The demands on municipal lodging-houses, charitable societies, churches, and employment bureaus, the long bread-lines, the men walking the Bowery at night, the scramble for the snow-shovels in the street-cleaning gangs, the falling off in deposits at the savings banks,—a score of bad-times barometers give evidence of unemployment greater than has been known since the winter of 1893-94.—From "The man out of work to-day," by Arthur P. Kellogg in the American Review of Reviews for March.

The April Woman's Home Companion.

The April number of the Woman's Home Companion contains several notable articles, and is, in addition, a thoroughly artistic and beautiful issue. Kellogg Durland contributes his second article on "Women of the Russian revolt"; Jane Addams writes a thoughtful and appealing article on "The working woman and the ballot"; Doctor Edward Everett Hale gives a helpful talk on "The meaning of home," and Elizabeth Stuart Phelps continues her serial story, "Though life us do part." There are also some excellent short stories. This April issue is beautiful in its Easter cover and in many fine pictorial features by Hermann C. Wall, Florence Scovel Shinn, Ellen Macauley, and others.

During the last three months of 1907 a series of deaths and diseases were recorded as being caused by the handling of filthy money. During the three months since, others have occurred. The Binghamton, New York, Republican speaks of George Pratt, first cashier of the First National Bank of that city, who contracted smallpox from a package of bills. His physician, Doctor Burr, said it was a mystery for some time as to how he could have caught the disease, but when the smallpox reached the stage where the peculiar odor characteristic of the disease was noticed, even by the patient, he exclaimed, "Why, that is just the same peculiar smell that I noticed when I opened a package of bills a few days before I was taken sick." Doctor Burr claims that cases are common where different contagious diseases have been contracted from paper money.

Another specific instance is that of Edward H. Hall, one of New York's prominent money handlers who died from a disease directly traceable to the handling of currency. Medical treatment was wholly futile.

Philip Wilson, councilman from the sixth ward, Camden, and paying teller of the Camden National Bank, was in November at home suffering from blood poisoning. On the previous Friday he had handled a large quantity of bank notes and felt a burning sensation in his hand. The hand began to swell and the disease contracted was pronounced blood poisoning. Hundreds of newspapers, copying Leslie's Weekly say: "There is no means of tracing this germ laden currency—a bill may be in the pocket of a tuberculous sweat-shop tailor to-day, and in the purse of a millionaire's wife to-morrow. The number of cases of mysterious illness due to this universal means of transmitting disease can only be guessed at, but physicians agree that it is enormous." It seems from these instances that A. Cressy Morrison's campaign for "Clean Money" was started none too soon.

Spiritualism Exposed

Is the title of a lecture delivered by Rev. T. W. Petty, which is now being published in book form. The price prepaid is fifty cents, and everybody interested in spiritualism should read it. Agents wanted in every state. Book and terms to any address on receipt of price. NEW PUBLISHING CO., Phoenix, Arizona. 11-3t

What Forestry Has Done.

Many people in this country think that forestry had never been tried until the Government began to practice it upon the National Forests. Yet forestry is practiced by every civilized country in the world except China and Turkey. It gets results which can be got in no other way, and which are necessary to the general welfare.

What forestry has done abroad is the strongest proof of what it can accomplish here. The remarkable success of forest management in the civilized countries of Europe and Asia is the most forcible argument which can be brought in support of wise forest use in the United States. . . .

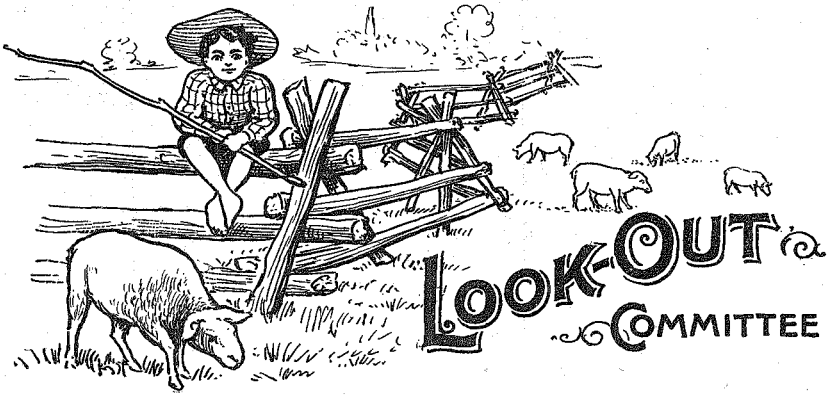

Take the case of Germany. Starting with forests which were in as bad shape as many of our own which have been recklessly cut over, it raised the average yield of wood per acre from 20 cubic feet in 1830 to 65 cubic feet in 1904. During the same period of time it trebled the proportion of saw timber got from the average cut, which means, in other words, that through the practice of forestry the timberlands of Germany are of three times better quality to-day than when no system was used. And in fifty-four years it increased the money returns from an average acre of forest sevenfold.

In France forestry has decreased the danger from floods, which threaten to destroy vast areas of fertile farms, and in doing so has added many millions of dollars to the national wealth in new forests. It has removed the danger from sand dunes and in their place has created a property worth many millions of dollars. . . .

In Switzerland, where every foot of agricultural land is of the greatest value, forestry has made it possible for the people to farm all land fit for crops, and so has assisted the country to support a larger population, and one that is more prosperous, than would be the case if the valleys were subjected to destructive floods. In a country as small as Switzerland, and one which contains so many high and rugged mountains, this is a service the benefits of which can not be measured in dollars. It is in Switzerland also, in the Sihlwald, that forestry demonstrates beyond contradiction how great a yield in wood and money it may bring about if applied consistently for a number of years.

A circular entitled "What Forestry Has Done," just published by the Forest Service, and obtainable upon application to the Forester, Washington, D. C., reviews the forest work of the leading foreign countries.

LOOK-OUT COMMITTEE

Every Latter Day Saint is a Lookout Committee of one. As a believer in the latter-day work it becomes your duty to warn your neighbor.

You may do this in various ways. You may club him on his theological head with scripture quotations and defeat him in argument,—and at the same time make him mad. Or you may get around him in a diplomatic way and interest him and at the same time keep his good will.

We suggest that as a starter you buy the Two-story Book and place it in his hands; it will interest him and it will not offend him.

What is the Two-story Book? It is a book containing two stories: An Instrument in His Hands, by Mary Leland Carter; and The Minister Who was Different, by Elbert A. Smith. It will win its way where a tract would not be read and where a sermon would not be listened to.

The Two-story Book is for sale by the Herald Publishing House, at the extremely low price of fifty cents, cloth binding. Two stories high, well lighted, well furnished, rock foundation.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid ..$30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

Atonement of Christ
and Final Destiny of Man
Revised and Enlarged
No. 17—10 cents each.

ZION'S PRAISES
No. 70, cloth$.40
No. 70¼, leather..... 1.00
No. 70½, leather, flexible..... 1.50

THE INSTRUCTOR
No. 126, cloth$.75
No. 127, leather 1.00
No. 128, leather, flexible 1.50

THESE BOOKS ARE NOW READY.

Bible References
By Alvin Knisley
Paper cover 5 cents
Cloth cover 10 cents

THE INDIAN MAIDEN
A Temperance Story
No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

Low Rates

via

From Lamoni, Iowa Pacific Coast

$32.00 to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. $32.00 to Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and Vancouver. Similar rates to many other points. Tickets on sale daily until April 30. Round Trip $63.05 April 25 and 26, to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego; approximately $15.00 higher one way via Portland, Ore.

Colorado and Utah

$23.25 to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo and return, April 7 and 21, May 5 and 19; $38.25 to Salt Lake City and Ogden and return, $38.15 to Butte and Helena and return, $34.65 to Billings, Mont., Basin, Cody and Worland, Wyo., and return.

Homeseekers' Rates

Very low round trip rates to practically all points west of the Missouri River on the 1st and 3rd Tuesdays of April and May.

Big Horn Basin Excursion

Personally conducted homeseekers' excursions April 7 and 21, May 5 and 19; to assist settlers to secure irrigated lands in the famous Big Horn Basin, Wyo., and Yellowstone Valley, Mont. Ask for folders telling all about these lands. Round Trip $36.95.

No matter where you are going this spring. I can give you rates, printed matter, and useful information.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent, C., B. & Q. Ry.

The Jackson County Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

ELLIS SHORT, President.
WM. CRICK, Vice-president.

M. H. BOND, Vice-president.
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

G. H. HILLIARD.
MRS. O. H. RIGGS.

DR. J. MATHER.
A. L. YINGLING.

HORACE SHELEY.

Very truly yours,

J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice,
Mite, and Rain
Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK

LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church.

1tf

"HEAVEN AND HELL"

BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps

PASTOR LANDENBERGER,

Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 8, 1908

NUMBER 15

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
LEON A. GOULD, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Leaves from Life - - - - -	337
A Remarkable Omission - - - - -	339
The Temperate Life - - - - -	341
Notes and Comments - - - - -	342
GENERAL CONVENTIONS - - - - -	342
ELDERS' NOTE-BOOK:
Privileges and Duties of the Local Priesthood - - - - -	344
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
Divorce - - - - -	345
Are We Building Up or Tearing Down - - - - -	348
Marriage According to the Law of God a Remedy for Divorce - - - - -	349
ORIGINAL POETRY:
He Pardoned Me - - - - -	351
Assurance of God's Love - - - - -	351
MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:
He Cares for Me - - - - -	351
Letter - - - - -	351
"Who Is Doing Your Work" - - - - -	351
Do Not Be a Waster - - - - -	352
Prayer Union - - - - -	352
LETTER DEPARTMENT:
Letters - - - - -	352
"Have You a Few Pennies to Spare" - - - - -	355
NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - - -	355
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:
Conference Minutes:
Kentucky and Tennessee - - - - -	356
Central Nebraska - - - - -	356
Northwestern Kansas - - - - -	356

Editorial

LEAVES FROM LIFE.

JOSEPH SMITH, THE PATRIARCH.

In Book of Mormon history the greatness of the Prophet Lehi is somewhat overshadowed by the greatness of his son, Nephi. In like manner the student of men and events connected with the latter-day restoration finds that Joseph the Patriarch was great, only the luster of his work is somewhat dimmed by comparison with that of his son, Joseph the Prophet. Yet he justly claims our attention. He did a considerable work in connection with the restoration of the gospel. He was an inspired man to whom God revealed certain things concerning the coming forth of the work, while his son Joseph was yet a little child. As regards his official position, he was the first patriarch of the church; as regards his personal character, his leading traits were honesty, simplicity, steadfastness, faith, and spirituality.

He possessed one characteristic in common with the early pioneers that surrounded him: the disposition to launch out into new enterprises. In the Old World a man inherited his trade or profession from his father and worked at it during life. In the New World the yoke was thrown off; opportunity knocked at the door every morning, and men decided before breakfast what new venture to embark upon. So the subject of our sketch was by turns a farmer, a merchant, and a school-teacher, and in the declining years of his life he became a preacher, the first of at least four generations of preachers, and traveled thousands of miles, converting and baptizing many people.

Evidently he entered upon his true calling late in life, as he was a very spiritual man, calculated to succeed as a minister and to fail as a financier. In 1802 he rented his farm and engaged in mercantile business. He ventured about all he had in one enterprise, in the exporting business, and the venture resulted well for others but illy for him, as he was swindled out of all that he had invested. He failed and went out of business, but not with full pockets, as some have done before and since his time. He sold his farm and drew the savings of years from the bank and settled his debts in full. This trait of honesty is further illustrated by an incident which occurred just prior to his removal to Palmyra. He had been farming in the state of

It is an old saying, that charity begins at home; but this is no reason why it should not go abroad; a man should live with the world as a citizen of the world; he may have a preference for the particular quarter or square, or even alley in which he lives, but he should have a generous feeling for the welfare of the whole.—Cumberland.

People who use religion as a cloak usually wind up without a rag of respectability.—The Commoner.

Vermont and crops had failed for three years in succession, resulting in hardship that amounted almost to famine. It was decided to move to the state of New York, but before leaving, Mr. Smith called his creditors and his debtors together and made a satisfactory settlement with them all. Afterward when some of the creditors made complaint they were paid again the second time, in cash. The family kept clear of lawsuits and litigation of all kinds; never becoming involved in anything of the kind until years later when Martin Harris' wife sued their son Joseph, charging him with extorting money from Mr. Harris; on which occasion Mr. Harris testified that the charge was false, and the case was dismissed.

The subject of our sketch may be termed the first convert of the Latter Day Saint church; at least he was the first to hear and accept the testimony of his son regarding the angel's message. His simple and childlike faith is shown in his ready acceptance of the message, and his steadfastness of character is shown by the fact that he never wavered during all the severe hardships and perils of the years of persecution that followed. His ready acceptance might subject him to the charge of credulity, were it not that he had himself received divine instructions that prepared him for the events connected with his son's ministry. This shows us something of the spiritual nature of the man. The first of these revelations (see Lucy Smith's History, p. 57,) was given during a night vision, the exact date of which is not a matter of record (probably about the year 1811). It appeared to him that he was traveling through an open, barren field, covered as far as he could see with dead, fallen timber. A deathlike silence prevailed, and no vestige of life was to be observed. He was alone in that gloomy place, with the exception of an attendant spirit that kept close to his side. This spirit told him, "This field is the world, which now lieth inanimate and dumb, in regard to the true religion, or plan of salvation; but travel on, and by the wayside you will find on a certain log a box, the contents of which, if you eat thereof, will make you wise, and give unto you wisdom and understanding." In the vision he traveled on and found the box. When he ate of its contents he was made perfectly happy, but immediately there rose out of the ground all manner of beasts, horned cattle, and roaring animals that surrounded him and compelled him to fly for his life, typifying no doubt the intense persecution that awaited him.

Just a little later he received another vision which bears a resemblance to one that was granted to the Prophet Lehi. This is recorded in Lucy Smith's History, page 58. At first the same barren wilderness presents itself, but presently there is a change, and we quote a part of his description of the scene, as follows:

"Traveling a short distance further, I came to a narrow path. This path I entered, and, when I had traveled a little way in it, I beheld a beautiful stream of water, which ran from the east to the west. Of this stream I could see neither the source nor the termination; but as far as my eyes could extend I could see a rope, running along the bank of it, about as high as a man could reach, and beyond me, was a low, but very pleasant, valley, in which stood a tree, such as I had never seen before. It was exceedingly handsome, insomuch that I looked upon it with wonder and admiration. Its beautiful branches spread themselves somewhat like an umbrella, and it bore a kind of fruit, in shape much like a chestnut bur, and as white as snow, or, if possible, whiter. I gazed upon the same with considerable interest, and as I was doing so, the burs or shells commenced opening and shedding their particles, or the fruit which they contained, which was of dazzling whiteness. I drew near, and began to eat of it, and I found it delicious beyond description. As I was eating, I said in my heart, 'I can not eat this alone, I must bring my wife and children, that they may partake with me.' Accordingly, I went and brought my family, which consisted of a wife and seven children, and we all commenced eating, and praising God for this blessing. We were exceedingly happy, insomuch that our joy could not easily be expressed. While thus engaged, I beheld a spacious building standing opposite the valley which we were in, and it appeared to reach to the very heavens. It was full of doors and windows, and they were all filled with people, who were very finely dressed. When these people observed us in the low valley, under the tree, they pointed the finger of scorn at us, and treated us with all manner of disrespect and contempt. But their contumely we utterly disregarded."

What is termed his seventh and last vision was received in 1819, on the eve of the beginning of the restoration. It is recorded on page 74 of the history before mentioned. In this vision a man bearing a peddler's pack approached him and their conversation is recorded as follows: "Sir, will you trade with me to-day? I have now called upon you seven times, I have traded with you each time, and have always found you strictly honest in all your dealings. Your measures are always heaped, and your weights overbalanced; and I have now come to tell you that this is the last time I shall ever call on you, and that there is but one thing which you lack, in order to secure your salvation.' As I earnestly desired to know what it was that I still lacked, I requested him to write the same upon paper. He said he would do so. I then sprang to get some paper, but, in my excitement, I awoke."

It was reserved for his son Joseph to receive in writing the plan of salvation.

Physically, Joseph Smith, the Patriarch, was very strong. He stood six feet and two inches in height and weighed two hundred pounds. As a young man he was noted as a wrestler.

Our paper deals with his character, but a brief outline of his life may be given. He was born in Topsfield, Essex County, Massachusetts, July 12, 1771. He married Lucy Mack, January 24, 1796. Ten children were born of them. Following the organization of the church, he moved to Kirtland, Ohio, in 1831, where he was ordained patriarch, and president of the high priesthood, December 18, 1833. In 1838 he moved to Far West, Missouri. Following the extermination order of Governor Boggs, he escaped to Quincy, Illinois; and in 1839 he arrived in Commerce, afterward known as Nauvoo, Illinois. He died September 14, 1840.

Elder R. B. Thompson, who preached his funeral-sermon, said, "A prince and a great man has fallen in Israel; a man endeared to us by every feeling calculated to entwine around and adhere to the human heart by almost indissoluble bonds; a man faithful to his God and to the church in every situation, and under all circumstances through which he was called to pass."

Of him another wrote:

"Zion's children loved him dearly;
 Zion was his daily care;
 That his loss is felt sincerely,
 Thousand weeping Saints declare;
 Thousands, who have shared his blessing,
 Thousands whom his service blessed,
 By his faith and prayers suppressing
 Evils which their lives oppress.

 Faith and works, most sweetly blended,
 Proved his steadfast heart sincere;
 And the power of God attended
 His official labors here:
 Long he stemmed the powers of darkness,
 Like an anchor in the flood:
 Like an oak amid the tempest,
 Bold and fearlessly he stood."

ELBERT A. SMITH in the Historical Journal.

A REMARKABLE OMISSION.

In the Times and Seasons for January 15, 1845, there was an epistle of the then existing Twelve sent out to the Saints abroad in reference to work on the Temple, and urging certain duties upon members of the church abroad, including the eldership. The Times and Seasons was the official organ of the church at Nauvoo, which began to be published in 1839 and continued until the Saints were driven from the State. It is because of its official character that we call attention to this epistle.

In the paper published by the Utah Mormon church, at Independence, Missouri, called Liahona, The Elders' Journal, for February 22, 1908, this epistle from the Times and Seasons is reprinted. We give it entire for the purpose of making comments upon it.

AN EPISTLE OF TWELVE.

FROM "TIMES AND SEASONS," JANUARY 15, 1845.

To the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in all the World, Greeting:
 Beloved Brethren:

As the purposes of God roll forth and the work of the Lord hastens to its accomplishment, it is necessary that we, as watchmen upon the towers of Zion, communicate with you from time to time, and put you in possession of such information as may be deemed necessary for your welfare, for the furtherance of the cause of God, and for the fulfilling of those great purposes which our heavenly Father has designed in the rolling forth of the dispensation of the fullness of times, spoken of by all prophets since the world was.

The Temple has progressed very rapidly since the death of our beloved Prophet and Patriarch. The diligence of those employed and the willingness of the Saints to contribute, have brought it to a state of forwardness, which has far exceeded our most sanguine expectations. You have already been informed that the capitols of the columns were all on; we have now to announce to you that by the time the spring opens we expect that every stone will be cut to complete the Temple, and it will not take long to lay them, when they are all prepared.

Great numbers of carpenters, masons, and other workmen are daily engaged in this arduous undertaking, so that not only is stone being prepared, but the sash, flooring, seats, and other things are progressing rapidly; and it is our design, if possible, so to rush the work forward, that the building will be enclosed, and certain portions of it in that state of forwardness, so that we shall be prepared to commence giving the Saints their endowments next fall; that the elders of Israel may be prepared by the power and Spirit of the great Jehovah, to fulfill with dignity and honor, the great work devolving upon them to perform.

We wish to inform you, brethren, that the work in which we are engaged is great and mighty, it is the work of God and we have to rush it forth against the combined powers of earth and hell, we feel it to be an arduous undertaking whilst you, many of you, have been enjoying ease, prosperity, and peace at home, we have had to combat mobs and to wade through blood to fulfill the work devolving upon us, and you; we have been exerting our energies, expending our money, and employing our time, our labors, our influence, and means for the accomplishment of this purpose; and feeling confident, dear brethren, that you would like to share with us the labor, as well as the glory, we make the following request:

We wish all the young, middle-aged, and able-bodied men who have it in their hearts to stretch forth this work with power, to come to Nauvoo, prepared to stay during the summer; and to bring with them means to sustain themselves with, and to enable us to forward this work; to bring with them teams, cattle, sheep, gold, silver, brass, iron, oil, paints, and tools; and let those who are within market distance of Nauvoo bring with them provisions to sustain themselves and others during their stay. And let all the churches send all the money, cloth and clothing, together with the raw material for manufacturing purposes; such as cotton, cotton yarn, wool, steel, iron, brass, &c., &c., as we are preparing to go into extensive manufacturing operations, and all these things can be applied to the furtherance of the Temple.

There was a font erected in the basement of the Temple, for the baptism of the dead, the healing of the sick and other purposes; this font was made of wood and was only intended for the present use; but it is now removed, and as soon as the stone cutters get through with the cutting of the stone for the walls of the Temple, they will immediately proceed to cut the stone for and erect a font of hewn stone. This font will be of an oval form and twelve feet in length and eight feet wide, with stone steps and an iron railing; this font will stand upon twelve oxen, which will be cast of iron or brass, or perhaps hewn stone; if of brass, polished; if of iron, bronzed;—upon each side of the font there will be a suite of rooms fitted up for the washings. In the recesses, on each side of the arch, on the first story, there will be a suite of rooms or ante-chambers, lighted with the first row of circular windows. As soon as a suitable number of those rooms are completed we shall commence the endowments.

Brethren, inasmuch as you have long desired blessings, come up to the help of the Lord, and help to forward the work that we are engaged in; for we trust that these rooms will be finished by the first of December next, so that you may enter therein and receive wisdom, knowledge, understanding, and the power of the priesthood, which you have so long desired; that you may be prepared to go forth to the nations of the earth and build up the kingdom in all parts of the world; gather up Israel, redeem Zion, rebuild Jerusalem, and fill the whole earth with the knowledge of God.

While upon this subject we would remind the brethren of their duty in tithing according to the laws and commandments given through Joseph the Prophet. It is the duty of all Saints to tithe themselves one tenth of all they possess when they enter into the new and everlasting covenant; and then one tenth of their interest, or income, yearly afterwards. If the brethren will attend to this strictly, and send up the sum by agents appointed by us, whose names you will see in this paper, then we shall hold ourselves responsible for all moneys and properties delivered to those agents that the names of the several individuals who send their tithing by the legal agents may be entered upon the books of the law of the Lord; if this is not attended to strictly by the branches of the church abroad, they may be disappointed when they find that they have sent their names by unauthorized agents, who have not made returns to the Trustees and their names are not recorded as they should have been if they had hearkened to counsel. On the subject of regular appointed agents we would refer you to an article written by the Trustees, Bishops Whitney and Miller, and published in the Times and Seasons, of December.

We would further say to the brethren that if there should be any of the churches to whom these agents do not come let them send their means by honest men whom they may select from among themselves, and in whom they can place confidence; but we can not be responsible for the conduct of any agents that we do not send, and can only give credit for that we receive. And as the churches abroad have been much imposed upon by designing men, without authority, we would warn them against such persons, and advise them not to pay their funds to traveling elders and others without written authority from us, to which should be attached the private seal of the Twelve and their names published as above stated. Those men that we shall select for agents will be men of honor, men of integrity and respectability, in whom we can confide, and who are responsible and able, and willing to enter into bonds for the faithful performance of their duty. This course will prevent those many impositions which have heretofore been practiced by villains wearing the garb of Saints, and place the churches in a situation that they can forward their tithings with safety.

There is now in the city eight of the Twelve all in good health and spirits; our city is progressing, and the work of the Lord is rolling forth with unprecedented rapidity.

Thus, dear brethren, we have given you, in part, some of the measures and calculations, which we mean to carry into effect for your salvation, and for the furtherance of the salvation of the world. We have commenced a new year, and, as the Lord says, "All victory and glory is brought to pass unto you through your diligence, faithfulness and prayers of faith," so we can not but hope, that you will renew your exertions, your prayers, and your tithings, for the benefit of Zion, that she may arise and shine, for the good of all people.

We can not say everything in one short epistle, therefore, from time to time, as the Lord puts into our hearts instructions, we shall give them unto you; solemnly praying that you will increase your faith, double your diligence, walk by light and obedience, and be instant in season, to do the will of our Father in heaven. Beware of ungodly men, who creep among you unawares; they are clouds without water, driven about by winds, and will finally be blown into outer darkness.

Our counsel to the traveling elders abroad is for them to return to Nauvoo by the 6th of April, to Conference, or as soon as possible afterwards, and before they leave, it will be necessary for them to ordain good and wise men to preside over the branches during their absence.

May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, a veneration for the names of the first martyrs, first elders, and first prophets of the nineteenth century, inspire your hearts, to hear counsel, to keep counsel, to practice holiness, live the life of Saints, and "die the death of the righteous, that your last end may be like his."

Done in council, at Nauvoo, this 14th day of January, 1845.

BRIGHAM YOUNG, President.

WILLARD RICHARDS, Clerk.

As will be observed, this epistle was issued in January, 1845. In view of the statement so persistently made that Joseph Smith should have prophesied that the church would go into the wilderness and there become a mighty people, the absence of any reference to this prophecy in this epistle is remarkable; and, what is perhaps more remarkable, there is not a line in the epistle that mentions or hints at a possible removal from the state of Illinois, or a cessation of labor in building the Temple. It will also be noticed that the statement is made that there would be a font placed in the basement in which baptisms for the dead and for health would be administered. It is significant that at that time, January, 1845, six months after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, there was no place in which these baptisms were recognized to be performed. We have no authentic information that we have seen in reference to this purported prophecy that the church would be driven from the State and into the wilderness, and there become a great people. We have heard rumors to the effect that in a conversation said to have been held at Montrose, Iowa, upon the occasion of a large gathering, a sort of a review, that Joseph Smith should have made such a statement that the time would come. What were the circumstances under which the conversation was held is not stated. But we presume that before the conversation was applicable to us that there would have been a provision touching the conduct of the people which would bring to pass upon them the wrath of the people and the withdrawing of the protecting hand of God, so that they would be compelled to get out of the State.

It will be noticed that in this epistle there is not a reference to such prophecy, or a hint of a possible removal of the Saints from the city; and, further than this, there is a statement which goes to show that, though the elders were called to come to conference to Nauvoo, they were to leave properly ordained men in charge of the branches to take care of the work until they should return back to their respective charges and missions. This clearly shows that at that time there was no intention of removing. If a prophecy of the kind had been uttered by Joseph Smith, it would have been at least six months prior to the issuing of this epistle; and if the parties who subsequently held so strenuously to the idea that Joseph Smith had made such a prophecy had knowledge of it at the time that this epistle was written, they are guilty of a most reprehensible withholding of proper information from the Saints. Why should they have remained silent? Why should they have continued to exhort the Saints to come to Nauvoo to bring their gold and their silver, their brass and their steel and their iron, and why should they have stated distinctly that they were about to engage in great manufacturing industries in which the materials, cotton, cotton yarn, and other commodities would be required as raw material for the purpose of the industries referred to? Surely if such intentions had been honestly stated, it shows clearly that no one had at the time a knowledge that destruction or removal from the State was impending.

It seems to be peculiar that this epistle should now be revived by these people in such a cool manner, as it is certainly strong evidence against the claims made by them that their establishment in Utah fulfills the prophetic statement that "Zion is to be established in the tops of the mountains."

The great Salt Lake is situated in the lowest valley in the Rocky Mountain Range, as we have understood, and it is certain that from the north, south, and east waters converge into this lake, and the valley of the Jordan which runs by the city is so low and flat that frequently the Jordan overflows its banks, and the lower part of the city is flooded. There is no apparent outlet from the Salt Lake Basin. The lake itself is filled with the acrid impurities that are brought into it from the rivers flowing in from the north and from the south and from the east. It is a dead sea; and how a city located in so low a valley can be said to fulfill a typical prophecy which requires an establishment in the tops of the mountains, it is difficult for ordinary mortals to see and understand.

Other publications in the Times and Seasons, in the year 1845, will show the same lack of recognition of any intention or necessity for leaving the State as this epistle does; and we commend the careful reading of it to the eldership, that they may be prepared to meet antagonism touching the prophecy referred to and its fulfillment.

THE TEMPERATE LIFE.

It is not meant in this article to speak of what most persons understand by temperance, that is to say total abstinence from the use of alcoholic beverages. When six entire States in the Union have voted to prohibit the use of intoxicating beverages, and when in others which have local option so many counties and towns have done the same that it is estimated that thirty-three millions of the inhabitants are living under prohibition laws, argument in favor of prohibition does not seem necessary. The temperance of which it is here desired to speak is wider, more far-reaching than this, for it prohibits nothing, but urges extreme moderation in the use of everything—temperance in eating, in drinking, even in drinking pure water, in bathing, in exercise, and in sleep.

In the matter of food, it really makes little difference what one eats, except in the case of actual disease, when dieting is part of the treatment, so long as one eats moderately.

It is in eating that there is more intemperance than in any other of man's indulgences. It would surprise and grieve many a man, who would not touch a drop of liquor to save his life, to be told that he was as intemperate as the greatest slave to alcohol, yet there are numbers of just such persons. They will eat three hearty meals a day with meat, and drink one or two cups of tea or coffee with each meal, and perhaps nibble at little "snacks" between meals, besides taking a bite—and a good big one—before retiring, and yet scorn the man who drinks, however moderately, anything containing alcohol.

One need not praise the drinker, who deserves no praise, in saying that the overeater is the greater sinner.

This virtue of temperance in eating has been preached for centuries, and this preaching has resulted in the creation of a host of "cranks," who may themselves be most intemperate in their attitude toward eating, but it has not opened the eyes of the overeater to the enormity of his offense.

Cornaro in the sixteenth century urged moderation in eating, and the prolongation of his life to within a year of the century mark bears witness to the life-saving value of temperance.

Addison devoted a paper in the Spectator to the praise of temperance in eating, which, he said, "in many cases produces the same effects as exercise, and may, in some measure, supply its place." This is the contention of Mr. Fletcher, the present-day preacher of thorough mastication and moderate eating, who says that without regular exercise he can in an emergency do "stunts" easier than the man in regular training.—Exchange.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Editors acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to attend the graduating exercises of the Teachers' Training Class at the Saints' Church in Philadelphia. There are eighteen graduates. We note that Bro. Walter and Sr. Eunice Smith have completed the post-graduate course. Those completing the State course are: Archibald Dow Angus, Elizabeth B. Fowler, George Asa Fowler, David Freeland, Albert Bradley Hall, Alma John Harrison, Catharine Angus Lewis, Walter Henry Lewis, Barbara Wood Milligan, Noble Edward Milligan, Elsie Grant Plunkett, William Plunkett, Daniel Thomas Shaw, Anna Zimmermann, Clara Zimmermann, John Zimmermann, Jr.

Elder L. E. Hills, of Marion, Iowa, and Reverend C. L. Brooks, of Fairview, Iowa, have signed propositions for a four-night debate, to be held in the opera-house at Elkport, Iowa, between April 15 and May 15. Reverend Brooks represents the United Brethren Church. The third proposition contains this peculiar affirmation, "That Nauvoo, under the reign of Joe Smith's leadership, was the seat of vice and crime."

ALBANY, New York, April 2.—The Reed Hollow Earth Exploration Club, of New York, filed a certificate of incorporation with the secretary of state to-day. The club is organized to explore the Arctic and Antarctic regions "to the end that the truth or falsity of the proposition or theory advanced by William R. Reed that the earth is a hollow sphere may be established with absolute certainty."—Kansas City Journal, April 3.

If you want to be miserable, think about yourself; about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you, what people think of you; and then to you nothing will be pure. You will spoil everything you touch; you will make sin and misery for yourself out of everything God sends you: you will be as wretched as you choose.—Charles Kingsley.

• * •

A great many wrongs are committed in the name of "good business."—The Commoner.

General Conventions.

APRIL 1.

The General Convention of Zion's Religio-Literary Society convened at Independence, Missouri, Wednesday evening, April 1, at eight o'clock; President J. A. Gunsolley in charge.

Credential committee were as follows: J. M. Baker, Nellie M. Anderson, Frank E. Smith.

Program for the evening consisted of short speeches.

Credential committee's report was read.

APRIL 2.

Religio prayer-meeting convened at nine o'clock, in charge of J. A. Gunsolley, Walter W. Smith, and S. A. Burgess.

Business session at ten o'clock, J. A. Gunsolley and Walter W. Smith in charge.

Song No. 22 in Praises was sung. Minutes read and approved. Additional report of credential committee. The secretary chose Sr. Belle James as assistant.

Completion of organization left to the executive officers.

By motion, courtesy of floor was extended to visitors.

By motion, arrangement and time of meetings left with the executives.

By motion executives were authorized to appoint committee of three to notify Presidency and Twelve of the convening of Religio. Committee appointed were as follows: Edward Rannie, J. F. Curtis, and A. D. Angus.

Reports of president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, librarian, Quarterly editor, superintendent home department, editor of Religio's Arena, revising committee, treasurer's financial report, and auditing committee, were all read.

Closing song, No. 117. Adjourned till half past two.

Afternoon session convened at half past two. Song No. 66 from Praises. Prayer by J. A. Gunsolley. Bro. Paul Craig chosen chorister.

Motion to grant Bro. W. N. Robinson the privilege of an ex officio was granted.

Moved and seconded that we take up the financial reports for consideration. Carried.

Moved and seconded that the report of the auditing committee be approved.

The recommendation in the auditing committee's report was read as follows: "We, your committee, would recommend that the general treasurer be required to keep a separate account in which only the funds belonging to the society shall be placed. And we would further recommend that the general treasurer be required to make entries of all transactions involving the transfer of funds."

Moved to amend this recommendation by "placing the funds belonging to the society in the hands of the Bishop, without interest, and keeping it there, and the Bishop acting as the bank."

It was moved and seconded to amend the amendment by striking out the word "bank" and inserting "custodian." The amendments carried, and the recommendation as amended was adopted.

Financial report of J. A. Gunsolley read, and deficit ordered paid, 51 cents.

Financial report of vice-president read, and deficit ordered paid, $21.11.

Librarian's report (financial) read, — deficit, $50.70.

It was moved and seconded that we ask the Sunday-school to reimburse us for fifty per cent [of the $50.70] and let the church go free. Seconded and carried.

Moved as a substitute that the chair appoint a committee to take up this matter, and all other matters in which the Sunday-school and Religio are jointly interested, and that we be bound by the final adjudication as so determined by that committee.

The substitute was lost, the first motion prevailing.

Secretary's financial report was read and ordered spread upon the minutes.

Home department superintendent's financial report, and report of Translation Fund read.

The matter concerning the amendments of constitution and by-laws was then taken up.

Song No. 2 was sung.

Moved to amend article 3, section 1, page 4, by adding "home department superintendent," after the word "librarian," the same rule to extend to districts and locals. Amendment carried.

Moved to amend article 3, section 2, page 5, "librarian," by striking out all after the words "shall be," in the first line, and adding, "a member of the Latter Day Saint Library Commission, and as such shall have full power to represent the library interests of this society, and shall secure and impart needed information relating to the establishing of libraries."

Moved and seconded that the amendment suggested by the library board be the sense of this body, and that the change be made in the constitution and by-laws, and that all parts not agreeing with this act be changed in accordance therewith. Carried.

It was proposed to amend article 3, section 4, page 13 as follows: Before the words, "the district or stake officers," in line seven, insert the words, "the stake presidency or president of the district," and add after the word "officers," in the eighth line, the words "of this society," so that the last sentence of section 4 shall read, "Member of stake presidency or the president of the district, the stake or district officers of this society, and home class superintendent, and all officers of locals shall be ex officio members of the district or stake convention."

Article 3, section 5, page 8: Moved to amend, before the words, "general officers," insert, "members of the First Presidency and the Quorum of Twelve"; and add, after the words, "the general officers," the words, "of this society."

It was moved to defer action upon the two above amendments for one year. Carried. Song No. 21. Benediction by Walter W. Smith.

Evening session, half past seven.

J. A. Gunsolley present.

Song No. 67. Prayer by Frederick M. Smith. Walter W. Smith in the chair. Minutes read and approved. Communication from Quorum of Twelve read. Report of Library Commission, and part of the published report was read.

Moved that the report be approved, and the recommendations adopted.

Section 3 of committee's recommendations was by motion adopted.

Moved the adoption of section 5. Moved, as an amendment, that in case this prevail, that we guarantee one third of the sum as a society.

Moved to amend the amendment by striking out the words, "one third of the amount," and insert "one hundred dollars."

Moved to refer the matter to the committee for decision as to what they want.

Substitute was offered that this recommendation of the Library Commission be referred to the executive committee of this society, with power to act.

Substitute prevailed.

Recommendations adopted as a whole.

Moved and seconded that we take up the course of study for the coming year.

Moved that we take up the price of the Quarterlies. Carried.

Moved the adoption of the recommendation of the treasurer to reduce price of Quarterly to twenty-five cents per year. Carried. Moved and seconded that the price of a single quarterly be ten cents. This was amended by striking out ten and inserting eight, and motion as amended carried.

Moved to take up the revising committee's report. Carried.

Report read and motion made to adopt, then a motion to refer to the executive committee for final adjustment. By motion the matter was tabled.

Solo by Miss Blanche Nesbit. Announcements. Benediction by R. B. Trowbridge.

APRIL 3.

Friday morning, nine o'clock.

J. A. Gunsolley in charge. Song No. 99. Prayer

(Continued on page 357.)

Elders' Note-Book

PRIVILEGES AND DUTIES OF THE LOCAL PRIESTHOOD.

(Read before the Southern California District Conference, Garden Grove, February 14, 1908.)

The subject of this paper is one that, in my opinion, has been little understood in the past, by both priesthood and laity.

It is strange, but nevertheless true, that some of the priesthood, having accepted ordination to office in the church of the First-born, should consider the step taken of so little moment as to ignore the divine command, "Now let every man learn his duty," and therefore are unfitted to do their part in the administration of God's law; for truly the priesthood is the administrative power in the gospel.

To my mind one of the greatest helps for the education of the local ministry along the lines of duty and service is the monthly priesthood meeting, for there the duties appertaining to the different officers are discussed, thus enabling all the ministry to become more familiar with their several duties. Also at these meetings different points of the law are discussed; so that, if possible, all may become of one mind on any question which may come before the body, which is a strong factor in keeping harmony in the branch; for nothing will demoralize a branch quicker than to have members of the priesthood disagreeing on points of law.

One thing that is absolutely essential among the priesthood is unity. Of course there will be differences of opinion right along, and I do not believe that a man should at all times sacrifice honest opinion for the sake of unity, unless it flagrantly counters any accepted law of the church. I do believe that if we at all times followed the injunction, "Let us reason together," that we can come so close to an agreement that there will be very little difference in the end. Our ministry, in preaching and teaching the law, should be very careful and not present individual ideas and opinions as gospel truths, unless said opinions are in accord with church law.

The crying need among the priesthood at this time is for loyal, enthusiastic, conscientious workers, men who, having accepted office, will make a strenuous effort to further God's work; men whose integrity is shown by their acts, who in very deed are coworkers with Christ in the redemption of mankind.

At the first monthly priesthood meeting held this year, eight out of twenty members attended; less than half of our local priesthood present, at the first meeting of the year, where of necessity work for the current year would be outlined and discussed. Is it any wonder that the spirituality of our people is at a low ebb, when those who are the leaders, who should set the example, are so dilatory, careless, and negligent? And I will say right here, that the same percentage who miss the priesthood meetings are often absent at the regular sacrament, prayer, and preaching services. I believe sickness, either of family or self, is the only reasonable excuse for one of the priesthood missing any of the meetings.

If the priesthood is to fulfill all the functions relative to it as a body, there must be system, law, and order connected therewith; hence, as to all of God's work there is a head, so in the priesthood the president of the branch is the spiritual head and adviser of both branch and priesthood, and all official work done by any member of the priesthood should be directed by him or at least have his sanction.

His associates, the priests, teachers, and deacons, should seek his advice and counsel at all times, relative to official work in contemplation, for the gift of executive ability and wisdom are some of the prerogatives of his office. Should the presiding elder at any time be called away, the presiding priest takes charge; and, in the priest's absence, the presiding teacher; and, in the teacher's absence, the presiding deacon. Thus it is very essential that all the priesthood, and especially those officers just mentioned, understand parliamentary law, so that if anything of a business nature comes up it may be properly attended to.

Another thought: when the president of the branch contemplates being absent from a preaching service, it would be well for him to inform his associates of the fact, a little ahead of time, so that some one of the brethren can be prepared to fill his place in the pulpit; for a man preaching only once in a while needs more time to prepare a discourse than does one who preaches every Sunday in the year.

That all the officers, from presiding elder to deacon, are essential in the church, is attested by the fact that God placed them in the church; and a deacon, though the lowest officer in the priesthood, is just as great if he does his whole duty as the head of the church.

To sum up, let me repeat the thought in the first part of this paper, "Wherefore, let every man learn his duty," and do it. Let us have harmonious activity along the lines of service. May the administration of God's law be our first thought; and, by his help, we may be the instruments he will use to build up his kingdom on the earth.

Yours in gospel bonds,

LOS ANGELES, California.
1714 New England Avenue.

FRED ADAM.

The community which dares not protect its humblest and most hated member in the utterance of his opinions, no matter how false or how hateful, is only a gang of slaves.—Wendell Phillips.

Original Articles

DIVORCE.

There has been much agitation of the question of divorce during the past few years, and the papers, both religious and secular, have been filled with articles treating upon it. A wave of popular sentiment against what is termed the "divorce evil" has swept the country, and some of the great religious bodies have taken the matter up, passing drastic measures against it, forbidding their ministers to perform the marriage ceremony where either of the contracting parties has been divorced, and prohibiting divorce for any cause. It is easy for the discerning mind to see in this, as has been the case with many other questions, that popular agitation has caused those who have been somewhat lax in the past, to rush to the other extreme and pass measures that are harsh and unreasonable. It ill becomes the Episcopal Church, which found her origin in a divorce case, to be the foremost in action, and to be noted as the most uncompromising in her attitude against divorce, yet such is the case. One who has read her history can hardly avoid the suspicion that she is making all this noise in the hope that King Henry VIII and his six wives may be forgotten in the din.

It is seldom that those who are carried away on a wave of popular agitation can listen with patience to one who cries "moderation," therefore a bitter opposition by the extremists to the position herein taken upon the question is not unexpected. Yet we are reminded that the old axiom that, "If you would find truth look between extremes," has been proved so many times that perhaps it may be useful in the consideration of this question.

But is divorce an evil? The abuse of it is, to be sure, but the abuse of many good things is an evil. To the true student of sociology divorce seems to be a safety valve to society; and, under the present social conditions, to bolt down the safety valve completely, would cause an explosion that would destroy the whole social machine. Divorce may be called the civil remedy applied by society to relieve its moral disease; it is thus used to heal the running sore of society, and is not the cause of the disease by any means. Until the whole world obeys the perfect law of liberty, the perfect kingdom of God which Jesus taught his disciples to pray for is established on the earth, and Satan bound, men will continue to sin, and that remedy will be needed. The Savior saw this, and not intending to make the innocent suffer for the guilty said, "Saving for one cause."

Some have quoted: "What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder," and argue that therefore there should be no divorce granted. What is the percentage of the marriages made in the world to which this can be applied? It seems but little short of blasphemy to say that the thousands of marriages that are the outcome of lust, and are only used to legalize it, with those that are made under contract with pecuniary and other base motives, are bound together by God, or receive his sanction in any way. We can not believe that it was God who gave to that delicate and refined woman, a lustful, drunken brute of a husband, who spends night after night in carousals with boon companions; or that he bound that gentlemanly, kind, and noble man to the giddy, nirting, trifling woman, who is never at home, and who seems to hate him simply because he is not her kind. We can not be made to believe that because the parties mentioned made a sad mistake, that they can never find a remedy, and that it is the will of God that they should remain in such torment (for it is nothing less) all the days of their lives. And as one writer put it, "They made their beds, now they must lie in them." Such a description of God reminds us of that good old song that brought so much consolation to our forefathers, "For hell is crammed with infants damned, without a day of grace." There seems to be a natural propensity in man to give a description of the Devil and then call it God.

How many Latter Day Saints would say that those who were immersed by a sectarian minister were truly baptized, and that God was bound to recognize the act and sanction it as his own? Yet this is the argument used by some of them in regard to the important ordinance of marriage; and more, they affirm that God must recognize and sanction as his own, the act that is performed by a drinking, swearing, tobacco-chewing, old infidel of a justice of the peace. And then some of our extremists would have it, that if any who have been married by such authority, obtain a divorce for any less or other cause than adultery, they have broken the law of God, and should they marry again are going right into adultery themselves, and would forbid ministers to perform the ceremony. As though the same power that bound them together (civil law) could not revoke and nullify its own act if it chose.

The question has come up for us as a church, as a people to decide, and it remains to be seen whether we will allow the popular agitation to drive us to take extreme measures, or if we shall insist on being just and fair in spite of the howls of extremists. Will it help matters or make men better for us to prohibit our ministry to perform the marriage ceremony for those who have been divorced for any cause but that of adultery? Whether they are the guilty parties or not, does not appear to have been taken into consideration hitherto.

It seems to us that the language of Doctrine and Covenants 111: 4, "All legal contracts of marriage made before a person is baptized into this church should be held sacred and fulfilled," shows that ALL legal contracts should be recognized, and as divorce is a legal contract of (or pertaining to) marriage, the minister of this church is in duty bound to recognize it and perform the marriage ceremony for those who have been legally divorced.

Let us take the words of Jesus, who says that divorce, "saving for the cause of fornication" (adultery) is not sanctioned by him. We are willing to abide by his words. It is agreed then that divorce for "the one cause" is scriptural. What does adultery or fornication mean? Shall we take the definition of Jesus or that of the common law? The common law demands proof of the specific act. Jesus does not, for he says in the same chapter: "But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart."—Matthew 5:28. This is HIS definition of adultery, and we hope that those who are such sticklers for a literal application of his words will try to be consistent here. "But," says one, "you can not prove the charge that an individual has adultery in his or her heart, without proof of the specific act, can you? Why, certainly. Will one who has adultery in his heart (whether man or woman), continue to love and cherish his or her companion as before? The bond of unity is broken; they have ceased to be one in fact, and are only held together by the slender thread of the law. Even though they may never have accomplished their lustful desires, will they not begin to neglect, mistreat, and misuse the person who stands in the way of their unlawful gratification. Then comes, as a natural sequence, a train of offenses, cruel and inhuman treatment, desertion and so forth. Do you not think that the man who is a hale fellow well met, with a class of drunken men who frequent houses of ill repute, and who remains out night after night in their company, seeming to prefer it to that of his wife, is very liable to have adultery in his heart, although proof of the specific act can not be obtained by his suffering companion? And if a woman is seen flirting with strangers at every opportunity, is fond of disreputable company, staying out late nights, frequently leaving home for weeks at a time, without telling her busy husband where she has gone, has not adultery in her heart, she has something equally as bad.

A divorce case on grounds of adultery is a revolting thing, and no self-respecting, virtuous man or woman would wish to be connected with one in any way. This not only makes it hard to get witnesses, but keeps many a deserving person from urging suit on those grounds, and many is the decree given for cruel and inhuman treatment, or incompatibility, where there was plenty of evidence of adultery (the specific act), but a horror of the revolting details, the gaping crowd in the court-room, glaring headlines in the newspapers, and the foul-mouthed lawyers, induced the parties to urge suit on other grounds. And shall the church place a ban upon such people; and if they come to the elder asking him to perform the marriage ceremony for them, compel him to say: "No, the church won't let me"? The Lord has said that if any such will come and testify that they were divorced for that cause they shall be received by the church, (see Doctrine and Covenants 42:20.) He saw these conditions and provided for them.

But what a peculiar position it puts the minister in, if the church forbids him to perform the ceremony for those who were divorced for any other cause than adultery. A couple come requesting his services. He asks if either has ever been divorced. The lady says, "Yes, I have," "Was the cause adultery?" he inquires. She answers, "No." He replies, "Well, then, I can not marry you." They go across the street and are married by another minister or a justice of the peace and go their way. Some time later they hear the brother preach, are convinced, and request baptism, and as Doctrine and Covenants says: "All legal contracts are to be held sacred and fulfilled, which are made or entered into before coming into the church," he is compelled to baptize these parties whom he could not marry. Or suppose the man answers, Yes, to the elder's question, and after the ceremony it develops that he told the truth, and that he is the guilty party. Rather a bad mess.

Marriage being a legal contract, and all the power we have to perform it being given by the law of the land, would it not be well to recognize the power of that law when it grants a divorce? The Twelve took action upon this once, and the following is the result: "Resolved, That while we recognize the validity of the marriage contract entered into before coming into the church, we also recognize the validity of divorces by the courts, touching those same contracts, except in the case pointed out in paragraph 20 of section 42, Doctrine and Covenants, wherein the parties who are the cause of the separation are the offenders; and further, that while the injured party remains unmarried, the offender is not entitled to baptism."—History of the Church, vol. 3, p. 474.

The Roman Catholic Church does not recognize any divorce but her own, but is consistent in that she also holds that no earthly government has power to authorize marriage either, claiming that she alone has power to bind and loose in heaven what she does on earth. Until we as a church take the same position and hold that by virtue of our priesthood we have bound in heaven the marriage tie which we have bound on earth, and that we alone have power to do so, it is hardly consistent for us to refuse to recognize the annulment of the marriage tie by the same power that performed it—the law of the land.

Suppose that two people were placed upon an island and cut off from communication with the rest of the world; they learn to love each other, and without the aid of priest, preacher, or law, they enter upon the relationship of husband and wife, living thus for years. Are they any the less married because no earthly law has sanctioned the act of marriage? Who performed the ceremony for Adam and Eve? God joins man and woman together by bringing their hearts into unison in pure and lasting love, and the act of the law merely legalizes the union among men. This being true, is it not possible then that two people may be legally bound together by the law of the land who were never united or bound together by God in any way, and who if they had waited for his direction, followed their common sense, or been led by wisdom instead of passion or a passing fancy, would have chosen a different kind of husband or wife altogether? Is it just then, or sensible, to say that "What God hath joined together let not man put asunder," applies to every couple who have appeared before an officer or minister, and been married by the law of the land?

It is a significant fact that those who are most radical and extreme, and loudest in the denunciation of divorce, are nearly always those whose matrimonial ship has never been jostled, and who in the matrimonial grab-bag drew a prize. Sympathy for their less fortunate brethren does not manifest itself in their arguments. They are not troubled by pity for those who have had shipwreck and disaster, and with aching hearts have seen their fond hopes dashed to the ground and their lives wrecked by another's sin and their own mistake. Those who say that because a mistake has been made that there is no hope for the poor creature to ever have a happy home and loving companion, are taking the same position in regard to the mercy and justice of God as do those who teach that he condemns those who sin, to eternal, never-ending punishment and torture.

Here is a sweet and gentle girl who married a promising young man, and hope pictures a rosy path for them through life; but a change comes. The husband takes to drink and bad companions; soon he goes into the saloon business and becomes a gambler as well, and all efforts to reform him prove futile. Shall she continue to live with him and bring children into the world under such environment, to see them follow their father's footsteps and become sots? Her soul revolts at the thought, and she leaves him, taking her children with her. She can not prove adultery, although she has her suspicions and has heard many rumors; so she gets a divorce on grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment, which she has no trouble in proving. For a few years she struggles in poverty to rear her children; then one day a good man of the neighborhood, a man of means, asks her hand in marriage, offering to give her a good home and an education for her children. She loves the man for his noble qualities and beautiful character, and accepts him with a feeling of gratitude to God for his providential watchcare over her. Together they go to the elder, but great is their mortification when he, after inquiring into the matter says, "No, I can not perform the ceremony. My church forbids it; you must either go back to the drunkard or stay single in abject poverty. There is no hope for you in this life unless he dies. Yes, I know it seems unjust, but we are told, 'What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder,' and 'saving for one cause.'"

Positively, we do not believe that God ever bound a good, virtuous woman to a drunken cur, or a good, honorable man to a disreputable woman. This is the Devil's work, and they are attributing it to the wrong party altogether.

The writer by no means favors divorce for every slight pretext, neither does he favor the extreme positions taken against it by some. He is well aware that some strong texts against it are found in the Bible, but a too literal and stringent interpretation and application of Bible texts might pinch somewhere else as well. For instance, we are told by Paul that a bishop should be the husband of one wife. It is held by some that this does not mean one at a time, but only one during his lifetime. This interpretation would not be relished by many Protestant bishops to-day, nor Roman Catholic either, for that matter.

Let us spend more time teaching people how to choose their life companions, and to avoid divorce, before we pass stringent measures against it. Let us cleanse the system of its disease before we try to heal over the running sore of society. And let us, oh! let us teach the young the need of judgment and care in the selecting of a husband or wife, and to look for qualities and virtues of mind and temperament, instead of a pretty face or a fine figure.

It might be well to make it a little harder to get married in the first place, than to wait until lives were wrecked and divorce granted; for those who have been through the fire usually know it will burn. Not only the young need instruction in these matters, for as the old saying has it, "There is no fool like an old fool," and sometimes the greatest blunders are made by those who are old enough to know better.

This is written with the hope that it may be seen that the question has at least two sides (it appears to be forgotten by some); and, with the hope that some light has been thrown on this knotty problem, we close, praying that truth may prevail and justice be done.

FRED B. FARR.

• * * * •

ARE WE BUILDING UP OR TEARING DOWN.

One day I came home from school and did not feel very hungry. This was something unusual for me, and I said, "My appetite is not very good." A little three-year-old girl, who sat just across the table from me, was very busy eating. Without stopping or looking up, she said, "I have a good appetite, and I am going to keep it." We all laughed and thought it was a strange way to keep an appetite by continuing to eat. Since thinking it over, I have decided that it was a very wise saying. She taught me a lesson, but she did not know it. How can we keep an appetite for food, only by supplying our body with the food that it demands? The food thus taken builds up the body, and thus keeps it so more food is needed after awhile, and you keep your appetite.

A pupil in school was reading a book on history. After he finished that he wanted another of the same kind, and he did not stop until he had read five of those books, all in that series. Then he wanted to know if we had some more of that same kind. I thought of what this little girl had said about the way she was going to keep her appetite. This boy had an appetite, a desire for reading. He wanted to read and the best way to keep that desire was to keep on reading. Suppose, though, when he wanted to read he had taken books that were not good. It would have had the same effect on his mind that poor or poisonous food would have had on his body. Have you a desire for reading? Keep that desire and increase it by reading books that are good, pure, and wholesome. In this day when there are so many books we should be careful in our choosing. There are so many good books that there is no excuse for our reading the others, saying that we must have something to read.

Have you a desire for spiritual things? Let us keep that desire by studying and thinking along spiritual lines. Let us learn of those things that are spiritual, that will improve our mind, that will lead us nearer to God. These same things will help our mind to grow and help to build up the spiritual part of our being just as the food builds up our body, and there will be an increasing desire for more of that heavenly food.

The body grows by what it feeds upon, so our mind develops and grows by what it feeds upon. Shall we build up a good, strong, spiritual house by giving our mind good food, or shall we let our spiritual beings decay for lack of nourishment? Remember that whatever you have an appetite for, you can keep it by partaking of that which your appetite demands. This is true of our desire for wrong things as well as the good. It is not a good thing to let our body starve for a long time and then eat an overabundance of food. It is likely not to build your body up very fast. It is better to take our food regularly. So it is better to take of our spiritual food regularly. We can starve in that way as well as physically. Christ said to his disciples one time, when they were urging him to partake of the food, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." So ought we all, who are members of his kingdom, partake of that life-giving power, and grow in knowledge and understanding. We ought to be partaking of that food that is gained through prayer, through study, through association with God's people, and through contemplation of God's works and his laws.

Is it not just as bad for us to harm one spiritually as to harm physically? We would shrink from giving food that contained a deadly poison to any one. Yet is it not equally as bad to present to others those things that will hurt or destroy their faith? If we can carry faith, hope, trust, and confidence with us, we are building others up and not tearing down what they have already gained. Some say our faith ought to be strong enough to resist everything that is brought against it. Our faith, the gospel, as brought forth in these latter days, is able to resist all, but we as individuals have not received enough of the life and light that comes from the fountain of life that we can endure all. When we meet together, why not talk of those things that will build us up in the faith? Somewhere I have read that doubt is darkness, and where there is darkness there is no life. If, then, we foster and nourish those doubts, we can not expect life, for there is not much good, strong life where there is darkness. Why will we take those things into our spiritual system that have no life-giving power, and will destroy the life we have. "But," says one, "of what use is a counterfeit? I think some of our spiritual experiences are only counterfeits." Are you going to throw away all of the good because you find some that are not genuine? You would not do that way with hundred dollar bills. If half or three fourths proved to be counterfeit, you would hold on to the rest. If you were not sure of the rest, you would keep them till they were proved entirely worthless. I have come to this conclusion in regard to these things. I shall measure everything by the word of God. Those I am positively sure of, I will put away as such, like putting money in the bank as a reserve fund. It is good when I put it there; why will it not continue thus? Then I am not going to begin to doubt if this was true or not, and think may be I was mistaken. I will let it stand as true. It may be in the final summing up of things I will find a few counterfeits; but that will not affect the genuineness of the ones that are true. It may take time to find if some are true.

There are some things I can not understand. I may never be able to do so till a brighter, better day dawns upon us. When the mists have cleared away, we will understand some of the things that now seem so very hard to make harmonize.

One time at a prayer-meeting, at General Conference, I could not help noticing the discordant tones in the singing. There was a good spirit present, and I wondered why we could not all sing together. Then I thought, "Why, here we are from all parts of the country, of different natures, of different training, and we ought not to expect to work together in all ways." Then I thought, "Why should not God's Spirit so work with us that even in the singing we could be as one?" It seemed as if a voice said, "This is more than you ought to expect. We are in school. A teacher can not make a child learn unless he wills to do something for himself, then he can not learn all at once. The Holy Spirit can not make one learn unless he wills to do something." We must be taught. We must do some things for ourselves. We are human, and it will take a thousand years to reach perfection.

Across the street is a house, a nice, comfortable, pleasant-looking home. A few months ago it was moved here from the country, and the verdict of nearly every one was, "That man will never get that building to look like anything. It will be a regular eyesore there all the time." The man said, "There is good material in that building, and I can make a good house for some one." The carpenters went to work; the masons laid a good, solid foundation; the carpenters put a door here and a large window there; a nice porch; the shape of the roof was changed; and then when a new coat of paint was added, it was a neat looking, comfortable, and substantial house.

Now what is there in this for us? We meet many a person in whom there is good material for a good worker in the gospel; but lots of hard work may have to be done to get that person so he will be of use. In his character, some things have to be developed, some things have to be taken away, and others put in their place; but if the material we have to work with is good, there is no need to despair. If we are not willing to work with that person, and use lots of time and patience, we need not expect the finished life to stand as a character of usefulness. All buildings do not require the same amount of work, and all do not serve the same purpose. Neither do we as individuals require the same training, neither is our work the same.

As citizens of the kingdom of God, the same rule will apply to all. To be good citizens of our nation, or of the kingdom of God, we must obey all the laws regulating that kingdom; but if we have certain duties to perform, certain places of trust and usefulness to occupy, we will have to obey certain other requirements than if we were to occupy some different places.

The question for us all to settle is this, "Am I doing the things which are to build up my spiritual life and that of others, or am I doing the things that will tear down?" May we be able to say with Paul, "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Let us furnish good material for the building of that which we expect to inherit hereafter.

N. I. H.

• • • • •

MARRIAGE ACCORDING TO THE LAW OF GOD A REMEDY FOR DIVORCE.

And I, God, created man in mine own image, in the image of mine Only Begotten created I him; male and female created I them. And I, God, blessed them, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply.—Genesis 1: 29, I. T. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh.—Ibid., 2: 30. Marriage is ordained of God unto man . . . and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure [or race] of man, according to his creation before the world was made.—Doctrine and Covenants 49: 3.

That the present generation might better understand their duty, the Lord has made it more clear that marriage is appointed of God unto man:

Verily I say unto you, that all things unto me are spiritual, and not at any time have I given unto you a law which was temporal, neither any man, nor the children of men; neither Adam your father, whom I created; behold, I gave unto him that he should be an agent unto himself; and I gave unto him commandment, but no temporal commandment gave I unto him; for my commandments are spiritual; they are not natural, nor temporal, neither carnal nor sensual.—Doctrine and Covenants 28: 9.

From these scriptures we learn that marriage, as appointed of God, includes both natural and spiritual; and, when thus joined together, by the authority of Jesus Christ, a man and wife can not be legally separated; when married according to the intent of the spiritual law, they never want divorce. The law is both human, natural, and spiritual. There is nothing carnal or sensual in the relation of the sexes in observing the command of God to increase and multiply. The Lord declares this is a spiritual law. And, to obtain the best results, it must be observed with spiritual intent. Nothing carnal or sensual can be acceptable to God or profitable to man. This law, as given, is far-reaching in its consequences. Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. If he sow to gratify carnal desire, that shall he reap,—not only in himself, but in his posterity, as like begets like. So mankind reap what they have sown. This is the great source from which our boys have to sow "wild oats."

In Doctrine and Covenants we learn that all things that pertain to the government of God are governed by law. It is written that God hath given a law unto all things, by which they move in their times and in their seasons, even the courses of the heavens and the earth, which is the mother of all pertaining to the flesh, whether in the animal or vegetable kingdoms. All are governed by law, whether written or unwritten. The unwritten law should govern the relation of the sexes, whether animal or human. All these increase and multiply in their order, in their times and seasons, according to the decree of the great Jehovah. One of the first commands God gave to Adam and Eve was to increase and multiply. The unwritten law that governs all the animal creations, manifested a desire for increase. The Bible tells us that Adam knew his wife, and she conceived, and brought forth a son, Cain. He grew up to be a murderer, a wicked man. Possibly Adam and his wife did not understand the law God had given them was spiritual, and should be observed with spiritual intent. Possibly the sensual, carnal nature predominated. The Lord said of Adam, "Behold, I gave unto him that he should be an agent unto himself." He had the privilege of choice. He could follow the carnal and the sensual, or observe the spiritual, according to nature's law. Possibly that may account for the difference in the make-up of Cain as a wicked man, and righteous Abel, and his brother, Seth.

The law, as given to our first parents, has been renewed in the restoration of the gospel. It still remains a spiritual law, and should not be entered into to gratify the lustful passions of man. Marriage, as appointed of God, is a sacred ordinance, and should be regarded as such, especially among church members. Jesus taught, "By their fruits ye shall know them." If men sow to gratify the flesh only, they shall reap a corrupt progeny. Their offspring will as surely sow "wild oats." A corrupt tree can not bring forth good fruit. Nature's laws will surely vindicate Nature's God.

Marriage and divorce has become a by-word and a reproach to the people of the United States; and among church members it is becoming a serious problem, as quite a number of writers in the HERALD have expressed their views, yet their views differ.

As nothing of importance happens without a cause, we ask, Is there not a cause for divorce, as conditions exist? We shall plainly state our understanding of the reasons for conditions as we find them. One of the main causes for divorce is because the majority of men enter the marriage contract simply as a license to gratify sexual passion. They have no regard to nature's law, as given of God.

They observe neither times nor seasons, as appointed to govern the relation of the sexes. The animal creation observe the law implanted within them, and as a general rule they bring forth the highest type of their kind. The same natural law was implanted in the human breast; but man has become corrupt. The Lord says, My vineyard is corrupted; there are but few that do good, all having corrupt minds. This is the chief cause for divorce: corrupt actions, as a result of corrupt minds. And in the church, among the leading quorums, we seem to be at a loss to find a remedy.

The object of marriage has not been regarded as a spiritual contract, only in part, as we perform a religious ceremony and offer prayer. As a church we have neglected to add to our faith, virtue, to spiritually observe all moral duties and obligations, one of the most important of which is incorporated in the marriage covenant. Ninety per cent of the causes for divorce originate in the uncontrol of lustful passions of man. He loses sight of true manhood. Through sexual excess his vital power is prostituted to intemperance. His unfortunate companion becomes disgusted and disheartened. Unable to endure the conditions she perhaps ignorantly accepted in becoming a wife, she finally applies for divorce, but seldom gives the real cause.

To apply a remedy for this evil, is a topic for consideration at General Conference. We are satisfied the remedy is found in the gospel. Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ:

Verily I say unto you, that all things unto me are spiritual, and not at any time have I given unto you a law which was temporal, neither any man, nor the children of men; neither Adam your father, whom I created; behold, I gave unto him that he should be an agent unto himself; and I gave unto him commandment, but no temporal commandment gave I unto him; for my commandments are spiritual; they are not natural, nor temporal, neither carnal nor sensual.

They that worship God must do so according to the spirit and letter of the law. The spirit and letter must be joined together. We may observe the letter of the law so far as outward appearance is concerned, and become church members. We may become officers in the church. We may preach and teach, and partake of the sacrament, and perform many duties; yet, if we lack the spiritual intent and desire to fulfill all righteousness, we are not members of the church of Jesus Christ; but we may be found among church members who may say: "Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name; and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I say, Ye never knew me; depart from me ye that work iniquity." My earnest desire is to be found acting the part of a wise man.

GEORGE DERRY.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 13, 1908.

Original Poetry

He Pardoned Me.

(Tune: "He Leadeth Me.")

I've found the truth that Jesus taught,
By His own precious blood I'm bought,
And by obedience now I see,
That God, through Jesus, pardoned me.

REFRAIN.

He pardoned me, He pardoned me,
From all my sins He set me free,
To His commands I did agree,
And God through Jesus pardoned me.

Ofttimes I've prayed 'mid darkest night,
For faith that I might walk aright,
For light that all my doubts might flee,
And know that God had pardoned me.

No more, dear Lord, will I repine,
The ransom's paid and I am thine,
With joy I'll keep each just decree,
And praise the One who pardoned me.

Oh, may the Gospel I have found,
Shed its bright beams the world around,
That all may come and bend the knee,
And serve the Lord who pardoned me.

JAMES L. EDWARDS.

MELROSE, Massachusetts.

Assurance of God's Love.

What joy, to receive from our dear Lord above
Choice blessings and gifts, of his wonderful love!
He gives heed to our pleading, and helps us to bear
Each burden and trial, if we're humble in prayer.

Let's guard every moment; each thought, word, and deed;
Keep our hearts pure and meek, till from error we're freed.
Temptations pass by us—hope dwells by our side—
Sweet peace "abides" with us, when Christ is our guide.

May we ever observe each holy command
Contained in this gospel—complete and so grand!
That we may endure, with faith, to the end;
Being worthy the name of Christ Jesus,—our Friend.

MABEL M. LEA.

NAPA JUNCTION, California.

What "Single Tax" Means.

The Single Tax theory is based on the principle recognized by leading philosophers, economists, and jurists of all ages; that the earth is the heritage of the people, and that land should not be absolutely private property; even our modern governments recognize this in their law of eminent domain, and Moses, Blackstone, Adam Smith, John Stuart Mill, Thomas Jefferson, and Herbert Spencer have specifically declared this as a principle of justice; yet no one had discovered a practicable way of giving effect to this principle,—various schemes such as subdivision of the land among the people every ten years having been tried and found of little avail in escaping the well-recognized evils of land monopoly—until George thought of the natural and easy method of perfectly working out an apportionment of nature's bounties and values created by the community by a tax on the value of land, in the place of every other tax.—C. H. Ingersoll in the National Magazine for March.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. T. A. Hougas, secretary, Macedonia, Pottawattamie County, Iowa; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, Treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, 630 South Crysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

He Cares for Me.

He cares for me, oh, blessed thought,
To be his child is a glorious lot.
Though suffering comes, and trial deep,
After life's "fitful fever," I shall sleep

Where suffering, sorrow, pain or death
Can never enter this blessed rest;
And where the loved ones gone before
Shall welcome me to the glad shore.

Then help me, Lord, the cross to bear,
Of suffering, sorrow, trial, and care;
Knowing he who "chose this path for me,"
Will the great burden-bearer be.

For in the great unknown, some day,
We'll understand the mysterious way
Of him who chasteneth those he loves,
To bring them safely to his home above.

PRISCILLA.

KEOKUK, Iowa.

Dear Editor: I thought, as I was reading the Mothers' Home Column, I would like to join your number. I do not take the HERALD; but my brother (may God bless him and his) sends me his from San Francisco, California. As I was reading the number for July 3, I wondered how "Have faith in the boy" would answer for the girl. I think there are some girls who would like to feel that their mother put some faith in them.

I enjoy reading the letters in the HERALD. I do hope and pray that there will be an opportunity for the isolated brethren and sisters to attend meeting. I could not do without our church. It is all there is in this life worth anything to me. I always remember the Saints in my prayers, and ask an interest in theirs. I also pray for the time when my husband and son will be numbered among the Saints, and I feel that my prayer will be answered. My husband has at times been much interested.

Your sister in the one faith,

M. A. P.

"Who is Doing Your Work."

In all the world there is nothing so wonderful as "God's way with a soul." This, the actual experience of one woman, may have its message for others.

She had had a beautiful girlhood, rich in all that love and wealth could give. Then trouble came and everything was swept away from her—parents, husband, children, and wealth. In her anguish she prayed passionately for death; death alone was refused her.

Her brothers took her abroad, hoping so to lift her from her grief, but though several years passed so she still prayed for death. Then one night she had a dream. She thought that she had gone to heaven and saw her husband coming toward her. She ran to him full of joy; to her terror, no answering joy shone on his face, only surprise and almost indignation.

"How did you come here?" he asked. "They did not say that you were to be sent for; I did not expect you for a long time."

"But aren't you glad?" she cried, struggling with her pain.

But, again, he only answered as before: "How did you come? I didn't expect you." And there was no gladness in his tone or eyes.

With a bitter cry she turned from him. "I'll go to my parents," she faltered. "They, at least, will welcome me." So she went on until she found her parents, but instead of the tender love for which her heart was sick, she met only the same cold looks of amazement, the same astonished questions. Faint and heart-broken she turned from them, too.

"I'll go to my Savior," she cried. "He loves me if no one else does."

Then, in her dream, she reached the Savior. She was right, there was no coldness there; but through his love the sorrow of his voice thrilled her into wondering silence. "Child, child, who is doing your work down there?" Then at last, she understood.

When she woke in the morning with the memory of her dream strong upon her heart, it was to find a new heaven and a new earth. She had no children of her own, but God's little ones, struggling under burdens that bent the childish backs and brought pitiful lines of care into the childish faces, were all about her. Down in the heart of the city she found her work—and her God.—Forward.

Do Not Be a Waster.

There is much waste in personal lives. Most of us waste a great deal of time—and time is more precious than gold. Some people waste it by days, months, years. They live a life of idleness. Thus not only do they squander their own time, but they make themselves a burden to society, for others must support them. Every non-producer is a waster in a double sense. Every idle person wastes the cost of maintenance in good money which other thrifty people have toiled to earn. Even many who are not classed among the idle, who are reasonably busy, waste great values of time every year in little fragments which they lose out of the days.

There is much waste, too, of ability and capacity. Not many persons make the best possible use of their life. A man with five talents develops and uses one. It has been well said that "the object of life is to grow." Yet there are comparatively few persons who grow continuously. With too many men their first years are their best. They start off with enthusiasm and give promise of something very fine, but they soon settle down into a lazy content and the splendid promise is never realized. Yet it might have been realized. The difference between attainment and possibility is waste. Indolence is a terrible waster. It makes poor, miserable failures of men who might have been worthy successes.—Selected.

Prayer Union.

Pray for my mother, that she may be healed of the cancer on the back of her right hand. Oh, may our heavenly Father see fit to give her the blessing! Pray for me, that I may be found faithful in the good cause, and that I may raise my two dear little fatherless girls up in a way that will be well pleasing in his sight.

Your sister,

LADORE, Colorado.

LENA M. WOOD.

When a man is wrong and won't admit it, he always gets angry.—Haliburton.

Letter Department

DERBY, England, March 10, 1908.

Editors Herald: The dear HERALD is an ever welcome visitor to our home, where we love to peruse its pages, which bring joy to our souls, when reading the many noble, inspiring testimonies, and thrilling experiences of God's children. We still continue to meet together here, as circumstances permit, good feeling prevailing among us. We have some few who are interested, who, we have reason to believe, are near the kingdom. The missionaries left us some three months or more ago, but we still continue to serve the interests of the church every opportunity we have. It is a very difficult matter to get our work before the people of this country, who are steeped in the traditions of men. The churches have adopted all kinds of methods to attract and hold the attention of the masses. They have clever elocutionists, word painters, songsters, and all kinds of college tradesmen; and even these fail to cope with the growing disinterestedness in spiritual matters.

I really believe the churches themselves are largely to blame for this state of things, inasmuch as they tell stories of how wicked people have been converted at the last moment of their lives; thus the people grow careless and indifferent.

But, I thank God the Latter Day Saints have not so learned the scriptures. We realize we have no time to lose; but every day of our lives should be consecrated to the service of God, if we ever expect to reach anything like the perfect stage; so we deem it our duty to warn others to flee from the wrath to come when opportunity arises. Socialism is rampant on every hand, atheism, infidelity quite common, which, no doubt has been brought about through the hypocrisy which is to be found in the churches. Would to God the world would patiently investigate our claims. They would soon see their condition was but the fulfillment or the scriptures, the result of not listening to the voice of God, but of giving heed to the commandments of men; and nothing but a return to the "good old way" will bring joy and satisfaction.

As secretary of this district, I should like to give just a brief review of the condition of affairs. During the year 1907, a considerable number of Saints left Burton on Trent for Brooklyn, New York, while Stafford Branch has lost ten of its members, who emigrated to Lumsden, Saskatchewan, Canada. Bro. John Dyche and family, and Brn. Cooper and Bates, missionaries to that territory, please note; and, if possible, call on them. I have no doubt they would be pleased to see you.

In Nottingham, where once a branch of the church existed, a great interest at present prevails; and we trust ere long an organization will again be formed. The work in Leicester and Birmingham moves along slowly. It is true seven were added to Birmingham during the fall of the year, chiefly the product of the Sunday-school, I believe. Otherwise, the outlook is not very bright. But, alas! Some of our pioneers and stalwart heroes have fallen from the ranks. Others with silvered locks, bent frames, or faltering steps, indicate that the summer of life is almost over; while others have fallen asleep. There are others, who are careless and indifferent, who do not seem to have received the true Spirit of the work, the good seed evidently having fallen on stony ground or among thorns. Some have slackened pace, and others fallen out by the way. Sometimes we think there is a dearth of spiritual manifestations, when compared with days gone by. But, dear Saints of this district, let us gather our scattered forces together and rally again. Come up to conference. Let the young be encouraged and privileged to put on the ministerial armor. Then we may expect brighter times, joyous experiences; and we shall prove that the Lord hath not forsaken us. Let us say to ourselves, "Awake my soul, stretch every nerve, and press with vigor on." Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

Your brother and colaborer for Christ,
100 Havelock Road. JOSEPH ECCLESTONE.

SOUTH BOARDMAN, Michigan, March 28, 1908.

Editors Herald: We have experienced great pleasure in the company of the Saints, since moving to this branch. Here, where the Saints have made a temporary gathering, we receive a foretaste of what we will enjoy in the greater gathering in the near future. Just for example, while my companion was sick this winter, the sisters kindly looked after things in such a manner that I was not hindered from my labors, which was a blessing indeed. And we see the Saints doing things like this continually, preaching to the world a sermon louder than tones of thunder. Perhaps the reason I love such sermons as these is because they are the kind of sermons that led me to investigate this glorious gospel; but, as I dare not let my pen keep pace with my thoughts along this line, for fear of trying your patience, I will close with love to all.

Your brother,
Box 228. J. H. ROCKWOOD.

ST. CLAIR, Michigan, March 27, 1908.

Dear Herald: I realize that the fast-speeding moments of time are precious, and that each of us must give account of misspent time and talents lying idle. As I look abroad upon the world, I see the heralds of the coming of the Son of God: troubles, woes, and destructions, the air red with assassinations and crime, the world madly seeking after pleasure, while tens of thousands are being irresistibly drawn into the whirlpool of worldliness and sin; and many of scattered Israel are being lulled to sleep, so fast asleep that nothing but the midnight cry will arouse them. God has pleaded with them in a still small voice of love in the past; but to-day the echo of his words is like the rumbling thunder, ever growing louder and nearer, and will soon break forth in wrath and fury on the heads of the unfaithful. The history of ancient Israel will be repeated in the woes and wailings of Israel of latter days, when they awake to the fact that the fury of the storm has burst upon them, and the voice of God is silent in their midst. What will then avail the glittering baubles for which they have bartered their birthright, or the bright promises of pleasure and worldly gain with which Satan has so craftily lured them? The glitter of gold was on them; but alas! alas for the awakening! Words fail me, as I realize the terrible condition of those who are deaf alike to words of love or denunciation. Are we altogether guiltless of our brothers' blood before the throne of God? Have we pleaded with them with words of love and charity? Have our words brought encouragement and comfort to the soul, struggling with the trials of life and saddened with sorrow and care? How little we know of the inmost soul of our brother. He may be hungering for a cheerful, kind word, and we drive him to deeper despair by our cold, unkind attitude. We are so dignified, so unapproachable; in short, as unlike our blessed Master as possible. Can we sympathize with the humble, if we so exalt ourselves? It is impossible to enter into the sorrows of the sorrowful without charity. Oh, to be clothed with charity! Charity, how much we need you, to be clothed with humility, "in honor preferring one another."

Satan's weapons, envy, jealousy, dark suspicions, rivalry, pride, have no abiding place in the heart of the child of God. Humility, and a love for all humanity, a love that is broad and deep and humble enough to meet all on a common level,— that is the kind of love that Jesus had. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." When we get to that pinnacle, then we have "come up higher."

Is it possible to even carry this beautiful gospel to the world without the spirit of humility and love? They have heard us make loud claims for the gospel; but in nine cases out of ten they will keep a sharp outlook to see the fruits of it in our own lives. We can not carry the gospel in our hearts and a sneer on our lips at the same time. The great, loving heart of Jesus, filled with love to fallen humanity, left his beautiful home in glory, and humbled himself that we might have the gospel. It is our inestimable privilege to bring the same, pure, white gospel to a darkened world. Then woe to us, if the blood of these people will be required at our hands.

MRS. A. MCKENZIE.

SUTTON, in Ashfield, England.

Dear Herald: You are always welcome at our home. Before coming into the church of Jesus Christ, I was a Baptist for twelve years. I remember attending one baptismal service, particularly, when Reverend Baker had nine candidates before him for baptism; and, while in the water, ready for immersion, he told the congregation they could either "do with, or without it, as it was not necessary." I thought, "How strange. Christ himself had to go down into the waters of baptism, to fulfill all righteousness. Never was guile found in his mouth. Christ and his apostles taught baptism for the remission of sins. Christ said, 'My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man shall do his will, he shall know of the doctrine.'" So, with the Lord's help, I investigated his doctrine; and am pleased to say that I know this is the work of the Lord, having received many testimonies, in those signs that follow the true believer.

When entering the church, I had suffered with epileptic fits for twelve years—had one two nights before I was baptized. Praise God, I have never had one since. My daughter, Emily, had to be led about, at one time, having films over her eyes. We gave heed to the ordinance that is set in the church for the healing of the sick; and, under the hands of J. W. Gillen, she received her sight. She had never been able to go to school; but she was able to attend school for a few years after.

We have had the pleasure of having Bro. Rushton among us, and also Bro. Greenwood, and Bro. Taylor.

I was led to rejoice while reading the letter from Sr. Schofield. I know her testimony concerning tithing was true. At some future date I may send you our testimony concerning the same.

Your sister in Christ,

MARY JANE RALLINGS.

COMSTOCK, Nebraska, March 30, 1908.

Editors Herald: As I was moderator for Bro. W. M. Self during the ten evenings of debate between him and Elder C. A. Loney of the Primitive Christian Church, I drop you a line to say another decided victory was scored for the truth.

Elder Loney was acquainted in Elsie, Nebraska, where the debate was held, and he had so deported himself that he had very few friends outside of his church there. So while Bro. Self and I were strangers in the place, he had no advantage over us on that score. The people seemed to be willing to give us a fair hearing.

The propositions discussed were church propositions. Mr. Loney affirmed for their church five evenings, and Bro. Self affirmed for our church five evenings. The usual arguments were introduced. Loney tried to bring "Joe Smith" and the Book of Mormon into the issue and commenced to ape Clark Braden about the "hole in the rent"; but we raised a point of order, stating that those were other propositions, and that we were ready to take them up with them at the close of this debate if they wished. So they were ruled out. Mr. Loney then said he was ready for them; but when the debate closed he said nothing further about it. We were ready, though, and had our propositions drafted.

The Lord was with us, and gave us favor with the people. And, while Mr. Loney was very sarcastic, the good Spirit was in the ascendancy as a rule. Judging from the way we were treated, we made friends from the start. Bankers, merchants, hotel folks, farmers, and all had a friendly greeting for us, and took us to their homes, and we were obliged to leave many requests to come and visit without responding. And we were urged to return and preach to them.

When we took up our proposition, we captured the choir, and had splendid music and singing, much to the chagrin of our opponents. They were so defeated that they tried to get the organist to cease playing for us, remarking that if they could do that it would break up the choir, I was told. But the organist continued to play, and they all sang with a zeal; and in their manners and demonstrations seemed to be anxious for our opponents to know that they were our friends.

Bro. Dickey, who lives there and supported us in the debate, Sr. Dickey also bearing her part cheerfully, are worthy of double honor for the deep interest they manifested, and material aid rendered to us. I am glad to know we left them bubbling over with thanks to God for the results of the debate, and encouraged for the Christian warfare.

May God bless the good seed sown, as a result of the debate, with the righteous efforts of his servants everywhere, is our prayer. Yours in the one faith,

C. W. PRETTYMAN.

COFFEYVILLE, Kansas, March 23, 1908.

Dear Herald: We will not try to express by words the joy we receive as we peruse the columns of the Ensign, HERALD, and the other church papers. May the Lord continue to bless the editors in their work, is our prayer.

We certainly love to read the letters from God's people from all parts of the land, which encourage and strengthen us spiritually. Perhaps a few who are interested in, or know of the Angola Branch, would like to hear from us. Though this branch has been at death's door for some time, we trust it is slowly recovering, and we entertain sweet hopes of permanent health and strength, spiritually, if God's Spirit continues to strive with his people here as it has been doing of late. O Lord, grant that we may not reach that condition where thou wilt be forced to remember thy saying, "My Spirit will not always strive with man."

Our branch president, Bro. Westervelt, has encouraged us to meet on the first Sundays in the months, to have Saints' meeting, and he preaches for us. April 5 we will, (God permitting,) partake of the sacrament, the first time for over two years.

We so often read letters in the church papers, from isolated ones, who long for the privilege of attending Saints' meetings. My heart goes out to them; for I can sympathize with them, as, up to February, we had had no Saints' meetings of any kind for over a year. And we Angola Saints now have the chance opened up for us to meet together, to have our spiritual strength renewed and strengthened; but, dear Saints, will we let this chance slip? Let us all make one more effort to bring about the revival of our branch. May the Lord bless us to this end, is my prayer.

Bro. Thurman and Walters, we still remember your noble efforts with us, and you did much good here, though it might have seemed otherwise to you. We appreciate your help, and it was not in vain. I would be glad to see you, or any of the missionaries here again.

This world is truly growing very wicked. In all of four Methodist revivals near here I only heard of three poor sinners being saved. (?) My chum, who recently joined them, says he does not see why they can not have any "luck" any more. Since he joined them, two of their ministers have flopped over to the Christian Church, and another (their present preacher) has turned out to be a Holiness, and was after the boy to pay his church dues, and because he did not pay quite all he asked for, he went off mad, without even a "thank you" for what he did get. The boy is getting discouraged, and who can blame him?

I am thankful that God has blessed me with a desire to serve him; and ask the Saints to remember me in their prayers, that I may always be willing to trust all to God.

Your brother in Christ,

ELMER HART.

CARRINGTON, North Dakota, March 9, 1908.

Dear Saints: A few words from this part of the vineyard may be read with pleasure. My home is in Des Moines, Iowa, and since December, I have been in the Dakotas. While in South Dakota, I have, through the kindness of Bro. Blair, been able to locate a few of the Saints, and meet with some of them, having the pleasure of meeting Elder Edward Rannie among the rest. At Jamestown, North Dakota, I also met with the Saints, and we sat up till in the late hours talking over our experiences. In Carrington I met Bro. Sparling, who has the honor of being the first elder to bring the latter-day gospel into the Dakotas. Arrangements were quickly made for services for Saturday night, and Sunday; and, though only a few being present, God's Spirit was with us, in great abundance, which was highly enjoyed. At the Sunday evening service, three of Bro. Harry Peek's children were blessed, and during the blessing of little Ruth, the spirit of prophecy was present, and great are the promises given our little loved one. At the close of the preaching service, Sr. Peek, as we shall now be privileged to call her, offered herself for baptism, as did also the eldest daughter, Hazel. It was a grand sight to see mother and daughter ready at the same time.

As a traveling man, I must say there is no joy so sweet as communion with Saints; and, while out in the world, meeting and dealing continually with men of the world, I am in great need of the prayers of the Saints, that I may be guided by the Holy Spirit to do the will of my Lord and Savior, and to set such an example as shall not bring reproach upon the fair name of the church. I always try to meet with the Saints as often as possible and find that the scattered of the flock always welcome me, which makes me stronger in the faith, and in love for our brothers and sisters. Asking an interest in your prayers, for wisdom and strength to overcome the evils of life, I am,

Yours in gospel bonds,

FRANK BRIGGS.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 19, 1908.

Dear Herald: I have thought many times of writing to the HERALD, which I have taken ever since I was baptized in South Boardman, Michigan, in October, 1902. No tongue can tell of the blessings I have received in reading letters and sermons, as found in the HERALD, written by the true servants of God. How strengthening they are! I am sure, if it had not been for the HERALD and other church papers, tracts, and literature, and a continual reading of the same, I would not have the faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ and latter-day work that I have to-day.

Dear Saints, any one not taking the church papers does not realize what he is missing. In nearly every HERALD we read how God's Spirit is working with his faithful ones, so that some speak in tongues, having the interpretation to the same; others have the spirit of prophecy. How encouraging it is to us; and especially to those living in isolated places, to know that God is unchangeable, and is mindful of the latter-day Saints, as he was of the former-day saints.

Permit me to say, I just received an "Autobiography of Elder R. C. Evans," and I can truly say I thank God for that book. It is so interesting; it seems to satisfy the hungry soul. The book contains about four hundred pages. I read it through in a little over two days, regardless of my regular work of nine hours per day. It has made me a stronger man in the faith of God. Every Saint should have one of his books. It is just the book to let your neighbors read. I was overjoyed and rejoiced many times with tears in reading it. It contains many accounts of miracles of healing; no doubt some of the best on record, showing how God's Spirit has worked through his faithful servants. The two sermons at the closing of his book have references and proofs on the polygamy question, clearing the Prophet Joseph Smith of that vile doctrine of polygamy. Those two sermons, alone, are worth more than the price of the book. And any one, with an honest heart, reading them will have a better opinion of the Latter Day Saints, and more respect for their religion.

My companion and I are trying to do what we can to manifest to others the light we have received in the gospel; but we feel we are the very weakest ones of the Saints, and we ask all to earnestly pray for us, that our heavenly Father might spare the life of our only child. God saw fit to take the first child given us. We were not living, then, as faithfully as we are now. We believe that God does things sometimes which are not pleasing to us, at first; but it brings us nearer to God in the end; and we see a need of living closer to our heavenly Father. In gospel bonds,

W. H. WAKEFIELD.

MOUNT CARMEL, Illinois, March 30, 1908.

Dear Herald: I have often enjoyed reading your columns, and hardly know how to express my appreciation of the good letters of all the Saints. It has been nineteen years since I first heard the Latter Day Saints, and I was made to believe it to be the doctrine of our blessed Savior. When I look at the pages of the HERALD, and see so many contending for the faith that was once delivered to the Saints, my heart is made to rejoice. Are we trying to prove by our lives, to the world, that we are Saints indeed?

I live here almost alone in the faith. About five years ago my father died, leaving me the only Saint at that time; but since then I have told the angel message to all I could, and, last fall, Bro. Morris, from Xenia, came over and preached and baptized three, and one of them has passed to that home of rest for those who are faithful. I have attended other churches and helped in Sunday-school among the Holiness people. I like their belief this much, that we must live pure lives. Those who have church privileges, and go to church, often do not know how much it will help them to live good lives. I love to think of that reunion with the Saints, when we shall clasp glad hands for ever, and ever be with Jesus.

I wish to say, Any elder passing by will always find a welcome in my home. My prayer is that God will bless every effort put forth for his kingdom.

Your sister in the one faith,

231 Mulberry Street.

MRS. LEORA GRIESS.

"Have You a Few Pennies to Spare?"

Dear Herald: This is the first time I have ever written to your pages. I am a cripple, have been for nearly a year. I can not walk or even stand alone. I am therefore unable to earn money in any way. I have neither father nor brother—my mother being a widow lady and poor, it is almost impossible to obtain the necessaries of life, besides the oil and medicine that I should have. I am only twenty-three years old; and, although I have been in the church for years, I feel that I have not improved the time as I should, leaving much undone that should have been done, and doing many things that should have been left undone.

Oh, dear Saints! do not forget me in your prayers. I feel so weak, and it is so plain to me that I do not possess the amount of faith that I should. Please remember, no matter how few the pennies they will all count, and go to help me along the path of life, which now seems very dark at times. And may God's richest blessing rest upon each one of you. I would be very glad of a letter also from any of the Saints—they would help to brighten the days.

Now, dear brothers and sisters, pray for me, that I may get well, and that I may be not only willing but able to go out in the world, no matter where it may be, and work for Christ, making up for the time that I have lost.

May God bless you all and keep you in the straight and narrow way, is the wish of HOWELL, Michigan.

DESDE DALEY.

News From Branches

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

Our Religio rally, at the Ivanhoe, or Forth Kansas City Branch, March 29, 1908, was a grand success in more ways than one. Large attendance, both in afternoon and at night, and many outsiders present. The program was well arranged and prepared, and all who took part seemed to have given their subject thought, and rendered their part in such a manner that it was both enjoyable and instructive.

We were glad to see so many of our young men and maidens developing in gospel work. They are not only becoming, but are now, a power in the hand of God for good in this great city. Their light is shining for good in shops, stores, offices, and in fact almost everywhere; and that is according to God's word. Therefore, you young Religians, take courage, and press forward; you are building better than you thought, and great will be your reward in the sweet by and by.

But there was one part of the program which was not on the printed form, which was sandwiched in between the afternoon and evening sessions, by a number of the sisters, in a manner we have never before witnessed at any of our Religio rallies; and we are so thoroughly converted that we think it should never be omitted at any Religio rally hereafter, if possible to avoid it, because of the social feature of it. No person was invited by any one to go home with them; but all were invited to come into an adjoining room, where tables were prepared, and furnished with paper plates, tea-spoons, bread, butter, potato salad, sliced ham, pickles, doughnuts, cake, bananas, etc. About thirty persons were seated at once. More than seventy persons partook of the most excellent lunch thus prepared; and for about two hours "we, as a whole," had one of the most social and enjoyable times we ever witnessed, in which all partook; and it seems to us that this part of the program should, if possible to avoid it, never be omitted.

F. C. WARNKY.

2424 Wabash Avenue.

He who is firmly seated in authority soon learns to think security, and not progress, the highest lesson of statecraft.—J. R. Lowell.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.—Conference of the Kentucky and Tennessee District convened with the High Hill Branch, February 29, 1908. T. C. Kelley chosen to preside; D. E. Tucker, secretary pro tem; Sr. Nellie Williams, assistant. Branches reporting: Farmington, 150; Foundry Hill, 75; Liberty Hill, 70. Ministers reporting: J. R. McClain, C. L. Snow, D. E. Tucker, T. C. Kelley. Teacher: J. W. Caldwell. Report of Sunday-school convention read. One hundred and forty-eight officers and pupils engaged in Sunday-school work in the district. Report of tent committee: Received, $1.00. Committee continued. Moved to request all members of the district to place their membership in the nearest branch to where they reside. Carried. Election of district officers: J. R. McClain, president; J. J. Adair, secretary; N. Ella Adair, treasurer. Delegates to General Conference: J. M. Stubbart, C. L. Snow, T. C. Kelley, J. R., W. L., and Alma E. McClain, Ross, Mary, and Grace Shupe, Bobbie Williams and Doctor A. P. Skaggs. Moved that the delegates present be empowered to cast the majority and minority vote. Bishop's agent's report. Total receipts, $110.57, paid out, $238.01; Due agent, $127.44. Adjourned to meet at Oakland, June 6, 1908. J. J. Adair, secretary.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA.—The semi-annual conference of the Central Nebraska District met at Inman, February 15, 1908. The meeting was called to order by the district president, Levi Gamet, at 10 a. m. Bro. Rumel was chosen secretary pro tem. Bro. Gamet reported, as president of the district; and Bro. Rumel, as vice-president. Branches reporting: Meadow Grove, 58; Inman, 68; Clearwater, 71; Bonesteel, 79. Bishop's agent's report showed: Receipts, $206.08; expenditures, $200.22; balance due church, $5.86. Ministry reporting: J. H. Jackson, E. Downey, W. M. Rumel, Levi Gamet, C. H. Derry, Hartman Ek, and W. E. Kester. The district officers were all sustained. Delegates to General Conference: Chas. Williams, J. H. Jackson and wife, Levi Gamet and wife, W. M. Rumel, C. N. Hutchins, Srs. L. Lewis, and E. Bender, and Bro. C. W. Prettyman. In case of division delegates present to cast majority and minority vote. Clearwater was chosen as the place for holding the August conference. A committee was appointed, composed of E. Downey, Hartman Ek, and N. S. Butler, to have charge of the coming reunion. The prayer and preaching services were spiritual and edifying. W. E. Kester, secretary.

NORTHWESTERN KANSAS.—One hundred and sixth quarterly conference of the Northwestern Kansas district met with the Hill City Branch, March 14, 1908, at 10.30 a. m. Officers for conference: John Teeters, president; R. Hoskins, assistant; Myrtle Coop, secretary; Mary Teeters, assistant. Elders reporting: John A. Teeters and S. A. Madden; Priests: V. Boatwright, A. B. Young, and J. P. Anderson. Bishop's agent, John A. Teeters, reported: On hand last report, $28.20; total receipts since he was appointed Bishop's agent, $118.50; disbursed, $100.71. District secretary, Eva L. Teeters, and Myrtle Coop, district treasurer, reported. Secretary's expense bill of 21 cents, allowed. Moved and carried that the district officers issue John A. Teeters an elder's license, and Bro. Hoskins a priest's license. Delegates to General Conference: E. H. Ebert, W. E. Peak, M. F. Gowell, and Sr. Ebert. Mt. Olive Branch recommended the ordination of A. B. Young to office of elder, and M. J. Boatwright to office of priest. Ordinations were granted. District president authorized to provide for the ordinations. Moved and carried that the delegates that were elected to General Conference may choose or substitute any one they see fit. Moved and carried that the delegates be instructed to cast full vote of the district, and in case of division, cast minority and majority vote. At the Sunday prayer-meeting, Bro. Young was ordained by John A. Teeters, and Bro. Boatwright by Brn. Etheridge and Anderson, to the respective office asked for, herein before mentioned. At 5.50 Carl Frank was baptized by John A. Teeters in a clear, sparkling pool of water; was confirmed at the evening meeting by Brn. Teeters and Young. Adjourned to call of president. Eva L. Teeters, secretary.

Conference Notices.

The Alabama District conference will convene with the Lone Star Branch, Saturday, May 9, at 10 a. m. Will the branch presidents please send their branch reports to me at least five days before conference. Do not send your reports too late to reach me before conference and send them to the secretary and not to the president of district. I need your report to look over, and to make my report from. M. S. Wiggins, McKenzie, Alabama, secretary.

Marriages.

HOLMAN—MCCULLOCH.—At the home of the bride's parents, Everett, Washington, on February 11, 1908, Bro. Frederick W. Holman and Sr. Bertha McCulloch, in the presence of relatives of the contracting parties only, were united in marriage, Elder William Johnson officiating. Bro. Holman is a man of sterling qualities, who has been a resident of Seattle for a number of years, and has taken a very active part in all departments of the church. Sr. Holman is also an energetic worker in the Master's cause. Bro. and Sr. Holman will be at home at 1202½ Seventh Avenue, Seattle. We bespeak for them a peaceful, happy, and prosperous journey through life.

Died.

HASKELL.—Peter H., at his home at Little Deer Isle, Maine. The cause of his death was cancer of the stomach, from which he suffered very much. He was born November 19, 1853. Died March 27, 1908. He united with the church, May 3, 1896, and died in the faith. Funeral-sermon by W. E. LaRue.

"Prohibition" Fifty Years Ago and To-Day.

This is not the first wave of prohibition that has swept over the country. Fifty-four years ago there was one that swept over the Northern States with as great violence as the one that is now passing over the South. Then Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Delaware, Michigan, Indiana, and Iowa, by acts of their legislatures, forbade the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. Nine Northern States went "dry" in a single year, the year 1855.

The liquor men, dazed and frightened at the revolution, set themselves desperately to resist it. By one pretense or another there was widespread nullification of prohibition. One State after another receded from its radical action, until nearly all adopted the system of license. So that, up to a year ago, of the eighteen States that had tried the experiment of prohibition only three,—Maine, Kansas, and North Dakota,—remained in the ranks, they having adopted constitutional prohibition.

Will the present prohibition legislation be ephemeral like that of half a century ago or will it be permanent? There is every reason to believe that it will be permanent. There were more elements of permanency in the earlier movement than appeared on the surface; for during all the years that the States were falling out of the prohibitory column the people were steadily removing the saloon by "local option," till at the time there were but three prohibition States left the liquor traffic had been abolished from two thirds of the territory occupied by one half of the population of the United States. Of the 36,000,000 people who have expelled the saloon only 10,000,000 have done so by State prohibitory laws, and 26,000,000 have effected the removal by local option.—From "The nation's anti-drink crusade," by Ferdinand Cowle Iglehart, in the American Review of Reviews for April.

Work as Punishment.

Unless a mother wants to heap up trouble for herself and the child now and later on, it is better never to punish by making the culprit perform a certain amount of work, says Hilda Richmond in the Housekeeper for April. There are mothers who keep certain disagreeable tasks for little sinners, just as some cities compel their offenders against public peace to repair roads or break stone. This is risky business since it gives the child the impression that it is a misfortune to have to work.

A grown man says he hates the very sight of an onion bed because his mother made him weed the tiny plants every time he was naughty when he was a child. Onion weeding is tedious, back-breaking work at best, when it is done as a punishment it becomes horrible. A bright penny, a special treat in the way of a big orange or a trip to the pond to fish would have sent the boy whistling to the onion bed deter-

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

mined to conquer or die, but to be chained there, so to speak, with a smarting sense of his woes makes him recall those days yet.

Some mothers put the little girls to patchwork when they are restless and in mischief, but the only thing accomplished is to make the little fingers loathe the needlework. I have seen rebellious little girls making buttonholes all over a piece of old goods as punishment for some wrong-doing. The work was wasted because the mother threw it in the wastebasket the minute she was satisfied with the effort, and the children only turned out good work in order to be released.

Solitary idleness is better than work as punishment. Often when left to themselves the children would gladly take their books or work, but they always resent being ordered to work to atone for their sins. A long, quiet think will make them penitent while hard work only makes them feel injured, and gives them the lasting impression that all work is disgraceful.

Value of the Second Hague Conference.

President Butler, of Columbia University, Congressman Bartholdt, Ex-mayor Seth Low, Richard Watson Gilder, of the Century Company, Doctor Lyman Abbott, of the Outlook, and their colleagues of the executive committee of the American Branch of the Association for International Conciliation, are trying to show the American people the real importance of the Second Hague Conference. In their judgment, the conference was widely undervalued in this country, because its work has not been clearly understood. Many of the strenuous advocates of peace feel that the conference was a failure, because the delegates devoted the greater part of the four months they spent at The Hague, to plans not for peace, but to the regulation of War. However, as Doctor Scott of the State Department at Washington, himself a delegate, says: "One great concern of such a Congress must be, as far as possible, to humanize war as long as war exists."

In the words of Ambassador-designate Hill, "If the results of the conference do not seem brilliant, it is not because noble ideals were not held steadily aloft, but because it is the function of an international conference simply to register the general average of progress that has been attained." The mere fact that for four months delegates of forty-four nations worked together, learning to know each other and each other's point of view, while discussing freely the most delicate diplomatic questions, would have been simply impossible of achievement not so many years ago.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Root have both expressed their appreciation of what the conference has accomplished, the President being especially pleased with the steps for the establishment of a Prize Court. "Any one," he says, "who recalls the injustices under which this country suffered as a neutral power during the early part of the last century, can not fail to see in this provision for an international prize court the great advance which the world is making toward the substitution of the rule of reason and justice in place of simple force. Not only will the international prize court be the means of protecting the interests of neutrals, but it is in itself a step towards the creation of the more general court for the hearing of international controversies to which reference has just been made. The organization and action of such a prize court can not fail to accustom the different countries to the submission of international questions to the decision of an international tribunal, and we may confidently expect the results of such submission to bring about a general agreement upon the enlargement of the practice."

The positive and direct results of the conference, leaving out minor matters, are:

To provide for a meeting of a Third Conference within an analogous period, namely eight years, to be under the control of the Powers generally, instead of the control of any one of them.

To adopt a convention for the non-forcible collection of contract debts, substituting arbitration and an appeal to reason, for force and appeal to arms.

To establish a Prize Court to safeguard neutrals, and

To lay the foundations of, if not to put the finishing stone to, a great court of arbitration.

General Conventions

(Continued from page 343.)

by W. S. Taylor. Minutes read and approved. The following officers were elected by unanimous vote: J. A. Gunsolley, president; Walter W. Smith, vice-president; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, secretary; R. B. Trowbridge, treasurer; S. A. Burgess, librarian; Mrs. Deam, home department superintendent. Moved and seconded that the treasurer be authorized to provide a typewriter for the use of the home department superintendent.

Moved as substitute that the matter be referred to the executive committee with power to act. Substitute lost; original motion carried.

Moved and seconded that the sum of $200 be appropriated for the use of the executive committee in general work for this year. Carried.

Moved that the matter of providing a junior quarterly be referred to the executive committee, and they be given power to act. Moved to amend by adding the name of Quarterly editor.

Requests concerning junior Quarterly matter coming from Independence Stake and Far West District were read, and it was moved as a substitute that we adopt the recommendations from the Independence Stake. Previous question called for. Substitute lost. Amendment carried, and motion as amended carried.

Moved and seconded that we favor the publication of a junior Quarterly. Carried.

Report of joint committee of normal superintendents on normal work was read. Moved that this report be approved and recommendations be adopted. Carried.

Report of revising committee was taken up. Motion to adopt the report. A resolution concerning the same was also read and its adoption moved as a substitute.

Moved to amend the substitute by prefixing, "We approve of the report of the committee," and placing "be it" before the word "resolve." Amendment carried, and substitute prevailed.

Communication from Presidency read.

Document on chronology was read, and the matter, by motion, referred to committee on normal work.

HEINZ

Wide-Open Kitchens

Sunlight everywhere—spotless walls and floors—tables snowy white—shining utensils.

Why not let the HEINZ Kitchen be your kitchen—and thus save a vast amount of work and worry, at the same time retaining every quality of purity and home-made goodness in food. This is what is offered in each of the

From the gathering of the fresh fruits and vegetables until the perfect product reaches your table—all through the process of preparing, sealing and sterilizing—the HEINZ system is a marvel of exactness and cleanliness.

Try HEINZ Baked Beans (three kinds),
Tomato Ketchup, or Pure Olive Oil.

H. J. HEINZ CO., Pittsburgh, Pa.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid ..$30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

Bible References

By Alvin Knisley

Paper cover 5 cents
Cloth cover 10 cents

THE INDIAN MAIDEN

A Temperance Story

No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

THE INSTRUCTOR

No. 126, cloth$.75
No. 127, leather 1.00
No. 128, leather, flexible 1.50

THESE BOOKS ARE NOW READY.

No. 77—Hurlbut's Normal
Lessons 30 cents, paper

No. 77½—Hurlbut's Normal
Lessons 45 cents, cloth

If You Want to Be Up With the Times in the Sunday-School Work You Will Want a Copy of These Lessons.

Atonement of Christ and Final Destiny of Man

Revised and Enlarged

No. 17—10 cents each.

ZION'S PRAISES

No. 70, cloth$.40
No. 70¼, leather..... 1.00
No. 70½, leather, flexible..... 1.50

The Herald Publishing House places good literature within your reach; will you do your part?

The latest publication is The Two-story Book,—better in some ways than a tract or a sermon. This book consists of two stories that tell the gospel story in an entertaining way. These stories are, An Instrument in His Hands, by Mary Leland Carter; and The Minister Who Was Different, by Elbert A. Smith.

Why not buy the book and loan it to your neighbors—after you have read it to the family circle? It will make an opening that you can follow up successfully with gospel conversations.

For sale by the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, for the small sum of fifty cents, cloth binding.

Two stories high, well lighted, well furnished, rock foundation.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice, Mite, and Rain Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF

NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK

LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church.

1tf

DES MOINES TENT & AWNING CO.
MFRS OF ALL KINDS OF CANVAS GOODS.
513 WALNUT ST.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE & PRICES.

"HEAVEN AND HELL"

BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps

PASTOR LANDEBERGER,

Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

- No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
- No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
- No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
- No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

The Jackson County Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

ELLIS SHORT, President.
WM. CRICK, Vice-president.

M. H. BOND, Vice-president.
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

G. H. HILLIARD.
MRS. O. H. RIGGS.

DR. J. MATHER.
A. L. YINGLING.

HORACE SHELEY.

Very truly yours,
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

San Francisco	} $3200	One Way
Los Angeles		Until April 30
San Diego		Round Trip
	} $6355	April 25 and 26
Seattle		} $3200
Tacoma
Portland	Until April 30

Homeseekers' Round Trip Rates

To all principal points west and northwest first and third Tuesday every month.

No matter where you are going consult me about the rates and get complete information.

L. F. Siltz, Agent,
C., B. & Q. R. R.

CATALOGUE AND PRICE LIST

Of Books and Publications, Sunday-school Supplies, etc., of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Published by the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE SAINTS' HERALD. Established 1860. Official publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; issued every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa. Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Leon A. Gould, Assistant Editor; Frederick M. Smith, Corresponding Editor. Price, per year, $1.50. Discontinued when six month in arrears. No discount on HERALD, Autumn Leaves, Hope, Tracts, or Quarterlies.

AUTUMN LEAVES. A religious magazine, published the first of each month, for the youth of the church. Elbert A. Smith, Editor. Price, per year, $1.00. Discontinued when four months in arrears.

JOURNAL OF HISTORY. A historical magazine, published quarterly. Editors: Heman C. Smith, Frederick M. Smith, and Daniel F. Lambert. Price, per year, $1.50.

Books.

All books are sold by numbers. The list price includes postage. Send numbers only.

HOLY SCRIPTURES. Inspired Translation, by Joseph Smith.
 78 Cloth $1 00
 79 Full leather 1 25
 81 Morocco, gilt edges 2 25
 82 Flexible binding, gilt edges... 3 75

NEW TESTAMENT. Inspired Translation.
 83a Cloth 35
 83b Cloth sides, leather back.. 50
 Large type edition.
 84 Cloth 65
 85 Cloth, leather back and corners..... 1 00
 86 Full leather..... 1 25
 87 Full leather, gilt edges..... 1 50

HOLY BIBLE. King James' Translation. Large type, self-pronouncing, with foot-notes and full index and references.
 178 Cloth..... 1 25
 179 Flexible..... 3 00

Self-pronouncing, with references, helps, and maps, Sunday-school Teacher's Bible.
 155 Flexible..... 2 25
 156 Cloth, with references..... 80
 157 Cloth, without references... 30
 158 Cloth, without references, gilt edges..... 50

NEW TESTAMENT. King James' Translation.
 159 Cloth, small size..... 15
 160 Cloth, large size..... 25

BOOK OF MORMON.
 88 Cloth..... 65
 89 Full leather..... 1 00
 90 Imitation morocco, gilt edges 1 25
 91 Morocco, gilt edges, flexible 2 00

Cheap edition.
 210 Paper covers..... 35
 211 Limp cloth..... 50

Large type edition.
 92 Cloth, leather back and corners..... 1 50
 93 Full leather, gilt edges..... 2 00
 109 Flexible, gilt edges..... 4 00

MORMONS BOG (Danish Book of Mormon).
 Leather back and corners..... 75
 Full leather..... 1 00

DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.
 94 Cloth..... 65
 95 Full leather..... 1 00
 96 Imitation morocco, gilt edges 1 25
 97 Morocco, gilt edges, flexible 2 00

THE TWO RECORDS. The Book of Mormon and the Inspired Translation of the New Testament; large type, in one volume.
 98 Leather back and corners.. 2 00
 99 Full leather..... 2 50
 101 Morocco, gilt edges..... 4 00

SAINTS' HARP—HYMN BOOK. Words only.
 102 Cloth..... 75
 103 Full leather..... 1 00
 104 Imitation morocco, gilt edges 1 25

SAINTS' HYMNAL. Words and music.
 108 Leatherette, 30 cents; per dozen..... 3 20
 110 Cloth, limp, 35 cents; per dozen..... 3 75
 111 Cloth and leather..... 50
 112 Full leather..... 1 00
 114 Flexible, leather..... 1 50

Words only.
 115 Paper, 15 cents; per dozen.. 1 60
 116 Cloth, limp, 25 cents; per dozen..... 2 70
 118 Flexible, gilt edges..... 75

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. By President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. In four volumes.
VOLUME 1.
 119 Cloth..... 1 50
 120 Leather back and corners.. 2 00
 121 Leather..... 2 50
 122 Gilt edges..... 3 00

VOLUME 2.
 186 Cloth..... 1 50
 187 Leather back and corners.. 2 00
 188 Leather..... 2 50
 189 Gilt edges..... 3 00

VOLUME 3.
 190 Cloth..... 1 50
 191 Leather back and corners.. 2 00
 192 Leather..... 2 50
 193 Gilt edges..... 3 00

VOLUME 4.
 194 Cloth..... 1 50
 195 Leather back and corners.. 2 00
 196 Leather..... 2 50
 196½ Gilt edges..... 3 00

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER JOSEPH LUFF.
 123 Cloth..... 75

ABSTRACT OF EVIDENCE, TEMPLE LOT SUIT.
 124 Cloth..... 1 50

BRADEN - KELLEY DEBATE. Report of a discussion between Elder Clark Braden of the Christian Church and Elder E. L. Kelley of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.
 125 Cloth..... 1 50

THE INSTRUCTOR. A compendium of the faith and doctrines of the church, by Elder G. T. Griffiths.
 126 Cloth..... 75
 127 Leather..... 1 00
 128 Flexible..... 1 50

VOICE OF WARNING AND INSTRUCTION TO ALL PEOPLE.
 130 Paper, 10 cents; per dozen.. 1 00
 131 Cloth, limp..... 20

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY. By Elder C. Scott.
 132 Paper..... 25
 133 Cloth..... 40

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD. By Elder W. H. Kelley.
 134 Cloth..... 1 00

THE PATRIARCHATE; THE CALLING AND DUTIES OF PATRIARCHS.
 135 Paper..... 05
 135½ Cloth..... 10

ARCHAEOLOGICAL COMMITTEE REPORT. Evidences in support of the Book of Mormon, with maps.
 136 Paper..... 30
 137 Cloth..... 50

MANUSCRIPT FOUND. This is the notorious book written by Reverend Solomon Spalding, a certified copy of the original, which is now in Oberlin College, Ohio.
 139 Paper..... 35

WHAT IS MAN? By Elder J. R. Lambert.
 140 Cloth..... 50

COMPENDIUM OF FAITH.
 141 Cloth..... 75
 141½ Leather..... 1 00
 142 Flexible..... 1 50

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED. By Elder J. R. Lambert.
 142 Paper..... 25
 143 Cloth..... 40

DOCTRINAL REFERENCES. By Elder A. Knisley.
 144 Paper..... 05
 144½ Cloth..... 10

MANUAL OF THE PRIESTHOOD. By Elder C. Derry.
 145 Cloth, limp 25

GOSPEL TENT AND MISSION HYMNS, WITH EPITOME OF THE FAITH.
 146 Paper, per dozen..... 25

SONGS OF ZION. By Elder T. W. Smith.
 147 Paper, 5 cents; per dozen.. 50

MISSIONARIES' DIARIES, complete.
 148 50
 Extra fillers for one year.. 10

TRUE SUCCESSION IN CHURCH PRESIDENCY. By Elder H. C. Smith, Church Historian.
 152 Paper..... 35
 153 Cloth..... 50

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.
 161 Cloth..... 40

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 15, 1908

NUMBER 16

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
LEON A. GOULD, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

Editorial

THE RECEPTION OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

We are sometimes asked the question whether it is not possible that the promise made in Acts 8 with reference to the gift of the Holy Ghost may not be deferred in its fulfillment for a period of time, either shorter or longer, owing to conditions which may not readily be known or explained.

This inquiry has been the subject of much thought among the eldership of the church, and more or less animated and inquiring discussions have been had upon it. The consensus of opinion among many who have thought and talked together upon the subject is that the qualifying statement made by the Apostle Paul in the twelfth chapter of Corinthians with reference to the various manifestations, which indicate the reception of the Spirit should be more definitely and universally understood, than it sometimes appears to be. The thought conveyed by the Apostle in that epistle is to the effect that every gift or manifestation is directed to be bestowed with a direct view to the character of the individual to whom the separate gift may be given, as is conveyed in the expression, "to every man severally as he will."

Our experience has been of varied character, and has shown to us clearly that the Spirit has been bestowed at the time that hands were laid upon the candidate after baptism, invisible perception to both the administrators and the candidate upon numerous occasions. And yet, that in other cases where no apparent difference in the character and integrity of the candidate seemed manifest, hours, days, and even months have been known to pass ere any outward manifestation indicated the acceptance of the candidate by the fulfillment of the promise. In one instance that came under our immediate observation four years had passed and the candidate who had received baptism and the laying on of hands was expressing extreme depression of spirit because of the apparent failure to receive a manifestation of the Spirit.

It so transpired, however, that the individual, after baptism and the laying on of hands, by conditions which could not be prevented, had lived away from the company of the Saints, practically alone with her former associate with whom she was friendly and on good terms, and hence did not mingle

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

The Reception of the Holy Spirit	361
Ancient Watch-Towers	363
A Sermon from the Laity	363
The Passing of Protestantism	364

GENERAL CONFERENCE	365
GENERAL CONVENTIONS	371

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

The Ensign of the People	373
--------------------------	-----

MOTHER'S HOME COLUMN:

An Awakening	377
Humble Heroism	378
Letter	378
The Mountains	379
Coolness of Trees	379

LETTER DEPARTMENT:

Letters	379
Roberts and Slover Debate	380
Extracts from Letters	381

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:

Conference Minutes:
Little Sioux	382

"The grandchildren of Abraham, who now bring to this land all their possessions, come from all parts of the world, and speak in different languages; but the Hebrew language, which is no longer a dead tongue, binds them all together, even as their religion does. The Hebrew literature has begun to bloom. The most important books of the world are being translated into the Hebrew. The children study everything in Hebrew. In Jerusalem there appear Hebrew newspapers, and the presses issue forth Hebrew manuals which are scattered all over the land.

• * •

"Jerusalem is gradually assuming the aspects of a distinctly Jewish city. Already fifteen per cent of the population of the city is Jewish, and this is only the beginning."

with the Saints during her period of isolation.

She had, however, subsequently returned to where she had association with the Saints, and not long after this she made the complaint referred to above, seeming to mourn her want of qualifications and worthiness of the reception of the Spirit, which caused her great distress of mind and depression in spirit. The elder presiding had known of occasions when this member of the church had been overcome by sickness and by administration of the elders in the rite of the laying on of hands for the recovery of the sick, and the anointing of oil she had been blessed and caused to recover from severe attacks of sickness, evincing, beyond question, that she had at least received so much of the gift of faith that it was unconsciously exercised by her in every instance referred to. Further than this she had been blessed with a singularly clear and definite comprehension of the faith and doctrines of the church, so that when even in her isolation the church was attacked, she was instantly able to properly present the faith and to maintain its integrity, showing that she had received what is known in the Apostle's epistle as the word of knowledge.

When the presiding elder made explanation of this condition of things which was known to him, having been acquainted with the member a number of years, she instantly exclaimed, "How blind I have been!" But she had but fallen into an error which many others have fallen into with regard to the gift of the Spirit, at least so far as the outward manifestations of the Spirit are concerned. The promises made by the Savior as recorded in the fourteenth and fifteenth chapters of John's Gospel indicate that none can know Jesus is the Christ except it be through the revelation from the Father, nor is there anything in the promises themselves which indicate clearly just how the reception and presence of the Spirit are to be recognized. But there is the definite promise that they shall know of the doctrine, and that Jesus is the Christ.

The great variety of individualities who hear the gospel message and are led to obey it, bringing men of every degree of intelligence and from every class of mankind, showing almost infinite variety of individuality, would lead us to conclude that there must be a variety of ways by which the individual who becomes obedient to the gospel should become cognizant of the fact that he had so far pleased the Father that he would manifest unto him that the doctrine was true, and that He was the Christ. This leads us to the inquiry suggested at the beginning of this article, and if we take in connection with it the epistle of the Apostle Paul, who was quite well informed touching the mission of the Spirit, we will discover that he has given us a clew, and that to one man may come a manifestation of the Spirit in one way and to another man in another way, and so by some one of the many manifestations referred to by him clear down to helps and governments, the required gift of the Spirit may reach the individual. If in no other way than by the positive conviction clearly and definitely made to the conscious identity of the man, that Jesus is the Christ. This is the central and prevailing truth of the gospel economy. It is the great gift, and which becomes almost infinite in its greatness and goodness under the characterization given in John's Gospel where it is stated, "And this is eternal life, that they may know thee, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

We are left free then to conclude that it is within the line of possibility that men may hear the gospel, may recognize its call, may be baptized, may receive the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and that by virtue of the wisdom of the Master who "giveth to every man severally as He wills" the period between the obedience and the conscious acceptance of the individual by virtue of the manifestation of the Spirit may be of a shorter or longer continuance. In the many years of our ministry we have known the Spirit to rest upon individuals at the moment that they were raised up out of the water by the administrator who baptized them. We have known them to receive the visible presence of the Spirit while the hands of the priesthood have been laid upon them. We have known them to have received the manifestation of the Spirit at different periods of time, becoming conscious by some occurrence which brought the fact indisputably to their consciousness.

We take into consideration the statement made by the Apostle Paul in his epistle to the Corinthians, twelfth chapter, that the first three manifestations of the Spirit are what might be called the invisible or inward manifestations, namely wisdom, knowledge, and faith. While some of those which follow after are recognizable as the outward manifestations, such as prophecies, speaking in tongues, discernment of spirits and interpretation of tongues, and yet further along in both the epistle to the Corinthians and one to the Ephesians there is a class of manifestations spoken of which are called helps and governments, and these may be of an infinite variety. But are we warranted in concluding that those who receive of this variety are not accepted of God, have not received the presence of the Spirit, have not been accepted by a gift of the Holy Spirit? Surely not. For if the dispensation of these gifts, various as they may be, is at the disposition and discretion of the Master, is not each one as important as every other so far as the absolute testimony of the Spirit is concerned? We certainly think so. And hence we would exhort those who have been obedient, and who may have thought that they have been neglected by some means in the dispensation of these manifestations of acceptance at the hands of God through the manifestation of the Spirit, that they should seek a more intelligent and complete understanding of the full measure of the provisions made by him who authorized the preaching of the gospel for the carrying on of his work and establishing it in the hearts of his people.

ANCIENT WATCH-TOWERS.

Our attention is called to the within clippings from the Star for February 16, by Bro. Jerome E. Page, who noticed it and called the attention of Bro. George E. Harrington, president of the Independence Stake to it.

Readers and lovers of the Book of Mormon will remember the fact that towers were built, at least the account so states, from which observation could be made of the surrounding country, thus avoiding surprises and also to know when the people could safely occupy their fields in the valley. It will not be surprising to these readers to note the discovery.

In pre-Columbian days, probably even before the period of the Aztec and Toltec peoples, and at a time when a considerable portion of the southwestern part of this country, now embraced within Colorado, Utah, and New Mexico, was densely populated by a race well advanced in many crude arts and industries, constant warfare was carried on between factions or rival tribes, as is evidenced by the defensive positions picked out by the more peaceable inhabitants for their dwellings.

In nearly every one of the ancient communal buildings can be found towers and lookouts, with small windows or loopholes commanding all approaches. Usually the towers are a part of the main building, but occasionally they are detached and stand off at some distance, and are built sufficiently high to afford a view of the country on all sides.

One of these remarkable structures has been found in Navajo Canyon, which is included within the Mesa Verde National Park, in Southwestern Colorado. The tower still stands on top of a sandstone cone about thirty feet high and is perfectly cylindrical. By the aid of steps worn in the stone it is possible to climb to the tower and even to walk around it. The walls are twenty-four inches thick and, although their original height is not known, those now in place are over nine feet high. This tower, arising from the bottom of the canyon to an elevation above the surrounding rim, commanded a view of the adjacent mesa and was undoubtedly the viewpoint from which warnings of an approaching enemy could be sent out to the Cliff-dwellers in the canyon below.

Another remarkable lookout is "Gibraltar House," in Ruin Canyon, just across the Colorado-Utah line from the Mesa Verde National Park. Like the round tower of Navajo Canyon, this structure overlooked great distances, preventing a surprise from an approaching enemy.

Considering the fact that about the only known weapons these prehistoric people used were the bow and arrow and a spear-like implement, the necessity for the great fortresses and thick walls is not clear.

They are slaves most base, whose love of right is for themselves and not for all the race.—James Russell Lowell.

A SERMON FROM THE LAITY.

It is said, somewhere in scripture, that the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of the kingdom. This may not be true in all cases, or under all circumstances, but one thing is very sure that we frequently get from the laity, even though that laity may be outside of the bonds of our own belief, words of common sense and wisdom. We reproduce from the Kansas City Journal, for Sunday, March 29, the following "Little lay sermon," and commend the things therein stated to the careful consideration of all the readers of the HERALD.

It sometimes appears from the excuses which men make for doing wrong that they feel constrained by force of circumstances to do wrong, to neglect the admonition of their position in society and conditions surrounding them as men, and permit themselves to drift into the doing of things which are not defensible from any standpoint of honesty. The Saints, of all people in the world, should be free from such weakness as that, for they are pursuing their courses in life with a consciousness that they have acknowledged openly the supremacy of God and his law, and by so doing they have testified to the world that they not only expect to give account for what is done in the flesh before the august Judge, but that they are walking in the light of his approval, or subject to his disapproval while yet in the flesh, not as a remote contingency to take place in the judgment, but subject to the penalty of incurring the direct loss of that which the Spirit brings of comfort and joy and satisfaction, and its final withdrawal, leaving one in the darkness of doubt and despair. There is no safety in dishonest things. There is no safety under a refuge of lies.

While there may not be a great many who by nature are instinctively honest, there is that in man, which falling under the guidance of the gospel spirit, through obedience, opens into life and activity and becomes the educator of man's conscience, and it is not until this occurs that conscience becomes the safe guide, as it is so frequently held up to be by sectarian philosophy. Under the influence and teaching of the gospel economy men may become honest by a refined second nature. As man's natural condition is a two-fold man, serving the law of the flesh and the law of the spirit of man; so man by obedience becomes a three-fold man, serving the law of the flesh, and the law of the spirit of man under the direction, guidance, and control of the "spirit of the law of life in Christ Jesus," as stated by the apostle.

It has been well said that "An honest man is the noblest work of God," and yet it is within the province of every man by putting himself into contact with the gospel economy to become an honest man; not by natural instinct, but by the direct influence and supervision of the gospel which giveth the "spirit of life in Christ Jesus."

While we commend the reading of this "Little lay sermon" to the readers of the HERALD, we think it would be safe to read the thirteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians in connection with it, in which the office-work of charity is quite succinctly stated. It may be thought by some that the charity enjoined is the relief of physical distress of our fellow men. We deem it to be a mistake, for it seems to us that the higher teaching is that which takes in the scope of our spiritual conduct not only in handling the things of this world, but in the exercise of our tempers, propensities, feelings, and sentiments, with regard to all our intercourse with our fellow men, and that the Savior's rule, Do ye unto others as ye would that they should do also unto you, is far more reaching than simply to deal with the ordinary affairs of life touching temporal things.

The world in its present condition is not only calculated to deceive the unwary; but it is also calculated to lead astray by slow degrees men of the most secure balance of mind, and overcome principles which may have been the result of long continued influences of heredity; and "degenerate sons of noble sires" may be produced by these evil tendencies at work nearly everywhere in the present day, and from which it seems there is scarcely any locality secure. It is then necessary for Saints to be clothed and in their right minds, always paying heed to the teachings of honesty, the pleadings of the noble spirit in which the gospel bears witness in attestation of the goodness of God.

We commend this "Little lay sermon" with a good deal of confidence that it will be read with pleasure on the part of the Saints:

A LITTLE LAY SERMON.

The following paragraph has been floating around among the "patent insides" of the rural papers in this part of the country for several weeks:

"It's a task. Did you ever try it? To be honest and kind at all times, to earn a little every day and spend a little less, to make the whole family happier for your presence, to renounce evil when necessary and not be embittered, to keep a few friends all the time and these without capitulation, and above everything else keep on good terms with your own conscience and self. Aye, there's the rub! It takes nerve to stand when popular opinion and applauding hands point another way, but it is possible."

Possibly somebody will begin to believe that it is harder to do right than to do wrong. Such a belief has been entertained in all ages of the world, long before and ever since Jesus said in effect that the way to destruction is broad and easy and many walk therein, while strait is the gate and narrow the way that leadeth unto life and "few there be that find it."

But the world's view is becoming modified and the gospel of sacrifice and despair and gloom and "hell-fire" is not being preached so widely or so confidently as it used to be.

A smile has crept into the message of the church, for "gospel" means "good tidings," not the news of immolation. To teach that it is easier or pleasanter or more profitable to be bad than to be good is to teach contrariwise to the experience of all the good people and all the bad people who ever lived. Of course there must be somewhat of a readjustment of values, for what the unkind and avaricious and self-seeking and fearsome may consider the highest value and the greatest reward may not be after all the true assessment of these things.

It is easier to be honest than to be dishonest; it was never more easy in all the history of the world than now. The graft we hear so much about does not mean that there is any less honesty in the world; it simply means that there are dishonest men now as there always have been, but that the people no longer tolerate dishonesty and that graft is under the ban of popular condemnation. In the business world the man who is known to be tricky and to cheat is very short-lived commercially after he is found out.

It is easier to save a little every day now than it ever was before. The difficulty is not that it costs more to live, but that people spend more. There is a vast difference. False and inflated standards of living compel many people to live beyond their means. There is a very general tendency to emulate the example of the frog in the fable and try to be "as big as the cow." Of course, people who do this are apt to "go broke." But there was never a time when thrift and industry and temperateness and right living earned such sure and large rewards as to-day.

It is easier to retain the approval of one's own conscience to-day than ever before, for there are greater incentives to right-doing and fewer inducements for wrong-doing. The papers are full of the punishment of evil; they teem with the wrecks of human lives and human hopes. Many people think the papers should print only the nice things and the pleasant things. But the press serves an immensely valuable end in constituting itself seven days in the week a constant warning against the thinking and the doing of evil, which warning must inevitably embody the converse enticement toward the thinking and the doing of good.

It is always easy to get friends and to keep them. Anybody who deserves to have friends can have all he wants. Friends are reaching out their hands all around us. The world is crying for men worth being taken by the hand and to the heart as friends.

It should be easy to do right regardless of the world's opinion. The right thinking man knows that the world is wrong when it points toward evil or away from the right in any degree. Knowing that the world is wrong at such times, it takes only a little real, true courage to do the right thing. The main point is to get right, and the man who gets thoroughly right will have little trouble in doing right.

THE PASSING OF PROTESTANTISM.

The following is cut from the Kansas City Journal for March 22, 1908. It is only one of many similar expressions that are going the rounds of the press, and is of a piece with a statement made by President R. C. Evans in a discourse preached by him Sunday morning, March 22, at Independence, Missouri, to the effect that a Protestant clergyman of Texas was proposing to write the Pope upon the subject of the too apparent disunity existing among or between the churches, and proposing to that church functionary that he call a general council of church digni-taries of all classes to take into consideration the subject of a means to bring to pass a unity of church fellowship and rule. This ecclesiastical aspirant for unity is alarmed at the evident failure hitherto of every effort made to bring to pass a unity among the churches. A unity of either faith or action.

This wail coming from New Haven is but a reflection of the fact fast becoming universally acknowledged that there must be some sort of catholicism, as he terms it. As one intensely interested in the final unification of all believers in Christ, we fail to see how this can be accomplished by the hopeless search along the history of the past to discover the traces of "Apostolic Succession." We agree with the writer that "Protestantism" lacks the guaranty of continuity. If it did not have such lack there would long since have been an agreement reached as to some basis upon which the great Protestant mass might unite. If this Protestant minister who is proposing to write to the Pope endeavoring to secure such effort from him as is proposed, we shall be pleased to know what the answer of Pope Leo will be. It would not be difficult for any one partially conversant with history to guess at what such answer might be, holding as the Pope evidently must do that there is no disunity in Catholicism. We wait developments. In the meantime commend the thought conveyed in the following clipping to the readers of the HERALD.

NEW HAVEN, Connecticut, March 21.—The Reverend Frederick Bugress of Christ Episcopal Church to-day predicted the decay and downfall of Protestantism, eulogized the new catholicism, and the sentiments were received with enthusiasm by the body of Episcopal clergymen whom he addressed.

"Protestantism is spent and is passing," said he, "and we want some sort of catholicism. If there is to be any visible church unity at all, it must be on the basis of the apostolic succession. Protestantism lacks the guaranty of continuity based upon that most despised and much maligned succession.

"I have heard it said that New York will be a fine place when it is finished. So it will be with the Catholic Church. The church is not a mutual admiration society of mature saints. Puritanism is responsible for this theory, and it is responsible for much of the difficulty people have about the church to-day."

Evil company, beside that it blemisheth our reputation, and makes us think evil though we be good, also inclines us insensibly to ill, and works in us, if not an approbation, yet a less dislike to those sins to which our eyes and ears are thus continually inured. For this reason, by the grace of God, I will ever shun it. I may have a bad acquaintance; but I will never have a wicked companion.—Bishop Hall.

• * •

Amusement that is excessive and followed only for its own sake, allures and deceives us, and leads us down imperceptibly in thoughtlessness to the grave.—Pascal.

General Conference

APRIL 6.

The first day of the Conference passed off very pleasantly. The day was bright and sunny; the attendance was noticeably large for the opening day, and every one seemed happy. The Independence Saints had made extensive and thoughtful preparation for the comfort of visitors. These preparations included a large tent that had been fitted up for the use of visitors who might have no other place to go for rest and recreation.

At ten o'clock in the forenoon President Smith called the assembly to order. "God speed the right" was sung as the opening song. Prayer was offered by President Smith.

Following the prayer the presiding officer announced the hymn, "Father, when in love to thee, low we bow the adoring knee," and exhorted the congregation to sing it with the spirit of prayer. The hymn was sung reverently, yet heartily, and it rang true and clear.

A motion prevailed that President Smith and his counselors preside over the conference and have authority to make other appointments necessary to complete the organization. The following appointments were made:

Bro. R. S. Salyards was appointed secretary of the conference with power to choose his assistants; later he selected Brn. F. A. Russell and Charles Fry. Arthur H. Mills was appointed chorister and Ralph G. Smith organist; they to choose assistants. Janitor work and the work of ushering was left with the local officers. Elbert A. Smith was appointed on the press committee and selected Brn. T. W. Williams and Walter W. Smith as his associates. Leon A. Gould was appointed stenographer of the conference. Brn. R. C. Russell, W. M. Aylor, and W. E. Peak were appointed on the credential committee.

President Joseph Smith then addressed the conference as follows:

I regret one thing—it must be understood by the Saints that this session is a business session, and that the room and its accommodations must necessarily be reserved for those upon whom the business devolves. This may exclude a number of visitors, but we will do the best we can, after the business body is provided for, to give all the room that is possible for us to spare. This refers to the business sessions. As for the preaching services and the prayer services, Saints will all understand that they who are here will be entitled to the seats, no reservation except for the presiding officers and possibly the choir in singing services.

I want to remind those that are present, and I will have no better opportunity, that we understand this to be the house of God, the house of the Lord set apart for divine services and for the work of the church while we are assembled in business, and I particularly request, as your presiding officer with my colleagues, that those present at all meetings will remain in the house in quietude until the benediction is pronounced. It is unseemly for any number of thoughtless people, disregarding of the dictates of the body, and the sacredness of the place, and the courtesy which is due a great many of us, who take great pleasure not only in the services as they progress, but in the closing music and the good word, the benediction; and for people to get up and begin to go out just as soon as the closing hymn is announced is very annoying, and I may add, so far as I am concerned, I consider it very disrespectful, disregarding of the rights of those that remain, and I purpose, as an individual, to protest against it, constantly. I will say that a word to the wise is sufficient; sometimes I think that a word to the unwise ought to be sufficient, too. I hope it will be. I do not say that there has been any disposition on the part of these that have continued to do this to treat others wrongfully, but it assumed that aspect, and I believe that we are admonished to avoid the very appearance of evil.

It has been lately brought to my attention that people, of whom we should expect better things from their profession, have assumed to misrepresent me seriously, and that by grave omission of what I have said. I do not know whether there is any one person present that was present on April 6, 1860, forty-eight years ago, or not—there may be—the circle is growing smaller and smaller, and there soon will be few or none who were present upon that occasion. At that time I stated to the people who represented the work, and with whom the Reorganization began, that I pledged myself not to promulgate any doctrine which should not be approved by them and the code of good morals. This people to whom I refer have reproduced a part of that statement. I reiterated it at Los Angeles, I believe, in 1901, and I repeat it to-day as a whole, but when these people omit the closing portion of that statement, they put me in a false light, and it is evidently done for the purpose of prejudicing the minds of those whom they represent against me as an individual, and as a reflective against the body whom I represent.

Now let me repeat that statement as I made it then, and as I reiterated it in 1901, at Los Angeles, to which they refer. I pledged myself to that people to promulgate no doctrine that should not be approved by them and the code of good morals. I repeat that to-day. My conduct then, so far as promulgating doctrine is concerned, must be tried both by the approval of the people and the code of good morals, and I am sorry, decidedly sorry, that that should have been left out of the representation for the simplest of all reasons. The crowning glory of the code of good morals is the word of God, and if man can have his conscience approved by the Almighty, and what he teaches conform to that which was taught by Jesus Christ, as shown in the New Testament and its history, he has no need to fear the approval of honest, upright, earnest-minded men and women, and we must necessarily think harshly or disapprovingly of either men or women who disregard the dictates of good morals. There can be but one code of good morals in Christian communities; among Christian believers there can be but one code of good morals, and when we as a people or as individuals conform our teachings to that which is given us as the word of God, we certainly will be within the line of good morality and commend ourselves to the citizens among whom we live and among whom our work is carried on. Now how much am I at fault for making that statement? I leave it to the conscience of every hearer, and if perchance there should be any one here that differs from me and thinks by such a statement as this I have put myself into the hands of designing men whom they have no confidence in, I pray them to repeat me as I make my own statements. If these men and women have a different code of morals, one that does not conform to the word of God, it is their misfortune and not my fault that I stand as I do.

The work which is before us is opening, in my judgment, grandly. I think that the records will show the last year to have been an active period among the ministry, and I trust that the conference year that is now ushering in will show a decided increase of activity. I believe there is a better spirit at work among the ministry as a whole in the different fields in which they are at work. I believe there is a better feeling of unity among the ministry. As we have become better acquainted with each other, we have naturally wrought out of our calculations or our mental scope suspicion and distrust to a large degree—I am glad of it. The farther we progress along this line, the better we can serve our calls, and you all must know none better than those that are in the fields abroad; that the cause—that is to say, that the regard the people may have for the cause—is largely the result of the attitude of the appearance and conduct of those who represent the cause, and while it is true forty of our ministers may make a good record and pass the judgment and criticism among those with whom they labor without being strangely found in fault, yet one mischievous man, or one careless representative, or one that loses his standing with the Spirit, either teaches falsely, or more especially if he conducts himself immorally and subject to reproach can do more harm in the community where he dwells than the forty that have attracted no such notice, but have faithfully performed their duty, and there is no task so hard for the minister in the field as to follow a mischievous representative; there is no task that burdens him so much as that. He can stand poverty, he can go without his meals, he can be disregarded by them that are without, he may sleep upon the schoolhouse benches, or he may ask for something to eat and to drink, and take that as a legitimate part of the service, if it is meted out to him; but he has a right to expect that those who represent the church like he does shall represent it honestly, uprightly, and if they do not do it, he is burdened and burdened grievously. Now, we all recognize that it follows as a foregone conclusion, then, that every man must do as I have pledged myself to do; conduct himself in such a way in his teaching and in his department as not to be subjected to reproach and condemnation by the code of good morals.

It has been our habit at the opening session to have a series of discourses, and in the afternoon when we gather for business, to arrange our quorums in their places in order that there might be no confusion; also to arrange the order of meetings, and provide for those who are speakers. I suppose that we may as well conform to this order this morning, as we are in kind of a mixed multitude, or we can take up a portion of business. I understand the report of the committee on credentials is in the Secretary's hands.

The report of the credential committee was read. President F. M. Smith took the chair. Various corrections to the report of the credential committee were suggested. That part of the report known to be correct was adopted and the rest was referred back to the committee.

The order of seating the assembly was announced by the chair, following which, song 150 was sung and President Smith pronounced the benediction.

At two o'clock in the afternoon the assembly was again called to order by President Smith. Prayer was then offered by Patriarch Alexander Smith. President F. M. Smith then took the chair; the minutes of the last meeting were read. By motion the Presidency was authorized to appoint times and places of meetings, and to select speakers.

An additional report of the credential committee was read.

The report of the Recorder was read. Some interesting items appear in this report. The total membership of the church at the last report was 55,045. There has been added by baptism 2,873; by letters received 1,863. Lost by letters granted 1,818; by expulsion 95; by death 2,320. The total membership at present is 57,365. Net gain for the year 2,320. Of this membership there are absent from organized branches 16,683. There are in the various orders of the priesthood 3,452. Canada shows the largest net gain for the year, 530; Missouri follows with 509. The largest membership is found in Iowa, 8,982; Missouri follows with 8,650; Michigan has 4,791; and Canada has 4,598; England, 1,277; the Society Islands, 1,785. Fifty-eight baptisms are reported from Hawaii; three are reported from Germany, the first on the records of the Reorganization.

The report of the Church Secretary was read.

The report of the Library Commission was read and adopted. Three members of the Library Commission were elected to cooperate with members previously elected by the Religio and Sunday-school Associations. Those elected were: Brn. E. A. Blakeslee, F. M. Smith, and Heman Hale Smith. This action was in accord with the recommendation of the report, requiring one committeeman from the Bishopric, one from the Presidency, and one committeeman at large.

A motion prevailed to appropriate one hundred dollars for library work, to be placed at the disposal of the commission, the Religio and Sunday-school Associations having each made a similar appropriation.

The committee appointed one year ago to outline methods of procedure, and prepare blank form for use in church trials, reported. Their report was ordered printed and distributed among the various quorums for consideration.

A petition from the Spokane and Seattle Districts regarding boundary lines was read and approved.

The First Presidency, as committee on tracts, reported. They report having received and examined a great many manuscripts, the majority of which have not been found suitable for tracts. The faults pointed out were two: First, faulty literary style; second, lack of brevity. The committee stated that it is the intention of the Herald Office to reprint many of the old tracts. Criticism of these tracts are invited, so that they may be gotten into the best possible form.

The report of the Graceland College Trustees was read. Their report shows an enrollment for the the year, 118, or including music and oratory, 180.

The work of President R. M. Stewart was commended. They reported the purchase of forty acres of land adjoining the College grounds, for the use of the Industrial Department.

Reports were read from the First Quorum of Teachers, the Sixth Quorum of Priests, and the Second Quorum of Deacons.

The order of meetings was announced as follows: Prayer-meeting at 9 a. m., preaching at 10.45 a. m., business-meeting at 2 p. m., and preaching-meeting at 7.45 p. m.

Elder T. J. Sheldon was the speaker of the evening, assisted by Elder T. J. Riley.

APRIL 7.

The morning prayer service was in charge of Elders William Anderson and J. M. Baker. The morning sermon was by Elder V. M. Goodrich, assisted by Elder G. A. Smith.

The afternoon business-meeting was called to order at two o'clock by President F. M. Smith. Prayer was offered by Apostle J. W. Rushton. Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

A report from the committee on compilation of General Conference resolutions was read and adopted. They reported that they had completed the compilation of resolutions from 1852 to 1908, and that the completed work is now on sale by the Herald Publishing House.

A report from the Zion's Religio-Literary Society was read. The First Quorum of Elders reported; also a report from the Fourth Quorum of Elders was read.

The committee on loose-leaf system of books for the General Church records reported. They had taken no action, and were continued.

The committee appointed to secure assistance for the Church Recorder, reported that they had supplied him with such help as he had required.

A committee on administration was appointed.

The resignation of Mr. I. W. Allender, of Lamoni, from the board of college trustees, was read and accepted. A unanimous standing vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Allender for his long and faithful services. Mr. F. W. Newcomb, of Lamoni, Iowa, was elected to succeed Mr. Allender.

The committee on reversification of the Book of Mormon reported. They reported that their work had been completed,—the system of versification adopted corresponding with that of the large type edition.

Bro. E. L. Kelley, Jr., resigned his position as member of the board of college trustees. On this board, Bro. W. A. Grenawalt was elected to succeed E. L. Kelley, Jr., and Brn. J. A. Gunsolley and Daniel Anderson were elected to succeed themselves.

An invitation from the Lamoni Stake and the Lamoni Branch to hold the conference of 1909 in Lamoni was read and accepted. No other nominations were presented.

Apostles Heman C. Smith and W. H. Kelley, in charge of Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Southern and Central Illinois, reported 10,715 sermons in their field; 754 baptisms. "Conditions of the field fair. Prospects good. But few serious difficulties."

Apostles I. N. White and Joseph Luff, in charge of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Louisiana, reported 3,038 sermons in their field; 169 baptisms. They say: "Comparing the field with what it has been in other years, we consider it in fair condition. Some branches are widely scattered as to membership, and this has caused a lethargy to obtain among them, that is not so easily broken. As a general thing, members are not so ready to go long distances to attend meetings as they are further north; this readily makes it against the spirituality of the membership. It is not an uncommon thing to meet Saints in the South that have not taken the sacrament for one, two, or three years. We have made some strenuous efforts to correct this by urging the officers to fix some specific date for sacramental service; and stick to it through the entire year. . . . There are no serious troubles in the mission, unsettled."

Apostle J. W. Wight, in charge of Michigan, Indiana, Northern Illinois, and Wisconsin, reported 4,150 sermons in his field; 202 baptisms. "So far as seen at the present the field may be said to be in good condition. The crying need as noted last year is even intensified rather than diminished—that of local men who can and will take up the work of a pastor in all that such term implies and carry it on to a successful end. The problem, and to me a grave one, is the successful nurturing of those already within the fold. To undertake to answer that problem I dare not, as I do not know how. To me it appears that the entire world is just now drifting from its moorings, religiously, and just what the final result of such drifting is to be or where it will terminate I am willing to confess is too much of a problem for my poor weak brain to solve. I may be altogether too much of a pessimist, but that is the way it appears to me, at least."

Apostles U. W. Greene and G. T. Griffiths, Atlantic States, reported 5,079 sermons in their field; 289 baptized. "No serious difficulties have arisen in this mission and we face the conference year better prepared than ever before for aggressive work. . . . During the fall and winter simultaneous evangelistic meetings have been held in various places, from Ohio to New England, with a degree of success and promise for the future. . . . We need men for every department of church work, and earnestly pray God to call and send laborers, and so touch the hearts of the Saints that they may be properly supported."

Apostles F. M. Sheehy and F. A. Smith, Western Mission, reported 4,005 sermons; 245 baptisms. "The preaching in Utah and Idaho has been done on the streets and in some of the Protestant churches, with occasionally a schoolhouse that we are able to get. This is due to the fact that the First Presidency of the dominant church in that country has issued an order that the houses of the Mormon church should all be closed against the Reorganized Church. . . . Northern and western parts of the field offer fine opportunities for missionary work, and we believe are in good condition. . . . Eastern part of field presents a splendid opportunity for missionary labor and the local work is growing steadily."

Apostle Peter Anderson, Scandinavia and Germany, reported 653 sermons in his field; 13 baptisms. "No serious difficulties. Most of the Saints faithful. Prospects better than ever and numerous opportunities for work in all four countries."

Apostle C. A. Butterworth, Australasian Mission, reported 590 sermons in his field; 38 baptisms. "Field may be said to be in a fair condition and the work in all parts where we have a footing is holding its own, and in some instances increasing. Our missionary force is small, as you are aware, five besides myself. . . . If it is the Lord's will I should very much like to see Elder J. F. Burton made a patriarch and spend some time in the Australasian Mission. . . . Young men who are anxious to magnify their calling should be sent to this field, as they are less expensive to the mission and will soon develop into useful ministers for the church."

President R. C. Evans, Canada, reported 2,369 sermons in his field; 272 baptisms. "The brethren have done well. . . . Good interest in many parts. . . . Good prospects for work in the future. . . . The outlook is encouraging."

This being the day of election of city officers in Independence, an early adjournment was had, so as to permit citizens who might be present to reach the polls. President Smith made the following statement:

We are citizens here, and we make a part of those who are governed, pay our taxes, pay our portion for city improvement; or take our risk of having our property sold if we do not pay them. Let me urge you to cast your ballot and vote as you feel satisfied to do. I never told a man how to vote yet—never biased a man's vote and would not do it, neither should any of you; but I believe it to be right that we should vote. I went to the polls this morning to cast my vote. I am not going to tell you how, nor who for. I voted as a citizen. I don't care what your politics are so long as your religion is all right.

The benediction was pronounced by President Smith.

Elder R. C. Russell, of Canada, preached in the evening, assisted by Elder R. M. Maloney.

APRIL 8.

The morning prayer service was in charge of Elders J. S. Snively and T. W. Chatburn.

Elder J. J. Cornish was the speaker at the morning preaching service, assisted by Elder S. K. Sorensen.

At two o'clock in the afternoon the assembly came to order, President R. C. Evans occupying the chair. After the opening exercises the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Arthur H. Mills announced as his assistants in the chorister's work, Laura Kelley, F. G. Pitt, Amos Chase, F. A. Russell, and Hale W. Smith.

Apostle J. W. Rushton, in charge of the British Isles, reported 731 sermons in his field; 15 baptisms. "The work generally speaking is progressing, though not so rapidly as we could wish, nor as it could, even with the limited supplies at our disposal. There is still much prejudice against the cause, that, of course, we do not consider; but there is a growing indifference to all religious subjects, and people are much more interested in economic and social questions. . . . The Mormons are very active and do not spare means or men to push their claims before the public; nor do they hesitate to employ methods which would tax my knowledge of language to describe and yet keep within bounds of religious expression. . . . They have over two hundred missionaries at work in our land; well equipped with headquarters and literature and tracts; also a liberal supply of finance."

Elder Joseph F. Burton, in charge of Society Islands, reported: 112 sermons, baptized 17, ordained 13. "The mission is not in good order, chiefly because of our long standing difficulty, and spiritualism; these things are causing trouble in these islands to all the churches here, and not to us only, but the Protestants have lately disciplined some of their ministers for encouraging spiritualism. The native missionaries have been hindered considerably by spiritualism and its friends, for in their endeavors to evade the law they seek all manner of excuses, and want every point and particle of the law explained and decided upon, which would be all right if they desired to keep the law; but when you know they merely want to evade it and are seeking a loophole for that purpose, it becomes very trying to the missionaries."

Reports were read from the Seventh and Eighth Quorums of Elders and Second Quorum of Teachers.

The First Presidency reported as follows:

To the General Conference: The members of the First Presidency have in the past year continued to do such work as came before them for attention in their efforts to discharge the duties which have been placed upon them.

A brief outline of their work is herein presented to you:

President Joseph Smith has been in Independence, his home, the major portion of the year, attending to detail duties of the office. He has made occasional trips away from home as calls and duty have demanded, one of which was an extended trip to Honolulu, full account of which has appeared elsewhere. His efforts were evidently blessed, and he was enabled to make the trip under comfortable conditions on the whole.

First Counselor, Frederick M. Smith, has been in Independence most of the year, making only short trips occasionally. He has attended to the details of the office work, which have devolved upon him by reason of his being secretary of the quorum, to the best of his ability.

Second Counselor, Richard C. Evans, has in the past conference year remained in charge of the Canadian Mission, and during the winter has continued his work in the Majestic Theater at Toronto, which has been spoken of elsewhere more fully. He made trips into Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, Washington, California, and Colorado, visiting Independence Stake on his way back to Canada.

Members of the First Presidency have been in attendance at a number of reunions, district and stake conferences, and officiated in the dedication of a number of church-buildings.

Reports from the various missionaries in charge have been submitted to the Presidency more or less regularly. We regret to note that complaints come to us from a number of the missionaries in charge that some of the men in their charge have delayed their reports or failed entirely to make reports. The Presidency desires to urge upon the men under conference appointment, and upon the branch and district presidents, and other local or missionary officers, the necessity of making reports promptly and as fully as may be desired by those upon whom supervisory charge has been placed. These reports to general missionary and supervising officers are desired by the Presidency and are of use to them in their work. We feel that it is unnecessary to do more than state the foregoing to insure prompt and complete reports from all laboring under conference appointment, or under district or stake authorities.

It is also apparent from the reports that come to us from the missionaries in charge that there is great and extended need for the development of local laborers. Such local laborers in the spiritual vineyard are not so numerous as they should be. What can be done to supply the demand?

As the missions have been reported to you by the missionaries in charge, it is unnecessary to mention them here.

Patriarch A. H. Smith, as president of the Evangelical Order, has reported to us statistically of the work accomplished by the various members of that order; thirteen of the order reporting have given about one thousand patriarchal blessings, and have preached about eight hundred sermons. Bro. Smith says that he has had no reports from the membership of the order in Europe. He says, "In fact, no official notice of their ordination has ever been received by me. I have sometimes thought, as president of the order, I should have been notified of such ordinations so that a proper enrollment might be made."

Bro. Heman C. Smith, of the Twelve, in addition to having a portion of the oversight of the mission to which he was assigned, has devoted about one half of his time to his work as historian, in which office the work is, as a matter of course, increasing. The way is opening before him for more important work in that office, and it is not at all unlikely that demands upon his time in this direction will increase rather than decrease.

Bro. Joseph Luff has devoted almost his entire time, so far as church work is concerned, to the discharge of his duties as physician to the church. He probably will report to you direct.

Bishop E. L. Kelley, as presiding bishop of the church, has continued to discharge the duties of his office, and while he has made no regular report at stated intervals to the Presidency, he has responded to all requests from the Presidency for special reports. His work in detail has been set out in his published report, and it is unnecessary for us to say more.

Respectfully submitted,

FRED'K M. SMITH,
Secretary Presidency.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, April 6, 1908.

A communication from the Commercial Club of Des Moines inviting the conference of 1909 to meet in Des Moines was read.

The list of ex officio members was read.

The Bishop's report was read.

Bishop Kelley stated that he had decided that it would be best for the Bishopric to be relieved of the burden of overseeing the management of the Saints' Homes at Lamoni and offered the following resolution:

Moved that a board of at least three members be selected whose duty it shall be to look after the management and care of the Saints' Homes including the Saints' Home proper together with the Liberty Home, at Lamoni, Iowa.

The following substitute was presented and prevailed:

Moved as a substitute that inasmuch as the work of the Bishopric has so enlarged that they now need help for the Homes at Lamoni, that they be authorized to appoint a board to look after and care for those Homes.

The committee on a monument to be erected at Nauvoo to the memory of Joseph Smith reported verbally; the report was accepted and the committee was continued.

The Historian's report was read.

The evening hour was occupied by the Daughters of Zion, in the interests of the children's home. An excellent program, consisting of papers, music, and speeches, was presented.

APRIL 9.

The morning prayer service was in charge of Elders William Lewis and J. A. Tanner.

At fifteen minutes to eleven Elder C. Ed Miller preached, assisted by Elder H. E. French. The afternoon business-meeting was called to order by President F. M. Smith. Patriarch Joseph Lambert offered the opening prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read. An additional report from the Presiding Bishop was read.

At half past two o'clock the business made the special order of the day, the question of marriage and divorce, was taken up. The resolution of the Twelve presented to the last General Conference was read.

The following substitute was immediately presented:

Resolved, That in our opinion, the law of God states but one cause for divorce; viz: adultery or fornication; also that the remarriage of any divorced person guilty of adultery or fornication is wrong, and should not be approved or condoned.

After some discussion it was proposed to amend the substitute as follows:

Resolved, That in our opinion the law of God states but one cause for divorce, viz: adultery or fornication; also that the remarriage of any divorced person guilty of adultery or fornication, save it be between the parties separated, is wrong, and should not be approved or condoned; and where the marriage is not between the parties concerned, any one solemnizing such marriage shall be held to have done what is contrary to church law, and should be held amenable therefor.

The balance of the session was taken up in a spirited debate.

The benediction was pronounced by Patriarch Alexander H. Smith.

At the evening hour the speaker in the upper auditorium was Elder Columbus Scott, assisted by Elder L. E. Hills. At the same hour a meeting of those interested in social and economic questions met in the basement. This meeting was in charge of Apostles Rushton and Sheehy.

APRIL 10.

Prayer service was in charge of Elders V. M. Goodrich and George A. Smith. Elder W. A. McDowell was the speaker at fifteen minutes to eleven, assisted by Elder J. A. Tanner.

At two o'clock in the afternoon business-meeting convened, President F. M. Smith in the chair. Elder J. W. Rushton offered the opening prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read.

The question of marriage and divorce was again taken up. After some debate it was moved to refer the matter to the First Presidency. A motion that the whole matter lie on the table was presented, but was voted down by a large majority. After further debate the previous question was moved and the motion prevailed.

The motion to refer to the First Presidency, the motion to amend, the substitute, and the original resolution of the Twelve were then put, in their order, and all were voted down; the vote on the last named resolution standing 217 to 246.

Benediction was pronounced by Elder J. W. Wight. The evening services were in the interests of Graceland College, Elder F. B. Blair being in charge. Professor C. B. Woodstock was the principal speaker, and explained the aims and workings of the Industrial Department.

APRIL 11.

The morning prayer service was in charge of Elder M. H. Bond. At fifteen minutes to ten Elder I. M. Smith preached, assisted by Elder A. D. Angus.

(Continued on page 381.)

General Conventions.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

The seventeenth annual convention of the General Sunday-school Association assembled at half past two. Song No. 182 Zion's Praises. Prayer by T. A. Hougas.

A few remarks by President T. A. Hougas.

Credential committee's report read.

Moved and seconded that so much of the report as is correct be adopted, and the balance be returned to the committee for correction. Carried.

By motion the courtesies of the floor were extended to visitors.

Bro. J. F. Mintun and Sr. Mary O. Lewis were selected by the secretary as assistants and the selection approved. Sr. Laura Kelley chosen as chorister, and Sr. Stella Harding as pianist.

By motion chair was authorized to appoint press committee. T. W. Williams and W. H. Garrett were appointed, the latter declining.

W. N. Robinson took the chair. No. 42 was sung.

Reports of general superintendent, T. A. Hougas, first assistant, W. N. Robinson, second assistant, E. H. Fisher, were read. Statement of secretary concerning printed report.

Reports of librarian, Sr. Lucina Etzenhouser, home department superintendent, Sr. T. A. Hougas, editor of Quarterlies, Mrs. Anna Salyards, first assistant superintendent in the Society Islands, Sr. Burton, J. W. Wight, and Ammon White, read.

Moved and seconded that the chair appoint a committee of three to notify the Presidency and Twelve that we are in session. Motion to amend by adding Bishopric. Amendment and motion carried. Committee appointed, W. W. Smith, Levi Gamet, and J. O. Dutton.

Song No. 90; benediction by J. F. Mintun.

FRIDAY EVENING, 7.30.

No. 122 Zion's Praises. Prayer by Bro. Chatburn. Song No. 3.

Minutes read and approved. Additional report of credential committee read and adopted and committee continued.

Report of joint executive committee on normal work.

Report of revising committee read.

First recommendation of joint committee on normal work "that we continue the Hurlbut and Bible study," was adopted. Also second and third recommendations adopted.

Report of John Smith, treasurer, and auditing committee's report read and both adopted.

Financial report of assistant superintendent, W. N. Robinson, and adoption.

Bill of E. H. Fisher presented and allowed.

Financial reports of assistant superintendent and general librarian read and ordered paid.

Song No. 4.

The recommendations of the editor of the Quarterlies were taken up. Reading of superintendent's report on this matter, also resolution from the Clinton District and Eastern Colorado District read, and the whole matter was by motion referred to a committee to be appointed by the body. Committee appointed was J. A. Gunsolley, W. W. Smith, Sr. R. S. Salyards, Bro. Hougas, and F. M. Smith, and in case of vacancy or absence of any of the members Bro. T. W. Williams was to serve with the committee.

Recommendation of the treasurer that three auditors be appointed, one for one year, one for two years, and one for three years, and thereafter they shall be appointed for three years annually, was moved to adopt.

Moved to amend by inserting the words "to which shall be referred all financial reports of the convention." Moved to further amend by striking out the word "convention" and insert "this association." Amendments carried and resolution as amended carried.

Moved and seconded that this auditing committee shall be required to report annually to our conventions. Motion to table was lost, and motion carried.

Benediction by E. L. Kelley.

SATURDAY MORNING, 8.30.

Morning prayer-meeting at half past eight in charge of J. M. Baker and George Thorburn. Song No. 48 Praises.

Songs 7, prayers 6, testimonies 14.

Business-meeting at fifteen minutes to ten.

Song No. 2. Prayer by F. G. Pitt. Song 144.

T. A. Hougas and W. M. Robinson in charge.

Reading of minutes. Secretary's printed report and statements concerning it. Revising committee elected, R. S. Salyards, Duncan Campbell, and John Smith.

Moved that the amount appropriated for contingent expenses be $400, and for the Exponent $300. Moved to strike out part referring to Exponent and insert, "that in view of the uncertainty of the matter the executive committee be authorized to provide for the contingent expenses of the Exponent." Amendment and motion as amended carried.

Resolution concerning diploma for Golden Roll of Honor was read and it was moved that the association provide such diploma. Moved as a substitute to refer to executive committee with power to act. Carried. Motion to confine speeches to limited time was lost.

A resolution sent in by Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District was referred to lesson committee.

Report of Library Commission read.

Moved that the report be approved. Moved as an amendment that the recommendation concerning the $300 expense, that the Sunday-school bear one third of such expense. Carried. Motion as amended carried. Other recommendations of superintendent referred to executive committee.

Song No. 83.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON SESSION, 2.30.

Song No. 110.

Prayer by M. H. Bond.

Song No. 46.

Communication from Bishopric read.

Communication from First Presidency read.

Communication from Quorum of Twelve read.

Officers elected as follows: T. A. Hougas, superintendent; W. N. Robinson, first assistant; E. H. Fisher, second assistant; D. J. Krahl, secretary; John Smith, treasurer. By motion the election of librarian was deferred until action had been taken upon the library amendments.

By motion Sr. T. A. Hougas was continued as home department superintendent.

Auditing committee elected consisted of R. S. Sal-yards for one year term, John Garver for two year term, Oscar Anderson for three year term.

Song No. 96.

Report of lesson committee read and adopted by sections and as a whole.

Election of lesson committee as follows: J. A. Gunsolley one year term, Duncan Campbell two year term, Heman C. Smith three year term.

Proposed amendments to constitution concerning library commission as published in HERALD of December 25 were read and adopted by sections and as a whole.

E. H. Fisher chosen as librarian.

Amendment on elections, article 5, section 2, page 10. Moved to amend after the word "represents" and before the word "in," by inserting as follows, "or otherwise as the district may determine."

Moved as a substitute for the whole matter that section 2 of this article be amended to read as follows: "In the election of officers to the district association, and of the delegates to the General Association, the business shall be transacted by open nomination and vote." To strike out all after the word "association" in third line, and insert "the business shall be transacted by open nomination and vote." Carried.

Song No. 9.

Benediction.

SATURDAY EVENING, APRIL 4, 1908.

Graduating exercises of Sunday-school and Religious normal class. In charge of J. A. Gunsolley and T. A. Hougas. Thirty-nine graduates, sixteen present.

A paper was read by Walter W. Smith on "the Sunday-school of to-day." Paper by A. D. Angus on "The Sunday-school of to-day, and the Church tomorrow." Paper by Edward Rannie on "Analysis and Assimilation." Superintendent T. A. Hougas addressed the class. Presentation of diplomas by D. J. Krahl to graduates present. A vocal solo by Mamie Pace of Shenandoah. Two songs were rendered by the missionary octette. Euphonium solo by J. A. Robinson, Jr.

A morning prayer-meeting at eight o'clock, and Sunday-school at half past nine.

SUNDAY MORNING SERVICE, 11 O'CLOCK.

Service in charge of first assistant superintendent, W. N. Robinson, and T. A. Hougas, superintendent. Song No. 7 Praises; prayer by W. H. Kelley; anthem Independence choir; speakers, T. A. Hougas and T. W. Williams. Song No. 92 Zion's Praises. Benediction by W. H. Kelley.

AFTERNOON SESSION AT 2.30.

Sacrament meeting, in charge of J. A. Gunsolley, Bro. Krahl, and Independence Stake presidency.

Song No. 255 Hymnal. One child blessed and one confirmation. Sacrament administered. two prayers, six songs, and twenty-eight testimonies. Doxology. Dismissed by Bro. Hougas.

An overflow meeting was held in the basement.

Sunday evening service at half past seven, in charge of R. B. Trowbridge. S. A. Burgess offered prayer. Address by F. M. Smith.

In the daily newspapers of the 21st of March, two news items appeared in significant juxtaposition. One of them told of the net profits of the United States Steel Corporation for the last year, amounting to $757,014,768. The other told of three hundred men, desperate from hunger, fighting for jobs at the Cleveland plant of one of the constituent companies of that corporation. If any comment upon this ugly contrast is necessary we are at a loss for phrases in which to express it.—The Public.

A man that does not know how to be angry, does not know how to be good.—Now and then a man should be shaken to the core with indignation over things evil.—H. W. Beecher.

Amusements are to religion like breezes to the flame,—gentle ones will fan it, but strong ones will put it out.—Thomas.

We are more sociable, and get on better with people by the heart than the intellect.—Bryère.

Original Articles

THE ENSIGN OF THE PEOPLE.

SERMON BY ELDER HEMAN C. SMITH, AT LAMONI, IOWA,
FEBRUARY 24, 1907.

(Reported by Leon A. Gould.)

I will invite your attention to the reading found in the eleventh chapter of Isaiah:

And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots: and the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears: but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off: Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. But they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the west; they shall spoil them of the east together: they shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab; and the children of Ammon shall obey them. And the Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea; and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it in the seven streams, and make men go over dryshod. And there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria; like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

I have read the entire chapter. I desire to invite especial attention to the tenth verse of this chapter: "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious."

I think I will express the sentiment of all who have heard this chapter read, or who have read it, when I say that to us, with our limited understanding, with our very meager conceptions, the relation of things spoken of here, which are to come to pass, is grand. We can only enter into the suburbs, as it were, of the consideration of it; for in our present condition we are not able to fathom it. There is enough, however, that is open to our understanding to interest us, and cause us, if we are reflective and thoughtful, to conclude at once that there is nothing possible to humanity of an earthly nature that we would not sacrifice to be participants in the glorious rest that is spoken of in the language of our text. All other earthly considerations, all prospect of wealth, of fame, of ease, of comfort, fade into oblivion when we compare them with the thought that occurs even to our limited understanding, the glorious rest described here and elsewhere that men are to obtain in the coming kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, whom we understand was referred to here in the words: "In that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people."

He is the personage, no doubt, spoken of. And what I want to emphasize this morning, if I am permitted to do so, is the great necessity of recognizing him as the ensign; that in all other things that occur to our minds, or all other duties that may be enjoined upon us while here, which are temporary in their character, this one we should never lose sight of: that Christ is the center, that he is the one to whom our thoughts should always be directed. He is the one to whom all the duties that we owe to our fellow men, all the duties that we owe to ourselves, are but aids in approaching. Anything that does not tend in that direction—though it may appear plausible to us for the time,—anything that may appear to us as being worth the doing, anything that may appear to us as to be worth the thinking, that does not have a tendency to draw us nearer to him as the ensign of the people, is a mistake. It is not worth doing. It is not worth thinking; and the quicker we discover that some things that we are practicing do not have that tendency, the better it will be for us; and the quicker we abandon them the better it will be for our interests. I do not believe it was the purpose of the Master, that it was the purpose of the Almighty to simply send his Son into the world to be recognized by humanity, and a penalty attached for not recognizing him, simply that he might show his authority, and bring us under subjection. But all that is required in this direction is required because it is good for us; and the love of God was manifested in all and through all. His consideration and interest for our welfare stands behind every requirement made.

When we talk about sacrificing for Christ, when we talk about sacrificing for the truth, it may be true in a sense; but not in the highest sense. We sacrifice that which is not to our profit for that which is to our profit. We invest, perhaps, some pleasures and some comforts in this life in order to get more; but it is not considered a sacrifice generally when we are considering business to pay out a few dollars for the purpose of gaining more money. That is a good business proposition, if it is done honestly. And so in regard to the pleasures, so in regard to the comforts of this world; we are required to sacrifice nothing only for the purpose of getting more out of a good proposition made for our benefit; and then it is entirely unbecoming for us to be complaining or whining about what we sacrifice for God and the truth. We have not sacrificed—only something that might have contributed to our lustful pleasures, or our—what shall I call it—our changed and perverted natures, for the purpose of getting something grander and better. And not only is this true in our lives; but if true in our lives, it must be true in our teaching, especially of the individual who stands behind the sacred desk, and in a more limited sense, perhaps, to every one, who should see to it that their teaching, that their influence, that the example they set in the world, is tending toward directing men to this ensign that should be established in the last days, to whom, if men would resort, they should find a glorious rest.

In our teaching, to the aged and the young, the one central thought should be, Christ, the ensign of the people, to teach them of his love, to teach them of the wonderful provision that he has made for our exaltation and our peace, whether we do that teaching from the sacred desk, or whether we do it in the public school, or in the Sunday-school, or wherever it may be; or whether it is the influence we have upon a friend in our private life, the only thought and the only desire should be to bring those people who are under our influence nearer to that glorious rest that is beyond, and to teach them that the things that are transitory are of but little consequence compared with this. Things that are past, I care not what they are, whether they are contained in sacred writ or in profane history, are interesting and beneficial as history. The old dispensation that was revealed to men under the administration of Moses is interesting, and the lessons that are to be deduced from it, of the consequences of obedience and of disobedience are good, and it is well to cite to them incidentally. But the one grand thought that should always be kept before us is: Christ and his future kingdom, and his work, and his truth.

It is natural for men to have objects in the past that they look back to as mementoes, or you might call them ensigns in a sense. Way back yonder in the olden times, when the people were led by the hand of God out of Egyptian bondage, when they crossed the River Jordan, and the rivers were parted so that they went over dryshod, they were commanded that there should be twelve men selected, one out of each tribe, and these twelve men as they passed through where the rivers of Jordan once rolled its flood, should each take a stone from the bed of the river and carry it away with him, take it into their lodging where they were to tarry that night, and these stones were to be preserved, and, saith the Lord, "When your children shall ask their fathers in time to come, saying, What mean ye by these stones?" tell them about this occurrence, when they were directed through the waters, or led through the waters of Jordan by the power of God.

We have been noticing all along throughout history, and through our experience, that men like to do this sort of things. If there is any historic place, it must be carefully guarded when people go there, lest it is picked to pieces and carried away as a memento, as souvenirs of the place or the occasion. And these things were a sort of souvenir. They were used to remind the people of things that were past. But I do not know where those stones are now. The statement was made that they were to be had in remembrance by the people for ever. I do not know whether they are preserved or not. I have not read anything about them. But I want to tell you I am not very much interested; do not care where they are; do not care whether the people have kept them or not; do not care whether they are to be found among the Jews, or whether they have been lost in some of their wanderings. I do not care much for any of these things, now, for the reason that the Lord has erected an ensign for the people to gather to; and he has said that this disposition in the minds of men to have something as a memorial, something to represent their thought or their desire shall be supplied, grandly, in the person that is spoken of in the language of our text, called the root of Jesse, which shall stand for the ensign of the people. This came in harmony with our traditions,—I do not know where the traditions came from—came in harmony with our natural desires—I do not know where they were planted in man—to have something to remember, something to remind us of things that are past. The Lord Jesus Christ, in this, as well as in everything else, meets the demands of men, and there is an ensign, the Lord says, for the gathering of the people. And if the people are to be literally gathered to him, their thought must be gathered first,—their minds, their affections, their desires. And hence, here is the place around which we must rally. Here is the embodiment of all that is good and noble and true, and everything must be subject to that, if we would enjoy the glorious rest that is prepared for the people of God. For that reason I believe that all our lessons, wherever taught, should use these old things that have transpired simply for what they are worth, as illustrations of the main subject, as simply the means to exemplify or to enlarge our understanding of the main thought of Jesus Christ, the ensign of the people.

Away back there in the times that are past, they had a great many things that can be referred to casually that will do us good; but the details of it I care but little about. I do not care very much in regard to how many yards of silk or linen it took to make a curtain for the tabernacle; or how many pomegranates were on the robes of the priests, or anything of that kind. But the lessons of obedience and the results of disobedience are to be pointed out as illustrative of the thought that we are taking the Christ and his truth as means to bring us the glorious rest that is prepared for the people of God. Then, to the people we should tell that the central thought was not these ceremonies, not these things that were prepared for the purpose of beautifying places of worship, etc. They were simply incidental; but they were taught to look forward to the time when the great prophet of the world should come, when he who should redeem his people was to appear in the world; and this was the highest ambition of the people of God in early ages.

Other things may have attracted too much attention—at least I think they did. But they did not lose sight of that that the Lord had promised in the meridian of time, that one should come who would redeem the people of God, and to him should the people seek. When he came, if they had given earnest heed unto the things which were taught them, and not so much heed to ceremonies, and shadows and types, they would perhaps have been prepared to receive him; but they rejected him because he did not come in harmony with their traditions. And among other things they were traditioned in regard to was this question of war and force and compulsion. They saw no other way for Christ to reign, only to come as a conqueror, a prince with the armies of Israel marshaled and disciplined for war and equipped with the munitions of war. Had he come as such and called them to arms it is probable that many would have followed him who did not follow him. They would have rallied to his standard then, and perhaps would have been as good soldiers in his cause as ever drew the weapons of warfare to fight a foe. But he told them that was not the way to conquer the world. He said the way to conquer the world was to preach peace to them, to say, Come to me, and I will give you rest, the glorious reign of rest that has been predicted shall come through the means of peace, and not through war. That thought was emphasized as it never has been emphasized before nor since, when the angelic messenger came to the shepherds by night, when the Christ was born, and said, I bring you glad tidings of great joy which shall be to all people; for to-day is born in the city of David, Christ the king; and the multitude of the heavenly host joined with this first one and sang the anthem, Peace on earth, good will to men. And if this world is ever to be conquered, if this world is ever to be brought in subjection to the Christ, it will be by men being instructed in the ways of peace and of righteousness, and of love.

I have no confidence in the gospel of Jesus Christ being carried to the nations of the world by force of arms. Neither the last step nor the first, nor any other step is to be taken in such a way as that. I repudiate the thought that God is preparing the way for the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ by war and bloodshed. I do not believe it. And the older I get the less I believe of it. I used to have something of the martial spirit in me, when I read of the noble deeds, so-called, and the brave deeds of the warrior upon the field of battle; but it has left me. I have not a vestige of it that I know of. It does not appeal to me at all. But this "Peace on earth, good will to men," appeals to me more and more as the years go by.

I say in former times, before the coming of the Son of God upon the earth, that they pointed forward to him, as the ensample; and since he has come into the world we are pointed backward to him. There is the light shining, that shall shine on to the perfect day! There is the personage to whom we must look, not only as individuals, but as nations. No nation is a Christian nation in the full sense of the word that does not adopt the policy and the truth of the Son of God. We may call them such, because they have been enlightened to some extent; but they are not Christian nations unless they are followers of the Christ. And I would not retain any confidence in the gospel of Jesus Christ at all—I would discard it all—if I could not apply it to every question that comes before the sons of men for solution. If I could not apply it to my religion and my politics, and to my social duties, I would lose confidence in it entirely. I have no occasion so long as I believe in the Son of God to resort to other means to solve the problems that come to me in this life.

Our message to-day, as Latter Day Saints, wherever we may be found, in whatever capacity we may act, is to preach the angelic message, to tell this generation of the angel that came to earth to bring back the everlasting gospel to preach in these latter times. But this angelic message can not be received by us without it points out to us more clearly the ensign that has been erected for the people to gather to. But wherever we neglect to preach this angel message, we are neglecting our duty as representatives of the Christ. We are to preach the restored gospel—not always and in every place and under every circumstance to speak of the angel—that is not it; but to speak of what the angel did, and present the truth as it is reflected upon us in consequence of that angel message. And I believe that in every department of church work the central thought should be the dispensation in which we live. That is what is committed to us. That is the message that God has given us to deliver to the people. Other things may be used as corroborative. The history of other peoples and their experiences may be brought in, and we may occasionally, or often if we see fit, read their history, and read it with profit; but the central thought should be the message delivered to us as a people.

God sent us into the world, if he sent us at all, to tell that the angel has flown in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth. Sometimes we get timid and think we will drive people away if we talk about that, therefore we must talk about something else. It does look that way sometimes, for I have seen people go away when we spoke of it. And yet my experience has been that there have been more people converted, and the conversion of those who have united with the church more enduring, and they are more firmly established, when they have caught the spirit of the angel message. When we have told them of the glad tidings that the Lord has revealed to the world through the angel that appeared in this latter-day dispensation, and men have seen the beauty of it, they are converted, and soundly converted. When we convert them by making them think that there is not very much difference between us and other denominations of Christians, and they just as well be with us as anybody else, and people will think just as much of them as they would if it was some other church, and especially if they are in a neighborhood where there are a good many of our people,—we get along smoothly that way with our neighbors,—but when we get people into the church that way they do not stick very well. That is my experience. Not worth very much. I am reminded sometimes of a little incident that I heard a veteran of the cross say one time in my boyhood's days, Uncle John McIntosh (some of you have heard of him, and all of you have read of him), when an individual approached him and said, Uncle John, I believe your doctrine. I believe the principles that you preach, as deduced from the Bible, and I would like to obey them. Isn't it possible for me to be a Latter Day Saint and not believe that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God? Could not I make a Latter Day Saint, and stand there? He said, You might make some sort of a one, but it would be a very poor one. I have thought of that a great many times; and I believe it is true. Those from whom there has been no concealment, to whom we have openly brought the message that was committed to us, and taught it to them, they have gotten the spirit of it; you can risk them anywhere. They will stand when trial comes. They will not be soon to depart from the faith. And I do not want any tampering with untempered mortar so far as I am concerned. I think if we have a dispensation of the gospel delivered to us we ought to deliver it everywhere and in every place, and let the consequences remain with God. He will take care of his truth as he always has done. But there is a danger of another extreme; if not in our minds, of making it appear so in the minds of people we meet. If we are not careful they may think that we are placing this latter-day dispensation, with the Prophet of the latter-day dispensation first, when we do not intend to make that impression. We intend, or should intend (and I believe all Latter Day Saints do intend), to make it to appear that while we accept the dispensation delivered to us, and as faithful ministers proclaim it, it is simply because it has a tendency to point to the ensign which came from the root of Jesse, and because we find in the latter-day work the greatest exemplification of the truth that is taught by the Son of God that we can find anywhere in the world; that he is first, and that without him there is no salvation; without him there is no real rest; without him there is no real enjoyment; without him there is no real comfort.

How weak it is then in us, if we neglect a duty of this kind for the sake of wealth, of influence, of popularity, of renown. There is not anything that we can think of that is worth the price we pay for it. But to have our thoughts, our acts, our duty to God and our duty to man—for I do not make much distinction there. Our duty to man is our duty to God; our duty to mankind generally, our duty to those that we love best, and our duty in the extended as well as in the narrower spheres of life, are all essential toward making us better prepared for the rest that is prepared, which it is said in our text shall be a glorious rest. And we like to think of that. We like to think of the time when peace shall cover the earth, when this prophecy shall be fulfilled; for I know of none that presents a higher and better condition than this condition described in the language we have read, when this root of Jesse shall stand for an ensign of the people, and they shall gather to him; when we shall recognize that righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins; when the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together, and a little child shall lead them.

Right here permit me to say that away back yonder in the creation man was given dominion over the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air. They were under his control. He lost control until it takes a good deal of skill to bring some of the tamest animals under our control now. They rebel, and we are hardly capable of government. We are lawbreakers, largely; and no lawbreaker is capable of being an executor of the law. We lost our standing because of this; but when we shall have rallied to the standard which is erected here, then we shall occupy our place among the creations of God, not only will the man who has made it a study, the man who is skillful and ingenious be able to take and control the beasts of the field; but dominion shall be given to men absolutely, so that those ferocious beasts, the wolf and the leopard, also the kid, the calf, and the young lion—some of them you notice are beasts of prey, and would devour the others—shall not only be subject to men, but a little child shall lead them. That will be the condition that will come about when we learn to do right. "And the cow and the bear shall feed; and their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp (no danger there), and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den (it will not hurt him, because it is under control). They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord." That is the best part of it. These other things, such as controlling the animals, and their lying at rest in peace among themselves, or in the fields as they feed upon what God has provided for them and not upon each other, is a nice thing to think about; but it is all secondary to the thought that "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

"Knowledge of the Lord"! We shall know him! I do not think it will be necessary to examine him, and see the prints of the nails in his hands and feet, as we sing about sometimes, to know him there. There is a better way to know him than that. I never did like anything like that, and do not now,—that we shall know him by the marks upon his body. I want to know him in a different way from that in that day.

And this is all to be brought about by this root of Jesse who shall stand for an ensign of the people whom the knowledge of the Lord governs. Then shall Israel be gathered. Then shall the nations of the earth come to that standard and shall learn war no more. Then shall they recognize that this contending with each other was wrong; contrary to the divine plan. They shall not seek the advantage of each other. There will be no nations rushing to war; no men seeking each other's blood. Ah, more, no one seeking advantage of another. But they shall live together in peace; and selfishness shall be taken away; and the good of one shall be the glory of the other. Then shall he gather the remnant of his people, he says, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from other places named here, and from all the world, and gather them to the ensign of the people; and in his kingdom and under his control and leadership they will rest gloriously and rest for ever.

Let us make this our mission, the burden of our lives—if it might be called a burden; make it the central thought wherever we teach, wherever our influence extends; and I think we will accomplish that which the Lord has committed to us to accomplish; and we shall not have sacrificed anything when all sides of the account are summed up. We will find we are ahead, and all that we have contributed has yielded to us profit, a large increase beyond anything we ever invested in this world.

May God's peace and blessing abide with us in our efforts to attain this reign of righteousness and peace, is my prayer.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. T. A. Hougas, secretary, Macedonia, Pottawattamie County, Iowa; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, Treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, 630 South Chrysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

An Awakening.

She sat on her humble doorstep, when the long day's work was done,

And watched with gloomy vision the setting of the sun;
Heeding not the splendid beauty of the ever-changing west,
Dwelling only on her troubles, struggling with a vague unrest.

How she fiercely longed for beauty, and for riches, and for fame;

With a sudden loathing, whispered her unnoted, humble name;

When her little sweet-faced baby toddled slowly to her knee,
Spurred his wistful baby pleading, bade him run away and play.

O'er her senses came a slumber as the sun sank down to rest,
And she dreamed of silks and jewels flashing brilliant on her breast;

Flatt'ring mirrors showed her beauty that she thought almost divine,

Lords and ladies passed before her, humbly bowing at her shrine.

But her beauty paled and faded, honeyed words were changed to jeers,

Silks and diamonds failed to comfort for the sting of bitter sneers;

Gifts of fame and riches vanished like the bubbles blown in air,

And upon her crushed existence fell the chill of cold despair.

"Won't you speak to baby, mamma?" said the childish voice once more;

And the timid, "Baby loves you," touched her heart as ne'er before,
 "Ah, thank God," she cried, "for duty, for a home and honest name,
 For my work and strength to do it,—nobler calling none may claim.
 "Thank thee, O my God and Father, for thy Spirit, pure and mild,
 And,—most precious gift to woman,—for this little loving child,
 For the faith and hope thou givest, oh sustain me, give me grace,
 That I be among the faithful, who shall see thee face to face."
 Thanksgiving Day, 1907.

SISTER BERTA.

Humble Heroism.

AN INCIDENT OF THE FLOOD IN THE ALABAMA RIVER.

Negroes frequently exhibit a wonderful heroism in times of danger. An incident of this I witnessed in the spring of 1886, when a freshet in the Alabama River caused the country on each side to be overflowed by water for many miles.

The negroes on the river plantations were the greatest sufferers. Their cabins would be under water almost before they knew that danger threatened them, and hundreds of them were sometimes found huddled together on some knoll sufficiently elevated to be above the water. There they often remained two or three days and nights without food, and exposed to a soaking rain. Fortunately the weather was not cold.

Many relief expeditions were sent out from the neighboring towns to rescue them. These consisted of one or more boats, manned by expert oarsmen and swimmers and filled with cooked provisions, blankets, etc. One day the news came that the negroes on a certain plantation had sought refuge upon a corn barn, around which the water was rapidly rising, and so rendering their condition exceedingly precarious. Two boats started out at once to their assistance. In one of these I went, accompanied by another white man and a negro. Just before dark we sighted the corn barn, upon which a mass of black humanity clustered like a swarm of bees. A heavy rain was now falling, and daylight beginning to fade away. Their condition became almost distressing as they sat in perfect silence waiting our approach.

But we did not appreciate their extreme peril until the boat struck against the frail log building which was in the water to the edges of the roof and visibly shook and tottered. The poor creatures commenced to climb hurriedly down to the boat.

"Stop!" I cried. "The women and children first."

The men obediently resumed their seats. We took in first the children and then the women, and were about to push off, telling the men we would hurry back for them as quickly as possible or send the first boat we met, when a very old woman (I noticed she was the last to get in the boat and had done so reluctantly) seized the corner of the house, and looking anxiously into my face, said:

"Marster, ain't you gwine to take my old man?"

"No, auntie," I answered, "the boat is too full now. He must wait till we come back."

The words were hardly out of my mouth, when with a sudden spring she was up and on the roof again. It shook as she scrambled on it and took her seat by a little, withered old black man whose hand she seized and held as if she was afraid we would tear her away from him.

"Come, auntie," I cried, "this won't do. We can't leave you here, and we can't wait any longer for you."

"Go on, marster," she answered, "I thanks yer, en I pray de good Lawd to fetch you all safe home; but I am gwine to stay wid my ole man. Ef Simon got to git drowned, Lyddy gwine git drowned too. We dun bin togedder too long to part now." And we had to leave her, after throwing some blankets and a lot of provisions to them.

As we rowed off in the rain and night a high falsetto voice, tremulous with age, came across the waters from the crib, where we left the almost certainly doomed group in the blackness of darkness. They dared not have a light for fear of setting fire to their frail support. We stopped our oars to listen to the song. It came clear and distinct. First Lyddy's trembling voice and then a chorus of a dozen or more of the deep bass voices of the men:

"We're a clingin' to de ark,
 Take us in, take us in,
 Fur de watah's deep en dark,
 Take us in, take us in;
 Do de flesh is po' en weak,
 Take us in, take us in,
 'Tis de Lawd we gwinter seek,
 Take us in, take us in;
 Den Lawd, hole out dy han',
 Take us in, take us in,
 Draw de sinnahs to de lan',
 Take us in, take us in."

We could wait and listen no longer to the weird sounds, but struck our oars in the water and hurried away.

Most fortunately we came across a boat bent upon the same errand as ourselves, which went immediately to the barn and saved all of its living freight. The building had apparently been held down by their weight, for as the last one left it turned over and floated away to the gulf.

Their rescuers told us afterwards that as they neared it the first sound they heard was an old woman's voice singing:

"De Lawd is hyah'd our cry."

Answered by the men:

"Take us in, take us in,
 En He'll save us by en by,
 Take us in, take us in."

To this simple-hearted old creature divorce courts and separations were unknown. With her it was "until death do us part."—M. E. S.

GERING, Nebraska, March 28, 1908.

To the Mothers' Home Column: In the HERALD for March 25, an article in your columns entitled, "A protest against corporal punishment," seems to me radical in the extreme. The writer infers that all those who use the rod as a means of punishment are inflicting tortures on a par with those of the Dark Ages. To my mind, to whip does not mean to beat. There are extremes in this matter as in all others. The spirit of the day among those who do not believe in whipping, is to guide by suggestion, or in other words, turning a child's mind from the mischief or wrong that he intends to do. This is reasonable in a degree; but, too, the child can be turned so often and shielded as it were from meeting these issues, that he is apt to become weak-willed, a creature of impulse, who, when the diverting support is removed from him, will follow any one or anything that appeals to him. Is it not better to meet bravely the wrong, and teach the child that it is wrong, and why; giving him a spirit of self-control, (from fear of punishment if need be,) until he is old enough to see the wisdom of refraining from it? One writer speaking of this subject says, "If you know the bridge is down, seek a ford, farther up." Why not repair the bridge? You may not always be in a position to use the ford. I believe in the wisdom of suggestion, reasoning, patience, and all other reasonable helps in gaining obedience, but I also believe in the wholesome use of the rod. Not constantly and for slight faults, but where rebellion and perversity have resisted all kindly appeals, the rod acts like a thunder-storm on a hot day.

It purifies the nature of the child, and he recovers from it penitent, loving, and wanting to gain his parent's, or teacher's favor again. Of course there are children whose natures are made fierce and vindictive by whipping, but I think if these were punished in a spirit of correction and not of anger the results would be different. The writer of the article first referred to cites a case where a pupil on being reprimanded by his teacher, knocked the teacher down. I do think the action of the school authorities was wrong. In the first place, the boy was in the wrong for wearing soiled gloves, and in the second, in striking his teacher; for he transgressed one of the fundamental laws of all order, this: "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves."

The writer asks, Are these Christians and followers of the Holy Nazarene? My Bible tells me of an instance when Christ found the money-changers and merchants using the temple as a place of business, that he made a whip of small cords, and drove them, by whipping, from the temple. He showed just indignation at their transgression and punished it in an effective manner. Let us not be too weak to punish in like manner, when necessary, but, using such justice, wisdom, and mercy as the Lord will give us in answer to constant prayer. SISTER VIOLA BARKDOLL.

The Mountains.

I saw the mountains stand
 Silent, wonderful and grand,
 Looking out across the land
 When the golden light was falling
 On distant dome and spire,
 And I heard a low voice calling,
 "Come up higher, come up higher,
 From the lowland and the mire,
 From the mist of earth desire,
 From the vain pursuit of pelf,
 From the attitude of self;
 Come up higher, come up higher—
 Think not that we are cold,
 Though eternal snows have crowned us;
 Underneath our breasts of snow
 Silver fountains sing and flow
 And restore the hungry lands."

—James G. Clark, in The Arena.

Ofttimes I have seen a tall ship glide by against the tide, as if drawn by some invisible tow-line with a hundred strong arms pulling it. Her sails hung unfilled, her streamers were drooping, she had neither side-wheel nor stern-wheel; still she moved on stately, in serene triumph, as if with her own life. But I knew that on the other side of the ship, hidden beneath the great hulk that swam so majestically there was a little, toiling steam tug, with a heart of fire and arms of iron, that was hugging it close and dragging it bravely on; and I knew that if the little steam tug untwined her arms and left the tall ship, it would wallow and roll about, and drift hither and thither, and go off with reflux tide, no man knows where. And so I have known more than one genius, high-decked, full-freighted, wide-sailed, gay-pennoned, that, but for the bare, toiling arms, and brave, warm, beating heart of the faithful little wife that nestled close to him so that no wind or wave could part them, would soon have gone down stream and been heard of no more.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Coolness of Trees.

It is not shade alone that makes it cooler under a tree in summer. The coolness of the tree itself helps, for its temperature is about forty-five degrees Fahrenheit at all times, as that of the human body is a fraction more than ninety-eight degrees. So a clump of trees cools the air as a piece of ice cools the water in a pitcher. That is why the legislature has authorized the park authorities of New York City to plant trees in the tenement districts. If the air can be made cooler and purer by the trees, fewer children will die of heat ailments.

Letter Department

LANGLEY, Washington, March 26, 1908.

Editors Herald: We enjoy reading your pages, filled with so many encouraging sermons and articles. I do enjoy reading the letters from the brothers and sisters, and the Mother's Home Column. There are many good things in the HERALD, and where one is isolated from the Saints, not able to meet with them in Sabbath-school and prayer-meeting, or to associate with them, the papers help one very much.

We are living on an island fifty miles long and about ten broad, and there are, to my knowledge, only five families of Saints living here. The wife of a cousin of Senator Burroughs has a brother here who is a Saint, so I have been told, but have never seen him. But they will not let our people have their church to preach in or their church song-books to sing from; are very prejudiced, claiming the Saints think no one but they will be saved.

I am glad the HERALD is sent without a wrapper on, as those in the post-office read them, in some instance requesting the privilege of reading them before handing them out.

I think the Exponent is fine, but I do not think it will ever take the place it would with outsiders until the Saints use the same lessons they do at the same time. The Exponent explains the lessons they have passed over, making the explanations of less value to them should they wish to use them. If our Gospel Quarterlies were on the same lessons, we, who have to attend their Sabbath-schools or none, could use our own quarterlies and thereby get the teaching of the gospel before people who could not be reached any other way.

We have been blessed in many ways and know this work is of God, and the longer I am in it the more I love it.

Yours in the faith,

LULA J. BARTLETT.

DORA, Alberta, March 25, 1908.

A number of my friends made the request before I left the States that I write a description of this part of the country and send it to the HERALD, after I had been here long enough to form an opinion from actual residence, and as I have been here nearly two years, I shall endeavor to comply with the request. As I see others have written from other parts of the country, and as my ideas will conflict somewhat with many things they have said, I will simply say that different climatic, and other conditions in the different localities, may account to some extent for the difference in opinion.

I am located near the central part of Alberta, on the Lacombe branch of the Canadian Pacific Railroad survey. The country is a gently rolling prairie, dotted here and there with small clumps of willow and poplar brush, with an occasional small pond or lake, with streams of running water few and far between. Well water is found at various depths, from ten to seventy-five feet, and a great deal of it is not very good. The soil is mostly a dark loam, slightly sandy, from six inches to two feet deep, with spots here and there of a hard soil, hard-pan cropping out on the surface. It is all underlaid with hard-pan, which accounts for the numerous lakes throughout the country, as this hard-pan will hold water like a dish. The soil, however, is fairly productive for small grain and grass, and many kinds of vegetables, when the season is not too short.

Wheat, as a rule, will average about twenty bushels to the acre throughout all Northwestern Canada; oats, thirty-five to forty bushels; barley, about twenty-five. But the last two years, the yield will hardly reach those figures, especially through this part of the country.

Nor are our local markets very encouraging. At Stettler, our nearest railroad point, and at present the terminus of this branch of the railroad, they have been paying this winter, when they would buy at all, thirty to forty-five cents for wheat, twenty-five to thirty cents for oats, twenty-five cents for barley, twenty-five cents for potatoes, and four and one half to five cents per pound for dressed pork. Butter has been twenty to twenty-five cents per pound, and eggs eighteen to thirty-five cents per dozen.

Goods and provisions of nearly all kinds are from twenty-five to fifty per cent higher here than in the States, for the same quality of goods.

We have no very warm weather here; the summer weather is something like the weather in the mountain regions in the States. Nights are cool, and frosts come early. Last fall we had our first snow-storm the 11th of September, and our first frost about the 14th. However, from that time on till about Christmas we had very nice weather, when we had our first winter snow, and it has been accumulating ever since, until now it is from eighteen inches to two feet deep, packed hard by the wind, but not hard enough to hold either a man or horse on the surface, making it almost impossible to get around, unless it is on some road that is traveled constantly, as the snow on the surface is constantly shifting with the wind, and entirely obliterating any track that is not traveled continually. A year ago this winter the ground was covered with snow from the 1st of November to about the middle of the following May. Before the snow commenced to melt in the spring, it was from eighteen inches to three feet deep on the level, while around my buildings the snow was drifted from six to eight feet deep. My stable, which is ten feet high, was completely buried. I do not wish to frighten those who are contemplating coming here to take up land, but I want the Saints who do come to know the exact state of affairs, so if they come they can prepare for the worst and not be caught unprepared, as a great many have been who have come here.

There is still good land available for homesteading, eighteen to twenty miles back from the railroads and railroad surveys, that will probably be quite valuable in a few years' time, but I would not advise men with families to come here unless they have money enough to fix themselves up comfortably, and enough to live on for a couple of years, until they can get their land broken and raise a crop. There will be more railroads built through the country in a few years, and with more roads and better facilities for shipping, we will have better markets.

So the man that has plenty of grit, "the genuine article," that will enable him to stand the hard knocks, will in all probability do very well from a financial standpoint, by taking up land in Western Canada.

There is very little work to be had in this part of the country; some of the young men leave here in the winter and go to British Columbia and work in the mines and the timber. Coal here is worth one dollar and fifty cents per ton at the mines; but is not very good, and it takes about twenty tons of it a year for one heater and cook-stove.

Chinook winds in this part of Alberta are a dream.

J. W. K. JONES.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, March 25, 1908.

Editors Herald: We received good news from home by this mail, and know that our heavenly Father oversees all things and works for good to all those who sincerely love him and strive to do his will.

Bro. Lake and I took twelve of the Sunday-school lessons to Mr. Brault, the printer, and yesterday he brought some of the pages for us to proof-read; so we have commenced our printing again, and as soon as we finish a tract which we are arranging for the printer, we expect to start the Orometua again, or rather Bro. Lake will, as I have made arrangements to leave here on the next steamer if possible, and Bro. Lake, being somewhat of a printer himself, and not fancying the old army press which Bro. Luff and I bought in San Francisco in 1896, as it was considerably marred by having been under the salt water, we sold it to Mr. Brault, and Bro. Lake hopes to get a more suitable press for the mission. In the meantime Mr. Brault will do our printing.

Our conference met on March 6 this year, and was finished on the 10th. A very quiet and peaceable conference. Bro. Lake presided over the most of the sessions, and is getting very familiar with the needs and work of the mission, and the Saints like him very much.

The most of the Saints have returned to their island homes since conference, and now it is very quiet at Taronā.

May peace and the blessing of God the Father, the faith of Jesus Christ, and the light of the Holy Spirit rest upon all the Israel of God. Amen.

Your brother in Christ,

JOSEPH F. BURTON.

LEICHARDT, Sydney, N. S. W., Australia.

Editors Herald: This leaves Elder Barmore and self engaged in tent work—a method well adapted to the large center of population here. Nearly half the population of New South Wales is in Sydney. This is the seventh week at this spot and we have reached more people than it were possible to reach by hiring a hall, as a pioneer effort. We are beginning to reap some fruits of our labors. Several have given their names for baptism. Cold and wet weather will soon compel us to put the tent away for the winter. One of us will continue the effort in a hall, if procurable. Elder Barmore is making a special success in selling Gospel Standards from house to house, leaving a tract whether they buy or not, and conversing with those who will talk. He is a marvel at this work, having sold about eight hundred copies of Standards in seven weeks.

Hope you will have a good conference and remember those far away.

G. R. WELLS.

Roberts and Slover Debate.

The discussion of propositions involving both the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and the Nonprogressive Church of Christ began the night of Tuesday, March 24, and ended the night of Tuesday, March 31. The agreement was for a ten-night discussion, but Roberts was called home the second night of his proposition.

Elder Roberts brought his muck-rake into use, and from the rakings and scrapings of the dumping-ground, the garbage-cans, and the scavengers' wagons, were, as he thought, adroitly and successfully brought forth some choice morsels of filth, and misrepresentation of the Saints. But these were not sufficient to weaken the faith of a single Saint, or to turn one to his side of the question.

The general talk, and it was concurred in by some of Roberts' people, was that Elder Slover showed himself to be a Christian gentleman, and that Mr. Roberts acted directly the opposite. Mr. Roberts is egotistical, abusive, dotes on what he knows, and resorts to taunting and sarcastic expressions of great variety. People wondered that Bro. Slover could be so calm as he was when under such a tirade of abuse. Mr. Roberts is either blind to the deportment that should characterize a minister of God toward an opponent, or he has no regard for such things.

Bro. Slover met his arguments that were of any weight, well and successfully. We are feeling satisfied with the results. Ground has been gained, and some are reading that scarcely read their Bibles before. Good has and will come from this discussion, and we feel glad and thankful.

W. A. GUTHRIE.

Extracts from Letters.

Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Lane, Tipton, Iowa: "February 2 and 3 we rented the opera-house, as before, and had Bro. and Sr. Farr come and occupy; but the people would not come out, so we only held three services. We are giving out our church literature, wherever we think it will be read. (Sr. Lane and I expect to be at General Conference, if it be the Lord's will. Neither of us have ever attended a General Conference yet.)"

Isaac R., and Sr. Mildred A. Moore, recently of Long Beach, California; now, Pioche, Nevada: "With best wishes we remember the several publications of our faith, as we are now scattered members, surrounded by Utah Saints, with no preaching of any kind in this rough mining town; but we are looking Zionward, and praying God to help us prepare the way speedily."

General Conference

(Continued from page 370.)

At two o'clock in the afternoon business-meeting was called to order by President Joseph Smith. President R. C. Evans offered the opening prayer. Minutes were read. A petition from Elder R. M. Elvin was read and was referred to the Quorum of Twelve.

The following resolution was moved by two of the brethren:

Whereas, The law of the Lord requires that his people shall so conform to such a standard of equality that there shall be no rich and no poor among them, and

Whereas, It is absolutely impossible to bring about such a condition unless there be a given or approximate standard of basis for all, therefore

Be it resolved, That the present ministerial allowance basis be a sufficient capital, to produce that amount annually, shall be the standard of equality for every member of the church; all above that amount to be considered surplus under the law; and

Be it further resolved, That at the discretion of the Bishopric money or property which has been turned over as surplus and consecration may be kept in the hands of individuals who by experience or ability may be qualified to handle wisely, that it shall not be considered their own, and shall be subject at all times to the order of the Bishopric, and

Be it further resolved, That we support the bishops and every legitimate effort to so execute the law.

A motion to refer the matter to the Bishopric, they to consider it and report to the body, prevailed.

A report from the High Priests' Quorum was read.

A communication from the Quorum of Twelve relative to procedure in case of silencing ministers was read, and adopted as follows:

1. We believe it is the duty of the church to so execute its laws that the interests of those who may be accused of wrong-doing shall be safeguarded as well as those of the general body.

2. Every man's claim of innocence should be respected until his guilt is established, and he is entitled to and should receive such consideration in the legal processes as to protect him from needless suspense or exposure and secure for him a prompt and impartial adjustment of the case in which he may be involved. Hence we have decided on the following:

3. Complaints of misconduct on the part of any minister may be made by any member of the church having knowledge or information regarding the same, to the minister under whose direction or jurisdiction the accused may be laboring.

4. It should be the duty of the one in charge, when thus informed, to see that proper labor is performed (if it has not already been) with the accused, with a view to restitution.

5. Should the efforts in this direction fail of desired results he should see that the charges, embodying in separate counts the items of wrong-doing complained of, are formulated and served on the accused, in person, or left for him where correspondence with him has been usual, at the earliest practicable moment.

6. When notice is thus served, the accused shall be considered legally silenced, and should at once surrender to the minister in charge his license, (and certificate of appointment, if he be under general appointment,) and should refrain from all official work until the disability thus imposed is removed.

7. No minister, thus silenced, should be held in suspension longer than is absolutely necessary to bring the case to proper trial; hence it is the duty of the minister having charge to appoint (unless he be the party involved in the case either as accused or accuser) a court, or to refer the case to the proper tribunal for its hearing, without unnecessary delay. As soon as practicable thereafter, said tribunal should confer with all parties involved, as to convenient time and place for hearing the case, and at once notify said parties when these are decided upon.

8. Should exigencies exist in connection with any case of ministerial misconduct, such as necessitate an immediate official imposition of silence, this action may be taken before formulating charges as hereinbefore provided, but in all such cases this action should be followed by as prompt an observance of all the details of the above requirements as the conditions involved will admit of.

9. Where the minister in charge is personally involved in the case against the accused, he should turn the entire matter over to the most available minister in charge, of equal authority, or to the First Presidency.

10. In cases where the accused is acting in local capacity only, or is not under general appointment, the local authorities should proceed as above; and in the event of their neglect so to do, or of their being personally involved, the minister in charge of the missionary field in which the case occurs should interpose and see that the matter is proceeded with according to the foregoing provisions.

11. In grave cases, involving the membership of the accused, proper notice should be lodged with the branch of the church having jurisdiction.

The report of the Third Quorum of Seventy was read. The report of the Second Quorum of Elders was read. Reports from the First and Fourth Quorums of Priests were read. The Daughters of Zion reported. The report of the General Sunday-school Association was read.

A request from Victoria, Australia, was read.

A letter from Mr. F. W. Newcomb, accepting election on Graceland College Board of Trustees, was read.

The report of the auditing committee was read. They reported accounts of Herald and Ensign Offices correct, and only two minor errors in the report of the Bishop. Clerical work in all the offices in excellent shape.

Elder F. A. Russell was reelected as member of the Auditing Committee.

The report of the Sanitarium Committee was read. They estimate the final cost of the completed building at about $32,000, exclusive of furnishings, amount received to date $24,251.48, expended $22,299.96, balance $1,951.52.

A resolution on the divorce question was presented and tabled.

A matter relative to making bishops of stakes custodians of church properties in stakes was referred to a committee consisting of Joseph Smith, Heman C. Smith, R. S. Salyards, E. L. Kelley, and Columbus Scott.

Tuesday was named by vote as the limit of time for the introduction of new business.

The benediction was pronounced by President Joseph Smith.

In the evening Elder Paul M. Hanson gave his illustrated lecture: "Around the World." He was assisted by Elder V. M. Goodrich.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

LITTLE SIOUX.—The conference of the Little Sioux District held at Moorhead, Iowa, February 8 and 9, will be remembered as a refreshing season, where the Lord was present with his Holy Spirit, to comfort and strengthen. Fortified by the prayer service which convened at 9 a. m., and during which the time was fully occupied with song, testimony, prayer, and prophecy, the business session began at 10.30 a. m., with the district presidents in charge, and who were afterward made presiding officers of the conference. The books and accounts of the Bishop's agent, A. M. Fyrando, had been audited and found correct, showing for the year a total of $3,548.19 collected in tithes and offerings, which, together with cash on hand from previous report, made a cash total of $3,813.76. Paid out $3,645.94, leaving a cash balance of $167.82. District president, Sidney Pitt, reported the spiritual condition of the district as well as could be expected, and reports from all of the twelve branches comprising the district showed a decided gain in spiritual conditions. Statistical reports from the branches show a present numerical strength in the district of 1,783, a gain of 23 since last conference. Of this gain, 11 were by baptism. Thirty-five of the priesthood reported their labors to the conference, showing 627 sermons preached, 591 times assisted, 11 priest-

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

hood meetings attended, 86 official visits made, and 1,578 other services attended, beside much other labor of a similar character not specifically mentioned. Twenty-three were baptized, 20 confirmed, one ordained, one marriage solemnized, 36 children blessed, and 186 administrations to the sick. Sixty-three delegates were elected to represent the district in the General Conference, being the same as were chosen by the district Sunday-school Convention. The selection of Woodbine for the place to hold next conference was made unanimous. June 6 and 7 at 10.30 a. m., as the time. The branches were requested to send their reports to the conference as the law directs. James D. Stuart, district clerk.

Corrections.

In HERALD for April 1, page 333, under "Addresses," the address given there should read: Mrs. James S. Schofield, 101 North Ashland Avenue, Buffalo, New York.

Conference Notices.

Conference of the Northeastern Kansas District convenes at 10.30 a. m., May 2, 1908, with the Atchison Branch. Frank G. Hedrick, secretary.

Convention Notices.

Convention of the Northeastern Kansas District Sunday-school association will meet at 2.30 p. m., May 1, at Atchison. Local secretaries of schools will please mail their reports to Mrs. Flo. McNichols, 712 Commercial Street, Atchison, Kansas. Frank G. Hedrick, superintendent.

Died.

BEVAN.—Frederick Bevan was born May 12, 1856, and was baptized November 5, 1887; he died at 137 Severn Road, Cardiff, Wales, March 17, 1908. He leaves a wife and three children, one adopted, to mourn. Funeral-services in charge of Elder Thomas Gould. Interred at Cardiff New Cemetery March 21. A large number of relatives, Saints, and fellow workmen followed to his grave. We have lost a faithful member, a good citizen, and a friend to all visiting Saints.

WINTERS.—Annie Marie Winters, of Guilford, Missouri, was born in Denmark, April 5, 1824. Died March 31, 1908. Sr. Winters united with the Utah church in Denmark, and moved to Utah. January 24, 1866, she united with the Reorganized Church, at Goshen, Utah. She was one of the pioneer Saints of the Nodaway District. She was in the faith and bore a strong testimony to the latter-day work. Sr. Winters was ready to go, desired to be at rest. She leaves, to mourn her departure, husband, children, and grandchildren, besides a host of friends. Funeral at the house, conducted by A. E. McCord, of Clyde, Missouri. Interment at the South Methodist Cemetery, Guilford, Missouri.

Spiritualism Exposed.

Is the title of a lecture delivered by Rev. T. W. Petty, which is now being published in book form. The price prepaid is fifty cents, and everybody interested in spiritualism should read it. Agents wanted in every State. Book and terms to any address on receipt of price. NEW PUBLISHING CO., Phoenix, Arizona. 11-3t

Decay in Wood Prevented.

It is estimated that a fence-post, which under ordinary circumstances will last for perhaps two years, will, if given preservative treatment costing about ten cents, last eighteen years. The service of other timbers, such as railroad-ties, telephone poles, and mine props, can be doubled and often trebled by inexpensive preservative treatment. To-day, when the cost of wood is a big item to every farmer, every stockman, every railroad manager—to every one, in fact, who must use timber where it is likely to decay—this is a fact which should be carefully considered.

It is easy to see that if the length of time timbers can be used is doubled, only half as much timber will be required as before and only one half as much money will need to be spent in the purchase of timber. Moreover, many woods which were for a long time considered almost worthless can be treated and made to last as long as the scarcer and more expensive kinds.

Of the actual saving in dollars and cents through preservative treatment, a fence-post such as was mentioned at the beginning might serve as one example. The post is of loblolly-pine, and costs, untreated, about 8 cents, or, including the cost of setting, 14 cents. It lasts about two years. Compounding interest at 5 per cent, the annual charge of such a post is 7.53 cents; that is, it costs 7.53 cents a year to keep the post in service. Preservative treatment costing 10 cents will increase its length of life to about eighteen years. In this case the total cost of the post, set, is 24 cents, which compounded at 5 per cent, gives an annual charge of 2.04 cents. Thus the saving due to treatment is 5.49 cents a year. Assuming that there are 200 posts per mile, there is a saving each year for every mile of fence of a sum equivalent to the interest on $219.60.

In the same way preservative treatment will increase the length of life of a loblolly-pine railroad-tie from five years to twelve years and will reduce the annual charge from 11.52 cents to 9.48 cents, which amounts to a saving of $58.75 per mile.

It is estimated that 150,000 acres are required each year to grow timber for the anthracite coal-mines alone. The average life of an untreated mine prop is not more than three years. By proper preservative treatment it can be prolonged by many times this figure. Telephone and telegraph poles, which in ten or twelve years, or even less, decay so badly at the ground line that they have to be removed, can, by a simple treatment of their butts, be made to last twenty or twenty-five years. Sap shingles, which are almost valueless in their natural state, can easily be treated and made to outlast even painted shingles of the most decay-resistant woods. Thousands of dollars are lost every year by the so-called "bluing" of freshly sawed sapwood lumber. This can be prevented by proper treatment, and at a cost so small as to put it within the reach of the smallest operator.

In the South the cheap and abundant loblolly-pine, one of the easiest of all woods to treat, can by proper preparation be made to take the place of the high-grade longleaf pine for many purposes. Black and tupelo gums and other little-used woods have a new and increasing importance because of the possibility of preserving them from decay at small cost. In the Northeastern and Lake States are tamarack, hemlock, beech, birch, and maple, and the red and black oaks, all of which by proper treatment may help to replace the fast-diminishing white oak and cedar. In the States of the Mississippi Valley the pressing fence-post problem may be greatly relieved by treating such species as cottonwood, willow, and hackberry.

Circular 139 of the Forest Service, "A Primer of Wood Preservation," tells in simple terms what decay is and how it can be retarded, describes briefly certain preservatives and processes, gives examples of the saving in dollars and cents, and tells what wood preservation can do in the future. The circular can be had free upon application to the Forester, Forest Service, Washington, District of Columbia.

We are but stewards of what we falsely call our own; yet avarice is so insatiable that it is not in the power of abundance to content it.—Seneca.

Pure Olive Oil

The pure virgin oil pressed from choice selected fruit especially raised by HEINZ in the heart of the olive-growing section of Spain.

Its goodness is due to its absolute purity and its careful "curing."

Possesses the natural greenish amber tint and delicately sweet olive flavor. Our own bottling—direct from Spain to you.

All grocers.

Others of HEINZ 57 Varieties are Baked Beans (three kinds), Tomato Ketchup, Fruit Preserves, etc.

H. J. HEINZ CO., Pittsburgh, Pa.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid . . $30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply lasts). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

Bible References

By Alvin Knisley

Paper cover 5 cents
Cloth cover 10 cents

THE INDIAN MAIDEN

A Temperance Story

No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice,
Mite, and Rain
Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK

LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church. 1tf

"HEAVEN AND HELL"

BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps

PASTOR LANDENBERGER,

Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

The Jackson County Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

ELLIS SHORT, President.
WM. CRICK, Vice-president.

M. H. BOND, Vice-president.
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

G. H. HILLIARD.
MRS. O. H. RIGGS.

DR. J. MATHER.
A. L. YINGLING.

HORACE SHELEY.

Very truly yours,

J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

Go to Pacific Coast Before April 30— Very Low Rates until that date only

To all principal points in Washington, Oregon, California, British Columbia, etc.

Through Service of Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Chair Cars (seats free) from all principal Burlington Stations.

Complete information and printed matter gladly furnished.

L. F. Siltz, Agent,
C., B. & Q. R. R.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 22, 1908

NUMBER 17

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
LEON A. GOULD, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
A Possible Necessary Explanation - - - -	385
GENERAL CONFERENCE - - - -	386
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
The Doctrine of Christ - - - -	394
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
An Open Letter and Challenge - - - -	402
MOTHER'S HOME COLUMN:
Daughters of Zion Reading for May - - - -	404
Questions on May Reading - - - -	405
Program for May - - - -	406
LETTER DEPARTMENT:
Letters - - - -	406
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:
Conference Notices - - - -	407

"On this side of the Jordan the Jews have transformed a large stretch of arid lands into fruitful fields. Few can withstand the determination of the Jews to come into possession of land and to rescue it from foreign hands. The German colonists now meet with some difficulty in acquiring land for the settlement of their people. Everywhere the Jews are making strenuous efforts to gain more and more ground in the country.

• * •

Man's first care should be to avoid the reproaches of his own heart, and next to escape the censures of the world. If the last interfere with the first it should be entirely neglected. But if not, there can not be a greater satisfaction to an honest mind than to see its own approbation seconded by the applause of the public.—Addison.

• * •

All earthly delights are sweeter in expectation than in enjoyment: but all spiritual pleasures more in fruition than in expectation.—Feltham.

Editorial

A POSSIBLY NECESSARY EXPLANATION.

The query often arises in the minds of some of the Saints, What necessary precautions may be taken for a case of exigency where the Bishop or Bishopric of the church may, if by reason of the immutability of human events and the accidents to human life, anything should intervene to disrupt the administration of human affairs?

It may be satisfactory to the Saints to know that the properties belonging to the church being held by the Bishop, and upon which he is administering both through his own personal labors and oversight and through others of the Bishopric and Bishop's agents, are held in such manner as conforms to the legal requirements of the statute enactments of the various States and Governments in which the property is held. This is done so far as real estate is concerned, both by deeds of record to the Bishop, as trustee for the church, and also by himself of properties consecrated in kind, or purchased by consecration and contribution of moneys outside of the statutory limitations governing the holding of property for church uses. Where this is the case the Bishop has provided by instruments of writing known as "deeds in escrow" by which the title to such properties inures to his successor in office as trustee.

In some States the legislatures have provided that churches may not hold more than a certain amount of land for church purposes. For instance, in one State, three acres. Whatever the trustee may hold for the membership of the church in such States over and above this amount, it would be necessary for the trustee to hold it through personal title to himself, but secured to his successor in office by the deeds in escrow as above recited, which would secure the property so held against any possible demands, as against the church titles. All personal properties held by the Bishop, his associate bishops, or his agents, would pass directly to the successor of the Bishop, without limitation, and could not be considered as personal belongings, and no one could possibly make just claim against them, so that the church would be in this respect amply safe.

It appears that the lawmakers have been more or less suspicious of church domination for a good many years, and have provided against the encroachments of priestcraft in this regard. No matter against whose aggressions these statutory limitations originally may have been made, they affect all alike; and it does not follow that loss must necessarily accrue to the church because they may be compelled through trustees properly qualified through obedience to the statutes to hold and use properties for the use of the church over and above these statutory limitations. The Bishop as an officer of the church is just as much interested in carrying into effect the spiritual laws of the church concerning temporalities as any of the spiritual authorities can possibly be, and no amount of supervision can so direct in regard to the temporalities of the church as to provide other or conflicting regulations than those provided by the statute law of the land. In some States even the churches in which the Saints worship must be held in the name of trustees in order that they may comply with the law. In other States deeds may be made directly to the church. In others they must be deeded to the general trustee of the church, and all these things provided for in the statute laws required to be made of record are complied with, with the direct purpose of securing the church against possible loss through the loss of the Bishop or any of his coördinate bishops or agents, by reason of death or transgression. There is absolutely no way provided in the law of God to make men absolutely honest, by statutory enactments, either secular or ecclesiastical. It is a necessity that men must be trusted, and it is a fortunate circumstance to the church if her temporal and spiritual authorities are worthy of trust. We have never seen any kind of association, whether great or small by reason of the number which might belong to it or be affected by it, in which there was not one or more in whom implicit confidence has been and must be placed. We have frequently requested persons who have challenged what they call loose methods of business that they would kindly point out a means by which an absolutely unchangeable guarantee against loss, either temporal or spiritual, could be secured. We have never yet been gratified by receiving such assured guarantee. The best we can have is the presence of the Spirit with officials, both temporal and spiritual, by which they become by the Spirit's indwelling intuition, righteous and unselfish servants of God and his people. These we need always; but we feel confident in assuring the inquiring Saints of every class that the Bishopric is taking every legal step to make titles of the properties of the church secure to the church as a body. Should any evidence of a failure in this be discovered by the proper authorities of the church, those who may properly proceed against wrong-doers will take measures to arrest the course of untoward events and prevent loss to the body.

General Conference

APRIL 12.

Sunday was one of the brightest and most pleasant days of the conference. Immense crowds were present at all the services, and those who came to Independence twenty or twenty-five years ago grew reminiscent and recalled the little handful of Saints then resident in Independence. At that time the Saints were unknown in Kansas City, in strong contrast to the throngs that attended the Sunday services in the new Central Kansas City Church.

The prayer-meeting at eight o'clock in the morning was presided over by the Independence Stake Presidency, G. E. Harrington, W. H. Garrett, and M. H. Bond. It was a very spiritual meeting and the gifts of the gospel were manifested, to the joy of those present.

The Sunday-school, at fifteen minutes after nine, was in charge of the local officers,—D. J. Krahl, superintendent.

At eleven o'clock President Joseph Smith spoke in the upper auditorium, assisted by President R. C. Evans; at the same hour Apostle F. M. Sheehy spoke in the lower auditorium, assisted by Elder Charles Fry; Elder Walter W. Smith occupied in the Central Kansas City Church, assisted by Bishop John Zimmermann.

At half past two in the afternoon President R. C. Evans spoke in the upper auditorium, assisted by Apostle Peter Anderson; at the same hour Apostle Heman C. Smith spoke in the lower auditorium, assisted by Elder O. H. Bailey; Elder T. W. Williams occupied at the Central Kansas City Church, assisted by Elder H. E. Moler.

At half past seven in the evening Patriarch Alexander H. Smith spoke in the upper auditorium, assisted by Patriarch Joseph R. Lambert; Elder F. M. Cooper occupied in the lower auditorium, assisted by Elder Hale W. Smith; Elder J. J. Cornish was the speaker at the Central Kansas City Church, assisted by Elder F. A. Russell.

Also during the day street services were held on Market Square in Kansas City.

The Second Quorum of Seventy reported, presenting the following resolution, concurred in by the First and Third Quorums of Seventy:

Resolved, That we petition the General Conference to take into consideration the advisability of printing the Book of Mormon elsewhere than in Herald Publishing House, providing better arrangements can be made.

After a spirited debate the matter was referred to the Board of Publication.

A committee of three was elected to compile conference resolutions that shall be adopted from time to time and arrange them so that they may be added to the book of Conference Resolutions. Elders R. S.

Salyards, Daniel McGregor, F. B. Blair compose the committee.

The benediction was pronounced by Patriarch Alexander H. Smith.

At half past seven in the evening Elder H. E. Moler was the speaker, assisted by Elder George W. Thorburn.

APRIL 13.

Prayer-meeting at nine o'clock in the morning in charge of Elders A. J. Layland and I. N. Roberts.

Preaching at fifteen minutes to eleven in the forenoon by Elder J. C. Crabb, assisted by Elder F. M. Slover.

At two o'clock in the afternoon business-meeting convened, President R. C. Evans in the chair. After the opening song Apostle W. H. Kelley offered prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read.

The Church Librarian reported.

APRIL 14.

Prayer-meeting at nine o'clock in the morning in charge of Elders T. T. Hinderks and M. H. Cook.

Preaching at a quarter to eleven in the forenoon by Elbert A. Smith, assisted by Elder F. M. Weld.

The afternoon business-meeting was called to order by President Joseph Smith. After the opening song, prayer was offered by President Joseph Smith. The minutes of the last meeting were read. President F. M. Smith took the chair.

The following resolution was offered, and was referred to the Board of Publication:

Whereas, The SAINTS' HERALD, being the official paper and organ of the church, be it resolved that space be set apart each week in the SAINTS' HERALD for the free and proper and unbiased study and discussion of the underlying principles of social and economic questions, and be it further

Resolved, That this department be conducted and in charge of some responsible and competent person elected by this body.

The object and purpose of this resolution is to bring about a better understanding among the Saints concerning the redemption of Zion, and education along economic and social lines.

A resolution, coming from the First Quorum of Elders, was presented and referred to the Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric.

The following resolution was presented:

Whereas, The law of God provides that the families of those engaged in the service of the church are to be provided for according to their wants and needs, inasmuch as their wants are just, and

Whereas, The Bishop can not know their true condition without an inventory of their property, therefore, be it

Resolved, That all ministers appointed and sustained by the General Conference, shall, within one year, file with the Presiding Bishop an inventory of their property; and that a failure to make or file such inventory will make such ministers ineligible to appointment.

The following was moved:

Whereas, The law of God specifically predicates ministerial support upon the law of necessity (see Doctrine and Covenants 81: 4; 77: 1; 70: 3; 51: 1), and

Whereas, There is no provision in the law for any minister receiving financial aid from the church not based upon his actual needs, therefore, be it

Resolved, That hereafter all those engaged in general church or ministerial work be supported in harmony with the aforementioned provisions of the law.

Moved to refer to Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric.

A substitute was moved to refer to Presidency, Twelve, Quorums of Seventy, and Bishopric. Moved to amend by adding High Priests.

The balance of the session was taken up with discussion of the resolution.

Benediction by Patriarch Alexander H. Smith.

At half past seven Elder J. W. Metcalf was the speaker, assisted by Elder Sidney Pitt. At the same hour those interested in sociological and economic questions met in the lower auditorium. Elder F. G. Pitt presided over this meeting.

APRIL 15.

Prayer-meeting at nine o'clock in the morning in charge of Elders Ammon White and E. F. Shupe.

Preaching at quarter to eleven in the forenoon by Elder J. C. Clapp, assisted by Elder Sidney Pitt.

Business-meeting convened at two o'clock in the afternoon, with President F. M. Smith in the chair. After the opening song, Apostle G. T. Griffiths offered prayer. Minutes of the last meeting were read.

The resolutions under discussion at the time of adjournment the day previous were taken up. The previous question on the whole matter was moved. Carried. The matter being put to vote the amendment and the substitute and the motion to refer were denied and the original resolution was adopted.

The committee on preparation and arrangement of the children's home appointed last year reported. They report funds collected to date amounting to $10,922.60. Will begin the work of preparing and arranging the home soon after the completion of the Sanitarium. Will receive propositions from either stake regarding location. They have decided by formal vote to establish the home on the plan of the cottage system.

A request from the San Jose Branch, asking that they be annexed to the Northern California District, was read, and a resolution adopted granting their request.

The Second, Fourth, Fifth, and Eighth Quorums of Elders reported.

The committee chairman of the Committee on the Church of Christ (Hedrickites) reported as follows:

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, April 13, 1908.

To the Presidency and Brethren in Conference Assembled: As chairman of the committee acting between the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the Church of Christ, I desire to report that I have visited Elder Hill, presiding officer of the Church of Christ, and have conversed with him upon the probable necessity of calling the committee together to counsel together upon our differences in faith.

He gave me to distinctly understand that he saw no necessity for doing so. He said he had not changed one particle, that it was morally impossible for him to do so. Was firm in the faith that if the Lord wanted the Church of Christ to build the temple, he could put it in their power to do so; and cited the case of Nephi in the command to build a ship in which to cross the sea, opposed by his brethren, without the means or tools, yet he built the ship. He was not prepared to make a single concession, but bid me to rest easy, that there was not money enough coined, nor gold enough in the mountains to purchase the lot from him by any organization.

It is not necessary to report all that was said. I also had some conversation with Elder Cole of that church, who seemed very kindly disposed towards us, and expressed a desire, if it could be brought about, but there was no probability of anything of the sort at the present.

I see, at present, no good to be attained by continuing the committee; however, if it is thought best to do so, I am at the service of the church.

I respectfully submit this brief report, still hoping that God will speedily move for the building of his temple.

ALEXANDER H. SMITH,
Chairman of Committee.

The Seven Presidents of Seventy reported, recommending the following names for ordination to the office of seventy: Birch Whiting, Leonard G. Holloway, George M. Shippy, Leonard Houghton, J. E. Wildermuth, David E. Dowker, Johnson Hay, J. T. Hackett, J. C. Farnfield, Joseph W. Smith, James E. Kelley, Reese Jenkins.

In the case of J. W. Smith and Birch Whiting action was deferred; the latter stating that he had not yet received sufficient personal evidence. The recommendation regarding the other names was approved and the ordinations ordered provided for as soon as practicable. The ordination of Bro. A. D. Angus was attended to at the close of the service, as he was about to return to his home.

The committee on archaeology reported.

A report from the First Presidency was read. They offered the following names for ordination to the office of high priest, the recommendation being confirmed in by the Quorum of High Priests: Sidney Pitt, Sr., A. D. Angus, A. F. McLean, John D. Suttill, John A. Becker, Myron C. Fisher, Samuel Harding.

The recommendation was approved and the ordinations ordered provided for. On motion the matter of ordaining Bro. H. E. French to the office of high priest, deferred from last year, was taken up, and his ordination was ordered provided for. By motion the matter of ordaining in all the cases before named was placed in the hands of the Presidency.

A report from the Second Quorum of Seventy was read.

A report from the Quorum of High Priests was read. They offered the following resolution:

That the last clause of Resolution No. 279, reading, "And when one of them is present at a district conference or branch meeting, it should be left discretionary with him, as to whether it would best serve the cause by presiding," in book of General Conference resolutions, be rescinded.

Action on the matter was deferred and it was made the special order for the third day of the General Conference of 1909.

The benediction was pronounced by Patriarch Alexander H. Smith.

At half past seven in the evening Bishop E. L. Kelley was the speaker, assisted by Bishop John Zimmermann.

APRIL 16.

Prayer-meeting at nine o'clock in the morning in charge of Elders John Smith and H. A. McCoy.

Preaching at a quarter of eleven by Elder A. Carmichael, assisted by Elder T. T. Hinderks.

Business-meeting convened at two o'clock in the afternoon with President Joseph Smith in the chair. After the opening song Elder M. H. Bond offered prayer. The minutes were read.

Bishop Kelley rose to a question of privilege and stated that one of the morning papers had misrepresented the attitude of the brethren of the Church of Christ (Hedrickites). He introduced Elder Frisbee, of that church, who made the following statement:

My object in rising is to make the statement that our committee is ready at any time to confer with the committee appointed by the Reorganized Church as they may see fit. I want to correct the mistake that occurred in the paper this morning. Bro. Kelley, I think, has said all that is necessary in the matter, still I am willing to answer any questions.

The Presidency and Twelve reported on the petition from Elder R. M. Elvin, referred to them.

The Bishopric reported on the resolution on equality referred to them during the early part of the conference. They reported adversely.

A report from the First Quorum of Seventy was read.

Elder Birch Whiting expressed willingness to accept ordination to the office of Seventy, deferred from the day previous, and his ordination was ordered provided for. The matter of ordinations was then taken up and the following were ordained high priests: Sidney Pitt, J. D. Suttill, J. A. Becker, M. C. Fisher, H. E. French. The following named brethren were ordained seventies: Birch Whiting, L. G. Holloway, J. E. Wildermuth, Johnson Hay, J. T. Hackett, J. C. Farnfield, J. E. Kelley, and Reese Jenkins. T. G. Hedrick was ordained president of the First Quorum of Elders; and Earl D. Bailey was ordained his counselor.

Bishops and Bishops' agents reported as follows:

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, April 16, 1908.

To the General Conference: We, your brethren who have been called to labor along financial lines, have held two meetings with five bishops, six counselors, and nineteen agents in attendance.

Duties and privileges belonging to the financial agents of the church were discussed. Unity of expression as to individual ownership of inheritances and stewardships should be maintained as directed in the word of God, for the safety of the Saints and the maintaining the dignity of our work.

As God has designated the General Bishopric as the proper interpreter of the financial law it would seem unjust for ministers who go out to represent the church to incorrectly represent the Bishopric, hence believe that unity of action can only be obtained by recognizing the channel through which the law should be set forth upon these matters.

If a flagrant disregard is made apparent to any member the law provides a method of procedure by which the rights of all are maintained. The observation of this rule incorporated in the divine code will establish unity, and if observed, harmony and peace will be secured and preserved.

A general discussion obtained on the principle of tithes, surplus, special consecration, free-will offerings, and inventories. Concensus of opinion that all should comply with the law of tithing and those who have or have not a surplus should make their inventories in evidence. Special consecrations and free-will offerings are permissible and anticipated from those who intensely love the work. The first when there is a special demand for a special work; the second is a privilege of each member.

The method of reporting as previously adopted by us to obtain a correct report of the amount gathered and work done by each did not materialize as we anticipated, on the account of blanks being sent out too late. But the awakening brought about by the introduction of these blanks we trust by another year a more complete report of the work done by this arm of the church shall be our privilege to make.

Respectfully in gospel bonds,

A. H. PARSONS, Secretary.

The paper on procedure in church courts, referred to the quorums during the early part of the conference, was taken up. The Presidency, Twelve, First and Second Seventy, First, Second, Fourth, and Fifth Quorums of Elders reported their action in regard to the document.

On motion the paper was taken up and examined paragraph by paragraph until the time of adjournment.

The benediction was pronounced by President Joseph Smith.

At half past seven Elder James Davis, Sr., was the speaker in the upper auditorium, assisted by Elder Paul M. Hanson.

At the same hour a missionary meeting was held in the lower auditorium, Elders F. A. Russell and Elbert A. Smith in charge. Methods of advertising were discussed by various speakers.

APRIL 17.

Prayer-meeting at nine o'clock in charge of Elders J. M. Baker and John Garver.

Preaching at a quarter of eleven by Elder A. B. Phillips, assisted by Elder C. I. Carpenter.

Business-meeting convened at two o'clock with President F. M. Smith in the chair. After the opening song, prayer was offered by Apostle J. W. Wight. Minutes were read.

In harmony with the Bishop's request, the sale of certain properties in California was authorized.

The paper on procedure in church courts was again taken up, and its examination continued. As amended and finally adopted as a whole it reads:

Precedent to any action in the church courts there must be full and consistent labor performed as required in the church laws and rules governing, and no action can properly be maintained against a member where due and diligent labor has not first been performed on the part of those whose duty it is under the law to do this work. In case a member should put himself out of the way of labor, making efforts to evade the officers so that labor can not be performed, or should he persistently decline to receive and hear the officers, whose duty it is under the law to perform this labor, then such action and refusal to hear on the part of the member may be shown in justification of the procedure against him; otherwise the basis of the action is the performance of kindly, diligent and brotherly labor, for the purpose of in good faith, reclaiming the member.

After the full performance of labor referred to in the preceding paragraph, and in case where members refuse to hear either the party offended or the officers who have performed the work of labor, it is proper for either the party offended, or the officers, to enter a complaint against such member, a copy of which shall be given to the member before the same goes before the church, and then presented to the officers of the branch or district or other division of church work, whose duty it is to act in such matters, provided in the Scriptures and outlined in the church Rules of Order.

The Complaint: No particular form is necessary to the validity of the complaint. There should, however, be such a direct and simple statement of the matter as will disclose to the comprehension of one reading it the nature of the grievance, time and place of the offense, and refusal of the accused to make restitution; also setting forth the privilege of the accused to make reconciliation before the appointment of the court for the trial of the case, if he desires to do so. No evidence should be set forth in the complaint, neither any unnecessary threat or charges, or imputations not properly a part of the complaint.

Service: Service of the complaint is properly made upon the accused by handing him or her a copy, or if this can not be done, leaving such copy at the usual place of residence with a member of the family over eight years of age, or if this can not be done service may be had by sending a registered letter containing copy of complaint, in which case the return of the card attached will be evidence of service.

Appointment of Court: Members of the First Presidency and the Twelve; high priests, seventies, and elders, when traveling in missions, or in localities where no organization, branch or district, has been perfected; presidents of districts, and presidents of branches, branches and conferences have power to appoint elders' courts, according to the nature of the complaint, the time, and the emergency of the case. A branch or conference at any business-meeting may appoint a court by nomination from the members confirmed by vote, or by vote authorizing the presiding officer to name the elders who shall compose the court. In no case, whatever, should any officer appoint a court to try a case in which he is to be a party, either as complainant or defendant; or in the issue of which he is directly a party in interest.

Court to Appoint the Time and Place of Meeting: An elders' court is a court of inquiry; and when appointed, has the right to appoint the time when, and the place where, it will sit to hear the case (provided that such time and place do not materially injure either party to the case); due notice of which time and place shall be given to all persons who are expected to be present at the hearing of the case.

Charges: When it shall be determined to call an offending member before a court of the church, the branch or officer appointing the court shall cause the charge or charges made against the accused in writing, to be prepared, stating definitely and specifically what the offense is charged to be, a copy of which shall be furnished the accused, if practicable, so that he may, if he so desire, make settlement of the difficulty by reconciliation or otherwise, and avoid further action; this copy may be given to the accused by any teacher, or deacon, or member in the absence of said officers, or if left at his usual place of residence with a member of his family over eight years of age, it shall be held as given to him. Upon the failure of the accused to make restitution, or explanation, the court shall be appointed, and shall proceed to examine and try the cause upon the charge, the original of which, or a copy thereof, shall be furnished them by the party appointing them; they shall also give due notice to all parties of time and place when and where the trial shall be had as provided in Book of Rules. Where in cases persons can not meet together by reason of great distance between them of travel or other obstacles over which they have no control, and which is sufficient to prevent meeting in person, the work toward reconciliation and labor referred to herein may be done by written correspondence between the parties.

Objection Before Trial Begins: In case the defendant is not satisfied with the court as selected he must file his objections and the nature of the same with the court, prior to its entering upon the hearing of the case. Unless such objections are entered at the beginning of the trial, they will be presumed to have been waived. Upon the filing of such objections it will be for the court to decide whether the objections are well taken, and sufficiently pertinent as to require a new court. Should the court decide that the objections are not well taken, it will proceed with the trial as though no objections had been offered, and in such cases the remedy for the defendant, if he has any, would be to present his objections on appeal before the appellate court.

Minutes of Meeting: The court should keep a full and complete memoranda of its proceedings, and while an oversight or omission to take note of minor matters, such as engaging in prayer or the time of adjournment, would not be fatal error, yet oftentimes a number of these omissions would help to invalidate to some extent the correctness of the procedure and work of the court.

Due Notice Before Trial: Upon the assembling of the court to hear the complaint against any member, it is necessary in order that the court may authoritatively proceed, to have a proper notice of the service of the complaint upon the defendant, in its hands. In case that due notice is not placed in the hands of the court that the defendant has been served with the complaint, and also as to the time and place of trial, it would be improper for the court to proceed to hear the case or any part of the same.

Should the defendant have placed himself beyond the reach of notice and purposely avoided the service of the notice in order to defeat the hearing of the case, this may be shown by proper evidence, in which case it would be proper for the court to proceed as though the defendant had been regularly served. Service of notice upon defendants or upon witnesses may be duly shown by the one performing such work making due return of the same, and a number of returns of service may be made upon the same sheet.

Service, Witnesses: Service of notice upon witnesses to take depositions before any court should be made in a similar manner as that of summoning witnesses to appear before the court to give testimony in a case.

Depositions: No court or officer can take a deposition for any party to use in any case, where the adverse party has not due notice of the time and place of the taking of such deposition, and permitted to be present and cross-examine if he desires to do so, unless a deposition is taken upon written interrogatories, a copy of which must be placed in the hands of the adverse party, and he given the privilege of filing cross-interrogatories before the time of taking of the deposition. Affidavits or ex parte statements in writing can not be introduced as proper testimony upon the trial of a case. Every party to a case is entitled to be confronted by the witnesses, and should be privileged to do so at the time the deposition or writing is made, or before the court.

New Trial or Rehearing: In case that any party is dissatisfied with the decision of the court, he may move for new trial or rehearing of the case at the time, and if the motion is overruled by the court, give notice of appeal at the time or within sixty days. If notice of such appeal from the decision is given at the time it should appear as a part of the record in the case.

Appeal: Appeals from elders' courts are taken direct to the bishop's court within the district or stake where the case is tried, if there is such existing bishop's court. In case there should not be a bishop's court within the district or stake to which an appeal can be had, appeals may be taken to the Presiding Bishop's court of the church.

In case an appeal is taken to the bishop's court in any district or stake, and it is found that by reason of any direct interest or relationship of the parties that such bishop's court should not hear the case, such case should be taken directly to the Presiding Bishop's court unless the case is within a stake, in which case the cause would go before the high council of the stake, if there be such council.

Evidence in Writing: Evidence given before the elders' court should be reduced to writing, and unless it is taken by a stenographer verbatim, it should be read over to the witnesses, and signed by them in the presence of the court.

Appeal: Notice of appeal from the findings of the elders' court, if not given at the time the decision is had, should be served upon the judges or the presiding officer of the branch or other body, and filed with the bishop to which the appeal is taken. Notice of appeal from the bishop's court to the high council should be served upon such bishop, and also filed with the President of the church.

Findings Where Reported: When the court has heard the case as provided in the preceding rules, it is proper that it should at once make up its findings, and hand these to the president of the branch or officer in charge, and also to present a copy of findings to the defendant in the case.

It is the duty of the president of the branch or whatever officers having in charge the findings duly reported by the elders' court, to call a business-meeting of the branch, or other body, at the earliest time practicable thereafter, and present the findings for the action of such body.

Proper Action upon the Findings of the Court: Upon presentation to the branch, or other body, of the findings of any court authorized to try any cause of action it is the duty of such branch, or body, to sustain the findings of the court until such time as the parties to the action shall appeal if they desire to do so, to a higher court and the action shall be reversed. It must not be overlooked that the court is a creature of the body, the church, as the courts of the land are creatures of the government or citizens under the laws of the land, and while a court may not bring in such decision as shall please the people, since the people are not authorized to judge, except through proper chosen judges for this purpose, the remedy if there is any dissatisfaction, must be upon appeal to the superior court. Any other method to overturn the decision of the court, except that provided in the law, is outside of the law, and would bring disorder and anarchy instead of good to the body.

Action of the Branch upon the Findings: The branch, or other body, upon the presentation of the findings of an elders' court should at once sustain the findings, always with the permission to any party in interest to seek his redress before the higher court by appeal, if he is still persistent that he has been wronged. Until the branch so sustains the findings of the elders' court the party dissatisfied is left powerless to move. He must appeal from the findings of the court and the action of the branch thereon, and if there is no action sustaining the court it places the party at a disadvantage, as he can not appeal and seek the redress which he claims as his due.

Action of Officers and Court: It is the duty of the officers of the church in any case which may be tried by a court, and also the duty of each member of the court to assist either party in every way practicable to appeal his case, and to help him to make up the record in such a way that he may have the full advantage of the same. Any officer or member of the court who refuses to assist a party aggrieved in a case to bring it before a superior tribunal, will show an unbrotherly act and reflect discredit upon his own work.

Procedure upon Appeal: When a case is properly filed and tried in the appellate court and decision is had thereon, either confirming or reversing the decision of the court below, it is proper for such appellate court to return its findings and decision to the president of the branch, or other body, from which the appeal was taken. Upon receipt of this decision of the appellate court the president of such body must bring the same before the members in a duly authorized business-meeting for the approval of the same, and it is the duty of the members to approve the findings of the appellate court as promptly as they approved the findings of the lower court. In case that further appeal is desired by either of the parties to the suit, it is proper for the appellate court to forward all papers and a record of the proceedings in that court, to the higher tribunal, in like manner as is provided for appeals from the elders' to bishop's courts.

A motion to take up the Bishop's report on the resolution touching temporalities was voted down.

Moved to take up the following recommendation, contained in the report of the Auditing Committee:

Several notes of small denomination included in the assets, have received no indorsement by the payment of either the interest or any portion of the principal, for such a long period of time, that we believe they should be carried to the loss and gain account and no longer reckoned among the assets. Under the heading of these assets is found the original Book of Mormon manuscript, valued at $2,450. We suggest that this account also be carried into the loss and gain account.

The recommendation was referred to the Bishopric.

Certain questions regarding the manuscript of the Book of Mormon and the manuscript of the Inspired Translation were informally asked and an informal discussion continued at some length.

Benediction by President R. C. Evans.

At half past seven Elder Alvin Knisley was the speaker, assisted by Elder John Shields.

At the same hour Bishop Kelley conducted a "round table" in the lower auditorium, at which the financial law was discussed.

SATURDAY, APRIL 18.

Prayer-meeting at nine o'clock, in charge of Elders M. C. Fisher and Joseph A. Tanner.

Preaching at a quarter of eleven by Elder O. J. Hawn, assisted by Elder J. L. Mortimer.

Business-meeting convened at two o'clock, with President Joseph Smith in the chair. After the opening song, prayer was offered by Elder M. C. Fisher. Minutes of last meeting read.

A report from the First Quorum of Teachers was read. Ordination of R. A. Penny to the office of first counselor to the president of that quorum was ordered.

The following quorums and individuals were sustained by vote: First Presidency, Twelve, High Council of the church, Quorums of Seventies, Bishopric, High Priests, Evangelists, Bishops, Church Secretary, various quorums of elders, Church Recorder, Historian and assistant, Board of Publication, Librarian and assistant, Library Committee, priests, teachers, deacons, Zion's Religio-Literary Society, Sunday-school Association, Grace-land College Trustees, physician to the church, Seven Presidents of Seventy, Board of Auditors, standing committees, stake organizations, editors of church papers.

By vote thanks were extended Bro. Alfred White and assistants in the post-office department; and to Mr. Decker and Mr. John Davis for free telephone service. A standing vote of thanks was extended reporters of daily papers for courteous representation. The reporters presented a paper thanking the press committee for favors.

Ordinations provided for, (parties not present) were referred to ministers in charge.

The table being cleared of business, speeches were made by President R. C. Evans, President Joseph Smith, and Apostle William H. Kelley.

Benediction by R. C. Evans.

Business-meeting convened at half past seven in the evening, with President Joseph Smith in the chair. After the opening song, prayer was offered by Elder J. C. Crabb. The congregation then sang, "Father, when in love to thee, lo! we bow the adoring knee."

The minutes of the last meeting were read. President F. M. Smith took the chair.

Additional report of First Quorum of Seventy read.

First Presidency reported recommending ordination of A. Carmichael, J. A. Becker, and M. C. Fisher, bishops. The recommendation was approved.

The action of First Quorum of Seventy in honorably releasing H. H. Robinson and Levi Phelps was approved.

Missionary appointments were read as follows:

APPOINTMENTS OF MISSIONARIES IN CHARGE BY PRESIDENCY.

Mission No. 1. North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Southern and Central Illinois, H. C. Smith and W. H. Kelley in charge.

Mission No. 2. Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, and Louisiana, I. N. White in charge.

Mission No. 3. Wisconsin, Northern Illinois, Indiana, and Michigan, J. W. Wight in charge.

Mission No. 4. Maritime Provinces, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and Canada, U. W. Greene in charge.

Mission No 5. Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida, G. T. Griffiths in charge.

Mission No. 6. British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, California, Nevada, and Hawaii Territory, F. A. Smith in charge.

Mission No. 7. Utah, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, and Mexico, F. M. Sheehy in charge.

Mission No. 8. British Isles Mission, J. W. Rushton in charge.

Mission No. 9. Scandinavia and Germany, Peter Anderson in charge.

Mission No. 10. Australasia, C. A. Butterworth in charge.

Mission No. 11. South Sea Islands, C. H. Lake in charge.

Bro. Joseph Luff has been released from duty as a missionary in charge, that he might give attention to his special duties as physician to the church, which have increased to the extent that he can not give time to the active oversight of a missionary field. He doubtless will, however, as in the past, give such time as he can to missionary work in the way of preaching, etc.

The appointment of Bro. H. C. Smith is with the understanding that he will give necessary attention to his special duties as Church Historian.

Respectfully,

FRED'K M. SMITH, Secretary Presidency.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE FIRST PRESIDENCY, TWELVE, AND BISHOPRIC.

Superannuated Ministers.

James Craig, H. A. McCoy, W. H. Kephart, J. S. Roth, R. M. Elvin, W. T. Bozarth, William Newton, I. P. Baggerly.

FRED'K M. SMITH,
Secretary of Presidency.
FRED'K A. SMITH,
Secretary of Twelve.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE FIRST PRESIDENCY AND TWELVE.

Evangelical Ministers.

Bailey, J. J., Michigan and Wisconsin.
Butterworth, C. E., Gallands Grove District.
Carlile, Joshua, Pottawattamie District.
Keeler, E., Oregon and Washington.
Kemp, Henry, Independence Stake.
White, Ammon, North Missouri.

High Priests.

Baker, J. M., Omaha and Council Bluffs.
Bullard, Richard, Eastern Maine.
Burton, Joseph, Southern California.
Buschlen, George, London District, Canada.

Carmichael, A., California.

Carmichael, J. B., Central California.

Chatburn, T. W., Oklahoma.

Chlosson, A. V., Spring River District, to preside over district.

Cook, M. H., Des Moines District.

Crabb, J. C., Gallands Grove and Little Sioux Districts.

Davis, E. A., Western Mission.

Fry, Charles, Nauvoo District, Burlington objective point.

Grant, J. A., Central Michigan District.

Goodrich, V. M., Far West District, St. Joseph objective point.

Hunt, C. J., Gallands Grove District.

Johnson, William, Seattle and British Columbia District.

Jeffers, S. J., Ohio.

Lake, Charles H., Society Islands, in charge.

Leverton, A., Chatham District, Canada.

Lewis, William, Wales.

Longhurst, R. C., London District, Canada.

McClain, J. R., Southeastern States.

McDowell, W. A., Kewanee District, Kewanee objective point.

Moler, James, Clinton District.

Moore, A. J., Oregon.

Mortimer, A. E., Northern Michigan.

Pitt, F. G., Southern California, San Bernardino objective point.

Roberts, I. N., Ohio and Virginia.

Shupe, E. F., Colorado.

Smith, W. W., Philadelphia.

Smith, George A., Ohio, Dayton and Middletown objective points.

Tanner, J. A., St. Louis District, St. Louis objective point.

Terry, J. M., Northern California.

Turpen, M. M., Lamoni Stake.

Twombly, Samuel, Northeastern Kansas District.

Taylor, Thomas, England.

Waller, G. J., Hawaiian Islands.

Williams, T. W., Northern California District.

Becker, J. A., Pittsburg District.

FRED'K M. SMITH,

Secretary of Presidency.

FRED'K A. SMITH,

Secretary of Twelve.

APPOINTMENTS BY QUORUM OF TWELVE.

Seventies.

Allen, Arthur, Chicago, Illinois.
Arber, Joseph, Fremont District.
Aylor, W. M., Texas.
Bailey, O. H., Kewanee District.
Baker, A. M., Southern Missouri District.
Baldwin, R., Pittsburg District.
Barmore, A. C., Australia.
Berve, A., Kewanee District, Tri-cities objective point.
Booker, Alma, Western New York, Greenwood objective point.
Brookover, G. J., Southern Wisconsin District.
Brown, Samuel, Virginias.
Burr, Charles H., Central Illinois District.
Case, Hubert, Oklahoma.
Chatburn, F. J., Spokane District, Washington.
Chase, Amos M., Oklahoma.
Christy, Wardell, Des Moines District, Iowa.
Condit, S. D., Oregon.
Cooper, F. M., Northeastern Illinois District.
Cornish, J. J., Michigan.
Crumley, C. E., Northern California.

- Curtis, J. F., Utah.
 Davis, John, Western Mission.
 Davis, J. W., Pittsburg District.
 Davis, J. Arthur, Spring River District.
 Davis, William, Eastern Michigan District.
 Davison, Holmes J., Eastern States.
 Davis, J. T., Arkansas.
 Devore, L. R., Clinton District, Missouri.
 Dutton, J. O., Southern Wisconsin.
 Ellis, W. D., Michigan.
 Enge, N. C., Nebraska.
 Erwin, E. A., Kentucky and Tennessee.
 Etzenhouser, R., Eastern Michigan District.
 Farr, F. B., Nauvoo District.
 Farrell, R. W., Eastern States.
 Gamet, Levi, Northern and Central Nebraska District.
 Goodenough, E. J., Northeastern Illinois District.
 Gowell, M. F., Topeka and Atchison, Kansas.
 Greenwood, William H., England.
 Gregory, Fred, Canada.
 Grimes, J. F., Oklahoma.
 Hackett, J. T., Western Mission.
 Haden, W. E., Fremont District.
 Hanson, P. M., Lamoni Stake.
 Hansen, J. H., Sweden.
 Hansen, H. N., Denmark.
 Harpe, Charles E., Nodaway District, Missouri.
 Harp, John, Texas.
 Hawn, O. J., Central Michigan District.
 Haworth, W. J., Australia.
 Hayer, Eli, Western Iowa.
 Henson, E. L., Far West, Missouri.
 Hills, L. E., Western Mission.
 Holloway, L. G., South Dakota.
 Howlett, R. B., Canada.
 Jackson, J. W., Arkansas.
 Jenkins, George, Clinton and Spring River Districts.
 Jones, J. H. N., Australia.
 Jenkins, Reese, Wales.
 Kaler, John, Independence Stake.
 Keck, F. C., Northern Missouri.
 Kelley, T. C., Southeastern States.
 Knisley, Alvin, Arizona and Mexico.
 Koehler, H. A., Eastern States.
 Kelley, James E., Western Nebraska and Black Hills.
 Layland, A. J., Spokane District.
 Lewis, C. G., Northern Michigan District.
 Long, E. E., Ohio.
 Mackie, William, Australia.
 McRae, W. S., Northeastern Missouri District.
 McKiernan, James, Eastern Iowa and Central Illinois.
 Maloney, R. M., Texas.
 Mannering, W. H., Western Texas and Mexico.
 Metcalf, J. W., Kentucky, Louisville objective point.
 Mintun, J. F., Des Moines District, Des Moines objective point.
 Moler, H. E., Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District.
 Morgan, E. B., Lamoni Stake.
 Mortimer, J. L., Canada.
 Muceus, Peter, Norway.
 Palmer, D. S., Texas.
 Peek, W. E., Kansas.
 Pender, W. S., Arizona and Mexico.
 Peterson, J. W., Kewanee District, Illinois.
 Phillips, A. B., Eastern States.
 Porter, Charles H., Southern Nebraska.
 Pycok, James, Canada.
 Quick, Lee, Oklahoma.
 Reiste, S. M., Eastern Iowa District.
 Renfroe, B. F., Texas.
 Riley, J. T., Arkansas.
 Robinson, W. P., Northern Wisconsin District.
 Robertson, E. F., Northwestern Kansas District.
 Rumel, W. M., Southern Nebraska District.
 Russell, F. A., Colorado.
 Russell, R. C., Western Pennsylvania and Pittsburg District.
 St. John, Benjamin, Canada.
 Scott, S. W. L., Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana.
 Scott, Columbus, Colorado.
 Self, R. O., Northeastern Missouri District.
 Self, W. M., Pottawattamie District, Iowa.
 Sheldon, T. J., Kirtland, Ohio.
 Sheldon, N. V., Little Sioux District.
 Shields, John, Canada.
 Simmons, S. W., Oklahoma.
 Simmons, Jessie M., Western Mission.
 Slover, F. M., Southeastern States.
 Smith, S. S., Western Mission.
 Smith, H. O., Minnesota and Dakotas.
 Smith, David, Central Illinois.
 Smith, I. M., Montana.
 Smith, W. A., Little Sioux District.
 Snow, C. L., Southeastern States.
 Sorensen, S. K., Pottawattamie District.
 Sparling, Henry, St. Louis and Southeastern Illinois District.
 Stead, J. D., Seattle and British Columbia District.
 Stubbart, J. M., Kentucky and Tennessee.
 Sutton, J. R., Nebraska.
 Swenson, Swen, Minnesota.
 Thomas, O. B., West Virginia.
 Thorburn, George, Seattle and British Columbia District.
 Tomlinson, G. C., Canada.
 Tucker, D. E., Southeastern States.
 Walters, R. T., Spring River District.
 Wells, G. R., Australia.
 Whiteaker, A. L., Minnesota.
 Whitine, Birch, Minnesota.
 Willey, C. E., Nauvoo District.
 Wildermuth, J. B., Eastern Iowa District.
 Wildermuth, J. E., North Dakota.
 Yates, James E., Oklahoma.

Elders.

- Anderson, A. C., Nauvoo District, Keokuk objective point.
 Anderson, Peter T., Denmark.
 Baillie, James, Scotland.
 Baker, James H., Oklahoma.
 Baldwin, D. R., Southern Missouri District.
 Barr, Andrew, Eastern Michigan District.
 Blackmore, J. H., Northern Michigan District.
 Booker, N. F., Southeastern States.
 Bootman, W. P., Far West District, Missouri.
 Brann, Eugene, Maine.
 Brooner, W. A., Oregon.
 Burr, A. E., Central Michigan District.
 Burt, G. W., Central Michigan District.
 Bussell, P. B., Texas.
 Day, George, Nodaway District, Missouri.
 Davis, James, Western Michigan District.
 Dorsett, A., Canada.
 Dowker, D. E., Southern Indiana.
 Dowker, William, Eastern Michigan District.

Davis, C. F., referred to minister in charge of Pennsylvania and Bishop.

Earle, C. W., Northern California.

Ensley, Joseph, Southeastern Missouri.

Elia, Society Islands.

Farnfield, J. C., New York.

Fields, S. H., Southern Illinois.

Goodman, J. C., Northern Michigan District.

Hartnell, William, Seattle and British Columbia District.

Hay, Johnson, Texas.

Houghton, Leonard, North Dakota.

Ingham, Edward, Hawaii.

Johnson, John, referred to minister in charge of Scandinavia, and Bishop.

Jones, Thomas, Wales.

Kelley, William H., Ohio and West Virginia District.

Lambkin, B. S., Northern Michigan District.

LaRue, W. E., Kirtland District.

Leggott, G. W., Manchester District, England.

Lundquist, David, Sweden.

McConnaughy, J. C., Kirtland District.

Madden, S. J., St. Louis District.

Marere, Society Islands.

Miller, C. Ed, Pittsburg District.

Okerlind, O. W., Sweden.

Paxton, J. W., St. Louis District.

Peters, C. J., Lamoni Stake.

Petre, J. F., Independence Stake.

Pickering, W. P., Far West District.

Pierce, F. J., Independence Stake.

Pinga, Society Islands.

Potter, W. N., Northwestern Kansas District.

Prettyman, C. W., Western Nebraska and Black Hills.

Putoa, Society Islands.

Pycok, David, Canada for winter months.

Rannie, Edward, South Dakota.

St. John, Grant, Canada.

Sawley, F. L., Southeastern Illinois District.

Seigfreid, M. H., Nauvoo District, Nauvoo objective point.

Shippy, G. M., Chatham District, Canada.

Silvers, A. C., Clinton District.

Skinner, W. O., West Virginia for six months.

Smart, W. H., Southeastern Missouri.

Smith, Edgar H., Louisiana.

Smith, J. W., Minnesota.

Sparling, William, North Dakota.

Stone, A. E., New York and Philadelphia.

Smith, Hale W., Montana.

Smith, James V., Louisiana.

Swenson, C. A., Sweden.

Tai, Society Islands.

Tane, Society Islands.

Tapuni, Society Islands.

Taruia, Society Islands.

Teeters, J. A., Northwestern Kansas District.

Tehu Teihoarii, Society Islands.

Temarei, Society Islands.

Tepoaitu, Society Islands.

Tetaku, Society Islands.

Thompson, Joseph, Canada.

Titi, Society Islands.

Turner, Warren, Eastern Iowa District.

Turatahi, Society Islands.

Vanderwood, J. E., Northeastern Illinois.

Whiting, Alonzo, North Dakota.

Wildermuth, Lester, Northern Wisconsin District.

Wiles, John F., California.

Wiriamu, Society Islands.

Priests.

Anderson, William, Canada.

Buschlen, J. P., Eastern Mission.

Ethridge, E. W., Northeastern Kansas District.

Fuller, W. H., (colored) Uniontown, Pennsylvania.

Hiti, Society Islands.

May, J. Charles, referred to missionary in charge of Western Mission and the Bishop.

Miller, O. R., Northeastern Missouri District.

Plumb, P. T., Southeastern Illinois District.

Shippy, Saleda D., Texas.

Titi, Society Islands.

Lintel, John, Western Mission.

Respectfully submitted,

F. A. SMITH,
Secretary of the Twelve.

Following the reading of appointments the minutes were read and approved.

A motion was made referring the Church Secretary, R. S. Salyards, to the First Presidency and ministers in charge of the field where he resides, for appointment to spend a part of his time in the mission field. Carried.

A vote of thanks was tendered the Independence Saints for their hospitality.

By motion C. C. Joehnk was referred to Presidency and Bishopric for appointment. Carried.

The conference stood adjourned following the singing of hymn 98, and benediction by President Smith.

Original Articles

THE DOCTRINE OF CHRIST.

DEDICATORY SERMON OF THE WEBB CITY, MISSOURI, CHURCH, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1907, BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

(Reported by Belle Robinson James.)

Man worshiped originally in God's first temples, the groves. Subsequently they erected buildings in which to gather, culminating, as far as the Jewish dispensation was concerned, in the building of the Temple. This temple was destroyed. It had been prophesied of and it was fulfilled.

In presenting to the public a house of worship, or a place where men and women can gather for the purpose of enjoying the exercise of their faith according to their respective tenets, their principles of faith, it is perhaps fair to concede the thought that those among whom these buildings are erected, should give to the people, as briefly as practicable, what shall be the character of the doctrine that may be declared from the pulpit.

This is understood to be a Christian dispensation, in which salvation through Jesus Christ is to be preached to the world, and the prophecy concerning him that he was a deliverer, a commander, and a leader, be fulfilled. We agree with our neighbors who worship according to this Christ idea, in the thought that in Jesus Christ is to be found the Redeemer of man. But, whether fortunately or unfortunately, we seem to dig deeper than a good many who seem to be satisfied with the expressions, "The gospel," "Good news," "Glad tidings of great joy," in that we believe that this man, this divine man, was specially sent from God and endowed with extraordinary powers to declare a system of faith that should be preached until the end of the world, in some form; that he made a statement at Jerusalem, as found in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, that "repentance and remission of sins should be preached in all the world, beginning at Jerusalem." And as your speaker this morning, I concede fairly and unequivocally that that statement has been practically fulfilled; that there is not a church organization assuming to be Christian anywhere in all the world but what these two principles are announced as a part of their faith,—repentance and remission of sins. But while I do that, I by no means concede that the gospel in its entirety has been thus preached. And this morning I am going to tell you some of the reasons why, and being in Missouri, I am going to strive to show you, following the axiom that seems to have gone abroad, that anybody who is a Missourian, you will have to show him, or he is excused from conceding what you ask him.

In the same chapter of Matthew's Gospel from which this statement is taken, there is another, overlooked largely in the broad world of Christendom, and viewing the history of the world by the unbeliever and the class called infidel; they use it as against the prevailing sentiment of Christianity, and they charge it upon the Christian church that this prophecy has not been fulfilled. That prophecy runs thus: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come."

We have been before the world now something like three fourths of a century, myself and my present confreres and my predecessors in this faith; and we have constantly combatted the idea presented by some of those who believe in the second coming of Christ. We confess that we also believe in his second coming, but that he could not come at the times which they have set for his coming, for the simple reason that the prophecy made by him has not been fulfilled, and his coming under such circumstances would prove him to be a false prophet. And while we may concede that men may be proved to be false prophets, no matter where they come from or what their names may be, one thing the so-called Christian believer can never concede, and that is, that Jesus Christ shall be proved to be a false prophet. We may strike at the predictions of all the false prophets, if they do not happen to be fulfilled, and may comfort ourselves upon the hypothesis that Jesus, the speaker who spoke as no man spake, and who came as a special minister sent from God, so long as his words are not disproved and the prophecies uttered of him hitherto have been fulfilled, so we look for the fulfillment of every one, and we comfort ourselves with the thought that he can not fail us.

It is upon that basis that I approach you this morning. We make inquiry what gospel is referred to by this prophetic statement of his, for it is a prophecy: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come," and not until then can it come. In this same chapter it is said that no man knoweth the day nor the hour that God hath set in his power, no, not the angels in heaven. And it would appear from the reading that even it was kept from the Son, even Jesus the Christ; notwithstanding the statement is made to those that believe in him, that the day need not overtake them as a thief in the night. They shall be governed by certain controlling signs prior to his second coming and that should give them to understand of the time of his second coming as mentioned, and in order that they may not be taken unawares he gives them to understand that they must occupy until he comes; and that is what we are trying to do, occupy until he comes. But we are asking our neighbors how shall we occupy. They are building churches, and lifting their spires heavenward, and are trying to tell the people that in this Christ they shall find deliverance. And we have discovered to our sorrow and our great regret that they have failed and continuously do fail to present all the gospel truth as it is given by Jesus Christ, and his disciples; notwithstanding that repentance and remission of sins have been preached in the world beginning at Jerusalem, beginning at the time that he and his disciples preached them and they continued continuously down to the present time. Not only the mother church, but every offshoot from it, down to the American Volunteers are continuously preaching repentance and remission of sins; and a great many of them, including this army of volunteers, a great many of them, discard the argument of organization as found in the scripture. But that is not a part of my argument this morning, because I purpose to devote the hour to what kind of doctrine shall be taught from this pulpit by the people who have erected this church.

So I make inquiry, How are we to discover what gospel it was that he referred to there? I know that every one who thinks of what I am saying would say that it is the gospel of Jesus Christ, from a matter of course. We reason from that, if that be true, the gospel of Christ must consist of certain component parts known as principles, and it can not be successfully divided and the one doing it preach the whole gospel itself.

John, the beloved disciple, the one whom Jesus loved, the one who may have had a closer insight into the peculiar philosophies of the Master, obtained by conversation and close association with him, states in his second epistle, "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God; but whosoever abideth in the doctrine of Christ hath both the Father and the Son." This agrees with what the Master said as recorded by this same disciple in the eighth chapter. I call your attention to it. I am not taking a text, and I do not propose to do it, but I am going to fill the hour with texts, and if you can get along with them with a different rendition from what we have, you may be happy in it, but we could not. "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." What we want at this time is to be free. I discover by inquiry that in this city here, Webb City, this wonderful city that has grown up around these industrial mines, I discover there are something like fifteen hundred believers or worshipers that are gathered together from time to time in the different churches and are recognized as different members. Fifteen hundred worshiping people out of a population of fifteen thousand, ten per cent of the people supposed to be believers, in the churches, church membership. If there is a city anywhere in Missouri or anywhere else that needs a practical application of the gospel of Jesus Christ to redeem them from this condition of lethargy, this condition of disbelief, to say the least of it, this condition of unbelief, I assure you I think that Webb City is one of them.

What is the meaning of this? "Then said Jesus to those Jews that believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." The antithesis of this is true, and it would read thus, transposed in this form: "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue not in my word then are ye not my disciples indeed, and ye shall not know the truth and the truth shall not make you free." That is just as clear as the other statement. This statement was made by the Master. This Jesus Christ who made the statement prophetically that this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then should the end come. I want to make a distinction between the practical statement and the prophetic one, because we have a rendition in a subsequent translation which says, "And again shall the gospel of the kingdom be preached in all the world for a witness unto every nation, and then shall the end come." My friends, we are looking for the coming of Jesus, for the end of the world, for that great crash that shall destroy existent things, and on the debris of which shall rise a kingdom that shall be free from all the things that we complain of in our economic and spiritual world, that shall sweep them out of the way, and eliminate them from among men, and establish a reign of peace and power for ever. We are looking for that time, but we are not going to be passive and allow the people who preach the gospel but not as Jesus gave it in his word, to allow them to lead us captive, but we are going to ask and continually knock until we discover the truth, and it shall make us free.

A practical question: Is that statement made by the Master operative to-day? Just as surely as the Christian trusts in the saving grace of Jesus Christ to be kept free from evil here and to furnish him an abode of happiness and peace in the spirit world beyond, by just so much is this absolute force of spirit and power existent to-day, and that is how we differ from our brethren of different beliefs, because we make the statement fairly that no man can be saved by him but by his power. He provided them a means of salvation here and hereafter, and without this, no man can see God. Have we proof for that? I turn over to the seventeenth chapter of John and read from that wondrous prayer, the most wonderful prayer that was ever offered upon earth; one that every time I approach it, whether in argument or whether I read it by the fireside, or in the family circle, every time its wondrous provisions come to my heart, my heart almost leaps with comfort and joy, and I am almost moved to tears, because of the wondrous provisions of the Master in it. Let us hear what are the terms of it. "These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son that thy Son also may glorify thee: as thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him." That same wondrous provision is open for us to-day, that as God gave him out of the world those who should become the sons of God, and has the power to give them eternal life, that power is supreme to-day, and that loving-kindness that moved his heart then to pray for his disciples, moves his loving heart now, and it should move his disciples, and every man that stands in the sacred desk should do it at the expense of his humiliation, of his remembrance of Christ's extreme condescension, when he took upon himself a body of the nature of Abraham's seed, and suffered death that he through his love accomplished it in this death upon the cross; and he left words, eternal words upon record that every man might read for himself and be saved.

I read on: "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." Men should so know him and ascertain who he is, meeting him face to face. And this can only be because of this gift of eternal life. Not until we are shorn of the environments of the flesh; not until our spirits shall have been made over from the turmoils imposed upon us by this earthly tabernacle; not until then shall we be able to see him face to face and be removed from the environments of our earthly life, and he has provided a means by which it shall be accomplished for us.

"I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." What a spirit of condescension is shown here! Leaving the glory of the Father, came to earth and wrought out for men that which God, his Father, had sent him to do, and then pleading, when his work was done, that he might have returned to him that glory which he had before the world was.

"I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were and thou gavest them me: and they have kept thy word." What does John say in the eighth chapter? That Jesus said to the Jews which believed on him, "If ye continue in my word then are ye my disciples indeed"; and here is a book called the Bible, the King James version of it spread all over the earth, hundreds of thousands sent abroad everywhere, and men told to take it as their counsel, and when we open it and read things from it, they say we are superstitious, and men say: "Bro. Smith, and Bro. Evans, you must not preach doctrine in the church; if you do, you will sow dissension and controversy and contention, and strife will ensue and we will have a divided church." All we have to say to that is this: that if Jesus Christ has so ordered the ways of his law and his spirit that the preaching of his doctrine should destroy the church, that is not the church of Christ, for he never would destroy his own church, and if he has been so foolish as to leave doctrine on record that the preaching of it would destroy a church, myself and my comrades say that the sooner that church is destroyed, the better for mankind. I hope no one will misrepresent me when I have gone from Webb City. I was here something like ten or twelve years ago and helped to dedicate a little church here, and since that time the word that we preached then has been scattered everywhere, until now we have here a congregation something like two hundred people, who have erected them a chapel in which these words shall be presented to men, the everlasting, eternal words of Jesus Christ, which men may take as the means of their salvation. But I read on.

"I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are mine. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them. And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are. While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name; those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition, that the scripture might be fulfilled. And now I come to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves. I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world."

We present these things to you for this reason, that they present a continued statement concerning his disciples and his prayer for them, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth." We have been met with this opposition, almost everywhere when we have come: "Brother Smith, you and your confreres believe too much. You believe in the Book of Mormon, you believe that angels visit the earth, you believe in revelation, and apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers, and all of these things which have passed away in the far off past and now are no more. But we find them in this word, and here we have the Master bowing before his Father and agonizing for those that believe in him and saying, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth," and we only can continue. It is everlasting, firm as the bounds of the everlasting hills, as the works that fashion the backbone and the sinews of the world itself. It is eternal as God himself is, and not one jot or one tittle shall pass away until all shall be fulfilled, without respect to how poor or mean it may be, so far as the children of men may think of it, it shall be found grand in the eyes of God, and he will maintain himself until the last, as far as his word is concerned, and he will act like himself, and will judge man according to those things which he hath done.

What men do arises from their belief largely; and man's thoughts fashion his belief and his belief fashions his words and his deeds. Show me the man who has a firm, upright, earnest belief in Jesus Christ, and I will show you a man who tries to reflect the Spirit of God in his walk and conversation. I don't care whether he is a mechanic or minister, he will show by his works his faith in God. You ask him if he believes that Jesus Christ is the ruler of the world; he will tell you, Yes. He will point you to his life and works and show you the means of this salvation. "Not one jot or one tittle shall pass away until all shall be fulfilled." "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." That is the seventeenth verse of the seventeenth chapter of John.

Is that word of force and power to-day? Does he mean now, speaking to us as his believers in him? If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. Does he mean that if we did not continue in his word, we are not his disciples? Is that statement of John, the beloved disciple, in his second epistle, true: "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God, but whosoever abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son"? Here is this Bible placed in our hands and upon our sacred desks and our tables, and we worship around the family altar, the widows' friend, the mourners' comfort. Does it mean what it says? That is the question for us to consider. We, as a people, think it does; therefore we ask the privilege of abiding in the doctrine of Christ, if we can find what it is. Jesus came preaching doctrine, did he not? Well, I think it is conceded that he did. Let us see. How knoweth this man doctrine, having never learned letters? Turn to the seventh chapter of John and see what we have there, beginning with the fourteenth verse: "Now about the midst of the feast, Jesus went up into the temple, and taught. And the Jews marveled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" It is supposed that he taught something that was of value. I wrote an article for our paper a little while ago and when it came out the printers made me to say that Jesus gave no ideal word or doctrine to mankind. I wrote the word idle. It was stated he was never known to laugh or to smile, hence he gave no idle word. His words were sound, were solemn, were truth. They were sanctified by the sending of the Father unto the good of men. "And Jesus answered them, saying, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." One peculiarity that you will find, if you choose to hunt it up, after we have shown what the doctrine of the Lord Jesus Christ was then, as confided to his disciples, you will discover that Jesus Christ himself is implicated either directly or indirectly in the teaching and presenting of every single one of them. We think we can show you from this morning's evidence that this is an absolute fact, and any one that reads the Bible and studies it will find that he was either directly or indirectly in touch with every doctrine that he taught and that is represented here as the doctrine of Christ; they will find it comports exactly with what we have stated in regard to it. "If any man shall do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." I once read a wonderful tome written by a certain Doctor Hickox, that was an endeavor to present to men the idea that we know because we become conscious of. It was a labored effort to show or prove that we know because we know. I can not see any difference between the statement, "We know because we know," or because we become conscious of, and if a man knows it, he knows it. That is all there is to it. That is a homely way to put it, nevertheless it is true. I believe the homeliest things are truest after all." "If any man shall do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself." Now he said, "As my Father sent me, so I send you," referring to his disciples. I apprehend that is true of every disciple he has sent out under his own ministration from that time to this, every one. "As my Father sent me, so send I you." According to the same rule, the same authority representing the same truths if he could not vary from that which the Father told here; for he would not vary from that which the Father told him; he could not have done and he did not. It was his business to tell the world what the Father told him to say, and he did it and took the consequences of it. I do not know of a single man since that time that he has ever called and sent into the field that he has ever authorized to misrepresent him in the least; but he has persistently borne testimony to those to whom the word was sent that the testimony was true.

Here is a peculiar condition of things; a minister extraordinary, a minister plenipotentiary from the kingdom of heaven on high to the kingdom of men on the earth, to establish, build up, and continue to perfect an organization of men or a convocation of men, by the application of principles and rules to be of the family of God on earth, whose names, inscribed upon the family book of God on earth, shall be inscribed upon the family book of God in heaven; and the Bible bears witness unto it something like this, that there are three which bear witness on earth, and there are three which bear witness in heaven, the Father, the spirit, and truth and it bears record on earth and in heaven.

We want our names to be inscribed upon the family book on earth, that they may be inscribed in the family book of God in heaven. I will tell you a reason for that after awhile.

I turn over here to this statement of the Apostle Paul, writing to the Hebrews. I find there a peculiar condition of things and a peculiar statement; first verse, the sixth chapter. "Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God." What was almost the first declaration of John who was sent by command of the Father to be the forerunner and to make the way of the Lord plain? Was it not to cry repentance unto mankind, and did he not preach the baptism of repentance unto man? Was not that his object? And when the Master came, he went directly to John, and the first work that he did before he began his spiritual ministry, aside from the disputing with the doctors, was to go to John the Baptist and ask baptism at his hands.

Now, I ask you a question, my friends, you who exercise the faculty of thinking about what you see and hear. Is any one of us of such a character that we are to be excused from the operation of the doctrine that Christ came to teach, and the one that John was sent to preach and practice; that we could be saved without baptism, the same as that he could be saved without baptism? Some one once asked me the question, If baptism is for the remission of sins what was he, Jesus Christ, baptized for? He was baptized for the imputed sins that came and fastened themselves upon the body of the nature of Abraham's seed, (not a body of the nature of angels) which must taste of death; and Christ could never have redeemed that body under the law if he had not compelled that body to submit to the law of God given through John the Baptist.

Now in Hebrews, we have this declaration on the principles of the gospel of Christ stated by the Apostle Paul. Paul was the great apostle to the Gentiles. Born away down here in the lapse of time, away from Jerusalem, so geographically situated here in the New World in our Jerusalem, comparatively, I find these words coming over to us just as perfect, true, and grand as they were when they were uttered by the Apostle Paul, and the enumeration of these principles just as applicable to the people. The same principles that saved men then must save them now. "Not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works or of faith toward God." "Repent, every one of you," said Peter on the day of Pentecost, "and be baptized for the remission of your sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." O, but our friends, the clerical brethren say, "You do not need to be baptized for the remission of your sins." "That is not correct." Who says it is not correct? Whence comes the authority by which they say it? Peter, upon the day of Pentecost said it. Christ told Nicodemus its equivalent. Luke makes the statement in the third chapter, third verse. We all know that Mark makes it that baptism is for the remission of sins. We know that somebody may write upon the black-board here that baptism is unto the remission of sins, and they will tell me at the same time, it is an answer of a good conscience unto God. No man can answer a good conscience unto God until he has been baptized. His conscience can not be clear. You can not substitute the one word unto for the word for. Jesus went unto the mountain. He does not say he went into the mountains. He did not go into the solid earth of the mountain in person. He went up there on a mountain, on the place where he could talk to the people. Jesus was baptized in Jordan. I remember when I was a boy I saw a picture of Jesus at the Jordan. I can see that picture yet. Jesus was represented kneeling upon the stones near the water, and John stood by him with something like a cow's horn, pouring water upon his head. On Jesus' head was that figurative halo that was said to surround the head of the Virgin Mary. I knew that picture could not be correct because this record says they went down into the Jordan and they came up out of the water, and, as they did so, the Spirit fell upon the Master in the form of a dove and a voice was heard, "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear ye him." And not until then had God acknowledged him. That voice of the Spirit recognized to-day whenever this word is read. That Spirit recognized in the minds and hearts and ears of those who hear and read, "Hear ye him." That is what we want to-day, my friends. Shall we hear him? Listen to the counsel. Faith comes by hearing the word of God. How shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall he preach except he be sent? Something peculiar about this. We read this chapter a little further. "And of faith toward God." What was the statement made by the Master upon one occasion? Read it in the fourteenth chapter of John: "Ye believe in God. Believe also in me." He was anxious that they should have faith in him. He had faith in his Father. He wanted them to have faith in him; and those who preach to us to-day want us to have faith in him, confidence, trust, everything that we have we want to put direct in his keeping.

"Of the doctrine of baptisms." Yes, says some one, we knew you would introduce the doctrine of baptisms. Well, we can not help it. John could not and Jesus did not. Paul could not help it, for the dispensation of the gospel had been confided to him and as a consequence he had to do it. "Woe is me if I preach not this gospel," and he went right on preaching it. He says, "I was not sent to baptize but to preach the gospel." What is the reason? Because the doctrine had grown up among the people, and those that were grown up began to differ, just as they do to-day. I was baptized unto John and I was baptized unto Cephas. Says Paul, "I thank God that I baptized none of you excepting a few," and what was the result? Paul preached the gospel, and just as soon as he preached it, baptism followed. Philip went down to the city there and preached the kingdom of God and they were baptized, men and women. The Holy Ghost had not yet fallen upon them. Following the Apostle Paul, he came down to Ephesus, and asked the people there, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" Have you people here heard it? Have you received the Holy Ghost since you believed? They said, "We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." "Unto what then were ye baptized?" "Unto John's baptism." And the Apostle Paul showed spiritual diplomacy, for instead of attacking them, as he might have done, he said to them, "John truly preached the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins," and then instructed more properly, and when he had so instructed them, they were baptized, and having laid hands upon them they received the Holy Ghost.

So with the doctrine of baptisms. We turn to the third chapter of John and there we have the interview of the Master, with the man that came to him by night. It is supposed by some that he was afraid to come by day. I believe that the man who came to him, Nicodemus, was occupied during the day, and so he came by night, as stated in the third chapter of John's Gospel. And when Jesus talked to him, he said, "Except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God." "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of God." People tell us now we can enter, but Jesus said we could not. Who knows best? We are applying it in a common-sense form. We are trying to deal with it in a plain, matter-of-fact way. These are the words of Jesus Christ the Master, who came to do what his Father told him to do and to say what his Father told him to say. And if he told Nicodemus that a man could not enter into the kingdom of heaven except he was born of the water and of the Spirit, who says that he can? Who is authorized to say that he can? I apprehend that we mortals do not keep the gates, but those of diviner power keep the gates of that celestial kingdom; those who are authorized of the Master are those who shall stand there and say who shall be entitled to enter, and every person that can not present the passable receipt of that which he hath done on earth will never be permitted to enter there.

We have two baptisms spoken of here. Plural. One of the flesh, one of the spirit. Baptism of the water and of the spirit. This is Christ's statement to Nicodemus. The baptism of the water, the baptism of the body. The baptism of the Spirit giving men a spirit born of the Master. Of the Holy Ghost. That used to be left out a good deal. I preached for something like twenty years, and I met a great rebellion whenever I talked about the Holy Ghost. Did the Master lay on hands? Yes, he laid hands on the people, blessed them. He laid hands on the sick and they were healed. He blessed little children by laying his hands on them and praying for them. A gentleman came from Newark, New Jersey, and preached in Sandwich, and he was invited to speak from the twelfth chapter of Corinthians in order that our work might be offset.

One thing he said I am always thankful for. "When Christ came to the Jewish nation, he found them suffering spiritual and temporal sickness; and he chose the very best means for the overcoming of this sickness; he laid his hands on them that they might receive spiritual and temporal health." He adopted it as a means. And when we look back upon the history of time we read that wondrous revelation of Habakkuk with the description of this one that was to come, that he was to have horns growing out of his hands. Horns symbolize power in the prophetic language of the old book. It represents power, "therein was the hiding of his power." I thanked this gentleman from Newark who came over to preach of Christ, that came to preach the gospel, because he spoke the truth, and I have had a warm place in my heart for him ever since.

The laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost. Turn to the eighth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles and you will find that these people to whom Philip preached had not received the Holy Ghost. And when these disciples at Jerusalem heard that they had received the message and had been baptized, they sent down to them Peter and John, who when they were come down, laid their hands on them that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, for as yet it had fallen upon none of them. Elder Parham, from your nearby State, who has gone up to Chicago to offset the work of John Alexander Dowie, and whose work has been split all to pieces by the incoming of that graft of greed that has gathered the shekels from the people and almost enslaved them, has broke up that condition now, and Parham has gathered some of Dowie's adherents around him. And in your morning paper is a statement made by a certain groceryman, whose wife has been estranged from her husband by the teaching of Mr. Parham. I am not here to talk about finding fault with men who may have different faith from me in this respect. I will not state the fact as it appears in your morning paper. But they spoke in tongues and prophesied after they had received the laying on of hands of Peter and John. In the nineteenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, the same thing occurred as on the day of Pentecost. They did speak in tongues and prophesy when the Spirit came upon them, after they had been told to tarry there and wait for the Holy Ghost to come upon them; and they had had the hands of the Savior laid upon them, and he had ordained them. The record says "he breathed upon them and they received the Holy Ghost."

Is it to be the doctrine yet? I have been preaching for forty-seven years; my brother for something like thirty years. It has been practiced in the church and hundreds and thousands have answered under the inquiry, Have ye received the Spirit since ye believed? and they say they have. Persons have arisen and testified that they have received the Spirit under the laying on of hands by those who were sent to preach. Again, when this work began, away back yonder in 1830, at the organization of the church, they were told by the voice of revelation to go out and preach the doctrine to be found in the Bible, and in the Book of Mormon, and in the revelations to the church; and those who believed for themselves, those who heard their message and believed them, and received the ministration at their hands, should receive of the Spirit which should testify to them whether the doctrine was true and whether Jesus was the Christ or not. What has been the result? For seventy-five years, three fourths of a century, they have been preaching, and their representatives and hundreds and thousands have testified that the statement made in the seventeenth chapter of John is true. "He that will do the will of the Father shall know of the doctrine." He must enter into relationship with Christ and he shall know.

And of the resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment. Now our proposition is this, gathered from the teaching of the word to us, and especially as found in the twentieth chapter of Revelation, that there are yet two resurrections of the dead. One took place at the resurrection of Jesus Christ, in which many of the dead who were buried in the cities and around about, rose from the dead and appeared to many in the city. That there are yet two resurrections from the dead, one in which shall rise all those that are Christ's at his coming, and all those that shall so rise shall be living on the earth a thousand years and reign with Christ. This is the first resurrection. The millennial world, the millennium, the thousand years of uprightness and right and righteousness; but the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were past. And then the great mass of mankind, all of them, were brought out from the grasp of death and hell and the grave, and they were judged by the judges out of the books according to the things which were done by them in the flesh. Now, my friends, I come almost to the application of my texts and my sermon. That is this: Is it not better for us to accept the doctrine of the Lord Jesus Christ, to become his disciples in fact and in spirit and to be sanctified by the truth, our names written upon the Lamb's Book of Life here, that they may be inscribed upon the Lamb's Book of God in heaven, that when that great judgment shall sit and the whole world will be gathered together in successive masses to receive the examination and the adjudication, according to that which is written in the books, is it not better for us now to accept the message of Jesus Christ, than it is to take the judgment that is passed upon us as one of those that are without Christ? Let me picture a scene to you as I have seen it often in imagination and sometimes by the impress of the divine Spirit. Here upon the throne sits the great Judge. Before him are gathered all nations. At his right hand stands one, who when he was seen in the fiery furnace was described as the Son of God. And close by the throne sits the Angel who has the books in his hands, the records of which are opened by him, and as my name is called, I come in to have my life examined, to have my name examined to see whether I have so labored and wrought that I shall remain or go out from that presence without happiness and without peace. My name is called and I come forward, and this man like the Son of God stands there. Turning to the secretary he says to him, Is this man's name inscribed upon my Book of Life? The secretary will turn rapidly to the page upon which my name might appear and he either looks up with a nod or he fails to say, and if he fails to say that my name is recorded, the Master is silent, and my judgment must proceed according to the things which are written in the books. But if perchance I have obeyed him, not having been ashamed of him nor his words while I have been upon the earth, then this secretary looks up with a smile, and the Master turns to the Judge and says, This man is mine. He was not ashamed of me nor of my words on earth. I am not ashamed to own him before thee, my Father, and those angels which surround thee. Give to him what thou promised me, that he may enter into everlasting life and live with me as I reign upon my throne which thou mayest finally confirm unto me as the everlasting life.

Your name is called. You press forward to the judgment. You have passed through the portals of death. You have received the resurrection, either one or the other, and as you come forward, you do so with confidence and trust, or with humiliation and trembling, and if perchance your name is found written there, what a spirit of peace falls upon your mind! What a contentment reaches your heart! You have done that upon the earth that you were commanded to do through the ministration of this august son of God. Fear has been banished. You can address him that stands there as your advocate to speak for you, for you have not been ashamed of him nor his words upon the earth. If perchance you have tried to avoid the final conclusions that must come upon you if you read his word aright as we have read it before you concerning the doctrine of Christ which was to be preached in all the world for a witness before the end should come, then you will realize the torture of having heard the truth, and having abided not in the doctrine of Christ, you shall have neither the Father nor the Son. But if you have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine, you will have both the Father and the Son to comfort you. "Comfort one another with these words," says the Apostle in writing to the Philippian brethren, "that we who are alive and remain until his coming shall not prevent them who are asleep, but we shall live and reign with Christ a thousand years and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

Let us comfort ourselves that this is the doctrine that shall be taught from this pulpit and within these walls, and if we want an inscription, let it be, "A free pulpit and an open Bible." Inquiry before God. Inquiry before our fellow men. Searching for the things that have been written, that we may find the truths that are written in accordance with it, and so find ourselves at the end of our lives, entering into the joy of eternal life with Christ and with God.

Of General Interest

AN OPEN LETTER AND CHALLENGE.

To the Rev. O. L. Spurgeon, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Harlan, Iowa.

Dear Sir:

The first Sunday in last month you advertised to, and did speak in the Baptist Church in Harlan, on the subject of "Latter day apostasies." In that sermon, I am informed you referred to the Latter Day Saint Church as one of those apostasies. You also referred to the Book of Mormon as unworthy Christian belief, and to Joseph Smith as a false teacher, at the same time making light of certain doctrines and supposed doctrines of the Latter Day Saints which you thought were unscriptural, among others being that of the "laying on of hands." (See Acts 8: 15, 16, 17.)

A public teacher should at all times be willing to give the proof of his assertions. I therefore challenge you to furnish the proof that the Latter Day Saint Church in the days of Joseph Smith and under his presidency or the presidency of his son, were apostates from true Christianity; that the Book of Mormon is unworthy Christian belief, or that Joseph Smith taught false or unchristian doctrines. While we challenge you to prove your statement in public, we demand in the name of common honesty, Christian courtesy, and true Americanism, that we be given the privilege granted by the courts of all civilized countries, to examine your proofs and cross-examine your witnesses publicly, and before the same people who shall hear your proofs. We think the fairest way to do that, would be in a public discussion in Harlan on the following propositions:

First: Resolved that the Missionary Baptist Church is in harmony with the church of the New Testament, in doctrine, organization, and gifts, of the Holy Spirit. Baptists affirm. Latter Day Saints deny.

Second: Resolved that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is in harmony with the church of the New Testament in doctrine, organization, and gifts of the Holy Spirit. Latter Day Saints affirm. Baptists deny.

Third: Resolved that the church of Jesus Christ established in New Testament times, afterward departed from the faith and polity of that church, and was rejected of God, and the Bible indicates a restoration of the church of God in the latter days. Latter Day Saints affirm. Baptists deny.

Fourth: Resolved that the Missionary Baptist Church has continued in true succession from the days of the New Testament until the present time. Baptists affirm. Latter Day Saints deny.

Fifth: Resolved that the Book of Mormon is a true history of ancient Americans and of God's dealings with them, and its teachings worthy the acceptance of all Bible believers. Latter Day Saints affirm. Baptists deny.

Sixth: Resolved that the canon of scripture is closed and the Bible contains all that God ever gave or intended to give for man's guidance and instruction in righteousness. Baptists affirm. Latter Day Saints deny.

Seventh: Resolved that the teachings of Joseph Smith were in harmony with the New Testament and he and others divinely inspired to organize the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Latter Day Saints affirm. Baptists deny.

Eighth: Resolved that the Missionary Baptist Church was organized with divine favor, and its founders divinely inspired to institute its faith and polity. Baptists affirm. Latter Day Saints deny.

You will discover that the same points are to be affirmed of one church as the other. Any thing short of that would not be fair. As these propositions are in pairs, each one offsetting the other, two nights ought to be sufficient on each proposition, with two speeches of one hour each, followed by two ten minutes speeches each evening for each disputant, alternately. Three moderators should be chosen to preserve order and enforce all rules hereafter agreed upon. Sixty days should be sufficient time to prepare for the contest.

Please give special attention to the eighth and last proposition. We can expect you to either affirm that the Baptists' Church was divinely authorized or in some way a divine institution, or else refusing to defend that point, you acknowledge thereby your church to be only of human origin and design, and its ordinances administered without divine authority and sanction.

This challenge is issued for the branch of the church in Harlan, Iowa, and the proper authorities will name the disputant. The church will indorse their man and we ask the same indorsement for yourself or for your substitute. The propositions are stated in such a way that either side may appoint whom they choose to represent them. Reverend Yule made similar misstatements, you might substitute him.

We offer the use of the Latter Day Saint church in Harlan, Iowa, for the discussion, but should it prove inadequate we will pay half the expense for a suitable place.

We challenge the correctness of your statement and call upon you to defend it. Give us the right of honorable defense by making your statements in our presence, where our mouth is not closed, and before the same people who heard your first attack. Do not entrench yourself behind your own pulpit, where your opponent may not come. That would not be honorable. Will you accept this challenge, or will you seek some excuse to back out? We shall see.

A STATEMENT.

For the benefit of the public, that they may have a clearer idea of who is issuing this challenge, we present the following statement of facts:

First: The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which have a branch in Harlan, Iowa, are not Mormons. All who refer to them as such do so either from ignorance or design.

Second: They believe in primitive Christianity.

Third: They believe there are no nonessentials in the teachings of Christ and no change in his doctrine or policy.

Fourth: They believe in the highest possible attainments in matters of science and civilization, in progress and refinement, but that such attainments do not invalidate primitive Christianity.

Fifth: They believe the primitive church was as God designed it should remain through all ages, but she changed her organization and law, and though she gained the world she lost her soul through disobedience.

Sixth: They believe there has been recommitted in these last days, the ancient order of things known in the Bible as "The dispensation of the fullness of times."

Seventh: They are not so numerous and not so popular as the churches of men, but their position can not be moved and their doctrine will stand every Bible test.

Eighth: The headquarters of this church was first at Plano, Illinois, and since that time at Lamoni, Iowa; that of the Utah church has from the time they left us, been at Salt Lake City.

Ninth: These two churches have no affiliation or connection with each other, and their doctrines are radically different in many respects.

Tenth: The true Latter Day Saints never indorsed the doctrine of polygamy and its kindred evils. Their members are not under the domination of a priesthood, nor do they have anything in secret. All their doctrines are open and honorable. They differ more widely from the Utah church on polygamy than do the Baptists, for there is a taint of polygamy in the historical blood of the Baptists that they can never escape from. Not only among the old Waldenses through whom they must trace their lineage, but in the immediate family it broke out afresh in later times. At a conference held in Calcutta, India, in 1855, in which eighteen Baptist ministers participated, the following resolution was adopted: "If a convert, before becoming a Christian, has married more wives than one, in accordance with the practice of Jewish and primitive Christian churches, he shall be permitted to keep them all; but such a person is not eligible to any office in the church. In no other case is polygamy to be tolerated among Christians."—Allan's India, Ancient and Modern, pp. 601, 602, published in 1856. The account of that conference was published on the Baptist press in Calcutta, in 1855. The work of those men was indorsed by the foreign missionary board at home. This is not written in any spirit of retaliation, nor do we go to the Baptists' enemies for our proof.

Eleventh: Joseph F. Smith, who admitted before the Senate Committee in the Smoot case that he was a polygamist, is not a member of the true Latter Day Saint Church.

Twelfth: The true Latter Day Saint Church is the most alert enemy polygamy has ever had. They were the first to send missionaries to Utah, and the only church that has ever succeeded in turning any great amount of their members to principles of chastity and liberality.

Thirteenth: Joseph Smith, founder of the Latter Day Saint Church, was an honorable Christian man, kind of heart, benevolent of purpose, chaste of opinion, and moral in his deeds. He was, like other men of God, grossly belied by religious zealots and fanatics, whose misrepresentations have crept into the literature of to-day, contrary to the facts. Many who think they know the man and his work, know only the misrepresentations, and have never been broad enough to examine the other side. Mr. Spurgeon's denunciations of Joseph Smith were born of popular prejudice, and not from a knowledge of the facts. We are prepared to impeach the statement of any paper, book, history, encyclopedia, or individual that contradict these facts.

Unless Reverend Spurgeon is above the average clergyman, he will, for the sake of his salary, contrive every possible excuse to avoid public discussion: but I hope I may find in him one that has the courage of his convictions and not a mere hireling or coward. An ancient sage has said:

"He who will not reason is a knave.
He who can not reason is a fool.
He who dare not reason is a coward."

A PARABLE.

Two boys one day were jumping on the lawn. One the son of a wealthy society lady, the other the son of an honorable but poor widow. The widow's son far out-jumped his playmate, whereupon a dispute ensued as to the distance each had jumped. The society lady, overhearing part of the dispute, inquired as to its cause, and was informed by the widow's son that his playmate had made statements he could not prove, and that the size and form of the tracks proved he had jumped the farther, though he were the younger, and his tracks the smaller. Whereupon the lady said to her son, "Come with me, do not pay any attention to him." Her son remarking with an impudent air as he left the yard, "I consider that I have too much sense to monkey any more with you." Question: Who was the gentleman, and who jumped the farthest?

A PHONE MESSAGE.

The following conversation took place Monday, March 9, over the phone:

"Hello central; give me Reverend Spurgeon's residence, please." "Hello; is this the Reverend Spurgeon?" "Yes, sir." "This is J. W. Peterson." "Oh, yes." "Had you heard yet from the propositions I submitted to you for consideration?" "No, sir, I am not considering them at all. I consider that I have too much sense to monkey with that matter." And Mr. Spurgeon hung up the receiver.

Soliloquy of Mr. Peterson: Mr. Spurgeon has grown wondrous wise in the last few weeks. He did "monkey" with the matter enough to misrepresent and ridicule the Latter Day Saints a few weeks ago; and now, when his statements are called in question, he has more sense than to monkey with it further. Rather looks like that is a direct insult to my intelligence, and to every Latter Day Saint, not only in Harlan, but in the world; and that, too, coming from a professed follower of Christ. Wonder if he will not "monkey" behind my back and try to make it appear that the Latter Day Saints are not honorable because they differ from the Baptists, and not worth "monkeying" with because they demand fair play. Perhaps his (Baptist) mother has told him to let us alone.

Kindly, but firmly,

J. W. PETERSON.

The above paper with the exception of the "Parable" and "Phone message," was read before the Harlan Branch of the Latter Day Saints, at a regular meeting, Sunday, March 8, 1908, indorsed and ordered printed. The latter part I have added on my own responsibility.

J. W. P.

Harlan Tribune, March 11, 1908.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. T. A. Hougas, secretary, Macedonia, Pottawattamie County, Iowa; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, Treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, 630 South Chrysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Daughters of Zion Reading for May.

TO WHOM DOES THE CHILD BELONG? TO HIMSELF.

The parents look upon the new-born child, and say, This is my child, he belongs to me. They anticipate the pleasure they will take in his development; they look forward to the time when he will be a support to their old age; they admire themselves in his features; they prophesy their own talents reproduced in him; they love themselves in him; they amuse themselves with him. He is tickled and played with that they may smile; he is stimulated to walk, or to manifest awakening intellect that they may feel pride; his sleep is disturbed that they may receive flattery of friends; he is dressed to please their fancy, regardless of his health or comfort. In truth, they act as if they thought that his existence was chiefly, if not solely, for them. He belongs to them.

If this feeling is not founded on a right understanding of things, it might be well to ask seriously: If this child does not so entirely belong to his parents, to whom does he belong? Upon the answer to this question, depends his right education. If he belongs to the parents, then their feelings, fancies, pleasures, might decide his training. If he primarily belongs to some one else, the interests of that other one should be consulted, and that other one is the child himself. In the first place, the child belongs to himself, then he belongs to God, then to humanity of whom his parents form a part.

Some one may ask in horrified amazement, Does not the child belong to God first of all? In a certain sense he does, and yet God himself recognizes the inherent individuality of each one, his right to himself, when he says, "My son, give me thine heart." God has claims to love and obedience, as have the parents, but it depends upon the individual whether he shall recognize those claims. He has the power to choose, and by recognizing this power, God himself grants to each his right to himself. The value of belonging to God consists in its being a voluntary surrender of self. If then we admit that the child's first right is himself, we see clearly that all training must have for its object the interest of the child, therefore must vary with his temperament and constitution. And this consideration of the child's good must be the underlying motive in every act of the parent in which the child is concerned. Great wisdom is needed to know just how to do best for the bodily welfare of our children, and the majority of men and women marry, and enter upon the duty of educating the wonderful little beings without one particle of especial training for the work; and acting upon the supposition that the child belongs to them, their methods are not always calculated to produce the most desirable results.

If the child is a little noisy in his play, the father harshly checks him, never for one moment considering that the child has any right in the matter. This sounds on the surface as if the child should be allowed to rule the household, but that is not the thought intended to be conveyed. The father is weary, and desires quiet, and that is right. The only question is, How shall he obtain his needs and at the same time consult the best interests of the child? The sharp, quick reprimand, the box on the ear, the shoulder-shaking, may secure quiet, but it does it by tyranny, a triumph of brute force. The only feeling aroused in the mind of the child is one of rebellion, and of disinclination to regard the rights of others. Obedience is not the primary object of discipline. If it were it would matter but little in what way obedience were secured. The great underlying principle of all true training is development of character.

If obedience were the primary object, then when the child is scolded, boxed, or shaken into silence, the desired result is obtained. If development is the object, the securing of silence by those means is a failure.

What shall be the process by which the needs of the father, and the good of the child shall be accomplished? That depends upon the individuality of the child; but training in a care for the rights of others should be begun in infancy, and by the time the child is old enough to be whipped into obedience, he will have learned the lesson of thoughtfulness, so that voluntarily he will keep quiet, in order that the parent may rest. A little boy of two years, who had observed that the rest of any member of the family was considered sacred by the other members, never saw any one lie down for a nap that he did not go to cover a shawl over the sleeper; and with his finger on his lip intimate to every one who came into the room that silence must be maintained. There was in his mind no feeling of irritation that his activity was lessened, because he obeyed the rule of quietness through his own volition, and that constitutes the value of obedience. God himself recognizes this, and gives his children the opportunity to choose obedience or disobedience and the results of each.

One of the most imperative rights of the child is a strong, unbroken will. In the struggle of life he will need all the will-power that he can command. It must not be an ungovernable will, but the governing power must be in the child himself. The duty of the parent is not to break the child's will, but to teach him to use it wisely. His value as an individual may be measured by his will-power. Willfulness is not an evidence of strong will, but rather of undisciplined will and weakness of character. The man will need to decide between different courses of conduct. If choice has always been denied him as a child, he will thereby be deprived of experience, and will vacillate in his decisions. He must be trained to obedience, for during his whole life he must be under law; but he should be trained to a voluntary obedience rather than submission through coercion. Herbert Spencer says, "Whoso is to rule his passions in maturity, must be practiced in ruling them in youth. He must be induced to fix the boundaries of his own actions and voluntarily confine himself within them." A contest of will between parent and child is to be avoided as a "conflict of brute force."

The wise parent will avoid a contest, even in those cases where he does not intend to give the child an opportunity of choice. A gentleman writing at his desk told his little son to shut the outer door. The boy could not open the door when it was latched, therefore he only closed it, leaving it unfastened. The wind blew it open, and again he was told to shut it, and again left it unlatched so that he could run in and out. After the third time of this half-obedience the father rose, gave the boy his cap, opened the door and said: "Ward, you like the cool air; I don't. You can go out; I will shut the door and stay in; then we will both be suited." The boy recognized that this act of his father's was a direct result of his own conduct, and could feel no injustice. But supposing the child had said that he did not want to go outdoors? Then the father could have said, "You will have to choose between going out entirely or staying in with the door shut." As it was there was no contest of wills, and yet the father invaded no right of the child, nor did he suffer his own rights to be invaded, nor did he allow the child to have supremacy.

Children are often supposed to be stubborn when they are unable to do that which is required of them. Especially is this the case where fear is brought in as an element of coercion. A little boy was trying to learn to count. His father believed in driving in knowledge with the whip. He had learned as far as 15, and then stubbornly, as the father thought, refused to learn sixteen, seventeen, and eighteen, and the more he was whipped the more obstinate he became. When asked the reason, he replied: "I don't know; but I can't think when papa whips me." The mother decided that he should be helped without knowing how it was done. So in the evening, while undressing the baby, she began to sing a little rhyme in which these three numbers had a large place. The boy became interested, and in ten minutes had learned the numbers, and also had learned their connection with the numbers that preceded them. The father had been trying to break the boy's will, and in reality the boy had been willing, as hard as fear would let him, to do what the father desired.

The parent who is wise enough to recognize the individuality of the child, and his right to himself, will be keen-visioned to see the moral question involved in every circumstance of his life, and will at every point take time to consider the ultimate good of the child, not his desires, not even the parent's wishes, but the true and lasting welfare of the little soul intrusted to his care. He will see that to rightly belong to one's self is to have self-mastery; is to be governed by principle, not by impulse; is to rule his own spirit, and so to be strong to meet life in all of its trials and temptations, and thus make of life a triumph of righteousness.—American Motherhood.

Questions on May Reading.

What is dependent upon the answer to the question, "To whom does the child belong?" In what sense does the child belong to himself? How does God recognize his right to himself? How should it be recognized by his parents? What is the primary object of discipline? In what sense may a triumph of brute force be a failure? Will early training in a regard for the rights of others have effect upon the child, whatever his individuality? What constitutes the true value of obedience? What is the benefit to a child in having a strong will? By what power must this will be governed? What is the parent's duty in regard to it? Of what is willfulness an evidence? What is the advantage of voluntary obedience over submission through coercion? In the discipline of a child, has the parent need of a strong will? What control of his own will is necessary? What may be the effect of a contest of will between parent and child? How may the parent's will be exercised to bring the child to the best use of his own will? When should a child be given the opportunity of choice? Are children always stubborn when they are supposed to be? What pains should be taken to understand the child? Should fear ever be used as a means of coercion? What is it to rightly belong to one's self?

Program for May.

Hymn No. 172, Saints' Hymnal; prayer; reading from Home Column with discussion; paper, "How to secure voluntary obedience"; roll-call; business; closing prayer.

Letter Department

SHATTUCK, Oklahoma, March 15, 1908.

Editors Herald: I have received much comfort in reading the many things contained in the HERALD. I came to this place by special request of Mr. T. S. Martin (whom I have known from my boyhood days as "Thad"). He and his faithful wife lately moved here. There appeared here a man who is claiming to be "a real God-sent preacher," a "bold, fearless, prophet of God," by the name of Telford Boling. When I arrived, this professed "prophet" had engaged a local Adventist preacher by the name of J. W. Brown in debate on the subject of water baptism and the soul question. I attended and heard this prophet challenge, defy, and dare any one to take issue with him, etc.; that no one was able to disprove his doctrine, as he was a "real, God-sent preacher," and openly declared that water baptism was not only non-essential, but "of the Devil." I accepted his challenge, and offered to defend the following question: "Water baptism; does it form a part of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the plan of salvation, and is it essential unto salvation?"

We met for three nights in the rink, with an audience of about one hundred and fifty to two hundred. I was greatly blessed in my efforts in defending the truth, and have made friends. This man Boling is indeed, in my opinion, the most cunning, bold, and fearless, the best educated in the fine arts of sophistry, in his efforts to pervert the teaching of the New Testament Scriptures, that I have been permitted to meet or hear. He is not an orator by any means, but is a very able and forceful speaker. With wonderful self-confidence, and inexpressible boldness, he denounces all churches, organizations, sects, etc., and spiritualizes nearly everything connected with the teachings of the Bible. He admits the great "dark apostasy," and then teaches the restoration or return of the true gospel to the world, and that he is a "real, God-sent preacher," and "prophet of God."

I never before realized with as much emphasis the meaning of the Master's words in Matthew 24, where he says that just before his coming should false prophets arise, and if possible deceive the very elect. Those who do not know the truth, but are blinded by tradition and doctrines of men, are not fortified nor prepared to withstand this man and his cunning sophistry. This professed prophet, Tilford Boling, claims that his home is in Boston, Massachusetts; and that he has preached from Maine to California, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf. I would be pleased to hear from any of my brethren who have met him.

For one to believe that he is able to have the "discerning of spirits," and is permitted to read the real spiritual character of people, either within or without the church, is not so very enjoyable; but it has a tendency to draw us nearer and nearer to this glorious latter-day work. I have never felt more anxious for the power of God to be with me than now.

This is a new opening. I have an appointment at the rink for to-morrow night, and may continue all week. If so, it will deprive me of going to Redmoon, where I have intended going for some time. I trust if it seems clear to me, that I follow the leadings of the Spirit, and do not go to Redmoon at this time, it will not be taken as evidence that I am unruly, and not respectful to those in charge. I have not yet accepted the "infallibility of man" doctrine, either relating to myself or any one else. Neither do I feel in duty bound to do just as I might be told to do, when it does not seem right to me. I have such unshaken confidence in the divinity of this restored gospel, by the hand of an angel, to Joseph Smith, that when I get out into it, laboring for it as I now am, it seems to take from me all earthly interests so far as this world's goods are concerned,—the accumulation of houses or lands.

The ministry of this church should be unincumbered; should be absolutely free and clear of debt; should have no other interests, prospects, or attractions to hinder them from the study of the gospel, and the preaching it to the world. "Ye can not serve God and mammon," is as true to-day as when the Master spoke the words. I have learned it to my satisfaction. Yet, how often, oh, how often, do we feel ourselves drifting out into the broad open sea of worldly attractions and earthly gain, longing and hungering after them, when God has called us to a higher and holier calling! Yet many of the ministry are incumbered, sometimes forced to quit the mission field, to provide for wife and children, or save their home from the grasp of him who holds the mortgage, while at the same time there are those in the church, dwelling in luxury and wealth, who call the family to the altar of prayer and ask God to hasten the redemption of Zion!

I know that Jesus is the Christ; that Joseph Smith was and is a true prophet sent of God, and that God has called me to preach this restored gospel; and I am determined, by the help of God, to continue in his work while strength of mind and body shall remain.

In gospel bonds,

R. M. MALONEY.

WAWAKA, Texas, March 20, 1908.

Dear Herald: I think no one can appreciate the church papers as the isolated Saints can. The HERALD, Ensign, Hope, and Autumn Leaves are welcome visitors to us. Do not see how we could get along without them. They are the only preachers we have had since we came to Ochiltree County, with the exception of husband's brother, S. W. Simmons, of Holdenville, Oklahoma. He visited us last October, preached five good sermons at our schoolhouse, and had good attention. Most every one said they enjoyed his sermons very much. We are anxious for him to come back this summer; are doing all we can to remove prejudice. Went six miles last Sunday eve to distribute church papers and other church literature. Most every one seems willing to investigate our claim. At least they promise to read what we give them.

This is a fine country. We have as good neighbors as anywhere we ever lived. When we came here a little over two years ago, land could be bought at two and one half to three dollars per acre. The same land is selling now at ten to twenty-five dollars per acre, depending on location. Do not know of but one man that has any for ten dollars. He has several sections that must be sold right away. Part of it is in our neighborhood. It is as good land as any in the country. Every one that comes here buys a piece of land if he is able. All are delighted with the Panhandle that see it. Heard one man say that there was plenty of land in the Northern States selling for seventy-five to eighty dollars per acre that was not a bit better than this. Can not see why some of the Saints do not come and buy some of this land while it is cheap. We have a graded school at Ochiltree, and plenty of country schools over the county. We live within a half mile of a school. Land is selling for twenty to twenty-five dollars per acre as far out as three miles from Ochiltree. This is a fine grain country. All kinds of vegetables do well; and it is a good stock country. This is an easy country to make a living in. We have pleasant winters and summers, and good health. But no one, except isolated Saints, can realize how I feel. I am the only member in the county. Husband has not obeyed yet; but is a friend of the work. Am hoping and praying that he will obey soon. There is a brother living at Colo, Iowa, who owns a section in the northeastern part of the county. He does not think he will move on it for a year yet, so we are here alone, doing all we can with what little time and means we have to spare. Husband is not very strong, but has had better health since we came here. I ask the Saints to remember us in their prayers. May our heavenly Father bless his work everywhere; and may we all be more obedient, is the prayer of MRS. W. A. SIMMONS.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Notices.

Conference of the Western Maine District will convene with the Stonington Branch, May 16 and 17, 1908. Business session begins May 16, at 2 p. m. Reports from every branch in the district desired, as several have failed to report for some time. Send all communications to W. A. Small, Mountainville, Maine.

$1,000 for a Woman.

There may be nothing new under the sun, but "When the Mummy Moves" is certainly an original title for a story. It is, of course, a story of mystery and it is so ingenious and interesting a mystery that the Chicago Record-Herald,

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

in which it appears serially, offers a first prize of $1,000 to the woman who makes the best solution, with 115 other cash prizes for women and girls who make the next best solutions. The story begins in the Chicago Record-Herald Thursday, April 23, and the conditions of the contest will be found, accompanying each installment, in that paper. Those who have been unable to get the Record-Herald containing the early installments may obtain a reprint of those installments by writing to the Prize Mystery Editor, the Record-Herald, Chicago. While the masculine sex is not eligible in this competition it is probable that it will interest the whole family circle and there is no reason why men should not help their wives, daughters, or friends to a successful solution.

THE one brand of tomato ketchup that contains no artificial chemical preservative or coloring matter is

Tomato Ketchup

Made exclusively of fresh, plump, vine-ripened tomatoes, grown especially for HEINZ in sections producing the choicest varieties; seasoned with spices of HEINZ grinding. Conveyed in silver-lined tubes direct from the brightly polished kettles to sterilized bottles. Piquant, pleasing, wholesome and appetizing, with a flavor no other ketchup possesses. Try a bottle.

Others of HEINZ 57 Varieties sold by your grocer are Heinz Pure Olive Oil, Baked Beans (three kinds), Fruit Preserves, etc.

H. J. HEINZ CO., Pittsburgh, Pa.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid ..$30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply lasts). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

Bible References

By Alvin Knisley

Paper cover 5 cents
Cloth cover 10 cents

THE INDIAN MAIDEN

A Temperance Story

No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice, Mite, and Rain Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK

LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church. 11f

"HEAVEN AND HELL"

BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps

PASTOR LANDENBERGER,

Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

- No. 108—Leatherette, each 36c; per dozen $3.20.
- No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
- No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
- No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

The Jackson County Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

- | | |
|----------------------------|-----------------------------|
| ELLIS SHORT, President. | M. H. BOND, Vice-president. |
| WM. CRICK, Vice-president. | J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier. |
| G. H. HILLIARD. | DR. J. MATHER. |
| MRS. O. H. RIGGS. | A. L. YINGLING. |
| HORACE SHELEY. | |

Very truly yours,
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

Landseekers' Excursions

The Big Horn Basin and Yellowstone Valley

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month, April to November inclusive, I will personally conduct Landseekers' Excursions to the Big Horn Basin, Wyo., and Yellowstone Valley, Montana. The earlier in the season you go, the better. Train Leaves Omaha 4.10 P. M., Chicago 9.15 A. M., St. Louis 8.02 A. M.

These sections are rapidly increasing in population and the new towns are growing fast. Opportunities to acquire land, stated briefly, as follows:

14,000 acres of homestead land near Garland, Wyo., irrigated by the Government, now ready for settlers.

16,000 acres of homestead land, irrigated by the Government, and 15,000 acres under the Carey Act, ready for settlers in the vicinity of Ballantine, Huntley and Billings, Mont.

50,000 acres under the Carey Act ready for settlers May 12, near Cody, Wyoming.

60,000 acres under the Carey Act now ready for settlers in the vicinity of Worland, Basin, Greybull and Lovell, Wyoming.

Our new folder with large map, giving full and complete particulars regarding these lands, will be sent free upon request. Address

D. CLEM DEEVER, General Agent,
Burlington Route Land Seekers' Information Bureau,
1004 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 29, 1908

NUMBER 18

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
LEON A. GOULD, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

The Conference - - - - -	409
Spirit Medium Fakirs - - - - -	411
Remission of Sins Retained - - - - -	413
Vivisection as Practiced in Canada - - - - -	414
Notes and Comments - - - - -	415

ELDERS' NOTE-BOOK:

Our Attitude Towards the Ministry and Members of Other Churches - - - - -	416
---	-----

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

A Few Thoughts on Tithing - - - - -	416
Doctrine and Covenants, Section 42 - - - - -	419

MOTHER'S HOME COLUMN:

We Welcome the Spring - - - - -	426
Letter - - - - -	426
Parepa Rosa, a More Beautiful Picture Than Can Be Seen in the Hall of Fame - - - - -	427
Prayer Union - - - - -	427

LETTER DEPARTMENT:

Letters - - - - -	427
Extracts from Letters - - - - -	430

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:

Convention Minutes:
Central California - - - - -	430
Idaho - - - - -	430
Bishop's Agents' Notices - - - - -	430

The conditions of conquest are always easy. We have but to toil awhile, endure awhile, believe always, and never turn back.—Simms.

Anger ventilated often hurries towards forgiveness; anger concealed often hardens into revenge.—Bulwer.

Persistent people begin their success where others end in failure.—Edward Egglestone.

He who foresees calamities, suffers them twice over.—Porteous.

Editorial

THE CONFERENCE.

The conference just past was one of the most notable in many respects that the church has held for years. The attendance was large, the largest in ex officio and delegate members the Reorganization has ever held. It was very interesting in the regard of the matters which were presented and discussed. And while the discussion was at times warm and exciting, there was no animus of malice or bitterness shown, and nothing said that was likely to leave a sting or produce any great degree of uneasiness. The subject made the special order for the fourth day of the session was properly taken up, and considerable animation shown in the discussion of it. The final disposition of it was adverse to the terms of the resolution itself; and while the consensus of opinion among those who discussed the topic was favorable to positions hitherto assumed by the church that there was but one justifiable cause for divorce, the general feeling was adverse to passing a restrictive rule calculated to prevent the exercise of individual discretion of the eldership under the ministration of the Spirit of their calling and their mission, it being thought better to leave each case that might occur to be judged by actual conditions necessarily attaching to it. The discussion elicited much thought and a far better understanding of the general subject was obtained through the different presentations of those who spoke to the subject.

The position of the church upon the subject remains unchanged, and while the expression which the vote will bear may seem to some to favor a loose construction of the law, it could not be so construed for the reason that the basis of the whole matter is found in the sayings of the Savior as is found in Matthew 19: 9, as qualified by what is reported as being said by him by Mark, chapter 10, verses 11 and 12. These passages of scripture make the putting away of a companion by either husband or wife on an equality, leaving the matter to the conditions as to whether the crime is actual or constructive.

We have ever been opposed to the idea of making either man or woman the subject of constructive criminality; but notwithstanding this objection which we have always held, it is not for us to discriminate against or go contrary to the direct word of God, understood and acknowledged by the church as of paramount importance and authority. The King James Version and our own Holy Scriptures are alike as the matter is stated by Matthew, Mark, and Luke, and it is evident that upon these scriptures and in the spirit of them, section 42 of Book of Doctrine and Covenants, if not based, are in accordance and keeping with them. There is, however, in one of the revelations a statement to the effect of the following: "Thou shalt not commit adultery, nor do anything like unto it." From this, those who are inclined to restrict this construction of law may find a basis for a positive refusal upon their part to perform the ceremony of marriage for persons who have been divorced, and propose to marry other than their former companion who may have become reconciled to each other.

The action of the ministry of the church authorized by law to perform the marriage ceremony being left to the exercises of discretion and their own understanding of the provisions of the law upon the subject, will do well if they study closely paragraph 20 of section 42, and determine their own action in each case in which they are called upon to act in the light of their understanding of what is required of them as ministers for Christ.

Many are so strongly imbued with the idea of right of human conscience that they conclude that if whatever may be required of them by the rules of church associations or what may be recognized as a proper construction of law by the great majority is against their own conclusion, they are in honor bound to follow the dictates of their conscience, whatever may be the issue thereof. The church may not have the right to enforce adherence and obedience to its mandates in such cases where the right of individual conscience is pleaded in extenuation or defense of their refusal to abide by the rule. And it is certain that no one is authorized by prerogative to dictate in such cases. It is possible that the idea of the right of individual conscience may be strained and a mistaken notion of conscientious scruple permitted to warp and override the judgment, and this from causes that may prejudice the individual. Members of any association which may have rules of faith and practice by which its membership are to be governed must certainly have the right to expect that the official members of the association shall conform to the rule, and where those rules are the result of a conjoint action of the membership by a system of consideration and determination as to the correctness and applicability of the rules to which allegiance is expected and required are formulated and adopted, no one is justified in refusing credence and acceptance of the rules so formulated and formally expressed. The association certainly has a justifiable right to expect its members to observe its own rules. It is possible, however, that the limitations of human thought and actions, rules formulated upon given law might be erroneous, and if so they should be found to be thus erroneous there might be justifiable objection to them. But until this objection is found to be correct the rule ought to apply.

The matter is left open now to the exercise of the judgment and discretion of the eldership, and each member of the ministry, if he chooses so to do, may absolutely refuse to perform the marriage ceremony between those who may present themselves for the performance of the ceremony of marriage, if he feels led so to do, and he be blameless for so doing. Those who upon the examination of cases coming before them in which the performance of the ceremony of marriage is required, may determine or be satisfied the particular case does not come within the prohibition of paragraph 20, section 42, and the governing clauses in Matthew 19 and Mark 10, may elect to perform the ceremony and be subject to after inquiry if such inquiry should be deemed advisable, as each and every case must be determined upon its own merits, as it seems impracticable to make any general rule which will cover every particular case.

A new feature was introduced at the conference. By the request of several and at his own suggestion the Bishop delivered a rather exhaustive discourse upon the subject of equality, in the course of which it appeared that the minds of many of his hearers were disabused of some notions which had been held which have prevented a working understanding of the law, and the procedure of the Bishopric. This was followed by what was denominated a round table, a meeting in which the Bishop gave answer to written questions, as well as some oral ones, upon topics connected with the administration of the law under the general Bishopric. These questions were necessarily suggestive and the answers thereto covered a wide range and were in the main quite satisfactory, and it is believed that a much better understanding was established between the Bishop and those who heard him. It certainly was quite commendable as an effort, and we believe will be productive of good. It showed at least that the Bishop was familiar with what had been written upon the subject, and the Saints will do well to remember that one of the effective answers made by the Savior to the adversary was the simple expression, "It is written."

Provision was made for a small book of instruction in court procedure to be accompanied by a number of blank forms covering the entire procedure from a complaint to an appeal which it is hoped will be productive of unity of procedure and better results.

Resolutions were introduced with a view to bring about a condition of Zionie equality in temporalities which elicited considerable discussion, but without any definite results so far as action was concerned. The difficulty seems to be in an agreement as to whom the responsibility is left to interpret and apply the law. It must be clear to every one that any law which is to be carried into effect must have application, and in order that this application may be effected, there must be some one or more whose duty it is to interpret the law.

In the civil law of the land courts are provided ranging from justice's court to the supreme court in which there is vested power to determine upon questions of law, make interpretation thereof, and determine decisions where cases occur under the law of the land. It is a fair presumption that in the affairs of the church association there should be authority placed somewhere for a rendition or interpretation upon every clause of applicable law. It seems difficult to place this authority, or there is a failure from some cause which perhaps we are not authorized to state to accept the rendition of law by those who seem to be charged with the duty of carrying the laws into effect. It is to be hoped that this difficulty is but seeming, and that ere long there may be such an adjustment that interminable discussion may be avoided. In the meantime as touching temporalities, the language of paragraph 10, of section 126, Doctrine and Covenants, should be permitted to prevail as follows:

"The application of the law as stated by the Bishopric should be acceded to." If in this application wrong should be the result, there is a remedy which may be applied, and should be. No one is necessarily free to disregard the proper application of remedial procedure against wrong-doing. Unfair and unjust criticism and opposition to the ministration of the Bishopric can never remedy any wrong which may exist, and it certainly should have been found out by this time that continued and caviling attacks upon the Bishop in an endeavor to force him and his associates to follow the interpretation of extremists is productive of nothing but a preventing of carrying out the law in any form. Too many minds are busy, each striving to enforce his own application and understanding of the law, resulting in the confusing of those who are willing to become subject to the law as interpreted by the Bishop, and to be helpful in the financial affairs of the church. The conservative element among the members can not justly be made to accede to the conclusions of the extreme and violent element.

Stiff in opinion; always in the wrong.—Dryden.

SPIRIT MEDIUM FAKIRS.

The spirit rapping development in the United States began in Rochester, New York, in 1848, with a family known as the Fox girls. Spirit rappings and what were known as dark seances were held, guitars played, bells rung, and other phenomena produced, as it was claimed, by spirits, together with appeals made through mediums to what were known as departed spirits, spread rapidly all over the country and thence to other countries as well. The first developments in Hancock County, Illinois, were made at Carthage, at Basco, we believe, and in Senora Township, two and a half miles east of Nauvoo. We were acquainted with this latter movement. It originated in the family of a farmer named Chadsey, his elder daughter being the medium. It continued for quite a time and we had an opportunity of watching its development from the so-called spirit rapping and table tipping to the writing stage. The fame of this medium and the seances held by her spread quite rapidly, and in company with many visitors who came to Nauvoo for the purpose of investigating this phenomena, we visited at the place where the seances were held and from there saw its outcroppings in other parts in the western part of the county. Having a good opportunity in company with a man by the name of James Richardson, who was a near neighbor, we gave the manifestation just as fair an investigation as it was possible under the circumstances to do. We witnessed the exhibition of powers which we could not locate and for which we could find no explanation. But notwithstanding this fact, we were unable to discover any mental, moral, or spiritual good coming through the movement. During the time from 1850 to 1855 we were able to discover that a great many of the alleged manifestations, especially the communications made in writing, were of no practical benefit to anybody, and many of them were below ordinary intelligence and, moreover, quite contemptible. Many were absolutely false in fact. We thought at the time, as we think now, that there was some sort of psychological rapport between the mind of the inquirer and the medium through which it was possible for an answer more or less relevant to be made. We discovered further that the person seeking to investigate, who would by force of will-power hold his thoughts in reference to the questions asked in absolute abeyance, the response was vacillating and very uncertain. We had an opportunity to test it once for all by receiving a written communication, purporting to come from the spirit of an old-time friend whose handwriting was absolutely capable of being identified by comparison with that already in our possession in letters from the man himself. The purport of the communication was that the man had died of cholera some time before the communication was given, leaving his family at the place where we knew his residence had been. We wrote to the purported widow of the man, directing it to the city where we knew his residence had been, and in less than a month's time we had a letter from a man who would be the reported dead man's brother-in-law, stating that his brother-in-law had left the city some two months before that time, en route for Salt Lake City, Utah. And at the expiration of two months from the date of our letter to him we received a letter from him dated at Fort Leavenworth, and stating that he was well and hearty, and had not been sick. This decided us that the system so fraught with falsity and deception, so replete with imposition both by those who had faith in the movement and practiced it upon the credulity of the people through a system of deception, was of no practical benefit to us, and so we lost interest in further inquiry in regard to it.

Subsequently to this we removed to Plano, Illinois, and there came in contact with a number of spiritualists, some of whom were quite intelligent and seemed to be well grounded in the philosophy. One of these, a man by the name of Durbin, a tailor, became very enthusiastic, and I used to converse with him frequently. Not long after, he removed to Sandwich, still pursuing his trade. I met him occasionally and at each recurrence of our meeting I would inquire of his progress. Meeting him one day in the street I noticed that he had an air of somber dejection manifest in his countenance and his attitude. I asked him what was the matter with him; if he had been sick. He told me that he had not, but that he was sorely tried and disgusted. I asked him if it was in relation to spiritism and he said that it was; that he had lost all faith in dark seances and he had little or no confidence in any of the manifestations.

Mr. Durbin then told me that he had for some little time been paying attention to the seances held by different mediums at different places, had spent a good deal of time and considerable money in attending them, and to his satisfaction he had proved that they were frauds; that so far as they were concerned he was again at sea. I then asked him what conclusion he had come to about the other manifestations, those which were delivered through mediums in writing, etc. He said to me then, "I tell you, Elder, there's not more than one in two hundred of them that is genuine, and not one in twenty that is of any practical value to anybody." He says, "I am done with them." I then said to him, "Friend Durbin, why that's a fearful condition; that if in the faith I was a participator in, not one in two hundred was genuine or of any practical value, I would stop right where I am and wouldn't preach another sermon." He said, "Well, Elder, I can't help it; it's the conclusion I am forced to come to," and he said it in sadness.

We had another friend living at Sandwich at the time, Mr. Charles Nicholson, the father of the late Bro. D. F. Nicholson, the husband of Bro. W. W. Blair's daughter Minnie. Mr. Nicholson was engaged in a kind of trade in which he bought books and sold them, also canvassing for certain works. He was a kind of bibliomaniac, that is, he was a lover of books, and wherever he went he was ranging the libraries and the book-stores for odd works and books of value, ancient and modern. Whenever he secured anything that he thought was allied with our religious topics and that we would prize, he used to give us at the Herald Office the privilege of the first bid. It was from him that we bought the copy of the "Breeches Bible," an edition in which the story of the garden is told in reference to Adam and Eve making garments for themselves. The statement in this version is, "And when they found they were naked they sewed fig leaves together and made for themselves breeches." The book was lost with the rest in our unfortunate fire in Lamoni. He also had studied the phenomena of spiritism for a good while and very closely, and had at considerable expense attended the seances of certain celebrated mediums, going to different places, among the rest, two men who for a while operated in Chicago. The name of one of these was Bastian. He spent several days with others attending seances held by these men, and becoming satisfied that their efforts were a fraud he met the men on the street the next day after the last seance he had attended and publicly accused them and denounced them. Soon after they were exposed their fraudulent seances stopped. We were at the time exchanging the HERALD with the Physiological Journal published at Chicago by Spiritist Jones and others, and as we had no care to file them we used to pigeonhole them for Mr. Nicholson, who would get them when he called on us from time to time. When he returned from Chicago after his episode with Bastian and his coworker, he came in looking very solemn and said to us, "I want you to stop my paper." We were quite surprised, for he was not taking the HERALD, and I so told him. Still he said, "I want you to stop my paper. I don't want it any longer. I am done with the whole thing." And saying this he glanced at the place where we kept the Physiological Journal and we then understood what he meant. He then related the history of his visiting the different mediums, closing with the Chicago episode, and saying that he was satisfied there was no good in it and he was done with it.

Craving the pardon of the readers of the HERALD we introduce the following from the Salt Lake Tribune of February 4, venturing to give this advice: Spiritism asks its devotees first of all to put themselves in a receptive condition and to become passive and let whatever spirit may be seeking to enter their being to take possession, thus placing themselves at the disposition of any spirit, good, bad, or indifferent, that may be seeking a covert in a human tabernacle to answer its own purposes. The Spirit of God, while it asks its devotees to be in a receptive condition does not ask them to divest themselves of their identity or lose control of their individuality, as they are warned that they will be held to strict accountability for the uses to which their tabernacles are put by the spirits which may enter into them; therefore, each spirit must take cognizance of its own body, and will be held to the strictest accountability for suffering an evil, malicious, or ill-advised spirit to enter and use the tabernacle appointed unto itself. Remember the scriptural injunction, "To whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey." Also, read the statement where it is related that an evil spirit if allowed to enter in where a house had been swept and garnished, the condition of the individual is ten times worse than at the first. Preserve your bodies in charge of their own spirits, subject only to obedience to the will of God, who wisely seeks your own good by its impression, visitations, and control.

"Professional mediums and fakirs, from the Witch of Endor down," was the subject of Bishop F. S. Spalding's address to the young women at the Young Women's Christian Association home Monday evening. After remarking that he had been a student of clairvoyant mysticism for a number of years, Bishop Spalding said he had not yet discovered a plausible explanation for the phenomena, and that while he was confident there existed with some persons a super-normal mediumistic power, he thought that ninety-nine per cent of all so called mediums were humbugs.

"There is no doubt but that many of the mediums, especially women, really believe in their own power. Students in psychological research long ago discovered there was some foundation for belief in mediumistic powers, but though a psychological society, composed of scientific men, both in America and England, has been investigating the subject for the past twenty-five years, it has been unable to discover exactly upon what principle the phenomena were based."

Bishop Spalding introduced the Witch of Endor, before whom King Saul, distressed and at his wits' end, appeared and commanded that she call forth the spirit of Samuel that he might have advice from the aged prophet, to show that in ancient biblical times the manner of "readings" given by mediums was identical with that of the present day. He interpolated the explanation that the woman at Endor was called a witch because no one in her country was able to explain her "trances," except through witchcraft.

"The Witch of Endor," said the bishop, "at the command of the king went into a trance just as modern trance mediums do. She explained that she was able to see things vaguely, which is an explanation made by every clairvoyant when about to describe what she sees. She described Samuel as an old man coming forth with a robe about his shoulders, and the message she gave Saul as coming from him was the same denunciatory reproof as Saul was accustomed to receive during Samuel's lifetime.

"In other words, Saul received from the lips of the woman the same thoughts that were already in his mind. There was nothing new in the description of Samuel's appearance, nothing new in the spirit message he sent the king. It is possible that the woman, having put to sleep her conscious mind, was able, through her sub-conscious mind, a possession which psychologists accredit every person, to read the thoughts of Saul, which she merely repeated to him.

"It is not uncommon for mediums to tell us something we already know, and we think it wonderful. There may be more in telepathy than we understand, and to a large extent I think clairvoyant powers may be explained by that."

Regarding predictions of the future, Bishop Spalding read from an article on the subject of Professor Scripture, professor of psychology at Yale. Professor Scripture ignored the possibility of any one's ability to accurately tell of coming events, by saying that he would make any one who could predict the rise and fall of market prices a millionaire over night, and that any one who could describe transpiring events in another part of the world would never have to work for a living.

"I believe that ninety-nine per cent of so-called mediums are fakirs, just sharp-witted tricksters who are able to live off of the public by their deceptions. Many of them realize they have some strange power which they can't themselves explain, but the most of them take pains to turn it into a commercial advantage."—Salt Lake Tribune, February 4, 1908.

REMISSION OF SINS RETAINED.

Some little speculation is had among the Saints as to the continued condition of a person obedient to the law of the gospel after baptism. The philosophy of the matter is briefly this, that when a person is baptized into the church and has received the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, he has complied with the law of the gospel adoption, his sins are remitted unto him. If he retains his integrity of purpose, remains in obedience to the requirements of the law of Christ as a member of his body, he retains from day to day that remission of sins; and until he commits some act by which he is made a transgressor against the law and loses his identification with the church, and the presence of the Spirit, he is not a loser of the continued remission of his sin. For such the sacrament is provided as a means of a retention of remission of sins; being the Lord's supper, those who partake of it worthily receive a continuation of the Spirit of the Master and eat at his table and are sustained by such partaking. The sacrament is not instituted as an ordinance intended for the remission of sins, but it is an open confession before the church by the member that he remembers the Master and is willing to keep his commandments, that his Spirit may continue with him, and in such sense it is a help and an ordinance by which the remission of sins is continued unto the disciple.

A person being guilty of wrong-doing, unless it is of such a marked character as to warrant a proceeding by the church authorities, is entitled to make a confession to the Lord and receive forgiveness through the intercession of Jesus Christ the Righteous, who is just to forgive our sins, as stated by the Apostle Paul; and should a person transgress and feel the necessity therefor, he may confess to the church and receive forgiveness therefrom.

The sacrament may be administered by the officers of the church in the church building owned by the Saints, in a hall which they may use as a church building, or any other place of which due notice of the time and place is given to the Saints, or any provisions made by the branch or the church. There are no official limits of a branch provided for in the church rules. It depends upon conditions under which the branch exists and the place where, whether it is in a sparsely settled country or in a city.

The baptism of the water precedes the baptism of the Spirit, and it is difficult to determine just when a person is baptized of the Spirit, but whosoever receives of the manifestation of the Spirit mentioned in the twelfth chapter of Corinthians, has received of the Spirit as provided in the gospel rule.

We think this is sufficient to answer any question upon these topics that may be necessary to reply to.

VIVISECTION AS PRACTICED IN CANADA.

Some time ago Elder R. C. Russell was holding meetings in Bothwell, Ontario. He wrote an article for the Bothwell Times. In the same column, immediately following his article, appeared the following notice:

MR. EDITOR: I was presented with a card inviting me to attend certain meetings and question the speaker. The Devil always likes to get into an argument that he may thereby get more fully established in the hearts of the people. James says, "If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God," not of Elder Russell and not for the sake of argument. The Devil has his followers and so has Joe Smith. We know enough about the Devil without inquiring from his followers, and we know sufficient about Joe Smith without inquiring from Elder Russell. I trust our people will be wise enough to absent themselves from the meetings advertised.

REV. W. J. ASHTON.

Elder Russell came back in the next number of the Times with a reply that was probably justifiably caustic. We quote:

TO REVEREND ASHTON: Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, Romans 1: 1, said, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thessalonians 5: 21.

W. J. Ashton, a servant of ? ? ? ?, called by ? ?, $, $, to be a reverend ? (will a man rob God?, Malachi 3: 8; see Psalm 111: 9 reverend,) said to the people of Bothwell, "I trust that our people will be wise enough to absent themselves from the meetings advertised."—Bothwell Times, February 27, 1908.

I am indeed very sorry, Mr. Ashton, to see displayed by your article in last week's Times such a very unchristian, malicious, and slanderous spirit. I assure you I would expect more gentlemanly treatment at the hands of an avowed infidel, let alone a man who calls himself Jehovah. I really think, dear friend, that you lose influence in the minds of honest thinkers, when you put up such a scurrilous composition as your reasons why you will not attend Elder Russell's meeting and ask him questions.

You say, "The Devil always likes to get into an argument that he may thereby get more fully established in the hearts of the people." Pray where do you find such doctrine as that? It must be in your book of purchased sermons, for I assure you it is not so taught in the Bible, but the very opposite, as you may see in the following: "Ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."—Jude, 3d verse.

"Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness."—1 Thessalonians 3: 16. Now, Mr. Ashton, why do you, who claim to be called of God to turn on the light of the scriptures, instead of coming to the open platform and thus fulfill the law of Christ by putting to silence a follower of the Devil, as you say I am,—rather refuse an open meeting? Just please let me present a few reasons for your thus acting as I view your position from behind your glasses.

1. In the days of Christ, those who had false doctrines formed by man or Satan came repeatedly to ask the most crooked questions they could by their evil minds conjure up, until in their own snares they were by him so tangled up that they, according to Luke 20: 40, "Durst not ask him any questions at all." Since that, to them, sad experience, people of like weak positions are more given to throw mud than "prove all things."

2. Some time ago you were in conversation with one of the lay members of the Latter Day Saints' Church, and while arguing with him on the mode of water baptism you contended for sprinkling while he for immersion, and by your own admission afterwards to other parties you were tied up, and you also admitted that the people had a great knowledge of the Bible. Now it is but reasonable to suppose that you would conclude that when one of the lay members could tie you up, your chances to successfully tie up a traveling missionary who meets men of your caliber almost every day would be vastly too slim to attempt.

3. At the present time I believe you are drawing a salary of about eight hundred dollars and have intimated that unless your already overtaxed communicants pay you more, your God (? , $) will call you where he is more plentiful, and were you now to invite those dear people to come out to a public meeting where the Bible would be the standard of evidence, you know beyond a shadow of a doubt that if I have any knowledge of the Bible at all, I would very easily prove to an intelligent audience that you are guilty of the very thing that the Bible says false teachers and false prophets will do in the last days, viz: preach for hire and divine for money. Then as soon as they are convinced that the Bible don't require them to pay the preacher, they will refuse any further to be imposed upon, the salary will not be forthcoming, and of course a preacher would not be supposed to labor and no god ($) to bless the (parson), so the drayman will get a job moving furniture, and the Times will have a very nice little article in announcing that the Reverend ——— got a call to (the Lord had called us to preach the gospel unto them, Acts 16: 9, 10) the town of "more dollars," and the people say, "I wonder did he get the eight hundred and seventy-five dollars?" (See 1 Timothy 3: 3.) Now, my dear friend Ashton, the people of this town are alive to the facts as above stated, and if you wish to prove to them that I am misjudging you, kindly comply with my request and come with your entire congregation, as per invitation by card, and put the Devil, as you call me, to flight; for you know that Jesus gave his ministry authority to rebuke the Devil, and he would at once have to flee. But according to your version of it the Devil is the stronger power to-day and God's servant has not only to flee (the hireling fleeth because he is a hireling, and careth not for the sheep.—John 10: 13,) but has to advertise in the public press that his congregation, who are supposed to be receiving their daily bread from heaven under the Reverend's fatherly hand are so "lean and illfavored" that they are not to be trusted away from the parson's apron string, lest they might eat of the husks dispensed by the "Devil's servant," will be wise enough to absent themselves from the meetings. Oh, how weak your position is, Reverend. You say, "If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God, not of Elder Russell." Now, friend Ashton, if you were to ask Elder Russell he might give you an answer because he has a body, parts, and passions, but according to your Discipline, section 1, paragraph 1, your God has no body, nor parts. How then, dear friend, could he give wisdom? for there is an established axiom which says "From nothing, nothing can come." As you preach about this God you say he has ceased to give visions, dreams, revelations, and signs following the true believer, Christ said he would give them. (See Mark 16: 15-20.)

Now, friend Ashton, as God is unchangeable and no respecter of persons, you know that if there can to-day be found a congregation of real true believers, as existed in the days of the apostles, they shall receive those God-promised blessings, as in days of yore. Now that is the doctrine I preach; and if you are sincere in your statements as to how much you know about "Joe Smith," (would it not be more gentlemanly to call him by his Christian name, Joseph. Would you not think Elder Russell was very ill-mannered if, in referring to the founder of your church, he were to try to belittle him by calling him Jack Wesley?) you know that I preach that doctrine, and you also know that we as a congregation do enjoy them. And I am constrained to believe and openly confess that if you were really operated on by the Spirit of the God of heaven instead of getting gain in $s and popularity in the eyes of the people, you would be concerned enough about my soul (for you must consider that I am in a lost condition as you say I am a follower of the Devil) to come to my meeting and put me right. What would Christ do? "The servant is not greater than his Master."

And again, dear friend, how can you harmonize your statements to one of our people in this country wherein you said, "You did not know anything about our church and its doctrines, therefore could not say anything about them," and your most numerous statements of slander and ridicule in this town and country and your "know all" statement in the Times.

By your slap at "Joe" Smith you would lead the public to believe that their parson had a wonderful fund of knowledge in reserve relative to the desperate character of the Devil and "Joe" Smith. Now I am not looking for your wonderful store of satanic information, but this I will say, if you can produce one court record of any country to prove that Joseph Smith, who founded the Latter Day Saint Church, ever committed a crime, I will make you a present of five hundred dollars in gold the very moment you come into my meeting, and before the public read your evidence bearing the seal of the court from which it came. This is a good chance for you to make some money if your recent article is not a bluff which you try to ring in as a fact. Your future actions will try your honesty.

Now, my dear friend Ashton, there are in this town and vicinity a number of good, honorable citizens who are members of the Latter Day Saint Church, and you in the public press openly call them followers of the Devil! You, therefore, to them and the public in general, owe a recantation of your public slander. I think, dear sir, if you are wise to your own interests, you will not attempt any more slander and ridicule, but will, in a nice Christian spirit, present some Bible proofs to refute my doctrines if you can, and thus feed the minds of an intelligent, inquiring people, who do not applaud you for the malicious spirit you manifest in your recent article. When you reply to this please give us the production of a reasoning mind, and the public will not censure so severely, as they at present are in view of you insulting them by saying they are not intelligent enough to be trusted to listen to a speaker who may differ from them in religious opinions.

Anxiously waiting your attendance at my services, as per card, and a gentlemanly, Christian reply to the above article, I remain, One who wishes an open investigation of truth.

R. C. RUSSELL,

Of the Latter Day Saint Church.

Parable: A certain rancher had a large flock of sheep which he was feeding on fables, and a recital of what the former shepherds fed the flocks upon (Mark 16: 15-20). The sheep seeing a neighboring flock well fed on truths and a restoration of the former foods, became dissatisfied, many of them jumped the fence and could not be decoyed back again to the food where the rancher preferred wool to mutton. The unjust rancher, to retain his wool producers, hastened in a great rage to increase the height of his coral and built dead falls out of the domineering, treacherous, but decayed timbers of "I trust our people will be wise enough to absent themselves from the meetings advertised." R. C. R.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Professor R. M. Stewart, of Graceland College, and Elder D. A. Anderson have been offered positions in the Iowa State University as assistant professors. Such an offer is a well-earned recognition of merit and hard work.

Two hundred and twenty-five dead and many injured are reported as the result of tornadoes in Georgia, Alabama, and other Southern States during the past week. Twenty towns were wholly or partially destroyed.

"Low Twelve" is the title of a book written by Edward L. Ellis, and published by F. R. Niglutch, New York. The book deals with the subject of the Fraternities and makes the statement that the Indians had a knowledge of Free Masonry and in many cases befriended American soldiers who were Masons. Where they got their knowledge is not stated.

It is a shame for a man to desire honor only because of his noble progenitors, and not to deserve it by his own virtue.—Chrysostom.

Mere family never made a man great.—Thought and deed, not pedigree, are the passports to enduring fame.—Skobelev.

When a nation gives birth to a man who is able to produce a great thought, another is born who is able to understand and admire it.—Joubert.

Elders' Note-Book

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARDS THE MINISTRY AND MEMBERS OF OTHER CHURCHES.

Love them. Pray for them. Be frank with them. Command their respect. Set a pace for them. Disarm their opposition. Greet them as friends. Credit them with honesty. Ours is a work of education. Example is more effective than precept. Affirm your position rather than assail theirs. If we have the truth we can demonstrate it. Do not credit them with ulterior motives. Do not invite their ill will by mental suggestion. Kindness is far more effective than abuse. Do not call our work a warfare, unless you qualify it. Ours is a message of love; the warfare should be more within than without.

On entering a town, extend a cordial invitation to the minister as well as his flock to attend your service. "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Concede that it is possible for them to honestly believe what to you is absurd. Do not charge the minister with preaching for hire; for, with few exceptions, most ministers are poorly paid.

Place yourself where they are; look at things as they look at them; proceed to reason yourself from their position to your own.

We are sent out to save souls, not to damn them. It is not enough to tell the story, we must manifest the Spirit of Christ in the telling, being filled with a yearning solicitude for their souls' welfare.

We are sent out to win souls to Christ, rather than to make church members. Church membership is only incidental, a means to an end; the saving of souls a finale, a successful culmination.

Do not carry a chip on your shoulder, strutting around and defying some one to knock it off. Preach Christ. Hold HIM up before the people. All other personalities, however good, are simply echoes; nothing more, and scarcely that.

Affirm your position, rather than negate theirs. Ridicule is not argument. It indicates an ignorant and intolerant character. Assumption is not argument; assertion is not proof. A debate is generally the longest way around to a given and desired point.

This article by request contains eight hundred words—three hundred and fifty are herewith presented; the reader, by courtesy, will be allowed to supply the balance.

Very truly yours,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

1307 West Forty-fifth Street, LOS ANGELES, California.

Great minds had rather deserve contemporaneous applause without obtaining it, than obtain without deserving it. If it follow them it is well, but they will not deviate to follow it.—Colton.

Original Articles

A FEW THOUGHTS ON TITHING.

Tithing, to my mind, is one of the subjects first to be considered, after we become members of the church of Latter Day Saints.

1. Because it teaches God's way of caring for the poor and the needy.

2. It is the means God has instituted for the support of the families of those who preach the gospel.

3. For the purchasing of lands for the Saints to dwell on,—in the hour of his judgments a place of safety from destruction, and from the desolations that shall come upon the earth in the last days.

4. To bring about an equality to all his people, that there shall be no poor among them; also to banish all selfishness from us, which at the present time is very detrimental to the progress of the work; and to make better men and women of us, which is necessary in order to bring about the redemption of Zion, for which we are all looking. And I am of the opinion that we have been lying too long upon our oars; for as early as 1861, the Lord spoke through his servant to the church that in order to "carry on the promulgation of the gospel, and as a means of fulfilling the law, the twelve will take measures in connection with the bishop, to execute the law of tithing; and let them before God see to it, that the temporal means so obtained is truly used for the purposes of the church, and not as a weapon of power in the hands of one man for the oppression of others, or for the purposes of self-aggrandizement by any one, be he whomsoever he may be. As I live, saith the Lord, in the manner ye execute this matter, so shall ye be judged in the day of judgment."

Note the Twelve and the Bishop were to take measures to execute the law of tithing, to bring it in force among the Saints, to perform his great work, which gives us to understand that this work can not be carried on without the tithing from the Saints. Did the Twelve and the Bishop take these measures? If they have done so, they are free in that respect, and the Saints who will not comply with the law will be the sufferers. So let us see to it that we do our part as God has commanded. For, as Samuel said to Saul, "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice." And we as a people will realize it when too late, when the judgments spread destruction, with no place of safety to flee to. We may wish that we had not been such dull scholars. Zion is to be a place of safety, a city of refuge. So let us see that our city of refuge is built, by first sending our treasures to the Bishop or his agents, or to Zion.

Too many of the Saints think that all they have to do it to get up and go, without any preparation on their part. For such there is disappointment. First comply with the law, by paying the tithes; afterwards go up to the land of Zion.

Our heavenly Father wishes to bless his Saints abundantly, both spiritually and temporally; and he will do so if we keep his commandments. For this reason was the gospel restored with power and authority to administer in its ordinances; and one of the commandments is tithing. For we can read of it away back in Genesis, in the patriarchal age. We might review some of these references. Genesis 14: 15, 19, Inspired Translation: "And he [Abraham] brought back Lot, his brother's son, and all his goods, and the women also, and the people. . . . And Abram gave him [Melchisedec] tithes of all he had taken."

It is evident from reading the above scripture that Abraham was not ignorant of the law of tithing, and of the necessity of paying tithing to Melchisedec, who was priest, or in other words, high priest of the Most High. "And he lifted up his voice, and he blessed Abram, being the high priest and the keeper of the storehouse of God."—Verse 37.

You see he was keeper of God's storehouse; a great favor conferred upon man, for God to trust man with the true riches of heaven. Let us read the thirty-eighth verse, a very important part that we should notice: "him whom God had appointed to receive tithes for the poor."

So if God made provision as early in the ages as that for the poor of his church, has God changed? Malachi tells us: "For I am God, I change not." Now, since God is unchangeable, and there are poor in his church to-day, would it not be reasonable to suppose that God would make the same provision to-day that the poor and the needy ones shall be cared for? I think so.

We read in Proverbs 3: 9: "Honor God with thy substance, and with the first-fruits of thine increase." The definition of the word substance, as given by Webster, is, "Being; essential part; matter; body; goods; property." This not only means a tenth part; but a whole consecration of ourselves to God. And we can not do it unless we obey his commandments. Evidently tithing is included also.

I have heard some Saints talk like this: "Well, I don't pay tithes directly to the Bishop, or his authorized agents; but I spend some of my time preaching, and bear my own expenses, if I don't receive enough from individuals by the way; and I don't call on the Bishop or draw from the church funds to defray my expenses. This I consider equal to paying tithing."

If that is good for one person it will answer for all, and where will the tithes and offerings come from? How will the Bishop fill his office and calling; and, again, what need is there of this high priest to have charge of the storehouse of God? It is similar to the sectarian idea, any person who feels like preaching, go and do it; and if not, let it alone. God is a God of order, and his people must observe law and order. Did not Abraham hold the priesthood? We have every reason to believe that he did. He understood the law of tithing, and that it was his duty to comply with it; and he paid tithes to this high priest, of the goods that he brought back, and the tithing was placed in the hands of Melchisedec, who was keeper of the storehouse of the Lord, before it was counted as tithing. And Abraham was blessed, and not until then. "If ye love me, keep my commandments," says Jesus.

Let me call your attention to Malachi 3: 10. The prophet here, under the influence of the Spirit of God, speaks as follows: "Bring ye all the tithes into [where?] the storehouse." What for? "That there may be meat in mine house (for the poor and needy), and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts."

This is the way for us, as Saints of latter days, to prove our own selves, as well as to prove God; to realize, here, by obedience to his commands, that he is a God of his word, and will do just as he says. These are the rules that we have to work by in this life, so as to fit us for the great millennial reign.

As I see it now, no man is a proper representative of the gospel who does not believe in, and comply with the law of tithing. John, in his first epistle, chapter 3, verse 17, says: "But whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" If we entertain a feeling within us, not to impart of our substance as God hath blessed us, instead of love there is within us hate. Love is of God; and hatred is from beneath. And we have got to get rid of all hatred, and do as we are commanded, or where God and Christ are we can not come. So it is better for us to impart of our substance while it is in our power to do it.

I am acquainted with two persons who belonged to the church, and who had talked frequently of the law of tithing, and who believed it to be right. One of them decided to obey. The other thought to wait for a time. So the first one obeyed by paying his tithing. The second one thought the first one should have helped his boys in business first, and the result was that the latter did not comply with the law of tithing, as he should have done. Neither did he give his boys the start in business that he should have done; for his business affairs commenced to fail, and other affairs in life went against him, so that he lost about all he had. And the other one, who paid his tithing, has his receipts for it, and had enough left to start his boys in business. Now there is one instance of obedience to the temporal law, and another of disobedience, in our day.

Some may say, Well, it will be time enough when I get out of debt, get a home for myself, etc. Now, if every person in the church would be of that mind, how long would it be before the gospel would be preached to the nations of the earth, and an inheritance for the Saints purchased, or, in other words, the redemption of Zion be brought about? The Lord, speaking through the Psalmist David, says, "Gather my Saints together unto me, those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Now, what sacrifice would it be if we wait until we get out of debt, etc.?

Come with me to the history of Jacob, in Genesis 28:22. The young man seemed to have an idea it was one of the first commandments with which he should comply. Read Proverbs 3:10: "So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." Again in Malachi 3:10: "if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

After a due consideration of the above portions of scripture, at what period would it be commendable for us to make the start at tithing? It is evident that when we enter the church, that as we covenant to serve God in the act of baptism, if we set to work to pay our tithing, that the blessings of our heavenly Father will be fourfold, yes an hundred fold. As the poet says:

"Awake, Saints, awake,
No time now for reposing."

Let us all awake from our slumber; and may the mist that hath hung over us so long be removed. Taking God at his word, we shall be blessed above all people. For the windows of heaven are to be opened unto us. Now, if it stands good in one way, it will be good in another. If we disobey, the windows of heaven will not be opened unto us, but will remain closed, and no temporal blessings be received. Come with me to Doctrine and Covenants 64:5. It reads as follows:

Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after to-day cometh the burning; this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, To-morrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up; for I am the Lord of hosts; and I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon. Wherefore, if ye believe me, ye will labor while it is called to-day.

This revelation was given in the year 1831. It says: It is called to-day from this time on till Christ comes, and it calls it a day of sacrifice, and a day of tithing. For whom? "My people," says the Lord: Latter Day Saints. And according to this revelation, no one is exempt from the law of tithing, neither priesthood, nor laity; and the ones holding the priesthood should be first to comply with the law, as they should be examples to the flock over which they have charge; for how can we say to our brethren, "Obey God's commands," when we are indifferent ourselves?

I remember once, while speaking on the law of tithing, the query came to me, Why preach it to others, when you have not obeyed in full? I felt the reproof keenly, and it was further shown to me at that time that the adversary taketh advantage because of disobedience, and has power over us to a certain extent, bringing doubts and fears, seeking to have us believe that the God we worship is not a God of his word; that it is a vain thing to serve God. My experience since I became a Saint convinces me that as soon as I have done my duty, God never has failed to do his part of the work. We read in Doctrine and Covenants 81:3, where the Lord speaking to his Saints says, "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." When we do not obey, just think for a moment; no promise! But, again, if we obey, we have promise of God's protection and blessing. Surely he (God) will rebuke the devourer for our sakes, and our vines and fruit-trees will not cast their fruit before their time. There is at present a standing enemy to all vegetation; and the only way for the Saints to escape is by obedience. Read the latter part of section 101, paragraph 2, Doctrine and Covenants, the preface to the revelation given to Enoch, concerning the order of the church, for the benefit of the poor:

I prepared all things, and have given them unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment.

Let us not try to beat the Lord and the church (poor and needy) out of that which rightly belongs to them, and not to us, and then expect to dwell in Zion. We can not do it. God will not be mocked.

According to the law, God only asks one tenth, and allows us to have nine tenths; and, more than that, he furnishes all in the first place, and still further opens unto us the windows of heaven, and showers blessings upon us; also promises to rebuke the devourer for our sakes.

In section 102, paragraph 2, of Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord as early as 1834, says, "and do not impart of their substance, as becometh Saints, to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom; and Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise, I can not receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be by the things which they suffer."

This revelation was given to those who were appointed to lead the people, or the first elders, so that they would be able not only to obey it themselves, but to teach others what God required at their hands. And it shows conclusively that we must suffer until we learn obedience. Then why not heed the counsel given in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, the three standard books of the church? The Book of Mormon is just as explicit on the law of tithing as is the Bible, though no reference has been made to the Book of Mormon in this article, which might have been done; and a great deal more evidence than is herewith presented could be brought from either of the three books. These three books agree as touching the law of tithes and offerings.

In conclusion, will say, May God help us to perform our duty as Saints, so that the poor and needy may be cared for, the gospel preached to the nations of the earth, Zion redeemed, and the Israel of God gathered home to enjoy the reward consequent to our faithfulness in this life.

Yours for the welfare of Zion,
SAMUEL BROWN.

* * * * *

DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS, SECTION 42.

This purported revelation of Jesus Christ, was given to the Saints at Kirtland, Ohio, in February, 1831. It is a remarkable document, whether we accept it as a revelation from God or not, and is worthy of a thorough examination.

WHY WAS IT GIVEN?

We must conclude that in everything God does, he is moved by a wise and beneficent purpose. The purpose, or purposes, must always be in harmony with the perfect and matchless character of God, else we are justified in rejecting its claims of divinity. If, therefore, this document fairly reflects the wisdom, purity, foreknowledge, love, etc., all of which enter into the character of God, so far the way is clear for its acceptance.

But to come directly to the purpose, or purposes, had in view by the Almighty when he gave this revelation to his people, we call your attention, first, to some things which had been revealed in January of the same year:

Verily I say unto you, Ye are clean but not all; and there is none else with whom I am well pleased, for all flesh is corruptible before me, and the powers of darkness prevail upon the earth, among the children of men, in the presence of all the hosts of heaven, which causeth silence to reign, and all eternity is pained, and the angels are waiting the great command to reap down the earth, to gather the tares that they may be burned; and, behold, the enemy is combined. And now I show unto you a mystery, a thing which is had in secret chambers, to bring to pass even your destruction, in process of time, and ye knew it not, but now I tell it unto you, and ye are blessed, not because of your iniquity, neither your hearts of unbelief, for verily some of you are guilty before me; but I will be merciful unto your weakness. . . . And that ye might escape the power of the enemy, and be gathered unto me a righteous people, without spot and blameless: wherefore, for this cause I gave unto you the commandment, that ye should go to the Ohio; and there I will give unto you my law; and there you shall be endowed with power from on high.—Doctrine and Covenants 38: 3, 4, 7.

At this early date, about nine months after the organization of the church, "the enemy" was seeking to bring about the destruction of God's people, by working in secret and in the dark (his, the enemy's, own chosen way); but they (the people of the church) did not know it. In this history repeated itself. But who is the "enemy" referred to? Satan, evidently, who is the enemy of God, his truth, and his people. His purpose is to destroy God's people, both in time and eternity, or, temporally as well as eternally. As usual, he found willing instruments who, wittingly and unwittingly, were ready to do his bidding.

Yes, at that early day, the little flock was in great danger! Some were not "clean" and the Lord was not pleased with them. They were practicing "iniquity," had "hearts of unbelief," and were "guilty" before God. By the plainest kind of implication, we are informed that these guilty ones were in some way connected with the work of the enemy in "secret chambers."

In paragraph 6, we have the following: "And again I say unto you, that the enemy in the secret chambers seeketh your lives." Then follows a prediction of wars, calamity, and trouble that would come upon the people, our own country not excepted, with the closing statement, "But if ye are prepared, ye shall not fear."

This shows, not only that Satan sought to destroy the people, temporally as well as eternally, but that God, on the other hand, in his own peculiar way, proposed to save his people, both in time and eternity. All this is in harmony with what has come to us in the Bible, historically, doctrinally, and prophetically.

Paragraph 5 informs us that when Christ comes he will be our king and watch over us, and we shall have no laws but his, for he is our lawgiver. These words are significant:

Wherefore, hear my voice and follow me, and ye shall be a free people. . . . Teach one another according to the office wherewith I have appointed you, and let every man esteem his brother as himself, and practice virtue and holiness before me.

We must obey the Master's voice in time, else we can not be crowned in eternity; but here, in this world, we are also required to obey the laws of the land. In eternity, when Jesus shall have come in glory, we shall be governed wholly by his laws. We must not break the laws of the land, but obey them (see Doctrine and Covenants 58:5; 95:2); but we should not make the mistake of presuming that we are to rise no higher on great moral and social questions than the law of the land requires.

From that part of paragraph 7 already quoted, we learn that they had been commanded to go to the Ohio, there to receive God's law, "escape the power of the enemy, and be gathered unto" him "a righteous people," and "be endowed with power from on high," that is, receive a special endowment of the divine Spirit.

They went to the Ohio, and there received the law, a record of which is contained in Doctrine and Covenants, section 42. Therefore, so far as revealed in section 38, the purpose of God in giving section 42, was the complete salvation of his people in time and eternity.

Before passing to additional evidence on the purpose of section 42, it is well that we should note the difference between God and Satan, in doctrine taught and methods employed. God proposed to save his people through obedience to the celestial law (the law of the gospel), as we shall presently see, and he does his work in the light. He plainly declares his purpose, and how it may be secured. Satan lurks in the dark. He purposely deceives his followers and hides from them the true purpose of his work, lest the better part of them should forsake him. What doctrine was taught his subjects in "the secret chambers," we can not, of course, tell; for, while God reveals, Satan hides up the "mystery" in the dark. However, we can reach some safe conclusions from what God has revealed.

The law of salvation, temporal and eternal, and the instruction connected with it, which God has now promised to give, as contained in Doctrine and Covenants, section 42, enjoins that which would make them a pure and righteous people, plant them safely in the New Jerusalem, and secure unto them eternal life. And as the law mentions a number of things which we are forbidden to do, and its purposes were that the Saints might escape the power of the enemy and become a righteous and pure people, etc., we are fully justified in the conclusion that the things which the law condemns are the things which were "had in secret chambers, to bring to pass" their "destruction, in process of time."

Thus far we find the purposes announced, and the work undertaken, in complete harmony with the character of God.

We now go to Kirtland, Ohio, where the Saints had been commanded to go, that they might receive God's law, and an endowment of spiritual power. On February 4, 1831, a revelation was given, known as section 41. We quote paragraphs 1, 2:

Hearken and hear, O ye my people, saith the Lord and your God, ye whom I delight to bless with the greatest blessings; ye that hear me: and ye that hear me not will I curse, that have professed my name, with the heaviest of all cursings. Hearken, O ye elders of my church whom I have called: behold, I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together to agree upon my word, and by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church, and have all things right before me. And I will be your Ruler when I come; and, behold, I come quickly; and ye shall see that my law is kept. He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you; for it is not meet that the things which belong to the children of the kingdom, should be given to them that are not worthy, or to dogs, or the pearls to be cast before swine.

From the above we draw the following conclusions:

1. They were commanded to make special preparation to receive the promised law by faith and prayer.

2. All who would receive the law, which the Lord was about to give, and obey it, would be true disciples, or Saints, and constitute the church of God in the last days, under the restored gospel; but all who should profess to believe it, and at the same time not obey it, were not his disciples, and should be cast out. No matter by what name this class of believers (?) (unbelievers) should be called, they were no more the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints than a thistle is a rose, when called by the same name.

3. The law was to be in force till Jesus Christ should come in glory, to reign over his people. Nothing else could possibly obtain in its place.

4. The elders were to see that the law was honored and obeyed.

5. The law was given that "all things" might be "right" before God. Hence, just so far as the teaching and work of the church should be in harmony with the law, things would be right; just so far as it should oppose, violate, or conflict, in any way, with the law, things would be wrong; that is, if the judgment of the Infinite One may be relied upon. Therefore, the faith and doctrine of the church is only responsible for that which is done in harmony with the law of the church. Further, the benefits of our religion must be measured by the good which comes to, and goes out from, those who live in harmony with the law.

INSTRUCTION AND LAW.

We now come to section 42, which was given about five days after section 41. It is quite a lengthy communication, consisting of eight and one half pages, divided into twenty-three paragraphs.

Paragraph 1 may be considered as the introduction, and it is important. It reads as follows:

Hearken, O ye elders of my church, who have assembled yourselves together, in my name, even Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, the Savior of the world; inasmuch as they believe on my name and keep my commandments; again I say unto you, hearken and hear and obey the law which I shall give unto you; for verily I say, As ye have assembled yourselves together according to the commandment wherewith I commanded you, and are agreed as touching this one thing, and have asked the Father in my name, even so ye shall receive.

Thus we see that the great importance of obeying the law is emphasized, not only by the strong and significant terms used, but by repetition.

In paragraphs 2 and 3, the elders are commanded to go forth and preach the gospel, "two by two," and they are instructed how to preach, that the work may be done according to the wisdom of God, and not in the wisdom of man. We are also informed that Bishop Partridge must stand in the office of his calling, and that in case he should transgress another should be appointed in his stead.

Paragraph 4 relates to authority and ordinations, and is in harmony with the teaching of the New Testament. It must be known to the church that the minister has proper authority, and has been properly ordained, else he is not to be trusted as a gospel representative of the church.

Paragraph 5 contains important instruction to "the elders, priests, and teachers of this church." They are instructed, in the form of a commandment, to teach the principles of the gospel as they have been presented to us "in the Bible and Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel." They are to observe the covenants and church articles, and teach as they shall be directed by the Spirit, and the Spirit is to be given by the prayer of faith. They are also to "speak and prophesy," as the Lord will, by the Comforter, which knows all things, and bears record of the Father and the Son.

As this paragraph comes to us in the form of a commandment, it is law (a rule of action) and binding upon the ministry of the church. However, if there is any conflict between the Bible and Book of Mormon, concerning the principles of the gospel, the commandment can not be kept, no more than a man can serve two Masters. We are not aware that any such conflict exists.

Paragraphs 6 to 16, inclusive, were spoken to the church as a whole, that is, to ministers and members, though some things, or duties, enjoined, belong to the ministry alone. The opening statement reads as follows: "And now, behold, I speak unto the church."

After this statement follows a series of commandments, numbers of which are in the form of "thou shalt" and "thou shalt not." Killing, stealing, lying, polygamy, adultery, and speaking evil of one's neighbor, which constitute the leading sins in the catalogue, are positively and emphatically condemned. Then, at the close of paragraph 7, we have this general and sweeping statement:

"Thou knowest my laws concerning these things are given in my scriptures; he that sinneth and repenteth not, shall be cast out."

The crime of killing is made very prominent and strong. "Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come." "And again, I say, thou shalt not kill; but he that killeth shall die."

That is, any one who is found guilty of killing, or murder, must pay the penalty as established by the laws of the land. A statement in paragraph 21, reads as follows:

And it shall come to pass, that if any persons among you shall kill, they shall be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness; and it shall be proven according to the laws of the land.

Marriage, with all its attendant conditions, is the greatest social question of this, or any other, age. In the past, God has thought it to be sufficiently important to require a plain revelation of his will to his people. By his own act and his own voice he established monogamy in the beginning. (See Genesis 2:18, 21-24.) All this, that man and woman might enjoy the benefits of true companionship, and that the earth might be peopled.

At the time of the flood, when wickedness was great and almost universal, God spared Noah and his three sons, giving to each one wife, and only one, that the earth might be repeopled.

In the days of Christ and Paul, the same order of marriage was sustained by the word of God. (See Matthew 19:4-6; 1 Corinthians 7:2.)

In the last days, when, as we claim, the gospel, and the true order of divine service, were again restored to man, did God say anything about marriage? If so, what did he say?

Right here, in the law given to the church, that we might have all things right before God, we have the following language:

Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and cleave unto her and none else; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit; and if he repents not, he shall be cast out.—Paragraph 7.

As collateral proof, the attention of the reader is called to Doctrine and Covenants 49:3; Jacob 2:6, in the Book of Mormon, small edition. The first reference reads as follows:

And again, I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry, is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made.

The foregoing statements are very significant in the light of the well established facts, that years after they were given, the crimes of killing, stealing, lying, and polygamy were taught by leading men, who claimed to represent the true church; and they were taught in the name of God and our holy religion! Evidently, then, the very things which this law condemns, were taught and contemplated in the work of "the secret chambers." No wonder that God said to his people, when speaking of this secret work, its purpose is "to bring to pass your destruction, in process of time, and ye knew it not, but now I tell it unto you," etc.

Paragraph 8 introduces one of the most important parts of the divine plan, namely, the law of love—love to God and love to man. In harmony with the teachings of the Bible, and consistent with the claim of a restored gospel, we are herein told how we may demonstrate to God, each other, and the world, that we are actually in possession of this love. We quote in part:

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and deed which can not be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me.

Another practical manifestation of this great principle is indicated in paragraph 12:

Thou shalt live together in love, insomuch that thou shalt weep for the loss of them that die, and more especially for those that have not hope of a glorious resurrection. And it shall come to pass that those who die in me shall not taste of death, for it shall be sweet unto them; and they that die not in me, woe unto them, for their death is bitter.

It may be asked, Why weep for those who have no hope of a glorious resurrection? What good will it do? Why weep for those who die in Christ, inasmuch as their reward is secured?

Why did Jesus weep at the grave of Lazarus? Why did he weep when contemplating the destruction of the wicked Jews? (See Luke 19: 41.) Whether our tears and sympathy will benefit the unrepentant, we are not able to say; but it is not difficult to understand that they will benefit us. Bringing ourselves in closer touch with suffering and unfortunate humanity, and with the pure and good, who have been removed from us by death, can not fail to improve our character, hence fits us for better service, and for the enjoyment of a greater degree of bliss.

The balance of this paragraph, together with paragraphs 9, 10, and 11, are mainly devoted to instruction, and to rules and commandments, pertaining to the work of consecration. They seem to have been given that the work might be done decently, orderly, safely, and altogether according to the will of God. The purposes for which the means consecrated is to be used are plainly indicated.

At the close of paragraph 10, we have this important statement: "And this I do for the salvation of my people." Another important statement occurs at the beginning of paragraph 11: "And it shall come to pass that he that sinneth and repenteth not, shall be cast out of the church," etc.

ITS DURATION AND APPLICATION.

We have already considered the duration of the law, and referred to it several times; but we wish to strengthen our position on this point, and also establish its universal application to the church.

Section 85, given nearly two years after the giving of the law, contains the following statements:

They who are not sanctified through the law which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ, must inherit another kingdom, even that of a terrestrial kingdom, or that of a telestial kingdom. For he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom, can not abide celestial glory; and he who can not abide the law of a terrestrial kingdom, can not abide terrestrial glory; he who can not abide the law of a telestial kingdom, can not abide telestial glory: therefore, he is not meet for a kingdom of glory. Therefore, he must abide a kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory.—Paragraph 5.

And again, verily I say unto you, That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willeth to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, can not be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment; therefore, they must remain filthy still.—Paragraph 8.

These plain and significant statements put the matters involved beyond the realm of doubt. The law is to be in force till the ushering in of the eternal state, through the righteous reign of the King of peace. All must obey it, who would be sanctified and, finally, crowned with celestial glory.

Let us not forget the stated purposes of the law:

1. That all things may be right before God. When any part of the law is ignored, or violated, wrong obtains, or remains where it already existed. But when the law is fully kept, "all things" are right before God.

2. The salvation of God's people, which, of course, includes the promised "escape from the power of the enemy," and the gathering of them unto God "a righteous people, without spot and blameless."

3. Church government. "And by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church," etc.

We have already learned that in securing these purposes, we are commanded to take the things which have been given to us in the scriptures (Bible and Book of Mormon) for divine law, and for the government of Christ's church; and, further, "he that doth according to these things, shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues."

"INSTRUCTION AND LAW" CONCLUDED.

The first portion of paragraph 12 reads as follows:

And again, thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands, and let all things be done in cleanliness before me. Thou shalt not be idle; for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer. And whosoever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness with herbs and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy. And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them in my name; and if they die, they shall die unto me, and if they live, they shall live unto me.

Some have claimed that the statement made about wearing apparel, found in the first sentence of this paragraph, was of local application and applied, perhaps, to some of the old sisters who lived at the time it was given, and who were, possibly, a little proud and inclined to be dissatisfied with their homespun apparel. We think this view to be dangerous and untenable, and for the following reasons:

1. The statement is a part of the law, and however difficult it may be for some of us to explain it, and however much some of us would like to see it moved out of the way, it does, nevertheless, like all other parts of the law, apply to all Saints up to the time of the righteous reign of the King of kings.

2. It occurs in the middle of a sentence, of which it is a part. The first part of the sentence says, "Thou shalt not be proud in thy heart." Does not this statement apply to-day? Do we not need it as badly as those old sisters did at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1831? If not, why not? The last part of the sentence says, "And let all things be done in cleanliness before me." Who will say that this does not apply to-day? Now, is it safe to take out the middle portion of a sentence and declare that it is one of those divine revelations which applies only to those to whom it is given, while the first and last portions have no such limitations? We think not. This part of the law, like every other part, applies to us, and it serves to show how practical and far-reaching are the provisions of this wonderful document!

The other portions quoted, condemning idleness, and containing another provision for the temporal salvation of God's people, speak for themselves. They are in complete harmony with God's wisdom, justice, and love, also with the general and specific statements of the Bible, along the lines indicated in the paragraph.

Paragraph 13 teaches that, through faith, the sick may be healed, the blind made to see, the lame to walk. "And they who have not faith to do these things, but believe in me, have power to become my sons; and inasmuch as they break not my laws, thou shalt bear their infirmities."

Paragraph 14 teaches that each one should stand in the place of his own stewardship; that we should meet our financial obligations to each other, and draw a clear line of distinction between business transactions and giving; that if we should receive more than what is needed for our support (by donation or gift, we suppose), we are required to give it to the "Lord's storehouse."

Paragraph 15 contains instruction and promises concerning the Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures, which promises were literally fulfilled through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith the Prophet, his widow, Emma Smith, after his death, and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. By the church, they were published to the church and the world.

Paragraph 16 has already been presented.

Paragraph 17 contains precious promise of divine knowledge, "if thou shalt ask," such as shall bring "joy" and "life eternal."

Paragraph 18 consists of instruction and promise. The Lord's servants were to be "sent forth to the east, and to the west, to the north, and to the south [evidently to preach the gospel]; and this in consequence of what is coming on the earth, and of secret combinations. Behold thou shalt observe all these things, and great shall be thy reward. And ye shall hereafter receive church covenants, such as shall be sufficient to establish you, both here, and in the New Jerusalem. Therefore, he that lacketh wisdom let him ask of me, and I will give him liberally, and upbraid him not."

Thus we see that all that is not actually contained in this section, by way of instruction and commandment, necessary to establish them in their scattered and gathered condition, is to be found in the "church covenants," and must, of necessity, be in perfect harmony with section 42.

Paragraph 19 relates to stewardships, and to the support of the bishop and his counselors. It shows that the priests, teachers, and members are to have their stewardships as well as the elders and high priests.

Paragraph 20 informs the church that "whatever persons among" them have put away their companions for the cause of fornication, shall not be cast out; but if the church finds "that any persons have left their companions for the sake of adultery, and they themselves are the offenders, and their companions are living, they shall be cast out from among you. And again I say unto you, that ye shall be watchful and careful, with all inquiry, that you receive none such among you if they are married, and if they are not married, they shall repent of all their sins, or ye shall not receive them."

Are we now, and have we been in the past, careful and diligent to follow the instructions and injunctions of this paragraph? Or has history repeated itself by recording our folly in trying to make the work a little more successful by lowering the standard?

In the first part of paragraph 21 we have the statement that "every person who belongeth to this church of Christ shall observe to keep all the commandments and covenants of the church."

Paragraph 22 contains additional instruction on how we should deal with those who are found guilty of the crime of adultery. In the closing portion of the paragraph our attention is again called to the laws of the land. Those who rob, steal, or lie, are not to be hidden away from the grasp of the law, but, under all circumstances, it must be honored; therefore, they are to be "delivered up unto the law of the land."

The last sentence in the paragraph is another one of those general but comprehensive statements. It leaves no room for the practice or toleration of any kind of iniquity which has not been specifically designated in previous paragraphs. It reads as follows: "If he or she do any manner of iniquity, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law, even that of God."

From what precedes and follows this section we discover that God was careful to have all things done in harmony with the laws of the land. The church was organized "agreeably to the laws of our country, by the will and commandments of God in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month which is called April."—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 1.

Six months after section 42 was given to the church, we find the following language was spoken, as recorded in the middle of paragraph 5, section 58:

Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet.

Paragraph 23 deals with personal offenses between the members of the church. It also deals with private and public offenses, and with private and public sins. It is in harmony with what is written in the New Testament, but is more specific and explicit.

CONCLUDING THOUGHTS.

In the light of the foregoing examination is there any room anywhere for the doctrine and practice of polygamy? Absolutely, there is nothing in the sacred books of the church, either teaching or permitting the unholy practice. It is contrary to both the laws of God and man. If it could be proved that Joseph Smith, the man through whom God restored the divine plan, either taught or practiced polygamy in the latter part of his life, as believed by some, it would not change the situation in the least, except to reflect dishonor and shame on one who had been chosen of God, and who had already done such a noble work in the interests of man's salvation.

The Great Teacher said, "Have faith in God." He did not intend that our faith should be injured or destroyed by the teaching or practice of any man, without regard to position or prerogative. Can the work of any man change the truth of God? Who is it that has faith in God?

The editor of the Ensign told us, a short time ago, that "we should follow the teachings of no man only as he follows Christ, for he alone is the perfect pattern." We have believed this in the past, we believe it now. The Editor of the HERALD, and president of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, teaches the same sentiment. Over his own signature we find the following words:

"As if that should stop all controversy. We have not so learned Christ. His commands can not be set aside by the doings of any prophet, or the sayings of 'no prophet, nor the son of a prophet,' Brigham Young."

This is evidently the correct position to assume, and should be made the material and leading point in the controversy. Polygamy is not, never has been, and never can be any part of the faith and doctrine of the church. Whether Joseph Smith ever taught or practiced it, to any extent, is a secondary matter.

In 1852, and afterwards, the Brigamite church taught and practiced the doctrine of polygamy, and as suitable concomittants, they also taught "blood-atonement," (killing some men in order to save them) and, under certain conditions, lying and stealing were justified. How did it come that the God of the Saints foresaw these terrible conditions that would obtain in the name of the church, and as early as 1831 made ample provision against them? Does it not prove that he is more than a human god?

By these provisions, for which there seemed to be little or no demand, at the time they were given, so far as appearances would indicate, we are able to defend anywhere, and at any time, the restored gospel, as it was given to the world through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith.

In view of what we have herein presented, (and there is much more in reserve) by way of instruction, commandment, and promise, we solemnly ask: What more was, or is, necessary to make the work a success? Who will tell us? With no disposition to ridicule or denounce, we ask, Was it Masonry? Is it Masonry? Whatever may be thought, by some, of this ancient, secret order, one thing is plain, namely, that there is no place for it in the divine economy, as restored in the last days, to help secure the favor and blessings of God, either for time or eternity.

I do not say that Joseph Smith, the Seer, taught the Saints to go into Masonry as a means of protection and help in the accomplishment of the work; but if he did, it was equivalent, in a large degree, to a repudiation of the revelations he had received, and which had been indorsed by the church. It would have been sinful for the prophet to give such counsel as this, and it would have been sinful for the people of the church to receive it. But if it be true, we can not wonder that the Saints were scattered and peeled.

Is it not a fact that the sacred books of the church condemn all "secret combinations" and "works of darkness"? (See 2 Nephi 14, 15.)

It is true that the Saints were commanded to hearken unto the voice of the Lord, and the voice of his servants whom he had appointed to lead his people (see Doctrine and Covenants 107:13), but were they to hearken to the voice of his servants just the same as the voice of the Lord? That is, unconditionally obey their counsel and advice? If so, do we not trust in man just the same as we trust in God? In this case, the words of the prophet would apply: "Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord."—Jeremiah 17:5.

What God requires, and all that he requires, is that we should put ourselves in a position and condition to recognize the voice of the Good Shepherd, through his servants, whenever it is heard; but we must bear in mind that weak, fallible man may go wrong at any time. Suppose there is a conflict between the voice of the Lord and the voice of his servants, which is always possible; how can we obey both? Suppose, again, that the counsel given at different times, and pertaining to the same matter, conflicts with itself; how can we obey it all? To illustrate: If the Seer advised the Saints to go into Masonry, at Nauvoo, how could they obey it and at the same time obey the counsel which he gave while in Liberty jail, Missouri, in 1832?

The true position is plainly set forth in the word. There is a grave responsibility resting upon the minister, and also upon the member. The minister must teach intelligently and by the Spirit of truth; the member must hear and receive intelligently, and by the same Spirit.

And again, he that receiveth the word of truth, doth he receive it by the Spirit of truth, or some other way? if it be some other way, it be not of God: therefore, why is it that ye can not understand and know that he that receiveth the word by the Spirit of truth, receiveth it as it is preached by the Spirit of truth? Wherefore, he that preacheth and he that receiveth, understandeth one another, and both are edified and rejoice together; and that which doth edify, is not of God, and is darkness: that which is of God is light, and he that receiveth light and continueth in God, receiveth more light, and that light groweth brighter and brighter, until the perfect day.—Doctrine and Covenants 50:5, 6, a portion of each paragraph.

Thus we see that grave responsibility rests upon both parties, teacher and hearer. True faith, humility, discernment, and careful thought are essential to the success of both parties concerned; and the beauty of it is, that the more careful and prayerful the membership are, the more readily they will discern the meritorious efforts and works of those who have been called to lead the church of God. In fact, they are the only ones who are prepared to properly and fully sustain them in righteousness.

Just as soon as we assume the position that we are under obligations to accept the counsel and advice of the Prophet unconditionally, and without question, we thereby make him infallible in his official capacity, exulting (?) him to the high (?) position which was occupied by Brigham Young, and is occupied by the pope!

I have naught but good feelings toward those who assume this position, with all its dangerous committants; but I believe the sooner the position receives effective blows that will send it tottering into a grave of everlasting oblivion, the better it will be for the work! In the divine economy, there is no place found for this doctrine.

Section 42, together with the other revelations found in the Doctrine and Covenants, presents the highest and best moral and spiritual standard for the conduct of the Saints, that has ever been revealed to man! Absolutely, there is no promise of success, the enjoyment of God's Spirit, (that precious Spirit of promise) or of eternal life, made to any, except those who love God and keep his commandments.

In section 122; 6, the law contained in section 42 is once more referred to, as late as April 1894. From the statements made we are very glad to learn, once more, that the Lord has not changed his mind:

And further the Spirit saith unto you, that "with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day"; therefore, the law given to the church in section forty-two, over the meaning of some parts of which there has been so much controversy is as if it were given to-day.

Too bad that after having so much trouble with some parts of the law, the good Lord would not permit us to remove the troublesome parts!

This law, given in the wisdom of Him who loves his people and his work (thank God), enables us to successfully defend against polygamy and every other immoral and wicked thing which evil minded men have attempted to fasten on the restored church. And who has ever been left alone in making this defense, when he has trusted in God and made it because he loved the truth? How often the Spirit has burned within us like living fire, when making this defense, and we have been made to realize, as never before, the wisdom of God in revealing his law to the church, in the very terms in which it is couched, as early as February, 1831.

Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.—Matthew 4: 4.

If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8: 31, 32.

And then ye shall begin to be gathered with your families, every man according to his family, according to his circumstances, and as is appointed to him by the presidency and the bishop of the church, according to the laws and commandments, which ye have received, and which ye shall hereafter receive.—Doctrine and Covenants 48: 2.

This could not be done if any conflict should arise between the earlier and later revelations, no more than a man can serve two masters. Therefore, polygamy, and everything else which is contrary to the gospel of Christ, as set forth in the commandments given before this date (March, 1831), is for ever excluded.

But verily I say unto you, that I have decreed a decree which my people shall realize, inasmuch as they hearken from this very hour, unto the counsel which I, the Lord, their God, give unto them. Behold, they shall, for I have decreed it, begin to prevail against mine enemies from this very hour, and by hearkening to observe all the words which I, the Lord their God, shall speak unto them, they shall never cease to prevail until the kingdoms of the world are subdued under my feet; and the earth is given unto the saints, to possess it for ever and ever. But inasmuch as they keep not my commandments, and hearken not to observe all my words, the kingdoms of this world shall prevail against them, for they were set to be a light unto the world, and to be saviors of men; and inasmuch as they are not the saviors of men, they are as salt that has lost its savor, and is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden underfoot of men.—Doctrine and Covenants 100: 2.

And Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I can not receive her unto myself.—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2.

The works, and the designs, and the purposes of God, can not be frustrated, neither can they come to naught, for God doth not walk in crooked paths; neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore his paths are straight and his course is one eternal round.—Doctrine and Covenants 2: 1.

J. R. LAMBERT.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 15, 1908.

When the millions applaud you, seriously ask what harm you have done; when they censure you, what good!—Colton.

• * •

It is a sin when low things, however good in themselves, stand in the way of high things.—Rufus Ellis.

• * •

Peace is the happy, natural state of man; war, his corruption, his disgrace.—Thompson.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. T. A. Hougas, secretary, Macedonia, Pottawattamie County, Iowa; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, Treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, 630 South Crysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

We Welcome the Spring.

We welcome with pleasure the beautiful spring,
As it starts from cold winter's embrace.
Sweet, balmy breezes from southland it brings,
Soon of winter there will be not a trace.
Out in the orchard the birds are now singing,
All things seem gay; earth to new life is springing
Since spring came in cold winter's place.

The fields with new garments themselves are adorning;
The trees themselves dressing in green.
Up in the branches and down in the hollows,
Birds building their nests may be seen.
Out in the meadows the lambs are at play;
The brooklet sings gayly, and runs on its way;
For they welcome the springtime again.

Oh! beautiful spring you must soon pass away,
For summer is now on the wing;
She scatters her blossoms o'er valley and plain,
And the bees are now with us again.
Out on the hillside the cattle are lowing,
Far in the distance the sweet doves are cooing,
For they ever would welcome the spring.

BEALS, Maine.

LUCINDA J. BEAL.

Dear Sisters: Why do we not hear more frequently from the sisters who have no children or whose children are grown? Who are better fitted than they who have leisure to observe the experience of others or tell of their own experience, now that they are free from the charge of rearing the little ones? Surely not we mothers who are burdened and often seemingly overburdened with the blessed care of bearing and rearing a large family.

The woman without children has her mind free from the immediate strain and worry of child-bearing and training and has, generally speaking, ample opportunity to observe among her many friends and acquaintances the application and failure or success of new and old principles and methods of child-training. Why should she not jot down these observations for the benefit of us mothers, who are so busy with hands, heart, and brain, from sun to sun, that we have no time for theorizing; but are applying principles and working out methods without realizing it.

Or the mother who has succeeded in bringing to manhood and womanhood, through the busy and trying years of child life, those who are now among the valiant in the work of reclaiming mankind? She now has leisure to think and write of her past experiences, her successes and failures, and present them for those who have no time to study them out for themselves.

Surely they are better fitted for this task than we mothers whose strength of mind and body and heart are often overtaxed until they refuse to act by the strain of bearing and rearing a large and ever-increasing family.

Do not be afraid, sisters, that some one will criticise you because you, who have no children, write for those who have. We value your observations and past experiences.

IVY CARPENTER FISHER.

Parepa Rosa, a More Beautiful Picture Than Can Be Seen in the Hall of Fame.

Many years ago a poor widowed woman, leading a hard life of unending labor, was called on to part with the one thing dear to her—her only child. Mother and daughter had toiled together for fifteen years, and the only bit of sunshine falling into their dark lives was that shed by their loving companionship. But the girl had always been weakly. Under the heartbroken mother's eyes she faded and wasted away with consumption, and at last the day came when the wan face failed to answer with a smile the anxious, tear-blinded eyes of the mother. The poor young creature was dead.

For many months the pair had been supported by the elderly woman's sewing, and it was in the character of employer I had become acquainted with Mrs. C. and her story. By an occasional visit to the awful heights of an East Side tenement, where they lived, by a few books and some comforting words I had won the love of the dying girl. Her grateful thoughts turned in her last hours to the small number of friends she possessed, and she besought her mother to notify me of the day of the funeral and ask me to attend.

That summons reached me upon one of the wildest days preceding Christmas. A sleet that was not rain, and a rain that was not snow, came pelting from all points of the compass. I piled the glowing grates; I drew closer the curtains and shut out the gloom of the December afternoon; I turned on the gas and sat down, devoutly thankful that I had cut all connection with the wicked weather, when an installment of it burst in upon me in the shape of Parepa Rosa. She was Euphrosyne Parepa of that time, and the operatic idol of the city.

And even as we congratulated ourselves on the prospect of a delightful day together, here came the summons for me to go to the humble funeral of the poor sewing-woman's daughter. I turned the little tear-blotted note over and groaned.

"This is terrible," said I. "It's just the one errand that could take me out to-day, but I must go."

And then I told Parepa the circumstances, and speculated on the length of time I should be gone, and suggested means of amusement in my absence.

"But I shall go with you," said the great-hearted creature.

So she rewound her throat with the long white comforter, pulled on her worsted gloves, and off in the storm we went together. We climbed flight after flight of narrow, dark stairs to the top floor, where the widow dwelt in a miserable little room not more than a dozen feet square. The canvas-back hearse, peculiar to the twenty-five dollar funeral, stood in the street below, and the awful cherry-stained box, with its ruffle of glazed white muslin, stood on uncovered trestles in the center of the room above.

There was the mother, speechless in her grief, beside that box, a group of hard-working, kindly-hearted neighbors sitting about. It was useless to say the poor woman was prepared for the inevitable end; it was cold comfort to speak to her of the daughter's release from pain and suffering. The bereft creature, in her utter loneliness, was thinking of herself and the awful future, of the approaching moment when that box and its precious burden would be taken away and leave her wholly alone. So, therefore, with a sympathizing grasp of the poor, worn, bony hand, we sat silently down to "attend the funeral."

Then the minister came in—a dry man, with nothing of the tenderness of his holy calling. Icier than the day, colder than the storm, he rattled through some selected sentences from the Bible, and offered a set form of condolence to the broken-hearted mother. Then he hurriedly departed, while a hush fell on everybody gathered in the little room. Not one word had been uttered of consolation, of solemn import, or befitting the occasion. It was the emptiest, hollowest, most unsatisfactory moment I ever remember. Then Parepa arose, her cloak falling about her noble figure like mourning drapery. She stood beside that miserable cherry-stained box. She looked a moment on the wasted, ashy face, upturned toward her from within it. She laid her soft, white hand on the forehead of the dead girl, and lifted up her matchless voice in the beautiful melody—

"Angels ever bright and fair,
Take, oh, take her to thy care."

The noble voice swelled toward heaven, and if ever the choirs of paradise paused to listen to earth's music, it was when Parepa sang so gloriously beside that poor dead girl. No words can describe its effects on those gathered there. The sad mourner sank on her knees, and with clasped hands and streaming eyes the little band stood reverently about her.

No queen ever went to her grave accompanied by a grander ceremony. To this day Parepa's glorious tribute of song rings with solemn melody in my memory as the most impressive service I ever heard.—Our Dumb Animals.

Prayer Union.

Sr. Mary A. Ferguson asks all of the Saints, and the Prayer Union, to pray, on the twelfth day of May, for herself and family, that they may hear the restored gospel and obey the same.

Letter Department

BUFFALO, New York, April 7, 1908.

Editors Herald: I am feeling well in body and mind. I realize a great change in my physical condition to what I was two years ago. I hardly felt myself well enough to take the field, but I was told in the gift of prophecy that in the event that I took the field health should be given. So I took the Lord at his word, believing I should receive it if I did my duty. To my delight I received the blessing, and since that time I have tried to do the best I could at all times for the Master's cause, which is so dear to all of his Saints.

The work moves on quite well, considering the opposition, and the lack of laborers to assist in caring for the work, I having it about all to myself outside of local labor. The work in Sunderlinville, Pennsylvania, is moving on nicely. The Saints there are heart and soul in the work. Bro. M. A. Surdam being ordained a priest a little over a year ago, has the oversight of the work, and he is putting forth a good effort, and is upheld by the Saints. They have a lively Sunday-school. Old and young are alike interested in the work. One was baptized while I was there in February, and she promises to be a worker; the outlook is favorable for more to follow ere long. Prejudice is gradually giving way to gospel truths.

At Greenwood the Saints are plodding along as best they can. As there is material and membership there they should be organized into a branch. They have been on probation long enough. I think when they have stemmed the tide up to this present that a trial in an organized condition would be good for them. I think it a mistake to expect perfection before we proceed to ordain or organize. God has placed these officers and gifts for our perfecting, and while I do not indorse premature ordination, I do believe in giving men a chance as soon as the Spirit manifests it to us that it is God's will for certain ones to be ordained.

At East Pharsalia there are six Saints who meet every Sunday to worship without any priesthood or organization, and at Fulton, New York, there are a number of Saints who are doing the best they can without any priesthood or organization, having Sunday-school and prayer-meeting, with an outlook for several more entering into the church, and it is needful that labor and care should be given these places by the missionary force. If it is cared for branches would be effected and a good work done for the Master. There are other places that could be reached from these places, and a district could be organized in the western part of this State.

Bro. F. J. Updyke, of Greenwood, accompanied me to the above-named places. I appreciated his company and the Saints felt comforted by his presence and counsel along the line of tithing and offering. He seems to have this work at heart, and in time will make his mark in usefulness to the church, he being one of the pillars for the work at Greenwood, also Bishop's agent for this western part of the State.

East Syracuse, New York, has the appearance of a good work having been done, so far as Bro. Whitehead is concerned; his home being the home for some of the elders, whoever may be willing to enter into the battle for the establishment of truth.

In the different places that I have been I have been made welcome to the homes of Saints and friends, and have found them to be good and kind. I appreciate the favors conferred on me by them. Hoping that the peace and blessing of God may be with them in all their outgoings and incomings, I am,

Yours in gospel bonds,

SAMUEL BROWN.

GUILFORD, Missouri, April 11, 1908.

Editors Herald: It gives me great pleasure to be able to say I have never regretted the step I took when I entered the waters of baptism. All I regret is that I have not done as much as I might have done for the work. My desire is to do all that I can, however little that may be. I know that the Lord is pleased with us if we put forth an effort to do all that we can.

I feel that I could not get along without the HERALD.

I love to read the experiences of the older ones, who have had trials to battle with and have overcome them, as it gives me renewed strength and makes me feel thankful that we have our places where we can worship our heavenly Father in peace and happiness.

The Lord has surely been very good and merciful unto me. I will relate a little experience I have had with him. A few years back I was troubled a good deal with erysipelas, on my face and body. Finally it got so bad that I thought I could not stand it any longer; my face was a solid mass of sore, and I got medicine from a doctor to kill the poison; but instead of giving the relief sought for it only made my face the more sore. I doctored with two doctors; neither of them did much good. I began doubting that I ever would get well, and I was very much discouraged and did not feel like asking God to help me.

But one night, as I lay thinking about my condition and wondering why it should all be, a thought leaped into my mind, "Why not be administered to?" The next morning I sent for my uncle, C. C. Nelson, and T. A. Ivie to come and administer to me. They came and administered to me and I felt some better. The next day I was administered to by my grandfather and I began to improve, very slowly but steadily. I prayed earnestly that if it was God's will, I might be healed to praise and glorify his holy name. And I am thankful that the Lord did hear and answer my prayers, for now I am well once more.

Dear Saints, let us try to live aright, and let our lights shine, and do good unto others, that when we shall be called to pass beyond the river that others may be benefited by our having been in the world.

Your sister in gospel bonds,

MRS. M. E. (NELSON) SCHMIDT.

MANCHESTER, England, March 11, 1908.

Editors Herald: It is a long while since I troubled your columns with a letter. I seem very remiss in writing, especially of my own personal labors. However, I have not done much labor of late, owing to sickness and illness, the nature of which has been very trying indeed; but realize the blessing of the Lord in that, so far, I have had strength to bear up against it.

My trouble, as named by the doctor, is mucous polypi, and catarrh of the stomach, and I have had nearly four months of it up to date, and passed through two operations. I am not yet certain whether I shall pass through another operation. I want to maintain my position in the work for the work's sake; for our condition in this mission is none too grand. I would like, still, to be able to second the noble efforts of our Bro. Rushton, if I can only get back my health and strength. However, I shall do what I can. If I have to retreat to the rear, I hope some better soldier will fill up the gap, and give a bold front to the enemy. In the absence of our Bro. Rushton, I shall make an effort to hold the fort. Therefore, all matters requiring attention during the absence of the mission president, please refer to the writer, and they will receive attention forthwith.

Respectfully yours,

W. H. GREENWOOD.

127 Upper Couran Street, Harperhey.

SULLIVAN, Indiana, April 7, 1908.

Saints' Herald: I visited Bro. J. L. Tempest and wife last night, at 1425 South Tenth Street, Terre Haute, Indiana. While they are isolated from a branch, it is grand to find such noble Saints, who can stand true to the angel message. They have a noble daughter, who is a great help to her parents. She is also one of God's Saints, and stands out nobly for the cause, in spite of having only worldly people among the young for her associates.

I am told by Bro. Tempest that there are three other Saints in Terre Haute. There seems that an organization here could be expected. Bro. Tempest is a deacon. May God be with them and abide.

JOHN ZAHND.

PIOCHE, Nevada, April 8, 1908.

Dear Herald: We are staying for a short time here in Pioche, mixed up some with the Brighamite faction. Will some elder interested in Nevada find time to call upon us? There is no one of any faith preaching here. We would gladly care for an elder as long as he would stay, and do anything we could to help him get a hearing here.

BRO. AND SR. I. R. AND MILDRED MOORE.

BELVIDERE, Illinois, April 5, 1908.

Dear Herald: I receive so much good from your weekly visits that the thought comes to me that each one should tell his experience or testimony for the benefit of others. I thank God to-night that I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to all that believe and obey. We are a few scattered Saints, only four in number here, and four in Belvidere. We have our prayer-meeting every Thursday evening, at half past seven, and feel that the promise is true, that where even two or three are gathered together in His name, there he will be in their midst, and that to bless.

There is much prejudice here. Nearly all think that any form of religion, except that of the Latter Day Saints, is all right; as long as a person is honest about his belief, all roads lead to eternal life; but that is one of the biggest errors mankind has to grapple with. Once convince a person of this error, and the rest is easier to accomplish. The gospel says, Straight is the gate and narrow the way, and few there be that find it. That does not mean that any way will do.

We have an elder here occasionally to preach a few sermons, and once last spring had a sacrament-meeting, for which we are truly thankful. Ever praying for that happy time when righteousness shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea, and praying for the redemption, I remain your brother in Christ,

WM. DARMAN.

R. F. D. 3.

BOTHWELL, Ontario, April 8, 1908.

Dear Herald: As I have seen nothing in your valuable columns from this part of the Lord's vineyard, I feel that a few words would not be out of place.

We, as members of the Lone Branch, are striving in our weak way to serve God and let our light shine, and in so doing we can see the Spirit of God working with us, giving encouragement, and also increasing our numbers.

During the past year our numbers have increased by about fifty, and for this credit is due our beloved missionaries, Brn. R. C. Russell and B. St. John, and our worthy district president, Elder Leverton, in helping the branch to gather in the honest, as we believe. All are worthy additions, and many heads of families.

I ask the prayers of God's Saints in my behalf.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

JOHN C. DENT.

CHEROKEE, Iowa, April 12, 1908.

Dear Herald: I have been reading the HERALD this lovely Sabbath morning, and felt impressed to write a few lines.

We have a nice little branch here. Every one seems to be doing all he can for the cause of Christ. Bro. A. R. Crippen is doing all he can for the work in this place. He is surely one of God's servants, as he is so faithful in his work.

I can truly say I love this grand and glorious work of the Lord, and I am trying in my weakness to serve the Lord and keep his commandments. My prayer is that every Latter Day Saint may be faithful as long as life shall last.

With love to all the Saints,

MRS. N. HAYES.

NAYLOR, Missouri, April 17, 1908.

Editors Herald: I thought I would write you a few lines, as I have not seen anything from this place. We are still holding the fort. The enemy rages sometimes from without, but the spiritual condition of Nalor Branch I think is better than it was some time ago. Of course we might do better; for some of the members are a little unconcerned, or at least it seems that way to me. But some are working more earnestly than ever before, trying to do all they can to forward the work. Bro. L. M. Sucous and I go out and preach as time and opportunity permit. Last month we preached five Sundays in five different places, one place about five miles from where Bro. Edwards and Woods had their debate, and the people seem to be well pleased with the preaching. They said they could understand such sermons as we preached, because we explained our faith and proved it by the Bible. They wanted some of our tracts, but I had run out, so could not supply them. I would like to have some when I go back. I think that is a good way to get the gospel before some of the people. Just now the times are so busy, and I have run out of money with which to buy tracts, so will not order any till I get my crop laid by; then I can make a few ties and get some money for tracts. I hope this will be a successful year in the gathering of souls for God, and that God will give his Spirit in greater power.

H. V. BRAUN.

MANCHESTER, England, March 28, 1908.

Editors Herald: No doubt ere this our esteemed Bro. Rushton is amongst you. A few of us were present in the station as his train steamed into Manchester, and bade him "Godspeed" as he left for Liverpool en route for New York. His dear wife has been in very delicate health for some time, and the parting must have been severe.

Our dear Bro. Newton paid us a flying visit on his way from Exeter to Liverpool en route for General Conference, staying over night, and leaving us next morning. The old veteran seemed to be in very poor health. We were pleased to see our brother and sorry to part with him. We learned with regret that he is not likely to visit us in the British Isles again. We shall always remember with pleasure his genial presence and fatherly advice.

Trusting that all workers at the office are well, and with kindest regards to all, I remain,

Your coworker in Christ,

10 Rye Street, C upon M.

WM. R. ARMSTRONG.

MARLETTE, Michigan, April 11, 1908.

Dear Herald: We are still enjoying the blessings of our dear Master; and feel like going on to perfection. Bro. George M. Shippy has been here with us for the past few weeks. Seven more were added to our number, and many more very near the kingdom.

About a year and a half ago we had only six Saints attending our Sunday-school and prayer-meetings. One family has moved here, and now we have seventeen members. The Lord spoke through his servant, Bro. George Shippy, in the gift of tongues, calling Bro. Richard Weaver to the office of priest, and giving many encouraging words to the Saints, which greatly encourages us. We were glad Bro. Shippy was permitted to meet with us again, as he is acquainted here, and seems always to accomplish something for this good work. We are anxious that he should be sent back here another year, as the harvest is great, but the laborers few. There is a call for him to preach the gospel at Laurel, where it has never yet been preached.

Your sisters in Christ,

AVIS WESTOVER.

ROSA MESSACAR.

HOWELL, Michigan, April 16, 1908.

Editors Herald: About two weeks ago my daughter, Desde Daley, wrote a letter to your columns asking for pennies to help her in taking treatment. Since then the dear Saints have nobly responded to the call, beyond our expectations. Monday she commenced treatment with an osteopath. We hope the results may be beneficial, though he does not talk very encouragingly. We need your prayers, both for my child's recovery, if God so wills, and for the poor, sickly mother.

I write this to let all who are interested know how grateful we are, how glad she is to get your kind and loving letters, and also to say that she intends answering every one; but it will be slow, as about two a day are all she will be able to write. May God's richest blessings rest upon his church and his people, is my prayer.

MRS. A. J. DALEY.

POLLARD, Alabama, April 18, 1908.

Dear Herald: I have only been a Latter Day Saint since July last, but know of a truth it is the Church of Jesus Christ. I have four children. All the family belong to the church. I want to say to Bro. P. T. Langdon that I got a paper containing his letter about the tobacco habit. I gave it to a young man who chewed tobacco; and he said he would never use it any more. Now we all make mistakes, and if any of them would lead some young man or lady to better lives it would be well to publish them. We are not always anxious that the world should know our faults. I will write again some time and tell how I came to be a Latter Day Saint.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. A. WORLUND.

Extracts from Letters.

R. M. King, Biloxi, Mississippi: "Though we are but few in this town, we feel as though we are God's children. We have no branch here; but we have a nice place for meeting, and have now sixteen Saints. We are enjoying the blessings of our Master, and praying that the time may not be far distant when we shall have a branch raised up here. Pray for me that I may be worthy to assist in the redemption of Zion."

Iver Carstensen, Gravelswitch, Kentucky: "I have now been in the church six years, and am trying to let my light shine, that others may see the truth, for so we are commanded. Am at present isolated from the church, or branch of the church. Am trying to bring my children to the fold, but it seems hard on account of unbelief. I need the prayers of all the Saints; for I feel that I am the least among many brethren."

H. Rohrer, Boulder Creek, California: "I am one of the isolated ones. If I go to church with a horse, it takes me three days to go and come, as it is thirty miles; and if I take the cars I have to ride one hundred and seventy miles going and coming. But I am not starving, spiritually, for I have lots of good reading, and enjoy the Spirit."

Miscellaneous Department

Convention Minutes.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA.—District Sunday-school convention convened at Tulare, March 7, 1908, at 10.30 a. m. District president in charge. District treasurer reported $13.67 on hand. Reports from San Jose and Tulare were read. One Sunday-school organized at Fresno. Sunday-school at San Benito, the Jefferson, disorganized. District officers elected. Delegates to General Convention: J. C. Clapp, A. Carmichael, F. A. Smith. Next convention to meet the Friday preceding the next district conference. Evaline Carmichael.

IDAHO.—At Hagerman, Idaho, Sunday-school convention of the Idaho District association, met at the home of J. E. Condit, March 20, at 11 a. m. S. D. Condit reported a new school organized at Boise, Idaho; membership about twenty. Number of schools reporting, 4. J. H. Condit elected delegate General Convention. Bro. Lars P. Larsen released as secretary of district. Bro. H. B. Gilmore chosen to fill vacancy. Adjourned to meet at call of district superintendent. Millie Gilmore, secretary.

Bishop's Agents' Notices.

To the Saints of Eastern South Dakota; Greeting: The new conference year is now open for us with an opportunity

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filing of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

to make a good record in the service of our Master; and, as we have had your assistance in the past, we hope for it to be continued in the future. We need your confidence and prayers and financial aid to do the work assigned us.

The purchase of a tent for missionary purposes is an assured fact, if we do not fail in our promises. All those who have promised to aid in the purchase of a tent will please remit on or before the 1st of May. All those who have not given assistance, we should be glad to hear from you at once. All those that can not give now, write and let me know how much you can give on or before September 15. If any can spare a second offering it will be welcome.

Do not forget your tithes, offerings, and special consecrations for the Sanitarium.

Do not refrain from sending small amounts; they are welcome.

Do not think you will have a dollar less when you give one to God's work. It will return to you many fold in spiritual and temporal blessings.

Until further notice address me at Omaha, Nebraska, 3318 Taylor Street.

EDWARD RANNIE,

Bishop's Agent for Eastern South Dakota.

Convention Notices.

Semiannual Convention, Independence Stake Zion's Religious-Literary Society, will meet with the Second Kansas City Branch, Twenty-third and Holly Streets, Saturday and Sunday, May 16 and 17, 1908. Saturday, May 16, 10 a. m., prayer service. 11 a. m., reports of officers and committees. 2.30 p. m., election of officers; reports continued; new business. 7.30 p. m., literary program. Sunday, May 17, 11 a. m., "What part can the Religio have in the redemption of Zion," Elder M. H. Bond. 2.30 p. m., field work. 7.30 p. m., short speeches by officers elect. Secretaries of locals please send reports and credential report to the stake secretary not later than May 9, 1908. Mrs. J. C. Nunn, secretary, 1603 West Short Street, Independence, Missouri.

Died.

CHURCH.—Sr. D. Cordelia, at her brother's home, two miles north of Argyle. Services from the Argyle church. F. M. McDonald, of Montrose, preached the funeral-sermon. She was laid to rest in the Meeks Cemetery. Said sister was born in DeWitt County, Illinois, November 21, 1842. Died April 13, 1908.

Excellent Remedies.

FOR A COLD.

Procure a five-cent bottle of vaseline and have a druggist mix five cents' worth of "oil of mustard" with same. Place between cloths and apply to afflicted parts. This will not blister and has been well-tested and found to be invaluable in drawing out a cold.

FOR STRAINS AND BRUISES.

After having done an unusually hard day's work or undergone some unaccustomed strain such as is likely to leave the muscles sore and stiff, mix fifteen drops of the tincture of arnica thoroughly in one half glass of water and take one teaspoonful of the mixture every hour until relieved. This will give much quicker relief than when applied externally. It is also one of the best remedies to promote absorption, remove soreness and prevent inflammation in any wound or bruise of the soft parts of the body.

HOT WATER FOR A COUGH.

For a tight, hoarse cough where phlegm is not raised, or with difficulty, take hot water often, as hot as can be sipped. This will be found to give immediate and permanent relief.

TO RELIEVE ASTHMA.

Wet blotting paper in a strong solution of salt petre, dry it and burn a piece three inches square on a plate in the sleeping room. It will afford quick relief.

FOR TIRED NERVES.

If overworked homemakers whose nerves are "worn to frazzle edge" would acquire the habit of sitting or lying absolutely still, relaxed and motionless, for five or ten minutes twice a day, they would soon see improvement. The mind must be relaxed, worries dropped, thoughts wandering to pleasant things. You will probably try this several times before you get it right, but after a little practice you will find that it yields large returns, far surpassing the sacrifice of the time it takes. Try it, nervous ones.—From Home Department National Magazine for April.

Farmers Receive High Prices for Dairy Products.

There are approximately six thousand creameries in the United States, making a total of five hundred million pounds of butter annually. The average net price per pound paid farmers for butter fat ranged from four to five cents higher in 1907 than in 1906. This would indicate an increased return of twenty to twenty-five million dollars to the patrons for the year just passed.

An interesting thing about the creamery business is the fact that one thousand eight hundred of the six thousand creameries are coöperative plants, and the number of coöperative creameries is constantly growing. The greater number of creameries that have gone out of business for one reason or another in the past few years have been the individual creameries, owned by individuals or corporations.

Something over a thousand creameries, mainly in the Middle Northwest, have reported the results of the past year's business to the Department of Agriculture. These reports are nearly all from sections where the local creamery (either coöperative or individual) predominates. Careful estimates have been made from these reports which show that the net price paid farmers for butter fat at these creameries averaged between twenty-eight and twenty-nine cents for the year 1907. The lowest price paid was in June, when the average was between twenty-four and twenty-five cents.

These prices are true only for the local creamery, which receives its cream or milk direct from farmers' wagons, where there is neither commission to pay for buying cream nor freight or express charges for transporting it to the churning plant. Commission and freight average from two to three cents per pound. Farmers selling cream to agents who have to ship the cream to distant churning points may expect to receive two to three cents less per pound for butter fat than prices paid by local creameries.

The United States Department of Agriculture is desirous of getting additional information concerning the net returns farmers are receiving where, by reason of their location, they are obliged to sell through cream-buying agencies rather than to a local creamery.

It is requested that all farmers willing to assist the Department of Agriculture in securing information on this point will mail to the Department at their earliest convenience a report of the net price per pound received by them for butter fat for each month during 1907. If original statement slips giving price per pound can be forwarded, these will be copied and returned upon request.

Correspondence should be addressed to the Dairy Division, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, District of Columbia.

Baked Beans that are Really Baked

Baked Beans

Every bean rich, smooth, mellow, tender, mealy, with none of the sogginess that comes with steaming or boiling. Simply because they are BAKED—actually baked to a turn—baked brown and appetizing, baked as Heinz does it—the only method of cooking which insures perfect healthfulness, nutrition and flavor.

For an irresistible treat, get baked beans—Heinz Baked Beans in the Heinz Improved Tin. 10c—15c—20c.

Others of the 57 are Heinz Pure Olive Oil, Tomato Ketchup, Fruit Preserves, etc.

H. J. HEINZ CO., Pittsburgh, Pa.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE
BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid . . $30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

FARM FOR SALE

180 acres, mostly in crop, well fenced, splendid stock farm, three quarters of a mile from L. D. S. church. Immediate possession, Terms favorable.

L. J. THOMAS,
Earlham, Iowa.

18-4t

THE INDIAN MAIDEN

A Temperance Story

No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice, Mite, and Rain Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK

LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church. 112

"HEAVEN AND HELL"

BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps

PASTOR LANDEMBERGER,

Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

- No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
- No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
- No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
- No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

The Jackson County Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

- | | |
|----------------------------|-----------------------------|
| ELLIS SHORT, President. | M. H. BOND, Vice-president. |
| WM. CRICK, Vice-president. | J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier. |
| G. H. HILLIARD. | DR. J. MATHER. |
| MRS. O. H. RIGGS. | A. L. YINGLING. |
| HORACE SHELEY. | |

Very truly yours,
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

State Drawing For Irrigated Lands

Wyoming state drawing for choice irrigated homestead lands in Big Horn Basin will be held at Wiley, Big Horn County, Wyoming, eleven miles south of Cody, on May 12, 1908.

DESCRIPTION OF LANDS—This is a compact tract of 150,000 acres of excellent bench land, irrigated by the Big Horn Basin Development Company.

TERMS—$40.50 per acre. Price of land, 50 cents per acre. Price of perpetual water rights, $40.00 per acre; $5.00 per acre immediate payment, remainder spread over a period of 9 years.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED EXCURSION to Cody will be run by the Burlington Route on homeseekers' excursion date, May 5; round trip rates from Chicago $39.00, St. Louis $36.50, Omaha, Lincoln, and Kansas City $34.00. I will personally accompany this excursion to assist prospective settlers.

Write me for complete information.

D. CLEM DEEVER, General Agent,
Burlington Route Land Seekers' Information Bureau,
75 Q Building, Omaha, Neb.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

Leon Gould

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, MAY 6, 1908

NUMBER 19

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
LEON A. GOULD, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

Editorial

ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

April 18, 1908, at the close of conference.

I have tried at successive sessions of conference, before its close, to make an appropriate address, sometimes longer, sometimes shorter. Some things that I have said in the past, I desire to repeat. You will remember that some years ago it was made apparent that the church would never again be compelled to face that which disturbed and broke it up, so to speak, at the death of the Martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith; but there would be an effort made to sow dissension in our own ranks to destroy the confidence of the brethren in each other, to disturb by insinuation and the means known to such insidious detractors, and undermine the influence of those who were accounted men of repute in our midst. I am very sorry that the prediction was ever verified; but it is a fact that it has been. We had the evidence of it last evening, in the questions presented to the Bishop.

I would like to express myself sufficiently strong, without hurting anybody's æsthetical feeling. I guess I will do it in as plain language as I know how; and that is, that there is no human being so detestible to me as a tattling elder. I do not care what rank in the church he holds.

Some of us, some time ago, wanted to lay an embargo upon the prayer circle, or Prayer Union as it is called. I was approached in regard to the subject, and I made the statement to Sr. Walker that if I ever learned that these prayer unions were turned into scandal-mongering associations, then I would have something to say about it. But, bless you, they can not do nearly so much mischief as those individuals that hear these rumors and insidious implications against their brethren, both at home and in the field. Now, you know that is true, if you stop to think about it.

I give you a piece of advice, a lesson that I have tried to teach. But, unfortunately, sometimes I have been compelled to forego the full execution of it, and made to listen to complaints that men have had to make, or thought they had to make, against their coworkers, or about their coworkers. But, as a rule, I have refused to hear them. If anybody has any charge to make to you or in your presence

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

Address by President Joseph Smith - - - -	433
Church Privileges--A Question - - - -	437
Change of Address - - - -	437
Correction of J. R. Lambert's Article - - - -	437
Notes and Comments - - - -	437

THE STRAIGHT ROAD:

A Future or Unseen Life - - - -	439
---------------------------------	-----

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

Leaves from Life - - - -	441
Where Are the Lost Tribes - - - -	444

OF GENERAL INTEREST:

A Little Lay Sermon - - - -	447
-----------------------------	-----

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:

Just Once in a While - - - -	448
Governor Hanley on the Liquor Traffic - - - -	448
Letter - - - -	448
Prayer Union - - - -	449

LETTER DEPARTMENT:

Letters - - - -	449
-----------------	-----

NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - -

	453
--	-----

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:

Pastoral - - - -	453
Bishop's Notice - - - -	455
High Priests' Quorum - - - -	455

SAD NEWS [FROM] ENGLAND.

Elder W. R. Armstrong writes under date of April 23 that Elder Joseph Dewsnup passed away at his home in Manchester, at two o'clock of that day. He had been ailing for some time. His loss will be keenly felt in that mission.

Nothing sooner overthrows a weak head than opinion of authority; like too strong liquor for a frail glass.—Sir P. Sidney.

* * *

What do we live for if it is not to make life less difficult to each other?—George Eliot.

against an elder, just have him reduce it to writing and sign it. I will guarantee to you that you will not be carrying many such documents in your pocket.

I know it is frequently said by some, What I have not said to your face, I have not and will not say behind your back. I heard a man say not long since, in a certain place where he was, he never saw such a like. Men stood in admiration of others, in their presence spoke well of them, but in their absence they treated them lightly, and spoke ill, an insinuation, at all events; and this man said he did not know what to make of it. I do. Perhaps I am not so well acquainted with this style—you may call it presentation or argumentation—as some of you, for a good many hesitate to bring things to me that they will give to others, and I hear things about myself in a roundabout way that I have never heard before. They are absolutely new to me.

Now, if any of you brethren have anything against me as an individual or an officer, I want you to remember that I think far more of the man, as a man and as a coworker, if he will come right straight to me and tell me about it, quietly, and if I can not make an arrangement with him, why you can turn me over to the church. I will not plead the baby act if I am found in fault. I will accept the finding of the court and abide its decision. But if you hear stories about me, first ask these questions: If it is probable? If it is like me? Is it true? Now, these few things you can attach to the examination of everything of the kind that is presented to you? Is it probable? If a man approaches you with a story of one that you know, you know something about him, is it in accordance with your knowledge of him that the thing told is true? If it is not, do not build anything upon it, and do not tell it to anybody else. Let it pass. Life is too short to run these stories down. You know it is said that "a lie will travel from Maine to Georgia while truth is pulling on her boots." Do not let us drop into these habits.

Another extreme it is best to avoid: Being offensive, or what you may call blunt, under the garb of fairness and frankness. "A soft answer turneth away wrath. Grievous words stir up anger." There are very few of us but what are sufficiently full of temper to hastily resent anything that is said about us upon the spur of the moment. It is best not to listen too quickly, not to speak too quickly. Take things patiently.

Last year was a favorable year for the preaching of the gospel. From appearances this will be a better year than last year. This is the largest representative assembly that we have ever had, so far as its attendance of ministers and delegates may be concerned. You have not called a yea and a nay vote. Delegates have not been called upon to vote for the absentees. You have made your motions. You have heard and discussed them, and you have decided the matter here upon the conference floor. Now, let what has been done here, let that govern your thoughts. Suppose that the things that have been done have not altogether been to your liking. You are no better off in this matter than I am, and I have sometimes thought that there was a disposition to down anything that Bro. Joseph presented because of the source whence it came. I may judge that wrong. But it requires some nobility, I grant, to oppose a popular man. But resentment does not belong to men. It may belong to a lower order, but not to men.

As a consequence, what the Conference does, I, as an officer, must take notice of it. Until it is reversed, I must let it govern me as a church officer. I am not at liberty to exercise my judgment and refuse to occupy in harmony with it, simply because it does not agree with me or with my opinions. The body has spoken. If it is not of such vital import as to vitiate the word of God, which we hold to be supreme, it is a method of doing things, or our understanding of it, and I understand that individual understandings must yield to the understanding of the whole, the whole body.

I hope you will understand me now. That I do not feel at liberty to set up my private judgment, my personal judgment, against the judgment of the body, while I am a member of it, in association with it. That is the rule to govern me in my associations with my fellows, officers of the church. My time to make objection is at the time that the thing is done, not to take it with me in the field and find fault with it, not to there call it in question and refuse to be obedient. I must do it on the Conference floor in the councils where the matter arises; and courtesy, kindness, and exact justice seals my lips when I go outside. I have no business, even as a presiding officer in the church, to go into any man's district and sow insidious seeds of disrespect to him in his administration. If I know of that which is wrong and is hurtful to the work, I must deal with him, but I must let his clientage alone. I must not go into the houses, among the members, and sow the seeds of disrespect for that man. I must not repeat what I have heard that was to his disadvantage, if it is of such a nature as to injure his work, injure his reputation. I must take it in an official way, and move against him as an officer of the church. I object to any man sowing dissension in the field or in the branches or districts against me as a presiding officer, and circulating any kind of stories or anything of that kind against me that would hurt my influence and going among them. I protest against it for every member of the Presidency. I protest against it in regard to the Quorum of Twelve as individuals and as a body: against it for the Bishopric as men, as individuals, and as a body: against it for the whole Quorums of Seventy and every elder and priest that is put into the field, and high priest. I protest against it. It is unmanly. It is unchristian. "Charity thinketh no evil." That ought to reach the heart and the brain of every minister of Christ. "Charity thinketh no evil." It has no business to seek for the evil motive for a man's act when he is engaged in the same work that you are. Give him credit for the same earnestness of purpose, the same devotion of heart. We have no business to attribute evil motive to him. Charity and Christian principles and courtesy say no. We have no business to do it. It is evidence of a remarkably small mind. Brethren, you want to be large minded and large hearted men.

I feel in earnest about this. I suppose I have heard more contemptible rumors since I reached Independence here, than I heard in ten years at Lamoni. Rumor seems to have been busy. Their name almost is legion. Some of them are very new, but they are so new as to be absolutely harmless unless they be repeated and a degree of sanctity given them because they are repeated.

You go out into the field, you men that are sent abroad. Your object is to make a good impression upon the people and for the work in which you are engaged. Do not mar the good effect of what your gospel in its presentation makes upon the people, by talk that may be misconstrued. Seek to rid yourselves of everything that makes you a mark of unnecessary observation, or reflection, or persecution. I know that this text of scripture is applied, "He that will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution," and hence some men may invite persecution upon the hypothesis that they are helping to fulfill that particular passage of scripture. The words to suffer, mean to endure, humiliating as it may be. Therefore, if we are called upon to suffer persecution, let us suffer it for righteousness' sake, and not because we have invited it. I know you can understand this.

Nearly everything that will possibly try you and your faith will be aimed at you this year. Some of you will face new difficulties. We are moving against active forces outside, and we are to be compact as a body concerning those within. The watchmen upon the walls of Zion ought to be able to see eye to eye. Now that does not mean that we see all things alike. There are Bro. Kelley down there, and Bro. Wildermuth, and Bro. Metcalf; if they get up upon this platform, I am not near so high as they are; they can see where I can not see. We may all stand close together and yet see things differently from the position in which we stand, and the viewpoint from which we see things. To see eye to eye does not mean seeing all things alike.

I disagree very radically from some of the speakers that have spoken on this floor, but if I understand them and they understand me, we see as watchmen should see. Let me illustrate this:

An army of occupation spreads its lines of sentinels from Kansas City to Independence. The ground is not even. Some of it is high and some low, and some of it level. The watchmen are placed in sufficiently close proximity to see that portion of land or space that lies between the respective standing points. They traverse these beats to and fro and when they reach the end of the beat, they see their fellow watchmen over here. And over here, if the land is uneven, the watchmen must be placed closer together, but the men on the hill and the men in the valley, seeing eye to eye, can protect the army against invasion, and yet they may see widely different things and see them from different standpoints. But if they so watch over, and the spirit of the body or what the Frenchman calls esprit de corps is with them; they see eye to eye.

You take a four-square or an eight-square citadel or fortress, and you plant a man upon each corner. They do not begin to see the same scenes when they look out, but when they turn towards each other and they see that which is between and covers the ground between them, they see eye to eye. That is our position, brethren, as watchmen upon the walls of Zion. And that, in my opinion, is the correct rendition or interpretation or expression of that passage of scripture, the watchmen upon Zion's walls shall see eye to eye. Understand each other.

If the man that is opposed to me, I being opposed to him, if we understand each other, and the bond of our unity that binds us to the same cause is sufficiently strong, we will labor together without injury to each other and without lowering our good opinion of each other. I think you can understand that thought.

It is a foolish thing for a man to give way to his prejudices. Do not let prejudice disturb your calm, dispassionate judgment. Do not be unnecessarily moved by it, either for or against. If a matter comes before you for judgment, judge of it as truth must be judged of. Do not judge of it from prejudices. We can not afford to give way to it.

I want to say to these men who are going out into the field, especially some of the younger ones, that this spring makes the forty-eighth year that I have been at work with the church and for it. I have had no other employment. It has been my whole service. I have tried to serve the church in every capacity in which they have placed me. My editorship of the HERALD began in 1866; active supervision of it—forty-two years this spring. I have preached more or less at home and abroad ever since. I have never asked a man for a dollar when engaged upon missionary work. I have never lacked for a dollar to pay my way anywhere I was called to go. I never had my clothing wet through by rain but twice in all that forty-eight years when I have been trying to fill an appointment to preach. One of them was going to a schoolhouse from Plano, a little house, known as the Partridge Schoolhouse. Then it was one of those hasty summer showers. Bro. Levi Lightfoot and I were together. The other time was crossing the Mississippi River in a boat to fill an appointment in the town hall at Nauvoo, crossing from Park Bluff.

I have never lost five appointments during all these years that I have made myself or suffered to be made for me, from any cause, and have scarcely refused to make an appointment until the last two or three years, when I was compelled to. Not because I wanted to fail, but because I could not help it. That may be encouraging to you to make your appointments and fill them. A man in the field who is a preacher is under obligation to God to keep his appointments, and to the people. The people are under obligation to meet him, and he ought to be just as prompt and earnest in doing that as anything else, and suffer no trivial thing to keep him from keeping his appointments.

I was down in a country field here some years ago, about 1874. Made an appointment at a country schoolhouse. I went there at ten thirty in the morning. No one was there at the hour of appointment, except the brother who took me to the place in his buggy. We waited until fifteen minutes after eleven; nobody came near us. I said: "Brother, whatever preach I had this morning with me is gone. Let us go home." We started, and a mile and a half from the place we met the whole branch coming to meeting. I asked them where. They said down to the schoolhouse. I said, "Yes, there was a meeting to be had there at ten thirty"; pulled out my watch and showed them what time it was, and said, "We are going home." I preached there two weeks, and the branch was always there on time after that. It was down in the neighborhood of the Cow Creek Schoolhouse. Bro. Maloney knows where it is. Your father was one of them that was late, Bro. Maloney.

I was elected to preside over the branch at Plano on one occasion. They had been in the habit of meeting anywhere from fifteen to thirty minutes late. I made up my mind to start on time, and the very first meeting there was one man and his family got in in time to hear the benediction and that was all.

You might say to me, being Brother Joseph, of course people would look to him. That may be true, but when I landed in Southeastern Kansas upon one occasion, and started out from a little town to go down to Bro. Stephen Maloney's, where I was going, four miles and a quarter, I had twenty-five cents left in my pocket. I picked up my satchel and started out just at sundown. I had not gone more than a hundred yards from the house; a man drove up with a mule team, called me "Stranger," and asked me where I was going; told me to get in, and took me right to Bro. Maloney's door. It was just about the time when the coal-mines were opened down there. I came back from that place with two thousand dollars borrowed for the use of the Herald Office, and another gold nugget given me by a brother to put to his credit, upon which he should draw for a library. A portion of that amount remained with us until we arrived at Lamoni. I notified him then that there were eighty-two dollars left. I had money enough to pay my fare home. That has been the history.

On one occasion I was at Council Bluffs. I had an appointment at Columbus, ninety miles away. They were paying then seven cents a mile on the road. I had seventy-five cents in my pocket on Thursday morning. I was due there on Friday evening. I did not know how to get there. However, I was watching. And I stood in the door of Bro. Hall and Jensen's store watching. A man came riding up on a fine looking horse. He was a fine rider. He went on by me and up as far as the Bowery Church and rode back down the street. He came back the second time and rode on down by the store and seemed bewildered. Finally he came riding up, headed toward the door of the store. I went in and thought I would not be gazing at a stranger, if he was a fine rider. He came up to the door, and threw his bridle over the hitching-post, came into the store, and I knew him. He sat down by the stove, he expressed his gladness to see me, and I was glad to see him. He arose to his feet and took out his pocketbook from his pocket, took out a ten-dollar bill and handed it to me and said, "I can not preach, but I can help those who do," put his pocketbook back in his pocket and said, "Now, maybe I can go home." Bro. Wilcox, of Shenandoah.

I went about my business at Columbus, was on my way for two months, and did not lack from then on. And so it has gone. We had to put our trust in God. We ought to do it. He has told us to do it. The experience of those who have done it is that the promise has been fulfilled, that the faces of the sons of Jacob should not wax pale.

I congratulate you, brethren, upon the kindness with which you have treated us as presiding officers. I thank you for your expressions of good will, and I thank God for an association with men whom my experience for a good many years has warranted me in placing trust and confidence in them. Whatever may be the issue of the future, whatever may be the difficulties that we have to encounter, whatever the fate that may await us as individuals, as far as I am concerned and as far as my colleagues are concerned, you go out with our confidence.

You will find me by correspondence. If I have failed to respond heretofore, I have not been aware of it. I want to become acquainted with you by your missives, by those things that you write me, the topics upon which you ask information or to give my opinion, and the things that are transpiring, all of them, go to help us in our work, our mutual work.

I believe that the Spirit will be with us in additional power during the year that lies before us. It certainly will if we observe the bond of our unity, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, unbroken, unshaken confidence in him and his work.

I believe I have nothing further to add, but to ask that God will so grant to us that we shall meet again in due time, our confidence in each other unbroken, our faith unchanged, our faith in his gospel the same as it is now, but burning brighter because of the added experiences that we may pass through.

CHURCH PRIVILEGES—A QUESTION.

Questions frequently arise in branches as to the right, privilege, or propriety of permitting persons who have been expelled from the church to exercise any of the rights of membership, while suffering the disability of accusation and conviction and expulsion from the church for cause.

It is clear that such persons ought not to be permitted to partake of the sacrament, as this would be partaking unworthily. The courtesy of kindness would suggest the exercise of charity toward any one who had been justly expelled from the church, but it is within the province of the presiding officer at the meetings of the branch to refuse the privilege of exercising the rights of fellowship in occupying the attention of the members in prayer and testimony, when it is well known as to the circumstances of the accusation and expulsion from the church.

The Book of Covenants provides that the elders shall see that the law is kept, and it is their right when presiding to prevent the privileges of the members present from being intruded upon by those who may be in their midst who have forfeited by transgression the sacred character of association with the Saints. The article on governments in general provides that the church can not put persons in jeopardy of life or property, or take from them this world's goods without their consent, but can only expel them for just cause, or withdraw from their fellowship. Under the operation of this rule those who may be in charge of meetings justly may exercise their prerogative and determine what action would be best under the conditions known to them at the time. This would include knowledge of the nature of the wrong done by the persons and the character of his intrusion into the privileges of the church family. No general rule can be made that will cover all cases. Each case must be determined upon its merits, the same as in all other questions of a similar character.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

The Associate Editor has removed to Lamoni, Iowa. All matter intended for publication in the HERALD may now be addressed to the Herald Editors, Lamoni, Iowa.

Matter for Autumn Leaves may be addressed to Elbert A. Smith, Lamoni, Iowa.

Address all business letters to the Herald Publishing House.

CORRECTION OF J. R. LAMBERT'S ARTICLE.

In J. R. Lambert's article, "Doctrine and Covenants, Section 42," on page 425, in a quotation from the Doctrine and Covenants, column 2, line 1, insert the word not between doth and edify, making it read, "And that which doth not edify is not of God," etc.

On the same column, paragraph 3, line 5, read exalting instead of exulting, which latter word destroys the sense.

J. R. L.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Auditing committees are supposed to deal with facts and figures, not with the encomiums. There are exceptions. As a matter of passing interest we reproduce the report of the auditing committee of the Utah Church, as found in the Liahona for April 25, in a report of the late General Conference of that church:

"A report of the special auditing committee was read as follows:

"We, the undersigned, members of the church auditing committee, beg leave to report as follows:

"We have carefully audited the financial reports of the trustee-in-trust, presiding bishop, the latter comprehending the presiding bishop's office, 56 stakes of Zion and 21 missions in the world: also the Deseret News and the L. D. S. hospital for the year 1907. The said reports we found to be very full and complete in every essential, showing care and accuracy in the work done, and we were highly gratified with the systematic, thorough, and business-like manner in which the accounts of the church were kept.

"In view of the financial stringency and depression of business interests last fall almost resulting in a panic, we are happy to report that there is a substantial increase in the total amount of tithing paid for 1907 over and above that paid for 1906. The Latter-day Saints are to be commended for their faithfulness in the observance of the law of the Lord.

"In our examination of the report we noted with pleasure the fact that generous aid was extended by the trustee in trust to the worthy poor, church schools, stake and ward meeting-houses, mission meeting-houses, mission maintenance, Latter-day Saints' hospital maintenance, and for fares of returning elders from the mission fields.

"All of which is respectfully submitted.

"Your brethren,

"RUDGER CLAWSON,

"W. W. RITER,

"A. W. CARLSON,

"HENRY H. ROLAPP,

"Committee."

A detailed, or at least a summarized report of moneys received and expended might enable the church membership to share in the "pleasure" of the auditing committee.

The following is a sample of letters received by the Herald Publishing House:

"Gentlemen: I have never been a subscriber to the Autumn Leaves, but after reading some of the articles in the April number, handed to me by Bro. Henry Danielson, I have made up my mind that I can not afford to be without it. I inclose you subscription price.

"Yours truly,

"JAMES F. KEIR.

"405 North Fifty-second Ave., CHICAGO, Illinois."

Better subscribe now. The May number is fully up to the standard. The opening number, a story by Sr. Grace Russell, will interest every Latter Day Saint. Every young Saint, especially, will profit by reading it. It is the story of a young girl who was tempted to conceal her religious belief from her bosom friend. She overcame the temptation with results that will strengthen and cheer others who may be tempted in like manner. Elder Alvin Knisley continues his "Letters from the past," this time dealing with early events at Kirtland, Ohio. The "Autobiography of Elder J. C. Clapp" maintains its interest undiminished. The fourth installment of "The minister who was different," appears in this issue.

The Nauvoo Independent, April 25, contains a few verses and editorial comment that recall stirring events of past days. The verses, if we are correctly informed, were written on the occasion when Major Bidamon entertained a company of soldiers at the Nauvoo House on the eve of their departure for the war. The author of the verses was then a boy and his song was not of literary merit to entitle him to deathless fame, yet it is worthy of passing notice as recalling the martial and extravagant spirit of the day:

[The following poem was written by David Smith, son of the Prophet Joseph Smith, in Nauvoo, on December 24, 1863. It was sung here by the boys during Civil War times, to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne." A written copy was furnished to us by Leonard Hudson, who does not know whether or not it was ever in print before. David Smith wrote excellent poetry and a volume or two of his poems have been published.]

I

And shall our country be forgot,
Our flag be used unkind?
Shall traitors tread it under foot
And ne'er be brought to mind?

II

Shall queens and tyrants o'er the sea
Laugh our bright land to scorn,
And fling it in our teeth that we Are of our glory shorn?

III

Shall copper-headed snakes go mad
And work our country ill;
Shall evil things of her be said
And we sit calmly still?

IV

And shall the turkey-buzzard come
With all her filth and dirt,
And violate the eagle's home
And yet receive no hurt?

V

Oh! no, the eagle in her flight
Will tear her limb from limb;
We will replace each missing stripe,
Nor let a star grow dim.

VI

O! no as long as Union men
Are leagued with purpose strong,
We'll bring our country back again
And crush the rebel throng.

The Iowa State Historical Department recently undertook the work of opening up an Indian mound located near Boone, Iowa. The Register and Leader, April 28, contains the following comment on their work. The evidences that the builders of this mound were familiar with the use of cement will be of interest to students of the Book of Mormon:

"The Register and Leader presents herewith the first picture of the interior of the mysterious Indian mound which was recently opened near Boone under the direction of the State Historical Department. The picture shows the strange stone work that was exposed after the great heap of earth had been carefully removed. This stone work stands on a so-called flat stone floor of flat stratified stone about twenty-one by twenty-six feet in dimension and of irregular outline, practically level and supporting a circular arrangement of the same character of stones near its edge. These stones standing in a circle at the edge of the floor are uniformly about eighteen inches wide. Decayed timbers were found in a position indicating that they had lain across the stone floor, resting upon the edgewise stones; these timbers were five in number, two extending east and west, and three north and south. Above these timbers were small bowlders, in rows east and west, two feet apart.

"These regular rows of smaller bowlders seem to have been rows of capstones, possibly supported by the timbers at one time as a part of a sort of earthen roof or covering. To explain this covering is a hard problem for the excavators.

"While excavation was going on, the workmen struck a layer of earth which could not be shoveled with an ordinary implement, but which required the use of pickaxes. The appearance of this 'roof' or whatever it is, was in no way different from the rest, but appeared to be earth treated to some kind of a cement filling which made it very hard. Whether this is a natural action, due to the elements, it is impossible to decide, but it seems improbable from the fact that it occurred over the burial place only, as if by design. In the digging pieces of some material that looked and acted like cement were frequently found. No one could explain them.

"Human nature is naturally skeptical, and at first there were really many people who believed this new discovery was some kind of a 'Cardiff giant' hoax. They failed to take into consideration the institution which is making the research, and for a long time they refused to 'bite.' It seems extraordinary that any one would believe that the State Historical Department would lend itself to a 'fake' research. All this is changed now, and the populace is beginning to realize that one of the greatest finds of the century has been made. A constant stream of people now drifts to the place, and the more times a person goes the more puzzled he becomes.

"Acting Curator E. R. Harlan has made the first preliminary official statement. He does not venture to solve the problem. This is not the province of the department. He makes known the discovery, charts and photographs it, preserves a minute record of the things found, and asks the scientists of the world to interpret if they can. The bones of about twelve persons were discovered, nearly all apparently buried on a thin layer of sand which prevails a few inches above the stone platform."

The third annual conference of the Christian Socialist Fellowship will meet in New York City, May 28 to 31. The fellowship is composed largely of ministers of various denominations, and dates its existence from a conference held in Louisville, Kentucky, two years ago.

The Straight Road

A FUTURE OR UNSEEN LIFE.

Is it wrong to learn all that is to be known about the future life? or should we timidly shrink from looking behind the curtain because God has not permitted us to gaze with the natural eye into the unseen world where our loved ones have gone?

Although the path may seem dreary and lonesome without the assurance of the divine word of God, (and surely it is bleak), when the blessed light of revelation is turned on, it drives the darkest clouds away, and opens to our view the unseen life, which skepticism has told us was death.

Question: What is it? Is it life, or is it death? Let God and inspired men of God decide. We have loved ones that have gone before. We long to be with them and our hearts yearn for their society as it has been. Maybe the object of our desire was a chubby babe snatched from our embrace, or perhaps a dear mother, father, brother, sister, or bosom companion of a long life or a short life, as the case may be. In a few years at most we shall be leaving this life,—of what? Of enjoyment? Sometimes it seems so, and sometimes it seems to be a life of worry, toil, trouble, and temptations; if not more than we can resist, it is often more than we do resist.

However, we are on the road to the unseen life. We will soon be over there. Then is it not natural enough that we desire to know what and who is there, or in other words, what will be our lot? We must meet the realities, whether we be Jew or Gentile, Christian or infidel. We are all on the road which, with the earthly tabernacle, or so far as the body is concerned, ends in the tomb.

The spirit has taken its flight. The wise man said, "It returned to God who gave it." The spirit is what we are looking for, and with a desire to learn where it is, revelation is what we are in search of. We know what has become of the body, what will be hereafter; we know what our end is concerning the fleshly tabernacle. The spirit, where is it?

We stand by the side of the sealed white lips with sad regret, that although we may ask of that dear friend where he has gone, the echo of our call is the only answer. The lifeless form, still in death, makes no answer. Friendly hands place the loved one in the casket,—not even a frown is on his brow to indicate that he does not wish to remain there. The sight of the open grave,—the stoutest, strongest men (and it may be they have seen the death and carnage of the battle) will weep over that grave. Still the lifeless form is undisturbed. The life, where is it?

Our Lord has told us there is a resurrection, and he taught also that there is eternal life, and that God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth. He also said that they that believed on him, though they were dead, yet should they live.

After his resurrection we find the Savior sending his disciples, giving them instructions in regard to their commission. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."—Mark 16: 14. Once more we ask, Where are the departed spirits of all those that have been by friendly hands consigned to the tomb? All those that had and since have reached their destination in the earth life? I meet a friend and ask him the question, Where are they? He tells me in all confidence, it is settled in his mind for ever. They are asleep. I retire with Bible in hand, for I have been divinely instructed to do this. I search the Scriptures, for in them I think I have eternal life. They are they that testify of the Son of God, and in him is life eternal. I find that Moses, the great lawgiver, was seen thousands of years after he had passed into the unseen world. Elias, the wonderful prophet, was seen, too, at the same time, hundreds of years after his dead body had been laid in the tomb; and the Savior also, a few days after his dead body had been taken from the cross, was with others walking and talking. This is not all. We follow the wicked king to the cave where he had resorted for the safety of his life, and the woman calls the spirit of Samuel, the prophet, and talks with him. Well, we will drop the curtain on these and listen to the spirits under the altar crying to God for vengeance. They had been slain for the word of God.

We let these go by. We are not satisfied with this sleepy condition of mankind, so we turn to another for information. We meet one that looks very wise. He bears the title of Doctor of Divinity. "Doctor, I am in search of knowledge. You look to me to be a wise man." He bestows a pleasant smile and wants to know the nature of that I am in search of. I tell him I want to know the condition of departed spirits. He begins to look very wise and tells me they are in heaven and hell, there to remain for endless duration, those that have accepted Christ to enjoy the presence of God, those that have neglected him consigned to the flames of hell, in endless torment.

But, doctor, this does not cover the case in question. Thousands have gone to the unseen world that have neither accepted Christ nor rejected him, have never known of him in this life, never heard of him except in the use of profanity, and millions that have never heard of him at all. What about those? Where are they? Cut off from the presence of God entirely, absolutely, never to see him or know him? You tell me there are only the two places? Yes. And the departed spirits have all gone to those two places? Yes. Then what about the vision? "I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I can not tell; or whether out of the body, I can not tell; God knoweth;) such an one caught up to the third heaven."—2 Corinthians 12: 2, 3. Paul was pleased to call such a place paradise.

"Well," exclaims this Doctor of Divinity, "there are hidden mysteries that have not been revealed to men."

"Then, Doctor, I suppose if I am fortunate enough to reach the endless glory that I must be hoodwinked, and that hoodwink will be removed when I am brought into the presence of God and the hosts of heaven without any instructions how to conduct myself when the hoodwink is removed." This doctrine reminds me of my early experience in life. My first-born was a son. I was truly anxious about that boy. I had begun life without education and I have not any yet, like the man in Arkansas making a public talk to a large audience. He painted glowingly the advantages of the States and said, "I came to Arkansas twenty years ago with only twenty-five cents in my pocket." A voice asked, "How much have you now?" "Twenty-five cents."

Well, I was determined that boy should never meet the battles of life under the disadvantages that I had already experienced, so before he had learned the alphabet I went to the store and bought an arithmetic of the highest grade and started him to school, kissed him a pleasant good-morning, and charged him to be diligent in his studies. It seems that the theologians of the present age would have us spring from earth's fetters to the top round of Jacob's ladder.

We turn to others, but with no better success. We resort again to the Scripture, and as we have already remarked or hinted, we can not think the Savior would require an impossibility of his disciples, hence when he told them to preach the gospel to every creature, the commission had a broader meaning and reached farther than those then living in Judea and its surroundings. It is hard to get our friends to realize that a soul on this side the great waters is just as precious with God as those in the narrow regions of Judea. It seems a long way for Christ to extend his mission, or at least it has been one of the hardest things for me to work into their minds. I have found it easier to get them interested in Peter's testimony in regard to the thought of the Savior preaching to the spirits in prison. However, with us the grandest thought looms up in our minds when we trace the goodness and mercy of an allwise and all-powerful God of the universe. His power reaches from pole to pole and encompasses the entire universe. With this point in view we see no defalcation, or the least straw in the way of the disciples carrying the message to all the world.

Those disciples doubtless understood the commission. It was not Christlike to leave the business half done. Prior to this commission he told them the time was coming, and to make it stronger he adds, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God. (John 5:25.) Peter's testimony corresponds with this declaration. (1 Peter 3:18-20; 4:6.) He has told his disciples to fear not men, who could only kill the body, but rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. So, when Christ was relieved from the body, he could then more fully reach the destiny of his mission. Peter says, "he was put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit, by which he went and preached to the spirits in prison."—1 Peter 3:18, 19. Unburdened by the body he could cross the ocean wide, visit the Lamanites and Nephites, and fathom the depths of eternity, visit the departed, and administer salvation to all who could be brought to repentance, and made it possible for his disciples to obey the great command, "Go ye into all the world." He opened the road for the departed spirits to reach eternal life. It is not unreasonable to think that the disciples as they departed this life one by one, continued their mission in the unseen world.

I fear I am getting too lengthy, and with necessary apology I can not abruptly close for fear some one, if these lines find their way to the pages of church publications, might accuse me of universalism. I verily believe there is a hell prepared for the wicked, also a judgment to come. Christ said there was a sin that should not be forgiven neither in this life nor in the life to come. This has opened to my mind most clearly that there is a consideration in the unseen life, and if there is no forgiveness then a necessity arises for a veritable hell, and a long life has convinced me of a necessity of that hell. We meet with some in this present life so stubborn that they can not be persuaded though one rose from the dead. We meet some who have received the Holy Spirit, been enlightened by it, tasted the good gift, rejoiced in the good gift, and have turned away, crucified the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame. Such, to my mind, will not be easily convinced in the unseen life.

We are daily reading tragedies in our weekly or daily papers that appall the stoutest hearts. I fear that there are some that may reach the hell that is described as a fire, that can not be described more to the point than is sometimes described in the divine word of God, that they are so seared that they will be ashamed to look the loving Savior in the face and cry out in that dreadful day, "I meekly submit to the will of the Father." Hence the judgment and the cleansing. Peter likens this to the cleansing by the flood (2 Peter 3:6 and 7; also 12th verse). Then in the thirteenth verse he says, "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." Verily the word of God is true, though every man a liar. We may be sure there is joy and gladness awaiting the righteous, and destruction awaiting the wicked who do not repent. We look for new heavens and a new earth; when the heavens shall melt with fervent heat, and the city of God shall descend, and the clouds burst with the glory of God, the curtain will be raised and there will be no more talk of the unseen life, for the perfect thing will have been accomplished, and we will see as we are seen and know as we are known.

With a heart brim full of love for the work, and a longing desire for the salvation of mankind, and a supreme love for God and his Christ and our Savior, I am,

Truly and sincerely,

L. L. WIGHT.

Original Articles

LEAVES FROM LIFE.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER ALONZO H. PARSONS.

ELDER A. H. PARSONS.

It was on the eighth day of the second month of the year 1857 that the subject of this article made his appearance upon the stage of action, in the county of Madison, state of Indiana. I am not aware that there was anything unusual in the introduction of this lad among the children of men; yet it is said that his life hung in the balances, in the opinion of men, for about three years; and, when his physical condition would permit, he was too musical to be enjoyed as company and too sick to be left alone. If the music had been the classical kind of our time, instead of ragtime of that date, it is possible it might have been more interesting to the young mother.

Of my progenitors I want to speak: My father's name was William, he was the son of Solomon, who was the son of Ivans, who was the son of George, who was born in Guilford County, North Carolina, whose progenitors came to this country from England, in the early part of the eighteenth century, locating at or near Jamestown, and moving out with the settlement of the country till we find them in Guilford County.

My grandfather "Solomon" left North Carolina in 1832 and located in Indiana. He married Miss Rachel Harvey, a Quaker lady, in Randolph County, Carolina, October 12, 1824.

The Harveys were Quakers, who, with many others, came to America for religious freedom, and, landing at Jamestown, they drifted with the settling of the country into or near the region of the Parsons family. So on grandmother's side my people were Friends or Quakers, across the mighty deep. It is supposed that my father was a member of that society as all children born to parents were. They call it a "birthright."

It was by marriage, that I came so near being related to the Welsh and Irish. It might be wise not to tell this, but I guess I will! My grandmother's great-grandfather, "Jesse," wedded a lady from Wales, and his daughter wedded an Irishman by the name of Chaney. I had once wished that there was some Irish blood in my veins, for the wit they always have; but since getting hold of these facts, I have doubted that saying; of course judging from my own personal experience.

My father married Miss Martha Ann Kent, who was the daughter of Horatio Nelson, who was the son of Carlton, who was the son of Able, who lived in the state of Massachusetts. The Kents came from England, as the name designates. Grandfather Kent's mother's name was Starkwether. She was born and raised in the state of Connecticut, five miles from Norwich. My grandmother's maiden name was Almira Sloan.

After grandfather was married and living in Bartholomew County, Indiana, in the spring of 1836, Elder George M. Hinkle came into their neighborhood and began a series of Latter Day Saint meetings. Grandmother (Almira) attended and enjoyed them so much that she persuaded grandfather to go out and hear. It was only a few days till both, with many others, were baptized; and the following spring, with others, they sold out and left for Zion, which was said to be in the state of Missouri. With ox teams they were forty days wending their way into the vicinity of Far West, Missouri. They located a little south of east of Far West. From this home they were driven in 1838, almost destitute, yet not as nearly so as many others.

I have spoken of my progenitors and the religious tendency of some of them that my personal destiny might be more clearly indicated to those who believe in predestination and fore-ordination. From the time I can remember I always said I was going to be a preacher when I got to be a man; and, as a boy, would preach to my playmates, or if I had none I would round up the chairs and talk to them as my audience. I have thought that these experiences were not altogether lost, as I have actually had to speak to chairs or benches since I have been a minister, and it was comforting to think it was not the first time. I took a little cold consolation from it at least. In the spring of 1860 my parents left the state of Indiana and located in the state of Iowa, in Ringgold County, and later moved to Fremont, near Hamburg. Here I obtained what schooling I had when I started into the world for myself, which was very limited, as three or four months' school was all we had in those days on the frontier.

January, 1875, I was married to Miss Martha Gale, of Ringgold County, with whom I had played when we were children. The following spring we moved to Kansas and located in Jewell County, in the midst of a Quaker settlement, and soon became interested and joined that society according to their rules. I felt at home as soon as I began to meet with them. In those days it was nothing uncommon to sit for one hour and not a word be said. I thought then that the time was well spent in solemn meditation and prayer.

1877 I was set apart as a minister for that society and made my maiden effort in a sod schoolhouse in the month of September. The people seemed to enjoy the effort, and for three years or near that time I continued to preach almost every first day at some point near by, and felt blessed. And it was not till the spring of 1879, in the month of March, that my mind was the least disturbed in my religious conviction. I had just closed a series of very successful meetings by which many had professed conversion and joined the church, when my uncle, Elder Alma Kent, of Iowa, came to see me. He talked day and night for four days, and I did my best to show him his errors; for I was sure he was deceived though I thought he was honest; but I became certain of one thing, and that was, that he was a better Bible scholar than I, and that the best thing for me to do was to say as little as I could and let him alone. I did my best to prove to him that the "hand writings and ordinances were nailed to the cross with Christ," but he made it so uncomfortable for me I concluded that the words "No" and "Yes" would serve my purpose better, and I would not be playing the losing game all the time.

After his departure I took up the tracts left for my perusal and began an investigation, not expecting to find the work true, but intending to expose it and show the fallacy of Mormonism. But alas! The errors of Quakerism became apparent to me so forcibly, as the investigation continued, that in about fifteen months I was ready for baptism.

I threw down my Bible many times during that period, and declared that my uncle had tampered with it in some way; I knew not how, or what he had done, but I was sure it did not read as it did before he came. The things that I did not want to see, was the very matter that came to view whenever I would open my once good old Quaker Bible to read. Water baptism, laying on of hands, were just the matters that I did not believe, and I tried to keep away from them and the reading of passages touching those points; but for the life of me I could not. Try as hard as I would they would loom up and the letters were larger in the reading of those passages (it seemed to me) than any others. I "had the Holy Ghost," I knew, and did not want to believe anything else, and never had hands laid on me, nor had I been baptized in water.

But the final struggle was made, and the good Father gave me the needed light, and no one knows how good I felt when I saw for myself that these ordinances were essential to my salvation, unless they have had similar experiences. It was on a beautiful day, July 23, 1880, wife and I were baptized. In prophecy Bro. Kent spoke and said (when confirming me) that I would be "called to preach this gospel," which at the time I supposed would be about like I had been doing, just around home.

As the old saying goes, "it was a hot time in the old town"; so it was in that Quaker neighborhood. They did all they could to reclaim us from the Mormon delusion, as they called it, and for one year we had almost a constant controversy on the matters of differences, till I came out in our county paper answering some assertions made in it and stated my conviction in the truth as set forth by the true Latter Day Saints. Then they dropped us from their fellowship and treated us (wife and I) so shamefully that we quit going to church, and that was not an easy matter to do, as we were used to going every first day, and also fourth day, for eleven o'clock meetings. Harvest times never kept a Quaker away from church on fourth day, or as we would say Wednesday, everybody went to church, big and little.

I have often wondered how many Latter Day Saints would quit the harvest-field and go to church, with all their advantages over these people. At the conference in the Northwestern District of Kansas, convened at Cuba, Republic County, I was ordained to the office of elder by Elders John Landers, C. G. Lanphear, and Alma Kent, and made my first effort the next morning at eleven o'clock. During the General Conference at Stewartville, I was received into the Third Quorum of Elders. At Lamoni, Iowa, I was ordained to the office of seventy (First Quorum) by Elders John T. Davis, James Caffall, and E. C. Brand, the president of the quorum at that time. This ordination took place on the tenth day of April, 1886. April 20, 1900, at Lamoni, Iowa, I was ordained a high priest by Elder R. C. Evans and G. H. Hilliard of the general Bishopric. April 24, 1901, I was ordained one of the standing high council at organization of the Independence Stake, by Apostles W. H. Kelley and Heman C. Smith. At the General Conference at Lamoni, I was ordained first counselor to F. G. Pitt, president of the High Priests' Quorum, by Apostle I. N. White, and F. G. Pitt. May 14, 1902, I was ordained to the office of first counselor to Bishop Roderick May, bishop of the Independence Stake, by Apostles Joseph Luff, I. N. White, and Bishop R. May.

I have labored in the last two offices as best I could with the limited light and intelligence given, with a growing confidence in my heavenly Father for the help necessary to meet every issue.

I have traveled and preached for four years as an elder and sixteen years as a seventy, and since as a high priest and one of the bishopric of the stake. I have served the church as a missionary and labored in the following States: Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Maine, and the province of Nova Scotia. I have preached when passing through the states of Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Oklahoma, and the province of Canada. I presided over the branch in Boston for about eighteen months and the Philadelphia Branch for seven years, and was in charge of the Kirtland Temple, and branch, for one year, and the district for three years.

In all these offices and duties I have found that my only safety was in implicit confidence in God, who called and was willing to direct when necessary. With a growing confidence in God and this great work committed to our trust, I submit this as per request, and trust it may be of some interest to some one.

ALONZO H. PARSONS.

HOLDEN, Missouri.

• * * * *

Wherever you see persecution, there is more than a probability that truth is on the persecuted side. —Bishop Latimer.

WHERE ARE THE LOST TRIBES?

SERMON BY W. A. SINCLAIR, M. D., AT SOMERVILLE, MASSACHUSETTS, FEBRUARY 23, 1908.

Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast.—Isaiah 26: 20. Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me.—Psalm 139: 7-10.

I purpose to-night to dwell somewhat on a peculiar line of thought; and while it may possibly strike some of you as somewhat premature, in the light of modern discovery; yet we shall endeavor to produce some scriptural argument to sustain the contention, and leave you to draw your own conclusions from the argument.

We have two peculiar texts as a basis for our argument, or as a starting point from which to build our superstructure. "Come, my people (Israel), enter thou into thy chamber, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment." You will notice the peculiar language addressed here to Israel, "Enter thou into thy chamber," and this chamber was to be of a character which would effectually hide them from observation. "Hide thyself as it were for a little moment." This also carries with it the suggestion that the hiding is not to be permanent, but for a little moment, or space of time, and the inference is that after "the little moment" they should come out of hiding; "the chamber" should be opened again.

Let us trace Israel, if possible, from their abode in Palestine to their present abiding place, if we can discover where that place is; which, we believe, in the language of our text, is hidden from the observation of mankind at the present time.

Israel, as you are all well aware, were located in the land of Palestine; they turned away from the commandments of the Lord, and made molten images, serving Baal. And we read in 2 Kings 17: 18, "Therefore the Lord was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight; there was none left but the tribe of Judah only." And in the eighteenth chapter of 2 Kings, eleventh verse, we see how this was accomplished: "And the king of Assyria did carry away Israel unto Assyria, and put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes."

We find Halah is situated in Media, beyond Assyria, northwest of Babylon, towards the Caspian Sea, about two hundred and fifty miles, while Habor is on the border land of Syria and Mesopotamia, on the River Euphrates, northeast of Babylon about four hundred miles. Thus we see in carrying them away from Jerusalem they were taken north, far beyond the borders of their own land.

This was a just punishment for their disobedience, and Israel seems to have learned a lesson thereby.

I wish to call your attention now to some record which is not used in every day scriptural arguments, but which may be just as important and as authentic.

In the Apocrypha, 2 Esdras 13: 39-47, we have recorded the interpretation of a dream, which we think has a wonderful significance on the migration of Israel. It reads:

And whereas thou sawest that he (God) gathered another peaceable multitude together unto him; those are the ten tribes, which were carried away prisoners out of their own land in the time of Osea, the king, whom Shalmanasor, the king of Assyria, led away captive, and he carried them over the waters, and so came they into another land. But they (Israel) took this counsel among themselves, that they would leave the multitude of the heathen, and go forth into a further country, where never mankind dwelt, that they might keep their statutes, which they never kept in their own land. And they entered into Euphrates by the narrow passages of the river. For the Most High then (after they had determined to serve him) showed signs for them, and held still the flood till they were passed over. For through that country there was a great way to go, namely, of a year and a half; and the same region is called Assareth. Then dwelt they there till the latter time; and now when they shall begin to come, the Highest shall stay the springs of the stream again, that they may go through; therefore sawest thou the multitude with peace.

You will note that when Israel reached this point in their history, they seemed to awaken to the fact that a better heritage belonged to them, if obedient to the mandates of the God of Israel, so they seemingly covenanted to keep the statutes and commandments of God, and as a consequence God returned to them and displayed his power as formerly when leading their fathers out of Egypt; and, as this dream gives us to understand, he led them to a land where never mankind dwelt."

In Doctrine and Covenants 108: 6, we read of Israel: "And they who are in the north countries shall come in remembrance before the Lord, and their prophets shall hear his voice, and shall no longer stay themselves and they shall smite the rocks, and the ice shall flow down at their presence."

This then gives us to understand that the land "where never mankind dwelt," is the north country, or to speak more plainly is the interior of the earth by the way of the north passage, and as our text says: "hide thyself as it were for a little moment"; the "little moment" is the space of time between their migrating there, and the period when "their prophets shall smite the rocks" and march forth to the remnant of their nation.

Our second text gives us to understand that there is no place where we might take our flight in which we would be separated from God or his Spirit, as David says: "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?" So that although the ten tribes may be or are in the interior of the earth, yet God would remember them, and in his own due time would bring them from their secluded condition, and place them in their own land, their everlasting possession as promised to their father Abraham.

"Oh, well," says one, "it is all right to make the assertion that the earth is hollow, and possibly inhabited, but you must produce more evidence to substantiate your argument before we can accept such a theory." That is just exactly what we wish to do.

In the first place, let us see what scientists have to say concerning the earth in the beginning. They tell us that the earth was once in a liquid state. If this be true, and we have every reason to suppose it to be, it throws considerable light on the subject; for, in order for our earth to maintain her position in space she must revolve. Now supposing it to be in a liquid state and revolving, what would be the tendency of the liquid? To accumulate around its outer margin, of course, leaving an open space or vacuum in its center, and of course the crust formed while it was still in motion, hence there would be an outer crust and an inner crust, leaving the central portion open.

To illustrate: Take any fluid and put it into a basin, place the basin on a revolving surface, and to make it more realistic place ice on the outside of the basin in close proximity, so that it will freeze the liquid while it is revolving. You will find the liquid will heap up around its limiting circumference wall, leaving the center space clear. Just what happened to the earth.

In Genesis 48:16, Jacob blessing the sons of Joseph, we read: "The Angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers, Abraham and Isaac; and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth." Jacob here is speaking in prophecy, and in all probability undiscerning the import of his language. "And let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth." Webster says midst has reference to the middle, therefore a perfect interpretation or rendering of the reading would be, "let them grow into a multitude in the middle of the earth."

Under the old interpretation of the language relative to the inheritance of the offspring of Joseph it is easy to understand that portion relative to the "utmost bound of the everlasting hills," and some of the things spoken of "Joseph's land," but, it is seemingly quite difficult to locate the place in the "midst" or "middle" of the earth where Ephraim and Manasseh shall grow into a multitude. But as they were among the ten tribes led away, of course they are in the north country.

Again, I never could see the significance of the fourth verse of the twentieth chapter of Exodus, only as I look at it now, that God knowing the end from the beginning, knew where he would be leading Israel at a later date, and provided for future emergency by making his commandments large enough to embrace future conditions. We read: "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth." Not an image of anything in the water in the earth, but under.

If the earth is a hollow, inhabited land, and the people who inhabit it, the ten tribes, the land being internal would be a warmer land, as evidenced by some of the discoveries to be mentioned later. Is it not reasonable to suppose that the warmer waters would abound with animal life? Probably the now seemingly extinct antediluvian animals may be found in there. If so, the command is pertinent, and displays the wisdom of God.

In addition to these references I wish to present a few deductions gleaned from the different arctic explorers as compiled by Mr. William Reid in his book, A Phantom of the Poles. "Explorers often found rock, gravel, sand, and coal on the ice. No way to get there but by volcanic force. No volcanoes near on the outside of the earth."

"Quantities of volcanic dust found so annoying by Nansen."

"Musk-ox and great flocks of birds abound in arctic regions in summer. Where do they winter? Not south. They must go into the interior of the earth."

"In winter in Arctic regions the warm winds come from the north and the cold ones from the south. Warm winds must come from the interior."

"Trees and other large pieces of wood found by explorers on polar shores. No wood of such size growing on outside of earth in the north?"

"Areas of red, green, and yellow snow found to be caused by vegetable matter believed to be the pollen of flowers. Would require millions of acres of flowers to so color snow."

"Evidences of human occupancy far north; abandoned slate houses containing combs of walrus, ivory, fish-hooks, bone needles, and worked articles of bone and wood, their use being unknown to the Eskimos."

"Open water found at farthest points reached in polar regions."

"The appearance of the aurora borealis or northern lights which he claims arises from three causes: 1. Active volcanoes in the interior of the earth. 2. Great forest or prairie fires in the interior. 3. Or to the reflection and rereflection of the sun's rays as they enter the opening at one pole and are reflected out of the other." He claims one reason why the aurora, when caused by the sun, is brighter in the north, is because the southern opening is much greater than the northern; "proven by the fact that explorers have reached only within seven hundred and fifty miles of the south pole and have passed the magnetic pole, while they have been within five hundred miles of the north pole and passed the north magnetic pole; thus showing that the southern entrance is one thousand five hundred miles in diameter, while that at the north is but one thousand miles."

"The action of the compass needle in pointing upwards in the arctic polar regions."

It stands to reason that if the opening at the north is one thousand miles across, the magnetic point of the north would be five hundred miles out in space, and as the boat made the turn into the interior of the earth, the needle would consequently point upwards, or out into space, and again if the magnetic point, or north is a central imaginary pole five hundred miles out in space, and an opening really exists, then the language of Job is significant wherein he states, chapter 26, verse 7, "He (God) stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing." More particularly does it apply, as Job gave voice to this language before the Israelites were taken there, so that it was indeed an "empty place," so far as man was concerned, for you remember in 2 Esdras the language, "and go forth into a further country, where never mankind dwelt."

Again we read in Matthew 12:40: "For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." It has been argued that this has reference to Christ's death and burial in Jerusalem, but I can not agree with them, because it does not fit the circumstances.

Jesus was crucified Friday afternoon (see Mark 15:33-37; Matthew 27:46; Luke 23:44). He arose Sunday morning early. (See Matthew 20:18, 19; Mark 9:31; 10:34; Luke 18:33; 24:6, 7.) Thus you see he was only in the tomb two nights and one day. So even if we could call the tomb the "heart of the earth," the time is insufficient to stand the test, so we must look further for a solution to the problem.

If we can arrive by any process of reasoning at a period wherein Jesus spent three days and three nights in the interior of the earth, then the language in Matthew becomes illuminated before us. We can not apply it to his burial; it does not fit the time limit; so we will trace him for a short period after his resurrection and see what we can discover.

As already quoted, we see he arose on Sunday, being with the disciples in Jerusalem the same evening, but leaving them Sunday night. The night on this continent corresponding to the daytime at Jerusalem, Sunday night there would be the last dark day of the three here, according to the prophecy that there should be three days and three nights darkness. And Monday daytime at Jerusalem would be the last dark night following the third and last dark day. So if he came to this continent immediately from Jerusalem, as it is recorded in the Book of Mormon, Nephi 4:13, large edition, his voice could be heard among the people in harmony with the record.

We are told in Nephi 12:5; "And now I, Mormon, make an end of my sayings and proceed to write the things which have been commanded me; therefore I would that ye should behold that the Lord truly did teach the people, for the space of three days; and after that, he did show himself unto them oft and did break bread oft, and bless it, and gave it unto them."

We see from this statement that he remained with the Nephites on this continent for the space of three days, and while teaching them he spoke of the Israelites, intimating that they had been separated and led away by the Father. He told the Nephites that they were the "other sheep" spoken of in the scriptures, and then he tells them concerning the ten tribes. Nephi 7:22: "And verily, verily, I say unto you, that I have other sheep, which are not of this land, neither of the land of Jerusalem; neither in any parts of that land round about, whither I have been to minister. For they of whom I speak, are they who have not as yet heard my voice; neither have I at any time manifested myself unto them. But I have received a commandment of the Father, that I shall go unto them, and that they shall hear my voice, and shall be numbered among my sheep, that there may be one fold, and one shepherd, therefore I go to show myself unto them."

After commanding them to write these sayings and giving them certain instruction, he states in Nephi 8:3: "But now I go unto the Father, and also to show myself unto the lost tribes of Israel, for they are not lost unto the Father, for he knoweth whither he hath taken them."

We learn from these citations that Jesus remained here with the Nephites three days, and then he told them he was going from them to the lost tribes of the house of Israel. He remained with them three days, corresponding to Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights in Jerusalem, so that if he went to the lost tribes and they were in the interior of the earth, as we have every reason to suppose they were, he would certainly be with them an equal period of time, especially as we suppose them to be much more numerous than the Nephites, as ten tribes are represented there, while the Nephites were the result of a very small fragment of one tribe. Consequently he would be with them Thursday, day and night; Friday, day and night; and Saturday, day and night, and still be in Jerusalem for the next meeting with the disciples on Sunday; and in this way would the scriptures be fulfilled, as recorded by Matthew, 12: 40: "For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly [central portion]; so shall the son of man be three days and three nights in the heart [central portion] of the earth."

Again we return to Doctrine and Covenants 108: 6, and read:

And they [the Israelites] who are in the north countries shall come in remembrance before the Lord, and their prophets [leaders] shall hear his voice, and shall no longer stay themselves, and they shall smite the rocks, and the ice shall flow down at their presence [signifying they are beyond the ice]. And an highway shall be cast up in the midst of the great deep. Their enemies shall become a prey unto them, and in the barren deserts there shall come forth pools of living water, and the parched ground shall no longer be a thirsty land. And they shall bring forth their rich treasures unto the children of Ephraim my servants. And the boundaries [outer limits] of the everlasting hills shall tremble at their presence. [This indicates that they were far beyond the everlasting hills and came towards them, and as they neared or came into view of them the hills trembled.] And then shall they fall down and be crowned with glory, even in Zion, by the hands of the servants of the Lord, even the children of Ephraim; and they shall be filled with songs of everlasting joy. Behold this is the blessing of the everlasting God upon the tribes of Israel, and the richer blessing upon the head of Ephraim and his fellows.

Come, my people, hide thyself as it were for a little moment until [a period of time] the indignation be overpast.—Isaiah 26: 20.

Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me.—Psalm 139: 7-10.

So he watcheth over Israel and has led them from their dispersion in the days of Osea the king, to the present time, and will continue to do so until they are again reunited to the scattered remnants of the house of Israel. They shall grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth. Jesus has visited them three days and three nights, the north is spread out over the empty place, and the mystery of all is shortly to be revealed in the coming forth of Israel from their long hiding place. May we be among the faithful to receive them.

"There are innumerable souls that would resent the charge of the fool's atheism, yet daily deny God in every deed."

* * *

Better be despised for too anxious apprehensions, than ruined by too confident security.—Burke.

Of General Interest

A LITTLE LAY SERMON.

The other day a man who was many times a millionaire dropped everything connected with his business, closed his office and took the first steamer he could catch for Europe. Wealth and social pleasure, all the rich rewards for which countless thousands of people are madly striving every day of their lives—these things were nothing to him any more. He had striven as madly as the rest of us and he had succeeded beyond the degree of the vast majority. But almost in a moment his millions were the mere baubles of a child's play hour, save for their ability to procure the best treatment which the famous oculists of the Old World could give him. For the mere boon of sight, the inestimable heritage of humanity, he announced that he would gladly give every dollar he had. He no longer wanted to pile up dollars or sweep through fashionable thoroughfares in an automobile or sail the sea in yachts or loll in the delights of a mansion. He just wanted to see.

A few weeks ago a man in Philadelphia offered one million dollars for the life of his friend. Any physician who could cure a man of pneumonia could have for that service, performed for a trifling fee every hour in the day somewhere in the world, wealth beyond the dreams of his greediest hour. But the man's friend died and the other millionaire is going blind.

A few years ago the richest man in the world offered one million dollars for the man who could make him really enjoy an ordinary meal, such as the humblest of his countless workmen eat with a relish every day. Just the other day a young millionaire blamed his millions because they did not bring him domestic pleasures. And so it goes—the vast majority thoughtlessly playing with the diamonds of blessings which they do not appreciate; like the Kaffirs of the Transvaal in the early days, reveling in the luxuriance of capacities for enjoyment which the millions of the rich can not buy.

If these melancholy examples serve any useful purpose, it is to show that contentment does not depend upon riches or position; that there is no material success which can procure blessings which the moneyless man may not have without money and without price; and that these so-called "every day blessings" of simply seeing and hearing and being healthy and reasonably happy in our various relations should be appreciated far more keenly than they are.

The very possession of these blessings, which are really powers, involves the responsibility of their wisest use. How many of us who can see put our eyes to the best use and always see the best things that are to be seen? We take mere physical existence as a matter of course, while there are men in the world with millions in their outstretched hands eagerly offering gold for the power to eat a square meal and enjoy it. No golden key can unlock the storehouse of health or happiness, but the world is full of people who having eyes see not and having ears hear not. Helen Keller can neither see, hear, nor speak, and yet she has surpassed the great majority of girls with all the advantages of speech, sight, and hearing, even those who are given the best training possible.

In the physical world organs which are not used or are improperly used atrophy and become rudimentary, but unfortunately—or mercifully—there is no corresponding penalty in the moral world, unless there is a spiritual atrophy of which we do not know. Perhaps there is. Perhaps if we do not hear the best there is to hear and see the best there is to see and make the best and highest use of our physical powers there is an analogous spiritual blindness and deafness and aphasia and decrepitude. The risk is too great for the wisest people to take.—Kansas City Journal.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. T. A. Hougas, secretary, Macedonia, Pottawattamie County, Iowa; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, Treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, 630 South Crysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Just Once in a While.

Just once in a while if we'd think to convey
To those who walk with us life's devious way,
In glances or words, half the joys that abide
In our hearts because loved ones are close by our side;
If we'd think but to garb in words' tenderest dress
A phrase that were sweet as a mother's caress
Care's road would be shortened by many a mile;
If we'd think to be thankful just once in a while.

Just once in a while if we'd lay down our load
Of worry and work by the side of the road,
And a bit of the love that we're feeling expend
On sister or brother, on parent or friend,
In words that would tell them their nearness makes light
The path which alone we would grope through the night;
How oft we'd be blessed with answering smile,
If we'd think to be thoughtful just once in a while.

Just once in a while if a hand were but pressed,
A shoulder but patted, a word but addressed
That would thankfulness speak to the ones by our side,
Would not joy spur the feet to a magical stride
As they wended their way down life's main traveled road?
Would not grief slip away and thus lighten the load?
For ourselves and for others we'd shorten each mile,
If we'd think to be thankful just once in a while.

—Roy Farrell Greene, in Leslie's Weekly.

Governor Hanley on the Liquor Traffic.

[We wish to ask of our readers if the reason for Governor Hanley's hatred of the liquor traffic is not well founded, and we pray that these questions may sink deep into the heart of every one in our church who has the privilege of casting a vote upon this liquor question.—EDITOR.]

Personally, I have seen so much of the evils of the traffic in the last four years, so much of its economic waste, so much of its physical ruin, so much of its mental blight, so much of its tears and heartache, that I have come to regard the business as one that must be held and controlled by strong and effective laws. I bear no malice towards those engaged in the business, but I hate the traffic. I hate its every phase. I hate it for its intolerance. I hate it for its arrogance. I hate it for its hypocrisy. I hate it for its cant and craft and false pretenses. I hate it for its commercialism. I hate it for its avarice. I hate it for its sordid love of gain at any price. I hate it for its domination in politics. I hate it for its corrupting influence in civic affairs. I hate it for its incessant effort to debauch the suffrage of the country; for the cowards it makes of public men. I hate it for its utter disregard of law. I hate it for its ruthless trampling of the solemn compacts of State constitutions. I hate it for the load it straps to labor's back; for the palsied hand it gives to toil; for its wounds to genius; for the tragedies of its might-have-beens. I hate it for the human wrecks it has caused. I hate it for the almshouses it peoples; for the prisons it fills; for the insanity it begets; for its countless graves in potter's fields. I hate it for the mental ruin it imposes on its victims; for its spiritual blight; for its moral degradation. I hate it for the crimes it has committed. I hate it for the homes it has destroyed. I hate it for the hearts it has broken. I hate it for the malice it has planted in the hearts of men; for its poison, for its bitterness, for the dead sea fruit with which it starves their souls.

I hate it for the grief it causes womanhood—the scalding tears, the hopes deferred, the strangled aspirations, its burden of want and care.

I hate it for its heartless cruelty to the aged, the infirm and the helpless; for the shadow it throws upon the lives of children; for its monstrous injustice to blameless little ones.

I hate it as virtue hates vice, as truth hates error, as righteousness hates sin, as justice hates wrong, as liberty hates tyranny, as freedom hates oppression.

I hate it as Abraham Lincoln hated slavery. And as he sometimes saw in prophetic vision the end of slavery and the coming of the time when the sun should shine and the rain should fall upon no slave in the Republic, so I sometimes seem to see the end of this unholy traffic; the coming of the time, if it does not wholly cease to be, it shall find no safe habitation anywhere beneath Old Glory's stainless stars.

From Governor Hanley's speech at the Republican State Convention.

MINDEN CITY, Michigan, March 1, 1908.

Dear Sister Frances: Having many times felt it my duty to write for the Home Column, I will try to do so this Sabbath afternoon. We were somewhat disappointed when we arose this morning to see the snow blowing very hard, and it continued so we could not attend Sunday-school and sacrament services, as we live one and a half miles from our chapel. We have had so many seasons of rejoicing there, that it seems we can not afford to miss one Sunday. Oh, how soul-cheering it is to meet with those of like precious faith, to mingle our voices in song and praise to God, the giver of all we enjoy in this life; and oh, what a help the Sunday-school is to both old and young. Those who are not privileged to attend Sunday-school know not what they are missing.

I spent much of the forenoon in reading the HERALD. How much comfort and encouragement we find there! How much good the Mothers' Home Column has done me in times past; and how I wish I could write something that might cheer others in like manner! It seems life would be very lonely at times were it not for church papers. We, as mothers, ought to read and study much, so as to teach our little ones aright, and live godly lives before them, and to have much patience, and be kind and true to them, and teach them to obey their parents and God. Oh, how my heart has been pained to see how harshly some parents use their children. True, it is, we must make them mind; but there are many ways to do this. It requires a constant study, and we must not forget to pray often. The dear Father will help us through where we could accomplish nothing in our own strength. Our home has been blessed with one little girl. She is three years and five months old to-day. Children are a great care at times; but this is our life work as mothers, and how well we are repaid for our earnest toil and care! How much sunshine these little ones bring into the home! Many times when I have been sorely tried and discouraged, Fern would say to me, "Will you play the organ for a little while?" and it would seem as if it were impossible for me to do so; but, to please her, I would go and play a few hymns and sing, and oh, what comfort and cheer it has brought to me! Children can be taught when very young to sing and take an interest in Sunday-school. Fern knows all of her letters, and is very much interested in her Sunday-school Quarterly. I desire to do whatever I can for my Master, and try to do my duty in bringing up the little one as the Lord would have me. Because of ill health I can not do as much as I would like to; but so long as we do our best that is all that is required. Fern and I are alone just now. Husband has gone to do the chores for Bro. J. Obrien (our neighbor). He is away helping to care for a sick brother. I trust that this, though written in weakness, may do a little good at least. I desire to overcome and be faithful to the end. Pray for me, dear Saints.

LENA F. HENRY.

Prayer Union.

Sr. Emma Vancleave desires the prayers of the Prayer Union, and of the Saints everywhere, that she may be healed of the affliction that has troubled her so long if it be God's will.

Letter Department

VERA, Oklahoma, April 22, 1908.

Editors Herald: As I am sending subscription, will write a few lines. Wife and I are among the isolated number. We love the church papers. My mother and father take the Ensign, so we will take the HERALD and exchange papers. The few Saints here are all trying to do the will of our Father. We have had no preaching here since last spring, and are getting anxious for Bro. Keck or some one to come. He will find a hearty welcome.

I was baptized when a young boy, and have never regretted the step taken. I think it a great pleasure to serve a God who will hear and answer our prayers. My wife was baptized last spring, and is very strong in the faith. We are trying to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. I find, in trying to do this, that we are greatly blessed. My wife has never had the opportunity to take the sacrament but once; but our earnest prayer is that the time will soon come when we can live where there is a branch, that we may enjoy such privileges as the church affords.

We desire the prayers of all the Saints in our behalf.
Ever praying for the redemption of Zion, I am
Your brother,
EVERT RESER.

THEODORE, Alabama, April 20, 1908.

Dear Herald: I am only a girl of sixteen years. We have a Saints' church here, and I attend all the meetings I can. We have Religio on Wednesday night, prayer-meeting on Saturday night, and Sunday-school and church on Sunday. Our dear mother passed out of this world in 1906, and one dear sister in December, 1907, and it grieved us to lose those loved ones; but the dear Lord knows best. My papa is fifty-nine years old. One of my brothers is an elder. All of us belong to the church, excepting one brother. I want you all to pray for him that he may become a Saint some day.

Bro. Alexander Smith gave me my patriarchal blessing, and it gives me many warnings. My sister, Vadine, was married, the 15th of March, to Elder W. L. Booker. We would like to have some elders come and preach for us. They are ever welcome at our home. ADINA TILLMAN.

SCRANTON, Pennsylvania, March 2, 1908.

Editors Herald: Last January we had the names of nine good people for baptism. Not having a convenient place to baptize, as the water in the Lackawanna River is dirty, and the pond that we formerly baptized in no one was allowed to use for any purpose, as they were harvesting the ice for domestic use, I concluded that I would ask for the use of the swimming pool at the Y. M. C. A., but was refused. I wrote for a reason why they would not accommodate us, stating that it was my understanding that the Y. M. C. A. was an organization composed of the various religious denominations, and that we considered ourselves Christians. I stated that we would be willing to bear the expense, and to use the pool whenever it would be most convenient for them, but we were treated with silent contempt. No reasons given why we were refused. I had explained the difference between us and the Utah church.

I then concluded that I would next try the English and Welsh Baptist churches for the use of their baptistry, but was again refused, and the following correspondence took place; and as many of our friends here are interested in the matter, and are very much opposed to the way we have been treated, and some of the Saints thought if it would not be intruding too much on the space in the HERALD they would like to have the correspondence published, believing that we can use it to good advantage. I shall only submit the correspondence between me and Mr. Wrightnour, pastor of the English Baptist church. Mr. Hughes, of the Welsh Baptist, gave as his reasons why they objected to us using the font, that it was against their rules to permit any one, not of their faith, to use the same, and that the difference between their church and ours was so great that it was the unanimous sentiment of his brethren not to grant our request. I answered his letter, and presented an outline of our faith, and informed him that I was aware that there is a wide difference in the faith of the two churches, more than he possibly had ever thought, and extended to him a kindly invitation to meet us in a public discussion. I stated that we would affirm that our church is in harmony with the church of the New Testament, and asked, would he deny; or affirm that his is? Mr. Hughes never answered.

Christendom is so inconsistent. They claim it makes no difference what church you may unite with, just so you live a good, upright life. This we are trying to do, and I am safe in saying that the standing of the Saints morally and spiritually is at least equal to them. Still, while they cry, "All are one," they draw the line, not only against us, but others. One of our brethren asked a minister of this city if he would let a minister of another church occupy his pulpit. He replied that that depended who he was; that he had at one time permitted a fellow minister to occupy his pulpit, and he took one of the best members he had.

If the position is true that it makes no difference which of the various churches you unite with, why be fearful of letting others occupy their pulpit? It looks as though it is a question of bread and butter more than the salvation of souls.

Inclosed is the correspondence that I wish to be published, and if not published please return to me.

Your brother,
WILLIAM LEWIS.

SCRANTON, Pennsylvania, January 4, 1908.

MR. J. S. WRIGHTNOUR, Scranton, Pennsylvania.

Dear Sir: I have been laboring here for the past two years in the interest of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and have the names of some good people who wish to unite with us.

I called at the Armoury to make arrangements for the baptisms but was informed that during the epidemic of typhoid fever last year they let all the water run out of the swimming pools, and as they needed repairs, which has not yet been done, they could not refill them; and as there is no other public bath or font in the city, to my knowledge, outside of churches, that would answer our purpose, I ask if we may have the use of your baptismal font? As to the date, we can use it any time, after the 12th of this month, (January) to the 18th, and from three to seven o'clock p. m. The accommodation will be very much appreciated, and what expense there is, we will cheerfully pay.

As I am a stranger to you, I give as reference Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Williams, corner of Luzerne and Decker's Court, who are members of your church, I believe; also Miss Maria Evans, 310 South Main Avenue.

Kindly inform me as soon as convenient, if we may have the above favors.

Yours respectfully,

310 South Main Avenue. WILLIAM LEWIS.

SCRANTON, Pennsylvania, January 10, 1908.

Dear Sir: I laid the matter of the use of our baptistry before our deacons, but as we have several times given the use of it to the Millennial Dawn people and others, the unanimous feeling was that some of the other churches with baptistries should be applied to, and that we have done in this matter all that could reasonably be expected. Aside from our religious convictions, besides this, is the firm conviction on my part, and of those who have candidly investigated its origin, that the Book of Mormon is a piece of imposture, and no more a revelation from God than the Koran.

Feeling as we do about it, we feel that we should be lending our influence to what we believe to be "a lie and not the truth," if we should allow our baptistry to be used in that manner. I do not confound the Reorganized Church with the branch which teaches, or formerly taught polygamy.

With perfect frankness, I remain,

Yours,
J. S. WRIGHTNOUR,
Pastor First Baptist Church, Scranton.

SCRANTON, Pennsylvania, January, 1908.

MR. J. S. WRIGHTNOUR, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Scranton, Pennsylvania.

Dear Sir: Yours of January 10 at hand. I am very sorry that your opinion of the origin of the Book of Mormon is of such a low standard. It is an old and a true saying that "There are two sides to every question," and, "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him."—Proverbs 18: 13. No court of justice will sit in judgment upon any matter unless both sides are prepared to be heard. You have evidently judged and condemned the Book of Mormon after hearing but the one side, and that of those that have condemned it upon similar evidence to that which you have judged from. The Book of Mormon, like the Bible, stands upon its own merits, and we are ready to defend it from the same standard of evidence, as you and I would the Bible. In doctrine the two books agree, and if you believe the teachings of one, you can not consistently reject the other. The Bible gives the history of the people and the dealings of God with them upon the Eastern Continent; the Book of Mormon, the dealings of God with the people on the Western Continent, North and South America.

The spirit you manifest in refusing the baptistry to those who do not believe as you do belongs to the Dark Ages, and is in opposition to the spirit of the Constitution of this Government, which says, "all men shall have the privilege to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience" (as long as they do not interfere with the rights of others). We believe in an open Bible, and a free pulpit to all respectable people. I hope that I shall never be guilty of turning my fellow minister out into the cold, winter weather, and look upon him leading good, honest souls into the waters of baptism through the snow and ice, away from a convenient place for the faithful candidates to change their garments that have been made wet in following in the footsteps of their Savior, when it is in my power to invite them into the house that is equipped with all the conveniences necessary to enable them to comply with the ordinance of baptism. I may not believe that the minister has divine authority to officiate in the sacred ordinance, still, if he is a good, upright man, and believes he has authority, and the candidates are willing to follow him, why should I close the door against them? My duty is to preach to them the gospel, not to compel them to do as I think they should. All men have their agencies, and the Lord will hold every man responsible for how he has used it.

Let us apply the Golden Rule, Do unto others as you would they should do unto you.

Yours in the interest of truth and justice,
310 South Main Avenue. WILLIAM LEWIS.

SCRANTON, Pennsylvania, January 15, 1908.

MR. J. S. WRIGHTNOUR, Pastor First Baptist Church, Scranton, Pennsylvania.

Dear Sir: We extend to you, or your representative, if properly indorsed by your church (the First Baptist), an invitation to meet one of our representatives, indorsed by our church,—(the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,) in a friendly public discussion, time and place to be arranged later, as can be agreed upon by both parties, also the rules governing the discussion.

The subject matter for discussion:

First: "That the church I (J. S. Wrightnour) am a member of, is in harmony with the church of the New Testament established by Jesus Christ and his apostles, in organization, doctrine, gifts, and blessings. I (J. S. Wrightnour) to affirm, and I (William Lewis) to deny.

Second: "That the church I (William Lewis) am a member of, is in harmony with the church of the New Testament established by Jesus Christ and his apostles in organization, doctrine, gifts, and blessings. I (J. S. Wrightnour) to deny, and I (William Lewis) to affirm.

Third: "That the Book of Mormon is an imposition; no more a revelation from God than the Koran. J. S. Wrightnour to affirm, William Lewis to deny.

Fourth: "That the Book of Mormon contains the history of the seed of Joseph, the son of Jacob, mentioned in Genesis 47th, 48th, and 50th chapters, and contains a record of the dealings of God with the people upon the land of North and South America, and that the teaching of said Book of Mormon is worthy of the respect and esteem of all good people. William Lewis to affirm, and J. S. Wrightnour to deny.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM LEWIS.

SCRANTON, Pennsylvania, January 30, 1908.

Dear Sir: I have received your letter. You are, I think, quite unjust to the deacons and trustees of the First Baptist church, as well as myself. We have frequently given the use of our baptistry to people with whose views we do not altogether agree—for instance the "Millennial Dawn" people three times, as well as to the Ruthenian Mission, the Bethel Baptist church, and others. We think we have done our share, and that the three other Baptist churches on the west side, besides those in the rest of the city, might be approached as well as us. Whether they would consent to the use of their baptistries, I can not say. But it seems to me that those holding a faith as subversive of that which we hold as yours, and some others, would hardly wish to use a building the faith of whose builders and users you are seeking to overturn. I think I should hardly wish to ask a Roman Catholic church to lend their building for a Protestant service, nor a R. C. congregation a Protestant church.

With regard to the Book of Mormon, I am not so ignorant as you suppose. I have read it as I have also the Koran. I have had long conversations with preachers of the Mormon faith, and I have long since learned the futility of arguments with people who find it possible to believe in these things. The same is true with the Seventh Day Adventists, the Millennial Dawn or Russellite people, the Christian Scientists, and others with whose writings and doctrines I have made it my business to become familiar.

As to the Book of Mormon it is quite in harmony with those views of the New and Old Testaments which were in vogue among many at the period at which it was written, in the states of Pennsylvania, Ohio, and New York. It was near the time of the "Millerite" excitement, and not long after the rise of Campbellism, of which Sidney Rigdon, one of the founders of Mormonism, was one of the early teachers. Its doctrines are a mixture of the doctrines of these bodies, with others, more or less in harmony with the Bible—in my view oftener less than more.

It was my fortune to spend the early part of my ministry in two places, Pittsburg and Warren, Ohio, where I met old people who knew Rigdon. I can not say so much as to Joseph Smith—though I have heard much at second hand as to him. But this much is known by those who have investigated the subject. In the early part of the nineteenth century a retired Presbyterian clergyman named Spalding had the fancy that the North American Indians might be the descendants of the ten tribes which were taken captive. He amused himself by writing a romance, in the old English of the authorized Old Testament version, describing the wanderings and settlements of these tribes. The names which occur in the Book of Mormon were names he invented, such as Nephi, Moroni, etc. He was fond of reading his romance to his friends. His manuscript was left with a printer in Pittsburg in whose office Rigdon frequently was. The latter was a fluent but rather unbalanced man. He was at that time a Baptist preacher, but soon became a follower of Alexander Campbell. He went to Warren, Ohio, as preacher, where I met people who had seen and heard him. It is known that in the "thirties" of the nineteenth century, he became acquainted with Joseph Smith, who, like himself, was a mystic and a seeker after strange things, and with a great opinion of himself. About that time the Book of Mormon appeared and Rigdon became one of the leading preachers of the new faith. In later years he was cast out by Brigham Young. I met a man who met him in his old age. When the Book of Mormon first appeared several persons to whom Spalding had read his manuscript, said that in its so-called historical parts the Book of Mormon was almost identically the same thing. The conclusion is irresistible that Rigdon became possessed of the manuscript or copied it, became fascinated with the idea of it, communicated it to Joseph Smith, and between them they launched it on the world, in the shape of the Book of Mormon. Perhaps they imagined it might be true. I don't know.

At all events the above are well authenticated facts.

I am certain of one thing, that if Joseph Smith had translated from gold plates (which no one was permitted to see) the Book of Mormon, it is strange that he did not try to use the plain English of to-day instead of an imitation of the old English of the King James Version of the Bible. The story that the characters of the supposed gold plates were submitted to Professor Anthon and pronounced "Reformed Egyptian" is nonsense, first because no such language as Reformed Egyptian is known in heaven or on earth—and, secondly, because Professor Anthon (whose Greek text-books I studied at school) repeatedly denied that he had ever said any such thing.

I think a public discussion of all this would be entirely profitless and would only serve to advertise what I believe to be error. I have written this much so that if you are interested in pursuing this investigation you may read the book by Doctor Stanton on "Three Great Errors" or "Three Great Movements" (I forget which is the exact title). I will try to procure it for you. Doctor Stanton is my successor in Pittsburg and has also made an exhaustive study of the facts I have outlined. I am sorry that a man so sincere and so devout as I believe you to be, should be devoting yourself to the propagation of one of the false doctrines, as I believe them to be, which the New Testament tells us should arise, and "if it were possible, deceive the very elect."

When I procure the book above referred to I will send you a copy. I do not see my way clear to do more—and can only pray that the Lord may direct us both in the way of his commandments.

I remain, yours as ever,

J. S. WRIGHTNOUR.

SCRANTON, Pennsylvania, February 23, 1908.

MR. WRIGHTNOUR, Pastor of First Baptist Church, Scranton, Pennsylvania.

Dear Sir: Yours of January 30, 1908, received in due time. It is unfortunate for your position that at this late date you present an old, worn, threadbare story of the origin of the Book of Mormon, viz: the Spalding Romance. There never was a shadow of truth in the claims presented by the unbelievers to the true origin of the Book of Mormon, and reiterated by you.

The advocates of the Spalding theory do not agree in their statements. You claim that the Spalding Manuscript was left in a printing-office in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and that Mr. Sidney Rigdon was a frequent visitor there, and it was supposed that he, Mr. Rigdon, either stole the manuscript or copied it (no one saw him do either), and that he, in connection with Joseph Smith, published the Book of Mormon. You state that Rigdon met Joseph Smith in the thirties, which we understand to be from 1830 to 1839. If this be true then it will destroy your theory, for the Book of Mormon was published nearly one year before Mr. Rigdon ever met Joseph Smith.

On December 31, 1829, Sidney Rigdon solemnized the marriage contract between David Chandler and Polly Johnson, in the township of Chagrin and Cuyahoga County, Ohio, signed, A. Sidney Rigdon, Pastor the Baptist Church, in Mentor, Gauge County, Ohio; filed and recorded, January 12, 1830. November 4, 1830, he married Louis V. Wood to Laura Cleveland, in Kirtland Township, Ohio; recorded November 11, 1830, D. D. Askin, Clerk. Signed, Sidney Rigdon.

By the above facts we find Mr. Rigdon was still a minister of the Baptist Church, and living in Mentor, Ohio. About this time Mr. Parley P. Pratt, a fellow minister of Mr. Rigdon, of the Baptist Faith, but now an elder in the Church of Latter Day Saints, presented to Mr. Rigdon that faith, and November 14, 1830, Rigdon was baptized and became a member of the church of Latter Day Saints, and in December, 1830, he met Joseph Smith for the first time. The 11th of June, 1829, in the clerk's office of the Northern District of New York, the following was recorded: "Be it remembered that on the 11th day of June, 1829, Joseph Smith, Jr., of said District, hath deposited in this office the title of a book, the right whereof he claims as author in words following towit: 'The Book of Mormon, an account written by the hand of Mormon upon plates taken from the plates of Nephi, and also of the Lamanites. Etc.' R. R. Longsing, clerk of the Northern District of New York." As early as June, 1829, Joseph Smith had the manuscript of the Book of Mormon ready for publication, and in August, 1829, it was delivered to the printer, one Mr. John H. Gilbert, of Palmyra, New York, and it was all printed by March, 1830.

The above are facts, and matter of record, so if the theory, presented by you, be correct, viz: that Mr. Rigdon stole or copied the Spalding Manuscript, he was too late in presenting it to Joseph Smith.

Let me present to you another popular statement, as to the origin of the Book of Mormon. It is on the same line as the one presented by you, only in this case it is claimed that Joseph Smith himself obtained the manuscript, and not Mr. Rigdon, which is more consistent, as we have shown that the Book of Mormon was published some months before Mr. Rigdon had become identified with the Latter Day Saint Church, or of meeting Joseph Smith.

This theory is: that Mr. Spalding took much pleasure in reading his manuscript to his neighbors, and that it was identical with the Book of Mormon, names, Nephi, Moroni, and Lehi appearing quite frequently. Among those who attended the readings was one Joe Smith. He became deeply interested in the manuscript and asked Mr. Spalding, if he, Smith, could take it home to read to his wife and children, and that was the last that Mr. Spalding saw of the manuscript. Now, Mr. Wrightnour, do you not think that this is the better theory of the two? Still, there are objections to this, while it seems quite reasonable and consistent to all who are not acquainted with the following facts: Joseph Smith was born December 23, 1805, and Mr. Spalding died at Amity, Washington County, Pennsylvania, in 1816. How long before his death (Spalding's) Joseph Smith borrowed the manuscript the witnesses do not say. However, Joseph was rather young to have a wife and children, being only eleven years of age. In the language of the good book we say, "Thou art weighed in the balances and found wanting," as the following will show: June the 12th, 1885, Mr. L. L. Rice, of Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, once in the printing business in Pennsylvania, sent to the Library of Oberlin College, Ohio, the original manuscript of Solomon Spalding, copies of which have been published under the direction of Oberlin College, and can be had at the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa. In a letter, now in my possession, written by Azariah S. Root, Librarian of the Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, he certifies that they have in their library the original manuscript, written by Solomon Spalding, which was sent to said library by Mr. L. L. Rice, of Honolulu, in 1885, and copies of this manuscript made under their direction, have been furnished to the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints Publishing House, at Lamoni, Iowa.

Volumes have been published and thousands of lectures delivered from the public platform, as well as the pulpit, and far and near has the cry gone forth, "Book of Mormon is a delusion, a piece of imposition, the origin of the Book of Mormon is the Spalding Romance." For nearly sixty years it was a sweet morsel, even for the clergy to feed their flock with this untruth as to the origin of the Book of Mormon. They may have been honest, but time has demonstrated that they were wrong in their denunciations of the Book of Mormon.

For the sake of truth I am grateful that the original manuscript of Spalding's has come to light, and that through a channel that was not in any way connected with the Church of Latter Day Saints, nor in sympathy with the origin of the Book of Mormon. With all due respect to those who have testified that the Book of Mormon and Solomon Spalding's romance was identical, I beg leave to say that the two books differ as widely as the Bible does with last year's almanac.

You say that you have read the Book of Mormon, and that you are certain that Joseph Smith never translated from the plates, as no one was permitted to see them. On the first page of the Book of Mormon there is the testimony of eleven men who saw the plates, and how can you make the statement that none were permitted to see them? Have you no regard for truth? When a minister says he is certain of a matter, there should be no cause to doubt his statement. How do you know that Joseph Smith never translated those plates? He did the work before you were born. These eleven witnesses whose signatures appear as stated on the first page of the book, never went back on their testimony. One of them, Mr. John Whitmer, I had the honor to see, in company with T. T. Hinderks, and C. P. Faul, of Stewartsville, Missouri, and to us he reiterated his testimony as recorded in said Book of Mormon. This occurred at Mr. John Whitmer's home, in Far West, Caldwell County, Missouri, February, 1876.

During the dark and cloudy day that came upon the church after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, June, 1844, the church divided into several factions, and, the witnesses became scattered in the following of Brigham Young, Strang, and others; but in their divided and scattered condition they, to a man, maintain that their testimony, as recorded, was the truth, and died strong in the faith of the divinity of the Book of Mormon.

Again you say that it is strange that if Joseph Smith translated from the plates that he did not do so in the English language of his day, in place of trying to imitate the Old Testament. Will you answer why the translators of the King James Version of the Bible did not give it to us in the plain English language of their day, and why did not the committee of the Revised Edition of the Bible do so? You conclude because Joseph did not do so, he was an imitator and a forger. What about the other two committees?

You state that you would hardly ask the Roman Catholics for the use of their building to hold Protestant services in, or the Protestants for the Catholics to hold their services in. You may not like to do so, but I am pleased that I can speak for a church whose doors are open to representatives of the Catholic or the Protestant religion. Let me repeat my former statement to you, "Welcome to all respectable, upright men and women. An open Bible, and a free pulpit." If you have the truth you should have no fear, and if you have not, "prove all things, and hold fast that which is good."

You say that a public discussion would be fruitless, and would only serve to advertise what you believe to be error. That is just the reason why I submitted the propositions to you for public discussion. I want the public as well as yourself to know where the error is. It is evident from your letter that you are holding to an erroneous position when you will at this late date maintain that the Spalding Romance is the origin of the Book of Mormon. There was, at one time, a shadow of an excuse for those not informed, prior to the discovery of the manuscript, but to hold on to that position now is strong evidence that whosoever does, loves darkness more than light. In conclusion I extend to you an invitation to exchange pulpits whenever it is convenient, not for the purpose to slash and cut the religious ideas and faiths of others, but to present the truth as it is in the word of God, and if by so doing, you can convince us that we are in error, I shall consider you a friend, and say in the language of the wise man, "A rebuke of a friend is better than the kiss of an enemy." No, Mr. Wrightnour, I have no desire to tear down my neighbor's house, but, I am anxious to show my fellow man the house (church) that Christ built, and if, after I have had the privilege to present that church, my religious friends are satisfied with the one they are believers and members of, I shall still continue to treat them with kindness, and bid them God-speed in all that is good, and ask that we all shall strive to live up to the Golden Rule, Do unto others as we would others would do unto us.

WM. LEWIS.

BIRMINGHAM, England, April 6, 1908.

Editors Herald: We are still alive in Birmingham, and doing a little for the Master's cause. The little branch, Summerfield, over which I preside, have moved out of the room that we occupied so many years, and which became unsuitable for our requirements, as we could seldom get strangers to come in. Am pleased to say we have a more suitable place, adjoining the piece of freehold lawn we bought for erecting a chapel, at much less rent than the other. It is more comfortable, and we have had more strangers and friends in the last six weeks than in twelve months at the old room. We hope for better times. The inclosed verses were composed by the blind Sr. Taylor, now residing in Stafford, late of the Saints' Home. Thought you might publish them in HERALD for the benefit of those who know her.

With best wishes and kind regards to all,

J. E. MEREDITH.

Beatrice Villa Hunton Road, Gravelly Hill.

How welcome to the Saints, the hour
When Christ our Lord from heaven shall come,
And change us by his mighty power
And take us to his Father's home.

How welcome to the Saints, the morn
When all of sin is done away,
And from the tomb we shall be borne
To dwell with Christ in endless day.

Our eyes shall see, our ears shall hear,
Our tongues, unloosed, his praise shall tell;
No pain, no death, no grave to fear,
For Jesus doeth all things well.

Oh hasten, Lord; that joyful hour,
When thou from heaven shall come again
In glorious majesty and power,
And o'er the earth triumphant reign.

Loud hallelujahs shall arise
From all thy Saints,—on earth, on high,—
Our songs shall swell with glad surprise,
Shouts of hosanna fill the sky.

Lord, help us by thy mighty power;
Watchful and faithful may we be,
That in the resurrection hour
We all with joy thy face may see.

January 15, 1908.

News From Branches

NEW ALBANY, INDIANA.

Last fall, I promised good news before the roses bloomed again. We have changed our meeting place from Ninth and Main to 1117 Vincennes Street. We now have a lovely hall which we have rented for one year with privilege of two more years. The Sunday-school purchased a nice lot of new chairs, Bro. Alma Brown put on the wall paper, and Bro. Enlitt did the painting, so everything looks cozy and prosperous, also progressive.

We recently had our Sunday-school organization completed, and our school is now in fine working order.

To all who are interested, wish to state that we have preaching at a quarter of eleven in the morning, and at half past seven, every Sunday, except the first Sunday of each month, when the morning services are dispensed with. Sunday-school every Sunday at half past nine, except the first Sunday of each month, when it is at nine o'clock.

2017 Culbertson Avenue.

JOHN ZAHND.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

We are very thankful to have Bro. Tanner returned to labor with us for another year. He with his family have endeared themselves to us.

Our church is now equipped with electric lights, which we find quite an improvement; painting and cleaning have also been attended to.

Bro. R. Archibald performed the ceremony which united in marriage Bro. Lewis Joerndt and Sr. Alice Schaeffer, April 17, at ten o'clock. They left at noon for a visit with Bro. Joerndt's mother and relatives in Pontiac, Illinois.

A number of our young people held a prayer-meeting in behalf of Sr. Anna Shaw, who has been ill so long, Sunday afternoon, at the home of her parents, Bro. and Sr. J. R. Lloyd, where she and her husband reside. We sincerely hope she will be restored to health.

We are anticipating two good sermons, May 3, from Apostle Rushton.

2739 DeJong Street.

Your sister in Christ,

E. M. PATTERSON.

Miscellaneous Department

Pastoral.

To the Ministry and Members of Mission No. 5, namely, Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, and Alabama; Greeting: The following brethren, who have been assigned to the Southern States—T. C. Kelley assistant minister in charge of said territory will have oversight of the work, and direct the ministry in said territory, with the exception of J. W. Metcalf, who will report to the general minister in charge, and will be directed by the same in his ministerial work. Northeastern Kentucky and Southern Ohio, with Louisville as objective point, will be this brother's field of labor. The other ministry in the South, namely, C. L. Snow, D. E. Tucker, J. M. Stubbart, E. A. Erwin, F. Slover, and N. E. Booker, will report to and be directed by Bro. T. C. Kelley. All local officers and Saints who will have business with the minister in charge in the above named Southern States, refer to Bro. Kelley, who will confer with me. Address T. C. Kelley at Independence, Missouri.

Bro. R. Baldwin and Hallibaugh will operate the tent in Pittsburg District during the tent season. R. C. Russell and

J. W. Davis will labor until further orders along the Monongahela and the Ohio Rivers. Davis will labor in the vicinity of Fayette City, Pennsylvania, in connection with missionaries R. C. Russell and J. W. Davis. J. A. Becker, our new bishop, will doubtless travel in the three districts, Kirtland, Pittsburg, and Ohio, respectively, in the interest of his line of work, and will be assisted by two counselors in due time. Bro. J. W. Davis will look after the Pittsburg Branch in the absence of Bro. Becker. Bro. C. Ed. Miller, president of district, will find plenty to do in looking after the branches, making Wheeling, West Virginia, his objective point. S. J. Jeffers, president of Ohio District, will look after the interest of same. Elder William H. Kelley is requested to go to Dayton and Middletown right away, and look after the work at these points until September. Bro. George A. Smith will continue to preside over the Kirtland District until after district conference, and also in the north-western part of Ohio. Bro. E. E. Long will work the tent during the summer months in Columbus and vicinity. The local ministry will render him assistance. Bro. I. N. Roberts will spend most of his time laboring among his relatives in Ohio and Virginia. Bro. O. B. Thomas and W. O. Skinner are assigned to West Virginia. Bro. S. Brown will labor in the northwestern part of Ohio, Toledo his objective point. Bro. T. J. Sheldon will labor in Kirtland and look after the Temple during the summer months. Bro. William LaRue will confine his labors to the city of Cleveland. Bro. J. C. McConaughy is assigned to New Philadelphia and vicinity until further notice. Bro. W. H. Fuller will continue his labor in Uniontown, Pennsylvania. Elder J. C. Clapp has my permission to visit Kentucky and Tennessee. We wish him God-speed while he sojourns in the mission. Bro. W. N. Hanner, who last year assisted Bro. Metcalf in missionary work, is hereby given permission by the writer to do all that his circumstances will permit in the coming year. I herewith urge the ministry to be prompt in reporting to those in charge the first of every quarter, and we sincerely trust the Saints will not forget their financial obligations to the church. We can not succeed in carrying on the work of God without the financial support of all. It is possible that the above arrangements of the ministry may be changed somewhat during the year, however, due notice will be given of the same. Praying that our eternal Father will abundantly bless our endeavors to win souls to Christ, and to help build up his great cause among men, I remain, Bro. U. W. Greene and I have arranged the dividing line in the western end of Pennsylvania. I will also arrange for two-days' meetings in most of the branches later on.

Your well-wisher and collaborer in the one covenant,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS,
Minister in General Charge.

1463 Pennsylvania Avenue, COLUMBUS, Ohio.

To All the Holy Brethren throughout Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Louisiana, I Come Greeting: We have just merged into another conference year, wherein we must make a record for ourselves, God, and the church, that must be met for good or otherwise at the end of the conference year. Branch and district officers have been called and set apart, I trust, by the voice of the brethren as they were moved upon by the wisdom of the Spirit, to preside over and counsel them in things pertaining to their good citizenship in the church and kingdom of God; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind through the voice of the Spirit, as overseers to the children of God. Dear brethren, as you magnify your calling, so will your reward be. It is expected that all presidents of branches will make full and complete reports to the presidents of their respective districts, on blanks that will be furnished them on application to either myself or my assistants, or presidents of districts. These reports should be made on the first day of July, October, January, and March. Immediately after these reports are in the hands of the district president, he should complete his district report, and forward to my assistant, so he can report the same to me. Under no circumstances should this part of the work be neglected, either by branch or district president. It is, that we might be in touch with the interest of the work, taking a bird's-eye view of the whole mission, which the Lord, we trust, has put us in charge of, by the spirit of wisdom and revelation through the First Presidency of the church. That I might be better able to handle and care for the different parts of the field, I have chosen and appointed as my assistants, Elders W. M. Aylor, Hubert Case, and J. T. Riley. Bro. Aylor, in charge of Texas; Bro. Case, of Oklahoma; and Bro. Riley, of Arkansas and Louisiana. These brethren are of the Seventy, whole-souled, clean, and chaste, and worthy of your patronage. Do not turn them away empty handed when they chance to be among you on duty for the church. The minister may leave his home and loved ones to carry the gospel to the world without purse and scrip; but, remember, railroad fares, clothing, stationery, and incidental expenses must be met by them; otherwise, they are made to suffer in a land of plenty, by reason of a little carelessness of those among whom they are laboring. Christ said: "Whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward." If a reward for so small a remembrance, what may be had for greater things? While it is a worthy "gift" for the minister to give his life to God and the church, turning his footsteps from his home into the cold world to deal out the bread of life—keeping in touch with the motto, "Freely you have received, freely give," he needs the loving hand of a comforting friend now and then to assist him to his work. Finally, brethren, be cheerful in your warfare, meet trials, persecutions, and the privations incident to your work and calling, without murmur and complaint, being faithful and diligent, and God will go before you by his agents, the angels, to open doors and soften hearts to receive you and the great message of truth you bear. Let any, or all, feel free to write me or my assistants, when they feel a word from our pens would be of comfort to them.

Ever your affectionate brother,

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, April 24.

I. N. WHITE.

To the Saints of Spokane (Washington) District; Greeting: Since the close of our General Conference those in charge of the Western Mission have seen fit to transfer me from the Montana District to the Spokane District. This places me in territory new to me; and, in order to secure a proper understanding of the needs and wants of the district, so far as preaching the gospel is concerned, I ask the Saints in different parts of the district, especially where preaching is needed, to write me, as soon as practicable, and give me some idea of the interest, demands, and prospects for labor where you live. I may not be able to fill all the calls; but, if I know the situation and present needs in the different places, I shall be better prepared to plan my work for the summer. Shall expect to reach Spokane sometime between the 6th and 10th of May; and I want to begin work at once, after getting into my field.

Just what arrangements those in charge may make, I do not know; hence I shall not anticipate. But, by getting in touch with the work and workers of the district, I hope to begin, at least, to get acquainted with the Saints and their needs along spiritual lines.

I do not know, yet, what my field address may be; but, for the present, you may address me as follows: Elder Isaac M. Smith, care W. W. Fordham, East 2317 Pacific Avenue, Spokane, Washington.

Hoping our acquaintance may prove both pleasant and profitable, I am,

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, April 27.

Yours in gospel bonds,
ISAAC M. SMITH.

To the Brethren and Saints of Texas: Having been appointed assistant in charge of the state of Texas, I take this opportunity of expressing a few suggestions and directions to you. After consulting with Bro. White, I have decided our force should be divided, (so all the State may have some special care) as follows:

Bro. Johnie Hay and Saleda D. Shippy will labor in the southeastern part of the State, known as the Texas Central District.

Bro. D. S. Palmer, John Harp, and W. H. Mannering, in the Southwestern Texas District.

Bro. B. F. Renfroe, R. M. Maloney, and P. B. Bussell, in the north and northwestern parts of the State, extending about as far south as Hillsboro.

We hope these brethren will cooperate, and when it is possible and necessary, observe the rule to go two and two. Also look out for the scattered Saints, that do not have church privileges, and open the work in their vicinity, and avoid following the old trails, and make new openings a specialty; and when an interest is aroused, by all means stay with it for weeks if necessary to develop the work. I think lots of our work has been lost in the past by leaving it too soon. I think the best way to reach the people in towns through the summer, is to hold outdoor meetings; get as public a place as we can; do some advertising; where it is possible, fix up some seats, and make our services as attractive as possible.

As missionaries, our time belongs to the church. Let us see to it that it is well spent. The opportunities are great

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

now for our work, I do not think we ought to have any trouble making from forty to sixty sermons a quarter. Please observe the request Bro. I. N. White makes in his pastoral address, on reporting. My field address for the month of June, will be San Antonio, Texas, 341 Stace Street. Mail your first report to me there on the first day of July, 1908. Home address will reach me any time, would be pleased to hear from all.

Ever praying that we may have a prosperous year, and be kept from all evil, sustained by the Holy Spirit, and bring many people into the kingdom,

As ever, your brother, and colaborer, INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, April 30. W. M. AYLOR.

Bishop's Notice.

To the Saints of Northern California, including San Jose; Greeting: The General Conference of 1908 has passed into history as having been well attended. We have returned to our field of labor strengthened, and hope to do all that opportunity affords for the good of all and the Master's cause.

There is one thought I wish to call attention to, and that is, if we expect to find favor with the Lord we must do as he has bidden us. If we want his blessings in our temporal affairs, we must comply with the terms upon which they are promised. "If ye do what I say, then am I bound, otherwise ye have no promise." There is no evading that. I expect to visit all the branches and do what I can to have all comply with the law, which if all would do, we would have ample means. Please note my change of address,

CHAS. A. PARKIN, Bishop. 18 Clement Street, SAN FRANCISCO, California.

High Priests' Quorum.

To Quorum of High Priests; Greeting: A few of our number failed to report, and several will have a change of address by reason of appointment to new fields by the late General Conference. Will all who have changed their post-office addresses since the publication of Annual of 1907, please, upon reading this notice, send me their present address; for this is absolutely necessary to a safe delivery to you of such mail as I may have to transmit you.

Settlement in full has been made with the printer for Annual of 1907, but we need financial help to get out the Annual for 1908. Will you contribute at an early date, to meet this unavoidable expense? Hope to hear from a goodly number, with a liberal consideration.

ROBT. M. ELVIN, Secretary. LAMONI, Iowa, April 30, 1908.

Convention Notices.

The Philadelphia District Sunday-school association will meet in convention at Elk Mills, Maryland, Saturday, May 30, at 2 p. m. Superintendents will please send their reports to the secretary early; also delegates to represent their schools. E. B. Hull, secretary, 3513 North Smedley Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Reunion Notices.

The Eastern Reunion Association will hold its next session July 25, 1908. M. C. Fisher, chairman.

Addresses.

J. C. Clapp, Cottage Grove, Tennessee, R. R. 11, Box 41.

Born.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Selain Tideman, a daughter, February 6, 1908, Chicago, Illinois, and named, Mildred Elizabeth. Blessed under the hands of Elders F. M. Cooper and J. E. Wildermuth, April 29, 1908, at Plano, Illinois. Little Mildred is a promising baby, and represents the Master's thought—"for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Died.

EWING.—Sr. M. A. Ewing, at her home near Estillene, Texas. Sr. Ewing was born January 22, 1845. Was married to Bro. John Ewing, May 5, 1865. Baptized July 4, 1904, by Elder T. J. Sheppard. She passed from this life February 4, 1908; and died in the faith of the gospel restored. She was the mother of several children. How sad the parting, yet

"With them the toil and strife are o'er; Their labors end, their sorrows cease; For they have gained the blissful shore Where dwells serene, eternal peace."

McFADDEN.—Sr. Mary McFadden, relict of the late Arthur McFadden, died at Fletcher, Ontario, April 3, 1908. She was born in Northumberland County, England, February 19, 1831. Married in 1856. There were born three sons and four daughters, who are in the church, with the exception of one daughter. Sr. McFadden, with her husband, was baptized November 25, 1863, at Louisville, Ontario, by J. W. Gillen, and confirmed by John Shippy and J. W. Gillen. She remained a faithful and devoted member of the church till death. Buried at Maple Leaf Cemetery. Funeral-service conducted by Stewart Lamont.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice, Mite, and Rain Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF

NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

FARM FOR SALE

180 acres, mostly in crop, well fenced, splendid stock farm, three quarters of a mile from L. D. S. church. Immediate possession, Terms favorable.

L. J. THOMAS, Earlham, Iowa.

THE INDIAN MAIDEN

A Temperance Story

No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

Bible References

By Alvin Knisley

Paper cover 5 cents
Cloth cover 10 cents

Atonement of Christ and Final Destiny of Man

Revised and Enlarged

No. 17—10 cents each.

Low Rates

via

From Lamoni, Iowa

Pacific Coast

$62.30 to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego and return. $62.30 to Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and Vancouver and return. Similar rates to many other points. Tickets on sale daily after June 1.

Colorado and Utah

$34.30 to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo and return, May 19, June 2 and 16; $38.40 to Salt Lake City and Ogden and return, $38.40 to Butte and Helena and return, $36.70 to Billings, Mont., Basin, Cody and Worland, Wyo., and return.

Summer Tourist Rates

Very low rate round trip Summer Tourist tickets to Colorado and Utah, Yellowstone Park, Black Hills and the Pacific Coast will be on sale daily, commencing June 1.

Homeseekers' Rates

Very low round trip rates to practically all points west of the Missouri River on the 1st and 3rd Tuesdays of May and June.

Big Horn Basin Excursion

Personally conducted homeseekers' excursions May 19, June 2 and 16; to assist settlers to secure irrigated lands in the famous Big Horn Basin, Wyo., and Yellowstone Valley, Mont. Ask for folders telling all about these lands.

Round Trip $36.70.

No matter where you are going I can give you rates, printed matter, and useful information.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent, C., B. & Q. Ry.

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church. 11f

The Jackson County Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

ELIS SHORT, President.	M. H. BOND, Vice-president.
WM. CRICK, Vice-president.	J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.
G. H. HILLIARD.	DR. J. MATHER.
MRS. O. H. RIGGS.	A. L. YINGLING.
	HORACE SHELEY.

Very truly yours,
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid .. $30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

"HEAVEN AND HELL"
BY SWEDENBORG
400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps
PASTOR LANDENBERGER,
Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK
LAMONI, IOWA

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, MAY 13, 1908

NUMBER 20

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
LEON A. GOULD, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

Editorial

"LATTER DAY SAINT WOMEN OF THE PAST."

In the Woman's Exponent, for February, 1908, a journal published in Salt Lake City and conducted by the women of Utah, there appears the following under the caption of "Latter Day Saint women of the past; personal impressions by Emeline B. Wells."

To begin a series of remembrances of eminent women, who have been conspicuous in church history, one must first mention Lucy Smith, mother of the Prophet Joseph Smith. This article is not to be life sketches but, as stated, only personalities from the writer's point of view. That Lucy Smith was a strong character is self-evident from her own picture. She was everywhere recognized among the Saints as a remarkable personage, a woman whose soul shone out of her eyes, and who uttered wise sayings. It was considered a privilege to call upon her, and one felt in her presence a sort of unusual reverence. To me she seemed what she really was, the mother of great men. She possessed a very good gift of language to express her ideas, and did not hesitate to speak somewhat authoritatively. The people paid her homage wherever she went and quoted her wise sayings. She impressed me as a woman of great power and force of character. She seemed to be by nature endowed with the rare gifts of prophecy, blessing the sisters and healing the sick, as well as giving spiritual comfort and consolation to the sorrowing and afflicted. Lucy Smith was born in Gilson, [Gilsun] Cheshire County, New Hampshire, July 8, 1776, and died in Nauvoo, Illinois, May 5, 1855.

The wife of the Prophet Joseph must be next in order of early church women. She was a woman of great prominence among the people; large and well proportioned, of splendid physique, dark complexion, with piercing eyes that seemingly looked one through; noble in appearance and bearing and certainly favored of the Lord, who called upon her to prepare the first hymn-book of the Latter Day Saints, and by revelation styled her the "elect lady."

Sister Emma was benevolent and hospitable; she drew around her a large circle of friends, who were like good comrades. She was motherly in her nature to young people, always had a houseful to entertain or be entertained. She was very high-spirited and the brethren and sisters paid her great respect. Emma was a great solace to her husband in all his persecutions and the severe ordeals through which he passed; she was always ready to encourage and comfort him, devoted to his interests, and was constantly by him whenever it was possible. She was a queen in her home, so to speak, and beloved by the people, who were many of them indebted to her for favors and kindnesses.

Emma Smith was fond of horses and could manage them well in riding or driving. Many can recall seeing her mounted on horseback beside her husband in military parade and a grander couple could nowhere be found. She always dressed becomingly, and a riding costume showed off her shapely figure to the best advantage. She was a woman of

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
"Latter Day Saint Women of the Past" - - - -	457
A Significant Omission - - - - -	458
Historical Department of the Boone Indian Mound -	460
Amendment to Book of Rules - - - - -	460
Remnants of the Sacrificial Feast - - - - -	461
Lamoni Items - - - - -	461
Notes and Comments - - - - -	462
ELDERS' NOTE-BOOK:
Theology versus Fact - - - - -	463
Sermons in Barrels - - - - -	463
Nagging Non-Members - - - - -	463
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
Sunday-School and Religio Work in the Lamoni Stake	464
Celestial Law, or the perfect Law of Liberty - -	466
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
Why I Am a Total Abstainer - - - - -	468
What the "New Theology" Means - - - - -	470
MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:
Resting in God - - - - -	471
A Few Thoughts on the Sunday-School Work - -	472
Where is Heaven - - - - -	472
The Easy Chair - - - - -	472
Just in Time to Catch the Train - - - - -	472
LETTER DEPARTMENT:
Letters - - - - -	473
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:
Conference Minutes:
Leeds - - - - -	475
Florida - - - - -	476
Mobile - - - - -	476
Spring River - - - - -	476
Pastoral - - - - -	476
Bishop's Agents' Notices - - - - -	477
Fourth Quorum of Priests - - - - -	477

Nothing is so easy as to deceive one's self; for what we wish, that we readily believe. Demos-thenes.

• * •

Baseness of character or conduct not only sears the conscience, but deranges the intellect. Right conduct is connected with right views.—Colton.

commanding presence and in her palmy days, a brilliant conversationalist. Born in Harmony, Susquehanna County, Pennsylvania, July 10, 1804; died in Nauvoo, Illinois, April 30, 1879."

We are decidedly pleased to note this very favorable comment on Grandmother Lucy Smith, the mother of Joseph Smith and his brother, Hyrum, and also of Emma, the wife of the Prophet. We are pleased to note this apparent change of opinion, if it may be called that, for certainly the commendatory mention and eulogy passed by Mrs. Emeline B. Wells shows the life and characteristics of the wife of the Prophet differ very materially from what was said of the same woman years ago by President Brigham Young, who is on record as having called her a "wicked, wicked woman," charging her with hostility against her husband, and not being in sympathy with him in faith; also charging her with having burned the original of the so-called revelation on celestial marriage.

If the estimate of Mrs. Wells is the correct one, which of course we believe, then she is to be credited with having stated the truth when she affirmed that she knew nothing of the revelation referred to, had never seen it until after it was published by the people of Utah, had never seen the original, had not burned it, and knew nothing about her husband's implication with the dogma, if he was implicated.

We commend this to the reading of the Saints, and all others who may be in any way interested in contemplating the life and character of the Prophet's wife.

A SIGNIFICANT OMISSION.

In the Liahona for January 11, 1908, there is an extract from a discourse delivered by Thomas L. Kane, who became connected with the Mormons just about the time of their leaving Nauvoo, before the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, March 26, 1850, which extract, a postscript written by Thomas L. Kane himself and dated July 15, 1850, we give entire to the readers of the HERALD:

I am asked to explain or justify the Mormon creed: I will have nothing to do with it. It is enough for me to say, that it does not manifest itself externally by the Pythian ravings of Eleusinian hocus pocus of new religions, nor the pageantry or mummerly of those sometimes established; that its communicants cultivate no mysteries or double faiths and that I certainly think they are to be believed in their own exposition of it. [Omission.] I am not called upon to investigate this subject, so long as any person of a jealous orthodoxy can constitute himself as good an inquisitor, by investing somewhere about one dollar and fifty cents.

Nor shall I go out of my way to discuss the question of the former character of the Mormons. What they were in Illinois, or what some of their predecessors were there, it will not be difficult for those to learn who are curious after the truth; the Honorable Stephen A. Douglas, who is Presiding Judge of the Circuit in which they lived and was often called upon to dismiss idle charges against them, is now at Washington, an honored member of the Senate of the United States. His personal testimony, I am assured, has always vindicated his judicial action. Some people who believed the Mormons traduced, ask me how they are to account for the great prevalence of these charges before the expulsion. Interest and feeling founded on it, is the answer. The value of the property of which the Mormons were dispossessed in Missouri and Illinois is currently estimated at over twenty millions of dollars; an adequate consideration certainly for a good deal of misrepresentation on the part of those who were endeavoring to appropriate it to themselves.

A motive sufficiently analagous explains the active circulation of new calumnies within the last half year. Instead of being broken up for ever, as not more than five years ago their foes supposed with reason, their congregation is gathering in increased numbers, and their application to be admitted as a State into the Union, announces their probable restoration to power and influence, and is a cause of corresponding disquiet to the possessors of the properties in Illinois and Missouri, from which they have been expelled. These are now the busiest Mormon slanderers. I speak of them with reluctance. They are, the best of them, but interested persons, who circulate calumnies at hearsay, calumnies which began with the original enemies of the Mormons, the felons, that charged with unchastity the wretched women they had ravished—with riot the men whose brothers they had murdered—with community of property those whom themselves had robbed, whose houses and homes they fired over their heads on the lands from which they drove them. Such wretches lie with the brutal strength of crime. And the Mormons are far away, and their few friends here are nearly all humble in life, and those public men in the West, whose duty it was to do them justice, consent to render themselves parties to the guilt of their constituents by their interested silence.

At all events was there not something about their religion that made their neighbors unable to live with them? Undoubtedly the industrious chevaliers of the Half Breed Tract, and other precious neighbors of the Mormons, have in one sense proved this to be the case; perhaps, in the course of their wolf and lamb quarrel, they may have even said so, and before they finally devoured the offenders; complained seriously of the insulting proximity of their good roads, good schools, temperance, and moral reform, and musical associations, and their good laws not enacted only, but enforced. I understand this to be essentially the ground of complaint of the same marauders against the Swedish Quaker Colony they have lately broken up in Henry County, above Nauvoo.

With other neighbors the Mormons have no trouble. We have had large numbers of them in Philadelphia, and elsewhere in the East, for now nearly twenty years past, whose good citizenship is no subject of a discussion with those who have daily business dealings with them. In England, too, they number nearly twice as many adult members as the Baptists in Pennsylvania. Once, indeed, when their religion was first preached in that country—it was at the very time their earliest trial before Lynch J. in Missouri was pending—a charge was laid against them in a manufacturing borough there that they had made away with an Elizabeth or Betsy Martin, one of their new converts; and the beginning of a mob entered upon its extermination. But to her British Majesty's government, which holds the old-fashioned notions of law and order, it mattered as little if it were the case of Betsy Martin, a Mormon, as if it were Betty Martin the Cyprian. A commonplace government magistrate decided there should be no mob, and a commonplace legal investigation decided the charge was groundless. The Mormons have therefore been free to preach, and sing, and pray, in the United Kingdom to this hour, and I remark that evangelistic secretaries of my own persuasion there, do battle with them in print on the same terms as with Millerites, Wesleyans, or Seventh, or Every-day Baptists.

It is observed to me with a vile meaning that I have said little about the Mormon women. I have scarcely alluded to them, because my memories of them are such that I can not think of their character as a theme for discussion. In one word, it was eminently that which for Americans dignifies the names of mother, wife and sister. Of the self-denying generosity, which went to ennoble the whole people in my eyes, I witnessed among them the brightest illustrations. I have seen the ideal of charity of the statue gallery surpassed by the young Mormon mother, who shared with the stranger's orphan the breast of milk of her own child.

Can such charges, which are so commonly and so circumstantially laid, be without any foundation at all? I know it. Upon my return from the prairie I met through the settlements scandalous stories against the president of the sect, which dated of the precise period when I myself was best acquainted with his self-denying and blameless life. I had an experience no less satisfactory with regard to other falsehoods, some of them the most extravagant and most widely believed. During the sickness I have referred to, I was nursed by a dear lady, well connected in New York and New Jersey, whom I sufficiently name to many, by stating that she was the first cousin of one of our most respected citizens, whose conduct as chief magistrate of Philadelphia in an excited time won for him our general esteem. In her exile she found her severest suffering in the belief that her friends in the States looked upon her as irreclaimably an outcast. It was one of the first duties I performed on my return, to enlighten them as to her true position, and the character of her exemplary husband, and the knowledge of this fact arrived in time, I believe, to be of comfort to her before she sank under the privation and hardship of the march her frame was too delicate to endure.

15th July, 1850.

THOMAS L. KANE.

This discourse is quoted from the Millennial Star, number 14, volume 13, dated July 15, 1851. Our object in presenting it is that when the matter was published in the Millennial Star as stated, there appeared in it matter which was left out of the Liahona as is seen in its perusal above. This is quite significant, and seems to be without necessity.

It will be discovered that in the first paragraph, near the center, there is a break, but which break is not noted. This break is filled in the Millennial Star by the following: After the words "exposition of it," and before the words, "I am not called upon to investigate this subject," as appearing in the Liahona, the following should have been inserted, as appears on page 219 of number 14, volume 13 of the Millennial Star, dated July 15, 1851:

They have two books that are for sale in the shops, called the Book of Mormon and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, which profess to contain the entire body of their faith. The latter harmless work has its special chapters on Marriage, and on the Right of Property, Religious Toleration, and the Union of Church and State.

It may be well, however, to quote from two of these.

Section CIX.—On Marriage.

Marriage should be celebrated with prayer and thanksgiving; and at the solemnization, the persons to be married standing together, the man on the right, and the woman on the left, shall be addressed by the person officiating as he shall be directed by the Holy Spirit; and if there be no legal objections, he shall say, calling each by their names; You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is keeping yourselves wholly for each other, and from all others, during your lives. And when they have answered "yes," he shall pronounce them "husband and wife in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by virtue of the laws of the country, and authority vested in him"; saying, May God add his blessings, and keep you to fulfill your covenants from henceforth and for ever. Amen.

The clerk of every church should keep a record of all marriages solemnized in his branch.

All legal contracts of marriage made before a person is baptized into this church should be held sacred and fulfilled. Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication, and polygamy, we declare that we believe, that one man should have one wife, and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again. It is not right to persuade a woman to be baptized contrary to the will of her husband, neither is it lawful to influence her to leave her husband. All children are bound by law to obey their parents; and to influence them to embrace any religious faith, or be baptized, or leave their parents without their consent, is unlawful and unjust. We believe that husbands, parents, and masters, who exercise control over their wives, children, and servants, and prevent them from embracing the truth, will have to answer for that sin.

Section CX.—On governments and laws in general.

We believe that governments were instituted of God, for the benefit of man, and that he holds men accountable for their acts in relation to them, either in making laws or administering them for the good and safety of society. We believe that no government can exist in peace, except such laws are framed, and held inviolate as will secure to each individual the free exercise of CONSCIENCE, the RIGHT and control of PROPERTY, and the protection of life.

We do not believe it just to mingle religious influence with civil government; whereby one religious society is fostered and another proscribed in its spiritual privileges, and the individual rights of its members as citizens denied. We do not believe that any religious society has authority to try men on the right of property or life, to take from them this world's goods or put them in jeopardy either of life or limb, neither to inflict any physical punishment upon them; they can only excommunicate them from their society, and withdraw from their fellowship.

We believe that religion is instituted of God, and that men are amenable to him, and to him only, for the exercise of it, unless their religious opinions prompt them to infringe upon the rights and liberties of others. We do not believe that human law has a right to interfere in prescribing rules of worship to bind the consciences of men, nor dictate forms for public or private devotion. We believe that the civil magistrate should restrain crime, but never control conscience; should punish guilt, but never suppress the freedom of the soul.—The Book of Doctrine and Covenants.—Edition printed by John Taylor, at Nauvoo, Illinois, 1844; pp. 440-443.

We have before us a copy of the Book of Covenants for 1844, second edition, as published by John Taylor, evidently the same edition from which the quotations above referred to were taken. Why should the Liakhona have omitted from this published discourse of Thomas L. Kane the matter which was published in the discourse in the Millennial Star?

It will be seen that these quotations made by Doctor Thomas L. Kane, so prominently connected with the Mormons at and about the time of their expulsion from Illinois and speaking at so short a period of time from that expulsion as 1850, would have been informed in regard to the facts of their faith and practice at that time, and this statement from him as published in the Millennial Star is an additional evidence that at that time, the time at which this discourse was delivered, the doctrine of plural marriage and its practice was denied and the reasons assigned for such denial were given by quoting from the published works of the church under the supervision of those who succeeded Joseph and Hyrum Smith. Doctor Kane can not be justly charged with a disposition to suppress any facts within his knowledge in regard to the Mormons at that time. We suggest that this omission is significant, and commend it to the readers of the HERALD.

HISTORICAL DEPARTMENT ON THE BOONE INDIAN MOUND.

The acting curator of the Historical Department of Iowa, Edgar R. Harlan, has issued the following report regarding the findings of the department in their excavations of the Indian mound near Boone, Iowa:

This work is completed as was desired by the lamented Mr. Aldrich, and as planned at his request by Mr. Van Hyning, in charge of the museum of the historical department of Iowa. Archæology of Iowa was a field Mr. Aldrich highly regarded, and for which he made provision in his plans for the future work of the institution he founded.

Mounds, such as this, were found by the earliest white visitors to Iowa regions. Their inquiries of Indians elicited the information that mounds were here from their earliest traditions. Their origin and purpose are amongst the mysteries of man, and their exploration awakens the interest of scientists the country over. The quest for facts touching life amongst the ancient peoples is made by the United States Government as well as by different States through their archæological bureaus and societies, as also by individuals. This exploration by the historical department is its contribution to the general effort. These efforts aim, principally, at discovering what was done by these people, and secondly to recover the objects they left. Hence the "finds" are of a value expressed in their work and not solely in their bones, implements, and utensils. With this view, the value of Mr. Van Hyning's pursuit of Mr. Aldrich's plans may be readily estimated by the following schedule of "finds":

1. The mound is 110 by 190 feet, 14 feet high.
2. So-called ash heaps, averaging a foot in diameter scattered throughout the mound within four feet of the bottom.
3. Absence of stone or other implements, except in some four or five instances.
4. The occurrence throughout the mound of pottery fragments to the number of two thousand, usually indicating vessels of two feet in diameter, and showing an excess of thirty patterns of ornamentation.

5. The occurrence of a compact, baked-like sheet of dirt, five feet thick over the whole and three feet beneath the surface.

6. The occurrence of clam shells throughout and especially numerous near the bottom. These are of a species now extant in the Des Moines River.

7. The composition of the dirt so differing in color and character at small intervals as to indicate its deposition in small quantities.

8. The occurrence of single human bones at different and distant portions of the mound.

9. The occurrence of separate skeletons in disconnected and incomplete condition at different places on the bottom of the work.

10. The occurrence of so-called "stone floor" of flat stratified stone, some twenty-one by twenty-six feet in dimension and of irregular outline, practically level and supporting a circular arrangement of the same character of stones, near its edge, which stones are on edge and which are of a width practically uniform and of eighteen inches.

11. The occurrence of decayed timbers, so disposed as to suggest their having lain across the floor upon the edgewise stones. There are five in number, two extending east and west and three north and south.

12. The occurrence of small bowlders above the timbers mentioned, in substantial regularity of rows east and west and some two feet apart.

13. The occurrence of two elm- and one oak-tree on the mound of a diameter of two feet each.

Mr. Van Hyning has had exhaustive preparations completed for the reproduction of this work if found advisable. For a few weeks it is desired to allow the same to remain undisturbed for the inspection of the public, and for the final disposition of the work intact to any institution that may care to acquire it. It is hoped that all who can do so will visit the site in a day or two. All museum specimens will be in charge of Mr. John M. Brainard, of the Ericson Library.

Yours truly,

EDGAR R. HARLAN,

Acting Curator Historical Department of Iowa.

Dated, BOONE, Iowa, April 22.

AMENDMENT TO BOOK OF RULES.

Notice is hereby given that an amendment to the Book of Rules in the following form and substance will be presented at the April session of Conference in 1909:

That the rules and orders of the Book of Rules may be amended at any General Annual Conference; provided that at least sixty days' notice of the effort to amend in manner and form be previously given in the SAINTS' HERALD, the official organ of the church, before the opening day of such session, the same to be inserted, when adopted, at the close of chapter 16, page 111, of Book of Rules, and to apply to all parts of the book except the Articles of Incorporation, a rule for the amendment of which is found in the articles themselves.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, April 23, 1908.

During the late session of conference a resolution was introduced having for its object the amending of the Book of Rules with reference to the now restrictive rule requiring that delegates be instructed by the conferences and branches appointing them to cast a majority and minority vote, in order not to lose the vote of the district or branch.

Upon the presentation of this resolution it appeared that no rule had been provided by the committee of revision of the Book of Rules, although it had been usually understood that sixty days' notice prior to the assembling of conference was necessary in order to make such amendment possible. This shows that notwithstanding all the care used by the committee of revision this particular item was overlooked. The resolution to amend was ruled out of order upon the technicality that the rule provided in the Articles of Association for the amending of such Articles would apply to the rules of order and procedure. Discussion upon this resolution, or rather upon the order of the chair to exclude it for the lack of such notice, brought out the fact that there was no rule requiring such sixty days' notice for the purpose of amending the Rules of Order. It is for this reason that notice is now given for the purpose of mending the omission on the part of the revising committee.

REMNANTS OF THE SACRIFICIAL FEAST.

The question seems to be recurrent, What shall be done with the remnants that may be left of the bread and the wine after the administration of the sacrament? It would seem that all that would be necessary to say is that due care should be exercised in providing enough if possible, and no more; but it is manifestly better to have too much than too little, as witness the baskets of the loaves and fishes left over when Christ fed the multitude, as related in the New Testament Scriptures. Nothing should be lost, or thrown out as a wasted product. The bread may be eaten without injury or without sacrilege, and the wine may be turned into the keeping vats or jars whence it was taken. There need be no hesitancy in adopting this method, as the blessing asked upon the elements is substantially this: "Bless this bread and this wine to the souls of all of those who partake of them," and means nothing more and nothing less than that portion which is partaken of which is blessed to the partakers. There is no necessity for controversy in regard to it.

LAMONI ITEMS.

Business before pleasure was the order of the services at the Brick Church Tuesday evening, May 5. The business-meeting in the basement adjourned after a half hour's session and the congregation moved to the up-stairs room, where a reception was tendered Apostle C. A. Butterworth, of Australia. This was in the nature of a complete surprise to Bro. Butterworth. A program of instrumental and vocal music, speeches, and readings was rendered. Bro. J. W. Wight, who had arranged the surprise, stated that twenty years ago, June 2, he and Elder Butterworth, then young and inexperienced men, sailed from San Francisco on the ship Alameda. This is Elder Butterworth's first visit to his native land since that time. Elder John Smith, in behalf of the people, presented Elder Butterworth with a sum of money as a token of esteem. Patriarch Alexander H. Smith told of the ordination of Elder Butterworth to the apostleship. At that time Elder Smith was in Australia and the order to ordain came by cable. Elder Butterworth was very ill at the time, in Bro. Smith's opinion not likely to recover, but he was directed by the Spirit to proceed with the ordination and trust the results to God. Perhaps the most enjoyable feature of the evening was Elder Butterworth's address. This, together with his sermon of the Sunday before, was much enjoyed by the Saints. The people of Lamoni have found in him a humble, unassuming, spiritual minister for Christ, and have been benefited by his visit. Their prayers go with him to his distant field.

The Board of Trustees of Graceland College has elected Bro. David A. Anderson to succeed R. M. Stewart as president of Graceland College. Mr. Stewart will take up work in the Iowa State University. Besides being one of our own men and well known to the church, Bro. Anderson comes well recommended. He is one of two recommended to the trustees by Frederick F. Bolton, director and professor of education in the Iowa State University, and was given preference in the recommendation over the other one named. Of him Mr. Bolton wrote: "I am glad to emphasize my former explanation concerning Mr. Anderson's probable executive ability. Ever since I have known him I have felt that he was especially strong in that direction. He has had a large amount of experience in various lines, which has given him a valuable knowledge concerning the management of men and affairs. I think that he is especially well fitted for the headship of your college. . . . He is one whom I should be decidedly glad to have in charge of children of mine. He has made friends in the University of all students and members of the faculty with whom he has come in contact."

Elders J. W. Rushton, F. M. Sheehy, W. A. McDowell, and others have called at Lamoni, homeward bound from conference.

The Graceland Alumni Association will meet on June 6, 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, Alumni Day, for their annual business-meeting, and at five o'clock on same day at I. O. O. F. Hall will be given the annual banquet of the association. Each member is privileged to bring one guest. Price of plate, seventy-five cents. All members desiring to attend will please notify the secretary, Nellie M. Anderson, Lamoni, Iowa, before Monday, May 18.

The Industrial Department of Graceland College wishes to acknowledge the receipt of one thousand apple-trees, the donation of B. C. Smith, Independence, Missouri. A few more such practical donations would assure the success of this feature of the college work. Who will be next?

Bro. H. S. Wildermuth and Sr. Berta Johnson were united in marriage May 6, Elder F. B. Blair officiating. Both are employed in the Herald Publishing House, Sr. Johnson as bookkeeper and Bro. Wildermuth as electrician.

Bishop E. L. Kelley and Bro. H. R. Mills, of Independence, have been in Lamoni during a part of the past week, attending meetings of the Board of Publication. Bishop Kelley was the speaker at the Brick Church Sunday morning.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

In an address in Chicago on "What is in a name?" Doctor Emil G. Hirsch, a widely known rabbi, spoke of the feeling among bigoted people that "something without pay was foreign to a Jew." He added: "Not a week goes by but that I am called to the telephone and asked if I will lecture before this or that religious society. If I say 'Yes,' then comes the hesitating query, 'How much will you charge, for we can not afford much?' believing that, being a Jew, I must always get money for everything I do. My invariable reply is: 'My standard price for religious societies is $100,000. You contribute the ciphers and I'll strike off the one.' That is all I ever receive."

At the recent election in Illinois, the vote on the liquor question in Fountain Green was a tie. The poll-books showed that two ministers residing in the city did not vote. And now the people are wondering why these two gentlemen failed to perform their duty as American citizens.—Hawk-Eye.

The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church is in session at Baltimore. It is an imposing gathering. It convenes once in four years and its sessions cover the month of May.

There have been many rumors that the Methodist Church is about to modify its long-time attitude with reference to the amusement question. There may be changes in phraseology, but we shall not believe that Methodism will make much of a surrender over long-cherished principles for mere worldly consideration. The Methodist Church is composed of a sterner quality of stuff.

Another important and always interesting matter will be the naming of new members of the board of bishops. During the last quadrennium Joyce, McCabe, and Fowler have passed away. Other members are very old and are ready to lay aside the work. Much care will be exercised in selecting new men to take up the great responsibilities in these offices.—Des Moines Capital.

It is reported that the oldest paper in the world, the Pekin Gazette, is about to suspend publication. The Gazette was established in 911 A. D., and has appeared without interruption since 1351.

Reports presented before the Methodist Episcopal conference at Baltimore show a gain in the number of communicants during the past four years of 273,358, the greatest gain during any similar period for sixteen years. The number of ministers in annual conferences, not including local preachers, is 19,353, an increase of 1,171. The membership in the United States is 3,036,000; in the entire world, 3,307,271.

The Deseret Semi-Weekly News, of Salt Lake City, Utah, in its issue for February 17, 1903, is responsible for the following quotation accredited to a French journal: "From year to year the settlement of the Jews in Palestine is increasing. Already there are thirty Jewish colonies in existence. Each one of them constitutes a Jewish center, and is conducted according to the best method in agriculture. In the neighborhood of Jaffa forty per cent of the agriculturists are Jews."

Some wonder that children should be given to young mothers. But what instruction does the babe bring to the mother! She learns patience, self-control, endurance; her very arm grows strong so that she holds the dear burden longer than the father can.—T. W. Higginson.

"A skeptical young man one day, conversing with the celebrated Doctor Parr, observed that he would believe nothing which he could not understand. 'Then, young man, your creed will be the shortest of any man's I know.'"

Meet the first beginnings; look to the budding mischief before it has time to ripen to maturity.—Shakespeare.

We are slow to believe that which if believed would hurt our feelings.—Ovid.

Elders' Note-Book

THEOLOGY VERSUS FACT.

I been t'inkin' 'bout the preachah; whut he said de otha night,
'Bout hit bein' people's duty fu' to keep dey faces bright;
How one ought to live so pleasant dat ouah tempah never riles,
Meetin' evahbody roun' us wid ouah very nicest smiles.

Dat's all right, I ain't a-sputin,' not a t'ing dat soun's lak fac',
But you don't ketch folks a-grinnin', wid a misery in de back;

An' you don't fin' dem a-smilin' w'en dey's hongry ez kin be,
Leastways, dat's how human natur' allus seems to 'pear to me.

We is mos' all putty likely fu' to have ouah little cares,
An' I tink we'se doin' fus' rate w'en we jes' go long and bears,

Widout breakin' up ouah faces in a sickly so't o' grin,
W'en we knows dat in ouah innards we is p'intly mad ez sin.

Oh dey's times fu' bein' pleasant an' fu' goin' smilin' roun',
'Cause I don't believe in people allus totin' roun' a frown,
But it's easy 'nough to titter w'en de stew is smokin' hot,
But hit's mighty ha'd to giggle w'en dey's nuffin' in de pot.

—From Paul Laurence Dunbar, the colored poet.

* * * * *

SERMONS IN BARRELS.

The teacher was trying to explain to the class the indestructibility of matter. "Nothing is ever wholly annihilated," she said. "It may change its form, so that you see it no longer, but it still exists. A solid may become a liquid, and a liquid change to vapor, but it is just as much a part of creation as ever. Not a particle of it has been lost.

"It is so, as I believe, in the world of mind. No spoken word, no thought, even, fades away into utter nothingness. It lives on, whether for good or bad. A minister may preach a sermon and see no effect from it, but that sermon is not lost. No sermon is ever lost."

"I know papa never loses any of his," spoke up a little girl, the daughter of one of the local pastors. "I know where he keeps 'em. They're in a barrel in the back attic."—Youth's Companion.

* * * * *

NAGGING NON-MEMBERS.

QUESTION.—Is it right for Latter Day Saint ministers when preaching to be nagging at others who are not in harmony with our faith?

We who are called, chosen, and sent to bear the restored gospel tidings to all men, whether they be religious or otherwise, whether denominational or non-denominational, are to unfurl the gospel banner before all.

There are times when it seems necessary to draw comparisons, that the contrast between the truth and theories held as sacred by others may be made plain and clear. This we can not do at all times without reference to theories extant which can not be sustained as gospel truth by what is written in the Bible. It is not what is said as a rule that hurts, or wounds, or offends; it is the way it is said.

In presenting the gospel to those who know but little, or possibly nothing about it, we should remember that we were just as ignorant once as they, yet we held a reverence for our traditions to some degree at least, and were not ready at first to say, "I was taught wrong." The habit of nagging at the faith and theories of others is out of harmony with the true spirit of the gospel.

I will not admit that I was responsible for my early traditions. To have them ridiculed, made light of, either privately to me, or worse, in public from the pulpit, would tend to raise in my breast a resentment against the speaker. I know one of our able ministers, who, many years ago, I was informed, was laboring in one of our large cities of America, who was in the habit of holding up to his audience the erroneous theories of those of other faiths known as sectarians. Numbers became offended, and his manner in that line was proving an injury to the cause. The presiding elder called his attention to the matter, and told him that unless he would change his manner of preaching that he must seek other pulpits than that one. I have heard him often in recent years, and his manner now is pleasant and agreeable to both Saints and outsiders.

Paul's appeal to the Corinthian brethren is appropriate when he said: "I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say."—1 Corinthians 10:15. Also: "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger."—Proverbs 16:1. Jesus the Christ said, "With whatsoever measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."—Matthew 7:2. "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days."—Ecclesiastes 11:1.

The above references are certainly suggestive that nagging others is not charity. The gospel seems so plain to us that we wonder why all can not see as we do, and we feel like pouring hot shot and making them feel if they will not see; and we may venture ridicule, to our own hurt, and harm the cause.

A good rule to observe is this:

"If your lips would keep from slips,

Observe five things with care:

Of whom you speak, to whom you speak;

And how, and when, and where."

"Study to show thyself approved, rightly dividing the word"; is good admonition to Latter Day Saint ministers.

Nagging others, who differ from us, suggests to them that we think we are wiser than they, and that they are foolish in our estimation. Doubtless we are in advance in knowledge of the gospel, but may be wanting in wisdom to properly use the knowledge before them.

It reminds me of a very pious, self-conceited deacon, who had a hired man who made no boast of piety or righteousness. They went out to mow grass; the deacon put the hired man in the lead, and by and by he came to a hornet's nest, and to escape torture he backed out and fled to safe quarters. The pious deacon saw the man run and said, "The wicked flee when no man pursueth, but the righteous are bold as a lion." The deacon mowed on till he came to the nest, and the hornets, not knowing the difference between a deacon and a non-professor, began to use their weapons of war on the deacon, which were felt but not appreciated. The hired man, at a safe distance, looking on said, "A prudent man forseeth the evil and hideth himself, but the simple pass on and are punished."

Original Articles

SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND RELIGIO WORK IN THE LAMONI STAKE.

ELDER JOHN F. GARVER.

Member of the Lamoni Stake Presidency.

It has been some time since the request came from the HERALD Editors for an article dealing with the Sunday-school and Religio work in the Lamoni Stake. Statistics were not at hand for a time; and later other duties prevented a compliance. The request was accompanied with the suggestion that the numerical strength and the spiritual condition of the work be presented; the writer to use his judgment and his acquaintance with the work to further govern in the preparation of the article. Though late, it is hoped that the response will be adequate.

In "digging around" among old records they are found to be incomplete. Many papers, reports, etc., have not been preserved. There is no certainty that the figures used to indicate the numerical strength of the societies at the organization of the stake are correct; however, for the greater number of the organizations they are reliable, and for the remainder they are approximately so. It may be, too, that all the societies then existing will not appear here. The method of reporting and of recording reports was such that it can not be determined how many societies there were, or if there were any failures to report. So it can not be positively determined what societies comprised the Decatur District associations. The records and what remain of the reports have been examined; it is hoped that no injustice is done either in over- or underestimating the number of societies and their membership at the time the Decatur District associations gave place to the Lamoni Stake associations—in April, 1901.

At the organization of the Lamoni Stake, according to the records at hand, the following Sunday-schools were in working order, their membership being as indicated: Lamoni, 437; Evergreen, 81; Leon, 22; Ellston, 22; Cleveland, 123; Pleasanton, 41; Hiteman, 30; Lone Rock, 85; Centerville, 36; Davis City, 88; Lucas, 109; Greenville, 64; Andover, 40; Pawnee, 40; Allendale, 30. These figures show fifteen schools, with an aggregate membership of 1,248.

Andover, Leon, and Ellston were each suspended or discontinued for a time. At Andover there is no branch, and at Leon and Ellston the branch membership is small and at times workers have been few. These conditions account largely for the break in the work. The Andover school was reorganized in May, 1906; Leon in December, 1907; and Ellston in March, 1908. The Allendale school was discontinued in the summer of 1907. Removals and other conditions have left the work here at a low ebb, so the school suffered accordingly. In the spring of 1904, a school was organized at Oland. In the fall of 1905, another was organized at Graceland. These organizations remain, making a gain of two schools. Allendale having been discontinued, the net gain in the number of schools is seen to be one.

The present membership, gain or loss of the various schools now comprising the stake organization is: Lamoni, 569, gain 132; Evergreen, 86, gain 5; Leon, 13, loss 9; Ellston, 25, gain 3; Cleveland, 93, loss 30; Pleasanton, 35, loss 6; Hiteman, 100, gain 70; Lone Rock, 40, loss 45; Centerville, 42, gain 6;

Davis City, 30, loss 55; Lucas, 60, loss 49; Greenville, 39, loss 25; Andover, 20, loss 20; Pawnee, 24, loss 16. Allendale being discontinued makes a total loss there, or a loss of 30. The school at Oland has a membership of 58, the one at Graceland of 29. From these figures the present membership is seen to be 1,236, a gain of 15. So we find a gain in the number of schools of 1, and in membership of 15, since the organization of the stake.

It has been seen that Andover, Leon, and Ellston have experienced checkered careers, and for the reasons given. Cleveland, Hiteman, and Lucas are in communities depending almost or entirely on the mining industry. Mining-camps rise, flourish, and decline. These camps have experienced the common lot. The fluctuating in school membership in these instances is thus accounted for. Removals are partially responsible for the decline in membership in the case of some of the other schools.

It seems only fair at this juncture to state that at least half the schools and locals within the stake depend almost or entirely on farming communities for attendance and membership. It can not be expected that the work will move along here as favorably as in communities where the population is more centralized. Again, in these farming communities the attendance and membership is sometimes largely on the part of non-members of the church. Under these conditions of location and personnel the membership is uncertain—flourishing for a time, then a period of depression. While both membership and attendance throughout the stake might be better, it should be remembered that in half the communities both must be obtained, if obtained, under conditions unpleasant and sometimes very unfavorable.

When the Decatur District changed its name to the Lamoni Stake, Religio locals were as follows, with membership as indicated: Lamoni, 191; Cleveland, 44; Pawnee, 44; Centerville, 18; Lucas, 34; Evergreen, 42; total membership, 373. The present membership, gain or loss, of these locals, with the exception of Pawnee, which has been discontinued, is: Lamoni, 278, gain 87; Cleveland, 37, loss 7; Centerville, 22, gain 4; Lucas, 31, loss 3; Evergreen, 58, gain 16. In 1902 a local was organized at Pleasanton, present membership 31; in 1903 one was organized at Lone Rock; this local was discontinued, was reorganized in 1907, and has since been discontinued; in 1905 a local was organized at Graceland, present membership, 19; in the same year another was organized at Hiteman, present membership, 33; and, in 1907, Greenville local was organized, present membership, 24. By these figures the present membership of the stake Religio association is found to be 533; net gain, 160. The gain in locals has been 3.

The same conditions determining the membership and continuation of the work in the Sunday-school department must be considered in the Religio work; with the additional condition that, especially in the farming communities, the services being in the evening, active membership and attendance requires a greater effort, and obtains under greater disadvantages. Now the net gain in Sunday-school membership has been 15, in Religio membership, 160. In the light of the conditions cited, it may seem that the Religio work is receiving more attention in the stake than is the Sunday-school. It should be remembered in this connection that the Religio is the younger institution, the growth of which is expected to be more marked. However, in some communities the Religio, seemingly, is in the advance, and vice versa. Everything considered, from indications, there is no general preference. Wide-awake Saints, old and young, appreciate the work of both departments, and are doing what they can to induce their less active friends to enlist in the cause.

So far as now known there are six normal classes organized and pursuing the prescribed normal study. Four of these classes are at Lamoni, one at Evergreen, and one at Centerville. In other communities, books have been purchased and some workers are taking the course alone. As the advantages and desirability of this course are presented the workers sense the necessity of such work—to what extent is yet to be determined.

As indicated heretofore, the figures used in this article have been obtained under no little disadvantage. In the consideration of the spiritual condition, growth, or retrogression, we would be much more at a loss to arrive at "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." And even in a consideration of the present spiritual condition—spiritual in its primitive sense—these societies would in all probability be misrepresented, or represented largely according to the spiritual condition, appreciation, discernment, or standard of the writer. Now, if the term spiritual be made to include interest in the work, zeal manifested, and the general outlook, an opinion, or a consideration might be ventured. The writer has intimately met with the general Religio work of the stake only in stake conventions and an occasional visit to a few locals. However, in Lamoni Stake, as elsewhere, Religio workers are almost invariably Sunday-school workers. Having visited every school now comprising the stake association, except Leon, and thus meeting the auxiliary workers, the Religio work may in a sense be appreciated. Almost universally in both departments there seems to be a disposition to "come up higher." True, this is more noticeable in some instances than in others; but on the whole the desire seems commendable.

This desire does not always bear the fruit hoped for; but if continued in it may, in every instance, bud, unfold, and bear. Much more might be done than is being or has been done, both on the part of stake officers and local workers. But the Lamoni Stake auxiliary associations are not alone in these things, so are not to be unduly condemned because all that is possible to be done is not done. Recent reunion and convention interest, if continued, will materially advance the work.

An army of young workers, through the opportunities afforded by the organizations, are gaining a better acquaintance with the church work and are acquiring the capacity to convey this acquaintance to others. The advantages are, of course, greater in many respects at Lamoni than in other smaller communities. However, the smaller societies afford in turn advantages to their members not found at Lamoni.

The smaller communities look to Lamoni as an example and an ideal; and some seek to conduct their work accordingly. In turn Lamoni might with profit look to some of the smaller societies for examples of thrift, energy, determination, and devotion. The desirable condition will obtain when each community, large or small, learns to recognize the other, not only with the idea of noting and taking the advantage of example in the hope of improvement, but also in suggesting the eradication of undesirable methods of work.

Lamoni Stake auxiliary work, like the various departments of the church in other sections, has "troubles of its own." It can hardly be said in connection with the Sunday-school and Religio work in the stake that "All is well in Zion." However, the writer is firmly of the opinion that these societies will lose nothing by a fair comparison with the general work of the Lamoni Stake. It ought not to be expected that the auxiliaries will in any instance run ahead of the church. Nor do we wish to be understood as speaking disparagingly of the general stake work. We would not depreciate the work in any of its departments, neither would we overestimate it. "A spade is a spade," and the sooner we learn to call a spade a spade, the sooner will our final development be possible. It should at once appear that the spiritual condition and development of the various societies for good in any district can not be intelligently considered wholly apart from the general work. The departments throughout church institution are necessarily and materially affected by each other. Hence the spiritual side of the Lamoni Stake Sunday-school and Religio work can not be legitimately considered without reference to or consideration of the general work of the stake. The attempt has been made to represent the work as it is, or as it appears to the writer, without mock consideration for either auxiliaries or general work.

There are some conditions, as elsewhere, that are undesirable, but, on the whole, present indications promise advancement all along the line.

In the church work there should be no place for veneering—masking the real conditions for the sake of passing appearance. Eventually, before the final end of the latter-day work, the truth must be bared, conditions seem as they are, and remedied to insure ultimate consummation. With these considerations in mind, the effort has been made to hold this article to the truth. If it misrepresents the auxiliary work of the stake in any way, it does so in erring judgment and not in intent. If the Sunday-school and Religio work of the stake appears at a disadvantage in comparison with that of other fields, there is no apology. If the workers of the stake or of any other district may be induced to greater efforts, the article will have aided in the advancement of the cause we all love. If it truthfully represents, in a measure, the conditions within the stake, it should be educational. Finally, if it reaches the requirements demanded by the HERALD Editors and escapes the waste-basket, it will be fortunate. May its errors have been harmless, and its conclusions sane.

LAMONI, Iowa.

J. F. GARVER.

• * * * •

CELESTIAL LAW, OR THE PERFECT LAW OF LIBERTY.

Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed.—James 1: 25.

Will obedience to the perfect law of liberty make the comers thereunto perfect, and prepare them for celestial glory? What think ye? "To the law, and to the testimony."

Celestial is a word which to me signifies heavenly. Hence the word conveys the idea of superior excellence, or purity; therefore, is of the highest order, and when spoken of as celestial law, conveys to my mind also the idea of perfectness with it. As David exclaimed, "The law of the Lord is perfect."—Psalm 19: 7. Hence the law of the Lord is a celestial law; and, when honored, will make the comers thereunto perfect. (See Hebrews 10: 1.) In order to do this "he [Jesus] taketh away the first" (or old law. See verse 9), which "made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did" (Hebrews 7: 19), and establishes the new, which will prepare those who heed it for the celestial glory. Jesus said, "For he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom, can not abide a celestial glory," (see Doctrine and Covenants 85: 5,) hence must inherit another kingdom—terrestrial or telestial.

This law consists of principles which, also, are of the highest order, some of which I will mention; for the Apostle Peter said, speaking of Christ's law, "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, . . . whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature."—2 Peter 1: 3, 4. This word these, to my mind, represents all that is required of us by the Lord. 1. Faith. 2. Repentance. 3. Baptism. 4. The laying on of hands, with prayer. These, when obeyed from the heart, secure remission of sins, and the promise of the Holy Ghost. Having obeyed this law of the spirit of life, we become new creatures in Christ Jesus. We then become the servants of righteousness. Old things having passed away, behold all things become new. Of this class it is reasonable that the writer should say,

And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. . . . And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.—Acts 2: 42-45.

Or, as Joseph Smith, Jr., gave instructions how to organize this people according to Christ's law (if otherwise they will be cut off):

Wherefore let my servant Edward Partridge, and those whom he has chosen, . . . appoint unto this people their portion, every man equal according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs; and let my servant Edward Partridge, when he shall appoint a man his portion, give unto him a writing that shall secure unto him his portion, that he shall hold it, . . . until he transgresses and is not accounted worthy by the voice of the church, according to the laws and covenants of the church, to belong to the church.—Doctrine and Covenants 51: 1.

See how this harmonizes with the "apostles' doctrine."

Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.—Acts 4: 34, 37.

See the harmony:

For it is expedient that I, the Lord, should make every man accountable, as a steward over earthly blessings, which I have made and prepared for my creatures. . . . And it is my purpose to provide for my Saints, . . . but it must needs be done in mine own way; and, behold, this is the way, that I, the Lord, have decreed to provide for my Saints: that the poor shall be exalted, in that the rich are made low; for the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare; yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves.—Doctrine and Covenants 101: 2.

The Book of Mormon corroborates these statements in the strongest terms (see page 471, chapter 12 of book of Nephi):

And as many as were baptized in the name of Jesus were filled with the Holy Ghost, . . . and they taught, and did minister one to another; and they had all things common among them, every man dealing justly one with another, . . . and they did do all things, even as Jesus had commanded them. And they who were baptized in the name of Jesus, were called the church of Christ.

Again, on page 478, chapter 1, verse 2, this man, in speaking of the blessed condition, says,

And there were no contentions and disputations among them, and every man did deal justly one with another; and they had all things common among them, therefore there were not rich and poor, bond and free, but they were all made free, and partakers of the heavenly gift.

Brethren, can you not see that this condition was reached by giving diligent heed to this perfect law of liberty? Only two years had passed away, after Jesus had appeared unto them, and given instruction what they should do and teach, "and they did do all things even as Jesus had commanded." In view of this blessed condition revealed by them so soon, can we realize where we are? Seventy-seven years have passed since this perfect law was given to prepare a people for the Lord, of which he said of our fathers:

They have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom; and Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I can not receive her unto myself.—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2.

Can we ever become united according to the union required, by any other means than those used by the Saints at Jerusalem, and on this land, in view of the fact that those who are ordained are expected to give diligent heed to the words of Jesus? For they were to live by every word of God (see Doctrine and Covenants 83: 7). He said, Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto you in my scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continue. And ye shall see that my law (not other laws) is kept. "He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple." Would it not be better to keep this law as did those of Bible and Book of Mormon times, that we may be able to realize the union required to be enjoyed, by honoring the principles of the law of Christ?

Some of those principles we have honored, viz: Faith, repentance, baptism, and the laying on of hands, as taught by Joseph Smith, Jr., as the doctrine of Christ. To set either one of these aside, and accept something else in its place would disqualify one for this union required by this law, would it not? When Joseph Smith presented other principles as essential parts of the law, by way of commandments, how can we escape if we fail to honor them also, when they are just as scriptural, hence apostolic, viz: Virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, and charity; also, Thou shalt not kill, nor lie, nor steal, nor commit adultery, nor speak evil of thy neighbor, nor do him any harm. Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and cleave unto her and none else. Thou shalt not render evil for evil, nor be proud in thy heart. Let all thy garments be plain, and the beauty thereof the workmanship of thine own hands. Thou shalt not be idle, nor take thy brother's garment, but pay for that which thou receiveth of thy brother. Thou shalt not bear false witness. In fine, thou shalt stand in the place of thy stewardship, and keep all the commandments of the Lord, as all these injunctions are component parts of the celestial law, and have been accepted by the church, to be the law, to govern the church.

And as it was needful that the bishop receive directions how to organize this people according to his law (if otherwise they will be cut off), should not every point in detail be followed as strictly as that pertaining to any other line of action? How can a man become a steward except he follow the directions, and comply with every detail that is made known to the bishop in Doctrine and Covenants 51:1. Please read; also verse 4. This is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, and "behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God." This being true, where are we?

We learn that Joseph Smith instructed the bishop to organize those who were willing to keep the commandments that were given to govern them, that all things might be made sure according to the laws of the land, giving the bishop to understand that he can in this way, by their consecrations, appoint each one his portion, equal according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs, inasmuch as their wants are just.

This being true, where are we, having received no stewardships from the bishop, and not having had our portion set off to us as the law directs, and having no storehouse to which we may take whatever we may gain in money or meat, to be kept in the hands of the bishop, as trustee in trust, "to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants." (Doctrine and Covenants 42:10.) With these things lacking, why not ask ourselves the question, Where are we?

"I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." Therefore let us be doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving our own selves.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri.

L. H. EZZELL.

Man, proud man! dressed in a little brief authority, plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven as make the angels weep.—Shakespeare.

Of General Interest

WHY I AM A TOTAL ABSTAINER.

There are three attitudes which may be occupied toward the use of alcoholic beverages:

First. Drinking to excess.

Second. Drinking, as it is usually expressed, in moderation.

Third. Total abstinence.

No one will defend the first. Not a few speak kindly of the second. The larger number are indisposed to adopt the third. Let us, therefore, eliminate the first named and consider the second and third.

What is moderation? That is a question which it seems impossible to answer. That which is moderation to A, all agree would scarcely be recognized as such by B. Let us use an illustration.

I have just swallowed a full glass of whisky. Its effect upon me has been that of intoxication. I am lying prostrate on the sidewalk. A large, full-fledged toper, looking more like a beer-keg on stilts than a man, happens to pass by. A brandy-blossom on his nose speaks more eloquently than words his daily habits of indulgence. He looks askance at the unfortunate victim of the single glass. "Why can't that fellow take it in moderation like me!" is his exclamation to a companion as he passes on. Perhaps that man has swallowed a dozen or more glasses of different kinds of alcoholic liquor during the previous part of the day and is able to keep his equilibrium notwithstanding. It is obvious that what is moderation to him is not moderation to the one who is unaccustomed to the use of liquors. Continued use gives increased ability to "stand up under."

It is obvious, therefore, that we can find no rule for our guidance. There is constant danger of the man who takes the first glass taking the second. We may safely aver as a proposition that will stand considerable examination, He who takes the first glass does not possess the moral power to resist the second glass which he had to resist the first. Therefore, the only sound doctrine is, Decline the first glass. He who does not drink the first will not drink the second.

Again, drinking grows on one, but not on all alike. We learn that a large number indulge without apparently becoming excessive. Since, however, the line of moderation is invisible and really impossible to find, no one may be positively sure when he passes it.

From the village of Chippewa, about four miles above Niagara Falls, it is safe for the larger number of people to cross the river in a boat. But some who have attempted to do so have failed. Without being aware of it they were caught in the current and gradually drifted down-stream far enough to be unable to return. The result was they went over the falls of Niagara to death.

People who live in that region are not in the habit of doing much boating on that river, because they are wise enough to realize that every attempt to cross is fraught with danger, and that the only crossing that is free from danger is the crossing that never takes place.

In regard to drinking, therefore, I have no hesitation in making the positive assertion that safety lies in total abstinence, while danger must ever be coincident with drinking. The best place to stop the use of alcoholic beverages is before you begin. The first glass contains the possibilities of the second and the third and so on. Therefore, Let the first alone.

An argument in favor of total abstinence may well be derived from the health side. Medical science has made it clear beyond all peradventure that alcohol is not helpful in the making of tissue, nor in repairing that which is wasted. The best scholars in this field say positively that alcohol is neither food nor fuel for the body. Instead of being helpful it is hurtful to the system. He who would be a healthy man can not afford to ignore the doctrine of total abstinence. While there may be, here and there, apparently perfect specimens of health in the cases of individuals who drink occasionally, it may nevertheless be safely maintained that their fine physical condition is in spite of, and not because of, the alcohol that enters their system.

Sir Frederick Treves, the eminent surgeon to King Edward VII, expresses himself as follows:

"It is said that alcohol is strengthening and that it gives great working power. We hear a great deal of this in the advocacy of British beef and beer. That sounds very well, but let us view the facts. Alcohol modifies certain constituents of the blood and, on this account and on others, it affects prejudicially the nourishment of the body."

Sir Frederick also speaks of the British troops in the South African campaign a few years ago. The great surgeon was with the relief column that moved on Ladysmith. He states, "In that column of some thirty thousand men the first who dropped out were not the tall men, or the short men, or the big men, or the little men, but the drinkers; and they dropped out as clearly as if they had been labeled with a big letter on their backs."

In speaking of the effects of alcohol on the circulation, Sir Frederick states:

"Alcohol produces an increased heart-beat, a fuller pulse and redder skin. It calls upon the reserve power of the man, but the moment the effect passes off the action of the heart is actually weakened. Consequently the temporary effect is produced at an unfortunate cost."

Another statement by this eminent physician is as follows:

"To be 'fit' no young man must touch it. No one who is young and healthy can want alcohol any more than he can want strychnin."

Perhaps we will be pardoned for another quotation from this eminent writer and scholar. He says:

"The point in regard to alcohol is simple enough. It is a poison, and a poison which, like other poisons, has certain uses; but the limitations in the use of alcohol should be as strict as the limitations in the use of any other kind of poison. Moreover, it is an insidious poison in that it produces effects which seem to have only one antidote—alcohol again."

Several other distinguished writers can be quoted. N. S. Davis, M. D., says, "No form of alcoholic drink is capable of either warming, strengthening, nourishing, or sustaining the life of any human being."

Professor Youmans says, "All alcohol is the product of death and decay."

F. R. Lees, M. D., says, "It is false that alcohol promotes digestion."

Even in disease it is unnecessary. Doctor John S. Griscomb says, "I have come to the conclusion that alcohol as a medicine can be wholly dispensed with."

Doctor Willard Parker says, "When people understand what alcohol is and what it does, they will put it out of existence."

Sir Henry Thompson says, "I find alcohol to be an agent that gives no strength."

Doctor Benjamin Ward Richardson many years ago said, and, so far as we are aware, it has not been successfully refuted, "Alcohol can not, by any ingenuity of excuse for it, be classified among the foods of man."

Thousands of great names might be quoted along these lines. Fifty years ago physicians were generally disposed to speak kindly of the alcoholic beverage. To-day the opposite is true. The consensus of opinion, we have no hesitation in declaring, is that alcohol is not necessary in health or sickness. It is a poison pure and simple.

Sir Andrew Clark, M. D., physician to Her Majesty, Queen Victoria, expressed himself unhesitatingly as follows:

"Alcohol is a poison. So is strychnin; so is arsenic; so is opium. Alcohol ranks with these. The health is always in some way or other injured by alcohol; benefited by it—never!"

We have thus far spoken of the physical. Nor is the use of alcohol less injurious to the mental conditions. It is not sound doctrine that claims the use of alcohol is beneficial to high thinking. There may be stimulus at times, but there comes just as surely reaction. To the physician, lawyer, banker, and business man generally a normal mental condition is of the highest importance. Great issues may depend upon this. Whatever men in professional and commercial circles may do in the evening under social conditions, those who are successful are careful to abstain completely during the day. There can be no doubt that alcohol hinders mental activity.

Professor Huxley once remarked, "If a man can not do brain-work without stimulants of any kind, he had better turn to hand-work; it is an indication on nature's part that she did not mean him to be a head-worker."

Sir Benjamin Richardson wrote, "Of all men brain-workers are the least able to bear up under the ravages of alcohol—this traitor who enters the most precious treasury, the citadel of the mind."

The poet, Homer, certainly a very ancient authority, has spoken wisely on this subject, as on many others. Here are his sentiments,

Inflaming wine, pernicious to mankind,
Unnerves the limbs, and dulls the noble mind.

A greater than Homer, however, has spoken with emphasis upon the subject. We refer to the prophet, Isaiah. Here are his words,

The priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink . . . they err in vision, the stumble in judgment.

Those of us who believe in total abstinence certainly feel grateful to Doctor Sims Woodhead, professor of pathology in Cambridge University, for the following: "A man under the influence of even small quantities of alcohol has no right to believe his senses. He can not trust them to give him correct facts, and he can not rely upon his judgment for the interpretation of those facts."

Very much more might be said along this line, and many more quotations might be given. "To the wise," however, "a word is sufficient."

The effect of alcohol upon the conscience and the will would afford an interesting study, and many expressions of opinion by those high in authority and having a right to speak, might be quoted. Perhaps the strongest argument that can be advanced for total abstinence is the argument from the standpoint of expediency. Paul remarks in one of his epistles, "All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient." He shows that his brother's welfare is the important consideration which should occupy the mind of the true man. "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." "It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak." Perhaps the Revised Version gives this text with a little more clearness, as follows, "It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth."

For the sake of my brother, then, I am to let that entirely alone which may injure him. Does any one question the fact that the use of alcoholic beverages injures human beings? It is difficult to secure actual statistics. We are safe, however, in saying that from sixty to one hundred thousand persons die annually in our country from the effects of intoxicating liquors. Over five hundred thousand more are made to suffer as wives and children from the loss that is thus sustained by the death of so many who are necessary as breadwinners.

Nor do we consider in this estimate those who do not die, but live and continue the drinking habit with increasing appetites. Think of the great number of men and women who, by reason of indulgence in the intoxicating cup, are cut off from the ranks of industry. There is nothing, perhaps, that produces indisposition to work and the disposition to loaf more than the use of liquors. The nation is suffering tremendously from the army of consumers, and therefore non-producers, that are the results of the liquor traffic. It is unkind to say that those who are the victims of intemperance are weak and should be ashamed of themselves for not being stronger. It is the duty of the strong to help the weak. He was not a manly man who said, many centuries ago, "Am I my brother's keeper?" I owe it to my brother whose will-power is weak and whose powers of resistance are greatly deficient, not alone to impress upon him the duty of abstinence as a duty incumbent on him. It is a duty incumbent on me to set him an example by totally abstaining myself. This duty belongs to me all the more that it is no great exercise of self-denial on my part to assume it. I have not formed the alcoholic habit as yet. It is a cross of the heaviest kind for him to give it up. It seems to the writer that Paul was correct in his declaration, therefore, that we should, for the sake of our brother, let those things which make him to stumble and fall severely alone.

This is the doctrine of total abstinence in a nutshell.—Alexander Alison, general secretary of the National Temperance Society, in Cosmopolitan, May, 1908.

* * * * *

WHAT THE "NEW THEOLOGY" MEANS.

Some recent comments of the New York Sun on the apparent failure of the Unitarian Church to give any large visible evidence of growth, in spite of the attractive example of its many illustrious adherents, have resulted in a vigorous though courteous controversy in the columns of that paper.

On the other side it was pointed out, as it has been many times before, that Unitarianism is an attitude of mind rather than a body of doctrine, and that the Unitarian Church is an influence rather than a denomination. The most striking contribution to the pro-Unitarian side was that of Doctor

Isidor Singer, the well-known Jewish scholar, encyclopedist, and man of letters, and withal a man of profound religious convictions.

Doctor Singer applauded Unitarianism among Christians which is the faith of his fathers—as a movement toward a reunion among all nations for the worship of one God between whom and his soul man would finally decide that there was no need for a mediator. But the most interesting part of Doctor Singer's letter to laymen to whom theological distinctions do not appeal, but who are alive to concrete religious issues, is the following sentence.

"The new theology—Jewish, Christian, and Mohammedan—while recognizing the sublimity of Jesus' figure and his transcending position in the historical evolution of mankind, has decided to render divine worship to him alone whom Jesus called heavenly Father."

To those laymen who have been perplexed over what this "new theology" may mean that statement is as illuminating as it is clear. It seems very plainly to define what the Reverend B. W. R. Tayler, in commenting on it, calls "the main issue in the religious world to-day." It is an affirmation from a Non-Christian, whose position is without any sort of doubt, that the Christians who advocate what is called the "new theology" are coming to his position. He sees them coming and welcomes their advent.

However, it does not seem to have occurred to the advocates of the "new theology" that this very precise definition of their position as one in which Hebrews and Mohammedans may stand with them gives the very reason why the great majority of Christians will reject this "new theology" and refuse to be led by it. For the conception of the personality of Jesus that distinguishes historical Christianity from all other forms of faith is not a conclusion of the intellect alone, nor born of its dry light.

That conception may be reached, and ample grounds may be and have been found for it in the intellect. But, after all, and with the overwhelming majority of Christians, a conviction that answers as it has been answered the nineteen centuries the question "What think ye of Christ?" rises from the deeps which no human intellect has sounded—which no man can sound for another.

Out of the depths of the experience of the human soul, tried and tormented, buffeted and perplexed, swelling with hope and sinking in despair, seeking for refuge and peace and finding it nowhere else, comes the conviction:

"Thou art the King of Glory, O Christ! Thou art the everlasting Son of the Father!"

There are some, who, whatever their experience, are still so "captains of their souls" that their wills have never yielded to that conviction. These exceptions do not prove untrue what is unquestionably the experience of countless millions of men in all generations since Jesus died upon the cross. As Bishop Gore has wisely said in his book on The New Theology and the Old Religion:

"A man is much more likely to be mistaken in what he denies than in what he affirms. What he affirms is what he realizes. What he denies may be only what he has failed to realize."

For a secular newspaper to consider, as between those who believe in the divinity of Jesus and those who do not so believe, which may be absolutely and finally right would be to go beyond its province. It must suffice for laymen to point out to other laymen what the so-called "new theology," raising a question as old as Christianity, really means and is.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. T. A. Hougas, secretary, Macedonia, Pottawattamie County, Iowa; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, Treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, 630 South Chrysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Resting in God.

Since thy Father's arm sustains thee,
Peaceful be;

If the chastening hand restrains thee,
It is he.

Know his love in full completeness
Fills the measure of thy weakness;
If he wound thy spirit sore,
Trust him more.

Without murmur, uncomplaining,
In his hand

Lay whatever things thou canst not Understand.

Though the world thy folly spurneth,
From thy faith in pity turneth,
Peace thy troubled soul shall fill,
Lying still.

Fearst sometimes that thy Father
Hath forgot?

When the storms about thee gather,
Doubt him not.

Always hath the daylight broken,
Always hath he comfort spoken,
Better hath he been for years
Than thy fears.

Know then, whatso'er betideth,
Night or day—

Know his love for thee provideth
Good alway.

Weakest lambs have largest share
Of the tender Shepherd's care;

Ask thou not then when nor how—
Only bow.—Selected.

A Few Thoughts on the Sunday-School Work.

We read in Proverbs 22 and 6, "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." We should all be interested in the Sunday-school work, for through its means many young are brought into the church. Jesus said, "Feed my lambs."

"Who will go and help this Shepherd kind,
Help him the little lambs to find;
Who'll bring the lost ones to the fold
Where they'll be sheltered from the cold?"

Dear Sunday-school workers, what greater work can you do on the Sabbath day than to gather the little ones around you and teach them of a loving Savior, who suffered and died for them? And how much easier it is to reach their young hearts before the tares are sown there! There are always some neglected ones around us, if we will take the trouble to look them up, that we can bring into the Sunday-school. Let us show them that we love them and are interested in their welfare. We may be the means of bringing them into the church. There are so many temptations in this sinful world to lead the young astray. On the Sabbath day we find many of our young engaged in the ball game; some go hunting, others go fishing, and almost everywhere there are attractions to keep them away from the Sunday-school; but I believe the parents are responsible for the way their children spend Sunday, at least to some extent; for the way the twig is bent the tree is inclined to grow, and we can not begin too soon to teach our children what is right and what is wrong. And let us not think because we are caring for their temporal wants that that is all that is required of us, and leave the rest for the Sunday-school teacher to do. It is the duty of parents to teach their children at home; teach them to pray; teach them to love God and have faith in him; help them learn their Sunday-school lessons; go with them to Sunday-school, and let them see you are interested in the Sunday-school work. And where the parents and teachers are working in harmony there is bound to be success. There is much need in the Sunday-school workers being very humble and prayerful and devoted in their work; for we need the Spirit of God to help us that we may be coworkers with God in bringing souls to him. Let us be pleasant and cheerful in our work, always wear a smiling face, though our hearts may be discouraged and sad at times; and let us remember that whatever we sow, that shall we also reap.

CHRISTINA RASMUSSEN.

Where is Heaven?

"Mr. Cook: Please answer this question for me: Where is heaven? I have had the question asked me, and was unable to give a satisfactory answer."
L. B.

I do not know where heaven is, if, by that question, you mean the abode of the blessed who have gone from earth. I think we are not to live material lives when we awake after death, and so will not require a material world for our home. But Jesus taught that each one might be in heaven while here. He taught that he and the Father would come and live in each heart which truly opened to them, and so make of that heart a heaven. You know we pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," and I am sure that wherever this is true in any heart, there is indeed heaven. I think it is right to suppose that, when we have passed through death, we shall expand into a larger life, but you can never be more full of joy than "full," so why not have heaven here and now? I am afraid it is too often the case that some people do not want this life. Such persons would not be happy in the heaven beyond; they are on a different road. Already they have started in a direction contrary to heaven. Like the tree which, as it peeps out of the ground, is already beginning life in the light, so should each one of our lives be the beginning of our life in the light and joy of companionship with him who is the light of heaven and the central attraction of it. But what of such as stay in darkness and night all through their lives here? Surely they can have no interest in the life of heaven. I know many of them think they have, but they are deceiving themselves.—Selected.

The Easy Chair.

We once heard of a dear old saint, living all alone in a humble cottage in an out-of-the-way place, some distance from the busy town, with very few neighbors about her, and they quite poor.

She was too feeble to work, but God had put it into the hearts of some of his children to look after her and minister to her necessities, so that she did not come to want. Her stopping-place, for it could hardly be called a home, was scantily furnished; a bed, a chair, a table, stool, and cupboard, with stove, was all she had.

Upon being asked, "Do you murmur at your lot?" she replied, "Satan does tempt me to murmur sometimes when things are bare."

"And what do you do then?" "Why, I just ask the Lord to put me in the easy chair to keep me quiet." Her visitor looked about in vain for anything like an easy chair, and wonderingly said, "I don't see any easy chair; I don't think I quite understand you."

"No, you don't see it," she said; "but it is always close by, and when He sets me in it, I just rest and say to Satan, 'Now you be quiet.'"

"My easy chair is Romans 8: 28, 'And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, who are the called according to his purpose.'"—Word and Work.

Just in Time to Catch the Train.

I often say these words when the train moves off and I have been just in time, but I am thinking now of other trains that are moving and opportunities that are passing. I am thinking of that picture of the woman who was just in time with her precious box of ointment, who did not think the burial was so near and who heard the words: "She is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying."

We need often to heed the world quickly—we put off until it is too late, and then we say: "Oh, if I had only written that letter I intended to write. If I had only told her that I loved her—I meant to do it. Why didn't I do the thing I intended to do?" Just because you forgot that word quickly. You put it off and the burial came before your anointing. Your sweet spices, your flowers are of no account now. You put the flowers in her hand too late. You perfumed the room after she was cold. What she needed was the perfume of love while she was alive. When she was hungry for the sweet words of love it would have been everything for her to have had you notice when she looked tired and to have heard you say: "Haven't you been working harder than usual?" The food the human heart needs is love!—Margaret Bottome.

"Oh, my friend, thou mayest be sunk very low down in sin and woe, but there is a thread of divine love that comes from the divine throne of heaven and touches even thee. Seize that thread. It may be small, but it is golden. Improve what you have, however little, and more shall be given. That thin thread of love, if you will not neglect it, shall lift even you up to God and glory. 'Who hath despised the day of small things.'—Newman Hall.

Letter Department

LANGWORTHY, Iowa, May 2, 1908.

Dear Herald: We are commanded to do all things in singleness of heart in honor to the Lord. It seems to me this is sound advice—"sound doctrine." I would be greatly pleased if in the day of accounts for my stewardship I shall not be wanting in this respect. "Youth is the time to serve the Lord," is also written. To form habits in early life as the result of the exercise of our senses in discerning good from evil, choosing the good, and rejecting the evil, that we grieve not the Holy Spirit, the guide of our youth. I hear people say that if we do as we think right, we will be right, but this is not "sound doctrine." We should learn to carry everything to God in prayer for light, to learn the "voice of the good Shepherd." It is safe to think in harmony with law, both human and divine. The carnal mind is not in reciprocity with the Holy Spirit. If it were there would be little use for the criminal law to protect the weak from the strong. The world, the flesh, and the Devil are a trinity with influences mighty in our warfare, and we only learn their strength as we overcome our great besetting sins by resistance; for as long as we yield to them we are servants of sin, and do not fully sense the exceeding sinfulness of faults or blemishes which mar our daily record. If we take the Holy Spirit for our guide, we will cherish its teachings, both past and present, and as we grow in the grace and favor of God, our thoughts and desires will be gauged by the Holy Spirit.

Not all who are called Saints love truth and righteousness enough to square their daily conduct by the rules in the Statue Book, and so their prayers are hindered, and more or less darkness clouds their spiritual vision. Doubtless, all who are called out of darkness into light have had seasons of depression and gloom settle over their horizon, whether for a trial of their faith, or as a result of apathy in line of duty. It means, "Come up higher," and by a closer walk with God we grow in vigor and spiritual vision to discern our pathway.

All have their own peculiar experiences as the good seed swells and the leaven of righteousness develops in all who truly watch as well as pray. The hope of eternal life grows brighter according to our daily diligence to be doers of his will, and so purify ourselves even as God is pure. Along this plane of thought we become justified, or sanctified in spirit and body, and bring fruits worthy of the kingdom of heaven. This is the only way I know whereby we may prove our own works acceptably unto God.

It is sometimes said that Joseph Smith advised and did contrary to what is written. I neither know nor care if he did or not, so far as my conduct is to be. If he asked me for a chew of tobacco, or advised me to join any secret order, as some assert, yet I would not be justified in doing either. I wish all such stories were forgotten, or better still, that there were no truth in them. I never spoke a foolish word or did a foolish act but the remembrance is painful. They are unbecoming, even in children. Even worldly people see this and censure it in professing Christians.

Well, here I am up in Iowa. I came in here on the 31st of March to see my father, as I was informed he was poorly and failing, being about eighty-six years of age. As I stepped off the cars I was told father was to be buried at one o'clock in the afternoon, the funeral-services at eleven in the morning by a Methodist minister from Monticello, Iowa. I wanted to remain in Independence till after conference, but felt too uneasy, lest even then I should be too late to see him alive. Affairs of life will keep me here awhile, but I aim to do what I can for the Master's cause. I have the privilege of putting some literature in the library and reading-room at Monticello.

As ever yours for Zion's weal,

CHARLES ALBERTSON.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 5, 1908.

Editor Herald: The Sunday following conference adjournment, I spoke in the First Kansas City Church. This was my second effort there. The first was a frost, chargeable neither to the speaker nor the people. The appointment was inopportune, practically precluding any material attendance from Independence. The last was an evening service, and I was impressed with the possibilities of advertisement, not only locally but in a general way through the coöperation of an awakened press, thus correcting the false and erroneous ideas existing in the minds of the masses. With this church building as a base of action, no other place, to my mind, affords a better opportunity in this direction. The most excellent article written by the special Star correspondent has been supplied newspapers throughout the country, and generally published.

A well organized campaign, under the supervision of some strong, aggressive, yet tactful pastor, with a drawing personality, ever alert for expansion, keenly awake to the avenues of publicity, coupled with a tireless following up of every vantage ground, and augmented by a united church following, must necessarily bring success locally, and consequently benefit the entire church.

Monday morning, I turned my face southward to mother, sisters, and the old home, and found them in sore straits. Our aged but dauntless mother, the heroine in many conflicts, mental, moral, and spiritual, ever ready to meet the vicissitudes ahead, yet wasting no energy in lamenting the failures of the past, is about the age of Bro. Joseph. Age is telling on her. She is still suffering with a disease of thirty years' standing, so far incurable, which ordinarily would have overcome many a younger woman; but her indomitable will stands her well in hand. She has but recently been bereft of her companion of twenty years, which incidentally deprives her of all visible support. Immediately following the burial of "Father Davis," my two sisters, who had been in California for several months, returned home, Mrs. Johnson in a slowly convalescent condition, and Mrs. Davis completely prostrated. Mrs. Davis had gone to California to recuperate her health, which had been shattered after losing husband, following an illness of a few days, together with the subsequent premature and untimely death of her only daughter. Mrs. Johnson was with her sister to assist her in her struggle for health. Adversity followed them even here. Mrs. Johnson contracted a cold which developed into acute mastoiditis, necessitating an operation. The attendant suspense and nervous strain produced a physical and nervous collapse with the other sister, Mrs. Davis, from which she has never rallied. They need your prayers that God may interpose in their behalf. Please remember them.

Though loath to depart, previous appointments precluded a longer sojourn, so I left them with a heavy heart. I reached Council Bluffs Saturday evening, April 25. I preached at Omaha, Sunday morning. The house was comfortably filled. The Saints were very kind. I would have been pleased to remain with them longer. While there I was reminded of my debate with the Reverend Charles W. Savage, and feel that the divine benediction which came as a result of that encounter has not been wholly dissipated. They have a thriving branch, with a promising future. Bro. Schafer makes an excellent pastor. The evening service was at Council Bluffs. The church was crowded. I spoke there five evenings, the audience increasing nightly, until at the close it was more than crowded; packed better expresses it. Two rows of chairs in the aisles, with every available floor space occupied, was an inspiration calling for the best at our disposal. The audience was very responsive to our message. "Our Father" graciously remembered us, and many times during those five evenings many in the audience were moved to tears, not by the eloquence of the speaker, but by the gentle Spirit's presence. Let God have the glory!

A sense of sadness came over me as I missed the familiar faces of other years, who had been loyal supporters in my former mission here. Brn. Beebe, Dodson, Peterson, Nelson, and Baker; Srs. Beecroft, Baker, Christensen, and others. I drove to Crescent Friday night in the face of a driving northwest wind, which penetrated to the very marrow of my bones.

The house was warm and correspondingly packed to suffocation; all available standing room being taken. Non-members as well as members vied with each other in tendering me a royal welcome all along the line. I spent the entire time until twelve and one o'clock at night visiting the people.

Saturday, May 3, I went to Woodbine. Found Bro. "Willie" Smith conducting a series of meetings. I preached Saturday night, and twice on Sunday, with average attendance. Bro. Kibler and his coworkers are alive to the needs of the work. Now that he has sold out his business, and can give more attention to the little details of the work, it should receive a new impetus. I was disappointed in not seeing our aged veteran, Bro. Charles Derry. This was one of my chief reasons in going. He was away somewhere, intent on his "Master's work." God speed and preserve our aged brother.

Bro. Samuel Harding, and the loyal workers there, are doing a noble work in Council Bluffs and Pottawattamie District.

I know I was out of my territory in going into these places, and after reading the articles of Brn. W. H. Kelley and J. C. Crabb I was in doubt as to who was in charge. I had Bro. Kelley's consent and Bro. Harding offered no objections. I did not see Bro. Pitt. If perchance I have transcended my bounds, it is regrettable on my part, but hardly revokable now. I left Omaha for the West Monday, May 4, at ten minutes past four in the afternoon, San Francisco being the first objective point. Will preach there Sunday, and then home.

Your brother in Christ,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

1307 West Forty-fifth Street, LOS ANGELES, California.

CHICAGO, Illinois, May 5, 1908.

Editors Herald: This writing finds us in the great railroad center of the world, and we are made welcome at the home of Bro. and Sr. James Keir at 405 North Fifty-second Street. They are both alive to the work, and we are pleased to note the zeal with which they take hold of the gospel work. Had the pleasure of attending sacrament service and Sunday-school with the West Side Branch on Sunday last, and preaching at the Central at night. The day was profitably spent, and the prayer-service following the sacrament was one long to be remembered. The good Lord remembered us with tender love, and shed forth upon us a portion of his Spirit, to the edifying of all present.

On yesterday we attended a Bible-class at the home of Sr. E. Horton, 1506 West Nineteenth Street, and there were permitted to speak a word in defense of the restored gospel.

Feeling in a measure as a stranger in a strange land, it would be greatly appreciated if those who know of opportunities for work would kindly apprise us of the fact, that we might the more readily enter in and perform it.

We feel to appreciate a change of field this year and trust that we shall be able to represent the work to its best interests, and render the best service possible.

We are hopeful in the work, trust that as Christ triumphed over death, so, also, will his work over all that is brought to bear against it.

May the love of God characterize our work, and his peace and blessings be ours to enjoy, is the prayer of his weakest servant.

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

RAKE, Iowa, April 27, 1908.

Editors Herald: We could not get along very well without the HERALD, as that is the only way we get any sermons. We are the only Saints in this locality, and have not heard a sermon by any of our people for five years. Have been distributing the HERALD among the neighbors, and several have expressed a desire to hear one of our elders, so I asked the trustees of the Methodist church, as we have been attending it since we came here, but was told that there was not another preacher allowed to preach in it except of their faith. If any of our elders come this way we would be glad to have them stop here, and we will try hard to get an opening, as I am sure we will be able to get the use of the schoolhouse.

Yours for the truth,

PETER CHRISTENSON.

STIDHAM, Oklahoma, April 10, 1908.

Editors Herald: I will drop you a few lines from this corner of the Lord's vineyard. This is a new town, situated fourteen miles northeast of Eufaula, in McIntosh County, and the gospel has never been preached here. I have only been here about three weeks, and have met with people that never heard of our church. The Campbellites and Baptists have this country, but are friendly toward me, I having been invited to assist in a prayer-meeting that is conducted by the Baptists. I think that in the near future there can be a branch raised up here, as the people seem anxious to investigate our claims. The Campbellites are holding a meeting at the present writing. Commenced last night and baptized some this evening. If there should be an elder intending to pass through Eufaula if he would notify me I would make arrangements for preaching, and I will give one a home as long as he wishes to stay with me. There is a daily mail hack running from Eufaula to this place. If any of the Saints wish a change in location in business I think that this is a good location. Stidham being a new town, property can be bought cheap, situated on a high, dry, rolling prairie, with good farming country for ten miles surrounding. Any one with money, wishing to go into business, if they would come here and do a fair and square business, they would do well, especially if they were full-handed enough to sell on time with security, as the merchants here are surely robbing the people. And if any one is interested in farming, land is cheap. Can get a good title to it at fifteen to twenty dollars per acre. This is in the Creek Territory, on the South side of the North Canadian River, a good cattle country, as the native wild grass is abundant. There are very good schools here. I will give any information I can, if asked. Land rents cheap, at two dollars an acre. Standing rents are one third or one fourth crop rent. Good water and healthy climate, and good opportunity for lessees. Good water can be got at a distance of from twenty to thirty feet, and can dig your own well with a post-hole digger. I think that this would be a nice place for Saints to locate, both for rich and poor, where they could breathe a good free breath of good pure air. I intend to do all I can for the work here, but being poor am unable to furnish tracts as I wish. If any one will mail me some for distribution, I shall be very thankful to them, and will give praise to the Lord. It seems lonesome to be where there is not a Saint within fifty miles that one knows of, having had branch privileges before coming here, and would be very thankful if some of the Saints would come.

I enjoy reading the church literature, especially the HERALD. It is a weekly preacher to me. I know that at this writing there are lots of the Saints enjoying themselves at the conference, and I hope that in the near future God will bless me with the same privilege. My prayer is that I may help to build up Zion.

Yours faithfully,
C. C. CHRISMAN.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, May 6, 1908.

Dear Herald: I am truly thankful to my heavenly Father for his kindness towards me and my dear family, for we have received many blessings after passing through many hard trials.

To live is a great gift, and those entering upon life naturally ask themselves what is the object of their existence. Life is just what we make it. Nearly every one has a desire to become great and make this world better for having lived in it; but how many upon reaching old age look back upon blasted hopes, unfulfilled ambitions and a misspent life! Their failure can often be traced to lack of perseverance, neglected opportunities, and a lack of a goal for which to strive. All nature is continually impressing the reward of perseverance upon our minds. The spider works hour after hour until his web is completed and his work is done. The ant carries burdens so great that its tiny body staggers beneath the weight, but it keeps on steadily until it has deposited its burden. The bees busy themselves all day long, laying treasures, and we as Saints of God shrink from our duties, which by doing would result in much good to ourselves and to others. We fail in our promise to God and drift into the pleasures of the world, forgetting God causes us to miss many of his blessings.

We may not receive rewards at first, still the maxim is true that the reward of a thing well done is the knowledge of having done it well. Constant toiling is always rewarded, and why should we not strive to win the prize, for God is sure of his promises. The humblest toiler will be remembered. Our Savior was once a laborer so poor that he had no place to call home. Then no matter what our station, let us persevere, not for selfish ambitions, but that the world may be better, and that when our work is ended we may look upon our Savior's face and have the knowledge of having used the talents he has given us for the glory of God and the betterment of mankind, and as a reward hear his "Well done."

Yours in bonds,

W. R. RUSH.

BEARDSTOWN, Illinois, May 5, 1908.

Dear Herald: I am always glad to hear the letters, from the dear brothers and sisters. They encourage me many times and give me strength. I request the prayers of the Saints in my behalf. I have been a sufferer for about a year, from nervousness, heart trouble, and other afflictions, and desire the prayers that I may be healed, if it be God's will.

Yours in the one faith,

915 Wall Street.

MRS. MARGARET SEEGER.

CLE ELUM, Washington, May 5, 1908.

Dear Saints: I hardly feel good enough to be called a Latter Day Saint. I joined the church in 1889, but am sorry to say I have not lived up to my covenant. My name and that of my wife are on the church books at Roslyn, Washington; but it is unhandy to go to Roslyn, as it is four and a half miles from this place. I would like to have my faith increased, so I can feel it a pleasure as well as a duty to go at least once a week to the Roslyn meetings. I am not satisfied with the way we are living and feel too weak to quit our evil habits.

As to books, we have nearly all the church books, and while we have been taking church papers, many of them are never opened. I am going to make an effort to live the life of a Saint. I will have to quit reading the worldly papers and try to learn more about God's work.

Box 37.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN.

SPRINGFIELD, Missouri, May 4, 1908.

To the Saints at Liberty Home and at the Saints' Home; Greeting: Since my departure from Liberty Home, I have enjoyed myself fairly well. I truly had a good time at the General Conference; and since coming here, I have been well cared for by the Saints. Each of you please take this as a personal letter; for I often think of you. Do you have good meetings now? How about the Religio? Is it still going on? I hope to meet you all again, sometime.

Your brother in Christ,

C. J. SPURLOCK.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

LEEDS.—Annual conference of the Leeds District convened in the Wortley Branch meeting room, January 11, 12, 13, and 22, 1908, J. W. Rushton in the chair; T. Taylor, secretary pro tem. The last quarter's missionary fund financial report, which was referred back for correction, was approved. Ministers reporting: W. R. Roberts, T. Taylor, G. H. Hammond. Priests: W. Williamson, A. Mandifield, S. Horton, and J. H. Sykes. Reports of Elders G. H. Fenton and W. H. Seekins were referred back, the former for consideration, the latter for correction. Statistical reports of Burley and Wortley Branches were referred to a scrutiny committee. The president of the mission ruled that ministers not holding licenses be reported as lay members. Moved that the resignations of Elders G. H. Fenton and G. H. Hammond, as elders of the district, along with reasons, be referred to a committee for investigation. A committee of three was appointed: J. W. Rushton, T. Taylor, and W. R. Roberts. A petition from the Burley Branch, for a grant of three pounds from the district, was considered, and payment authorized; also petition from Wortley Branch for a grant of five pounds was considered, and payment authorized. Notice of motion was entertained, regarding disorganization of the Leeds District, and affiliation with the Manchester District. It was resolved that the Leeds District be disorganized, when the various committees of the conference had given in their reports, and that the president of the district call a special meeting for the hearing of reports, clearing up all incidental matters in connection with the district. Carried. It was moved and carried that the conference petition the president of the mission to let Elder T. Taylor labor in Leeds. The petition was not granted. Adjourned to January 22, 7.30 p. m. On that date conference convened with J. W. Rushton in the chair. The committee on the G. H. Fenton and G. H. Hammond case presented majority and minority reports. Moved that the cases of Elders G. H. Fenton and G. H. Hammond be referred to their branch and its officers for adjustment. Carried. Report of scrutiny committee on statistical reports was received and accepted. Moved that the Wortley Branch report be referred back for completion, and approval, and then sent to the Church Recorder. Resignation of the vice-president of the district was presented and accepted. Moved that the district treasurer be authorized to hand over to the treasurer of the Burley Branch the balance in hand after all the expenses of the district are paid. Moved that the books, papers, and documents belonging to the Leeds District be handed over to the secretary of the British Isles Mission, at the close of the conference. Moved at the close of the conference that the Leeds District be disorganized. Carried. Moved that the balance of the Leeds District missionary fund be sent to Bro. C. H. Caton, for the mission fund. Carried. General missionary and local authorities of the church were sustained. Elder T. Taylor, secretary pro tem.

FLORIDA.—The Florida District conference convened with the Pleasant View Branch, April 4, 1908, G. T. Chute in charge; B. L. Jernigan, clerk. Elders reporting: G. T. Chute, E. Powell, B. L. Jernigan. Priests: Clayborne Dixon, W. M. Hawkins. Teachers: Joseph G. Dixon, Willoughby Dixon. Deacon: Mack Barnes. Bishop's agent's report: Received since last report, $35; on hand, present report, $35. Branches reporting: Calhoun, 59; Pleasant View, 39. Motion prevailed to extend a vote of thanks to Bro. and Sr. C. J. Clark, for work done in the district, and that a copy be sent to HERALD for publication. Adjourned to meet with the Santa Rosa Branch, the first Saturday and Sunday in July, 1908, at 10 a. m. B. L. Jernigan, secretary.

MOBILE.—District met in conference with the Theodore Branch, March 7, 1908, Alma Booker, presiding. Branches reporting: Bluff Creek, Theodore, Three Rivers, Bay Minette. Elders reporting: Alma Booker baptized 3, W. L. Booker, O. O. Tillman, G. W. Sherman, F. P. Scarcliff. Priests: N. L. Booker baptized 4, G. W. Bankester, T. W. Smith. Teacher: David Goff, D. W. Tillman. Deacon: Frank Stiner. Bishop's agent's report read and referred to an auditing committee, and found correct. District secretary, Mrs. Alma Booker, offered her resignation, and Sr. Edna Cochran was elected secretary. Adjourned to meet with the Three Rivers Branch, at call of district president. Mrs. Alma Booker, secretary.

SPRING RIVER.—Spring River District met in conference at Pittsburg, Kansas, 10 a. m., February 15, 1908. Meeting called to order by E. D. Bailey, who, with W. J. Thurman and G. Jenkins, were chosen to preside over the conference. Reports from ministry: G. Jenkins, R. T. Walters, J. A. Davis, J. T. Riley, L. Quick, W. H. Smart, F. L. English, J. M. Richards, E. D. Bailey, W. S. Taylor, J. W. Thorpe, J. A. Graves, W. S. Hankins, J. D. Kelley, H. J. Thurman, W. E. Westervelt, R. E. Martin, M. L. Beck, W. B. Hillen, J. Cochran, J. L. Lancaster, S. P. Hogue, William Kirk, F. M. Connor, George Bath, Oran Duncan, Otto Hempel, W. I. Clark, S. N. Gray, Jr., L. F. Binkley, S. G. Carrow, G. W. Breeze, W. S. Stricklin, J. D. Hogue, J. Bath, Charles Kyser, Matt Crownover, G. E. Carter, O. Nunamaker, J. W. Foster, S. N. Gray, Sen., J. Lamons, J. C. Hogue, E. P. Adams. Branches reporting: Joplin, 241; Webb City, 229; Pittsburg, 93; Galena, 26; Weir City, 93; Fairland, 190; Rock Creek, 70; Angola, 67; Columbus, 70; Pleasant View, 110; Shaw, 20; Scammon, 42; Traverse, 45. The adoption of report of Library Commission, with recommendations, resulted in the following resolution, that all branches that are in arrears to library fund pay ten cents per capita for all resident members, as a first assessment to library fund. Resolved, That the district presidency be sustained until the First Presidency and Quorum of Twelve have opportunity to send a man to preside in this district. Mollie Davis was elected secretary and treasurer, and Mabel Holsworth a member of Library Commission. J. S. Mackie was ordained an elder, by George Jenkins and E. D. Bailey. Adjourned to meet with Columbus Saints, Friday, before full moon in June. Mollie Davis, secretary.

Pastoral.

To the Ministry, Saints, and Friends, of the Pacific Mission, comprising Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Hawaii Territory, and British Columbia; Greeting: The General Conference has passed into history and we are entering upon the work of a new conference year, and once more I have the pleasure of being associated with you in gospel work.

I was not able to accomplish all I desired to last year, but I presume my associates realize this as keenly as I do. I enter on this year's work with the hope that I can do more than in the past year.

I appreciate the hearty good will and confidence shown to me in the past, and hope to merit your continued confidence and earnest cooperation in the work now lying before us.

It is desired that the work in this field be urged forward with all the energy and zeal that is possible in wisdom.

Our missionary force is small, our means very limited, hence the great necessity for every one lending a helping hand. It is not the preacher in the field alone that does the work; but they that help with their means are a party to the good that may be accomplished. So please do not forget the needs of those who are willing to devote their lives to the field-work, making the sacrifice of home comforts and natural ambitions.

To the local ministry I wish to make an earnest appeal.

It is a sad thing to find the branches in poor condition for the lack of the careful pastoral labor that should be given by the officers God has appointed for this very purpose. Now brethren, this is as necessary as the work of spreading the gospel in NEW places, and it is very discouraging to the men in the field to see those brought into the fold neglected, and, as a consequence, lose interest in the work, or, have to leave the field-work to care for the branches themselves to keep them from going down. There has been a constant cry for help in the branches, and especially for pastors; and we are confronted on every hand with the cry that there has not been the visiting done that should have been done. Brethren, this should not be! Therefore, I appeal to the presidents of the branches to awake to the importance of the responsibility that rests upon them, and urge every priest, teacher, and deacon to do his duty, and "do it now." Your work is as important and necessary as the work in the field, if it does become irksome and trying at times. Never mind the criticism; but do your duty. SAINTS, it should be recognized that God has set these offices in the church, and we should be ready to uphold them and give them all the encouragement possible; and even should they not be able to preach as well as some of the men in the field, you should not make your criticism so harshly. It has the tendency to cause young men to feel that their efforts are not appreciated; and they, as a consequence, lose interest and cease to try to develop. Sustain them by your faith and prayers and attendance at the meetings, and a word of encouragement. Saints, can you not sacrifice your pride along this line a little in order to help the cause you profess to love? Did it ever occur to you that some of the best field-workers were young men once, and had to develop as well as the young men you seem to think are not fit to put up to preach now?

Now let us go to with our might and do a year's work that will be a credit to all, an honor to the cause we represent, and pleasing to our heavenly Father.

Blanks will be furnished to branch presidents, who are requested to report promptly to the district presidents on the 1st of July, October, January, and March; also to the district presidents, who are requested to report to the minister in charge by the 10th of the same months. Please be prompt with your reports, as the minister in charge wishes to get his report in to the First Presidency by the 20th of the month if possible.

Now to the missionaries; I have chosen the following as assistant ministers in charge of the several districts named:

S. S. Smith, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, and the Spokane District.

Geo. W. Thorburn, Seattle and British Columbia District. S. D. Condit, Oregon.

C. E. Crumley, Northern California and Nevada.

T. W. Williams, Central and Southern California.

The following division of missionaries will obtain unless some emergency should arise that would demand a change later. Those laboring in the territory named above will report promptly on the first of July, October, January, and March, the last named to be an annual report to the assistant in charge.

G. J. Waller and E. Ingham will be associated together in the Hawaiian Territory, and report direct to the minister in charge.

A. J. Layland and W. A. Brooner will labor in Idaho, Western and Southern Wyoming, along the lines of the Union Pacific Railroad.

L. E. Hills and Hale W. Smith will labor in Montana, Northern and Eastern Wyoming, along the lines of the Burlington Railroad.

I. M. Smith, F. J. Chatburn, and S. S. Smith will labor in the Spokane District, the last named also in the other fields named as necessity requires.

G. W. Thorburn, J. D. Stead, William Johnson, William Hartnell, will labor in the Seattle and British Columbia District.

S. D. Condit, John Lintel, and A. J. Moore will labor in Oregon.

E. Keeler will labor as an evangelical minister in Oregon and Washington.

C. E. Crumley, C. W. Earle, and J. M. Terry will labor in the Northern California District and Nevada.

J. B. Carmichael, John F. Wiles, J. F. Burton, F. G. Pitt, T. W. Williams, and A. Carmichael will labor in Central and Southern California.

Now, brethren, the field lies before us, and we should labor as diligently and faithfully as though we were laboring for ourselves. While it is true we are not laboring for a money consideration, we are spending our life, our energy, sacrificing home associations, natural ambitions, and all because it is our belief that God has called us and asked us to go out in his name for the good of the people to whom we are sent, and our brethren at home are giving of their means to help us in the work. So let us be true to the trust imposed on us, and improve every opportunity to spread the work abroad. Let the local officers attend to the branches as far as it is at all possible, advise them, encourage them; but let them do their own work. If it is found necessary, instruct them how to do; but let them do it if they will. When they do not and will not, then it will be time for those whose duty it is to regulate, to step in and see that it is done.

Wherever you can find a local elder, or priest, that is free from the care of local work, who is willing to go with you and help you for a series of meetings, or a month, take him with you and let him feel that he is a worker with you, as the law directs. Put away all jealousies from among you, and labor together as one in interest and purpose, whether local or general.

I shall expect you to act as men of God. Keep humble, and ask God for his Spirit to be with you to direct and assist you in your work.

In case of debates consult with the minister in charge whenever it is possible to do so; in emergencies defend the work the best you can in the Spirit of humility.

I desire that all shall feel free to write me at any time if they desire to do so. I will publish my field address as soon as I can get into the field; in the meantime you can address me at my home address, which will find me at all times.

May the Lord bless you in all your labors,

Your brother and collaborer,

FREDERICK A. SMITH.

Bishop's Agents' Notices.

Spokane District consists of the following counties: Ferry, Okanogan, Chelan, Douglas, Spokane, Whitman, Adams, Kittitas, Yakima, Benton, Klickitat, Franklin, Walla Walla, Columbia, Garfield, Asotin, Kootenai, Bonner, Shoshone, Latah, and Nez Perce.

Members living in above counties having tithes and offerings please send to me. Also those who wish to make inventory as the law directs will be assisted personally or by mail. You are invited to help care for the missionaries' families. Thanking you for liberal support in the past, and trusting you will not slacken your efforts this year,

W. W. FORDHAM, Bishop's Agent.

East 2317 Pacific Avenue, Spokane, Washington.

Fourth Quorum of Priests.

Dear Brethren of the Fourth Quorum of Priests; Greeting: I take this means of notifying you of the resolutions adopted in our quorum meetings. It is requested of each member to correspond with the presidency of our quorum at least once every three months, giving them a description of our work, where we are doing labor, and how the Lord is blessing us in our work. Whether in missionary, branch, Sunday-school, or Religio work, let us notify those whom you have placed in charge, and keep them acquainted with regards to our faithfulness. Some of our members in the past have been dropped for not reporting within two years. This should not have to be done, if we understood our duties aright. A thing that is needful to be done ought to be done well. The system we represent, as ministers for Christ, is perfect. So let us who comprise the Fourth Quorum of Priests see that we have a perfect system of reporting. There has been a typewriter purchased and paid for, with supplies necessary to run the quorum, and the financial load has been carried by a few. So we have increased our yearly dues from twenty-five to fifty cents each member, to be sent our corresponding secretary, James D. Schofield, of Stanberry, Missouri, when you submit your annual report in March.

In the past year some of our number were ordained to the office of elder. One of our number died, Bro. N. S. Dunnington, of Topeka, Kansas. We regret to lose him; but we trust he is resting in the paradise of God.

All new members taken into our quorum will be given a quorum license, and a list of all the members of our quorum. So, brethren, let us go to work with a willing heart and hand, and do what we can to forward this latter-day work, that our counsel to those with whom we labor may be made effectual by our example. Ever praying for all our collaborers,

GEORGE EDWARDS.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, Route 8, Box 6.

Conference Notices.

Kewanee District conference will meet with the Dahinda Branch, at Dahinda, Illinois, May 30 and 31. The missionary in charge, J. W. Wight, will be present. It is very urgently requested that all branch clerks send in their branch reports to the district secretary not later than May 23. This is absolutely necessary in order to get a correct general report of the whole district from the secretary. Branch presidents' reports should be sent to the district president, Elder O. H. Bailey, Media, Illinois. Annual election of officers will take place. Mary E. Gillin, secretary, 1410 North Elizabeth Street, Peoria, Illinois.

Chatham, Ontario, district conference will convene June 13 and 14, 1908, at Stevenson. Arrangements are being made to have all P. M. R. trains stop at Stevenson June 13 and 15. See later issue for further announcement. Saints from other districts are also invited. It is expected that both President R. C. Evans and Apostle U. W. Greene will be present. Anthony A. Hewitt, secretary, Box 573, Chatham, Ontario.

Nova Scotia Saints please remember that our annual conference will be held at Williamsdale on Saturday and Sunday, June 27 and 28, 1908. Please have reports ready. Kenneth Hyatt, secretary.

To the Saints of the Little Sioux, Iowa, District: The district conference of the above district will convene at Woodbine, Iowa, Saturday, May 30, at 9 a. m. Trusting that we may have a large attendance, and a spiritual time, I remain, Your collaborer, Sidney Pitt, president, Persia, Iowa.

Nauvoo District conference will convene at Keokuk, Iowa, the first Saturday and Sunday in June, the 6th, and 7th, following the Religio and Sunday-school conventions the day before. Let all who can, attend this conference and the conventions, as we want it to be the best for some time past. Will the branch officers take particular notice and have all their reports in the hands of the secretary before the conference convenes. Send all reports of the branches to M. H. Siegfried, Nauvoo, Illinois.

Pottawattamie District conference will convene at 10 o'clock, Sunday morning, May 31, 1908, at Hazel Dell. All reports and other papers for the consideration of the conference should be mailed to the undersigned on or before May 24. J. Charles Jensen, secretary.

Conference of the Southeastern Illinois District will convene at Bellair, Crawford County, Saturday, June 13, 1908, at 10 o'clock, a. m. Branch clerks will please send reports to me, or send by the hand of some one coming to the conference. Also please do not fail to send the assessment of not less than one dollar per branch per quarter, for funds for district treasurer. A. H. Burroughs, secretary and treasurer.

The Nodaway District conference will convene with the Bedison Branch, at the Union Church, June 13 and 14. Committees, ministry, etc., are required to report in writing. Blank forms will be furnished the priesthood on which to report. Remember, a resolution passed at last conference that all principal motions and resolutions must be presented to the conference in writing signed by two persons. All come with prayerful hearts, that the Spirit of the Lord may be with us. W. B. Torrance, secretary.

Clinton District conference will convene at Rich Hill, Missouri, June 6, 1908, at 10 o'clock a. m. District officers will be elected at this conference. Send reports and communications to the undersigned on or before June 1. A. C. Silvers, secretary, Walker, Missouri.

Conference of the Des Moines District will convene at Runnells, Iowa, Saturday, June 6, 1908, at 10 a. m. We hope all the district missionaries will be present, also that the membership of the district will be well represented, as there will be important business to come before us. Marcus H. Cook, president, 1736 Maple Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

Montana District conference will meet at Bozeman, Saturday and Sunday, May 23 and 24. J. P. Wyckoff, clerk, Deer Lodge, Montana.

Conference of the Lamoni Stake will be held at Hiteman, Iowa, June 13 and 14, 1908. Send reports to the secretary. John Smith, president; L. A. Gould, secretary, Lamoni, Iowa.

The Western Michigan District will meet in conference at South Boardman, Michigan, on May 20 and 21. The Sunday-school convention will be held on the 19th.

Conference of the Eastern Maine District will convene with the Saints at Beals on June 13 and 14.

Convention Notices.

The Nauvoo District Sunday-school association, will convene at Keokuk, Iowa, June 5, 1908. All are invited to attend. Ray Gunn, secretary.

Pottawattamie District convention will meet with the Hazel Dell Sunday-school Saturday, May 30, at 10.30 a. m. Schools will please send in their credentials as soon as possible.

Reunion Notices.

The Lamoni Stake Reunion will be held in the Dancer Grove, south of and adjoining the city of Lamoni, beginning on Friday, August 21, and lasting over Sunday, August 30, 1908. Preparations, including increased and improved space for campers, better facilities for water supplies, and other general features tending to supply additional comforts for campers and visitors, are being provided. Good speakers, including new talent, are expected. Further particulars, including cost of renting tents, will be announced later. John Smith, chairman; R. S. Salyards, secretary.

Addresses Wanted.

Any one knowing of the whereabouts of George Decker, Sarah M. Robinson, Soren N. J. Norgard, members of the Guilford (Platte) Branch, of the Nodaway, Missouri, District, will please send the addresses of the said persons to either of the undersigned.

C. C. NELSON, Presiding Elder, Bolckow, Missouri, R. F. D. 3.
W. B. TORRANCE, Presiding Priest, Bolckow, Missouri.

R. F. D. 3.

Died.

LOWE.—The Saints and citizens of Baldwin, Iowa, were not a little shocked to hear of the sudden death of Sr. Alma Lowe, the wife of Elder E. Lowe, Jr., president of the Baldwin Branch, and junior partner of the firm of Lowe & Son, general merchants. Hoping that it might be of interest to many of the Saints, we herein insert a copy of the obituary read at the beginning of her funeral-sermon. "Georgie Alma Lockard was born March 13, 1886, at Jamison, Davis County, Missouri. Died April 21, 1908. She was married September 7, 1904, to Edwin Lowe, Jr., of Baldwin, Iowa. Of this union was born one child (a daughter), who died at birth, for which child the mother gave her life. Mother and child will be laid to rest in the same casket to await the first resurrection of the Saints of the Most High God. Her husband, his people, her father, mother, three brothers, three sisters, and a host of relatives and sympathizing friends mourn the loss of a loving and devoted wife, daughter, neighbor, and friend. She was loved and respected by all honorable people who knew her." The funeral-sermon was preached by Elder J. B. Wildermuth, in the Methodist Episcopal church (not having a church building of their own). Reverend Davis, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, was present, and made the opening prayer. Elder L. E. Hills, and his daughter, Sr. F. B. Farr, of Marion, Iowa, were in attendance at the funeral. Sr. Lowe was the only one of her father's family who belonged to the Saints. Her parents, brothers, and sisters, who live in Gallatin, Missouri, are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The remains were interred in the cemetery at Canton, Iowa.

CORBIN.—Sr. Martha M. Corbin, of Jackson, Missouri, died at the home of her daughter, Sr. Ena Sperry, March 5, 1908, at the age of 67 years, 11 months, and 6 days. She was born in Belmont County, Ohio. She was the mother of three sons and four daughters. She united with the church in 1890, being baptized by T. W. Smith, at Denver, Colorado. She lived a humble, Christian life, beloved by all, and died firm in the faith. Funeral-services by Henry Kemp.

BAILEY.—At Lamoni, Iowa, March 25, 1908, at 5.20 a. m., the spirit of Elder Samuel Vaughn Bailey departed from the mortal house of clay for the realms of rest and bliss. He was born in Rutland County, Vermont, September 30, 1830, therefore was his pilgrimage 77 years, 5 months, and 24 days. He came into life the same year as the organization of the church of his choice, being baptized by E. C. Briggs, at Concord, Dodge County, Minnesota, in April, 1862, and was ordained an elder at the same place, and year, the same minister officiating in his ordination. He became a pioneer missionary for the cause of the truth of the restored gospel, in Minnesota, at Coldwater, Michigan, and in Decatur County, Iowa, to which place he moved with his family in October,

1875. He leaves, as chief mourner, a faithful companion, who stood to her post during his prolonged last illness; also, seven children: Sr. Frances Brand, Lamoni, Iowa; Elder Earl D., and Sr. Eva M. Bailey, Independence, Missouri; Srs. Cara Moore, Clara McElroy, Samuella Kelley, and Bro. Vaughn Corliss Bailey, Lamoni, Iowa; also, sixteen grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. One of the ambitions of our departed brother was that he should live to be a great-grandparent. He was highly esteemed by neighbors and friends, as the large gathering at the Brick Church, Friday afternoon, the 27th, evidenced. John Smith was in charge, John F. Garver offering prayer; the sermon was from Job 5:26, by Robert M. Elvin. The pall-bearers were William Anderson, A. K. Anderson, Asa S. Cochran, John H. Harp, H. A. Stebbins, and John Scott. The floral tributes were most beautiful and abundant. The body was consigned to Rosehill Cemetery, to await the summons to a glorious resurrection. Our experience with Bro. Bailey for long years in church association was of the most genial nature. With the erring he was ever kind and charitable, and his counsel wise in adjusting differences. We can not find a more fitting closing to this obituary than the words of his eldest son: "If I can so live that my children can speak of me, as my father's children can of him, I shall feel myself truly honored, and that I have not lived in vain, and shall die satisfied, and feel that the world has been bettered by reason of my living."

SALISBURY.—Albert B. Salisbury was born near Greenwich, Ohio, September 15, 1833. Died near Glidden, Iowa, April 12, 1908. In early manhood he married Nettie Marr, who left two small daughters. Later he was united in marriage to Dora Merrick, who died, leaving him two children. November 24, 1892, he was married to Christena Bosley. He leaves a widow, four children, two stepchildren, three brothers, one sister, and a goodly number of near relatives to mourn. He was baptized in July, 1896, by Charles E. Butterworth. Funeral-services at the Dixon Schoolhouse, April 13, 1908, conducted by Charles E. Butterworth.

RUBY.—Mrs. Pauline Ruby died Friday evening, April 28, at the home of her brother-in-law, Anthony Bell, at Angus, Iowa. Mrs. Ruby was a kind and lovable woman, and had many friends, who will be grieved to hear of her sudden death. She and her husband had been members of the Latter Day Saints for many years. The funeral was held at Buffalo, Iowa, the 27th of April. Services were conducted by Elder Davis, of Davenport, Iowa, and the body laid to rest beside her husband, in the Buffalo Cemetery. No immediate relatives survive. A niece, Mrs. Anna Latham, resides at St. Louis, Missouri.

CROOKS.—Robert C. Crooks, who lived near Lacona, Iowa, was born September 1, 1830, in Belmont County, Ohio. Married to Miss Elizabeth Spence, April 9, 1852. Nine children born of them. Bro. Crooks was baptized May 2, 1897, by Robert M. Elvin. Died May 3, 1908. Funeral-sermon by D. C. White. Buried in Graceland Cemetery.

DUVIC.—At Monte Vista, Colorado, March 5, 1908, Cecil Clyde, son of L. H. and Eva E. Duvic, aged 4 years, 5 months, and 22 days. He was a very patient sufferer, and while he was sick a long time was not one to complain. He was buried from the Christian church of Monte Vista, Elder E. F. Shupe preaching the sermon, assisted by Reverend M. M. Nelson, pastor of the above church. Though young, he was loved by all who knew him. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

EVERETT.—At Denver, April 10, Jessie Winifred, and on the 11th of the same month Gertrude Louise, infant daughters of Elder Charles E. and Sr. Mae E. Everett. They were born December 27, 1907. They were only permitted to remain with us long enough to entwine themselves around our hearts sufficiently to make the parting doubly hard. May it be our happy lot to meet them in the sweet bye and bye. Funeral from the home, sermon by Elder E. D. Bullard.

KENTY.—At 3440 Madison Street, Denver, April 24, 1908, Alva Owen, youngest child of Alexander and Addie Kenty, aged 3 years, 6 months, and 11 days. He was taken with convulsions, and lived but a few hours. Funeral from the house, Elder Charles E. Everett preaching the sermon. Interment at Fairmont.

TRESE.—Bro. William S. Trese passed away at his home in Joplin, Missouri, March 30, 1908, after about two years of illness. He leaves mother, wife, three sons, two daughters, and two sisters to mourn their loss, besides relatives and friends. Funeral at the Saints' chapel, with a well-filled

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

house. Remains laid to rest in the Fairview Cemetery, at Joplin. Sermon by H. J. Thurman; service in charge of F. L. English.

DODSON.—Daniel K. Dodson was born near Pike County, Illinois, February 6, 1840. He came with his parents to Pottawattamie, Iowa, in 1846. Was baptized in December, 1864, at Provo, Utah. Was ordained an elder October 29, 1865, by George Sweet, at North Pigeon, Iowa. In 1866 he was married to Miss Emma C. Alexander. Five children were born of them. Two daughters and one son, with their mother are left to mourn. He died at Council Bluffs, April 20, 1908. Sermon by Joshua Carlile.

BELL.—At Pawnee, Missouri, April 27, 1908, Sr. Indiana Baggerly Bell. Born in Wood Township, Clark County, Indiana, May 17, 1844. Married January 10, 1863, to Gabriel Bell. She was baptized May 22, 1870, near Galena, Indiana, by W. W. Blair. She lived a Saint's life. Funeral from the home, April 28, in charge of Bishop William Anderson. Sermon by Joseph Snively. She leaves husband, two daughters, eight sons, one sister, and two brothers to mourn. She died in the glorious hope.

BURROWS.—Bro. Edward Burrows died April 22, 1908, at his home in Holden, Missouri, after a brief sickness of one week. He was born in Lincolnshire, England, November 14, 1848. Came to this country in 1869. Married Miss Mary Nuttal in 1873. Three children were born, and remain. He became a member of the church August 28, 1892, at Victor, Montana. Came to Holden in 1903, and purchased a farm, and resided there till about two weeks before his death, when he sold out and moved into town. He leaves a widow, two sons, and one daughter. Funeral was held in the church the 24th. Sermon by A. H. Parsons.

POLLEY.—Abner H. Polley died November 6, 1907, aged 64 years, 7 months, and 14 days. He obeyed the gospel in June, 1905, being baptized by Elder R. Baldwin, who also conducted the funeral services, which were held Saturday.

STANTON.—Died September 24, 1907, aged 75 years. He united with the Reorganized Church in June, 1905, being baptized by Elder R. Baldwin.

Resolution of Condolence.

Our heavenly Father, in his wisdom having seen fit to take from our quorum, by death, Elders Charles Perry, Ezra W. Depew, and Richard W. Hugill, we hereby express our sympathy to the bereaved relatives of our departed brethren. We lament our loss, but submit to the will of God, knowing he doeth all things well.

J. E. WILDERMUTH,
D. R. BALDWIN,
S. J. MADDEN,

Committee for the Fourth Quorum of Elders.
INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, April 9, 1908.

The Driving Power in Modern Socialism.

What, now, is the driving power back of these great congresses? What is the meaning of the movement, from a wide, non-partisan point of view? Where does the organized Socialist party stand to-day? Is it waxing or waning? What does it portend? Here are a few of the questions that occur to us in face of such a manifestation as the Stuttgart Congress.

First of all, the fact should be made quite clear that the Socialist party is far-and-away the largest political unit, not only of to-day, but of any time. To the uninformed who conceive of Socialists as a rather obscure and fantastic sect of Utopians,—of "dreamers,"—the discovery must come as something of a shock that the world's Socialist vote now stands between eight millions and nine millions, representing about thirty millions adult Socialists. This latter number includes, of course, women and disfranchised persons, who in the Socialist concept of government, in the "state within a state" which Socialism is building up, enjoy equal rights with present voters. There is something peculiarly disconcerting to the present governments of, by, and for plutocracy in those thirty millions of "dreamers," all so active in propaganda, all so terribly in earnest,—in that ever-widening acceptance of the visionary axiom that "without rights there should be no duties; without duties, no rights."

In the second place, it should be definitely understood that the movement is already breaking into legislative bodies all over the civilized world, to an extent hardly realized by the casual critic. The United States is practically the only large country of modern type in which the party has no national representation,—a state of affairs, be it said in passing, which will soon be remedied.—From "International socialism as a political force," by George Allan England, in the American Review of Reviews for May.

The New Hymnal Now Ready

- No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
- No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
- No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
- No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK
LAMONI, IOWA

FARM FOR SALE

180 acres, mostly in crop, well fenced, splendid stock farm, three quarters of a mile from L. D. S. church. Immediate possession, Terms favorable.

L. J. THOMAS,
Earlham, Iowa.

18-4t

"HEAVEN AND HELL"

BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps

PASTOR LANDENBERGER,

Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice, Mite, and Rain Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF

NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 313 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

INSTRUCTIVE

INTERESTING

"Correct English-- How to use it."

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO THE
USE OF ENGLISH.
JOSEPHINE TURCK BAKER, Editor.

PARTIAL CONTENTS:

- Queries and Answers.
- The Art of Conversation.
- Shall and Will: Should and Would: How to Use Them.
- Pronunciations (Century Dictionary).
- Correct English in the Home.
- Correct English in the School.
- What to Say and What Not to Say.
- Course in Grammar.
- Course in Letter-writing and Punctuation.
- Business English for the Business Man.
- Compound Words: How to Write Them.
- Studies in English Literature.

AGENTS WANTED.

$1.00 a Year. Send 10c for Sample Copy
Department E.

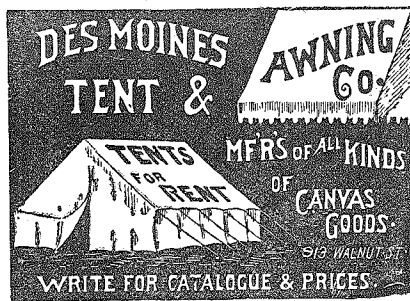

CORRECT ENGLISH, Evanston,
20-St Illinois.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid ..$30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church. 1tf

The Jackson County Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

- | | |
|----------------------------|-----------------------------|
| ELLIS SHORT, President. | M. H. BOND, Vice-president. |
| WM. CRICK, Vice-president. | J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier. |
| G. H. HILLIARD. | DR. J. MATHER. |
| MRS. O. H. RIGGS. | A. L. YINGLING. |
| HORACE SHELEY. | |

Very truly yours,
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

Landseekers' Excursions

The Big Horn Basin and Yellowstone Valley

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month, May to November inclusive, I will personally conduct Landseekers' Excursions to the Big Horn Basin, Wyo., and Yellowstone Valley, Montana. The earlier in the season you go, the better. Train Leaves Omaha 4.10 P. M., Chicago 9.15 A. M., St. Louis 8.02 A. M.

These sections are rapidly increasing in population and the new towns are growing fast. Opportunities to acquire land, stated briefly, as follows:

14,000 acres of homestead land near Garland, Wyo., irrigated by the Government, now ready for settlers.

16,000 acres of homestead land, irrigated by the Government, and 15,000 acres under the Carey Act, ready for settlers in the vicinity of Ballantine, Huntley, and Billings, Mont.

50,000 acres under the Carey Act ready for settlers May 12, near Cody, Wyoming.

60,000 acres under the Carey Act now ready for settlers in the vicinity of Worland, Basin, Greybull, and Lovell, Wyo.

Our new folder with large map, giving full and complete particulars regarding these lands, will be sent free upon request. Address

D. CLEM DEEVER, General Agent,
LANDSEEKERS' INFORMATION BUREAU,
1004 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, MAY 20, 1908

NUMBER 21

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
ISRAEL A. SMITH, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Answers to Questions - - - - -	481
Mrs. Beall; Her Mentality; the Calf - - - - -	482
The Plaint of the Preachers - - - - -	482
The Eternal Jew - - - - -	483
Notes and Comments - - - - -	484
Lamoni Items - - - - -	485
THE STRAIGHT ROAD:
What is the Book of Mormon - - - - -	486
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
The Apostasy of Catholicism.—Part I - - - - -	487
Leaves from Life - - - - -	492
What Are the Books - - - - -	494
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
Concerning Mrs. Eddy's Work - - - - -	495
Social Lines in the Church - - - - -	496
MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:
Work Hard and Pray - - - - -	497
The Daffodils - - - - -	497
Nature Fakery and Realism - - - - -	497
LETTER DEPARTMENT:
Letters - - - - -	498
NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - - -	500
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:
Pastoral - - - - -	501

ELDER CATON PASSES AWAY.

Death has again visited the British Isles mission-field. Elder C. H. Caton passed away at his home in Birmingham, England, at 3 p. m., April 27. The funeral was held May 2. His death occurred just four days after the death of Elder Joseph Dewsnup.

A CORRECTION.

The article entitled, "Nagging non-members," page 463, SAINTS' HERALD, May 13, should have been credited to Elder L. R. Devore. It was read before the ministerial meeting at Holden, Missouri.

Ascend a step in choosing a friend.—The Talmud.

Editorial

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

There is no specific rule of instruction as to the disposal of the remnants of the bread and wine that may be left after the sacramental service in the general church meeting. It is not necessary that such remnants should be thrown away. The small portions of the bread that may be left could be used by those who provide for the sacramental service, and the wine that is left be poured back into the receptacles in which the branch keeps it between the services.

In taking the sacrament to those who may be sick, or unable to attend the general service at the place where the church holds its sacramental service, it would not be necessary to renew the blessings upon the bread and the wine at the homes of the sick, providing that the portions which were taken were of those which were blessed at the general service. Of course there would be no objection or reason to find any fault, if those who are sent to administer to the sick in their homes should renew the blessing upon the bread and the wine in their prayer for the sick before administering, but the blessing which is asked upon the elements in the general service would be sufficient without such renewal, the general tenor of the prayer being to the effect that the elements blessed are sanctified to the souls of all those who partake of them. This would necessarily mean those to whom the sacrament was taken by direction of the branch authorities, as well as those who partook of it in the general service.

This question arises occasionally, which will be taken as a reason for this bit of instruction.

There is no special rule of law associating the elder and priest as visiting officers of the branch, but there is nevertheless plenty of law for the emergency if it occurs. The elder is made the watchman of the affairs of the branch, and in the absence of other officers to assist him, he is both presiding elder and visiting officer, and the rule of the law provides that in his duties he is to be assisted by the priest, and the priest may be requested to assist the elder and the elder may take the priest with him in visiting the branch membership, providing there is no teacher. These are the principles of association. It is the result of necessity, and it is said that necessity knows no law. This should be sufficient for any necessity in the absence of other officers.

MRS. BEALL; HER MENTALITY; THE CALF.

The Daily Gem City (Fort Madison, Iowa,) April 25, contained a remarkable story quite along the line of those frequently told by people who wish to air their personal knowledge of "Mormon" history. Joseph Smith, Mrs. Beall, and a calf figure in the supposed anecdote; and as one of the survivors Mrs. Beall relates the story. The belated appearance of the calf in human affairs and tardy nuptials of Mrs. and Mr. Beall rather spoil the document as history; but it may aspire to a place in fiction. The Gem City quotes from the Ottumwa Courier:

In Lee County, near Keokuk, April 16, 1865, [1856?] just fifty-two years ago to-day, J. J. Beall, then twenty-five years of age, and Miss Nancy Moore, a blushing bride of twenty-three years, plighted their marriage vows.

After their marriage in 1856, Mr. and Mrs. Beall continued to reside on a farm in Lee County for twenty-eight years, when they moved to Wapello County, settling on a farm near Old Ashland, in Washington Township, where they made their home for twenty-two years. Leaving Ashland Mr. and Mrs. Beall moved to Agency, where they still reside.

While feeble in health, Mrs. Beall is endowed with a remarkable mentality and oftentimes recounts reminiscences of the early days. She tells of the Mormons and the time when the prophet, Joseph Smith, ruled supreme at Nauvoo, Illinois. She remembers of the death of Smith and recalls an incident with Smith and his followers in the early days. "Smith and his people were the ruling powers in those parts in that day," said Mrs. Beall, "and almost whatever they wanted they were sure to get if force could obtain it. At the time of which I speak they were on a foraging expedition. I presume you would term it such, and while so engaged they took a fancy to a calf which we owned. Without the formality of asking for the animal, much less offering to buy it, they took it with them to their headquarters.

"Naturally we resented this mode of high handedness and Mr. Beall went into Nauvoo for the calf. He, however, returned without it, as Smith told him that the Lord had revealed to him that he was to have the calf, so he took it in compliance with a revelation of the Lord, of which he had several."

Bro. S. Tripp, of Fort Madison, replied to this absurd story through the columns of the Gem City, as follows:

Please notice, Joseph Smith was killed June 27, 1844, twelve years before Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Beall were married. The Mormons, as she called them, were driven out of Nauvoo in 1846, ten years before Mrs. Beall was married. She was twenty-three years old when she was married according to her own statement. Smith was killed on June 27, 1844. Mr. and Mrs. Beall were married April 16, 1856, twelve years after Smith was killed. If Mrs. Beall was twenty-three years old when she was married let us subtract twelve from twenty-three and we have Mrs. J. J. Beall eleven years old when Smith was killed. Mrs. Beall says the Mormons were the ruling power in those parts in that day, and history shows that two years after the death of Smith, in 1844, which would make it 1846, the Mormons were driven out of Nauvoo. This would be ten years before they were married. Mrs. Beall is commended for her remarkable mentality, but you citizens of Fort Madison can now see that there is no truth in her statement and [it] should be branded as a falsehood. If Joe Smith got the calf he certainly got it before he was killed and then twelve years after [later] Mr. Beall made up his mind that he could whip a dead man and his wife insisted on the fight, so Mr. Beall rolled up his sleeves, his wife patted him on the back and away he went to Nauvoo for a twelve year old dead calf. But meeting Joseph Smith twelve years dead was not able to take the rattle bones of the calf which Smith still had so went back home and was not able to leave Lee County for twenty-eight years. Mrs. Beall kept these sayings in her remarkable mentality. Well, if a man was to come to my place twelve years after he was dead and take my calf and say the Lord sent him after it, I certainly would believe him and give him the cow and my mentality also.

Remarkable mentality, weighed in the balance and found wanting.
S. TRIPP.

THE PLAINT OF THE PREACHERS.

The pastors of various churches in Kansas City met the other day and spent several hours deploring the apparent decline of piety and the fact that church attendance is not what it should be. One speaker lamented that "we are following in the path of the European countries, and coming to regard the Sabbath as a day of physical and social enjoyment." "Our parks are filled," said the speaker, "while the churches are sparsely settled. Commercialism is absorbing the life of our people. These things lead to a denial of a personal God."

With all proper respect for these well meaning ministers who express regret at the seeming decline of piety and theology, it can be said that if they would seek more diligently for the causes of the condition at which they complain their search would be rewarded. There was never a period when ministers of the gospel devoted so much time and attention to matters purely secular. In many of our churches pastors deliver addresses each Sunday that deal with political and sociological questions, and we have grown to expect nostrums for all our material ills from the pulpit. During the recent municipal campaign many of the ministers of the city took an active part in supporting the cause of one candidate for mayor largely because he was a church man and prominent as a Y. M. C. A. worker, though otherwise little qualified for the office of mayor.

Clergymen to-day have practically abandoned the old school plan of preaching only the gospel, and many of them are taking active part in politics and other matters not essentially religious or theologic. No one denies the right of ministers to take part in politics, but ministers who take politics into the pulpit should not complain if a spirit of worldliness becomes dominant in their congregations. It is hardly fair for ministers to decry the use of the public parks by the people, either on Sundays or on other days of the week. If people no longer go to the churches there may be something wrong with the churches, not necessarily with the people or the parks.

The foregoing is an editorial from the Kansas City Journal for Tuesday, May 5, 1908, and its peculiar pertinence in the present crisis in religious affairs is quite striking. We call the attention of the eldership specially to the closing portion of the editorial in which it is clearly stated that the clergymen themselves are very largely to blame for the decadence in church attendance. We who have attended the sessions of ministration in the different churches know that secular affairs, economic problems, political issues, and many other things that may attract the attention of the congregation of a sensational character are used as topics upon which to discourse to the people, either in an endeavor to educate them into the preacher's ideas, or to force things upon their attention, not connected with the preaching of Christ and him crucified. It is fortunate for our average eldership that they, in their public ministrations, do not meddle with politics, even remotely. Some of them have attempted the discussion of economical questions under the head of the Gathering and Zion, both in discourses and in articles, but these have been usually among the Saints rather than to the outside world.

This editorial in its comment would force the issues strongly upon us that it is our duty to preach the gospel, the living force of which is to assist mankind in redeeming themselves from the things which are evil and to help them to bear the conditions in life to which they are subjected and likely to be surrounded by to a great extent, until Christ comes. We give credit to the acumen of the editor who wrote this editorial for his clear observation and frank statement of the conditions as he sees them. We have a right to make inquiry of our secular brethren, pardon the expression, as to how they see things of this character and to profit by their conclusions if we discover their conclusions to be just. The press is a great shaper of public opinion, and while there may be cases in which those connected with the popular journals of the day do not render exact justice to us as religionists, we can afford to give credit for what we observe in these journals that is profitable to our maintaining our attitude as disputants in the great religious controversy that is going on. It is for this reason that we offer for consideration the statements made in this editorial. They seem to be just, and to be presented at an opportune time. Will our clergymen friends be admonished or will they continue as heretofore? That is a question that is worthy of occupying our attention.

THE ETERNAL JEW.

"Have they not kingly lineage, have they not pedigree?
Are they not wrapt with wonder, like the darkness of the sea?
They come out of the night of years with Asia in their blood,
Out of the mystery of time that was before the Flood.
"They saw imperial Egypt shrink and join the ruined lands;
They saw the sculptured, scarlet East sink under the gray sands;
They saw the star of Hellas rise and glimmer into dream;
They saw the wolf of Rome draw suck beside the yellow stream,

And go with ravenous eyes ablaze and jaws that would not spare,
Snarling across the Earth, then, toothless, die upon his lair.

"And have they not grief enough, this people shrunk with chains?

Must there be more Assyrias, must there be other Spains?
They are the tribes of sorrow, and for ages have been fed
On brackish desert-wells of hate and exile's bitter bread.
They sang the elegies that tell the grief of mortal years;
They built the tombs of Pharaohs, mixing the bricks with tears;

They builded up fair cities with no threshold for their own;

They gave their dust to Nineveh, to Babylon their moan.

"After tears by ruined altars, after toils in alien lands,
After wallings by strange waters, after lifting of vain hands,

After cords and stripes and burdens, after ages scorched with fire,

Shall they not find the way of peace, a land of heart's desire?

Shall they not have a place to pray, a land to lay the head?

Shall they not have the wild bird's nest, the fox's frugal bed?"

The Jew of yesterday is a noble figure in the world's history. He gives us the basis of our civil law. By him our religion is shaped. From his writings we glean the texts upon which our most spiritual sermons are built; they point our morals and adorn our orations.

There is no land to which a Hebrew wanderer has not penetrated. There is no law that a Hebrew lawyer has not helped to frame. There is no bright dream that a Hebrew poet has not dreamed. There is no vista of the dim future which has not opened to the eyes of a Hebrew prophet; to his quickened ear came the greatest revelation of Deity and his hand wrote the greatest books of all time.

We begin to trace their history as it takes its rise in the great patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who, strong in body, mind, and spirit, became the fathers and founders of a wonderful people. Defective though their lives were in some respects, still they cherished the basic principles and the simple virtues which insure existence and are the salt of religion and politics.

Next appears Moses, the great emancipator and lawgiver. After him was Joshua, the warrior. The one gave freedom to an oppressed people, and inspired, educated, and organized them; the other drilled them and infused into them the militant spirit so that they went as conquerors into the promised land. There, by virtue of their native qualities and the divine inspiration received from on high, they became in most that is good the teachers and leaders of the whole world.

Reflect for a moment upon their illustrious names. Would you find a typical pioneer? He is found in Abraham, who heard the voice say, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee." So he went and staked his claim in Canaan and founded a family that was to become a nation. Do you ask for a typical lawgiver? Moses is his name. Joshua is the valiant warrior; Daniel the inspired reformer. David is still the preëminent poet. Solomon is still the type of kingly splendor and wisdom. Jeremiah, Isaiah, Ezekiel, John,—no greater prophets have been born of women.

But what a change since the day when the King of the Jews said, "Behold, your house is left unto you desolate"! What a change since Paul wrote, "Seeing ye judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles"!

The picture of the eternal Jew is drawn in black and white, and the contrast is harsh to the point of offense. Yesterday, the throne, the scepter, the altar, the psaltery; to-day, the sign of the three gilded balls.

If we seek for the typical Jew of to-day we do not find a warrior, a lawgiver, a poet, or a prophet. We find an ignorant Russian exile, a crafty dealer in second-hand clothing, a money-lender.

The race that once caught the gleam of fire in the burning bush now sees but the glint of gold. The race that once heard the voice of God at Sinai now hears but the clink of the silver dollar. The race that once thrilled in contemplation of the questions of eternity now thinks mainly of the problems of gain. The Jew has fallen so low that when any man of any race descends to unspeakable meanness in a bargain he is simply said to be "jewing his neighbor down." The very name has become a "hiss and a by-word."

Fortunately there is a brighter side to the picture, which is seen as we look at the future. The Jew of to-morrow will be as the Jew of yesterday. God plainly says that he will "set his hand again the second time to gather the remnant of his people."

This will not mean simply a return to the promised land, but a complete recovery of their former state of spiritual and temporal greatness. The reproach will be removed so that kings will be proud to be their "nursing fathers," and queens be honored to be called their "nursing mothers."

The promises of God concerning them have always been fulfilled. He declared that he would sift them among all nations "as corn is sifted in a sieve." It was done. Yet he declared that "not one grain" should be lost. It is true. They are scattered but not lost. So far as the Jew proper is concerned, he is a Jew anywhere. Bleached by the Arctic winds or tanned by the African sun, he is still a Jew. He may rise to the highest heights of education and wealth, or sink to the lowest depths of ignorance and poverty, he is still a Jew. Rothschild or "sheeney," he is a Jew.

When the gospel again comes to them, as it surely will when the "times of the Gentiles are fulfilled," the same Spirit will go with it that has quickened the intellect of every people to whom God ever sent the gospel.

If the Gentile nations, among whom the gospel has been preached so long and whose intelligences have been enlivened by inspiration, shall fail to acknowledge the source of their greatness, the sun will set upon their glory, and they will cease to lead as inventors and rulers, as artists and writers, and the Jew will again lead and teach the world.

The subject is of vast importance because the welfare of the whole world is more or less affected by the welfare of the Jew. Abraham was not chosen for his own benefit alone, but that "in thee and in thy seed" all the nations of the earth might be blessed.

Looking into the future we see the time when the Jew shall attain to his supreme greatness; perhaps not as a Jew, but rather as a citizen of that great nation that shall be made up of men from every race and every clime,—the great general assembly of the First-born.

E. A. S.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Advices are received from London, the home of Bro. R. C. Evans, and Toronto, where Bro. Evans has been laboring for the last winter in the Majestic Theater, which indicate at his return Bro. Evans was received with warmth, and splendid attendance at the opening services held after his return. They gave him a warm reception indicative of the esteem in which they hold him as a laborer. He expects to begin campaign services in Toronto in a rink owned by a man friendly to the cause, which rink is offered him without expense to the church. It will be an experiment attempting to hold extended services throughout the summer, but it is worth the trial and if the effort meets the response from the public that the one in the Majestic Theater has met with for the four winter seasons past, it certainly will be productive of great good. We certainly wish that he may be able to accomplish the good he desires in this regard. This effort at Toronto with special services to which he may give his attention at stated places, and his labor as Bishop's agent in financial affairs will keep him pretty busy during the season.

By letter from Bro. W. E. Peak we learn that the late conference of the district held at Atchison, May 3, was one of the best that had been held in the district for a good while,—Bro. Peak says, "Since

I have been in the mission." He reports the Religio and Sunday-school work as progressing nicely. Sr. Flo McNichols is wielding an influence that is being felt throughout the district in the Religio and Sunday-school work, together with her earnest assistants. Bro. Peak thinks that notwithstanding the branches are not in an ideal condition, there has been yet a marked improvement in nearly all of them. The ministerial force is moving in harmony, making it a pleasure for them to labor together.

We are pleased to receive such notes from the field; it indicates a movement in the right direction.

We understand that Bro. U. W. Greene will attend some of the conferences in the Dominion and get acquainted with the working forces in the field, and the people; decided good will follow.

The Nauvoo Rustler recently expressed the sentiment that the citizens of Nauvoo should assist financially in erecting the proposed monument to the memory of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. Relative to the matter the Rustler for May 12 contained the following letter from one member of the committee:

"LAMONI, Iowa, May 7, '08.

"EDITOR RUSTLER, Dear Sir:—You may announce that the committee on monument for Joseph and Hyrum Smith will meet in Nauvoo on May 28. Nothing has yet been done as to location or the character of monument. I note what you said regarding the citizens helping to erect the monument. I suppose that was on conditions that it was located in Nauvoo. I am not authorized by the committee to solicit or accept subscriptions to this fund, but doubtless if the citizens wish to make any propositions the committee will be glad to consider them when it meets. The committee is composed of Joseph Smith and E. L. Kelley, of Independence, Missouri; A. H. Smith and Heman C. Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa; and G. P. Lambert, of Hancock County, Illinois.

"Respectfully,

"HEMAN C. SMITH."

"Who is afraid to have the light turned on?" The Saints about the Tabernacle, for on Wednesday afternoon Elder E. C. Briggs of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, who is proselyting for his church, was ordered from the grounds under threat of arrest if he did not go at once.

Elder Briggs, as said, is in Salt Lake proselyting for his church. Wednesday he visited the Tabernacle grounds, and was handing his literature to the visitors who were in the grounds. Among his literature was a booklet bearing the title, "Who is afraid to have the light turned on?" giving the correspondence between Elder Briggs of the Reorganized Church and Joseph F. Smith, Jr., of the Utah church. Another booklet was entitled, "Was Joseph Smith a polygamist?" Another entitled, "Polygamy, was it an original tenet of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints?" Another entitled, "Plural marriage in America; a critical examination." Still another, "Why I became a Saint." All of these combat the doctrine advanced by the Utah church.

Elder Briggs was at the Tabernacle entrance, talking with a tourist, when he was notified to move, as stated above, and he was told that he was violating a city ordinance.

Elder Briggs complied with the request to leave the grounds, and at once called on the city attorney, explained what had been done, and asked if he was doing anything in violation of the city ordinances. He was informed that he was not, as the documents he was distributing did not come under the head of a circular, handbill, or placard.—Semi-Weekly Tribune, Salt Lake City, Utah, May 12, 1908.

"WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Senate committee on finance to-day voted unanimously to report the bill already passed by the House providing for the permanent restoration of the words 'In God We Trust' to gold and silver coins of the United States. The motto was taken off the coins by order of the President."

The negro problem enlarges its zone and intrudes itself upon the notice of Northern people. It remains to be seen whether they will be more temperate than their Southern brethren have been under like conditions. In the city of Des Moines in one week two awful outrages have been committed upon white women by desperate negro criminals. White citizens alarmed at these crimes proceeded to organize a vigilance committee of five hundred members to cooperate with the police force for the protection of their women.

LAMONI ITEMS.

Elder J. W. Rushton delivered the baccalaureate sermon for the class of 1908, Lamoni High School, at the Brick Church Sunday forenoon at eleven o'clock. The attendance was all that could be desired. Every seat was taken, and many people were turned away. The speaker based his sermon on 2 Timothy 2: 5, "And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully," and declared his intention to point out some of the dangers as well as some of the possibilities of life. His message was a plea for sacrifice, heroism, and justice in the common affairs of life; those qualities not to be monopolized by the preacher, the soldier, and the judge.

The graduating class numbers eighteen. The commencement exercises will be held Friday evening, the address being delivered by Honorable Edwin G. Moon.

In harmony with a resolution passed at the late General Conference, Bishop Kelley has placed the management of the two Saints' Homes in the charge of a local committee; and has selected as that committee William Anderson, stake bishop, John Smith, president of the stake, and Lorenzo Hayer. The committee has organized with John Smith as president; William Anderson, treasurer; and Lorenzo Hayer, secretary.

Mrs. Jessie Morant, chairman of the good literature committee at Lamoni, has in hand various tracts, also back numbers of the SAINTS' HERALD, Autumn Leaves, and Zion's Ensign. Any one who can use these publications to advantage in missionary work may correspond with her.

The Lamoni Chronicle has the following interesting item regarding the work of the citizens' committee for soliciting funds for the rebuilding of the Herald Office: "At a meeting of the citizens' committee on rebuilding the Herald Office, which was held Tuesday night, it was decided that the unpaid subscriptions be turned over to F. B. Blair, manager of the Herald Publishing House, with instructions to collect the same. The collections to date were $15,174.86, of which $15,125 had been turned over to Bishop Kelley, leaving a balance of $49.86 on hand which will be turned over to Bishop Kelley. This leaves a balance to collect of $1,805.91, of which about $500 is in notes. It is believed that all or at least nearly all of this amount will be collected in a short time."

The stake council met in the basement of the Brick Church May 12. The name of D. C. White was presented to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of D. J. Krahl. The recommendation was indorsed. The Saints of Lucas and Cleveland sent in a communication asking for advice and counsel. They are in serious straits caused by the closing down of the coal mines at those places. The mines are being dismantled and abandoned. The Saints have secured little homes at much toil and sacrifice, and are now left without means of support. Elder John R. Evans stated that the mine operators had become involved in difficulties with the railroad that brought about this result. He was of the opinion that good coal lands could be leased and operated with profit by the Saints if they could secure a little capital with which to operate. They were referred to the stake bishopric for advice and help.

Elders J. F. Mintun and James McKiernan, of the Seven Presidents of Seventy, were in Lamoni during the past week looking up matters connected with the records of the First Quorum of Seventy.

The Straight Road

WHAT IS THE BOOK OF MORMON?

"We hold that is the 'sealed book' of Isaiah 29, the 'stick of Joseph' of Ezekiel 37, the 'truth to spring out of the earth' of Psalm 85."

The Book of Mormon claims to be a record of divine inspiration written by a succession of prophets who inhabited ancient America. It purports to give the origin of the American Indians, and the source from whence they sprang. When Columbus with his crew landed on the coast of the New World in 1492, he found it inhabited. It has since then been a question with the scientific world as to when the original inhabitants came here, and where they came from. The Book of Mormon answers these questions. It informs us that three distinct companies came out here at three distinct periods of time.

The first came from the tower of Babel about 2200 B. C. They were about twenty or thirty souls who, in answer to their importunities, were permitted by the Lord to retain their Adamic speech, and were not confounded. They were led to the Atlantic coast (possibly Portugal, Spain, or France) where they constructed eight vessels with which they crossed, bringing with them all manner of animals and seeds of every kind. They landed on the eastern coast of Central America. They tilled the land, and soon grew to vast numbers. But on account of their wickedness they were all destroyed about 600 B. C., not far from the southern shore of Lake Ontario.

About this time the Lord brought out another company from Jerusalem, Israelites of the tribe of Joseph. This company journeyed in an easterly direction, crossed the Pacific in one vessel, and landed on the western coast of South America.

About eleven years later another company, the third, who were of the tribe of Judah, came out, journeying in about the same direction, and landing on the western coast of Central America.

The second company, soon after their landing, divided into two nations, known as the Nephites and Lamanites. It is from the latter that the Indians are descendant.

The third company was known as Zarahemlites. They moved southward from their landing and established themselves in the northern part of South America. The Nephites moved northward, and about 200 B. C. they came in contact and merged into one nation. Being driven northward by the Lamanites, they were finally all destroyed by them near the southern shore of Lake Ontario, save the few who dissented and went over to the Lamanites, which happened about 400 A. D. Because of the iniquity of the Lamanites, God caused a darkness to come over their skins, and they wandered in wild, indolent tribes—and do so yet.

The Book of Mormon has about five hundred and forty-five pages of closely written matter, mostly historical. It was engraved on plates by a succession of prophets. Each would engrave thereon the events and important revelations of his time, and ere his death commit them to his descendant. Thus they descended from father to son down to about 400 A. D. The last prophet to hold them was Moroni. The people had developed in iniquity to such an extent that they were no longer worthy of a prophet. At the command of God, he deposited the plates in a stone box, securely sealed, to come forth in due time.

Now, dear reader, all we claim for Joseph Smith in this connection is that by vision and the visitation of heavenly angels, he was enabled to locate, to get possession of the plates, and by the power of God to translate them into the English language. He got possession of the plates in 1827, finished translating them in 1829, and published the first edition of the Book of Mormon in 1830. It has been on sale from that time to the present, and can be purchased by any one at from thirty-five cents to one dollar, according to binding, by addressing Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa.

There is not a single thing in the Book of Mormon contradictory to the Bible; and on polygamy it is most emphatic and condemns it in a number of places. It says, "There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife."—Page 116.

It says that they worshiped God according to the law of Moses on the American Continent down to the coming of Christ; that after the crucifixion of Christ he visited the Western Continent, ordained men, organized his church, and sent his ministers out to preach. As an indication of this, the cross has been found in America, as the emblem of Christianity, and the ten commandments have been found engraved on stone. The ancients of America had as good a right to pray, to receive an answer, and to hand their answer down, as did Peter at Joppa, or Paul, or any other in Palestine. Those who will read the book in the spirit of honest prayer will receive an evidence of its truth, as thousands can testify. We hold that it is the "sealed book" of Isaiah 29, the "stick of Joseph" of Ezekiel 37, the "truth" to "spring out of the earth" of Psalm 85.

ALVIN KNISLEY.

As objects close to the eye shut out larger objects on the horizon, so man sometimes covers up the entire disc of eternity with a dollar, and quenches transcendent glories with a little shining dust.—E. H. Chapin.

Original Articles

THE APOSTASY OF CATHOLICISM.—PART I.
A REPLY BY ELDER V. M. GOODRICH TO A CHALLENGE OF BISHOP BURKE.

ELDER V. M. GOODRICH.

[This lecture was delivered in the Tootle Theater, St. Joseph, Missouri, May 10, to a large and interested audience. It was in reply to a challenge issued by Bishop Burke, as will appear in the body of the lecture. Bro. Leon A. Gould was present and reported for the St. Joseph papers and for the SAINTS' HERALD.—EDITOR.]

With malice toward none, and good will for all, I am pleased this afternoon to be your speaker; not because I am persuaded that I am the most proficient, but because opportunity is afforded to speak in behalf of the truth, and of the great things that pertain to life eternal.

As has been announced, our purpose here this afternoon is to make reply to a challenge by one of the ministers of this city. We differ from him, and believe we have the right to state our differences, and why we differ. We shall now read the challenge of the lecturer, that you may more fully understand why we are here. We read this as we find it published in the St. Joseph Gazette under date of April 26, 1908.

I simply defy the lecturer or any other man on earth to prove that any pope from Peter the Apostle to Pius X, ever signed an heretical creed or ever erred in teaching throughout all the ages of the Christian dispensation the revelation and doctrine of Jesus Christ.

Here our divine Lord has declared that the Spirit of Truth, who came upon the Apostles on the day of Pentecost, would abide with them for ever, and that our Lord himself would be in coöperation with them in the preaching of the gospel all days even to the consummation of the world.

"Now, it has been the perpetual teaching of the Holy Catholic Church," of the apostles' creed, of the one holy, Catholic and apostolic church, of the Nicene profession of faith of the fourth century, the teaching of the Catholic Church of all the Christian ages from the day of Pentecost to this day that the church thus established and sent forth with divine power by God our Savior, in accordance with these promises, is infallible in its teaching, and indefectible in carrying out her God-given commission, and that the gates of hell should never prevail against her.

And the Catholic Church to-day, as it has been in every age of the Christian dispensation, is the only witness of God and of the eternal power and divinity of Jesus Christ.

This, my dear brethren, is the sum of my contention—that the church of Rome is the one Catholic church of Jesus Christ and that there is no other. The church that has come down to us through all ages from the apostles of Christ.

We are here, to-day, desiring to show the fallacy of some of the doctrines of the Roman Catholic Church.

First, the succession of the pope from Peter the Apostle to Pius X.

The date of the first pope proper.

When he arose to be a temporal prince.

The apostasy or turning away from the truth.

Who is the man of sin?

To point out where the popes' church is at variance with the apostolic church, as instituted by Jesus Christ and his apostles.

We shall use the Douay translation of the Scriptures, the authorized version of his eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, of the Roman Catholic Church. We desire and design by this to meet this church upon its own grounds, and with the Scriptures which they present unto us.

In order that we may canvass this first proposition concerning the succession of the pope, from Peter the Apostle to Pius X, it will be necessary to read from history, that you may understand the conditions politically and religiously at certain given times. And this history I wish you to note carefully as we shall read it, because it will form a basis, in part at least, for what we have to say to-day, and we shall refer to it throughout our lecture. We take this from Doctor Maclaine's translation of Mosheim, published in 1849, century 4, chapter 2, paragraphs 1, 2, and 3.

1. Constantine, the Great, made no essential alterations in the form of government, that took place in the Christian Church before his time; he only corrected it, in some particulars, and gave it a greater extent. For though he permitted the church to remain a body-politic, distinct from that of the state as it had formerly been, yet he assumed to himself the supreme power over this sacred body, and the right of modeling and governing it in such a manner, as should be most conducive to the public good.

This right he enjoyed without any opposition, as none of the bishops presumed to call his authority into question. The people therefore continued as usual, to choose freely their bishops and their teachers. The bishop governed the church, and managed the presbyters, and with a due regard for the sufferages of the whole assembly of the people. The provincial bishops assembled in council, deliberated together concerning those matters, that related to the interests of the churches of a whole province, as also concerning religious controversies, the forms and rights of divine service, and other things, of like moment. To these lesser councils, which were composed of the ecclesiastical deputies of one or more provinces, were afterwards added, œcumenical councils, consisting of commissioners from all the churches in the Christian world, and which, consequently represented the church universal. These were established by the authority of the emperor, who assembled the first of these universal councils at Nice. This prince thought it equitable, that questions of superior importance and such as intimately concerned the interests of Christianity in general, should be examined and decided in assemblies that represented the whole body of the Christian church. There were never indeed, any councils held which could, with strict propriety, be called universal; those however, whose laws and decrees were approved and admitted by the universal church, or the greatest part of that sacred body, are commonly called œcumenical or general councils.

2. The rights and privileges of the several ecclesiastical orders were, however, gradually changed and diminished, from the time that the church began to be torn with divisions, and agitated with those violent dissensions and tumults, and other things of a like nature to which they frequently gave rise. In these religious quarrels the weaker generally fled to court for protection and succor; and thereby furnished the emperors with a favorable opportunity of setting limits to the power of the bishops, and of infringing the liberties of the people, and of modifying, in various ways, the ancient customs according to their pleasures. And, indeed, even the bishops themselves, whose opulence and authority were considerably increased since the reign of Constantine, began to introduce, gradually, innovations into the forms of ecclesiastical discipline, and to change the ancient government of the church. Their first step was an entire exclusion of the people from all part in the administration of ecclesiastical affairs; and afterwards, they by degrees divested even the presbyters of their ancient privileges, and their primitive authority, that they might have no importunate protestors to control their ambition, or oppose their proceeding; and principally that they might either engross to themselves, or distribute as they thought proper, the possessions and revenues of the church. Hence it came to pass, that, at the conclusion of this century, there remained no more than a mere shadow of the ancient government of the church. Many of the privileges that formerly belonged to the presbyters and people, were usurped by the bishops; and many of the rights, which had been formerly vested in the universal church, were transferred to the emperors, and the subordinate officers and magistrates.

3. Constantine the Great, in order to prevent civil commotion, and to fix his authority upon solid and stable foundations, made several changes, not only in the laws of the empire, but also in the form of the Roman government. And as there were many important reasons, which induced him to suit the administration of the church to these changes in the civil constitution, this necessarily introduced, among the bishops, new degrees of eminence and rank. Three prelates had, before this, enjoyed a certain degree of preëminence over the rest of the episcopal order, viz; the Bishop of Rome, Antioch, and Alexandria; and to these the Bishop of Constantinople was added, when the imperial residence was transferred to that city. These four prelates, answered to the four prætorian prefects created by Constantine; and it is possible that, in this very century, they were distinguished by the Jewish title of patriarchs. After these, followed the exarchs, who had the inspection over several provinces, and answered to the appointment of certain civil officers who bore the same title.

I wish to state that Constantine, who, this history tells us, assumed or usurped authority over both church and state, was not until the close of his life accounted a Christian. We are told that Eusebius, just a few days before his death, baptized this monarch into the church. I call your attention to this fact to show you the condition of things, and that he usurped the authority, made himself the supreme head of the church as well as of the state,—and he a pagan, of the pagan religion. And none of the bishops, at this time, we are told, disputed his right—they conceded that right. Where is your pope, the head of the church?

We are also informed in reading this, that the form of government that was existing in this century was episcopal. What do I mean by that? Ruled by bishops having various districts. None was universal. There were a number of them, you noticed as we read. Whatever the form of government instituted by Jesus Christ and the apostles, we find that at this juncture of history, in the beginning of the fourth century, the government was episcopal in its form, and the pope was a creature that was erected subsequent to this period.

We want to read you a little more history, to show that there were two bishops at one time, according to canon law adopted by their highest council, who made them such. And let me say, that at that time there was no such term used or known as "pope"; but they were known as bishops. The word pope is derived from the Greek papus, meaning father.

The council of Chalcedon was held A. D. 451, and notwithstanding the preëminence assumed therein by the legates of the bishop of Rome, he had not power or influence to prevent the passage of a canon, which proved extremely odious, to his lordly master, Leo, who had been surnamed the Great, and which resulted in a protracted and bitter controversy, between the bishops of Rome and Constantinople, as to who should be greatest. Some years, previous to this time, since the removal of the empire to Constantinople, the ambition and assumption of the bishop of Constantinople, had almost equalled that of Rome. He had lately usurped the spiritual government of the provinces of Asia Minor, Thrace, Pontas, and the eastern part of Illyricum, very much to the chagrin and dissatisfaction of Leo. This dissatisfaction was increased when, by the twenty-eighth canon of the council of Chalcedon, it was resolved that the same rights and honors which had been conferred upon the bishop of Rome, were due to the bishop of Constantinople.—History of Romanism, page 41.

We want you to notice by what authority and right the bishop was recognized, the general opinion prevailing, and the understanding of what the right of the bishop in rank was we learn from the following:

By general consent a kind of superiority of rank had long been conceded to the bishop of Rome, chiefly by the fact that that city was the first in rank and importance, and the ancient capital of the empire; and upon the same ground it was that the council of Chalcedon, already referred to, "proceeding on the principle that the importance of a bishop depended alone on the political consequence of the city in which he lived, decreed the same rights to the bishop of Constantinople, in the Eastern church which the bishop of Rome enjoyed in the Western."—Gieseler, volume 1, page 269.

We note here, now, that there were two bishops, as our Catholic friends would say, two popes. Well, they would not concede this for a moment; but history records the fact that there were two, and that the council there held ceded and passed this contrary to the will and wishes of the bishop of Rome, and because the city in which he (the bishop of Constantinople) lived equaled the other in importance, and had become the capital, and consequently he should have the same rights and privileges and honors that belonged to the bishop of Rome.

We have some history here, if you will notice, that we wish to refer to later on. We want to find the date if we can, the time subsequent to the fourth period when Constantine the Great assumed power and came into control over the whole Roman Empire.

We read from the History of Romanism, page 55, the following:

Boniface, who succeeded to the Roman See, in 605, . . . applied to the Emperor Phocas, a cruel and bloodthirsty tyrant, who had made his way to the throne by assassinating his predecessor, and earnestly solicited the title (of universal bishop)

Note the fact. This date is the first we hear of such an application by any individual who succeeded in the request.

with the privilege of handing it down to his successors. The profligate Emperor, who had a secret grudge against the bishop of Constantinople, granted the request of Boniface, and after strictly forbidding the former prelate to use the title, conferred it upon the latter in the year 606, and declared the Church of Rome to be the head of all other churches.

Henceforward the religion of Rome is properly styled popery, or the religion of the pope. Previous to the year 606 there was properly no pope.

I want to call your attention to the manner in which the pope was established as the bishop of Rome and was made the universal bishop. We are told here by the historian that it was by the profligate Emperor, who had gained ascension to the throne through murder, one who had a grudge against the bishop at the other point, Constantinople, who conceded to the request, thereby making it a law of state—and gave him authority to hand it on down.

We now want to call your attention to the time when the pope became the temporal prince. We will have need of this further along:

In the year 755, the pope became a temporal prince, "the little horn."

This refers to the little horn which Daniel saw in the seventh chapter of the book of his prophecy to which we hope to refer later.

For countenancing the dethronement of Childric III, king of France, and crowning Pepin, Pepin gave to the Roman see, the exarchate of Ravenna, Pentapolis, and twenty-one cities and castles. Charlemagne, his son and successor, aimed at the empire of the west. He accomplished his purpose, went to Rome and was crowned; and in return for services ceded to the papal see, several cities and provinces, and gave it a subordinate jurisdiction over Rome, and the annexed territory, enabling it to become the seat of wealth and magnificence. . . . The man of sin came in, as Paul said he would, "after the workings of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness, of unrighteousness, in them that perish." He arrogated to himself god-like titles and attributes, King of Kings, Universal Father, Master of the World; set himself above all laws, human and divine; by taxes and massacres he oppressed and wore out the saints; he changed "times and laws," appointing innumerable fasts and feasts, new modes of worship, and new articles of faith, and supporting himself, by the most infamous frauds, and barefaced pretensions to miracles. The most powerful monarchs were powerless before him. Emperors led his horse and held his stirrups. Kings were stripped by him of their honor and power, and whole realms were deprived of every religious privilege.

For refusing to surrender to him the right of investiture, the right ever claimed by the princes of Europe, of conferring the most important places in the churches and monasteries upon whom they pleased, by the ceremony of presenting the ring and crosier, Hildebrand, Gregory VII, a pope haughty and arrogant in the extreme, drove Henry, Emperor of Germany from his throne, and compelled him, in the winter of 1077, to cross the Alps, and stand three days in the open air at the entrance of the pontiff's palace, with his feet bare, his head uncovered, and no other garment but a coarse woolen cloth thrown around his naked body, and implore forgiveness and a restoration to his dominions.

I am reading now the history of some of the acts which the pope did, for a purpose which will appear later. I wish you to notice how he humbled this mighty monarch, together with two others of which I shall read.

For sanctioning, as was supposed, the violent death of Thomas a' Becket, archbishop of Canterbury, a man who had acquired, by his pretended sanctity, a most amazing power, Henry II, King of England, was compelled by Pope Alexander, to walk barefoot over three miles of flinty road, with only a coarse cloth over his shoulders, to the shrine of the murdered saint, where eighty monks, four bishops, abbots, and other clergy, who were present, whipped his bare back, with a knotted cord, compelled him to drink water, mingled with Becket's blood, and give forty pounds a year, for tapers to burn perpetually before the martyr's tomb.

For opposing him in the appointment of an archbishop of Canterbury, Pope Innocent III, in the commencement of the thirteenth century, excommunicated John, king of England; forbidding all persons to eat, drink, or converse with him, or do him service, absolving all his subjects, from his allegiance, ordering the other monarchs of Europe to kill him, and laid the whole kingdom under an interdict, so that every religious privilege, was taken away; every church was shut, no bell was heard; no taper lighted; no divine service performed; no sacrament administered; no priest was present; no interment was permitted but the highways.—Marsh's Ecclesiastical History, page 232.

Now I wish to read three or four articles from the canon law. That you may understand what is meant by the canon law, I will state, it is that law which is binding upon the Catholic Church, passed upon by ecumenical councils:

All human power is from evil, and must therefore be standing under the pope.

3. The church is empowered to grant, or take away, any temporal position.

4. The pope has a right to give countries and nations, which are no-catholic to catholic regents, who can reduce them to slavery.

7. The church has the right to practice the unconditional censure of books.

The pope is above all human laws, therefore can not be judged by man.

The question comes to us to-day, Is the claim of the pope's church correct? Is it true that Pope Pius X is the legal successor of the Apostle Peter? Are they, in fact, the only church having the right to represent the power and kingdom of God on earth? If that be true, we ought to know it. No error will save any man or woman, and hence, if it is not true we ought to know it; because we read in Holy Writ, that there shall come many false prophets and teachers, and they will deceive many. We do not want to be in that class. And if their claim is not true, then their religion will be of no eternal worth.

Let us examine the Scriptures. We often hear it said, "Why, the pope's church is the oldest church on the earth. It is the mother church. And because of its wealth, because of its splendor, because of its great numbers, and because of its eminent men of learning, it must be right." That is one of the arguments, if it be an argument.

But we have the eternal word of God. That is the standard by which we must judge; because the Lord Jesus said that he would judge us according to his word at the last day. He has left us his word, and we are responsible if we do not take that word as the standard of evidence, and be guided accordingly.

The good bishop in his lecture laid great stress upon that which the Master said to the Apostle Peter, as found in the sixteenth chapter of the gospel as recorded by Saint Matthew: "Upon this rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall never prevail against it." And we are given to understand by the lecturer that the Roman Catholic Church is the perpetuation of the church that was established by Jesus Christ and the apostles; and if it were not that way, there were nothing in the word of Jesus Christ but a failure.

I do not believe any such statement. I do not believe that the words of Jesus Christ were a failure.

I do not believe that the church of Jesus Christ that was founded by himself and his apostles has its continuation in popeism. And why do I not believe it? Because the word of God warrants me in the belief that there was to be an apostasy, that there was to be a falling away, a turning from the truth; and that the man of sin must be revealed before the coming of Jesus Christ.

There are various words and testimonies recorded by Jesus Christ and the holy apostles, and by the prophets of old, looking forward to the apostasy, or a turning away from the truth, or as the Douay translation has it, "a revolt." And I want to place right beside the saying of Jesus Christ to Peter, which the good bishop has used, another saying of Jesus Christ found in Matthew 11:12:

And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent bear it away.

Notice! "And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent bear it away." Was not that to be fulfilled? "The violent shall bear it away." The King James translation has it, "shall take it by force."

Let us read another. But before we do that I want to call your attention to the record as made by Isaiah in the fifty-fifth chapter. The Lord speaking through him said, "My ways are not your ways, neither are my thoughts your thoughts. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my thoughts higher than your thoughts, and my ways higher than your ways." We will show you how God preserved his church, and the gates of hell did not prevail against it, and it was not through a succession or continuation of popery. Now we read:

Jesus therefore said to them: Yet a little while, the light is among you. Walk whilst you have the light that the darkness overtake you not.—John 12:35.

"Yet a little while [not a great while] the light is among you. Walk whilst you have the light, that the darkness overtake you not." And again:

I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh when no man can work.—John 9:4.

"The night cometh," which was to be subsequent to the time of Jesus Christ, when he was here talking. Is not that plain? Do you think he storied when he said it?

Let us read from the Apostle Paul, the great apostle to the Gentiles, to whom we are indebted for more of the epistles than to any other sacred writer:

Take heed to yourselves, and to the whole flock, wherein the Holy Ghost hath placed you bishops, to rule the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. I know that, after my departure, ravening wolves will enter in among you, not sparing the flock. And of your own selves shall arise men speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.—Acts 20:28-30.

Does not that sound like what I read to you out of the history a little while ago, how the order was changed, how the pagan prince assumed control over the head of the church, directing it, setting officers in it corresponding to the political officers of the day? And, moreover, we are told here that the flocks would not be spared. There would not be any left then, would there?

Again:

Let no man deceive you by any means—[that is just why we are here to-day], For unless there come a revolt first—[think of that], and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition, who opposeth, and is lifted up above all that is called God, or that is worshiped, so that he sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself as if he were God.—2 Thessalonians 2:3, 4.

The particular point I want you to note at this juncture, is that the apostle there was assuring the Saints that the day of the Lord would not come—they were thinking that the day of the Lord was right at hand—until there should come a revolt first. What is a revolt? This is translated from the Greek word, apostasia, and means "turning from the truth; being reversed in faith." There must be a revolt first, and the man of sin be revealed.

Having read to you from the New Testament Scriptures, I want to give you just a few quotations from the old prophecies. There are a great many of them bearing upon this subject, many more than we shall have time, to-day, to present to you.

Behold the days come, saith the Lord, and I will send forth a famine into the land: not a famine of bread, nor a thirst of water, but of hearing the word of the Lord. [We all know what a famine is. But this is not of bread. It is not of water. We are told, here, the famine the Lord was going to send was that of hearing the word of the Lord. What further does it say?] And they shall move from sea to sea, and from the north to the east: they shall go about seeking the word of the Lord, and shall not find it.—Amos 8:11, 12.

What do you think of that? And the interpretation that the gates of hell shall never prevail against the church? There was no time previous, that history records, from the time this was spoken by Amos, when men and individuals were unable to find the word of the Lord. There were priests, and authority, from the time that this was uttered until the coming of Jesus Christ and John the Baptist. It could not have been, then, between these times. It must of necessity have been later; and corresponds with that time wherein Jesus said, "Yet a little while, the light is among you," and the apostle we have quoted where he said there must be a revolt, a falling away.

Now again:

And the earth is infected by the inhabitants thereof: because they have transgressed the laws, they have changed the ordinance, [I wish you would bear that in mind.] they have broken the everlasting covenant. [That is, the gospel covenant.] Therefore shall a curse devour the earth, and the inhabitants thereof shall sin: and therefore they that dwell therein shall be mad [drunken, if you please, as we have it in another place], and few men shall be left. [Few men left that would not be mad, of course.]—Isaiah 24: 5, 6.

Be astonished, and wonder, waver, and stagger: be drunk, and not with wine: stagger, and not with drunkenness. For the Lord hath mingled for you the spirit of deep sleep, he will shut up your eyes, he will cover your prophets and princes, that see visions.—Isaiah 29: 9, 10.

These are prophetic declarations that must be fulfilled. When did the time come?

(To be continued.)

• * * * •

LEAVES FROM LIFE.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER W. E. LA RUE.

"The sublime truths that have come to our knowledge by research and by experience give this great latter-day message a value in our estimation that can not be reckoned by dollars and cents."

Personally, I have no desire to advertise myself before the public, and the attempt to give a brief account of my life is in answer to the request of the HERALD editors. For historical and other purposes, the church needs to be acquainted with those whose lives are chiefly spent in the ministry.

I was born May 5, 1876, at Buffalo Prairie, Mercer County, Illinois. I was the baby and only boy in a family of five children. My father was Isaac B. LaRue and my mother's maiden name was Melissa Adams. My parents were both Latter Day Saints; they lived and died in the hope of the gospel of Christ. My grandfather, Jesse L. Adams, was for many years a member of the First Quorum of Seventy. He and his wife were devoted members of the church and died in the faith.

It will be seen by the above statements that I "was born in the faith"; however, I was not exactly "brought up in the faith." My mother died when I was four years of age, and many times have I longed for a mother's love and care. During the years of my youth, my lot was cast among a class of people who were almost regardless of religious obligation. Suffice it to say, I have been so situated that I have seen much of the vilest forms of wickedness with which humanity is cursed. As I review the past I feel a sense of gratitude to the giver of all good, that while I was permitted to see many illustrations of darkest sin, his guiding hand restrained me from being entangled or ensnared therein.

Being taken with sickness while working with a threshing crew in South Dakota, I went to Millersburg, Illinois, where my father was residing at that time. There I heard and began a thorough investigation of the latter-day work. However, the first sermon of which I have recollection was preached by Elder W. W. Blair, at Buffalo Prairie, Illinois.

His text was, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."—1 Corinthians 2: 9. I was only a small boy at that time, but an impression was made on my mind; I liked the text, which was fittingly made the foundation of the sermon, and I also liked the personal appearance of that Saint and sage whose memory is ever held in high esteem by the church in general.

Among the elders that visited the vicinity of Millersburg and preached to my edification previous to my conversion were John T. Kinnaman, W. S. Pender, F. G. Pitt, M. T. Short, and others of local distinction.

As I now find myself constantly engaged in preaching to young men and boys, I often wonder if the sermons which I preach and the impressions which I make are as lasting in the memory, as instructive to the mind and edifying to the soul as were the ministrations of these men above mentioned, and also others. If so, I can feel that I am doing some good in the world.

I was baptized September 25, 1895, at Millersburg, Illinois, by Elder David S. Holmes. About one year after that date I was ordained to the office of teacher, and served for some time as teacher of the Millersburg Branch.

It was while serving in this capacity that I preached my first sermon. An appointment had been made by a certain brother, and for some reason he failed to appear at the appointed time. It was up to me to preach, or else there would be no meeting. Two sisters kindly encouraged me to make the effort. They said, "Go ahead, Bro. LaRue, and we will pray for you." I remember my text, which was Romans 1: 16, 17, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ," etc. I felt encouraged by the effort and enjoyed fair liberty.

At a conference held at Millersburg, in the month of June, in the year 1897, I was ordained to the office of priest. The circumstances attending my calling to this office are worthy to be related here. It was a most beautiful morning and the Saints and friends had assembled at an early hour for prayer and testimony-service. Apostle John H. Lake, who was at that time in charge of that territory, was present. A good spirit pervaded the assembly. After a time Bro. Lake arose and spoke in the gift of tongues. Although at this time he was not acquainted with me, I was made to feel that some message concerning me had come. He later arose and delivered the interpretation, and among other things it was to the effect that I was then to be ordained to the office of priest, and also that T. J. Sheldon, who then held the office of priest, was to be ordained to the office of elder. A most peaceful, joyful influence accompanied the message. When I witnessed the gift of the Holy Ghost, so manifest to all present, what was I, that I could withstand God? The audience was melted to tears, and the divinity of that message seemed beyond question.

I have been told by my father and by others, that I was as one born out of due time. For, several years before I was born, it was declared to my parents, in prophecy, by my uncle, John F. Adams, that a son would be born to them and would hold the priesthood and preach the gospel. My mother was very ill at that time, and had almost given up hope of recovery. My aunt, Rachel Keck, and Sr. Catherine Epperly, who are yet living, were familiar with this announced event mentioned in the prophecy, and looked, waited, and hoped to see the fulfillment. When Elder Lake delivered the message mentioned above he made reference to this prophecy, of which he had no knowledge of his own wisdom. It so happened that my aunt, Rachel Keck, and Sr. Epperly were present at this meeting and arose and gave their testimonies, amid tears of joy, to the divinity of the call, which to their knowledge had been made previous to my birth and was there confirmed, when the set time had come for me to enter upon my work.

I endeavored to occupy in this office, preaching and doing other work in the branch, and holding meetings at other places in that vicinity. In June of the year 1898 I attended a conference at Canton, Illinois. While there Elder John H. Lake again spoke by the Spirit's direction, and part of the message was to the effect that the time had come for me to be ordained to the office of elder. Accordingly I was ordained to the office of elder, June 6, 1898, which office I now hold.

Soon after this time I removed to Davenport, Iowa, where I spent the winter attending the Davenport Business College. Later I was employed by the Tri-city Electric Company, working at night for about two years, during which time I was either in charge or actively connected with church work in the cities of Davenport, Iowa, Rock Island and Moline, Illinois.

During the fall of 1900 I determined to give up my position with the electric company, and decided to enter school and take up the study of law for a profession. While making arrangements to this effect, it suddenly came to me in the form of a question, as though propounded by an audible voice, "What about your calling to the priesthood?"

The result was that I decided to enter the active ministry, and made application to those in charge for appointment. My first mission was the Eastern Iowa District, and Kewanee District, in Illinois. Here I labored from Oct., 1900, to April, 1901, under appointment of those in charge of that territory.

At the General Conference of 1901 I was appointed to the Eastern Mission, then in charge of Apostle W. H. Kelley. I was detained from entering my field, being taken sick with small-pox at the close of conference. I recovered sufficiently to leave for my field early in June—my objective point being Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. I stopped en route at Palermo, New York, by direction of the missionary in charge, to act as moderator in a debate. From there I went to Greenwood, New York, also, to act as moderator in a debate. These duties having been accomplished I went direct to Philadelphia, where I arrived July 24, 1901.

At that time the meeting-place of the branch at Philadelphia was in a hall. A movement was in operation to build a church in which to worship. The result was that in December of the same year the church building there was opened with appropriate services. I continued to labor there, in the city, and also at various places in the district, and was reappointed to that field by the General Conferences of 1902 and 1903. At the conference of 1904 I was appointed to Eastern Maine, with objective point at Jonesport. Here I labored until the conference of 1905, when I was appointed to the British Isles Mission. Arriving in the field there, I labored but a short time when, for reasons which need not be stated here, I offered my resignation to the missionary in charge and obtained release from the appointment. Before returning to my native land I took a circular tour in Europe, visiting the countries of Holland, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, and France.

At the conference of 1906, I was appointed to labor in the Western Maine District, and also reappointed to the same field at the conference of 1907, being placed in charge.

On March 27, 1907, I was united in marriage with Cordie C. Short, of Independence, Missouri. We are in the field of service, at the post of duty, endeavoring to cheerfully contribute our humble influence to the uplifting of the gospel standard. My wife's progenitors, like my own, were staunch Latter Day Saints. Her father, Elder M. T. Short, gave many valued years of his life to missionary labor, and in death laid off the toils of earthly effort in hope of the celestial glory. The sublime truths that have come to our knowledge by research, and by experience, give this great latter-day message a value in our estimation not to be reckoned by dollars and cents.

W. E. LARUE.

DEER ISLE, Maine.

• * * * •

If judges would make their decisions just, they should behold neither plaintiff, defendant, nor pleader, but only the cause itself.—B. Livingston.

WHAT ARE THE BOOKS?

I desire to enter into an examination of the above question. In so doing I fully realize that I must cross swords, as it were, with many who are my superiors in every way. Yet I believe that we should obey in the fullest sense the warning of Apostle Paul, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thessalonians 5:21. The necessity for observing the above rule is found in the fact that if it were so observed we would all teach the same thing, and there would be no vital questions over which controversy could arise. But methinks I hear the question, by some one, "What books do you refer to?"

Not long ago I had the pleasure of listening to an able discourse delivered by an aged brother, one who has spent upwards of forty years in an endeavor to teach men the way of life, and at the close of his effort he quoted Revelation 20:12 which reads as follows: "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works."

The comment of the speaker upon the above quotation was as follows, "You will notice, beloved friends, that the time will come when the books will be opened, and all will be judged by the things written in the books. What are the books? We have them here, the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants." Had this been the only time that the above statement had been made, we would not offer criticism. Let me ask a question, Where, from Genesis to Revelation, can a quotation be found supporting the statement that the books mentioned are the books John refers to? Echo answers, Where? But, brethren and sisters, we once had a prophet sent of God, who received and wrote upon the very question before us, and if you will turn to your book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 109, and read the first three paragraphs, and carefully note, you will see that the prophet speaks under the power and direction of the Spirit of God, giving counsel and direction concerning the building of the temple at Nauvoo. Paragraph 5 speaks concerning their dead. (I hope I shall not be considered as treading upon forbidden ground, as we continue our investigation.) In this paragraph the prophet counsels the Saints that, when any are baptized for their dead, a recorder be present to see (the baptism) with his own eyes and to hear with his own ears the words spoken, because this is an act that is binding on earth and in heaven. You will notice that a system of book-keeping is to be had whenever this ordinance is in force before God, and it must be so correct that it will be binding on earth and in heaven.

In section 110, paragraph 2, the prophet in another letter resumes the subject by telling them he has had additional revelation on the subject of a recorder, and, reader, if you follow closely you may find what special authority was given to the Apostle Peter by the Savior when he said to Peter, "And I will give unto thee [Peter] the keys [power] of the kingdom of heaven, [not the keys or power of the kingdom on earth, for it must first receive its authority from heaven] and whatsoever thou [Peter] shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever thou [Peter] shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Now read on in paragraph 3 and see how explicit and plain the Lord God puts the whole matter, and all the counsel is concerning certain records that must be kept in the due time of the Lord. Paragraph 4 also speaks concerning a general church recorder, and all these records are to contain the words of the dead (not the living) who should die without a knowledge of the gospel. (Par. 5.) And in the judgment of the writer paragraph 6 for ever disproves the theory that the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants are the "books" referred to in Revelation 20:12. Hear the prophet: "And further, I want you to remember that John the Revelator was contemplating this very subject . . . when he declared, as you will find recorded in Revelation 20:12." In paragraph 7, the prophet's comment is as follows: "You will discover in this quotation that the books were opened, and another book was opened, which was the book of life; but the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works; consequently, the books spoken of [by John, Revelation 20:12] must be the books which contained the record of their works, and refer to the records which are kept on the earth. And the book which was the book of life, is the record which is kept in heaven."

Read paragraph 8 and see how the Lord tells us that this whole matter consists in the power of the priesthood by the revelation of Jesus Christ (just what Peter received—Matthew 16:17), "wherein it is granted that whatsoever you bind on earth [or record] shall be bound [or recorded] in heaven," just what Jesus told Peter he should do (Matthew 16:19), and the prophet says so in paragraph 10. Paragraph 11 tells us that when a man stands in such a position holding this authority to bind or to loose on earth and it becomes a law in heaven, having this power under the priesthood, there is no difficulty in such an one receiving a knowledge of facts for the dead as well as for the living; and who among New Testament writers tells us about the salvation of the dead except Peter?

W. A. GOODWIN.

Of General Interest

CONCERNING MRS. EDDY'S WORK.

Naturally, the first danger, [to Mrs. Eddy's supremacy] lay in the pastors of her branch churches. Mrs. Stetson and Laura Lathrop had built up strong churches in New York; Mrs. Ewing was pastor of a flourishing church in Chicago, Mrs. Leonard of another in Brooklyn, Mrs. Williams in Buffalo, Mrs. Steward in Toronto, Mr. Norcross in Denver. These pastors naturally became leaders among the Christian Scientists in their respective communities, and came to be regarded as persons authorized to expound Science and Health and the doctrines of Christian Science. Such a state of things Mrs. Eddy considered dangerous, not only because of the personal influence the pastor might acquire over his flock, but because a pastor might, even without intending to do so, give a personal color to his interpretation of her words. In his sermon he might expand her texts and infinitely improvise upon her themes until gradually his hearers accepted his own opinions for Mrs. Eddy's. The church in Toronto might come to emphasize doctrines which the church in Denver did not; here was a possible beginning of differing denominations.

So, as Mrs. Eddy splendidly puts it, "In 1895 I ordained the Bible and Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, as the Pastor, on this planet, of all the churches of the Christian Science Denomination." That is what Mrs. Eddy actually did. In the Journal of April, 1895, she announced, without any previous warning to them, that her preachers should never preach again; that there were to be no more preachers; that each church should have instead a first and a second reader, and that the Sunday sermon was to consist of extracts from the Bible and from Science and Health, read aloud to the congregation. In the beginning the first reader read from the Bible and the second reader from Mrs. Eddy's book. But this she soon changed. The First Reader now reads from Science and Health and the Second reads those passages of the Bible which Mrs. Eddy says are correlative. This service, Mrs. Eddy declares, was "authorized by Christ." . . .

With the branch churches the case is much the same. Mrs. Eddy starts out bravely by saying that they are to have "local self-government." But on reading the Manual we find that they are pretty well provided for.

A branch church can be organized only by a member of the Mother Church. (Church Manual (43d ed.), Article 28.)

The services of the branch churches are definitely prescribed; they are to consist of music, Mrs. Eddy's prayer, and oral readings from Science and Health and the Bible.

Mrs. Eddy may appoint or remove—without explanation—the Readers of the branch churches at any time. (Ibid. (11th ed.), Article 23.)

The branch churches may never have comments or remarks made by their Readers, either upon passages from Science and Health or from the Bible. (Ibid. (43d ed.), Article 4.)

The branch churches may have lectures only by lecturers whom Mrs. Eddy has appointed in the usual way—through the "vote" of her Board of Directors. (Ibid. (43d ed.), Article 34, sec. 1.) And the lecture must have passed censorship. (Ibid. (43d ed.), Article 34, sec. 2.)

After listening to such a lecture, the members of the branch churches are not permitted to give a reception or to meet for social intercourse. Mrs. Eddy tells them to "depart in quiet thought." (Ibid. (43d ed.), Article 34, sec. 4.) (It seems more than probable that this by-law was devised for the spiritual good of the lecturer. Mrs. Eddy had no idea that these gentlemen should be feted or made much of after their discourse and thus become puffed up with pride of place.)

Since the branch churches, then, have nothing to say about their services, Readers, or lecturers, there seems to be very little left for them to do with their powers of local self-government.

Services in the branch churches, as in the Mother Church, are limited to the Sunday morning and evening readings from the Bible and Science and Health, the Wednesday evening experience meetings, and to the communion service. (In the Mother Church this occurs but once a year, in the branch churches twice.) There is no baptismal service, no marriage or burial service, and weddings and funerals are never conducted in any of the Christian Science churches.

Included in the Mother Church organization are the Publication Committee, the Christian Science Publishing Society, the Board of Lectureship, the Board of Missionaries, and the Board of Education, all absolutely under Mrs. Eddy's control.

The manager of the Publication Committee, at present Mr. Alfred Farlow, is "elected" annually by the Board of Directors under Mrs. Eddy's instructions. His salary is to be not less than $5,000. This Publication Committee is simply a press bureau, consisting of a manager with headquarters at Boston and of various branch committees throughout the field. It is the duty of a member of this committee, wherever he resides, to reply promptly through the press to any criticism of Christian Science or of Mrs. Eddy which may be made in his part of the country, and to insert in the newspapers of his territory as much matter favorable to Christian Science as they will print. In replying to criticism this bureau will, if necessary, pay the regular advertising rate for the publication of their statements. The members of this committee, after having written and published their articles in defense of Christian Science, are also responsible, says the Manual, "for having the papers containing these articles circulated in large quantities." This press agency has been extremely effective in pushing the interests of Christian Science, in keeping it before the public, and in building up a desirable legendry around Mrs. Eddy. . . .

All that Christian Science comprises to-day—the Mother Church, branch churches, healers, teachers, Readers, boards, committees, societies—are as completely under Mrs. Eddy's control as if she were their temporal as well as their spiritual ruler. The growth of her power has been extensive as well as intensive.

In June, 1907, the membership of the Mother Church, according to the Secretary's report, was 43,876. The membership of the branch churches amounted to 42,846. As members of the branch churches are almost invariably members of the Mother Church as well, there can not be more than 60,000 Christian Scientists in the world to-day, and the number is probably nearer 50,000.

In June, 1907, there were in all 710 branch churches. Fifty-eight of these are in foreign countries; 25 in the Dominion of Canada, 14 in Great Britain, 2 in Ireland, 4 in Australia, 1 in South Africa, 8 in Mexico, 2 in Germany, 1 in Holland, and 1 in France. There are also 295 Christian Science societies not yet incorporated into churches, 30 of which are in foreign countries.

In reading these figures one must bear in mind the fact that twenty-nine years ago the only Christian Science church in the world was struggling to pay its rent in Boston.—Georgine Maxine, in May McClure's Magazine.

* * * * *

SOCIAL LINES IN THE CHURCH.

In the course of an anniversary sermon at old Plymouth Church, Doctor Hillis recently broached a subject that is little mentioned in city churches,—class and social distinctions. He adjured his hearers: "I charge you to be faithful to Christ, and loyal to his work. Plymouth Church has stood for the poor and the weak, for the wise and the rich. I charge you to fight against the class spirit. Never to revere the patrician through office or gold, above the poor in humble attire, lest you make Plymouth Church a memory, and the building a shell, where life once was."

There is just a little suggestion in this incidental paragraph in the course of a long sermon that it is not a perfunctory utterance, and that it voices a real sentiment, a sentiment Doctor Hillis believes vital to the purposes of the church if it is to retain any real power in the world.

But will the members of Plymouth Church recognize equality in church of people who are not recognized as equal in the social and business world? Is the belief real that in heaven there will be no distinction of high and low, great and small, as this world measures honors? Have not these assertions of equality become cant phrases in the church, just as our political declarations of equality have become cant phrases at patriotic celebrations?

Herbert Quick pictures the short career of a proselyting minister who had succeeded in inducing the laboring masses to attend his aristocratic church and crowd the pews. Supposing Doctor Hillis could by his eloquence fill Plymouth Church from the byways of Brooklyn? Would Doctor Hillis, if he knew he could do it, fill the pews of Plymouth Church from the highways and byways?

It is pretty hard to meet, in the church, people we refuse to meet socially, and have no business relations with. It is pretty hard to believe that those who do not cut much figure in this world will be important in any other world. It is pretty hard to believe in democracy in any relation of life, that is, to really believe in it. It is easy to say that before the Lord and before the law all men are on terms of equality. But it is pretty hard to live it in every day life.

Doctor Hillis may believe there should be no class distinctions in Plymouth Church. But if he ever begins a crusade for real equality he will have cut out for himself the hardest task of his ministerial career. For as wealth increases and people grow further and further apart in manner of dress and style of living they grow further and further apart in their church affiliations. With the possible exception of the Catholic Church no church organization has yet been able to stem the tide.—The Register and Leader, May 11, 1908.

Crossing the Bar.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea,
But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.
Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark.
For tho' from out our bourne of time and place,
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

—Alfred Lord Tennyson.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. F. M. Smith, secretary, 630 South Cryster Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. E. Etzenhouser, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

"Work hard to-day and pray,
Be resolute and say,
'I will not fail in work of mine,
Though I must toil till bright stars shine,
And midnight falls.'

"To-morrow when the sun
Shines on thy duty done,
Thou wilt rejoice and gladly sing--
Sweet peace to thee thy task will bring
And rest complete.

"And finished work abides,
Thy toil doth crystallize
The thought of brain and hours of pain,
For ever will thy task remain
A precious deed."

The Daffodils.

"I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills;
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host of golden daffodils,
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

"The waves beside them danced; but they Outdid the sparkling waves in glee.
A poet could not but be gay
In such a jocund company.
I gazed and gazed, but little thought
What wealth to me the show had brought.

"For oft, when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye,
Which is the bliss of solitude.
And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils."

—Wordsworth.

"They flash upon that inward eye—which is the bliss of solitude." It is beautiful to know that through these golden summer hours we can give out tiny gleams of the eternal love, touches of the beauty that the delicate handiwork of God has wrought—flower-thoughts which will enter the reflective centers of soul-life, there to deepen with unfolding life, entering the eternal symphony of beauty.

Only a flower-thought, just a blended touch of blue and gold; yet, through the imparted beauty, a delicate impress reaches a soul.

"Don't you want to throw away that wilted rose, and put on this fresh one?" The scene was on the platform of a street-car, where a sweet-faced lady in a tailor-made gown, evidently from the upper class of society, offered the weary car conductor a rose from the cluster of hot-house blossoms she carried in her hand.

The man's tired face lighted up as he said: "Thank you, ma'am; but I don't want to spoil your bouquet."

The lady smiled, as he answered brightly: "Oh, it won't do that; I am going shopping, and to each girl who waits upon me I give a rose."

How rested the man looked as he accepted the flower! On the opposite side of the car sat a group of schoolgirls, who listened with intense interest to the conversation. The lady left the car, but her kind act had dropped a seed-thought in the hearts of these girls.

"What a lovely idea," exclaimed one of them as the car moved on. "Why haven't we thought of something like it before?"

"We have just loads of pansies," said another. "We picked a thousand blossoms to decorate the tables for the Shakespeare luncheon a week ago. The plants are full of flowers again; I am going to pick a basket of them and take to my favorite glove girl at Dodd's."

"Our hedge of Madame Cecil Bruner roses is just coming into bloom," announced a third. "I'll gather a big cluster, and give them to that dear little girl at Phillip's, who always takes such pains to see that I am well served."

So the beautiful plan grew; and was not only a plan, but was actually carried out. Each time that these dainty maidens from the city's suburbs went into town, they carried with them something from the home gardens.

The girls had no thought of making their little plan public, but in some way the story leaked out. Others took up the idea; and now, in that city, there is scarcely a day but some one from the suburbs carries to the sisterhood of workers in town a bit of God's out-of-door world.—Selected.

Nature Fakers and Realism.

John Burroughs, the delightful writer on nature topics, was a pioneer in the fight on the "nature fakers," and of course he strongly approves the President's campaign against them. He has just indorsed every word of the recent magazine interview with Mr. Roosevelt on the harm done by the use of too much imagination in alleged descriptions of the wilderness and of animal life, and has associated himself with the demand that the "Munchausen yarns about our wild animals" be stopped forthwith.

The campaign against the "nature fakers" will be welcomed by every friend of the animal kingdom. Indeed, it may be regarded as a natural extension of the warfare on cruelty to animals. We may, in self-defense, be compelled to kill a bear or a wolf occasionally, and even in the interests of healthy sport and the physical and moral courage of the human race "big game" may have to be sacrificed. But the least we can do is to stop slandering and misrepresenting our wild animals. The fact that they can not protect themselves against literary attacks should make a peculiar appeal to the sentiment of justice.

Besides, we suffer enough from unbridled romanticism and sensationalism in fiction dealing with men and women to endure the carrying of these tendencies into wild Africa or wild America, and into so-called nature studies. We take up nature books largely to secure relief from the deceptions and hypocrisies of conventional and third-rate novelists, and we are entitled to the truth, the exact truth, and to nothing but the truth, in the stories about animals. Away with misplaced romanticism! Let us be true to nature in books about nature, if we can not be true to nature in any other class of literature.

If the Roosevelt-Burroughs protests against the mixing of fact and fiction and the perversion of natural history shall fall on deaf ears and fail to discourage the "nature fakers," it will become necessary to ask the publishers to divide their nature books into realistic and romantic and properly label them. We have pure food laws to protect the body; why not pure mental food laws to protect the mind?—Record-Herald.

Letter Department

Downs, Kansas, May 7, 1908.

Dear Saints: A few of us are still trying to do the Lord's will. We meet in our house the first Sunday of each month for preaching and prayer-meeting. We are quite scattered and not many of us, but have some real good meetings. Last Sunday one more was added to the branch by baptism and I think more will follow. One was baptized in January, and so our little branch is growing, and most of us seem to be encouraged to do our duty.

I have been west most all winter on a visit in hope a change would benefit my health, and I have been helped considerably. I was very kindly cared for among the Saints and will never forget their kindness. In Gore County I was cared for and made to feel at home with Bro. and Sr. J. B. Coop's.

I attended the district conference near Hill City, Graham County, it being a good conference, and one being baptized. There are a few Saints there and they made me feel at home among them. I also visited the home of Bro. Greer in Norton County and found a welcome there. One thing to be regretted is that there is no Sunday-school in the district. Saints, if you can not attend a Sunday-school, get a Quarterly and study at home.

I love the gospel work and I like to read the church books and papers. All the Saints should take the papers. The Autumn Leaves is a good paper for the young as well as the old to read, and parents should supply such papers for their children.

My desire is to live faithfully, so I may be worthy to be called a Saint and may have a part in the first resurrection.

Your sister in the one faith,

MISS MYRTLE COOP.

COMINS, Michigan, March 5, 1908.

Editors Herald: To-day it is raining and I find leisure hours to read the columns of the paper that has become dear to me, dear for two reasons: because it is the official organ of the church and in it I receive such grand lessons, and because it brings me in closer touch with the Saints whom I have never personally met. When I read letters from the different parts of God's vineyard it thrills my heart with joy to see the increasing efforts and the more earnest desire of the Saints.

The great question that confronts me is, "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" When I search the law as given in the Doctrine and Covenants I find that the pure in heart is Zion. "For this is Zion, the pure in heart." I wonder if we at all times realize the depth of the meaning of this word pure, to be pure even as our heavenly Father is pure.

Let us stop for a moment and consider the life of our Savior. Paul says, "After we have obeyed the first principles, let us go on unto perfection." Can we find in the life of our Savior one instance where he stepped aside from his duties to take up with the things of this world? No, not once do we find him thus engaged. "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."—Hebrews 2:1.

Space would not permit me to write all things that we have heard. We have heard the law taught in its fullness, besides the many things we have heard through the servants and handmaidens from time to time. These words came through a sister the other night at prayer-meeting: "I have warned and forewarned you to be faithful, for greater trials are coming." These are the things that we should not let slip: Is our mind taken up with cares of this life? Are we indulging in jesting and laughter? (See Doctrine and Covenants 85:37.) Do we allow our angry passions to rise? Are we inclined to find fault with our brethren and sisters? Are we apt to judge them in their honest efforts to serve the Master when they make mistakes? "Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; then thou shalt see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye."—Matthew 7:5. Is there envy or strife, contention or division, any jealous feelings among us? Now, if these things are in our midst, James says, "glory not, and lie not against the truth." Do not testify before the church that you are pure with these things in your hearts. "This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work."—James 3:15, 16. Now let me ask, Can we be pure with these things in our midst? I understand, by studying, this was the condition of Israel of old, and also the reason of the overthrow of the Nephite nation, hence the question rises to-day, "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" Answer: "He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart."—Psalm 15:1, 2. How many will be there? With these few thoughts before you, I remain,

Your brother and colaborer for the redemption of Zion,

G. F. ALBERTSON.

GOREVILLE, Illinois, May 9, 1908.

Dear Herald: I am thankful to be numbered with the Saints, though I feel unworthy the name. It seems I am the weakest of all at times. I humbly ask the Saints to pray for me that I may outlive the temptations of this life and become a useful instrument for the good cause, to live worthily and to rear my children in the right way.

Times seem to be harder than ever this spring and I was anxious to earn enough to pay for my church papers and tithes. I ask the Lord to help me. I have been selling large religious pictures and I feel it my duty to send the money at once. I am glad I can do so and hope to be able to send more in the future and be permitted to commune with the Saints and receive blessings that are in store for the faithful.

A sister,

MRS. F. M. COONCE.

DECKERVILLE, Michigan, February 18, 1908.

Editors Herald: As I have been reading some of the letters I felt as though I would like to let the Saints know the way our branch is thriving. It was in a sorrowful condition last spring when Bro. G. M. Shippy and Bro. D. E. Dowker came and preached and showed us how we were neglecting our duty, and the blessings we might enjoy if we would only live to enjoy them. Bro. D. E. Dowker organized a Sunday-school of between fifty and sixty scholars, and everybody seems to be interested and trying to live so as to enjoy the great blessings of our Master. Our superintendent is a man of God and is trying to do what God wants him to do. He always meets us with encouraging words, and is ever ready to help us weak Saints. We hold Sunday-school at half past two, and preaching at half past seven by our superintendent, Bro. C. K. Green, and we all enjoy listening to his encouraging words. Dear Saints, we all have a deep love for Bro. Shippy and Bro. Dowker for helping us in the hour of need. Bro. D. E. Dowker added two more to our flock about four weeks ago, Bro. and Sr. W. M. Burgett, and we always have visitors to our Sunday-school. Our Wednesday night prayer-meetings we hold from house to house, and how much we enjoy the Spirit in our meetings. I have often wondered why the Saints of God are so weak and careless when we know what he has in store for us if we only do our duty. Pray for me, dear Saints, for I feel that I need your prayers. My prayers are for the advancement of God's great work.

I want to tell of God's glorious blessings. About five weeks ago our two-year old baby wakened in the night choking with the croup. We did not know what to do, for we thought every breath would be her last. We were four and a half miles from an elder, so my husband and I knelt in prayer, and before we were through asking that great favor she quit choking. Saints, why are we so neglectful when our great Master is so kind?

Ever trying to climb up higher and live more humble in this grand and glorious work, I am,

Your sister,
MRS. BERTIE SHAFFBOWER.

WOODBURN, Indiana, May 4, 1908.

Dear Herald: I ask you to please give me a little space for a few lines. I am about fourteen years old. I live a mile and one fourth from Woodburn and fourteen miles from Fort Wayne, east, on the Wabash railway. I should be very thankful if a couple of elders would come and stay with us and preach. My mother and I are the only Saints near here. Elder Nathan Hill was here and preached three nights on the streets with good results.

Your brother,
VERE DAVIS.

LEXINGTON, Tennessee, April 21, 1908.

Editors Herald: As I have been asked by the Herald Publishing House why I was not taking the HERALD, I am glad to inform you that I have been a reader of the HERALD for at least ten years. My father takes it, I take the Ensign, and my wife takes the Autumn Leaves. My father lives with me. I would have the HERALD if it cost five dollars a year, if that was the only way to get it. I do not see how it is that the Saints can do without the church papers. I know numbers of them that are not taking any, and when asked why, they claim they are not able. At the same time they are using from five to ten dollars worth of tobacco a year. That sounds very weak to me. I would never make any such claim till I got unable to buy tobacco or snuff or coffee or whisky. I am sure the Saints should be willing to sacrifice any or all of these things to get the church papers, and if they will read the church publications they will build up in the faith till they have a greater desire to leave off those filthy habits that the Lord said is not good for man.

I long to see the day when the Saints will come up higher and be willing to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. We should consider the covenant we made when we accepted this work, also that we have taken upon ourselves the name of Jesus and the name Saint. Either one of these names means something. I can not believe that a man or woman can be a Saint indeed, and at the same time refuse to obey the commandments of the Lord. Now I have reference here to such as have said they never expected to leave off tobacco or snuff. I have heard just such things said. Dear Saints, let us try to put on the whole armor of the Lord and come up higher. There is work for us all to do and we should be up and doing. The Lord has said, "He that has been warned, let him warn his neighbor." So we have been warned. Are we warning our neighbors? If we are not, let us do it now. And he has said, "Let your light shine that others might see your good works and be constrained to glorify our Father who art in heaven." Are we doing this, or are we dragging along and not letting our light shine? I am afraid there are many of us that have such a dim light that no one can see it but ourselves, and it may look very dim to us. So let us get out of this way of living. The Lord said, "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees you can in nowise enter into the kingdom of heaven."

I want to say before I close that I love all the Saints, and pray that we all may have the true Spirit of this grand work. May the Lord bless his people everywhere.

U. S. GOWER.

MARLETTE, Michigan, April 6, 1908.

Editors Herald: Once more I am writing a letter to your columns. In looking back over the past year we see many things for which to be thankful, and we know that the favors and blessings received have not been ours by chance, but our heavenly Father has given them to us to draw us nearer to himself.

We are a little body of Saints, but we were made to rejoice two weeks ago last Sunday when six were added to our number. They were baptized by Elder Shippy, and I think there will be more. We have been greatly benefited by the elevating and inspiring sermons delivered by Elder Shippy, realizing much good has been accomplished through his efforts here. Elder Shippy was going away, but another sister wanted to be baptized, so he stayed with us over Sunday, and truly the Saints of Marlette enjoyed a feast of fat things from the Lord. We had a prophecy and interpreting of tongues through Elder Shippy, and through prayer the interpretation was given that Bro. Weaver was to be ordained to the office of priest and that the Lord had a great work for him to do if he was faithful. Let us aid our young brother by our prayers.

It is only four months since we came to Marlette. Our home and church were at Shabbona. We sold our farm, so we had to get a home, so we asked the Lord where we should go. We came here, though the Saints and neighbors did not want us to leave Shabbona. We are glad we came here for we feel there is a great work to do here, and if the Saints are faithful, and the elders come and help us we will have a branch here before long. Now, dear Saints, pray for us that we may receive spiritual strength and be able to overcome every besetting sin, and at last be gathered with the blest. My prayers are for God's people.

Your sister in the one faith,
MRS. ELIZABETH M. McLAREN.

BOSTON, Massachusetts, May 11, 1908.

Dear Herald: I wish to state through your columns that to-day I have learned that my mission for the coming year is to be in the Maritime Provinces. I will be ready to go into the field just as soon as I can arrange with Bro. J. P. Buschlen, of Independence, who is to accompany me. Would say to the Saints and friends of Nova Scotia that they probably will not see very much of us, since our advice is to operate in new fields. However, we expect to be at the conference at Williamsdale in June. Would say to the Saints, especially the officers, do not neglect to arrange all that is necessary for that conference. Let us see what a good showing can be made. The work is of the Lord, and the responsibility rests upon us. We think to go to Prince Edward Island first, but for the present let all mail matter be addressed to home address and it will be forwarded to me. Hope our friends will not forget us in this hard, lonesome mission.

I have just returned from an exceptionally fine Sunday-school and Religio Convention held at Providence, Rhode Island, said to be the best ever held in the district. I never attended any better anywhere. I think this church holds some of the finest and brightest people in the world.

I would like also to say to the number of members of the different branches whom I partially promised to visit, that the above mentioned exigency is my only explanation and reason for failing. I am sure the greater regret is mine. Some future time it may be our mutual pleasure.

It was with a good deal of pleasure that I read the contents of the Blue Hope this year. Especially the names of those whom I know in Maine, Massachusetts, Holden and other places in Missouri, Kansas, and Ohio. It is only one short line to a name, but what a beautiful story in every case. One can easily imagine pretty vines and sweet flowers and green leaves, entwining every name, and about each one might be written a touching little story of sacrifice, loyalty, and love. I wonder if any one ever thinks that it is worth the amount paid in to some just to see their names on the list connected with something good, even if there were no other recompense. And again, I have wondered if the angels who look upon those lists ever feel sad and discouraged not to see the names of those over whom they have special charge. If so what must be their feelings when they see them turn away altogether and become lost to the kingdom?

May it be the happy lot of all some day to reach a point where no act of ours will be a disappointment to those we love whether in heaven or on earth.

Yours in gospel bonds,

H. J. DAVISON.

23 Wigglesworth Street, Winter Hill.

ESCATAWPA, Mississippi, May 10, 1908.

Editors Herald: I was impressed by reading Bro. T. W. Williams' three hundred words in HERALD and want to ask him, How can we hold up Jesus Christ and him crucified (his mission in the flesh) directly before the people without excluding all intervening dispensations, and if we hold him up (indirectly) behind an intervening dispensation, which of these dispensations gets the preëminence? It seems to me that if the event is revered equally with the name, the event would always be included with the name of Jesus Christ, and there would be no other event given under heaven.

JOHN B. PORTER.

CENTRAL CITY, Illinois, May 10, 1908.

Dear Herald: I must do something at once, and I write this letter that Bro. F. L. Sawley or Bro. Gosstree may see it, for I have written to them and have received no answer. I want to know when these elders can come here for a stay of two or three weeks? Will they please let me know at least two weeks before they come, so I can get the school-house and have electric lights put in. I also would like to tell Bro. David Smith to come. I want the meetings to take place in June. There are only a few Saints here and it sometimes looks like their light has gone out.

I am glad we receive the church papers. My mother and I have been blessed many times since we have been workers for the Master. We know this work is true. We are all well. We ask the prayers of the Saints that we may have meeting here which will not be without profit.

Your brother in the one faith,

L. L. GATT.

MINT, Missouri, May 5, 1908.

Dear Herald: You always find a welcome in our home and we like to read your interesting pages and the Christ-like letters from the Saints. We take the Ensign, Autumn Leaves, and Hope, and feel that we could not do without any of them, and can not understand how any of the Saints can get along without them.

We will be glad to receive letters from any who feel like writing us as it always makes us rejoice to get kind letters from the Saints. Good tracts would also be welcome, as we are trying to get the truth before the people by letting them read our papers and tracts, the latter sent us by good Bro. J. S. Roth.

I love the work of the Lord and I want all to pray for me that I may endure to the end.

Your sister,
MRS. REBECCA ATKINSON.

News From Branches

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

Dear Herald: Since writing you quite a change has taken place in our branch. For about seventeen years we have been occupying our little twenty-two by forty frame building. Many are the blessings and many times our souls have feasted upon God's love, and many are the precious souls who have learned of the restored gospel through the ministrations of holy angels.

When we look back twenty-eight years to the time when we first began preaching under the shade of a big tree near Troost and Forest Avenues (which is now in the heart of the city) and in private families to less than a dozen people, with little of encouragement, we see that the hand of God has guided and blessed our labors. My diary shows that since then I have baptized one hundred and twenty souls into the fold, and my labors are only a drop compared to what other brethren have done. Now we have seven branches, two missions, and several hundred Religians. We are a power in the hand of God for good all over this city.

Changes have come in more than one way. The Bishop has bought the beautiful brick church on Lydia Avenue and Ninth Street, and he and those in authority have invited us to move from our little frame church into the new building. So, on the first Monday of the month, at our business-meeting, we accepted the invitation as a branch and have made the change. We felt almost like it was a funeral to leave our blessed meeting-place, for during all those many years we have been almost free from jarring and contention, love and good-will having abounded.

Bro. D. F. Winn has been our presiding elder most of the time, and nearly all have tried to make it pleasant for him. He asked us not to reelect him, and so we have chosen Bro. M. H. Bond as presiding elder, according to the wishes of those in authority; and for presiding priest, Harvey Sandy; teacher, Seth Sandy; deacon, Bro. Selander; secretary, Arthur Larkey.

Efforts here and east of us are continued under the care of Bro. H. Ashbaugh; Sunday-school and preaching at the house of Bro. Drice, 1616 Crystal Avenue; prayer-meetings at private houses regularly on Wednesday evenings. Last Thursday evening the writer preached at the house of Bro. Post, 5823 East Eleventh Street, and will preach there this week. Doors for preaching are open for us everywhere, and God is confirming with signs following.

Our new church is well located. The Brooklyn and Tenth Street, Independence Avenue and Sheffield, Ninth Street and Grand Avenue lines run within a block; the Independence line two blocks, and Troost cars three blocks. We extend a welcome to all the scattered Saints to meet with us. Our church is complete and up to date. The pipe-organ, pulpit, and seats are well arranged. We have also a large lecture-room, a kitchen, dining-room, sewing-room, and all necessary conveniences.

F. C. WARNKY.

Miscellaneous Department

Pastoral.

To the Ministry and Saints of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Central and Southern Illinois; Greeting: Having again been appointed to the charge of the above-named field, known as Mission No. 1, and believing that the work would be better served by placing some of the brethren in immediate charge who can give the several fields more direct attention than can we, we have decided on the following, which will be but little change from the arrangement in force last year:

Hyrum O. Smith, Minnesota and the Dakotas. J. R. Sutton, Nebraska. Warren E. Peak, Kansas, except those counties included in Independence Stake, and Clinton and Spring River Districts. George Jenkins, Clinton and Spring River Districts. A. M. Baker, Southern Missouri District and the unorganized territory adjoining. Henry Sparling, St. Louis and Southeastern Illinois Districts. John Kaler, Independence Stake. F. C. Keck, Far West and Nodaway Districts. W. S. Macrae, Northeastern Missouri District. James McKiernan, Nauvoo, Des Moines, Eastern Iowa, and Central Illinois Districts. Paul M. Hanson, Lamoni Stake. Eli Hayer, Fremont and Pottawattamie Districts. N. V. Sheldon, Little Sioux and Gallands Grove Districts.

It was thought best by the appointing authorities to leave stake officers without general appointment with the understanding that their position as stake officers carried with it an appointment to labor, in their respective offices with the same consideration as those under general appointment. It would be wise, however, that those whom we have appointed in charge of the missionary work in the Stakes be in close touch with the stake presidents, and that an understanding be had at all times in order to avoid conflict in appointment as regards time or place. This would also be advisable as regards district presidents. We trust that neither the general, nor the local authorities will anticipate trouble so far as to make provision for the emergency.

If we deal only with actual or present troubles, and refrain from anticipating possible trouble, there will be little or no friction, and each will have opportunity to attend to the duties of the hour; while peace will prevail and good-fellowship obtain.

In order that there may be means for the support of the families at home it will be necessary that the ministry be very economical in expenditure, traveling only as the needs of the work may require.

We wish to especially call attention of the Saints and friends to the duty of providing for the personal wants of the ministry. When you have opportunity to assist them hand them what you may be able and willing to do, so they may not need to draw, for personal expenses, upon the tithing fund in the hands of the Bishop and his agents.

To the superannuated ministers in our field we wish to say that while we do not call upon you for special help we will be glad to avail ourselves of the help that you may be able to render, and have the benefit of your counsel and advice. So feel that you are of our number in advancing the work of God.

Reports should be sent promptly on dates provided by rule. Assistant ministers in charge will report to Heman C. Smith, Box 10, Lamoni, Iowa.

Trusting that in the future our associations may be pleasant, and our labors conducive to the advancement of Zion's cause, we are your collaborators for Christ,

WILLIAM H. KELLEY.
HEMAN C. SMITH.

To the Saints of the Maritime Provinces, Eastern States, and Canada; Greeting: We enter upon another conference year under changed conditions. A number of our missionaries are transferred to other fields, but with depleted ranks we must close the gaps and labor more diligently for victory. We pray the divine blessing may follow the brethren to the new fields and shall be glad to learn of their success. The Canadian Saints will be pleased to know that Bro. R. C. Evans expects to continue his work in Toronto during a part of the year, so his services will not be lost to that field.

The elders are reminded of the fact that at the late General Conference an effort was made to have all ministers appointed to the field set an example to the church by filing an inventory of their property and income with the Bishop, that all families may be supplied according to their wants and needs. In order that a greater degree of equality may prevail amongst us, I suggest that we give this subject prayerful thought and that all who have not as yet done so, will see that the inventory is filed this year.

The work intrusted to our care is of increased magnitude; let us seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit, put forth our best efforts in love and mutual forbearance, that the year may see great spiritual activity and large numerical increase. I trust the Saints everywhere will rally to the support of the work by keeping the law of tithing and properly caring for the missionaries who labor in your midst. We suggest to all the brethren the advisability of concentrating your effort and following up an interest if once created. Do not seek to cover ground; it is a waste of money and brings unsatisfactory results. We should seek to curtail expenses as much as possible.

To assist in properly caring for the field, I have decided to place Bro. H. J. Davison in charge of the Maritime Provinces. Bro. J. P. Buschlen will assist him. Eastern Maine will be in charge of Bro. R. Bullard with Elders Brann and Cushman to assist for the present. Western Maine in charge of Bro. R. W. Farrell. Massachusetts District in charge of Bro. A. B. Phillips. New York and Philadelphia Districts in charge of Bro. W. W. Smith. We have decided to place Bro. J. C. Farnfield in Buffalo and Niagara Falls for the present. Bro. Alma Booker will locate at Greenwood and will labor in Northern New York. Bro. A. E. Stone will labor in New York District. Bro. H. A. Koehler in Massachusetts. After careful thought I have concluded not to make radical changes in Canada until by personal observation we find them necessary. Bro. J. L. Mortimer will continue in charge of the Canadian Northwest, assisted by Bro. Dorsett, if he remains in the field. Chatham District in charge of Bro. B. St. John. Middlesex and Elgin Counties in charge of Bro. John Shields. Manitoulin Islands and the North Shore with Bro. R. B. Howlett in charge. Brn. Gregory, Tomlinson, Pycock, Thompson, Grant St. John, Anderson, Leverton, Lundquist, Buschlen, and all others who can assist in building up the kingdom of God, are requested to labor as heretofore, until we meet in the June conference, when we will consult fully relative to final arrangements. Do not forget the dates for reports: July 1, October 1, January 1, and March 1. Be prompt.

So far as practicable, brethren, leave the care of the branches and districts to those officers who are in charge of the same, and prosecute the missionary work with the warning voice, that God may richly bless us according to his promise.

That part of the Kirtland and Pittsburg Districts in Pennsylvania will be under the supervision of Bro. G. T.

Your collaborator in the Lord,
R. F. D. 2, WILLOUGHBY, Ohio. ULYSSES W. GREENE.

To the Saints of the West Virginia District; Greeting: Whereas, it hath pleased God to call from earth's labor our beloved brother and fellow laborer, Gordon H. Godbey, president of this district, we feel that a great responsibility now rests upon us under present circumstances. Therefore we earnestly hope and ask the officers of branches and Saints throughout the district to keep us informed as to your condition and needs. We are glad to know of the provision of the General Conference for our district as to the brethren assigned to labor among us, and urge that you honor the Lord with your substance as God has blessed you, that the work may be enhanced and may finally triumph. Do this and let us pray that we may be found coworkers with Jesus Christ.

Your servants,
JOSEPH BIGGS,
F. M. JEFFRIES,
Counselors.

ADAMSTON, West Virginia.

To the Saints in Great Britain; Greeting: Having been appointed by the late General Conference to take charge of the interests of the church in Great Britain for another year, I desire to express my gratitude for the confidence and kindness which in the past years has been exhibited to me; also to earnestly solicit the help and cooperation of each one in the Master's cause during the year's work now lying before us.

The following brethren have been appointed to labor as missionaries: William Lewis, Reese Jenkins, and Thomas Jones will labor in Wales. Bro. Lewis will take charge of the work in the principality, and matters needing attention be referred to him. James Baillie will labor in Scotland, and will be assisted by one of the missionaries as circumstances will permit. Brn. Greenwood and Taylor will labor in England and for the immediate present will continue the work they are engaged in until my return to England. Bro. G. W. Leggott will continue to labor in the Manchester

District in harmony with the district officers. Bro. Caton has by agreement with Bishop Kelley and myself been appointed to care for the financial interests of the work and will devote what time he can spare to labor as circumstances may demand in conjunction with local officers and missionary in charge.

It is desired that the missionaries prosecute their labors in proselyting with system and diligence; tracting from door to door, and by open air preaching when weather will permit. By these means trying to create an interest which can be cultivated by fireside conversations.

The numbers of services, sermons, and other rituals are not so important as the influence of the patient, plodding work, which may be termed drudgery, sufficiently performed, which accrues from this kind of service.

The missionaries will be supplied with tracts on application to Joseph Dewsnap, 12 Albemarle Street, Moss Side, Manchester.

In reporting quarterly it is desired that the number of tracts distributed from door to door shall be included.

We would suggest that the local ministry make an organized effort in the places where they reside under the direction and supervision of the respective district and branch officers, upon similar lines as those suggested to the missionaries. We shall be glad to assist in the work of organizing and also supplementing this effort of the local ministry.

We call attention to the necessity of paying attention to Sunday-school work and also sisters' meetings in the various branches. Any help or advice regarding Sunday-school work will be supplied by Bro. S. F. Mather.

Some energetic sister in the branch could do much to assist both the church and the sisters individually by organizing a meeting for say one hour on a week day afternoon, for social service and prayer, also sewing for the benefit of each other or the church.

Bro. Leggott has been appointed to take care of the Zion's Religio work in England and will be glad to organize societies in the branches for the benefit of the young people.

We advise that in the branches attention be paid to visiting the membership at regular periods, so that by sympathy all may feel that the church is their home. It is not a good testimony to the influence of the work to have any dissatisfied or unproductive members; but the evidence of divine approval is in the happy, fruitful lives of those who claim to believe in the gospel of Christ.

We must call attention to the financial obligations which are devolving upon us all; we need money to prosecute our work and for this we depend upon the fidelity of the Saints. Seeing that Bro. Caton has appointed a collector in each branch who will receive and credit you with whatever sum you can give as tithing or offering, may we ask all to do the best they can regularly. As God shall bless you week by week, give liberally, with gratitude, that this gospel which has been the means of blessing to you may be spread abroad to your friends and neighbors.

We request that all reports be sent in promptly by the 1st of June, September, and January.

Praying success may attend our work and the blessing of God be with his people, I am, Yours sincerely,

JOHN W. RUSHTON.

CHICAGO, Illinois, May 8, 1908.

Permanent address, 5 Woodland Mount, Spencer Place, Leeds, England.

To the Saints of Rocky Mountain Mission, comprising Utah, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, and the Republic of Mexico: The General Conference just passed has assigned us to associate together the present year. "For we are fellow laborers together with God; ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building." Also as per modern revelation: "Let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work, labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.

The following brethren may occupy as follows: J. F. Curtis, Utah in charge. E. A. Davis to labor principally in Salt Lake City and environs. John Davis, Ogden and vicinity. J. T. Hackett to report to J. F. Curtis. In Colorado: Bro. Columbus Scott will attend to the demands in Eastern Colorado, where a debate is on hand. J. M. Simmons may associate with F. A. Russell. E. F. Shupe, as president of the district, may labor as usual. W. S. Pender and Alvin Knisley are assigned to Arizona and Mexico, with intention to begin work among the Spanish speaking people, as the way may open.

Signs of the times constantly remind us of the need and importance of the work for which we stand, for some features of which time and patience are now important factors. Let not overzeal thereon mistake process for results. Harmony with God's appointments are safer than vagaries of finite conception. Let us be consistent with ourselves as believers in modern revelation. "Have faith in God."

With confidence in the message of this dispensation, and hopeful of success, I am,

Fraternally yours,

F. M. SHEEHY, minister in charge.

CUSTER CITY, Oklahoma, May 14, 1908.

Conference Notices.

Quarterly conference of the Northwestern Kansas District will be held with the Scandia Branch, near Scandia, Kansas, June 13, at 10 a. m. We want prompt reports from all local ministers. Branch presidents will see that their branches report on time. Trains will be met at Scandia, June 12, by D. S. Marple. John A. Teeters, president.

The semi-annual conference of the Spokane District will be held at the Saints' church, corner of Third Avenue and Smith Street, Spokane, Washington, at 10 a. m., Saturday and Sunday, June 13 and 14, 1908. M. Fordham, clerk.

The Fremont District will meet with the Hamburg, Iowa, Branch, Saturday and Sunday, June 6 and 7, 1908. The dedication of the new Saints' chapel at Hamburg will take place at this conference. Be prompt in sending in reporting to my address or in care of F. Becksted at Hamburg. C. W. Forney, secretary.

Spring River District will meet in conference with Columbus Branch, June 12-15. Parties going by train write W. S. Taylor, Columbus, Kansas. Earl D. Bailey, president.

The Northern Nebraska District will convene at Blair, Nebraska, Saturday, June 6, 1908, at 10 a. m. A pleasing feature of the coming conference is that it will hold over the regular sacrament Sunday for the month. Members of the priesthood reporting should communicate with the district secretary, H. T. McCaig, 3308 Charles Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

The conference of the Little Sioux District will be held at Woodbine, Saturday, May 30. Prayer-service at 9 a. m., business session at 10.30. James D. Stuart, Clerk.

Conference of the Northeastern Illinois District will be held at the Mission Branch, June 13 and 14. Branches and officers will send all reports promptly to W. E. Williamson, Marseilles, Illinois, R. F. D. 57.

Kentucky and Tennessee District will convene at "Oakland," Farmington, Kentucky, Branch, Saturday, June 6, at 10.45 a. m. It is expected that all the missionaries will be present, and a good time is anticipated. Send reports to J. J. Adair, Farmington, Kentucky, R. F. D. 1.

Convention Notices.

The convention of the Northeastern Illinois District will be held with the Mission Branch, Friday, June 12, 1908, at 2 p. m. Would like to have all schools represented. Mary Anderson, secretary.

The Central Michigan District Religio association will meet at Coleman, June 12 at 10 a. m. Sunday-school association at 2 p. m., same date.

The Kewanee District will convene at Dahinda, Illinois, May 29 at 2.30 p. m. Program will consist of institute work.

Des Moines Sunday-school association will meet in convention Friday, June 5, 1908, at Runnells, Iowa, at 9 a. m.; prayer-service 10.15 a. m., business session 2.30 p. m., normal and special work 7.45 p. m. Will the local secretaries send in reports for quarter ending March 31 immediately? Mail all reports to Pearle Shannon, secretary, Rockwell City, Iowa.

Little Sioux, Iowa, District will convene at Woodbine, Iowa, May 28, at 2.30 p. m. Sister M. A. Etzenhouser is expected to be with us in conducting normal work and we urge all who can to attend. Annie Stuart, secretary.

The Clinton District will meet in convention at Rich Hill, Missouri, June 5, 1908, at 9 a. m. Would like to see all of the schools represented. Please have credentials in early. Zora Lowe, secretary.

Reunion Notices.

Reunion will be held at the church, at Inman, Nebraska, beginning June 3, 1908, and continuing five days. Tents, hay, and fuel will be furnished for all who wish to camp.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

Good speakers will be present. All are cordially invited. Those wishing tents should notify J. H. Logeman or N. S. Butler of the committee on arrangements. Levi Gamet, president of district.

Addresses.

Arthur Allen, 1432 West Walnut Street, Independence, Missouri.

Died.

DEWSNUP.—Joseph Dewsnup, Senior, was born at Manchester, England, March 6, 1859, and was married to Annie Ritson November 6, 1854. His widow, one daughter, four sons, and other relatives mourn his departure. Millennial Star and Deseret News please copy.

FARLEY.—Robert Easm Farley was born January 6, 1816, at Deal, England; died April 3, 1908, at Wisner, Nebraska; married Harriet Collins in 1840; united with the Latter Day Saints' Church in 1844, and was ordained elder in 1847. His wife and four children died in 1849, leaving him one son. In 1854 he married Ann Link and came to America, settling in St. Louis. In 1856 they emigrated to Utah, his wife dying soon after their arrival. In 1857 he married Mary Ann Cole. They left Utah and settled at Omaha in 1864. In 1867 he took a homestead near Wisner where he lived till last October, when he moved to town. In 1870 he was baptized by James Caffall into the Reorganized Church. He leaves to mourn an aged wife, one son, ten grandchildren, a number of great-grandchildren and two sisters.

PERRY.—Elder Charles Perry, aged 82 years, 9 months, and 14 days, died Sunday, March 15, 1908, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Edmund, Bevier, Missouri. Deceased was widely known and respected throughout the community, having made his home here for a third of a century. Deceased was born at Upton, Gloucester County, England, came in early life to this country near St. Louis; came to Bevier thirty-three years ago. He professed faith in Christ in the year 1840 and united with the Latter Day Saints; was ordained an elder in 1864. To mourn are four sons and two daughters, twenty-eight grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren. Burial in the Bevier cemetery, Elder F. T. Mussell in charge of the service.

JOHNSON.—Lillian D., daughter of Thomas and Sr. Mary P. Long Johnson. Born at Woodbine, April 14, 1906; died at Omaha, Nebraska, May 8, 1908, aged 2 years and twenty-four days. Funeral at the home, Sixth and Martha Streets. Prayer by Bro. C. A. Butterworth; sermon by E. R. Ahlstrand. Interment in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

MORGAN.—At Lamoni, Iowa, January 28, 1908, David Lewis Morgan passed to the paradise of God. He was born at Canton, Illinois, September 25, 1877; baptized at Bevier, Missouri, August 7, 1892, by Ephraim Rowland. Ordained priest February 11, 1900, by William Summerfield. Married Vida E. Elvin, November 5, 1903. Of this union two sons were born; eldest gone on before. With infant child, a sorrowing wife mourns a loving companion. He leaves, also, one brother and five sisters. Ordained an elder April 30, 1905, by John R. Evans. Funeral-service at the church, in charge of John Smith. Sermon by Alexander H. Smith. Laid to rest in Rosehill Cemetery.

More things are wrought by prayer than the world dreams of. What are men better than sheep or goats, that nourish a blind life within the brain, if, knowing God, they lift no hands of prayer both for themselves and those who call them friends.—Tennyson.

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK LAMONI, IOWA

Are You Interested In Independence?

Then you should have one of those pictorial books with historical sketch of Independence.

A book made by the genuine Carbon Photo process (not Engravings), contains twenty pages of views and two pages descriptive. Price 50c each.

One 5x7 view would cost you at least 25c, but this booklet all complete for 50c, the universal price for 20 pages for this grade of work, or only 2 1/2c a page.

The Independence Examiner says . . . It is a beautiful souvenir executed in a most artistic manner and should be in every library in Independence.

EVAN V. DAVIS, Photographer, Lock Box 35, Independence, Missouri.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice, Mite, and Rain Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROF

NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

FARM FOR SALE

180 acres, mostly in crop, well fenced, splendid stock farm, three quarters of a mile from L. D. S. church. Immediate possession, Terms favorable.

L. J. THOMAS, Earlham, Iowa.

18-4t

"HEAVEN AND HELL"

BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps

PASTOR LANDEMBERGER,

Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

Bible References

By Alvin Knisley

Paper cover 5 cents Cloth cover 10 cents

Atonement of Christ and Final Destiny of Man

Revised and Enlarged

No. 17—10 cents each.

THE INDIAN MAIDEN

A Temperance Story

No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20. No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75. No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c. No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

Spanish Tracts

No. 350 Epítome De La Fe, per doz.. 10c No. 351 Restauración, per doz. 10c

INSTRUCTIVE

INTERESTING

"Correct English-- How to use it."

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO THE
USE OF ENGLISH.
JOSEPHINE TURCK BAKER, Editor.

PARTIAL CONTENTS:

- Queries and Answers.
- The Art of Conversation.
- Shall and Will: Should and Would: How to Use Them.
- Pronunciations (Century Dictionary).
- Correct English in the Home.
- Correct English in the School.
- What to Say and What Not to Say.
- Course in Grammar.
- Course in Letter-writing and Punctuation.
- Business English for the Business Man.
- Compound Words: How to Write Them.
- Studies in English Literature.

AGENTS WANTED.

$1.00 a Year. Send 10c for Sample Copy
Department E.

CORRECT ENGLISH, Evanston, Illinois.
20-3t

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE
BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid . . . $30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the
STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S
HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church. 1tf

The Jackson County
Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

- | | |
|----------------------------|-----------------------------|
| ELLIS SHORT, President. | M. H. BOND, Vice-president. |
| WM. CRICK, Vice-president. | J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier. |
| G. H. HILLIARD. | DR. J. MATHER. |
| MRS. O. H. RIGGS. | A. L. YINGLING. |
| HORACE SHELEY. | |

Very truly yours,
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

Where Are You Going for Your Vacation?

If you have not decided, let me tell you all about the railroad round trip rates this summer to

Colorado
Yellowstone Park
Pacific Coast

and many other parts of the West and Northwest. I will give you illustrated folders describing the routes, scenery and climate and giving list of hotels and boarding houses with rates of board.

I will quote you rates (very low this year) from your home town and will plan your whole trip. See me to-day.

L. F. Siltz, Agent,
C., B. & Q. R. R.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, MAY 27, 1908

NUMBER 22

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
ISRAEL A. SMITH, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
"Making Good" - - - - -	505
The Prayer Union - - - - -	507
Lamoni Items - - - - -	507
Notes and Comments - - - - -	508
ELDERS' NOTE-BOOK:
Things Seen and Heard by an Elder - - - - -	509
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
Tobacco, Liquor, and the "Word of Wisdom."—Part I	511
The Apostasy of Catholicism.—Part II - - - - -	513
SELECTED POETRY:
What You Can Do - - - - -	518
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
A Pious Forgery - - - - -	519
MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:
Daughters of Zion Reading for June - - - - -	521
Questions on June Reading - - - - -	522
Program for June - - - - -	522
LETTER DEPARTMENT:
Letters - - - - -	522
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:
Conference Minutes:
South Sea Islands - - - - -	525
Pastoral - - - - -	526
The Bishopric - - - - -	526
Meeting of the Board of Publication - - - - -	526

Resident members of the Decatur County Historical Society met in the office of Heman C. Smith, secretary of the society, Monday evening, to arrange for the entertainment of the society at their annual meeting, which is to be held in Lamoni, June 4. Honorable G. P. Arnold, of Garden Grove, is president of this association; Judge J. W. Harvey, of Leon, is vice-president; Mrs. W. E. Meyers assistant secretary.

• * •

I do not want the walls of separation between different orders of Christians to be destroyed, but only lowered, that we may shake hands a little easier over them.—Rowland Hill.

Editorial

"MAKING GOOD."

The world demands of a man that he shall "make good," to use its own phrase. He must succeed wherever placed, regardless of circumstances. There is a smile for the man who succeeds and there is a smile for the man who fails; but the smile differs in the two instances.

God also demands that a man shall make good. But God and the world differ in their ideals. The world shows little enough kindness in its methods of spurring men toward success and little enough justice in distributing its laurel wreaths.

The gospel of endeavor in secular affairs has been preached from countless pulpits, featured in countless periodicals, taught in countless schools. Young men and women are urged forward in a keen and often deadly struggle for preëminence. Prizes richer than ever before offered are offered to the strong and the quick. But what of those who by nature are not strong or quick?

The gospel of endeavor is good and wholesome doctrine, when properly preached,—to stir the lethargic, to arouse dormant ambitions, to fling men forward shoulder to shoulder in earnest efforts to succeed in a good and worthy cause. It is all wrong and is used to a base end when it pits brother against brother in a struggle that results in death for one and a crown for the other. Or when it is used to incite the weak to mad endeavors that will end in suicide or dementia.

When the race horse is full of vigor and go and feels the joy of the race there is little need for the whip or the spur. When they are freely used it would indicate that he is breaking, the strain is too great. A few races won in that way end his career. He may have beaten the other horse but he has beaten himself also.

This constant urging forward in the strenuous life would indicate that some one or many are laboring under a strain. From the kindergarten to the university, children and youths are urged forward by ambitious parents, with the result, in some cases at least, that the scholar is "finished" in more senses than one. It is "commencement" to-day; nervous prostration to-morrow. Meanwhile the father is trying to make good in a commercial way. In his field he finds the goal moved forward a little every year and the pace set a little faster. His wife and daughters dress to kill, and they do kill. He goes down at fifty, and when his life insurance money is paid over the bargain is ended.

Those who have no great reserve of mental or physical energy fight against great odds in this world. As was recently pointed out by one of our public speakers, there are heroes even in the common walks of life. There are heroes among pick and shovel men as well as in the Alamo. With implacable and incurable disease fastened upon him, weak and ill, the man faces the day's toil, day after day, until the end, because the wife and children must be fed and clothed. He is making good; but no one realizes it.

There are heroisms in the kitchen, too, as well as on board the Dreadnaught. So tired that she would like to lie down and die in order to obtain plenty of undisturbed rest, many a mother lives and works on by sheer force of will because she does not know what father and the children would do without her. She is making good. What does the world know about it? Nothing. Nor does that matter particularly, either. The world is applauding the women who sing and act, they stand in the limelight; the men and women who do are in the shadow of obscurity and only one in a thousand is discovered and applauded.

In fact the world has coined the phrase "to make good," but is not itself a proper judge of what it means to make good.

Christ himself by personal word of mouth and via the lips of his spokesmen has from time to time incited men and women to strive earnestly, hard, and long, to make good wherever called upon to occupy. "Brethren, faint not in well doing." "He that endureth to the end shall be saved." "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life." "Remember without ceasing your work of faith, and labor of love." These sayings come to mind.

Yet the great Judge knows the limitations and the surroundings of every man, and the man makes good in his sight who does his best, no matter how many may do better. Nor will your reward be less because you help another man to make his reward greater. Nor will your coronation be delayed a day because you stop by the way to help others. In fact God is tenderly concerned in the work of helping those who are weak and at a disadvantage, both in spiritual and in material matters. He is trying to secure in the church a condition that does not and can not exist among worldly and selfish people. Namely, a condition where artificial inequalities shall be removed and where men will help their brothers to overcome natural inequalities, so that all, as nearly as possible, may have a fair, untrammelled opportunity to do their best.

Under those conditions there will be a blending of rivalry and fellowship, the ambition of each being to accomplish the greatest possible amount of good. Such a condition can be obtained by an observance of the law as God has given it, and in no other way.

Jacob gave the people of Nephi some excellent advice regarding one particular phase of the struggle of life, and perhaps it will apply to any other phase as well. The preparation for the struggle is, "But before ye seek for riches, seek ye for the kingdom of God." The incentive is, "And after ye have obtained a hope in Christ, ye shall obtain riches, if ye seek them; and ye will seek them, for the intent to do good; to clothe the naked, and to feed the hungry, and to liberate the captive, and administer relief to the sick, and the afflicted."—Jacob 2: 5.

At the point where man has satisfied the world God begins his closest scrutiny. We think that the man has made good when he gets the money; he has simply arrived at the position where he can begin to make good, so far as money figures at all in his ultimate success. Whether a fortune shall at the end be accounted an asset or a liability depends on the use that is made of it,—that and the methods by which it was obtained. "What is your pile?" the world asks. "How did you get it? How are you using it?" God asks.

It is the same, at least to an extent, in regard to other tests by which we are wont to measure success. There are several candidates for an office. One man is elected. We say that he has succeeded. In reality the question of his success is yet undetermined. Politicians may regard the victory as won; God begins to watch the man to see whether or not he will make good. We speak of the office as an honor conferred upon him,—it may bring dishonor.

Perhaps even in the church we sometimes cherish a mistaken idea of success. An elder goes to a certain town and holds preaching services. He advertises as extensively as circumstances will permit and preaches the true gospel as prayerfully and forcefully as he can. No one believes his message. There are no conversions to report. Has he failed? Not in the sight of God. Those who refused to accept the gospel when they heard it are the ones who have failed.

The visiting officers of a branch attempt to settle a long-standing difficulty between two members. They comply with the various requirements of the law, prayerfully and humbly, with a real desire to save. A reconciliation is not effected. Have they failed? No. The stubborn persons who refused to become reconciled are the ones who have failed.

Both officers and others might avoid undue dejection of spirit at times or exaltation and pride at other times if they would remember that visible results in our work are not always the true measure of merit. The man who does his duty as best he can under all circumstances has nothing to be ashamed of. Under other circumstances another man may secure greater visible results; but he need not be unduly lifted up in his own esteem, he has done his duty, nothing more. Both men have made good in the sight of God, let the matter rest there and go on to other duties. This of course applies only when both have done their best, and does not in any way excuse the slothful servant who fain would claim a reward as great as that bestowed upon a more diligent brother.

Perhaps we have made our thought plain enough without reiterating that we believe that the man who is doing his best is succeeding. The man who is honestly conscious that he is doing his best, whether in religious or in secular affairs, or in both, will have a peace of mind and a joy in life that can not otherwise be obtained; and the very crown and triumph and culmination of his life will be the final commendation from the lips of the great Judge, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

ELBERT A. SMITH.

THE PRAYER UNION.

There seems to be some question among some of the Saints with reference to the Prayer Union; what its scope is and what should be the manner in which it should be conducted.

Our understanding of the matter is this: there were a great number of inquiries made in the HERALD from time to time, for prayers to be offered for those who were sick, afflicted in body, or distressed in spirit. This attracting the attention of some of the sisters of the church suggested the thought that it would not be improper for some of the sisters in any given locality to meet by agreement on some certain day of the week and at a given hour of the day, for the purpose of entreating in prayer on behalf of these afflicted persons. We were consulted about this contemplated prayer-service, and readily gave the matter consideration and approval. It began with a few, and notice of the matter was given in the HERALD, and the example set was soon followed by the organization of other prayer unions.

We then thought, as we think now, that the sisters were privileged to meet together at each other's houses, or at any designated convenient place, for the purpose stated. We could not then see that there could be any reasonable objection made to such services; and as long as it should be confined to the object stated we could see no reason why it should be thought necessary that any officer of the church should be expected to take charge of such prayer-service; it surely could not be thought objectionable for the sisters of the church to engage in the unity of prayer for specific objects desirable for themselves and others who had confidence in the efficacy of prayer. It was not then contemplated that these prayer-services or prayer unions should be diverted to the kind of services held at the regular prayer-service of the branch or the church, which were conducted under the direction of the church officers. It was merely to secure an hour and a time and place where there could be an understood agreement between willing participators in asking God for benefits which suffering companions were seeking. Remarkable results were obtained, and we heard no specific objections for a long time against the holding of these prayer-services, except the casual mention of a thought by some that some member of the priesthood should be set aside to preside over such meetings in order to prevent any unforeseen departure from right rule. We paid but little attention to this mention for the reason already stated. Of late, however, we have heard some complaint arising out of the fact that in some places these prayer unions have assumed a character of the ordinary testimony-meetings held by the branch, and over which the officers of the church preside; this is a departure from the original intention and must be avoided; as advantage has been taken and will be taken of the conditions, and imposition by improper spirits will result, the sisters being off their guard. We advise at once a return to the original intention and understanding upon which these prayer unions were established. When this is done we see no reason for the intervention of church authority in regard to them. The sisters clearly have a right, the same as the brethren would have, to meet for prayer-service for themselves and others who may request it of them, at a specified and understood time when there can be unity of thought and action between those asking for prayers and those engaging in such service, the sisters themselves selecting some one from among themselves to preside over this prayer-service.

LAMONI ITEMS.

The annual graduating exercises of the Lamoni High School were held in the Brick Church Friday evening, May 22. Such an event is interesting in itself, more especially when an excellent program is well rendered, as was the case on this occasion. Honorable Edwin G. Moon, of Ottumwa, Iowa, delivered the address. He emphasized this thought, "The safety of the country depends on men and women who are trained to think soberly, carefully, and accurately." Of citizenship he had this to say, "We have progressed from a time when citizenship and the people were nothing to a time when they are everything. The people are now sovereign, and no sovereign ever reigned without a great weight of responsibility."

Other numbers of the program displayed exceptional merit.

The graduating class numbered eighteen. Lamoni High School is an accredited school; scholars graduating from this school will be received in the State University without further examination. The State University annually gives a free scholarship to one pupil in each accredited school, the one thus honored to be one of the highest four in the graduating class. Superintendent Hannum announced that the faculty had conferred this scholarship on Charles Prall.

Mr. W. Z. Allen, field secretary for the Iowa Anti-saloon League, occupied the morning hour at the Brick Church. His address was attentively listened to by a large audience. Our people seemed entirely in sympathy with his work and evidently enjoyed his clear and forceful address. He advocated a law of extermination, not of regulation. The league is working for constitutional prohibition in Iowa. He said, "It is robbery to take a man's money and give nothing in return; worse than robbery to give worse than nothing in return. The saloon is a robber. And ruins all social surroundings. It is the nursery of every form of vice."

At the branch business-meeting next Tuesday evening the matter of church extension will come up. The presiding officers will present a recommendation in which they will say, "We are emboldened to think that by a consistent effort the branch might be able to build a new church, leaving the present building for overflow meetings, when necessary, and for the boarding of General Conference visitors." They will recommend the appointment of a committee of five to canvass the matter and report at a later date.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Elder Joseph Burton writes that he expects to sail for San Francisco some time during the month of June. He has spent the greater part of the past twenty-six years in foreign mission fields. He reports that at the last mission conference at Tarona, Papeete, a letter was read from Queen Marautaaoroa in which she tendered the conference a bell for the chapel at Makatea, one of the islands in that mission.

Elder Walter W. Smith, pastor of the church in Philadelphia, writes of the Pennsylvania Arbitration and Peace Conference held in that city May 16-19, that three delegates from the local church were present by invitation and were accorded every courtesy. These delegates were Bishop John Zimmermann and Elders E. B. Hull and Walter W. Smith. The object of the conference is stated thus:

"First: To promote the universal acceptance of the principles of international arbitration, and the establishment of permanent courts of justice for the nations, as the only practical means to insure the blessings of peace by making wars improbable and ultimately impossible, in the civilized world. Second: To give the people of Pennsylvania an opportunity to commend the splendid record of the United States with regard to arbitration, and to pledge their active and earnest support to every effort of our Government to continue the work and to carry out the recommendations of the great Hague Conference of 1907. Third: To form and provide for an effective representation of public sentiment upon the great issues making for international friendship and world organization that should signalize the third Hague Conference."

Many noted speakers were heard during the sessions of the conference. Perhaps the most notable speech was made by David J. Brewer, justice of the Supreme Court. He declared that the United States might long ago have been free from debt but for the cost of maintaining armament and deplored the fact that enough was wasted in firing one twelve-inch gun once to feed and clothe an ordinary family one year.

The committee on the erection of a monument to the memory of Joseph and Hyrum Smith meets in Nauvoo May 28. The Nauvoo Rustler has inaugurated a movement looking toward the appointment of a local committee to cooperate with them.

The location for the monument [to Joseph and Hyrum Smith] has not yet been determined, nor the character or design of monument. In our opinion we would say that here in Nauvoo on the banks of the Mississippi River, a proper and suitable monument ought to be erected to both the martyrs and let it be erected somewhere on these beautiful hills. Nauvoo derived its name from the prophet, and is the most beautiful place on the Mississippi River from St. Paul to New Orleans.

Let our people call a meeting for the 28th to meet with the committee and give them all the encouragement possible. Nauvoo ought to have the monument. It would prove a great attraction to visitors to our city. Don't let the committee come to Nauvoo and receive no welcome or encouragement.—The Nauvoo Rustler, May 19, 1908.

There is no royal road to learning. Only by diligence in study and persevering effort can one become a scholar.

Elders' Note-Book

THINGS SEEN AND HEARD BY AN ELDER.

There are many things met with in an elder's travels, some to cheer and some to discourage. "Home folks" do not always know how an elder's path is strewn both with thorns and roses.

I met an aged sister that had been baptized many years ago, who said: "I was an inveterate smoker of tobacco when I came into the church, having used it for thirty years. I desired to be pure before God; fifty times did I try to quit the use of the weed, and as many times failed. One evening while reading an article in the SAINTS' HERALD upon the sin of using tobacco, I felt prompted to make one more effort to quit its use. Before retiring that night, I offered an earnest prayer to God for help. That very night every desire for the use of tobacco left me, and at no time since has it ever returned, though it has been many years ago. This has been a living testimony to me, that God is in this work and will answer an earnest prayer."

I once saw an elder sitting in the pulpit in his shirt sleeves with a fan in his hand, while the perspiration showed prominently upon his face. He complained greatly of the heat, and was scarcely able to get around because of rheumatism. Presently, I met him at the table; pork, beef, and hot coffee were his prominent dishes, yet it was neither "winter" nor "time of famine," and the table teeming with vegetables. I thought, Is not the Word of Wisdom worthy of the elder's attention, that he might be an ensample to the flock and an eye-witness of the majesty and virtue there is in this revelation to the Saints?

I once met a lovely looking girl at the chapel (probably fourteen or fifteen years old), captivating in her make-up, "pretty as a peach." The parents invited me home to dine with them. During the time I heard hard words in the kitchen. Were my ears deceiving me? No, not that. It was that "charming girl," talking saucily to her mother. The mother was attempting to advise her along some domestic lines, and a little cyclone had broken forth; the mother had to hold her peace in order to keep the elder from hearing the racket. Those "charming qualities," and those beautiful "peach blow flushes," were now fading away, passing behind a cloud of pity, not hatred. I could but say, O, were the inward qualities as beautiful as the outward appearance in that young sister, what a charming wife she would make for some young man in the church! Could we always see ourselves as others see us, would we not profit by it by adding to our inherited beauty all the graces both inwardly and outwardly that would be commendable to the society of the Saints, and to Christ at his coming? Try it, my young sister.

In my travels I heard on three different occasions: "That brother preaches well enough, but there is no Spirit in it; what is the difficulty?" I did not answer, because I could not. Shortly after, I met this brother at a meeting on one hot summer day. We were invited to take dinner on the church lawn. A sumptuous meal was spread before us; meats and vegetables, pies, cakes, bread and butter, pickles, beans, etc., in profusion. Fried chicken melted away before our brother, like snow before the summer sun; he took a liberal hand with the "roast beef," and as some of the smaller eaters were pushing back from the table, the brother said to the waiter, "Pass me that boiled ham," and this was his dessert. I soliloquized, "Yea, flesh, also, of beasts and of fowls of the air, I, the Lord, hath ordained for the use of man, with thanksgiving. Nevertheless, they are to be used sparingly; and it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used only in times of winter, or cold, or famine." By treating this word lightly, "could not that be one of the reasons why the brother preached—not having the Spirit"? If Christ were here what would he say? "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him."—John 14: 21.

One night I spoke with much freedom of how the Lord would manifest himself unto the Saints if they only would keep themselves pure before him. On leaving the pulpit, I saw four brethren standing together, who seemingly were much interested in a conversation. On inquiry later, of what was the topic of their conversation, one of the brethren related to me the following: "I dreamed a messenger stood before me holding a Bible in his hand. This he presented to me, and said, 'Read it.' I took the book and attempted to read, but the smoke from cigars I had been smoking, came between me and the Bible in such denseness that my vision was so beclouded that I could not see the words. Feeling somewhat puzzled and ashamed, I handed the book to Brother M, who stood by me, and asked him to read it. He made an attempt, but neither could he see the words; and it was with difficulty he kept the amber that was running from the corner of his mouth from the book. He seemed to be somewhat disturbed over the matter, and handed the book to Brother B, who stood by, and asked him to read it. Brother B made the same kind of attempt to read as did the other two, but he could not see the words, and was experiencing the same difficulty that Brother M did. At this juncture he turns to Brother T, who stood by, and asked that he take the book and read. Bro. T took the book and read without the least difficulty and the vision closed." These four brethren that figured in this peculiar dream lived miles apart; but now, either by accident, or from some other cause, they found themselves standing together, immediately after I closed my services, engaged in conversation as before mentioned. And as peculiar as it may seem, relating the dream just as it had been shown to one of them some time before. All of these brethren seem to be good men; Brother T, an old time veteran of the cross. The scene was an affecting one, and the brethren profited by the lesson it taught.

May not other things, such as eating meats, other than in the time of "cold" or "famine," drinking "hot drinks," and in fact, neglecting to do what we know to be right, darken our vision, causing the "abundance of the Spirit" to be withheld from us?

Here comes a phone message: "I was out to hear Brother _____ preach last night; and really I could not get head or tail to his subject because he spoke so fast. He spoke so loud and rapid that the people could not distinctly understand more than two words out of a dozen. Somebody ought to jog his mind about it. He runs everybody away; they complain about it on every side, and the night he is to speak, a large number of the people simply stay away. If he don't correct this, he had just as well be left at home—it's hurting the cause."

Brethren should study to show themselves affable workmen when the interest of this great work demands it. Many a fine dress pattern has been spoiled by not learning to "cut to fit." We have the best doctrine in the world, and why not study to present it, to touch the hearts of the people? Ugly women are made to look neat and clean even in a calico dress when properly fitted. Pretty women are slouchy in silk when it is slovenly put together. Put a whole grocery store at the command of some careless cook, who just throws things together, and you have not a meal to entice the appetite. Others will get a meal from a lean huckster's wagon that would tempt the stomach of the most dainty king. The message we bear is from heaven, and the law instructs the elders how to deport themselves while delivering the message to the people. "There is a great work to be done by mine elders, and that they may be fitted to do this work and the accomplishment thereof be not prevented, it is enjoined upon them that they shall not only be kind of heart and of a lowly spirit, that their wisdom may be the wisdom of the Lord and their strength the strength of the Spirit, but they shall lay aside lightness of speech and lightness of manner when standing to declare the word, and shall study to approve their ministrations to the people by candor in speech and courtesy in demeanor, that as ministers of the gospel they may win souls unto Christ."—Doctrine and Covenants 119:2.

Here is another message that came to me by letter: "Send us one or two good speakers for our reunion, but don't send Brother _____, his sermons are just too long. Why, I have known him to preach sermons two and one half hours long; he tires everybody out. He has an idea that people like to hear him, and are really interested in his long sermons, but could he get on the outside and hear the complaints that I have heard he would get his eyes open and shorten up a little. Don't send him."

I heard one elder say to another one, "Why are you drinking tea?"

He answered: "I am only following my file leader; at one time I did not drink it, but I saw one of the prominent elders and two other prominent men of the church drinking it, hence I fell 'in line'" Moral, What a power there is in EXAMPLE.

While in a social meeting, I heard a brother say (presumably by the Spirit): "The time will come, when the Word of Wisdom will be considered a jewel among the Saints." Why not, when its closing sentence is: "I the Lord give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them"? We are living in a day of social corruption—even among all nations, and the day of which God says "a desolating scourge shall go forth among the inhabitants of the earth, and shall continue to be poured out from time to time, if they repent not, until the earth is empty, and the inhabitants thereof are consumed away, and utterly destroyed by the brightness of my coming. Behold, I tell you these things even as I also told the people of the destruction of Jerusalem, and my word shall be verified at this time as it hath hitherto been verified."—Doctrine and Covenants 4:3. While the elders "cry repentance" to the people, is not the power of example necessary to clear their skirts? God has said men in this generation "shall see an overflowing scourge, for a desolating sickness shall come over the land; and my disciples shall stand in holy places, and shall not be moved; but among the wicked, men shall lift up their voices and curse God, and die."—Doctrine and Covenants 45:4.

Do not the signs of the times indicate we are now entering the field where all of these conditions must soon be met? The picture presented by the Government's health department is appalling. The report deals with cholera, yellow fever, bubonic plague, the three epidemic diseases that make their homes in certain parts of the earth, but are now slowly gaining a foothold in Africa, Australia, Hawaii, Japan, the Philippines, and several parts in South America; and to the great chagrin of the people of the United States, they come creeping into our western borders along the shores of the Pacific. Where will they end? I heard a very "good elder" say: "An audible voice spoke unto me at a time when I greatly needed some admonition, saying: 'Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord.'"

We can not afford to be careless in dealing with God's word. "And all they who receive the oracles of God, let them beware how they hold them, lest they are accounted as a light thing, and are brought under condemnation thereby."—Doctrine and Covenants 87: 2. Again, "Remember that, that which cometh from above, is sacred, and must be spoken with care, and by constraint of the Spirit, and in this there is no condemnation; and ye receive the Spirit through prayer; wherefore, without this there remaineth condemnation."—Doctrine and Covenants 63: 16.

We hardly know what these "observations" will lead to; they may cause grief and discouragement, or they may lead to the correcting of some of our past mistakes. It is true we should bear one another's burdens; yet, a rebuke of a friend is better and more desirable than the kiss of an enemy.

Fraternally,
"OBSERVER."

Original Articles

TOBACCO, LIQUOR, AND "THE WORD OF WISDOM."— PART I.

Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation, that inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold, it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together, to offer up your sacraments before him. And, behold, this should be wine; yea, pure wine of the grape of the vine, of your own make. And again, strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies. And again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises, and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill. And again, hot drinks are not for the body or belly. . . . And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel, and marrow to their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint; and I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 86: 1-3.

While this revelation is not mandatory, it gives us the opportunity to regard or disregard the wishes of the Lord; not that he receives any special benefit from our complying with his wishes,—the benefits accrue to ourselves. Shall we, then, not only disregard his wishes, but also disregard the benefits which will accrue to us by complying with them? Think of it, Saints, and you young men who have not yet acquired evil habits; which do you prefer? We read of some things in the Bible which are a sweet smelling savor unto the Lord, but if the Lord regards the smell of tobacco as the writer does, it is certainly a stench in his nostrils.

Some Saints are ashamed, apparently, to have the minister know that they are using the weed, and yet they persist in its use. Not long since, I was riding along with a brother who was using the weed, and of course some expectoration was needed now and then, and I noticed that he tried to avoid having me see it. Another time in a city I happened along a street where a certain brother was attempting to light a cigar. Upon seeing me he at once crushed out the fire, and disposed of the cigar where I should not see it.

Why is it that some men are ashamed to have a minister see it? Is it not because they know it is wrong? But why should they be ashamed of having the minister see it, when he who gave the law sees them every day using it? Should he be considered inferior to the minister? Why should they not be ashamed to have their neighbor see it, among whom they stand as lights in the world? Sometimes I am inclined to think that the only light some reflect to the world is that which is seen in the end of a cigar, or in the sparkling and foaming liquor in the glass. They go hand in hand with the world, and to the observer, in such cases, it would be impossible to distinguish between the light and the darkness, between the covenant people of God, who have voluntarily assumed the position of being light-bearers to the world, and those who are yet in darkness.

The Lord says,

When men are called unto mine everlasting gospel, and covenant with an everlasting covenant, they are accounted as the salt of the earth, and the savor of men. . . . Therefore, if that salt of the earth lose its savor, behold, it is thenceforth good for nothing, only to be cast out and trodden under the feet of men.—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 5.

Those who have entered into this covenant are considered the bride of Christ, and he wants them to be clean in body and in clothing, and to put on their beautiful garments, the garments of righteousness, as revealed from God in the gospel; but are we doing that when we refuse to comply with that which is revealed? Our own righteousness can not save us, unless that righteousness is a result of transformation of character brought about by obedience to the law of righteousness as revealed in the gospel.

Are we clean in body when we are saturating our bodies with tobacco juice from center to circumference? Verily, no. Would a man be clean in body if from his mouth proceeded a number of little trickling streams of tobacco juice, winding their ways down through a thicket of stubby beard, and finally finding an exit at the lower extremity of the chin? No, you would answer at once. We must keep the outside clean. But pray tell me, is it any worse to have it on the outside than to have it in the mouth? Is not the mouth a part of the body which we must keep clean? Yea, the whole person should be clean from the filthy stuff. Do you not realize that when the whole system is saturated with this nasty stuff that there is not a particle of the body which is free from it, not even the breath? How then are you complying with the commandment to be clean in body? The body is simply the index to the contents of spirit. If the body is clean in every respect it is because there is a clean spirit within that body which causes the body to act in harmony with its promptings. The body never does anything unless directed by the spirit within it. Therefore, if we indulge in the use of tobacco, or any other filthy habit, the spirit within the body has so directed, and we are neither clean in body nor in spirit. How then can we be the bride of Christ, if nothing unclean can enter into celestial glory?

But that bride did not heed the warning which had been given her, hence the Lord reproved her for her conduct in not conforming to the word of wisdom as follows:

Behold, I, the Lord, am not well pleased with many who are in the church at Kirtland, for they do not forsake their sins, and their wicked ways, the pride of their hearts, and their covetousness, and all their detestable things, and observe the words of wisdom and eternal life which I have given unto them.—Doctrine and Covenants 95: 4.

How long will the Lord have to wait before his bride will make herself ready to meet him? Is it to be wondered at that he wants a pure people when we take into consideration the beauty of the celestial city we are to dwell in, whose streets are paved with gold?

To the Reorganization the command comes, "Avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form." "Well," says one, "that is for the ministry." Truly, but the commandment continues, saying, "that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example." Effectual on whom? Why, effectual on those whom they (the ministers) counsel and teach. Certainly there is no excuse for any one. Some one must set the example and teach it; others must receive that teaching and follow that example. Is not the promise of health in their navel and marrow to their bones, and wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, and vigor of body and mind, promised to all alike who will keep these sayings, or do you wish the ministers only to enjoy these blessings? Are these blessings not to be equally desired by all?

Perhaps few, if any, of the users of tobacco, strong drinks, and tea and coffee, have taken into consideration the height and the depth and the extent of the wisdom manifested in this revelation. It is not only the filthiness it produces, and the total disregard for the will of God evinced by those who use it; but the wisdom in abstaining from it has never been fathomed, neither has the curse which it has brought upon the human family by using it.

We can rest assured that God never asks us to do anything, or refrain from doing anything, which is not for our best interest. The only difficulty with humanity is, we are not far-seeing enough, hence we do not see the wisdom of complying with instruction which we do not comprehend, and we are not willing to accept it in faith until we shall be able to comprehend it.

The tobacco and the liquor bill of the United States for the year 1906 was $2,350,000,000. In the same year we spent for men's clothing only $625,000,000, for women's clothing $475,000,000, and for children's clothing $890,000,000; we paid for fuel for our homes and places of business only $600,000,000; for life insurance, $500,000,000, and for fresh beef, $930,000,000.

That is, we spent for liquor and tobacco nearly four times what we spent for men's clothing; we spent for those two articles nearly six times what we spent for women's clothing, and nearly three times what we spent for children's clothing.—Franz V. Feldman, of Chicago's Statistical Bureau.

Some statistics taken from "Facts for the times," reveal the fact that annually there is spent for tea and coffee $100,000,000; public education, $96,000,000; bread articles, $505,000,000; boots and shoes, $197,000,000; sugar and molasses, $155,000,000.

Thus we discover that this country annually spends for tobacco, liquor, tea, and coffee, $2,450,000,000; and for clothing, fuel, beef, bread, boots and shoes, sugar and molasses and public education, leaving out the insurance, $4,379,000,000. Not quite double the amount which tobacco, liquor, tea, and coffee cost, which are not only luxuries indulged in to gratify a habit and an abnormal taste, but the money is worse than wasted. It would be far better to bury it somewhere than to use it for those purposes. These figures not only represent millions of barrels of liquor and millions of tons of tobacco, but they represent millions of untold miseries and heartaches, murders, and suicides; unhappy homes and divorced families; ragged and ignorant children, growing up without education, without respect for themselves or any one else, steeped in crime, moral and physical wrecks, like their parents, doomed to a drunkard's grave.

And you tobacco-chewing and liquor-drinking Latter Day Saints (?), you contribute your mite, little or much, to uphold and perpetuate institutions which manufacture the cause of all this vast amount of misery in the world, while at the same time you have entered into an everlasting covenant to do the will of the Lord, and to be a light unto the world, that the world may see your good works.

From a financial standpoint, Is it wisdom to do so? If not, we conclude that it would be wisdom to abstain from it, hence acknowledge the Lord's warning and forewarning as a word of wisdom. But this is not the only way in which it is a word of wisdom. There is a far greater and unlimited sense in which it is a word of wisdom, that of the effect on our bodies and spirits, and that of our posterity.

Perhaps few have ever taken into consideration the amount of poison which is taken into the system by the means of tobacco, liquor, tea, and coffee. Hence I present for the consideration of my readers the authority of J. H. Kellogg, M. D., and others. I fancy hearing some one say that tea and coffee are not referred to in the Word of Wisdom. I admit they are not called by those names, but I suppose we might permit Joseph Smith to interpret this revelation. When asked whether the Word of Wisdom referred to tea and coffee he answered that it did. This you will find in the Times and Seasons where I have read it, but do not remember the volume.

As to tea and coffee I quote from some of the old HERALDS an extract from "Physiologist and family physician."

Question.—Is the use of coffee and tea with our meals injurious?

Answer.—They have been charged with producing dyspepsia, neuralgia, and other injurious effects upon the stomach, bowels, and nervous system generally.

I quote the opinions of the following well known authors upon this subject and would add that my personal and professional experience fully coincides with the views herein presented.

Doctor Johnson says, "We are convinced by many years' observation that very many of the diseases we are called upon to treat as dyspepsia, nervous and sick headache, heart disease, epilepsy, neuralgia, paralysis, etc., etc., are the legitimate and certain fruits of these narcotic stimulants."

Hahneman describes a number of diseases induced by these beverages and assures us "that they are the most insidious and dangerous enemies which slowly and silently undermine the citadel of life itself."

Doctor Bell says expressly that coffee has "a pernicious effect upon the stomach, bowels, and nervous system generally."

Mr. Graham declares that "both tea and coffee are among the most powerful poisons of the vegetable kingdom."

Doctor Combe observes, that "tea and coffee not only ruin the stomach but seriously derange the health of the brain and nervous system."

Doctor Teste says that "coffee is responsible for six or seven tenths of the neuralgia we have to treat daily."

Tea, in anything but great moderation, is a poison capable of ruining the stomach, enfeebling and disordering the heart's action, shattering the nerves and ruining the health and happiness of the victim. In a few words without holding that the use of teas is as bad as the use of alcoholic liquors, one may well believe that the total abstinence reformers have, in their red-hot zeal against rum, encouraged an indulgence in tea-drinking which will have to be fought against with might and main to prevent the wholesale ruin of multitudes.

So much on the tea and coffee question. Pretty good evidence of the wisdom in the statement that such things were not for the body. The Lord did not intend that his people should use their bodies as cesspools for any and all kinds of poison and filth of which the world is full in this generation. How can they retain healthful bodies and sound minds under such conditions? These poisons taken into the system will affect their posterity after them; each succeeding generation will have to suffer for the transgressions of its parents. It must be remembered that the Lord will never compel us to obey him; neither does he give directions or commandments simply to show his authority, but because he knows the end from the beginning and the consequence of a disregard for law, both as pertaining to this life and that which is to come. He counsels, advises, and directs for our good, not for his; for our bodily and spiritual welfare, not for his. He does not need our service. He pleads with us to obey him because of his superior wisdom, but sometimes man is prone to think that he knows more than God,—at least his action would indicate that.

S. K. SORENSEN.

(To be continued.)

• * * * *

THE APOSTASY OF CATHOLICISM.—PART II.

A REPLY BY ELDER V. M. GOODRICH TO A CHALLENGE OF BISHOP BURKE.

This lecture was delivered in the Tootle Theater, St. Joseph, Missouri, May 10, to a large and interested audience. It was in reply to a challenge issued by Bishop Burke. Bro. Leon A. Gould was present and reported for the St. Joseph papers and for the SAINTS' HERALD.

I want now to call your attention to the reading of the revelation that was given to Saint John upon the Isle of Patmos. You will remember reading the seventeenth chapter of the Revelation concerning the vision which John saw. There was a presentation in the figure of a woman. She was riding upon a beast having seven heads and ten horns. He described how she was adorned, and "Mystery Babylon," was written upon her crown; she was adorned with jewels and precious stones, etc. She held in her hand a cup of wine; and she had made the nations drunken with the wine of her fornication. They had been indoctrinated, intoxicated. We associate the church of Rome with this prophecy and we learn that the fulfillment of the prophecy must be subsequent to the time in which John saw it, which was about the year A. D. 96. So much then for the claim of the succession of Pope Pius X for the apostolic office; it must come later than that—later than the year 96.

Now we want to show you something concerning that which the apostle has seen:

And a great sign appeared in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and on her head, a crown of twelve stars: and being with child, she cried travailing in birth, and was in pain to be delivered. And there was seen another sign in heaven; and behold a great red dragon, having seven heads, and ten horns: and on his head seven diadems.

We want to call your attention to what we have here upon our chart. Perhaps you can see it. Here is represented the woman which John saw in vision. We want to call your attention for one moment to her adornment in comparison to that of the other woman. There are two represented, as you will see. We are told of the first that she had twelve stars as a crown; she was clothed with the light of the sun; the moon was under her feet. Think what a wonderful adornment: Siderial worlds as gems for her crown; the solar orb for her mantle; the lunar world for her footstool! Wonderful to behold! Now in comparison, let us read about the other one:

And he took me away in spirit into the desert. And I saw a woman sitting upon a scarlet colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. And the woman was clothed around about with purple and scarlet, and gilt with gold, and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand, full of the abomination and filthiness of her fornication. And on her forehead a name was written: A mystery; Babylon the great, the mother of fornications, and the abominations of the earth.—Apocalypse 17: 1-6.

Now, instead of this wonderful adornment of the heavenly worlds, we notice the adornment of this other is purely and simply earthly, with jewels, gold, silver, and precious stones, and robes of earthly material. And we see upon her head in place of the siderial worlds, the phrase, "Mystery, Babylon," meaning darkness,—Babylon—confusion, or error.

It is conceded by eminent scholars and divines, that the symbol used here, and shown to the apostle as a woman, represented the church of Christ, in the first instance, as we read from the twelfth chapter of Revelation, or the Apocalypse. And also the other woman represents a church; but you can see there are two of them. There is a genuine one. There is a spurious one. Now we are told here concerning the first woman which John saw, that appeared in the heavens, whose head was adorned with twelve stars: "And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she had a place prepared by God, that there they should feed her a thousand two hundred sixty days."—Apocalypse 12: 6.

Whatever may be the opinions of men concerning that term wilderness, it must be conceded that it is aside from the abode of men. When we are in the wilderness we are not where men reside. We are obscure; out of sight. And she was to remain there for a period, a thousand two hundred sixty days. A day representing a year would make a thousand two hundred and sixty years. She was fed and nourished, and protected from the face of the serpent; and the gates of hell did not prevail against her. God had her in keeping, under his own hands.

I want you to note, concerning this other one, supported by the dragon: "And there was given to him a mouth speaking great things, and blasphemies: and power was given him to do two and forty months." Take two and forty months and multiply by thirty, the number of days in the Jewish calendar for a month, and you have exactly a thousand two hundred and sixty.

Notice that during the absence of this first woman, when she was carried to the wilderness, when she was borne away as the Scriptures said she would be, that when she should be taken away this other woman would have "to do forty and two months," a thousand two hundred sixty days or years, occupying in the place of the first. There was a spurious one. There was a counterfeit. And I presume if we have any in our audience who are as skillful in detecting counterfeits as our bankers are in detecting counterfeit bills, they will not have much trouble in detecting the spurious woman. It will suffice our purpose to say that the second one was given power. She was having to do forty and two months, corresponding to the time when the other was in the wilderness, where she was being nourished by the hand of God away from the face of the serpent.

Previous to Constantine's time, the church suffered a great many persecutions, of which all students of history are well aware; and it was by powers political, by the political kingdoms of the earth, which Daniel in his vision saw, the various beasts, and according to the dream and interpretation as Daniel gave to Nebuchadnezzar the king. He was shown there the different powers which would arise, of which time will not allow us to enter into detail. But these beasts, we are told by the holy prophets, made war with the Saints; and, as Daniel tells us in one place, overcame them, and wore them out.

At the appearance of Constantine upon the throne, there was a different order by the church. In place of suffering, and persecution, they received favor at his hands. And we are told it was because of political reasons, that his kingdom might be strengthened. But be that as it may, history records the fact that the clergy began to receive at his hands favor, and the order was changed; they were arrayed in purple, and great riches and honor were bestowed upon them. According to that which we have read there was scarcely a form of the former things left. Apostasy!

And we are told, now, that, after this period, ten kings should arise. This king's time, in which Constantine the great was occupying, represents the fourth beast of the kingdom. Ten horns, or ten kings should arise. And while he was considering the ten horns, we are told by Daniel there was a little horn that sprang up among them; a little horn.

We find these beasts, and the little horn, as spoken of by Daniel, all alike. The support and power of the dragon was given unto them. And they all made war against the saints. But the mode of warfare by the little horn was different. In place of the fagot, and the sword, and the many ways in which the saints were put to death and destroyed, the dragon, now, supported the power; and there was, gradually, a counterfeit being introduced and slipped in, and the saints were worn out and overcome by the usurpation of power and authority, and by introducing new doctrines, and thus turning away from the faith. We are told of the little horn:

And I saw another beast coming up out of the earth, and he had two horns, like a lamb, and he spoke as a dragon. And he exhausted all the power of the former beast in his sight; and he caused the earth, and them that dwell therein, to adore the first beast, whose wound to death was healed.

You see they all went right along. They all supported the policy and work of the first. But here, as we have quoted from the Apocalypse 13: 11, 12, in connection with that which Daniel saw, the little horn came up among the ten horns. He described it as lamb-like; but it had two horns, one representing political power, and the other ecclesiastical power.

It was after the year 450 that this little horn arose. And this one which John said he saw coming up out of the earth, like a lamb, notice it had two horns, representing two different powers; and it spake as a dragon—coming up, representing both church and state.

We showed you that in the year 606, the pope became a temporal prince, beginning when he had a few provinces or cities and castles. He came up like a lamb, representing the Lamb, or claiming to be a representative of the Lamb, and yet he spake as a dragon. He made war with the saints, and overcame them. How? By introducing the spurious. And the first woman fled into the wilderness. And power was given unto this prince, unto this beast that was like a lamb, and yet spake as a dragon, to do forty and two months.

Now, who is this man of sin? How are we going to identify him? All things have their marks of identification. They have their features. And when we want to identify, we learn concerning their marks, and then we start out in our search. Our astronomer, when he places his instrument upon the planet Mars, discovers it has certain features. There are its canals, so it is said, and other things. There is Saturn with her rings. And thus they are known by men. And so it is with the church of Jesus Christ. So it is with the pope's church. We should look to their features.

This little horn was to do certain things. We read to you where there was a power coming, and it was going to have power over all nations. It was going to lift itself up. It was going to show itself sitting in the temple as if it were God. We read to you from the canon law where this pope claimed to be above all human laws, and could not be judged by men. We have read to you that a power was coming that would cause men to sin. We have read to you where the laws would be changed. It would think to change times and laws; and it would make the people to sin. We want to see if we can identify who has fulfilled all these prophecies. It must come to pass, as we have read. There must be a revolt first. There must be a turning away from the faith.

Let us see. We read in one place where he should bring down three kings. Let us see if we can find that. Yes, here:

I beheld, and lo, that horn made war against the saints, and prevailed over them, till the Ancient of Days came and gave judgment to the saints of the Most High, and the time came and the saints obtained the kingdom. And thus he said: The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon the earth, which shall be greater than all the kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. And the ten horns of the same kingdom, shall be ten kings; and another shall rise up after them, and he shall be mightier than the former, and he shall bring down three kings.

There shall another king rise up after the ten kings, and he shall be mightier than the former, and he "shall bring down three kings."

Who did that? Answer: The pope.

And he shall speak words against the Most High: and he shall think himself able to change times and laws, and they shall be delivered into his hand until a time, and times, and half a time (Daniel 7: 21-25), corresponding exactly according to the words of Daniel and of John, previously quoted, when the woman was carried into the wilderness.

Who is it that has thought to change times and laws? Who is it that has brought down three kings? Do you not remember that which we read in your hearing, where the pope became the temporal prince, and there was Henry, the Emperor of Germany, who was made to walk for many miles over frozen ground and stand three days barefooted before the palace of the pope, and plead to be restored to the kingdom. Henry II of England was brought down; and John of England. Who did that? It was the pope—no other religious power. No one else has filled that prophecy. None but the pope. No one but that church that boasts of its antiquity, and of its great power, and might. What power except the church of Rome, has had a universal power over every nation, kindred, and tongue? None. Who was it that was enabled to enthrone kings, and to dethrone kings? Who was it that had dominion, and should have dominion over the kings of the earth? have a kingdom over kingdoms? None but the pope.

Now our Catholic friends are willing to count us as apostates, as heretics. Yes, all Christendom outside of them are heretics. I do not have any fault to find with them for believing that, because I am just liberal enough to believe that they are honest, and they do not know any better. But it is facts that we want to get at. They count us as heretics; and we believe they are apostates; so we are about even as far as that is concerned. But now, how is it? Had any of the reformers, any other religionists such universal power? Have they fulfilled prophecy, to which we have been calling your attention? Not one of them can ever fulfill it. No one of the Protestant churches, in any time, ever held universal sway. They never brought down three kings. They never changed the ordinance, and made people sin. None of them have been universal, like the church of Rome, to make every nation, kindred, and tongue drunken with the wine of their fornication, or false doctrine.

Now we want to say a word concerning the changing of the ordinance. You remember what we were told in Isaiah, 24. We wish to read that again:

And the earth is infected by the inhabitants thereof: because they have changed the ordinance, they have broken the everlasting covenant. Therefore shall the curse devour the earth, and the inhabitants thereof shall sin.

I have a little work here that is written by his eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, and I want to notice from their own book where the ordinance was changed, so that we can know who has fulfilled the prophecy. I read from page 318 of this work, The Faith of Our Fathers:

For several centuries after the establishment of Christianity, baptism was usually conferred by immersion; but since the twelfth century, the practice of baptizing by infusion has prevailed in the Catholic Church, as this manner is attended with less inconvenience than baptism by immersion.

Here we have the words of one of the sons, as he styles himself, of the Catholic Church, confessing that baptism by immersion was the primitive practice. That was the usual practice. That was the mode. And elsewhere in this book, he tells us that there was no place in the writings of Jesus Christ or the holy apostles where baptism was administered in any other way, save by immersion. He tells us they changed it. We learn that by a council in the year 1311, baptism by immersion was annulled or set aside, and sprinkling was made the rule of action. There is a change of the ordinance. Who did it? It was the pope. There is the fulfillment of that prophecy. And we are told that a great many of the nations are drunken with that doctrine. How big a mistake have we made? You take the reformation, the greater portion of it, and they yet follow that practice as one of the modes. There are a few who do not; but for centuries all nations were drunken and contaminated with that doctrine, before our immersionists came, in the way of Baptists and Christians, or Disciples, and a few others. Hence the reformation was contaminated with this as well as with many other doctrines, which we have not time this evening to enumerate.

A work entitled, Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, declares that it would take ten solid years of reading for a man to point out the errors in the teaching of Catholicism, and where the popes differ one from the other. How could we expect in a short time to point out but some of the prominent ones?

We find another error. And who has fulfilled it:

In 786, Adrian, Bishop of Rome, summoned the second Nicene council, and sanctioned the image worship. In 794, Charlemagne, assembled at Frankfort, a council of three hundred bishops, who unanimously condemned the worship of images and charged the Roman Pontiff with error.—Mosheim, p. 185.

Now, again, another practice; and it is not according to the teaching of Jesus Christ. We will show you where it is contrary. We take the invocation of the Virgin Mary:

Hail Mary, full of Grace, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the first of thy womb, Jesus, Holy Mary, Mother of God, pray for us sinners now, and at the hour of death. Amen.

This is taken from the Catholic prayer-book. What are the words of Jesus Christ? There is a teaching and indoctrinating of the children of men contrary to the doctrines of Jesus Christ. Let me give you his word:

And in that day you shall not ask me anything. Amen, Amen, I say to you: if you ask the Father anything in my name, he will give it you.

Now the question is, What is the use of asking the Virgin Mary, when Christ has promised if you will ask the Father in his name he will give it? And again:

In that day you shall ask in my name; and I say not to you that I will ask the Father for you.—Saint John 16: 23, 26.

That is the idea. You ask the Father in my name, and the Father will give it to you.

There is another doctrine, that of the Eucharist or Lord's Supper. In this same book the Cardinal tells us that in the bread we get both the body and the blood; and yet he acknowledges to us that the Lord said, Except ye eat of my flesh and drink of my blood, ye shall not have life in you. By argument and sophistry he wants us to believe that we get both in one, notwithstanding the Lord said, Except ye eat and drink. You can not both eat and drink in the act of eating alone. See the idea? There is the error. They do not administer the wine. They leave it out. Remember, that the Lord said, This is my body which is broken for you. It was the broken and mangled body of Christ which they were to eat, and which they were to remember. It was the spilt blood, the shed blood which they were to drink, and to remember; not as a whole; not as a body, with the blood that is within the flesh.

The pope was to have names of blasphemy upon his head. We read in history where he arrogated unto himself the title King of kings and Lord of lords, etc. And to-day the modern style and way of addressing the Pontiff is something like this: "Sovereign Pontiff; Vicar of Christ; Your Holiness; Your Beatitude," etc., etc.

Who is it that fulfills that? There was to be a mystery,—mystery, darkness. In Isaiah 60:2, we are told that "darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the minds of the people; but the Lord shall arise and shine among thee and his glory shall be seen in thee." Now, there was darkness. There was mystery. There was confusion. There was misunderstanding. But the Lord should arise. What does that mean? There would be a time, as we are told in Zechariah, I believe about the eleventh chapter, that there would be a day known unto the Lord, not clear nor light; but it should be a day known unto the Lord, not day nor night; but at eventime it should be light. At eventime! Why the Scriptures are full of prophecies and statements pointing out a great apostasy, the day, and the night, and the darkness. But before the end, at eventime there should be light.

We have identified this church that has made its boasted claims of its great antiquity, of its great following, of its wealth, of its learning, and all this. We have shown that there must be an apostasy, a turning away from the truth. We have shown you that the man of sin must be revealed, and that he should make the nations of the earth drunken, and the inhabitants of the earth to sin because they transgressed the laws, because they had changed the ordinance, because they thought to change times and laws, as we read, appointing different feasts, etc.

We can plainly see by the Scriptures that it is not true that the church was to continue, as organized by Jesus Christ, among men. But according to the figure which John saw of the woman, she was to fly into the wilderness, as we are told; she was to get the wings of a great eagle, and she would fly into the wilderness, and she would be fed from the face of the serpent for a time, times, and a half; that there would be another that would occupy forty and two months.

We want to ask you this question, and we want you to think about the pope's church, and the good bishop claims for him that he is the successor to the Apostle Peter. We called your attention a little while ago to features when the astronomer wants to discover a planet. He has the description, and when he places his instrument upon it, he knows what planet it is. When he beholds the rings of Saturn, he knows that is Saturn, etc. And so the church of Jesus Christ has its marks of identification. It has different features. It has its organization. It had its doctrines. It had its officers. And we look at it through the great telescope, the Bible. We have no other way to look at the church of Jesus Christ, only through the Bible. What do we see?

We find, in the twelfth chapter of the first Corinthian letter, the statement that God set first in the church apostles, after that prophets, and thirdly miracles. Now we look at the pope's church. It has no apostles. How could the pope be in succession? How could he be, when he has no apostles? He could not be. They have done away with that quorum of inspired men.

They have no prophets. You read in the thirteenth chapter of Acts that there were prophets in the church, several of them.

They have done away with the miracles. We have this little book which tells us so. This little book was written on purpose for the Protestants and the reformation, and we have a perfect right to examine it; and that is what we want to do to-day; and we hope none will think hard of us. He says here,

Those who were confirmed by the apostles usually gave evidence of the grace they received by prophecy, the gift of tongues, and the manifestation of other miraculous power. It may be asked: Why do not these gifts accompany now the imposition of hands? I answer: Because they are no longer needed.

They have no apostles. None to be successors of. There is no corresponding apostolic quorum in that church. They have not the same features you see. It is a different woman, a different church. They have no prophets. They have no miraculous gifts. They say they do not need them. All these are gone.

If the claim of the good bishop is true, and the gates of hell never should prevail against her, why have they not got all these things? And where are they? What did they do with them?

When we examine the features of that church, and the church of Jesus Christ, and what they had in them, we see the different women. We see the spurious, the counterfeit, and hence we are not warranted in the belief that Pope Pius X is the successor of the Apostle Peter. We are not warranted in the belief that the Roman church is the only church that has the right to represent the kingdom of God on earth to-day. But we have the right to believe that there would come a falling away, a revolt, and that the man of sin would be revealed. And we must look for it. We must expect it. We have the right to believe that the woman, the church, would be borne away into the wilderness, to remain for a season. We have the right to believe, and look for the time when God should arise and shine forth in his glory. We have the right to expect, before the coming of the Son of Man, that God, true to his promise, would restore the gospel and the priesthood. Do the Scriptures warrant such hope and belief? Are there no prophecies to that effect? We maintain and contend that there are. If you will turn to the fourteenth chapter, sixth verse, of the gospel as recorded in the Apocalypse or Revelation, you will find there:

I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

The fact is, John saw this. He comes in vision to such a period. And if the church and kingdom of God was upon earth, why need an angel come from heaven with the gospel to be proclaimed?

We can not find salvation in the pope's church. There is another question to be settled. Which is needed, reformation or restoration?

Which will we have? Which will the Bible warrant us in believing? Restoration by angelic ministration, or reformation by human wisdom? You will agree with me that the reformation offers as an apology for its existence that the church of Rome became corrupted, that there was an apostasy from the truth, and hence they sought to reform her. Was God with them, and did he sanction their work? Or was he to restore the gospel? This is the question for us to settle. Which does the Bible teach? We propose to cover that, and to speak upon that question one week from this evening, at half past seven, at No. 417 North Seventeenth Street; and to all those who are interested in this matter, we kindly and cordially extend an invitation to be present.

Opportunity.

Master of human destinies am I!
 Fame, love and fortune on my footsteps wait.
 Cities and fields I walk: I penetrate
 Deserts and fields remote, and, passing by Hovel and mart and palace, soon or late,
 I knock unbidden once at every gate;
 If sleeping, wake: if feasting, rise before
 I turn away. It is the hour of fate,
 And they who follow me reach every state
 Mortals desire, and conquer every foe
 Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate,
 Condemned to failure, penury and woe,
 Seek me in vain and uselessly implore—
 I answer not, and I return no more.—

—John J. Ingalls.

Skepticism is slow suicide.—Emerson.

Selected Poetry

What You Can Do.

If you can not on the ocean,
 Sail among the swiftest fleet,
 Rocking on the highest billows,
 Laughing at the storms you meet,
 You can go among the sailors,
 Anchored safe within the bay,
 You can lend a hand to help them,
 As they launch their boats away.

If you are too weak to journey
 Up the mountain steep and high;
 You can stand within the valley,
 As the multitude go by;
 You can chant in happy measure,
 As they slowly pass along,—
 Though they may forget the singer,
 They will not forget the song.

If you can not with the reapers,
 Garner up the richest sheaves,
 Many a grain, both ripe and golden,
 Do the careless reapers leave.
 You can go among the briars,
 Growing rank against the wall;
 For it may be that the shadow,
 Hides the heaviest wheat of all.

If you can not in the conflict,
 Prove yourself a soldier true;
 If, where fire and smoke are thickest,
 There's no work for you to do,—
 When the battle-field is silent,
 You can go with careful tread;
 You can bear away the wounded;
 You can cover up the dead.

If you have not gold or silver,
 Ever ready to command,
 If you can not toward the needy
 Reach an ever open hand,—
 You can visit the afflicted,
 O'er the erring you can weep;
 You can be a true disciple,
 Sitting at the Savior's feet.

Do not, then, stand idly waiting,
 For some greater work to do;
 Fortune is a lazy goddess,—
 She will never come to you.
 Go and toil in any vineyard;
 Do not fear to do or dare;
 If you want a field of labor,
 You can find it anywhere.

Talkers and futile persons, are commonly vain and credulous withal; for he that talketh what he knoweth, will also talk what he knoweth not; therefore set it down, that a habit of secrecy is both politic and moral.—Bacon.

• * •

The essence of true nobility is neglect of self. Let the thought of self pass in, and the beauty of a great action is gone like the bloom from the soiled rose.—J. A. Froude.

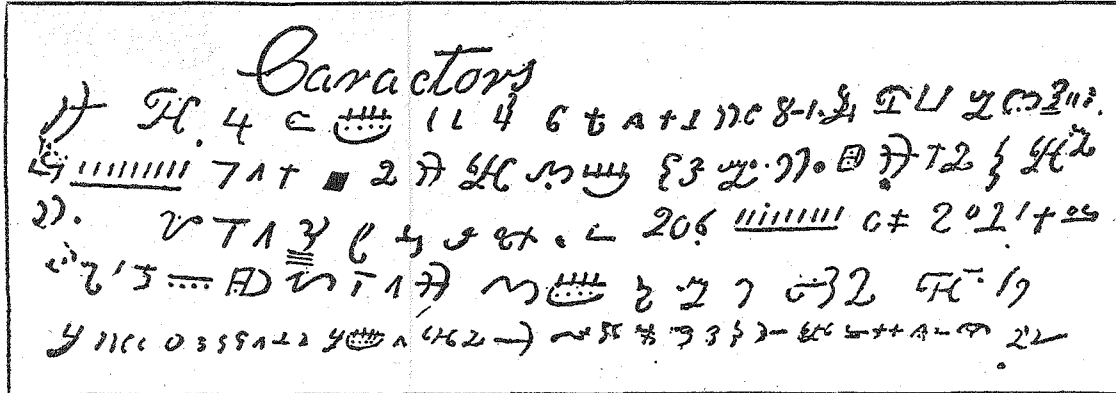

Of General Interest

A PIOUS FORGERY.

[The cuts used in this article are used by courtesy of the Liahona.—EDITORS HERALD.]

Our readers who are familiar with the events which attended the coming forth of the Book of Mormon will remember that, while the translation of it was in progress, and about two years before it was published, the Prophet Joseph Smith made upon a sheet of paper a facsimile of some of the characters on the gold plates from which he made the English translation, and gave it to Martin Harris, who showed it to Professor Charles Anthon of New

Mormon Caractors	English Characters
1	1
2	2
3	3
4	4
5 x	5
6	6
7 x	7
8	8
9 x	9
0	0
206	206
1 x	1
2 x	2
3 x	3
4 x	4
5 x	5
6 x	6
7 x	7
8 x	8
9 x	9
0 x	0
206 x	206
A x	A
B x	B
C x	C
D x	D
E x	E
F x	F
G x	G
H x	H
I x	I
L	L
O	O
S	S
T	T
U	U
V	V
X	X
()	()
=	=

York, a scholar learned in ancient languages. This slip of paper came to possess great historic value, and was carefully preserved. Facsimiles of it have been published repeatedly.

Some months ago the Christian Standard, (Campbellite, Cincinnati,) promised its readers some anti-"Mormon" articles, and on the first page of its issue of April 18 it gives one, under a "scare" heading, written by Reverend R. B. Neal, a Campbellite preacher, and rabid opponent of the Book of Mormon. Evidently this production has been in process of incubation a long time. What purports to be a facsimile of the famous Harris-Anthon sheet of hieroglyphics forms part of the article, but it gives only five lines of characters whereas the original contains seven lines. As newspaper cuts go the imitation of the five lines is close, but it is not perfect. The reproduction given by the Standard has the heading "Caractors," and Reverend Neal grows sarcastic over the faulty orthography.

It is frankly admitted that at the time this sheet of characters was copied from the plates of the Book of Mormon, which was early in 1828, the education of the Prophet Joseph Smith, then twenty-two years old, was very defective, a fact that makes the work he did all the more marvelous, and is an added proof of its divinity. If his education was so deficient that he could not spell the word characters correctly, how could he have exercised, without divine aid, the wonderful ability to concoct and successfully foist upon the world such a stupendous imposture as the Book of Mormon must be, if it is not of divine origin? Sarcastic flings at his lack of education are really arguments in defense of the genuineness of his inspiration.

This incomplete facsimile is given for the purpose of basing upon it an attack upon the Book of Mormon. The Standard writer sets out to show that the characters are not ancient hieroglyphics at all, but were "put down at random by an ignorant person, with no resemblance to anything, not even shorthand." After "proving" this claim, the astute Standard writer proceeds to "prove" that many of the characters "resemble" English letters and figures so strongly as to show that they were actually taken from these sources. In one breath he holds that they resemble nothing, "not even shorthand," and in the next he holds that they so strongly resemble English characters as to prove such to have been their origin. So much for his consistency; it indicates his brain power.

This prodigy of polemics next essays a mode of attack on the Nephite scriptures which, so far as we are aware, is original with him, and over the success (?) of which he gloats tremendously. He pretends to select from the reproduced facsimile thirty-seven Nephite characters and arranges them in a vertical row. Then in a parallel row he places the same number of English characters that resemble those in the first row. He thus makes it appear that each of the thirty-seven characters selected by him from the hieroglyphics bears a resemblance to some English character, either a digit or letter of the alphabet. He resorts to many different styles and "faces" of English type in order to make up his second column. His purpose is to show that the Nephite characters are not hieroglyphics at all, but were adapted from English letters and figures by Joseph Smith for fraudulent purposes. In other words he attempts in this manner to prove that this famous sheet of ancient Nephite writing is a bungling forgery, so stupid in design and execution as to be easily detected by a schoolboy.

We took a copy of the Christian Standard to an engraver and had made exact duplicates of the facsimile of the slip of hieroglyphics and the parallel columns of characters, which illustrated its article, and give both herewith. As these cuts are zinc etchings they may be depended upon to be absolutely exact reproductions of those in the Standard, and are the same size to a hair's breadth. We wish to emphasize this statement, and in support of it challenge comparison of the cuts which accompany this article with those given in the Christian Standard of April 18. The naked eye can not detect the slightest difference, except that fifteen of the characters in the first of the parallel columns are followed by an X, which our engraver affixed to them pursuant to our instructions.

Now remember that Reverend R. B. Neal, Campbellite preacher, pretends that he selected from among the hieroglyphics which he reproduces, all of the thirty-seven characters in the first of the parallel columns. But not one of the fifteen characters marked with an X can be found there. They are forgeries—brazen, shameless, indefensible forgeries. The reader is invited to scan as closely as he chooses the plate of hieroglyphics and he will not find on it one of the characters marked with an X. There are several other characters among the thirty-seven which are very doubtful. Two or three of the forged characters resemble some found among the hieroglyphics. But in a case of this kind mere resemblance is not enough. No torturing into shape can be allowed. The characters in the first of the parallel columns must have exact duplicates among the hieroglyphics, or the charge of forgery stands. Nearly half of this evidence presented to prove the Book of Mormon a forgery, is forged, and the forger is a Campbellite preacher, a reckless accusant and assailant of Latter-day Saints' missionaries, and a regular contributor to the chief organ of his sect.

As a rule the members of the Christian denomination are truthful, moral, and respectable people; will they sanction on the part of one of their ministers the forgery we are exposing? Will they support the principal organ of their church in being a party to such a fraud? Do they doubt that it has been committed? Let them examine a copy of the Christian Standard of April 18, 1908. It contains the proof we give here, which is absolutely mathematical in the certainty with which it establishes the guilt of the accused. Although this offense may not be punishable by law, it is detestable in morals.

The Standard was cunning enough to print the plate of hieroglyphics on one side of a leaf, and the parallel columns on the other, thus making scrutiny and comparison of the strange characters so difficult that not one reader in thousands would detect the forgery which, however, is obvious when both plates are printed on the same page and attention is called to it.

But what of the twenty or more characters found among the hieroglyphics which strongly resemble English digits or letters? If such an argument has any weight when applied to one sample of ancient writing, it must be given equal weight when applied to another. But it has no force at all. Most modern alphabets are of necessity formed of lines, curves, dots and angles, and most ancient writing was composed of the same elements. In our day the type-founder's art has been carried so far in devising varied styles of "faces" that English letters or figures of some "face" can be found that will match characters taken from almost any ancient alphabet or specimen of writing.

Take the Moabite stone, for example. All scholars are familiar with it. It is reproduced in the "Illustrations and Helps" (p. 11) of the American edition of the Oxford Bible, which gives a description of it. It dates back to the beginning of the ninth century before Christ. A glance at the facsimile of this stone will show that many of the characters on it could be closely duplicated from English fancy type, yet any man who would urge this fact as an argument against its genuineness would be regarded by scholars as a simpleton. So much for this latest and most formidable (?) attack on the Book of Mormon!—From an editorial in the Liahona, the Elder's Journal, May 9, 1908.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. F. M. Smith, secretary, 630 South Chrysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. E. Etzenhouser, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Daughters of Zion Reading for June.

TO WHOM DOES THE CHILD BELONG? NO. 2. TO GOD.

Before parents can claim any right to their child, they must first recognize his right to himself, and then God's right to him. First individuality; then religion. It is true that these two can not be actually placed the one before the other and separate from the other. They are inextricably intermingled, and when we say that the child's first right is to himself, we mean that in all things he has the right to claim that his individuality be considered. Even in acknowledging his obligation to his Creator he must be allowed to worship according to his individuality. One may worship with serious earnestness, and his prayers be anxious longings; another may find a joy and gladness in service, and his prayers be anthems of praise and rejoicing. And this violates no moral law. . . .

Reverence for God and obedience to him is a duty. By nature the human being is reverent. The savage has his god and his religion. The infant sees in his parents the highest and best that he knows. They stand to him for God. But early in life he may be made to feel that they themselves obey a power still greater and stronger than themselves; that this power governs not only their deeds but their thoughts, and he begins to feel that he, too, must yield a loving obedience to this great Being. He begins to feel that he belongs to God. If rightly taught, this feeling will not be one of fear, but love, and this strengthens his character. The service of fear is slavery; the service of love is freedom by means of control of self. This self-control should extend to the domain of physical as well as spiritual things.

A very little child can understand that his body is a temple for his soul and for the indwelling of God. I think we do not understand how intuitively a child grasps the idea of his dual nature. . . .

Very early in life the child can understand God's claim upon him in the care of the body. He can understand that God has a claim upon him by creation and preservation; he can understand that God works with him daily in the keeping of the body in repair. If he eats proper food, it is the divine power that makes of it the tissues and keeps them in health. He learns that in this, as elsewhere, God works by laws which the individual has the power to obey or ignore, but in violating these laws it is always himself who suffers. Children can as readily be taught a bodily religion as a spiritual religion. They can be taught regularity in eating, the avoidance of injurious articles, the keeping of regular hours of sleep, the value of exercise,—in short, the obedience of physical law as a duty they owe themselves and their Creator, and to be rendered joyfully. Why should not the child be taught to rejoice in the thought that he belongs to God, and also that God belongs to him?

Thus taught he will perceive the beauty of the Sabbath as a day different from all others, sacred to the God whom he loves, and will gladly make it a day of rest and worship. Thus taught, he will ever be ready to refer all conduct to the approval of the supreme Judge of right and wrong. He will be anxious to keep his body pure in deed, his mind pure in thought, and his heart pure in its emotions, because the God to whom he belongs is a God of purity.

In trying to teach faith in God, there may be danger that the child will obtain the idea that God will make a special interference in his behalf, and overturn natural law; but the instances of absolute faith in the heavenly Father are often very interesting. A little girl had been taught to pray with perfect faith. She had been naughty, and her mother was taking her away to punish her. As they climbed the stairs, the little one earnestly said: "O Lord, if you ever wanted to help a little girl in your life, now's your chance."

It is wiser to teach the child that all human beings belong to God, and he has their best interests at heart, and if we love him and try to obey him, all will be ordered for our good, and that sometimes it would not be kind to allow us to escape merited punishment. The absolute trust that accepts the trials or life, as well as its joys, as part of the disciplinary process of life, is the trust that best fits one to bear the part of a noble, patient, undiscouraged scholar in earth's great Polytechnic.

What a parent desires a child to be in relation to God, that must the parent be. He must manifest absolute trust, not only in word, but in a cheerful, serene acceptance of all the circumstances of life. He must show that he belongs to God every day in the week. Sunday prayers and week-day bad tempers are bad lessons in piety. It is not wise to endeavor to arouse piety through the emotional nature of the child, nor through fear, nor even by too constant appeals to the conscience, which may become morbid under such training; but a life of consistent recognition of God's claims and the persistent effort at patterning after the Christ as the only Savior of mankind, is the true religious training. And as Jacob Abbott says:

"We must not look for the development of the moral and religious sentiments too soon, nor be too much troubled if in the first two or three years of life, the animal sentiments seem to overpower the higher sentiments and principles. No one can possibly know at how early an age that great change which consists in the first faint kindlings of the divine life in the soul may take place, nor with what faults, failings, and yieldings to the influence of the mere animal passions of childhood it may co-exist."

Therefore, we, as parents, must be patient, sympathetic, loving, gentle, tender-hearted, forgiving, "even as God for Christ's sake" has forgiven us; believing that it is better to win our children to God through love, than to frighten them to him through fear.—Mary Wood-Allen, M. D., in American Motherhood.

Questions on June Reading.

What rights to the child stand before that of the parents? In what sense does the child's right to himself come before God's right? What place must be accorded individuality even in one's obligation to God? What evidence is there that reverence is inherent in human nature? Through whom should the child first recognize God? When the child feels that his parents are subject to the higher power, what is the effect upon him? Who is responsible for the child's first ideals of service to God? What will be the effect on the child's character whether this service be one of love or of fear? In what way does self-control become a part of the service of God? How may a child be taught of his dual nature and that his body is a temple for God's Holy Spirit? How is a child to know of God's claim upon him physically as well as spiritually? How early may a child be taught of God's care for his body? Will it not be an attractive thought to a child that he is to care for his body as a coworker with God, who has created it, who provides for its needs, and whose laws work for its preservation? Is it not possible to teach all this in language a child may understand? Will not this teaching tend to make the child rejoice in his service to God? What will be the result upon his conduct in general? Is it right to teach a child that he may ask favors of God? In expecting answers to prayer, as in the healing of the sick, do we presume that God will overturn natural law or simply put in operation higher law? How would you deal with the child who appealed to the Lord for relief from punishment? What effect will it have upon the prayers of a child to teach him of the care of God over all human beings? What kind of faith will best fit a child for his part in life? As an example for his child how should he accept the circumstances of life? While we may need to wait patiently for the development of religious sentiment in the child, should we be neglectful about giving such teaching as he can receive?

Program for June.

Hymn No. 89, Saints' Hymnal; reading from Home Column with discussion; paper, "How may a child be taught to rejoice in the thought that he belongs to God, and also that God belongs to him?" roll-call; business; hymn 132; closing prayer.

Letter Department

SHARON, Tennessee.

Dear Herald: I was baptized into the church October 4, 1906, by Elder J. R. McClain, of Fulton, Kentucky. I was a member of the Christian Church thirty years, and can say I have received more light and enjoyed myself more since I came into the Latter Day Saint Church than I did in all the thirty years I lived a member of the so-called "Christian Church." I know, since I hear the true gospel preached, that I was in darkness all this while and was ignorant of the true gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I was healed since I came into the church of a sore affliction that had troubled me quite awhile. The elders administering to me were led to pray the Lord to remove the cause of that which was making me suffer so much. Well, it was removed and I have felt no such pain since.

At the time I was administered to I used tobacco, chewed, smoked, and dipped snuff, had some in my mouth most all the time. After the administration I never wanted to use any more tobacco. The desire for it had been removed, and so I was healed by the power of God and shall never use any more tobacco. I am satisfied lots of the Saints are suffering from the use of tobacco. I hope some one will read this and profit by the lesson taught in this part of my letter.

I have a husband and eight children. My husband was baptized the same day I was, but none of our children have followed our examples yet, but I hope they will some day. We are now living at Sharon, and doing all we can to help on the great work of the Master.

Bro. S. H. Fields first came here to preach for us and caused quite an interest to spread through the country. Since then A. V. Closson, J. R. McClain, and C. L. Snow have labored here. The interest is still growing. There are many friends to the cause here. Bro. McLain and Snow close their meetings here to-night. The people like to hear them preach, and pay the best of attention.

I would have been glad to attend the General Conference at Independence, but we are too poor, and then I see board and lodging was three dollars and a half per week. So I do not see any chance for me to attend the General Conference soon. I can not see how the Saints can think of charging the Saints board for a few meals and a place to sleep during the conferences. I only wish I lived there and had a house of my own to invite the Saints to stay with me. I feel like I ought to make some sacrifice to help on this great latter-day work. We are renting land and give half of what we make to have a place to shelter us, but we are always glad to divide meat and bread and shelter with any of the Saints free of charge. In the Book of Covenants the Lord tells us how we may know his disciples. He says to the elders, "they will feed you and clothe you and give you money," and it seems to me if we should charge the elders board at any time it would not be feeding them in the way the Lord intended we as his disciples should feed them. We have kept the elders and Saints weeks at a time free of charge, and I do not believe we are any the worse off by it. I believe if the Saints where the General Conference is held would open up their hearts and houses to entertain the Saints free of charge poor Saints would get to attend more than they do, and get the benefit of the conferences, which would be such great help to them. I hope none will take offense at what I say, for I only mean to let the members see where I stand on the above subject.

I love to read the many good letters in the church papers. I shall ever pray the Lord to continue to bless his Saints, and to help us to live pure lives before him, and to learn our duties and to walk in that straight way that leads to eternal life. I ask the prayers of all the Saints that I may continue in this great cause till the end; then I am sure if I do I will be saved in the kingdom of God.

MRS. S. N. MCGREGOR.

FULTON, Kentucky, May 16, 1908.

Editor Herald: On Monday following conference adjournment, accompanied by Elder J. C. Clapp, I returned to Fulton. Elder S. H. Fields bore us company as far as Belleville, Illinois, on his way to his mission-field in Southern Illinois. We found Bro. Clapp to be a very congenial traveling companion, and more like a young man than an old veteran of seventy-odd years. Bro. Clapp has a number of relatives in the Kentucky and Tennessee District, as well as a host of friends, who will be glad to know of his coming. Bro. Clapp introduced the work in this country years ago, and made a lasting impression as an able preacher. We are glad to have him with us, and feel that he will be able to accomplish good in the ministry here.

Upon our arrival home, I found all well, except the baby boy, who was convalescing from a spell of pneumonia, contracted soon after I started to conference, which caused a great deal of anxiety on our part; but through the mercy of God, he was soon on the road to recovery.

After a day's visit in Fulton, Bro. J. M. Turnbow, a cousin to Bro. Clapp, came with his buggy for Bro. Clapp to go home with him, while the writer went to Murray, Kentucky, to visit Bro. C. L. Snow, who has been very low. I found him very much improved, though far from well. He was suffering with smothering spells, caused from water gathering around his lungs. We are informed that he is able to be up now.

Bro. Snow had just received a letter from some parties in Southern Illinois, where he and Bro. Fields held meetings last fall, wanting him to come at once, or send some one to look after a Campbellite preacher that was spoiling for a debate, and was holding meetings at that place, and exposing what he was pleased to call Mormonism. He was challenging the world, and especially the Latter Day Saints, to meet him in debate, and, to use his expression, "he would skin them and tan their hides." We have no members at that place, but a number of good people are investigating. As Bro. Snow could not go, and we did not know how to reach Bro. Sparling or any of the men in his field, we decided the nature of the case demanded immediate attention, and as it was just across the river from Paducah, Kentucky, I decided that I would for once transcend my bounds and cross the line, and meet the champion who was so anxious for our friends to "trot out their man!" Bro. Sparling, we hope you will pardon us for this intrusion, and if you want to pay the work back, we can use you at our reunion beginning July 20. The next day being Sunday, I went over to Oakland church and heard Bro. Clapp preach, and returned to Murray the same evening.

Monday afternoon I went to Paducah, and crossed the river to Brookport where I was met by Mr. Andrew J. Lynn, who carried me over to the place of meeting in his buggy. But the preacher was gone; had closed his meeting the night before, and left the neighborhood. I was not much surprised at the turn of affairs. There was no chance for a debate, as they could not get a man to meet us, but the people were anxious for us to preach, so we held forth over Sunday with good interest. I did not fail to call their attention to the statement of the Savior concerning the "hireling shepherds that would flee away when the wolf came," because "he loves not the sheep." There are some about ready for baptism. It is a good opening, and should be looked after.

I was with the High Hill Saints last Sunday, and will go to Sharon, Tennessee, to-day. I shall try to visit all the branches, just as soon as I can. It is likely that I will be associated in tent work again this year, and I would like to remind the Saints of the fact that we are in need of a new tent. There has been something like seventy-five dollars subscribed, but that is not enough by at least fifty dollars, and if we expect to get the tent in time for the reunion in July, we will have to get a move on us, and it will be necessary for those who have already contributed to give more, as most of the Saints are poor and can not give much. And while I am talking about financial needs, I want to remind the Saints, one and all, do not forget your Bishop's agent. It is his business to look after the poor, as well as elders' families, and this he can not do, unless the means are placed in his hands.

Dear Saints, we are looking forward to the time of the gathering, which we have every reason to believe is not far distant. In fact is now here for those who can do so, and the call will soon be general, according to the revelations, when all must go, if we will escape the destructions that are coming upon the earth. Are we ready? If not, what is lacking? These are pertinent questions to every Latter Day Saint. Who will be gathered? Hear the voice of inspiration: "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice."—Psalm 50:5. Again: "Let all things be prepared before you."—Doctrine and Covenants. I want to urge it upon the Saints this year to file their inventories, and pay their tithing, or at least begin to do so, so that when the time comes for you to gather, you can secure your certificate and be ready. And remember, the Lord requires us to make a sacrifice.

If we refuse to pay our tithes and offerings because it will work a hardship on us, and are not willing to sacrifice, we are not in a condition to be gathered. Do not begin to say, "There is plenty of time; I have some other debts to pay, and then I will pay my tithing." Let me ask, Who is your oldest creditor? Do not you think you ought to pay him at least a part? We might wait too long, it might get too late. Remember the parable of the ten virgins. (Matthew 25). I would like to get the name of every Saint in the Kentucky and Tennessee District on the book as a tithe-payer, if only for five cents, and thus show your willingness to comply with the law; and I do not think there is one too poor to do that much. Take the Lord in as a partner in your business, and see how you will prosper, and then give him his share. Those wishing to contribute to the tent fund can either hand it to C. L. Snow or to the writer, who are the committee, Bro. Closson having resigned. Those wishing to do so may send tithes to me at Fulton, Kentucky, or hand to Bro. Snow, who will receipt you for the same.

Hopefully in the conflict,

J. R. McCLAIN.

TRINIDAD, Colorado, May 16, 1908.

Editors Herald: Leaving General Conference, I stopped ten days at Prowers, Bent County, Colorado, and held meetings in the Enterprise Schoolhouse. Had a good hearing, especially of the young people. There is a live Sunday-school here. The branch is in charge of Priest M. F. Ralston, who is the only one in that part of the country holding the priesthood. Leaving here I called at Rocky Ford, preached once, and then on home.

I had been at home only one day when I got a letter to return to Rocky Ford to solemnize the marriage of Sr. Esther Severin, of Hallowell, Kansas, and Mr. Charles O. Whipple, which was attended to as best we knew how at the home of Bro. Ira Whipple, on the 6th inst. The bride is a staunch Latter Day Saint, and if her husband is not one in the near future it will not be her fault.

After the wedding I preached every night but one for a week at the house of Bro. and Sr. Sanders, to small but attentive congregations. A few who had never attended our meetings before were regular attendants. I think if a public place could be had and regular services held in Rocky Ford a branch could be built up.

Leaving there on the 13th I came to Raton, New Mexico, and back to this place on the 14th. I shall try to get a public place for preaching and see what can be done here. There are quite a few Saints here who are anxious for meetings. What we need in all these towns is a public place and regular meetings.

I do not know how we are going to fill the calls for service this year, with only three missionaries for the great state of Colorado. Maybe our minister in charge can help us figure it out.

In the faith,

E. F. SHUPE.

SHERIDAN, Nevada, March 18, 1908.

Editors Herald: The Saints here are very much scattered, and have scarcely any meetings except in Carson City where a few are held in the course of a year. We expect Bro. E. Penrod on a visit. He lives at Elco, but winters in California, as the climate in Elco is severe in winter. He is an old veteran of the Mexican war. He has been on this coast ever since. He is in his eighty-second year and is hale and stout. He was one of the discoverers of the famous Comstock mine. He was one of the first that united with the church, that is, what was called the Josephites.

The first Latter Day Saints in Nevada were called Brighamites, when Alexander H. Smith and C. W. Anderson came here in 1867, and Bro. Brand and Bro. W. W. Blair in 1868 on a mission to the Pacific Coast. Many united in those days with the church, and several branches were organized, the most of those uniting having come from Utah when the soldiers went there. Many came here in 1868, 1869, and 1870, and settled the vales in Eastern Nevada. In 1866 we first heard of the Reorganized Church when Brn. Smith and Anderson first came. We did not see them then, but our hired man heard them preach in a blacksmith shop near Carson City. Myself and wife were Methodists, but when our hired man explained so much about the Josephite preaching, we began to read our Bibles and found we had no foundation to our faith. But it was a horrible thing to be a Mormon. It was about a year before we could think of being baptized.

Bro. W. W. Blair came the next fall with E. C. Brand, on his first mission to our house, by invitation from us. As soon as they stepped in the house we felt the power of God resting upon us, and a few minutes later as we sat in the room I requested them to pray for us and a change came over us immediately, and then we made arrangements for baptism which took place on the 18th of September, 1868. Some other folks were baptized at the same time. What a change! What an unspeakable joy! What testimony we received of the restored gospel and of the angel message!

The next February a branch was organized called the Mottsville Branch with about twenty-five members, and the writer was chosen to preside. There were some others who had been elders in the old organization and had been baptized into the Utah church. I had to take the lead of the branch and as the Brighamites were on some doubt about the authority of the Reorganized Church under Joseph Smith, I traveled several miles each Sunday and we had a glorious time.

The gifts were manifest in our meetings. I wish to relate one instance. In 1862 there were several families came from Utah. They were called Morrisites at the time that Joseph Morris was killed, but none of them ever united with the church, except one sister, Mary Cook. She was a noble Saint and had the gift of tongues, and some time in the year 1874 a man came from Montana or Idaho with a message or a prophecy, one of Morris revelations, and they sent us word that the man wanted to come to our meeting the next Sunday which was held at a schoolhouse at two in the afternoon. Well, about thirty of the Morrisites, and about the same number of the Josephites came together, so we arranged with them that after our meeting we would give them the liberty to speak if they chose. So they seated themselves on one side of the house and we on the other, and, as it happened, the day was sacrament day, and when the sacrament was over and the meeting open for testimony and prayer and song this Sr. Cook, who had been a Morrisite, but had not long since been baptized into the Reorganized Church, spoke in tongues as she usually did at other times, and the interpretation was given by another one in language so plain, stating the calling of young Joseph to take his father's place, and inviting all the scattered sheep to return to the old path, a fair invitation to those deluded people to come to the true fold. Finally we closed our meeting and gave them a chance to say what they wanted to say, which lasted about an hour. After that meeting they had not much to say, as one of their own number had left and united with the true church and gave them fair warning to return to the old path, to their Father's house. Strange indeed that they claimed a greater light than we did, but by this time they have all passed away to meet the Judge of all the earth.

The church in Nevada is in rather a deplorable condition, situated one or two in a neighborhood and only two or three of us left and we are old, your writer, seventy-seven, a Bro. Bidlar in Carson City seventy-nine, and Bro. Penrod, at Elco, three hundred miles away in the eastern part. We hope the General Conference will appoint some one here the coming summer and revive the work. We are all willing to help as one would move from one neighborhood to the other. Nevada is proving to be a great rich mining state, and thousands are rushing wild to find the gold, and new towns are being built in places that no one ever thought of any gold being found, and hundreds have worked over the ground not thinking of any being there.

We have lived here since fifty-three. Crossed the plains that year. Wife and self are the oldest married couple in Nevada. We have stood for the gospel and the angel message whenever an opportunity offered, in our weak way, and whenever any of the missionaries came they had a welcome home with us. We have many friends outside of the church, and are always treated with respect in the community where we live. The old settlers have died and others have sold out, and the new ones are Germans or Danes or Italians, and it is hard to do any gospel work with them. With the best wishes to all Saints,

Yours in Christ,

D. R. JONES.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, May 2, 1908.

Editors Herald: Our steamer was four days late as she was detained in San Francisco and therefore arrived on April 30 and brought us good news from friends and relatives, but of course not much conference news.

We will have the Sabbath-school books ready probably next week and send them to all who have subscribed for them as we did for many years, and we hope to soon print the Orometua again, although we have not got many subscribers yet, for it takes some time to get word to all the islands and receive word again, and of course we will send not only to subscribers, but will send to them monthly as we did always before, of course. We have a tract ready, prepared by Bro. Lake, which we hope to print soon in the Orometua, and another one by Wiriamu which we hope to print in tract form, and when the Orometua gets under way again the natives will be delighted as well as instructed in the things of the kingdom.

Bro. and Sr. Lake hope to go to the Tuamotus, perhaps next week, and I hope to go to California by the next boat, which leaves here in June, or certainly on the July boat. My successor will have all the work and care of the mission to look after, and I hope the good Lord will direct and bless him in all his work in this mission.

I have passed the three-score-and-ten mile-post and feel that I should be at home in America, for the last twenty-six years have been spent in foreign missions, except a short time spent in the Pacific Coast Mission, and from Nova Scotia to Australia was a long ways formerly, but not so far now, as steamers shorten the time, and in these last days time counts.

Mrs. Burton and Bertie are in their usual health, as is Bro. Lake also, but they are all busy, for untill Monday is mail time, and then comes the bustle of getting ready for a Tuamotu trip, and I suppose we will bid them good-bye till we meet again in California, if the Lord wills. I did not suppose when I left California that I would stay here so long, but it has been so ordered and I am content.

May God bless all Israel and help onward all the efforts made to redeem Zion.

Your brother in Christ,

JOSEPH F. BURTON.

ADAMSON, Oklahoma, May 12, 1908.

Editors Herald: Adamson is a coal-mining town on the M. K. & T. Railroad. The coal here is easy to dig and good money can be made in the mines. Coal pitches thirty degrees and is handled on flat sheets and chute work. It is five feet thick with fair top for such big coal. Union wages are paid to all men under the employment of the company. We are expecting to start work as soon as the scale is ready to sign.

I will favor any Latter Day Saint with the best of my work who will come. I am not short of men, but will place all Latter Day Saints on their arrival, and I can handle one hundred and twenty-five men. Dwelling-houses are scarce. Write before coming. I want to get our branch in better condition. I want the banner of our King to float high in the air here and we are in need of good church workers.

I have learned from experience that Latter Day Saints can do better while living their religion and holding up the banner, make more money, and their hope grows brighter, than when sitting idle. I have learned to strive to hold fast to the rod of iron that leads to eternal life. My promise at the water's edge comes to my mind more and more, when I promised to be a better man, to lay off the old man, sin, and put on the new man, Christ. Upon the right and left there seems to be discouragement, sorrow, and distress. The only hope is to live faithfully. Our Father who has promised help is still with us. In the long ago the sea divided, the blind saw, the lame walked. We are to-day worshiping the same God, the same Redeemer, the same Friend. He should be our King, our all, and he will be if we are faithful. Let us then be doers of his word. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am,

Your brother in gospel bonds,

PETER ADAMSON.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

SOUTH SEA ISLANDS—Conference met Friday, March 6, 1908, at Tarona, Papeete, at 8 a. m., as was appointed on the 20th of October, 1907, at a special conference. J. F. Burton was chosen president of the conference, and C. H. Lake assistant, D. M. Pohemiti secretary, and Tane a Temai assistant secretary; and the following persons were appointed to take care of the house and the grounds of Tarona during conference: B. Richmond, Paia, Hotu, Teu and Maro. After which Elder Tara spoke of his children living with companions unmarried formerly, but now they were married and he was free, and wished to lay this before the conference; elder Mauna spoke of like conditions with him formerly, and that he now also was free.

Report of officers read: High priests, J. F. Burton preached 42 times, baptized 11, ordained 1, married 4 couples, blessed 9 children; C. H. Lake preached 56 times, baptized 8, confirmed 1, ordained 11, married 3 couples, blessed 4 children, and administered to 72 sick persons; Metuaore attended 220 services, preached 17 times, baptized 1, confirmed 2, ordained 1, administered to 40 sick, held three bishop's courts. The quorum of elders met on the third of March and three times since, 28 elders in attendance, 5 new members received, 481 sermons preached, 20 persons baptized, 19 confirmed, 19 ordained, 38 children blessed, 225 administered to, held 8 courts of elders, 47 marriages performed, money and food received $261.40 Chile money.

Conference met again at 1 p. m. Elders reports: Wiriamu preached 50 times, blessed 5 children, baptized 11; Vaiarea preached 30 times, on 4 courts of elders; Teato preached 6 times; Hotu preached 30 times, baptized 4, confirmed 4, blessed 2 children, and 40 persons left the "Pupu" in his district; Tai preached 40 times, confirmed 1; Maevatua preached 6 times; Tarua preached 8 times, baptized 1, on 1 court of elders; Tetai preached 12 times; Tefau preached 15 times; Kehauri preached 7 times, baptized 1, confirmed 1, on 1 court of elders; Tehu preached 32 times, ordained 1, confirmed 1; Taroi preached 4 times, on 1 court of elders; Varoa preached 10 times, baptized 1, confirmed 1; Tapuni Aporo, preached 50 times, 100 other meetings, blessed 6 children. Session adjourned. Tane a Temae preached at 7 p. m.

Met at 8 a. m., on the 7th. A letter was read from Queen Marautaaoroa in which the queen bestowed upon the church a nice bell for the chapel in Makatea, which was received by vote, and J. F. Burton was authorized to answer the letter. Elders reports: Mauritera preached 52 times, blessed 3 children, Tane a Temai preached 38 times, baptized 3, confirmed 3, ordained 9, married 4 couples, blessed 2 children; Tumatau preached once; Rongotonga preached 28 times, blessed 2 children; Teahio preached 12 times; Teuira preached 3 times; Teotahi preached 13 times, baptized 1, on 1 court of elders; Tupakake preached 13 times; Tehani preached 7 times; Rua preached 15 times, ordained 1, confirmed 1, on 1 court of elders; Roo preached 14 times; Temarei, a three years report, preached 80 times, baptized 20, confirmed 30, ordained 28, blessed 30 children. Priests reporting: Haorea, Faarii, Atahi Moerai, Tehautupu, Hiti, Tehania, Teopa, Tanenui; Teachers, Maro; Maave, Taheta, Taputui; Deacons, Hotu, Teata, and Roo a Tevari. At 7 p. m. Pohemiti preached.

Sunday, March 8, Metuaore preached on tithing at 8 a. m.; J. F. Burton preached at 10 a. m., after which the Sunday-school was in session till noon. At 2 p. m., the testimony meeting was led by A. Sanford and Hotu, in which Tanenui's boy was blessed. At 7 p. m., Wiriamu preached.

Monday, March 9, reports read of money received by J. F. Burton, C. H. Lake, E. Burton, and A. Lake. Metuaore reported tithing received and offerings and sister's money $397 Chile; expended $397. Hotu his counselor also reported having received $47 Chile, and expended $47 Chile. Tetai Kehauri were appointed a committee to examine and report to this conference upon the reports of Metuaore and Hotu. Hotu reported having borrowed $25 French money of the Tarona land money. The bishop's court reported having tried the brothers and sisters of the "priesthood company," of whom 33 were cut off from the church. Reports were read from the branches of Apataki, Arutua, Takapoto, Tarona, Tikahau, Makatea, Mahu, Mataura, Tahuia, Manihi, Tiona, Niau, Taenga, Takarua, Hikuuru, Tiputa, Makemo and Hao. Met at 1 p. m. The eight laws of Tarona grounds were then considered and received by vote. Tapuni Aporo stated that he wished to be released from missionary work this year, but afterwards accepted the office of missionary to Tubuai. Elder Tehu wished to be released from missionary work, because of infirmities. Report of the committee appointed to examine the bishops' books reported them correct. Bro. Lake spoke advising the officers of the different branches to pay heed to the law concerning officers of the church who sanctioned their children living with companions unmarried, who should give up their office. Wiriamu preached at 7 p. m. Met March 10, at 8 a. m. A letter was read from Temarei asking brethren C. H. Lake, Wiriamu and Turatahi to visit Hikuuru. Also a letter from Elia, president of the Hao district, asking the leading officers of the mission to attend the dedication of the new chapel in Amanu, on the 25th of August. A resolution was passed requesting the bishop not to lend tithing to any person.

The following missionaries were sustained and appointed: J. F. Burton president of the mission and C. H. Lake his assistant; Wiriamu president of the Fakarava division and Tetaku his assistant; D. M. Pohemiti president of the Tahiti division and Tane a Temai his assistant; Hotu, the first counselor to the bishop to the Fakarava division, and Alfred Sanford, the second counselor, to Tahiti division; Teopaitu, Teruia, Temarei, Vaiarea, Teihoarii, Elia, Tetai, Tai, Tapuni Aporo, Pinga, Putoa, Marere, Reit, Tetooba, Tefau Turatahi, Hiti, Titi; these appointments were all confirmed by vote. Afterwards a letter was read from the president of Tarona Branch asking for the ordination of Pai Haaotua to the office of elder, which request was received and arrangements made for his ordination. D. M. Pohemiti, the secretary of the mission, gave instructions to the presidents and secretaries of the branches concerning keeping the branch records and reporting to the conferences. Bro. Lake advised all the brethren and sisters to keep the laws of Tarona. Metuaore told all the bishop's agents not to spend the tithing and offerings they received for the building of chapels, but after the sick and poor and missionaries are supplied to send the rest to him. C. H. Lake spoke of the printing of the Orometua to be 40 cents French money a year, which was agreed to by a unanimous vote. He also spoke of the Sunday-school lessons in the hands of the printer, which would be about 8 cents French for each book of twelve lessons, and advised the Saints to help the printing work by sending money to him. The following officers were sustained by unanimous vote: The First President and his counselors, the Apostles, the Seventies, the High Priests, the Bishop of the church, E. L. Kelley, and his counselors, and the Patriarchs of the church. The president of this mission and his assistant, Metuaore and his counselors, the quorums of elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, Emma Burton and Alberta Lake, and all the brethren and sisters. And by a unanimous vote the French Republic was sustained. Conference adjourned at 10.30 a. m., to meet in Tarona, Papeete, according to former resolution on April 6, 1909, at 8 a. m. Thus has passed a quiet and peaceful conference over which Bro. Lake presided most of the time. D. M. Pohemiti, secretary. Tane a Temai, assistant secretary.

Translated from their minutes by J. F. Burton.

Following is a copy of the letter sent by the conference to the Queen.

"PAPEETE, March 7, 1908.

"QUEEN MARAUTAAROA:

"Peace be with you, madam.

"Your very kind letter of March 2, was read before the conference yesterday, and caused the brethren much delight and joy; and by a unanimous vote the gift which you so graciously bestowed upon them, was accepted by all freely and fully.

"And we all tender you our very grateful thanks for the bell, and hope it may long remain among us as a token of your great kindness to us in the part of the world in which we now are.

Very respectfully,
"J. F. BURTON, President of the conference."

Pastoral.

To the Minister and Saints of Mission No. 3, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Northern Illinois; Greeting: In this the commencement of the fifth year of our association it is but fitting to address a few lines to you by way of the needs of the hour. The four years' association leads us to look forward with pleasurable anticipation and we indulge the thought that it is mutual.

Economy. Perhaps one of the crying needs of the hour is economy, as the finances are in that condition that it will require the strictest economy on the part of all to alleviate the existing conditions. To this end let the Saints remember that the railroads have ceased the half-fare privileges, and the ministry economize accordingly. To do effectual work it is necessary to "abide" where an interest is found until the work is accomplished. "Moving about" will economize neither in time nor money.

Troubles. In all matters where counsel is required address the assistant minister in charge of the field where you labor. Do not anticipate difficulty; meet it when it comes.

Southern Indiana District. We have a smaller force than last year. Shall we labor the harder to make up the lack? Southern Indiana having but one appointee, it is thought best that Bro. E. J. Goodenough labor in that district also. The president of that district having moved away, it is felt best that the vice-president and secretary, after conferring with relation to the matter, call the next conference.

Assistant ministers. Western and Northern Michigan, J. J. Cornish; Central Michigan, J. A. Grant; Eastern Michigan, William Davis; Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana, S. W. L. Scott; Southern Indiana, D. E. Dowker; Northeastern Illinois, F. M. Cooper; Kewanee, Illinois, O. H. Bailey; Southern Wisconsin, J. O. Dutton; Northern Wisconsin, W. P. Robinson.

Reports. Report directly to me on the first day of July, October, January, and March. The first report should cover four months and the last be an annual report. Better put the dates in your diary and be certain to remember them.

In bonds,

J. W. WIGHT.

The Bishopric.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

Saints and friends of Southern Indiana District, please take notice that upon the removal of former agent, Bro. J. J. Boswell, from the district, the Bishopric of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has duly appointed Elder John Zahnd, of New Albany, Indiana, as Bishop's agent in and for the said district, to act in behalf of the Bishopric of said church in and for said district.

The Bishopric extends to Bro. Boswell especial thanks for his faithful and earnest work in the office of agent the past few years, and trusts the Lord will bless and direct him in his labors in his new home.

Also earnestly solicit a united effort on the part of the Saints and friends of the Southern Indiana District in behalf of the work of our blessed Lord and the promulgation of his truth, and that each may feel the necessity of performing his or her part therein and making due effort to assist the agent and thereby the church in its work. In behalf of the Bishopric.

Very respectfully,

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, May 14, 1908.

Meeting of the Board of Publication.

The Board met at Lamoni, Iowa, May 6, at 3 p. m., with the following present: Bishop E. L. Kelley, Business Manager F. B. Blair, H. R. Mills, Oscar Anderson, and Secretary J. A. Gunsolley; absent T. A. Hougas.

The new Board organized by choosing Bishop Kelley president; F. B. Blair business manager and treasurer; J. A. Gunsolley secretary; H. R. Mills and Bishop Kelley executive committee for the Ensign Publishing House; and F. B. Blair,

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same. All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

Oscar Anderson, and Bishop Kelley executive committee for the Herald Publishing House.

Editors were appointed for the various periodicals as follows: Joseph Smith, editor, and Elbert A. Smith, associate editor of the SAINTS' HERALD; W. H. Garrett, editor of Zion's Ensign; Elbert A. Smith, editor of the Autumn Leaves; Mrs. M. Walker, editor, and Estella Wight, assistant editor of Zion's Hope; Heman C. Smith, D. F. Lambert, and Fred'k M. Smith, editorial staff for the Journal of History. Superintendents of the various departments were also appointed.

A petition for a special department in the HERALD was considered, having been referred to the Board by action of General Conference. The action of the Board thereon is as follows:

Reply by Board: The Herald Publishing House Board to which the General Conference referred resolutions which were presented to the body asking for space to be set apart each week in HERALD for the discussing of social and economic questions report:

"1. That no restrictions or limitations have at any time been imposed by the Board that would exclude articles of any class appropriate to a religious periodical, and presenting any phase of the doctrine of Christ.

"2. That, necessarily for the protection of the church paper, and the rights of the church, articles submitted for publication must be passed upon according to the merits of each, and while infallible judgment is attributed to no one, yet the supervising editor of the HERALD occupies the position of chief adviser and director of the work, and measures, that best subserve the good of the entire body, and his judgment should and must be accepted as the wiser and more correct position as to the fitness of any article presented for publication in the HERALD, until appeal is made to the Board of Publication and this board as a body shall have passed upon the matter or submitted the same to the chief quorums of the church for decision. As yet the board has had no such complaints lodged with it. In the church as in the state, the presumption is that the wisdom of the council, or the majority, is a safer guide than that of the individual, and not to respect the procedure outlined in the law for the correction of abuses, or evils, brings anarchy and confusion to the body instead of good.

"3. The board is not averse to the consideration under wise supervision of any or all questions pertaining to the body of Christ, the church, but it would not expect that the divine law, plans, or procedure, to be followed in the work of Christ, could in any way be supplemented, directed, or interpreted by the views, or spirit of the socialistic theories of the world, or that it is wise, or material to the good of the church, that the church organ shall take up and discuss the special views or principles of any of the political parties of the times, and thus become one of the secular journals of the day."

Very respectfully submitted,

By the Board,

E. L. KELLEY, President.

J. A. GUNSOLLEY, Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 7, 1908.

Corrections.

In our issue of May 20, in pastoral of Bro. U. W. Greene, we wish to make the following corrections: In the fourth paragraph beginning with the word Chatham, it should read as follows: "Chatham District in charge of G. M. Shippy with Bro. B. St. John to assist," instead of as published. The last paragraph should read: "That part of the Kirtland and Pittsburg Districts in Pennsylvania will be under the supervision of Bro. G. T. Griffiths."

Conference Notices.

The Eastern Michigan District will convene at Applegate, Michigan, June 6, 1908. We wish for a full report from the ministry, and are mailing blanks this week. Mail them to President G. M. Shippy, 2054 Tenth Street, Port Huron, Michigan, not later than June 1. Secretaries of branches will send branch reports to my address at Applegate, Michigan. F. O. Benedict, secretary.

The Mobile, Alabama, District will convene with the Three Rivers Branch, July 11, 1908, 10 a. m. W. L. Booker, vice-president.

Those expecting to attend the coming district conference at Mission Branch, Illinois, will be met at Seneca on the Rock Island or Sheridan on the C. B. & Q. road up to Saturday noon. Please notify Bro. Thomas Hougas, Marseilles, Route No. 58, or W. E. Williamson, Marseilles, Route No. 57, what town and time you are coming in order that necessary arrangements can be made. W. E. Williamson, district secretary.

Convention Notices.

Zion's Religio Society will meet in convention at Rich Hill, Missouri, June 5. Officers are elected for the coming year and we want as many delegates as possible. Dora Lowe, secretary.

The Eastern Michigan District Conventions of Zion's Religio-Literary Society and Sunday-school Association will be held at Applegate, Michigan, June 5, 1908. Time principally devoted to institute work. Trains run directly to Applegate. Emma H. Whitford, secretary.

The Minnesota District Sunday-school convention will convene at Clitherall, Minnesota, June 19, 1908. Hallie M. Gould, secretary.

Northern Michigan District Religio Society will convene at East Jordan, Charlevoix County, Michigan, on Friday, June 26. Social service in the morning. Charles Burtch, secretary.

Notices.

To Western Michigan Saints: Bro. H. A. Doty has been appointed by the Herald Publishing House to represent the publishing department at the Western Michigan Conference. He will have a supply of books aond be prepared to receipt you for your subscriptions.

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK LAMONI, IOWA

Are You Interested In Independence?

Then you should have one of those pictorial books with historical sketch of Independence.

A book made by the genuine Carbon Photo process (not Engravings), contains twenty pages of views and two pages descriptive. Price 50c each.

One 5x7 view would cost you at least 25c, but this booklet all complete for 50c, the universal price for 20 pages for this grade of work, or only 2 1/2c a page.

The Independence Examiner says . . . It is a beautiful souvenir executed in a most artistic manner and should be in every library in Independence.

EVAN V. DAVIS, Photographer, Lock Box 35, Independence, Missouri.

"HEAVEN AND HELL" BY SWEDENBORG 400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps PASTOR LANDENBERGER, Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

THE INSTRUCTOR

- No. 126, cloth $.75 No. 127, leather 1.00 No. 128, leather, flexible 1.50

THESE BOOKS ARE NOW READY.

Round Trip Homeseekers' Rates

June 2 and 16

- $23.40 to Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo. Proportionately as low rates to other points in Eastern Colorado. $55.20 to Spokane and other points in Eastern Washington. $38.40 to Salt Lake and Ogden and other points in Utah. $38.40 to Billings, Montana, the metropolis of the rich Yellowstone Valley. $38.40 to Butte, Helena and other points in Montana. $36.70 to Cody, Basin, Worland and other points in the famous Big Horn Basin.

Similar low rates to hundreds of other points west and northwest. If you have never seen the rich irrigated farming districts of Montana and Wyoming you should join one of our personally conducted excursions the first and third Tuesdays of each month to the Yellowstone Valley and the Big Horn Basin.

Let me give you further information and folders.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent, C., B. & Q. R. R. Lamoni, Iowa.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice, Mite, and Rain Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

Atonement of Christ and Final Destiny of Man Revised and Enlarged No. 17-10 cents each.

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY No. 108-Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20. No. 110-Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75. No. 111-Cloth and Leather, each 50c. No. 114-Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

Spanish Tracts

- No. 350 Epítome De La Fe, per doz.. 10c No. 351 Restauración, per doz. 10c

INSTRUCTIVE

INTERESTING

"Correct English-- How to use it."

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO THE
USE OF ENGLISH.
JOSEPHINE TURCK BAKER, Editor.

PARTIAL CONTENTS:

Queries and Answers.
The Art of Conversation.
Shall and Will: Should and Would: How to Use Them.
Pronunciations (Century Dictionary).
Correct English in the Home.
Correct English in the School.
What to Say and What Not to Say.
Course in Grammar.
Course in Letter-writing and Punctuation.
Business English for the Business Man.
Compound Words: How to Write Them.
Studies in English Literature.

AGENTS WANTED.

$1.00 a Year. Send 10c for Sample Copy
Department E.

CORRECT ENGLISH, Evanston,
Illinois.
20-3t

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid ..$30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church. 1tf

The Jackson County Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

ELLIS SHORT, President.	M. H. BOND, Vice-president.
WM. CRICK, Vice-president.	J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.
G. H. HILLIARD.	DR. J. MATHER.
MRS. O. H. RIGGS.	A. L. YINGLING.
HORACE SHELEY.

Very truly yours,
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

Best Trips for Your Vacation Colorado $23⁴⁰ Round Trip

Colorado has a more invigorating and enjoyable summer climate and a greater variety of opportunity for outdoor recreation and sport than any other state in America. Good board may be had from $6 a week, up.

Pacific Coast $63³⁰ Round Trip

Includes more unique scenic attractions and points of interest than any other trip—the Rockies and Sierras—the Spanish Mission and Big Trees—the Pacific Ocean and Puget Sound, Yellowstone and Yosemite as convenient side trips. $15 extra for Grand Tour including all Coast cities from Vancouver to Los Angeles.

Above rates are daily from June 1. I will give you illustrated folders describing routes, points of interest, list of hotels and boarding-houses with rates for board and quote you rates from your home town. See me to-day.

Burlington Route

L. F. Siltz, Agent,
C., B. & Q. R. R.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, JUNE 3, 1908

NUMBER 23

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
ISRAEL A. SMITH, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

The Radical, the Conservative, and the People	-	529
The Anti-Saloon League	- - - - -	531
A Church Directory	- - - - -	532
Lamoni Items	- - - - -	532
Notes and Comments	- - - - -	532

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

The Study of Good Books	- - - - -	533
Tobacco, Liquor, and the "Word of Wisdom."—Part II	- - - - -	535
Concerning Zion's Religio Society	- - - - -	538
Leaves from Life	- - - - -	539
Heart, Head, and Hand Philosophy	- - - - -	540
The Church Homes	- - - - -	540

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:

We Thank Thee, Lord Jesus	- - - - -	541
Responsibility of Life	- - - - -	542
Request for Prayer	- - - - -	542

LETTER DEPARTMENT:

A Dream	- - - - -	542
Letters	- - - - -	543
Extracts from Letters	- - - - -	547

NEWS FROM BRANCHES

	- - - - -	547
--	-----------	-----

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:

Conference Minutes:
Alabama	- - - - -	547
Manchester	- - - - -	547
Pastoral	- - - - -	548
Bishop's Agents' Notices	- - - - -	548

We are sorry to note that Lamoni took no official notice of Decoration Day. Individually there were many who decorated the graves of departed friends, but so far as the town was concerned the day was as other days.

Bro. Alma Booker, Lock Box 18, New York, desires to hear from any of the Saints in Western New York who think openings can be made where they reside.

With much we surfeit; plenty makes us poor.—Drayton.

Editorial

THE RADICAL, THE CONSERVATIVE, AND THE PEOPLE.

In almost every organization, whether of church or state, there are found two classes of people: those who are extremely radical and those who are extremely conservative. Naturally these two classes look at almost every question from different standpoints. Neither has any vast amount of charity for the other. Each is prone to regard the other as a serious menace to the public welfare.

"You are a crank, a fanatic, an anarchist. You destroy confidence and undermine society," declares the conservative. The radical replies, "You are a chump, a back number, an enemy to progress, a brother to the czar."

Perhaps either free to carry out his own policies without hindrance or modification would be a menace to society; but the two confronting each other counteract each other to an extent and often force the adoption of measures that lie between the two extremes.

We may as well avoid argument by admitting on the start that those who are regarded as being extremely radical are sometimes exactly in the right and well within the bounds of truth; while at other times those who are considered extremely conservative have established themselves on the truth. But in many instances, perhaps in the majority, they occupy, as before stated, two extremes, and arrive at the truth only by compromise.

The word compromise is distasteful to those who are of a very positive nature and loth to admit that they may be in error in any detail of their convictions. But we are not talking of a compromise between truth and error, between right and wrong, by which an individual gives up a true principle and accepts a false one in the interests of peace. We are talking about a compromise between two men or two factions who agree (or are compelled by force of circumstances) to abandon false positions and unite on a basis of truths that were originally common to both or were somewhere between the two or were only partially accepted by one or both.

Truth is frequently arrived at by compromise. The Constitution of the United States was a compromise. God commended it. In the convention that met to draft the Constitution there were delegates who wished to make each State almost an independent republic; they were opposed by those who desire a strong centralization of power, with the president an uncrowned king. There were other important questions before the convention and on each of them these two classes of temperament clashed. At times the disagreement seemed hopeless of remedy. The entire summer was taken up in debate. The document as finally adopted embodied ideas that were between the two extremes.

It may be argued that truth is itself an extreme,—the farthest removed from error. Not when it lies between two errors, as is frequently the case, if not the rule. The Shakers forbid marriage, that is an error; would the truth then be found at the opposite extreme, among the Utah people? No. The truth lies between these two. Napoleon considered five hours each day sufficient sleep for any man. He was wrong. Would truth then be found as far as possible from this error, and man should sleep, say fifteen hours each day? The Quakers are a restrained and melancholy people, drab of color and solemn of countenance; the "four hundred" have the opposite extreme, gaudy colors and incessant laughter and chatter. According to God's definition correct deportment is somewhere between these extremes,—to be joyous in the warfare yet to avoid loud and excessive laughter.

There is more than a degree of truth in the statement made by one philosopher that "the reverse of error is not truth, but error still. Truth lies between these extremes."

So long as society is composed of so many differing minds, and so long as the net gathers of every kind of fish, the conservative has a certain function to perform. It is his work, because of his peculiar turn of mind, to conserve, protect, and perpetuate the customs, institutions, and traditions of the past. He is concerned in preserving all that is good that has been handed down by the fathers. Yet the conservative should remember that his class has also clung to the errors and evils of the past. There is some ground for the charge made by one cynic that "the conservative is a man who will not look at the new moon, out of respect for that 'ancient institution,' the old one."

The radical also has his duty. Every idol that has fallen has been shattered by the hammer of an iconoclast. Every advance movement has been forced because of the stand taken by some one who has been considered a radical thinker. Yet he should remember that men of his class have led in countless hairbrained, ridiculous, and disastrous adventures.

In fact the common people may well listen to both of these men; but they should follow neither blindly or implicitly. They should not be carried away by the brilliant oratory of one; or halt their investigations because of the dogmatic assertions of the other. That an enlightened people are capable of doing this was the opinion of the good King Mosiah, who said, "It is not common that the voice of the people desireth anything that is contrary to that which is right; but it is common for the lesser part of the people to desire that which is not right."—Mosiah 13:4.

Mosiah entertained a courageous, wholesome, stimulating belief in the ability of the people to determine between right and wrong when once they set their minds to the task. If his view was correct it is worth while to be "just one of the people,"—one of those who look before they leap, who are sure they are right before they go ahead, who are not commonly found in the wrong.

Mosiah is careful in his statement. He does not say that the majority of the people are never wrong; he says it is not common for them to be wrong. This leaves a little grain of comfort for one who is of the minority: he may be right after all. But, remembering which is the exception and which the rule, when one finds himself out of harmony with the voice of the people, he will do well to consider the situation long and seriously before deciding irrevocably that he is right and everybody else wrong.

We are inclined to accept Mosiah's statement as the truth because God has arranged it so that his church (as an organization) must stand or fall by the voice of the people. That is quite in harmony with all his dealing with men; he has ever sought a people who would accept and obey his laws because they wished to and not because they had to. Moreover, when we read Mosiah's words we recollect that we are living in a dispensation wherein the promise is still good, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." The Spirit is still given to guide into all truth.

Man is ever beset with the temptation to be intemperate in one way or another. Ministers and members of the church are by no means exempt. The temptation to be impressive or sensational, to flourish the torch, climb the heights, storm the battlements, rout the minions of error, usher in the new era, and all that sort of thing, may lead one to take extreme positions and to use extreme methods in defending them, thereby in the end defeating himself. Or a different sort of temperament may be tempted to take its stand behind the existing order of things, regarding them as invulnerable, God given, and the incarnation of perfection, thereby failing to see good when it cometh.

The statement regarding the servant of Christ is that he shall be "temperate in all things whatsoever shall be intrusted to his care." This is unequivocal and without reservation, and does not pertain to food and drink alone.

To obtain the Messiah's commandment and be a "wise servant," temperate and prudent, yet alert and active, is a task to challenge the unceasing attention of any man. The man who succeeds in that task may not be at all spectacular in any way but he will be one of the safeguards of Zion, one of the number who are not commonly in the wrong.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

[Editors' Note.—Sunday, May 24, Mr. W. Z. Allen, field secretary of the Iowa Anti-saloon League, addressed the people of Lamoni at a meeting presided over by the mayor of the town and the president of the Lamoni Stake. At that time we invited Mr. Allen to prepare a brief statement of the aims and work of the League for the information of the HERALD readers. His response follows.]

Editors Herald: In response to your request that a brief resume of the work of the Anti-saloon League be presented to your readers we wish to assure you of our appreciation of the opportunity and to congratulate you upon the strong temperance sentiment represented by your constituency.

The Anti-saloon League is now fifteen years old and it has become one of the strongest and most effective organizations in our country. Its singleness of aim and simplicity of organization contribute to its effectiveness. Leagueing, as it does, the churches together in their opposition to the liquor traffic it mobilizes them as an army in this great effort, and the officers being chosen by the representatives of the churches and responsible to them, act as the agents of the Christian churches as a whole and so wield a tremendous social and political influence on this subject in the State and Nation. Of the National Congress it is said, "They fear the organized temperance people of the country led on by the National Anti-saloon League. They know enough of the organization to know that if it went out to make a fight against members of the House of Representatives on the temperance question it would do damage and plenty of it."

In many cases this organization through the churches which it represents has changed the political situation because of this issue and has compelled reluctant politicians to consider the voice of the temperance people. The aim of the league is well expressed in the Wine and Spirit News which says,

"A word or two about the Anti-saloon League. It is one of the most powerfully organized movements which ever swept this country since the days when the anti-slavery movement was started. They have an organization in every State in the Union and practically in every county and township in the Union. Their method of operation is first the enforcement to the letter all existing excise laws in the statute books in regard to the liquor traffic. Their next move is toward township local option, from township local option to so-called county option, but which in reality is county prohibition and should be so designated. County prohibition they use as one of their most efficient weapons because by it they get the vote of the rural communities. This is only in reality used as a stepping-stone for their fight for State prohibition wherever a county prohibition law is put in effect. They do not disguise the fact that from county and state prohibition they are going to aim for national prohibition. They are also going to make a fight to place the city of Washington, District of Columbia, the capital of our country, in the prohibition column."

The league for one thing has put the liquor traffic on the defensive and they are now fighting under their true colors and have to plead their reasons or excuses for existence. Three States in the South have gone prohibition and all the other Southern States are about to outlaw the traffic. The Pittsburg Liquor Journal says, "It is the Anti-saloon League which is chiefly responsible for the big conquests which liquor exclusion has been making in recent times. The league has no politics. All parties look alike to the Anti-saloon League."

The league has also rallied the temperance sentiment as no other organization has been able to do. Its methods of gaining ground foot by foot and waging a progressive warfare appeals to men of affairs as well as to the moral element of the churches.

Nearly half the population of the United States is living in dry territory and one half the area has no saloon. The result of prohibition in the saloonless territory is the reduction of taxation, the decrease in criminality, and an increase in the prosperity of the people. The banks of the prohibitory territory report large increases in the deposits of the savings banks and commercial men report larger sales of the necessities of life and of a superior quality. In the state of Maine alone under constitutional prohibition over one third the population, including women and children, have bank deposits, and more people own their own homes in this State in proportion to the population than in any of the other States of the Union. There has been a great reduction in numbers of paupers in the dry States and eighty counties out of one hundred and five in Kansas have no paupers in their almshouses. The dry States of the South report a higher moral tone of life in their communities, a decrease in criminality, and greater industriousness on the part of both the white and the black.

In the seventy-three counties out of ninety-nine in Iowa the mulct petition of consent legalizing the saloon does not exist, but in thirteen of these dry counties out of the seventy-three are located large cities which have a local charter and a local petition of consent. So that we have sixty counties from which the legalized saloon has been expelled. These counties report a decrease in taxation, with less bonded indebtedness than in the wet counties, and the spiritual life of the churches is much higher where the saloon has been expelled. It is noticeable in Iowa that the mulct and semi-mulct counties are having much difficulty in enforcing the law, while in the dry counties in the majority of cases the people insist on the strict enforcement of the prohibitory law, and the sentiment is such that such conditions are maintained. The pauperism of our State finds its origin in the larger measure in the wet counties and the increase in criminality is directly traceable to the counties in which the mulct saloon operates. One mulct county alone in Iowa in 1906 furnished over fifteen per cent of the criminals. Inebriates in our inebriate asylum, with the exception of seven per cent, all are residents of the wet counties. So that the dry territory in the state of Iowa can be said to be in the more prosperous condition; and if the prohibitory amendment is resubmitted to the people of Iowa at a special election the dry territory will doubtless be the factor in a great victory for state-wide prohibition.

W. Z. ALLEN.

A CHURCH DIRECTORY.

An effort is being made by the management of the publication department to secure a directory of the heads of families of the church with their post-office addresses. The object is to get the church literature into the homes of all the Saints, by sending sample copies of the periodicals, and catalogues and advertising of the books. We feel confident that much good can be done in this way. If church members who have become careless and indifferent can be reclaimed and made to appreciate their duty through the printed word our efforts will not be in vain. In the past our efforts have been directed towards those outside the fold, but we now intend to expend at least a part of our effort on those within.

A letter has been addressed to the president of each district asking for the names of the branches, their president's name and address. Upon receiving this information a letter is sent to the president of each branch asking for the names of the heads of families who are members of his branch. These lists when received will be carefully filed away for reference. Our subscription lists will show whether they are subscribers to the HERALD, Ensign, and Leaves, and sample copies will be sent occasionally to those who are not subscribers. We want the names of all heads of families whether they are subscribers for the papers or not, and if the branch officers will furnish us this information we will do the rest. Now, brethren, do you not think that the good to be accomplished will justify you in doing the work? DO IT NOW. Let us be "laborers together" and success is certain.

F. B. BLAIR, Manager.

LAMONI ITEMS.

The Decatur County Historical Society will hold its semi-annual meeting in the upper auditorium of the Brick Church, Thursday of this week. There will be a session at half past nine in the morning and one at half past two in the afternoon. Mayor R. M. Elvin will deliver the address of welcome at the forenoon meeting; response by Judge J. W. Harvey, president of the society. G. P. Arnold will read a paper on "Garden Grove after the first colony"; John E. Vail will read a paper on the "Nomenclature of streams." Miss Wellemeyer and Miss Bond will furnish vocal and instrumental music. At the afternoon session papers will be read dealing with the early medical practitioners and the early lawyers of Decatur County.

College graduation exercises begin Thursday evening, June 4, with the graduating recital of the school of oratory. The recital of the school of music will occur Friday evening. The annual banquet will be given at five o'clock Saturday; and at eight o'clock Honorable V. R. McGinnis will deliver an address at the College chapel. Sunday will be baccalaureate day, with sermon at the Brick Church. Monday and Tuesday evenings, the Athenian Literary Society will present a play at the College chapel, under the direction of Miss McElrath of the school of oratory. Tuesday afternoon, President and Mrs. Stewart will receive the students, faculty, and Board of Trustees, at the College. Wednesday, commencement exercises will be held in the Brick Church. Doctor Merton S. Rice will deliver the commencement address.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Nauvoo Rustler reports a series of meetings in the city hall at that place Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday evenings, May 28 to 31; with Presidents Joseph and F. M. Smith and Elder Heman C. Smith as speakers.

Here is a news item that may be interesting. This is the smallest number of supporters for each saloon that we remember to have seen. At one time Quincy had one saloon for each two hundred and fifty of population, the same year Chicago had one saloon for each two hundred and seventy to three hundred. It is an object-lesson worth thinking about: "Benbow City, Illinois, a town which has grown up around the Standard Oil Company's new refinery, eight miles south of Alton, is the wettest town in Illinois, and because it is the wettest it is also proportionately the richest. It began its corporate existence as a village last Monday with eighteen registered voters and twenty-three saloons. Within the corporate limits of Benbow City there are three hundred persons and one saloon for each thirteen inhabitants. In addition to the twenty-three saloons there are seven brewery agencies, and each saloon and agency pays three hundred dollars a year license. Payments for the coming year have already been made and the little village starts out with a fifteen thousand dollar nest-egg."

Elder John Zahnd was present at the State convention of the Prohibition Party in Indiana, and on his motion the following plank was added to the party platform as it came from the hands of the committee on resolutions: "We demand the enactment of national legislation which will for ever destroy the crime of polygamy in America. In his speech in support of the resolution he took occasion to explain our position on the marriage question to the five thousand delegates who were present.

Original Articles

THE STUDY OF GOOD BOOKS.

One has said, "Show me the books that a man reads, and I will show you the man"—which, if given an extreme, literal interpretation, one would imply that the man who reads nothing is no man at all, which, indeed, in a comparative sense, is true.

The man who does not read may require as much cloth to make him a suit of clothes, and as much food to satisfy the demands of his stomach, as the man who reads—perhaps more. Yet, in the broader sense, the real manhood, as weighed in the intellectual scale, must of necessity fall to an inferior plane. Broad shoulders, firm muscles, and a splendid physique generally are much to be admired; yet avoirdupois alone is not the final standard by which to judge humanity.

It is said of the renowned Doctor Watts that, in his early life, the fair object of his affections, because of his diminutive proportions, ceased to regard his wooing with favor, and finally gave her hand in marriage to one more generously endowed in physical construction. As a sort of mental exhaust, he composed the following lines:

"Though I could reach from pole to pole,
And grasp creation in my span,
This were no index of the soul—
The mind's the measure of the man."

While the culture of the physical partakes of the grand, reaching even to the sublime, yet the development of the mind and soul transcends beyond computation in point of importance all other considerations. For, after all, how many know or how many care that Paul the Hebrew and Socrates the Greek were small of stature and inferior in personal appearance? or that Washington and Gladstone were of the opposite type?

The homage of the world relating to those illustrious and noble personages is based wholly upon the lasting impress left upon humanity by the ponderous achievements of their minds.

These are but four of the great men; and perhaps neither of them could be called the greatest of earth. Though possessed of remarkable individuality and mental acumen, their greatness was not wholly resident within them, nor was it created by them. It was largely accumulated—gathered from exterior sources, "here a little and there a little," as the embryo mind expanded and absorbed.

I think it was Emerson who voiced the truism that we become a part of whatever we come in contact with. And thus we grow.

It is a quite well-understood principle that everything, created or otherwise, has its influence—that is to say—there is an eternal influx or flowing into the great laboratory of the universe from each and every integral part of it, ranging from the highest to the most insignificant.

Even the persevering act of a little spider once inspired renewed hope and courage in a Bruce who victoriously won Scotland to his allegiance. The tenderness of a tiny violet by the mossy bank of a brooklet, changed the purpose of an otherwise murderer, and prevented the entailment of suffering and crime.

If it be a fact that such trivial things minister so signally to the shaping of the destiny of men and nations, how much more intensified is the thought and important the principle when applied in relation to the influence of books! For to them the reader yields himself so unreservedly; and by them is he led out of the narrow confines of his own limited experience into the broad expanse of hitherto unexplored regions.

Through books the embryo intellect becomes quickened and enlarged. Literature is a door for the unfettered soul, through which it passes on its eager journey of quest and accumulation to the utmost bounds of the material universe.

The child is awakened to an ever new world by books.

The youth, embarked upon the sea of life's mystery, is either guided from port to port of happiness and peace or caused to be stranded upon the rocks and shoals of doubt and ruin by books.

Books are the thoughts and sentiments of other's minds, gleaned and formulated, and are (according to their character) as capable of accomplishing evil as others are fraught with power to promote the good. Hence the necessity of discrimination.

A sick man who enjoyed the well-earned reputation of being a worthy man as the world goes, was called upon by a friend who, in his conversation, inquired as to his attitude toward religion, and what he professed to be along that line. With a contented smile he replied:

"Amo de cosmos [a friend of the world] and that," continued he, pointing to a handsomely bound volume of Shakespeare, "is my bible."

"And why choose Shakespeare as your Bible?" asked his friend.

"Because," he replied, "Shakespeare knew the world better than any man that I know of, and has said it all."

"Then your religious sentiments are confined to this world alone?"

"Yes, for the present, this world alone—one world at a time. I am doing my best for the general good of this life as I understand it. If I am destined to live another, I hope to do no worse in that one."

We as members of the body of Christ seek to maintain a standard which embraces all that is comprehended in all that, and vastly more. Our range of reading would circumvent all that is known of this world, and contemplates many worlds beyond. And we hail as authors those who know both the human and the divine—both this world and the world to come.

The Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants are referred to generally as the standard books of the church, and the authority in all phases of Christian ethics. But the man who tenaciously confines his reading to these books, and these alone, falls into error, and violates the teaching of the books he reads; and his reading, to that extent, is worse than to no profit, and is akin to vain repetition—a species of idolatry scathingly denounced by the Author of light. The injunction and also the command in those books require an extensive and comprehensive range of study outside of themselves. In one place we find the following expressive language:

And I give unto you a commandment that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand; of things both in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; things which have been; things which are; things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home; things which are abroad; the wars and the perplexities of nations; and the judgments which are in the land; and a knowledge also of countries, and of kingdoms, that you may be prepared in all things when I shall send you again, to magnify the calling whereunto I have called you.

All this, beside the realm of religion and ethics, embraces the vast field of history, geography, philosophy, political economy, and journalism. True, it does not command to read all this; but to teach it. Yet it were folly to command the illiterate and un-informed to teach what they did not know.

Elsewhere the matter is made plain and clear by the injunction to "seek out of the best books words of wisdom," etc.

These quotations from the standard works prove beyond question that an informed ministry is in the mind of the Almighty, that we might have an informed laity. The word informed is used advisedly, rather than the word educated, because of a sometime erroneous construction placed upon the latter term, for reasons that are obvious.

Illiteracy is unpardonable in this age of advanced schools and free libraries. And he who will not ride upon the crest of the wave must sink into social oblivion as the penalty.

The responsibility of preaching the gospel to "every creature," to "all nations," is now resting upon the church. And the world that reads can be more effectually moved and influenced by a body of men and women that read than by those who do not, both being equally commissioned with a divine message, the importance of which contemplates the salvation of the race. As it is necessary to approach the inhabitants of foreign countries in their native tongue, so it is essential to be equipped with the accepted vernacular of the informed to be effective.

Infinite wisdom enjoins the church to first study the standard books of the church, they being, of course, the best exponents of truth in existence so far as they go. One of the reasons for this injunction is quite obvious,—that the reader might be more thoroughly equipped and prepared for the duties of discrimination. Having at his command the touchstone of truth to which criterion all books should be brought for final arbitrament.

One of the effectual methods of imparting knowledge of "what is" and of "what has been," adopted largely by the present age, is the medium or channel of fiction and romance.

This channel, like most everything, has been rendered seriously defective in the dissemination of unsullied truth by a wanton prostitution of its virtues. Nevertheless, it still has its place in the world, and demands recognition, as we find it in certain forms even in Holy Writ. The parables of our Savior and perhaps the whole book of Job are upon the plane of fiction; but who can estimate the value of the beautiful truths thus portrayed? Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress was a romance; but the wholesome effect upon the minds of men requires no comment.

For a glimpse of the true inwardness of systematic tomfoolery and first-class humbuggery relating to the English court of chancery, read Dickens' Bleakhouse.

Should you desire to know concerning the depravity of high life and the rottenness of political putrefaction in England, read the story of Ernest Mellrave. Or should you care to enter into the knowledge of things that are, as pertaining to the depth of greed, graft, and official corruption in the United States, read Thomas Lawson's "Frenzied finance," in Everybody's Magazine. And so we might go on and enumerate a hundred and one of the necessary things that might be gathered through the channel of fiction—still, in the lines of fiction there is a danger.

The object of establishing a library in the church is to supply the members with an approved and selected line of reading, upon all the lines necessary for the general improvement and development of the mind.

The extent or degree attained is still of a problematic nature. Yet a consciousness of success in the minds of those most interested is an incentive to further effort.

The later feature of activity toward the end designed, is the amalgamation of each of the libraries of the different societies of the church into one library, that is to say, the whole library scheme or movement will be under one management, thus providing for a concentration of energy and effort.

The main object, first, last, and all the time is the cultivation of that within us which is capable of expansion, even to the comprehension and appreciation of the best, highest, and most wonderful of the thoughts, designs, and works of the omnipotent Creator of the universe.

H. J. DAVISON.

• * * * •

TOBACCO, LIQUOR, AND "THE WORD OF WISDOM."— PART II.

Doctor Kellogg tells us that "the proportion of nicotine in tobacco varies from two to eight per cent. Kentucky and Virginia tobacco usually contain six or seven per cent. A pound of tobacco contains on an average three hundred and eighty grains of this deadly poison, of which one tenth of a grain will kill a dog in ten minutes. A case is on record in which a man was killed in thirty seconds by this deadly poison. The poison contained in a single pound of tobacco is sufficient to kill three hundred men, if taken in such a way as to secure its full effect. A single cigar contains enough poison to extinguish two human lives, if taken at once."

It is in harmony with common sense that the endless amount of nicotine continually taken into the system through smoking and chewing will have a serious effect upon generations yet unborn, and

Doctor Kellogg speaks as follows upon hereditary effects:

There is no vice or habit to which men are addicted whose results are more certainly transmitted to posterity than those of tobacco-using. A vigorous man may use tobacco all his life and be able to convince himself all the time that he is receiving no injury; but the children of that man, who ought to inherit from him a vigorous constitution and high health, are instead robbed of their rightful patrimony, and enter upon life with a weakly vital organism, with a system predisposed to disease, and destined to premature decay. The sons of an inveterate tobacco-user are not as robust as their father; and the grandchildren, in case the children are tobacco-users, are certain to be nervous, weakly, sickly creatures. This fact we have verified in so large a number of cases that we make the statement fully prepared to maintain it by indisputable facts.

Doctor Pidduck, an English physician of experience, speaks as follows from his observations on the effects of tobacco at the dispensary of St. Giles:

If the evil ended with the individual who, by the indulgence of a pernicious custom, injures his own health, and impairs his own faculties of mind and body, he might be left to his enjoyment, his fool's paradise unmolested. This, however, is not the case. In no instance is the sin of the father more strikingly visited upon the children than that of tobacco-smoking. The enervation, the hypochondriasis, the hysteria, the insanity, the dwarfish deformities, the consumption, the suffering of lives and early death of the children of inveterate smokers, bear ample testimony to the feebleness and unsoundness of the constitution transmitted by this pernicious habit.

In addition to the maladies already noticed, we might enumerate a large number of other diseases, which are either the direct or indirect result of tobacco-using; but the facts we have adduced are ample to warrant the conclusion that the use of tobacco is one of the worst forms of intemperance, and one of the surest means of producing disease.

The foregoing is another valuable testimony and confirmation by the wise and learned of the world to the truth which the young Seer declared, that tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly. Since the present generation is subject to many diseases not so generally known in former ages, such as consumption, cancers, heart-disease, paralysis, etc., it is well to know what the Doctor says on tobacco and consumption:

The relation of impure air to disease of the lungs is everywhere recognized. It has been very clearly demonstrated that breathing impure air is the great cause of consumption, on account of the effects of poisonous elements upon the blood, and the lungs. Even the impurities gathered from the blood itself exist in the air which has been once breathed, in such quantities as to render it unsafe to breathe again. This being the case, it will readily be seen that filling the lungs with nicotinized smoke and hot fumes of tobacco from a pipe or a cigar for several hours a day, can not be but a most certain cause of lung disease. More-over experience shows this to be the case. Doctor C. R. Drysdale, the chief physician to the Metropolitan Free Hospital of London declared in an article in "Public Health" that "Smoking in youth is no uncommon cause of pulmonary consumption." Tobacco is the cause of heart-disease, dyspepsia, cancer, paralysis, color-blindness, nervousness, etc.

The fact is established beyond the possibility of successful controversy that tobacco is a poison, deadly in large doses, pernicious and harmful in all doses. It taints the breath, ruins the digestion, obliterates taste and smell, spoils the blood, oppresses the brain, depresses the heart, irritates the nerves, wastes the muscles, obstructs the liver, dims the vision, stains the skin, and deteriorates and contaminates every organ and tissue with which it comes in contact in the body. Its influence is to lessen vitality, to numb the sensibilities, to shorten life—to kill.

Truly tobacco is not good for man. But inspiration told us so as soon as the church was established. Shall we heed it?

Sometimes we are met with such philosophy as this: "How is it that women suffer with these diseases as well as the men and yet they do not use tobacco?" How logical! Have you not taken into consideration that these women had fathers and grandfathers who perhaps were addicted to the habit and that this poisonous virus contained in their blood would be transmitted to the girls as well as the boys, and thus bring a curse of disease upon their innocent and helpless offspring? Eternity only will be able to reveal the suffering and misery and penalty for such crimes towards innocent children, whose natural rights are to be well born into the world, sound in body and in mind. It is a mystery how any ordinary intellectual woman can submit herself to marry a man who uses tobacco and liquor. They are to be blamed as much as the men. If they refused to marry them while addicted to that habit, or refused to live with them if they ever used it, they would soon quit using it.

Now in reference to the liquor question we can not keep silent. If tobacco is bad, liquor is still worse, and I have always pitied the innocent girl who ever submitted to become the bride of a drunkard, or of a man who had a tendency in that direction. Little does she realize the miseries she will be subject to and the sacrifice she is making by giving herself heart and hand to a thing who is not worthy the name of husband.

The liquor philosopher advocates the use of liquor because it stimulates and strengthens the nerves, by which he is better able to perform his work, and some seek refuge under the instruction of Paul to Timothy, to take a little wine for his stomach's sake and his oft infirmities. The liquor advocate does not generally stop with a little, but it is taken in large doses, and I doubt very much that they drink of the kind which Paul recommended Timothy to use. But is their plea, that it strengthens the nerves, true? Let us hear what Doctor Kellogg says of the drunkard's heart:

When alcohol is taken into the blood it soon comes in contact with the nerve centers which govern the action of the heart. Its effects are the same as upon other nerve centers. It paralyzes them just like chloroform does the brain. Then the heart is like a steam engine without a governor or clock from which the pendulum weight has been removed. It runs down with wonderful rapidity. This effect is largely due, also, to the influence of alcohol upon the small blood-vessels; the nerves which control them become paralyzed, they become dilated or relaxed, and so afford less resistance to the action of the heart, allowing it to beat too rapidly.

This increased action is most unfortunately mistaken for increase in strength on the part of the organ when it is a mere increase in action—wasted force.

The amount of extra work done by the heart under the influence of liquor may be readily estimated. Doctor Parks, by a series of careful experiments, found that the pulse of a man whose heart beat about seventy-four times a minute, or 106,560 times in twenty-four hours, when drinking only water, was, when under the influence of one ounce of alcohol per day compelled to beat 430 times more in a day. Two ounces of alcohol per day caused an increase of 1,872 beats a day. Four ounces required 12,960 extra beats a day. Six ounces drove the pulse up to 18,432 extra beats, and eight ounces to 25,488 unnecessary beats, or nearly one quarter more than when taking water only.

Did you ever see a drunkard who was not made weaker in body and mind by the use of alcoholic liquors? He realizes that weakness and must have something to stimulate him, and every time he repeats that stimulating remedy he becomes just that much weaker by reason of extra work on the part of the vital organs, as well as weaker in mind to resist the use of such stimulants.

Do alcoholic beverages produce disease? Some say, No. Having read a number of authors on this subject I prefer to take for granted their experience and observation in preference to those who have not made this a study. We believe in the maxim to let each man learn his duty. Let the preacher learn his duty, the mechanic his, the journalist his, and the physician his. Having learned that duty and the business that pertains thereto, what right have we to reject the conclusions each one has arrived at through a long series of observation and experience. Doctor Kellogg quotes Doctor Richardson as follows on alcoholic consumption:

Doctor Richardson points out the fact that alcohol, instead of preventing, actually produces consumption and that of the most fatal type. He states that a person suffering from alcoholic phthisis shows no improvement under treatment. The disease steadily, surely, and usually quite rapidly, progresses to a fatal termination.

Doctor Kellogg says in reference to beer and Bright's disease:

The idea that beer is harmless because it contains but a small proportion of alcohol, has been wholly refuted by observation, that Bright's disease and other maladies of the kidneys are far more frequent among beer-drinkers than among any other class of men.

Of the hereditary effects of alcohol he says:

The drinker himself is not the only sufferer from this vice. Indeed it seems in many cases that he is not the greatest sufferer. He may even live out his three score and ten in apparent defiance of the laws of nature and the warning of friends; but look at his children. Are they strong and robust as he? Oh, no. Instead we often find them frail, nervous, imbecile, idiotic—poor specimens of the race. The iniquities of the fathers are visited upon the children.

Doctor S. C. Howe attributed one half the cases of idiocy in the state of Massachusetts to intemperance, and he is sustained in his opinion by the most reliable authorities. Doctor Howe states that there were seven idiots in one family where both parents were drunkards. One half of the idiots in England are of drunken parentage, and the same is true in Sweden and probably of most European countries. It is said that in St. Petersburg most of the idiots come from drunken parentage.

No wonder the Lord said that strong drink is not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies, and that it was not meet in the sight of your Father to use it. Behold, here is wisdom when we consider the terrible effects upon both body and mind, that it robs those who use it both of physical and mental powers. No wonder he promised his people wisdom and great treasures of knowledge (the opposite of idiocy), and strength of body if they would refrain from using it. It is astonishing in the highest degree that Saints will persist in using such things which bring such awful entailments on themselves and their posterity. Even if all Saints who use it should entirely abstain from it it would then take generations before the effects thereof would entirely be eradicated, viewing it from a natural standpoint, unless the Lord should miraculously intervene, by reason of obedience to his will, and set aside the natural consequences of nature's broken laws. Take a good look at the state institutions for feeble-minded children, and consider the enormous amount of money expended there, then look at their inmates, and if your heart is not made of adamant, it will surely be touched with the most profound pity for these unfortunate, innocent children, weak both in body and in mind, some perfect idiots, a sight when once beheld you will never forget. And what is the cause of it? The preceding pages tell the story.

Then take a look at the insane asylums, consider the vast amount of money expended there, and do not forget to visit the unfortunate inmates, which have been either born with a tendency toward insanity, or have been made so through strong drink, or been driven to it by a husband's or father's cruelty, and you are confronted with a picture—a real live picture—which the demons of hell and their imps on earth have made, a picture which you never will forget.

Then, as you pass along, take a look at the penitentiaries, and pause to ask yourself the question, What are these here for; and whence came they? A little reflection on your part will answer the query. These are they who were born thieves and liars, murderers, and whoremongers, and whosoever doeth iniquity, and that because of inherited tendencies, the cause of which is moral and physical wrecks in their parentage, brought about by poisonous and foreign substances which have undermined both the physical and mental powers for good.

And as you pass along, take a look at the poor-houses and slums and brothels in the cities and consider what is the underlying cause,—invariably drink. Then take into consideration the many unhappy homes, the abused and mistreated wives, the ragged and half-starved children, and the untold miseries and privations they are subject to, and when this whole panorama has passed before you, can you still uphold and support a cause which brings so much evil into the world?

In regard to expense it is not only the first cost, the figures of which we have already presented, but it is also the after cost, the keeping up of asylums, penitentiaries, almshouses, lawsuits, and court proceedings, etc., etc., which perhaps would require an equal sum to sustain and maintain.

Did you ever stop to think that whenever you paid your nickel or dime for your plug of tobacco, your cigar, or your glass of beer or whisky that you contributed that much to the support of the institution which made it, and at the same time created a necessity for these other institutions which must care for the patrons and converts of the former?

Truly these things are not good for man. Christ said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments," but in this case we might well reverse that, and put it like this, "If you love yourselves, keep my commandments."

Surely these warnings and forewarnings are words of wisdom. Shall we, as Saints of the Most High, be wise virgins and heed the warning, or shall we be found among the foolish virgins who have not taken the Holy Spirit for their guide, and have not purified their bodies and made themselves a fit dwelling-place for his Holy Spirit so that he can receive them unto himself?

How often have we sighed in spirit and longed for our redemption that we might enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb; but as often our hearts have been made sad when we have realized that his bride has not as yet made herself ready. Saints, how long shall we wait and keep the bridegroom waiting before we are ready? Shall he come and find us not prepared, not having put on the wedding garment—the robes of righteousness and purity?

Being zealous of Zion's cause and the purity of her children, I subscribe myself your servant for Christ's sake,
S. K. SORENSEN.

• * * * *

Holy, humble, penitent, believing, earnest, persevering prayer is never lost; it always prevails to the accomplishment of the thing sought, or that with which the suppliant will be better satisfied in the end, according to the superior wisdom of his heavenly Father, in which he trusts.—Weeks.

CONCERNING ZION'S RELIGIO SOCIETY.

Sunday-school work was old and well established in the land before church societies for young people were instituted, and while the Sunday-school always needs our hearty support and able defense, our own society for young people, Zion's Religio-Literary Society, can not have too much said in its favor—can not have too many noble adherents or able supporters.

The object of the Religio is to interest the young in the work of the church; to study the doctrine and the books that we regard as sacred—the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants; to promote sociability; to develop the young in many different lines of knowledge; to improve the mind by study and with various literary productions as they meet together from time to time. As one contemplates it, the object can not be stated in few words, it is so grand and far-reaching. And the results—who shall say what they may not be, as the hundreds of young people take an earnest interest and are developed and made strong by this means?

It is the solemn duty of each member of a society wherever he may be, to take such part as he may be asked to take; for we learn to do by doing. Development is a duty we owe to ourselves, to our families, to society, to the church, and to our God. He has not placed us here to stand still, and in our own church the Religio is one of the greatest aids for our young people, if they enter into the work in the proper spirit and avail themselves of its benefits. A willing worker is worth much. And now is the time to work, not later, at some future time, and then expect great results. Here a little, and there a little—and lo, something has been accomplished, and we are pleased, and surprised, and glad.

Some one has said this: "It is certainly true that the Lord has helped us, and that he does help us, and that he will help us; but God helps those who help themselves. Don't you think it is asking too much of his abundant mercy to ask him to make up to us that which we have lost through indifference? I do." We can not afford to be indifferent to this branch of the good work—we may lose too much.

We have committees in our society, program, social, relief, lookout, library, and with each committee working we shall have live locals. A home department is provided for. Many could be taking up the study in the Religio Quarterly at home. A few minutes at a time would give an insight into the lessons, which are so very instructive, so full of meat. Some of the books given as references in the suggestive programs could be read with profit.

The library department has a grand field which requires work and means to develop. We need the church books for study and reference; books on American Archæology; commentary and Bible concordances; books of general reference and encyclopedias; files of church publications, and church history. We need such books in the locals and should be working to get them.

The good literature committee is "to encourage the reading of all good books;" to send out literature that will, possibly, bring fruit for the church. Our Arena editor says, "Keen, studious, alert minds should formulate the message in a thousand attractive ways. It should be printed in a thousand attractive forms. The willing hands and feet of 'good literature committees' should scatter it the world over."

Parents can help in the whole of this great work so much. How? By understanding its object; by making themselves acquainted with the working of their own local; by encouraging their young people to attend the meetings and by helping them to prepare for their own particular part as they are asked to assist with the program; by entering into a study of the lesson with them; if possible, by all means to attend the meetings with them.

The Book of Mormon normal work being given us in the Autumn Leaves by Walter W. Smith is splendid. Get together the magazines for the last year and examine it, if you have not, beginning with page 83, February, 1907, and continuing through the year. By a study of this, a wonderful knowledge of the Book of Mormon will be gained. Later we are to study the Religio, its object, its origin, and many more good things.

There is so much that is beautiful and good and instructive and of spiritual benefit in all the work of the Religio that we can not afford to miss it. We must be keeping pace with those who are up and doing, who are striving to improve every side of the nature God has given them; to improve their talents. Each one can do some work. Let us work, too. We have been admonished to come up higher. Our motto is "Onward and Upward." Come, let us climb, reaching out helping hands that others may gain the heights with us.

"When Liberty's torch shall be lighted,
Let her brightest, most far-reaching rays
Discover no wrong that's unrighted,—
Go challenge the jealous world's gaze.

"Not only in freedom and science
And letters should you lead the earth,
But let the earth learn your reliance
In honor and true moral worth."

HORTENSE SELLON CRAMER.

We are not to lead events, but follow them.—
Epictetus.

LEAVES FROM LIFE.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER WILLIAM SPARLING.

Having been requested along with others to write a brief sketch of my life, and having been cheered and strengthened by the experiences of my brethren, I feel it a duty to respond to the best of my ability, humbly acknowledging that whatever of good I may have accomplished has been through the blessing and favor of my heavenly Father.

I was born March 30, 1857, at Barwick in Elmet, a small hamlet near Leeds, England. Of my ancestors I know but little except that in rambling through the old parish graveyard as a child I read the family name on tombstones, the oldest, as near as I can remember, dating back to 1740. My parents were poor, having a family of ten children, of which I was the eighth. Father had a meager salary as tax-gatherer and supervisor of the parish turnpikes. He was noted for kindheartedness and sterling honesty and retained the confidence of his neighbors to such an extent that he was sustained in his office twenty-three successive years, or up almost to the time of his death.

Father and mother, both old, were taken sick the same day and died three days afterwards within a few hours of each other. They were buried in the same grave. It could truly be said of them, "Lovely and pleasant in their lives, in death they were not divided." Father made no profession of religion; mother was an old-time Wesleyan Methodist, and I am thankful she taught me to pray and read the Scriptures while young.

It is with regret that I have to confess I neglected her example and teaching for a few years. But shortly after my twentieth birthday my wife and I, for I was now married, joined the Methodist Church. I look back with much pleasure and satisfaction to that step, for while it is true that Methodism is not the "fullness of the gospel," I learned much from that people, being a Sunday-school-teacher, class-leader, steward, and somewhat of an exhorter, being urged repeatedly to take a theological course and receive ordination. I am thankful now that I refused that, and I can now clearly see the hand of God was leading me to something better.

I came to the States in the spring of 1880, and worked as a coal-miner in different parts of Pennsylvania and Iowa. It was while working at Boonesboro, Iowa, that I met a man whose name I shall ever bless while memory lasts, Bro. James Weir, for the patience and gentleness of a true child of God that he exhibited while teaching me the first principles of the gospel while laboring together in the bowels of the earth.

In about six weeks from first hearing the gospel preached by Bro. Robert Nelson and others I was baptized, and also Bro. Henry Sparling, by Elder William McBirnie, March 12, 1883, and the following Sunday by vote of the branch I was ordained a priest, Bro. Henry being ordained a teacher the same day. The next day I started to my home in what was then "Dakota Territory" living at that time about twenty miles south of Aberdeen.

I started in with great zeal, talking "gospel" all the time and everywhere to whoever would listen, innocently thinking that all I had to do was to prove it was "in the Bible" and they would surely "believe." But, alas, I found out I could not even convert my own wife, for she vehemently shook her clinched fist at me telling me to go to Utah, if I pleased, and get as many wives as I liked, as for her she would remain in the good old Methodist Church and take care of her children. I took her reproaches mildly and did not blame her, for in her childhood she lived near the "Brighamite" branch in Leeds, England, and personally knew of one family of small children that was deserted by a heartless father who went to Utah.

Experience taught me to mingle wisdom with my zeal, and I so far succeeded, with God's blessing, that in the course of two years I built up a small branch at Pembroke, Potter County, South Dakota, where I had taken a homestead; and by request, after correspondence with Bro. Joseph, he sent Elders Charles Sheen, at one time of Lamoni, Iowa, and Gomer Reese, now of Montana. Both resided at that time at Highmore, South Dakota. They organized us into a branch, of which I was presiding elder, and Bro. Henry teacher. Mrs. Sparling was one of the first to be baptized.

I am painfully conscious of many mistakes, but God knew the integrity of my heart, and I was wonderfully blessed both in preaching and in public debates of which I have had six. In one of these debates after three meetings I baptized my opponent.

In March, 1902, I traveled three hundred miles with my team and wagon, settling at Clifford, North Dakota, and again, after two years' work, and with the splendid assistance of Bro. I. N. Roberts and Swen Swenson, another branch containing in all about fifty members, but since largely scattered to other parts, was organized.

For the past ten years the most of my time has been spent as Bishop's agent, district president, and missionary; and if I know my own heart, I love the work more and more. I would rather "wear out" than "rust out." There'll be sweet rest "bye and by" for all the faithful ones. So let us cheer up and encourage each other along the "old, old path." Bright things are in store for Zion. Portentous omens foreshadow the near approach of the Redeemer of Israel. May we be ready.

SHERWOOD, North Dakota.

WILLIAM SPARLING.

HEART, HEAD, AND HAND PHILOSOPHY.

Our car of spiritual progress is again gathering speed. The spiritual and progressive endurance-run will have to be slowed down a bit on account of a slight flurry of fear among the contestants. Some of them were so badly frightened that they got off and walked. Most of them have climbed aboard again, and now we are getting into a fine pace. Our car was all right. The motive power of our spiritual progress was as great as ever. The spiritual and progressive road looked smooth and all right. Everything looked like a great, record-breaking run. Then, I guess we got to over-speeding a little and scared a few of those on board.

It is a good thing to slow down a trifle, at times, examine the bearings and other machinery, make quite sure of the steering-gear, look to our engines, get a good map of the road, and let some of the chauffeurs affected with speed-madness get off and walk awhile. We have more confidence in the good car, and her certainty to reach her destination than ever before. And now while we are getting under spiritual progress again, and before the speed gets too great, let us take time to think which way to turn. Let's study the map of the course a little.

We notice, first of all, that the road is full of forks. We are called upon at every stage of the journey to decide whether we shall turn to the right or left. And at many of the forks there are more than two choices open. It will require much knowledge, much keen analysis, much close reasoning, much accurate observation, much calmness, much decision to keep on the main highway to our destination, the land of Zion, the haven of rest.

And the combination of qualities that enables us to keep on the right track is called judgment.

Never before in history has there been such a heavy and continuous demand for new ideas. The advertiser, the editor, the manufacturer, the merchant, the religionist—everybody is trying to beat everybody else in the exploitation of something new. Styles used to last for years, with very little modification. Now they scarcely survive a season. And thousand and one new mechanical, literary, musical, electrical, theological, scientific, religious, and philosophical ideas are pushed to the front every year. In trying to keep in the race, we must be careful not to get too many new ideas ourselves. And to produce the right ideas of worth, takes judgment. Spiritual judgment is simply the result of the drawing out of positive faculties and qualities that are innate in every man—in some more pronounced than in others, perhaps—and the filling in of useful knowledge that is within the reach of every one who will sacrifice his self-indulgence and ease, for the sake of acquiring the study habit.

Correct judgment is nothing more than the right, logical combination of true ideas. This gives us the clew to what studies and training are necessary to develop good spiritual judgment. To get hold of true ideas, we need trained sense, accurate observation, intensified by close attention, the habit of noting the slightest differences and putting your finger upon the most essential similarities, and care to take in the surrounding circumstances and background of the ideas under investigation. All these came by study and self-development. Having settled upon true ideas, the next thing is to combine them logically. That requires the power of reasoning. But there are laws and processes of reasoning as immutable as the historic laws of the Medes and Persians. There is no necromancy about that. All you have to do is to learn the laws and apply them. This all comes under the first head of the great science, or philosophy, of area development. It is a very important part of ability, the name I have given to the combination, the positives of the intellect.

And as I remarked in the beginning, this breathing spell in the spiritual race is a good time to pay some attention to the further development of this particular part of Area. Then we shall keep on the right track, and there will be, not speed-madness, but a fine, steady, accelerating, long-distance pace, that will land us, bright and early, after a happy run, in the beautiful city of God.

Therefore let us deal fairly with one another, and execute that good judgment that will cause us all to realize that we owe the same due respect to others, as we wish ourselves. Perhaps we are, in many instances, honest in certain efforts, thinking that we are doing the will of the Master. Whereupon by close and careful self-observation, we will find ourselves far from right. Sometimes we misunderstand each other, just as the disciples misunderstood the Savior, when he told them he was the bread that came down from heaven, and he that eateth this bread shall live for ever. For we find here that many of the disciples walked no more with him. Therefore let us ever be careful of speed-madness, and throw ourselves in the hand of God.

JOHN ZAHND.

NEW ALBANY, Indiana, 2017 Culbertson Avenue.

* * * * *

THE CHURCH HOMES.

Realizing that many have a very faint idea of what the Homes really are, namely, Saints' Home and Liberty Home, it may be gratifying to such, and especially to those who help keep up these homes with their tithing, to learn more particulars concerning them. Before coming here, I heard different stories. One thought we all had to wear white caps and aprons. Another thought, "You'll have to stay in your rooms, and only be allowed to go out at stated times." Finding such erroneous ideas existed, I thought, after being here over a year, it would be well to give a few facts.

1. We wear just what we please, so we look clean and tidy.

2. We stay in our rooms just as much or as little as we like. We visit each others' rooms, or stay in common sitting-room all we please. Our Bishop designs this to be as much like a real home as possible. He has been obliged to send some here he would rather not, yet this difficulty will be obviated when the sanitarium gets in running order, which will soon be accomplished.

While the members are for the most part spiritually-minded, it can not be expected, among so many aged ones having their own peculiar traits and dispositions, their set ways fostered from childhood, and nerves incident to old age, that there should never be any friction among us, but that perfect peace and harmony should exist. It could not be in the nature of things.

As the laws of the land are often broken, so are sometimes the rules of the Home; but with all this, a better-hearted, more spiritual people (where so many are together) it would be hard to find.

The first Home, called Saints' Home, was dedicated March 17, 1898, with Sr. Dancer as matron, who for years refused, and I presume does yet, any remuneration for her services. Often for months together she undresses and dresses those unable to do it for themselves, helps them to bed, is up and down all night with the sick, often takes the inmates riding with her, leads the blind sister to church, and makes herself equal with those in her care.

There are about thirty inmates, seven of whom are over eighty, and one ninety-three years of age. Last year fourteen were so feeble their meals were taken to their rooms. There were five deaths during last year.

We have several hundred chickens, also over a dozen cows to give cream for the tables, and new milk for all who desire it to drink; and plenty of good, plain food.

Liberty Home is three fourths mile from the other. It was taken possession of May 1, 1906, with Sr. Rudd as matron. It is at present in two buildings, some little distance apart, and it is proposed to build in and bring all together at some future time. The men's rooms are in the east, and the women's in the west building, sitting-rooms, dining-rooms, kitchen, hall, and bathroom taking in all down-stairs, but two bedrooms. This is unfortunate, as some are hardly able to climb the stairs. But when the center part is built, bringing dining-room, kitchen, etc., between the two buildings, then these others can be made into bedrooms, where the aged and crippled can have better accommodations.

There are prayer-meetings in both Homes Thursday evening, and preaching Sunday evening. Men also have prayer-meeting in each Home. The sisters have also had a Prayer Union Friday afternoon. Sometimes they suggest a subject the week before, to have special prayer for, beside the sick. One week it may be for "the editors of church literature," that they may have wisdom to guide them in the selection of articles for the paper. Sometimes for Daughters of Zion, etc. Sometimes, for some of our own loved, absent ones, that God may lead them into the true gospel. I often get letters asking for prayers for better health. I write, setting a time, they fast and pray on that day, and answers come back very encouraging. Have had prophecies several times, showing that God approved of us and our work. We have Religio every week. Bro. Elvin is our teacher. We have prayer, with scripture-reading and song, morning and night.

I will say that the Two-Story Book is being read for an hour after supper to all who wish to stay in the sitting-room and listen. I would advise all who have fifty cents to spare to send to Herald Office, and get it, as they will not only find it interesting, but attractive and profitable reading. It is a nice book for center-table and library.

(Sr.) M. J. PHIPPS.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. F. M. Smith, secretary, 630 South Crysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. E. Etzenhouser, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

We Thank Thee, Lord Jesus.

When the glad sun shines above us,
And the sky is bright and fair,
Not a lowering cloud to blight or mar
The beauty of a day so rare,
'Tis then with thankful hearts we say,
"Thank Thee, Lord Jesus," and kneel to pray.

When friends gather fondly round us,
Hearts filled with love and joy;
In songs of gladness and good cheer,
The moments they employ;
'Tis then with thankful hearts we say,
"Thank Thee, Lord Jesus," and kneel to pray.

When we sit near the hearth with all
Our loved ones gathered round,
With plenty to eat and plenty to wear;
And the winter wind's moaning sound
Is heard without; 'tis then we say,
"Thank Thee, Lord Jesus," and kneel to pray.

When the sky is darkened with storm clouds,
Not one ray of the sun shining down;

When the winter storm's beat on our humble abode,
 And our loved ones are far from home;
 'Tis then with humble hearts we say,
 "Oh, hear us, Lord Jesus," we kneel to pray.

When scandal assails us, and friends grow cold,
 And our loved ones are scattered and gone,
 The gospel restored by Jesus our Lord,
 Will lighten our way through the gloom.
 The joy of the gospel more precious each day,
 Oh, let us be thankful, and kneel to pray.

JANE HEATON.

Responsibility of Life.

"Life!" What is it? It is a great mystery. We behold it all about us, yet the wisest can not explain it. We consult the dictionary, and find it variously described as soul, heart, spirit, and breath; because where any of these are absent there is no life—that is animal life; but this much we all know without the dictionary, and we do not feel any wiser. All that we have learned through human knowledge is that life is something which animates these bodies of ours.

But through the scriptures we learn that life is a gift from the great animating Cause of all things. We learn, also, from the same divine inspiration, that the aim of the gift is that each one receiving it should, through its possibilities, develop into a still higher form of life; that is into life immortal. As Jesus said: "I am come that they might have life, and have it more abundantly."

He came to teach us the possibilities of life, and how to attain to immortality, because the laws, as well as the divine aim of life had been lost sight of through the pursuit and pleasure of sin; therefore he came and brought back to light, life, and immortality, that more abundant, or abounding life.

Sin, we are told, is the breaking of the law, the laws of life and health included; for when these were broken disease came, and the years of life were shortened. In the gospel are reestablished the laws of life, demanding perfect purity in body, in spirit, in thought, and associations; in everything that concerns life, even to our food and drink. Food and drink have much to do with health and life,—hence comes the Word of Wisdom, that hot drinks are not good for the body, that flesh is only to be eaten under certain conditions. Not to look upon the wine, to flee youthful lusts, not to be enticed to evil.

With strict observance of these perfect laws of life, there results health of the body, and consequently lengthened years; as, also, the growth and development of the mental faculties, and of the spirit entity, until life is finally merged into that higher state of existence to which those followers of Christ who have obediently followed him in all things attain, even immortality.

Now, the observance of this pure living is the greatest responsibility laid upon all who come into the light of the gospel; because it not only affects ourselves but our descendants in the flesh as well. For, as the sins of the fathers are visited upon the children through heredity, so also are the effects of right-living subject to the same law of heredity. In view of this fact, we may not use our life in a way to cause suffering to the generations after us. The responsibility of life is so far-reaching, and nothing is truer than this, that "none of us liveth to himself." The effect of our life for good or evil will reach all who come within the range of our influence, and be reenacted on the lives of others; for, who can say how long the deeds of a man live after him and help to make or mar life for unnumbered others?

The responsibility of life, and the gospel of Jesus Christ, imposes upon us the careful study of the laws of life, to guide our lives by those laws. It is not enough that we believe in temperance as a church. Each individual is required to live it in all things. Temperance can not be separate from religion, it must enter into every detail of living. It is the eternal principle of the divine law that there can be no excesses in anything, if we would reach that more abundant life.

We are under responsibility to bear perpetually in mind what such a life lived according to the gospel means to those who have not learned the mystery existing between this life and the spiritual; that the one is the step-ladder to the other, and we may not step from the rounds of sin into the presence of the Lord.

The life of the body and spirit are so intimately connected, that whatever degrades the body, degrades the spirit. And whatever tends to purify and elevate the soul also is reacted upon the body. There is no such thing as spiritual life and progress where the moral laws are violated in the body. The body and spirit perish or are elevated together. "The wages of sin is death."

May the aim of our lives be to serve God with all the powers that constitute our being, body, heart, and mind, keeping in view the great object of life, our growth to a higher state,—to the measure of the stature of Jesus Christ.

M. ELEANOR KEARNEY.

Request for Prayer.

Bro. John B. Tinker, Malcom, Iowa, requests the prayers of the Saints that he may be healed of affliction, and that he may continue faithful to the end.

Letter Department

A Dream.

Editors Herald: In reading over the different articles in the HERALD, I thought I would try to write something as well. Some time ago I had a dream in which I saw two large armies of people about to be in war. I thought I stood alone as it were, looking on, and that I was anxious to go with one of the armies, which was the Saints. It seemed they were preparing to go to Zion because of the war that was about to take place between them. As I stood still a voice seemed to say, "Have you prepared yourself?" I made no answer. Then again, and again, and still I made no reply. By and by the voice said, "Yes, you have." I hope this may be so. Then I was filled with exceeding joy, so much so that I began to sing as loud as possible:

"Hearken to the glorious news,

Accept the gospel's precious truths,

That saves the Gentiles and the Jews,

Oh come, come away."

Then I awoke, and I was singing aloud, and I was still as happy as I could possibly be. It seemed there was an inward swelling of joy after I awoke from the dream. Although it has been three years past, it fills me with joy when I contemplate it; and that same feeling of joy seems to thrill my being. Oh may it be my joyous experience to be numbered with the Saints in Zion. I want to prepare myself for this time as best I can, though I have many weaknesses and failures; yet my best and happiest moments are when I am with the people of God. I just try to be patient, and pray that God's will may be done on earth as it is in heaven.

I have been tried more than I felt able to bear, many times, and yet it only showed me my weakness plainer than I ever could have seen it without these conditions.

I was very much strengthened and encouraged by reading a letter entitled, "A dream," by Sister Emma. I was obliged to stay at home with my little ones, and could not attend the Sunday morning meeting as I sometimes do, so I took up my HERALD, and it was full of inspiration. I thought, if it could be said of all of us, "You have left a straight mark," how nice it would be; but I shall have to confess that mine has been very crooked since I made that sacred covenant twenty-two years ago. Yet, I thank God for my experience, which I believe has made me appreciate the gospel more. I want to serve him as he would have me, that I may some time be numbered with the Saints in Zion.

Your sister in the true faith,
HATTIE SUTHERLAND.

Bow, Washington, May 17, 1908.

Dear Herald: You are a welcome visitor and the only preacher I have. I am quite isolated and have not attended a Latter Day Saint meeting since last November. How I wish I could be with the Saints at Moorhead, Iowa, my old home, to-night.

There is an opening here if the missionary in charge or an elder could come right away. If there is an elder that is free from home ties who could come out here for a year or two, I am sure he could do a good work, especially if he can teach vocal music.

I am placed in a position that I do not feel competent to fill. Pray for me, you who feel interested in isolated Saints, that I may always be guided to do every duty that God puts on me. I pray that God will be with every one that is alone and fearful, that he will be with our elders to guard them from all evil. I ask him to care for the families of the missionaries. I really believe they will receive a glory more beautiful and fair than mortal can imagine, if they live as they should. With love to all the Saints, your sister in the latter-day work,
MRS. ETTIE HILSINGER.

R. F. D. No. 1.

CAMAS VALLEY, Oregon.

Editors Herald: I thought I would relate to you a vision I had when I was confirmed into this church by Elder E. Keeler, now a patriarch. It may be of some benefit to others, as I know it has been to me. I was confirmed in my own house, and as I was looking out of the window I saw the heavens open, and a group of angels, and Christ on the right hand side of them. The angels saw me and started toward me, first at a walk, then they commenced to walk a little faster, and then they started with a rush toward me. Their joy seemed so great that they could not hold themselves. Then Christ raised his right hand, and they stopped at once, and waited until Christ caught up with them. They then started toward me as before, coming a little faster, until they started with a rush toward me, and then Christ raised his right hand, and the angels stopped as before, waiting until Christ came up even with them, then the vision closed.

There were several things shown to me in this vision besides the joy of the angels. The angels were all dressed so neat and looked so clean; their hair was trimmed and combed real neat, and their clothes fit them good. Their suits were all made of gingham such as we buy to make children's aprons and dresses of. Christ was of medium size, as I saw him in the vision. And the only thing my attention was called to in regard to Christ's clothes, was his coat. Brethren, it was a short sack coat, such as the common people wear. He looked very, very common and plain. His coat did not look like those of some of the brethren and elders that I have seen. I believe when he comes, he will be dressed more like those fishermen that he was with, that we read of. I do not look for him to be wearing any reverend's coat, or style of the world. Saints, I believe if we would obey the Doctrine and Covenants that God has given us, as I saw the angels obey him in the vision, we would be a great deal more advanced than we are at the present time. I speak for myself; and also think we ought to keep ourselves neat and clean, and not wear too costly clothing.

I hope this will not hurt any one's feelings; for I am sure it is not written with that intention. And I do not believe that you will hold me responsible for the vision. Hoping that I am worthy to be called

Your brother,
S. H. CROY.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 13, 1908.

Editors Herald: I write to inform your readers that I am still alive and in the conflict. I arrived in this the capital of Denmark on February 9, and for about a month labored in company with Bro. Muceus, who had begun operations here a short time before. But for the last two months I have been alone, as he returned to Norway. I can not say that I have found open doors and people waiting anxious to hear, for that has not been the case. I am hiring a hall in which I preach Sunday and Thursday nights of each week, and besides have been holding some little meetings in private homes from time to time as I have found permission. The attendance has generally been small, but better recently, and prospects seem to be brightening. I find, as elsewhere, much opposition here, though no such trouble as in Aalborg, where our meetings were disturbed by the mob. The Seventh-day Adventists have been doing what they can to prejudice the minds of the people, and of course the state church, with her hireling clergy, will countenance almost anything that will hinder the people from a fair investigation of the latter-day work. I have lately delivered several lectures showing the position of the Reorganization in juxtaposition to that of the Utah church, thus getting the attention of some who were entire strangers to our claims. I advertised that representatives from Utah would have a chance to be heard if they desired to defend themselves, but though they have a force of fifteen men laboring exclusively in this city, none ventured to appear. It helped me to a better hearing and to get facts before the people, and I found friends that now seem quite interested in the work.

I am pleased to learn that Saints in America are manifesting their interest in the work, and in this field, by supporting our little mission paper, Sandhedens Banner, by their contributions, and trust their interest in that line may continue. This mission in some respects is a difficult one, and the brethren laboring here truly need the aid and encouragement that the Saints can give them. I feel, even if prospects are not flattering now, that if the work is pushed this will yet become an important field. My stay and effort in this city has been quite expensive, but I have at no time felt justified in abandoning the work, though there have been times when it looked as if it were time spent in vain. At present writing things look a little more encouraging, and I feel hopeful, trusting that some will take hold of the work and become helpers to the cause.

Times are very hard here, and there is much privation among the poorer classes. It is claimed that there are ten thousand able-bodied men in this city who are willing to work but have no employment and their families are on the verge of starvation. This may be an exaggeration, but the actual condition is very bad. There has been a general influx to this city from the provinces and surrounding country until the population has reached more than half a million, almost one fourth of the entire population of the country. It is evident that the expansion that has been going on for years has been overdone, and a reaction was sure to come as a natural result, but the stringency that came in finances last winter has hastened the climax and brought it about sooner and more suddenly than it perhaps otherwise would have come. It is a hard and trying time for some, especially for those who have been unwise and extravagant in the management of their affairs during the prosperous times.

I attended a mass-meeting of unemployed men recently and listened to the most radical and inflammatory speeches that I have ever heard, something that seemed to me altogether out of reason and inconsistent. They passed resolutions demanding that the city shall pay them their wages, not as an act of charity, claiming it is due them, as they were willing to work. Most of the speakers spoke of their families at home starving, but I noticed that nearly all came with a lighted cigar in the mouth and the features of a good many bore evidences of overindulgences in the intoxicating cup. No doubt, to a large extent, the hard condition of many is due to the unwise use of time and opportunities of the past. But it is sad to contemplate and hard to imagine what the final end will be. There is a spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction prevailing with the masses, and man looks with distrust upon his fellows. Truly these are perilous times.

Through reading the news from General Conference in the HERALD and Ensign I am beginning to fear that a degree of the same spirit of dissatisfaction and distrust is beginning to operate in the ranks of the eldership. I judge from resolutions that were introduced that some thought they had not been as well supplied financially as others, and that may be true. For when I read in the Bishop's report, the receipts and expenditures of elders, I find that quite a number have managed to get along with less than a hundred dollars a year while the expenses of others have been several times that much. Of course all have not been situated alike, and some of necessity must incur greater expense than others, this being evidently the case with ministers in charge of large and distant fields; but when a man laboring among the Saints where his board and lodging are furnished free of charge, has several hundred dollars a year for his individual expense, he certainly has no good reason for complaint. This question of equality, I think, has been troubling us more than it ought, and we do not seem to be much nearer its solution than years ago, notwithstanding some consider themselves wise on the subject. I have found that when a man has spent his money and knows his brother has a few dollars in his pocket, the equality question is very interesting to him, but when the same man may be riding comfortably in the cars, while the other, in order to curtail expenses, is footing it through the snow and mud, the question of equality does not concern him so much. I hope the day may soon come when God's people shall become more equal than at the present, but I am confident that the adoption of stringent rules and iron-clad resolutions will not hasten the day.

While we talk about equality, surplus, and consecration, I think it is well to remember that we must consecrate self to the service of God. If we can learn to love self less, the command to love our neighbor as ourselves will not be so arduous as it otherwise appears. With selfishness banished and more of the love of God in our hearts, we will not constantly be afraid some brother shall fare a little better than self. I am confident that much education is needed all along the line, not only upon the part of those whom we may term rich, but also upon the part of the poor. The Lord said to the church in an early day: "Woe unto you rich men, that will not give your substance to the poor, for your riches will canker your souls; and this shall be your lamentation in the day of visitation, and of judgment, and of indignation: The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and my soul is not saved!"—Doctrine and Covenants 56: 5. But he said with as much force, and as if it were of as much importance: "Woe unto you poor men, whose hearts are not broken, whose spirits are not contrite, and whose bellies are not satisfied, and whose hands are not stayed from laying hold upon other men's goods, whose eyes are full of greediness, who will not labor with their own hands."—Ibid., paragraph 5.

Thirty-three years ago, in company with Bro. Magnus Fyrando, I landed in this city, entering upon my first mission. At that time there was not a systematic arrangement for the support of the missionaries and their families. The funds that came into the hands of the Bishop were very meagre, and sometimes even the brethren of the Twelve could hardly be supported so as to continue in the field. But I entered upon the work with the understanding that it meant sacrifice, and I was not disappointed in that respect. The only assistance that I received from the church or from the Saints, with exception of my parents, was two dollars handed me by a brother, whose name I have forgotten, while on the train going from Plano to Chicago, and one dollar inclosed in a letter to me, while here, from Bro. T. W. Smith. I had not been in the field long before I found my few means becoming exhausted and the only source open to me that I could see, was to go to work at manual labor to secure the necessities of life. I found work to do, but was paid only about fifty-five cents per day, and out of this small earning I paid for my board and lodging, and had a little left with which I once in a while hired a hall for us to preach in, and for other expenses incident to our work here. I think likely some of my brethren fared better than I, but the question of equality did not trouble me, and the experience gained has done me good.

When I returned home from that mission I went to work to secure some of the temporal things needed in life, acting in keeping with the instruction of the then bishopric and other leading men of the church. I was blessed in so doing, and have since been able to spend much of my life in the interest of the work with but little expense to the body, and would have been with even less expense, had my fields of labor not been so far from home as they sometimes have been. I do not say this boastfully nor to complain, but when I discover so much dissatisfaction because of inequalities in temporal matters these thoughts naturally force themselves upon the mind. I am thankful and satisfied in my lot as it has come to me, and while my ministerial work has not produced the greatest result I feel that I have the approval of the Master, and have truly found: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

I trust the Lord will so bless and direct his servants whom he has placed in direct charge of his work that Zion indeed may prosper, and that we may each of us strive to learn our duty so as to act in our calling; then all will be well. For us to put forth an effort to direct or push the "leaders" I fear will hinder rather than hasten the good work. While we do not want to follow the example of the people in the West in blindly following counsel and in doing as we are told, asking no questions, there is also danger in going to the other extreme.

I think I have said enough for this time, but it is with the best of feelings towards all of the household of faith. I trust that we who are laboring over in this corner of the Lord's heritage may be remembered by you, and when any find time and inclination to write, remember that a few lines will always be appreciated.

Elmegade 17

In gospel bonds,

H. N. HANSEN.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, May 25, 1908.

Saints' Herald: It may be of interest to some of the Saints, and especially to those of the Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts, to know where and when our annual camp-meeting will be held this year.

The committee appointed by the camp-meeting association decided on Council Bluffs as the place, and from the 22d to the 30th of August as the time. Everything that can be done to make it a success will be done. We have not decided on the exact place, but have hopes of securing Fairmount Park. It does not matter so much about the place as it does about the interest shown by the Saints. We intend to get as good speakers as can be secured. Every convenience will be provided to make it a success. The Saints of both districts are invited to come and have a nine-day outing in tent life, and get away from the busy cares of life, and enjoy themselves in a social and spiritual way.

Saints and friends living close enough to attend, whether residents of either districts or not, are invited to attend. We feel sure that if you do not have a good time it will be your own fault. Come one, come all, as many as the woods will hold.

Yours for success,

H. M. LILES.

CARRINGTON, North Dakota, May 17, 1908.

Dear Herald: I desire to pen a few lines that our many friends may know we are still here, praying that it may give encouragement to some of the Saints who may be isolated as we are.

We had the pleasure of having our beloved brother, Elder William Sparling with us on the 12th and 13th, who baptized two more precious souls into the kingdom. They were the sister-in-law and niece of the writer. He confirmed them in the evening and in prophecy was given the following: "Great are the promises of God to those who will obey and keep his commandments." May God by his Holy Spirit ever be with them and help them to keep the covenant made at the water's edge. The writer was deprived of witnessing the baptism on account of being in the mail service for Uncle Sam, but was present at the evening service.

I can truly thank God for such blessings and I ask an interest in your prayers that I may ever be found faithful. Now as a little band of Saints numbering five, we feel strengthened and encouraged to press on. We have our Sunday-school at eleven o'clock every Sunday at the home of the writer, and we extend an invitation to all the Saints and elders to stop over with us when passing through.

We expect to have the gospel tent here this summer, if all goes well, and give this town and community a chance to hear the true gospel. Then if they reject it, it is between them and their God. On the other hand, if they accept it, to God be the praise and to his will we frankly submit. As Saints, let us stand up for Jesus, and cling to the rod of iron that leads to eternal life, put our trust and confidence in him who doeth all things well, and he will never forsake us. I know by experience, for I have tested it to my own satisfaction. I would say it in a voice loud as thunder that I know this work is true and if we fail to reach the high mark in Christ the fault is with us and not with the church.

May God hasten the day when the knowledge of truth will cover the earth as the waters the deep. He reigns whose right it is to reign.

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. PEEK.

PURYEAR, Tennessee, May 16, 1908.

Editors Herald: For three weeks Sr. Tucker and I assisted to watch at the bedside of Bro. C. L. Snow who is passing through a severe siege of sickness and suffering, which the doctor pronounces pleurisy, catarrhal fever, and stomach trouble. He has borne his sickness very patiently. When we left him he was improving slowly.

On the morning of the 30th of April we discovered that quite a snow had fallen during the night. Some thought their gardens were injured, but it did no harm. There is a very good prospect for a crop of fruit here.

General Conference of 1908 is now history. Bro. T. C.

Kelley writes that he and I may have to take the south part of the mission. Very well, I am willing to go where the dear Lord wants me to go and do all I can. I hope we will all be able to labor harmoniously together for the upbuilding of the work of the Master.

As there seems to be a little misunderstanding on the part of some touching the duties of the high priests and seventies as to who has the right or preference to preside under certain circumstances, if you will allow us we will give our exegesis of the matter on this wise: The parallels are these: First Presidency, three. In mission work, 1st the Twelve, 2d the seventy, 3d the elders, 4th priests; in presiding work, 1st the Twelve, 2d the high priests, 3d the elders, 4th the priests, 5th the teachers, 6th the deacons.

We notice the First Presidency is over all. The second presidency is the Twelve, who preside over the mission work in all the world, under the First Presidency; and over branches and districts to regulate and set them in order especially when branch and district officers can not or will not do so, regardless of who the branch or district officials may be. They having control over branches, districts, and the ministry as a whole, and as church organizations, and not as local presiding officers in these organizations. (See Doctrine and Covenants, page 379, paragraph 23.)

"The twelve and seventy are traveling ministers and preachers of the gospel, to persuade men to obey the truth; the high priests and elders holding the same priesthood are the standing ministers of the church, having the watchcare of the membership and nurturing and sustaining them, under the direction and instruction of the presidency and the twelve. The seventy when traveling by the voice of the church, or sent by the twelve to minister the word where the twelve can not go, are in the powers of their ministration apostles—those sent—and in meetings where no organization exists should preside, if no member of the twelve or presidency be present."—Doctrine and Covenants, page 363, paragraph 3.

Now the little hitch, if there is any, seems to be here: When a high priest, for instance, is elected president of a branch or district, a seventy has no right in the branches in the district where he presides at all. Let us see: "In both branches and districts the presiding officers should be considered and respected in their offices; nevertheless, the traveling presiding councils of the church being made by the law, their calling and the voice of the church the directing, regulating and advising authorities of the church, and representing it abroad, should when present in either district or branch be regarded and considered as the leading representative authorities of the church, and be respected as such, their counsel and advice be sought and respected when given; and in cases of conflict, or extremity, their decision should be listened to and regarded, subject to the appeal and adjudication provided for in the law. He that heareth him that is sent heareth the Lord who sent him, if he be called of God and be sent by the voice of the church. In these matters there is no conflict in the law."—Doctrine and Covenants, 120: 4-6.

A seventy when called of the Lord and sent by the church, has a right to go into organized branches or districts and labor when necessary, and his advice and counsel should be sought and respected when given. See Doctrine and Covenants 123: 22, also paragraph 13. This refers to the seventies as well as to the Twelve. According to my understanding the president of a district presides over the conferences and has supervisory charge of the branches, in the district, but does not preside where there is no organization, neither does he preside over the territory in the district. (Book of Rules, old edition, page 14.) There should be no jealousy between seventies and high priests, as they hold the same priesthood. There is no gradation of priesthood that I have ever been able to discover, as seventies ordain high priests and vice versa.

Your brother in Christ,
D. E. TUCKER.

PROVIDENCE, Rhode Island, May 6, 1908.

Editors Herald: In reading my last HERALD I saw the counsel or advice of T. W. Williams to the missionaries. It is the best that I ever read; a fine sermon in a nutshell. I thank God that he blessed Bro. Williams with his Spirit to write such good advice. I read of some of my brethren and sisters who say they could not do without the HERALD. I could not. When I read it and I see how God blesses his servants I feel glad that he does remember them in their labors. Again when I read that some of my brethren have a hard time of it, I pray to God to bless them and open the way that they may find friends and those that are kind to them; that God would bless them for the good they do and that they may feel that God does bless them.

Your brother in the gospel of Christ,
T. H. MOORE.

CLARKSBURG, West Virginia, May 18, 1908.

Editor Herald: By letter from Sr. G. H. Godbey we learn that Bro. Godbey passed away in March. She says she wrote to certain parties at headquarters, and also to the secretary of his quorum; but nothing is said about the sad passing of our brother in the minutes of conference, nor in the report of the quorum of which he was a member. Members of his branch were requested to write to the church papers, but it was not done.

We know that in the death of Bro. Godbey the church has lost a strong advocate, an incessant worker and defender of the faith. Like many of the pioneers of this work, he had his "fightings without and his fears within" the church. Faults were found which were not faults in fact, nor will they appear against him when "the judgment is set and the books are opened." Bro. Godbey lived and died with a good conscience toward God and man.

When he was with us here in December, he preached for us, a farewell discourse (so it was, but we little thought it then) in our meeting in the schoolhouse, with some difficulty in the opening, but later he became strong and fluent. His subject was the Bible. And he spoke with a fullness of true liberty; the inspiration of that good book came with his words and with his testimony. The saving and sanctifying power of the word of the Lord was carried to every heart in the audience and all present were edified and comforted. He said during this discourse that he was ready to depart this life whenever it was the Master's will for him to go.

Sister Godbey writes that "he preached the gospel as long as he had breath to talk." She was used to him going, and being away from home, but now he has gone to stay, not to labor, but to rest from his labors and truly his works do follow him.

OUR LAST TRIBUTE.

He has fallen asleep ever faithful enduring:

His labors are ended, his crown is secure.

Our God ever blest him the Spirit outpouring,

In preaching good tidings to comfort the poor.

He has fallen asleep and we would not awake him,

Nor grieve we because of our glorious hope;

He has gone on before and we'll soon overtake him,

In this dark vale of evil no longer to grope.

He has fallen asleep, in the vineyard we miss him,

Where we long worked together in love and delight:

He sleeps with the dead, but he'll wake with the living,

And come with the Saints clad in robes pure and white.

He has fallen asleep, in the Lord he is resting,
Till the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall arise
Dear brother, we loved thee with love everlasting, Fare thee well, fare thee well, till we meet in the skies

D. LEMUEL SHINN.

BEARDSTOWN, Illinois, May 18, 1908.

Dear Editor: Last Saturday I had an interesting chat with a Jew who came in my studio for some pictures. I soon learned that he was from Russia, had spent four years in the Russian army, and while in China in the late Russia-Japan war, succeeded in getting away to this country. When I asked why he did not stay and fight, he said he wanted to see Russia whipped. He said the condition of his people in Russia was terrible; they are nothing more than slaves, unless they denounce their religion and swear allegiance to the Pope and the Catholic religion. Then they are allowed just a few more privileges; but as it was there is a limitation placed on what they should own, where they should reside, and what they should know, being allowed to go only to lower grade schools, saying nothing of persecution and hardships.

Asked if he thought the revolutionary party there would accomplish anything. He thought not, as Russia could raise a million soldiers in a short time and overpower them.

"Does the Jew ever expect to leave that country?"

"Yes."

"Where are you going, to Palestine?"

"No. The Turks would not object to us, but the land is poor and the resources bad, and the people ignorant there. Most of the Jews want to come to America. Here we are free, we can make money here. The people are smart here. They are sociable; it makes no difference whether you are Dutch, Irish, or Jew, you are treated with respect."

"Is the Jew a moral people, or anarchistic?"

"Very good people; our law (of Moses) is more strict than their law. We are held down and are poor there; we come over here and get rich."

"What about the Zionistic movement that has been going on for the Jew?"

"Since Hearschill died, we haven't been doing much, but lately a movement is on foot to get land for a colony in Mexico."

"Well, what would it take to cause an exodus of your people?" He was at a loss for a word to express himself for a while and then said. "Lincoln. We are just waiting for a Lincoln." So they are just waiting for a leader or a prophet to lead them out. Then I told him a little of our belief and that we had prophets, and read him the following tongues by John R. Rudd, given at Dow City, Iowa, in 1903: "Verily thus saith the Spirit unto you, I, the Lord God, have a people prepared, and yea, saith the Spirit, they shall be blessed of you, saith the Lord God. Yea, Ephraim shall come forth from the north country; yea, and they shall come forth and be blessed of my people, even Ephraim in this land, saith the Spirit, and inasmuch as you are faithful and go forward in the discharge of your duty, my people shall be gathered to a place appointed unto them. And inasmuch as they will do this, and be faithful unto me, I will lift you up at the last days and you shall be greatly blessed of me. Even so. Amen." I also read the last tongues given at Independence through Apostle J. W. Wight, April 12, 1908, quoting only that part pertaining to the Israelites: "The time is not far distant when, from various parts of the earth will I call my people together, and the Gentile nations need to be warned; for soon will I turn from them, lo, unto my people that have been my people in times past. From the Gentiles will I turn, and then my people, sanctified unto me through their father Abraham, will come from the four parts of the earth, center together, and be prepared to meet my Son when he shall come upon the earth. Yea, thus saith the Spirit unto you, in warning voice this morning. Amen."

On reading the first tongue his whole soul seemed filled with joy and he took a literal and temporal view of it, i. e., Ephraim of the north country was the Jew of Russia; that "Blessed by Ephraim of this land" referred to the rich Jews of New York City and all over this country who would furnish the money; and that the place appointed unto them would be the place in Mexico or elsewhere, that would be selected. The coming to this country just fit his idea. In the second tongues he was elated over the gathering question, and said he expected the European powers, some time soon to be in war. But when it came down to the point, "to meet my Son when he shall come upon the earth," it was too much for him and his countenance changed. He could not accept Jesus, as he thought him an impostor. I thought of the prophecies of the Master in Matthew 23: 38 and Luke 21: 24.

So what is the use to try to convert the Jews "until the time of the Gentiles be fulfilled"? His house will be desolate until that time, and when this time is ushered in, history will be made pretty fast. We as a people know that it is not far distant; then let us take heed to the warnings, lest the Jew, when he does accept, make us ashamed of ourselves by his strict observance of the laws, strengthened by his long exile.

Yours,

M. R. SHOEMAKER.

Extracts from Letters.

Sr. Celia McCallum, Grindstone, South Dakota, desires elders to call, and thinks good can be done there.

News From Branches

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

We are pleased to report a cheering prospect before us, though of late we have been handicapped by the street-car strike and the dynamiting and shooting affrays incident to same. Order has been restored and traffic resumed with more degree of safety, and our attendance at service bettered. The public parks are drawing the masses of humanity and our permit to occupy the public rostrum in Wade Park has been availed of accordingly, U. W. Greene occupying on the 17th and our new missionary, Bro. W. E. LaRue, making his maiden address to the Cleveland public therefrom on the 24th. Fine weather prevailing, and a good crowd whose attention assured us of Bro. LaRue's success in the oncoming Sunday afternoons.

Bro. F. T. Haynes was lately unanimously elected to fill the position of presiding elder of Cleveland Branch, Bro. Eben Miller resigning to take up other work of the Bishopric appointed him.

Bro. McNeil has returned from his winter's sojourn in the Isle of Man, but comes accompanied with a bride to augment his work as chorister. Mrs. McNeil sang for the park services before mentioned and is indeed an appreciated help being the fortunate possessor of a well-trained voice. E. A. W.

DES MOINES, IOWA.

The district conference convenes at Runnells, June 5 and 6. Elders J. F. Mintun and M. H. Cook have been holding services on the street in the city with a reasonable interest manifested by the people.

The local work here has recently felt the loss of our Sunday-school superintendent, Sr. Hattie Clark, and the assistant, Sr. Pearle Shannon, the former removing to Missoula, Montana, and the latter to Rockwell City, Iowa.

The Dunkard, or Brethren Church will hold its annual meeting for this year in Des Moines, beginning June 3 and continuing eleven days.

The committee on entertainment are arranging to accommodate twenty-five thousand people.

If the General Conference of our church were held here the Saints would be very glad if every citizen of Des Moines would attend some of the services. For the same reason we as a people will be interested in attending this great gathering of the Brethren.

Sister Ethel Banta closes another year of successful work in the Des Moines schools this week and returns to her home at Lamoni, she to continue here another year.

Sister Orpha Emslie was recently chosen assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Of the missionaries from other parts who have been in the city since General Conference we mention Elders S. M. Reiste and G. W. Thorburn, and on Sunday, May 24, Elder F. A. Smith preached at the church. He was greeted with a warm friendship by the Saints who remembered him so kindly from his former work here.

A new pastor at the Central Presbyterian church in the city during the past year has recently introduced what is known as the Emanuel Health Movement, and the One Hundred Year Club was organized with four hundred charter members. The movement has for its object the prolonging of life by a proper observance of the laws of health. We believe that it is a step on the part of the Christian people of to-day towards the observance of the Word of Wisdom.

A. A. REAMS.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

ALABAMA.—Alabama District conference met with Lone Star Branch, May 9, 1908, at 10 a. m., J. R. Harper in the chair, assisted by J. J. Hawkins; J. S. McCall secretary pro tem. Elders Reporting: J. J. Hawkins, J. G. Vickrey, G. O. Sellers, W. J. Booker, and J. R. Harper. Priests: A. G. Booker and A. A. Weaver. Branches reporting: Flat Rock last report 50, present number 50; Pleasant Hill last report 226, present number 212; Lone Star last report 142, present number 142. Bishop's agent reporting: On hand at last report $267.20, received since $52.50, paid out $177.00, on hand $142.70. Bertha Harper, J. S. McCall, and D. B. Sellers were appointed a committee to audit Bishop's agent's report, committee finding the report correct. Tent committee reported through R. B. Booker, and committee continued. Conference adjourned to meet with the Pleasant Hill Branch on the first Saturday of the reunion at same place. M. S. Wiggins, secretary, McKenzie, Alabama, R. F. D. 2.

MANCHESTER.—The conference of the Manchester, England, District was exceptionally long, occupying two Saturday evenings, Easter Saturday and Easter Monday. H. Greenwood, president, after the opening services, put the conference in charge of his son, W. H. Greenwood, of the seventy, who had been associated with the presidency. The deacons of the South Manchester Branch were made the deacons of conference. The report of the president was read and the consideration of it deferred to a later session.

A letter from the Bishop's agent, C. H. Caton, of Birmingham, was read, and it was resolved to make an appeal at the Sunday services on behalf of the financial condition of the mission. Delegate's credentials were received from the following branches: North Manchester, South Manchester, East Manchester, Northeast Manchester, Warrington, Stockport, and Eccles. Elders reporting: James Spargo, William Spargo, W. H. Chandler, William Worth, J. S. Grundy, George Tower, D. Hope, Edwin Nixon, S. F. Mather, J. Foden, Joseph Harper, J. Schofield, F. Bruton, J. Dewsnup, Jr., N. J. Weate. Priests: J. W. Green and William Maddock. Branches reporting: North, South, East and Northeast Manchester, Salford, Farnworth, Warrington, Stockport and Eccles.

The services on the Easter Sunday were held in the Hulme Town Hall, and were fine spiritual feasts. The speakers were G. W. Leggott, John Schofield, W. H. Greenwood, and

W. R. Armstrong. The afternoon testimony-meeting was in charge of James Baty, district patriarch, assisted by Elders J. W. Taylor and T. Brien, the vice-presidents of the district. The South Manchester meeting room was open for the convenience of those who required refreshments, and several of the sisters did noble work there, attending to the needs of those present.

Easter Monday, April 20, meeting was called to order at 9 a. m., W. H. Greenwood in charge. The president's report was discussed. The recommendations for ordinations were read and the matter referred to a committee of elders present. District superintendent of Sunday-school reported. Adjourned to meet the following Saturday, May 2. These arrangements were upset by the death of our esteemed brother, High Priest Joseph Dewsnup, Sr., on April 23. Interment took place at the Harpurhay Cemetery the following Tuesday, a large assembly of Saints being present and taking part in the out-door service. The weather was cold and wet, as though mourning Bro. Dewsnup's departure. We were further saddened by the news that C. H. Caton had died the previous day, Monday, the 27th. Both these brethren had been counselors to Bishop Taylor, of Birmingham, until his death.

The sitting of the committee on ordinations was held May 2, at 3 p. m. Their work was completed and the conference convened at 6 o'clock. Committee reported as follows: J. A. Flemming to be ordained a deacon; Priest J. W. Green, to elder; Deacon Edward Maloney, to priest; George Foster, to deacon. Secretary's report read: Branches 10; members on book last report, 455, number this report, 459. We have 1 patriarch, 1 seventy, 2 high priests, 28 elders, 19 priests, 9 teachers, and 12 deacons. There have 15 received by baptism, 4 by letter, total gain 19; lost by letter 10, by death 5, total loss 15; 2 marriages and 1 ordination. Treasurer and auditors' reports deferred till the October conference. Present officers were sustained.

Letters of condolence were ordered sent to the bereaved ones of Brn. Dewsnup and Caton. Thanks were awarded to Sr. Green for repairing the Sunday-school banner. Adjourned to meet the following Saturday at 6 p. m.

May 9, meeting in charge of W. H. Greenwood. Some of the branch reports were referred back, not being in harmony with district rules. Elders not reporting were suspended till necessary explanations are given. Patriarch James Baty by resolution was made the instrument in offering a prayer of thanks to God for having miraculously healed Sr. Rush-ton. Thanks of the conference were offered to W. H. Greenwood, to the deacons, choristers, singers, and to all who had assisted in the services; also to the South and East Manchester Saints for their kindness in lending the use of their rooms for the meetings. Resolved that Elder G. W. Leggott having been appointed to labor in England and in the Manchester Branch, we accept his labors and that his name appear on the district rota plan. H. Greenwood, president, William Worth, secretary.

Pastoral.

To the Ministry and Saints of Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, and Spokane Districts; Greeting: Since learning I have been chosen as assistant minister in charge of the above named territory, I hasten to write you a few lines. My address until July 15 will be 1827 East Olive Avenue, Spokane, Washington. Communications and the first quarterly report, will reach me there. I shall confine my labors principally to Spokane District unless urgent demands require me to visit other portions during the year. I hope the brethren and Saints will feel free to write me at any time regarding the work and their necessities. Those scattered and away from branches should not hesitate to write those appointed to do missionary labor in the State or district where they reside. You can aid them greatly in opening up new places if you will cooperate. It would be to advantage if missionaries would have their mission address published in the church papers so each could keep in touch with the other. Hoping and praying for a prosperous year in gospel work, I am, very respectfully,
Your coworker,
S. S. SMITH.
May 19.

To the Missionaries of the Clinton and Spring River Districts; Being appointed to labor as assistant missionary in charge another year to get this work before the people that the honest in heart may have the opportunity of obeying the angel's message, and thus be privileged to enjoy the blessings God has promised to the faithful ones. Neglect no opportunity of presenting the gospel when offered.

The local brethren that are holding the priesthood will report the work done to the district president July 1, October 1, January 1, and March 1, so they can report the same to me. The missionaries appointed to labor in the above districts will report to me on the above dates; this be sure and do, so we can get our report to the ministers in charge at the proper time.

Saints, as we are all colaborers in this great work, we ask your hearty assistance in getting new openings and places for the missionaries to hold meeting; we can not make a success without your help. And as the Lord has said, "he that is warned let him warn his neighbor." When the elders come to hold meetings invite your neighbors out, and thus help the missionary to make the meeting what it should be; and assist him financially, as he has no way to earn the money to get clothing and for traveling expenses. He does not like to come to you and ask for help, for he knows not but that you are in the same condition, besides he feels timid. If he has to be helped out of the tithing fund then that takes it away from the family that is left at home. This should not be done. I am not complaining, for you did so well last year I want to extend to you the highest commendation for your hearty support. I believe I can be safe in saying that you will continue in giving your hearty support both in the above and in tithes and offerings, for you love this work too dearly to think about slackening in any of your duties. Let us then go hand in hand with cheerful hearts laboring together for the salvation of souls.

You that are isolated, if you can secure a place where meetings can be held, let us know, and some of us will come and help you get the work before your neighbors.

Trusting that much good may be done this year, I remain,
Your brother and colaborer in the Master's vineyard,
HOLDEN, Missouri, Lock Box 306. GEO. JENKINS.

To the Saints of St. Louis and Southern Illinois Districts: It is with some degree of pleasure that I find myself and my associate laborer assigned to this field for another year, and if our association is as pleasant as last year, with the additional knowledge of the needs of the field, and the additional help of two young missionaries, our success should be assured.

Along with my associates I enter into the year's work with increased confidence in the willingness of the Saints to help us make this the banner year of our life work. The late General Conference was one to inspire new hope in the hearts of all. We have a tent in each district, and we have Saints living in small towns where the tents might be of service. Let Saints write, and do not be backward because you think you might be unable to care for the elders. Write me anyway. I have confidence in your brethren to help you get a foothold.

With the addition of two missionaries, it means a little more in the way of tithing. Bro. Russell Archibald, 5741 Garfield Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri, is agent for St. Louis District; F. M. Davis, Thomsonville, Illinois, R. F. D. No. 6, is agent for the Southern Illinois District. Paste these addresses on the looking-glass where you will see them three times a day, if not oftener, and when you have a dollar remember your duty. We need your help, the people need the gospel, and you need the reward. My field address is 2941 Thomas Street, St. Louis, Missouri.

Yours in bonds,
HENRY SPARLING.

Bishop's Agents' Notices.

To the Saints of Southern Indiana District: I have been appointed Bishop's agent for the district instead of Bro. J. J. Boswell, and I will visit each branch as soon as possible, as well as the isolated members; but I trust that all will pay their tithing at once, or as soon as possible. All true Saints know God's law regarding this, and I want to hear from each one. If you can not pay much pay a little. Trusting that all will regard this notice in a proper manner, I am,
In gospel bonds,
JOHN ZAHND.

2017 Culbertson Avenue, NEW ALBANY, Indiana.

Conference Notices.

The Southern Indiana District will convene at New Albany, June 20 and 21. Those attending write Bro. John Zahnd, 2017 Culbertson Avenue, New Albany. Branches not reporting by delegates will please send reports before the 15th. Ed. O. Byrn, secretary.

Conference of the Central Michigan District will be held at Coleman, Michigan, June 13, 1908, at 10 a. m. Branch secretaries will please send reports to me not later than June 10. Can we not have a report from every branch in the district? There are twenty-one branches and we receive reports from about thirteen. We haven't heard from Brinton since the district was formed. There will be no charge for meals at conference, so let every one bring a well-filled basket and make the burden lighter. Addie Grant, secretary, Bentley, Michigan.

Northern Wisconsin district conference will be held with Porcupine Branch, June 13, at 10 a. m. Branch presidents will please see that their reports reach me in time. Address me at Arkansaw, Wisconsin, in care of O. D. Gano, R. F. D. All expecting to attend please notify S. E. Livingston, Arkansaw, Wisconsin, R. F. D., in time so arrangements can be made to meet you Friday, the 12th, at Durand. W. P. Robinson, president.

The Northern Michigan District will convene at East Jordan, June 27 and 28. Secretaries, send reports to my address by the 24th. Charles Burtch, secretary.

Conference of the Mobile District will be held with the Three Rivers Branch, July 11 at 10 a. m. Be prepared to elect another as president as my field has been changed. Alma Booker, president.

London District conference will meet in Waterford, Ontario, June 20, 1908. No reports are required from the branches. Delegate rates have been secured. See Canadian Messenger. All are cordially invited. Hannah Leeder, secretary.

The Minnesota District conference will be held at Clitherall, Minnesota, June 20 and 21, 1908. Hallie M. Gould, secretary.

The Far West District will convene with the Stewartville Branch on June 13, 1908, 10 a. m. Attention is called to the following which was passed at the conference held in St. Joseph, Missouri, February 22, 1908: "Resolved, That hereafter the ministry comprising the priesthood of this district, shall report their labors to the president of the respective branches, of which they are members; then the presidents of the seven branches shall summarize these labors in their reports to the conference." D. E. Powell, president. Charles P. Faul, secretary.

Central Illinois District will convene at Beardstown, Illinois, on June 13, 1908. Every one is cordially invited to attend. Chas. C. Simpson, secretary and treasurer.

Southern Missouri District will convene with Springfield Branch, June 13, 14. Send all reports and quarterly dues to me in care of J. W. Quinly, 1995 Boonville Street, Springfield, Missouri. J. C. Chrestensen, president and secretary.

Convention Notices.

Zion's Religio-Literary Society of the London District will meet at Waterford, Ontario, Thursday, June 18, 1908, at 2 p. m. Lucy Yerks, secretary.

The Gallands Grove, Iowa, District will convene at Dow City, Iowa, June 11, 1908, at 8.00 p. m. Floy Holcomb, secretary.

The Spokane District Sunday-school Association will convene in Saints' Chapel, Spokane, Corner Smith Street and Third Avenue, Friday, June 12, at 2.30 p. m., one day before district conference. Oliver Turnbull, secretary.

Spring River District Sunday-school association and Religio Society will convene at Columbus, Kansas, Friday, June 11, 1908. Mabel C. Holsworth, secretary.

Convention of Northern Wisconsin District Sunday-school Association will be held at Porcupine, Wisconsin, Monday, June 15. Archie Hook, secretary, Nekoosa, Wisconsin.

Reunion Notices.

The Northern Minnesota District will hold a reunion in Clitherall, commencing June 13, and continuing over two Sundays. Some of the leading men of the church will be with us. Let all Saints come and bring the good Spirit with them. A. L. Murdock, secretary of committee.

A reunion will be held twenty-five miles north of North Platte, Nebraska, commencing June 27 and continuing for ten days. Parties coming by rail will be met at North Platte on June 27 from 7 to 9 a. m., by reception committee who will convey them to the reunion grounds. Committee will have blue ribbon badges on their left shoulders. Parties coming on other dates can get transportation by stage line from North Platte to Tryon. Tent-room for all, but be sure to let us know your requirements, as tents will be free. There will be free cook-stove, free fuel, pasturage, hay, water, etc. We expect to have one of the Twelve with us, as also Elders J. R. Sutton and J. E. Kelley. C. W. Prettyman, president, Tryon, Nebraska.

A reunion will be held in the Eastern Iowa District some time in July or August at Oelwein, Iowa. Those wishing tents should notify me early as to size wanted, as this will be the busy season for tents. The prices following are for two weeks' use, the time required for reunion and conference: 7x2 $2, 10x12 $2.75, 12x14 $3.25, 14x16 $3.75, 14x20 $4.50; compartment tents 10x14, 2 rooms, $4.75, 14x14, 3 rooms, $6, 14x21, 5 rooms, $7.25. There will be also a freight charge of about twenty-five cents. The exact date of the reunion will be given later. Robert Smith, secretary committee.

Two-day Meetings.

There will be a two-day meeting at Chetek, Wisconsin, June 20 and 21, 1908, in harmony with conference resolutions of last February. Come one and all, and let us have a spiritual feast together. W. P. Robinson, president.

Two-day meetings of the Mobile District will be held by brethren as follows: Three Rivers, June 6, 7, Oscar Tillman and N. L. Booker; Bluff Creek, June 6, 7, F. M. Slover and G. W. Sherman; Theodore, June 13, 14, N. L. Booker and G. W. Sherman; Bayminette, June 13, 14, W. L. Booker and F. M. Slover; Perseverance, June 20, 21, F. M. Slover and N. L. Booker. The Horse Shoe Branch will please meet with the Three Rivers Branch on above date. Alma Booker, president.

Wanted.

The HERALD Editors desire a copy of the Leaves for December, 1907, to complete their file.

Corrections.

In the death notice of Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Sr., in issue of May 20, the date of birth was given as 1859. This should have been 1839.

Addresses.

S. S. Smith, till July 15, 1827, East Olive Avenue, Spokane, Washington.
Amos Berve, 1019 East Fifteenth Street, Davenport, Iowa.
Alma Booker, Greenwood, New York.
W. E. LaRue, 1389 East Ninetieth Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

Died.

ADAMSON.—John Adamson was born at Fadam Square, England, October 17, 1842; died at Jerome, Arizona, May 4, 1908. Six children survive: Robert Adamson, Hiteman, Iowa, Mrs. Alice Nichols, Cleveland, Iowa, Mrs. Mary Barker, England, Mrs. Emma Cobb and John Adamson, Butte, Montana. Interment at Lucas by the side of his wife who preceded him twenty-four years ago. Elder E. B. Morgan preaching funeral-sermon, assisted by Brn. John J. Watkins and Thomas A. John, at Saints' church.

MOON.—At Lamoni, Iowa, May 15, 1908. Fred was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Moon; he was born at Lamoni, Iowa, November 15, 1884, where his earth-life of 23½ years was spent. September 19, 1906, he married Sr. Ruth Atkinson. Left to mourn, a youthful wife, father, mother, brother, and sister. Funeral from parents' home in charge of Elder Moroni Traxler, sermon by Robert M. Elvin, to a large sympathizing audience. Interment in Rose Hill.

CATON.—At his residence, 189 Oldfield Road, Sparkbrook, Birmingham, England, Elder Charles Henry Caton, the dearly beloved husband of Sarah A. Caton, passed peacefully away April 27, 1908, aged 61 years. At rest after much suffering.

SCHAEFFER.—William Henry Schaeffer, born December 20, 1869, died May 21, 1908, at Scranton, Pennsylvania; was laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery of Peckville. Was baptized into the church when a boy. His mother died shortly afterwards. The Plymouth Branch of which he was a member, became disorganized, and under these conditions he lost track of the church. For the past ten years he has been sorely afflicted with the miner's asthma. Death to him was a blessing. He leaves a faithful wife, father, step-mother, five brothers, two sisters, one step-son and step-daughter. Funeral in charge of Bro. Tally Jones. Sermon by Elder William Lewis. Wife, step-mother, and father are members of the church.

GODBEY.—Gordon Huston Godbey was born January 20, 1841, at Newbern, Pulaski County, Virginia. Was baptized by Elder D. L. Shinn, in Jackson County, West Virginia, August 4, 1890; was wonderfully strengthened and confirmed in the faith; and was soon ordained a priest, and began preaching. He was afterward ordained an elder and began a life of steady missionary work; traveled much and baptized many. After organization of the West Virginia District, he was ordained high priest, and elected president, in which position he continued to the end. He is survived by wife, four children at home, and three daughters married; all, I believe, being in the church except the little ones.

COX.—Sr. Julia Cox at Wilburton, Oklahoma, May 3, 1908; funeral by E. A. Erwin at Saints' church on May 4; interment in Wilburton Cemetery. Baptized by A. B. Moore in 1895. She was a loving wife, a kind mother, a noble Saint, and loved by all who knew her. She leaves husband and four children to mourn.

SHAW.—Annie May, beloved wife of George G. Shaw, and daughter of J. R. Lloyd, was born January 20, 1878, at St. Louis, Missouri; united with the church in 1894, being baptized by Charles Jones; married September 14, 1904, to George G. Shaw, to whom was born one son; died May 7, 1908, leaving to mourn husband, son, father, mother, two brothers, two sisters, and other relatives. Funeral from the church to Bellfontaine Cemetery, conducted by J. A. Tanner.

WITHEE.—Joseph A. Withee was born March 9, 1879, at Yankton, South Dakota. In 1898 he enlisted and served in the Philippines with the First Regiment of Nebraska Volunteers, receiving an honorable discharge upon their return. On November 18, 1903, he was united in marriage with Miss Eva Coates. On March 10, while engaged at his trade as an iron-worker, he fell from a steel bridge on the Lane cut-off of the Union Pacific Railroad near Omaha by which he received injuries from which he died May 22, 1908. He leaves a young wife, two little boys aged four and two, mother, four brothers, and three sisters. His interest was growing in the gospel work and it is likely that before long he would have been with us had he lived. Funeral at the chapel, Omaha, Nebraska, in charge of F. R. Schafer, sermon by Charles Fry.

Resolution of Respect.

Whereas, God, our heavenly Father, in infinite wisdom and love was pleased to call from our midst our beloved brother and coworker, Elder Joshua Armstrong; and notwithstanding we the Second Quorum of Elders deeply deplore the loss of such an esteemed brother, yet we feel to rejoice in the fact that a lively hope of a glorious resurrection gladdened his soul at the hour of his departure. This noble character being comprised of that which is good and true we deem it well worthy of emulation. May He who doeth all things well give us patience to bear with meekness the affliction we feel at our brother's departure. He has gone to his rest to realize the hope he enjoyed and ultimately receive the reward of his labors, and may we who mourn expect to meet him face to face with our blessed Master when the labors of life are ended. Therefore be it resolved, That we offer condolence to his bereaved widow and relatives and earnestly pray that heaven's blessings may rest upon them; and be it further resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes, and also sent to the church papers for publication, and to the relatives of the deceased brother.

F. C. WARNKY,
C. DEPUY,
B. F. DURFEE,
Committee.

"Correct English: How to Use It."

By Josephine Turck Baker, editor of the magazine, Correct English: How to Use It, Evanston, Illinois. Copyright 1904, by Josephine Turck Baker.

ARTICLE IV. COMMON ERRORS OF THE CARELESS SPEAKER.

It is the careless speaker who misuses the verbs "sit" and "set."⁸ For some unknown reason he seems to think that only human beings are privileged to sit, and that hens, articles of furniture, etc., are obliged to set. One may set a table or a hen, but after the "setting" has been accomplished, the dishes sit on the table and the hen sits on her nest. In poetry, "The bird sits brooding o'er her nest." If birds can sit o'er their nests, hens should have the same privilege. One will not be apt to misuse the verbs sit and set if one will remember first, that "sit" expresses inaction while "set" expresses action (to cause to sit); and, secondly, that the principal parts of "sit" are, present "sit," past "sat," present participle "sitting" and past participle "sat"; while the principal parts of "set" are: present "set," past "set," present participle "setting," past participle "set."

GRAMMATICAL CONSTRUCTION.—SIT AND SET.

		Sit (intransitive verb)*
Present	Past	Present	Participle	Past	Participle
Sit	sat	sitting		sat
		Set (transitive verb)*
Present	Past	Present	Participle	Past	Participle
Set	set	setting		set

SIT AND ITS USES.

"Sit" means to occupy a seat.

1. He told her to sit down and she sat down.
2. He is sitting beside her.
3. Having sat down he proceeded to explain the situation.
4. He had sat down by the wayside to rest.

*"Sit" and "set" have a transitive and an intransitive form but "sit," in its main uses, is transitive, while "set" in its main uses is transitive.

Sit (transitive): He could not sit his mule.—Shakespeare.

Set (intransitive): The sun is setting.

NOTE.—"Set" in this sense means to sink down, to settle, as the sun, moon, or stars.

"Sit" means to perch or to roost.

The bird sits brooding o'er her nest.

The hen is sitting on her eggs.

NOTE.—"Sit" also means to be worn or adjusted; fit, as a garment; hence used figuratively of anything assumed, as an appearance, opinion or habit.

1. Your dress does not sit (not set) well.

"Her little air of precision sits so well upon her."

SET AND ITS USES.

"Set" means to cause to be seated or to cause to rest.

1. He told her to set the child down.
2. Having set the child down, she set the table.
3. She had set the table and was setting the chairs around it when you entered the room.

Forest Planting on the Northern Prairies.

Nowhere in the United States, perhaps, is the need of forest planting greater than on the prairies of Minnesota and the Dakotas, and nowhere is it more profitable for commercial returns. Protection from wind and storm is essential for the well-being of the family, the stock, and the orchard. Indeed, in many cases it is the presence and shelter of belts of trees about the farm buildings, with their continuous supplies of fuel, that mark the distinction between the comfortable home and the one wherein comfort is lacking. Owners estimate the value of good groves, on an average, at $1,000 an acre, on the basis that their property, if placed upon the market, would be increased to that extent by the trees. Bankers and land agents take special note of thrifty groves, for they have learned that buyers are ready to pay for the protection and comfort of a grove. The effectiveness of the grove as a windbreak is determined largely by the number and kinds of trees planted and their relative positions.

When planting for direct profit is contemplated, inquiry becomes necessary into (1) the market, (2) the cost of production, and (3) the species planted. As a result of the absence of natural supplies, posts, poles, and fuel wood are shipped into this region from Northern Minnesota at a freight rate of 10 cents a hundredweight, or about $3.50 a cord. This, with the original selling price and the dealer's profit, brings the local selling price up to from $7 to $11 a cord.

Cottonwood and white willow are profitable on the deep, porous soils of the river valleys. Seven cottonwood groves yielded in lumber and fuel an average annual net return per acre of $10.67, while eight groves of white willow gave products of posts and fuel equal to an average annual net return of $24 per acre. European larch and Scotch pine produce, respectively, an annual net return per acre of $11.93 and $13.35 when planted on upland, and would do even better in the river valleys. White spruce, Norway spruce, and

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same. All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

western yellow pine are also adapted for planting for wind-break purposes. In species for park, lawn, and roadside planting, symmetry and gracefulness are important considerations.

Cuttings are usually used in establishing a plantation of willow or cottonwood. The expense is little or nothing. Seedlings of broadleaf trees are easily procured. Unfortunately, coniferous stock is expensive. Considering, however, their high protective value in the winter, and their ability to resist drought, heat, cold, storm, and snow pressure, and the quality of the wood produced, conifers have proved more desirable for permanent plantations than broadleaves.—"Forest Planting on the Northern Prairies," issued by the United States Forest Service.

Let's Keep our Young Men Farmers at Home.

The population of Iowa is being rapidly depleted each year by the emigration of our young men to the West and Northwest, and many of them to Canada.

A proper encouragement of the dairy industry will stop this. When it is known that dairying can be done profitably on Iowa land at $100 per acre, and when our young men find by what method this can be accomplished, our farms will be reduced in size and our boys given a profitable occupation at home, while the profits from agriculture in the State will greatly increase through methods of intensive farming.

Iowa farmers who bought their land when it was cheap would be encouraged by our educational campaign to remain and reinvest their money at home instead of going to Texas, Canada, South Dakota, or any place else, where conditions are new to them, where they will be removed from friends and associates, and compelled practically to start life anew without the educational and other facilities offered by our now rich state of Iowa. Legislative Committee Iowa State Dairy Association, E. R. Shoemaker, chairman, 181 Bridge Street, Waterloo, Iowa.

The city of Philadelphia will celebrate the two hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of their city government from October 4-10, this year. The first day is to be religious and will be the greatest of the celebration. "It will be by far the most impressing co-mingling of all creeds and faiths in the history of this or any other country." This is certainly commendable and entirely in keeping with the idea of "brotherly love," as indicated by the name given the city by its founder, William Penn. The program for the week is as follows:

- Sunday, October 4.—Religious Day.
- Monday, October 5.—Military Day. Parade of 25,000 troops.
- Tuesday, October 6.—Parade of Police and Fire Departments of city and State. Assembly of clergy in Friends' Meeting-house.
- Wednesday, October 7.—All Day Industrial Parade.
- Thursday, October 8.—Naval Day. Review of thirteen limited states and foreign war vessels.
- Friday, October 9.—Historic Pageant.
- Saturday, October 10.—Knights Templar Day.

Dairying Maintains Soil Fertility.

Every farm should be worth more money at the end of each year. Yet we find that between the years of 1880 and 1900 the aggregate value of farm lands in the New England and Middle States declined something over $300,000,000. Even in Ohio, we find a depreciation during the same period of $60,000,000. In the densely populated portions of Europe where dairying and diversified farming is carried on extensively, the yield of cereal crops per acre is gradually increasing every year while ours has been slowly diminishing.

Dairying is the only method of farming that will keep up the fertility of our soil, and on the maintenance of the fertility of Iowa farms depends almost entirely the future success of the Iowa farmer. A ton of butter, which has a market value at the present time of $600, only removes 50c worth of fertilizing material from the soil. A ton of wheat, which has a market value of about $22, robs the soil of $7.50 worth of fertility, and this is practically true of all of our grains.—Legislative Committee Iowa State Dairying Association, E. R. Shoemaker, chairman, 181 Bridge Street, Waterloo, Iowa.

The HERALD editors are in receipt of the most marvelous photograph ever made, showing five hundred different views of President Roosevelt assembled in one big picture, which forms the double-page feature of the June Woman's Home Companion. These hundreds of photographs, taken in almost every State and Territory in the Union, show our strenuous President in all periods of his public life—as cowboy, rough rider, governor, speaking, lecturing, on horseback, etc. Whether we admire Mr. Roosevelt or not, we can not but marvel at the great collection of photographs of this human dynamo which have been brought together here in one picture. It is the most remarkable picture ever made.

The New Hymnal Now Ready

- No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
- No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
- No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
- No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

Are You Interested In Independence?

Then you should have one of those pictorial books with historical sketch of Independence.

A book made by the genuine Carbon Photo process (not Engravings), contains twenty pages of views and two pages descriptive. Price 50c each.

One 5x7 view would cost you at least 25c, but this booklet all complete for 50c, the universal price for 20 pages for this grade of work, or only 2 1/2c a page. The Independence Examiner says . . . It is a beautiful souvenir executed in a most artistic manner and should be in every library in Independence.

EVAN V. DAVIS, Photographer,
Lock Box 35, Independence, Missouri.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice, Mite, and Rain Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

Atonement of Christ and Final Destiny of Man

Revised and Enlarged
No. 17—10 cents each.

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

- No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
- No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
- No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
- No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

Spanish Tracts

- No. 350 Epitome De La Fe, per doz.. 10c
- No. 351 Restauración, per doz. . . . 10c

EXCURSIONS

via

From Lamoni, Iowa Colorado

The greatest summer resort state in America; $22.10 round trip to Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo; $34.10 round trip to Glenwood Springs. Proportionately low rates to other points.

Pacific Coast Round Trip

$64.60 to San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Victoria or Vancouver. $79.60 for Grand Tour including all Coast Cities.

Yellowstone Park

$57.10 to Mammoth Hot Springs and return; additional charge for hotels and staging in Park.

To the East

Low round trip rates to principal points in Michigan, Canada, St. Lawrence River, Adirondack Mts. and New England; reduced rates June 19 and 20 via New York City to Boston.

Other Round Trip Rates

$35.10 Salt Lake City, Utah;
$24.15 Hot Springs, S. D.;
$15.60 St. Paul or Minneapolis.

Big Horn Basin Excursions

Personally conducted homeseekers' excursions 1st and 3rd Tuesday each month, under guidance of D. Clem Deaver, General Agent Landseekers' Information Bureau, Omaha, to assist settlers to secure irrigated lands in the Big Horn Basin, Wyo., and Yellowstone Valley, Mont.

No matter where you are going this Summer, I can give you rates and useful information and interesting illustrated folders. Ask for them please.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent, C., B. & Q. Ry.

The Jackson County Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

ELLIS SHORT, President.	M. H. BOND, Vice-president.
WM. CRICK, Vice-president.	J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.
G. H. HILLIARD.	DR. J. MATHER.
MRS. O. H. RIGGS.	A. L. YINGLING.
HORACE SHELEY.

Very truly yours,
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid .. $30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply lasts). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

"HEAVEN AND HELL" BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps
PASTOR LANDENBERGER,
Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK

LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, JUNE 10, 1908

NUMBER 24

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
ISRAEL A. SMITH, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

Editorial

THE AX AT THE ROOT OF THE TREE.

Jesus did not doctor symptoms. He struck at the malady itself. He knew that the symptoms would disappear when the disease was eradicated.

To change the metaphor, he saw that the multi-form evils of the world sprang from a common root and he made it his work to destroy the root. His gospel was designed to strike at primal evils from which all lesser ones grow.

John, the great forerunner of the Messiah, expressed it thus, "And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."—Luke 3: 9.

Every evil that affects humanity has its roots deep in human nature, as human nature is at present interpreted. No evil, whether social, moral, or economic, could continue to exist if the world were peopled with the right kind of men and women. Christ recognized that simple truth and proposed to get the right kind of men and women. He went back to the unit of society, the individual. He proposed to regenerate society by regenerating individuals. He declared, "Except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God."—John 3: 3. He made it his work and the work of his disciples to see that men were born again, by a process of regeneration, they themselves cooperating with God in that regeneration. A community composed of that kind of individuals would naturally be a regenerated community. Such communities have never existed except as a result of gospel regeneration; following such a regeneration they came into existence in the days of Enoch, in the church in Judea, and during a period of Book of Mormon history.

We would not argue that Saints should not do what they can to aid sporadic movements looking toward reform, or that they should not do what they can individually or in an organized way to alleviate the sufferings that are in the world because of evil. In fact it is contemplated that men should so do, pending the final and complete culmination of gospel work. For instance, immediately following his declaration regarding the ax and the tree, John said, "He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none." Poverty is a symptom, only.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

The Ax at the Root of the Tree - - - -	553
Monument for Joseph and Hyrum Smith - - -	554
The Epitome of Faith as Changed by the Utah Church	555
Lamoni Items - - - - -	555
Notes and Comments - - - - -	556

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

Methods of Advertising - - - - -	557
----------------------------------	-----

OF GENERAL INTEREST:

The Dedication of Kirtland Temple - - - -	562
Let Him Name His Scholars - - - - -	565

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:

Letter - - - - -	566
"The Baby Was a Mistake" - - - - -	567
Request for Prayers - - - - -	567

LETTER DEPARTMENT:

Over the Mountains - - - - -	567
Letters - - - - -	568
Extracts from Letters - - - - -	570

NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - - -

570

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:

Conference Minutes:
Western Maine - - - - -	573
Convention Minutes:
Massachusetts - - - - -	573
Little Sioux - - - - -	573
Bishop's Agents' Notices - - - - -	573
Pastoral - - - - -	574

There are still people who endeavor to deny or disbelieve the discoveries of science. They are setting themselves athwart the stream, and trying to stop its advance;—they only succeed in stopping their own. They are good people, but unwise, and, moreover, untrustful. If they will let go their anchorage, and sail on in a spirit of fearless faith, they will find an abundant reward, by attaining a deeper insight into the Divine Nature, and a wider and brighter outlook over the destiny of man.—Sir Oliver Lodge.

Charity, as manifested in the act of giving, is only a palliative. Yet the Saints may do what they can to mitigate that evil until the gospel finally destroys the root from which it grows.

Another illustration may be taken from the work of the Anti-saloon League, in fighting the liquor traffic. To the extent that they are successful they will reduce the sum total of human misery and crime. The Saints are free to cooperate with them in every legitimate effort to secure the desired end. Yet they can not remove the cause that first led men to manufacture and use drugs and liquors. On the other hand, the man who has truly obeyed the gospel has no desire to either sell or use intoxicants or harmful drugs. Any community composed of such men would have no need of legislation prohibiting such a traffic. The ax would have severed the root and the evil would die.

No system or scheme of reform that does not include regeneration of the individual by the power of the gospel can ever permanently succeed. The gospel strikes at the root of all evil. Reforms that operate independent of the gospel can at best only lop off a few of the branches.

Here is a beautiful flower-bed. The plants are growing thick and strong. A wide-spreading, repulsive weed has taken root among them. Presently it thrusts a branch up into view among the flowers. The florist seizes it and wrenches it off. Two days later another branch appears in a part of the bed a little removed from the first appearance. The florist breaks that branch off. A few days later he notices many branches, apparently individual weeds, defiantly rearing their heads above the flowers. He investigates and finds that they have one common origin. Carefully he reaches his knife among the flowers and severs the pest at the root. Notice how quickly all the branches wither and die.

An occasional ramification of evil, upthrusting its head among the virtues of the world, is attacked and perhaps subdued by reformers. The sap from the main root is simply diverted into other branches and they grow the more lustily. Christ proposes to get close to the soil, to strike at the source of life.

Therefore the preaching and actual living of the gospel is the first and most important work that is committed to the church. "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness." So far as the Saints are concerned other interests must be secondary. ELBERT A. SMITH.

The passions and capacities of our nature are foundations of power, happiness, and glory; but if we turn them into occasions and sources of self-indulgence, the structure itself falls, and buries everything in its overwhelming desolation.—G. B. Cheever.

MONUMENT FOR JOSEPH AND HYRUM SMITH.

Reverend A. H. Smith and Heman C. Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley, of Lamoni, Iowa, Joseph Smith, of Independence, Missouri, and George P. Lambert, of Adrain, were here the past week and held nightly meetings at the city hall. On Sunday evening Joseph Smith, now seventy-six years old, delivered an interesting address.

The above gentlemen met with a number of our citizens at the city hall last Sunday afternoon for the purpose of considering the matter of erecting a monument to the memory of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. Those present as a unit extended the committee a hearty welcome with a wish that they erect the monument in Nauvoo. Following is a report of the meeting held by the committee in Nauvoo on Thursday last:

Prayer was offered by Joseph Smith. Organization was effected by the selection of Joseph Smith, chairman; Heman C. Smith, secretary; and Edward L. Kelley, treasurer. Some historical reminiscences were related by Joseph Smith and others. The following resolutions were then adopted:

Whereas, The erection of a suitable monument to Joseph and Hyrum Smith will require additional funds than what has been already donated and appropriated for this purpose,

Be it resolved, That the secretary and treasurer are authorized to solicit further means for this purpose, and that as soon as the amount is in hand the place of erection be fixed, and the work at once entered upon.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the committee that the monument be erected at Nauvoo, provided sufficient means are obtained to erect a suitable monument and properly improve the grounds.

Adjourned to meet at the call of chairman. Heman C. Smith, secretary.

The committee does not ask any money from Nauvoo, but all donations cheerfully given will be thankfully received. A monument to cost several thousand dollars will be erected and if Nauvoo is selected as the place, the monument will be placed on the old Joseph Smith residence property, where it is said the remains of the Smiths lie buried. It is the purpose also to erect a nice cottage on the premises where some one will reside and have constant supervision over the grounds, and the Rustler believes that the people of this part of the country ought to take a deep interest in the matter and meet the parties in a businesslike way. Nauvoo is the place where the monument ought to be erected, but let us extend to the committee a hearty welcome to locate it here.—Nauvoo Rustler, June 2.

Believe that story false that ought not to be true.—Sheridan.

THE EPITOME OF FAITH AS CHANGED BY THE UTAH CHURCH.

In a pamphlet issued by the Northern States Mission of the Utah Church, 149 South Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois, and written by Charles W. Penrose, of the Utah Quorum of Twelve, on its 15th page he introduces the articles of faith by the following statement, "What the Mormons believe, is thus epitomized as formulated by the Prophet Joseph Smith." Then follows the epitome of faith published in 1842 and 1844 by Joseph Smith the Prophet. Into the fourth paragraph of which these cunning Utah priesthood have introduced the word first before the word principles.

The article as written by Joseph Smith when published in 1842 and 1844, reads, "We believe that the principles and ordinances of the Gospel are"; these Utah teachers make it read, "We believe that the first principles and ordinances of the Gospel are."

This change is evidently made for the express purpose of using the word first, as applied to the principles and ordinances, as a cover under which to introduce their system of plurality of wives and other corrupt doctrines. We would have no disposition to say that they should not formulate their own epitome of faith and belief; but when they make Joseph Smith the Prophet responsible for any part of their departure from the original faith, we have the undoubted right to object with as strong a protest as we can make to their falsifying the record, misquoting or misstating what the prophet, Joseph Smith, said or did. This right of protest inures to us as successors in the gospel economy instituted by the angel's message, as well as by the unchallenged right accruing to us as his son, desirous of shielding his memory from the effect of prejudicing the minds of those not acquainted with the facts, both in the church and out of it, as to what the original doctrines were.

A man of ordinary intelligence should not unwisely condescend to make changes in published documents when he knows there are those who stand ready to challenge those changes and have the evidence at hand upon which to convict him of fraud and show its fraudulent intent and purpose. We are often led to exclaim aloud, as well as in spirit, "How long, O Lord, will this refuge of lies be permitted to continue?"

LAMONI ITEMS.

At the branch business-meeting, June 2, eight members were received by letter. The statistical report prepared for the next stake conference shows a net gain of twenty-five since last report; the present membership is fifteen hundred and thirty. About four hundred are absent from the branch. The question of building a new church was taken up and discussed. A committee of five was elected to take the matter under advisement and report later. Those appointed were Heman C. Smith, John Smith, R. J. Lambert, Charles F. Church, and W. A. Hopkins. A committee of three, consisting of Heman C. Smith, Sr. M. Walker, and William Anderson, was elected to confer with the committee on location of the children's home. The sentiment was expressed that the question of finance should not determine where the home should be located. The question of fitness alone should determine its location. Whatever is given by the Saints of any locality should be given to help and not in any sense to compete with any other locality in an effort to secure the home.

The semi-annual meeting of the Decatur County Historical Society was held in the Brick Church Thursday forenoon and afternoon. The program as announced last week was carried out with some variations. The musical and literary features of the program were of an exceptionally high order. Those who conceive of the meetings of historical societies as dry and prosy would certainly have changed their minds had they been present. The papers dealing with local history and the speeches made by old settlers were interesting, spicy, and full of wit and romantic reminiscence. The meetings were presided over by Honorable G. P. Arnold, of Garden Grove; Elder Heman C. Smith acted as secretary. The society now has a membership of one hundred and twenty-seven. It is a pioneer in such work in Iowa, being the second county historical society to be organized in the State. It was organized seven years ago under the leadership of President F. M. Smith, with five members, all of whom were elected to office.

President Joseph Smith came to Lamoni Saturday from Nauvoo, Ferris, and other points in Illinois. He was joined by Sr. Smith and the two will spend a few days in Lamoni, after which they will make an extended visit in Canada. We also have President Fred M. Smith and family with us; Bro. Fred on church business, Sr. Ruth to visit relatives.

College commencement events have claimed a goodly portion of time during the past week. These events began with the recitals of the school of oratory and the school of music, Thursday and Friday evenings, respectively. The annual banquet was held Saturday afternoon, and in the evening Honorable V. R. McGinnis delivered an address in the college chapel. His subject was "Self-government." He presented the idea that government is not an end, but a means to an end,—the end being to enable each individual to have the utmost liberty to "develop his own talents and reap the fruits of his own toil," the only limit to individual liberty being the boundary line of the rights of others. Sunday morning President R. M. Stewart delivered a carefully prepared baccalaureate address at the Brick Church. The events of the week close with the commencement exercises proper of Wednesday forenoon. These of course are too late to report in this issue of the HERALD. Undoubtedly the community at Lamoni is greatly benefited by the presence of Graceland College. It affords the people a chance to come in contact with educational movements and lends a variety and color to the social life that otherwise would not obtain.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Elder W. S. Pender, assisted by his wife, has been holding a series of meetings at a Spanish settlement four miles south of Bisbee, Arizona. Street-services were held, music from the Bilhorn organ. The preaching was in the Spanish language. Elder Knisley reports himself as an interested but unlightened participant in the meetings. He is studying the Spanish language with a view to remedying this defect, and has progressed to a point where he can say, "viva la Mexicana." The wisdom of mastering that phrase first may appear later.

Under date of June 4 Elder T. W. Williams writes from Los Angeles as follows:

"My Dear Brother: All arrangements consummated for a two weeks' 'vacation' at Fresno, California. Minister in charge concurring; 'Salary' to continue. Bro. A. Carmichael accompanies me. Expect to spend most of the time 'hunting and fishing.' Only one restriction. I am obligated to devote two hours each evening in entertaining one E. A. Bedicheck, a so-called 'Church of Christ' man from Texas. Hope to make the entertainment so interesting that our friend will have profound sleep at the end of each performance. Am indebted to Bro. J. B. Carmichael for this short respite from active pastoral work. If we fail in our purpose we will discreetly 'say no more about it'; that is, providing we are astute enough to sense it. Bro. F. G. Pitt is at work in San Bernardino; likes his mission and takes well with the people."

The following press dispatch gives an account of Reverend William Sunday's recent eruption. He seems to spout some truth along with a lot of mud and hot ashes:

"PITTSBURG, June 1.—Reverend 'Billy' Sunday, the evangelist, delivered an address to the Presbyterian ministers of Pittsburg to-day. His words caused consternation among the preachers, some of whom left the First Presbyterian church with their dignity stung, but most of them remained. Reverend Sunday, who is a former professional baseball player, has been conducting a revival at Sharon, near here, and came to Pittsburg to speak on 'Why some ministers fail.' The evangelist said many of the ministers of the present day were 'fudge-eating molycoddles who were continually springing "bullcon" to their congregations.'

"He asserted that few ministers of to-day are anything but stiffs, salary quacks, willing to accept serial distinction, and that many of them are 'qualified for the funny house.'

"Continuing he said: 'Some of you ministers are controlled by riches and not by the Bible. Many of you are grafters, pure and simple. You know this, too. There are some of you preaching to-day that should be carrying the hod.

"'What we want is to tear down the seminaries and stand the professors on their heads in mud-puddles. A seminary and its teachings are of no more use to preaching than a crane's legs are to a setting hen.

"'I am not an osteopath. I am a surgeon, and my line is to cut out the abscess in the side of the church.'"

The Los Angeles Examiner, May 31, contained the following: "Discounting the theories of scientists regarding historic life in Western America, and routing the elaborately conducted systems of the world's greatest geologists, workmen digging near Claremont yesterday unearthed the remains of a huge elephant, the type of animal known as a mammoth, as distinguished from the mastodon, both creatures of the pre-glacial epoch.

"The bones of the huge animal were found in the bed of a small stream which runs through 'Puddin' Stone' Canyon. Its body was twenty-six feet long, and, though it had been crushed by the vast mass of earth which at one time covered it, it is believed to have stood at least fifteen feet high.

"Geologists have formulated the theory that, while the mastodon was found in Southern California, the mammoth never wandered this far south. The discovery at Claremont yesterday sets all this aside as false, and as a consequence, the whole prehistoric plan of animal life in this end of California must be changed. The fauna of the lands in which the mammoth lived was totally different from that of the section in which the mostodon wandered. What then must have been the bird and mammal life of a land which sheltered both these monsters?"

The Independence Examiner of recent date contains mention of our Sunday-school there, as follows: "The Sunday-school of the Reorganized Latter Day Saint Church had an attendance Sunday morning of eight hundred and twenty-four scholars, a gain over the previous Sunday of one hundred and twelve. It is the ambition of the school to have an enrollment of one thousand pupils in the near future. Sunday afternoon at the church a baptismal service was held and thirty-two children, all over eight years of age, were baptized."

Original Articles

METHODS OF ADVERTISING.

At the late General Conference a "missionaries' meeting" was held in the lower auditorium of the church in Independence, Missouri, during the evening of April 16. A very large attendance was had and deep interest was manifested. After the opening exercises the following speeches were made on the subject of advertising. Bro. L. A. Gould reported for the HERALD.

ELBERT A. SMITH.—Probably it is unnecessary to explain the nature of this meeting. It is a "missionaries' meeting" for the purpose of discussing methods of advertising. We are pleased to see so large an attendance. Some one has complained that we have taken all the people away from the up-stairs meeting. All we have to say is that the people up-stairs will have to learn to advertise.

It is our conviction that any series of meetings that is worth holding at all is worth advertising. One of the writers in a recent HERALD declared that when a missionary came to any town where the Saints were, the Saints of that town had an opportunity, "Let them secure the most prominent place to be had and simply paint the town with advertisements."

In every successful effort at advertising there are two points that must be remembered; and it is the same whether you are advertising preaching-meetings or breakfast food. The first is that the advertisement must have something to it that will attract attention, and cause the one who sees it to want to read it. And that is comparatively easy. The second is that the body of the advertisement must create a desire in the one who reads it to get the thing that you are advertising. When we consider that we as a people are advertising a very unpopular article, it ought to be a spur to our ambition to see how attractive we can make the advertisement, and get the people to desire the thing we have to present.

Bro. F. A. Russell and I, who have been requested to take charge of the meeting, have thought best to limit the speeches of those who take part to ten minutes. What I am saying now will not be counted in the time that I occupy later on, if I make a speech.

We want to hear from those who have had experience in advertising. We want to know the methods they have used, so when we go out we can devise an advertisement that will attract attention and that will hold the interest of the reader; one that will make such an impression on him that he will come to the meeting, not simply say, "Yes, I will be there," and we never see him again.

Bro. Russell will take charge of the discussion, and we want you to move forward, and tell what you have experienced.

F. A. RUSSELL.—I believe that your very presence here indicates an interest in the direction of advertising. How can we arrest the attention of the people among whom we go to labor, so very thoroughly that we will bring them to our services? This has been referred to as a missionary meeting, but we do not want any of you to feel that others are excluded who have something to offer in the way of suggestion as to how to get our proposition before the public. All of us have had difficulties, I presume, in getting an audience. We want to bring out some ideas that you may have of your own that you may perhaps have tried, or may not have had the necessary equipment to try them. If you have an idea of that kind, suggest it. Perhaps brethren in some other part of the field may have just the thing necessary to put that idea into operation. If there is something that you have tried that is a little out of the ordinary, let us have the benefit of your trial.

C. ED MILLER.—In the way of church advertising, I have not had much experience; but I have some ideas, if that will do, or some theories. By reason of being engaged in the printing business, I have had to study, more or less, the methods of advertising. Most people who advertise want to put a great deal of matter in a little bit of space, and they want to throw a lot of curly cues around it. Now, there is a law of optics that must be observed in the method of advertising; and that is this: The more things that are in a given space to attract the eyes, the less distinctly does the eye see those things. If you have one thing in a certain space, that is, one object, one type in a certain space, you will see it very distinctly. If you have two pieces of type there—two letters—you will see them less distinctly. So, then, one of the rules of advertising to remember, is this: Do not put too much matter in too little space; and do not have a lot of ornamentation around it, because that will just simply attract the eye away from the reading-matter.

By reason of being a printer I may have a little advantage; but to advertise promiscuously and, if I may say, vociferously, requires considerable money. Now, I am going to try to buy one of those little hand printing-presses, and get out my own tracts, and have them adapted right to the city. We are to appeal right to the people of the city, and we want to make tracts that will appeal to them.

I will give you an idea of some of the lines we are going to try to carry out, that is if we have the opportunity. We believe in one church. I remember preaching a sermon one time, and using an illustration like this: People think we are narrow-minded because we teach just one church. Now for instance, there was an old farmer. He went to the city to get adapted to city life. I don't blame him a bit for doing that. He finally went back to the country, and took a couple of dogs, one great big dog, the other a little bit of a dog. His son came in, and the father said, "Yacup, you go and cut a couple of holes through the barn door, and take care of the dogs." Jacob came back, and he says, "Father, we vas two of the biggest fools that ever vas?" "Why?" "Why," Jacob says, "one hole would have done for both dogs, if you had made it big enough."

Seems to me we might have something after that order for an illustration. Something amusing, yet calculated to attract attention. You must attract attention to what you have, and that is why I believe in the illustration. Put in any of the illustrations you can find. If it is a last resort, put in your picture. But I believe that ought to be one of the last resorts. Of course some of those good-looking men over there do not believe that; and if it were the sisters doing the preaching I would say, put your picture in the very first thing.

Now suppose we have something after that order, that would illustrate the thought; you might say it presents the correct idea, and presents the truth. We can make this claim, that Jesus Christ made the church big enough for everybody. Our greatest men would not need to bump their heads in coming into the doorway, because it is large enough for the biggest man, therefore the smallest man can come in.

So I believe in illustrating. Use illustrations where it is possible to do so, because they attract attention. And I believe in using good paper. Use the very best paper you can afford. I believe that a great many of our tracts are got up on a too cheap style; and I would rather see a smaller bit of advertising got out in a good way, than a whole lot got out in a bad way. Give your advertising a genteel appearance. You judge a man by his clothes. You know you do. A woman, too. And the advertising that you send out, according to the kind of paper it is on, makes its impression upon the people. If it is got up in a shoddy, cheap sort of way, people may think you are advertising a cheap sort of religion. Spend a little more time on its appearance. And if it is not got up in a specially attractive manner, people won't read it. These six by nine dodgers, at a dollar and a half a thousand,—people don't read them.

Now look at that tag there [pointing to some bright colored advertising tags on exhibition,] it attracts attention. If that had been the regulation shipping-tag it would hardly be noticed. But it is so out of the ordinary. That is a good idea. It is longer, and that attracts more attention than the quite ordinary shipping-tag would have done.

So I would lay down these rules, then, in general review of the matter:

Give your advertisement a nice appearance.

Use illustrations where possible.

Scatter it around where it is at all possible to do so.

And I believe, then, with all our efforts, it is like Horace Mann said, when he was brought to task for exaggerating, in a statement he made when conducting an institution of reform. He said, "If it only saves one boy, it is worth while building that institution." Some said he was exaggerating. He says, "No, sir; if it only saves one boy it is worth while building—if it's my boy." And so, if we only save one soul with our efforts at advertising, it is worth while.

ELDER ARTHUR B. PHILLIPS.

Elder Phillips believes that there are many people who "care for religion" and wish to be saved, if we can only reach them.

A. B. PHILLIPS.—I don't know whether I ought to say anything about advertising or not, because quite a good deal of the advertising I have been doing this winter had my picture on it.

The extent of my advertising has been something like this: I started in some years ago advertising with the dodger that the brother referred to a few minutes ago, at about one dollar and a half a thousand—no, I guess they didn't cost quite that—and distributed them through the city where we were holding tent-meetings.

I tried that method. Then, after that, I distributed tracts, having on the back of those tracts printed the time and place of the service; going from house to house with them and perhaps engaging in conversation to some extent when it was practicable.

After that I tried the card system. That is, a card, about the size of a lady's visiting card, neatly printed. Another one was about twice that size, with, of course, a little more printing on it; but not much more.

After trying that, we tried some circulars—last winter. That is the first time I tried the circular—four-page circular, just a folder, having a cut of one of the speakers upon the front page, and announcing as briefly as could be done an outline of the services; and on the inside such subject-matter as we might think would be most interesting to the average individual. Or, in other words, we tried to arrange it in such a manner that it would appeal to the greatest number of individuals. On the fourth page might be found either a cut of the church where we were at the time holding services, and a statement of the hour of services, and the place of worship, and a few other local notes, as, for instance, the name and address of the presiding minister, sometimes associate ministers as well. And when we didn't have a cut of the church we filled in the space, using about half of the page with what we called a brief history of the Latter Day Saints.

So far as my experience has gone in the matter, I am inclined to think that the use of the card advertising has accomplished about as much good, according to the amount expended, as any means that I have used. We had one instance of that several years ago in California. We started services, and gave out these cards around at the houses. But unfortunately the small-pox broke out there. The first night we held services there were about the usual number of people out, I suppose. The next night twice as many. The third night nearly four times as many. The fourth night the house was fairly crowded. The fifth night every public building in the place was closed because sixteen cases of small-pox had broken out.

I never had any difficulty, so far as I now remember, in retaining an audience after I got one. The trouble has been to reach the people. I think the majority of individuals who really care anything about religion at all will not (if a message is presented to them in such a way that their judgment is appealed to) be very likely to allow their prejudice to overrun them. But some times, not knowing anything about it, they don't want to come out, of course. They think it doesn't amount to anything. I have heard some individuals quite severely censure the public because of not attending the service that they were advertising. I have heard some people say, "Why, they do not want to be saved. They don't care anything about religion." I am inclined to think that there are a vast number of individuals who do care for religion, and who do care to be saved; but there are other causes that are keeping them from attending our services. I think one of these causes, of course, is prejudice. Another one, possibly may be pride,—“These individuals! I do not want to be seen with them!” As for instance, I suppose we might consider something of a personal character in that matter. Possibly there may be individuals that you and I would not really like to be found associating with. I have an idea a great many people feel about the same way about us when we hold services in town. They say, “I do not want any one to see me going to a place like that.” And unless you can remove the prejudice that may be in their minds, and possibly some degree of pride also, I doubt if you will be able to reach that class of individuals.

But I am thoroughly convinced that it is absolutely necessary for us to advertise, and as extensively as possible, in this age of the world, if we would secure anything beyond a mere handful of individuals. The wider my advertising has been, the larger the number of people I have had out to my services, thus far.

ELBERT A. SMITH.—I remember holding a series of meetings that we made a special effort to advertise. We secured some large cardboards or bristol boards, about three feet long, I presume, and two feet wide. We secured from the Perry Pictures Company pictures of the head of Christ, by Hoffman, and they were quite attractive. On these cards we pasted in one corner the picture of Christ; and, with a large shading-pen we wrote the motto at one side, “The Gospel of Christ as Christ Taught It.” The announcement of our meetings was placed under the picture.

These large bills we put in all of the store windows in that part of town. Then we had some smaller handbills printed, almost the same. That is, we had the head of Christ and the motto opposite it. Then when we came to our meetings we had the large motto on the wall, “The Gospel of Christ as Christ Taught it”; that gave us a chance to emphasize that thought.

Then on the smaller handbills (we had a large number of them printed) we had the subject for each evening of the week outlined or stated under the picture. For the second evening of the series we had under the announcement the invitation, “If you can come only once, come this evening.” That seemed to work well, because it aroused their curiosity; they made a special effort to come that evening, and we had the house crowded. And we, of course, tried to interest them so they would want to come every evening.

Those little handbills we distributed to every house in that part of town. We had our associates assigned to different districts to go to every house. Incidentally we received a little free advertising while scattering those bills, because at almost every house there was some kind of a dog who advertised our approach and advertised it well. I remember one that became more enthusiastic in his announcement, and I appreciated the point of his remarks, too. The difficulty with that one was, he was so small there was no satisfaction in kicking him.

Towards the close of our series of meetings we announced the subject of marriage. We designed some larger handbills, like the first ones mentioned, and these we put in the store windows. At the top of these we had some brightly colored marriage certificates, pasted on with large red seals. The certificates were filled out with fictitious names, and they attracted the attention of the passer-by to the card; under it was the announcement of the subject and the time of meeting. We got an excellent hearing on the subject of marriage, and were permitted to defend our position on that subject before the people of that place.

I have been interested in this subject of advertising. You remember some years ago we had a series of articles in Autumn Leaves, from various writers, entitled, "How can we reach the people?"

As has been said, this is rather difficult when prejudice exists. In the city of Colorado Springs, the Saints have a little church, and Bro. Russell's little girl one day asked her mother what the sign on the church said. The mother told her. "No, it don't say that," the little girl declared, "it says, 'Scarlet fever! Quarantine!'"

That seems to be the idea that some people get about our churches. This little girl told my little boy what it meant. One night I reasoned with him, but he persisted that it said, "Scarlet fever; quarantine,"—so errors spread.

We must remove this prejudice; we must break it down. We can not ask the Lord to do it alone; but we must cooperate with him in overcoming obstacles before us. We believe in cooperating with God. Something like the little girl who felt grieved because her brother had constructed a trap in which to catch some little birds. She was telling her aunt, and her aunt asked, "What did you do?"

"I prayed that God wouldn't let brother catch any little birds."

"And then what did you do?"

"I went again and prayed."

"Then what did you do?"

"I went and kicked the old trap all to pieces."

That was cooperating with God to get an answer to the prayer that was desired. Now, we say, O Lord, send the people to us and let us reach them. We must cooperate with God in our efforts to reach them. If prejudice exists let us go out and kick it all to pieces.

L. E. HILLS.—I want to say that I believe in advertising; but I want you to understand that I am not advertising to-night. I have made quite a little study of advertising. And while some may not think the dodger works all right, I have had lots of success with little handbills of that character. But I believe it owes the success largely to the character of the material you have on the dodger.

I have been quite a close observer, was in touch with all classes of people before I entered the ministry. And I have heard many people say, "I would give anything if I could just tell who had the truth." And I remember that. And so in advertising, I would announce as one of my subjects, "How you may know who has the truth." I heard another brother say, "I would give anything in the world if I could just tell what minister had authority; whom we could depend on." So I have in my little advertisement announcing the meetings, "How may we know the priest sent of God, from the priest or minister of the world?"

ELDER L. E. HILLS.

Elder Hills got seven hundred people out to hear him in a town that had once been delivered over to the buffetings of Satan.

I believe we men do too little along this line of studying the minds of the people. In giving out handbills, give them something that will appeal to their curiosity. I have never had trouble to get a crowd.

I went into one city in Iowa where they had previously had a tent there, and four was the most they could get out; and I learned since then that brethren washed their feet against the city. I had a crowd of seven hundred people out there in a few nights after I commenced. It was largely through advertising.

I started in with an infidel. He did not believe anything along religious lines; and the first article that I had was, "Some reasons why we believe in God and in the Bible," and the "Bible proved by archæology," and many such subjects as that; and in reading these, I find that they will keep close track of things, and some night you will get them out.

I have been in cities the last year laboring, largely in opera-houses, and I learned another thing. You can not go into a large or a little town and sit down somewhere in an obscure place, and get a hearing. Better get opera-houses, or a good hall. We took some pretty long chances in renting opera-houses, and we invariably got the necessary money to pay the manager.

We can get out a crowd if we advertise properly, but we want to study the question and see that we have something that will attract, something that will excite curiosity, or a desire to hear. If we take subjects that we know the people generally want to know something about, I am satisfied we will get the crowd.

WALTER W. SMITH.—All that has been said about advertising has been so well said that no one would attempt to add thereto. But there is just a feature about advertising that we have encountered. Here is the proposition that we have met in trying to continue the matter of advertising. It is all right to go out and circulate those bills for a special meeting; but suppose you have had the special meeting the last four years, then what? That is the proposition that we have had in Philadelphia. It is all right when some brother comes there in a special series of meetings to make a special effort, but that effort, if repeated, gets very tame in its weakness.

Now we have done this in Philadelphia: After we had planned for the meeting, we arranged a little folder (mentioned by one of the brethren; and we followed out, pretty much, his tactics), and when we went to get rid of that tract, we called on all the men who were able to go out at a stated time, and they would spend the whole evening in advertising. There were fifteen volunteers, and the preacher made sixteen. I found the axiom just as true in religion as it is in everything else: If you want anything done well, do it yourself; and I never sent anybody to do anything that I didn't go along with them to help out. We didn't go out poking these things under the door. We spoke to the people, told them where the church was, etc., and if they would read that little tract they would know more about the Latter Day Saints, than they then did.

Next Saturday we did the same thing again. We did the same thing another time,—and again. And like the doctor who wrote the prescription, "Take ad libitum," that is just what we did, we repeated the dose every week.

When we started in the neighborhood, people would slam the door in our faces, and they would pay no attention to us. They got tired of that, because the next Saturday we popped up just as serene as we were the Saturday before, and knocked at the door just as hard and just as long. Now they come with smiling faces, glad to see us, and begin to know who we are as a result. We can circulate those tracts now in the neighborhood of the church, and go to two thousand houses and knock, and give two thousand personal invitations. As a result, we never circulate those tracts but what we get the house full to the door. I am not exaggerating it. That is just what happens.

In large cities like Philadelphia, New York, and Chicago, or any city of that size, this can not be made a very universal affair; but must be limited of course to the neighborhood in which the church is. But when we undertook to create sentiment in Philadelphia, and turn the tide of popular opinion, we undertook a different method.

We had been there for years, of course. The church there was begun in 1839 and they had heard time and again of the terrible Saints, and everybody concluded of course that we were what we were not. When we got ready to dedicate the church, and make a special effort, we went to the most successful advertiser in that city, a man who made a business of it. We told him that we wanted some advertising, and that we were ready and willing to pay for it; but we wanted what we wanted, and we would have nothing else. He said, "All right. I have a man that writes advertisements. That is his profession, and he can write your story for you." We left him quite a library, and in the course of two or three weeks he brought me the article. Well, now, it was just as fine an article as I ever saw written by anybody; but it was written in newspaper style, and defended our work from start to finish. We then told Mr. Arnold to find out what paper in the city would be likely to publish this article to the best advantage. We were not known in the matter at all. After a few days' studying the matter Mr. Arnold told us a certain paper would print it. Then we got a great stack of books, and left Mr. Arnold and the city editor to decide what they would put out. But we let Mr. Arnold distinctly understand that we would proof-read that article at the last moment. So at midnight on Sunday evening before the article appeared, Bro. Zimmermann and myself were at the editor's office till the last proof was brought in. We O. K.'d it. And on Monday morning the full page front appeared.

A good many of you remember concerning the dedication. The result of it was that it being made so much of by one paper, every paper in town had a reporter out there next day, to know why in the world we didn't let them know about it. We spent one hundred and thirty-one dollars on that front page; but we got five hundred dollars' worth of advertising for it; for every paper sent a reporter out every day that week. Every time a new man came, a reporter ran out to see what was going to happen, and we told him about it, and he wrote it up.

I think we make a mistake in advertising, very frequently, by trying to be cheap. From that day on, if we even have children's day at our church in Philadelphia, if we have graduation exercises, or normal class in the middle of the week, there are reporters out there, and we get written up, at different lengths. Sometimes it will be an article four or five inches long. And all this because we turned the tide of popular opinion by making everybody know that we were what we were. We got things coming our way, down in our city. Bro. Miller hit the nail on the head when he said, Be out of the ordinary. People are tired of seeing the same thing.

(To be concluded.)

Of General Interest

THE DEDICATION OF KIRTLAND TEMPLE.

It was Sunday morning, March 27, 1836, in Kirtland, Ohio. The sun was shining between the gray clouds driven swiftly along by the force of the cold northeast wind. On the hillsides the snow lay in small drifts, for the evidences of winter had not yet been obliterated. The early morning air was cold and penetrating. The sun's rays had not yet melted the frost that whitened the grasses on the bare hill-tops.

An imposing structure of solid masonry, its cemented walls showing architectural beauty and strength, crowned a hill at whose base ran the swift waters of the Chagrin River. It was a scene of animation; everywhere life abounded. A crowd of people in plain apparel, but with earnest faces lighted by smiles of pleasure, stood before the unopened doors of the building. It was the morning of the dedication of the temple, that remarkable structure erected by their sacrifice, by the toil and labor of their own hands. Now it stood before them, a monument of the indomitable courage and determination of that band of workers.

The doors are opened, the social talk so common to Saints is at once hushed and quietude pervades the throng. With hats removed and bowed heads they enter the building, which during its erection had received its baptism of tears, caused by the opposing forces, which, from the laying of the corner-stone to the last stroke of the painters' brush, had forced persecution and suffering upon its builders.

BISHOP RICHARD BULLARD.

But the hour of their triumph had come, and the recognition of a heavenly Father's favor was awaiting their entry into the courts of the Lord's house. A mellow, soul-pervading power took possession of the hearts of the faithful as they entered the auditorium. The eye refused to keep back the tears, the lips would quiver as the fire of God's Holy Spirit burned within the soul, and before they were conscious of it they had begun to breathe the atmosphere of heaven.

Ah, who but a true child of God could appreciate those moments of a heavenly Father's acknowledgment. The throng still surged around the doors, and every seat provided for the assembly was taken. The aisles were filled, also the vestibule, when at nine o'clock, the presidents, Joseph Smith, Jr., and Sidney Rigdon, reluctantly ordered the doors closed so that the exercises of this memorable day could commence.

The ninety-sixth and twenty-fourth Psalms were

THE KIRTLAND TEMPLE.

"From pinnacle to corner-stone,
A temple unto me was shown."

read by Sidney Rigdon, after which the following hymn was sung (Saints' Harp, 1004) :

"Ere long the veil will rend in twain,
The King descend with all his train,
The earth shall shake with awful fright,
And all creation feel his might.

"Proclaim the joys of heaven around,

Hosannah! now, the trump shall sound,
And all the Saints together join,
With songs of love, with hosts divine."

As the Saints with their well-trained choir sang, the Spirit seemed to shake the temple, and heavenly choirs were heard to mingle their voices with those of the Saints, making the effect wonderful, soul-inspiring, and uplifting. A thousand voices with the help of the Spirit and augmented by the heavenly forces who had been assigned by the Father to make sacred and more impressive the service of song, made it a service of rapture.

The discourse following, by Sidney Rigdon, was one of eloquence and spiritual power, occupying two and one half hours. After this the prophet, Joseph, was presented to the congregation as their prophet, seer, and revelator. All rose from their seats to receive and acknowledge him as the one appointed of God to be their president. Then followed the song, "Now let us rejoice in the day of salvation," and the exercises of the morning closed with an intermission of fifteen minutes.

The sun shone through the windows of the temple upon a people filled with joy and praise. The hours had fled as though they were minutes, so intensely happy were God's people under the holy influence which filled that edifice upon that occasion. But the real feast was yet to come.

All joined in singing, "This earth was once a garden-place." President Joseph Smith then arose and after some appropriate remarks, prophesied to the assembly concerning God's blessings upon that people, and the work intrusted to their care, after which followed the prayer of dedication by Joseph.

There stood the living prophet of God, clothed with a mantle of light and intelligence, even that of the Holy Spirit, with eyes closed and uplifted hands. He presented to the Infinite One the first temple built under the direction and after the pattern given of God, since the temple was raised to his name and glory in Jerusalem, and by the sacrifice of his people.

With face illuminated by the holy fire burning within him, stood this man, pouring out the longings of his soul to God, giving thanks and praise for the success which had crowned his efforts and the struggles and terrible persecutions which had attended the labors of these faithful Saints while building this house to the honor and glory of God.

The fervor, pathos, and spiritual power manifested in this prayer of dedication long remained with those who listened to its outpouring. The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel was earnestly appealed to, to accept the work of the hands of God's children, who through much sorrow and persecution had continued their work to its completion. The Lord was asked to permit his glory to rest upon it and to come into it for his children's blessing. The poor, the sick, and the afflicted were not forgotten before the Lord. The persecuted ones in Missouri, who had been cruelly beaten, slain, and driven from their homes and lands, were remembered, and the tears of sympathy coursed down the cheeks of the prophet as he earnestly pleaded their cause before the Lord. The sobbing response of those who silently joined with him in prayer showed how their hearts flowed out with sorrow towards their afflicted brethren. The church was remembered, with all the elders in Israel, that holiness might prevail among them, and that nothing should be permitted to enter the temple to pollute it, but that it might be preserved a house of holiness unto the Lord, that his glory might ever rest upon it. He prayed for himself, that he might be strengthened to do the will of God, and delivered from his enemies. His wife and children, with the families of all the Saints, were committed to the fostering hand of a loving Father.

Thus the temple was handed over to the Lord for his acceptance, and the sequel will reveal the fact that the work of sacrifice by the Saints was pleasing to the Lord and accepted by him. The Holy Spirit which had been pent up in the hearts of God's people during the wonderful prayer of the Prophet found relief when the hymn, "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning," was sung. Oh, what ecstasy of delight, what a thrilling power pervaded the assembly! Again heavenly choirs joined in chorus, swelling the strains of melody and praise to Jehovah. The hills surrounding the temple took up the sweet strain and reverberated the hallelujahs of that wonderful song of praise, and nature all around seemed to rejoice before the Lord. "Oh, happy people, whose God is the Lord!" The very atmosphere of the temple was filled with a soothing, melting influence which brought spiritual invigoration to the true and faithful children of God.

Quietude settled over the assembly when Joseph arose and announced that the emblems of the Lord's body would be administered. His brother, Don Carlos Smith, blessed the emblems and they were administered by the elders.

Then came a season of testimony and a wonderful display of spiritual power and manifestations of blessings in prophecy. There were tongues, and visitation of angels, one taking its seat between

Joseph Smith, Sr., and Frederick G. Williams. Loud acclamations of "Hosannah, hosannah to God and the Lamb," with "Amen" thrice repeated was sung by the assembly as an expression of the power and the blessing of God felt within them. Those "Hosannahs" were sung by an infant who had been brought into the temple under its mother's shawl, thus showing that the Lord used every available means to display his love and willingness to bless his people upon this memorable occasion.

Oh, the depths of the riches of his grace! How willingly he reveals his wonderful goodness when his people can utilize his blessings! Thus the meeting ended and the occasion has gone into history as one of the most blessed ever recorded.

Upon the Sunday following, the Saints again assembled to partake of the emblems of the Lord's body. A spiritual feast was again enjoyed. After the assembly was dismissed, Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery retired to the pulpit, the veil being dropped. They bowed in solemn, silent prayer before the Lord. On rising the following vision was opened to both of them.

The veil was taken from their minds and the eyes of their understanding were opened. The Lord, even Jesus Christ the Lamb, once slain, descended and stood upon the breastwork of the pulpit before them. Under his feet was a paved work of pure gold, in color like unto amber. His eyes were like a flame of fire, his hair white like pure snow. His countenance shone above the brightness of the sun and his voice was as the sound of the rushing of great waters, even the voice of Jehovah, saying, "I the first and the last; I am he who liveth, I am he who was slain. I am your advocate with the Father. Behold, your sins are forgiven you. You are clean before me, therefore lift up your heads and rejoice. Let the hearts of your brethren rejoice, and let the hearts of all my people rejoice who have with their might built this house to my name; for behold I have accepted this house, and my name shall be here, and I will manifest myself in mercy to my people in this house.

"Yea, I will appear unto my servants who keep my commandments and do not pollute this holy house. Yea, the hearts of thousands and tens of thousands shall greatly rejoice in consequence of the blessings which shall be poured out. And the endowment with which my servants have been endowed in this house and the fame of this house shall spread to foreign lands. And this is the beginning of the blessings which shall be poured out upon my people, even so. Amen."

What an indorsement of the work accomplished was this. Even the Master Workman who had given instructions concerning its building came down and inspected it himself, smiled upon it, then said, "I accept it."

Then the veil was rolled back from heaven's gate and Moses appeared before them and gave them the keys of the gathering of Israel and the gathering of the ten tribes from the land of the north. After this Elias appeared and committed unto them the dispensation of the gospel of Abraham, then Elijah, who was taken up into heaven without tasting death, stood before them and said the prophecy of Malachi was about to be fulfilled and the coming of the Lord was near at hand. Thus ended the vision. Who is a God like unto our God?

What beautiful memories cluster around that wonderful building, and more wonderful experiences attending its dedication! We feel this a fitting place for the beautiful hymn of David Smith's composition.

"From pinnacle to corner-stone,
A temple unto me was shown,
A building most desirable in which to dwell;
Buildd with wisdom every wall,
And graceful tower straight and tall,
High springing arch and spacious hall—were beautiful.
Within its courts I longed to go,
Its cause and purpose longed to know,
Above the door a name did glow,— God's Church Below."

—Richard Bullard in June Autumn Leaves.

* * * * *

LET HIM NAME HIS SCHOLARS.

Recently we listened to a Baptist preacher, and in his sermon—commenting upon Acts 2:38—the speaker said when we say a man was hanged for murder we do not mean the man was hanged in order to murder. Then, when this same word (for) is used in exactly the same sense in Scripture, we think it unreasonable to interpret it in order to. He went on to say that two thirds of the scholarship of the world was with him in this interpretation. What can you say in reply?—J. M. Plummer, Elk City, Kansas.

This particular Baptist preacher is either woefully ignorant, or he presumes on the credulity and ignorance of his hearers, when he seeks to make the impression that for, in Acts 2:38, should look backward rather than forward; should mean because of remission of sins, because your sins have been forgiven, rather than in order to the remission of sins; and that the scholars agree with him in his explanation of this passage. We are glad to believe that he is no fair representative of the Baptist ministry.

For sometimes means because of, but the Greek preposition eis which is here represented by for, has no such meaning. Out of the thousands of times it is used in the New Testament, eis is never translated because of. Its usual rendering is into, but it is also rendered by other English prepositions. Something like eighty times out of the many thousands, it is rendered for. Robinson's Lexicon of the New Testament defines as follows:

"Eis: a preposition governing only the accusative, with the primary idea of motion into any place or thing, and then also of motion or direction to, towards, upon, any place or object. The antithesis is expressed by out of. . . .

"3. Tropical as marking the end or purpose to or towards which anything aims or tends."

We know of no scholar who says that for in the expression "for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38), King James' Version, means because of—"because your sins have been remitted." Now and then a partisan preacher or debater might venture such statement, but we feel sure no scholar would. What the scholars who have given us our Revised Version, now coming into general use, understand the meaning of this passage to be, is seen in their translation: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto [italics ours.—ED.] the remission of your sins."

Some time ago we had occasion to look up what the scholars said on the expression in Acts 2:38 in the King James Version, for the remission of sins, and embodied the result of our investigation in an editorial found in the Standard of February 4, 1905, entitled, "What the scholars say." Hackett, perhaps the most eminent Baptist scholar, in his commentary on Acts says: "In order to the remission of sins (Matthew 26:28; Luke 3:3) we connect naturally with both the preceding verbs [repent and be baptized.—[ED.] This clause (for the remission of sins) states the motive or object which should induce them to repent and be baptized."

Meyer, perhaps the most scholarly and eminent commentator in the world, says: "Eis denotes the object of baptism, which is the remission of the guilt contracted in their state before metanoia [repentance.—ED.]"

With these commentators and scholars, in their comments on this passage, agree (as was quoted in the editorial), Pulpit Commentary; Alford's Greek New Testament; Matthew Henry; Jamieson, Fausset and Brown; Dick's Lectures on Acts; Lange; Knapp; Thayer; Albert Barnes; Professor J. R. Boise, Union Theological Seminary; Professor Tyler, Amherst College; Professor Packard, Yale University; Professor M. S. Cameron, Princeton University; Professor Foster, Colby University; Professor D'Ooge, Michigan University; Professor Flagg, Cornell University; Professor Harkness, Brown University; Professor Proctor, Dartmouth College; Philip Schaff; Butler's Bible Work; Geisler's Ecclesiastical History; Hagenbech's History of Doctrine, and McLean on the Commission. Let this preacher name his scholars who differ from these eminent commentators and teachers.

This exhibit is a sufficient answer to our rash preacher. The very version of the gospel he uses, if he is an alert preacher, utterly discredits his statement. The people on Pentecost repented and were baptized unto [italics ours.—ED.] the remission of sins, as the revision renders it; that is, remission followed repentance and baptism, and repentance and baptism lead to remission.

Of course, our friend, in his eagerness to bolster up an erroneous position on the design of baptism, did not see what his assertion involved. If it means in Acts 2:38 men were baptized because their sins had been remitted, then they have repented for the same reason. For repentance and baptism are joined together in the affirmation. What is said of one is said of the other. When we say James and John work for their living, we affirm the same thing of both. If James works to get a living, so does John. We can not make for mean because of with respect to John, and in order to with respect to James. If the one works to get a living, the other works for the same reason. So if we say, "Be baptized because your sins have been remitted," we must also say, "Repent because your sins are remitted," an unthinkable doctrine for Peter to preach. But to just such conclusions are men driven who are not willing to take the word of God as it reads.—Christian Standard, May 16, 1908.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. F. M. Smith, secretary, 630 South Chrysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. E. Etzenhouser, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

[In sharing with our readers the following letter, we wish to say that it is not often we admit into the Column matter which was intended solely for us. We rather read, are cheered and encouraged; and then, thanking God, who has permitted us to be of some use in our day and generation, renew our efforts to add if but a little to the great sum of good being done in the world. But in this instance, it seems to us the article which follows would be incomplete without the letter, revealing the fact that the writer is but a young girl; yet, young as she is, has had this terrible evil forced upon her attention, until she can no longer refrain from striving to say a word which may perchance lead others to inquire what share they have in the responsibility for its existence. This letter and article come from the heart; and we pray God that they may reach the heart, and that good may be done.

In our next issue we shall give our readers an article from the pen of Mr. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. It is a strong article, and one which we sincerely hope will be read by every father and mother into whose hands the HERALD comes; and not only read, but pondered upon and fully digested. If this be done it will help largely in answering the question as to where the weight of responsibility for these awful "mistakes" rests.—EDITOR.]

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, May 10, 1908.

Dear Sister Frances: To-day, if I am not mistaken, is your birthday; and, thinking of the many years of faithful service you have given us, of the many words of encouragement and counsel that have come from your pen to help us along the rugged path of life, I thank God that he gave "Frances" a birthday. Perhaps I may be mistaken in the day; but that will not materially change the spirit of words of appreciation, I think.

You are very dear to us "children" through the work in our little Hope; and the mothers are not alone in their appreciation of Frances' work in the Home Column. We, who are "standing with reluctant feet, where the brook and river meet" find there helpful thoughts—thoughts that are molding our characters, and shaping our lives. In the little drawers of our minds, we are storing away the thought treasures, to some time be shining jewels in our part of the Master's temple—in the little corner that we shall build for him.

The sentiment of my heart is expressed in this beautiful little poem, "God bless you."

"I seek in prayerful words, dear friend,
My heart's true wish to send you,
That you may know that, far or near,
My loving thoughts attend you.
I can not find a truer word,
Nor fonder to caress you,
Nor song nor poem I have heard
Is sweeter than 'God bless you!'

"'God bless you!' so I've wished you all
Of brightness life possesses;
For can there any joy at all
Be thine, unless God blesses?
'God bless you!' so I breathe a charm
Lest grief's dark night oppress you,
For how can sorrow bring you harm
If 'tis God's way to bless you?"

Two weeks ago, while working at the Charity Building in the city, the incident happened that impressed me to write the inclosed article. I do not know that you would care to use it in the Mothers' Column; but if there is any thought in it that would cause the light of God's love to shine in some heart, or if you wish to use the incident in any way, you may do whatever you desire with it.

As I said in the story, this is only one of the instances that are brought every day to the attention of the charity workers. My heart has ached when I have seen little children come into the building, looking ragged, dirty, and with little faces pinched by poverty and cares too heavy for childish shoulders, asking for food or clothing.

How many times have I thought of our own prospective children's home, and prayed that God would hasten the work, that some, at least, of the motherless, neglected little ones, of whom Jesus said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," might be tenderly cared for, and guarded from the terrible evils in the world to-day, might be placed in a "home" where the better life would be pointed out to them.

Ever praying that Zion's daughters will never cease their efforts to protect and care for the neglected, friendless little ones, and ever remember in their prayers the unfortunate and unloved girls in the city's merciless ways, I remain

Your young sister in the struggle for purity and truth,

MARGARET.

"The Baby Was a Mistake."

'Twas only an every-day incident in the Charity Building; only one of hundreds of little women who had been driven to seek refuge there for the sake of a little one dearer to them than life. She was only one—just one—of the girls who had left a country home innocent and pure to see the world, to come to the city where she would get experience and be independent, and she was only one of those who had sat before the kindly director, and heard his question, "The baby was a mistake, then?"

And back in the country was only one of the homes whose summer sunshine had departed, and over whose inmates had been cast a shadow which nothing could remove.

She was sick and out of money, with no place to go. What could she do with the baby?

"Why don't you give it away?"

"Nobody wants it!"

May the loving Father pity the little "mistakes" who come into the world where nobody wants them! Raised in sin, tossed about in the world, never knowing anything but evil; left perhaps as mere babies without a soul on earth to claim as "friend," to fight their own way through this merciless world!

I could not help saying in my very soul, as I sat in that cheery room, and heard her story: "Oh, if Jesus were only on earth to-day! He would pity those children! He would 'want' them. He would love them. Would he not go to them and lift them up out of the sin and wickedness of their surroundings? Would he not call for helpers to go with him, and with kindly words and wholesome counsel lead the wandering feet aright? He loves them—the little, neglected ones. Surely it was for such as these that he suffered in Gethsemane and endured Calvary's cross."

Ah, perhaps he is calling to-day, and we heed not the call; we shrink from the task. And when I consider the magnitude of that task, I do not wonder that we shrink from it. It would call for all the strength, courage, patience, endurance, and love that we could possibly obtain. To go into the midst of such sin would require the courage of those who go out in the life-boats to rescue persons in the midst of the raging, furious storm, and such love as the Christ had when he prayed, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

Perhaps we can not now go out and labor in the thickest of the fight, but there is something that we, as daughters of Zion, can do to aid the Master in stemming the tide of sin. We can keep our own girls from wandering away from our hearthstones. We can put loving arms around them, take them into our confidence and keep them there.

There is a time in her life, when she is "standing with reluctant feet where the brook and river meet," that the maiden longs for sympathy and love; for somebody who understands the mystery and beauty and purity of life; the longings and emotions of her heart, to sympathize, explain, and counsel with her. Naturally she first turns to "Mother," but if she does not receive here that which is as necessary to her at this time as bread when she is hungry, she looks elsewhere for sympathy. Home has become suddenly less dear to her—it is only her physical abiding-place—and mother has lost for ever the opportunity of becoming the girl's heart-confidant, her bosom-friend, in whom she confides her doubts, fears, and desires, and to whom she looks for counsel.

That mother has lost her influence over her daughter, and only the loving Father can protect the girl, as she, unwarned of danger, stumbles alone—or perhaps in company with one who is not worthy—over the stones and pitfalls of life's uncertain way. And when she falls, it is often only the blessed Master who loves and pities her then.

If we who "understand" our girls would only take the time to bring the neglected ones into our confidence, to throw a mother's arms of love around those who have no mother, to speak a kindly word to the wandering ones, God's love would shine in lives that know it not to-day. We know not the stones in another's way; we know not the struggles, the darkness and trials of other lives; neither can we measure the effect of a cheery word, "a bit of heartsome counsel," an expression of true sympathy, or a prayer offered in their behalf.

"Then hide it not—the music of the soul,

Dear Sympathy, expressed with kindly voice;

But let it like a shining river roll

To deserts dry—to hearts that would rejoice.

Oh, let the symphony of kindly words

Sound for the poor, the friendless, and the weak!

And he will bless you! He, who struck those chords,

Will strike another when, in turn, you seek."

MARGARET.

Request for Prayers.

Sr. Tacie E. Schultz, Brinton, Michigan, asks the prayers of the Saints, as she has been sick for three years and three months, having been confined to bed for a year and three months. If it be God's will she desires to be healed.

Bro. Dick Putney, South Boardman, Michigan, has been terribly afflicted and desires that when he is administered to he may be healed. He has never since birth had the proper and full use of his body, and is worthy and wants to be remembered.

Letter Department

Over the Mountains.

Editors Herald: Leaving Independence on the 4th inst., pulled away by the cruel car from the city of the Saints, from prospective Zion, a beautiful place and the loveliest people under the heavens, I reached this peculiar city of Bisbee, Arizona, on the 6th, after a very direct passage over the Rock Island via El Paso, Texas, and the viewing of scenery for the most part rugged and uninteresting. Here, met by two expectant brethren at the depot, I was escorted to their homes, where I have found plenty to eat and plenty to do. The pending of a city election for the 25th and its consequent excitement and absorption of the public mind has to some extent obstructed gospel activities hereunto. Taking advantage of the situation we have discharged some literary responsibilities which may possibly prove to be quite far-reaching in their effect for good.

Bisbee is a mining camp of about eighteen thousand population, at the highest estimate I should say; is situated in a narrow canyon, the houses running up for hundreds of feet on either side. The streets are narrow and sinuous. The population is composed of whites, negroes, Mexicans, negro-Indians, Spanish-Indian-negroes. The Mexicans we meet here are Spanish-Indians, a cross between the Spaniards and the natives of Mexico; though there are undoubtedly thoroughbred Indians in Mexico and also those of thoroughbred Spanish descent, as yet unmixed with the Mexican natives. Mexicans here would be "breeds" in the Canadian northwest, where many years ago the Indians mixed with the French and other white settlers. The whites, of course, are most numerous, next the Mexicans, then the negroes. Those referred to as "Mexican-negroes" (of Spanish, Indian, and negro blood), I should judge to present a very small percentage. Still there are such.

The elevation of this city is in excess of five thousand feet, over four thousand feet higher than Kansas City, on which account it does not get as hot in the summer as northerners might expect and the nights are cool the year around. All temperatures are had in this territory, in some parts the tropical fruits being produced. One place you descend to some hundreds of feet below sea-level—the lowest point in the United States I am told—where it is intensely hot. So that it is merely a matter of a little geography as to whether you will freeze or melt. At Phoenix there is a large ostrich farm, but I have not been there yet to get an orange or a feather, and it is quite doubtful about making that point, as we are directing our attention to the acquiring of the Spanish and the still "sunnier south."

Copper is the chief object of the mining industry in this locality, discovered about thirty years ago. By the courtesy of Bro. Farley the writer had the opportunity of a descent in one of the deepest shafts to the depth of nearly one thousand feet, straight down; of observing the operation of the larger and smaller hydraulic drilling machines fed hundreds of feet below by pressure generated on the surface; of tasting the puckering and poisonous mineral water containing copper in solution, which is pumped up and from which the copper is crystallized and extracted; of seeing the pump engines work below and of seeing the most marvelous and gigantic machinery toiling above; of seeing where men met narrow escapes and where others failing to escape were hurled into another world. Back of all this pile of wealth dug up by the many laborers who are compensated by three dollars and fifty cents a day, sits with a lever in hand the great "Copper Queen Co.," who certainly have been receiving their compliments at the hands of the Socialistic party on the streets during the past few weeks.

There are about twelve Saints here, in an unorganized condition, who have been officered and nurtured for a couple years by Elder W. S. Pender and his energetic companion, whose house is in view of the one where I am ensconced, on the opposite side of the canyon. They have taken up the Spanish, and of his authorship there are two Spanish tracts on sale at the Herald Office. There is a Spanish settlement or town some four miles south, and as a beginning we have had two preachings among them since my arrival, the brother speaking to them in the Spanish on both occasions. All I had to do was to listen and believe. It was little more intelligible to me than the first tongue I heard, when I was called to the office of priest, but nevertheless I assured him that he had preached a good sermon when he was through and that I believed all he had said. Several of the Saints went, and with our Bilhorn organ we held forth on the street. The first service was not so well attended. They seemed shy. Some would gaze from one or two hundred yards away. Many of the children came near and formed a semi-circle in front of the organ as Bro. and Sr. Pender sang in the Spanish, but the grown ones were very tardy about doing so.

We had about decided not to return to them again, to leave them to their fate as a hopeless task, not because we considered it impossible to do anything with them, but because we thought that in the same time we could do more elsewhere. We departed, leaving no appointment. But, lo and behold, the Lord who is rich in mercy, who sees from above, knowing the condition of that people better than we did, gave specific direction to return and work among them, for, he said, he had a people there. Forthwith we decided to go down again on the following Friday evening, which would be one week from the previous meeting. No one went this time but Bro. and Sr. Pender and I. We went in the afternoon (of 23d) and canvassed the town with mimeograph circulars, announcing preaching for six o'clock on the street. I would estimate the population at about two hundred, the houses being close together. Bro. and Sr. Pender then proceeded to visit some of them at their homes, to talk with them while the writer retired to the mountain for the sake of a brief season of seclusion. The meeting hour came and as the organ and song began to vibrate on the air of the little hamlet, its dusky-skinned occupants began to emerge from all directions, this time not looking at us from security as though we were a lighted bomb-shell, but men, women, and children coming right to the very spot, paying good attention and conducting themselves in a manner that would do credit to a Canadian audience. I did some tall looking on. We have an appointment for next Friday. The end remains to be seen, but I do believe that the time has come for successful work to be done among those Lamanitish-Spaniard people. They are mostly Catholics and gave us to understand that where they are under the tuition of the priest he instructs them not to read the Bible. We can furnish each family with a Spanish Bible for five cents or nothing. I began the study of Spanish day before yesterday. Already I can say, "viva la Mexicana." We are but a few miles from the Mexican boundary, which I crossed one day long enough to say that I was in another country. I visited an international boundary post and read the inscription. They hardly have a plough furrow to mark the boundary between Canada and the States.

Never till I went to Mormon Utah did I see an apricot growing or have a fresh one to eat. Never till I came here had I seen the various cactus plants growing wild, some of which are much taller than I am and more equal to the sun-baths of this southern sun.

We are approximately thirteen hundred miles from Kansas City and about fifteen hundred from old Mexico City, where the English is spoken more than any other language, not excluding the Spanish. If there are any Saints in Arizona who see this, we would be glad to hear from them as to their desires with reference to their neighborhood and the possibilities for work there, whether we can come or not. And if there are any Saints in the world who know of any one in our field they would like to put us in communication with, drop us a line.

Following my effort at Heyburn, Idaho, which I left in the middle of March, I came to my Independence home by way of Soda Springs, where I had a stop-over and quaffed the soda water and saw its curious water formations, and where there is a woman who had her chin shot off at the killing of Joseph Morris; and by way of Omaha and Council Bluffs where I preached five sermons, one of them a funeral, and where I was presented with an elegant suit of clothes in time of need. I'll call again! And after the longest period at home thus spent for years (nearly six weeks), after a happy time at the General Conference, we find ourself in a new land, in a new climate, among friendly strangers, and more donkeys than I saw in all the former part of my life. Here is where the Mexican Indians come to town with their "ooma" (singular) to sell to the citizens. It is a large earthen water-pot, so made that it is porous and keeps the water cool the hottest days.

Sometime during the summer we may write again. Our permanent address is 1037 West Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri, and our temporary address is Bisbee, Arizona.

ALVIN KNISLEY.

MALAD, Idaho, May 25, 1908.

Editors Herald: I arrived here a few days ago and preached to a small crowd of the faithful Saints on the 15th, and while studying the propositions of this (to me) new field and getting acquainted, I was unexpectedly called upon to preach the funeral of Mr. John Vanderwood, father of Elder J. E. Vanderwood, at Elkhorn, ten miles from here, on the 21st. A large funeral showed the great respect which was held for him in the neighborhood where he had lived so long, having been a citizen here for some forty years. And while I was informed that he was one time an elder in the church and had gone out, no doubt having been deceived by the "cunning craftiness of men whereby they lie in wait to deceive," I felt a good degree of the Spirit's influence while trying to declare the justice and mercy to God, to an interested audience.

I also preached at the schoolhouse there the two following nights to good crowds, and should have continued longer, but had appointments here for morning and evening yesterday. I want to go back to Elkhorn in the near future if conditions are favorable. I expect to continue meetings here this week; had quite a good crowd last night, so the Saints seemed well pleased, but of course do not know what the future will be. There are only a few Saints here now where I am told there was one time a fine branch; and it seems a large proportion of those here are discouraged and more or less indifferent towards the work. I feel my weakness when I have to meet such conditions, but it is the Lord's work and when I meet with others who are faithful and feel the Spirit's presence comforting and reassuring us, we take courage and so continue trying to be hopeful for the future.

In gospel bonds,

W. A. BROONER.

LUTHER, Montana, May 20, 1908.

Dear Herald: I am pleased to hear the letters from the dear brothers and sisters. We take the HERALD and Ensign. They are all the preaching we have. I would like very much to hear the gospel preached again. There are just three of us here that are members of the church. I feel my weakness very much and desire the prayers of the Saints that I may grow stronger. I know this is the true gospel, and hope to press on and help to build up the work, and gain a home in Zion at last.

ROSA SCHUYLER.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, May 30, 1908.

Saints' Herald: It has been the good fortune of the Saints in Council Bluffs to receive a visit from Apostle Cornelius Butterworth, of Australia. It was certainly a very great pleasure to see him again, and a still greater pleasure to hear him dispense the word, evincing the fact that he has been living with and learning of the Master. We hope he will be around this way again before his return to the far-off land of Australia. Bro. Butterworth not only tells us how to live, but shows us by his gentle manners and modest dress. His parting word to us was to take off that gold ring and plated chain, and "let us be plain," he said, "that bear the vessels of the Lord."

Well, Council Bluffs is going to have a reunion beginning August 19, and holding till September 1. The local committee are Marion Lile, S. Harding, J. P. Christenson, A. E. Dempsey, A. J. Davidson, Alma Gaylord, C. A. Riley. It is the desire of the Saints to make this reunion tell for the good of the cause as well as a time for the renewing of pleasant associations. Bro. Harding has secured promises from a number of the leading men of the church to be present, so we are assured of good speakers. Personally, we would be glad if all the elders who have labored in the city by special appointment in the years that are past could be here: Brn. Columbus Scott, I. M. Smith, F. M. Cooper, M. M. Turpen, M. H. Cook, and others. The committee are making an effort to get the use of Fairmount Park, an ideal place for a meeting of this kind. The president of the Council Bluffs Commercial Club has said he would give us all the assistance he could to obtain it.

Elder Baker, who is appointed to labor in Council Bluffs and Omaha, is expected to-morrow. He sends advance word that he would like to meet with the priesthood of both branches as early as possible after his arrival, we suppose for the purpose of organizing for a summer campaign of gospel work.

More in regard to reunion as matters pertaining to it develop.

C. A. RILEY.

LUTHER, Montana, May 23, 1908.

Dear Herald: We are having so much snow and rain that it looks as though we will not be able to raise much in the way of crops this year, but the good Lord knows best in all things. Perhaps it is because we do not live faithfully enough to receive his blessings.

Of course it makes quite a difference to be isolated as we are, but we still live in hopes that we can have a branch here some day. The people here care most for the worldly things and pleasures, and I know we have many things to overcome to become as Christ wants us. I believe the Lord has sheep here and if some of the elders could come and preach I believe some might obey. I like this country very much, except that the snow gets so deep.

My husband thinks of writing to the Ensign or the HERALD, but he has not done it yet. My desire is to continue to the end that when my life's work is done I can reap the reward of eternal life in his kingdom.

Your sister in Christ,

GRACE M. FULLERTON.

WAUBAY, South Dakota, May 28, 1908.

Editors Herald: I left home for my mission field on the 6th; called at Sioux City and Akron, Iowa, and then on to Springfield, South Dakota, where I tarried long enough to baptize Florence and Hilda, daughters of Bro. and Sr. Ross W. Crosley. Home teaching and a consistent saintly life have won these children, of ten and twelve years, to become soldiers in Christ's great army ere the allurements of the world can pollute their young, pure, and tender lives. Unless the enemy of all righteousness should succeed in alluring them from the path of duty, they will be useful in the Master's cause.

On the 11th, I called at Huron at the home of Bro. E. E. Willard long enough to talk over the prospects of tent-work in that city the coming summer. I arrived at this place on the 15th, where Sr. C. W. Lull had secured a hall for me; I tried to follow out the ideas of advertising exploited at General Conference, and in doing so a bill was put in the window of every business house, and in every home, and in the latter a copy of either "Good news," or the "Church of Jesus Christ," so that practically all of the five hundred inhabitants knew of the meeting. About thirty were present on Sunday, not many, but as great a number as were present in any other of the four churches. Lack of interest in religion of any kind is the principal cause of the small attendance, and antipathy to our people because of associating us with the people in Utah had some effect. The faithful consistent life of Sr. Lull has done much to make it possible to reach the few I did. At the close of the meeting an invitation was given me to occupy the Congregational church, which I did, and I continued until I preached myself out of an audience.

An amusing incident in South Dakota politics occurred while here. There is a factional fight in the Republican party and the two divisions are called "stalwarts" and "insurgents," the former claiming that the church in Utah is spending money to defeat Senator Kittredge because he voted to oust Reed Smoot from the Senate. The figures make the amount all the way from thirty thousand dollars to one million dollars. In some way the papers learning that our General Conference had sent two missionaries to this State, confused us with those in Utah and some of the papers stated we were the advance guard of two thousand from Utah that were going to flood the State with money to defeat Mr. Kittredge. One gentleman in this place that enjoys a joke told some that were foolish enough to believe such stories that if they would come to my meeting and put their hands behind their backs I would fill them with money. A person familiar with the flatness of a Latter Day Saint missionary's pocketbook can possibly realize the disappointment such people would feel.

I feel that I have done good in my short stay. Friends have been made, the seed has been sown in good ground, and for every sermon I have preached ten hours have been spent in private conversation on gospel themes.

One lady whose faithful life causes her to be held in high esteem in the community withdrew from one of the popular churches several years ago, informing her pastor that there was "no Christ in his church; that it was just a social club." To-day she stands "almost persuaded," not that she seriously doubts the message we have, but just as it were standing on the mountains looking into the land of Canaan. Beholding its beauties she stands in amazement and wonder, never having expected to find the truth her soul has been craving among the despised Latter Day Saints. She only needs time to reflect on the beauties her soul has been beholding.

Little did I think that so soon would I realize the promise made by our beloved President at the last conference that we would be blessed abundantly with God's Spirit. Not since I have been in the general missionary work have I enjoyed the presence of God's Spirit as on this trip. If it so continues it will be a happy year, and my cup of happiness would be running over if I had a more ready response for aid in tent-work in this State. Address me at Huron, South Dakota.

EDWARD RANNIE.

MARLETTE, Michigan, May 24, 1908.

Dear Herald: To-day many of the Saints are gathered to worship their Creator, but I am one of the isolated ones. We live five miles from Snover, where the Saints meet in prayer-meeting and Sabbath-school, but it is too far for me to walk and take a baby. We are starting a new place and use my husband's parents' team for working, but can not use it for driving, especially since they are not in favor of the Saints. The gospel has never been preached in this neighborhood, except one sermon by William Dowker who was here last winter. The roads were drifted, my little boy was sick, and we could not get many out to hear. After he went away several said they would have come had they known he was here.

If any of the elders could come when the roads are good and stay a week they might get a crowd. While there is no good place to preach they are welcome to preach in our house. We also have a large front yard if the house is not large enough. If Elder William Davis sees this, husband and I would like to have him come, as we are both acquainted with him, although we are not situated to convey anybody either way until we get a horse of our own. If they come, however, we will give them what they want to eat and a place to sleep, and I will help all I can to get the people to hear the gospel.

If Bro. Snover sees this I would like to have him bring over a load some evening and hold prayer-meeting. The snow is all gone so he can put his team in the barn. I would also like Bro. Phettyplace, of Shabbona, to bring a load some evening. We live seven miles south and one mile east of Shabbona.

I feel very lonesome for the company of the Saints at times, but God is my comforter by his Spirit, and I am able to withstand the slurs of others. There is a Methodist preacher on one side and a Mennonite on the other. They both like to give the work a dig or slur when they can.

Ever praying for the welfare of the work, the redemption of Zion and the honest in heart, I am,

MRS. E. G. MAXWELL.

FARWELL, Michigan, May 24, 1908.

Editors Herald: I desire the prayers of the Saints that I may continue strong in the faith to the end of my days. I want to be a benefit to others. I would like to have the Saints write me. I received a letter two or three years ago from a brother at Granville, Yukon Territory, Canada. His name was David Hollingsworth, and if he reads this I wish he would write me, as I have not his present address.

R. F. D. No. 2.

WARREN HALL.

Extracts from Letters.

Jennie Green, Shenandoah, Iowa, would like to know of the whereabouts of Sarah E. Ballantine, they having attended the Magnolia, Iowa, schools thirty years ago. If the latter sees this will she please write her old school-mate?

News From Branches

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Editors Herald: A large attendance was at our last sacrament service and a profitable hour was spent. The dear little babe of Bro. and Sr. Radford was blessed under the hands of Brn. Archibald and Cooke and given the name of Eveline Adel.

We were highly favored with a visit from Apostle Rush-ton who gave us some splendid instruction. He preached for us May 3, 4, and 5, and was also in attendance at two prayer-services. Food for thought was given us that we believe will remain for some time to come. He was entertained before his departure at the home of Sr. Peters.

Our dear Sr. Anna Shaw (nee Lloyd) passed from this earth life May 7, after a lingering illness. She leaves her husband, Bro. Gordon Shaw, and little babe of about two years, father and mother, Bro. and Sr. J. R. Lloyd, sisters Matilda and Nina Lloyd, brothers John and Robert, and grandfather, Bro. McFarland. A splendid funeral-sermon was preached May 10 by Bro. J. A. Tanner. The bereaved ones have our prayers and deepest sympathy. Bro. Tanner also had charge of a funeral-service for a young man not of our faith who was buried from the church on May 6.

The priesthood met May 12, and had the subject of the resurrection and restoration under consideration. Normal lessons are found very interesting.

Sunday-school and Religio are alive and progressing. An enjoyable program and social was given by Religio on the evening of May 22.

Sr. R. Archibald is in Independence because of the serious illness of her mother, Sr. Krahl. Sr. Billinsky is reported to be gaining strength. She is still at Eureka Springs, Arkansas. Sr. Richardson has returned from a visit with her brother. Bro. Paul Ayres and wife left on the 23d for a visit with her relatives. Bro. Barrett, formerly of Kansas City, is now located here. Sr. W. W. Smith enroute to Philadelphia was at services one Sunday this month. Sr. A. P. Burgess and children have been in St. Joseph, Missouri, for several weeks past. Bro. DeLong, of Bevier, was also a recent worshiper with us.

Your sister in Christ,

ELIZABETH PATTERSON.

2739 De Jong Street.

Wrinkle, Ruth... 16
 Minnesota.
 Erickson, O. A. 5 00
 Erickson, M. O. 5 00
 Lundeen, Chas., and family 5 00
 Millman, Rosella and Isabella G. 6 00
 Roth, Mrs. Thillie... 2 00
 Thomason, Mrs. H. M. 5 00
 Willing helpers, Clitherall. 20 00
 Mississippi.
 Ferrell, Mrs. C. B. 1 00
 Missouri.
 A sister... 1 00
 Allen, Brenetta 3 50
 Allen, John... 50
 Allen, W. A. 50
 Barron, Mary... 2 00
 Burch, Emma... 1 00
 Campbell, Frank... 7 10
 Chaburn, Mrs. T. W. 20 00
 Chaburn, Bro. and Sr. Jonas... 2 40
 Clinton, Geo. W. 50 00
 Clow, William... 10 00
 Constance, Sarah... 3 00
 Constance, W. B. 10 00
 Cool, Fred, and wife... 1 00
 Davis, R. W., and Teresa... 5 00
 Davis, E. V., two photos of Sanitarium.
 Deam, W. H. and Altha... 5 00
 Fassnacht, John, and wife 2 00
 Fausett, Al... 1 00
 Fausett, Inez... 1 00
 Franklin, J. M., and wife. 15 00
 Giesch, Louise... 15 00
 Graham, David... 5 00
 Graham, Viola... 1 00
 Hailey, Ann... 10 00
 Hartman, Lettie J. 1 00
 Hefflon, Mrs. F. G. 1 00
 Hooker, Harriet S. 2 50
 Hovenga, J. E. 5 00
 Humansville Saints... 3 15
 Independence Mfg. & Mer. Company... 1,000 00
 Kansas City, First Branch Sunday-school... 51 93
 Kelley, Mrs. C. B. 5 00
 Keown, Chas., and wife... 5 00
 Lawrenson, Wm... 10 00
 Laurel Club, Independence, Missouri... 200 00
 Madison, W. C. 5 00
 Mann, William F. 9 10
 Mather, J., M. D. 10 00
 Mills, A. H., and wife... 10 00
 Miller, Fred S. 50
 Miller, Mamie... 50
 Miller, Elizabeth... 50
 Mink, John M. 1 00
 Moldrup, Peter... 5 00
 Moss, Mrs. Ed... 25
 Moss, Fern... 25
 Moser, Fred... 1 00
 Nelson, C. C. 3 00
 Nesbitt, Mary... 1 00
 Nesbitt, Bina... 1 00
 Parker, R. J. 25 00
 Rawlins, Abbie... 2 00
 Reese, David T... 5 00
 Richards, W. B., agent, Northeastern District: Doestader, F. A., and wife... 1 00
 Edmunds, Niles... 2 00
 Heade, St. Lou... 1 00
 Jones, Margaret... 50
 Jones, Sr. E. J. 5 00
 Mason, Annie... 2 00
 Surridge, Maria... 3 00
 Surridge, Maggie... 3 00
 Shoemaker, Corin... 50
 Shoemaker, Leona... 50
 Williams, J. T., and wife 2 00
 Williams, Hattie... 1 00
 Riggs, J. D. 5 00
 Rowland, T. A. 5 00
 Schmidt, David H. 5 00
 Schmidt, H. G. 20 00
 Simmons, Ruby M. and Samuel H. 25 00
 Sisters of Joplin Branch... 21 75
 Skinner, W. O. 5 00
 Snodgrass, Sarah... 5 00
 St. Joseph Sunday-school... 22 85
 St. Joseph Zion's Hope Sunday-school... 2 79
 Thomas, Julia A. 5 00
 Torrance, W. B. 2 00
 Trowbridge, Bro. and Sr. Granville... 5 00
 Uncarer, Juliette... 50 00
 Volz, Mary E. 5 00
 Watkins, T. J., and wife... 5 00
 Webb City Sunday-school... 13 35
 Webb City sisters' aid... 5 00
 Webb City Daughters of Zion... 2 50
 White, Mrs. I. N. 5 00
 Williams, Mrs. Ellen... 5 00
 Williams, Iris... 1 00

Young, R. L. 50
 R. May, bishop Independence Stake, as follows:
 Devore, Ella... 50
 Thompson, Henry... 2 00
 Miller, Sr. J. F. 50
 Ashton, Sr. Moroni... 25
 Dennis, Mrs. A. L. 2 00
 Scott, B. J. 1 00
 Luff, J. W. 10 00
 Yingling, A. L. 10 00
 Fourth Kansas City Sunday-school... 1 58
 Roberts, Sam... 5 00
 Cook, Mary E. 1 00
 Sterrett, W. G. 10 00
 Dickinson, Mrs. F. C. 4 80
 Ayres, Mrs. C. W. 2 00
 Miller, Jerry F. 2 00
 Anderson, Sr. Martha... 1 00
 Goodrich, Sr. J. A. 2 00
 Waddell, Mrs. S. O. 1 00
 Coleman, J. A. 5 00
 Warnky, F. C. 10 00
 Fourth Kansas City Branch... 2 00
 McKenzie, Cady... 5 00
 Gurwell, Charles... 5 00
 Schimmell, Ruth... 1 00
 Schimmell, Laura... 1 00
 Schimmell, Mrs. J. J. 2 00
 Schimmell, Joseph J. 1 00
 Schimmell, J. J. 5 00
 Koehler, J. A., and wife 10 00
 Total... $103 63
 Montana.
 Benedict, Effie A. $ 50
 Collins, G. R. 1 00
 Fullerton, Grace M. 1 00
 Graybeal, Emma... 5 00
 Mauzey, Earl F. 10 00
 Peers, Mrs. A. J. and Ann Jenkins... 10 00
 Spragg, G. A., and wife... 4 00
 Sund, Carrie... 5 00
 Williams, Clinton... 5 00
 Nebraska.
 Barks, Carrie... 1 00
 Barton, Hester... 1 00
 Brandon, W. F. D. and Catherine... 1 00
 Broilrier, Samuel... 1 00
 Cox, Ella... 5 00
 Cox, Allie... 1 00
 Caress, Addie... 5 00
 Derry, Charles H. 2 00
 Diehl, Lillie... 1 00
 Downey, E. 10 00
 Emley, Mary M. 15 00
 Harshman, Fannie... 1 00
 Hillman, J. T., and wife. 1 00
 Hutchins, C. N. 10 00
 Kelley, J. E., and wife... 2 00
 Koupal, J. B., and wife... 5 00
 Mengel, Anna... 1 00
 Mengel, Irvin... 2 00
 Mengel, R. S. 2 00
 Omaha ladies' aid... 25 00
 Pendleton, J. T. 1 50
 Pendleton, Rosella... 1 50
 Rawlins, Abbie... 2 00
 Sail, Mrs. C. E. 2 00
 Strickland, Alice... 5 00
 Weed, Sarah L. 5 80
 White, Bertie... 50
 White, Henry... 50
 New York.
 Bierman, Sarah... 1 00
 Blair, William... 5 00
 Brothers, Wm., and wife... 10 00
 Hobson, Bro... 3 50
 Lewis, Mrs. L. H. 2 00
 Nichols, Almyra and Luther... 5 00
 Weegar, L. M. 1 00
 Nevada.
 Gault, Jane... 7 00
 Moore, I. R. 1 00
 North Dakota.
 Crowl, A. E., and wife... 2 00
 Moffitt, Sr. H. A. 1 75
 Weddle, Elmer E. 3 00
 Ohio.
 Bennington, M. L., and family... 5 00
 Edwards, Adda... 6 00
 Hammerstein, Mrs. C. W. 1 00
 Jeffers, S. J. 5 00
 Merrick, Andrew... 2 00
 Moxon, John W. 1 50
 Ramsey, F. E. 2 00
 Schmidt, Edmund and Agnes... 5 00
 Stone, A. E., and wife... 25 00
 Titus, Harriet G. 1 00
 Yates, Martha... 1 00
 Oklahoma.
 Craven, C. J. 5 00
 Dale, Frances... 1 00
 Gooch, William... 5 00
 Goss, N. A. 50

Hain, P. M., and wife... 2 50
 Hill, Mrs. M. C. 5 00
 Hixson, B. R. 4 00
 Hull, G. W. 25 00
 James, F. A. 10 00
 Jeffcoat, C. H. 5 00
 Sheppard, T. J., and wife 2 00
 Trego, A. V., and wife... 5 00
 Oregon.
 Calkins, Olive A. 1 00
 Feagins, T. H. 25 00
 Hanson, Olive... 1 00
 Hanson, Sylvia... 1 00
 Hanson, Veron... 1 00
 Hanson, Albert... 1 00
 Hanson, Fred... 1 00
 Greek, W. A. 2 00
 Longsdorf, Mrs. L. M. 1 00
 Minor, C. A. 25 00
 Pennsylvania.
 Engle, Susan... 1 00
 Isaacs, Mrs. M. A. 25 00
 Nelson, William... 10 00
 Surdam, M. A. and Rosa... 4 00
 Surdam, T. J. 2 00
 Scotland.
 McPherson, Henry... 5 00
 South Dakota.
 Babb, W. A. 3 34
 Hughs, Lena... 1 00
 McCallum, Celia... 5 00
 Mitchell, Sr. William... 7 00
 Sweden.
 Hannah Lawrence... 27 60
 Texas.
 Adams, O. L. 50
 Albertson, Charles... 10 00
 Colley, W. H. 50
 Gifford, Ruth... 1 00
 Hayes, A., and wife... 1 50
 Johnson, O. D., and wife... 2 00
 Riley, Mrs. D. S. 1 00
 Wolfe, Mrs. Addie... 3 50
 Utah.
 Davis, Edward M. 1 00
 Johnston, Oscar... 5 00
 Plain City Sunday-school... 1 75
 Warburton, Emma... 1 00
 Wilson, J. D. 5 00
 Virginia.
 Davison, William R. 10 00
 Herrick, L. M. 7 00
 Wales.
 Two sisters (Llanelly)... 2 44
 Washington.
 A sister... 3 50
 Allen, Mrs. J. R. 5 00
 Allen, Mary... 2 50
 Coleman, May... 1 00
 Coleman, N. E., and wife. 1 00
 Coleman, Genie... 1 00
 Gill, Rosie L. 2 50
 Kellum, Ada... 5 00
 LaConner helping hand society... 5 00
 Lang, Mrs. Frank... 1 00
 Veal, Hannah... 25
 West Virginia.
 Cottrill, Joanna... 50
 Givens, Daniel E. 1 00
 Wilson, Laura E. 3 00
 Wisconsin.
 Betner, Mary... 1 00
 Betner, Mildred... 1 00
 Blackburne, Alice J. 2 00
 Held, N. E., and wife... 1 00
 Mason, E. L., and wife... 2 00
 Smart, J. S. 1 00
 Townsend, E. A. 1 00
 Wyoming.
 Daniel, A. M., and wife... 5 00
 Miscellaneous.
 Sale of material... 193 41
 Sale of wood... 13 00
 Refund on cement sacks returned... 104 30
 By G. H. Hilliard, Counselor.
 Altrap, Thomas, Io... 5 00
 Burton, Minnie, Io... 5 00
 Benedict, Sr. M. E., Io... 1 00
 Beercoft, Olive, Io... 5 00
 Beercoft, Mary, Io... 1 00
 Beercoft, Henry, Io... 1 00
 Brown, Rachel, Neb... 1 00
 Cline, J. B., Io... 1 00
 Claiburn, James, and wife, Iowa... 5 00
 Caffall, Eliza, Io... 1 00
 Christensen, J. P., Io... 1 00
 Comstock, James, and wife, Iowa... 5 00
 Davison, A. J., Io... 1 00
 Dempsey, A. E., Io... 1 00
 Dunsdon, James, and wife, Iowa... 5 00
 Forney, C. W., Io... 1 00

Gaylord, M. W., Io... 5 00
 Goode, Frank L., and wife, Iowa... 20 00
 Goode, Joseph, and wife, Iowa... 2 00
 Gard, William, Io... 1 00
 Greenlee, Anna, Io... 1 00
 Hicks, Theodore A., Neb... 1 00
 Harding, Samuel, and wife, Iowa... 5 00
 Harding, Estella, Io... 5 00
 Holder, C. L., Io... 1 00
 Jacobson, Stephen, and wife... 4 00
 Kemp, James H., Io... 1 00
 Kemp, Geo., and wife, Io... 10 00
 Liles, H. M., Io... 10 00
 Leach, Earl M., Neb... 1 00
 Moore, J. C., Io... 2 00
 Mortimer, Sarah, Io... 2 00
 Mortimer, N. L., and wife, Iowa... 2 00
 Moyers, Ida, Io... 1 00
 Novinger, Frank, and wife... 10 00
 Oliver, M. B., Io... 25
 Roberts, E. W., Io... 1 00
 Roberts, C. M., Io... 75
 Riley, C. A., Io... 5 00
 Riley, C. L., Io... 5 00
 Schwartz, Alice C., Neb... 1 00
 Sylvester, Isaac, Neb... 1 00
 Underpool, Ella, Io... 1 00
 Utterback, O. F., and wife 2 00
 Wind, Floy, Io... 1 00
 Wind, Viva, Io... 1 00
 Total... $5,165 00
 CHILDREN'S HOME.
 Receipts by Presiding Bishopric from January 10, 1908, to April 1, 1908, California.
 Anthony, Sr. M. E. $ 5 00
 Askew, Jane... 1 00
 Baldwin, James... 1 00
 Grant, Mrs. M. H. 5 00
 Ladies' aid, Sacramento... 5 00
 Oakland Sunday-school... 5 00
 Santa Cruz Sunday-school... 3 00
 Wixom, Alexander... 1 50
 Wixom, George H. 5 00
 Canada.
 Brown, Leslie... 1 25
 Disley, Saskatchewan, Branch... 4 00
 Jenkins, Edna Pearl... 25
 Jenkins, Hazel Dolphin... 25
 Shelbourne, Ontario Branch... 2 00
 Thompson, Catharine I... 5 00
 Williams, E. E. 75
 Wilson, Nelson, and wife... 2 00
 Zone Branch... 1 00
 Colorado.
 Bullard, Mary E. 5 00
 Roush, Belle B. 2 00
 Roush, J. Blair... 1 00
 Roush, Claude E. 1 00
 Roush, Ada A. 1 00
 Tabor, A. E. and N. A. 5 00
 Weller, William H., and wife... 1 00
 Willis, Emma E. 5 00
 Wolfe, W. E. and S. E. 5 00
 Hawaii Territory.
 Alberts, J. J. 50
 Idaho.
 Christensen, Lena... 2 00
 Hendrickson, B. L. 1 00
 Hendrickson, Alfred... 50
 Williams, David J. 2 50
 Illinois.
 Brown, M. R., and wife... 2 00
 Daer, J. A., and wife... 5 00
 Hull, John, and wife... 2 50
 Johnston, Oscar... 10 00
 Johnston, Ellen... 5 00
 Norris, James, agent, Holmes, Dale S., and wife... 2 00
 Bean, J. E., and wife... 50
 Elvin, R. C., and wife... 1 00
 Constance, John C. 1 00
 Tilly, Lilly C. 25
 Holmes, Melvin B., and wife... 5 00
 Webber, Grace... 1 05
 Maynard, Alfonso, and wife... 5 00
 1st Primary Class, Kewanee, Illinois... 1 65
 Total... $ 17 45
 Smith, Nancy... 50
 Indiana.
 Beatty, J. H. 1 00
 McCullough, Stella... 50
 McCullough, Albert... 25
 Iowa.
 Fraser Sunday-school... 4 00

Harpe, Mrs. C. E.	1 00	Nebraska.		California.		Goodwin, Mrs. Kate	4 00
Lamoni Stake, William Anderson, bishop:		Brandon, W. F. D. and Catherine	1 00	A sister	10 00	Helms, Mrs. Lee.....	5 00
Bogue, Joseph.....	2 50	Hillman, J. T.....	1 00	Powell, H. C.....	2 00	Mills, Mrs. C. M.....	5 00
Burk, C. E., and wife..	2 00	Nebraska City Sunday-school	8 00	Ross, Mrs. F. E.....	2 50	Stoker, Gertrude	1 00
Fields, Reuben.....	5 00	Oklahoma.		Shipp, Harriet	2 50	Nebraska.
Lone Rock Sunday-school collection.....	5 22	Hull, G. W.....	15 00	Solan, James	2 00	A sister	2 50
Martin, James, and wife	10 00	Oregon.		Veddaer, Alta	1 00	Barks, Carrie.....	1 00
Mathews, Joseph.....	1 25	McCulley, Nellie I.....	35	York, Charles H.....	1 00	Hudson Sunday-school..	2 00
Mathews, Cyril	1 25	Minor, C. A.....	25 00	Colorado.		Nelson, Mary	60
Mathews, Gwendolyn ..	1 25	Pennsylvania.		Bartlett, Freddie	50	Pittman, Children of Mrs. John	1 00
Mathews, Elizabeth	1 25	Engel, Susan	1 00	Bartlett, Mrs. Helen C....	1 00	New Mexico.
May, Mary	1 00	Sharon Branch.....	5 00	Pueblo Branch	2 15	Davenport, Effie	1 00
Moore, Edward D., and wife	20 00	Scotland.		Westland, Martha	50	Crow, Mrs. David	10 00
Murray, Mrs. M.....	50	McPherson, Henry	5 00	Illinois.		North Dakota.
Murphy, Price.....	5 00	South Dakota.		Brunson, for Marion Hiel (deceased).....	2 00	Langton, Mrs. James	5 00
Perry, John	1 00	Babb, W. A.....	3 33	Heavener, Mrs. S. D.....	5 00	Ohio
Plum, Russell	50	Texas.		Joliet Sunday-school.....	2 00	Bosworth, Mrs. L. P.....	1 00
Smith, Ona	2 50	Hays, A., and wife.....	2 00	Johnson, Sr. C.....	1 00	Carpender, Mrs. C. E.....	5 00
Stevens, Ezra	1 00	Utah.		Ladies' aid society, Plano.	10 00	Kirkendall, Mrs. A. B.....	6 00
Young, D. D., and wife.	10 00	Davis, Edward M.....	1 00	Iowa.		Oklahoma.
Smith, Robert	2 00	Plain City Sunday-school.	1 75	Banta, Ethel.....	5 00	Sherwin, Mrs. Helen.....	1 00
Kansas.		Warburton, Emma.....	1 50	Daughters of Zion local, Lamoni	11 45	Terlton Sunday-school ..	2 38
Love, Mrs. John.....	2 95	Wales.		Jacobs, Alice	2 00	Pennsylvania.
Westervelt, Bertha	25	Two sisters (Llanelly) ..	2 43	Cartier, Savings of little Veneta, (deceased).....	2 00	Collected by Daughters of Zion local from members of Philadelphia Branca	45 55
Maine.		Washington.		Michigan.		Saskatchewan.
Ames, J. M. and W. S....	3 00	Gill, Rosie L.....	2 50	Bates, Olive Eulala	50	Ladies' aid society, Weyburn	5 00
Michigan.		Strickland, L. H., and wife.	5 00	Ladies' aid society, Bently	5 00	Texas.
Benne, Kate	2 00	Total	$384 38	Pringle, Mrs. E. L.....	1 00	Riley, Mrs. D. S.....	1 00
Inglwright, Ross.....	1 00	Report of Children's Home Fund. Received by Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, General Treasurer of Daughters of Zion Society, from March 30, 1907, to April 2, 1908.		Minnesota.		Rogers, Mrs. P. L.....	1 00
Rusnell, J. J.....	1 00	Interest on deposit certificates	$ 9 41	Horn, Mrs. Ida, and her lady friends	12 40	Washington.
South Boardman Sunday-school	15 30	Australia.		Thomason, Mrs. H. M.....	5 00	Ferguson, Mary	5 00
Traverse City Branch....	1 65	Balmain Religio	4 87	Willing helpers' society, Clitherall.....	12 00	Lang, Mrs. Frank	2 00
Minnesota.		Canada.		Missouri.		Sunday-school, Seattle ..	10 00
Wildy, Madaline	1 00	McArthur, Mrs. Ed.....	50	A sister	1 00	Total	$374 31
Missouri.		McArthur, Hector	1 00	Blair, Bro. and Sr. D. H..	9 00	Paid to Bishop E. L. Kelley by order of the Society for Children's Home Fund, April 24, 1908..	$374 31
Constance, Sarah	2 00			Daughters of Zion local, Bevier	20 00	Mrs. M. E. HULMES, General Treasurer,
First Kansas City Sunday-school	50 00			Daughters of Zion local, Independence	100 00	Daughters of Zion Society.
St. Joseph Sunday-school.	18 45
Williams, Iris	1 00
Mississippi.
Ferrill, Mrs. C. B.....	1 00

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

WESTERN MAINE.—The Western Maine District convened with the Stonington Branch, May 16, 17, 1908. Business-session May 16, called to order at 2 p. m., President J. J. Billings in the chair. R. Bullard was chosen president of conference and J. J. Billings associate; W. A. Small, clerk; Flora Smith, organist; R. W. Farrell, chorister; branch deacons, ushers. Privileges of conference were extended to visiting Saints. Ministerial reports: Elders J. J. Billings, J. N. Ames, W. E. LaRue, E. E. Holman, H. R. Eaton; Teacher Mark Billings. Statistical reports read from Mountainville, Little Deer Isle, Stonington, Dixfield Centre. Bishop's agent, H. R. Eaton, reported; receipts, $191.45; expenditures, $166.16; balance, $25.29. Treasurer Pearl F. Billings reported: Amount on hand last report, $7.62, receipts, $8.03; expenditures, $12.08, balance on hand, $3.57. Reports referred to auditing committee. A committee to draft resolutions to cover use of district funds and their expenditures, reported as follows: "Resolved, That we, your committee, are of the opinion that any one that is authorized to incur legitimate expenses, shall draw same from district treasurer, and shall receipt for same; treasurer's report to be presented to conference for approval or disapproval." Officers chosen as follows: President, J. N. Ames; associate, H. R. Eaton; clerk, W. A. Small; treasurer, Pearl F. Billings. Preaching by Elders R. Bullard, R. W. Farrell, W. E. LaRue. An excellent prayer- and testimony-meeting was enjoyed at 9 a. m., Sunday, in which many took part. Adjourned to meet at Little Deer Isle at call of president. W. A. Small clerk.

Convention Minutes.

MASSACHUSETTS.—The Sunday-school and Religio societies of the district met in joint convention at Providence, Rhode Island, May 9 and 10. Many were present, local schools were well represented, and delegates seemed inspired with the one object of advancing God's work. Harmony prevailed, and in many respects it was the best convention we have ever held. The program was excellent; some of the papers read were as follows: "The Sunday-school as a spiritual aid," "Social innovations," "The home department," "Duties of church members to Religio," "Library work."

Discussion followed and much helpful thought was caused. Spiritual and mental development resulted and every one seemed to rejoice at the prospect of a bright future for these auxiliaries of the church. R. W. Farrell.

Sunday-school convention of the Little Sioux, Iowa, District was held at Woodbine, Iowa, May 28. A large delegation was present and the sessions were interesting. Sr. M. A. Etzenhouser met with us and her illustrations of the normal work were very educational, instilling within each new zeal, interest, and determination. Reports regarding home class and library work were encouraging. Adjourned to meet at Sioux City, Iowa, October 1, 1908. Annie Stuart, secretary.

Bishop's Agents' Notices.

To the Saints of the Northern Wisconsin District; Greeting: I wish to thank those of the Saints who have so kindly contributed of their means to the tithe and offering fund. We have entered a new conference year, and as we feel sure the Lord has blessed your efforts in the past, he will surely bless you in the future. We wish that every Saint in the district could have their names placed on the "book of remembrance," as Malachi speaks of it in the third chapter, "that was written before him. . . . And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, . . . when I make up my jewels." By placing our names on this book we become members of the best assurance society in existence. Paul says, "Faith is the assurance of things hoped for." What wonderful promises are given to those who keep this law, both spiritual and temporal! Malachi, third chapter, and Proverbs 3:9 enumerate those blessings, and Doctrine and Covenants 70:3 gives us to understand that if we want the abundance of spiritual blessings to be given us we should obey this part of God's law, and then can be accomplished the preaching of the gospel, which must be to all the world for a witness before the end comes or the Savior appears.

For convenience of the Saints Bro. Oren Ganoe will receipt for tithes and offerings for those living in and near Porcupine or Frankfort Branches; Bro. Nalmer Johnson for Chetek and Twin Lakes. We request for these brethren your hearty cooperation in their work of explaining and teaching the law, also soliciting tithes and offerings for the Lord's work.

Do not forget the Sanitarium and children's home funds.

The Lord has directed their establishment. Let us help if we can.

I will promptly receipt for tithes and offerings at any time from any one from any part of the district. A letter will reach me quickly at any time at address given below. We will try some time during the year to visit all the branches and Saints in the district as far as possible. May the Lord bless and prosper all his people.

In gospel bonds,

LESTER WILDERMUTH.

NECEDAH, Wisconsin, R. F. D. No. 2.

Pastoral.

To the Saints of Southern and Southeastern Missouri; Greeting: Having been placed in charge of above territory again, I desire to call your attention to a few points, that we may labor together effectively in the gospel warfare: 1. Our field-workers are very limited—only three, Joseph Ensley having gone to the army. 2. Write me or my coloborers concerning opportunities for preaching. 3. Will you not make an extra effort to secure some new openings; that we may get out of the old beaten paths? 4. Let branch officers and members manifest special interest in the local work, Sunday-school and Religio, and where these societies do not exist, if possible, organize them. 5. We have two new missionaries with us this year, Elders W. H. Smart and D. R. Baldwin, who will give us a spiritual uplifting, if we give them the proper encouragement. 6. Remember the railroads charge two cents per mile for transportation. Don't ask if the missionaries need anything; just give them something and the Lord will remember you in mercy. 7. I want to call attention to the fact that I am acting as Bishop's agent. This will be a hard year for the church, if the Saints do not rally to its support, financially. Send money to me at my home address, 2219 Kellet Street, Springfield, Missouri, and I will receipt promptly. Let us pray for one another.

Your humble servant,

A. M. BAKER.

SPRINGFIELD, Missouri, May 27, 1908.

Conference Notices.

The St. Louis District wil convene in Landsdowne, Illinois, on Saturday evening, June 13, 1908, at 8 o'clock, and continue over Sunday the 14th. We desire a full representation of the membership of the district, as the matter of holding a reunion this year will come up for final action. Will the branch secretaries kindly mail me their reports not later than the 12th?

The Gallands Grove District will convene at Dow City, Iowa, Saturday and Sunday, June 13, 14, 1908. Branch presidents will see that their reports reach me by June 9; also would like the ministry to be prompt in reporting. Edith C. Dobson, secretary.

Arrangements have been made to have all Pere Marquette railway trains stop at Stevenson Saturday, June 13, for those going to the Chatham, Ontario, District conference, and on Monday, June 15, for those returning. Any information that I can give I will cheerfully do so to any who write me. Anthony R. Hewitt, secretary, box 573, Chatham, Ontario.

Conference of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District will meet at Galien, Michigan, June 20, at 10 a. m. President Joseph Smith, Bishop E. L. Kelley, and Apostle J. W. Wight, missionary in charge, are expected to be present, as well as others of the missionary force in this district. On Sunday, the 21st, the neat little chapel, just completed by the Saints of Galien, will be dedicated. The Saints of the district are especially urged to attend. We anticipate a fine conference. O. H. Storey.

Convention Notices.

Nauvoo District Religio Association will meet at Keokuk, Iowa, June 5, 1908. Both Sunday-school and Religio business will be disposed of in the morning, and the afternoon session will be in the form of a program of papers and round table.

The London, Ontario, Sunday-school District will meet at Waterford, June 19, 1908. Jennie Morrison, secretary.

The Kentucky and Tennessee reunion will be held at Foundry Hill, Tennessee, July 25, being the eighteenth reunion in this district. Good speakers, good time. One day (Thursday) devoted to children. Those coming by rail will notify R. M. C. Ross, Puryear, Tennessee.

Reunion Notices.

The North Dakota Reunion and district conference will be held at Dunseith, North Dakota, July 11, and hold over two Sundays. There will be hay and pasture for teams, also board for those who desire it. We are doing all we can to make expenses as light as possible. Dunseith is on a branch of the Great Northern Railroad, leaving the main line at York. C. J. Spaulding, secretary committee.

Addresses.

J. D. Stead, care Frederick W. Holman, 1202½ Seventh Avenue, Seattle, Washington.

C. A. Parkin, 18 Clement Street, Sacramento, California. Phone: Pacific 1395.

Died.

RUDICIL.—Clara May, daughter of Bro. Ed. C. Rudicil, of Cedar Grove, Indiana; was born August 2, 1903; died May 23, 1908. Funeral by Reverend W. B. Thom, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Bro. Rudicil and wife are true Latter Day Saints and have heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement.

KECK.—Sister Iva R. Keck was born June 4, 1878, at Eldorado Springs, Missouri; died May 31, 1908, at Nevada, Missouri. Baptized May 20, 1889, by Elder E. Curtis. Sermon at her father's house by Elder George Jenkins, on June 2. This sister has lived a devoted Christian life and has spent many years in the Sunday-school work, and during the last four years served as superintendent of the Clinton District. Her influence was felt wherever she went, both among the youth and aged. She bore with patience her great affliction and passed away peacefully. Buried in Deepwood Cemetery, Nevada, Missouri, leaving father, mother, twin sister, and two brothers to mourn.

JONES.—Thomas Jones, born February 15, 1829. Baptized by Elder W. Low near Eldorado Springs, Missouri, February 19, 1907; died May 31, 1908; funeral by Elder George Jenkins.

BECK.—Mrs. Josie Harris-Beck was born March 14, 1876; baptized in 1897, and died March 3, 1908, by the hand of her late husband.

HARRIS.—Dee Treadwell, son of Josie Harris-Beck, was born April 30, 1894, and died by the hand of his late father March 3, 1908.

MILLER.—George Chester, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. and Florence E. Miller, corner of Nineteenth Street and Turner Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, May 27, 1908, age two days. Funeral services conducted at the residence May 28, 1908, at 11 a. m. Sermon by Elder J. E. Vanderwood. Our heartfelt sympathy is extended to the noble parents who have thus been called upon to part with their only child.

RUSOW.—Lillie Rusow, born January 11, 1886, Bentonville, Arkansas; was baptized January 22, 1899, at Rich Hill, Missouri, by Elder F. M. Sharrock; died May 26, 1908, of consumption, at her parents' home in Rich Hill, Missouri. She lived a devoted Christian, was ever faithful to the covenant she made with the Lord. Funeral at the Saints' church by Elder George Jenkins. Interment in the Rich Hill cemetery.

SMITH.—At Humeston, Iowa, May 16, 1908, of cancer of the stomach, Elder Martin Van Buren Smith, aged 71 years, 4 months, and 16 days. He received the gospel at Florence, Nebraska, in 1865. Lived at Davis City, Iowa, from 1878 to 1896. He leaves wife, three sons, and three daughters. He endured his long and trying illness with patience and left an honorable reputation. Funeral-services were held at Humeston by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, and the body was brought for burial, to Davis City, where also a discourse was preached in the Saints' chapel filled with Bro. Smith's old neighbors.

DEMPSTER.—William Templeton Dempster was born October 9, 1830, at Nether Mills, Scotland; with his parents came to this country in 1841; located in Michigan; moved to Arlington, Iowa, in 1852; was united in marriage to Amy Cramer, August 22, 1858. Came to Plano in 1881 and was baptized into the church by Elder W. Vickery, June 18, 1882. Died at his granddaughter's, Somonauk, Illinois, May 25, 1908, leaving wife, one son, one brother, four sisters, six grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren to mourn. Funeral-sermon by F. M. Cooper, Plano, May 27, assisted by Elder C. H. Burr.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

BOOKOUT.—Francis M. Bookout, born October 31, 1875, Kenton, Christian County, Missouri; died from hemorrhage of the lungs, May 25, 1908, near Dogwood, Douglas County, Missouri, leaving wife, daughter, mother, brothers, sisters and others to mourn. He was baptized August 31, 1896, by Elder C. J. Spurlock. Dying as he had lived, a Saint indeed. Just before his departure he said that he was ready and prepared to go. Funeral-service at the Baptist church near Dogwood, Elder T. D. Williams in charge, sermon by Elder J. C. Chrestensen.

WILLETT.—Annie Halley was born May 22, 1840, Kenrosshire, Scotland. With her parents located at Bristol, Illinois, in 1854; was married to Thomas Willett March 17, 1857, locating in Plano, Illinois, the same year. Six children were born to this union; three are dead. Sr. Willett was baptized at Plano by Elder J. W. Gillen, April 9, 1865. Died at her daughter's, Mrs. James Hamlins, Aurora, Illinois, May 29. Funeral in the Plano Church May 31, in charge of Elder C. H. Burr, sermon by F. M. Cooper. Three children, two grandchildren, one brother, and two sisters are left to mourn. Sr. Willett died as she had lived—a Saint of God.

Ballooning.

Never shall I forget the scene when the large airship—the dirigible balloon—floated upwards from the slender trestle as it was released by Robert S. Knabenshue, who walked along the trestle from one end to the other. The balloon was of Japanese silk with propeller in front, and the white-winged rudder guided it with as much ease, apparently, as a boat in its native element. The throngs of people upon the ground—a sea of upturned faces—presented a spectacle of what this century can command in the shape of an audience for such a startling achievement as this one. Captain Thomas F. Baldwin built the ship which made its flight on this memorable day, occupied by Robert S. Knabenshue, and gazed with satisfaction at his pet invention as it winged its way out of view and returned again to within a few feet of the spot from which it started, after it had taken a tour of a number of miles in the air.

The award to Thomas F. Baldwin, the aeronaut and inventor of the parachute, who has made thousands of successful ascents, is interesting. He has made the science of aerial navigation and the building of airships his life work. The story of Thomas Baldwin as an aeronaut, as related by himself for the readers of the National, is a fascinating contribution concerning the new order of things.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in June National Magazine.

Just June.

There's a moon not too obtrusive,
Sort of misty and delusive,
Frequently and opportunely hiding, way beneath the clouds;
And a maiden, sweet and pretty,
Not too solemn or too witty,
Down a country lane a-walking, free from madding, gadding crowds,
With a youth, in love aplenty,
Probably some five-and-twenty;
And a heart that's liltling "Sweet, oh, I love you!" like a tune.
Well, the rest is very simple:
Just a sigh or two, a dimple,
And a kiss.—Ah, these things happen—happen when the month is June!
—From Woman's Home Companion for June.

Western Prosperity.

The Nation's prosperity really rests on farm products. So long as these reach up to the value of former years,—approximately $7,500,000,00 in 1907,—this must continue to be so. There has probably never been a time in this generation when such splendid general crop prospects existed as at the beginning of May, and which have continued up to the middle of the month. The empty cars of to-day will all be enlisted to move the wheat, corn, oats, and cotton now seeded.

One strong impression on the traveler in the trans-Mississippi country is the utilization of the waste places of past years. The unsightly desert of to-day is the blossoming orchard of to-morrow, and the irrigation ditch the advance agent of prosperity in manifold forms. Some of the results of irrigation in Texas, which promises to rival Louisiana as a rice-producing State, and in Colorado, where land newly watered commands from $500 to $1000 an acre, and that in bearing orchards from $3000 to $4000 an acre, are marvelous to behold. Western Texas, cleared of mesquite and cultivated for cotton, has witnessed an increase in her annual rainfall of nearly ten inches. The change of climate in the new portions of the country is a study by itself. Nature adapts herself to new conditions and helps those who help themselves.—From "Business conditions in the west and southwest," by Charles F. Speare, in the American Review of Reviews for June.

The Literary Digest, one of our most esteemed exchanges, is a veritable gold mine of current thought and information regarding all sides of all important events under discussion throughout the world. Here one can read in two hours what it would take a week to gather from the original sources. It supplies a want which is felt alike by professional scholars and every-day readers.

Are You Interested
In Independence?

Then you should have one of those pictorial books with historical sketch of Independence.

A book made by the genuine Carbon Photo process (not Engravings), contains twenty pages of views and two pages descriptive. Price 50c each.

One 5x7 view would cost you at least 25c, but this booklet all complete for 50c, the universal price for 20 pages for this grade of work, or only 2½c a page.

The Independence Examiner says . . . It is a beautiful souvenir executed in a most artistic manner and should be in every library in Independence.

EVAN V. DAVIS, Photographer,
Lock Box 35, Independence, Missouri.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice,
Mite, and Rain
Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF

NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

Atonement of Christ
and Final Destiny of Man

Revised and Enlarged
No. 17—10 cents each.

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

No. 108—Leatherette, each 80c; per dozen $8.20.
No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

Spanish Tracts

No. 350 Epitome De La Fe, per doz.. 10c
No. 351 Restauración, per doz. . . . 10c

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE
BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid ..$30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

The Safety of
Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK
LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S
HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church. 117

"HEAVEN AND HELL"

BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps

PASTOR LANDEBERGER,

Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

The Jackson County
Bank

(Independence, Missouri)

Having closed a more successful year than the most sanguine of our number anticipated, and recognizing the source of our success in the liberal patronage from far and near, we wish to give expression to our appreciation of the loyalty of our patrons and invite you to have no hesitancy in commanding us when we can be of service to you. During the late irregularities in the banking business we were able to do business undisturbed, practically without a limit to cash payments, and issued no certificates or scrip. Correspondence solicited. Interest paid on deposits.

Anticipating the pleasure of a call from you during Conference time, we tender you our services and facilities and ask that you feel at liberty to occupy our Directors' Parlor for reading and writing at your pleasure, where stationery will be in supply for your use, free. Form the acquaintance of our Directors while here; they will be glad to meet you.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

ELLIS SHORT, President. M. H. BOND, Vice-president.
WM. CRICK, Vice-president. J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

G. H. HILLIARD. DR. J. MATHER.
MRS. O. H. RIGGS. A. L. YINGLING.
HORACE SHELEY.

Very truly yours,
J. D. BRIGGS, Cashier.

Best Trips for Your Vacation

Colorado $22¹⁰ Round Trip

Colorado has a more invigorating and enjoyable summer climate and a greater variety of opportunity for outdoor recreation and sport than any other state in America. Good board may be had from $6 a week, up.

Pacific Coast $64⁶⁰ Round Trip

Includes more unique scenic attractions and points of interest than any other trip—the Rockies and Sierras—the Spanish Missions and Big Trees—the Pacific Ocean and Puget Sound, Yellowstone and Yosemite as convenient side trips. About $15 extra for Grand Tour including all coast cities from Vancouver to Los Angeles.

Above rates are daily. I will give you illustrated folders describing routes, points of interest, list of hotels and boarding-houses with rates for board and quote you rates from your home town. See me to-day.

L. F. Siltz, Agent,
C., B. & Q. R. R.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, JUNE 17, 1908

NUMBER 25

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
ISRAEL A. SMITH, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

Editorial

A VISIT TO NAUVOO.

It might be interesting to HERALD readers to read the memoranda of a practical visit to Nauvoo, "the city beautiful," together with thoughts incident to such visit.

On May 27, in company with Bishop E. L. Kelley, the Editor started from Independence, Missouri, in the evening, for Nauvoo, to be present at the meeting of the committee on the memorial monument for Joseph and Hyrum Smith, pursuant to resolutions of conference. The trip involved a night ride to Quincy, Illinois, where a change of cars was made for Montrose, opposite to Nauvoo on the Iowa side. We arrived at Keokuk at three o'clock in the morning, where it was learned that the excessive rain had washed sand over the track at one point, and had washed out the track at another above Montrose, and because the train could not pass on through to Fort Madison, we were detained at Keokuk until ten o'clock the morning of the 28th. However, while "time and tide wait for no man," but pursue their onward course as appointed by the Creator, delays upon the railway end at some time, and so having fallen into company with Brn. Alexander H. and Heman C. Smith, we reached Montrose at half past ten in the morning, but did not reach Nauvoo until half past one in the afternoon.

The committee, consisting of the Editor, Alexander H. Smith, Heman C. Smith, Bishop E. L. Kelley, and Bishop George P. Lambert, met on the probable site for the monument, an organization was perfected, and resolutions preparatory to future work adopted.

It is an impossible task to convey to the reader the sensations which oppressed the visitor as he traversed the streets once so familiar and so rife with human life and energy, mid scenes in which he was and had been one of the moving forces, and where his youth and early manhood had been passed, but now bearing such unmistakable marks of decay and desolation. Block after block where had been the homes of the cheerful multitude swept clean from their evidences of human occupation, and left to grow up with the rank vegetation to which long continued rains had given life. The once busy streets were covered with grass, even the sidewalks

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

A Visit to Nauvoo	577
Notes and Comments	580
Lamoni Items	581

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

Healing the Sick	582
Methods of Advertising.—Part 2	584
Building Up Zion	589
The Higher Plane	590

OF GENERAL INTEREST:

The Working Man and the Church	591
--------------------------------	-----

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:

The Truth About the Double Standard of Morality	594
Request for Prayers	595

LETTER DEPARTMENT:

Letters	595
Extracts from Letters	598

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:

Conference Minutes:
Northeastern Kansas	598
Nauvoo	598
Clinton	598
Convention Minutes:
Pottawattamie	598
New York and Philadelphia	598
Missionary Appointment	599
Church Secretary	599

As the Sandwich Islander believes that the strength and valor of the enemy he kills passes into himself, so we gain the strength of the temptations we resist.—Emerson.

Prosperity is the touchstone of virtue; for it is less difficult to bear misfortunes, than to remain uncorrupted by pleasure.—Tacitus.

having no mark upon them indicating that humanity passed upon them intent upon the affairs of daily life. A verse of one of our popular hymns kept ringing in the visitor's ear:

"Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day;
Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away;
Change and decay in all around I see;
O thou who changest not, abide with me!"

From every point at which the visitor looked, there came back to his vision the evidences of the truth of the poet's expression. Even those places which had been rebuilt, or those rebuilt upon the sites once occupied by the habitations with which he had been in youth familiar presented in themselves, or in the ruins near, but a continued reminder that the teeth of time gnaw without cessation. This aspect belongs particularly to what was known at the time of its past occupancy as the "flat," which reaches in its eastern extent from river to river again, and from the river to the foothills directly east from the shore, at which point in the foothills the evidences of busy occupation, to a greater or lesser extent, begins. Thence up to what is known as Mulholland Street there runs a continuation of business occupancy, with a few more to the east, beyond which the country asserts itself and farm and garden take the place of city occupation. Upon inquiry the visitor learned that it was reputed that there were twelve hundred inhabitants in the city; that these supported three saloons; that these saloons brought a revenue of one thousand dollars each to the city treasury. The visitor remembered that at one time when he was living in the "city beautiful," eighteen hundred inhabitants were claimed for the place, and twelve saloons afforded the vinous and spirituous comfort and consolation to the inhabitants. At that time the temperance sentiment was not very strongly represented, but the bibulous German and the foreign occupants of the city raising their own wine, making their own beer, manufacturing their own brand, scorned the idea of the rule of the sober and abstemious. But public sentiment has undergone considerable change in the State, and it has finally reached this decaying population, and the city has a strong proportion of those opposed to liquor traffic, and who propose to continue their efforts until there shall be a cessation of it. The visitor was pleased to note this; for he remembered many of the prominent citizens of the days that are past who were not only moderate drunkards, but fast approaching the drunkard's inevitable doom, a drunkard's grave; and some of the brightest lights, most prominent moving minds in the place, had gone with the great majority, their worldly prospects destroyed, and their moral control over themselves utterly destroyed, by the continued dissipation and looking upon the wine when it was red and moved itself aright in the cup.

There are but few of the houses once occupied by the Saints, even as late as 1866, left standing, and some of these were but broken reminders of the once happy and hopeful people who occupied them. The Editor forbears to pass further comment as he was all but moved to tears in contemplating the great change that had taken place, and he could not repress the thought that if the Master ever designs to renew the effort to build up the waste places of Zion, he would have a great opportunity from an almost original wilderness, the place where once moved the central figures in the establishment of the church after its exodus from Missouri.

The little coterie of visitors, including Frederick M. Smith, associate in the Presidency, and Elder Mark H. Siegfried, who is watching over the interests of the little branch at Nauvoo, were met at the river by a descendant of Major Louis C. Bidamon, who in his carriage took us, or the older portion of us, to the place of rendezvous, and where the organization of the committee took place. After the organization, and late in the afternoon, Bro. Siegfried conveyed the visitors to their places, where they would occupy during their visit at Nauvoo, and the Editor and son Frederick, together with Bishop E. L. Kelley and Elder F. B. Farr, were assigned to the care of Sr. Thomas Ellison and Bro. Siegfried who resided at one of the modern buildings erected in the east part of the town, and were only just under cover when a heavy rain fell accompanied by a strong wind which did some damage in the city, as well as at other points west and east. The whole month of May had been marked in the region by heavy rains, and the ground had become sodden with the wet insomuch that farm work was delayed and the vineyards had become weedy as well as the gardens, and gave a discouraging air to almost everything that was seen, and yet we were glad and cheerful notwithstanding that which was calculated to induce a sense of disappointment and desolation.

The little Methodist church on the corner near the third ward schoolhouse, built of stones that had been a part of the grand old temple, was standing forsaken, its windows broken, its floor going to decay, its door hanging loosely on its hinges, apparently utterly abandoned, not only by the faith which gathered the stones and built the little building, but almost breathing out from the insensate material the tears and sighs of the people who shaped them from the quarries and placed them in the walls of the temple which they had been commanded to build unto the Lord. Many years before, when the Methodist society seemed to be prosperous, there would come into their midst a spirit of discontent and contention. And they had disagreed among themselves and one impatient member had petulantly declared that it was her opinion that the curse of Mormonism went with the stones which were in the walls and which had been taken from the temple. When told this, years after, the Editor remarked that the member who uttered this statement mistook the character of the trouble; that no Mormon curse rested upon the stones, but that they had been consecrated by the privation, the devotion and the tears of those who had quarried the material and placed them in the beautiful structure which the hand of vandalism had destroyed. That if these constituted the curse, it was not because of the sentiment of the people against those who used them, but a visible token of the Spirit of the Lord which had been with the original builders. The visitor believes this still.

The temple block is covered with the buildings erected by the hands of those who followed the exodus, and their children, and are occupied from the imposing private dwelling to the abandoned store, and what is known as the city hall with its official occupants. This stands opposite the little grove or park of forest trees in which meetings used to be held, and which now is known as "city park."

Meetings had been arranged to begin on the evening of the 28th and to continue until after Sunday the 31st. It was a rainy, bad evening, and but few were out, the Editor preferring to remain at home. Others of the brethren went to the place of appointment, which was filled by one of them to the satisfaction of the Saints themselves and the few who from the outside gave attention.

Friday, the 29th, was a visiting day, and by the kindness of Bro. Siegfried the writer was permitted to visit a number of the old places and met a few—a very few—of those who constituted a portion of his acquaintanceship forty years ago. These, too, were sad reminders of the fact of rapidly passing time, and in their seamed faces and whitened hair and beard and toothless gums and shrunken frames he could see himself reflected as one of them who must soon lay down the weapons of earthly warfare, and pass into the inevitable rest of the beyond. But as all conditions of life have their recompenses, so had these conditions, for from every side, and upon every countenance, and every open hand we found an old-time welcome. Those whom we most intimately knew gave us cordial greeting, and those with whom we had faintly become acquainted also greeted us cheerfully, as if they recognized the influence of former association. For this we were quite grateful. But as we met in the city hall for the purpose of declaring our hope, we could not refrain from the thought that but few—very few—seemed sufficiently interested in what we were doing to come out and to give us their attention. The writer attended a meeting on Saturday night and also on Sunday morning, and preached Sunday night to the largest congregation which he met during this series, and these were but few, comparatively speaking.

It had been arranged for the citizens' meeting to be held on Sunday afternoon in the city hall at a time when the churches would not be in session, for the purpose of hearing from the committee whatever report it might have to present touching the intention respecting the monument. Upon meeting at the hall we were surprised, after waiting some half hour after the time appointed for the session to be opened, with the incoming of a bare half dozen of the citizens; Mr. Argast, the editor of one of the papers, and Mr. Dochrath, one of the business citizens, and four others, forcing the conclusion upon the committee that possibly a latent fear in the minds of some that they would be asked to subscribe money for the erection of the monument in the city kept the citizens away, and as there was no possible reason for such a thought, the committee were unable to determine how such a notion had become prevalent, if it had done so. However, there was no alternative, and the results were but meager. The secretary of the committee, Bro. Heman C. Smith, Bishop E. L. Kelley, and the writer made statements and were responded to by Mr. Argast and Mr. Dochrath, and a motion acceded to that the citizens should make some representation to the town council representing the statements of the committee and disabusing the minds of the citizens of any intention of making any demands upon them whatever, other than an expression of friendliness, if they should choose to give it.

The evening meeting passed off pleasantly. We had almost forgotten that Saturday was Memorial Day, but as we had been reminded of it by the commander of the Post, Mr. Herman Berger, we attended the memorial services held in the city park at half past two in the afternoon. A platform had been erected upon which the Post had been assembled, and the choir which gave patriotic songs, were stationed with their leader and assisted by the Nauvoo brass band which discoursed good music. The exercises began, the local minister leading in the invocation. The oration was delivered by a Mr. Joseph Frailey, a citizen of Fort Madison, Iowa, who informed the writer that he was a classmate of Bro. Frederick M. Smith at Iowa City. He gave us a very fine discourse, filled with pleasant quotations, garnished by flowery rhetoric, and many encomiums upon the courage, devotion, and sacrifice of those who fought the battles of the Republic during the dark days of 1860 to 1865, culminating in the assassination of President Lincoln. This oration was an excellent one and was well received. The writer was requested by the commandant to give a short address and did so, recalling to the memory of many the stirring times at the opening of the rolls of enlistment for service in the army at the beginning of the strife. When rising to speak the memory of those days came crowding upon the mind of the writer, and he could not forbear recalling to the minds of those that were present and whom he knew to be participants at that time, and for a few minutes the latent enthusiasm of the people was aroused. Tears stood in the eyes of some, and these veterans, few in number, most of whom the writer had known at the time of enlistment, by their expressions of marked attention gave tokens that they had not forgotten those far-off days of yore.

It was a pleasant incident and carried the writer back as if the years of time were standing still, to those days of contention and strife when civil war marked with desolation its fiery track on American fields.

On Monday Uncle Alexander and the writer passed on to Rock Creek, the Bishop took his way to Wisconsin; Bro. Heman C. Smith, Bishop Kelley, and Bro. F. B. Farr took their separate courses to their respective fields, while Uncle Alex and the writer went east to occupy at Rock Creek, and thence to visit cousins in the eastern part of the county, and the writer to include a visit to Judge George Edmonds, a resident at Carthage, and acquaintance and friend from 1845 forward, and who had shown himself an earnest and undeviating friend to the writer's family in times of exigency and distress. This visit occurred on Thursday when in company with Don C. Salisbury, one of the sons of the Martyrs' sister, Catharine, we drove over from his home at Ferris, Illinois, to the county-seat, Carthage, where Mr. Edmonds lives, after having had a pleasant dinner at Cousin Herbert Salisbury's, where he and his wife Leona, a former Lamoni girl, were living, Herbert being the county surveyor. He kindly showed us the residence of Mr. Edmonds and we spent a pleasant hour with him. We found him living with his daughter, Mrs. Cherrill. Mr. Edmonds was a stalwart man in his prime, but is now becoming decrepit and bowed with age and its infirmities. He is ten years older than the writer, but is still keeping his place as an attorney at law in active business with his associate, Bert Miller, an old Nauvoo boy. From Carthage the writer returned to Ferris, and the next day visited a cousin, Don C. Millikin, living down in what is known as the "Bear Creek settlement," where we again experienced the pouring of a torrent of rain which has been visiting the country during all the month of May, reaching well into June. The fields, also the road we traversed, were sodden with wet, corn crops ruined, oats spoiled, and acres upon acres unplowed because of the continued wet.

It had been intended to visit still other places in the county, but the rain having fallen so heavily upon returning to Ferris, the writer concluded it would be useless to proceed farther, and came to Lamoni on Saturday morning to attend the concluding exercises of Graceland College and its term for the year 1907-08. These exercises have been pleasant and we believe profitable. The writer was permitted to occupy the pulpit in the Brick Church at Lamoni on Sunday evening, if not to the profit of the hearers with pleasure to himself because of the cordial greeting extended to him after so long an absence. It is a good thing to be remembered.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

In connection with the clipping from the Nauvoo Rustler regarding the erection of a monument at Nauvoo the following from the proceedings of the city council meeting (Nauvoo Independent, June 3,) will be of interest: "As the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints of Jesus Christ are contemplating the erection of a monument in honor of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, Alderman Hart moved that they be extended a welcome greeting to erect the same in the city of Nauvoo, Illinois. Carried."

A debate between Elder J. F. Curtis of the Reorganization and Elder Jacob A. Eades of the Utah church began in the second ward meeting-house at Murray, Utah, the evening of June 8. Elder Curtis affirmed that Joseph Smith, president of the Reorganization, is the legal successor to his father in the church presidency; Elder Eades defended the claims of Brigham Young to the presidency. It was the intention to continue the debate four nights, but Bishop Erickson later cut the time down to three evenings because, as he alleged, the house was needed in ward work. The Salt Lake Tribune (Anti-Mormon), June 10, has this to say of the second night, "Elder Curtis made a strong address and seemed quite able to confine himself strictly to the question in hand. He was armed with a formidable array of authoritative church documents, of both branches, and made voluminous and effective quotations from these in support of his side of the controversy. His speech was rapid and incisive, and he covered a vast amount of ground in the short half hour in which he was required to finish on the question of succession. According to the Tribune report, Elder Eades was forced to an open defense of polygamy and blood-atonement. And if their report is correct, Elder Curtis was jeered and mocked by the audience in a very unseemly way when he attacked these and other similar doctrines during the third and last evening of the debate.

"Church of the Brethren" is now the official title of the sect formerly known as "Dunkers." The title was changed after a lengthy debate at their recent conference in Des Moines, Iowa. It is reported that the girls of the society are revolting against the time honored, regulation bonnet of the sect. The "merry widow" is making some encroachments in their ranks. The conference, however, did not take up the matter of reform in dress and it is thought that the older members will decide to quietly give way to modern ideas.

An interesting encounter between elders of the Utah church and elders of the Reorganization recently occurred at De Queen, Arkansas. It having come to the ears of Elders E. H. Smith and J. M. Smith that four Utah elders were preaching on the streets and incidentally representing the Reorganization as a "small apostate faction," they decided to take part in the proceedings. They found the Utah elders publicly defending the doctrine of polygamy and declaring that it was taught by Joseph the Martyr. The Elders Smith then followed them, holding the interest of an immense crowd for two hours. At the close the crowd, composed of all classes of townspeople, threw their hats in the air and repeatedly cheered the elders of the Reorganization. They lifted their hands in a unanimous vote that they believed that Joseph Smith had been cleared of the charge of polygamy. They offered to secure the largest hall in town for a continuation of the meetings. The Utah elders felt that something must be done and issued a challenge to joint debate. Propositions were drawn up and signed by the two elders of the Reorganization and by Elders S. F. Allen and Marion Henrie of the Utah church. The Utah elders, however, backed squarely down a little later, and announced through the daily paper that the debate was declared off. The only deplorable feature of the affair was an attack made upon the Utah elders by some of the irresponsible citizens, who, the night following the events above related, attempted to settle the matter with stones and rotten eggs. Such an attack is contrary to the American idea of religious liberty as well as to the spirit of Christianity and will not be approved by members of the Reorganization anywhere.

A committee of the International Association of Physicians organized last August at Stockholm has just prepared and issued the following appeal, which it is desired to give as wide a circulation as possible, as signatures and indorsements of the same are to be gathered throughout the world. It is entitled "An appeal by the physicians of all lands to all rulers, governments, legislatures, all educators, teachers, and ministers, and all who have a sincere interest in the welfare of our race and coming generations." It then proceeds:

"We, who belong to the medical profession and have by study and experience been especially enabled to recognize the true nature and the effects of alcoholic beverages, hereby declare that we are thoroughly convinced, that these beverages are altogether unnecessary and in every way injurious, so that we believe the evils arising from the indulgence in intoxicating drinks can and should be eliminated and avoided. Above all, the youth should be taught by precept and example and protected by legal enactments, so that they will abstain from alcoholic liquors. We declare, that it is our conviction, that this course must be pursued to insure the future sobriety of the race, which is the foundation of its prosperity, welfare and progress."

Signed first by Doctor Holitscher, Pirkenhammer, Germany; Doctor Santesson, Stockholm, Sweden; Doctor Ridge, Enfield, England; Doctor Stein, Budapest, Hungary; Doctor Vogt, Christiana, Norway; Doctor Laitinon, Helsingfors, Finland; Doctor Olrik, Fredericksvaerk, Denmark.—Evert.

Elder Charles B. Woodstock, director of industrial department of Graceland College, will spend the summer traveling among the branches in the interests of the college. Bro. Woodstock is well qualified to give information in reference to the college, especially in reference to the work and needs of the industrial department. He is authorized by the Board of Trustees to receipt for donations for any department of college work. At present he is laboring in Western Iowa.

Under date of June 4 Elder Rushton writes from on board the Carmania, homeward bound, that the Saints on board were well and enjoying a pleasant voyage. Their party consists of Bro. Rushton, Bro. and Sr. Giesch and daughter Louise, Bro. and Sr. Rees Jenkins, Bro. and Sr. William Lewis, Bro. James Baillie, Bro. T. Truman, and Bro. Daer.

LAMONI ITEMS.

The final graduating exercises of Graceland College were held in the Brick Church Wednesday forenoon, June 10. The auditorium was tastefully decorated in the class colors, pink and white. The musical features of the program were excellent. President Joseph Smith offered the invocation. He offered thanks for the faithful and efficient services of President Stewart during the past four years and commended him to divine favor in his new field of work. He also offered a feeling petition for spiritual guidance for the incoming president, Bro. David A. Anderson. The leading feature of the occasion was the address by Doctor Merton S. Rice, of Duluth, Minnesota. This was an exceptionally able discourse. It was based on the class motto, "Live for service." The speaker argued that every ounce of a man's ability over and above that which was required to maintain his own existence should be used for the betterment of his fellows. So far as we could see he was in direct harmony with the Latter Day Saint idea of consecration. As opposed to the world's idea of "Every man for himself and the Devil take the hindmost," he presented the gospel idea, "Every man for every other man and there will be no hindmost for the Devil to take." There are twenty-six graduates in the class of 1908. The best wishes of the church at large go with them. May they succeed in the broadest sense.

Sunday was Children's Day, and the entire day was given over to the Sunday-school. Following the regular session of the school in the forenoon the intermediate and primary departments gave an interesting program. The church was filled with interested listeners. The closing feature of the program was an address to the children. Elder R. J. Lambert was the speaker, and gave the children an instructive talk on the cultivation of habits. He succeeded in interesting the children, and when a speaker does that it goes without saying that the older people are listening. At half past one in the afternoon thirteen children were baptized in the Home pond. Confirmation and prayer-meeting was held at three o'clock. This meeting was intended primarily for the children, but was largely taken up by older people. In the evening the senior department rendered a program. Following some well-rendered songs and recitations Elder F. E. Cochran delivered an address on "The future of our young people." This address is worth notice. The speaker chose to take up the industrial future of our young people. He argued for the development of industrial Zion. He stated that so far as Lamoni is concerned our chief natural resource is in the soil, and that we would have to resort to intensive cultivation, growing such flowers, fruits, and vegetables as would yield larger profits on a small acreage. Children's Day was well spent, and happily there was a pleasant blending of the spiritual and the practical.

Fashion . . . is virtue gone to seed; a kind of posthumous honor; a hall of the past. Great men are not commonly in its halls: they are absent in the field: they are working, not triumphing. Fashion is made up of their children.—Emerson.

• * •

Slander, whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath rides on the posting winds, and doth belie all corners of the world.—Shakespeare.

• * •

In my investigation of natural science, I have always found that whenever I can meet with anything in the Bible on my subject, it always affords me a firm platform.—Lieutenant Maury.

Original Articles

HEALING THE SICK.

Though the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints have never accepted the healing of the sick as the corner-stone of their faith or as a fundamental principle of faith, yet they have ever treasured it as a blessing and privilege to which the true follower of the Christ was entitled under proper conditions.

The basis of this belief and trust was found in the promise of the Christ as recorded in Mark 16: 17, 18:

And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

While the church was yet in its infancy a communication was received purporting to be of divine origin, and being in perfect harmony with the foregoing it was received by members of the church as authentic.

It was given in December, 1830, and read as follows:

And it shall come to pass, that there shall be a great work in the land, even among the Gentiles, for their folly and their abominations shall be made manifest, in the eyes of all people; for I am God, and mine arm is not shortened, and I will show miracles, signs and wonders, unto all those who believe on my name. And whoso shall ask in my name, in faith, they shall cast out devils; they shall heal the sick; they shall cause the blind to receive their sight, and the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak, and the lame to walk; and the time speedily cometh that great things shall be shown forth unto the children of men; but without faith shall not anything be shown forth except desolations upon Babylon, the same which has made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.—Doctrine and Covenants 34: 3.

This was almost universally denounced as a delusion and not only persuasive, but violent means were resorted to to suppress it, church members and even ministers taking active part in these questionable means of suppression.

Yet the testimony is incontrovertible that there were many notable instances of the realization of the promises made. We might fill a volume with testimonies of this realization, if this were the purpose of this article.

The encouragement received through realization resulted in an attitude of firmness upon the part of the membership, which intensified the friction, and often resulted in bitterness which might have been avoided with an increase of peace and good feeling upon the part of all concerned.

Further instruction was received from time to time which increased the confidence upon the one side and the opposition upon the other. In February, 1831, the following was offered and received as authentic:

And whosoever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness with herbs and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy. And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them in my name; and if they die, they shall die unto me, and if they live, they shall live unto me. Thou shalt live together in love, insomuch that thou shalt weep for the loss of them that die, and more especially for those that have not hope of a glorious resurrection. And it shall come to pass that those that die in me shall not taste of death, for it shall be sweet unto them; and they that die not in me, woe unto them, for their death is bitter.

And again it shall come to pass, that he that hath faith in me to be healed, and is not appointed unto death, shall be healed; he who hath faith to see shall see; he who hath faith to hear shall hear; the lame who hath faith to leap shall leap; and they who have not faith to do these things, but believe in me, have power to become my sons; and inasmuch as they break not my laws, thou shalt bear their infirmities.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 12, 13.

In the following month this promise was reiterated. (Doctrine and Covenants 46: 5, 6, 7.) In October of the same year the promise was confirmed. (Doctrine and Covenants 66: 5.) In September, 1832, the ministry were sent out to proclaim the message of a restored gospel with its attendant results. The language is very significant and very much like the language of the Master as found in the New Testament record.

Therefore, go ye into all the world, and whatsoever place ye can not go into, ye shall send, that the testimony may go from you into all the world, unto every creature. And as I said unto mine apostles, even so I say unto you; for you are mine apostles, even God's high priests: ye are they whom my Father hath given me; ye are my friends; therefore, as I said unto mine apostles, I say unto you again, that every soul who believeth on your words, and is baptized by water for the remission of sins, shall receive the Holy Ghost; and these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name they shall do many wonderful works; in my name they shall cast out devils; in my name they shall heal the sick; in my name they shall open the eyes of the blind, and unstop the ears of the deaf; and the tongue of the dumb shall speak; and if any man shall administer poison unto them, it shall not hurt them; and the poison of a serpent shall not have power to harm them. But a commandment I give unto them, that they shall not boast themselves of these things, neither speak them before the world; for these things are given unto you for your profit and for salvation.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 10, 11.

Since the time when the Latter Day Saint ministry were sent out with this message others have claimed faith in the gift of healing and have even gone to the extreme of making it the central thought, and have made it the basis of their system without regard to gospel ordinances or fundamental principles.

These have generally been regarded as irresponsible institutions led by harmless vagaries, and hence these movements have not been calculated to add dignity or respectability to the theory of divine healing as taught by Latter Day Saints so many years ago.

More recently, however, the theory has received consideration by some who are considered more respectable, and the position advocated more than a half century ago by Latter Day Saints, and which at the time met such determined opposition, finds advocates among the most learned and popular ministry of the day.

As a case in point we note the following from the Omaha World-Herald of March 10, 1908:

The Reverend R. B. H. Bell, rector of the church of the Good Shepherd, Protestant Episcopal, announced to his congregation at the service Sunday evening that henceforth he will practice Christian healing which has come into some prominence in the past few months in other parts of the country. Bishop Fallows of Chicago, an Episcopal minister of the reformed church, has publicly announced his belief in the power to heal sickness by prayer and the Boston clergy have taken up the practice to a considerable extent.

Canon Bell said this morning that this is no new departure for him. He advocated it nine years ago in Canada and says that he has been giving considerable attention and study to it ever since. At that time, he said, he was jeered at by members of the clergy all over the country. Now he prophesies with confidence that within a very few years it will be regularly practiced by the entire church.

OLD CHURCH PRACTICE.

He explains that Christian healing is simply a return to the ancient doctrine of unction which was at one time universally practiced by the church. It was discarded, he said, after the reign of Edward VI, because it had given rise to such a widespread superstition as to have lost all its real force as a practical part of the church's work. Unction he explains, is the anointing with oil and the healing of pain and disease by prayer. The service of unction was contained in the old prayer-books, but was eliminated when the book was revised after the Reformation.

Preparation for its reinstatement in the prayer-book, he says, is being made under authority of a convention of the clergy held at Richmond. A committee has been appointed to adopt a form of prayer which will be recommended at a convention to be called in 1910.

SACRAMENT OF THE BISHOP.

"Those of us who are making public announcement of our return to the sacrament of unction and Christian healing you see are but anticipating what the entire church will adopt in a few years," said Canon Bell. "You would be surprised to know the number of the Episcopal clergy who have already taken this stand. Bishop Williams has practiced it in a quiet way. He knew my intention before I made public announcement of it and has sanctioned it.

"Several other of the clergy have been practicing it in a quiet way because the time has not seemed ripe to make it a generally public matter. Beside it should be adopted as a dignified sacrament of the church. It is not to be advertised as the so-called faith cures with which it has nothing in common."

HARMONY WITH PHYSICIANS.

Canon Bell said that he does not propose to claim the power to heal malignant sicknesses, such as contagious diseases, or to be able to set broken bones. He and others who are taking up Christian healing, he says, are working in perfect harmony with doctors who, he believes, are doing as great a work as the clergy, where they are practicing with the purpose of healing as their ideal rather than that of the dollar.

He does say, however, that he knows ailments which the doctors can not cure, can be, and have been completely cured through Christian healing. Miracles, he calls it. He does not attempt to give any scientific or material explanation of the matter. It is simply the power of God, he says, working through the human mind or sometimes even through material means, which effects healing.

Canon Bell told of a woman who was treated by him for chronic headaches. She had consulted numerous doctors in Omaha and had even tried a Chicago specialist without securing relief. To-day, he says, she is absolutely free from her headaches. Prayer and prayer alone, he says, did it.

Canon Bell has set aside every Friday morning from ten to twelve o'clock for the consultation with persons who desire help of this character. Next Friday morning he will give a lecture on the sacrament of unction and Christian healing.

BISHOP WILLIAMS TALKS.

Bishop Williams, in speaking of the action of Canon Bell, said he entirely approved and was in hearty accord with the step taken. He based his belief in the efficacy of Christian healing on the epistle of Saint James, fourteenth and fifteenth verses, chapter five, which reads:

"Is there any sick among you; if so call for the elders of the church and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick and the Lord shall raise him up, and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him."

The bishop said he had followed the practice for many years and predicted the return of Christian healing to the church in general in a few years. "It is but the return to old teachings," said he, "as it was in use before the revision of the old prayer-books. It was dropped at that time because of the superstitions attached to it by the more ignorant classes.

"It's all right if it does not become a fad," said Father Williams of Saint Barnabas' church, in commenting upon Christian healing. "There is really nothing new in it. It is the old law of prayer which the church has recognized for centuries, but which has been more or less dormant for some time.

"If the patient really has faith that he will be healed, then I believe that there would be efficacy in prayer; but I do not believe that I could do a man any good if he had no faith."

Latter Day Saints perhaps look upon these evidences of a disposition to return to primitive practices with more interest than others.

Their faith and experience both assure them that such efforts will be successful just to the extent that the heart is inclined to receive the truth and practice the precepts of the gospel.

They are, however, committed to another revelation which they are confident has had, and will have, its application in solving the realities of this awakening faith. It was received in 1831, and reads as follows:

I will give unto you a pattern in all things, that ye may not be deceived; for Satan is abroad in the land, and he goeth forth deceiving the nations; wherefore he that prayeth whose spirit is contrite, the same is accepted of me, if he obey mine ordinances. He that speaketh, whose spirit is contrite, whose language is meek and edifieth, the same is of God, if he obey mine ordinances. And again, he that trembleth under my power shall be made strong, and shall bring forth fruits of praise, and wisdom, according to the revelations and truths which I have given you.

And again, he that is overcome and bringeth not forth fruits, even according to this pattern, is not of me; wherefore by this pattern ye shall know the spirits in all cases, under the whole heavens. And the days have come, according to men's faith it shall be done unto them. Behold, this commandment is given unto all the elders whom I have chosen.—Doctrine and Covenants 52: 4, 5.

This is briefly the position occupied by the church upon this question, and believing that it has been divinely directed it can not recede from it.

The position set forth in the above is in part unpopular still, but as the great and learned minds of the age are approximating the time-honored faith of the Latter Day Saints they await the moving of the powers that lead the destinies of man for the consummation.

HEMAN C. SMITH.

METHODS OF ADVERTISING.—PART 2.

Part two closes our report of the missionaries' meeting held at Independence, Missouri, April 16. It will be remembered that the subject under discussion was methods of advertising. Speeches were reported by L. A. Gould.

A. E. MORTIMER.—There are various ways of advertising, of course; one of the things necessary in such work is determination, determination not to be set back by any difficulty. And while the brethren here were presenting their various ideas regarding advertising, the thought came to me about Elder Gordon Deuel who labored in Canada for some years very successfully. Perhaps a number of you have heard of him. He was eccentric, but a good preacher. I heard a story about him one time going to a certain locality, I do not know whether in Canada or the United States. But he went to the schoolhouse and advertised his meeting by notifying the teacher, and requesting her to give notice of the meeting. Time came for meeting, and there was not a soul in the place, except some little boys standing around the door. At the very hour of the appointed time he began his service. He gave out a hymn, sang, offered prayer, sang another hymn all alone, and gave out his text, and went on with his sermon, the little boys peeking in at the door. He stopped and invited them in, but they would not come. He finished his sermon, and went out. The boys reported that there was a crazy man down there talking, with nobody to listen. The report spread abroad about this man's peculiar actions, and next night the people came down to hear, but not very many, and they stood around outside, would not come in. He continued his meetings until he finally aroused curiosity, broke down prejudice, had a large congregation, and eventually raised up a branch in that place.

President Evans, in the Toronto church and the Majestic Theater, has been one of the best advertisers that I ever read of. He rings in the whole branch as advertising means. The boys, even girls, go out and distribute bills giving notice of the meetings; and some have done things that I do not think very many of us would care to do. They carried illuminated pictures advertising the meetings. Or they had a board on the back and one in front and went up and down the street, giving notice of these meetings. One of our missionary elders did that, so that notice of the meetings could be got before the public. And the Majestic was filled every night.

Sometimes the people will resist, of course. But, like Gordon Deuel, we ought to persist until victory shall crown our efforts.

I remember one time I was preaching at a place, and in the middle of my discourse, a man interrupted me. He says, "Mister, I would like to ask a question."

"Now," I said, "my friend, can't you wait till the close of my remarks?"

"No." I think he had a little "jag" on, for he was very determined to ask me a question, and I must answer, "Yes," or "No." There must be no explanation; no "if" or "but" or "peradventure." I must answer yes or no.

I thought very quickly, and I said, "Will you answer yes or no?"

"Why, yes," he said he would.

I said, "All right. Have you quit beating your wife?"

Well, he stopped, and finally he said, "You have me there," and the crowd laughed. And that brought crowds of people. It requires quickness and thought sometimes to do something that will arouse the public, and they will come out and hear us.

F. A. RUSSELL.—First I want to tell you a little about some experience that we have had, when we have been upon the street. About how to gather a crowd? I carry with me a little—I don't know what you would call it exactly. There it is right there [the speaker held up a bent forefinger].

You might not be able to figure it out just how that would gather a crowd for you, but—[here he gave two shrill whistles, that left no doubt in the minds of the audience as to its effectiveness in attracting attention]. Now that rarely fails to bring the attention of the people right around where we are. So that is one way you can arrest the attention of the people.

Those tags that you see hanging around on those brackets, jets, and lamps, are something just to illustrate what we used in the town of Monte Vista; and after we finished our work of advertising with these little tags the town of Monte Vista looked very much like a fire sale in a big department store, and especially to stand in a street where we had just passed by and see them flapping and fluttering in the breeze. We hung them upon the little limbs of trees, and along the tops of fences, and on nails. It is possible somebody will follow you down the street and tear them down. One young lady did that. Just after we had hung one up she stopped to see what was on it, and I was just hanging one up a little further down, and she turned, and after she removed it she went walking up the street tearing it up and throwing it in the street. But anyway that ad did its work. She read it, and that poor soul could not help telling a dozen or fifteen or twenty of her people what she had done. So that worked all right.

And then again, we will put up posters. For instance, something like our handbills—and I called on the wrong man, I guess, first to-night, when he talked about putting our pictures on the bills. We had to do it down there. We did not have any other illustrations to use.

ELDER F. A. RUSSELL.

Elders Shupe and Russell conducted a very successful campaign in Monte Vista, Colorado. They decorated the town with advertisements of varied hue until it was said to "resemble a fire sale in a big department store."

We got out handbills something like these, and tried it in an opera-house. Not quite as successful as you were up in Canada, but we succeeded, in a measure. And our opera-house was right by the side of a skating-rink, and the atmosphere produced by the manager seemed to add a chilliness to the room until we decided to give it up. Tried it three Sundays. Then we succeeded in securing the town hall. For the first advertising we went and got some advertising cards. No, for the first Sunday we got some little tags about like this, six or seven inches long, and two and a half inches wide. We advertised a big union service, and invited the ministers. We succeeded in drawing the fire of some of the ministers, and had a splendid crowd.

We used some of these tags the next Sunday. Hung them around on doorknobs. A few of them were put up around town, and hung on the door-knobs at each one of the houses. The next Sunday we used cards. Some of these of different shape and different color. We wanted to call attention to the fact that there was a different meeting that was being announced. These others still hung around town, and that is the reason we put the cards up. On this card we had the subject advertised. To give you an idea of how we proceeded there, in the opening meetings we advertised the proposition, "Is the Bible the final revelation from God, and the only rule of faith and practice?" Or, "Are we justified in seeking more light from God?" On the other side, in large letters, "Who told you God does not speak to us now, except it shall be through the Bible? The Bible itself tells a different story." "The local ministry are invited to participate in these services." A few short statements, in our judgment something that will start "a jingle at the door-bell of your conscience." I think Bro. M. T. Short, long since passed and gone, was the author of that statement.

Another Sunday we used something of this kind [an illustrated handbill bearing the following announcements: Subject, 2.30 p. m., "Authority." Who has the right to preach and baptize? Is it human or divine? Services at 7.30 p. m. Subject: "Signs of the times," or "From truth unto fables." Don't miss these two meetings. Elders Shupe and Russell. Town hall, Sunday, February 16].

You notice where the cuts are placed here. The succeeding Sunday we used one of the same size, with the cuts placed in a different place, for the reason that it would call the attention of the people to the fact that a new bill had been put up. The same rule that we followed on these little cards by trying to choose short, direct statements, we tried to follow in the statements that were to be used on these others. For instance, "The Book of Mormon; is it fact or fraud? Do you know the Bible and archæology prove it to be true?"

I am heartily in accord with the idea that what we want to do when we put a bill before the people is to present something there that will at once attract them. Does a picture attract you because you see all the details? No, not that. You see the picture, then study the detail. It is the picture that you want to get before the mind in presenting the advertisement, first, then they will study the detail. Other people are very much like you and me. We are all very much alike. Something that will attract you will have a tendency to attract them. Study yourself, and then try to work with them accordingly.

Now notice these long strips. We had something of that kind, and on this side we had. "We condemn polygamy. So does the Book of Mormon." On the other side, "Why don't you believe the Book of Mormon?" We scattered these all around town. It got people to thinking about it. You must fix the fact that you are going to be in town. Keep that fact where people will stumble over it while they are going around town. Keep it before their eyes, where they will see the fact that you are in town, getting them familiar with you. If it is necessary in order to get their attention, get them to talking about you. Let them talk about you. And when you can get the matter before the people, then you can change the manner of thinking from you to the message that you have to bear.

One very little thing I will mention, which we had in mind doing this year. We are going to take something in the nature of a leaflet. If I had a sheet of paper here I would illustrate it. This is not the proper size, but it will do to call attention to the idea anyway. Make something in the nature of a leaflet. Then if you do not wish to put your picture, for instance, on the inside, put some other illustration there, then write a few lines specially pertaining to your subject. But make those sentences to the point. Make them so they will simply bristle with points. If you can not do it, suggest the thought to some brother. Try it yourself first, and then turn it over to him if you are not satisfied with it. And then these can be passed about. You can put your local announcement on the outside; and these can be printed by the thousand. You can use them as long as you are in the ministry. The subject may be, for instance, "Present-day revelation." But leave the outside here to be used locally. Where you get in a town of any size, you can find a job-press and put upon it the announcement of your service. Then you can use them the same as you would a dodger, around the stores, on the corners, on walks and different places, and it will give each person an idea of what you are going to talk about there. Some objection was urged by one of the brethren as to whether these colored tags hung up around town might not frighten the horses. We must use wisdom in these matters, and govern ourselves, of course, according to the requirements of the town where we are advertising. Some towns would not permit them to be hung up. But where you can do that, some of this kind I believe will attract their attention. Now, if you hang these things upon the street, go upon the prominent streets of the town, and if they do not hang there longer than till the next day, they have accomplished their purpose in getting the facts before the people. Then use some more. Vary the shape of the cards. That is one thing to do every time that you advertise a separate meeting, if you possibly can; or use some cut that will be transposed, so that the fact will be prominently before them that there is a new meeting announced.

And I want to impress what has been said about getting anything up in the nature of a tract. Let us make it just as good as we possibly can. Get good paper. We in getting out our bills selected the best book paper we could get. As regards the style of arrangement, I do not like the kind we have printed. I honestly believe I could better some of it myself.

Do the best you can under the conditions, but use good material. And I am firmly of this conviction, that if we make the effort at advertising our services, when we go to work, we want to go in there and plan to put in a week or ten days trying to work up the ground. Billy Sunday, the evangelist, said, "I never expect anything the first three weeks of my meetings." He has his tabernacle built three weeks or a month before he comes; but he says, "I don't expect to do anything but advertise the first three weeks of my services." And we, brethren, sometimes drop into a town. No one knows we are coming. We go out to some little old schoolhouse, and we feel discouraged beyond measure that we can not get a crowd. Let us use paper. Let us use printer's ink. Let us use our best judgment. Let us study advertising, as well as methods of preaching. I tell you we might have ten thousand good preachers, but if you can not get the people to come out what good can those preachers do? I am of the opinion that it is very essential for us to study the method of getting people to the preaching-services. We should keep our eyes open along these lines. That is the object of this meeting, very largely, to-night.

One thing further: If you are handy with a brush or shading-pen, or anything of that kind, you can do much advertising for yourself. If you have not already noticed in experience, get a colored card; take red, or dark blue, get some white ink, and put your letters in white, and see what effect it has. And you will be surprised, yourself, if you have never noticed it. You will see how it actually attracts your own attention.

One brother told me, he says, "I got a piece of wrapping-paper, and I got a bottle of shoe-blackening." And he put out his advertising with letters made with shoe-blackening. Now that is an original method of advertising; but I question whether or not it would be the very best method. Perhaps the best that could be had under the circumstances.

Bro. Walter Smith referred to the fact that we should not try to be cheap. I think I can bear witness with the rest of you that we don't try to be cheap; but the fact is, sometimes we have to be cheap. But borrow some money sometimes to get yourself started in the meeting, then take a collection. Put good signs out, and your signs will bring you sufficient money, I promise you, for the money that is expended.

EDWARD RANNIE.—Sometimes, it is said, we profit by our failures. I do not know very much about advertising, but I am greatly interested in it, and I believe that if we can advertise right, it is a great success. I have done a little advertising, and I have had some success and some failures. I want to tell you a little of both, and possibly somebody may give us some light, and help us out in the matter.

One difficulty I find in trying to advertise is that while I know the value of advertising I lack the ability of being able to write an attractive advertisement. And in traveling around in some of these small towns, it is difficult to find a person that can write a good advertisement.

Last summer in South Dakota, my companion and I went to a neighborhood where for twelve or fourteen years our missionaries had been going, attempting to hold meetings in a certain schoolhouse—and they were good preachers, some of the best men the church has got. The neighbors that lived near to the schoolhouse, and were well acquainted with the Saints who lived there, would never come. We went there, got out several hundred bills announcing grove-meeting: "Bring your Bibles, come and hear the old Jerusalem gospel, and have a pleasant time." Well, while we did not get our hundreds and thousands out, yet we got people out to attend those meetings during the entire Sunday that had never come to the schoolhouse to listen to us. That little advertising brought people out that we could not otherwise get.

I went to another place in the northern part of the State. Just one sister lived there, and she sent for me to come. I got there at night, and she wanted meeting the next day. She said, "If you don't have it to-day, a great many of my friends can't come. It is a small place of four hundred people, and they will be disappointed. I have been talking to them about your coming." "Well," I said, "it is a question of what the paper will do." I wrote up a little advertisement, and the heading of it was, "A conflict," then about eight or ten lines, and "Has been raging for fifty years between the monogamic Latter Day Saints and the Mormons of Utah," and a few things like that, and distributed them over town; and, while it was a small town, I had an audience of forty people. That might seem small compared with hundreds; but if I had not pursued that course, I probably would have got none.

Since I have been here at the conference I have received two letters from that place urging me to come back; they want to hear more of our story.

Well, I have found some failures. I went into a town of four thousand people, and had an advertisement printed for a lecture in one of the pleasant halls of the city. I called at several hundred homes and announced it personally, and not one single soul came out. Just myself and the brother that lived in town. We advertised. I am satisfied there was something wrong in the advertising; and there is where the trouble is. So many of us that want to advertise, and know that it is good, we do not know how to do it. I am sure I am glad and anxious; and I believe there are many others, if we could get assistance along these lines.

I do not believe that the lack of people coming out to hear is altogether because they do not want to listen to us; but I think that one of the reasons is that people do not know that we are around; or if they do we do not give them something that is sufficiently attractive to bring them out. If we can do that I am satisfied that we can make some success; and as the brother suggests, cooperate with God. But that is the difficult question. Some of us who believe in advertising, do not know how to get out the advertisement, and we can not get men in these towns to do it.

T. W. CHATBURN.—Speaking of Gordon Deuel, I was very well acquainted with him in my younger days, and I presume he is the father of all the eccentric actions quoted through all the church.

A Voice.—Including "Jots." [Laughter.]

T. W. C.—Well, my mind always did run along mischievous lines a little.

Now, I find it is quite different in different places to get people out to hear you. What will do over in the Rocky Mountains will not do out in the eastern countries or down in Philadelphia. And so a man is put to his wits sometimes in order to have an effectual advertisement.

I went into a little town not a thousand miles from here, and I had my meeting and that night only two people came out. (And, by the way, afterwards I baptized that whole congregation.) Well, I was a failure. I went around and invited them out, but I was a failure. So I got some chalk, and I went out to the sidewalks, and the fences, where there was a plain view toward the church that I was preaching in. It had been abandoned. There was no religious sentiment in the town hardly, and it was a bad place for a preacher. But I took this chalk and marked on the sidewalks and on the fence-boards: "Mormons in town. Ladies beware!" And I had a big index finger pointing toward the little church. Well, I wrote that over the various places, and then I went and gave a merchant fifty cents for a big goods-box, drove some stakes in the ground, put poles across, and put that up there close to the sidewalk and printed the same thing on the box as on the fence, "Mormons in town. Ladies beware!" with that big index finger pointing to the little church.

Well, of course, that night the ladies wanted to go. [Laughter and applause.]

And they did go; but their husbands would not let them go alone. [More laughter.]

So the result was I got the town pretty well wakened up.

I agree with some of the speakers that it used to be more so than it is now, that when we would go into some little towns it was worse than smallpox or scarlet fever either.

I am satisfied that a sensational advertisement is best. This is an age of sensational advertising. Great big—yes, that is it. Something that will draw attention; some peculiar, flourishing, glittering headlines of some kind. I think that is the best way in some places. In other places, as has been said, the cards are the best, and the little papers are best. It is owing to where you are, I believe. And in the tent-work out in the fields, it is altogether owing to what kind of choir you have in the tent whether it draws or not. This has been my experience out in the field, preaching our work; for I will work. I will get a crowd some way or other. I never failed yet. I have persevered until finally I got the crowd. And I never had to leave any place for the want of a crowd.

We can advertise ourselves in a great many different ways. And I am satisfied that all a man has to do in the field, and especially now in this age, is to work. He wants to work. He must not be idle. I have no use for the idle missionary. I want a man to work. Hit or miss, right or wrong; let him work.

F. G. PITT.—Just one thing has not been touched on, with all the good things that have been said. And that is that we use the local newspaper. Now so many times the churches fail to advertise in their own papers. The result is, a stranger comes into town, and they really look for our church, and they can not find it. A brother, I think went to a town in Michigan, one of our prominent men, and he tried every way to find the Latter Day Saints. Finally he went to the police station, and through the officers there he found out where the Saints were located.

Now it is a fact that if we keep a small ad in the paper, the people will read it over and over again until after a while they will be impressed with the fact that we are in town. And it not only benefits those who are there; but a stranger comes in, and he knows where to find us. I would like to impress that thought. Some large papers put in those notices for nothing. We have but to make it our business to go down there once a week, and put in our ad.

They publish it there in the Ensign; but some of those ads are so old,—well they almost smell bad. They are so old that they are out of date. People have forgotten all about them. They ought to be renewed from time to time.

Now let us, in making an effort to advertise, not forget the local papers. If we have to pay twenty-five or fifty cents occasionally, it will be money well spent. And especially those big papers that publish them free,—have some one appointed to advertise your meetings in those papers every Sunday.

ELDER F. G. PITT.

Elder Pitt thinks that we should make the best possible use of the local papers. He recalls one town where a visitor was obliged to go to the police station to find any clue as to the whereabouts of the Saints.

[EDITOR'S NOTE.—At this point the presiding officers closed the meeting, owing to the lateness of the hour, with the remark that all that remained to do was to go and advertise and not permit a condition to obtain where it would be necessary to go to the police station to locate the Saints. Articles on this subject appear in the HERALD from time to time, and it is also proposed to run a second series of articles in the Autumn Leaves, under the caption, "How can we reach the people?" If you have had experience along this line give our readers the benefit of it.]

BUILDING UP ZION.

The purpose of this article is not so much to tell how little I know on this very important question, but to suggest some matters that are worthy of our consideration with the hope that the Editor, the Bishop, or some one else will give us some light.

In Doctrine and Covenants 77:1, we find the following instruction given to the church:

The time has come, and is now at hand; and, behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people, both in this place and in the land of Zion, or in other words, the city of Enoch, for a permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my church, to advance the cause which ye have espoused, to the salvation of man, and to the glory of your Father who is in heaven that you may be equal in the bands of heavenly things; yea, and earthly things also, for the obtaining of heavenly things; for if ye are not equal in earthly things, ye can not be equal in obtaining heavenly things; for if you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you.

We learn from the above quotation that it was to be something "permanent" to "advance the cause which ye have espoused." It was to be a factor in bringing about equality.

In Doctrine and Covenants 101:1, speaking in reference to the same order it says it was to be an "everlasting order for the benefit of my church, and for the salvation of men until I come"; and in paragraph 2 it is pointed out that the "poor shall be exalted." These several quotations indicate to us that the Order of Enoch was intended to be a great factor in the building up of Zion. In paragraph 12 it says:

And all moneys that you receive in your stewardships, by improving upon the properties which I have appointed unto you, in houses or in lands, or in cattle, or in all things save it be the holy and sacred writings, which I have reserved unto myself for holy and sacred purposes, shall be cast into the treasury as fast as you receive moneys, by hundreds or by fifties, or by twenties, or by tens, or by fives.

And further down the paragraph it points out the use to which this money is to be put. It is to help others in their stewardships. In section 81, paragraph 4, it gives us additional information on this same subject:

And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just; and all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundredfold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.

It appears from these several quotations that the Order of Enoch is a corporate body, and its increase in wealth is to be paid into the treasury of the church to be used for the benefit of those who need assistance in their stewardships. Without any intention of reflecting upon the motives and good intentions of the brethren in the stakes who are members of the different corporations, I will call attention to a few things connected therewith. Does the increase go into the treasury of the church? or is it added to the private fortune of the members in the different corporations?

Do those who are in their employ receive any better wages than in other institutions for the same class of labor? When trade is dull are the men laid off? Do they sell their products any cheaper than other corporations?

It is fair to say that all those questions would be answered in the negative, and in that event the good that God wishes to accomplish is only partially done. Believing that God's plans are the best, and that he has not changed concerning Zion, how are we to get into his way? Will it be done voluntarily? Is it necessary for him to command us again, or must his chastening hand be over us to afflict us and bring us to a realization of our duties by the things that we suffer? Will some one with knowledge and wisdom turn on the light? While it will be an individual gain, it is very likely that many others will be benefited also.

Hoping, laboring, and praying for Zion's development,

Your brother in gospel bonds,
EDWARD RANNIE.

THE HIGHER PLANE.

The product of Christian development of the average person in the church rarely comes to the standard of what they believe. Progress can not be measured wholly by our proficiency of penetration into the law, but our honest achievements in harmony with its demands. Therefore we suggest it is not always an easy task to strike a just balance between the real ideal of the law, and our individual accomplishments. Our ideal, together with the beckoning hand of opportunity for its attainment, are holdings that dint and courage transform into the structure of human life. If the ideal is low, on the other side will be manifested a corresponding low percentage of achievement. This reasons and shows the necessity of having high ideals to get the most practical benefits out of life. Where worthy ideals are not entertained, possibilities are generally restricted to no greater magnitude than the object in mind to be reached. A grave necessity exists, then, to know what the proper ideal is, and to become conversant with its higher aims, that when its principles of law are intelligently applied there will be a transformation to the Divine liking. The gospel, or perfect law of liberty, fills every requirement of the highest ideal. Any one will indeed find it to be the best and most practical receipt for character-building, and a true regulator for every abnormal condition of man.

It is then not so much a proper policy to pursue to be able to repeatedly receive from our merciful Father a remission of our constantly recurring sins, as to be able to eliminate such entirely from our nature and to reach so high a plane of true development that there will be no need for it. By the right application of true law there will be the relegation of sin entirely, or the disposition to sin, and we can see the bringing forth of strength where once was weakness. Like the uncultivated soil, there is much in it of the wild nature, which if put under proper regime of culture and development one will behold a vast difference in the productiveness and the quality of the article produced. Much energy is wasted in bewailing our conditions and the supplication of divine mercy, that if expended in correcting the mistakes of life and the careful cultivation of the nature of ourselves we would see greater progress. Understand me,—not that we should not call upon God for strength and mercy; but to live such a life that it would not be necessary so repeatedly.

Too many of us halt over the sins we find ourselves to have committed, and constantly ask for forgiveness, instead of seeking to correct the error of our ways. So long as the cause is there, surely we are not so blind that we can not see the inevitable consequence which will necessarily follow. What gain can we reap by constantly bewailing our oft mistakes of life into which we have fallen, unless we eagerly seek to make them a paying proposition in hurrying our feet to better and nobler paths of life for the years yet future? Sins and errors of life can thus be turned into profit, if we make them leave us a heritage of better judgment with a corresponding value on the high objects of life. We do not wish to convey the idea from this that it is necessary to commence with an investment in sin and moral degradation, or to have an ample supply always in stock, to get the highest attainment of our possibilities. At whatever stage of life it may be, the duty of the hour is to do the very best we can; and, as we look back and see mistakes have occurred, deplore them, and show a true repentance by seeking to correct them for the future welfare of ourselves.

That which generates the spirit of malice and hatred does not portend to true growth and development. The law of the higher plane demands that we stand forth from the jungle where the tooth and claw is of supreme importance. There is no place in the divine economy for hatred, malice, and strife.

We see the great value of tabulating the events of current history that future generations may profit thereby; also the stringent necessity of the journalizing of items of business establishments; then, lest we forget, why is not the same principle a good one in keeping tab on our assets of honesty, morality, and righteousness, that a correct estimate may be placed on the value of our lives by ourselves? If our memory is good, how pleasing it is to look back over the periods of life with at least a reasonable degree of gratitude that we have made the best of our opportunities. Our present prospects then should not be crushed with the weight of our past follies and stupidities, but with beaming hope look to the future for better days with a confiding trust in God for help.

We witness and should deplore with disgust the tendency of him, who, because one grave sin has been committed, loses all hope, seeks no more to do right, but gives up the effort. Such is weak and unmanly. Surely we can but believe that as long as there is a disposition to struggle on and recover that which has been lost, there is hope for the salvation of that man. This statement, with some, will seem about as practical as the instructions of a noted American who, when asked the proper stage in life to commence the training of a child, answered that it should commence with the grandparents. Right should be followed by any one because it is right, and for the sake of our posterity, if nothing more, this principle should be honored.

Each man should build for himself a home of pleasing environment. His home should be Christian, with an atmosphere of purity and holiness. His sphere should be one of noble endeavor that does not saddle posterity with the besetting sins of our mistakes and defects. The glory that will ever gild the past is that which transmits to the future the legacy of good health, and the untarnished character of true Christian manhood and womanhood.

In our life we have failed on the high plane of possibility unless we have learned our lesson well. So also are our lives fruitless of good results if we have failed to apply that which we have learned. Should we not appraise to the full valuation the lessons of the past that we have learned, and let such transport us to the high plane of righteousness?

To live to-day is not the true abundant life, unless we catch the inspiration of the great objective—the gospel of Jesus Christ. In this way only can we escape the consequences of this sinful age. We should then be content; for indeed in this is promised full deliverance.

We need reviving when we think we have reached a stage that we make no advancement. Our usefulness has become seriously crippled, when we arrive at the conclusion that the ultimatum in improvement has been reached. What we want is more thorough study and a greater concentrated effort in acting out the great truth of this latter-day message. We must take Jesus Christ as our authority, and bow down to his every command. If I am an honest man, I will not shift any responsibility imposed in this work. Our only legal ground is the gospel. Upon this high plane we stand; and, if faithful to the covenant, there will come enrichment of life and a deep earnestness of character that shall be fully fruited for the eternity of the future.

Our social life must be free from excess. Our moral life must be devoted to the manly art of doing unto others as we would that they should do to us. Our spiritual life must lead us to be true to others, to ourselves; and to the holy altitude that leaves far below every sin of the human race we will surely attain. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

To impress the weight of our message on the world, we should take time to think right, to do right, and to be holy. Faith in God and a willingness to work insures any man permanent employment in the government of the kingdom. Like the great personal example of the Master before us, we should go about doing good. We must take up the task before us manfully, with a certain realization of personal power, and the coöperative influence of our heavenly Father; and, though we may see adverse and perilous dangers and frowning difficulties before us, yet through it all we shall be able to stand and occupy this higher plane and get our reward, if we maintain true integrity of soul to the privileges of the gospel law. Such, dear Saints, are within the power of our possibility. We have the power to make our calling and election sure. What is your life?—James 4: 14.

S. S. SMITH.

1827 East Olive Ave., SPOKANE, Wash., June 6, 1908.

Of General Interest

THE WORKING MAN AND THE CHURCH.

Dear Jim: Don't imagine that I am going to the dogs altogether. I still go to church. That is, I go once in a while. When I find the right kind of a church, I'll go oftener. My church relationship was a comparatively easy matter when I was a youngster. I just naturally grew into the habit because mother helped me along. I don't say how. It was all right. I got there, and it did me lots of good.

But church-going in New York isn't what it was in Petersburg. It was like clockwork there. It came as regularly as one of the other chores. Nobody seems to care a hang whether church keeps or not. Some do, of course, but to judge by appearances on the East Side, in the tenement houses, it doesn't make much difference. The church bells ring, and early in the morning the Catholic churches are crowded, but mostly by foreigners. A Polish Catholic church near our tenement has a workingmen's mass at seven o'clock in the morning, which is usually jammed. I've seen them crowd clear out to the gutter long before the hour of service. They tell me that the pastor of the Protestant chapel near by, who was once a newspaper man and has pretty broad ideas about things, congratulated the priest upon his success in reaching the men.

"Ah, yes," the priest replied, "but if you should come around in a year from now you would not find one of these men. They will have become Americanized."

One Sunday evening I passed this church and heard a terrific racket down in the basement. Somebody seemed to be having a hilarious time. Stepping inside a long, narrow room, I saw a crowd of about a hundred men and women—all working people—dancing to the music of a squeaking violin, while the priest sat upon a small raised platform with his feet elevated higher than his head, resting them upon a little pedestal, as he was puffing away at a big cigar. That's one way of "reaching the masses."

There are quite a good many missions scattered throughout the district. They are supported by the uptown churches. I have attended two or three of them. The preaching wasn't so bad. It was really better than I expected. But the system! I could never go it. The patronizing air of the up-town helpers would put any kind of an institution out of business provided that a fellow wasn't compelled to stay—and I wasn't. They say that the members of the "chapel" are the members of the "home" church, with all the privileges of full membership. But the chapel people are never informed of the business-meetings of the home church, neither do they have any say as to how the money which they themselves contributed shall be expended. I believe that if the chapel people should exercise their function as members of the home church and take possession of the church meeting it would create a panic.

Furthermore, the missions are run by the folks from up-town through the officers elected by the up-town people. Not being present at the business-meetings and being unknown, no fellow down here has any kind of a show to be elected to anything. All this is against the spirit of democracy which is so common in working men's lodges, in the labor union, and in the saloon. The entire scheme is un-American and therefore can not succeed among American working men. Maybe they imagine that we working men could not manage a little church of our own. Well, if I couldn't scare up a bunch of fellows who had as much horse sense as some of the high-collared officials I've seen in a mission or two, I'd feel ashamed of my kind. They may not be on to the technical terms of the church, but I guess they could learn all right. As for doing the business, leave that to the men who are doing it all the time in their own organizations. It surely can not be very much more complicated. Perhaps they couldn't pay all the bills, but why can't the uptown church form a sort of partnership with the downtown mission which would be the real thing? This would be a whole lot more satisfactory than the way in which they are now running the works.

I don't imagine that working men would crowd into every church that was free from this system, but they certainly won't take hold of one that is governed in this way. The officials don't expect very much of the people either in the way of financial support or otherwise, and the mission people do not disappoint them.

A couple of Sundays ago I attended the service of an up-town church. I was very well received by the usher, and the people seemed rather pleasant, but I didn't wait to meet any of them. Why should I? I wasn't in their class, and probably never will be. I know that well enough. And I don't propose to get into any kind of a deal in which I can't hold up my end. I can't dress as well as they can, neither could I entertain as they do. I would constantly find myself in an inferior position, socially and financially, so—no rich man's church for me, no matter how welcome I may be. The fellows in the shop tell the story of a preacher who put on a pair of overalls and attended a number of churches to see how a "genuine" working man would be welcomed. They felt quite indignant about it, because, they said, no self-respecting working man would go to church that way. He'd pull off his overalls, put on the best clothes that he had, and go to church like any other man.

There is what is known as an "institutional" church near by, which is open every night and nearly all day, and in which they have all sorts of things going on. I like that immensely, so far as the idea is concerned. It would seem to indicate that these church folks have an interest in us seven days in the week. But somehow I can't get away from the notion that they are trying to use these meetings as a bait to work in their religion. I don't object to religion, but I hate like everything to feel, or to give others a chance to feel, that I have been euchered into a thing. If I get religion, I want it straight and aboveboard. I won't be tricked into it.

For ten days, recently, the preachers of New York held what they called a "noonday shop campaign." They came into the shops to talk to the men about religious subjects. As our plant covers so much space, and largely because the men will not go into another department for a meeting, it was decided to have three meetings in as many different departments. We had three different preachers. I attended all of the meetings. They had some pretty good singing, and the boys liked that. There was always a cornetist who played for ten minutes. The fellows expected him to begin with the long-meter doxology. He nearly stunned them by playing the latest ragtime. That fellow was sure onto his job. It made the boys finish their lunches much sooner than usual. Then they began to crowd around him. He played some extra tunes that the men wanted, and by the time the preacher took hold he had the whole bunch in pretty good humor.

But the preacher lost his grip. Really, he never got it. His first words queered him. "Now, men," he said, "we've come down to-day to do you good." Then he looked over his audience with a sickly kind of grin, as though he expected the crowd to cheer him because he had thusly made a martyr of himself. From where I stood I could see the wink being passed all through the crowd. Some of the men began to leave.

"You know we are all working men. I am a working man too," he went on. He certainly didn't look it.

"Whereas you toil with your hands, I toil with my brain." I could see some of the fellows who were going to night school five evenings a week, and some of the men who are compelled to do more hard thinking than he seemed to have done, put on a look of disgust.

Well, as I say, he didn't make good. While he was praying—he prayed five full minutes—half the crowd went. He had only seven minutes and a handful of men left. Few of these remained to the end. He wore a clerical vest and a long-tailed coat, with all the rest of it that goes with that style of a preacher. He never came back.

The following day we got another specimen. He began with a kind of a swagger air, which I suppose he thought was very fetching. He half apologized for being a preacher, for which the boys heartily despised him. They hate a coward. If he has no use for the ministry, why in the name of common sense doesn't he quit the job and earn an honest living? He certainly failed to make a hit, and that was the last we saw of him. The next day not quite so many men came, but there was still a pretty good crowd. After the cornetist got through, a young fellow stepped on to a machine and began to talk in an offhand way about the six mechanical principles that enter into the manufacture of machinery. He at once got every fellow's attention. He was meeting them on their own ground. That chap didn't seem to be preaching at all, but before he got through he landed some body-blows that most of us remember. Instead of men leaving, others kept coming until he had more than the first fellow started off with. He spoke every day for a week.

The boys liked his meetings. They asked the preacher—for he was a preacher, we found out afterwards—to come once a week for a regular meeting. He has consented to do so. They say that they'll chip in and buy a little organ, and they want some regular hymn-books, too. One of the men has already started in to make a box to keep them in. I never dreamed that the men could become so interested in a straight-out religious proposition. It just shows what a real flesh-and-blood, get-up-and-get kind of a preacher can accomplish. It isn't so much what the preacher does, as what he is, that counts. The fellows seem to have sized up these men at once, and they evidently gave them their right measure.

But why is it necessary for a preacher, whose business, I take it, is to get alongside of men so as to help them, to be so densely ignorant about even the commonest things that concern working men? Many of them seem all up in the air—like the first specimen that came into the shop. There wasn't a single point of contact between him and the men that he was addressing, and the men knew it. There is no doubt that he was a good man and that he meant well, but it requires more than that. Our preacher—we call him that already—the one who is going to hold "church" for us—seems to know. There's something human about him. He seems to appreciate how hard it is, sometimes, to do right and to be right.

But there is a better day coming. I believe it because the preachers are taking hold of things in a new way. They are studying our problems from our viewpoint. The Central Federation Union in New York has received fraternal delegates from at least four different ministers' associations. These men meet regularly on Sunday afternoons with the delegates from the local unions of the city, and I am sure that they are getting a new notion of what the labor movement stands for. On the other hand, the Central Body is sending fraternal delegates to the ministers' associations. They will probably learn something about ministers and the churches that they never knew before. I understand that this plan is in operation in about one hundred cities throughout the United States.

Yours,

SAM.

—From letters of an American Mechanic, Outlook.

Woman was taken out of man; not out of his head to top him, nor out of his feet to be trampled underfoot; but out of his side to be equal to him, under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be loved.—M. Henry.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. F. M. Smith, secretary, 630 South Chrysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. E. Etzenhouser, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

The Truth About the Double Standard of Morality.

The double standard of morality of the sexes has perplexed thousands of women, particularly the mothers of sons. They have never been able to see why a moral wrong in their sex should be a justifiable "necessity" with men. And thousands of mothers have accepted departures from their ideas of morality on the part of their sons as inevitable, because "hygienic reasons" were hinted at "which women can not understand." It is due to women that they should know the truth.

WHAT A MAN WAS SAID TO HAVE SAID.

A great many years ago a German physician, of unquestioned standing, was "said to have said" that "the sowing of wild oats" on the part of a man, in his younger days, was in accordance with his physical or hygienic necessities. He was reported as having said, too, that a life free from such an indulgence was all very well from a moral and ethical standpoint, but that when the "physical necessities" were considered, it did not, and would not hold good. A statement so inviting in its subject, and so comforting in its justification of a world-prevailing evil, was, of course, seized upon with avidity, and within a few months it had crossed every ocean in the world, and been duly heralded in every channel of printed publicity. Folks believed it because they wanted to believe it. Physicians accepted it, repeated it, and, naturally, with the weight of medical repetition behind it, it was not long before a large part of the public accepted the statement as a well-grounded medical fact. And it is this to-day.

WHAT THE MAN DID SAY.

So much can one man do: not the German physician who is "said to have said" it, but the man who thought the physician said it, and gave to the public as a fact what was an absolute perversion of what he did say. For the German physician never said what he is reported to have said. What he did say came out later when the erroneous statement began to be heralded, and it was this: that "the sowing of wild oats" on the part of a young man was strangely enough believed by many, both medical and non-medical men alike, to be a physical necessity, whereas from no medical studies or investigations, anywhere attainable, would such a "physical necessity" hold good. A slightly different statement! But the truth never caught up with the lie. It seldom does. And in perhaps no other single instance was a lie destined to do such incalculable damage. The medical profession has suffered from it, and, despite all that the most careful students of physiology could say, the lying statement has lived.

Of late, however, there has arisen a strong and insistent resolve among the foremost medical bodies and the acknowledged authorities of physiology and pathology to get from under the lie, and greater and more effectively organized efforts are being made to-day than ever before to reach the great public with honest teachings on this vital topic. But the popular press is, by reason of a false notion, closed to the dissemination of such knowledge, and the medical papers never reach the public.

THE TRUTH OF THE MATTER.

All the great medical organizations the world over stand as an absolute unit on the fallacy of the "wild-oats" theory. Instead of the popular fallacy that a young man is physically the worse for a clean, moral life, the entire weight of evidence of the world's foremost medical knowledge is unreservedly of the opinion that he is physically better for it. The distinguished specialists of the International Brussels Congress declared, as a body, that a clean, moral life for a man "is not prejudicial to health, but, on the contrary, is to be recommended from a purely hygienic point of view." The foremost German medical society took up the same ground. Fournier, one of the greatest specialists in the world, said of the so-called physical dangers of strict morality in men, "I do not know them." The foremost society in America for the study of this whole subject stamps the "wild-oats" fallacy as one of "the most dangerous errors to be counteracted," and roundly condemns the idea almost universally prevalent among young men that "the sowing of wild oats" is a "physical necessity, essential to their health." Young men everywhere should know, says this society, that a clean moral life is compatible with the highest physical and mental vigor, and that not alone does "physiology clearly teach this," but also that "the experience of athletes, sportsmen, scholars, and others is absolutely conclusive upon this point."

These words come not from men who do not know, or who talk idly. They come from men of the world, strong, virile, and in the very midst of the world's achievements, like Lyman Abbott and Felix Adler; from physicians of the highest repute, such as Doctor Edward G. Janeway, Doctor Edward L. Keyes, Doctor William Osler, Doctor Howard A. Kelly, Doctor L. Bolton Bangs, Doctor Prince A. Morrow, and scores of others. They are the men who are sponsors for these statements—men who know the world of men and what that world stands for.

WHAT TEN MEN REVEALED.

The truth of the question lies in the very opposite of the "wild-oats" theory. Of course, this point of view is at variance with the popular notion on this subject. But that is solely because the prevalent notion is baseless and has been blindly accepted. No actual medical ground has ever existed for it, any more than for the generally-accepted statement that it is only the rare man, the vastly exceptional man, who reaches years of manhood with the record of a clean life behind him. Statistics of this kind are always difficult to secure: almost impossible. Yet enough, and of an authoritative order, have been secured to disprove this alleged rarity. A physician of long experience, and having the entire confidence of a number of his male patients, during an inquiry extending over three years found the percentage of such lives to excite even his own astonishment. "I was amazed," he said, "to find six in a certain set of ten men, whereas I expected to find exactly the opposite ratio. And the most significant fact," he added, "was that the six men who had allowed their common sense and decency to sway their lives had risen, in each case, to positions of eminence and power, and were to-day—although one was fifty-one and another sixty-nine—in the full enjoyment of their activities. The other four had not, in a single instance, risen above subordinate positions. Of course, I do not mean to say that the one fact implies the other—I merely cite a fact as I found it."

A CASE OF TWENTY-TWO STUDENTS.

The president of one of our five large universities recently conducted an experimental comparison between twelve students. In order to classify them, six belonged to the "wild-oats" class; the other six did not. With their own consent, in order to demonstrate a belief in which each was firmly convinced and keenly interested, an experimental record of efficiency in studies was kept. At the end of the term the twelve came together, at the invitation of the president (himself not by any means a strong believer in the abstinence from "wild oats"), and it was unanimously agreed, as one of the "wild-oats" students afterwards expressed it, that "the other chaps had us whipped to a finish." And he added: "The truth is, I think, that 'Prexy' was as much surprised as we were at the showing. It taught us chaps something that I for one wouldn't have believed in any other way." And at the last term the same experiment was repeated with ten other students of the same university, and this second experiment produced practically the same results.

WHERE DOCTORS ARE TO BLAME.

All this does not prove anything new to students of human nature. But it will be a revelation to those who have firmly—and backed by medical authority, too—believed not only in the rarity of clean moral habits in men, but also in the physical and hygienic reasons advanced against such habits. The words medical authority are used here, and correctly so. Too many physcians, either incompetent or too lazy to ascertain the truth for themselves, have advocated directly to young men the noxious "wild-oats" fallacy as a necessary element of good health. Here a tremendous amount of harm has been done. It is a good deal to expect of a young man that he shall exercise will-power and refrain from a departure from moral standards which his own doctor, in whom he has been taught to have confidence, tells him "is necessary to his health," generally with the even more dangerous proviso added, "within limitations, of course." If there is need of a clearer understanding of the truth of this noxious fallacy of "sowing wild oats" on the part of what we call the public at large, there is also a vital need of more enlightenment on the subject on the part of an all-too-large percentage of the physicians who have persisted for years in densely and apishly keeping alive a life-destroying lie. Any physician, no matter what his standing, may well be distrusted when he does other than refute this fallacy.

THE SAME IS RIGHT FOR BOTH.

Every woman can accept this as a fact—that the most careful studies in physiology give the absolute lie to the "wild-oats" fiction; that, as Doctor Prince Morrow has well said, it refutes, and refutes absolutely, that wretched sophistry which would strip masculine immorality of its guilt and make of it a pardonable pastime, even in a hygienic sense. On the other hand, what physiology does reveal and clearly teaches, and what is confirmed by experience, is that a clean life is compatible with the highest mental and physical vigor: that no man was ever better for "sowing his wild oats," or worse for not sowing them. There is not the slightest shadow of support in any teachings of physiology or hygiene for the present double standard of morality of the sexes. What is morally right and physically well for a woman is equally right and well for a man.—June Ladies' Home Journal.

Request for Prayers.

Brother Lewis, Seim, South Dakota, requests the faith and prayers of the Saints for his recovery. He is afflicted with a bad cough and a weakened system, and can not eat anything with comfort.

Letter Department

JOPLIN, Missouri, June 2, 1908.

Editors Herald: There is much to rejoice over after the long attempt to overthrow the restored gospel by pulpit, press, false church historians, text-books in public schools, and villifying, railing accusations in publications, all this bringing out the most able defense that has made a lasting impression on the public mind. All along the line the battle has raged until it has finally raised up a lasting friendship that will bring to this work the needed assistance of men of exceedingly high standing, of large wealth and vast influence in the great commercial world. It will astound the bitterest enemies of the work, for the kingdom of God will not be stranded nor suffer long for want of money to carry on its great work. Many will lay at the feet of Zion not only their wealth, but they will also become brethren, gladly, whose blood is of Ephraim. They will hear the voice of the Shepherd. The eyes of the world are upon them and He knows who among them having wealth, honor, and name among the nations will throw their influence before others and to this wonderful work. The narrowing time has come and the great signs of the times indicate the near approach of the Master's coming, such as the ice flowing down, which looks like it by the inclosed clipping. The highway must be cast up before long in the midst of the great deep. The wonderful Zionite society with its ten million dollar trust company to aid the poor Jews of all nations into the lands of their inheritance, their much beloved land, their rejecting England's offer of a large tract of land in Africa, the awful multiplying signs of the times, the awful scourge to come from the east to sweep over our land, to cower the mocker and destroy the wicked,—surely the redemption of Zion draweth nigh. The quarrelling among the creeds has a strong foothold, as was foretold in the Book of Mormon. The leaven of the gospel has entered every nook and corner of the churches and has created a disturbance that can not be stayed. Everything is being shaken that can be shaken, and crumble they must, for the day is at hand when they must obey this gospel or perish with their forms of godliness. The bands that bind the "whore of the earth" are rusting apart. Within herself have come dissensions and awful discomfort. Her ruin is near at hand.

I have felt moved to write as I have, looking upon the wonderful fulfillment of former and latter-day prophecies. The latest surprise will be at Nauvoo, as I have read of late that a monument is to be erected to the much loved Martyrs, and that the citizens of that city are willing to receive our people again.

A. N. HOXIE.

WILBURTON, Oklahoma, May 26, 1908.

Editors Herald: I am packing my grips and to-morrow I will kiss my wife and baby and two sweet little girls good-bye for the field of labor, Kentucky and Tennessee. The world will never know what a sacrifice God's servants have made for the redemption of the children of man; but God has paid me for all that I can ever do for him when he has taken my child, now a sweet daughter of fifteen years, out of the jaws of death when all earthly hopes had gone. God gave her back to me in health, so I must go to Kentucky and Tennessee or anywhere God wants me to go.

I moved my family to this place last December. When I arrived here I found the Saints about spiritually dead and it looked as though the gospel work was about done in this place, but we went to work with many good Saints living here and the Lord began to bless us with his Spirit. The Saints began to attend meetings, but the outsiders did not seem inclined to even look at our church, to say nothing about entering it. But we kept on praying and sometimes fasting for the work, and God heard our prayers and the result is that in three months and a half there have been eleven added to the branch by baptism, one by letter, twelve children blessed, one elder ordained, and the ordination of a teacher provided for. Bro. S. W. Simmons has been laboring with us for four weeks and the Lord has blessed him in presenting the beautiful gospel and our church would often be filled with earnest listeners.

We have a fine Sunday-school under the care of Bro. A. Z. Rudd. He is a faithful worker and we have some noble Saints here. The citizens of the town generally are a good set of people, so the prospect for a fine branch here is very good. Bro. H. R. Harder lives here and is trying to do what he can to sound the gospel in these hills and valleys, so may God bless us all this year to do a good work, and that we may return from our fields at the end of the year with the sheaves of our labor. Success to the HERALD this year. I will let you hear from us over in the hills of Tennessee and Kentucky.

Your brother,
E. A. ERWIN.

DOW CITY, Iowa.

Editors Herald: I write to say I am enjoying myself among the Saints and old-time friends as much as I possibly can, beside preaching the gospel as the way opens before me.

After the General Conference I spent a few days in Independence and Kansas City, visiting and preaching at each place as much as I could. Then on to Lamoni, "the city of Saints," where I never had been before, and spent a profitable week in visiting old acquaintances and making new ones. This was an enjoyable treat, to inspect the Saints' and Liberty Homes and become acquainted with the aged inmates, who seemed to be well cared for and enjoying themselves as well as any one could wish. The sisters in charge were kind in showing me around and introducing me to the different ones who seemed pleased to see the Australian missionary, and who would not consent to let him go until he preached for them. It only took a few minutes to get ready, and I told them of the assurance we all had of reaching the "Zion above," if faithful in the cause we have embraced. They seemed pleased, and we parted with the best wishes for one another's welfare.

I spent one afternoon in profitable conversation with the wife and daughter of our old-time missionary, Glaud Rodger, and was pleased to find them in the faith he sacrificed so much to establish in the Islands.

My stay with J. W. Wight and family was enjoyable, also the pleasant evenings spent with others in conversation and listening to sweet music. With Heman C. Smith I visited Graceland College and felt pleased that we owned such a building, and trust that it will be a blessing to many of our energetic young men and women who must defend our work by and by.

I attended one prayer-meeting, preached once, and shared in one surprise where the Saints got the best of the blessing, as it is "more blessed to give than to receive," but I was content with the pocket full of silver.

I reached Omaha safely, and spent a week preaching there and in Council Bluffs, and was pleased to see several faces that I knew when a boy, and I enjoyed myself very much in doing what little I could to interest them in the old story we love so much.

The next week I spent at Logan and Bigler's Grove among relatives and Saints, preaching each night, and I managed to run over to Magnolia and see my old friend, J. F. McDowell, who was such a great help and adviser to the young about the locality in days gone by. The meeting was pleasant and profitable. I reached Dow City in time to give the baccalaureate address to the graduating class on May 24, and although the night was dark and rainy, yet the house was well filled, and we spent a very pleasant evening.

I am making a point to keep busy in the Master's cause until I take my departure for Australia.

In the faith,
C. A. BUTTERWORTH.

WEIR, Kansas, May 26, 1908.

Dear Herald: I am glad that the Saints are trying to come up higher. It seems like I am the weakest one in the branch, but like the apostle of old, I know that the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation.

I have received some wonderful manifestations of God's power. About a year ago when working on the railroad I was taken with a severe pain in my side. I had to go home and it continued to get worse until I could not turn in bed. I sent for our presiding elder, Bro. J. M. Robinson, and in the administration he spoke by the Spirit and told me I would be healed in the Lord's own time; so I was contented to wait. Bro. W. H. Smart came to see me and administered to one of my boys, and being directed by the Spirit to administer to me did so. When anointing with the oil the pain began to leave till every particle of pain and soreness was gone, and in half an hour I was up and dressed.

Ever praying that we may cease to murmur and complain till the Master sees fit to remove affliction from our pathway, I remain,

J. W. BUTLER.

HATFIELD, Missouri.

Editors Herald: I once was a member of the Latter Day Saints' Church, but I was hammered and pounded until I did not believe in anything, although I had a desire for the truth. For three years or more I almost despised the teachings of the Saints, and was on the road to ruin, when I was called on to help dig the grave of Sr. Bell, and, dear Christian friends, I want to tell you that I was in a terrible condition, apparently lost, at least I felt that way, and while the remains of Sister Bell were being lowered into the grave, I was made to know this is the work of God. Her spirit testified to me in her own words, "I know this work is of God." I know that I heard her just as plain as I ever heard her in my life. Of course it was not she, because the dead can not speak, but it was the Lord speaking through her.

Whatever this means to you, it is evidence to me, as also a warning to turn back to the church. I have had a very hard struggle and will have for some time at least. I feel my weakness and desire the prayers of the Saints, that I may no longer continue a wanderer, regardless of what anybody says to me about this work. I wish to be one of you again and a true one.

Yours for Christ and his cause,
B. H. YORK.

PHOENIX, Arizona, May 26, 1908.

Dear Herald: I do so much enjoy the good articles and letters in the HERALD and find them very strengthening in my isolated condition. I am very anxious to have the work started here in Phoenix. Surely there are many honest hearts here that would accept this beautiful gospel if they could but hear it preached by one having authority. Although W. S. Pender has been appointed to Arizona for some time, I think he has never been here. I see now that Alvin Knisley is also to labor in this territory and Mexico. I do hope one of them will find their way here by fall (it will be too warm until then). There are many Mexicans and Indians here, also at Mesa City, eighteen miles from here, the Utah Mormons have a large stake. I do not know how much I could assist should an elder come, as my husband is opposed to this faith, but I would do all I can. May the Lord lead in my prayer.

MRS. C. M. STURGES.

COLLINWOOD, Ohio, May 26, 1908.

Dear Herald: Being many times cheered by reading of experiences of the Saints in your columns, I would like to add two that have given me pleasure, quite recently. The tie-up of our street-car system in Cleveland affected many who make it a point to attend all church services. Because several cars had been dynamited I had walked the twelve miles on Sunday to meeting and a greater distance to work following days, and felt excused from meeting with the Saints on this occasion. During the following morning, while at work, there suddenly flashed up in my mind a brilliant dream of the intervening night, of a testimony-meeting of that soul-satisfying kind where the Spirit of God presides; I remember I testified to the willing sacrifice of the Son of God and its portent to us. So you see I was requited. The second incident concerns one of the office men of my firm with whom I have often conversed regarding our gospel hopes and the latter-day work in general. A week ago he was sent to Chicago on business and on his return sought me to say he had met a Latter Day Saint on the return trip. By inquiry I found he had traveled two hundred and fifty miles with W. H. Kelley, of the Twelve, and thus my testimony had been confirmed to him and a good impression made, evidently. This is encouraging to us individually to speak often and freely to our associates of the work we love, that though our efforts lie dormant for awhile, God will send refreshing rain in due season. Let our lives reflect no discredit, but may we be known as individuals living for high principles, stamped with the character of righteousness, and working for practical ideals; we shall leave our impress on a commonplace world.

Faithfully,

EARNEST A. WEBBE.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 1, 1908.

Editors Herald: I have just removed from Maine and am now located at the above address. When the word reached me that my field of labor was changed I began at once to make arrangements to come to this place. I have found a welcome among the Saints and friends here and think that we shall be content to abide and labor here for awhile. As wife and baby boy and I had made acquaintance of many good friends in Maine, we were indeed loath to sever our association with them.

I shall often recall to memory many of my experiences during three years of labor in the "dear old Pine Tree State." I have met as good Latter Day Saints in Maine as I have ever met elsewhere. If our work had always been represented in righteousness, it was destined to take a firm hold upon the people in several places where now the interest is waning. The work in that State should not decline under the efforts of Brn. Bullard, Farrell, Brann, Cushman, and the local force. We hope and pray that the Saints will all work unitedly and faithfully for the maintaining of the cause we all love. I shall always feel grateful to the Saints who so kindly assisted us in our temporal necessities and in various ways were true brethren and sisters to us. I must also acknowledge the many acts of kindness bestowed upon us by a large number of people who do not belong to the church. We were glad to make and retain the friendship of so many.

Part of my work here is to preach in open air in Wade Park on Sundays. It is a beautiful park and great crowds of people resort there. The city has erected a rostrum and arranged seats about it for a few hundred and we are at liberty to occupy. This work has been carried on by other brethren of the missionary force in other previous seasons and we trust some good will be accomplished by the efforts, and we certainly do reach a great number of people.

Yesterday at our meeting it was quite cool, with rain threatening. After we sang a few hymns we were surprised to have quite a good sized audience to whom we spoke with fair liberty. After I concluded I offered to give any who would promise to read, the excellent tract, "Why I became a Latter Day Saint." A great number came forth eagerly to receive them. I have never considered myself very well adapted for an open-air preacher—street preacher, etc.; but perhaps that is only due to timidity and lack of experience. God can equip and give us sustaining grace for all our needs. May the favor and blessings of the Lord be upon the harvest-field this year. There are rumors of several church dignitaries being about here, but I have seen nothing of them as yet.

Fraternally,

W. E. LARUE.

1389 East Ninetieth Street.

COLDWATER, Michigan, May 28, 1908.

Editors Herald: I have been touring Ingham and Gratiot Counties for sixteen days with interest. The whole country is fragrant with fruit blossoms. If no frost or freeze fruit will be abundant in Michigan. The blossoms seem to be piled up in endless profusion. We preached fourteen discourses, baptized six, and ordained one to the eldership, beside doing Sunday-school work and incidentals. The Capital City branch and Sunday-school are in fine condition; their work compact, systematic, and delightful. Interest at Ithaca is good; the Saints zealous.

Work in the eastern part of our district is taking on strength. I am cleaning house for a few days and then off again.

Coldwater Saints are enthused over the proposition of church building in their city. Lot purchased and the work has taken form. They hope to hold the fall conference in the new church. So goes the work.

Ever,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

VENUS, Texas, R. F. D. No. 1.

Editors Herald: As I read the letters from the different parts of the world, I rejoice to see the unity of faith and mind expressed. While singing that old hymn, "Evening thoughts," my soul is comforted and I humbly thank my Father for the gospel. How true the statement in John 7:17! I have put the author to the test and have found it true. Many blessings have I received, once in being healed from deadly poison; again in being shown the divinity of the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants; and in being shown in a dream that I was in the right church.

I long to see the church triumphant over all opposition. Saints, there is no sacrifice too big for us to make, for we will gain the victory if we are faithful. I am in this work to live and die, for I know it is true, not only by past experiences and blessings, but also by the assurance which is with me, that which was to follow the believer. (Mark 16: 15-18.)

I have seen the dead raised to life. The child had ceased breathing, but after being anointed by the elder, and prayer, it called for a drink of water. A sister in our neighborhood had been very sick for some time. The physician could do her no good. We held a prayer-meeting for her, and she was prompted to get up and take part with us. The next morning she was well and continued well, after having given up hope of recovery. Their little girl recently broke her arm. By administration she was helped and is fully recovered.

The Lord knows just what we need, and let us live for it. Let us pay our tithing and offerings; pray often, and fast. If faithful our days will be brighter and our lives will be more pleasant. There will be jealousy and faultfinding. Let us put forth a united effort in the work, is the prayer of your brother,

ALBERT VANCLEAVE.

LYONS, Wisconsin, June 8, 1908.

Editors Herald: Have been here at the above named place a week to-day. There are but three Saints living here, but as all other scattered Saints they feel their need of some special meetings. Bishop E. L. Kelley was at Elkhorn on business for the church, and Thursday joined me here and remained over Sunday. The Methodist Episcopal pastor here attended the meetings Friday and Saturday nights and invited Bro. Kelley to preach at his church at two o'clock in the afternoon, Sunday. Most certainly Elder McIness is not afraid to hear truth and we wish there were more of the Methodists and other denominations that would manifest the same spirit. Bro. Kelley leaves to-day for Ohio and the writer for East Delavan, Wisconsin. Our meetings, with the exception of the one service at the Methodist Episcopal Church, have been held at the home of our worthy Sr. Sarah Askin who is ever ready to do all she can for the work in every way.

The writer expects to join Elder G. J. Brookover at Madison next Sunday and begin a series of meetings in the city hall of Fair Oakes.

Of late the writer's mind has been more fully impressed than ever before with the awfulness of a soul that has become careless in regard to his duties to the church. My heart has been pained to find now and then a good bright mind that through carelessness and allowing the world to lead them, has gone into darkness and doubt and unbelief. How careful every one ought to be to keep his mind spiritual and avoid those things that lead one to forget his duties to his God; for the servant that knows his Lord's will and does things worthy of stripes shall be beaten with many. So states the Christ.

With sincere hope,

JASPER O. DUTTON.

Editors Herald: I want to let the dear Saints hear of our troubles, that they may pray for us. Our livery-stable burned a few nights ago, and we are much discouraged. Maybe, with God's help, we can overcome. We live at Flomaton, Escambia County, Alabama. If any of the Saints should come this way we will be glad if they will call on us. I trust God will bless all the Saints everywhere. We know we have been blessed often, and he will bless us again.

N. I. WADKINS.

Extracts from Letters.

Sr. Lettia Dunn, Midland, South Dakota, writes that she is the only Saint there, but that there are many good people there and she believed an elder could do good. He could find a home with them. Her husband runs a shoe shop in the town, but they live two miles in the country. She longs to hear the precious word.

Joseph Arber, Hamburg, Iowa, writes that the Fremont conference passed off peacefully. "Our church here was dedicated Sunday, 8th, sermon by Bishop Hilliard, prayer by Joseph Arber. Bro. Haden and I are still holding meetings."

Mrs. Susan Quinn, of No. 12 Sheridan Street, Wabash, Indiana, writes that she wishes some elder would come there; she thinks that she could find an opening for preaching in a church near her home.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.—Conference met with the Atchison Branch at 10.30 a. m., May 2, 1908, president, Samuel Twombly, and minister in charge, W. E. Peak, presiding; M. F. Gowell, secretary pro tem. Branches reporting: Fanning 95, Atchison 75, Topeka 48, Netawaka 51. Ministry reports: Elders W. E. Peak, Samuel Twombly baptized 3, W. H. Murphy, Henry Green, Mahlon Smith, Frank G. Hedrick, A. L. Gurwell; Priests, H. C. Shriner, A. C. Ingle, T. H. Barrett, J. W. Burns; Teachers George Ketchum, G. W. Shay, Albert Carney; Deacons Ben Shriner, C. W. Lonestine. The following officers were elected: Samuel Twombly, president; M. F. Gowell, assistant president; Frank G. Hedrick, secretary and treasurer. Adjourned to meet in four months with Netawaka Branch. Frank G. Hedrick, secretary.

NAUVOO.—District conference met at Keokuk, Iowa, June 6 and 7, with Charles Fry in chair. W. T. Lambert, Charles Fry, and A. C. Anderson reported as branch presidents. Reports from the following branches were received: Keokuk, Rock Creek, Farmington, Montrose, Burlington, Ottumwa, and New London. The bishop reported, receipts $473.97; expenses $445.00; on hand $28.97. He also reported for the Sanitarium, $235.20 received; for the college, $35.76; for the children's home, $8.00; for the Herald Office $6.00. As treasurer of the district he reported receipts $21.25, expenses $12.18, leaving a balance of $9.07. All financial reports were audited and found correct, as well as the books. The historian and secretary was allowed a bill of $2.10. Voice and vote were extended to visiting brethren. Madge M. Siegfried was chosen organist, and M. H. Siegfried, chorister. C. E. Willey was elected president, with power to choose his associates; M. H. Siegfried, secretary; George P. Lambert, treasurer. The historian and bishop of the district were by motion sustained. Preaching at 8 p. m., on Saturday, by Charles Fry; at 11 a. m., Sunday by A. H. Smith; at 8 p. m., by F. B. Farr; Sunday-school at 9.30 a. m., Sunday, and sacrament at 2.30 p. m. Adjourned to meet at Rock Creek, the first Saturday and Sunday in October.

CLINTON.—District conference convened at Rich Hill, Missouri, June 6, 1908. Brn. James Moler and George Jenkins were chosen to preside. Branches reporting: Coal Hill, 71; Rich Hill, 154; Eldorado Springs, 142; Wheatland, 84; Taborville, 51; Veve, 100; Walker, 18; Nevada, 81; Fort Scott, 55. Ministry reporting: Elders James Moler, A. C. Silvers, George Jenkins, S. C. Andes, John H. Tibbles, J. T. Higdon, T. R. White, Cornelius Edwards, G. W. Beebe, and L. R. Devore; Priests, W. E. Reynolds, A. T. Higdon, J. W. Strader, S. C. Williams; Teacher, T. C. Welch. Treasurer reported balance on hand last report, $1.00; paid out 25 cents. Bishop's agent, G. W. Beebe, reported: Receipts $114.30; paid out $117.88; due agent, $3.58. Bro. James Moler was elected president, A. C. Silvers secretary and treasurer, Sr. Lucy Silvers recorder. Bishop's agent, G. W. Beebe, and local historian, Lucy Silvers, were sustained. Next conference will be held at Veve Chapel, October 3, 4, 1908. A. C. Silvers, secretary.

Convention Minutes.

POTTAWATTAMIE.—Convention met with the Hazel Dell Sunday-school May 30, 1908. Social service at 11 a. m., in charge of Eli Hayer. At 2 p. m., meeting in charge of C. B. Bardsley. Schools reported: Oakdale, Grand View, Fontanelle, Wheeler, Crescent, Underwood, Hazel Dell, Council Bluffs. Report of home class department read. Paper, by Sr. Stella Harding, "The part the Sunday-school has to do with the redemption of Zion." A few thoughts upon the subject of granting diplomas to those who take the normal course, were given by J. A. Hansen. The following question was then presented for discussion: Is it right for schools to hold socials for the purpose of raising funds? At 8 p. m., sermon by Bro. Eli Hayer. Adjourned to meet on day previous to, and at same place as next district conference. C. E. Scott, secretary.

NEW YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.—District convention met at Elk Mills, Maryland, May 30 and 31, Superintendent O. T. Christy presiding, E. B. Hull secretary. Reports were received from Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Broad River, and Baldwin schools; the numerical strength of the district is now 420. Treasurer reported amount on hand at last report

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post-office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

$2.81, expended $6, balance due treasurer $3.19. Librarian reported balance on hand at last report $14.97, expended for new books $11.16, balance on hand $3.81; books have been sent to the different schools. The following officers were elected: Superintendent O. T. Christy; Associate N. Edward Milligan; Secretary-treasurer E. B. Hull; representative on the library board, John Lawrence. An entertainment was given on Saturday evening, consisting of singing, dialogues, recitations, and speeches on the various departments of work in the Sunday-school. Sunday afternoon four Sunday-school scholars were baptized by district president, A. D. Angus. An invitation was extended to the district Religio to meet with the Sunday-school at their next district convention. Collections received during the two days' convention, $9.02. Adjourned to meet with the district conference in February, 1909.

Missionary Appointment.

Arrangements having been made with the Bishop, I hereby appoint Elder John D. Suttell, of Providence, Rhode Island, to labor in the Massachusetts District for the ensuing conference year, said appointment to date from June 1, 1908.

ULYSSES W. GREENE, Minister in Charge.

WILLOUGHBY, Ohio, May 25, 1908.

The Presidency concurs in the foregoing appointment.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,

by Fred'k M. Smith, secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, June 8, 1908.

Church Secretary.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES.—The General Conference Minutes have been delayed by press of work in the publishing department. They will be issued just as soon as the office is able to put them on the press—probably in a few weeks. R. S. Salyards, Church Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, June 11, 1908.

Conference Notices.

Southwestern Texas District conference will be held July 10, 1908, at Pipe Creek, Texas. We expect Bro. W. M. Aylor, assistant minister in charge. D. S. Palmer.

Convention for the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District will meet with the Galien, Michigan, Branch, June 19. All Sunday-school workers of the district please take notice. Let all the schools see that their reports are in on time, and may all come together with a disposition to work. Mrs. Ella Davis, superintendent.

Reunion Notices.

Reunion of the Southern California District will be held at Huntington Beach, August 7 to 17. We have secured the Methodist pavilion specially built for religious gatherings and tent city concessions, one of the most ideal camp-grounds of the Southwest, as also the extensive and perfectly equipped dining-hall. Tents will be fully furnished with ample bedding and clean linen. The beach is well suited for bathing. Bro. Levi Hemmingway will superintend this department, thus affording ample protection for those unable to swim. The Saints need spiritual reviving; everybody loves to take a summer outing. We can combine both here. We will continue the cooperative table, though on a different basis, each one paying for what he eats, nothing more. We extend a cordial invitation to any of the Eastern Saints contemplating an outing. There will be no more pleasant place during August. Bro. Fred M. Smith, of the Presidency, has assured us of his presence if at all possible. Bro. Fred A. Smith, missionary in charge, will come if he can. Bro. F. G. Pitt, A. Carmichael, and T. W. Williams are already here. The Saints in Arizona, New Mexico, and Utah are especially urged to participate with us in the reunion. Ten-days' rates for tents: Two persons, $4.30; three persons $5.75; four persons, $7.20; five persons, $8.60; six persons, $10. This includes everything for immediate occupancy. You can secure cooking utensils (no dishes) for twenty-five cents per day. We advise coming prepared to patronize the Cafateria. You will save money. Huntington Beach is about an hour's ride from Los Angeles on the electric line; fare, fifty cents. Those coming from Santa Ana, change at Watts Junction. Ship all baggage to Tent City, Huntington Beach, California. For information address S. H. Garner, 1235 Normandie Street, Los Angeles, or G. H. Wixom, 936 Eleventh Street, San Bernardino, California. Those desiring tents will please notify Doctor F. E. Wilson, secretary Huntington Beach Tent City Company, Huntington Beach, California, not later than ten days prior to convening of reunion. Accompany your order with one half cash, stating how many will occupy tent; or if you prefer, write one of the committee two weeks in advance. The district conference will convene Monday, August 10, at 10 a. m., in pavilion grounds. Branches will all elect delegates. The Sunday-school and Religio associations will hold their conventions some time during reunion. All locals will appoint delegates. T. W. Williams, president, George Wixom, secretary of committee.

June 2, 1908.

The Northwestern Oklahoma reunion will be held in Burnham's grove, five miles southeast of Lookout, and seven miles northwest of Freedom, Woodward County, commencing on Friday, August 7, and continuing over two Sundays. Fine grove and plenty of good water, cooperative boarding-house, and good speakers. There will be an effort made to have one of our patriarchs with his stenographer present. Stage runs every day from Alva to Freedom, or from Coldwater to Lookout. Parties will be met either at Freedom, or Lookout, by writing Bro. Clyde W. McAllister, or M. S. Moreland, Freedom, Oklahoma, in proper time. Alva and Coldwater are on the Santa Fe Railroad. The Central Oklahoma reunion will be held at Ripley, Payne County, commencing August 21 and continuing over two Sundays. Ample arrangements are being made by the reunion committee, missionaries in charge, and the president of the district, for an up to date reunion. Come prepared to enjoy yourself by bringing tent and bedding and thus make others happy too. I. N. White, minister in charge, Hubert Case, assistant minister in charge, T. W. Chatburn, president of district.

Addresses.

J. C. Clapp, Cottage Grove, Tennessee.

To the man who feels the need of keeping abreast of the age, we would say that the Literary Digest is the only solution of this perplexing problem. Good magazines and newspapers, each covering its special field, but all of more or less general interest, are multiplying so rapidly that no man can hope to read them all. New books are issuing from thousands of presses at such a rate that it would require a specialist to keep track of them. Most daily newspapers overwhelm the reader with a mass of trash spiced here and there with a few grains of really useful information. To go to all these original sources and obtain the material which the ordinary man wants for the purpose of keeping abreast of the times is hopeless. The plan of the editors of the Literary Digest is at once unique, and of limitless help in the matter of keeping posted. They classify, quote from, and discuss the facts and information gleaned from the contemporaneous press of the world regarding the most important topics of current interest. No attempt is made to mold the reader's judgment, and here lies the great value of the Literary Digest—you get all sides of all questions—facts—and not, as is customary, the editor's private opinion, which may or may not be biased.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE
BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid ..$30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK

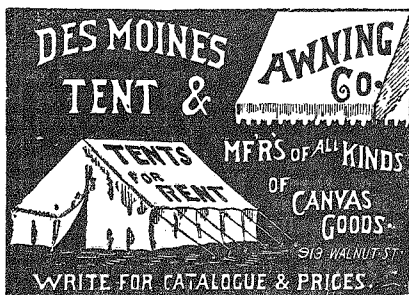

LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S
HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church. 14f

THE INDIAN MAIDEN

A Temperance Story

No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

Excursion Rates
East and West

Let me help you plan your trip and furnish you illustrated printed matter telling you all about the place you wish to go—if I haven't got it, I'll get it for you.

There are low rates this Summer to Colorado, Utah, Black Hills, California, Puget Sound country, Michigan, Canada, St. Lawrence River and Thousand Islands, New York State, Adirondack and White Mountains and New England and many other places.

Please see me before you decide.
I think I can assist you.

L. F. Siltz, Agent,
C., B. & Q. R. R.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice, Mite, and Rain Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF

NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

Are You Interested
In Independence?

Then you should have one of those pictorial books with historical sketch of Independence.

A book made by the genuine Carbon Photo process (not Engravings), contains twenty pages of views and two pages descriptive. Price 50c each.

One 5x7 view would cost you at least 25c, but this booklet all complete for 50c, the universal price for 20 pages for this grade of work, or only 2 1/2c a page.

The Independence Examiner says . . . It is a beautiful souvenir executed in a most artistic manner and should be in every library in Independence.

EVAN V. DAVIS, Photographer,
Lock Box 35, Independence, Missouri.

THE INSTRUCTOR

No. 126, cloth$.75
No. 127, leather 1.00
No. 128, leather, flexible 1.50

THESE BOOKS ARE NOW READY.

TENT FOR SALE

The Pottawattamie District has decided to offer for sale their tent and all its appurtenances. The tent is 26x40, 7-foot wall, 10-ounce ducking. Seats for one hundred persons accompany the tent, also a small tent for use of the missionary. For particulars address the undersigned.

J. A. HANSEN,
(For committee),
R. D. 1. Weston, Iowa.

"HEAVEN AND HELL"
BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps
PASTOR LANDEBERGER,
Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

Bible References

By Alvin Knisley

Paper cover 5 cents
Cloth cover 10 cents

Spanish Tracts

No. 350 Epítome De La Fe, per doz.. 10c
No. 351 Restauración, per doz. 10c

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

Atonement of Christ

and Final Destiny of Man

Revised and Enlarged

No. 17—10 cents each.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, JUNE 24, 1908

NUMBER 26

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
ISRAEL A. SMITH, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

Editorial

THE FUNCTION OF INSPIRATION.

It is an old observation that there seem to be two individuals in every man. Man's character seems to be dual; in him is man and "superman." John declared, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world"; a little later he sent his disciples around to investigate. Saul communed with God at one time and sought the witch of Endor at another. Peter pledged himself to stand by the Master to the extremity; shortly afterward he basely denied him. David wrote the twenty-third psalm and lusted after Bathsheba.

Nor need we go so far back for examples. In almost every life we see the ebb and flow of faith and doubt; heights of aspiration and depths of error. Within ourselves we feel the warring of impulses that are directly opposed to each other. We all hear the calling of the "two voices" that Whittier made the subject of one of his poems.

Yet man is not divided; he is a unit. He has one individuality composed of a union of flesh and spirit; but his being is attuned to many influences. Life's scenes are constantly shifting and at every angle of every new event the good and the bad await him and each solicits his attention. To-day he is influenced by one; to-morrow by the other. Only when he fully determines to enlist himself on the side of right and finally obtains the wisdom and power to consistently direct his course along right lines will he proceed without deviation.

True, he is not to be judged alone by the greatest height that he has attained, or by the lowest depths to which he has fallen; but rather by the average level that he is able to maintain day by day. Yet the supreme height that he reaches with the aid of inspiration has its work in his life. He remembers it. It is a constant incentive to move the average level of his life a little higher. The disciples never forgot the mount of transfiguration.

Man is inspirational. God grants him periods of inspiration. All vision was not and is not confined to a few men like John the Revelator; but Jesus Christ is the light that "lighteneth every man that cometh into the world." Inspiration is given to common people. Even the basest, at times, perceive in a clearer light than is their wont what they ought

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
The Function of Inspiration - - - - -	601
Lamoni Items - - - - -	603
Current Events - - - - -	604
The Problem of Life and Death.—Recrimination - - - - -	604
ELDERS' NOTE-BOOK:
How Can We Reach the People - - - - -	605
"The Mormon Puzzle" - - - - -	605
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
Coronation - - - - -	606
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
The Murray Debate as Seen by the Brighamite Press - - - - -	610
The Murray Debate as Seen by the Gentile Press - - - - -	611
The Des Moines Plan - - - - -	612
Evil Habits - - - - -	613
MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:
Are We Thinking - - - - -	615
Living and Learning for Thirty-Eight Cents a Day - - - - -	615
Request for Prayers - - - - -	615
LETTER DEPARTMENT:
Letters - - - - -	616
German Baptist Brethren - - - - -	620
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:
Conference Minutes:
Northern Nebraska - - - - -	622
Southern Missouri - - - - -	622
Des Moines - - - - -	622
Far West - - - - -	622
Kewanee - - - - -	622
Pottawattamie - - - - -	623
Pastoral - - - - -	623
Ministry, Take Notice - - - - -	623

A CORRECTION.

Owing to a mistake in the make-up the article on evil habits, by Elder C. L. Snow, this issue, appears in the department of "General Interest." It should be in the department of "Original Articles."

to be, and what they ought to do. The higher man rises, the clearer, brighter, and more constant the vision becomes. Inspiration is progressive.

These glimpses that we get are like the views on a mountain road. The road winds here and there, now up, now down. The traveler can see neither the beginning nor the ending. He seems lost. It seems to matter little whether he goes forward or retraces his steps. Presently an eminence is reached where he can look before and behind. Then he can see the valley out of which he came; and far ahead, at the end of the road, the beautiful city where his journey terminates. The view is joy-inspiring. At last he is in possession of truth because he has a knowledge of things past, of things as they are, and of things as they are to be. He continues on his way and the road again winds in and out. The beautiful city is lost to view. At times it is almost doubted; but it is not forgotten. Without that inspiring glimpse ahead the traveler might have turned back.

This is not a bad illustration of the actual experiences of the pilgrim bound for the heavenly city; and we entertain the idea that the "Comforter" is a comforter in a broader sense than to assuage the grief of a few disciples who centuries ago mourned the immediate personal loss of the companionship of Christ. It is a comforter to all followers of Christ in all times of doubt, uncertainty, and sorrow. By it he is with them "even unto the end of the world." The vistas of inspiration that it opens to their eyes remain with them all along the mountain road. By it they are shown things to come, are reminded of things past, sense things present, and so learn truth, the basis of all true comfort.

But the Holy Spirit with its inspiring influences, is much more than a mere comforter; and it is much more than a purveyor of information. It is a guide (so named in John 16:13) whose function it is to so train the human intellect that it can grasp and retain knowledge of itself, knowledge that is of a constantly higher and higher type, as we proceed in our investigations.

The Master said, "He will guide you into all truth." That means that man shall stand up and exert himself to accompany the guide. He is not to be carried, pushed, or pulled into the realms of truth. Truth is not to be fed to him predigested and in tablet form. Professor Richard T. Ely, of Wisconsin University, says, "If we may use the language of design, history teaches us that Providence does not intend that men organized in society should have what we are always looking for in the future, namely, an easy-going time. Every age has its problems. . . . Every civilization has been tested heretofore, and every civilization must have its test in the future, our own included."

The vast fields of nature and the stored up treasures of the world's libraries await the exploration of each expanding individual intellect. They await the exploration of the organized intelligence of the race as a whole. But the individual who essays that exploration without help from on high will find himself constantly confused; and at the end of a life of investigation he may have only erroneous, perhaps wickedly erroneous conclusions.

Darwin was wedded to the idea of the survival of the fittest. Carried to its logical conclusion that means that society owes it to itself to see that only the fittest do survive. Those who are weak, afflicted, or unfortunate should be speedily eliminated from society, upon which they act as a drag. And Darwin entertained a very gloomy view of the prospects for the future of the human race because of the apparently growing sentiments of pity and love that lead men to help the weak and to perpetuate their existence.

Christ was a man of keen mentality; he could meet men of brain of his own day on their own grounds. And he excelled Darwin in that he was in touch with a divine wisdom. He did and said always the things that pleased his Father. That meant that he was in touch always with God, and knew his will. Such a condition led him to conclusions as much higher than those reached by Darwin as heaven is higher than hell. His conclusions were in harmony with the highest ideals of humanity and with the pure wisdom and love of God. He believed in the conservation of all life. His fellowship included all men. His theory was that the fittest were to help the unfit to become fit, thus all shall survive. But the man that thinks only of preserving his own life shall lose it.

In all ages of gospel dispensation there are certain men who act as the mouthpieces of God for the church as an organized body, yet inspiration is for all people who will receive it; not for men but for man. God is not so much interested in seeing a few individuals rise to extremely high altitudes of inspiration and spiritual development, as he is in seeing the great body of the church rise to as high an average level as it is possible for them to reach. Rear Admiral Chadwick, of the United States navy, expressed an excellent sentiment in the Chautauquan, "I believe in man, not in individual men. The latter may be well enough for great emergencies, but at the bottom, it is a question, in the long run, of reliance on the whole community."

In a savage state men take the first step toward organization by acknowledging the leadership of some one man. Some one must lead out in undertakings, some one must make decisions, and that prerogative is left to an individual of superior wisdom or prowess. Later, they arrive at a plane where they make their own decisions, and the ones who stand at the head simply execute the will of the people. If the thing done coincides with the will of the leader it can only be because he is in line with the popular will or has won the popular will over to his side. This seems to be the rule that God has ordained for his church. Certain men or quorums of men preside over the church and over districts, stakes, and branches. Yet back of the men, both in occupying the positions and in the things done in those positions, must be the "common consent" of the people.

We can see, then, how essential it is that the great body of the church should be inspired, in touch with God, so that they may know what God's will is. True, the leaders receive the more specific and direct commandments, and must understand, explain, and teach the will and law of God; yet when it comes to the final decision as to what shall be done in obeying that law the voice of the people decides, and each individual should have some personal light, inspiration, and knowledge from on high coinciding with the advice, counsel, or admonition of his so-called superior officers, thus enabling him to cast his vote or make his decision intelligently. And so far as those "superior officers" are concerned, Joseph Smith is reported to have said by way of revelation, "No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness, and meekness, and by love unfeigned."

In a sense we can say with Moses that we would that all Israel were prophets. Not that all were constantly going about giving "decalogues" or laying down "the law" as they hourly receive it from on high for the edification of others; but that all were in touch with God, understanding his will, so that intelligent leaders might have intelligent followers and the voice of the people become in the highest possible sense the voice of God.

The spirit of inspiration, then, has an individual and a general work. It guides the individual into knowledge and light, gives his life direction and consistency, and corrects his infirmities, so that knowing good he has the power to accomplish good. It permeates the body of the church and gives consistency and direction to church policy, so that the church as an organization may labor together with God.

The progress of the church is and has been hindered because individuals have thought their wisdom or the wisdom of their associates sufficient to settle perplexing questions without the aid of inspiration. In proportion as such individuals are numerous the church is vitiated and inevitably tends toward apostasy. In proportion as the individuals who are in touch with God are numerous, the church is enlivened and enriched, and its progress toward final triumph is assured.

ened and enriched, and its progress toward final triumph is assured.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

LAMONI ITEMS.

The stake conference met in Hiteman, June 13 and 14. Among the various items of business transacted we notice that the Cleveland Branch was declared disorganized, this action being made necessary by the removal of so many of the members to other localities. The selection of Elder D. C. White for membership in the Stake Council was approved. The next conference will be held at Pleasanton.

One novel feature of the Children's Day exercises overlooked in our last week's report was the public presentation of diplomas to a class of nine little girls who were graduates from the primary into the intermediate department. These diplomas were properly signed by the school authorities and certified that the graduates had successfully completed their course and had creditably undergone an examination. This idea, if extended, may furnish an incentive to careful work in the Sunday-school.

The Iowa Sunday-school Association holds its forty-third annual convention in Humeston, June 29 to July 1. It is expected that about eight hundred delegates will be present.

The College Board of Trustees has announced members of Graceland College faculty for the ensuing year, as follows: David A. Anderson, president, and professor of education and psychology. J. A. Gunsolley, head of the commercial school. Lillian D. Brackney, director of the school of oratory, instructor in English. Charles B. Woodstock, in charge of the industrial department. Mildred Price, professor of ancient languages. Roy Hopkins, instructor in normal and preparatory departments and director of athletics. Pauline Anthony, instructor in shorthand and typewriting. Maud Alena Bond, director of musical school, instructor in piano, harmony, and history. Elizabeth Wellemeyer, instructor in voice and conducting.

The attendance at the Star of Bethlehem Sunday-school Sunday morning was four hundred and thirty-four. It happened that the collection amounted to just four dollars and thirty-four cents. Evidently no one forgot his penny.

The stake bishopric had charge of the services at the Brick Church Sunday morning. Bishop William Anderson was the speaker, his subject, as a matter of course, was the financial law. He emphasized the value of the law of tithing and promised to take up the law of consecration at some future time. Elder O. B. Thomas occupied at the evening hour. A basket meeting at New Buda was attended by a number of the Lamoni Saints who were fortunate enough to have some mode of conveyance.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

At the late annual conference of the Utah church, Salt Lake City, April 4, Joseph F. Smith, president of that organization, delivered an address or sermon. He paused in the midst of it to interject the following item of business: "It just comes to my mind that Elder Charles W. Nibley, having been called to the Presiding Bishopric, has been released from the auditing committee, and Bro. Henry H. Rolapp, of Ogden, has been appointed to act in his stead. I would like to submit the name of Bro. Henry H. Rolapp before this meeting for your approval and acceptance to act upon this committee. (Vote unanimous.)"—Millennial Star, May 28. There is something amusing to a member of the Reorganization in the idea of a trustee-in-trust submitting his accounts to an auditing committee of his own selecting. It opens up so many possibilities. Our people are accustomed to appoint the committee that is to audit the accounts of the men who carry the bag, and under such a system the treasurer may at times confront a committee not composed of personal favorites. Any effort on the part of a treasurer to forestall such a contingency may be all right; only you know we are not accustomed to it.

Elder M. F. Gowell would be glad to communicate with Saints having friends in Atchison or Topeka who might welcome the gospel message. Mail addressed to 203 Davies Street, Topeka, or 1114 Walnut Street, Atchison, Kansas, will reach him.

The Evening Chronicle, Spokane, Washington, June 12, has a very favorable mention of our work in that part of the world, together with notice of the then pending district conference.

An exchange contains the following: "Joseph Cowen, an English Zionist leader and a cousin of Israel Zangwill, was recently the guest at a reception in Boston. 'We have at our command a sum of between one million five hundred thousand dollars and two million dollars,' said Mr. Cowen, in an address. 'In July we shall open a branch in Constantinople which will be able to negotiate further concessions with the Sultan. As the Jews would be perfectly prepared to accept the suzerainty of the Sultan political complications need not be feared. A Jewish nation with us does not mean a Jewish kingdom, with an army and a navy. We have no pretension to such things. The Jewish spirit would produce a center of light, or learning and culture. The Jew is for the power of character and the power of learning.'"

THE PROBLEM OF LIFE AND DEATH. RECRIMINATION.

Said Life to Death, "Methinks if I were you I would not carry such an awesome face To terrify the helpless human race. And if, indeed, those wondrous tales be true Of happiness beyond, and if I knew About the boasted blessings of that place, I would not hide so miserly all trace Of my vast knowledge, Death, if I were you. But, like a glorious angel, I would lean Above the pathway of each sorrowing soul, Hope in my eyes and comfort in my breath, And strong convictions in my radiant mien, The while I whispered of that beautiful goal. This would I do, if I were you, O Death!"

Said Death to Life, "If I were you, my friend, I would not lure confiding souls each day With fair false smiles to enter on a way So filled with pain and trouble to the end. I would not tempt those whom I should defend, Nor stand unmoved and see them go astray. Nor would I force unwilling souls to stay Who longed for freedom, were I you, my friend. But, like a tender mother, I would take The weary world upon my sheltering breast And wipe away its tears and soothe its strife. I would fulfill my promises and make My children bless me as they sank to rest, Where now they curse—if I were you, O Life!"

Life made no answer, and Death spoke again: "I would not woo from God's sweet nothingness A soul to being, if I could not bless And crown it with all joy. If unto men My face seems awesome, tell me, Life, why then Do they pursue me, mad for my caress, Believing in my silence lies redress For your loud falsehoods? (So Death spoke again.) Oh, it is well for you I am not fair, Well that I hide behind a voiceless tomb The mighty secrets of that other place. Else would you stand in impotent despair While unfledged souls straight from the mother's womb Rushed to my arms, and spat upon your face."
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

So live, that when thy summons comes to join The innumerable caravan which moves To that mysterious realm where each shall take His chamber in the silent halls of death, Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night, Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave Like one that wraps the drapery of his couch About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.—Bryant.

True as the needle to the pole,
Or as the dial to the sun.—Song.

Elders' Note-Book

HOW CAN WE REACH THE PEOPLE?

Editors Herald: I have neither troubled nor comforted your columns for a long time; but I am not unappreciative as to what you furnish, nor how you serve it. I am far from having any fault to find; I have no complaint as to what is put in or left out; believe good judgment is being used. I am finding satisfaction in my work thus far this conference year.

"How to reach the people," seems to be the continual problem, in city or country. Members as well as missionaries, should be interested in this great question. If all work "together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all," the solution will come to our satisfaction. Let us give our thought to it as branches, where our candlestick is set to be a light to the people. Places of meeting are sometimes out of reach of the people; sometimes they are uninviting. We live often in good houses, rented or owned, with all furnishings, and worship God and expect guests in houses dilapidated and discreditable to the gospel. Thus the missionary work is at a continual disadvantage, though it is "intrusted to all," (Doctrine and Covenants 119:8.)

The cry is for missionaries in many branches. What will you do with them? What will you furnish them in the way of halls or houses where they may publicly represent you according to their calling to those who have not heard, nor never will, if you do not do your part? If you are doing your part, may God bless you and help you to continue; for this is a day of sacrifice. Let us examine ourselves. Do we love the Lord? Do we love the gospel? Do we love our neighbors who have not heard, as well as we love ourselves who have heard? Then let us invite them to places accessible and respectable; or, as it might be put, let places accessible and respectable invite them, as much so as is possible by the blessing of God. The preparation of a house is a part of the preparation, and a very important part of the preparation necessary "to reach the people."

And as all must labor together with God, prayerfulness is essential, not only for the preacher but for the member. In all our work "united we stand, divided we fall." Prayer-meetings are necessary. A throne of grace must be first reached. Think of a branch, district, or church trying to "reach the people" without prayer-meetings. A minimum quantity of prayer-meeting effort will never result in a maximum quantity of success in reaching the people. Shall we not labor together with the end in view of "reaching the people"? Shall we not pray together with this end in view? And shall we not "have faith in God" to believe that he will grant what he tells us to pray for, "thy kingdom come"? We do not walk by sight. From the natural standpoint or viewpoint, we are unequal to any and all difficulties in the warfare against evil. We can not move mountains without faith as a grain of mustard seed. We can not do this; we can not do that—how oft we hear it! Of course we can not. O we "of little faith!" Could the Israelites cross the Red Sea? Not without faith in God, inspired by Moses. Could "one put a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight"? Not without faith. Could the armies of Israel, unarmed, overthrow the walls of Jericho and overcome strong nations in the land of Canaan? Not without faith, inspired by Caleb and Joshua as leaders, who said in a minority report, "We are well able." Can we, Latter Day Saints, do things, which, because of our poverty, we are unable to do? No; not without faith. The worst poverty for a Saint is the poverty of unwillingness. "The willing and obedient" "shall eat the good of the land."—Isaiah 1:19.

Can the Saints pass through famines, wars, pestilences, and many desolations yet to come, without faith? No; but "the just shall live by faith." Can we now do impossibilities? There are no impossibilities with God, and those who have faith in him. "The time has come for the church to arise to its great mission in the world," we have been told. The faith of the ancients should be had by the Latter Day Saints, if the gospel is to be restored. "The days have come, according to men's faith it shall be done unto them."—Doctrine and Covenants 52:5.

Are we not justified, then, in laying our plans to reach the people around us, near us, rather than limiting our faith to our own membership and the natural increase?

May the missionary spirit burn in all branches, and kindle into a flame and a conflagration that shall envelop the world. We have no time to lose. Let us hasten our preparations for the gathering, rather than hasten the gathering.

M. F. GOWELL.

• * * * •

"THE MORMON PUZZLE."

In my search for evidence for and against the church, I found a book called, The Mormon Puzzle, and How to Solve It, by Reverend R. W. Beers, A. M., pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Elkton, Maryland, Funk & Wagnalls, publishers, 1887.

Mr. Beers is very fair in his description of the early Saints. Thinking the missionaries would like this bit of evidence for their scrap-book prompts me to write to the HERALD.

Mr. Beers describes the Saints as they were driven from Missouri and settled in Nauvoo and country round about, prior to their exodus to Salt Lake

City, and before the death of the Prophet in 1844. On pages 48-50 he writes as follows:

"The angel told him to call the city Nauvoo, which he said meant 'The Beautiful.' It was located on the east bank of the Mississippi River, forty miles above Quincy, Illinois; and twenty miles west of Burlington, Iowa. It is situated at a bend of the river on rising ground, which commanded a magnificent view of the Mississippi for many miles. . . .

Nauvoo became the capital of the world, to the Mormons, and attracted general attention. It was changed from a desert into an abode of plenty and luxury. Gardens sprang up as if by magic, fragrant with the most beautiful flowers of the New and Old Worlds, whose seeds had been brought from distant lands as souvenirs to the New Zion; broad streets were laid out, houses erected, and the busy hum of industries was heard in the marts of commerce. Steamboats unloaded their stores, and passengers came, and departed for fresh supplies of merchandise; fields waved with golden harvests, and cattle dotted neighboring hills.

"As might be expected, some adventurers, robbers, and people of a generally disreputable character joined the community to cloak their villainous deeds in mystery and religion. But marvelous to relate, within three years after their expulsion from Missouri, the Mormons had a prosperous city of ten thousand people, while near the city were at least twenty thousand more, and in the United States they numbered about one hundred and fifty thousand, not much less than their present number.

"This city, although peculiar, had many excellent features. There was no licensed place to sell liquors, and drunkenness was almost unknown. It was well governed. All was order and peace. There was great thrift and industry among the people. Loafers or idlers were in disrepute."

Concerning the death of Joseph Smith and those who took part in the assassination, Reverend Beers (pages 51, 52) says, "But on the twenty-seventh of June, 1844, an infuriated mob took matters in their own hands, decided to administer justice after their own fashion, and attacked the jail early in the morning. They broke down the doors of the room where the prisoners were confined, and horribly massacred Joseph and his brother Hyrum. Now, those two were defenseless prisoners, and the governor of the State had pledged to them safe conduct to the jail and before the court. Their murder was nothing else than a most foul assassination, the gravity of which was augmented by the fact that it was perpetrated by those who claimed to be upholders of the law in contradistinction to the Mormons who (they said) desired to set law at defiance. But besides being an act of lawlessness, it was the most impolitic thing that the people could have done. The martyr-like death of Smith threw a mantle of dignity over his person and a halo of consecration around his character that could in no other way have been secured."

May God bless the elders in their fight for right.

Yours in the conflict,

HALE W. SMITH.

Original Articles

CORONATION.

(Baccalaureate sermon, by Elder J. W. Rushton, delivered at Lamoni, Iowa, before the high school graduating class of 1908.)

ELDER J. W. RUSHTON.

We will read for our lesson this morning, a portion of the second chapter of the epistle to the Hebrews, commencing at the sixth verse:

But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of thy hands; thou didst put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man.

For a text, we will take the fifth verse of the second chapter of Paul's second letter to Timothy:

And if a man also strive for masteries, he is not crowned, except he strive lawfully.

This morning, it is my pleasant duty, for the first time in my experience, to bid welcome to these young men and women who have passed through the days of their schooling, and are now to take up their place in the serried ranks of life's forces, in order to spend and be spent for the good of the community at large, and in that secure their place in history; and, we trust to some extent, in the annals of fame.

I can associate myself with parents and relatives and friends of those who are thus honored this morning, in the honor, the joy, the gratitude they must feel that this stage of life has been successfully reached amid all the peculiar circumstances and difficulties that surround the pathway of youth. And doxology must necessarily well up in the heart, and have the first place this morning in our service. Yet it is also our duty and privilege to point out that this joy and pleasure resultant from the accomplishment of this, the primary victory of their efforts, is but in the truest sense a preparation for the sterner tasks and duties of life that are already crowding upon them; and by the grace and help of God, if it may be his will, it is my duty to-day to try to point out not only the possibilities of life, but some of the dangers by which they must necessarily be surrounded.

We have stood upon the shores, or banks, or docks, and seen the ships all gaily bedecked with bunting and flags, surrounded with the laughing throng, and every manifestation of pleasure, leave that dock and set out upon its voyage to some destination in the distance, but in spite of all our joy, and in spite of all our hopes and prayers, it often unfortunately has occurred that the ship has been wrecked upon the cruel rocks that lie hidden, and all the cargo, as well as its humanity, have been swept out of our reach, and it may be out of memory.

Now this is a crude picture of what often occurs in life; sometimes the wreckage occurs because of ignorance, and sometimes because of perversity. But I am one of those standing upon this platform to-day; I do not believe in the doctrine of original sin, in the sense that everything that men and women do is to be traced to original sin. I believe in the manhood of man and I am trying to believe in the womanhood of woman. I believe that there is inherent in every human heart the aspiration "godward"; that there is in every human heart longing for achievement that must have its opportunity, sooner or later, for realization.

Very frequently the wreckage occurs because we have not been able to identify the ideal. Under such circumstances we have necessarily missed the opportunity. But in these days of compulsory education we have been enabled, to some extent, to obliterate these initial difficulties, and give to our children opportunities which were denied to the fathers, grandfathers, mothers, and grandmothers, or even the present and passing generation, and by the means of education, while we have not realized the end, we can at least make our sons and daughters more efficient and capable of realizing the ideal that we have had before us all our days.

We have long since learned the fact that this life is not all; this life is not the end, or goal, or destiny; it is but the workshop, the opportunity in which eternal results are being worked out, and in which divinity is being born. The opportunities we now have are pregnant with everlasting and immortal results. It becomes, therefore, our duty not only to accord our congratulations, but in the spirit of wisdom, and I trust it may be of prophecy, we can outline the future development and the realization of all the hopes and aspirations that have been born of life on the part of parents, brothers, sisters, and anxious friends.

Life, given to us by the Almighty, is not what God makes it, it is what we make it. I have heard some sermons preached on preëxistence; I have read some philosophy on preëxistence, but without being afraid of heresy this morning, I will say that I do not believe God makes "Me,"—"I make Myself." The only thing that can survive is character. Everything else must go, whether it shall be wealth, or property, or estate, or even life, so far as this world is concerned; these are all transient, all evanescent, and but the frailest of dreams. The real thing is personality, and personality is what I make it; and I articulate personality in character, and that is what God recognizes, and in which eternal destiny is realized.

It is the making of character that stands as the essence of all religion; it is the making of character to which all science must do service; it is the making of character to which all the powers of education must lend their aid; it is character that will determine the destiny of the individual, and will determine the destiny of the collective nations, with all their power and with all their glory. In view of this stupendous fact, how essential it is that we should have a right commencement, a clear conception of our duty, and a clear definition of the end in view!

Some people that I have read of seem to have had the idea that education was the end, and that when they had passed through their training in school and, if they have been fortunate, they were privileged to have a college course, and have come out with what they called honors, they concluded that was the end, and the balance of their life was to be lived in pleasure, and in the attempt to satisfy their longings and desires for all that this world can give them. If I do not mistake my duty this morning, I believe I shall be justified in describing that as a heresy, in denouncing it as one of the greatest crimes that can be perpetrated against the common good.

I believe this morning that the noblest aim of education is to assist us as individuals so that others may be benefited, in the giving up of ourselves with all our ability; that by application of all that we have obtained, for the common good of the whole we may thus fulfill our mission. In the language of the Apostle Paul, "For no man liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself." In our living and dying there is either the shattering or the building up of the ideals of others, and I am living for the maintenance of the state only in so far as I am assisting every one to live a happy, healthy life. That is maintenance of the state, that every individual in the state, and under state control and within state jurisdiction shall be "living," not existing. Let us be careful of terms: Existence only is an insult to God, and an insult to man; living is the only thing that God has a right to expect from us, and health and happiness are the immediate blossoms and fruitage of our living. In living I am an asset; in existing I am a debt of the race.

Now, you will move out from the experience of school days, you will leave the environment of books and slates and pencils, paper and ink, and enter into the active warfare in which the struggle for existence is dominant, calling for all the energy and determination and courage and even the spirit of martyrdom that can be mustered. Unfortunately, to-day, we believe that these qualities are only essential for some special kinds of education, and many of our aristocratic families are honored only by such employment as soldiering, lawyering, preaching, and that the ordinary "trade" is beneath their dignity, and if there should be any one fortunate enough to pass out of the realm of the commonplace into that aristocratic circle by reason of their success in trade, they experience, more or less, that feeling of superiority exercised by the aristocrats, in the supercilious patronage of those who have succeeded in the commonplace of trade or business.

Why should the soldier alone have his heroism? Why should the preacher alone have his day of martyrdom? Why should we expect the lawyer only to give us justice professionally? Is it not to-day a fact that the greatest of all injustice, that the most gigantic of all our tragedies is because we have not learned to inculcate a sense of honor in the baking of bread and the brewing of beer, or in the production of all the common commodities of life? It is true that we honor the soldier, not so much because he slays, as because he is willing to be slain. We do not think so much about the bravado or swash-buckler as we think about the man who holds his life at the disposition of the state, who holds his life as valueless that the state may be saved. We read with growing wonder of the martyrdom of John Hooper, Wyckliffe, and others, the men who have made history, but why should the preacher any more than the baker have his place of martyrdom? It is the minister's duty to die rather than suffer truth to become obscured. It is the duty of every minister to hold the cause of righteousness as the supremest of all things; but not his only.

Why should the lawyer be expected to deal out to you justice at the rate of seven and six pence a time? Why should the judge be expected to distribute justice, and not these ordinary men of trade and of business, whose duty it is to provide for the wants of the nation? All require their sacrifices, their martyrdoms, their heroisms. The fault is not with them so much; the fault is with the public. You get what you demand, and if you undertake to make these men believe that the only want they have is for dividend, they live up to your ideal.

Now, from out of this school to-day, I trust, by the help of God, we will have a new ideal erected, which shall be one of righteousness and truth, and whether these young men and maidens shall take their position in the world as soldiers or preachers or lawyers, or whether they become ordinary tradesmen, or ordinary stenographers, or ordinary housewives, they will do their work for the honor that is at stake in their business. Do not think now that I am despising pay. I am not. Pay is all right, but the origin of the word pay is honorarium. You were not expected at one time to take your pay without honor. The fee of the lawyer is "honorarium." The fee of the parson is "honorarium." Why should there not be "honorarium" in the common duties of life? Let us not put all our aspirations upon the forensic or rhetorical abilities, and upon all these glories of the professions, and discriminate against the "glories" of the trade and commerce.

We are living in an age that is bubbling with new desires, we are living in an age when the power of youth has been renewed, when the dreams and visions of a new world are upon us, and when all the powers of the present age are being consecrated to the emancipation of the victimized slaves of capitalization. We live in an age of prophecy, when man's rights shall be held dearer than all the dividends of men, and the manhood of the poor shall be recognized as of equal value at least with the property of the rich. We depend upon you. Our day is fleeting. We have given up all we have to the good of the present age. The accomplishments and achievements of the past are gathered here, and this burden must sooner or later be imposed upon you, and for you to take hold of these duties, responsibilities, and tasks without due consideration, means not only defeat to you, but the wrecking of them, and the falling in humiliation and disgrace of all the aspirations of mothers and fathers and the past generations.

You stand in a peculiar position to-day. Not only are you heir to all that is past, whether they shall be the victories of a Nelson, or the victories of a Dewey, the colonization of Africa, or the colonization of the Philippines, the glorious history of Great Britain, or the magnificent history of America, the new-born world; the past is yours to use, yours to develop, yours to consummate the visions of these past heroes of the nation that have been victorious, yours to develop the seed that enshrines their blossom and their fruitage.

Not only are you heir to all that is past, but,— I charge you in the name of God to remember it,— you become a new starting point for a future generation, and as much as your lives have been shaped by the past, so will your immediate future be the necessary, logical outcome of the way you approach this responsibility, in which the lives to come will be equally influenced. I am heir to all that is passed, it is true. I glory in it. But I am myself the starting point of a new generation, and it is my duty, my privilege, and my religion to see to it that I shall commence rightly and continue properly in order that I may be crowned.

These are the common things of life that are devolving upon you from now onward. Your education is of value in so far as it enables you to realize these ideals; your education is valueless in so far as it fails you at this critical point. Either you will do honor to your teaching, or you will dishonor it. I am honored in the propagation of my principles by those who follow me, in the way in which these principles are inculcated. My teachers are honored in so far as I do justice to the righteousness of their teaching. Your teachers are honored in so far as you do that which is right and pure.

The ideal of God regarding man should be our first duty, and to express that ideal was the work of the Master; God was humanized in him, that man might be "divinized." You can not sin without influencing others in your sin; you can not do good without influencing others in your goodness. The life of the convent and the monastery is an everlasting disgrace, a stain upon the history of mankind, for man can not isolate himself. Those men, who in the fullness of their youthful energy, and the indomitable will of their manhood, will slave for the advancement of the race, they only have moral value, even though at times they have failed and have known the bitterness of defeat. God made you for that. Where man is enslaved you have man wrecked. Where man is enslaved you have the ideal of God obscured. What is man, that thou art mindful of him? He puts them in contrast, "When I consider the heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained; What is man, that thou art mindful of him? The poet puts man in contrast with the galaxies and constellations and systems of heaven, these that have been thundering through space for generations and centuries. Man is here to-day and gone to-morrow, but a weed that shakes upon the stream of life, and for a brief moment remains, and then passes on. What is man in the face of that? We look upon the Alpine ranges and see their summits crowned with everlasting snow. Before that snow came we were not, and before it melts we shall not be. What is man? What are the opportunities afforded him? Man is found fit to be the companion of God. Now, What is man? Thou art mindful of him! What is man? Thou visitest him! Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and crowned him with glory and honor! Do not forget your crown! Crowned with "glory and honor," that he should have dominion over the works of thy hands. The ideal has failed us. God help us. This writer to the Hebrews calls attention to it: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? What is man that thou visitest him? Thou hast made him to have dominion over all the works of thine hands." But now, says the writer, we see not man having dominion. No. Man is enslaved and affeared and affrighted by the very things of which he ought to be master.

But our redemption is being worked out. We see men now taking hold of the forces of nature and imprisoning the force of steam in the locomotive which carries our commerce from one end of the globe to the other. We can see him taking hold of the lightnings of God and fastening them to the wheels of progress. He is unsealing the doors of mystery and making the mystery reveal itself and give to him its inmost secret. But in all this man has not made the progress that God intended. He stands aghast or in doubt at the door of spiritual mystery. "The secret things belong to the Lord, our God, but the revealed things are ours, and our children's for ever." Your knowledge increases with your ability to use what you have, and that usage will be the key to unlock the door of the unknown.

Man has always been surrounded with mystery. There was a time when this world was bounded by the ne plus ultra of Gibraltar's rock. There was a time when the northern pole enthroned in everlasting ice and crowned by the aurora borealis was full of foreboding.

The doors of mystery are unfolding, and we are now penetrating into the very heart of these things. These ponderosities of nature are yielding their wealth of power to puny, finite man, blessed with a magnificent brain and a more magnificent divinity. They all reveal to us God's ideal of man. Think of it. They reveal the divine ideal of man. He was made to have dominion, but now we see no man having dominion. Through his ignorance, his perversity, he has been enslaved. But, says the writer, we see Jesus who, by suffering and death, was crowned, that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. There you have the secret of my lesson this morning. Crowning success. No man, says the apostle, is crowned except he strive lawfully. Man has realized the first half of that. They are striving, the cruel competition of the world is the result of their striving. But, says the apostle, the striving must be lawful. And here is where we are failing to-day. We are striving, but the striving is without law, and because it is without law there is no crowning. Crowning is symbolic. A coronation is a magnificent symbol. It means the selection of a man upon whom the whole community confers its authority to rule, and guide, and lead them.

Coronation: No man is divinely crowned except he strive lawfully. Coronation: Man was made for crowning. Man was made for divine coronation. He has missed it because he missed the lawful striving. We see Jesus crowned. He did the lawful striving. Now, what does it all mean? We see Jesus, by the grace of God, tasting death for every man, and crowned. There is the way to coronation. There is the way to crowning. The acceptance of death to our individual interests in the endeavor to conserve the interests of the race is the divine pathway to royalty.

Let me call my young friends' attention to the fact, that you have reached the age when the mind is flooded with new visions, the heart is throbbing with new passions; new emotions, that are altogether new, are now surging up. You are amazed by them, and if you do not know how to control them they will rule you and become the masters.

Here is the point: Every mountain of transfiguration, every psychic moment of divine revelation is followed immediately by some of the oncoming forces of evil which seek to spoil it. Taking the case of Peter, the very day he had seen the glory of God revealed in Jesus Christ, Jesus said to him, "Get thee behind me, Satan." The very day that Jesus had been immersed in the waters of baptism and of the Spirit, he went up into the wilderness and was pursued by the forces of evil. That is the common experience. Every moment of ecstasy, every moment of joy and glory is followed immediately by the powers of evil, seeking to spoil the vision.

Jesus was met by this very evil which will confront you sooner or later, as it confronts us day by day. "If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." "All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." Come up hither, and if thou be the Son of God, cast thyself from the pinnacle. These make the trinity of trials that will confront you. There will be bread, office, and honor offered to you, if you will be recreant to the trust of your own conscience. This is where manhood and womanhood must shine forth, and where the reality of the present education will reveal itself, in standing fast to the ideal of divinity, the manhood of man and the womanhood of woman, in resisting the flattering prospect of position and of trust rather than by being dishonored. If ever there was a day when this was needed it is now. Bread, office, and trusts have made your wars, have made your tragedies, have made your misery.

To-day America needs this more than any country I know. Until the day shall dawn that America can produce Americans with this ideal of honor and conscience, you will be at the mercy of the alien, with all his mercenary designs and cupidity uncontrolled.

Let there be a new starting-point to-day from this place, that these bribes shall not cause one to deviate from the tasks of duty and honor. Whether it shall be as soldier, lawyer, or physician, as preacher, or as common commercial men, the soldier's ideal should be the ideal of all, to suffer death rather than leave his post in battle, the minister's ideal to die rather than suffer truth to become obscured, the lawyer's to starve rather than make justice abortive; the man of commerce to fail rather than sell goods that are not genuine, goods that are adulterated, at a price which is an injustice either to the seller or purchaser. I would rather see six pence lost than honor lost. And while war has its heroes, for God's sake let us now have the heroism of trade, and in this these young men and women can go out into the world with a disposition that will bring the kingdom of God in deed and in truth, and Christ will say to his Father, "These are my jewels."

Of General Interest

THE MURRAY DEBATE AS SEEN BY THE BRIGHAMITE PRESS.

The people in Murray have been treated, recently, to a debate on the question of succession to the leadership of the church. Needless to say, the discussion was arranged on the urgent request of some representatives of the "Reorganized Church," whose forte is wrangling.

We do not as a rule approve of such disputes, for the simple reason that they very seldom are productive of any good. The purpose of such discussions ought to be to arrive at knowledge through an impartial comparison of arguments. But our Reorganite friends never enter into a debate for the purpose of establishing truth. They appear in the arena as champions of their own cause, right or wrong. They are combatants, instead of reasoners, sometimes badly beaten in argument and sometimes, perhaps, getting the best of it, like any slugger who happens to meet a less skillful antagonist.

A true thinker doesn't argue in support of a preconceived idea, but looks upon debate as a method of discovering truth. If you prove to him that he is wrong, he accepts that as a favor, for which he is grateful, because it is truth he is after and not dogma. An argument with a true philosopher would be of benefit to the participants and the audience, but there are, as far as we know, no men among the Reorganites of the type of Socrates, a Montaigne, or a Herbert Spencer. Their champions are special pleaders and nothing else. They are not open to conviction.

The question of succession is a question of an historical fact principally. And for the establishment of the fact we must now rely on witnesses. The Reorganites rely on the statements of their president, of Lyman Wight, James Whitehead, John L. Carter, and William Smith. But against these witnesses stand Brigham Young, Wilford Woodruff, Bathsheba W. Smith, Benjamin F. Johnson, and many others. We refer the reader to "Origin of the Reorganized Church," by Elder Joseph F. Smith, Jr. No one who is capable of weighing testimony and is willing to know the truth, will have any difficulty in recognizing on which side the truth is.

There would have been no difficulty on succession, but for the unfortunate fact that the Reorganite leaders have fallen into the error that the church could be transmitted by inheritance, like a flock of cattle. But the church never was the property of any man. It is the Lord's, and he appoints the leaders and shepherds of the flock, according to his own mind and will. If our Reorganite brethren could divest themselves of the delusion that the church can be "owned" by mortal man, they would not find the question of succession difficult of solution.

There was some excuse for different opinions on that question, at the time of the martyrdom of the Prophet. At that time it was perfectly legitimate to discuss the question from every point of view, and to urge the acceptance of available candidates for leadership. But when the mind and will of the Lord had been made manifest through the action of the majority, the question was settled for ever. To illustrate: When a political campaign is on, it is legitimate to work for different candidates; but when the matter is settled, loyalty demands obedience to the will of the majority. When the people have elected a president, the minority must accept him, or be branded as traitors. There is where the Reorganites err. They refuse to accept the mind and will of the Lord, as expressed through the action taken by his people, and they are, therefore, in rebellion against the Lord.—Deseret Evening News, June 13, 1908.

* * * * *

THE MURRAY DEBATE AS SEEN BY THE GENTILE PRESS.

Representatives of both factions of the church founded by Joseph Smith have just concluded a debate of three sessions at Murray upon the legality of the leadership of both branches, and the unprejudiced listener could not avoid the conclusion that Elder J. F. Curtis brought what is called the Reorganized branch out of the controversy with flying colors and in unmistakable triumph.

While the discussion and its results may not be of very great interest to the bulk of the public, the established conclusions involve some conditions of importance to the Mormon people. If it be true, as Mr. Curtis unquestionably showed it to be, that the Utah or polygamous faction are without legal standing and without proper authority under the original laws of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, then every act of this branch is invalidated. Under these circumstances, even the officiating in the temples are of no avail: the "work for the dead" is vitiated; plural marriage has not even the sanction of the orthodox Mormon faith. The whole structure is without foundation. . . .

Now, the contention of Mr. Curtis was that young Joseph Smith had been selected and indicated by his father to succeed to the presidency when there should be a vacancy. Mr. Curtis quoted the Doctrine and Covenants to show that this action was in accordance with revelation, which provided that the successor to Joseph could be named by no other than Joseph—that upon the Prophet rested the sole authority to indicate who should be the succeeding holder of the prophetic office. At that time young Joseph was but twelve years old, and a strong-willed man like Brigham Young was easily able to suppress the lad's claim. . . .

Granting that Joseph Smith had the right, under revelation, to name his successor, then Brigham Young was a usurper, and all of his successors in the presidency have been illegitimate; the Utah church is without standing, and every act of that body is without authority under church law and is apostate. These conclusions Elder Curtis seems to have established to the satisfaction of any unprejudiced mind. In fact, President Joseph F. Smith himself has said the same thing as to the irregularity of the succession.

There were some other incidents of the debate which hold considerable interest. One was the defense of the doctrine of blood-atonement, or human sacrifice, set up by Elder Jacob A. Eades, of West Jordan, who appeared for the Brighamite side. When Elder Curtis declared blood-atonement to have been one of the false doctrines introduced after the death of Joseph, Elder Eades flew to the defense of that teaching by attempting to justify it in the Bible. At first he denied that the doctrine had ever existed in the Brighamite church; but when Mr. Curtis produced authoritative sermons of the Brighamite leaders in positive refutation of the denial, Mr. Eades was driven to defense. And such justification as he was able to find, Elder Eades produced, in practical admission that the bloody and murderous doctrine was taught in Utah. Another incident was the unqualified defense of polygamy that Mr. Eades made. He did not attempt to say that the practice or the doctrine had been done away with, but launched right out in an effort to establish its righteousness, just as if the doctrine and practice of polygamy were now admittedly extant in the church, and as if there was no thought of abandoning them. The other, and most regrettable incident, was an unseemly interruption of Elder Curtis by an over-zealous young woman in the audience, a member of the Mormon church and a singer in the ward choir. This, together with frequent scoffings by men in the assembly on the last night, too plainly indicated the spirit of intolerance and low-browed bigotry that prevails among certain fanatics among the priest-ridden people of Utah. The occurrence did no credit to the Mormon people, and Elder Curtis behaved himself so well throughout all that his mental superiority was brought out in bold significance.

While there was no attempt to render any decision upon the merits of either side of the controversy, the candid, intelligent mind must necessarily have been with Elder Curtis in the debate.—Salt Lake Tribune, June 12, 1908.

THE DES MOINES PLAN.

Those interested in plans that will improve city government and take it out from under the grip of partisan politics may care to read a concise statement of the Des Moines plan of city government now being experimented with in two cities in Iowa, namely, Des Moines and Cedar Rapids. The following outline is quoted from the May Chautauquan, for June, 1908. Originally it appeared in the New Jersey Law Journal.

Under the charter the entire affairs of the city of Des Moines are conducted by a mayor and four councilmen, all elected at large, without regard to ward or other sectional lines, and, what is more important, without regard to party lines. A primary election was held in the city in February to select candidates for the five offices, and an election at which the voters made a choice between the candidates selected at the primaries was held in March. At neither the primary nor final election, however, was there anything on the tickets to indicate what ward or section any candidate came from, or of what party he was a member. The non-partisan election is probably the most unique feature of the Des Moines charter, whether it is the most important or not. The primary election is held the second Monday preceding the general municipal election. Any citizen who desires to be a candidate for the office of either mayor or councilman files a petition signed by not less than twenty-five legal voters ten days before the primary, stating the office for which he desires nomination. There is only one ticket in either the primary or general election. In the primaries the names of all the candidates are arranged, alphabetically, under the name of the office for which they are candidate. . . .

The two mayoralty candidates and the eight councilmanic candidates receiving the highest number of votes become the official nominees, and their names, and no other names, are printed on the ballot at the general election, in the same way as at the primary elections, the voters at the general election choosing between the two mayoralty nominees, and voting for any four of the eight councilmanic nominees. This plan is expected to discourage any attempt to manipulate the primaries in the interest of any candidates or set of candidates.

Under the charter the mayor and all the councilmen are elected for two years. Under the recall, which is a feature of the charter, a special election to unelect any one of these five officials must be held at any time it is demanded by a petition of twenty-five per cent of the number of voters who voted for mayor at the last election. The same method of nominating and electing as in the regular election is to prevail in a special recall election, excepting that the official whose recall, or removal from office, is demanded shall have his name printed on the primary ballots without petition, unless he asks that it be left off. In case of a vacancy arising because of death or resignation, the remaining members make an appointment to fill the vacancy. The mayor and four councilmen thus elected are to govern the city. The mayor is chairman of the council, but has no veto power, although he or two of the councilmen must sign any resolution or ordinance before it becomes effective. The executive and administrative powers, authority, and duties in the government are distributed among five departments. These are the departments of public affairs, accounts and finances, public safety, streets and public improvements, and parks and public property. In Des Moines the council is to take over and distribute among these five departments all the powers and duties now held or performed by the mayor, city council, board of public works, park commissioners, board of police, and fire commissioners, board of water-works trustees, board of library trustees, solicitor, assessor, treasurer, auditor, city engineer, and other boards and officers. Under the charter, the mayor is made the head of the department of public affairs. Each councilman is assigned to the chairmanship of one of the other four departments, the assignments being made by a majority vote of the council. The mayor has a vote in the council. All the offices are filled by appointment by a majority vote of the council, and the council prescribes the powers, duties, and authority of each department and department head. Any officer or assistant named by the council may be removed from office at any time by a majority vote.

The salary of the mayor of Des Moines, under the new charter, will be three thousand five hundred dollars a year, and the councilmen will receive three thousand dollars a year each. No franchise grant of any kind made by the council is to be effective until it has been approved by a majority vote of the voters of the city at a special election. All the ordinances, excepting those of an emergency nature, which must receive two thirds vote of the council, are subject to a popular protest and referendum. Such ordinances are not to go into effect until ten days after their passage. If, within such ten days, a protest and demand for a referendum vote is filed by twenty-five per cent of the voters, the question of its adoption is referred to a special election. A majority vote against the measure in such an election acts as a veto. If twenty-five per cent of the voters of the city petition for the passage of any resolution or ordinance, and the council fails or refuses to pass such measure in the form it is presented, within twenty days after the filing of the petition, the question of its adoption must be referred to a popular vote at a special election called on ninety days' notice. If, at such election, the measure petitioned for receives a majority vote in its favor, it becomes effective without further action by the council.

• * * * •

EVIL HABITS.

We are told, "Evil shall slay the wicked: and they that hate the righteous shall be desolate."—Psalm 34: 21.

When we look back at the history of the past, we behold great multitudes who have been slain upon the battle-fields, while engaged in war. Many have been slain by the power of disease, and many others by accident. But the largest numbers among the slain are those who have been slain by the power of evil habits. Evil habits have always been arrayed against the best interests of mankind, in all ages of the past. They have pulled down many mighty ones from the throne of usefulness and respectability into the very slums of infamy and degradation. Evil habits are no respecters of persons. In fact, they make an effort to intrude themselves into every life.

Satan has many ways by which he tries to blight the hopes and happiness of men; and, when he fails on other lines, he tempts them to indulge in some evil habit that is contrary to nature, and a violation of divine law.

When we contemplate the number who have been slain by the power of evil habits, we behold a great army, which no man can number. As we go among those now living upon the earth, we find many with diseased bodies, poverty-stricken, homeless, destitute, and sad, without hope for time or eternity. When we investigate the cause for such a sad calamity, in the majority of instances we find such lives the result of evil habits. Many evil habits upon first sight appear to be harmless. Many boys and girls begin to acquire them, unconscious of the effects that are sure to follow. A boy, when very young, happens to hear some man use some slang byword, and he becomes impressed that it is manly to repeat such a word. He commences to repeat it, and before he is aware of it, the habit has been formed, and he is using a phrase with a meaning that slays the use of better language.

But few boys learn to use a profane oath until they have learned to use words bordering on profanity. Many boys have been led, and are being led step by step, in the use of such language, until they have reached a point where they take the name of God in vain, without blushing. When a boy has learned to delight in profane words, his usefulness has been destroyed, his words are repulsive to all good and intelligent people. Among the many evil habits that are hindering the progress of men, there is perhaps none but what is based upon a better excuse than the one great evil of profanity. It does not recommend itself to the favorable consideration of any one. I have never known or heard of any one making money by the use of profanity. Those who indulge in the use of profane words, serve the Devil. It is a positive violation of the divine command, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."—Exodus 20: 7.

Next I want to notice the evil of intemperance, another great evil that has slain its millions. Saints, and every one else, should abstain from the use of strong drinks. They are condemned by the Lord; and that is sufficient. Comment is unnecessary.

Next I will speak of the evil of using tobacco, an evil that is slaying great multitudes of the inhabitants of the earth. Will you follow us in the investigation of the tobacco evil? I am not unmindful of the fact that when we raise our voice against the tobacco habit we are fighting against a very great multitude who are devoted slaves to its use. Tobacco is the master, and many are its servants. It commands, and they obey. It says, Go, and they go. It is leading many in whatever direction it seems to choose. When once thoroughly under the power of its influence, but few have made their escape. The tobacco weed has more lovers than has Christ, and more worshipers than the God of the universe. It says to the student, You can not make progress in your studies without my consent. It says to the minister of the gospel, Let me soothe your nerves, while you study the word of God. It says to all, Let me be your company.

My observation has taught me that all classes of humanity, from the highest to the lowest, have been brought under the influence of the evil of the nicotine found in tobacco. It is said God created man in his own likeness, and in his own image. That he understood his business perfectly, when he made man, surely no Latter Day Saint, or any one else, will call in question. He endowed man with the essential organs in the human body, that were necessary to life and happiness. Did you ever stop to think how the first chew of tobacco affects the human body? In a few minutes the person taking the tobacco turns deathly sick; the earth reels like a drunken man. Vomiting is the only relief. Why does he turn sick? It is because there is some organ in his nature that protests against it, and a severe conflict takes place in the human body; tobacco fighting to subdue an essential organ of the human body; and the organ, not willing to yield, makes a desperate struggle against the tobacco. The result is a sick body. The organ is exhausted and weakened. It only takes a few chews or smokes to weaken the organ till it is finally destroyed, and tobacco takes possession and proceeds with its business, which is to assume control of the man or woman, and transmit to the offspring; and the next generation is born almost destitute of one essential organ, caused by the use of tobacco in the parent. We are told in Exodus 20: 5 that the iniquity of the fathers is to be visited upon the children to the third and fourth generation. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption."—Galatians 6: 7, 8. The generation before us sowed tobacco in their human bodies, and they are now reaping a harvest of cigarette smokers, which are filling the asylums and the penitentiaries with young men, to say nothing of the suicides committed annually by those who have been bound under an influence over which they had no control. What will the next generation bring, unless there be a change? A crop of idiots, I am pretty sure.

Now, some one that knows, please tell me what a confirmed tobacco-user is good for. He is not fit to be a father; as he would transmit his evil habit to his offspring. He is not fit nor competent for the United States army, consequently those who are seeking for volunteers refuse them. Men in commercial business refuse them. Poor fellows, I pity them. They are compelled to reap what others have sown. Many of them are so under the influence of tobacco, they can not be contented without some in their mouths.

There is a great deal in habit. We should form good and correct habits. Our habits are carrying us upward, or downward. Good habits move us upward, and bad habits move us downward. Once I heard a politician tell a little story that will illustrate my point. A certain class of men had been led astray by a political schemer, and his teaching was carrying them speedily in the wrong direction. They had tied themselves to his teachings. The illustration was this: A steer was grazing in the meadow on the side of the hill, with a large rope tied to his horns. While it was quietly feeding, the boy for amusement tied the other end of the rope around his body. At that particular moment the steer became frightened and started with great speed for the foot of the hill. The only thing the poor boy could do was to run with all his might, and keep up with the steer. On his way he met a man who cried out, "Where are you going, my friend?" The answer was, "Don't ask me; ask the steer." The steer was in the lead, and had full control.

Now, dear Saints, are you tied to some bad habit? If you are, it is not necessary to ask where you are going. We will just ask the habit where it is leading you. Time and space does not permit me to mention all the bad habits we are heir to in this life; but I hope all that read this article will stop and think, and correct all their bad habits, as fast as they can. And remember, God has spoken right out to us, and warned us against the use of tobacco and stonk drinks, and evil of all kinds. Let us be led by the Spirit of God, then we will be the sons of God. The Spirit of God is to lead us into all truth; so remember, Saints, when we indulge in bad habits, we are not being led by the Spirit of the Master, and we should repent at once and forsake all our evil habits. Help us, Lord, to do thy will.

C. L. SNOW.

• * * * *

I do not find that the age or country makes the least difference; no, nor the language the actors spoke, nor the religion which they professed, whether Arab in the desert or Frenchman in the academy. I see that sensible men and conscientious men all over the world were of one religion.—Emerson.

• * *

The world is a comedy to those that think, a tragedy to those that feel.—Horace Walpole.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. F. M. Smith, secretary, 630 South Crysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. E. Etzenhouser, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Are We Thinking?

Is there a parent or guardian in the church who is not interested in our one educational institution, Graceland? one who does not desire to see it advance rapidly in its sphere of usefulness until prepared to extend a helping hand to each boy, each girl seeking to fit himself or herself for greater usefulness? If only the church membership will take time to think, we do not believe a single one will be found to answer in the negative.

For the purpose of awaking thought, not only in the church at large, but especially in those having immediate control of Graceland, we have selected from a recent number of the Outlook the following interesting sketch of what is being done by others in placing within the reach of ambitious boys and girls all the advantages of a good education. It is certainly worth the perusal, if but to see what economy and coöperation can accomplish. If results like these can be obtained by two individuals of moderate means, what ought to be accomplished by the church? What is the keynote to the situation, to the one great factor of advancement and success? Philips Brooks has said, "It does not take great men to do great things, it only takes consecrated men." Ah, truer words than these were never uttered; and if only those who have entered into covenant with Christ were truly consecrated—willing to serve, willing to spend and be spent in his cause, in the service of humanity, is there any limit to the good which might be accomplished?

Living and Learning for Thirty-eight Cents a Day.

"Who would believe, without actual demonstration, that it is possible to prepare an abundant, well-cooked, and wholly satisfactory dinner of four courses, and serve it on a neat, linen-covered, flower-decorated table, in a warm, light, well-ventilated hall, for the relatively insignificant sum of ten cents?" But Mr. George Kennan, in an article in McClure's Magazine, writes of an institution where the feat is performed daily, not as an act of charity or a sociological demonstration, but as a straightforward business transaction. The institution is the second largest university in the United States, which many readers will doubtless be surprised to learn is situated at Valparaiso, Indiana. Not only is the regular price for dinner ten cents, but breakfast and supper costs only four cents each, a good bed in a single furnished room five cents a day, and tuition fifteen cents a day. So at Valparaiso University, which has an enrollment of over five thousand, second only to Harvard, students of both sexes can obtain board, lodging, and higher education for thirty-eight cents a day, or about one hundred and twenty-five dollars a year—less than the average American college charges for tuition alone. "The first meal that I took in the Valparaiso University," says Mr. Kennan, "was a four-cent breakfast, served at six a. m., in Heritage Hall. It consisted of delicious apple-sauce, bread and butter, rolled oats, baked potatoes, coffee with milk and sugar, and big red apples of the highest market grade. Everything was unlimited in quantity, and I began the day with as good and hearty a meal as any student need desire." It might be noted, in passing, that the breakfast hour in itself sets the University in a class alone among American colleges. Who could imagine a student at Yale, or Princeton, or Amherst, or Cornell, breakfasting daily at six o'clock? Mr. Kennan's first supper at the University was eaten in another hall, and cost four cents. It consisted of hot tea-biscuits, French fried potatoes, steamed rice, baked apples with sugar and milk, stewed peaches, gingerbread, and tea. "Everything," says Mr. Kennan, "was as good as it would have been in a well-managed private household." The dinner menus, samples of which are given by Mr. Kennan, are at least as good as those provided at the average college boarding-house, where the cost of board is probably never less than four times the cost at Valparaiso. The meals are served in the different dining-halls to from six hundred to over a thousand students at a time. The serving is done by student helpers, who receive their board free in turn for their service.

HOW IT IS DONE.

The secret of the low prices at which such appetizing food can be furnished lies partly in management and partly in the elimination of middlemen and the purchase of raw foodstuffs in large quantities. Constant attention is paid to the smallest economies, such as the saving and selling of table and kitchen leavings and refuse, the buying of sorted potatoes of uniform size, and the cutting of bread in thin slices. The purpose of this last custom is not, as might at first appear, economy in the use of bread, but economy in the use of other more expensive kinds of food. Bread—one of the cheapest articles of food—is cut very thin in order to tempt students to eat more of it. The University obtains its raw food material at low prices in several ways. It has seven acres of garden, cultivated mainly by students, where vegetables are raised with great economy. Other things are grown by local farmers under a form of contract which gives the farmer a fair and certain profit and the University a good supply of the vegetables at a very low price. In buying the staple food materials the University buys by the ton or car-load direct from importers, jobbers, or wholesale dealers. Flour in five-hundred-barrel lots comes directly from the Minnesota mills; coffee is obtained by the ton from importers, at about fifteen cents a pound; and fresh meat is bought by the dressed carcass from local farmers and from the Chicago packing-houses, at from six to nine cents per pound for beef. "In a recent letter to the San Francisco Argonaut," says Mr. Kennan, "President Benjamin Ide Wheeler reported the case of a poor student in the University of California, who slept on a third-story stair landing, and by living on 'skim milk and old bread, balanced with a little fruit and meat,' reduced the cost of his daily food to twenty cents a day. For only two cents more—that is, for twenty-two cents a day—he might have had in Valparaiso a good bed in a furnished room and three excellent meals." Students are housed at the University almost as economically as they are fed. In the older dormitories a furnished room for two occupants costs sixty cents a week, and a sitting-room and bedroom one dollar a week. In the newest dormitory a suite of two rooms with hot and cold water and heat costs one dollar a week each for two occupants. At these rates the dormitories give a return of from six to eight per cent on the money invested in them. The University has no endowment. It was started thirty-four years ago by two comparatively poor men. Out of the profits on food, shelter, and instruction, furnished at the absurdly low rates already given, the managers have acquired fifty acres of land, have bought or erected nine substantial buildings, have earned and saved nearly a million dollars, and have created a university which has a staff of one hundred and sixty-two professors and instructors, and which gives educational training to more than five thousand students of both sexes. The educational side of the work is another story. There, too, are put in practice many practical, common-sense ideas which might be studied with interest and perhaps with profit by other institutions of learning. But on the purely business side the University presents a demonstration which should give many hints to those who are searching for a solution of the very difficult problem of living under present conditions.—Outlook, March 21, 1908.

Request for Prayers.

Sr. Susan I. Lindsey, Onawa, Iowa, asks prayers in behalf of a grandchild, Violet Mabel Toy, who is feeble-minded and is a great care on their hands. They desire that she be healed if it be the will of God.

Letter Department

PORTLAND, Oregon, June 6, 1908.

Editors Herald: We desire to say to the Saints and ministry of Oregon that we are here to cooperate with them another year in the great harvest which we are privileged to labor in. There is a place for every one to occupy without crowding and the locality is where God has permitted you to occupy, until the way is open for a change, at least.

Let every soul consecrate himself to God's service and let the prayer be, "Lord, what can I do?" Then with stout hearts proceed to the work, whether to hold up the hands of others or to sow the seed by preaching, tract distributing, or otherwise. All is necessary and all will be rewarded according to the good they do.

If we can not do a great work in the eyes of the people, remember we are not amenable to them, nor do we get our wage or living from them. Let us avoid the folly of laying up for ourselves shame and disgrace by speaking disparagingly of the efforts of others, by which we may prejudice the minds of the people against either ourselves or others. It will not make us one bit bigger to make them appear smaller, but in the final reckoning we will find that we have been but plucking plumes from our own crown and adding luster to theirs. We trust all will cast out the spirit of jealousy and envy and that all will grow big enough to fill the niche open for them.

Let us hear from you Saints who want work done as to what we can do to strengthen your hands. Bro. John Moore, of Condon, will gladly respond to calls from Eastern Oregon and will also receipt for tithes from that section. I will receive mail through the Portland office, general delivery, for the present, and will notify of any change.

May the Lord help us to become his by a proper love and labor together as one people, in my prayer,

S. D. CONDIT.

JONESBORO, Arkansas.

Editors Herald: I am where I have no church privileges and have not had them for years; and I feel to-day as though I must say something. I have often thought and felt that if I was so situated financially I would like to devote a part or all of my time to this noble work; but always this would come to me: "Seek ye first the kingdom of heaven and the other shall be added thereunto." I haven't heeded as I should. Why we as a people keep persisting and still staying in the same old rut I can not tell, when we know that by being "obedient to God's laws" what the results will be. We are careless with our tithing. We ought to contribute as we are commanded. If we disobey the laws of the land we know what the outcome will be.

Although there are lawyers and law makers that have a way of getting around the laws of the land, not so with God's laws. They are the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever. The Bible says of God that he is unchangeable. (Malachi 3:6.) Also in James 1:17 it directly declares the same thing of Christ. (See Hebrews 12:8; 1:12.) God Christ, and the Holy Ghost are one. (See 1 John 5:7; 1 Peter 1:25.) Can we or do we disbelieve those statements? No. Can any one tell why we are so eager for gain when it plainly states in Matthew 16:26: "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Now if there is anything the matter we should examine ourselves. If we are not getting along as we should I will assure you it is our own fault.

I say to the young, we should be more diligent and study the word of God, so we may know what we believe, then when any one speaks to us about our belief, we will not have to blush and get away, as I have done and others that I know. It may be, however, that we are more to be pitied than blamed, for it may be that circumstances have partly forced us to be so situated, but God has plainly said in Mark 8:38, "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and my words in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he comes in the glory of his Father with the holy angels."

Christ was crucified. Who for and why? For God and his people, and because he was delivering God's message. Why is Joseph Smith scoffed at and persecuted? Because he is delivering the message of God through Christ to the children of men and the honest in heart. If any one should make light of your belief, do not retaliate, but quietly turn to their Bible and present your claims which will stand for themselves. Do not blame others for not seeing as you see. Perhaps they have been born of just as honest and virtuous parents as you have, but reared along other lines of belief. You have no need to make any apology for your belief, because you believe in the doctrine that Joseph Smith teaches. Some will say, "Well, I can not go Joe Smith." It was just the same way in Christ's time. They said, "We can not go Christ's teachings." As he was acting as agent for God, Joseph Smith to-day is acting agent for God through Christ. Some will say Joseph Smith is no more than other men. With a little study you can disprove this. One thing you do know, and that is that the Latter Day Saints' Church that he represents has all of the principles and officers that Christ had in his church while here on earth and as taught in the New Testament Scripture.

I heard one of the Christian [Campbellite] evangelists, J. V. Coombs speak of Mormonism and he said, "I want to set three facts before you, and do not get mixed up on what I am about to tell you regarding Mormonism: There are three distinct bodies of Mormons, first, the Utah Mormons; second the Mormons or Latter Day Saints; third, the Hedrickites." He made light of Joseph Smith's doctrines; said we had the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. "These three books are their foundation." He also said the Mormons or Latter Day Saints had done more to fight polygamy than all other religious bodies combined; that they sent four delegates to the United States Senate to fight the Utah Mormons, the polygamists. Rev. J. V. Coombs said so much good in our behalf that I shall not tell the bad he said, for it was not much bad.

We must unite our help to battle for this noble cause. If any of us are out of line get back in rank and go forth with the zeal and confidence that we believe in the religion we are handing out, in the church we are working for, and in our ability to get results. We believe honest religion can be passed out to honest people by honest methods. We believe in working, not weeping; in boosting, not knocking; and in the pleasure of our job. We believe one gets what he goes after; that one deed done to-day is worth two deeds done to-morrow; and that no one is down and out until they have lost faith in themselves. We believe in to-day and the work we are doing; in to-morrow and the work we hope to do; and in the sure reward which the future holds. We believe in courtesy, in kindness, in generosity, in good cheer, in friendship, and honest competition. We believe there is something to do somewhere for every one ready to do it. We are, or at least I am, ready right now, and I ask especially the young to put forth an effort and do their best; however little it may be, that little is accepted with just as much favor from the young proportionately as from the older and greater. I pray we may be obedient to God's laws.

520 Oak Avenue.

DAVID M. BALDWIN.

LEES SUMMIT, Missouri, May 31, 1908.

Dear Saints: No doubt those of you who have formed my acquaintance and have any interest in me have wondered at my silence. There are several reasons which I shall not take the valuable space of the HERALD to relate.

It is now just about one year since my wife, four of the children, and myself left our Western Nebraska home in quest of a place of health and rest for my wife; and to see and test the realities of the land of Zion we made our first stop at Madison, Nebraska, for about a week with my sister, Mrs. Fraser. We were well pleased with the country. It much resembles Jackson County, Missouri. From there we wended our way to Independence, the center of Zion. Here I found much to interest me. The scenery is beautiful to one who for years and years has looked only on the western prairies and hills and almost fruitless regions. As I once again looked upon the green clover and grain fields, the stately walnut and many other familiar trees, to say nothing of the vast orchards of fruit, so impressed was I at the grandeur that tears unbeckoned came into my eyes. Surely, thought I, the Lord or some one exercised wisdom in selecting this region as a home for God's people! Nor have my ideas changed.

After spending eight or ten days about Independence attending services on some occasions at the Stone Church, and in looking about for a home, a small farm or garden-patch of five to twenty acres, I found the land worth from one hundred and fifty dollars to one thousand dollars per acre. Not being in financial shape to buy, and being advised to come to see Lees Summit and the country about, and it being only some fifteen miles from Independence, we concluded to heed the advice. So on the twentieth of June we halted here, casting our lot with Elder C. DePuy, president of Lees Summit Branch, and with other Saints, as also with strangers. Here we have tarried as if held here by some irresistible power, and personally not privileged even to attend the much longed for General Conference. I must say that I felt somewhat disappointed, as I now have been in the church since the autumn of 1884. I have thought since that it may have been for the best and I shall at least try to think so.

I have tried to give the Lees Summit Branch all my attention, assisting almost all the time at preaching, prayer, Sunday-school, and Religio services, at the same time bearing heavy cares of which I do not care to speak, only this, that I am strongly impressed that we are living in perilous times, and it behooves all Saints to be careful and wise in all of life's affairs. As for this place and country it is my judgment that Saints will do well to locate here, providing care is taken, wisdom exercised, the Bishopric and elders counseled. "Let everything be prepared before you." The land about here is worth from seventy-five to three hundred dollars per acre, good schools, plenty of churches, and the people civil. Should you care to know more of Zion, please inclose stamp.

With kind wishes to all,

D. W. SHIRK.

MT. PLEASANT, Iowa, June 8, 1908.

Editors Herald: I left home June 5, and came here, where I have held three meetings and do not know how long I will continue. I have had good liberty in presenting the gospel, though the crowds have been small. A Holiness preacher has been attending.

Yours in bonds,

NEPHI LOVELL.

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 13, 1908.

Dear Herald: After enjoying the products of others' experiences as found in the letters and original articles printed in the church papers, I was prompted this morning to lay aside other work long enough to be heard from along the line of my experiences, and thoughts growing out therefrom.

I find myself fully decided that the church publications are improving without an exception. There is less of unjust criticism found in them, and much more that is instructing and uplifting. This is certainly a sign of greater spiritual direction and closer walk in the path of doing to others as we would that others should do to us. I am of the opinion that some improvement along the same line should be had in the debates had on the conference floor. In attendance at the national conference of the Dunkers held last week and this week at this place I beheld a very high order of personal decorum. In the debates that I heard, while there was earnestness and force expressed, the kindly way in which they referred to those ideas from which they differed and to the persons holding those ideas, was very commendable. I did not hear a harsh statement, nor a sarcastic remark, but direct argument such as had a tendency to cause one to feel that there was some virtue in what was being said though differing ever so much from their previous ideas; and though one's own ideas were being attacked they could not but feel that there was much kindness towards the one holding them, and they could but have greater love for the one differing from them. I think I am not making public that which I should not when I say that the kind spirit that was manifest in the debates this year upon the various propositions before the quorum of which I am secretary, was superior to that of any previous year, and the result was that the hearts of the brethren were bound together more closely. I am convinced that there is evidence of greater faith in God manifest on the part of those who will present their ideas upon a proposition affirmatively, and though positively, yet kindly, and not attack the expressions of another in sarcasm or with apparent bitterness.

I am under the conviction that the last conference of the church was in some respects an improvement over the past, and many of the brethren of the missionary force went forth to the conflict with error and wickedness with greater determination and faith than previously. I am convinced by the instruction of the Spirit that retribution will follow more closely in the path of the transgressor, whether in the church or not, than in the past. The judgments of God are rapidly making themselves felt, and the swift following of the loss of the Spirit by those who look upon woman other than their wife, if they have any, is made very apparent; and following this loss of the Spirit the spirit of lying takes its place, which should show the person, in which the change has occurred, where they are, spiritually, and the danger they are in. We have witnessed the great darkness that comes to those in whom the light has become darkness, and with deep anxiety we seek for knowledge of how to proceed to redeem such a one from their sad condition, but we have learned ever since we have been in the church that it is not after God's way to save those who do not desire to be saved in harmony with the plan revealed by him, while it is after the offer of the Devil in the beginning to save all men, whether they will or not. Truly the hastening time has come, and those who can be shaken will be shaken, as the Spirit has previously said. Surely we should heed the instruction of the Master to "watch and pray always, that we enter not into temptation."

Since the General Conference I have been busy recording minutes, preparing a circular letter for the First Seventy, indexing old records, and attending to the calls in the mission, besides trying to hold some street meetings in the north part of the city. I say trying, because we had appointments for near two weeks, and on account of the cold and rains we held about five services, and those we held were not largely attended, although we had advertised them quite extensively in the immediate neighborhood. Bro. M. H. Cook assisted me, rendering valuable service. Several of the brethren have called in the city and have ministered, to the edifying of the Saints. Come again, brethren. Those who may know that they will be in the city over Sunday please let us know as early as possible so that we can arrange our work accordingly, and give proper notice.

Those who may have friends in the city, please let us know, sending me their addresses that we may visit them and minister to them of the word of life. Those who know of any Saints coming to the city please send the information that we may look them up and give them the proper care.

We begin this year's work with some discouragements. Several of our most earnest workers of the past have moved away, and others are not situated to render the help they should. But with all this we have received encouragement from the Lord, and we are trying to occupy every opportunity to testify for the Master, and to exemplify his precious character. On account of bad weather thus far we have been frustrated in nearly all our plans for building up the work, but we are hoping for the sunshine, and the directing of the Holy Spirit that we may occupy the most effectually.

Last Friday, Saturday, and Sunday was held the Sunday-school convention and the district conference, and the precious Spirit was present and the work advanced. The district library board was perfected, and the district officers reelected. During these sessions much valuable instruction was given on various subjects, and the preaching was good. Brn. E. F. Robertson and James McKiernan were present. The labor of Bro. Robertson in Warren County since the General Conference is much appreciated. We trust you may return in the near future. May God's blessing attend the labors of all his servants.

God has greatly blessed several of the afflicted here through the ordinances of the church, there is much spirituality shown at the social services, and the Spirit has assisted in the ministrations of those who have preached the word in the branch and mission, for all of which our hearts go out in thanksgiving and praise. We are informed that Mr. Harlan, of the State historical office, will give a talk to the Religians next Sunday night on the mound lately opened at Boone. He is a man somewhat acquainted with our belief in regard to the Book of Mormon being a record of the ancient civilizations of the American Continent, and we anticipate a treat through his talk.

Brn. Christy and Cook have begun meetings on the streets of Baxter. There is quite an interest growing out of the marvelous healing of the eyes of Sr. Lela Cushatt at that place, and we are hopeful that some will be led to an investigation and obedience by reason thereof. The brethren are there to give the people an opportunity to hear the reason for the hope that we have.

I have never been more blessed in some ways with the directing influence of the Holy Spirit than I have since the General Conference, and in this I can say that the words of our beloved President has been fulfilled; but this promise has been no more noticeably fulfilled than the information that the ministry would have some strange trials to meet. I have also had this experience, and such trials as one rarely meets with, but I have been sustained by the grace of God. Others have been passing through very severe trials, but we are hopeful that the Lord will permit none to be lost, and that all will receive through these trying experiences lessons that will better fit them for future service, and give them greater resistance against the power of the adversary of souls.

Yes, God has spoken to his people. He has warned them, as well as given them promises. He has spoken plainly to them in regard to pride and the judgments of God, but I am fearful that his people are slow to heed the admonition. It seems necessary to continually remind them of what the Lord hath said. Too many times those who need to be thus reminded are not where they can be reached often, and thus they are depriving themselves of one of the means the Lord has provided to render them help.

My hope in final triumph is growing day by day. While sadness overcomes me at times to see the indifference of the Saints, as well as all professing the name of Christ, and because some are failing to purify themselves, and some are falling by the way, yet the bow of promise seems to me brighter as the day approaches for the appearing of the One who judgeth not after the seeing of his eyes, or the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness does he judge for the meek of the earth. May God hasten that time, and yet when I thus express myself I long to have the time prolonged till the earth be properly warned, and I wish to live long enough to do my part of this work of warning, and be wise enough to occupy as God would have me, and humble enough to be subject to the powers ordained of God for the perfecting of the Saints and the final accomplishment of his great work.

With a prayer for all the Israel of God, and especially for those who are groping their way in darkness, I am

Your brother in hope,

1205 Filmore Street.

J. F. MINTUN.

On Board R. M. S. Carmania, June 4, 1908.

Editor Herald: After a very pleasant sojourn in America for about three months the writer brought a very enjoyable tour among several branches in various parts to a close last Saturday, when in company with twelve Latter Day Saints we boarded the Steamship Carmania and at fifteen minutes after three in the afternoon, the huge vessel was unmoored, and we pulled out into the river.

What would otherwise have been a very exhilarating and brilliant spectacle, was marred by the heavy and persistent rain which spoiled the Decoration Day festivities in the city as well as robbed the scene of the departing liner, always a sight full of interest and thrilling excitement, of its gayety. Slowly we passed by the familiar landmarks, and together with the gigantic Statue of Liberty, they were lost in the heavy mists of pelting rain. Reaching Sandy Hook, the pilot left us and soon the steady hum and gentle vibration of the ponderous turbine engines informed us we were now on our eastward voyage in reality.

Bro. and Sr. A. Giesch and daughter Louise of Independence; Bro. and Sr. William Lewis and daughter Ruth; Bro. and Sr. Rees Jenkins; James Baillie of Scranton, Kansas; Bro. Daer, of Illinois; Bro. T. Trueman, of Brooklyn, with the writer, have very comfortable quarters, and have only praise for the steadiness and luxury which characterizes this modern expression of marine engineering and skill of the Cunard Line.

The first day we experienced some of the discomforts of a very heavy ground-swell which prostrated the ladies and gave them the unpleasant taste of seasickness. Since then we have enjoyed good weather, smooth sea, and the pleasant society of our fellow voyagers. The nights have been full of romance, the indigo vault of heaven studded with countless stars of varying brilliancy, then the silver crescent of the month's new-born moon, shedding a shimmering radiance across the throbbing waves, looking like molten metal, and the deep silence only broken by the swishing of water, as this vessel speeds her way, filled the heart with reverence and the soul with the quiet hush of worship.

We are one hundred miles south of the usual course in order to avoid icebergs, the presence of which we occasionally feel in the chilly, icy winds through which we pass. However, we are hoping to reach our destination by Sunday, and then our company will be divided, it may be, never to meet together again.

The home-coming to the writer is saddened on this occasion by the knowledge of the passing of two of our most loved and best esteemed workers, Joseph Dewsnap and Charles H. Caton. These brethren have for years been in the van of the Reorganization in England and have done much to mould and shape its destinies. Most of the younger men have felt the influence of their strong and active love for the cause, which was the passion of their lives; and we shall miss them as we would miss a father.

The passing years seem to be filled with paradoxes and conflicting emotions. The love, friendship, and esteem for one another, the growth of years, is rudely broken, and what we conceived to be our real wealth and riches are taken from us and we are left lonely and sad with but the memory of what has been to inspire. We are grateful for such men and appreciate the noble qualities which made them so dear and lovable. God grant them the promised rest in his presence, which shall be to them ample recompense for sacrifice, struggle, and fidelity ripened in the years now gone, and to-day, history.

I would like to say to all the brethren and sisters in England, that while this cloud of gloom and death brings to our hearts the chilly sense of loneliness, yet let us not be discouraged, the divinity in the work is strong as ever and still is guiding and controlling all things to insure the eternal triumph of truth. Our love of the brethren who have fought the fight and reaching the summit of life's possibilities, have passed through the valley of the shadows to their reward, will be truly evidenced in that we who still remain will take up their armor and weapons, standing in the breach, and by God's help carry forward the standard of truth to heights of victory to them denied.

To despairingly lay down in sorrow and let the cause which to them was dearer than life sink in defeat or languish in doubt, would dishonor them and their work and disgrace their memory. Come, then, let their call to the courts of divine presence be to us the call of God to increased service.

Let us keep ever fixed as the pole-star of our lives, the "love and honor of God," and count everything loss, no matter what we gain, if the cause of Christ shall suffer; "for in everything we are enriched in Him."

Dear friends, we earnestly appeal to you, one and all, to throw off the spirit of indifference which has kept some inactive in the past and join hands with us in doing the best you can. God needs you, humanity needs you—the best that is in you; and count it not a hardship to serve in the cause of which Paul so exultantly writes, "He has granted to us not only to believe on him but to suffer for him." "To suffer" is a divine privilege granted in God's clemency, so that we may have completed in us his joy.

In conclusion, the financial matters will be taken care of by the undersigned until Bishop Kelley shall appoint another or others to carry on this aspect of the work. I need not remind you that we shall need all the help we can have this year to meet our current expenses. We look to you for your help now; and as in the past we have not been disappointed in trusting to your generous fidelity we hope that as God shall bless you your tithes and offerings may be forthcoming.

Yours sincerely,

J. W. RUSHTON.

5 Woodland Mount, Leeds, England.

TORONTO, Ontario.

Dear Herald: The Toronto Branch is still prospering and the interest is good, especially in the Religio and Sunday-school. I feel I have been blessed since my associations with Toronto Saints. The London District conference convenes at Waterford next week, starting on June 18 with Religio convention, and I am slated as a delegate; but owing to securing a new position I am sorry I will not be able to attend. It is about eighteen years since I attended a district conference in Canada and I know I will lose a good time spiritually. I am hoping some opportunity will present itself whereby I can attend. I pray for the good of the work all over the world, that we will have a good ingathering this conference year, and that I may ever live humble before my heavenly Father. I love to read the many good letters in the church papers. I ask the prayers of all the Saints that I may continue in this great cause till the end. Then I am sure I will be saved in the kingdom of God.

83 Gore Vale.

S. T. RIDLEY.

MOUNT VERNON, Washington.

Dear Herald: I could not do without you, for you solace and comfort me in my isolated condition. When I look back over the past and reflect on what I have missed by not taking you, dear old paper, it makes me sorry. I take a good deal of comfort in reading my church papers and books, as also my patriarchal blessing which I received under the hands of Bro. C. E. Butterworth, at Moorhead, Iowa, in 1907. Dear Saints, if you only could realize the blessed privileges and blessings you can all enjoy by communion with each other in your different branches. We isolated ones miss this and I sincerely crave the prayers of the Saints in my behalf and for my family, for my husband and one daughter are not in the fold. Oh, that they may enter into the sheepfold of God ere it be too late!

If there are any of the Saints living in Mount Vernon and read this, they will find me on the hill back of the Catholic church. I would be very much pleased to meet them.

I have one of the original issue of the Book of Mormon. It belonged to my grandfather, Edward Johnson, who was one of the Saints driven out from Zion. The book has a few leaves missing, also marginal notes made by my grandfather. I prize it very much, but will part with it if it is needed in the church library.

Dear Saints, pray for me that I may have the faith and that I may enjoy everything promised me in my patriarchal blessing, and that I may have the privilege of being where there is a branch. We hardly ever see an elder, and I believe an opening can be made at a little country place called Bird's View. My door is always open to the elders or any of the Saints that will try to find me.

If any of the Saints are too poor to take the HERALD I will forward copies if they will send me their address.

Ever praying that all may meet when Christ comes, and that we may stand at that last day.

Your sister,

ALICE SAVAGE.

BURNSIDE, Michigan, June 14, 1908.

Editors Herald: As I have been much benefited by reading the articles and letters in the HERALD, and as I have not contributed anything before, I thought I would let you know how the "great work" is progressing in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

Our beloved brother, George M. Shippy, came here and preached a series of eloquent sermons for us which stirred the whole neighborhood, and, as a grand finale, five souls were initiated into the kingdom of God by baptism. Others are ready for baptism now, and still others are beginning to seek for light and truth. Elder Shippy's artistic eye and skilled hand have enabled him to paint some fine charts which illustrate well every feature of this great latter-day work. They are certainly great helps to the cause.

We were sorry to learn that the General Conference had sent him to Canada, and hope he will be returned next year, because he had endeared himself to us by ties that time, we hope, will not sever.

By statements made by the Saints, by vision and dream, I am led to believe that the Lord has a work for me to do, and, if this is true, I hope I shall prove to be a wise and humble servant. My prayers are for the advancement of the cause and the upbuilding of Zion.

Your brother in the faith that Paul kept,

EDWARD WEAVER.

GRINDSTONE, South Dakota, June 11, 1908.

Dear Herald: I am trying to do the best under present circumstances. There is only one family of Saints near that I know about, their name being Orchard. If there are any others near here we would be happy to get acquainted with them.

We are trying to live so the world will know what we are. I believe there is a great work to be done here. We have the truth before many of them and some I am sure will accept the gospel. I have loaned my papers and have passed around some tracts. This is a good, honest neighborhood. We came here last fall and we would like to have an elder come this way as soon as possible, so the people can get out to hear. We can get a large hall to preach in. We have Sunday-school regularly and preaching-service every two weeks.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. CELIA MCCALLUM.

BOURBON, Missouri.

Editors Herald: I do not see how I could get along without the HERALD. Until lately I never realized its worth. Its inspired pages are as precious food to the hungry soul. How I do love to read the letters from all parts of the world and the many instructions and cheering words of consolation for the lonely, isolated heart; and how lonely I sometimes get without church privileges! I sometimes shed tears and determine to go to Zion; but those words come clear and plain: Who will care for and wait upon God's servants while they preach to your neighbors? This one witness of God's love to me is a great consolation. I feel glad to have this privilege, for I love my neighbors dearly, and if I have an enemy among them I do not know it.

I hope that the time may soon come that the honest in heart will be led toward Zion's cause, for I think that when one starts others will follow. I want all the Saints to pray for us that we may have a branch here. We are wanting Bro. Henry Sparling to come back in July or August, if it is God's will.

C. T. WHITESIDE.

German Baptist Brethren.

Dear Herald: Your many readers will doubtless be interested in knowing something concerning the annual meeting of the German Baptist Brethren Church, which was held in this city for ten days, closing June 11. This annual meeting, which is always held at this season of the year, is attended by multitudes of the members. The meeting this year was the celebration of the bicentennial of the founding of the church, and was therefore of more than ordinary interest.

The Brethren Church during the early years of its existence was wholly democratic in its form of government, but as its numbers increased and its missions widened out they found it necessary to adopt the delegate system for representation in their world conferences. They hold strongly to the church being one body, and these annual meetings are attended by delegates from every church in the world where their work has been planted. Yet, while they hold the church to be one body, they are without a governing head. The highest authority, the senate of the church, is composed of what they call "the standing committee." This committee is composed of one delegate from each district throughout the world, their districts not being dissimilar to those of our own church, Iowa having three districts, thus entitling her to three members on the standing committee. This standing committee has much authority, such as the locating of the annual meetings, etc., but some questions which they do not settle they pass to the delegates for discussion and settlement.

The meeting in Des Moines this year being the two hundredth anniversary of the organization of the church, was in the form of a celebration of the growth of the church. The meeting opened on Wednesday, and services were continued Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, the services during these days being wholly of a devotional and social character. No business was transacted, though the standing committee was in session each day. Sunday was a fitting climax for a close of these devotional services. On this day services began at six o'clock in the morning and continued until ten o'clock at night. It was voted by the body on Saturday to observe Sunday as a day of fasting and prayer. We learned that fasting with these people meant a literal abstaining from food, and we understood that many of the members thus observed the day.

The prayer-service on Sunday morning beginning at six o'clock, continued until nine o'clock. Then without intermission Sunday-school work was taken up and occupied the hour until ten o'clock, the discussion of the lesson being in charge of one of the professors from their Bible college in Chicago. At ten o'clock, without intermission, the morning program was taken up. The first speaker was Doctor M. G. Brumbaugh, an elder in the church, and superintendent of the public schools of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Doctor Brumbaugh is a ripe scholar, a deep thinker, and a brilliant orator. His subject was, "Conditions in Germany about 1708." The Brethren people say themselves that they are a queer people, and one of the queer things about them in the early years of their church life was the unwillingness to keep anything of records, or written history. They had an utter abhorrence for this. The present generation of the church sees the need of history. Doctor Brumbaugh has devoted a portion of his life-work to delving into the misty traditions of the past and has written a history of the church. The second speaker of the morning hour had for his subject, "The birth of the Schwarzenau congregation and its activities." Prayer and social-service was resumed at the close of the morning program, and was continued until the afternoon program was taken up. The afternoon hour was given to recounting the history of the mother church in colonial America. At 3.30, a Methodist minister, president of a college in Illinois, gave an address on secret orders. This address was a most bitter and scathing denunciation of secret orders of every class. At 6 o'clock, Miss Bixler, the most prominent musician in the church, gave a lecture from the stand on the subject of music, singing several selections during the hour. The evening hour was a historical sketch of the church in the United States, and at this hour an overflow meeting was held in an adjoining building.

Thus closed one of the most memorable Sundays ever spent in the Brethren Church. To visitors the service was interesting, and to the members it was a Pentecostal day. They felt that the heavens were opened to give answer to their prayers.

Monday was given to Sunday-school work, with reports from this department of church work. Tuesday morning the business session of the conference was taken up and questions which had not been settled by the standing committee were now passed to the body. The temperance question was discussed. The question of dress is still a discussed question. On the matter of questioning applicants for baptism: It has long been the custom of the Brethren people for the one administering the ordinance of baptism to lead the candidate into the water, and after they have knelt down to address to them three catechetical questions, then immerse them three times in the water, and while they are still kneeling in the water to administer the ordinance of the laying on of hands. Local congregations had petitioned the conference to permit such change in this form as would allow the asking of the questions before entering the water, and to receive the laying on of hands after the clothing had been changed. But owing to an error the rules would not permit this question to be acted upon at this meeting.

There are some in the church who believe that the sisters should have the right to break the bread and pass the emblems in the sacrament service. This question was continued for another year.

The most important question before the body, and one which marked an era in the history of the church, was on the question of the name of the church. The incorporated name of the church for two hundred years has been the German Baptist Brethren Church. A committee appointed to consider the question of a change in the name of the church reported, recommending three names: the Brethren, the Christian Brethren, and the Dunker Brethren. There was a decided majority in favor of the first name, and from this time the church will know only one name, The church of the Brethren.

To us, one of the most impressive statements made in our hearing during the conference was when one of the prominent elders in discussing a subject, in referring to the members as a body, the church militant, the brethren and sisters in the gospel, he unthinkingly, unconsciously, and unknowingly used the words, "the church of Jesus Christ." As a ray of brilliant light it came to us that the man who organized "the church" in 1830 manifested his gift of inspiration when he designated the followers of Christ, as "the church of Jesus Christ."

There is a congregation of the Brethren people in the city of Des Moines, but they are a small number among the great mass of humanity here, and when several thousand of the brethren people came to the city so different in manners, customs, and dress, their presence was at once noticed. The kiss was the usual form of salutation, with a clasp of the hand, but the supper, with the administering of the bread and wine after supper, and the washing of feet, is never practiced at the annual meeting.

The city of Des Moines kindly remembers their Brethren visitors, and to the Brethren people the annual conference of 1908 was a successful and important meeting.

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 15.

A. A. REAMS.

Extracts from Letters.

Sr. Grace C. Diggle, Nutana, Saskatchewan, says their branch has not been organized quite two years and has twenty-nine members. Meetings are held at two school-houses, alternating between them. Progress is being made both spiritually and temporally. The need is for more workers in church and Sunday-school. Nearly all the Saints attend meetings, some driving as far as eight or ten miles.

News From Branches

FIRST KANSAS CITY.

During the past month we have had very excellent preaching by Elders Bond, Hilliard, Peak, Arber, Parker, Scott, and last but not least, Elder Luff. Congregations have not been as large as we have desired. It seems necessary for social mingling and special and personal invitation from the pastor, and to have neighbors become acquainted with him. By doing this our congregations will increase.

At our business-meeting an effort was made to have our song-service better regulated. We are lacking a good chorister or leader.

Sunday-school, under the supervision of Bro. Arthur Larkey, also the Religio, under the direction of Bro. H. Sandy, are progressing nicely. Next Sunday will be children's day, and a good time is expected.

The young people have organized and will hold prayer-meetings every Sunday at eight o'clock in the morning.

On May 30, Miss Rose Cochran, who has been a faithful attendant and a firm believer of the restored gospel, and has expressed her intention to unite with the church, was married to Mr. J. F. Cox, a most excellent young man and member of the firm of Isaacs & Company, wholesale clothiers of this city. The wedding was at the home of Bro. and Sr. Warnky, and banquet was at the Baltimore Hotel. May their loving hearts be steadfast towards God and his service.

On June 13, Sr. Frances Stoker, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. C. H. Barrett, of Boone, Iowa, at the home of Bro. and Sr. Warnky. May God's blessing be theirs to enjoy.

Sr. Warnky has been very sick, but through administration and the blessing of God, she is better.

F. C. WARNKY.

DES MOINES.

A large number from here attended the district conference at Runnells, June 6 and 7. Different parts of the district were represented by the delegates, and the hospitality which is always extended by the Runnells Saints towards the conference visitors was fully enjoyed by those present. Three were baptized on Sunday. Elders M. H. Cook and W. Christy went from the conference to Baxter to hold services. The reunion committee made no report concerning the coming reunion; this report is anxiously awaited by the Saints. Elder E. F. Robertson, of Nebraska, has been visiting relatives in the district and attended conference.

On Sunday, June 14, Edgar R. Harlan, acting curator of the Historical Department of Iowa, spoke before the Religio.

His address was on the subject of archæology, in general, and included a complete description of the mound recently opened at Boone. He had with him several specimens taken from the mound, several pieces of pottery, some of the substance supposed to be ashes taken from the heaps, three pieces of arm or leg bones, and a skull, in a remarkable state of preservation. Our branch president, in the service following the lecture, said of it, "It was intensely interesting and profitable to me."

The annual meeting of the Church of the Brethren closed June 11. It was largely attended, was the bicentennial celebration of the church, and was fully enjoyed in every way by those in attendance at the meeting.

Sunday, June 14, the First Methodist Church of this city dedicated their recently completed two hundred thousand dollar church edifice.

A. A. REAMS.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

NORTHERN NEBRASKA.—Conference met at Blair, Nebraska, June 6, 1908, with F. R. Schafer, president, in the chair, James Huff, secretary pro tem, and Alice C. Schwartz, assistant. Elders reporting and present: C. A. Butterworth, Peter Anderson, J. M. Baker, F. R. Schafer, H. S. Lytle, and James Huff; Priests Ira C. Lewis, L. Marteeny, E. R. Ahlstrand, M. M. Bilyne; Teachers J. M. Case, C. M. Hollenbeck; Deacons J. M. Mills, W. F. Case, and D. S. Condit. Branches reporting: Omaha 320, one received by letter; Blair 38, one died, three removed; Columbus 22, no changes; Decatur 132, removed 1. Mistakes in reports to be corrected by district and local secretaries. Bishop's agent's report received, showing tithing received $345.15, Sanitarium fund $5, district funds $1. Resignation of H. T. McCaig as secretary received and accepted, and Alice C. Schwartz elected to fill vacancy. Bro. L. R. Wood appointed to act on the library board in connection with one from the Religio and one from the Sunday-school. Next conference to meet at Decatur, Nebraska, at the call of the presidency. Preaching by C. A. Butterworth and Peter Anderson. James Huff, secretary pro tem.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.—Conference convened with the Springfield Branch June 13, 1908, Elder A. M. Baker in chair and Elder J. C. Chrestensen secretary. The attendance being small the delegate system was dispensed with and visiting Saints allowed voice and vote. Reports were read from Elders J. C. Chrestensen, A. M. Baker, D. R. Baldwin, J. F. Cunningham, C. J. Spurlock, G. W. Bootman, J. B. Graham, G. W. Anderson, Grant Burgin, J. W. Quinly, and Priest J. B. Scott. Bishop's agent, A. M. Baker, made report. Same was approved by auditing committee and excepted. Secretary and treasurer's report read and approved. On account of business matters that would probably call him away from home for some time Elder J. C. Chrestensen tendered his resignation as president, secretary and treasurer. Resignation accepted and a vote of thanks given him for faithful an efficient service rendered. Historian, J. C. Chrestensen, made report which was approved. A. M. Baker was elected president and A. J. Fletcher vice-president. J. M. Quinly was elected secretary and treasurer. Next conference will convene with the Pomona Branch, October 3, 1908, at 10 a. m. Sunday evening sacrament and prayer-meeting, in charge of Elders Pickering and Quinly, was attended by a goodly number of Saints and visitors. A very profitable hour was spent, and an impressive talk was given by Elder Pickering of Kansas City. At this service, A. J. Fletcher, of West Plains Branch, was duly ordained to the office of elder by D. R. Baldwin and A. M. Baker. As he goes forth into the world to declare the everlasting gospel, may he so live that God will be with him, and that his labors will bring many to the true light of the latter-day work. J. M. Quinly.

DES MOINES.—District conference convened at Runnells, Iowa, June 6, 1908. Prayer-service at nine o'clock, business-session beginning one hour later. District presidency, M. H. Cook, W. Christy, and E. O. Clark, chosen to preside. Credential committee, E. F. Robertson, H. Castings, and Sara Rodgers, reported. Reports from the Boonesboro and the Des Moines Valley branches were read. Ministerial reports received from the following: C. B. Brown, John Hall, J. E. Laughlin, E. O. Clark, J. R. Epperson, W. T. Maitland, F. W. Briggs, E. F. Robertson, N. V. Sheldon, J. S. Roth, M. H. Cook, J. F. Mintun, and W. Christy. Bishop's agent, W. Christy, reported, balance and receipts $1,223.12; expenditures $695.43; balance $527.69. Acting district treasurer, E. O. Clark, reported on hand $3.27. The gospel wagon fund of $18 was placed in the tent fund account. District officers elected: president, M. H. Cook; vice-presidents W. Christy and E. O. Clark; secretary, A. A. Reams; treasurer, W. Christy. Frank Park chosen as member of the district library board, in place of J. G. Carpenter released, owing to his absence from the district. District Sunday-school association holding a convention the day previous, reported. Preaching during the conference was by E. F. Robertson, James McKiernan, and M. H. Cook. Conference adjourned to meet at Boone, Iowa, at the call of the district presidency, on or before February 20, 1909. A. A. Reams, secretary.

FAR WEST.—Conference convened with the Stewartville Branch on Saturday and Sunday, June 13 and 14, 1908, D. E. Powell and W. P. Pickering in the chair, C. P. Faul and T. H. Hinderks secretaries. Branch reports: DeKalb 68; Stewartville 249, loss 7; St. Joseph 604, gain 4; Delano 93, gain 3; Pleasant Grove 75, loss 2; German Stewartville 79; Edgerton Junction 53, Kingston, 107, gain 6; Far West 47, gain 3; Wogenda 52, loss 3. Bishop's agent, C. P. Faul, reported and the auditing committee, J. S. Constance, S. H. Simmons, and V. M. Goodrich, reported that the books and accounts were correct. A committee consisting of V. M. Goodrich, J. S. Constance, and Charles P. Faul, was appointed to draft suitable blanks for the ministry of each branch to report to the branch president, and another for the branch president to summarize and report to conference. The committee reported, the report was adopted, and the printing of the blanks was ordered. Ministry reporting: Elders J. C. Elvert, Walter Kinney, J. S. Constance, W. P. Bootman, B. J. Dice, D. E. Powell, E. L. Henson, A. W. Head, E. R. Constance; Priests Fred Uphoff, T. H. Hinderks, A. R. Daniels; Teachers John Pierpergerdes, J. H. Howard, John Stade. Treasurer, B. J. Dice, reported on hand $18.56. District tent was placed in the care of the president and secretary and missionary in charge. It was moved that ten dollars be given the missionary in charge for furthering tent-work. The presidency was given authority to appoint the local priesthood to hold Sunday services in the branches that ask for them. Preaching by E. L. Henson, V. M. Goodrich, and Ammon White. Social meeting in charge of T. T. Hinderks and W. P. Pickering. Officers elected as follows: D. E. Powell president, W. P. Pickering vice-president, B. J. Dice treasurer, C. P. Faul secretary. C. P. Faul was sustained as Bishop's agent. Adjourned to meet with the Cameron Branch, Saturday, September 26, 1908.

KEWANEE.—District conference met with the Saints at Dahinda, Illinois, May 30 and 31, at 10 a. m., O. H. Bailey and J. W. Wight in chair, Sr. Mary E. Gillin, secretary, assisted by Sr. Nettie I. Heavener. All of the nine branches reported and all were represented but Canton. Of the branch presidents, only one reported. That report came from Joy. Of the sixty-four holding the priesthood in the district only three reported, namely, Elders John S. Patterson, William Seward, and William Norris. Report of the secretary showed the district as having 653 members, a net gain of 2. Priesthood consists of 1 high priest, 3 seventies, 19 elders, 18 priests, 13 teachers, 10 deacons. Absent from branches 142. Upon the request of the Joy Branch and testimony of O. H. Bailey, Bro. Oral Sade was ordained an elder under the hands of Brn. Bailey and Peterson. By vote it was decided to dispense with one of the yearly conferences with a view to the holding of a reunion in its stead. Brn. Bailey, Berve, and Peterson, were named as a committee to see about the reunion. Bro. J. F. Adams asked that his license be restored to him or he be given the reason why. For an answer he was referred to the presidency of the conference. The annual election of district officers resulted as follows: W. A. McDowell, president; Charles Holmes, vice-president; Mary E. Gillin, secretary; James Norris, treasurer; Nettie I. Heavener, librarian. Conference voted to recommend Bro. Charles Holmes to the bishop to act as his agent in this district. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered O. H. Bailey and James Norris for past services in their respective offices, also to the Dahinda Saints for their very kind hospitality during conference. All of the sessions were attended by a spirit of peace and harmony. The preaching unusually good throughout. Next conference

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

will be held at Millersburg, September 26 and 27, 1908. Mary E. Gillin, secretary, 1410 North Elizabeth Street, Peoria, Illinois.

POTTAWATTAMIE.—Conference met at Hazel Dell, Iowa, Sunday, May 31. Prayer-service at 9:30 a. m. and preaching by Peter Anderson at 11 o'clock. At 2 p. m. preaching by W. M. Self and at 8 p. m. by Peter Anderson. Business session Monday morning; Peter Anderson and J. M. Baker were chosen to preside; J. A. Hansen was appointed secretary pro tem, and F. G. Hough assistant. Branches reporting: Boomer 57, Carson 31, Council Bluffs 300, Crescent 155, Hazel Dell 55, North Star 140. Ministry reporting: Elders Joshua Carlile, J. P. Carlile, C. B. Bardsley, D. Parish, J. C. Lapworth, R. McKenzie, M. F. Elswich, S. Harding, J. A. Hansen, A. J. Davidson; Priests J. P. Christensen, F. G. Hough; Teachers P. Olsen, Jr., J. C. Adams, H. M. Liles, A. E. Dempsey; Deacons Charles H. Wright, Alma A. Gaylord. Those reported 49 sermons, 3 marriages, 1 ordination, 10 children blessed, 35 administrations to sick, 20 official visits. Bishop's agent reported: On hand last report $207.70, received $434.85, paid ministry $45, families of ministry $192, widows' aid $30, Bishop E. L. Kelley $82, balance on hand $293.55. Sanitarium fund on hand at last report $21.50, received $94.50, paid Bishop E. L. Kelley $10, G. H. Hilliard $106. Children's home fund on hand last report $17, paid Bishop E. L. Kelley $17. Tent fund on hand last report $18.62, paid freight $5.39, lumber $2.05, on hand $11.18. A motion prevailed to sell the district tent, and J. A. Hansen, J. P. Carlile, and D. Parish were appointed to sell same. On report of the president that he did not deem a typewriter necessary for the district work, the committee appointed to consider the matter was discharged. Conference adjourned to meet at Carson on Sunday, October 11, 1908. J. C. Jensen.

Pastoral.

To the Brethren, Presiding Elders or Presidents of Branches; Greeting: I hope and trust you will send reports so I can have them in hand by the first of July; then I can make my report to our missionary in charge. Will all please send on time? Send to Ray, Indiana, R. F. D. No. 1. Then I will not have to hold those that are on time waiting for the tardy ones. If blanks have not reached you, let me know. I sent out blanks in envelopes with return card and so I take it for granted that all have received them. I see some new officers have been elected. Will the new presidents call on the old officers for these blanks immediately? Do not delay in this matter.

Will the local officers please look after the scattered Saints, the isolated ones, and gather them in as much as they can? See that they have the sacrament as often as once a month if you can so arrange. If some are a little cold or indifferent to their best interests, remember you are pastors to gather the scattered sheep into the fold, not to scatter them on the mountains of sin which are everywhere in the world. Visit them at their homes, encourage and cheer them as much as it is possible. When you hear of a member, try to find him and perhaps he can tell you of other isolated members you can find further on in your search. As I understand it, it is the duty of missionaries to preach, baptize, and bring members into the church; but the presidents of districts and branches, with the local priesthood, should see that the sheep are cared for. "Feed my sheep," says Jesus; "Feed my lambs." Watch the flock over which the Holy Ghost has made you overseers, not for filthy lucre, but with a willing mind.

I have been hunting up isolated members and have succeeded in finding many, and have heard of a number more to look after. I have arranged to hold a sacrament-meeting at Bro. John Estes, on Sunday. Bro. Estes has ably assisted us not only by encouragement, but has gone with us with his horse and buggy day after day. We came home yesterday from a forty-mile trip after finding four Saints and others who should be Saints and are near the door, we believe. Of course not all can spend time as Bro. Estes has, but he has a farm and some good boys to look after the work, although his good wife has been sorely afflicted for years. She is cheerful and pleasant in her home, with her twin girls—ladies, fifteen years old. All seem well. How I wish some of our sisters in good health who complain of trouble, could visit Sr. Estes' home and learn a lesson in patience! Well, many know Bro. Estes and family. With such they need no praise. May God bless his people everywhere, is my prayer in Jesus' name.

G. A. SMITH.

ANTWERP, Ohio, June 12, 1908.

Ministry, Take Notice.

The missionary report blanks have been put in the hands of the Herald Publishing House, and in the future the small sum of eight cents per dozen will be charged to cover the cost of printing and mailing. Branch and district presidents can secure their blankks at this office also.

As soon as practical they will be catalogued and given numbers by which to order; at the present, order by name as follows: "Missionary report blanks," "branch presidents' report blanks," "district presidents' report blanks."

F. A. SMITH, Secretary of the Twelve.

Reunion Notices.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Reunion Association will convene July 25, 1908, at Highland Lake, Norfolk County, Massachusetts. Highland Lake is located midway between Boston and Providence on the Midland Division. We have a beautiful pine grove with plenty of good spring water. The people of that vicinity are very much pleased that we are to come again this year. Arrangements have been made to have an abundance of vegetables planted for us. Arrangements have been made for wood, lumber, and ice which are only a hundred yards away from our grounds. Those coming should ticket to Highland Lake Station. Ten by twelve tents will be three dollars; twelve by fifteen, three dollars and fifty cents. Cots fifty cents each with a few old ones for children at twenty-five cents. The commissary department will be in evidence and board will be furnished at three dollars and fifty cents, lower if possible. The grocery department will also be in working order. Everything seems to indicate a large gathering. Agents will be appointed in all of the large branches to receive orders for cots and tents. Others may order with remittance of F. P. Busiel, 163 Pearl Street, Winter Hill, Massachusetts. Kindly get your orders in as near the first of July as possible so that we may not have trouble with the tents as we did last year. M. C. Fisher, chairman.

Annual reunion of the North Dakota District will convene at Dunseith, July 11, continuing over the 19th. Conference will convene on Wednesday, the 15th, at 2.30 p. m. Presidents and clerks of branches will see that branches are reported. Send reports to the undersigned not later than July 8. Warren McElwain, secretary, Lansford, North Dakota.

Addresses.

J. M. Baker, 3015 Franklin Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

The real meaning of the White House conference of governors and other citizens, held on May 13-15, at the invitation of President Roosevelt, is set forth editorially in the June Review of Reviews. Just why the conference was called, and what lines of action were developed are clearly stated. The newspaper reader who may have been more or less confused by the daily reports of the proceedings will find in the Review an illuminating summary of the whole matter.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE
BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid . . $30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK
LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S
HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

About one block from L. D. S. Church.

THE INDIAN MAIDEN
A Temperance Story
No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

Landseekers' Excursions
to
The Big Horn Basin and Yellowstone Valley

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month, June to November inclusive, I will personally conduct Landseekers' Excursions to the Big Horn Basin, Wyo., and Yellowstone Valley, Montana. The earlier in the season you go, the better. Train Leaves Omaha 4.10 P. M., Chicago 9.15 A. M., St. Louis 8.02 A. M.

These sections are rapidly increasing in population and the new towns are growing fast. Opportunities to acquire land, stated briefly, as follows:

14,000 acres of homestead land near Garland, Wyo., irrigated by the Government, now ready for settlers.

16,000 acres of homestead land, irrigated by the Government, and 15,000 acres under the Carey Act, ready for settlers in the vicinity of Ballantine, Huntley, and Billings, Mont.

50,000 acres under the Carey Act now ready for settlers near Cody, Wyoming.

60,000 acres under the Carey Act now ready for settlers in the vicinity of Worland, Basin, Greybull, and Lovell, Wyo.

Our new folder with large map, giving full and complete particulars regarding these lands, will be sent free upon request. Address

D. CLEM DEEVER, General Agent,
LANDSEEKERS' INFORMATION BUREAU,
1004 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice,
Mite, and Rain
Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT, MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF

NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

Are You Interested
In Independence?

Then you should have one of those pictorial books with historical sketch of Independence.

A book made by the genuine Carbon Photo process (not Engravings), contains twenty pages of views and two pages descriptive. Price 50c each.

One 5x7 view would cost you at least 25c, but this booklet all complete for 50c, the universal price for 20 pages for this grade of work, or only 2 1/2 a page.

The Independence Examiner says . . . It is a beautiful souvenir executed in a most artistic manner and should be in every library in Independence.

EVAN V. DAVIS, Photographer,
Lock Box 35, Independence, Missouri.

THE INSTRUCTOR

No. 126, cloth $.75
No. 127, leather 1.00
No. 128, leather, flexible 1.50

THESE BOOKS ARE NOW READY.

TENT FOR SALE

The Pottawattamie District has decided to offer for sale their tent and all its appurtenances. The tent is 26x40, 7-foot wall, 10-ounce ducking. Seats for one hundred persons accompany the tent, also a small tent for use of the missionary. For particulars address the undersigned.

25-4t
J. A. HANSEN,
(For committee),
R. D. 1. Weston, Iowa.

"HEAVEN AND HELL"

BY SWEDENBORG
400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps
PASTOR LANDENBERGER,
Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

Bible References

By Alvin Knisley

Paper cover 5 cents
Cloth cover 10 cents

Spanish Tracts

No. 350 Epítome De La Fe, per doz.. 10c
No. 351 Restauración, per doz. 10c

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

Atonement of Christ
and Final Destiny of Man
Revised and Enlarged
No. 17—10 cents each.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, JULY 1, 1908

NUMBER 27

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
ISRAEL A. SMITH, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

Editorial

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM.

The twenty-third psalm is recognized as one of the masterpieces of literature. Its beauty has won the admiration of the irreligious. Those of a religious inclination have loved it because it expresses in the finest possible manner sentiments that they have felt but could not express.

The twenty-third psalm is a triumph. For three thousand years it has stood as a witness that simplicity is the best expression of greatness. How simple its imagery,—a stream of water, green fields, a shepherd, a flock of sheep. How simple the words, as translated, mostly one and two syllable words. Common words. Yes, common words. Who can dispense with the common things? As one old violinist expressed it in his homely way, "You may buy a fifty dollar violin and a twenty-five dollar bow; but you can't make music without the aid of a five-cent lump of rosin."

The twenty-third psalm is a triumph. Almost any one can take an unimportant thought and clothe it in big words so that no one can understand it. That is easy. To take a thought that is profound, fundamental, and explain it so simply that all may understand, is a triumph. The twenty-third psalm contains elemental thoughts. It deals with life, death, love, enmity, and above all with faith, in an arrangement of something like one hundred and seventeen words that any one can understand and no one can excell.

The man or woman who imitates this psalm in his life and makes that life a simple and humble interpretation of great truths will be the true and successful messenger of the covenant. Simplicity of dress, simplicity of conversation and deportment, are all consistent with true greatness, in fact are inseparable from true greatness.

The twenty-third psalm breathes sincerity. David meant what he wrote. Otherwise he could not have written the twenty-third psalm. He might have written a pretentious poem, ornate with sounding phrases; but a minor poem. To be sincere and simple is to be godlike. David felt what he wrote as plainly as one feels hunger, cold, love, repose; and so his psalm goes home to the hearts of men and women.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
The Twenty-Third Psalm	625
Lamoni Items	627
Notes and Comments	628
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
Modern Revelation	628
Chronology	632
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
The Newport Plan	634
Brewers Attacking the Drink Evil	635
The Borrowed Mirror	637
ORIGINAL POETRY:
A Dream	637
An Inheritance in Zion	637
MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:
Daughters of Zion Reading for July	638
LETTER DEPARTMENT:
A Miracle of Healing	639
Letters	639
NEWS FROM BRANCHES	643
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:
Conference Minutes:
Montana	643
Central Illinois	644
Gallands Grove	644
Nodaway	644
Southeastern Illinois	644
Convention Minutes:
Des Moines	644
Clinton	644
Clinton	644
Pastoral	644
Bishop's Agents' Notices	645
Fourth Quorum of Priests	645

Elder T. W. Williams writes as follows regarding the debate at Fresno:

LOS ANGELES, California, June 26, 1908.

Editors Saints' Herald: Debate ended. Results fully satisfactory. Albert and J. B. Carmichael valuable aids. Attendance fair. Interest keen. Faith encouraged. Opposition not satisfied. Bedacheck's twenty-second debate. Conceded ours most valuable opposition ever encountered. Some prospects of branch organization at Fresno. John wiles goes to Modesto, Bro. Carmichael to San Luis Obispo County and contiguous territory. Only one branch fully organized in entire Central California District. Conditions there not very favorable. F. G. Pitt busy in San Bernardino. Times hard. Money scarce.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

"The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." The man who can say that and say it truthfully is indeed fortunate. In this age of uncertainty and doubt, when many conflicting claims are urged in the name of religion, and when thousands have abandoned religion and have written as the chief article in their confession the negative proposition, "I do not know," it is a wonderful thing to be able to say, "The Lord is my shepherd." It may be easy to say, as a mere matter of articulation, but let us not deceive ourselves; to say it truly one must not only acknowledge the leadership of Christ but indeed be really following him.

A great many people acknowledge Christ, in a way. Spiritualism and every other ism tries to hide behind him. "Yes, Christ was a spiritualist. Christ was the greatest medium that ever lived." And so the argument goes, Christ was this or that. Reduced to its elements the argument is, "Christ was like me," which is vastly different from saying, "I am trying to be like Christ."

To be able to say, "the Lord is my shepherd," argues not only a certain amount of obedient righteousness but also a certain communication with God. Yes, we can base our argument for continued revelation even on the opening line of the twenty-third psalm, the classic that has cheered multitudes of orthodox Christians. There is only one way for any man to know that Christ is his personal shepherd. He can not know that fact by reading it in the Bible, because it is not stated anywhere in the Bible. He can not know it by reading that Christ was the shepherd of David or of Paul. He can only know it when like David and Paul he establishes personal communication with the great Shepherd. "He calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice. And a stranger they will not follow."—John 10: 3, 5.

To argue that this is not an age of revelation and that communication between God and man has ceased, is folly. If we have no communication with our heavenly Leader, then we are indeed left with earthly leaders who are no better than we,—blind leaders of a blind people. Yet, strangely enough, such a proposition has been urged ever since the day when Joseph Smith first announced that he had seen a vision. It is merely an argument of convenience, urged because no other comes to hand; and we can afford to ignore it because the men who urge it most strenuously themselves deny it at every popular revival.

"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters." This might not mean so much in a land where all fields are green and where water is so common that though indispensable to human life it is described as "having no economic value." But in the land where David dwelt were many sandy wastes, streams and lakes were infrequent, and the words water and green fields conveyed more than mere poetic pleasure.

As a shepherd lad David had often led his sheep along the dusty highway and over barren plains, hot sand under foot, hot sun overhead, hot wind on the cheek, until at last they came down into the feeding-places, cool green fields beside the still waters.

When he became the sweet singer of Israel, he remembered that scene. He made it a part of his great psalm. He recognized that even as he had been a shepherd and had led his sheep, so Christ was a shepherd and was leading him.

The individual who has journeyed even a short distance in this old world begins to appreciate what it means to bear the "heat and burden of the day." Sorrow, sickness, poverty, loss of loved ones, the unfaithfulness of friends, one or all of these will find him out, whatever his station, and will compel him to seek consolation somewhere. Happy the man who finds his way to the green pastures and the still waters of God's love.

"He restoreth my soul." The book of Doctrine and Covenants tells us, "The spirit and the body is the soul of man. And the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul; and the redemption of the soul is through him who quickeneth all things." In the light of this definition of the human soul, a true one we believe, we see that the restoration of the soul means the conquering of death and sin and the reuniting of body and spirit in a condition of purity and perfection.

"He leadeth me in paths of righteousness for his name's sake." The Saints of God are bought with a price. They are no longer free to do whatever extravagant fancy may urge. Their actions reflect credit or discredit upon their Master and upon the cause for which he died. It is their duty to walk in paths of righteousness "for his name's sake." They can not go with the world and do as the world does. To be correct in doctrines and dogmas is not enough. They must cleave to that which is good and eschew that which is evil, "for his name's sake," if for no other reason. When we reach the point where we will stop to consider the inevitable results of certain lines of conduct as effecting the work in general, the church will begin to arise and shine.

When the world sends us a gilded invitation to attend its continuous vaudeville, let us write across the face of that invitation the third verse of the twenty-third psalm.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." It is easy to see where David got that figure of speech,—“the valley of the shadow of death.” As one approaches the mountains he crosses sun-kissed plains, but when he enters the canyon, where granite walls loom up on either side, he enters the chill and shadow of another world. Yet if he persists on up the valley he at last comes out upon the heights where the sun is still shining, shining with a beauty not before realized. Wonderful the panorama that is then unfolded to his vision!

The valley of the shadow of death lies before us all. The chill and gloom that is there felt by the bravest explorer has given death his title, “the king of terrors.” Yet David said that he would fear no evil. Why? Because the Lord would be with him; and because he knew that beyond the valley of the shadow the sun was still shining.

“Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.” Sometimes an obscure expression is understood when we know the customs surrounding the author during his youth. Elder Paul Hanson gives an explanation of this phrase gleaned from his travels in the Holy Land. He was told that it is the custom of the shepherds on dark and stormy nights to precede their flocks, and as they go to rap with their staffs upon the rocks and bowlders; the sheep hear and are comforted as they follow the unseen shepherd home to the fold.

“Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.” It seems strange that a follower of Christ should have enemies. Yet such is frequently the case, if not the rule. The lion's den, the fiery furnace, dungeons, the scourge, the cross,—with these arguments an offended world has reasoned with men whose pious lives have been a rebuke more scathing than any denunciation. The day of such persecution is not past. Husbands who are otherwise kind still make life a burden for wives whose only offense is that they wish to live the life of a consistent church member. Young men and women are still disinherited by parents and disowned by associates because in the day of choosing they have chosen the right and because that right came under the banner of the restored gospel. When the young man through whom that gospel was restored went out in the woods to pray on that spring morning, the only thing in the world that he wanted to know was what he ought to do. God told him what to do and he did it. For that he was hated. The thread of hatred that runs through history shows red at Carthage, Illinois, as plainly as it did in Jerusalem or in Ephesus. Yet, paralleling it, runs the white thread of God's love. “Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.” Have not individual Saints tested that promise, at Kirtland, in Missouri, at Nauvoo, and found it true? Immortal psalm! Unfailing promises!

“Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.” This is an expression of the unstinted bounty of God. We serve a generous God. Christ, our elder brother, is an advocate of the idea of giving good measure, pressed down and running over.

“Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.” How proud men are to build and beautify a house here on earth! The poor man saves and economizes and never quite gives up the idea of owning a little home of his own. He dies in a rented house, and some one has cheated him out of his birthright. The rich man schemes and speculates, beats close to the lee shore of the law, grinds the face of the poor, that he may build a mansion. All that money and power can command and art and skill supply goes into a marble pile of faultless design and appointment. But while the mills of finance are grinding out the dollars and the masons are building them into walls and the sculptors chiseling them into statuary and the landscape gardner transmuting them into lawns and parks, the sun rises and sets, time moves regularly on, and about the time the grand ensemble is nicely arranged the proud owner is filed away in the family vault, where the quarters are close and the atmosphere depressing, yet where none complain.

Why give so much attention to our temporary home? Why give so little attention to our eternal home? If all would plan to be associates in the house of the Lord in the life to come, we might be able to strike a balance between the palace and the tenement here in this life. So far as the future is concerned we are assured that in our Father's house there are many mansions.

The twenty-third psalm deals with affairs in this life, with affairs in the world to come, and with the much dreaded passage from the one to the other. It is essentially a message of comfort and its keynote is trust. It defends its own claim to immortality. The Jews carried it with them into Babylon. The ten tribes took it with them into their captivity. Probably Lehi brought it with him to the promised land. Our Lord heard it repeated when he was a lad. Now it comes to us, after long centuries, “borne on the wings of a hundred translations,” venerable with age, yet clothed in immortal youth.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

LAMONI ITEMS.

There are to be no violent eruptions of patriotism in Lamoni in honor of July 4. The Sunday-school is to celebrate the day in a quiet way with a picnic in Central Park. Many private picnics are planned and some are intending to take part in “celebrations” at other towns. It is to be hoped that the “safe and sane” Fourth of July will become an assured thing in the near future. It may be a great deal of fun to burn gunpowder on that day; but the horrible deaths from lockjaw, and the fearful accidents that maim and disfigure hundreds, that have so long been the penalty of our misguided enthusiasm, are too big a price to pay.

Missionary meetings will be held in the town park every evening for one week, beginning Sunday. They will be continued every Sunday evening during the summer. These meetings ought to be successful. The attendance at the church Sunday evenings is not at all satisfactory. But with good preaching, good music, and the open-air feature the park services ought to attract a large audience. There is opportunity for missionary work in Lamoni.

The Sunday-school now has three "history classes." The third class met for the first time Sunday morning with Leon A. Gould as teacher. Three classes in Church History, the Doctrine and Covenants class, sometimes slanderously referred to as the "heresy class," because of the wide range of its discussions, and the various classes in the regular departments afford a variety to choose from that ought to satisfy any one.

President Fred. M. Smith was the speaker at the Brick Church Sunday forenoon; Elder David Anderson occupied at the evening hour.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

President Joseph Smith, his wife Ada and son Reginald, arrived safely in Toronto the evening of June 23. They stopped en route at Detroit, Michigan, where President Smith addressed the people at the Saints' church in that city. At the close of his sermon a reception was held and two hundred and twenty-five people availed themselves of the opportunity of shaking hands with the entire family, including Reginald. It is reported that an unusually fine spiritual atmosphere prevailed during the entire occasion.

Elder W. E. LaRue is out with some neatly printed handbills announcing open-air meetings in Wade Park, Cleveland, Ohio. The bills have a picture of Brother LaRue and of the Cleveland chapel. They open with the question, "Are you satisfied that the one hundred and eighty varieties of Christianity are better than the one plan taught by Christ and his apostles?"

Elder John Hawkins, a notable figure in the history of our missionary work in the South Sea Islands, passed away May 16, at the advanced age of ninety-one years. Elder Hawkins was born in England, October 11, 1817. He was in the South Sea Islands on a mission at the time of the assassination of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and continued his labors there until his death. He taught the natives the true doctrine so thoroughly that they were immune to polygamy when the "Brighamites" appeared on the scene with that delectable doctrine. Elder Hawkins was married to a native woman and leaves many descendants, both children and grandchildren.

The Herald Publishing House has just completed the publication of a cook-book for the Patronesses of Graceland College. This is a valuable collection of receipts, having had the careful selection and compilation of the Patronesses, and is entitled Graceland Receipt Book. It has nearly a hundred pages, contains several hundred receipts, and is a splendid thing for every kitchen. The price of this book is only thirty cents, post-paid. Send all orders to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa.

Original Articles

MODERN REVELATION.

ELDER ASA S. COCHRAN.

Much prejudice exists in the minds of the people against any writing or manifestation claiming to be of divine origin, aside from the Bible. The ministers of the various churches, claiming to be evangelical or orthodox in their views, do all that lies in their power to strengthen this prejudice where it already exists, or to create it where it does not exist; and in their efforts in this direction they often make ridiculous statements that show either malice or ignorance.

One man, quite a prominent minister in his denomination, introduced a lecture on what he chose to term Mormonism, by saying, "Joe Smith inquired of the Mormon god as to which church he should join, and was told not to join any of them, for they were all wrong." He then said the Mormon god lied, or Jesus Christ did.

1. For Jesus said, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matthew 16: 18.

2. And Daniel says, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed."—Daniel 2: 44.

3. Another individual said, "Jesus said while on the cross, 'It is finished,' and all the devils in hell or this side of there can not get a revelation since then."

4. Another prominent minister makes the following statements in a sermon opposing anything aside from the Bible as being divine. He read Revelation 22: 18, 19, saying that "any revelation would not only be adding to the book of Revelation, but would be adding to the Bible."

5. Classed the Veda, Koran, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and revelations to Ellen G. White together.

6. They all were the results of hysteria, epilepsy, or catalepsy.

7. That the Koran excelled them all as a literary production, and in morality and spirituality.

8. That Mohammed was an epileptic, Ellen G. White received an injury to the head while young, and her manifestations were a result of it. Joseph Smith had a severe attack of epilepsy when he went to the woods to inquire of the Lord as to which church he should join.

9. That there was no such thing as a special call to the ministry; and no one was qualified to preach unless he could repeat correctly the first five books of the New Testament.

10. That sinners have no promise of any help in getting religion.

I have numbered these so-called arguments for convenience, and will number answers also.

1. Jesus was correct when he said, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." He was also correct when he said, "From the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."—Matthew 11: 12. But if the gentleman's ideas were correct, Jesus was mistaken in one statement or the other. The gates of hell did not prevail against either the rock or the church; but the violent did prevail against the church. Paul said, "I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them."—Acts 20: 29, 30.

And John the Revelator says that a certain power should arise, that would "make war with the saints," and "overcome them; and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations. And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."—Revelation 13: 7, 8. When those whose names were written in the book mentioned passed away, the beast having power over all others, the church would no longer exist, having been overcome by the grievous wolves, perverse preaching, the violent, and the beast, none of which were the "gates of hell."

On the other hand Jesus says, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."—Revelation 1: 18. His soul was not left in hell. (See Acts 2: 31.) So the gates mentioned did not and will not prevail; for death and hell will eventually give up the dead that are in them. (See Revelation 20: 13.) Hence both the statements of the Savior are correct, and the position taken is untenable.

2. In quoting Daniel 2: 44, the gentleman evidently supposed that it applied to the work of Christ, as set up by him, some nineteen centuries ago. But not so. The prophet is speaking of conditions as represented by the toes of the image. And in the days of these kings the God of heaven would set up a kingdom. Christ was born in the days of the iron kingdom, i. e., Roman. Notice, "And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree . . . that all the world should be taxed."—Luke 2: 1. This shows that Rome had universal power in the Savior's time, and the kingdom established in those times was taken by force, hence did not have the enduring qualities of the one referred to by the Prophet Daniel.

3. The person using the expression mentioned probably meant to insinuate that it was devilish to advocate any further revelation than that contained in the Bible. It was only necessary to inform him that not a word of the New Testament was written when Jesus said, "It is finished."

4. The Latter Day Saints believe Revelation 22: 18, 19, just as firmly as it is possible for any one to do. No man has the right to add to or take away from God's word; but God has never assured us he would not send any more prophets into the world, or that he would never speak again himself. The same restriction is found in Deuteronomy 4: 2 as that in Revelation 22:18, 19; and it did not prohibit the reception of the balance of the Old and all of the New Testament.

5. The books referred to should not be classed together, but each should be judged on its own merit.

6. An assertion without proof.

7. I have before me the Koran, translated by George Sale, which is prefixed by a history of Mohammed, which bears evidence of having been written by an opposer rather than by one favorable to his religion. Mr. Sale says in the preface, "The Koran is universally allowed to be written with the utmost elegance and purity of language. It is confessedly the standard of the Arabian tongue." Hence the conclusion as to its merit as a literary production. As to its morality, we have only to quote from its pages to show that the gentleman's standard of morality is not high, and his judgment not good. In chapter 2, page 59, polygamy is taught in the following language: "There shall they enjoy wives subject to no impurity, and there shall they continue for ever." Also, chapter 4, page 102, we read, "And if ye fear that ye shall not act with equity toward orphans of the female sex, take in marriage of such other women as please you, two, or three, or four, and not more." And in the same chapter, page 111, we find the following, "And if they turn back from the faith, take them and kill them wherever ye find them." And again, chapter 18, page 246, we read: "Remember when we said unto the angels, Worship ye Adam; and they all worshiped him, except Eblis who was one of the genii, and departed from the command of his Lord." In these extracts we have polygamy, blood-atonement, and Adam-worship. Any one commending the morality as excelling that of the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants certainly has not a very high standard of morals in his own mind; and, as to spirituality, a man having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof, certainly is not qualified to judge of the spirituality of any production whatever.

Paul says:

The things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual. . . . But he that is spiritual judgeth all things, yet he himself is judged of no man.—1 Corinthians 2:11-15.

Hence a man that does not believe in spiritual manifestations is not competent to judge of the spirituality of anything.

8. The history of Mohammed, referred to, states that he was an epileptic, but the historian certainly was not friendly to him, often showing a bitter feeling toward him and his religion, which a just historian should not manifest. But whether the statement was true or otherwise is immaterial as far as it relates to the latter-day work. The work of each of the parties mentioned must stand upon its own merits. And nowhere in history can be found a single thing that would go to show that Joseph Smith ever suffered from epilepsy, or any similar affliction. It is his claim that the powers of darkness were manifest, after which, he says, "I saw two personages (whose brightness and glory defy all description) standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name, and said, (pointing to the other,) 'This is my beloved Son.'" —Church History, vol. 1, p. 9. This sophistical method of dealing with this statement of history, can have no more effect against its truthfulness than it would against the veracity of many historical statements found in the Scriptures. The infidel could bring the same statement against the divinity of many of the Bible statements. The statement that Joseph Smith was an epileptic would have no more weight as against his testimony, than it would against the testimony of the Apostle Paul, as recorded in Acts 22:6. He could not see for three days by reason of the glory of the light that shone around him. Or against the statement of John the Revelator, when he tells us of the wonderful visions of the Savior, and the thousands of angels, and the souls that were under the altar, and the New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven. Joseph Smith, notwithstanding the denunciations of the ministers to whom he related his experience, knew that he had seen the vision and heard the statement of the person who addressed him. And time has proved the truthfulness of a statement made to him in answer to his inquiry as to which church he should join, when he was told to join none of them, for they were all wrong, and their creeds were an abomination in the sight of the One who addressed him. If their creeds were right then, they are wrong now; for they have, many of them, become an abomination in the sight of the devotees of the churches mentioned, who have changed them. And if they are right now they were wrong then, just as Joseph was informed.

9. If this objection is correct, then there is not an individual on the face of the earth that is authorized to "administer for man in things pertaining to God"; for "no man taken this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron."—Hebrews 5:4. Jesus never authorized any man or set of men to call and authorize their fellow men to act in his name; but said unto his disciples: "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."—Matthew 9: 37, 38. Again he says, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you."—John 15: 16. And, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you."—John 20: 21. Paul says, "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."—Romans 10: 17. "How shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent?"—Romans 10: 14, 15. These quotations show that the ministers of God are called, chosen, and sent by himself.

10. The Lord says, "My spirit shall not always strive with man."—Genesis 6: 3. This shows that as a rule God's Spirit does strive with man, and that when it does cease to so strive it is the exception and not the rule. Jesus says, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him."—John 6: 44. Again, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."—Revelation 3: 20. Hence we see that naturally the Spirit of the Lord strives with the sinner. The Father draws them, and Jesus is knocking at the door. So we see that the objections are not well taken, and their arguments are unreasonable.

However, there are many scriptural evidences that the Lord would reveal his will in the days and years subsequent to the work of the Master and his apostles, as recorded in the Bible. And while man is forbidden to add to or take from the word of the Lord, there is nothing to show that he would never speak to the children of men again; and, as these objectors claim to be silent where the Bible is silent, they should stick to their text, and hold their peace along these lines.

There are many promises that the Holy Spirit would manifest itself in many ways, and there is no limit as to time, people, or place, when people put themselves in a proper condition to receive such manifestations. The following is an everlasting covenant:

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.—Acts 2: 38, 39.

This promise is to all, as many as the Lord our God shall call. Jesus says:

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matthew 11: 28. Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live.—Ezekiel 33: 11. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations.—Matthew 28: 19. Preach the gospel to every creature.—Mark 16: 15. I . . . will draw all men unto me.—John 12: 32.

The call is universal, the promise also. Jesus says:

I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever.—John 14: 16. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.—John 14: 26. But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me.—John 15: 26. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will show you things to come.—John 16: 13. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our Spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ.—Romans 8: 16, 17. Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.—1 Corinthians 2: 9, 10. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.—1 Corinthians 12: 7. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom he hath sent.—John 17: 3. All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.—Matthew 11: 27.

From these passages and many others of like character, we see that the promise is a general one, that the spiritual manifestations are promised to the disciples. "And, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." And whenever they are manifested in the latter times we have modern revelation.

If there had not been a falling away, the spiritual manifestations would have continued down through the ages until the present time; but "grievous wolves" entered in, men taught "perverse things," the "violent" took the kingdom by force, the Dark Ages followed; the reformers improved conditions materially, but did not restore former conditions. But, thanks be to the Giver of all good, he had promised that at "evening time it shall be light." Jesus says that at the eleventh hour he would send laborers into his vineyard. (Matthew 20: 6.) And that after the Son had been sent to receive the fruit of the vineyard, and had been slain by the wicked servants, he will let out his vineyard to other husbandmen. (See Matthew 21: 41.) And the prophets of old assure us of the reestablishment of God's kingdom. Jeremiah tells of it in the following language: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt."—Jeremiah 31: 31, 32. He will, in the latter times, "proceed to do a marvelous work, . . . even a marvelous work and a wonder." (Isaiah 29: 14.) Yes, he, the Lord, will "set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, . . . and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth." (Isaiah 11: 11, 12.) "For . . . blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved; as it is written. There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob."—Romans 11: 25, 26. All Israel shall be saved; not in ungodliness; it shall be turned away. Their sins shall be taken away, evidently upon the terms of the gospel. For John "saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people" . . . in "the hour of his judgment." (Revelation 14: 6, 7.) And those who have been worshiping something else will be called upon to "worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." The Lord will carry out that "which he hath purposed in himself: that in the dispensation of the fullness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, even in him." (Ephesians 1: 10.)

So it seems that the position that all revelation ceased with the Bible is untenable, and there is an abundance of scripture to warrant the belief that additional revelations have been given and will be received in the future, and those who oppose this idea will find out their mistake, notwithstanding their assertions, that where the Bible speaks they speak, and where the Bible is silent they are silent.

ASA S. COCHRAN.

• * * * •

CHRONOLOGY.

AN EXAMINATION OF THE DATES GIVEN IN HURLBUT'S NORMAL LESSONS.

Having attended the quarterly conference of the Far West District, which convened with the Stewartsville Branch, June 13 and 14, 1908, and being a close student of history and chronology, I noticed several mistakes that were made in chronology by the one sent there by the General Sunday-school Association to conduct the normal work. I am one who dislikes errors in all forms, so thought I would try to correct errors in chronology. I do this in all good feeling toward all concerned, and with malice toward none.

I shall take up all that was taught, by sections, and show wherein the errors lie, and try to correct the same by the Bible alone, though I could use history and astronomy on the same with very telling effect.

1. We were taught that the date of the creation of man was uncertain; which, if the Bible is consulted and is correct, is an error.

2. That the call of Abraham was 2280 B. C. Another error.

3. That the exodus was 1270 B. C. This is an error.

4. That the coronation of Saul was 1050 B. C. An error.

5. That the Babylonish captivity was 587 B. C.

Now I am free to assert, and can prove that all of the above dates are incorrect.

I will affirm that the creation of man was 3996 B. C.; and for proof will cite my readers to the Bible. Go with me to Genesis 5: 3, and there you have the starting-point, where it states that Adam was 130 years old when Seth was born. And in the sixth verse of the same chapter, we have the age of Seth at the birth of Enos, and so on. In the following verses, 9, 12, 15, 18, 21, 25, 28, we have the length of time from each father to the first son, which, added together, makes 1056 years from Adam to Noah. And in Genesis 7: 11, we have the statement that Noah was 600 years old when the flood came on the earth; and 1056 plus 600 equal 1656 years. This gives us the length of time from Adam to the flood. Vide Josephus, book 1, chapter 3, verse 3.

Now in Genesis 11: 10, we find that Arphaxad was born two years after the flood, and in the following verses of the same chapter we have the length of time that elapsed between the father and son. See verses 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, which added together gives us 222 years from Noah to Terah; and in the thirty-second verse of the same chapter we learn that Terah died in Sharan at the age of 205, and in the twelfth chapter, and fourth verse of Genesis we find that Abraham was 75 years old when he left Haran; and 222 plus 205, equal 427, the length of time from the flood to the call of Abraham, and 1,656 plus 427 equals 2083 years, the length of time from the creation of Adam to the call of Abraham, or the year 1913 B. C., instead of 2280 B. C. as was taught.

In Genesis 21: 3, we have an account of the birth of Isaac, which was 25 years subsequent to the call of Abraham, and in Genesis 25: 26 is the age of Isaac at the birth of Jacob, which was 60. In Genesis 47: 9, we learn that Jacob was 130 years old at the time he went down into Egypt; and 130 plus 60 plus 25 equals 215 years for the length of time from the call of Abraham to the going down into Egypt; and 2083 plus 215 equals 2298 as the year that Jacob went down into Egypt.

Now Josephus, the Jewish historian, in book 2, chapter 15, and verse 2, plainly states that "they left Egypt in the month of Xanthicus, on the fifteenth day of the lunar month; and four hundred and thirty years after our forefather Abraham came into Canaan, but 215 years only after Jacob removed into Egypt." So I am in harmony with the Assyrian Tablets, Josephus, and the Bible on the above length of time they were in Egypt. And 2298 plus 215½ equals 2513½ years as the length of time the Israelites were in Egypt and Canaan; and also, from the creation of Adam to the exodus was 2513½. "Even the selfsame day." (See Exodus 12: 40, 41.)

I could tabulate the reign of the judges and the kings, but this would take too much space, so will say that in 1 Kings 6:1, we have the plain statement that "in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign . . . he began to build the temple." And 2513½ plus 480½ equals 2994. This gives us the fourth year of Solomon's reign. Now take 4 from 2994, and you have the beginning of Solomon's reign, which was 2990 A. M. And as David and Saul each reigned 40 years, we subtract 80 years from 2990 and we have 2910 A. M. as the date of Saul's coronation, or 1086 B. C. instead of 1050 B. C.

1	2	3	4	5	6
Per. Hu. Ra. C. of man 0 A. M., 3996 B. C. Call of Abr. 2803 A. M., 1913 B. C.	Per. Cho. Fam. Call A. 2083-1913 Exodus E. 2513-1483	Per. Is. Peo. Ex. Eg. 2513-1483 Cor. Saul 2910-1086	Per. Is. Kgm. Cor. Saul 2910-1086 Assy. Cap. 3284-712	Per. Ju. Kg. 3029-3416 967-580 D. S. 3029 967 C. B. 3416 580	Per. Je. Prov. 3416-4065 580-69 A. D. C. B. 3416-580 D. J. 4065-69 A. D.
Dir. Adm. 0 A. M., 3996 B. C. 2083 A. M., 1913 B. C.	Pat. Admin. 2083-1913 2513½-1483	Theo. Adm. 2513-2910 1483-1086	Reg. Adm. 2910-3284 1086-712	Reg. Adm. 3029-3416 967-580	For. Adm. 3416-580 4065-69 A. D.
Fall Del. 1656-2340 Dis. 2219-1777	Jou. Pat. 2083-2298 1913-1698 Soj. Eg. 2803-2513½ 1913-1483 Opp. Is. 2298-2513 1698-1483	W. W. 2513-2553 1483-1443 C. C. 2553-2578 1443-1418 R. J. 2515½-2963½ 1482½-1082½	Ag. Un. 2910-3029 1086-967 Ag. Div. 3030-3182 966-814 Ag. Dec. 3182-3284 814-712	Ag. Div. 3029-3284 967-712 Ag. Deca. 3284-3416 712-580	Chal. Sup. 3460-3666 586-580 Per. Sup. 3666-3705 380-291 Gre. Sup. 3705-3824 294-176
Adam 0 A. M.—3066 B. C. Enoch 622 A. M.—3009 B. C. Noah 1056 A. M.—2006 B. C.	Abra. 2083-2183 1913-1813 Jac. 2168-2298 1828-1688 Jos. 2259-2316 1737-1680	Mos. 2433-2553 1563-1443 Josh. 2453-2563. 1543-1433 Gid. 2917-2908 1079-1067 Sam. 2852-2948 1144-1048	Dav. 2950-2990 1046-1006 Elij. 3086-3127 910-869 Heze. 3254-3284 742-712	Isa. 3254-3234 742-722 Jer. 3396-3431 600-575 Eze. 3410-3430 586-566	Mac. Sup. 3624-3956 176-40 Rom. Sup. 3956-4065 40 B. C.—69 A. D. Dan. 3362-3446 614-580 Ezra 3469-3544 527-452 Sim. Just. 3698-3707 501-291 Jud. Mac. 3833-3860 106-136 Herod 3960-4065 36 B. C.—69 A. D.

In 2 Chronicles 9:30 we find that Solomon reigned 40 years, and according to the Assyrian records he (Solomon) began to reign in the year 2990½, and 40 years added to this gives 3030½ as the date of Solomon's death; and by consulting the following passages you will see that the reigns of the kings of Judah covered a period of 386¼ years, or from 3030½ to 3416¾ inclusive. (See 2 Chronicles 11:17; 13:1, 2; 16:13; 20:31; 21:5; 19; 22:2; 2 Kings 11:3; 2 Chronicles 23:1; 25:1; 26:3; 27:1; 28:1; 29:1; 33:1, 21; 34:1; 36:2, 5; 10:11; 2 Kings 25.) This takes us to the Babylonish captivity, which occurred 3416¾ A. M., or 580 B. C., which I can prove by history, astronomy, Josephus, and the Bible, if called upon to do so.

It is very generally conceded that the nativity occurred four years before our Christian Era; but by adding the dates as we find them in the Bible it will give you 3996 years as the length of time from the creation to the nativity, and 3416¾ plus 580 equal 3996¼, and as the nativity occurred on the twenty-fifth day of our December, but on the fifth of the Jewish month Chisleu, this would make the new moon come on December 20, 3996, or the year of the nativity, and as December was the third month of the Jewish year, we have the one fourth year; and we have 3996 B. C. as the creation year.

Summary, we have:

First, 0 A. M., or 3996 B. C., as the date of the creation.

Second, 2083 A. M., or 1913 B. C., as the date of the call of Abraham.

Third, 2513½ A. M., or 1483 B. C., as the date of the exodus of Israel.

Fourth, 2910 A. M., or 1086 B. C., as the date of the coronation of Saul.

Fifth, 3030½ A. M., or 966 B. C., as the date of the division of the kingdom.

Sixth, 3284 A. M., or 712 B. C., as the date of the Assyrian captivity.

Seventh, 3416¾ A. M., or 580 B. C., as the date of the Babylonish captivity.

Eighth, 3996 A. M., or 4 B. C., as the date of the nativity.

On the preceding page I present a diagram of the first six lessons in the Normal, as I find it in the Bible, etc., and by turning to the Normal you will find the key.

In conclusion let me ask, Why is it that our people can not see this? Is it because they have not the time to look it up? or is it because they prefer to take the words of some one who claims to know, but who does not know?

Trusting that this may start some one to looking this up; and that we may, in the near future, have a system of chronology of our own, and one that we know to be correct, I am

W. F. CURTIS.

Of General Interest

THE NEWPORT PLAN.

In our last week's issue we gave a synopsis of the plan adopted by the city of Des Moines, Iowa, known as the "Des Moines plan," to secure good city government free from party politics. Following is a synopsis of what is known as the "Newport plan." Some interest will be found in comparing the two.—HERALD EDITORS.

In our Newport system, we have a body of one hundred and ninety-five known as the representative council elected for three years, in whose hands are all legislative power, and a board consisting of a mayor and five aldermen elected for one year, as executives. The representative council broadly speaking has the powers of a town-meeting, and the board of aldermen of which the mayor is a member and also presiding officer, the powers of selectmen. The number of one hundred and ninety-five was fixed upon as large enough to be fully representative of the people, but too large for effective control in meeting, and also as being a multiple of thirteen and thirty-nine, the latter being the number elected for each ward, one third renewable yearly. The representative council is elected by wards, only those voting who pay a property tax on not less than one hundred and thirty-four dollars, this being a proviso of the Rhode Island Constitution in reference to such bodies. The aldermen are nominated by wards but are nominated by the city taxpaying vote. The mayor is voted for by the whole electorate. I would add that the Rhode Island rule disqualifies about fourteen hundred of the total fifty-four hundred Newport electors for voting for the council or for any proposition to impose a tax or spend money.

The representative council has its first meeting on the first Monday in January, elects a chairman, a large number of city officers, does a large amount of other business, and adjourns to wait a call to consider the budget. This is reported by a committee of twenty-five of the council, five from each ward, appointed by the chairman. The report of this committee must be printed and distributed to all taxpaying voters at least a week before the adjourned meeting called to consider it. I would say that this procedure is taken from that of Brookline, to one of whose citizens, Mr. Alfred D. Chandler, we also owe the suggestion of a large council with town-meeting powers. I would call special attention to this budget committee. It is large enough to be fully representative; its action is open and above board; its findings are known before they are finally passed upon.

The referendum and initiative in money propositions are made easy; the council itself can be called together at any time upon the written request of twenty-five of its members, or upon the request of the board of aldermen; the meetings must be with open doors, and its records open to public inspection; it elects the city officials, fixes their salaries and defines their duties; it may, by vote of two thirds of all the members, remove an officer for misconduct or incapacity. Any taxpayer, man or woman, may appear before the council and address it, subject of course to necessary rules.

The mayor has power to suspend any city official and bring the case before the whole board of aldermen. If the board sustain the charges, the official is dismissed. The official has, however, ten days in which he may make appeal to the representative council, whose action is final. The board of aldermen forms the several committees for the supervision of the administration of the city departments; it reports their condition, with recommendations, annually; it also attends the meetings of the council and gives such information as may be required. The mayor and aldermen receive salaries fixed by the council; the members of the council receive none. These are now, for the mayor twelve hundred dollars; the aldermen nine hundred dollars. These officials may not be interested in any city contract nor may any of them, stockholders in a corporation, vote upon a proposition or with reference to a contract between the city and such corporation.

The election, in order to separate it from party elections, is fixed for the first Monday in December; nomination papers are filed with the city clerk at least twelve days before this date; all candidates must give a written acceptance of candidacy; thirty signatures at least of taxpaying voters in the ward are necessary to nominate for the representative council; one hundred of the general electorate, to nominate for the School Committee; and two hundred and fifty of the general electorate, to nominate for mayor. No one can sign the papers of more persons than he is allowed to vote for. Though the aldermen must be residents of the wards for which they stand, they are voted for by the whole of the taxpaying voters of the city. Nothing of a political nature can appear upon the nomination paper or ballots.

It will be seen that the system developed in this charter is one of extreme simplicity. It unites all legislative power in a single body, and establishes a small committee to carry the authority of this body into effect; it brings back to the people in a very effective degree the authority which has been taken from them by political rings and combines; it separates the municipal from state and national elections; it separates the power authorizing the spending of money from the power which expends, thus vastly increasing the difficulty of a vicious combine. In the words of the "Explanatory Statement" which accompanied the act when brought before the legislature, it "is absolutely open to the knowledge of all the people; gives the right to every one to speak upon any proposition; allows no opportunity to stifle any question; makes it easy for any one to bring forward any subject for consideration; opens the budget to full inspection and discussion by the people before it is adopted; in a word, makes the public the master it should be in all questions affecting its civic welfare." Its one defect so far as I can see is in its short terms for the executives and technical staff.—Chautauquan, June, 1908.

• * * * •

BREWERS ATTACKING THE DRINK EVIL.

It is suggested by the Brooklyn Times that the Prohibitionists give President Liebmann, of the United States Brewers' Association, a place on their ticket in view of his strong temperance speech at the opening of the Brewers' Convention in Milwaukee, and in view of the resolutions with which the convention closed. "It is our duty," said Mr. Liebmann to the assembled brewers, "to spread the conviction that our industry stands for temperance in the best sense of the word, and will neither countenance nor tolerate anything not thoroughly in accord with the moral and physical welfare of the people." In its resolutions the association declared its "sympathy" and "coöperation" with "any movement looking to the promotion of habits of temperance in the use of fermented beverages," being careful to stipulate, however, that "by temperance is meant temperate use—neither abuse nor disuse." The Association goes on to brand as false the idea "that the commercial interests of the brewer are served by encouraging or conniving at lawlessness," and declares that disorderly saloons should be exterminated, "and not only the community be purified of objectionable places, but the brewing trade freed of an incubus which it is now struggling to shake off without such assistance." We are assured that "no one would hail such a consummation with greater satisfaction than the brewer." They therefore ask the public "to accept our assurance that the objectionable features of the retail liquor traffic do not rest upon and are not backed either by the commercial interests or by any supposed political power of the brewers, but that the elimination of such objectionable features is most earnestly desired by our trade, that we will lend our fullest coöperation toward their extinction, and invite the assistance of public officials and the people in general to that end."

These words of the president and the "platform" of the association are regarded as the official beginning of the campaign to rid the trade of the disreputable saloons that are blamed for the prohibition movement. Action has been begun in Milwaukee itself by the mayor and police chief, who have made a "black list" of forty-three saloons that are to be closed. The Milwaukee Wisconsin believes the work of the brewers "deserves encouragement from friends of social betterment," and the Pittsburg Leader thinks the eradication of the low grogeries "will make unnecessary sterner but too often less effective measures on the part of the people for the control of the liquor business." Many other papers wish the brewers success in their new line of endeavor, and the New York Tribune believes that if they go at it "heart, soul, and purse, in a war against dives and harmful saloons," the prohibition movement will "inevitably lose a considerable part of its present impetus." If they go at it half-heartedly, the Tribune looks for more prohibition victories.

The sincerity of the brewers is doubted by the Toledo Blade. It recalls that "when the assault against the saloon first took shape, the brewers tried bluff and bluster." Then they tried politics, and then advertising:

"Only when driven to the last ditch have the brewers seemed to appreciate the errors of their past campaigns, and shown symptoms of intelligence. We assume they are growing wise from the statement made that the convention is discussing methods whereby the business can be placed on a more legitimate basis.

"Had the brewers taken the necessary steps, years ago, to lop off the most disreputable feature of the traffic, the prohibition movement would not be what it is to-day. It is the low dive and the grogery, the wine-room, and the political work which is indispensable to the protection of these bad resorts that have aroused the people to strong protest. All such reforms must be backed by public sentiment in order to make progress, and the brewers themselves, by their arrogance and selfishness, are responsible for the public sentiment that is behind the present prohibition wave.

"How far the brewers will go to improve conditions in their own household is a question, but the fact that they did nothing in that direction until driven in a corner robs their new program of much of its efficiency. For the people, taking heed of the past, can not convince themselves that there is any sincerity in the proposed reformation of the business."

The Philadelphia North American, which the Prohibitionists consider their best friend in the ranks of the daily press, says:

"Excellent in all respects, so far as mere words go, is the proclamation of the brewers. Had such a platform been put forth and honestly adhered to before the abuses and crimes of brewry-backed saloon men had piled so high that finally they toppled over upon the heads of those really responsible, the present national protest against the traffic would not have come into being. . . .

"But they speak too late. They have sinned away their day of grace. Their repentance comes after the clock has struck twelve.

"And even now they do not speak honestly, for they declare that 'it is a mistake to believe that the commercial interests of the brewers stand back of the excessive multiplication of saloons or any of the unlawful or improper practices of the saloonkeeper.'

"The chattel mortgage and license records of every city in the land give the lie to the first statement. And the power in their hands is never used to check all evils by cutting off the supplies from saloons that tolerate gambling, the social evil, sales to minors and drunkards and during illegal hours. . . .

"For the moment we believe that they would be willing to do a little temporary housecleaning, if by that means they could check the overwhelming wave of the people's indignation. But their past proves that this means only that:

"The Devil was sick, the Devil a saint would be.
The Devil got well, the Devil a saint was he."

The accompanying diagrams are based on the annual beverage statistics gathered and published by the American Grocer (New York). It says in comment:

"Nearly double as much per capita is spent for drink as is spent for the maintenance of public schools. It nearly equals the value of exports of merchandise per capita. It is double the amount of the public debt. It is more than the farm value of the corn crop, which exceeds twenty-five million bushels; three times the value of the wheat grown; more than double the worth of the cotton crop. The indirect cost is beyond estimate, and so great is the waste and misery created that States are fighting the evil and endeavoring to banish the saloon as a distributing factor. It is easily the foremost question of the day, and places the support of a big navy or army in the shade."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat explains that the large figures for drink in 1907 do not discredit prohibition, because "the prohibition movement in the South, although well under way in 1907, had not yet won any great victories or placed entire States under prohibition, and we shall not be able to tell how far the prohibition in the South has affected us until 1909."—Literary Digest, June 20, 1908.

• * * * •

To be conscious that you are ignorant is a great step to knowledge.—Disraeli.

• * * •

Necessity is the argument of tyrants; it is the creed of slaves.—William Pitt.

• * * •

A liar should have a good memory.—Quintillian.

THE BORROWED MIRROR.

"What will other people think?" is the most cowardly phrase in use in society.

Only weak men stand in fear of the censure of the neighborhood.

Whatever is great in life brings down censure upon the head of the doer.

A man who lives, moves, and has his being in other people's opinions has not risen to the level of animal intelligence. The dog and horse are at least sincere and natural in all their acts.

Why not dress your life before your own mirror?

Look for your reflection in your own mind. There is a secret judge of all your acts within you. Conscience is your private opinion of yourself.

Why borrow a thing when you possess it yourself? What does it matter what others think of your actions? What do you think of them?

Some men crouch, crawl, and skulk all their lives. They are cowed by a whisper, their purpose is shaken by a look. They run like sheep before somebody's opinion, though they would return blow for blow if they were attacked on the highway.

They are larded, greased, and curled wax figures. Whenever they move you know that Public Opinion has pulled a wire somewhere. When they speak you know what they will say. They are not men enough to offend.

The ogre, Public Opinion, slays more originality and individuality than all the barbarous superstitious codes put together. It is the modern Moloch before which we all meekly bend.

That shameful hypocrisy which permeates society everywhere is born of the fear of other people's opinions. Sincerity and plain speaking are at a premium everywhere. We lie from morning until night, and pretend to things we abhor.

Turn once upon that lazy braggart, Public Opinion, and see it scamper away.

It is our latest idol, the modern social Jugger-naut.—Cosmopolitan.

Original Poetry

A Dream.

I had a dream long years ago,—
 A dream so wondrous sweet and rare
 The mem'ry leaves my soul aglow
 When pond'ring o'er the vision fair.
 Midst loving friends I seemed to be,
 All waiting for the coming Lord.
 We longed his glorious face to see,
 Yet were too full to speak a word.
 The "marriage supper" seemed to be
 Where we were sitting filled with peace;
 God's Spirit came till we could see
 "Eye to eye"—true heavenly bliss.
 With greater power the Spirit thrilled;
 Our souls with rapture grew apace.

And then the vacant chair was filled—
 Behold the Savior of the race!

O bliss, O joy unspeakable!
 His beaming smile did so entrance!
 That look of love unutterable!
 That glorious shining countenance!

His cheeks were full and rosy red,
 His curly beard of golden brown;
 And round his royal head,
 The silken locks came waving down.

His eyes beamed out in bluish-gray,
 They shone so wise and tenderly.
 There are no words that can portray
 His charming personality.

His manly form beyond compare,
 The shoulders broad and breast so strong;
 Oh, what a place of refuge there
 For all the weary ones who long—

For something better, sweeter far,
 Than found on earth's drear pilgrimage;
 Yea, perfect love without a thing to mar,
 A friend unchanged from age to age.

May 5, 1908.

SR. MINNIE ANDERSON-WARNOCK.

An Inheritance in Zion.

And inheritance in Zion!
 How the heart of every Saint
 Throbs with joy and thrills with longing,
 As this thought they contemplate.

Not a place in which to sojourn
 For a year, or two, or three;
 But a home, secure, abiding,
 That inheritance shall be.

But the joy pulse, nor the longing
 Can obtain for us that prize;
 We must, if we'd claim the promise,
 From our lethargy arise,

And with diligence endeavor
 To obtain the promised land,
 Each one giving of his substance,
 With free heart and ready hand.

Ever striving to secure
 Riches, in an honest way,
 That we may bring consecrations,
 Liberal tithes and offerings pay.

Thus the land may soon be purchased,
 Then in thriving state we'll find,
 For the maintenance of many,
 Industries of various kind.

Like the Jews of bygone ages,
 We may claim and hold the land;
 We may dedicate a temple,
 And build up a city, grand.

But, like them, a perfect Zion,
 One the Lord would own and bless,
 We can never make, if heedless,
 Of the laws of righteousness.

While we make a prosperous city,
 We unitedly prepare,
 Each his own heart must be making
 Ready for a dwelling there.

For 'tis those who're pure hearted,
Who, we're told in language plain,
An inheritance in Zion,
Can secure and retain.

In the heart that God calls pure,
Selfishness will not be found;
But for God and fellow creatures
In such hearts will love abound.

Love for God will prompt us ever
To obey his every law;
And each day we'll grow more perfect,
As we nearer to him draw.

With the pure in heart, no malice,
Jealousy, or strife can be;
But there's meekness, kindly feeling,
Perfect love and unity.

If for all our fellow creatures,
We a perfect love will bear,
All the worldly goods we're blessed with,
We will freely with them share.

If we thus strive to be perfect,
And like Enoch's loving band,
Each will ever give the other,
Willingly, a helping hand;

If, like them, for perfect union,
Oneness, and equality,
We will ever strive in earnest,
Owned and blessed of God we'll be.

And although our perfect Zion
He may not to heaven take,
We'll be loved as Enoch's people;
Of a joy as great partake.

There will be no lack of blessings;
Of the Spirit's power no dearth.
Our inheritance in Zion
Then will seem a heaven on earth.

SR. A. E. DEMPSEY.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. F. M. Smith, secretary, 630 South Chrysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. E. Etzenhouser, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Daughters of Zion Reading for July.

TO WHOM DOES THE CHILD BELONG? NO. 3. TO HIS PARENTS.

The obligation of children to their parents is much insisted upon, but the obligation of the parents to their children is less considered. . . .

It is the parents' duty to see that this "bundle of capabilities" which he calls his child, shall be trained in accordance with its own individuality, with its duty toward its fellow men. The parents' love must protect the child; their judgment serve him until his own experience shall develop judgment. Their example should be the child's model, and their precepts should accord with their practice. . . .

The habits of the parents in childhood, youth, and maturity, before the child has received the gift of individual life, have been forming the characteristics of the child—physical, mental, and spiritual. In truth, it is in these potential years of his existence that the child belongs most to the parent. In these later days considerable thought is given to pre-natal culture, but it is usually limited to the three quarters of a year which precedes the child's advent upon the earth, and referred most of all to the mother's influence. But the culture which the child receives through the whole life of his parents is even of more importance. Observant men and women have noticed how the childhood of parents is reproduced in the childhood of their offspring. Not only in their looks, but in tendencies, habits, likes, dislikes, of which the child has never heard as a peculiarity of the parent's childhood, do the children reproduce the parents.

I remember once looking with some anxiety at a willful, excitable child, and wondering what she would be as a woman, and the mother, a peculiarly sweet and lovable woman, said reassuringly, "She will come out all right. I was just such a child"; and the result has proved her prophecy correct. Men sometimes in a correct maturity are surprised at the wildness of their sons, forgetting that in their own youthful dissipations, they were creating the tendencies of their future children. If they had realized that the eyes of those children, who were not to receive their individual life for years to come, were watching their actions as models for future copying; that their unborn ears were hearing profane or vulgar words to repeat in after years; if they had felt that the impressionable hearts and minds of their children to be were receiving indelible impresses through their own practices, they could and doubtless would have saved themselves future anxiety and their children suffering, by living more virtuously. A mother who had been a coquettish girl, said to me, as her daughter was approaching womanhood: "As I think back over my girlhood, and recall my own imprudent conduct, the blushes run over me from head to foot, and I think, 'Oh, if my daughter should be a flirt!'" And the daughter is manifesting the same tendencies, and giving the mother many an anxious hour, and that mother moans: "Oh, why did not some one tell me in those girlish follies what I was doing for my children?"

In those years when her daughter most truly belonged to her, she might have molded her for all womanly virtues, but she did not know. People sometimes say that young folks will not be influenced by an appeal to such motives for right conduct; but experience demonstrates that a large proportion of young people will hear and heed. More especially is this the case if they have not been accustomed to hear jesting or vulgar speeches in regard to the duties which will devolve upon them in the future. A lad of sixteen was asked which would be the stronger motive to refrain from wrong-doing: that it would injure himself, or that it would injure his children; and he replied promptly, "I would not do it if I knew it would injure my children." A girl of fifteen, writing to one who had spoken before a girl's school upon the duty of taking care of health from the highest motives, says, "I thank you sincerely for the good advice you gave us, and I am going to try to take good care of myself in every way for the sake of my future children."

Herbert Spencer says, in regard to education, that the first thing to be taught is that parentage is a possibility for all; its duties the noblest in life; and should be prepared for. In the training of the children of the present generation, then, one of the most important lessons is that their possible children belong to them now, and are to be modified, impressed, and to a certain extent created, by the deeds of their own youth. This question of inheritance is not only of interest, but of vital importance; and it is a consoling thought that we can mold future generations by the modifications which we create in ourselves, by the habits which we form, the education which we receive, or even by the thoughts which we hold in our secret hearts. In view of this, we might truly say that the child belongs to the parent before he belongs to himself, and this thought gives a seriousness and grandeur to fatherhood and motherhood that is almost overwhelming. This thought, also, should make us more tenderly patient with our children, because, when they belonged so exclusively to us, we did not do the best for them. The idea that the child belongs to the parent, then, is one that puts the greater burden of obligation upon the parent, rather than on the child; and the lack of fulfilling these obligations in the sowing time of his own youth, puts upon him a greater obligation to weed out carefully the tares which he sowed, and to be more patient if the harvest of virtues is not all that he desired.

This child belongs to me,
And in his virtues and his vices shows
What I myself have been, and what I am.
He owes me—what? Alas, I dare not say
When I remember all that I have been;
But this I know, I owe him patient love,
And faithful, tender care to weed away
The faults I planted in his garden fair.

—Mary Wood-Allen, M. D., in American Motherhood.

Questions on July Reading.

Under what obligation are children to their parents? What other obligation has claim upon our consideration? What training does this obligation require parents to give their children? Why should a child's individuality be first considered? How is a child's individuality developed? What must protect the child until his own judgment is developed? From what is he to be protected? How may a child's character be injured by allowing his judgment too great latitude? If the parents' judgment always decides, what may be the effect upon the child's self-reliance? In what sense does the child belong to the parents in their early years? How far does the prenatal culture of the child extend? In what ways do children reproduce their parents? Is it safe to presume that children will come out "all right" because the parents have done so? What purpose may it serve for parents to tell their children of the failings of their youth? Do you think they may be influenced as suggested in the reading? What may be the effect of coarse jests and vulgar speeches in regard to parenthood? In the relation of parents and children, where does the greater obligation rest? With the serious responsibility resting upon them, to what end should parents exercise patience?

Program for July.

Hymn No. 279, Saints' Hymnal; reading from Home Column with discussion; paper, "Parentage a possibility for all"; paper, "Patient indulgence or patient direction"; roll-call; business; hymn 199; closing prayer.

One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,
Than all the sages can.—Wordsworth.

• • •

Cheerful at morn, he wakes from short repose,
Breasts the keen air, and carols as he goes.

—Oliver Goldsmith.

Letter Department

A Miracle of Healing.

LAMONI, Iowa, February 10, 1908.

Editors Herald: The inclosed testimony was sent by my uncle, Elder A. F. Henderson, and thinking it should have worthy mention in the HERALD I send it to you for publication.

Yours in gospel bonds,

MRS. J. E. STOWELL.

"GILBERT PLAINS, [Canada,] January 13, 1908.

"A miracle of healing performed under the hands of Elder A. F. Henderson, upon Alice Emelow, who was near unto death, and who, only for the prayers of those Saints that were around her and acquainted with her, would have passed away hours before the elder could have reached here, as at frequent intervals she would take spasms and at the close of each of those spasms she would, as it were, pass away; and we, the undersigned witnesses, could only bring her to consciousness by throwing water in her face and constant rubbing, by which means we kept life in her till the elder arrived. At the hour of half past six in the morning she was first administered to by Elder A. F. Henderson; at ten o'clock she wanted to get out of bed, and at half past eleven she arose, dressed herself, and had dinner with us and others at the table. As we, the undersigned eye-witnesses, testify.

"WILLIAM H. BRADEN.

"JOHN DALLYN.

"ARTHUR WARD.

"LIZZIE WARD.

"ALICE EMELOW.

"MRS. WM. H. BRADEN.

"ARTHUR H. BRADEN.

"MARY A. BRADEN.

"All of Gilbert Plains.

"Elder A. F. Henderson's address is 217 Lipton Street, Winnipeg."

SHABBONA, Michigan, June 16, 1908.

Editors Herald: It is with pleasure that I say God has spared my life. In answer to many questions as to why I returned to the Latter Day Saints' Church, I give as a reason that I can not find pleasure in the world after tasting of God's heavenly gifts. No matter how hard I fought against my feelings, I could not overcome that longing for God's Spirit, and still I fought God. About this time, one evening on my return home, I heard my parents in prayer. Listening, I heard what brought tears to my eyes. They were praying for my return to my place in the church. God has answered those prayers: I have returned to his people, my wife has joined hands with me, and we are trying to serve God with fear and trembling. I know this work is true.

I ask your prayers in my behalf. My prayers are for the advancement of the cause.

In gospel bonds,

J. G. GROOMBRIDGE.

DURHAM, Oklahoma, June 11, 1908.

Editor Herald: We have no meetings here and would be so glad if we could. There seem to be no other Saints around here at all. Mother, brother, sister, a nephew, and myself are all the Saints in the neighborhood. Mrs. J. B. Lytle is my mother's name.

I had the misfortune to lose my dear companion about a year ago. He was home from South America two months when he died. I am left with three little ones to support.

If there is any place where I could have a good home for myself and children, and work to support them as best I could, I would be pleased to hear about it. I would have to keep my children with me and the oldest will be old enough to go to school this winter, he being six in October. Perhaps I could get such a place at the Saints' Home or at Graceland College as there would have to be laundry work and sewing, cooking, and such work done.

I would like so well to be where I could go to church and raise my little ones in the faith. I can say I know this is a glorious work. I love to read the church papers, but have never had a chance till I came to live with my brother who takes the HERALD. I ask the prayers of all the Saints that I may live faithfully and raise my little ones as they should be.

Your sister in Christ,
MRS. G. H. GRIM.

VERA, Oklahoma, June 16, 1908.

Dear Herald: This is a new place where the true gospel has never before been heard until our noble brother, Lee Quick, came here and began to preach. It seemed like every sermon was given by inspiration and scattered prejudice from the minds of the people so they could understand the gospel in its purity. He preached twenty-five times and baptized twenty, all adults but three. It seems there are many more almost ready for the water. I have not words to express my gratitude and love for this great work and for the love that God has shown towards us in these meetings.

My husband and I were the only Saints here, and how thankful we are to see so many of the very best people of the town obey the truth! Nearly all of them have homes of their own, and we hope to see a branch raised up here in the near future. The people of the town gave liberally to our brother, twenty-five dollars in cash, and he has sold eight Books of Mormon.

Never since we have been members of the church have we seen such favor turned toward our people, and we have been members for seventeen years. Our prayers are that it will continue throughout the whole world. We are praying for the blessing of God upon the work, and especially upon the sisters who stay at home and care for the children while their husbands go out to spread the gospel among those who are honest in heart. May God bless the HERALD and its readers.

Yours in bonds,
MR. AND MRS. WM. W. SHOEMAKER.

PROVO, Utah, June 16, 1908.

Saints Herald: It has been quite a while since I have written to you. I have tried to keep busy at the Master's work. This field is a peculiar one in many respects. Of late I have been tracting from house to house, and already I have several interested. I believe it is the best way to reach the people out here.

Last week I held a public discussion at Murray, Utah, with Elder Jacob A. Eades of the Utah church, for three evenings. Succession in the Presidency was the subject under consideration. From four to five hundred persons were present each evening. Bro. E. A. Davis, of Salt Lake City, was my moderator. It was a good chance to get before the people the differences between the two churches and we felt blessed in making the effort. Several of the Saints from Salt Lake were present each evening; also the Saints from Sandy and Union Fourth. The Salt Lake Tribune published a synopsis of the discussion. The Deseret News also made mention of the debate. We are working and praying that God will soon open the way more favorably to his work in this part of the vineyard. Judge Henry S. Tanner, whom I met in public debate at Provo two years ago, was present two evenings; and Joseph F. Smith, Jr., was present one evening. Bro. E. C. Briggs was present and seemed to enjoy the debate, as also Bro. George Thorburn, of the missionary force.

In gospel bonds,
210 West Fourth Street. J. F. CURTIS.

MORLAND, Kentucky, June 10, 1908.

Editors Herald: I would like to submit a summary of the work done by the officers of the Louisville Branch in the last quarter: Sermons preached by the writer forty, by Priest W. N. Hanner sixteen, by Priest John Zahnd twenty; meetings presided over by the writer twenty, W. N. Hanner thirty-four, John Zahnd nine, Teacher Robert Willis three. Other meetings attended to the number of one hundred and five.

We have been laboring hard to build up this branch, and have a prospect of an ingathering in the near future; but there are not many "lively stones" in and near the city now, and we have a pretty hard pull to keep the work moving.

I am here in a new place where we have never done any work before. We have good interest with fair crowds. Brn. James and Charles Oliver have moved into this (Casey,) county; both have Latter Day Saint companions, and want to do what they can for the work. I hope we can gather in others as good. The Brighamites have a hold here.

May God speed the redemption of Zion and may we all be gathered into that goodly land, is my prayer.

1719 Seventh Street. J. W. METCALF.

COLUMBUS, Kansas.

Brother Blair: I took Bro. and Sr. Curtis Randall, of this place, to the Bullis Medical Institute, 3509 Morgan Street, St. Louis, Missouri, for treatment by a specialist, Sr. Randall having suffered a long time from gall-stones. She had been reduced to a shadow, almost. The doctor removed the stones without an operation, and she is now rejoicing, as are also the Saints of this branch.

I found this doctor and wife to be very nice, plain people. He does not profess any church, but is a firm believer in God. He uses very little medicine. He had never met with any of our people, so I reasoned with him and his good wife from nine o'clock in the evening till one o'clock in the morning. I almost thought they would believe, although it was the first they ever heard about our religion.

On Sunday morning I went to the stone church in time for Sunday-school, and they have a good one. Bro. Sandy preached a grand discourse. I was going at night, but a very severe storm came up and I could not go, which was a great disappointment to me.

Your brother in the one faith,
W. S. TAYLOR.

MOUNTAINVILLE, Deer Isle, Maine, June 18, 1908.

Editors Herald: Since last I wrote to your valuable and instructive pages many changes have taken place with and about us. The cold and disagreeableness of winter have given way to the warmth and beauties of summer and in the leafy boughs the songs from a thousand throats, give praises to their creator for his love and mercy to all. How thankful and grateful should we feel for all this! Surely no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly.

Bro. W. E. LaRue and wife, who have been with us quite a while, have left, and in his stead we have Bro. R. W. Farrell for the year. We are willing to assist in any way possible, as the brother comes to a field new in many ways to him.

A short distance from here, at Sunshine, the Advents, with their great revivals, are preaching hell fire and the end of the world, and by this means many are being scared into their church. They say that baptism alone can save and that they are now saved. O, what a void, empty religion alongside of the pure, unchangeable gospel of Christ, and what poor satisfaction for holding to such when compared to what is offered the true children of the King of kings! Truly, "I would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness."

I will say that I am trying, under the adverse circumstances of life which seem to surround on every hand, to do my Master's will the best I can, trusting him who is able to strengthen me to do all things, that I may acceptably run the race, watch and pray, and finally receive the reward and crown of life in store for the children of God. Saints, I ask an interest in your prayers and hope to be able so to live as to meet God's chosen in Zion face to face. Ever striving and praying to this end, I remain,

Your brother in the faith,
WALLACE A. SMALL.

RIVERTON, Iowa, June 20, 1908.

Editors Herald: Our branch is somewhat divided and scattered, but we hold Sunday-school and meeting yet. Bro. Jonas H. Drury, of Brownsville, Nebraska, has united with this branch and has been a great help in preaching; also Teacher N. B. Donaldson is doing what he can to preach, and in Sunday-school work. The writer is trying to hold the fort by preaching the word. L. C. DONALDSON.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, June 16, 1908.

Editors Herald: Notice is hereby given to all who may desire to attend the reunion at Council Bluffs, Iowa, August 22 to 30, and who want tents, to let the committee know as soon as possible.

The following prices will be charged for tents: Ten by twelve, two dollars; twelve by fourteen, two dollars and fifty cents; twelve by sixteen, four dollars. We can furnish cots and springs also, but in order to get the best terms on them we will have to know about how many to engage. They will not exceed fifty cents each, and we may be able to do better.

We have secured Walnut Grove, an excellent spot for our meeting, and can furnish pasture for horses at a nominal expense. We will be located by a street-car line that will be used for our convenience more than anything else. There will be no noise or dirt, but fine shade and blue grass abundantly. We see no reason, if you come with the intention of enjoying yourselves, why you will not have a fine time.

H. M. LILES, Committeeman.

DOW CITY, Iowa, June 19, 1908.

Editors Herald: It has been some time since I have written to your columns, but I am still in the faith and expect to be as long as life shall last. Indeed there is nothing that will inspire hope like the gospel of Christ. If obeyed in sincerity, and its precepts carefully obeyed, it brings, as a reward, the Holy Spirit with its inspiring and quickening power. The Spirit increases one's faith, and makes hope shine in the mind like the sun upon a sea of glass; and it fills the heart to overflowing with love to God and all mankind, as the soul is touched and the eyes flow with tears, and the lips give praise to the eternal Father, in the name of Christ, for the supply of good things coming from his bounteous store.

Our Bro. Cornelius A. Butterworth, who is with us after being in Australia for twenty years, has done some excellent preaching in our town and has made our hearts glad both with the good news of the gospel and with his presence and visits. May his health improve, his usefulness increase, and he be enabled to grow in favor with God and man, is our sincere desire and earnest prayer.

Our district conference, which closed last Sunday, was quite well attended, and, all things considered, was an excellent one. A good spirit seemed to prevail throughout. Branches were better represented than usual, which all were glad to see. Elder Orman Salisbury was again chosen to preside, with Bishop C. J. Hunt to assist. Our gospel tent was placed under the direction of the missionary in charge and district officers.

The weather has been too wet to suit the farmers; yet in the long run it will prove an excellent thing for this part of the country, as we were much in need of a good wetting up. It comes from Him who doeth all things well, and no one should complain. Who will do it?

The Saints the writer has visited seem cheerful and interested in the work, though there is some inactivity manifest. This evidently should not be. This latter-day work belongs to God and Christ, and we all are brethren, or should be. When we work for the promotion of the church and the spread of the gospel, we are working for each other's good. Every member should be a faithful, persevering, humble, prayerful, pure, truthful, honest, working Christian. There is so much to do, and so few to do it, that we need each other's love, confidence, and help. And, though the hastening time is here, and the authority of God, Christ, the church and her officers and ministers should be honored each in his place, yet no one should manifest a spirit of unkindness. Love, divine love, to my mind, represents the authority and power of the priesthood. Anything contrary thereto is not of God. How can we establish ourselves in each other's confidence, unless it shall be by words of love and deeds of kindness? Every look, every word spoken, every act performed that is contrary thereto only tends to destroy confidence and shake the faith of those who trust in us. We have the truth committed to our care, and the word is both quick and sharp, and, therefore, should be handled with care and love. The gospel is a system of love as well as of power, and we must remember the one and not lose sight of the other. The apostle was correct when he penned the following: "Follow after charity," "for charity never faileth." "And above all things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness." If we let our light shine, as we should, it will reflect both the likeness and the truth of Jesus.

The writer is trying to watch self, the signs of the times, and the movements of the enemy.

Praying for the success of the work, the multiplying of the disciples, the victory of every soldier of Christ, and the glory of spiritual Israel, I am, as ever,

Your brother in Christ,
CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

OMAHA, Nebraska, June 20, 1908.

Editors Herald: Having recovered sufficiently from the shock caused by the surprise of being appointed to this new field, I thought I would inform you that the loyal sons and daughters of Zion of the Omaha Branch and the writer are letting down the gospel net into the deep waters of this vast tempestuous sea of humanity. Turbulent waves of countless variety are breaking in over the shore, while winds of doctrine from every point of the compass are sweeping over the surface, leaving spiritual wrecks and frail, storm-tossed barks in their wake. Notwithstanding all this, many rational minds have turned a deaf ear to the howling of the tempest, and are calmly, attentively listening to the "still, small voice" as it proceeds from the mouths of the servants and handmaidens of the Lord, as they, amid the noises of street-cars, rumbling of vehicles, and the barking of dogs, endeavor to make themselves heard in song, prayer, and in the preaching of the word.

The writer left home May 16 and landed the same day in Omaha, finding our worthy Bro. F. R. Shafer, who, in unison with other duly appointed officers, is trying to feed the sheep over which he presides. Our old and tried soldier, Bro. Charles Derry, was in the city, and it was decided that Bro. Enge should preach Sunday morning and Bro. Derry in the evening. A goodly number attended the morning service, but on account of the signs in the sky but few greeted the speaker of the evening. The effort was excellent. I listened for announcement of preaching for the week; but none being made I concluded my morning effort was a failure, and that my stay in Omaha was at an end. However, Bro. T. A. Hicks, formerly of Spokane, Washington, was present and called attention to the fact that I was going to speak on the streets, and it was so ordered.

So with this no mean feather in my cap, I called on the city chief executive and obtained a thirty-day permit to occupy on the streets. Presenting this to the chief of police and the park commissioner, and receiving their verbal indorsement and instruction, I proceeded to arrange for the first effort. I suggested my plan to the Saints at the Wednesday night prayer-meeting, urging the sisters as well as the brethren to assist in singing, etc. Several volunteered, and among the first who met at the time appointed, were Srs. Rannie, Schwartz, Hicks, and Huff, Brn. Ahlstrand, Schafer, Huff, and Condit. This presented a formidable front, the singing brought the park saunterers to the spot, and the preacher in the loudest tones possible delivered his message of "the love of God to man," according to grace given. Judging from the attentive appearance of the audience, we believe the effort was well received. We feel grateful to the Lord and also to those who assisted.

We continued our meetings during the week, Srs. Schafer, McCaig, Madsen, Francis, Lowe, Fifer, and several others assisting in the singing. Bro. J. R. Sutton also arrived upon the scene. From fifty to a hundred were listening. The result—time will tell.

This letter is not written merely to let you know what we are doing. It is to encourage others among the Saints to bring their vocal and musical talents on the street and to assist every live missionary in his efforts, especially in the large cities. It is true that a talented speaker can hold a crowd, but it is also true that a crowd of singers and musicians can both draw and hold a crowd without a speaker. The time is at hand when we must go to the people; they will not come to us. And we must persevere. Do not look for speedy returns, because, as we sing, "the judgment is here, the end is near, so come, come away."

Bro. Sutton and the writer attended the Inman reunion, preaching by the wayside on our return, and pegging away since on the street-corners whenever the weather has permitted. We have also begun cottage meetings in South Omaha. We will speak to-morrow at Florence, on a latter-day apostate landmark (Brigham Young's cottonwood tree) in the public park.

I intend to continue in the work begun, assisting Bro. J. M. Baker, city missionary, when I can. He is now with us and may the Lord bless his labors.

Whether I shall succeed or not, I do not know; but I hope to hear it said that Bro. Enge made a fair effort to reach the people. By the grace of the Lord, the guidings of his Spirit, and the assistance of the live Saints of the Omaha Branch, who have hitherto so kindly administered to my needs, I will succeed in hauling the net to shore with some live fish in it.

Your brother,

N. C. ENGE.

WHEELING, West Virginia, June 22, 1908.

Editors Herald: Your columns are the medium of disseminating the news of the church and the experiences of many, who by reason of these, encourage others in their struggle against the combined forces of evil that try to stop the onward movement of the restored gospel. It is well that we learn of conditions as they exist, of the struggles as well as of the triumphs of the people of the Lord. While the work of the Lord offers the greatest joy and the most complete triumph in the end, it is on condition that we put on the armor and move forward in the conflict with sin, valiant in the warfare under our Leader, who has given us an example as well as instructions to help us fit ourselves to be worthy of the victor's crown when the warfare is over. If every one who has covenanted with the Lord could be numbered with the active workers instead of being found in the rear, the work would not only move forward with increased power, but the ones who by their inactivity are now deprived of the spiritual blessings they should be enjoying, would quickly learn what precious things they are losing.

Wheeling Branch has quite a number that are alive and doing all they can to spread the truth both by precept and example, and thus the good seed is being sown and is bringing forth fruit. I heartily wish this could be said of all whose names are on the branch record.

Bro. Henry Winship, one of our most highly esteemed members, was called from among us by the silent reaper, death. Not only the Wheeling Branch, but Fayette City and many other of your readers to whom he was known, feel sadly the loss we have sustained in his departure. But we rejoice in what we truly realize is his triumph. He lived true to the religion of the Master, and died firm in the faith and with strong assurances of ultimate victory. As a result of his faithfulness quite a number have united with the church. The presence of those not of the church at his funeral, and the high testimony they bore to his sterling character is strong evidence that, though we have lost his presence and help, he has gained a glorious reward. How true the expression of the psalmist, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." May we all arouse to the work before us and the opportunities afforded at the present time and so improve them that we can without fear meet death, and as Bro. Winship remarked shortly before he died, may we be able to say truthfully, "I have always tried to live my religion."

Your brother,

O. J. TARY.

DELOIT, Iowa, June 23, 1908.

Editors Herald: It is a pleasure to be able to report a district conference and convention so full of interest, spiritual blessings, and good attendance as the one recently held at Dow City, Iowa. Every department of the Master's work that was reported showed activity, which means encouragement to all. Our good-natured Bro. C. B. Woodstock, of the industrial department of Graceland College, was present, and presented the needs and wants of the college in a forceful and practical way, making many new friends to the school, who may give it substantial aid by and by. The conference was favored with the presence and faithful service of Apostle C. A. Butterworth, of Australia, who had not met with his old home district in conference for twenty years. His sermons were spiritual, instructive, and uplifting. The Sunday morning prayer- and testimony-meeting was truly a profitable session, at which time the gifts of the gospel were manifest in power. One hour and forty-five minutes proved to be too short for this interesting meeting.

Since January I have done church work in all the branches in the Gallands Grove District except Harlan, and I am able to report an increased interest on the part of the young and middle-aged members in paying tithes and offerings. May their good resolutions never grow less.

It was my good pleasure to baptize three young people belonging to the families of P. C. and William McCord, at Defiance, Iowa, who were the fourth generation of Latter Day Saints of the McCords. A good spirit was present at the confirmation-meeting.

At this writing I am holding a few meetings at Auburn where Brn. W. A. Carroll and J. W. Bean are trying to keep the good gospel work alive. Bro. William Kendall superintends the Sunday-school.

Very sincerely yours,
C. J. HUNT.

SAN DIEGO, California, June 22, 1908.

Editors Herald: For some time I have been corresponding with a poor woman in Virginia, who has been sick and bedfast for many years. It seems her daughters get married as soon as they get a chance to do so on account of poverty at home, and now she is left with a younger daughter, sixteen years of age, who has to attend to all the household duties. They live on a rented farm and there are still smaller children to care for beside her sick mother, and the father is not well, either. So the poor girl has her hands full, and can not give her sick mother the attention she ought to have. The mother used to write to me herself, but of late her daughter had to do it, as she has been too feeble. And it seemed they are too poor, so she can not get food, such food as would give her nourishment, let alone to get little things, such as a sick person generally craves for. If she could, she may be better or get well.

A short time ago the daughter wrote me that her mother was craving peaches all the time (canned peaches), but they had not the money to buy, so I sent along a little money with a letter telling her to be sure to get her mother some peaches if she could, and the other day I received a letter telling me that her mother's appetite was better and she is able to take a little nourishment now, also sits up a little now and then, and her mother ascribes it to the peaches. Well, the poor girl seemed to be delighted, and so was I. I praised the Lord. Now, if any of the Saints live near there, or even if they have to make a little sacrifice and walk a little distance, go and see the poor creature and speak a word of encouragement to her and help her in any way you can. A little kindness shown in time of need goes a long way. She is too feeble to read, else I would send her some reading-matter. She does not belong to the church, but she might be brought into the kingdom of God. Let us do good wherever we find an opportunity to do so, not for reward's sake, but for love of humanity. Her address is Mrs. John Grady, Nettle Ridge, Patrick County, Virginia. I got acquainted with her through a paper called the Open Window, published for the shut-in ones. I saw a letter from her published in that paper which was handed to me by an invalid who resides here in San Diego, also a shut-in one.

Your sister in the gospel,
MRS. ELIZABETH PICKLES.

2446 C Street.

Ah, how unjust to nature and himself
Is thoughtless, thankless, inconsistent man!—Edward Young.

News From Branches

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Editors Herald: On May 31 a very entertaining children's program was rendered under the auspices of the Sunday-school. The eleven o'clock hour was occupied with interesting talks to the children and parents by Brn. Tanner and Billinsky, and the little babe of Sr. and Mr. Swartz was blessed by Brn. Archibald and Cooke. In the afternoon a district Religio session was held, a good musical program and interesting discussions were much enjoyed.

We had a good attendance at our sacramental-service and a fine spirit prevailed throughout the meeting.

At our branch business-meeting, held on the evening of June 2, the following were elected to do branch work for the ensuing term: J. A. Tanner president, C. J. Remington presiding priest, J. M. Lloyd presiding teacher, J. E. Dawson presiding deacon, G. S. Trowbridge clerk, Sr. E. M. Patterson correspondent.

District conference convened in Lansdowne, June 13 and 14. A splendid attendance was on hand and spiritual strength received. In election the present officers were sustained. The order of the day was Sunday-school and preaching in the morning, prayer-service in the afternoon, which, owing to the large crowd, was divided into the young and older peoples' meeting; at fifteen minutes after four a district Sunday-school program consisting of music and discussions, was enjoyed. Preaching in the evening. Conference adjourned to meet in Bellville, September 19 and 20. The hospitality of the Lansdowne Saints will long be remembered and appreciated.

Regular priesthood meeting of our branch was held June 16.

Bro. S. R. Burgess and Sr. Richardson were quite ill the past week. We trust they will soon be with us again.

Sr. Amy Smith left on the 23d to visit with relatives and friends in Denver, stopping in Independence for a short time.

Bro. and Sr. Mercer's son, Ellis, has returned to St. Louis from Kansas City.

Your sister in Christ,
2739 De Jong Street. E. M. PATTERSON.

Miscellaneous Department

MONTANA.—District conference convened at Bozeman at 10.30 o'clock, May 23. Bro. Frank Christofferson in the chair. Prayer by Bro. J. D. Stead. Motion carried that in the absence of president, vice-president preside, and that J. D. Stead assist. Sister Hattie Pritchard was chosen clerk pro tem, Sr. Maggie Reese organist, Hale W. Smith chorister. The nature and time of meetings was left to the president. Short speeches were listened to from J. D. Stead, H. W. Smith, Thomas Reese, B. W. Wells, and Frank Christofferson. Meeting closed in form, benediction by Frank Christofferson. At 2 p. m. meeting opened with prayer by Gomer Reese. Verbal reports given by John Pritchard, Frank Christofferson, Gomer Reese, L. E. Hills, Hale W. Smith, J. D. Stead, and J. H. Wells. Deer Lodge was selected as the place of holding the next conference and on or before the full moon in November (7 and 8) as the time. Gomer Reese was sustained as president and Frank Christofferson as vice-president. Bro. Wyckoff was sustained as clerk. Thomas Reese was sustained as Bishop's agent, and also the present missionaries. On motion the president provided for the ordinance of the sacrament at 2 p. m. Adjourned until 8 o'clock, benediction by Gomer Reese. Saturday, at 8 p. m., Hale W. Smith was the speaker. Sunday, at ten o'clock Bro. Hills introduced J. D. Stead as the speaker. At 2.30 o'clock the sacrament-service was in charge of L. E. Hills and Hale W. Smith. At 8 o'clock L. E. Hills was the speaker, assisted by Hale W. Smith. Adjourned to meet as per former resolution. Hattie Pritchard, clerk pro tem.

CENTRAL ILLINOIS.—Conference convened at Beardstown, Illinois, on June 13, with President Luther Simpson in charge, James McKiernan, missionary in charge, being chosen assistant. The following branches reported: Taylorville, Pana, Beardstown, showing a total number of 183 membership, including elders 7, priests 5, teachers 5, deacons 4; officers reporting from Beardstown, elders 1, priests 1; Pana, elders 1, priests 1; Taylorville, elders 1; those reporting stated that in some instances they were in a good spiritual condition; others think that some means should be devised for the betterment of the district. Bishop's agent's report showed a balance on hand of $209.08. Treasurer's report showed a balance on hand, $26.07. Taylorville Branch petitioned the conference to set aside a time between conferences for a collection to be taken up in each branch for the benefit of the district. Petition was adopted and set aside the second Sundays in August, December, and March, for collections to be taken up for the benefit of the district. Election of officers resulted in David Smith, missionary, being chosen as president; Charles C. Simpson, secretary; Bishop's agent, Luther Simpson, treasurer. At 7.30 p. m. an entertainment was given by the Religio and Sunday-school. At 9 Sunday morning, Alexander Curry was baptized by David Smith. At 9.30 Sabbath-school in charge of district officers. At 11, preaching, by James McKiernan, S. J. Bartlett in charge. At 2.30 social-service, James McKiernan and Luther Simpson in charge, in which the sacrament was administered, 6 prayers were offered, 22 testimonies borne; Alexander Curry was confirmed by James McKiernan and Luther Simpson. At 7.30, preaching-service in charge of M. R. Shoemaker, David Smith being the speaker. Adjourned to meet at Pana, Illinois, October 3 and 4, 1908. Charles C. Simpson, secretary.

GALLANDS GROVE.—Conference met at Dow City, Iowa, June 13 and 14, 1908, with President Orman Salisbury in charge, assisted by C. A. Butterworth, C. J. Hunt, and J. L. Butterworth; Edith Dobson, secretary. Privilege was granted to visiting Saints to have voice and vote. Nine elders, three priests, and two teachers reported. Statistical reports were read from Salem, Lanesboro, Dow City, Cherokee, Deloit, Mallard, Gallands Grove, and Coalville. Bishop C. J. Hunt reported: On hand at last report $155.09, tithings and offerings received $1,171.65, expended $1,243.79, on hand $82.95. Sanitarium fund: On hand last report $1.75, received $60.20, paid Bishop Kelley $55.95, on hand $6.00. Tent and expense fund: On hand $2.58, received $30.39, on hand $32.97. Children's home fund: Received $15, paid Bishop Kelley $10 on hand $5. Officers elected as follows: Orman Salisbury, president, C. J. Hunt, assistant president, Edith Dobson, secretary and treasurer, James Pearsall, chorister. The district library board reported a membership of three, C. J. Hunt, J. L. Butterworth, and Floy Holcomb. C. J. Hunt elected chairman and treasurer, Floy Holcomb secretary, Etta Hunt librarian. A very spiritual prayer and testimony-meeting was enjoyed at 9 a. m. Sunday in which the gifts of the gospel were manifest to the edification and comfort of all. C. A. Butterworth, of the Australian Mission, gave three excellent sermons. Conference adjourned to meet at Deloit, Iowa, October 17 and 18, 1908. Edith Dobson, secretary.

NODAWAY.—On account of rain and high water, meeting was postponed till the 14th, when quite a number assembled and engaged themselves in the necessary business. A. E. McCord presided, W. B. Torrance secretary. C. E. Harpe, W. T. Ross, and R. P. Anderson were selected committee on credentials. Branches reported: Bedison 82, gain by letter 3; Guilford 94, gain by baptism 1, lost by death 3, and by removal 5; Ross Grove 45. Ministry reporting: Elders C. E. Harpe, A. E. McCord; Priests R. F. Hill, W. T. Ross, J. D. Schofield, W. B. Torrance. On recommendation from Bedison Branch, Alexander Jensen was ordained a priest by C. E. Harpe, A. E. McCord, R. Sorenson, and T. A. Ivie. Committee on priesthood blanks reported one thousand printed at a cost of two dollars and fifty cents. Committee on auditing bishop's books, continued from last conference, asked for an extension of time. These two committees were discharged after accepting reports. Branch presidents were authorized to take collections for district expense. A report from W. B. Torrance regarding balance due W. E. Haden on last year's tent expenses, was read, and the debt ordered paid. The chair was authorized to appoint a treasurer to act till annual election. W. B. Torrance was appointed. T. A. Ivie reported for reunion committee that grounds just east of Guilford could be obtained for $20 for ten days, that $79.50 had been pledged from the citizens of the town and vicinity, that other help had been pledged in the way of pasture, water, ice, etc.; that advertising had been looked after to some extent, and that the Guilford Branch had extended an invitation to hold the reunion there. The report was accepted and the committee continued, the time for the reunion being set for August 7 to 17. Preaching by A. E. McCord and C. E. Harpe. Adjourned to meet with the Ross Grove Branch, October 3 and 4. W. B. Torrance, secretary.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.—Conference convened at Bellair, Illinois, June 13, 1908. Henry Sparling, missionary in charge, was chosen to preside, associated with F. M. Davis, president. Branches reporting: Parrish 112, 6 baptized; Dry Fork 32; Brush Creek 316, 2 baptized, 3 died, 2 married; Springerton 166, 17 baptized, 1 died. Received for district treasury, Parrish $1, Dry Fork $1, Brush Creek $3.40, Springerton $1.05, total $6.45. Ministers reporting: H. Sparling, baptized 2, ordained 3; F. M. Davis, baptized 6; I. A. Morris, married 2; F. L. Sawley, baptized 10; S. H. Fields, baptized 2. P. T. Plumb did what he could. Bishop's agent, F. M. Davis, reported: Receipts for eight months $414.50, expended and sent to Bishop $400. Report audited and found correct. The secretary was ordered to issue letters of removal to N. L. Upton, Emma M. Upton, Newton W. Boyd, Media Boyd. The matter of taking steps to revive the Kibbie Branch was referred to the missionary in charge and district president. H. Sparling, F. M. Davis, and F. L. Sawley were appointed a committee to select time and place for holding the fall reunion. Adjourned to meet at same place and on the first Saturday and Sunday of the reunion. A. H. Burroughs, secretary and treasurer.

Convention Minutes.

DES MOINES.—Sunday-school convention met at Runnells, June 5, 1908, with prayer-service at 9 a. m. Business-session at 10.30 a. m. Thirteen schools in the district, eleven reporting for last quarter. School at St. Charles declared disorganized since only three members remain. Bro. Robert Park was elected district librarian. Normal work concerning the library occupied the afternoon session. Evening was given to short talks and special music. Adjourned to meet at the same place on the day previous to the next district conference. Pearle Shannon, secretary.

CLINTON.—District Sunday-school Association met in convention at Rich Hill, Missouri, June 5, 1908, 10 a. m. To fill vacancy caused by death of Sr. Iva Keck, W. E. Reynolds was elected as superintendent and Sr. Lucy Silvers as assistant superintendent. There were not many present, but a good spirit prevailed. Adjourned to meet October 2, 1908, at Veve chapel, Veve, Missouri. Miss Zora Lowe, secretary, Eldorado Springs, Missouri.

CLINTON.—The Religio-Literary Society met in convention at Rich Hill, Missouri, June 5, 1908. Officers were elected for the year as follows: J. W. Noyes, Nevada, president; Fred Cool, Nevada, vice-president; Miss Zora Lowe, Eldorado Springs, secretary and treasurer; William McElwain, Nevada, librarian; and Mrs. Lucy Silvers, Walker, home class superintendent. Miss Dora Lowe, secretary.

Pastoral.

To the Officers and Members of Central Michigan District; Greeting: At the last district conference held at Coleman, Michigan, Bro. J. A. Grant plead so earnestly to be relieved, for a time, from the duties and responsibilities of district work as its presiding officer, that your humble servant was chosen to succeed him; and inasmuch as this is a new line of work for me, I earnestly solicit the cooperation of every officer and member in the district. I feel that I need divine grace to help me, and to this end I ask you to remember me in your prayers to Him that doeth all things well, that I may be guided in my work in such a way that it may bring glory and honor to God and blessings to those among whom I am called to labor.

The work we are engaged in is indeed a laudible work, which demands our best efforts, and when we contemplate the glorious promises to the faithful ones, we can not afford to do otherwise than thrust in our sickle and reap. I trust our associations may be pleasant and mutually beneficial. I trust that branch officers will do their best to look after the church interests in their respective branches. Let us each strive to learn our duty from the law that has been given to govern the church and faithfully perform the same. If at any time I can be of any assistance do not hesitate to write me and I will respond at my earliest convenience. We will continue the same system of reporting. Report blanks will be sent you each quarter as has been done heretofore. Let us pray for one another.

Your humble servant,
BEAVERTON, Michigan. GEORGE W. BURT.

Bishop's Agents' Notices.

To the Saints of South Dakota; Greeting: After some delay, for which we attach no blame to any one, the tent for gospel work is an assured fact. It is ordered and in the near future we will commence meetings in Madison, and if conditions are favorable will continue until October, during which time we hope that the Saints who can will visit us and derive some good by so doing. We have promises of visits from those of the ministry besides the ones appointed to this State.

We feel grateful for the help given to us and we hope to accomplish some good in our labor; other places can be reached next year. Some have not contributed, perhaps fearing the amount they could give would be too small, but we assure you ten cents or a twenty-five cent stamp-book will be welcome, and that much from all who have not given would be ample to meet all incidental expenses for the season, otherwise the burden will fall on the two families there. Let me hear from you, dear Saints; do not say I can't, but I will.

EDWARD RANNIE, Bishop's agent.
MADISON, South Dakota, Box 65.

Fourth Quorum of Priests.

Will all members that do not live in the Independence Stake at large, taking in the territory of Holden, Knobnoster, Pleasant View, Post Oak, Lees Summit, and a portion of the Independence Branch, please send me their resignations, as our quorum has been rearranged.

Yours in bonds,
GEORGE EDWARDS, President.

Information Wanted.

The address of Roy J. Trego is wanted by the president of the Independence Stake. G. E. Harrington and C. D. Carson, presidents.

Wanted.

J. C. Chrestensen, Beaver, Missouri, is in need of HERALDS for 1904, from number forty-one to the end of the year, inclusive, and also number two of the same year. Can any one supply these numbers?

Reunion Notices.

The Northern California reunion will be held at the permanent location, Irvington, Alameda County, California, convening Friday, September 4, and continuing over two Sundays. The arrangements for tents, rooms, and eating, will be similar to last year. An eating-house will be conducted under the supervision of the committee, the charge will be made as low as possible; but should there be a margin it will revert to the reunion fund to be used to defray necessary expenses. We can not now state the price on tents; think they will not be more than last year, if as much. Our missionary in charge will be with us and correspondence is going on for others. The outlook indicates a larger attendance than last year, and we are hoping and praying for a great spiritual repast. Reduced rates will be at once looked after. Write me at any time and order tents, etc. J. M. Terry, chairman committee.

1362 Grove Street, OAKLAND, California.

The third annual reunion of the Saints in Northwestern Canada will meet with the Weyburn Plains Branch at Delight Schoolhouse, July 23 to 26. Sunday-school work will be taken up on Thursday, July 23. Let all be there, as we wish to get the Sunday-school work more thoroughly before the Saints. We expect to have a couple of sessions of Religio work as well. Those coming from Southern Manitoba, Ontario, and all eastern points, come via Souris and Estevan. Those coming from the Dakotas or Western States, come on the Soo Line via Portal, North Dakota, to Halbrite, Saskatchewan. Those coming from Northern Manitoba, Northern Saskatchewan, and Alberta, come to Moose Jaw, then via the Soo Line to Halbrite, Saskatchewan, where you will be met with rigs to convey you to Delight, eight miles west. Those who can will please let us know when and how they are coming as soon as possible. For any further information write Elder William J. Fisher, Tyvan, Saskatchewan, Elder J. L. Mortimer, Tyvan, Saskatchewan, or T. J. Jordan, Box 67, Halbrite, Saskatchewan. A number of the elders will be with us and possibly some of the district officers. Ample accommodation for all. T. J. Jordan.

The Southwestern Oregon District reunion will be held at Bandon, Oregon, August 7 to 16, inclusive. Conference will be held during the reunion. A cordial invitation is extended to all. DeWayne Carpenter, secretary.

Two-day Meetings.

A two-day meeting will be held at Beaverton, Michigan, July 4 and 5. All Saints coming from the north and east will be met with team at Gladwin on Friday evening, July 3. George W. Burt.

Addresses.

C. A. Parkin, 18 Clement Street, San Francisco, California, Phone, Pacific 1395.

Died.

THOMAS.—Willard B., was born April 5, 1839, at Streetsboro, Portage County, Ohio, and died June 9, 1908, at his home in Center Junction, Iowa, aged 69 years, 2 months, and 4 days. He was married to Amelia M. Squires, October 16, 1864. To this union were born two children, Mrs. Cora E. Wier, and Mrs. Julia Eva Rice. His wife, two daughters, one sister, a son-in-law, three grandchildren, and a host of relatives, friends, and neighbors mourn the loss of a kind, loving husband, father, neighbor, and friend. Bro. Thomas experienced religion and joined the Baptist Church while yet a very young man in Ohio. He came to Iowa thirty-seven years ago, but did not unite with the Baptist Church, for the reason that there was none in the locality where he resided. He came to Center Junction thirty-two years ago, and in 1893, his cousin, Orlin Thomas, came to him with the message of the restored gospel of Jesus Christ, hence, after a thorough investigation Bro. Thomas united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He lived to his best ability, and died firmly and zealously in the faith of the Saints of the most high God. The funeral sermon was preached at the residence of the deceased by Elder J. B. Wildermuth, of Osterdock, Iowa. The remains were interred in the Scotch Grove Cemetery.

VANDEL.—Abram W., died June 15, 1908, near Pleasanton, Iowa. He was born in Knox County, Illinois, November 12, 1846; was married to Martha Keown, October 12, 1867. He leaves wife and eight children to mourn. Funeral at his home by M. M. Turpen.

LOWDEN.—James Lowden was born in England, September 19, 1850; and came to this country with his parents in 1853. Married Emma H. Attmore, at Brazil, Indiana, in 1874, this union being blessed with five children: Mrs. George Payne, Mrs. Lizzie McLaughlin, and Mrs. Priscilla Rowley, living, and Ida and May, who preceded him to the great beyond. He was baptized into the church in 1896. He was sick for over a year. He desired to live if it pleased God, yet was willing to die. He died at Jack Oak, near Albia, Iowa, June 11; buried the 17th. Services were held at the home, Elder Ed. Rowley preaching the sermon as requested by the deceased, being assisted by E. B. Morgan.

COTTON.—Elsie, beloved daughter of Bro. and Sr. Charles E. Cotton, born November 10, 1905, at Stockport, England, passed away May 30, 1908. She moved with her parents to Pullman, Illinois, in April, 1907, where they became affiliated with the West Pullman Branch, and where they reside at the present time.

JONES.—Sr. Margaret Jones was born January 24, 1868, in Cumoman, near Aberaman, Glamorganshire, Wales; died at Lucas, Iowa, May 23, 1908. She was married in 1889 to John P. Thomas, at Merthyr Tydfil, Wales. To this union were born ten children, one of whom died in Wales. The remaining children, husband, mother, two brothers, and other relatives mourn their loss. Sr. Thomas was faithful, and always ready to do her part in the Lord's work. Her confidence in God was not shaken by the severe trial of the long illness that ended in her death. Through the pain incident to cancer of the stomach she was ever patient and enduring.

Her prayer was that God's will might be done. To know Sr. Thomas was to love her. Her friends feel assured that she has gone to the rest prepared for the faithful. The funeral services were in charge of Parley Batten, assisted by E. B. Morgan and John R. Evans.

HOWELLS.—Bro. Ernest H. Howells, was born at Mountain Ash, Glamorganshire, South Wales, January 11, 1833. Was drowned June 7, 1908, at Everist, Iowa. The body was brought to Lucas, Iowa, for interment June 10. Funeral-services were held at Saints' Church, Lucas. Elder E. B. Morgan preaching, assisted by Elder Duncan Campbell. The brother leaves a widow and one child to mourn their loss.

SEDDON.—James Seddon, was born in Lancashire, England, thirty-four years ago; came to the United States with his parents in 1832. Of late years he resided at Cleveland, Iowa. At the time of his death he lived and worked at Rutledge, Iowa. He met his death by falling from a freight train at Ottumwa, Iowa, June 6, 1908. He leaves a wife and three children and numerous relatives. Funeral-services were conducted June 9 at S. A. Crowley's Undertaking Parlors. Preaching to a large and attentive congregation by Elder E. B. Morgan, assisted by D. T. Williams.

KNOPP.—Sr. Ella Rebecca Knopp, daughter of Bro. and Sr. C. R. Smith was born June 8, 1832, at Waterford, Norfolk County, Ontario. Died March 10, 1908, at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. She was married to Mr. Harry Knopp December 24, 1903. To this union two children were born, aged three years and three months respectively. These with the husband, father, and mother are left to mourn her early departure. Funeral-services at West Newton, Pennsylvania, her late home. Sermon by J. A. Becker.

NEVIN.—William Edwin, eldest son of Mr. James and Sr. Jennette Nevin, was born at Lucas, Lucas County, Iowa, November 14, 1839. Lived for several years at Keb, Iowa. Was killed by a fall of slate in the Roseland Mines, Ottumwa, Iowa, June 1, 1908. The funeral-services took place at the family residence, Fair View, Ottumwa, June 4, in charge of Bro. Daniel T. Williams. Elder E. B. Morgan preached the sermon, speaking words of consolation to the large assembly. He had not obeyed the gospel but attended the Sunday-school. He was a young man of exemplary character. He was interred in Court Hill Cemetery beneath many flowers.

DONNIVEN.—Sr. Adeline R., born in New York, was first married to Edward Caselman, to whom were born a son and a daughter. Afterward married Mr. Donniven. She died March 1, 1908, aged fifty-six years and eleven months, funeral by R. O. Self.

CHISNALL.—Sr. Ellen, wife of Elder John Chisnall, at Kewanee, Illinois, June 3, 1908, aged seventy-six years, eleven months, and five days. Miss Ellen Sandiford was born at Ratchiff, England, June 29, 1831; came to America when twenty-four years of age and crossed the plains to Utah in 1855. On April 14, 1857, she was married to John Chisnall. One year later they went to Omaha and two years later to Philadelphia. In 1867 they settled in Kewanee where they have resided ever since. She was baptized by Thomas France in 1879 and has been a consistent Saint. Funeral by J. W. Peterson.

BARNES.—At Silver Peak, Nevada, Sr. Elizabeth A. Barnes passed away March 16, 1908, at the age of fifty-four years. She was the daughter of Henry Moore. Being away from the church so far no services were held. Her son was with her at the time of her death.

PHELPS.—The beloved son of Bro. and Sr. I. A. Phelps passed from a baptism of suffering to the sweet peace of paradise on May 28, 1908, from his home near Modesto, California, at the age of 4 years, 8 months, 26 days. Nephew Edwin was the second of three boys, and his departure leaves a sad vacancy. Funeral from undertaking chapel, Modesto, in charge of Elder C. W. Earle, sermon by J. M. Terry.

SCHMIDT.—Louisa Mary, wife of Henry G. Schmidt, was born August 27 1832, at Tebingen, Wurtemberg, Germany; died June 14, 1908, of old age and general infirmities. She came to America in 1853; was married July 28, 1858, at New York City. She is survived by her husband, five sons, and one daughter. She joined the church July 28, 1878, and became a member of the Dekalb Branch near Stewartsville, Missouri, at which branch the funeral-services were held, sermon by E. L. Henson.

WINSHIP.—Henry Winship was born in Northern England, February 2, 1844; came to America when twenty-four years old, laboring most of his life as a coal-miner. He united with the church November 15, 1888, at Florence, Colorado, his wife and eldest son being baptized by James Caffall. Wherever he has lived he has let his light shine, and among his fellow workmen he was always respected for his uprightness and integrity. He leaves a companion and seven children to mourn, but they do not mourn as they who have no hope. He died May 12; funeral in the Saints' chapel, by O. J. Tary.

Resolution of Condolence.

Whereas, on the seventh day of May, nineteen hundred eight, our dearly beloved and highly esteemed sister, Anna Lloyd Shaw, passed from this probationary state, wherein she served in faith, patience, and love, to take up her abode in the place prepared for the righteous; and whereas, this, our sister, was a member of the Zion's Religio-Literary Society in good standing, and ever desirous for the advancement thereof, be it resolved

That, unto the husband who has been bereft of a most loving, tender, and true companion, and unto the babe deprived of the watchfulness and gentle care of a devoted mother, and unto the parents and grandparent called upon to give up a loving and dutiful child, and unto the brothers and sisters, whose tender relationship has for a time been severed, our society extends its deepest sympathy; and whereas the departure of our beloved sister is greatly mourned by her loved ones and the entire society, be it further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be given the bereaved ones and that a copy be spread upon the minutes and also sent to the various church publications.

Thus the resolutions of the St. Louis Zion's Religio-Literary Society. Anna DeJong, E. M. Patterson, A. W. Smith, committee.

The Land of "Pretty Soon."

I know of a land where the streets are paved
With the things we meant to achieve;
It is walled with the money we meant to have saved,
And the pleasures from which we grieve.

The kind words unspoken, the promises broken,
And many a coveted boon
Are stowed away there in that land somewhere—
The land of "Pretty Soon."

There are uncut jewels, of possible fame,
Lying about in the dust,
And many a noble and lofty aim
Covered with mould and rust.

And, O, this place, while it seems so near,
Is farther away than the moon!
Though our purpose is fair, yet we never get there—
The land of "Pretty Soon."

It is farther at noon than it is at dawn,
Farther at night than at noon;
O, let us beware of that land down there—
The land of "Pretty Soon."—The King's Own.

In an interesting article in the Housekeeper for July, Paul Kirk tells of "The growing art of plant invention." After explaining how the work can be done by any gardener, he tells of the accidental discovery of the Blanche Perry sweet pea.

The daughter of a farmer in Jefferson County, New York, married a quarryman who neglected her, forcing her to live a starved and miserable existence in a small home over some limestone ledges. After a while the woman became a mother, and then death came and claimed the child. The mother took the body back to her own childhood's home—one of the most beautiful in New York—for burial. When the funeral was over, stricken with grief, the mother gathered from the old farm-place a few seeds of the old Painted Lady sweet-pea. These seeds she carried away with her to the poor little home by the stone-quarry. There she planted them. They flowered, and the mother saved some of the seed for another season's planting. From year to year, in this manner, the flowers were perpetuated and the memory of the child kept beautiful. After fifteen or twenty years the flowers had undergone a change—had taken on a new beauty, as fine as the sorrowing mother's devotion. They no longer resembled the old Painted Lady blossoms. The thin, poor soil, with its large element of lime, had dwarfed the vine, but in compensation had given more abundant flowers, larger and

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

brighter-colored. Mr. Tracy, of the government department of agriculture, while looking after some seed crops in the vicinity, saw and admired the flowers, learned their history, secured some of the seed, and later sent them out to the world as the Blanche Ferry sweet pea. Out of the sorrow and hardships of the lonely mother by the quarry-side had come about the development of a flower of exquisite beauty, which has since brought pleasure to millions and added beauty to countless homes.

An annual fence-post bill of more than $1,250,000 is one item in the expense account of the farmers of Iowa. It is estimated that the farmers of Iowa pay an annual bill for post renewals or $1,465,000. Iowa has a lack of fence-post material, with little excuse for this condition. It would take 22,350 acres about every 10 years to grow the necessary posts to supply the state. Iowa is said to have 200,000 acres of planted timber, and yet the fence-post supply is insufficient. These 200,000 acres are not at present furnishing the posts which it is estimated can actually be grown on 22,350 acres of properly handled forest land. There are several reasons for such a condition. They have been summed up under the three following heads: Failure to select species specially suited to the region and the land to be planted. No protection against stock. The animals eat the terminal buds of young trees, pack the soil so that it will not take up the rain, and break and bruise the trees, opening them to the attack of insects and fungi. Lack of protection against fire. As it is now, the farmers of Iowa have to buy many of their fence-posts from other States, which seems a burdensome and unnecessary expense.

The best species for post production are black locust, chestnut, catalpa, Osage orange, Russian mulberry, and European larch. Black locust is subject to the attack of the borer to such an extent as to make its cultivation in Iowa a rather doubtful proposition. In the southern part of the State the trees, once established, make very rapid second growth, and it is possible that under these conditions, with short rotations, small post size will be reached by the trees before the borer has done any serious damage. Black locust thrives on fairly good sandy or gravelly broken land. Chestnut is not suited to Iowa conditions and Osage orange is subject to winter killing north of a line drawn east and west through Des Moines. Osage orange makes a very long-lived post; its only drawback is a tendency to split under staple. It grows to best advantage on a deep, rich soil with plenty of moisture, but will do well on a variety of soils. European larch is suited to fairly good hilly lands. It will not thrive in wet places. It produces good post and pole timber and good lumber. Russian mulberry is a rather low dense tree with a strong tendency to branch and form crooked stems. For windbreak purposes around orchards and plantations it is especially valuable. Birds are fond of its fruit and the tree is frequently planted near cherry orchards to prevent birds making ravages on the cherries. It grows on a variety of sites and may be used where better trees can not be grown. Hardy catalpa is one of the very best post trees for the Iowa planter. The George S. Waller grove in Humboldt County is an excellent example of what may be expected on fairly good lands which are not hilly. At twenty years of age the value of the 10-acre grove for post and pole purposes exceeded $2,800. In addition, Mr. Waller was furnished fuel and protection, the thinnings more than paying for themselves in firewood. The trees were planted around his farm in a corn-field. In this way a half crop of corn was produced by the soil for two years, the trees meanwhile receiving the best cultivation. Seedlings of this species can be raised very cheaply and as easily as garden vegetables.

The United States Forest Service has made a number of tree studies in Iowa and will gladly give advice on planting to those desiring it. A letter to the Forester at Washington will bring the information.

A New Departure.

After considerable agitation up the part of those interested in the settlement of Government lands in the west, the government has now designated an engineer to show prospective settlers' lands within the Shoshone project in Wyoming. This is an innovation that will be appreciated by prospective homeseekers for the reason that in the past, persons seeking government lands have as a rule had to depend upon strangers to show them the land and point out the corners, but this is all changed now. Settlers now going to Powell, Wyoming, where the government engineers have their headquarters for the Shoshone project, have one of the engineers at their service, who goes with them personally and points out the corners and gives them any information desired. These lands are all platted into farm units and the engineer who did the surveying is the one designated to show the lands. This is certainly a step in the right direction.

To Keep Lard Fresh.

To keep lard fresh for several months, stir in about a tablespoonful of honey to every six or eight gallons of lard, after removing the dried fat.—Mrs. Russell Evans, Brownsville, Tennessee, in Home Department of June National Magazine.

Mr. Obed Edson, of Sinclairville, New York, contributes to the July Chautauquan an illustrated article upon the Eries, a famous Indian tribe which formerly occupied the region around Chautauqua, and which gave the name to Lake Erie. This famous tribe which may have inherited the traditions and arts of the prehistoric mound-builders was almost exterminated by the Iroquois in the middle of the seventeenth century. Their burial-places have been discovered around Chautauqua Lake and Lake Erie and one grave has even been opened upon the grounds of Chautauqua itself. The story of this long exterminated people is told in a convincing and fascinating way.

The graves of the Eries, the sites of their villages, and the earthworks that may have inclosed villages, as we actually find them at the present time, more precisely mark their location than can the map of Franouelin. In the valleys of Alleghany, Cassadaga, Conewango, French Creek, around Chautauqua Lake, along the shores of Lake Erie, are scattered the evidences of their long possessions. In Chautauqua County, New York, alone, were not less than thirty circular earthworks when the first white settler came. Besides the ordinary burial-places, there were ossuaries where there had been a general burial of the dead. In 1887, in the town of Gerry, one of these charnal places was opened in the presence of the writer and the bones of more than fifty persons exhumed. In the very heart of the Chautauqua Assembly Grounds was an Indian burial-place. There is scarcely a farm in the county that an old ash heap, ancient weapon, implement, or other relic of primitive occupation, has not been found.

In 1894, while workmen were excavating a cellar in the grounds of the Chautauqua Institution, beneath the cottage of Miss Eddy, near the shore of the lake, at the intersection of Preston Avenue and the Promenade, a burial-place of the Eries was discovered, and eight or ten skeletons exhumed that had been buried three feet below the surface. They were carefully examined by Reverend H. H. Moore. Several of the skulls were found to be of a good intellectual cast; others were inferior. Not many rods away, on the lower side of the old auditorium at Chautauqua, Reverend J. E. Chapin exhumed a well-defined skeleton. Around these sepulchers were doubtless the habitations of this people. Other burial-places and mounds of the Eries are strewn around the lake. Near Whitney's Landing were two conspicuous mounds. Near Stedman, about two and one half miles in a southwesterly direction from the assembly grounds, an ancient charnal place or ossuary was opened in 1867, and the bones of twenty-five to fifty persons, it is estimated, were disinterred.

WE PAY YOU TO SAVE BANK BY MAIL

Capital fully paid .. $30,000.00
Shareholders' Liability. 30,000.00
Surplus 5,000.00

The State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa, "Illustrated Souvenir Booklet" contains 40 pages, 19 pictures, and general information regarding this bank, and its "Banking by Mail" system. Also general information about Lamoni and surrounding country, including pictures of the Saints' Church, Saints' Home, Liberty Home, Graceland College, and Herald Publishing House. This bank solicits deposits from any part of the United States or Canada, and will send a copy of the "Souvenir Booklet" free and post paid to any one desiring this information (so long as our supply last). If you have not received a copy of this booklet write without delay, giving full address. Kindly direct your letter or postal to the

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI
LAMONI, IOWA

The Safety of Banking by Mail

The best proof of the safety of sending money by mail is the fact that the tremendous exchanges between banks of different cities, amounting to tens of millions of dollars a day, are handled entirely through the mails, without loss.

You can deposit here by mail, wherever you live, and be assured of FIVE PER CENT INTEREST, and the absolute safety of your funds.

This is a strong, conservative bank, of unquestionable financial standing. Under State supervision.

Capital and Surplus, $27,500.00.

FARMERS' STATE BANK
LAMONI, IOWA

DR. MATHER'S HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM

For the treatment of the sick and afflicted. A home where the Saints can come and be under the care and surrounded by those of our own faith. Lady patients will be taken charge of by Sr. May Mather, M. D., by those who desire.

1110 West Walnut Street
Independence, Missouri

At out one block from L. D. S. Church. 1tf

DES MOINES
TENT & AWNING
CO.
TENTS FOR RENT
OF ALL KINDS OF CANVAS
GOODS.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE & PRICES.

THE INDIAN MAIDEN A Temperance Story

No. 245.—Cloth - - - 50 Cents.

THIS BROOD COOP

Is Rat, Mink, Lice,
Mite, and Rain
Proof, Sanitary.

Easily taken apart and cleaned. Try our RAT,
MINK, LICE, MITE PROOF

NEST. It is a fine TRAP NEST, laying nest, and setting nest. Our Automatic Feeder feeds three kinds of feed at one time. Soon saves feed enough to pay for it. Our NON-FREEZING WATERING TANK will not freeze in coldest weather. Heater may be detached and tank used to water both old and young fowls. All made of galvanized steel. Our EGG TESTER tests six to twelve eggs at one time. Catalogue free. C. HOSKINS & CO., 318 State Street, Quincy, Illinois, Dept. S. H.

Are You Interested In Independence?

Then you should have one of those pictorial books with historical sketch of Independence.

A book made by the genuine Carbon Photo process (not Engravings), contains twenty pages of views and two pages descriptive. Price 50c each.

One 5x7 view would cost you at least 25c, but this booklet all complete for 50c, the universal price for 20 pages for this grade of work, or only 2 1/2 a page.

The Independence Examiner says . . . It is a beautiful souvenir executed in a most artistic manner and should be in every library in Independence.

EVAN V. DAVIS, Photographer,
Lock Box 35, Independence, Missouri.

TENT FOR SALE

The Pottawattamie District has decided to offer for sale their tent and all its appurtenances. The tent is 26x40, 7-foot wall, 10-ounce ducking. Seats for one hundred persons accompany the tent, also a small tent for use of the missionary. For particulars address the undersigned.

J. A. HANSEN,
(For committee),
R. D. 1. Weston, Iowa.

"HEAVEN AND HELL" BY SWEDENBORG

400 Pages. Postpaid for 15 Cents in stamps
PASTOR LANDENBERGER,
Windsor Place, St. Louis, Missouri

Bible References

By Alvin Knisley

Paper cover 5 cents
Cloth cover 10 cents

Spanish Tracts

No. 350 Epítome De La Fe, per doz.. 10c
No. 351 Restauración, per doz. 10c

NEW HYMNAL NOW READY

No. 108—Leatherette, each 30c; per dozen $3.20.
No. 110—Limp Cloth, each 35c; per dozen $3.75.
No. 111—Cloth and Leather, each 50c.
No. 114—Flexible Leather, each $1.50.

THE INSTRUCTOR

No. 126, cloth $.75
No. 127, leather 1.00
No. 128, leather, flexible 1.50

EXCURSIONS

via

From Lamoni, Iowa Colorado

The greatest summer resort state in America; $22.10 round trip to Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo; $34.10 round trip to Glenwood Springs. Proportionately low rates to other points.

Pacific Coast Round Trip

$64.60 to San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Victoria or Vancouver. $79.60 for Grand Tour including all Coast Cities.

Yellowstone Park

$36.60 to Mammoth Hot Springs and return; additional charge for hotels and staging in Park.

To the East

Low round trip rates to principal points in Michigan, Canada, St. Lawrence River, Adirondack Mts. and New England.

Other Round Trip Rates

$35.10 Salt Lake City, Utah;
$24.15 Hot Springs, S. D.;
$15.60 St. Paul or Minneapolis.

Low round trip convention rates on certain dates in July to Dallas, Texas, Columbus, Ohio, Cleveland, Ohio, and Indianapolis, Ind.

Big Horn Basin Excursions

Personally conducted homeseekers' excursions 1st and 3rd Tuesday each month, under guidance of D. Clem Deaver, General Agent Landseekers' Information Bureau, Omaha, to assist settlers to secure irrigated lands in the Big Horn Basin, Wyo., and Yellowstone Valley, Mont.

No matter where you are going this Summer, I can give you rates and useful information and interesting illustrated folders. Ask for them please.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent, C., B. & O. R. R.

Atonement of Christ

and Final Destiny of Man

Revised and Enlarged

No. 17—10 cents each.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

THE SAINTS' HERALD

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

VOLUME 55

LAMONI, IOWA, JULY 8, 1908

NUMBER 28

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor
ELBERT A. SMITH, Associate Editor
ISRAEL A. SMITH, Assistant Editor

Entered as second-class mail-matter at Lamoni post-office.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
At the Turn of the Tide - - - - -	649
Is Popular Christianity Losing Ground - - - - -	651
Blood-Red Not a Popular Color with Sovereigns - - - - -	653
Notes and Comments - - - - -	653
Lamoni Items - - - - -	653
ELDERS' NOTE-BOOK:
Do You Advertise? How? - - - - -	654
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
How to Create and Hold Interest in Sunday-School - - - - -	656
An Ancient Patriarchal Blessing - - - - -	658
Leaves from Life - - - - -	659
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
Old Faiths for New - - - - -	662
What the Emmanuel Movement is Doing for Nervous Invalids - - - - -	663
MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN:
Morning - - - - -	666
Dearie - - - - -	666
Letter - - - - -	666
LETTER DEPARTMENT:
Letters - - - - -	667
Request for Prayers - - - - -	670
Extracts from Letters - - - - -	670
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT:
Conference Minutes:
Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana - - - - -	670
Eastern Maine - - - - -	670
Southern Indiana - - - - -	670
Reduction in Price - - - - -	671
Blue Rapids, Kansas, Branch - - - - -	671

Elders doing any original work in the line of advertising, either in newspapers or via the illustrated "dodger," are requested to mail samples of their work to the HERALD Editors. These samples will be preserved and may form an attractive feature of future missionary meetings.

It may be of passing interest to some to learn that Mrs. L. E. Brittain, granddaughter by marriage and nearest living relative of Solomon Spalding, was baptized recently by elders of the Utah church, at Boston, Massachusetts.

Editorial

AT THE TURN OF THE TIDE.

Following the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith the spirit of apostasy swept the church like a flood. Ambitious men sprang up everywhere eager to be leaders, rulers, even kings, as witness the man who posed as king at Beaver Island, and that other individual who wielded despotic power in his mountain domain and boasted that the hosts of Israel moved at the bending of his finger. The number of men who were siezed with this mania to rule, so foreign to the true spirit of the gospel, is simply astounding. There may have been men among them who loved the flock more than themselves, but if so, they were hopelessly in the minority. The rule seemed to be to crave power, wealth, and the gratification of sensuality under the sanction of false doctrines.

As for the flock at large, the great mass of men and women, who were not leaders, who only desired to know the will of God, it is little wonder that they became perplexed, downcast, even agnostic. Those who listened to unscrupulous teachers were subtly indoctrinated with the idea that the standard books of the church, the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants, were no longer of value, that they contained the dead letter of the law while the leaders were the living oracles and should be obeyed implicitly. Thus some of the people were induced to accept the most astonishing and revolting practices as part and parcel of the gospel law.

As time passed on uncertainty merged into certainty; but it was a certainty that was worse than doubt. It was this: Salt Lake was becoming more and more the only recognized exponent of the "restoration." An awful caricature of the true church, she lifted high her wanton visage and challenged the attention of the whole world. "I am Mormonism," she proclaimed; "all there is of Mormonism, all there ever will be of Mormonism; and Mormonism is synonymous with polygamy, blood-atonement, and a thousand awful, oath-guarded mysteries known only to the faithful."

The crest of the black tidal wave seemed destined to top and submerge every vestige of the great latter-day work.

But there were branches of the church that had continued a persistent search for the truth. They saw no leaders whose fruits commended them as men of God. At times deceived by pretenders, they were soon undeceived and went back to their prayer that God would enlighten them and send them a true shepherd. The experience of these branches was the experience of many individuals scattered far and wide.

Their prayers and long-suffering were not unheeded. And it came about that on the eighteenth day of November, 1841, the Lord spoke to one of those men, one whose heart at the time was crying out for light, Elder Jason W. Briggs; the scene of the occurrence being on the prairies of Wisconsin, about three miles northwest of Beloit. The burden of the revelation was:

Verily, verily, saith the Lord, even Jesus Christ, unto his servant, Jason W. Briggs, concerning the church: Behold, I have not cast off my people; neither have I changed in regard to Zion. Yea, verily, my people shall be redeemed, and my law shall be kept which I revealed unto my servant, Joseph Smith, Jr., for I am God and not man, and who is he that shall turn me from my purpose, or destroy whom I would preserve? Wolves have entered into the flock, and who shall deliver them? Where is he that giveth his life for the flock? Behold, I will judge those who call themselves shepherds, and have preyed upon the flock of my pastures. . . . Therefore, let the elders whom I have ordained by the hand of my servant Joseph, or by the hand of those ordained by him, resist not this authority, nor faint in the discharge of duty, which is to preach my gospel as revealed in the record of the Jews, and the Book of Mormon, and the book of Doctrine and Covenants; and cry repentance and remission of sins through obedience to the gospel, and I will sustain them, and give them my Spirit; and in mine own due time will I call upon the seed of Joseph Smith, and will bring one forth, and he shall be mighty and strong, and he shall preside over the high priesthood of my church; and then shall the quorums assemble, and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be reinhabited, as I said unto my servant Joseph Smith; after many days shall all these things be accomplished, saith the Spirit. Behold, that which ye received as my celestial law is not of me, but is the doctrine of Baalam. And I command you to denounce it and proclaim against it; and I will give you power, that none shall be able to withstand your words, if you rely upon me; for my Spirit shall attend you.

This revelation was like a flood of light. The sun arose; the tide began to turn. Here was a word of consolation to the downcast; God had not cast his people off or forsaken Zion. False shepherds were to be judged and punished. God was to solve the problem of leadership, as was his right, and would send one of the seed of Joseph, as he had long before promised to do. Polygamy was rebuked. The three books were still the law of the church, despite the boast in Utah that they were of "no more value than the ashes of a rye-straw." Missionary work was to be prosecuted. Space will not permit a detailed account of the meetings that followed, the conferences, the successive steps of organization.

Gradually the banner of the Reorganization was erected. The floods gave back. Here were a people who stood upon the three books and in harmony with them. Here were a people who had cast off those abominations that has fastened as barnacles upon the work of the restoration. Here were men who were not seeking to exalt themselves. With absolute unselfishness they were preparing the way for the man whom God had called, and he was not yet even in sympathy with them,—there were no human indications that he ever would be in sympathy with them. All that they had to depend on was the promise of God that in due time the man would be forthcoming.

The burden borne by men and women who stood for the ideas above mentioned during the period covered by the years between 1850 and 1860 can hardly be comprehended at this date. Yet their faith and integrity can be appraised only as we understand the trials and uncertainties that beset them. They were charged with being concerned for the rights of one man, "young Joseph," as he was called. Well, even then they were in better standing than men were who were contending solely for their own advancement. But they were contending for principles.

With that people the sixth day of April, 1860, was a day long to be remembered. Conference was in session at Amboy, Illinois. Many had received an assurance that at that conference the Lord would send the promised leader, the man for whom most fervent prayers had oft ascended, and toward whom the hearts of the people were going out in love as they had gone to his father before him. The same Spirit that moved them moved him. He appeared in the assembly at the afternoon session and addressed the Saints. No wonder that men and women who had longed and prayed for that day saw him but dimly because of the tears that would not be denied. Here at last was the shepherd who would give his life for the sheep.

Some of the sentiments expressed in that address are worthy of note at this juncture:

I wish to say that I have come here not to be dictated by any men or set of men. I have come in obedience to a power not my own, and I shall be dictated by the power that sent me. . . . I do not propose to assume this position in order to amass wealth out of it, neither have I sought it as a profit. . . . I believe in the doctrines of honesty and truth. The Bible contains such doctrines, and so do the Book of Mormon and the Book of Covenants, which are auxiliaries to the Bible. . . . Should you take me as a leader, I propose that all should be dealt by in mercy, open as to Gentile or Jew; but I ask not to be received except as by the ordinances of the church.

The day grew brighter. The sullen waves receded. The Lord in his own due time had sent his chosen leader. The leader thus chosen gave no thought to personal aggrandizement.

With the people he took his stand upon the three books. The church militant was once more in a safe position.

The first general epistle of the newly-ordained president, addressed to the scattered Saints everywhere, was like the note of a trumpet sounding the "assembly." Clear, sweet, pure, penetrating, it sounded the world around. Men heard it and left the plow in the field while they hastened to weep with the good wife. Old veterans heard it and once more lifted their heads, for it had the sound of Cumorah. Young men and women heard it and were strangely drawn toward the faith of their fathers. "I knew the lad would come," rejoiced aged mothers in Israel. "He has the spirit and office of his father. He has the good word of the Lord." Yes, even the world heard, and realized that a new and true interpreter of what had become known as "Mormonism" had arisen.

Brethren, we ought to be proud of that first general epistle. Listen!

"I would not that men should hastily run without tidings, nor do I ask that any should place the stake of their salvation upon an earthly arm. 'Cursed is he that putteth his trust in man, and maketh flesh his arm.' I ask and desire that all may place their stake of salvation upon the author and finisher of our faith—upon the promises and principles of the gospel, pure as preached from the Savior's lips, for in him was no guile, and in his teachings there was no deceit.

"In the name of the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, I now call upon all the scattered Saints, upon all the broad earth, to arise and shake off the sleep that hath bound them these many years, take on the armor of the just, calling on the name of the Lord for help, and unite once more for the emancipation of the honest in heart from the power of false doctrines and the shackles of sin.

"In the name of bleeding Zion, I call upon all those who have been wandering in by and forbidden paths, and have been led astray by wicked and designing men, to turn from their scenes of wickedness and sins of convenience, to turn from their servitude to Satan, in all his seductive devices; from vice in every phase, and from the labor of sin, the wages whereof are ever death, unto their true and delightful allegiance to the principles of the gospel of peace, to the paths of wisdom, to the homage of that God that brought the children of Israel out of bondage; to turn and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon; to lay hold anew upon the rod of iron which surely leads to the tree of life; to remember that those who live to the Lord keep his commandments, and that the promises are unto the faithful, and the reward unto those that endure unto the end.

"And in the name of the Lord of hosts, I call upon all the inhabitants of the earth to repent, believe, and be baptized, for the time cometh when the judgments of God are to be poured out upon all nations, and the besom of God's wrath shall smoke through the land; when men shall know that there is a God in Israel, and he is mighty to punish or to save; that the prayers of those under the altar have been heard, and a swift retribution is to come, when the despoiler will be despoiled; when those who denied justice shall be judged, and the measure meted unto others shall be meted unto them; when the prisoner shall go free, the oppressed be redeemed, and all Israel shall cry, 'Glory to God in the highest be given, for he that is long-suffering and slow to anger, has arisen, and shall bring again Zion.' Amen and amen.

"JOSEPH SMITH,

"President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

"NAUVOO, Illinois, July 19, 1861."

The elders of the Reorganization are accused of being aggressive. Why should they not be aggressive? They are positive men who have answered a positive call. Aggressive? Yes; the day when they could simply hold their own passed with the turning of the tide. The work of God will be both defensive and aggressive until every foe is overcome and every citadel is taken.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

IS POPULAR CHRISTIANITY LOSING GROUND?

Reverend J. L. Blanchard recently delivered a remarkable sermon in the City Park Congregational Church, Denver, Colorado. The picture that he drew of conditions existing in the Protestant churches, and in the Catholic Church as well, is dark indeed, yet it need not surprise one who believes in the angelic message of 1820 regarding the popular churches. The only remedy that he suggests is to "sweep the cobwebs from the ancient nuggets of pure gold,"—nor is that a new idea. We quote from his sermon as reported in the Daily News, (Denver,) June 22, 1908:

Christianity in America is not keeping pace with our development along other lines.

It is rather startling to be told, on what seems to be reliable figures, that not a single denomination in America of any prominence, including our Catholic brethren, is able to take care of its natural increase in births inside of such denominations, to say nothing of the vast numbers who are unattached to any organized form of Christianity. Perhaps the Roman Catholic Church comes nearer taking care of its own than any other church, and yet there are some rather startling figures in regard to that great church, and the figures are more startling when applied to the Protestant churches.

Mr. Thomas Dixon, Jr., calculates that during the last eighty-six years this country has received about 25,000,000 immigrants, and that, at the fewest, 15,000,000 of them have been Roman Catholics. But, as a matter of fact, the Roman Catholic Church only claims 12,000,000 of adherents in this country—Mr. Dixon says 10,000,000, but his figures are too low—so that, notwithstanding the prolific birth-rate of the people from whom that church draws so largely, Catholicism seems to have gained nothing from outside and lost some of its own number. And a more careful writer than Mr. Dixon says that in 1890 there were in this country 8,301,367 Catholics, in 1902 there were 10,976,757. This is an increase of 2,675,390 in twelve years, but during those years the Roman Catholic immigration amounted to 2,705,134, so that instead of gaining through births there was a net loss of 29,794 members. While these figures must be taken with a grain of salt, they are in the main true.

When we turn to the Protestant churches the facts are still more alarming. Reverend Doctor Atterbury, of New York, is reported to have said:

"This city (New York) is becoming a nest of infidels. It is tottering on the verge of a terrible religious disruption.

Unless the Christian people of the nation rise to its rescue, the metropolis is doomed! . . . The situation now is terrible. Churches are decreasing in number and power as the population of the great city grows. Commercialism has crowded out Christianity."

Doctor Jefferson, of the Broadway Tabernacle, recently declared that:

"Manhattan Island is more and more the Paris of pleasure-seekers and the London of business; it is more and more a foreign city. Of our 2,500,000 population, the Roman Catholic Church claims 930,000. There is a Protestant remnant of only 720,000 which is 50,000 less than it was ten years ago. Only the smallest fraction of these 720,000 nominal Protestants have any connection with the churches. It is not easy for the churches to work here, and it grows harder all the time. The last decade has been the most strenuous and discouraging for Christian workers which this city has probably ever known."

In the figures referred to by Thomas Dixon, Jr., he says that the growth of the Protestant churches in New York during the past quarter of a century represents less than one fourth the birth-rate of their own membership. He asserts that the Baptists of New York have not only failed to gain anything from the outside, but that they have actually lost two thirds of the children born in their own homes.

He says that the Methodists have in the same way gained nothing from the outside and lost one half of their own children, and that the Presbyterians, with their great wealth and powerful churches, have only managed to hold two thirds of their own children, without gaining an inch on the dark mass beyond. He argues that even these figures may give too favorable a view, for church rolls do not represent the real church membership.

Doctor Charles F. Aked, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Church of New York, in commenting on these figures says:

"I am sure that he (Mr. Dixon) is right about this. I believe that there are a great number of churches whose returns would make an auditor use strong language. Even if we take with a grain of salt his illustration of a church returning a membership of four thousand of whom fewer than two hundred could be found, our own knowledge would leave us pretty confident that a vast proportion of the membership of churches is merely nominal."

Doctor Josiah Strong makes an absolutely appalling statement with regard to the gains of the churches of this country at the present time as compared with earlier victories. He says:

"If the gain of the church on the population during the first half of the century is represented by eighty, during the last half it is represented by twenty, during the last twenty years it is represented by four, and during the last ten years it is represented by one.

"In our own denomination the gains are fairly represented by the foregoing figures. We are not keeping pace with the growth either in population or with the birth-rate in our homes. Our theological seminaries report a dearth of students. We have seen Andover, with a great endowment and a full equipment of learned professors, compelled to give up the fight for lack of students, and in all our seminaries there are almost as many professors as there are students. The ministry no longer appeals to educated young men.

In 1906 we reported an absolute net loss in Sunday-school membership and a net gain of only about twelve thousand on a membership in the churches of nearly seven hundred thousand. Of these 700,000, more than 100,000 were reported "absent," that is to say, they had moved away from the vicinity of their churches without taking letters to other churches. During that year we received on confession of faith 32,890. We dropped from the rolls 13,354. There died during the year 8,924, and we dismissed to other churches 20,359. But we received from other churches 23,653, so that of the 12,000 we gained in church membership, more than 3,000 came from other denominations. Within our own borders we gained less than 9,000 net members. A net gain of one to seventy-seven.

Estimating the number of children born in Congregational homes during the year 1906 at 50,000, which would be one for every fourteen members, we find a net loss in our ranks of more than 40,000. That is, we are receiving into our churches less than one in five of the children born annually in Congregational homes. In New England our young people's societies lost nearly 4,500 in net membership, and in the same territory our Sunday-schools lost more children born in our denomination during that year, our net loss in the Sunday-schools for the whole denomination was 3,695, which would really represent a net loss of more than 53,000 children to the Sunday-schools of the denomination. In fourteen States, mostly in New England, there were reported actual net losses in church membership. Our Sunday-schools reported net losses in thirty-one States and gains in only twenty States. Out of 5,923 churches, 1,254 actually received not a single member during that year, and 2,504 received ten or less. Less than 600 churches are reported as receiving 25 members or more during the year. Of 5,923 churches 1,171 were reported without pastors, and of 5,900 pastors 1,187 [in] charge. In Colorado in 1906 our net gain in church membership was 215 and our net loss in Sunday-school was 427, and this notwithstanding the fact that the population was rapidly increased by immigration, to say nothing of the number of births in our Congregational homes. . . .

"Under these conditions, what shall the church be and do? No doubt there was much hoary with age in our teachings in the past which needed to be swept into the gutter and carried off by the flood of iconoclasm. But there was and is more which if allowed to go by the board will mark the doom of humanity. The sublime truths uttered by the Nazarene nearly two thousand years ago are just as sublime to-day as they were then. The world needs them to-day just as much as the ancient world did, more so, in fact. And the church to whom the oracles are committed has a divine authority to cry its message to this age, and it must continue to do it if men are to be saved from themselves. Let us sweep the cobwebs from these ancient nuggets of pure gold and offer them to men with the full assurance that there will come the reaction, and then men will hear in the mass. In the meantime, here and there are those who are tired of the mad rush, and they will hear and heed. Let us not make the fatal mistake of substituting philosophy for religion. The phenomenon of the ages is Jesus Christ. He is not to be explained by modern methods. Men will come back to him if we continue to present him in his beauty. We need and must present a sane religion, but it must be a religion and not a homily on duty. Nothing else will satisfy the hunger of the human heart in the long run. Notwithstanding the exaltation of man, we are bound to recognize that we are but creatures, an effect rather than a cause in our cosmos, and that we are not yet ready to deny the first great cause. Behind all things is God, and the only soul-satisfying revelation of him is in that mysterious but none the less real Jesus the Christ."

Silence is deep as Eternity, speech as shallow as Time.—Carlyle.

• • •

Liberty exists in proportion to wholesome restraint.—Daniel Webster.

BLOOD-RED NOT A POPULAR COLOR WITH SOVEREIGNS.

We often come into contact with scraps of information which are more or less valuable as to the knowledge of the things of the world. Here is one in regard to the prejudice, or superstition, in regard to blood-red color, which will give the reader a moment of thought, if not a shudder, as the peculiar abhorrence to the color on the part of sovereigns occurs to him as he reads.

Royal and national colors vary with nations and times, but since Cain slew Abel blood-red has been the sign of revolt. In the earliest revolt known to history, when the Persians rose against their king four thousand years ago, they were led by a blood-red banner, and during the riots which took place in Paris the men in the blood-red caps were followed by the mob. A blood-red flag waved over Bunker Hill when the Americans fought for liberty, and it was the emblem of the German peasants in their great uprisings in 1424, 1492, and 1525. Blood-red was the color of the trades union flags during the Middle Ages, and it framed the background of the emblem of the Swiss confederacy in 1315. Through the whole of French and every other national history those striking in their own ways for liberty have worn the blood-red cap and hailed the blood-red banner as their leader. It is a curious fact that never has a monarch chosen it as his color.—London Answers.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Lon Hill, of Harlingen, Texas, is considered the wealthiest Indian in the world. The Kansas City Star estimates his fortune at $6,000,000. He is proud of his Indian blood and considers himself an evidence that the Indian can take care of himself. He made his money by interesting capitalists in building a short line of railroad; meanwhile he quietly bought up land contiguous to the line at a low figure and profited on its rapid rise in value. The Lamanite has discovered a new way to spoil the Gentile. This is one step in advance of their old scheme of putting rocks into baled hay sold to the Government. High finance with all its allurements is now open to the sons of Laman. Even society offers one means of ascent. The Youth's Companion reports the case of one young Indian, Bob Tailed Coyote, by name, who attended college and returned home with visiting cards carefully engraved "Mr. Robert T. Wolfe."

At the missionaries' meeting on advertising one elder demonstrated a method of attracting a crowd on the streets; the immediate excitant being a horribly shrill whistle. The brother rather objects to our description of the method as printed in the report of the missionaries' meeting. He gives the following instructions for the manufacture and use of these whistles: "My whistle is my thumb and front finger fixed like the letter O. Make one half attempt to swallow them, catch them with the teeth, pucker your lips to stop up the leaks, and blow. Watch results." This is all clear; but the novice must be careful to make only a half an attempt to swallow the thumb and finger.

A Boston firm recently offered a prize for the best definition of what constituted success. A Kansas woman was awarded the prize, and this was her answer:

"He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche, has accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration; whose money a benediction."

LAMONI ITEMS.

A series of rainy and gloomy days gave way to pleasant weather for the Fourth. Between two and three hundred of our citizens celebrated out of town. The Sunday-school picnic in Central Park was a quiet yet enjoyable affair. A program was rendered in the forenoon at which John Garver and Max Carmichael were the principal speakers. Their addresses were much enjoyed. The afternoon was devoted to games for the amusement of the younger generation. The day passed, so far as we have learned, without serious accident.

Alexander H. Smith was the speaker at the Brick Church Sunday morning. At the afternoon prayer-service eight ordinations were attended to. The ordinations were as follows: D. C. White, member of the Stake High Council; E. F. Hall, president of the Third Quorum of Priests; William France and Oscar Anderson counselors to the president of the Third Quorum of Priests; Arthur Lane and Samuel Shakespeare, counselors to the president of the Second Quorum of Teachers; Charles Dillon, counselor to the president of the First Quorum of Elders; Nephi Lovell, counselor to the president of the Second Quorum of Priests.

The Sunday evening service was the first of the outdoor series now being held. Temporary seats have been arranged under the trees in Central Park. Elder Heman C. Smith was the speaker on the subject of "Worship." The attendance and interest were excellent. Several members of the town band were present and with their instruments led the singing. The combination of instrumental and vocal music in the open air was fine. These meetings will continue during this week and each Sunday evening thereafter during the summer.

Elders' Note-Book

DO YOU ADVERTISE? HOW?

This matter was ably and eloquently discussed on the night of April 16, at our late General Conference, and reported for publication. A few thoughts ran hastily through the writer's mind while listening, and by solicitation I herewith present them. Many missionaries were present from various parts of the world, and we studied hard to devise ways and means for turning to account the instructions given. But we are not all working in the congested centers of population, and we really wanted to invite some of the rare talent from Toronto, Philadelphia, Boston, and intermediate points, from the crowded marts where bristling intellect is stacked away, to come to the backwoods regions of the Boston Mountains in Arkansas, for instance to "Loafer's Glory," where people never see a railroad, and live from one to ten miles apart. Come down (in your minds at least) for a time to the Ozarks and wrestle with this kinky proposition, and tell us how to reach the people. Come away from the roar and hum of the street-cars, and electric glare of the great proud cities, down to Stringer, and walk with us after meeting two or three miles over the mountains and rocks by the light of a pine torch. Bid adieu to the illustrious pipe-organ, and the mammoth piano, and the multi-voice of the great choir, pull on your wading boots, get you a paddle, come with me and learn to chord your melodies to the notes of the peeping, croaking, bellowing harmony of the green-coated, uniformed legions of the lagoons in South-eastern Missouri and Northeastern Arkansas, and teach us how to reach the denizens of the swamps. We are anxious to learn; and indeed we have learned some things. We have learned that the aspirations and tastes of these people are not like those in the cities. We have learned that that which sets the people wild with excitement in one locality is a total failure in another. We have learned that while these people are seventy-five years behind in some things, that they are up to date, if not in advance, along other lines. They know the value of a boycott. A tremendous percentage of them are religious; they have a form of godliness; and we are considered as intruders. They know exactly how to freeze you to death with silence. They know there is more death wrapped up in one good silent, secret, letting alone, than in ten thousand open-handed attacks. So we have learned that while advertising is a splendid thing in most places, after the people are awakened and know what is going on, yet the most effectual way you can close their eyes and ears, and doors, and put them into a Rip Van Winkle sleep, is to advertise your first meeting.

I used to go into new places, negotiate with the directors, and if the house was not refused I went from house to house, engaged the people in conversation, inviting them out, while scattering my bills, and tacking up placards. And if there is a preacher in town he invariably gets busy. Some leading citizen will caucus with the people on the corners, and give the thing a black eye before it matures; kill it so dead in the shell that it will never pip.

Oh, of course, if you are able to hang on half the season you might work up an interest. I have outgrown this old way, and adopted a new one; new to me at least. Now, my best success in opening new places lies in surprising the people. I simply steal a march on them, if you please. If I can get the opportunity to address a congregation, it is seldom indeed that I do not make friends. Upon a time the question was asked by a leading paper, "What course should a young man adopt in order to become a first-class orator?" This was answered by many occupying the front ranks, electrifying the minds of the masses. I believe it was Beecher answered thus, "Let the young man fill himself so full of his subject that he can hold no more; then pull out the bung and see nature caper." And I suggest that whoever fills themselves to overflowing with the love of God, then let the Spirit direct, will succeed, will find some way to get the message before the minds of the people; and we delight in hearing how these men have been led and directed in attracting the masses.

I came to a little church in a thickly-settled neighborhood about one hour before sundown; inquired for the deacon, and found him picking cotton. I walked up briskly, taking him by the hand, and said, "My name is Baldwin. I am a missionary, and want to preach in your church to-night." "Yes," said he, "we need some preaching." I snatched the time and said, "You can send one of these boys into that lower settlement and 'norate' it, can you? I will go the other way." "Why, yes," was his hesitating reply. "Thank you. The hour is too late for lengthy talks. I'll see you later." I had good crowds and splendid liberty for three or four nights, then I was accused of lying to the deacon by telling him that I was a Missionary Baptist, and of course the house was closed. But I had stolen a march on the enemy; and had gotten the angel's message fairly before the people, and made friends to the cause, with no thought upon my part of deceiving any one. It was the deacon who added the word Baptist.

Old Doctor McFerson asked me to preach Christ at Coal Hill, where his children belonged to the Christian Church. I called on Mr. M., a large merchant, who controlled their church, when the following brief conversation took place. After a formal introduction, I said, "Can you tell me, Brother M., who has charge of your church here in town?"

Mr. M.—Why, yes. The Lord has charge of it, of course.

B.—Good. I am pleased to know that; then I must apply to the Lord for permission to preach in that church?

Mr. M.—Why, yes, if the Lord gives his consent it will be all right.

B.—As a minister for Christ, I have his consent to occupy where he has control. Does the Lord carry the key? (His clerks laughed and winked at each other, as they saw his own joke turned against him.)

Mr. M.—Yes, the Lord or some of his bosses has the key.

B.—Thank you. Now, Brother M., what way had I best announce meeting for to-night?

Mr. M.—Why, stick up a notice at the post-office, and—

B.—And tell it to the school; all right; thank you. And if I do not prove to-night that I have my commission from the proper source, let the blame rest on me. Good day.

In a minute I was by myself—O, infinite Father, will you tell me what to do in this case? It was a huge joke from the start, and I held the ascendancy; but what shall I do? Carry it out, or go back and explain?—All right Father, but will you please stay very near me? I am so weak by myself." I pulled a lithograph from a window, borrowed the agent's marking-pot, and printed: "A Great Sermon at the Christian Church To-night." The postmaster bowed politely, and felt himself honored with the privilege of relieving me of the task of tacking it up.

By request of the principal, I briefly addressed the students in several rooms, and went to the country for my dinner. I returned to town just as the mammoth bell was loudly telling the people the second time about the new preacher. With elastic tread I, the minister, walked down the carpeted aisle to the stand. The jugular veins of the large choir swelled out as they sang a song of welcome. The speaker introduced himself to the full house, and announced "The kingdom of God," as his text. A great silence prevailed; every eye was riveted upon the man in the pulpit. With consternation they first caught a glimpse of the awful fate of a ruined world, under the supreme reign of the prince of darkness; but were inspired with hope when the Prince of Peace was introduced; and lifted still higher as his wonderful mission was briefly explained. They followed carefully the details as he selected and commissioned his officers; saw the beauty and order as he placed them in charge over the various departments of his great army, and equipped them with "the whole armor of God." Their admiration was heightened when they saw how perfectly this army was drilled; their obedience, their loyalty, and their fearless march to the massacres of Pagan Rome demonstrated the infinite value of their equipment. There came a relief of their breathless suspense when they witnessed the conversion of the brilliant emperor, Constantine. They partook freely of the sudden burst of gratitude of the early saints as the emperor subdued their surly enemy and drafted a whole nation into the service of the captain of their salvation. But alas! it was a dream. Nay, worse than a dream; for they soon discovered that the whole church was riding on the crest of the most tremendous avalanche the world had ever witnessed. The heathen portion of the church proceeded to butcher the Christian portion, and engulfed the world in the awful night of ages. The last ray of light disappeared when the last man holding a divine commission was martyred. My congregation were left at the darkest hour, just before the day; but not until they heard the cocks crowing for dawn. Of course my congregation was much smaller the next night; but I had made friends, and hungry souls came out. And the young men of that church stayed with me during the week's meeting; then they gave me money and invited me back.

Schoolhouses all over the country are supposed to be open for preaching. I do not want to see the directors. I simply announce my meeting to the school and in town in a brief, business-like way, and let curiosity brew their minds until the crowd comes together. Then they are never left in doubt. By the help of God I just load them down the first round.

I went into a small town and billed it in a bustling way. "What the Bible says about America, date and place," was all the posters contained. I showed them that "all the earth," and "upon the face of all the earth," and "in every high mountain," etc., etc., spelled "America"; and do you not know that that crowd looked silly enough just at the close of a lecture that had absorbed their undivided thought for ninety minutes, when they learned that they had been tricked into listening with interest to an irrefutable argument on the Book of Mormon?

Let me say to these missionaries, especially those going into out-of-the-way places: Fill your souls so full of God and the truth that you will fairly bubble over; then without fear or reserve, say, Here I am, Lord, send me; and he will use you to advantage.

Let us come together again in the future, and tell in what paths he hath led us.

D. R. BALDWIN.

Original Articles

HOW TO CREATE AND HOLD INTEREST IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

(Two Pictures—A result of Personal Observation.)

Marie was to attend the Fair View Sabbath-school while visiting relatives. She had never attended a Latter Day Saint service of any kind. Arriving at the chapel her first Sunday, they found the door locked. The janitor was evidently tardy. The windows were then resorted to. They found one unlocked. A small boy climbed through and opened the door for the others. (I might insert here that this dignified performance was quite a regular occurrence in those days.) The family set about straightening the chairs and dusting, then read library books until children began coming in.

The superintendent was tardy and the assistant too bashful to take his place and open the school. So we waited until the missing link arrived, flushed and rushed, but with the usual abundance of good (?) excuses. We were near fifteen minutes overtime with the opening exercises. At times it had been even worse than that. The little ones had been exercising rather vociferously meanwhile and were tired and excited, ready to giggle at the least provocation. Some older ones were out of patience at the delay. The intermediates had begun a line of conversation, thought, and action contrary to the Sunday-school lesson, and consequently were not in the best trim to enjoy said lesson. It was hard, indeed, to divert their minds into necessary channels in order to have any kind of success with class work.

Had there been any song-service provided for, as should always be for each Sunday—the time would have been profitably and pleasantly spent, and every one present would have been more nearly in a proper state of mind. As it was the superintendent pounded the bell emphatically several times in succession, and called, in as moderate a voice as possible in order to be heard, that it was time to begin school, and past the time. Some obeyed, others lingered to finish a conversation, and were personally requested to obey orders! At last all were in place, but not quiet. No time to spare, however! So one verse of a song they had sung so often they had quite lost the spirit of it, was sung. (More need for song-service.)

The prayer was rather lengthy, and of such language the children could not readily comprehend. This is so often the case! The next song was omitted on account of lack of time; and the little songsters were disappointed, too.

At close of prayer a belated teacher or two hurried down the aisles, some stray pupils following—children beckoning or whispering them to "Sit by me," or "Come in here," etc. The responsive reading, being short, was not omitted this time, in the hurry. But if the assistant superintendent had occupied in his office there would have been a leading voice for the school, which would have helped to avoid the irregularity in reading—some slower, some faster than the others.

It was now time to pass to classes. A bell was rung three times, and superintendent called each time, respectively, "Rise," "March," "Be seated." This superintendent always did this same way. Some pupils and teachers resented it. It reflected on their ability to remember what the bells meant. The trouble was that sometimes the superintendent forgot one, two, or all three bells, and the school never really knew what to expect, and this caused disorder all around. At such times he would call out, "Classes will now take their places." "Be seated." Well, the pupils scudded around over the room, crossing lines, bumping each other, dragging chairs into position, and sitting down when they pleased. I do not know what Marie thought of all this disorder. She refrained from comments, but one could notice her taking notes pretty thoroughly. She was left to seat herself, had not a certain senior teacher kindly conducted her to his class. Some one else should have been free, or appointed to see to visitors. The lesson was not so interesting to her, because she had heard it studied at the home of her relatives. The teacher merely had the class read the Bible lesson, each scholar reading one verse at a time. They then read the Quarterly comments, he asking questions as stated in the Quarterly. Comments from the class were few and far between. Her mind and eyes began to wander—she overheard and oversaw other teachers and classes.

One teacher yawned very often during the lesson hour. (She evidently was not especially interested in the lesson, had just skipped over it, and was filling in the time with words instead of ideas. Can not expect pupils to learn lessons from such teachers, or for them; and they do not.) She heard another teacher explain that she had forgotten the cards promised as awards of merit the Sunday before: and the pupils were again disappointed. She saw the superintendent rushing around, trying to find a teacher for a class of two lone boys; and heard him explain to them that he guessed he'd have to get them a new teacher—theirs was so irregular. Marie heard him ask them where their companions were, and the reply that they "are not coming any more"! (They had been gradually dropping off. No wonder!)

At this juncture the superintendent rang the bell and called the attention of the school to the fact that the bell would ring again in three minutes, and to close classes. It slipped his mind. It was five minutes overtime, if not more, when he rang it, and the classes took their places again for review.

I do not know which kills interest most, no review at all, or one that is twice as long as it should be. This was one of the latter class. The superintendent delivered a short "sermon," after some questions, while presently people began coming in for the morning church service (some parents and others among them who should and could have attended the Sabbath-school). Branch officers were, as usual, displeased, and the children, turning to see the newcomers, lost out on the review.

Well, there was no closing song, and just as prayer was announced, some one reminded the superintendent that the secretary's report ought to be read. When the school was finally dismissed, the pupils managed to gather together their scattered possessions and squeezed out past the congregation now entering, while the superintendent breathed a perceptible sigh of relief (and Marie was left unwelcomed).

Now, for your encouragement, we are glad to say that although this Sunday-school barely struggled out an existence for years, sometimes prospering more than at others, there came a time when the light appeared and the school basked in it, and is doing so at present, so far as we know. There is a sequel to this "tale of woe."

There came along election of officers one day. A new superintendent was the result. She realized the necessity of a janitor who realized that his work is his duty before the Lord, and that it is as pleasing to the Lord as any other officer's work; that to be counted "doorkeeper in the house of the Lord," as the Psalmist once expressed himself, is an honor; that "order is heaven's first law," and that there can be no special interest where order is neglected so completely. Several "janitors" were tried, and advancement made along that line.

A pastor came to the flock who suggested and took equal interest in the workings of every department. (No more climbing in at windows.) The dear old soul who kept that chapel clean and orderly and opened on time, the pastor who acted as flower committee and got others started in looking after this feature of the work, the superintendent who worked with her "might, mind, and strength" to gather together the scattered wits of "the family," will long, long be remembered by the many. And their works do follow them.

The assistant superintendent, no matter what excuses may have been offered to get out of it, was marched to his place at the front, and led out in responsive readings, so that in time the pupils learned how and when to pause according to punctuation, and to read together.

Those who could sing, or who wanted to try, joined in practicing once a week for church services, and led out in Sunday-school service splendidly. This helped avoid confusion of conversation and children running all over the building. As a usual thing, school began on time; for if the superintendent knew she would be absent or tardy, the assistant was notified to take charge.

Some remember well the training received in regard to the bells, and the prompt obedience to the signals. To help the matters, the organist always played a march tune, no matter if short, while pupils marched. A certain march was arranged. All this took Sunday after Sunday of training; but it certainly paid; for it finally became part of the order of things, and pupils went through the opening and closing exercises very gracefully, and with pleasure. Sometimes, to be sure, there were visiting members or new ones, who made mistakes, and sometimes a regular pupil did so. But the conducting of the exercises in general was neat and timely and orderly. There is not much use trying to create interest or develop it in anything, if such is not the case; for one evil begets others—and gradually the organization will go from bad to worse. All the bringing in of new pupils, and carrying out of devices to gather more, will bring no everlasting effects for good and steady increase in attendance, if the workings of the school are not in harmony with law and order.

After reaching their classes, the children's minds were settled, and not in an excited state. Some of the teachers were quite models, others we do not know about specially. But in order to succeed in imparting to pupils the knowledge we have gleaned, we must have a clear and detailed understanding, outline of the lesson in our own minds, so that no reading of the lesson will be necessary, unless to get a quotation. The whole Bible text need not be read again, while a verse or two now and then may be necessary. We should form our own questions, also; not so strictly adhering to those in the Quarterly, going the rounds of the class, to each in his exact turn. If pupils are listless, devise some plan whereby they will need to hunt some needed information for the benefit of the class or school for the next week. Perhaps a reminder during the week will be a good idea.

Children need to feel that their ideas, as well as they themselves, are of importance and interest to the school. Let them in turn write a synopsis of the previous Sunday's lesson. Have a monthly contest to see what pupil has memorized the most Bible verses, including the memory verses and golden texts. We used to memorize verses and verses at a time for Sunday. Children will lose their interest if the teacher does not give them something to do and follow it up with suitable acknowledgments of their zeal and ability. But do not make promises to classes and forget them, or forget to carry out any plan that has been arranged. These disappointments are disastrous to the success of the school. Vary the routine work with little surprises, that it may not become monotonous, and that the school may not get into ruts.

The blackboard exercise is of great importance. Even if it is only a word and sentence picture, it "fills the bill" and brings out a good review. In time the school will overcome its natural shyness, and things will be livelier. The pent-up interest will crop out.

Plenty of time should be given for reports and announcements. These are always of interest, but the secretary's report should not be always the same stereotyped affair. There should be mention made of former classes in attendance, in collection, promptness, and any such items as the secretary may have noted, that would interest those present.

Whether begun late or not the school should be closed on time, especially if there is a service following it; but the singing should not be neglected. The children love it, and enjoy it, even more than the lesson in some cases. Music is God's gift to us, and this form of worship should be cultivated along with others. It is "the tie that binds."

Give the children plenty to do not only on Sunday, but during the week, to keep their minds active along lines of Sunday-school work.

Above all, we must be united ourselves, as officers and teachers, united in our efforts, putting aside and overcoming the differences and difficulties that are so sure to come among us; realizing that no glory which we gain here is everlasting, except it be that which goes before us, and in our favor, to meet us at the great judgment. MADGE SIEGFRIED.

• * * * •

AN ANCIENT PATRIARCHAL BLESSING.

While sitting at my fireside one evening the past winter, meditating upon the work of God and my part in it, the objection I had heard to the patriarchal order and its work came into my mind, and I was puzzled for a moment how to meet it. I was aware that evangelists were spoken of as officers set in the church, in the New Testament order, but where was there any evidence in the Book of Mormon of such an order, or anything that would lead us to infer that there were patriarchs in Book of Mormon times.

This was the objection made, and I was at a loss to know how to meet it, for I could not remember in my Book of Mormon reading anything that I could use in the defense of my work as a patriarch.

While I was thus deep in thought upon the matter, the voice of the Spirit said, "Read your Book of Mormon." I looked around, as if to see who had spoken, but did not take up the book, for I had the book at my elbow upon the table; but my thoughts turned upon my past reading of the book, and I could not remember any reading that I could make use of yet. When again the voice said, "Read your Book of Mormon." I then took up the book and opened it at the Second Book of Nephi, first chapter, and read Lehi's blessing of his sons. I read Jacob's, but the thought came to me, "That is too general for my use," and laid the book down and turned away, when again, more peremptory than before, the voice said, "Read your Book of Mormon." I took up the book again and it opened at the second chapter of the Second Book of Nephi, and I read Joseph's blessing under the hands of his father Lehi.

I closed the book and said to myself, "I can not use that, for Lehi was not a patriarch." When quick as a flash came the voice of the Spirit, "Lehi was both prophet and patriarch." I then reread and was strongly impressed to copy the blessing and offer it for publication, and now I ask a careful reading of what to me is the patriarchal blessing of Joseph, son of Lehi. From this testimony of the Spirit I am comforted in my work, and if the same satisfaction comes to those who read it that came to me, the objection mentioned above will melt away and disappear like the mists before the rising sun.

ALEXANDER H. SMITH.

PATRIARCHAL BLESSING OF JOSEPH, SON OF LEHI, GIVEN BY THE PATRIARCH LEHI JUST BEFORE HIS DEATH, GIVEN ON THE LAND OF PROMISE.

And now I speak unto you, Joseph, my last born. Thou wast born in the wilderness of mine afflictions; yea, in the days of my greatest sorrow, did thy mother bear thee. And may the Lord consecrate also unto thee this land, which is a most precious land, for thine inheritance and the inheritance of thy seed with thy brethren, for thy security for ever, if it so be that ye shall keep the commandments of the Holy One of Israel. And now, Joseph, my last born, whom I have brought out of the wilderness of mine afflictions, may the Lord bless thee for ever, for thy seed shall not utterly be destroyed.

For behold, thou art the fruit of my loins; and I am a descendant of Joseph, who was carried captive into Egypt. And great were the covenants of the Lord, which he made unto Joseph; wherefore, Joseph truly saw our day. And he obtained a promise of the Lord, that out of the fruit of his loins, the Lord God would raise up a righteous branch unto the house of Israel; not the Messiah, but a branch which was to be broken off; nevertheless, to be remembered in the covenants of the Lord, that the Messiah should be made manifest unto them in the latter days, in the spirit of power, unto the bringing of them out of darkness unto light; yea, out of hidden darkness and out of captivity unto freedom.

For Joseph truly testified, saying, A seer shall the Lord my God raise up, who shall be a choice seer unto the fruit of my loins. Yea, Joseph truly said, thus saith the Lord unto me: A choice seer will I raise up out of the fruit of thy loins; and he shall be esteemed highly among the fruit of thy loins. And unto him will I give commandment, that he shall do a work for the fruit of thy loins, his brethren, which shall be of great worth unto them, even to the bringing of them to the knowledge of the covenants which I have made with thy fathers. And I will give unto him a commandment, that he shall do none other work save the work which I shall command him. And I will make him great in mine eyes: for he shall do my work. And he shall be great like unto Moses, whom I have said I would raise up unto you, to deliver my people, O house of Israel.

And Moses will I raise up, to deliver my people out of the land of Egypt.

But a seer will I raise up out of the fruit of thy loins; and unto him will I give power to bring forth my word unto the seed of thy loins; and not to the bringing forth of my word only, saith the Lord, but to the convincing them of my word, which shall have already gone forth among them. Wherefore, the fruit of thy loins shall write; and the fruit of the loins of Judah shall write; and that which shall be written by the fruit of thy loins, and also that which shall be written by the fruit of the loins of Judah, shall grow together, unto the confounding of false doctrines, and laying down of contentions, and establishing peace among the fruit of thy loins, and bringing them to the knowledge of their fathers in the latter days; and also to the knowledge of my covenants, saith the Lord.

And out of weakness shall he be made strong, in that day when my work shall commence among all my people, unto the restoring thee, O house of Israel, saith the Lord. And thus prophesied Joseph, saying: Behold, that seer will the Lord bless; and they that seek to destroy him, shall be confounded: for this promise, of which I have obtained of the Lord, of the fruit of thy loins, shall be fulfilled.

Behold I am sure of the fulfilling of this promise. And his name shall be called after me; and it shall be after the name of his father. And he shall be like unto me; for the thing which the Lord shall bring forth by his hand, by the power of the Lord shall bring my people unto salvation; yea:

Thus prophesied Joseph, I am sure of this thing, even as I am sure of the promise of Moses: for the Lord hath said unto me, I will preserve thy seed for ever. And the Lord has said, I will raise up a Moses; and I will give power unto him in a rod; and I will give judgment unto him in writing.

Yet I will not loose his tongue, that he shall speak much: for I will not make him mighty in speaking. But I will write unto him my law, by the finger of mine own hand; and I will make a spokesman for him. And the Lord said unto me also, I will raise up unto thee fruit of thy loins; and I will make for him a spokesman. And I, behold, I will give unto him, that he shall write the writing of the fruit of thy loins, unto the fruit of thy loins; and the spokesman of thy loins shall declare it. And the words which he shall write, shall be the words which are expedient in my wisdom, should go forth unto the fruit of thy loins. And it shall be as if the fruit of thy loins had cried unto them from the dust; for I know their faith. And they shall cry from the dust; yea, even repentance unto their brethren, even after many generations have gone by them.

And it shall come to pass that their cry shall go, even according to the simpleness of their words. Because of their faith, their words shall proceed forth out of my mouth unto their brethren, who are the fruit of thy loins; and the weakness of their words will I make strong in their faith, unto the remembering of my covenant which I made unto thy fathers.

And now, behold, my son Joseph, after this manner did my father of old prophesy. Wherefore, because of this covenant thou art blessed: for thy seed shall not be destroyed, for they shall hearken unto the words of the book.

And there shall raise up one mighty among them, who shall do much good, both in word and in deed, being an instrument in the hands of God, with exceeding faith, to work mighty wonders, and do that thing which is great in the sight of God, unto the bringing to pass much restoration unto the house of Israel, and unto the seed of thy brethren. And now, blessed art thou, Joseph. Behold, thou art little; wherefore, hearken unto the words of thy brother, Nephi, and it shall be done unto thee, even according to the words which I have spoken.

Remember the words of thy dying father. Amen.

• * * * •

LEAVES FROM LIFE.

A SKETCH FROM THE LIFE OF J. E. VANDERWOOD.

ELDER J. E. VANDERWOOD.

I am the eldest son of John and Anna Vanderwood, who came to Utah as Mormons, having received that phase of the gospel in Europe; but soon after reaching the Zion (?) of the West they found that the gospel taught in Utah was not that which they had embraced, and in short the message as borne by the Reorganization reached them, and they accepted it and rejoiced in the gospel hope.

I was born on the twenty-ninth day of August, 1878, in a little country place called Elkhorn, Oneida County, Idaho, where I spent most of my time until of age. My early life was somewhat varied, my father being in the horse business. We soon learned to ride on horseback and at the age of ten years could throw the lasso with the greatest of dexterity.

Having been born in the church we were taught to revere the latter-day work. Nothing out of the ordinary home life occurred until the summer of 1887, when my elder sister received an angelic visitation; a messenger from the courts of glory, appearing at her bedside, informed her that the gospel was true and that she should obey it, and told her that Elder R. J. Anthony would come that way soon and that she, her sister Anna, and her brother John should be baptized if they desired to please the Lord. Accordingly we made preparation, and ere long the elder referred to came to our humble cottage and made his abode with us for a few days. On the eighteenth day of October, 1887, we were baptized.

Time ran on pleasantly until the autumn of 1888 when our father, who for years had been a faithful worker in the church, become estranged to the work through false brethren and other causes, amongst which was the pamphlet gotten out by David Whitmer. Becoming somewhat dissatisfied he resigned his duties in the branch, and without any labor on the part of the officers for his reconciliation he was excommunicated from the church, without judge or jury, and in such a way that it caused him to oppose the work very vigorously for a time. Those who should have been the ones to assist him in seeing his mistake were the very ones to cry apostate and drive him farther way, and we began to think that we had been deceived and there was nothing in the latter-day message after all, and thus my young mind became darkened, until at times I would almost doubt the existence of a Deity. However, at times the Lord would smile upon us with his Spirit and I would be forced to say that God is good. But as I grew older and noticed the spirit among some of the would-be church members, and then compared it with that of my father, whom they called an apostate, it increased my doubts in place of diminishing them, and the association of wild and rough characters along with it almost led me to believe the gospel was a fraud.

Being estranged from the gospel I sought the pleasure of the world, and in short became a great lover of the ballroom, and thus spent many precious hours at the dance that might have been given for the cause of truth had the environments been different.

I will just digress here to say that my schooling was received in the little country place where I was born, and the first term of three months that I received was in a private house prepared for the occasion with a long homemade table at each side of the room, with some homemade benches to correspond, the one being for the boys and the other for the girls. There we learned to work problems by counting on our fingers. The next year, however, our little log schoolhouse was built and seated with the same furniture we have before mentioned, and thus we were educated, part of the time going to school and part of the time at other duties, until we had attended for perhaps twelve months, when we were obliged to remain at home and assist in providing the bread and butter for the family.

Thus I moved along quietly, trying to win fame as a hard laboring man, until the year 1896, when I took a great interest in politics, thinking the salvation of the people depended largely in the reformation of the political aspect of life, and thus I continued to study and talk along political lines for the space of four years and found out some of the trickery and corruption prevalent in political circles.

At this juncture I decided to leave my old home for a time and visit my uncle, (Brother John Eliason,) at Deer Lodge, Montana, whom I had never seen, and he being a faithful Latter Day Saint I was placed in different environments and it had its effect on me in time. On arriving at my uncle's I found Brother and Sister Gomer Wells there to take supper with them. Of course I became acquainted with them and it called to mind the days when Brother Anthony used to stay at our house. We went to meeting, something I had not done for some time, and again heard something. I was then invited to attend Sunday-school, which I did, and soon became intensely interested in the lesson study, and at once began to make a study of the Bible, and took such comfort in it that it was frequently one and two o'clock in the morning before I would retire, and it brought to me afresh all the beautiful promises of the gospel. I thought again of the soul-thrilling sermons that had been delivered in our schoolhouse about two years prior by Brother D. W. Wight, which had been treated lightly by me at the time.

Well, a few weeks passed by, and I was elected superintendent of the Sunday-school at Deer Lodge, when it became necessary for me to apply myself to keep up and do justice to the Sunday-school work, and so by night study and fervent prayer I was able to prepare myself for the work.

Becoming more and more interested I laid aside all my former pleasures and applied every spare moment of my time for the search of truth and light; often enjoying the comfort of the Spirit in my study and prayer, so much so that the still, small voice that whispers peace to the soul gave me to understand that I must now prepare myself for the work which I would soon be called upon to perform. I continued to apply myself and acquaint myself with the word of God until the conference held at Deer Lodge the first of March, 1901, when I made my first attempt to speak in a testimony-meeting, whereupon Brother J. H. Wells arose and said the Spirit bore record to him that the young brother who had just spoken would in the near future be called to the ministry; and so I had another evidence that I must make preparation for the work to come.

Returning some months later to my old home, I created no little surprise on the part of some of my friends, as some would say, "What a change has taken place in Vanderwood since he left here; he seems to be so well informed." Others said, "He is on the road to insanity, for he always has his head in a book," so they disagreed in the matter.

Time passed along and I continued to study the standard books of the church, receiving evidence continually of the work before me, realizing that sooner or later I would have to stand in defense of the gospel truth.

We had met in business-meeting preparatory to the district conference to be held at Blackfoot, Idaho, the first day of March, 1903, when the branch saw fit to recommend me to the conference for ordination to the office of elder. I attended the conference and was there ordained an elder under the hands of Apostle W. H. Kelley, and Elders J. H. Condit and A. J. Layland, March 1, 1903. I began at once to preach and accepted an appointment from the General Conference of the same year and was placed in the active work of the ministry. My first sermon was delivered in our home schoolhouse, the one where I had attended school, only it had been fixed up by this time with new seats, a coat of plaster on the inside and rustic on the outside, covered by a coat of paint.

I went to the house about a half hour before the time of service, to build the fire, and there I began to meditate upon the effort before me and how difficult it would be to speak to people I had known all my life. I decided the best thing to do was to tell the Lord of it, and so I bowed in the corner and asked the Lord to assist me in the task, first by moving upon the people to come out and hear so that I would not have to speak to empty seats, and next that he would give me liberty of thought and speech that I might be able to rightly represent him and also receive a testimony of his approval of me as a minister for him. The house was crowded, and I began to speak by selecting as a text Hebrews 11: 6. I preached faith to them, occupying about fifty-five minutes, and when the meeting was closed I overheard the remarks of some of my congregation and the comment they made on the effort gave me great comfort; I gave God the praise.

After attending General Conference that spring, I soon found myself out on the frontier among our Mormon friends, who used to take great delight in asking me questions after we had spoken to them for a short time, and I am happy to say that the Lord has ever stood by me and I have never lacked for words when standing to defend the gospel.

The first year of my ministry passed away without any great events and the second year had begun when I found myself at Blackfoot, Idaho, where we had tried in vain to secure a meeting-house in which to speak to the people. After exhausting all the means in my power to secure a house for the purpose I arranged to begin street-work; my collaborer had not yet joined me so I was compelled to "go it alone" so far as earthly help was concerned. It required no small amount of courage to be able to step out on the street before a host of strange faces and tell them the gospel story; but I had faith in him who had ever been faithful, and so I began, and for three nights the questions came thick and fast at the close of the service. The good Lord stood by me and I was able to meet every objection that could be raised, and so another means was adopted, and that was to tell the people that our positions were false and therefore they should not listen to us, whereupon I had the following challenge published in the Bingham County Democrat for June 24, 1904: "Inasmuch as we have been denied the use of a meeting-house in Blackfoot and have been forced to speak on the streets, and whereas the positions taken have been denied by some of the Utah faith, we herewith challenge any representative of the Utah Mormon Church to meet us in public discussion upon the positions taken, namely, Was Brigham Young the lawful and legitimate successor to Joseph Smith? Is Utah the place of gathering? And was polygamy a tenet of the church in Joseph Smith's day?" This challenge, like all others, was not accepted by them. And again I was able to see the fulfillment of the promise made to me in my ordination, viz., that my tongue should be loosed and that I would be able by the Spirit's help to silence all opposition raised against me.

And I again remembered the words that came from the realms above when the voice clear and distinct made known to me my future work and gave a promise that if faithful I would be supported and that God would be my strength and defense. Relying on the promise I had received I moved on with faith in God and suffice it to say that my work was one of pleasure.

At this juncture it might be well to say that the thoughts of a life companion sometimes came before me and I often thought that I would be happy with one that could be a help to me in the gospel work, so I was somewhat careful in my choice, and had for some time made it a matter of prayer, believing the God of heaven could direct in that matter as well as in other matters that had been made clear to me through the aid of the divine Spirit. One night after praying for wisdom in my choice that the work be not hindered through any mistake that might be made on my part, the heavens were opened to my view and I beheld the glory of those who are true to the Master and faithful to the trust reposed in them. I said, "Lord, may this be my lot!" Later the scene changed and I found myself amid the toils of life, and my condition was lonely, as there was apparently no one amongst my acquaintances to share my trials. At this the scene changed and I was sitting on a sofa with a blue-eyed lady at my side, and it seemed strange to me that I had so soon formed her acquaintance. As I departed from her presence I said, How is this that I have visited a young lady whom I had never met? After the scene had been repeated three times, I said, What does all this mean? And a voice both clear and distinct said: "This is to be your future wife, and she shall be a comfort to you in the gospel work, and for this cause is she given to you," and at once the vision disappeared and I lay awake thinking of what I had seen.

Time passed along and I finally went to Sugar City, accompanied by Elder S. D. Condit, who at this time was my traveling companion, and to my surprise I there met the girl that had been shown to me in my vision, and it was no other than Sr. Bertha Radmall, who was quite well known in the Sunday-school work at Pleasant Grove. We gradually became acquainted during the few days of my stay there, which resulted in a friendly correspondence that finally consummated in our being united in the holy bond of matrimony, December 22, 1904. To this union there was a twelve-pound boy born on the second day of June, 1906, whom we named Elvin John, and our hopes are that he will some day be useful in the great work of truth.

It has always been a satisfaction to know that the cause I was called to represent could stand against any opposition that could be brought against it and that sustained our faith.

I held my first public discussion at the little town of American Fork, Utah, January 28 to February 2, 1907, with an elder of the Utah faith.

Here it might be well to mention a case or two of healing that have been an evidence to me of the goodness of God. One instance is where Brother Will S. Pender and the writer were called in to administer to a young lady and an infant child both of whom were very low, and on entering the house we were told by the mother that they were in a critical condition and that the child had not taken any nourishment for something like two days. We had prayer and then administered, first to the child and then to his sister, and they both received relief, and inside of a half hour the child that had not taken any nourishment for days arose and ate a hearty meal, and the sister who had been confined to her bed for over a week sat up the next day.

Another remarkable case was the healing of paralysis in Brother Trease, who had been injured in a mine and had been taken to a hospital and operated on, from which he never fully recovered. One side was left numb and as if it were lifeless for several months, so that he could not use his limbs to any advantage and could scarcely step over any obstruction that might perchance be in his pathway. After meeting one evening he told the writer that he wished to be administered to. We called for order and those who had not yet left the house were seated and Brother A. M. Chase anointed and the writer confirmed. The Spirit was present in power and Brother Trease was made whole.

And I was healed of a rupture just through the goodness of God and as a testimony of the truthfulness of the work, when I said, "Lord, if this work be true, give me a testimony of the same by healing me of this infirmity," and in an instant I was whole and I have never been troubled since, so I have cause to be grateful to as well as trustful in the Lord.

If this escapes the waste-basket we sincerely hope it will help to inspire hope and faith in the reader, while we will labor and pray for the redemption of Zion and her scattered children.

In the one faith,

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

Of General Interest

OLD FAITHS FOR NEW.

The Hindoo meets no very cordial welcome when he seeks entrance into Western nations. He is persona non grata even in the dominions of his sovereign lord, King Edward. But for the Hindoo's religion and for every school and cult of his philosophy there is a favorable reception in Christian lands which is an interesting aspect of the interchange of creeds between West and East.

A Buddhist monk has recently begun missionary work in London under social auspices. San Francisco has a new Buddhist church and Seattle a Brahmin temple. The announcement that among the pupils of a Hindoo yogi who has been teaching the occult wisdom of the East in New York were a banker and a trust president, a distinguished opera-singer and a former Cabinet officer, throws light on the vogue of oriental mysticism here.

With Theosophy New York was first made officially acquainted in 1875 through the society founded by Mme. Blavatsky, Colonel Henry S. Olcott, and Walter Q. Judge. On Mme. Blavatsky's death Annie Besant and Mr. Judge became the joint mediums of the mahatma's inspiration, to be succeeded in turn by Katherine A. Tingley, who in 1898 established the "Universal Brotherhood," with a colony at Point Loma, California, which included men of national prominence. There are now in the nation some seventy-two Theosophical branch societies, with a membership of more than two thousand.

Along with yogi asceticism flourishes also the non-ascetic pantheistic doctrine of Babism, imported from Mahometan Persia and numbering New Yorkers among its votaries. The newly opened "India House" in this city is the nucleus of a movement for the diffusion of Hindoo sentiment.

Meantime the New World is giving the Old by way of return two faiths native to American soil, Mormonism and Christian Science. The institution of a Mormon proselyting campaign in London has revealed the existence in England of ten thousand adherents to the Church of the Latter Day Saints, a vigorous growth from the seed sown at Liverpool by Orson Pratt nearly seventy years ago. Christian Science has several churches in London, others in Manchester, Edinburg, and in various Continental cities. The arrival in Boston of a German countess to become a student at the Christian Science mother church we noted in the despatches last week.

With which side the honor of gaining most converts rests, whether with India's ancient creeds or the new American religions, is a subject for curious speculation.—New York World.

• * * * •

[WHAT THE EMMANUEL MOVEMENT IS DOING FOR NERVOUS INVALIDS.

The Emmanuel Movement is distinctly religious, but very broadly and practically and undenominationally so. It is an endeavor to get the Christian religion down a little deeper into our daily experiences than the church has attempted to do heretofore. It strives to make the man whole.

It accomplishes this by bringing the whole man under the redeeming power of the Christian religion. An Episcopalian rector and his associate in office conceived the happy idea, a year or more ago, in the city of Boston, Massachusetts, and in a church named Emmanuel, of making Christian faith do service in the entire psychical and physiological realms. Their studies in psychology convinced them that there was an intimate and powerful relation between the psychic and physical parts in man, and that it was not wise to divide man into compartments, and say this part is for the priests to prescribe for, as it is psychic, and that part is for the physician to prescribe for, as it is physical, but that man is a unit, an entity, that the kind of a mind he has accounts largely for the kind of a body he has, and that a healthful spirit may become, if the man be willing, a curative force unto his entire system.

IF A MAN IS PREPARED TO LIVE, HE WILL BE PREPARED TO DIE.

Perhaps they also had a conviction on the religious side of the question. They recognized that something had been lost out of Christianity since Jesus asked the infirm man at the pool of Bethesda if he would be made whole, and since Peter commanded the impotent man at the gate of the Temple Beautiful, in the name of Jesus of Nazareth, to rise up and walk. This something that has been lost is that Christianity has a redeeming power for the cure of the body as truly as for the cure of the soul.

The older appeal was to the soul and the man's preparation for eternity. This new movement takes hold of his mental and bodily life and fits him for daily living right here and now. It says that if he is prepared to live, he will be prepared to die. It is here where he has to fight his battles, bear his burdens, work out his destiny. The Emmanuel Movement is not best called a provision for the healing of the body, for there are many diseases—namely, those of organic nature—that it does not attempt to cure. It exists really for the uplifting of the soul, the individuality, the man unto his divine and infinite possibilities of power to live in a clean, newly furnished house, with all modern improvements, and where he can enjoy all the comforts of home. It is a movement to help the church embrace a hitherto neglected field of usefulness, by assuring men that God is with us for the remedy of our ills.

The complaint is going up from everywhere that the church is losing its hold on practical men and women. The reason is not that the church is not faithful to its duty, but that the world has increased its facilities to satisfy man. Books, magazines, and papers were never so plentiful, cheap, and informing on all possible subjects. Lectures, musicals, libraries, clubs, entertainments, theaters, organizations, and orders of all conceivable kind, and adjusted to every phase of his social, mental, and moral life, make a tremendous appeal and occupy his attention. The church must have a compelling motive to awaken his interest. A purely spiritual appeal does not arouse him. Many conservative churches are averse to evangelistic revivals.

THE CHURCH AND THE MAN OF THE WORLD.

But here is a new way of reaching the man of the world. His modern way of living, with all its hurry and worry, has gotten onto his nerves. He sleeps poorly, is depressed and melancholy, has nervous breakdowns, is dyspeptic and sluggish and miserable. The same man who will not listen to a purely spiritual appeal wants help, and wants it badly. The church that can promise him health with which to do his work, wins him. His bodily pain is very real to him, for it is so much nearer than a cramped and dormant spirit of which he is not conscious. His training, and very likely his environment, are against his becoming a Christian Scientist. Yet he will if the church of his bringing up can not give the needed help.

We have just referred to Christian Science. Where does the Emmanuel Movement differ therefrom? There can be said to be only one point of similarity. It is that both are desirous of getting rid of disease. But they no sooner join issue than they disagree. The point of separation is in what constitutes curable and incurable malady. The Emmanuel Movement treats only "functional disorders of the nervous system." Christian Science does not distinguish between functional and organic diseases. Then, again, the Emmanuel Movement works hand in hand with physicians, taking only such cases as they recommend, cases that are beyond the reach of drugs and the ordinary medical prescription. There is a large range of nervous troubles that spring from deranged mental and moral conditions.

AMERICAN NERVOUSNESS.

In fact, nervousness is the great and almost distinctively American disease. It is estimated that a generation ago there were fifty thousand cases of one form or another in the United States, but that now the number has grown to two hundred and fifty thousand. In fact, a prominent physician told me a while ago that every man and woman in America was a neurasthenic (had some form or degree of nerve weakness). Whether this last statement be true or not, neurasthenia is very prevalent, due to such prevailing causes as the breakdown of religious faith, the growing artificiality of our social system, the mad rush for wealth, mental idleness, frivolity, use of stimulants and narcotics, lack of self-control from overwork and culpable self-indulgence, all of which produce a neurotic and disordered system. Doctor McComb, of Boston, cites the following: There is hysteria which manifests itself in exaggerated emotional displays, such as intense craving for sympathy or admiration or in unconscious simulation of various diseases, the fruit of an ill-balanced though by no means organically diseased brain; hypochondria, or the fixed but groundless belief that the victim is suffering from some particular disease; neurasthenia, which covers a vast variety of nerve weaknesses, from mild depression to extreme prostration; psychasthenia, in which the patient has a sense of incompleteness, or of the strangeness of things in general, and is the subject of abnormal fears and all kinds of impracticalities; alcoholism, morphinism, cocainism, and drug addictions which end in intellectual and moral degeneration; insomnia, one of the terrible curses of modern life, and an aggravating factor in many diseases; religious melancholy, in which the sufferer imagines himself to have committed the unpardonable sin and that God has abandoned him; fits of anger, of hate, of groundless suspicion which the subject is powerless to conquer, and finally suicidal impulses springing sometimes from deep depression, sometimes from utter disgust of life, sometimes from a sense of shame and despair.

A WORKING UNITY BETWEEN SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

Now, Christian Science admits no difference between these disorders and organic diseases; nor does it recognize medical science as a necessary ally. But the Emmanuel Movement's first step is to call in a physician, and thus establish for the first time a sympathetic and working unity between science and religion. Only such cases are taken in hand that the physician says have a mental and moral cause and can be cured by mental and spiritual methods. The first step toward cure is "confession," wherein the patient unburdens himself of his worries, confesses his follies and indulgences, that go back for years, perhaps, holding him in chains, and binding him to his present diseased condition. Doctor Worcester claims what has long been recognized, that there is large benefit to the sufferer in this opportunity to free his mind to a sympathetic listener. It also opens avenues for insight into the nature of the person's malady, so that curative suggestion can be more easily applied. We all know the value of an earnest talk with some one who can enter into our grief sympathetically. It relaxes and rests us. The old restrictions become unloosed. We experience a sense of freedom and ease. And if the person to whom we confide the secret of our discontent has the ability to help us out of our misery, our very confidence in him has curative force.

What may be termed a second method of remedy is the imparting of religious faith. To all persons whose personalities are submerged in immorality, unbelief, or the cold, empty realizations of the senses, and are, therefore, depressed and inert, comes the message of hope and faith in God. He is proclaimed as a present, near-by strength, ready to put his infinite power under the life. The afflicted soul receives the hopefulness offered, and is able to rest and sleep in the new assurance that all is well.

Perhaps a third method of remedy is in remoralizing the life. The emotions have a very apparent and violent influence upon the nervous system, the digestive organs, and the action of the heart. If the emotions of fear and worry fill the life, physical derangement results inevitably. If love, joy, and peace pervade the soul, the entire body responds to these health restorers, and a normal state of our functional life results.

THE POWER OF "SUGGESTION."

Then there is "suggestion" as another remedial agency. The patient is put into a quiescent state. The will relaxes its striving, the mind and body sink into rest. Complete surrender of the individual to the universal life is realized. The depths of the subconscious self are laid bare, and into these depths, where evil habit and physical habit are rooted, are put suggestions of health and strength and victory. The patient is made to feel this impartation of the stronger, purer self of the person treating him, and gradually the old evil habits and diseased conditions are replaced as consciousness draws upon these strong, true suggestions implanted in the depths below. No small factor in suggestion is the bringing into prominence the man's own latent dormant manhood as a child of God. He is made to believe that his true self, heretofore too weak to assert itself, awaits its opportunity to show its ability to dominate the situation.

Every one will readily see that while the Emmanuel Movement has nothing in common with Christian Science except the sublime desire to remedy bodily ills, neither is it to be identified in our thought with the so-called "Faith Cure." Though supremely spiritual in calling upon God to heal our sicknesses, prayer is only one of its many ways of remedying the human situation. No two cases are treated exactly alike. A keen and comprehensive knowledge of psychology is needed to treat successfully the diseases to which the principles of the Emmanuel Movement are to be applied, for while its content is religious, its form and basis are psychological, and it is thoroughly rational and scientific from beginning to end.

Such a famed psychologist as Professor James of Harvard gives his approval, saying it is time psychology did something. Doctor Barker, the eminent neurologist of Johns Hopkins University, journeyed to Boston to investigate, and returned to Baltimore convinced of its worth, because in harmony with his methods. Doctor Putnam, than whom there is, perhaps, no more skilled specialist on nervous disorders, has sent numbers of patients to the Emmanuel clinic. Doctor Richard C. Cabot of the Massachusetts General Hospital goes on record as saying: "I have examined the complete records of every case handled by Doctor Worcester and his associates, and can say they have accomplished a great deal of good and no harm whatever."

I said to Doctor McComb, when in Boston investigating this new theory, that I came as a sympathetic investigator, and not to criticize. His reply was: "We welcome criticism. We invite every possible scientific and religious test. We have no desire to carry on this work an hour longer than its legitimacy and worth will warrant." Both patients and critics have probed to the depths the movement to find rational or moral or religious inconsistencies, and have failed to detect a single flaw.

"IT IS TIME PSYCHOLOGY DID SOMETHING."

What professor James referred to, when he said it is time psychology did something, is this: Psychology, with its experimentation, its theories and principles, has heretofore been a theory of college classroom and laboratory. Now, for the first time, it is set to work for practical ends. It reveals an immense subconscious realm in which are lodged all possibilities of good as well as the rootage of evil habits. Of course, these features of all our life and activity are automatic. We do this and that instinctively, we say. Did we pause to think how we should place our feet, we should walk slowly and painfully. Conscious action is weak action. It is the reserve element in life that we constantly draw on when we do things by habit, by instinct. Such, also, spells character, good or bad.

Now, this subconscious realm in every life is susceptible to impression and suggestion and influence. Consciousness under the power of active will and reason is the stubborn element in life. We all know what a deterrent force is self-consciousness to all free activity. Knowledge of psychology enables us to put curative elements into the diseased life, that make for health and victory. This is the secret of spiritual hypnosis, or the influence of a strong mind over a weak one. Only in the rarest, most difficult cases is it necessary, and for the eradication of deepest-rooted bad habits. Nine times out of ten the person coöperates with the one doing him good by relaxing consciousness, unbending will and mind and body to the extent of allowing the physician of mind and soul to get at the subconscious parts. Sleep serves this purpose.

WHAT THE MOTHER CAN DO FOR HER CHILD.

The best time to correct the child of evils is when asleep. Then, sitting at its bedside, you can put into the unconscious child and into the subconscious depths the strong thought that is needed. Is your child afraid of the dark, as so many little ones are? Talk to him this way: There is nothing in it to harm you. It is your friend, not your enemy. It is given you to rest in and sleep in. It will not harm you. Repeat some such words and thoughts for a few nights, and the child, not knowing how, will, in its wakeful hour, come to believe it, and love instead of hate and fear the dark. You have planted new strong thoughts. They crowd out the weak thoughts that were there before. The child's conscious life acts on these, draws on them. They, in a mysterious manner, become its thought reserve. So, also, for the cure of any evil habit in the child. The parent can by this simple method drive out selfishness, bad temper, nervousness, and all evil tendencies. He can put into the little life confidence, hope, faith, God, courage, and peace. The power of a strong will and mind over a weaker one is marvelous. In this relaxed state, whether yielding through sleep or hypnosis, or whether he yields consciously to the one helping, positive reformation of character is realized.

During sleep the subconscious parts are nearest under God's influence. The divine mind and the universal life are in close touch with the latent personality embedded there. Bad dreams can be overcome by taking in, just before going to sleep, a thought of peace and rest and cheer. I have known a person to awaken in the morning in the actual experience of the peace or cheer which he or she took into the mind just before the unconsciousness of sleep.

This new movement could evidently be called Scientific Christianity and be well named. But with all its scholarly backing and scientific precision and religious consistency, it steps forth open-handed and loving-hearted to bless humanity, without charge, or sensational craving for recognition, under the modest caption, "The Emmanuel Movement"—the "God-with-us" cure for human ills. And the reason it has made so strong an appeal upon Episcopalian and Baptist, Roman Catholic and Jew, is because there is nothing in it that antagonizes their denominational and religious convictions or ravages their intellectual integrity. The simple, precious doctrine of "God with us" is a platform on which all men can unite, and it suggests a power that all men crave.—Woman's Home Companion, July, 1908.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board Daughters of Zion.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, vice-president, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. F. M. Smith, secretary, 630 South Cryster Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. M. E. Hulmes, treasurer, 909 Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. E. Etzenhouser, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. S. R. Burgess, 5920 Etzel Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Morning.

In the early hours of the morning,
When the clouds are kissed by the sun,
When the day is slowly dawning,
Ere the work of the day has begun,
I love to sit by the window,
And look on the scene so calm,
At the rosy clouds o'er the mountains;
It sends to my spirit a balm.

The beautiful glow of the morning
Brings to my mind the thought
Of the great white throne in the heavens,
In glorious light inwrought;

Of the time when the Savior from glory
Shall descend to the earth from his throne,
Attended by saints and angels,
To gather his loved ones home.

The thought is sweet to my senses,
Of that longed-for time to be,
When his saints and angels surround him,
On this earth, from sorrow free.
And now as the day grows lighter,
And the sun casts his light toward the west,
I will strive, with the strength that he gives me,
To fit myself for his rest.

LULU J. BARTLETT.

LANGLEY, Washington.

Dearie.

Dearie, the waste of the years goes on,
On with the rushing tide,
The sinner's pace
Is a swift sad race
That ends not when he is gone,
And woes he reaps beside.

Dearie, I'd keep you here by my side,
Away from the grinding din
Of the wicked rasp,
And cringing clasp
Of avarice that creates pride,
And love to steep in sin.

Dearie, the pleasures of this life,
Are not the sort for you.
The Father gave
You a soul to save,
To keep you from all strife,
Oh, to that trust be true.

ANNA O. SODERSTADT.

GREENLEAF, Kansas.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column: In reading the various articles written for the Home Column, I am often made to feel very thankful to the mothers in Israel for the good advice and words of instruction we receive from them; and I am sure I, for one, can not estimate the good I have received from the same as a very young mother twenty-one years of age with three little ones to care for, and no mother of my own; she, dear soul, having some four years before been laid away from earth's cares. Before my marriage I had been accustomed to reading the HERALD; but as I married an unbeliever we did not take it. I felt how much I needed the advice of some older woman. I had many times heard others say when a mother was taken away from her family, and her children were grown up, "What a blessing there were no small children to need a mother's care." But I felt that if I ever had needed my mother's counsel and advice more than then, I had never realized it at the time.

About this time I went to visit Grandma Lib. Dillon, known to many of our readers, and she had a number of HERALDS stored away, saving to give me when opportunity presented. I carried them home, read them and reread them, and how thankful I did feel for the Home Column. It was new and grand to me, receiving advice and instructions from the dear sisters older than myself—just what I had wished for so much. While reading some of the articles it seemed they surely must have been written for me, and I thought they certainly did know what we younger ones needed.

One sister, the name is forgotten, as it has been years since, advised the young mothers to pray with their children, and for them when they were young; for if we waited until they grew up it would be much harder to begin. I began at once, and each day I knelt with my little ones, and implored the blessings of heaven upon each, as well as the church everywhere, and also upon all mankind, and by so doing strength was given, until I finally felt myself equal to the task of taking up family devotion. As the years passed along what was begun in so much weakness, with fear and trembling, has at last become a pleasure, and there is no happier hour during the twenty-four than when, with grown-up sons and daughters, we gather at evening, read, sing, and pray before retiring for the night. Many times I am and have ever been made to see and realize my own weakness and shortcomings, also to see and realize the mistakes of my children; yet amidst it all, as they go out from me one by one, I have the blessed consciousness that I have tried, at least, to do my duty by them while they yet remained with me, and the tears of joy coursed down my cheeks when I read in my patriarchal blessing the following words: "I bless thee, that as thou hast wrought so faithfully and well in thy home, and hast sought to set a blameless and pure example before thy companion and thy children, and to faithfully teach them to do right, and believe in God, that thou mayest never tire at this work." How thankful I am for this promise! And when I realize that I have been deprived of the association of the Saints a greater part of the time, then I feel of a surety what a great blessing the Home Column has been to me in my work of training up a large family, and it will be to every young mother who reads it with a prayerful heart.

It is true we have, at times, found slight differences of opinions on some of the minor points; but the instruction has been good and pure and helpful, taken as a whole. I find other young mothers have felt as I did when young, and will reproduce a few lines from a letter written by one of the former students of Graceland College. Rich or poor, high or low, we have much the same experiences while bringing up our families. This was written to a widowed mother and brothers and sisters:

"Dear Loved Ones at Home: We received your letter a week ago, and I had tried to answer sooner, but baby was so cross I could not finish it, so will try again. His double teeth are just through. He has been so sick. I have wished so much for you, mamma. How happy I should be if I could only see you coming! But this is one of my trials, and as yet my greatest sorrow that I must be separated from you. I have never forgotten the loving care of my dear mamma, and never shall, although I am married. We shall all be married some day, I presume, and you will see if it doesn't make you love your mamma even more dearly than now, to have cares and trials of your own."

This touched a responsive chord in my own breast as I thought of my own days of young motherhood, and I hope the older sisters will not grow weary in writing letters of cheer and comfort for the benefit of the younger and more inexperienced ones; for I know they have helped me many times; in fact, never an issue but what some good is found in the Column that the young mothers may profit by. The experiences of one often are of great value to another, if given in the true spirit of the gospel. I am much pleased with the Column as it now is, but am sure there are many sisters who have the talent to write who could contribute to its space, and help Sr. Walker in her declining years to keep it up to the standard it has ever occupied. She has given much in the past to us, and is it not time others were thinking of her, and bringing their mites, though they seem to us to be small? She has sacrificed much for us of the church in the past.

I would like to say to the young mothers before closing this article, you can not be too prayerful. Prayer is the life of a Christian home. Sin is rife in the world, and your children will find trials and temptations upon every hand. If we lack wisdom let us ask of God, who giveth liberally to all and upbraideth not, and if there is anything a mother needs more than patience, it is wisdom, that wisdom which cometh down from above.

Ever praying for the ultimate triumph of truth and right,
I remain,
ELLEN SHERARD ADAIR.

Letter Department

RIPLEY, Oklahoma, June 23, 1908.

Editors Herald: A few lines to report the outcome of the debate recently held in this field may be of interest to the Saints, especially to those who live in this region.

The discussion was upon the usual church propositions between our Bro. Hubert Case and Mr. Paul E. Gorbit, of the Christian, or Disciple Church. He proved to be more of a gentleman than most of their debaters, and of course the result of anything like a fair comparison of their claims with the truth, in the hands of so able a man as Hubert Case, must show up their awful deformity as a church in no uncertain light. And so it was.

The debater without a case to defend may, by sophistry and quibbling, satisfy the prejudiced and deceive shallow and unsophisticated minds. This poor man, having no case to defend, and not being disposed to overdo the mud-slinging game, as the most of them do, was left in a sad plight, and no doubt realized that he had a weak case to defend, and a hard Case on his trail. Their own members admit defeat, and the most prejudiced persons in the audience admitted that Mr. Gorbit failed utterly to prove his church in harmony with the Bible.

Our chairman, Mr. Thomas Darnell, a non-member, is a man who commands the respect of all who know him. His illustration of how the matter appeared to him, after hearing all patiently, was that Mr. Gorbit's church was like a hostess inviting guests to dine, and after making mention of many good things which others had enjoyed at her table, cleared it all off except a glass of water, and then asked her guests to sit at the table and be filled.

A host of friends was made to the cause of truth at this place (near Horning, Oklahoma,) as a result of the debate. Our meetings which followed were attended to the overflow limit. They had none, and even their usual Sunday-school, where the debate was held, was not held the Sunday following the discussion, for the lack of people, who came to our meetings instead. It is my candid opinion that Mr. Gorbit will never be anxious for another debate with our people, and that, as Bro. Case told him in public, neither he nor his people who listened to the arguments will ever be quite satisfied with their faith. But for all that, people are, as of old, joined to their idols, and it takes more real courage to admit wrong than it does to march with a throng into battle.

May the wheat be garnered and the tares of the world soon be bound in bundles for the burning, and the great day of the Lord be hastened. May we ever love and adhere to the fullness of truth, that in the inevitable coming contest between error and truth the strength of our fortress continue to protect our soldiers.

JAMES E. YATES.

ROCHELLE, Illinois, June 24, 1908.

Dear Saints: I feel to write to ask that the Saints pray for me that I may be brought back among God's children. I joined the church when I was twelve years old, being baptized by Bro. Elswick, of Carson, Iowa. I have never heard one of our elders preach since we left there, eleven years ago. Since then I have married, and while my husband is a good man, he is not a member of the church. On account of this fact, however, I grew careless.

On April 22 a little daughter was born to us and it seemed that our whole aim in life was centered in our little one; but as soon as I saw her face I knew this life was not for her. I prayed and prayed for her, that God might spare my little girl, and so when she died I could not forgive God for taking her away and I tried to believe there was no God. My dear mother came the next day and her words brought me to a knowledge of the folly of my thoughts, although she knew little of what they were.

Even now, when I am alone, hard feelings come in my heart, and I have to kneel and pray before I can get rid of the feelings of hardness. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may be forgiven for such thoughts and that they may cease to come to me. Also pray that my husband may be brought to Christ, and my father, who has never heard the gospel, and many around here. If a minister could come here and preach, our house is open to him. Though we are poor we will only be too glad to have them hold services here. If any can come, let them write us and let us know. We will meet them at Flag Center, Kings, or Chana. I will also ask some of the sisters to write me.

Your sister,
MRS. CHAS. E. JONES.

R. F. D. No. 2.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 22, 1908.

Dear Herald: Thinking it would be of interest to some to hear a few lines from this part of the Lord's vineyard, will begin by giving a sketch of the recent discussion held by Bro. W. M. Aylor and Early Orsaneaux, a Campbellite minister. We are still alive and strong in the faith, and Bro. Aylor doesn't seem any the worse for wear. The debate resulted in a grand victory for our side, for which we feel to give God the praise. The tent was filled each night to its utmost capacity and many stood on the outside. More people got to hear the gospel during that time, than ever before in this city.

Bro. Aylor's good deportment won many to his side and many were heard to remark that "Mr. Aylor acted the gentleman," while the other man acted any other way than gentlemanly. He did nothing but villify and ridicule Bro. Aylor. He did not prove a point, and he would pick at Bro. Aylor because he substantiated every statement that he made. One lady, a Methodist, one of the number who was baptized since the discussion, would shed tears when that fellow would get to abusing Bro. Aylor.

Toward the close of the debate the Campbellite minister began getting hoarse, and the last night his voice was scarcely audible. He remarked about his voice being in such a fix, and said that it never failed him before. I believe if he would have had to speak five minutes longer his voice would have left him entirely. The last account we had was that he was no better. He made an appointment for Sunday, but was not able to fill it. Some of the Saints have reason to know why his voice failed him, as it was in answer to prayer. Bro. Aylor remarked at the close that he never felt better physically and that he felt as well as when he began the debate. His opponent remarked, in a voice that could scarcely be heard, "Guess he had hands laid on him."

Some of our people heard one of the Campbellites remark on the street-car, "That's a trick the Mormons had in putting up that innocent face," referring to Bro. Aylor. One gentleman, a Baptist, waded through the crowd till he got nearly to the stand and threw Bro. Aylor a bouquet of flowers, and there were many not of our faith who remarked that Bro. Aylor's closing speech was perfectly grand.

The Saints are greatly rejoicing, five more souls have been added to the kingdom, four being baptized yesterday by Bro. Aylor. Our little chapel, on South Flores Street, was filled at each service yesterday and we had one of the best prayer-meetings we have had in many a day. There seems almost a perfect unity now among the Saints, and it did us good when Bro. Aylor made the statement in his discourse yesterday morning that he could truthfully say that he had not heard one Latter Day Saint speak evil against another since he has been in our midst.

This year is our first acquaintance with Bro. Aylor, but we all love him as well as if we had known him always. That is the way this great gospel will make us feel toward each other. To my mind it is perfectly grand and grows dearer to me each day of my life.

May the Lord bless and prosper his people is the humble prayer of your sister in the one faith,

RUTH GIFFORD.

CHATHAM, Ontario, June 20, 1908.

Editors Herald: Just to let you know of the welcome surprise we had at our late district conference by the visit of Brn. E. L. and W. H. Kelley. We feel much pleased over the wise counsel given by these brethren. We would certainly appreciate more of such visits, which would strengthen us along the financial and spiritual line. Bro. U. W. Greene was also welcomed in his work in his new field. We trust the good Master will bless the labors of our brethren for good to build up the work we all love.

Your brother,

J. H. TYRRELL.

WAMSLEY, Ohio, June 23, 1908.

Editors Herald: I take this method of writing to every Saint and ask all to consider this a personal letter to each of you. We are here in an isolated condition, where there is no place to worship, not even a Sunday-school. We are as scattered sheep without a shepherd. I am here, as it were, among wolves in sheep's clothing. Dear Saints, I want to do the will of the Master so as to meet his divine approval; so in a land of persecution and strife and hatred, we have to trust the Lord for divine guidance and his Holy Spirit. I do not live at all times as I should live. Let us stand firm to our post and in faithful discharge of duty, as we are the light of the world, let us live so the world may see our good works. As we are justified by works and glorify the Father which is in heaven, it is also by our works that we stand or fall. The writer believes there is great good done by faithful living, by works and faith being linked together. We must show our faith by our works. This gospel satisfies the longings of the soul, as the Apostle Paul has said in Romans 1:16: "It is the power of God unto salvation."

I am glad I am a Latter Day Saint. I wish to give you a brief statement of my Christian life. I have attended protracted meetings time and again, and was at the mourner's bench, as it was called, trying to get religion, and was in earnest about my soul's salvation. I did not get any results. I was baptized by a Baptist preacher and lived in that church for about ten years and received blessings from God, as I was honest in my convictions and God is a just and a merciful God and rewards every man according to works. I lived in West Virginia at that time, it being my native State. I came to Ohio April 9, 1893, and united with the Baptists here, and remained for about three years. Then I united with the Christian Union Church until July 3, 1904, when I was baptized by Elder T. J. Beatty, into the true Church of Jesus Christ, where is retained all the gifts and blessings as of old, for which I intend by the help of God to ever defend his cause.

I desire to hold on to the rod of iron until the end, and receive the crown that the apostle said was laid up for the faithful and for all that loved the appearing of Christ. I wish to say in conclusion, if Bro. B. H. York, of Hatfield, Missouri, should see this, let me say to you, dear brother, put your trust in the Lord. He has promised never to leave or forsake those who trust him. The Lord is doing a marvelous work among his people.

Let us be up and doing, as it is the doer of the word that is justified. With love and best wishes to all the Saints of God, may all things work together for good to all that love the Lord. May the Holy Spirit be with all until we meet in the celestial kingdom.

Your brother in the one faith,
J. T. MITCHELL.

ARTHUR, Ontario, June 25, 1908.

Saints' Herald: The London District conference has just ended, and while it was not as spiritual as some we have had, in many ways it ought to be and will be one of the most profitable we have ever had when the needed lessons are learned and practiced.

We met here, for the first time, Apostle U. W. Greene, now in charge of Canada. He seems to take well, and if he continues to conduct himself before the people as he has done at this conference, he is going to win the hearts of the people. It will be news to all to note that the Canadian Messenger will no longer be published; its business manager, editor, and assistant, resigned their positions. As for me, I am glad it is set aside. My belief has always been, and is, that if our people would support the HERALD and Ensign as they ought to, just as much good could be accomplished and money saved to the church in general.

I am satisfied if we Canadians write proper letters and support those papers, that we will have equal rights and privileges in those papers. Some have argued that Canada is a side issue with those papers. I have never seen it. If we want to hand out to our friends a good sermon take the Ensign, if we want an education in this latter-day work take the HERALD.

GEORGE BUSCHLEN.

ROCKSPRINGS, Texas, June 19, 1908.

Dear Herald: I am the only member in this country that I know of. If you know of any Latter Day Saint in Edwards County please let me know. Where is T. J. Sheppard now? I would like very much to hear from him. I know I am going to have a hard fight here, and am not very well posted either; but as we are the only people that believe in direct revelation these days I trust to his omnipotent power for aid.

Yours in Christ,
H. L. HUTSON.

PLYMOUTH, England, June 18, 1908.

Dear Herald: Allow us a few lines in your columns to tell of the work in this part of the vineyard.

The Saints of this branch are striving to live as best they can and progress is being made. We have recently had laboring with us our esteemed Bro. William Newton, and his labor has not been in vain, we are glad to say, he having baptized three promising young men who are holding fast to the faith, and hope before long to be workers for the Almighty. One of them has been ordained to the office of teacher.

We are very sorry that Bro. Newton has left the English shores (perhaps never again will we see him in this sphere of life), and we shall miss him greatly, he having labored with us here in Plymouth on numerous occasions for the past twenty years, but we hear that he is now laboring in Canada, where we hope that he will bring forth fruit.

We have a meeting-room here at a low rental, and have been able to furnish same by subscriptions raised by the Saints.

One of the members here has a testimony of over forty years to bear of the truth of this latter-day work. We refer to our aged Sr. Mitchell, whose father was a great worker in this town of Plymouth soon after the church was first organized, and in the time of Joseph the Martyr. She has been approached on hundreds of occasions by the Brighamites to reject this work, but she now clings faster than ever to it. She is a great sufferer from rheumatism, and can not come to the meetings so frequently as she would like. So we ask the dear Saints to remember her before the throne of grace, that if it be not contrary to God, she might be healed. We have another sister here that has twenty-six years of testimony to bear (our aged Sr. Riddolls) to the truth of the work, and she also clings to the "rod of iron," never to let go.

Our branch has two officers, namely, a priest and a teacher, but neither of them is able at present to expound the scriptures in the open air, and it is their desire to proclaim this "everlasting gospel," so we ask you, dear Saints, to pray for us, that we might get the spirit of wisdom in this branch, to go out and teach the "plan of redemption," especially as the Brighamites have a branch here and they are doing their utmost to spread their work.

We have meetings three times on Sundays and every Wednesday evening, and we are being blessed in many ways. Our Sunday-school is slowly increasing, and is superintended by our Sr. Riddolls.

How glad we shall feel when, if all goes well, our dear Bro. Rushton will be among us soon after the August conference, when we hope to have some splendid open-air meetings, as the last time when he was here the eyes of many people were opened, and many inquiries were made as to his whereabouts, soon after his departure.

The outlook of the branch in the future seems quite encouraging if properly managed, and we look for an awakening in this town that will result in an increased membership.

Your brethren,
A. RIDDOLLS, President.
JAS. BUNT, Secretary.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 24, 1908.

Editors Herald: The Christian-Latter Day Saint debate is a thing of the past. To say that it was a victory for the Latter Day Saints, would be putting it in mild words. The debate opened promptly at the appointed time, June 12, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and held two sessions daily for eight days, closing the evening of the 19th.

The first three days Mr. Arceneaux, of the Christian Church, was in the affirmative, claiming that the Book of Mormon was a fraud. He opened up his speeches with that usual slang and mud-slinging and with all the vim and vitality that man can muster, rehearsing and repeating the same old story that has been hurled at the Book of Mormon for ages—the Spalding Manuscript, the R. B. Neal literature, and other dark slanderous things, such as has never come from the mouth of a Christian gentleman. Bro. W. M. Aylor was prepared to meet him on every point, and surely God used him to overthrow his arguments, and lay bare the errors and traditions of men. Bro. Aylor was calm and gentle, and reflected that Christlike character that won for him the friendship and admiration of all who heard him.

The congregation was large and very attentive, ranging in numbers from two to five hundred people, and many were heard to remark, "Surely the Book of Mormon is of God." Others said they almost thought it taught plural marriage, and still others said they had often wondered where the people came from that Columbus found on this continent, and said it was plain to them now.

Several times during Mr. Arceneaux's speech, he would try and sustain his argument by calling on the congregation, and he was rebuked every time. At one time, on the same proposition, he was trying to prove the Doctrine and Covenants a fraud and called on any old veteran to prove that the slaves were not marshaled against their masters. When two old gentlemen, one an infidel, the other a non-member spoke up and said that the slaves were marshaled against their masters, and that over two hundred thousand strong.

The second proposition opened with Bro. Aylor in the affirmative, claiming that the Reorganized Church, as restored by Joseph Smith and his coworkers, was in harmony with the primitive church. It would be needless to say that this second proposition was a victory from start to finish. In this proposition Mr. Arceneaux attacked the word of God as I have never seen it attacked before. He would seek a sign, dare, double dare, and double dog-dare him to show a sign. He continually referred to a man that was brought into the audience with a broken leg and another who was blind, and dared him, double dared him, and would double dog-dare Bro. Aylor to restore the broken bones and open the eyes of the blind. At one time he edged over to Bro. Aylor and said, "If you are a man sent of God, I dare you to strike me blind." In answer Bro. Aylor told him that he was already as blind as a bat, whereupon the audience gave evidence that Bro. Aylor spoke the truth. At another time he called upon any one who was not a member of the church that could say they were healed through the laying on of hands, and a lady arose and testified that she was healed by God through the laying on of hands by a Latter Day Saint elder. He ridiculed her and said such ridiculous things to her that he had to be called down by the moderator.

The third and last proposition opened with Mr. Arceneaux affirming that the church as restored by Alexander Campbell was in harmony with the primitive church. Surely it did not take a prophet to distinguish it from the beautiful Church of Jesus Christ. He used every means possible to twist the gospel to suit his argument, but all in vain. He could only show an evangelist, an elder, and a deacon in his church. Hence there was no comparison with the beautiful church of Jesus Christ as set up by Bro. Aylor. Mr. Arceneaux had made great boasts all along in his speeches that he was going to put to shame and for ever silence what he called Mormonism in this city, and that he would be on the grounds at the closing of the debate to see the Mormons get out of business, and to carry on a two-week meeting. But, strange to say, after all his boast and all the murderous knives that he had up his sleeves for his last speeches to down Mormonism with, he was struck dumb, and in his last two talks he was almost speechless, while Bro. Aylor was as fresh as he was the first day, speaking under the power and inspiration of a loving Father, and showing very vividly the great difference between the beautiful church of Jesus Christ as it was restored by Joseph Smith and his coworkers and the creeds and traditions of men.

At the closing of the first proposition one party asked for baptism. It was so announced, and on Sunday he was baptized. At the close of the debate four others demanded baptism, and it was also complied with the following Sunday; so you see the good work goes on.

Mr. Arceneaux's followers tried to keep up a good spirit by holding singing-service, as their leader had been silenced and put to bed and, I guess, told to be a good boy. They asked for converts, but got none.

The Saints here rallied to the front and stood up nobly for the cause of Christ and deserve much credit for the way in which they conducted themselves during such times of persecution. Several beautiful bouquets were given to Bro. Aylor and at the close of the debate several were thrown at him as a token of love and friendship.

The Saints are rejoicing in this great latter-day work and have united themselves in the bonds of true love. Ever praying for the onward march of God's work and the redemption of Zion, I am sincerely and fraternally your brother,
ED. N. McRAE.

Request for Prayers.

Sr. Desde Daley, Howell, Michigan, is sorely afflicted, so that she is unable to walk or move her limbs. She desires the prayers of the faithful that she may prove true and faithful and that she may be healed. She says, "It is a great comfort to me to know, in my dark hours of sadness, that God's people are pleading to God in my behalf."

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. Lee Quick, Vera, Oklahoma, writes that he had just baptized four more there, making twenty-four in all; had organized a Sunday-school; and was closing his efforts there with good crowds and the best of interest.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.—Conference met with the Galien, Michigan, Saints, in chapel, June 20, 1908, with Brn. Joseph Smith, S. W. L. Scott, O. H. Story, and Samuel Stroh, in charge; William F. Shaub and S. W. L. Scott secretaries; S. W. L. Scott, H. E. Moler, and Starr Corless choristers; Jessie Parker and Emma Keen organists. Bishop's agent reported: Received $519.10, paid out $512.20. A petition presented by the Ithaca, Michigan, Saints to be organized into a branch was left in the hands of the missionary in charge and district president. Treasurer's report: On hand and received since last report $16.54, paid out $21.86, balance due treasurer $5.32. The following of the priesthood reported: Elders O. H. Story, S. W. L. Scott, H. E. Moler, Samuel Stroh, Joseph Dexter, F. T. Field, F. J. D. Earl, William F. Shaub; Priests William Garver and Starr Corless. Fall conference to be held at Clear Lake, Indiana, at call of the president. The following officers were duly elected: Samuel Stroh, he choosing as counselors, S. W. L. Scott and O. H. Story; William F. Shaub secretary. Sunday morning opened with a good prayer-meeting and Sunday-school. About 10.45 Samuel Stroh called the house to order and after the usual opening exercises, E. A. Blakeslee, in a few well-chosen words, spoke of the efforts of the few Galien Saints to build their little chapel, and presented the key to Bishop Kelley, who spoke feelingly in response. President Joseph Smith preached the dedicatory sermon which was full of good thoughts, Bishop Kelley making the prayer. There was quite a number of the visiting priesthood as well as members of the district. The preaching of the conference was done by President Smith and Bishop Kelley. Thus closed a fine conference, spiritual from first to last. William Shaub, R. F. D. No. 1, Ray, Indiana.

EASTERN MAINE.—Convened with the Saints at Beals, June 13, 1908. Richard Bullard president, assisted by U. M. Kelley; E. M. Walker clerk. Ministry reporting: Elders S. F. Cushman, U. M. Kelley, E. C. Foss; Priest Frank P. Smith. Branches reporting: Olive, Jonesport 141, Indian River 76. Bishop's agent reported: Receipts to June 15, $221.10, expended $177, balance on hand $44.10. District officers were sustained. Adjourned to meet at South Addison, October. E. M. Walker, secretary.

SOUTHERN INDIANA.—Conference convened at New Albany, Indiana, June 20, 1908. District officers being absent, D. E. Dowker called the conference to order. E. J. Goodenough was chosen to preside, assisted by Bro. Dowker, and John Zahnd was chosen secretary, J. W. Metcalf chorister, James

THE SAINTS' HERALD

ESTABLISHED 1860.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on yellow label always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

