touch should set him on fire, one's first thought is pity for the weakness of a human will, but the next is concern about the past history of this man. What has he been doing with himself, what kind of books has he been reading, what company has he been keeping, what thoughts has he been harboring? If you could get at the truth, this man is not a victim, he is a suicide. Men do not fall because sin is strong; they fall because they have made themselves weak. When an unholy thought lands on a clean soul, it is cast forth with loathing; when it finds a foul imagination, it raises a fire none can quench.

It happens after the same fashion with the temptations which make their approach through the spirit rather than through the body. Why is it that one person falls into sin of spite and jealousy and greed and trickery, while his neighbor is magnanimous, generous, straightforward, and self-forgetful? Is it not because the former has allowed his mind to dwell too constantly upon his own interest, and his own dignity, and his own cherished aims, and his own ambitions? We all live in an atmosphere reeking with temptation, yet one is stricken, and another escapes. Why are bacilli in one man's lungs, and another's untainted? Because they have found a congenial soil. There are souls so mean by habit and training, that sin takes root in them like fungi in a bed of corruption; souls so pure and lofty, that in them every evil thought is sterilized. In the sudden hour of temptation one stands upon his past and reaps his reward, either good or evil.

May I suggest that the safeguard against temptation is not seclusion, which is, indeed, impossible, for temptation rises too frequently from within, but the surrender of our nature to the Spirit of Christ. As it is not disinfectants that will most certainly secure one against infection, but a sound constitution, so it is not rules of life that will strengthen one against temptation, but a strong soul. One must build up his moral constitution by the habit of noble deeds and high thinking, by fellowship with pure women and honorable men. Two of the chief aids in this regimen are literature and friendship, for he will not have houserom whose mind is already garrisoned by goodness. His garments will not take fire in the furnace who is walking with the Son of God. Above all books the Bible passes like an iron tonic into a man's blood, and gives vigor to his will, and he that lives with Jesus from day to day catches the infection of his aims and of his Spirit.

There has been a fine statue of Frances E. Willard placed in the National Statuary Hall, the Capitol, Washington, to commemorate the life and work of a good woman.

In a letter printed in the Christian Endeavor World, Boston Massachusetts, May 27, 1909, Miss Willard voices the sentiments of some people concerning the commission to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ:

The Christian Endeavor societies have come just in time to lift the churches out of formality and inaction, to warm them with the young lifeblood without which they would ere long become torpid, and to correlate them with the blessed everyday activities of this humanitarian age, nor will it prove a small part of the good work which I believe these young people are to accomplish that they illustrate to their elders that, not only has God sown the earth in families, but the church also, and that in the household of faith man and woman are to stand side by side as priest and priestess, equal in power, and equally commissioned to preach the glad tidings of the gospel of peace.

FRANCES WILLARD.

EVANSTON, August 21, 1888.

What Miss Willard states, could be, just as consistently, applied to the Epworth League. The Baptist Young People's Union, and numerous other church auxiliary societies.

But in the same issue, and twenty-one years after the above influential letter was written, the editor is calling attention to the unsatisfied hunger of people for the bread of life. The editor's position permits him to feel the pulse of public opinion. If their ministers have not been preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ, what have they been preaching? Confession is an element of repentance, and it is good for the soul.

His candor is commendable. The item follows:

There are great hunger and unrest among the people. Who that goes about in life can deny it? And we believe that nothing less than the gospel of Jesus Christ can satisfy the human heart.

There are plenty of churches, and ministers enough, and Christians without number. The gospel is free to whosoever will accept it.

What is the matter?

There are great numbers of people of sweet and beautiful life either entirely outside the pale of the churches, or connected therewith only in the most perfunctory manner.

What is the trouble?

There are thousands on church rolls that give no evidence in their lives that they have the fruits of the Spirit. It is hard to distinguish them from folks that have never made any profession.

What does it mean?

It must be that the gospel which we dispense and from which the hungry crowd turn away is not the gospel pure and undefiled. Maybe it has acquired accretions through the years that hide its real nature. Maybe it has been crowded into cramped quarters and not given a chance to expand and unfold itself in accordance with the growing life of the day. Maybe it has been monopolized by those that think thus to preserve it. . . . May not the trouble be with us,—the people who handle the gospel,—and with the way in which we handle it?

Searchlight.

If "Searchlight" will turn his lens toward the teachings of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, he will discover the solution of his riddles.

It is a deplorable fact that "Searchlight" speaks the truth. A man may seem to be winning souls to Christ, and it may be really only to himself, or a theory, or a party.

In Psychic Power in Preaching by J. Spencer Kennard, D. D., I find a chapter headed, "A pulpit of power the need of the times." The thoughts cited are relevant to our theme. Doctor Kennard says:

Twenty years ago a smart writer in the London Times asked, "Why this preaching? Why does this man talk to us? Why not be content to worship only when we go to church?" About the same time, in a more serious vein, the Edinburgh Review said, "Divinity fills up her weekly hour by the grave and gentle excitement of an orthodox discourse, or by toiling through her narrow round of systematic dogmas, or by creeping along some low level of schoolboy morality, or by addressing the initiated in mystic phraseology; but she has ceased to employ lips such as those of Chrysostom or Bourdaloue." And these utterances have had many an echo since, from sources of more or less importance. An English Church clergyman, a few years since, referring apparently to his own national church, elaborately argued "The failure of the pulpit," and a New England religious periodical invited a symposium on the solemn problem, "Shall we go on preaching?" These voices, which are quite representative of a class not altogether frivolous, can not be silenced by indifference or apology. A radical and fearless reconsideration of the position and function of the preacher in this twentieth century—which is neither the apostolic nor the mediæval—is demanded. It need not be feared but that it will appear, whether from a religious or philosophical, a socialistic or humanitarian, a patriotic or a practical, an ethical or an evangelical point of view, that the pulpit is neither obsolete nor obsolescent. The preacher is, and should continue to be, a paramount power in human society.

The pulpit no longer rules as it did when, allied with the state, it was the chief fountain of learning and authority; when the preacher alone raised questions, ethical, and social, and answered them, with none to dispute his verdict; when the seminary where the minister was educated was the mystic treasury of most of the learning, and his library contained the rest.

To-day a continuous stream of information and discussion of all subjects, and in popular form, rolls through the land and finds its way to every door. The most vital questions affecting human life and destiny are affluently treated, not only in books, but upon every platform, in religious and in secular newspapers, side by side with politics and trade. Everybody knows everything nowadays, or thinks he does, and the awe which the pulpit once inspired has disappeared. In saying, however, that the power of the pulpit as an institution has declined, we would by no means concede that the power of the preacher has gone with it. On the contrary, as the peculiar awe which invested the office has lessened, the greater is the demand that the man himself, as a living force among men and called to a supreme function, should heroically attain and maintain a personal power unaided by the buttressing of the state or the mystic authority of the church.

The highest and most enduring elements of power remain the same in all the mutations of the ages, and owe little to environment. They are at their best when called to conquer without the alliance of favoring conditions. If illustrations of this were needed, the career of that man who, in our generation, has divided with the world's greatest statesmen and princes the interested gaze of his cotemporaries—Charles Haddon Spurgeon—would be sufficient. Nay, the beneficent and acknowledged forcefulness of a Moody among the masses and a Phillips Brooks or a Maclaren among the cultured, would prove that this strenuous, conceited and materialistic age, not less than any former one, confesses the preacher's power. I go further; I affirm that it is historically and rationally demonstrable that times of enlightenment and progress, like these, are more favorable to the preacher's power, more hospitable to it, more fruitful of the best results than any since the dawn of Christianity. In fact, the preacher's power is as much nobler and more enduring than that of the Savonarolas or the John Knoxes of a former day, as that of the electrician, the biologist and the statesman of these times is nobler than that of the alchemist, the thaumaturgist and the feudal lord of an age of ignorance and superstition. "Is he a physician of souls? He can better operate on wakeful than on torpid patients. Is he an advocate? He can better plead before an educated jury than a clownish one. If his appeal is to men's will, it is, at least to one unfettered by fear; if to the conscience, it is to one unclouded by superstition; if to the heart, it is to one never more aching with unrest or hungry for reality and love."

The philosopher and poet declare that the times are barren of enthusiasm and heroism; and that a frivolous materialism in its dance of death is trampling out the torch of the soul. There is some truth and much folly in this despondent view of things. It springs from a shallow skepticism which looks only at the worst features of an age whose field of Christian activities shows divinest enthusiasm and heroism for humanity. But whatever truth there be in the pessimist's view of the times, it is all but a challenge to the best exercise of the preacher's power.

If never before were men so utterly "without God and without hope"; if, according to the poets of despair, materialistic curiosity has "ripped, one by one, the world's pretty dolls, a scattered the sawdust along its starless path," then it is surely the fullness of time for the true Prometheus to appear again, if he but carry in his reed the celestial fire; it is time for the herald who has a real message of life and immortality, who has seen God face to face and gotten his message from him, to lift up his voice like a trumpet.

In a word, if a man know how to preach the everlasting gospel, if he be himself a living incarnation of its perennial freshness and force, its life and peace and joy, if he be a voice that can speak, not only the seminary lore, but the Savior's love, then there never was a time when he could have a more open and inviting field, or a more grateful welcome among thronging men, or a fairer hope of success in the highest sense. If there is weakness in the pulpit in our day, it is not the fault of the "spirit of the age." The preachers of the apostolic era faced such pharisaic pride, such religious obstinacy, such depravity and frivolity, such fortified selfishness as is not equaled in our age; but they were not dismayed—by the power of their words they conquered. If the pulpit to-day is lacking in power, the sin lies at its own door and can not be shifted to the shoulders of society. The people, the press, public opinion in whatever way expressed, so far from antagonizing, would eagerly welcome a pulpit of greater power, in fact are insisting upon it. The living preacher never had so many aids and openings; men's hearts and homes and lives were never more hospitable to his message, and all the more as he approaches them simply as a man sent from God with a practical hope and help upon his lips.

In saying this I would not ignore those palpable facts which tend to repress pulpit power. One of these is found in the very process of ordinary theological training in our seminaries. In spite of the elevation of religious scholarship, the development of pulpit power shows in our graduates little advance. The seclusion of the student, for the six or eight years of his classical and seminary course, from contact with the real life of the toiling world to which he is at length to minister, and his constant dealing with abstract thought, and breathing a scholarly atmosphere, is not conducive to that "love of the people" which the Abbe Mullois tells us is the first qualification, or that "sympathy with their wants" which Vinet makes the foundation of the preacher's efficiency. His preaching is apt to be scholarly, theological, apologetic, classical, dogmatic, correct—everything but simple, natural, vital, enthusiastic, familiar, vehement, or, in other words, powerful.

Nor can we ignore the temper and trend of the age, its crowning of material activities and lack of moral earnestness, its abundant inventions, sciences, discoveries, enterprises, and its few spiritual lives; everything superficial—except human discontent, and that very deep, and not without volcanic mutterings. It is an era of fads, of laughter at everything, from heaven's law and love to hell's penalties. Life seems stripped of solemnity and sublimity, men's brains and hearts becoming taverns for the revels of le jeune siecle novelties rather than the home of truth and happiness. There is a strong temptation, with such surroundings, to accommodate our teaching to the mood of the people; to make the word only scintillate when it should shine and burn; to consult people's whims rather than their wants, to be popular rather than powerful, and to avoid sinking into insignificance, not by the strength with which we breast the tide, but by the lightness with which we float on the current. The very familiarity of the preacher's themes may put his soul to sleep, while the panorama of the gay world may distract him, like the rest, from the pulpit's chief work. Is it any wonder if power wanes, and the preacher almost loses enthusiasm for humanity, and with scarcely self-reproach sees the vanishing of his early ideal?

Principal P. T. Forsyth strikes a harmonious chord, when he says in the Sunday School Times:

Are we to infer, from the abeyance of the power of miraculous healing in the church, that faith is dead in the church? By no means.

But we do gather this, that it is a power which can go only with the faith of a whole community and not of stray individuals, however numerous or exalted. It can return to the church only as the effect of a collective faith and action.

It was the faith of a united church that did these things through the apostles in Acts. And, as done by Christ, they were the effect of his faith who is himself the common and perfect life of the whole church.

The Saint Louis Post-Dispatch, May 29, 1909, expresses its editorial opinion by saying,

The Y. M. C. A. railroad convention in Saint Louis may be said to be an important feature of current events. Its importance appears fully only as Mr. F. A. Delano, president of the Wabash Railroad, touches bottom and rises above the current of events to say that good can not be "legislated into men." . . . Freedom is necessary to the highest goodness.

Collier's, New York, takes up the strain with:

"A reforming age is always fertile of impostors," wrote Macaulay. Hitched to the star of every wholesome reform are the petty vendors who have a prescription for every outbreak of popular folly. They are the camp followers of the army. Whatever of intolerance is ascribed to every good reform too often grows out of this chorus. Perhaps it was as a tribute to the activity of the element that one disgusted voter in a western city laid down this epicedian platform for all reformers: "Make it a crime to smile; close up all the theaters; don't allow dancing; make everyone go to church for his soul, and to the cemetery for his recreation."

Reform has its infancy and its measles. One may smile and smile, and be a reformer, and one may go to church without becoming intolerant. The virtue which the world wants is noble-minded and noble-hearted virtue. Statues are not chiseled to little fault-finders, though they are raised often to reformers of a larger cast. "Deal mercifully with the man beside you, for he also has a hard battle to fight." Perhaps the light he sees is as pure and clear to him as yours to you.

Dr. W. S. Friedman, of Denver, Colorado, writing on the subject, "The unity of the Jew," in the Saint Louis Jewish Voice, May 21, 1909, mentions the destiny of the Jew to proclaim God's message to the world, as a fundamental Jewish belief. Rabbi Friedman says in part:

The boast of the solidarity of the Jew requires considerable modification before it spells the truth. A few decades ago the claim of Jewish unity passed unchallenged. Notwithstanding variation in religious views, which has always characterized Judaism and which testify to its depth and scope, Jewry presented a common purpose and common ideals.

To-day the most casual observer must conclude that if there be Jewish solidarity, it lies so deep that it is difficult to fathom. Indications abound that the common rock out of which we were hewn is forgotten.

But are we more united at the present time than the sects of Protestant Christianity? Protestant Christians are a unit in their "love of the Savior," however they differ concerning immaculate conception, vicarious atonement, and resurrection. Denominational lines are being obliterated and religious unity in diversity is practically emphasized. . . .

Whis is the way out of chaos? Religion must again assume its place. It must be the leader and inspirer of the Jew. All else is subsidiary. Religion alone will revitalize our history and our literature and give meaning to our martyrdom. It alone can harmonize discordant elements, blot out national antagonism, calm the intolerance of contestants and curb self-interested vanity.

In the same issue I find this by Rabbi Isidore Lewinthal:

He, of the modern religion, believes nothing. He, of the modern religion, takes nothing for granted. He depends entirely on his reasoning faculty. He relies altogether on his understanding. This is the basis on which he stands. Now then, if we place all mankind, from the child to the aged, upon the same basis, if we allow the human family of all its shades free scope to think as it pleases, according to its reason; if we allow children free scope to think as they please, according to their reason, our whole religious system would drop back into idolatry of various forms, as the world saw in ancient times and we still find in the East.

The modern religion wipes out God—our creator and preserver—and it wipes out revelation. The great Motor, which has helped mankind to advance from the lower level to the higher plane would thus be obliterated. Every step forward would thus be checked, as far as the great masses are concerned. Maybe one per cent of civilized mankind could hold its moral position for a very short space of time, which, however, would expire soon, or would be lost to sight within, perhaps, a single decade. . . .

He, of the modern religion, is unconscious of or undervalues his own religious training. He has reached a certain height of civilization; but he has forgotten how he came there. He is steeped in sciences, but has utterly neglected the ordinary common sense of wise people. In his search for truth he is not mindful that the light, which has helped him along thus far, has, by his neglect, burned out, and that he is hanging onto a candlestick only. To make proper use of science requires wisdom; wisdom is the consolidated product of brain and heart, and receives animation through reverence of God. We may truthfully assert that no wise man has ever lived who, in his heart, did not revere God.

The modern religion is a repetition of the vainglory of learned egotism of other ages. Learned men are not always wise men. Learning is haughty; wisdom is humble. The learning of men may sometimes bring forth misfortune and ruin; the wisdom of men may prevent both. Learning, unbridled by wisdom's calmness, is ever dangerous!

Rabbi Louis Bernstein, of Saint Joseph, Missouri, writes this paragraph:

What we need and need badly is spiritual as well as mental growth: we need to teach our people the idea of true reverence, the thought that we are God-made men and not man-made gods, that revelation neither began nor ended with Sinai, that God did not cease altogether to labor on the seventh day of creation, nor refrain for ever from speaking when Malachi died. A banished God must be brought back to the home and to the synagogue. The temple must again become the heart, and the sinews, the very center of Jewish life. Prayer by prayer and ideal by ideal must be builded the structure of the Jewish soul. Our young people must be inspired with love for and zeal in our faith, they must learn to accept Judaism not as an unpleasant obligation, which an unfortunate birth has placed upon them, but rather as a proud one, which with grateful hearts they accept as a sacred gift.

The Home Herald, October 20, 1909, says:

Another magazine has undertaken to enlighten on the question, "What ails the church?" presenting a collection of opinions by eminent clergymen as a preface to its several score pages of new fashions and toilette notes. We have read the material presented, as no doubt many other church members have, lest any should bring against us the charge that we fail to progress because we fear criticism; but we find in it little of criticism that has not been uttered before, and nothing that sheds new light. One writer asks that the preaching be in terms of modern science; another suggests the addition of more features of institutional work; another, that the church espouse more distinctly the cause of social reforms. No one adds authority to his message by holding up the spirit of the modern church against the Spirit of its Master, and showing wherein it fails to measure up to the ideal.

And it is for that reason, we believe, that the symposium is juiceless, that no one will read it with any feeling that it helps. For the church in its resurrection into new usefulness must be raised up in the image of its Master, and not twisted and distorted into the meaningless form of its environment. It was launched as a transforming force and not to be conformed. Its Model, if he be lifted up, will draw all men to him and to it. The church needs to be truly democratic, and he was democratic, knowing neither rich nor poor. It needs to dine with sinners as he dined with them. Its mission is not to save the state or espouse reform; for its Master steadfastly refused to do either thing. He came to save sinners, and he stood and quoted God. Cardinal Gibbons, Catholic though he is, sounded the clearest note of any man who wrote. The church needs again to speak with the authority of a body which knows that its Master lives, and that it is modeled in his image.

Would that we might understand this once and for all, and have done with this endless discussion of defects and remedies. The bread is so very sweet and the people are very hungry; shall we let them starve while we stand all the day long and discuss?

The religion of Islam is one of the most interesting in the history of mankind. It seems to be the religion which withstands longer than any other the religion of Christ. The New York Independent gleans from a German authority the following facts:

In Turkey the majority of the population are Mohammedans. There are sixty-two millions of Mohammedans in British India and twenty-five millions in Dutch India. Germany rules over eight and one half millions in Africa, France sixteen and one half millions, and Great Britain nearly eight millions. But of the two hundred and twenty-three million Mohammedans, nearly one hundred and sixty millions are under nominally Christian governments, while no nation whose population is Christian is governed by the Mohammedans.

The change of government in Turkey and in Persia is bound to affect the religion of these countries. Parliamentary freedom, the opening up of commerce, the building of the new railroad from Jerusalem to Mecca, and all other modern inventions will affect the life of the people. Christian America can do no more Christian thing than to support colleges like Roberts College at Constantinople, and the other Christian colleges which are being introduced into Mohammedan countries. The prophecy is made by those who are acquainted with the turmoil in the East that the time is not far distant when greater efforts will be made to Christianize all the Mohammedan nations.

John Vinton Potts, author of "The Secret Lodge System," published by the German Literary Board, Burlington, Iowa, forms logical conclusions and presents his ideas of the panacea for sin, discord and suffering.

In chapter 12, under the head of "The true basis," in his two hundred page book, Mr. Potts says:

It is useless to condemn a thing and offer nothing better. Some men are destructive, but they are not constructive. Wisdom advises us to be both. We would destroy the evil, and build the good. I propose an unailing remedy for the evils of which we complain, and under which we suffer. The plan is practical and may be put into operation in all places without partisan divisions. The system I propose is open and constitutes the way of life. It is composed of easy stages, and may be enjoyed by men, women, and children of all races in the world. Each point may be amplified into an extended discourse, but the writer can not do so in this connection.

1. Let us all honestly seek after and sincerely endeavor to know the truth. You ask, "What is truth?" "Thy word is truth." Nothing but the divine word is truth. There are seven sources from which we derive the truth. These are: 1. Instinct; 2. Intuition; 3. Reason; 4. Conscience; 5. Experience, including all human history; 6. Nature, including all the natural sciences, physics, or natural philosophy; 7. The communications of the divine Spirit, including the written revelation of God's will to man. These seven sources of the truth, when properly understood, interpreted and applied, all agree and harmonize. In normal conditions there is no antagonism or discord in these things. They all speak with the same voice. In a true interpretation or exegesis, they speak the same language. In their true relations there is not a discordant note in all these seven realms of thought. They illustrate and confirm the same truths.

2. Believe or have faith in the truth thus brought to our minds and understandings. It is incumbent upon us not only to know but also to believe the truth, as truth. To doubt or deny the truth shows ignorance, dishonesty, or perversity. The faculty of faith is inherent in the human mind. Also strength of intellect is given to everyone to exercise faith. The object of faith is afforded us through the seven channels indicated above. The object of faith is the truth. No man is under obligation to believe a falsehood, an inconsistency, or an absurdity. The act of faith, which is the mental acceptance of the truth, is our own, and for this we are responsible. True faith exists in these four facts or stages, the faculty, the strength, the object, and the act.

3. Obey the truth. We must know, and believe, and do. Truth demands outward action. It is elemental in our conduct. Know first, then believe, then do. Truth as mere mental furniture is of little avail. Its best results are reached only by obedience. Of course, it is a mental development to search after, find out, and believe the truth as a mental conception. But truth reaches after practical results.

Theory is important, but action goes beyond the stage of theory. It is action that tunnels the hills, climbs the mountains, bridges the rivers, mines the metals, and discovers continents.

4. Abandon all error, evil and wrong. The truth demands reformation. Our best efforts will be nullified or weakened or vitiated, if in any way we cling to error. The truth and wrong can not harmonize. There is no ultimate advantage in adhering to evil of any kind. All error in thought, disposition, sentiment, word and conduct must be abandoned. Every wrong theory, system, and association must be given up, because they do not comport with the truth. Truth in all its relations must be preëminent and interpenetrating. As long as evil, error and wrong lie in us or among us, the truth can not be exhibited in all its fullness.

5. Seek the inward spiritual life, the regeneration of the soul affected by the truth and the gracious influences of the Holy Spirit. This is called in the sacred scriptures being "born again," "born of God," "born from above," "born of the water and the Spirit." This is a moral and spiritual change wrought in the thought, the spirit, the disposition, the words, the conduct in life. It is a conscious change. The Spirit of Christ is hereby inwrought into our nature. We are new creatures.

6. Next comes confession of the truth, of our sins, of our faults, and of Christ as our Savior and Redeemer. This confession is necessary. Having a personal knowledge of Christ, the truth, and of our salvation, we are competent witnesses.

7. The next step in the way of life is that of consecration to God. All that we have and are, or may be, we put upon the altar at the disposal of the Master. A readjustment is to come about in our relations in which nothing is to come between our souls and God. He is to direct our thoughts, our feelings, our dispositions, our words, our conduct in all respects. We are to be co-partners with the Infinite Being. Satan is to be counted out as a governing element in our character and in the conduct of our lives. Mere policy is no more to be our guide, but true principle is to reign. The sinister methods of secretism are to be for ever abandoned. Our bodies, minds, souls, time, possessions, labors, influence, are all to come under the new and divine regime.

8. We now rest in God. The disturbing element of inward sin is taken out of us; the new element of the divine Presence has taken full possession of us. We now fully know that we have passed from carnal death into spiritual life. The fruits of the Spirit appear, without defect or deformity, and we grow in grace without obstruction.

9. Then comes, in consecutive order, the endowment of power. This is an enlargement and deepening of the work of grace in the mind, heart and life. It is effected by the same agency, the Holy Spirit, and by the same means; knowledge, faith, prayer, consecration, perseverance and obedience. The disciples, after the ascension of Christ, waited in earnest prayer in Jerusalem, ten days before the wonderful pentecostal endowment of power came. But this abundant grace will always come if it be properly and persistently sought in the divine ways. The endowment of the Spirit gives power, and humility, and boldness. It removes timidity and slavish fear.

It enables us to cheerfully do the will of God, and affords us a patient spirit to forbear in the ills and relations and provocations, and temptations of life. This endowment enables us to have the victory over the world, the flesh and the Devil. It makes duty easy, pleasant and joyous. It fills the soul with satisfaction and delight. It gives us power with God and men; makes life sweet, and puts divine things foremost in our minds, hearts, conversation and conduct. It puts us in hearty fellowship with all the true children of God, and makes their association desirable and agreeable. It is an antidote against all selfishness, and makes us liberal and benevolent. It prompts us to sincerely desire and practically manifest the welfare of all mankind, and is the sure precursor of everlasting life. Amen."

EFFECT OF PROHIBITION ON PUBLIC EDUCATION IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Hon. James Y. Joyner, Superintendent of Public Instruction in North Carolina, in a report recently printed showing the progress of public education in the State, gives the following facts and statistics. When we recall the fact that the recent prohibition movement in North Carolina began with the organization of the Anti-Saloon League in 1902, we see at a glance that the marvelous advancement in schools and education for our boys and girls have been hand in hand with the temperance and prohibition movement, proving conclusively that the old cry of liquor revenue for educational purposes is an invention of the Devil.

"ONE SCHOOLHOUSE A DAY.

"During the past year, our people have kept up the pace of the past seven years of building one new schoolhouse a day for every day in the year, Sundays included, in accordance with approved plans of modern school architecture, the new houses built range in value from $500 to $10,000. The total value of the public school property of the State is now $5,435,789, more than four times the total value of public school property in 1900.

"NEW RURAL LIBRARIES.

"Two hundred new rural libraries have been established, costing $6,000, making the total number of rural libraries in the State to date about 2,500. One hundred supplemental libraries have been added to the libraries previously established, costing $1,500. The average rural library contains about one hundred volumes of well selected books, the supplemental libraries contain about thirty-five volumes each.

"About $72,000 was added this year to the permanent loan fund for building and improving public schoolhouses, which now amounts to about $450,000. This loan fund continues to be in great demand, and to prove a great blessing and a great stimulus to schoolhouse building and improvement.

"LOCAL TAX DISTRICTS.

"Since January 1, 1910, one hundred and sixty-one local tax districts have been voted by the people in forty-three counties, to increase the school term, improve buildings and grounds, pay better salaries to teachers, and have better schools in every way in those districts. This is an average of one local tax district for every working day during the past six months. In 1900, there was only thirty local tax districts in the entire State, all in the cities and large towns. In 1910 there are one thousand and eighty, most of them in the rural districts, country villages and small towns. $817,249.82, about one fourth of the total annual school fund, was raised last year by local taxation.

"ENCOURAGING INCREASE.

"The school population increased last year 11,849, the enrollment 23,486, and the average daily attendance 27,481. These figures indicate an encouraging increase in educational interest, as the increased enrollment and average daily attendance is largely out of proportion to the increase in the school population.

"There was an increase of 2.5 days in the average school term of the rural schools of the entire State, making an average term in those schools for the past year of 89.6 days. The average term in the rural local tax school districts is one hundred and thirty-three days.

"HIGH SCHOOLS.

"There are now one hundred and seventy-five state-aided public high schools, located in ninety-three of the ninety-eight counties of the State, in which were enrolled during the past year more than six thousand country boys and girls, an increase of more than one thousand over the enrollment of the preceding year. Some of these schools have erected and equipped dormitories, in which their high school students can secure board at actual cost and pay for it in money or provisions at market price.—The American Issue.

A NATIONAL DISGRACE.

Sometimes a disgrace comes upon a family when the family, as such, is not to blame. Under such circumstances the disgrace is simply a family misfortune, and feelings of sympathy are aroused throughout the community. But if the disgrace is brought about by the family, as such, the disgrace is a family crime, and the family is blamed and held responsible. This is as righteous as it is true, and if it were otherwise, the foundations of good society would be sapped, and everything in the community would go to sticks morally. This is why every person and every family in the community have a right to take part in the regulation of every other person and every other family. A community is made up of individuals and families, and what affects one, affects all, and "personal liberty" stops where the interest of the community at large begins. In a sense, no man lives unto himself alone, and as every individual is an integral part of the community in which he lives, he is under obligation to take into consideration the welfare of the entire community and do nothing that might prove detrimental to the community as a whole. These principles are so self-evident that they may be said to be axiomatic.

But we started out to call attention to a disgrace that our Nation is bringing upon itself, and in so doing is making itself guilty of a high crime. It is well known that the people in many and large parts of our country, have determined that they don't want intoxicating beverages sold within their borders, and have expressed their determination in laws that they have enacted. But, in spite of this, the General Government at Washington sells to men licenses to violate the laws of the respective districts in which they live. Men who buy from the General Government licenses to sell liquor in territory where by local and state laws it is prohibited, do so with the intention of violating local and state laws without making themselves amenable to United States laws. Every time the National Government sells such a license, it puts the seal of its sanction upon the violation of law, and encourages lawlessness, and becomes particeps criminis with lawbreakers. That is a disgrace and a crime that should mantle the cheek of every government official in Washington with the blush of shame; and it should so stir the people throughout the country that they would arise in their wrath and dignity, and hurl power every officeholder in the Nation's capital who is not known to be heartily opposed to this outrage.

This iniquitous thing does more to render prohibition enactments ineffective, than any other one obstruction, if, indeed, it is not more powerful for harm than all other causes combined. Would-be lawbreakers have a wholesome fear of the laws of Uncle Sam, and they are loath to make themselves obnoxious to such laws. They know that when their venerable Uncle starts in pursuit of a man who violates his laws, he generally gets him and he has to pay the penalty. But if he holds in his hands Uncle Sam's permit, he is willing to take the risk of violating state and local laws, knowing that it is much easier to escape the legal penalties of the violations of such laws, than it is to keep out of the clutches of national laws when they are violated. How those who are in control of national affairs at Washington can reconcile it to their consciences thus to encourage lawlessness, and debauch the morals of citizens, is beyond ordinary comprehension. They are supposed to be there to uphold law and conserve the morals of the people, so far as government can do that, and they should not be tolerated in bringing this disgrace upon the Government that all patriotic citizens delight to honor.

Another matter comes to view from this standpoint, that deserves notice and the severest censure. We refer to that construction of interstate commerce law that allows common carriers to transport liquor into territory from which it has been excluded by law, to be received and disposed of by purchasers in violation of state and local laws. It is well known that an immense quantity of intoxicants is thus shipped into "dry" territory, and clandestinely disposed of, and that, too, under the sanction of the General Government. If these two buttresses of the temple of lawlessness were removed, we verily believe that it would reduce the violations of prohibitory laws fully ninety-five per cent. Let the religious press of the country, and all other papers that stand for law and order, lift up their voices and cry aloud against this iniquity till Washington sits up and takes notice. Let the people who have ordained prohibitory laws and want to see them enforced, buzz around the ears of their representatives in both branches of the national legislature, and bring them to understand that they must not be parties to this encouragement of the violation of law. The liquor interests of the country maintain lobbies in our legislatures, both national and state, to try to influence law-makers in their favor, and they do not scruple at anything by which they may further their ends. This is another item of our national disgrace and shame in regard to this matter, and steps should be taken by the sovereign people to unhorse the lobby, and drive it from the legislative halls of the land.—Christian Standard.

LESS HAM AND MORE EGGS.

In the United States in 1880 there were forty-nine million hogs and fifty million humans. Twenty years later there were seventy-six million humans, but only sixty-seven million hogs.

In the same lapse of a score of years the production of eggs rose from nine dozen to seventeen dozen per capita. The market receipts of our leading cities show that this increase of eggs and decrease of hogs still continues.

As the hen has outgrown the hog, so the dairy cow has cast into the shadow her big brother, the beef steer. In fact, we are becoming a nation of milk and egg eaters.

This passage of the cattle range, the wheat field, and the hog lot, and the phenomenal growth of the dairy and orchard and poultry yard and garden, is the most noteworthy development of modern agriculture.

In the pioneer days of unfenced agriculture, when the boundless prairie was yielding forth the stores of fertility that had been accumulating since the world began, humanity could afford to slaughter animals for food. But the day of limitless land is fast passing in the United States and in the world at large, and the more wasteful forms of production must give place to the more economical.

A hen can lay five times her own weight of eggs in a year. The prize cow at the University of Missouri produced sufficient milk in one year to equal the food value in the carcasses of four three-year-old steers.

There are other forces, however, than that of the growing scarcity of land that are aiding in bringing about an increase in the use of the animal products in the place of animal carcasses.

The preservation and transportation of flesh is an ancient art, but before the days of the private car line the only method of taking eggs to market was for the farmer's wife to hold the basket in her lap. Now the famous yellow special, side-tracking even the oil tank express, thunders along through the darkness of the prairie with its 5,000,000 eggs, each resting securely in its chilly little pasteboard stateroom.

The flesh of the hog is the natural food of the woodsman, the pioneer, the prospector, or the farmer, whose work begins with Aurora's harbinger and ends with the smoky lantern; but there is something about fat pork that fails to appeal to the man who labors with check book and fountain pen.

Perhaps another cause for the tendency to use more animal products and less animal carcasses is the discovery that the full dinner pail of the meat-eating American is the result, not the cause, of his efficiency as a worker, and that, to a certain extent, his efficiency increases as the full dinner pail is lightened.

Much of the credit of this discovery belongs to Horace Fletcher, who, being troubled with a pain in his stomach, began to chew his food.

"It is the much chewing," said Fletcher, but the professors were in doubt, so they measured and analyzed Mr. Fletcher's bill of fare, and discovered that the amateur strong man was consuming but one third the proteid, or flesh food, element that the professors had said was necessary for physical well-being.

Further experiments show that increased endurance invariably came to those who chewed more and ate less, especially less meat. To-day the endurance records stand: Knee-bending test, best vegetarian, 2,400 times; best meat eater, 1,227 times. Holding out arms, best meat eater, 22 minutes; best vegetarian, 176 minutes.

Now, the vegetarians are vegetarians in name only—the vegetarian partakes freely of the product of the cow and the fruit of the hen. There seems to be a reason why meat produces more fatigue than milk or eggs or vegetables. Science can not explain just why, but the answer lies deep in the mystery of the proteid molecule close to the secrets of life itself.—Selected.

BAPTIST RETREAT IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The British Weekly reports that the Baptist leaders in South Africa are ready to go into "the United Church of South Africa." The former Baptist churches will be allowed to continue the practice of the immersion of believers, if they wish, but the rest will practice the sprinkling of infants. We sincerely trust that this disgraceful surrender of Baptist principles will not be made. Surely the rank and file of South African Baptists will remain loyal to the Baptist cause. Union is a good thing, provided it is made on the basis of New Testament teaching. But to go into a denomination that "allows" believers' immersion for those who insist on it, but that practices sprinkling of infants is nothing less than abject surrender of the Baptist faith. Evidently there is pressing need of a Baptist propaganda among Baptists. Just at the time when Baptists have made their mark upon the world, when their main contentions are accepted as true by scholars of all denominations, when the democratic spirit of the age makes a world audience for our cause, we have an attempted movement among Baptists themselves to scuttle the ship.

The Baptists of Canada and America will not stand for this Baptist retreat. There has been no action in this direction in America save that of Dr. A. C. Dixon in Chicago. It is useless and worse than useless. Besides it will not succeed, and should an attempted propaganda be launched the Baptist World, which reaches at least the leaders wherever Baptists keep house, will be found a valuable, aggressive asset. A somewhat similar scheme is in the air in England, but it will only bring confusion there and disappointment among Baptists elsewhere. The Baptists of Wales, Ireland and Scotland are robust in the faith and have no notion of rushing into a nondescript union movement. If the matter is pushed, the English Baptists will simply divide as the Cumberland Presbyterians have done in this country. Rev. F. B. Meyer is right in our judgment in his opinion that the British Christians have given too much attention to politics. The necessity of standing against the politics of the state church is about to make them more politicians than religious leaders.

The Baptist World Alliance meets next year in Philadelphia. We are very sure that no welcome will be extended in that meeting to the white flag of surrender. It is a time for Baptists to be pulling together all over the world, not to be running off to other folds. These are plain words, but we believe that they are true words, and need to be said at this time. Baptists have a mission for Jesus in the world. Let us realize it by his help.—The Baptist World.

Baby.

We started the baby to school to-day,
The winsomest mite of a boy of five,
With the brightest eyes of sparkling gray,
The ruddiest little romp alive.
His small feet patter adown the path,
His voice rings out in its happy way;
The dawn of the golden dream of life
Awakes in the baby's heart to-day.

Noon brought him again to our waiting arms,
His quick tongue struggles the news to tell;
The master has penciled a line or two—
"The little master is doing well.
He is eager to enter the reading class,
He tackles his lessons with hearty will;
But his little limbs are so full of life,
We find it a task to keep him still."

Wind blows the rings of his sunny hair,
His eager bustle we check in vain;
So soon has the business of life begun,
He will never be "baby" to us again!
Baby, whose heaven was mamma's smile,
Content if we gave him a gilded toy;
Now, never again! He is passed away;
In his stead is this riotous, restless boy.

Ah, I think of a day that will surely come,
When out of life's playful A, B, C,
My boy shall have reached to a higher class,
And I wonder what will the lesson be!
A day when no loving hand shall fall
On the brow that will ache 'neath its load of care;
The morn be spent, and the noonday heat,
And the sun's fierce rays be hard to bear.

A day when a longing shall fill his heart
For a morsel of love like his mother gave;
For a draught from the fount of unselfishness,
He will find it so hard to be always brave.
So hard when the struggle of life is come—
So hard when the way is dark and long,
Storm racked, wind driven, tempest tossed!
Ah! it is hard to be always strong!

So I bring my burden of doubt and fears,
And lay it down with a patient prayer;
And I feel that in all that betides my boy
A cherishing God will bestow his care.
May every lesson abound in truth,
Nor bear the shadow of sin or shame;
In the Master's book, at the closing hour,
No blot be found by my baby's name.

—Nellie M'vey.

A Prayer.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And, by the winds from unshined spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of the darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown.

Thou who has made my house of life so pleasant
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
O Love Divine, O Helper, ever present,
Be thou my strength and stay.

Be near me when all else is from me drifting.
Earth, sky, home's pictures, day of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but thee, my Father! let thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if, my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy abounding grace,
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place:

Some humble door among thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows for ever through heaven's green expansions
The river of thy peace.

—John G. Whittier.

Our Daily Bread.

Prince Albert, consort of Queen Victoria, made a translation of a German hymn, which attained to some popularity in England and Scotland. One stanza was used in some households as grace before meat. It ran thus:

God bless our going out, nor less
Our coming in, and make them sure;
God bless our daily bread, and bless
Whate'er we do, whate'er endure;
In death unto his peace awake us,
And heirs of his salvation make us.

It is told of a Brooklyn city missionary, the Rev. Henry Bromley, that he was passing one day through the dark hall of a tenement, when he caught the words of this stanza through an open door.

Looking within, he saw a woman and three children seated at a table, whereon lay only a loaf of bread. The reverence and the apparent refinement of the family impressed him deeply, and gave to the lines a new beauty.

That evening a company of Christian men met to dine together and to consider and discuss some questions of religion or philanthropy, and Mr. Bromley was asked to say grace. He related the incident and repeated the stanza. Then the company sat down to dinner.

After the conference was over, a stranger, who had been present as the friend and guest of one of the company, came to Mr. Bromley, and asked him for some further description of the woman who had recited the lines. Such information as Mr. Bromley was able to give was received with the very greatest interest, and the stranger asked to be conducted to the tenement.

"Long ago, in our country home in Scotland," he said, "my grandmother taught my sister and myself to repeat that grace. Our grandmother died; my sister married and went,

I know not where. It is years now since I lost sight of her; but every day in my own home that grace is said, and I feel sure that in my sister's home, if she is living, it is also repeated."

The woman in the tenement and this man were indeed brother and sister, and were thus reunited after years of separation—years that on her part had been full of trial.

God's blessing, daily asked upon the humble loaf and the going out and the coming in of the orphaned household, had never failed through the years of privation, and it grew more abundant in the finding of the brother.—Selected.

Requests for Prayer.

Mrs. W. B. McQueen, of Oelwein, Iowa, desires the prayers of the Saints for her son John, who is severely afflicted, that, if it be the Lord's will, he may be healed. The prayers of the righteous avail much.

Mrs. Alexander Mellon, of Tidioute, Pennsylvania, desires the prayers of the Prayer Union, and of all who may read this and believe in prayer, for her son Emory, that he may be spared from a sickness with his lungs this winter, and that he may be able to go to school. "He will soon be ten years old, and has only had about four months' schooling, on account of having catarrhal pneumonia. I also ask your prayers in behalf of Edgar Mellon, a little boy who was at our house visiting and got his arm broken at the elbow; the doctors are afraid his arm will be left stiff. Pray that he may get the right use of his arm, and that these two boys spoken of may grow up to be useful in this cause, and we may be submissive to His will.

Letter Department

OTTAWA, KENTUCKY, September 15, 1910.

Editors Herald: We are trying to keep the campfires blazing in this part of our field. We are holding forth in the vicinity of the Long and Roberts debate. Bro. E. E. Long is held in very high esteem by the people up here; but W. G., the poor fellow, I haven't met a man that has a good word for him. Everybody could see his unfairness and turning and twisting to bolster up his misrepresentations. Well, I am glad that our dear Brother Long won the confidence of the better class of people.

There is a great deal of sickness here now. There is not a home where there are children that has escaped scarlet fever. Two children were placed beneath the sod Tuesday, the 13th.

My crowds have been small up till last night. We will stay with them a while longer, and trust that the dread disease may be abated. I have had a pretty bad time of it myself this quarter. Was in bad health for about six weeks. Not able to do much, but I thank my heavenly Father that I am just feeling well again, and trust I can make up for some lost time. Praying for the redemption of Zion,

Your brother,

J. W. METCALF.

Home address: 1381 Seventh street, Louisville, Kentucky.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLAHOMA.

Editors Herald: We arrived here the 1st of June from Toppliff, Utah. While there, for one year, we were isolated from church privileges; but by a close reading of the church books and papers we have been strengthened and encouraged. Many times we have felt the Spirit burn in our hearts while reading the letters and articles, which seemed to be written for our benefit.

When we left Toppliff, I distributed over one hundred HERALDS, Ensigns, Autumn Leaves, and Exponents—too good to be destroyed. I thought what had been such a blessing to us might also help others.

The daily lives of those around us, under the name of Latter Day Saint, were a constant reminder that we should live so as to bring no reproach on the fair name of the Reorganized Church.

When we arrived in Oklahoma City, we soon found those of like faith and began to talk prayer meeting, which all were in favor of. We soon had a prayer service once a week, an average attendance of eight members, and each takes part every meeting. Those meetings are a feast to our souls, and each one is growing stronger through his weak efforts in this great work. We notice a vast improvement in our worthy elder, Brother Dillon, as he is just new in the work, and we are pleased to stand by him, as we strive to grow together in grace and truth.

We have a little Sunday school started, with eighteen present. The writer was chosen superintendent, and Sr. E. C. Nelson, secretary. Immediately following Sunday school last Sunday, fifteen of those present went out to Bell Isle, to witness the baptism and confirmation of little Mary Layton. She went into the water just as calm as a soldier of Jesus could possibly do. Our hearts were made to rejoice to see the fruits ripening from the home and Sunday school influence.

We also have a study of the Book of Mormon once a week. As the book was new to most of us, we commenced at the first. We trust that others may come here and assist in the work in this city, where people are free to listen to whom they please. With every creed represented here, we also ought to have the truth. We have good prospects for an opening here and hope the missionaries will come this way again soon.

When we see the multitudes of people attend the big meetings night after night, we long to have the pure gospel preached to them. We are few in numbers, but a united band, and this is God's work, and by his help, and our diligence, faithfulness, and prayers of faith, we are striving for victory over every opposition.

MRS. A. V. LAYTON.

SAPULPA, OKLAHOMA.

Editors Herald: I feel like congratulating you on the many good things I read in your pages. I feel strengthened and more determined to fight on with every copy of Ensign and HERALD. I certainly rejoiced in Spirit when I read of the healing of J. P. Fowler's son in Philadelphia. I said, "God has not forgotten his people yet." What a grand and glorious thing to be a Saint in these latter days! I am isolated from the Saints, and church privileges, and do not have the pleasure of talking with the Saints upon the gospel which I dearly love, and which is so helpful to our trying to live right.

I am glad to note the desire in the sisters, though faint, for plainer dressing. I firmly believe when they understand and practice a simpler mode of dressing and housekeeping, one of the great obstacles in the way of redemption of Zion will have been removed, and a prolific cause for jealousy removed.

I am the only member of my mother's family in the church. My son and I live alone. He is not a member of any church. He just recently returned from the West, but he, with me, will give any elder a home that will come here and preach. We live among a Holiness settlement, and we have some warm arguments. I give them my church papers to read. Have had several talks with the Utah faction. I like to have them shown up before the people in the proper light.

Will close now, with an appeal to the elders in this district to take pity on the widows and the strangers, who are trying to let their light shine, and come and visit this part of God's heritage, for I believe there are some honest souls here worth saving. If one can't get a building to preach in, why not the streets; others do. Any Saints will find a welcome at our home, and I will assist all I can other ways to help the work. Would like to hear from Saints that are lonely and situated as I am.

Yours in the faith,

MRS. H. L. LOGAN.

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON.

Dear Herald: Would like to write a few lines through your pages to Sr. Edna King. I do not know her address, but I know her mother takes the HERALD. I was at church Sunday night, the 4th, and heard you sing that beautiful song, "Face to face," and it moved me to tears. The following day I had a great sorrow come into my life, a wrong that I bitterly resented. It seemed for a few hours I cared for nothing but revenge. I fell asleep resolved to do something on the day following that I would have been very sorry for the rest of my life. But the dear Father watched over me tenderly and came to my rescue, and your beautiful song was the instrument in his hands of saving me from doing that dreadful wrong. About 3 o'clock I was awakened by some one singing that song. It sounded just like your voice, and it caused me to weep for hours.

Dear sister, sing that beautiful song whenever you can, for perhaps it will save some other overburdened heart from doing wrong. I can understand now why it was given in Doctrine and Covenants for the young men and maidens to cultivate music. You do not realize when those sweet chords will touch some aching heart. I hope you will be happy in your new home, and that you will use your voice in this glorious cause. You will be missed here by many.

A SISTER.

Editors Herald: Our address, from now on, will be 171 P street, Salt Lake City, Utah. We are back from our Provo reunion and commenced our street services here again. Began last night. Besides my family, Elder H. N. Hansen and son John, a priest, were with us, and Elder Hansen spoke a portion of the time. We are holding open air services in Liberty Park each Sunday from 3 to 4 p. m. With our branch meetings these appointments keep us all busy. Regards to all readers,

A. M. CHASE.

MONROVIA, KANSAS.

Editors Herald: The writer attended the Northwestern Kansas district reunion at Alexander, August 19 to 28. The attendance was very small, but the interest was good, and those present seemed to receive encouragement. Bro. S. H. Fields and the writer had to do nearly all the preaching, Brother Teeters feeling a little backward on account of being at home.

Sr. Lillian Curtis did some good work each afternoon in the normal work; we are hopeful that it will encourage others to take up the work.

From Alexander, after the last service on Sunday night, we were conveyed by Bro. Herman Kneffer, in his automobile, to McCracken, where we took train for Blue Rapids to attend the Northeastern Kansas district reunion, arriving the next day and finding the Saints at work in the reunion, and doing their best to make the meetings a success. The attendance was small, but the interest was good. Both districts have voted for reunions next year, and have placed the matter in the hands of committees, who are expecting to begin work right away, and make preparations for the reunion of 1911.

Let the Saints in both districts take notice and begin now to make preparations to attend.

The Saints of the Northeastern District have voted to buy a big tent for reunions, and missionary work; and Samuel Twombly, of Fanning, Kansas, and the writer, Holden, Missouri, are the committee. We, or either of us, are ready to make donations for that purpose.

At Blue Rapids Swen Swenson, S. J. Madden, Ammon White, and the writer were the speakers. Sister McNichols was present, and did a good work in the normal, Sunday school, and Religio departments. Her efforts were very much appreciated. The Saints were also made glad to have Evangelist White with them. All seemed greatly encouraged in the gospel.

H. E. MOLER.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

Dear Herald: Our district conference has passed into history. Bro. O. D. Johnson and I started to and intended to attend, but the train we were on happened an accident by which it became disabled, so we didn't make proper connection with the conveyance that we intended to, and we failed to appear at the conference.

Our branch is still alive. We hold four services every Sunday. We have no Religio as yet. Bro. O. D. Johnson is the branch president. Bro. Hal Hamilton Davenport is the presiding priest, W. H. Davenport, teacher, Bro. W. H. Paulger clerk, Sr. Mada Davenport treasurer, Bro. O. G. Davenport deacon.

Our district president preaches for us occasionally. Bro. D. S. Palmer, of the missionary force, and also our vice-president and Bishop's agent, gives us a rousing sermon once in a while, also our submission in charge, preached once for us after coming down. I hear that he has departed for Independence. Bro. W. H. Mannering, of the missionary force, also preaches for us sometimes.

I have not been exceedingly active in the work, but have preached in the branch and have also been holding services every other Sunday at a friend's house on Austin street, to a small congregation of Mexicans in the Spanish language, alternating with my friend who is a Christian preacher. I expect to hear from him next Sunday. He seemed to be pleased with my talk. Bro. Ed. N. McCrae has been too sick to preach for some time.

Yours for the spread of the angel's message.

W. H. DAVENPORT.

BEARDSTOWN, ILLINOIS.

Dear Herald: I feel that I have many trials, but I remember that God said he would have a tried people. I have been quite sick for a long time, and was given up to die by some good doctors. I was then in the Methodist Church, and I always tried to live the best I could, and believed that God was just the same to-day as he ever was, and had faith in him.

One year ago my husband, my son, and myself were baptized in the Mormon Church, led there by false preaching, and three weeks and three days later found our mistake, and were led to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and at once baptized by Elder Burr.

Have had experiences in three churches; the Christian Church, the Methodist Church, and Mormon Church, and I have been more blessed in this, the Reorganization, than all the rest of my past life, although I have had a great trial this summer. I was taken to Springfield to a hospital and the doctors told me that unless I had an operation I could not get well. At first, I would not consent, but finally did, and before the operation I was encouraged by Elder Burr and others, and was given assurance that I would stand the operation all right. The doctor was very much surprised at my speedy recovery, and I told him that it was through faith that I was getting along so well. Am getting along finely now, but am not yet able to do my work. Was administered to by Brn. Walters and Guthrie, who are here holding a debate with two Baptist missionaries. I ask the prayers of the Saints that I may hold out faithful to the end.

MRS. EMMA SHOUP.

ALBERTA, CANADA.

Editors Herald: Would like to know if I might have space in your columns to tell that God does answer prayers. Some few years ago I was brought under the most severe trial of my life; coming into a new country where everything and everyone were strange to me. My oldest boy was not contented here, and went away. By neglect we did not hear from him, and we could not find his whereabouts, for he did not go to Omaha, where we had lived. Oh, where could he be? This was heart rending to me. Weeks, months, years went by. My health was failing fast. Where, oh, where was my boy! I was thinking a great deal about him one day, and I saw him in a vision, sitting at a table eating and laughing. In this way I saw him two or three times. I earnestly prayed to God, with all my heart, that he might spare his life, so that I might see his face again.

One day my husband said to me, if I would address a letter to him at Seattle, Washington, I would find him there; but just then we were on the verge of moving, so I did not write until we were settled. By this time a letter came to me from Seattle. Strange, was it not? God had heard and answered my prayer. I still kept on praying that he would come home. I was working in my garden one day and a young man came up to me and asked if he could get his dinner. Yes, I said, I could not refuse anyone something to eat. I looked at him, but there was something that drew him nearer to me. I looked and looked at him, and then he laughed, and I recognized that it was my boy. My heart was overflowed with joy. How good it is to be a Saint in latter days.

MRS. G. A. WHITMAN.

UTOPIA, TEXAS, September 7, 1910.

Editors Herald: The 10th of August I ceased my labor in a dry goods store, and on the 11th, in company with my sister, and other Saints, we left San Antonio, Texas, to attend the reunion and conference at Pipe Creek, about forty miles distant, up the hills.

The reunion convened August 12. Good spiritual meetings were enjoyed by all. We camped on the grounds of the reunion near the Medina River. On the 19th conference convened, at which time I was ordained to the office of priest, in the morning prayer service, by Brn. Aylor and Mannering, and made my first attempt to speak at the eleven o'clock service. We listened to good sermons delivered by Brn. Aylor, Palmer, and Mannering, during the reunion, and we all felt benefited by our meetings.

On Sunday night, the 21st, the conference adjourned, and Brother Adams took Brother Aylor and the tent up to Tuff, Texas, to hold meetings. Brother Palmer and I made ourselves ready and started for Tuff to assist Brother Aylor in meetings there, according to instructions and request. During our stay there Brother Aylor baptized nine who had heard the gospel for years.

I arrived in Utopia the first of September, and on the second day Brn. Aylor and Palmer arrived, and we had preaching that night in our gospel tent, Brother Palmer being the speaker. Brother Aylor remained with us until the morning of the 5th, addressing the crowd several times while here. The crowds are growing larger and greater interest is being taken in our meetings. I believe some are near the kingdom of God. About the 12th of this month, Brother Palmer and I will leave this place and go to Hondo City, to hold about ten or fourteen days' meeting.

I have been a member of the church seven years, was baptized when twelve years old, by Brother Harder, in the Indian Territory.

Praying for the welfare of Zion,

Your brother,

GLAUD R. KUYKENDALL.

ROSLYN, WASHINGTON.

Dear Herald: Your pages are so full of good news and instruction that our appreciation may not be amiss here, although it is with difficulty that I read your pages, having to use a magnifying glass with very strong lens.

The Sunday school here had a picnic on Labor Day, and we had a good time.

I see in the HERALD a communication-headed "Prerequisites to Baptism" which touches my sympathy, and I believe that in consequence of not observing the instructions laid down in Doctrine and Covenants, section 17, there are many who have not received the seal of their adoption. What can these members do? Are they to remain in this condition, when they are not responsible for it all? How are they to know that this is the reason they do not receive the Holy Spirit? They need our prayers that God will point out such to his faithful ministers, that they may be reclaimed by our heavenly Father, and be properly taught and instructed. We pray that right may prevail, and that ignorance and assuming bigotry may finally be overcome.

J. R. ALLEN.

WINFIELD, IOWA.

Dear Herald: We are nearly thirty-five miles from any of the branches of the Saints, and all the preaching we get we receive through the HERALD, Ensign, Autumn Leaves, Hope, and Journal of History.

About five weeks ago a gentleman was here and gave us a lecture on "Utah Mormonism." Joseph Smith came in for his share, and so we sent for some tracts, and distributed them among the people of the town, the other preachers not being missed. We give our church literature to our neighbors, and all those who will read it. We have some studying the Book of Mormon, and Church History, and they seem to be really interested. The writer has tried to do a great deal in explaining our position the last few months.

We have been looking for some of the elders through here, but as yet none have come this way, except Brother Roth. There is a nice park here that we could use through warm weather. Should an elder come this way we will do our best to secure a place to preach in and see to his needs otherwise.

Ever praying for Zion's cause.

MR. AND MRS. I. M. LANE.

PRICHARD, ALABAMA.

Dear Herald: We are trying to keep the old bell ringing here, and as in Jeremiah 6:16, "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein."

We try to show the people that the church is here on earth. Matthew 3:2; Matthew 16:18; Luke 6:13; Acts 13:1; Titus 1:5; 1 Corinthians 12:18, 28; Ephesians 4:11. Now

1 Corinthians 12:27, Romans 12:4, 5, Acts 14:27, show that the church is not composed of pure in heart altogether, which would have to be if the church was in heaven, and nobody but the pure in heart from all denominations belong to it. But read Matthew 13:47-53. Remember also the ten virgins. To for ever set aside this theory, we only need to refer to Ephesians 4:11-15. Paul said Jesus set those officers in the church. Now, if the church is on earth, we can look for the officers on earth, but if in heaven, then look for the officers in heaven. "For the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ," and to continue, "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ," and in verse 14 of Ephesians 4, "That we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive." So that there will be false teachers in the community of heaven. When you drive the people to the post they will do like one did with me a few days ago; when he could say no more against the church being here on earth, he thanked God he had the church at home, lying on the shelf.

Well, I've rocked the people so much here of late, in their creeds of various opinions, with the cradle of church organization and doctrine, that they are sound asleep, here at Prichard, as the Lord showed me in a dream; so I will leave and let them get their nap out.

But, thanks be to God, the people are not asleep everywhere, for I have been the instrument of leading seventeen into the church already this conference year, and have another to baptize Sunday. She has not heard very much of the doctrine, for it did not take much to convince her. She was convinced as soon as she saw my chart, and heard the first sermon from it. She had seen it in a vision when she was lying at the point of death, and knew it as soon as she saw it.

I find many people ready to listen to the gospel, and a few ready to accept it. I find many warm hearted Saints in this county, that are not only ready to do, but are seeking the opportunity of doing good. I labored here at Prichard and in Mobile, which are about five miles apart, for about five weeks, and find Saints with an interest in the work. So, dear Saints, who live in this mission, let us work together, and all pull, and the load will not be as heavy as it would be for a few.

ALBERT VANCELEAVE.

From H. M. S. "Defence."

I was baptized in November, 1907, by Brother Newton, of Kansas City, Missouri, who was then preaching in Plymouth. I was at the time not a seeker after truth, but when I heard the truth I believed and asked for baptism, and I do not regret the step taken. I know it is based on a rock, and that rock is Christ.

I am serving His Majesty, the king of Great Britain, as a Royal Marine, and am now on board the Defence, an armored cruiser, and being in the service, I have many discouragements and at times I feel I must give up trying to do good. I have presented the gospel to the captain of my ship, and he has also perused the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants, but as yet he sees no light. I have proudly declared my religion and distributed tracts to my shipmates. I was called and ordained a deacon to the Plymouth Saints, but being in the service, and going from one place to another, I have little opportunity of fulfilling my duties. I feel I am unworthy of the post I serve, but I look to Him above for strength and wisdom, and I know he helps me.

It is my delight to be alone on night watches, when I can commune with God, and enjoy his Holy Spirit. It thrills me through and through, and I always wish that was my last moment. There are about seven hundred and fifty men aboard this ship, and it is impressive to think that only one of the whole number belongs to Christ's church.

Many of my shipmates delight in calling me Mormon, but I have been able to prove to the majority the difference between the two churches; but still I suppose the stigma will stick. I had great trouble to get my religion changed in the service because of this, but I proved we did not practice polygamy, and I was allowed to worship according to my own religion. I have intentions of leaving the service and of going to Zion, about next February, and in the meantime I shall be pleased if any of the Saints would communicate with me. I also ask the prayers of the Saints to strengthen me, and keep me from the temptations that surround me.

Your brother,

Western Nebraska and Black Hills Reunion.

The reunion of the Western Nebraska and Black Hills District was held at Bayard, Nebraska, from September 2 to 12, 1910. The organization took place Sunday, September 4. The following officers were elected: Elder J. R. Sutton, president; Catherine Roberts, secretary; Elder J. T. Grimes, chorister. Owing to small attendance only one service a day was held except Sundays. Quite a number of Saints from various localities were present; some camping upon the ground while others stayed among the Saints. There was fine attendance during the latter part of the reunion; better than in the beginning. The meetings were very instructive and order was excellent. We had the pleasure of having with us as speakers Elders Grimes, Sutton, and Prettyman. We were also very glad to welcome in our midst, near the latter part of the reunion, Elder J. E. Kelley. His health being too poor, he was not able to speak but once. Elder Kelley labored here a few years ago, and his many friends, and especially the Saints, were glad to have him with us, but are very sorry he is not strong. May he be restored to health is the prayer of all the Saints.

We enjoyed, during the reunion, fourteen preaching services, two prayer meetings, one business meeting, two Sunday school sessions, also Sunday school convention on Sunday afternoon, September 11; and on that day all Saints present fasted and prayed in behalf of our young sister, Clarice Hanson, who has an affection. Three new members from other branches were united with our branch, and one member transferred to First Kansas City Branch.

The reunion of 1911 will be held in Bayard again, between the 1st and 20th of September, the exact days to be decided upon by committee in charge.

We hope all that were here this year will be present again in 1911, and that others will plan to be here that were not this year. The elders departed to various fields of labor after the reunions, except Elder Kelley, who will remain here for a time for the benefit of his health.

May "God speed the right," is my prayer, and may the day hasten when there will be a reign of peace and blessedness.

CATHERINE ROBERTS, Secretary.

Two-Day Meeting at Sparta, Michigan.

A two-day meeting of the Sparta Branch met with the Saints at Grant, August 27 and 28, with S. W. L. Scott in charge; Fred T. Field, branch president, and J. W. McKnight associates; Sr. Fred Field was elected corresponding secretary; Brother Scott as organist, and Sr. Maggie Lindsey assistant; Bro. Charles Gooderham, chorister; Brn. Claud Allen and Charles Whitmore as ushers.

Brother Scott made a few remarks on our need of faith, and the need of watching and prayer, after which eleven hymns were sung, six prayers were offered, and twenty-three testimonies given.

Saturday, at 2.30 p. m., Elder J. W. McKnight, of Galien, was our speaker, his theme being resurrection. He quoted many beautiful passages, mostly from Job and Isaiah, showing that we bring about our own immortality by the lives we live here, according to our obedience to the law of God; or condemnation by disobedience. Again citing us to Matthew and Ezekiel on the resurrection, strict obedience to the gospel law will fit and prepare us for the first resurrection.

Saturday, at 7.30 p. m., Elder S. W. L. Scott, of Coldwater, Michigan, was the speaker. His theme was, that we must emulate the life of Christ if we would reap a like reward.

Sunday, at 9.30 a. m., social service; seven hymns and eighteen testimonies and five prayers were given, and this was followed by preaching, the theme being, Discerning between principles and procedure of good or evil, living by the principles set down in the standard. Sunday evening after song service Brother McKnight spoke from Ecclesiastes 3: 1-14. As Christ set up a perfect kingdom or church, so a kingdom or church, to be perfect, must be the same in every point, even to the lowest official, quoting from several books in the New Testament. At the evening service, baptism having taken place before the meeting, those baptized were confirmed. The last four members baptized were admitted as members of the Sparta Branch. A collection of $14.37 was taken to defray missionaries' traveling expenses, while a hymn was sung. Thirty-six Saints were present at most of the services, and all seemed to feel that it was good to go there. Quite a large congregation of outsiders was present, and a good interest was manifested.

MRS. FRED FIELD, Secretary.

Reunion of the Eastern Oklahoma District.

The Saints of the Eastern Oklahoma District held their fifth annual reunion from August 12 to 21, inclusive. The organization took place Friday, at 10 a. m. Elders Lee Quick, John White, and H. R. Harder, were chosen to preside and arrange the meetings and speakers. It was one of the most spiritual reunions held in this district.

The reunion committee had secured the large pavilion and ball park just west of Wilburton. Fourteen tents were on the ground, besides numbers of the Saints who lived close to the park helped to look after the visiting Saints. Toward the close of the reunion, Apostle I. N. White and Patriarch Ammon White were in attendance, also Brn. Simmons, J. T. Riley, and Evert Reser of the missionary force.

Twenty-four preaching services were held; six were baptized during reunion and conference. The reunion committee did all they could to make the reunion a success and the Saints did nobly in the way of finance.

The conference at the close of the reunion was well attended. H. R. Harder was elected president of the district. The following branches reported: Wilburton, Haileyville, and Jacksonville.

Those of the ministry reporting: Seventy, Lee Quick, J. M. Simmons, E. A. Erwin, J. T. Riley. Elders H. R. Harder, John S. White, William Peacock, V. L. Lum, J. N. Perkins, J. P. Brannon, C. E. Goss, Else Youmans. Priests C. C. Crisman, D. O. Harder. Deacons J. H. Sills, L. S. Moore. Bro. I. N. White preached several times which was very much enjoyed by all the Saints, also Patriarch Ammon White preached a forceful sermon Sunday night. He is a man of God, and well qualified for the high position he holds.

At the close of the reunion Brother Quick held a series of meetings at Brother Manning's lawn for two weeks. As a result six more precious souls were united to the cause of truth. Brother Quick is an able defender of the truth, and was well received by the people both out and inside the church. Several more are near the kingdom, and many friends were made to the cause.

News From Branches

COMINS, MICHIGAN.

Believe that most of the Saints here are trying to live their religion and come up higher. Our meetings have been spiritual this summer.

Bro. D. J. Wheeler, of Rose City, occupied the stand on August 7, and on August 28 Elder A. S. Pushman occupied with good liberty. Also two were baptized by Elder E. D. Fultz.

On August 31 Elder G. W. Burt appeared in our midst and a grand prayer meeting was enjoyed at the home of Brother Dimmick.

September 2 sixteen of our branch started across the country for Hubbard Lake to attend the two-day meeting at Pine Grove, about forty miles distant from here. The trip and meetings were enjoyed by all. There was a nice crowd, and best of all, the Spirit of the Master was there in power, and all were made to rejoice in the work. The preaching was done by Elders Joseph Sheffer, James Carpenter, G. W. Burt, James Blackmore, and E. N. Burt. Each one being well blessed in his efforts. There were also two priests, three teachers, and two deacons present.

On Monday morning a prayer service was held at the home of Sister Farrar, that will be long remembered by all. The Lord spoke to us, so we had sufficient cause to feel good. That afternoon we drove back as far as Elder Blackmore's and enjoyed a sermon by G. W. Burt that night, and also enjoyed a visit with Brother and Sister Blackmore. September 6 we came home; and so the work goes on. The writer had the pleasure of leading two souls into the waters of baptism at the Pine Grove meetings.

Independence Sanitarium.

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES.

The Sanitarium offers a three years' course of instruction to ladies desiring to become trained nurses. The first month is probationary. The nurse in charge has full power to decide as to their fitness for the work, and to the propriety of retaining or dismissing them at the end of the month's probation. She can also at any time dismiss them for misconduct or inefficiency.

Room, board and laundry (except collars and cuffs) is furnished for the term, and an allowance of five dollars per month additional, after the first month. Except as above, no wages will be paid. The instruction, knowledge, and experience furnished, are considered full compensation.

The day nurses rise at 6 a. m., breakfast at 6.30, on duty from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., with two hours in afternoon for rest and study. One half day is allowed each week, and four hours on Sunday. Two weeks vacation each summer.

The candidates for admission must be unmarried women between twenty and thirty years old, and must possess a good common school education. They are required to furnish a physician's certificate of sound health and two certificates of good character. Those who have had partial training in any other institution, or correspondence school, for training nurses, are not eligible.

The applicant should bring two dark wash dresses, four white aprons, two inch waist bands and five inch hem plain underclothing, and rubber heeled shoes for probation. After being accepted for training, they are required to wear the uniform of the training school.

Those graduating after passing the final examination at the close of the three years' term will receive a diploma, certifying to their character, proficiency, and period of training.

Applicants should address Independence Sanitarium, West Blue avenue, Independence, Missouri. 36-3t

Died.

HARMON.—At Davis City, Iowa, August 29, 1910, Bro. Ransom J. Harmon, aged 77 years, 7 months, and 13 days. He leaves wife, five sons, and one daughter. First heard the gospel at Marengo, Illinois, in 1874, and on May 11, 1884, was baptized at Davis City, by Z. H. Gurley. Served as a soldier from April, 1861, to May, 1864. Disease was hardening of the liver, as proven by a post mortem examination, parts being found like a stone. Funeral service in the Saints' chapel, and sermon by H. A. Stebbins, assisted by James McDiffit.

STEDMAN.—Bro. Eli A. Stedman died suddenly at his home in Lamoni, September 8, 1910, aged 69 years, 10 months, and 1 day. Sister Stedman and one son and four daughters survive him. He was a soldier in the war of 1861-1865. Was baptized in Minnesota in 1869 by Bro. W. H. Kelley. For many years he labored as a missionary, serving as Elder, Seventy, High Priest, and High Counselor in Lamoni Stake. All his family were present at the funeral. Services in charge of John Smith; prayer at residence by W. H. Kelley, at the church by J. R. Lambert, and sermon by H. A. Stebbins.

BARR.—Elder Andrew Barr, who died at his home in this village, on June 22, 1910, was born in Airdrie, Scotland, on the 24th day of December, in the year 1828. He came to Canada in 1853, and was married to Miss Rebecca Barr, of Stratford, Ontario, in October, 1854. By this union there were born to them three sons and seven daughters, of whom the eldest daughter is dead. In 1879 death claimed his wife and in February, 1889, he was again united in wedlock to Mrs. Catherine Lane, of Forest, Ontario, who, with nine children by his former marriage survive him to mourn the loss of a fond husband and a loving father. He entered the ministry of the church of Latter Day Saints about thirty-three years ago, and during that time he filled the office of Bishop's agent for twenty-two years, and has been a faithful follower of Him who called him to preach the gospel.

No church ever had a more ardent supporter. He has faithfully performed his duty and has now gone to enjoy the fruits of a life spent in the service of the Master. The funeral held on Saturday, was conducted by Elder O. Haun, of McGregor, assisted by Elder F. O. Benedict, of Applegate, both of the Latter Day Saints' denomination, also by Rev. Nixon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Among the relatives and friends from outside present at the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barr, Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Emerick, of Richmondville; James Barr and Mr. and Mrs. Hooper, of Deckerville; Mrs. McKay, of Lindsay, Ontario; Mrs. Wilkie, of Shepherd, Michigan; Mrs. Provost and Ethel Provost, of Sandusky; Arthur and Andrew Barr, of Detroit; Mr. McLennen, of Buffalo, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Green, of Charleston.

RUSSELL.—Francis M. Russell was born January 8, 1848, at Odessa, Ionia County, Michigan. Was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ about the year 1881, by Ethan A. Shelly, at Elm, Mason County, Michigan, and up to his departing this life was faithful to his covenant with God, being loved and esteemed by all who knew him. On August 2, 1870, he was united in marriage to Eunice M. Ewer, at Odessa, Michigan. Soon after this union they moved to Sherman, Michigan, where they resided twenty-five years. Thence to Marshfield, Wisconsin, where they lived nine years, and in 1904 emigrating to Humansville, Polk County, Missouri, where they have lived until he was overtaken by the Pale Reaper on the evening of August 30, 1910, being found dead in his chair after coming in from his work. To them were born four children, three of whom with the wife and mother survive to mourn the loss of a kind and loving father and husband. The children are: Leonard J., of Crandon, Wisconsin; Laura A. Grovenburgh, Fountain, Michigan; and Victoria M. Gulmbo, Fountain, Michigan. Brother Russell will be remembered by many of God's servants who have labored in this part of God's vineyard as one who made many sacrifices to get the angel's message before his neighbor. Sermon at the residence, September 4, at 2.30 p. m., by Elder C. J. Peters; interment at Humansville. May his ashes rest in peace until the resurrection of the just.

HARRINGTON.—Elder Edgar Harrington died August 3, 1910, at Independence, Missouri. He was born at Millbrook, near Southhampton, England, March 15, 1832; was married to Harriet Randall, of Westminster, England, June 4, 1854. He and family left his native land for Canada, in July of 1869, locating at London, Ontario. Here he heard the angel's message and accepted it in 1816. He was ordained an elder and elected president of the London Branch. In 1884 he removed to Armstrong, Kansas, and acted for several terms of office as president of the Armstrong Branch. Lastly he moved to Independence, Missouri, in August of 1903, where his beloved companion passed into the great beyond not long afterwards, departing this life February 9, 1905. He leaves five sons and three daughters. He was sick but a short time, and bore his sufferings patiently. He passed away peacefully, retaining the possession of his faculties. Services at the Stone Church, and sermon by J. Arthur Gillen.

The Government Irrigated Homestead Lands of the Big Horn Basin and the Yellowstone Valley are to-day the garden spots of the country. Several farms are now ready to homestead, and the Government Surveyors are laying out more new farms for new settlers who are lucky enough to get on the ground in time to get the choice of these new locations. Our new literature just from the press tells how you can homestead these lands and repay the Government the actual cost of the water right in ten yearly payments without interest.

CAREY ACT LANDS. Several thousand acres of Carey Act lands just open to entry—only thirty days' residence required. The settler buys these lands from the State and the perpetual water right from the irrigation company. Long time given to settlers to pay for these lands and water rights. SHORT SERMONS ON FAITH.

ON THE ROAD FROM BETHANY TO JERUSALEM.

A little group of men are walking along the road from Bethany to Jerusalem. Presently their leader, a man of striking presence and personality, discovers a fig tree at a distance; and being hungry, he leads his followers thither, that perchance they may stay their hunger with fresh, ripe figs.

When they reach the tree they discover that it is covered with leaves, but barren of figs. Like some Christians, it is profuse with promises, but empty of good deeds. However, the fig tree is to be pardoned, for it is not yet the time of year when figs are to be gathered.

But to our surprise this man proceeds to curse the fig tree, saying, "No men eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever."

Who is this that thus curses the tree? Is it some fanatic who thinks that trees must bear fruit for him out of season? Is it some ill-tempered churl who flies into a passion when his wishes are disappointed?

We must wait until another day for our answer. Again it is morning, and again the same men travel the same road. As they pass the fig tree they discover that it is indeed dead, having dried up from the roots.

They gather around it, filled with awe and consternation. Clearly the individual who cursed the fig tree is one with whom rest the issues of life.

Having thus attracted their attention and riveted their interest in a way that they will never forget, their leader delivers the message that he has in mind; a single terse but all important sentence, "Have faith in God."

This is no fanatic. This is the Son of God, and he is laying down a great foundation principle upon which they are to build. The lesson that he taught them is no less important for us to consider. Without faith it is impossible to please God. Without faith we can not engage ourselves in the work of God, or even work out our own salvation.

Many are hesitating to-day to do their whole duty. They hesitate because they do not have absolute confidence that God will do all that he has promised. They should remember the lesson that was taught on the road from Bethany to Jerusalem.

THE TEACHING OF ALMA UPON THE HILL ONIDAH.

Jesus did not ask his followers to have a faith not based upon facts. Prior to this exhortation to have faith in God, and afterward, he explained to them the character and purposes of God sufficiently that they might know that their faith was not without foundation. Though surrounded by mysteries and oft called to walk by faith and not by sight, they knew that the faith by which they walked into hitherto impenetrable darkness was a faith well founded upon eternal verities.

Faith is something that grows and increases, and its growth may be encouraged by those who have it, even in the least degree, otherwise the exhortation to have faith would be wasted.

Mindful of this, Alma in the course of his ministry delivered a very interesting discourse of faith. Remember that he was talking to a people who were penitent and had begun to have faith in God. To them he said:

Now as I said concerning faith—that it was not a perfect knowledge, even so it is with my words. Ye have not known of a perfect knowledge. But behold, if ye will avail yourselves of a perfect knowledge, otherwise the exhortation to have faith would be wasted. Mindful of this, Alma in the course of his ministry delivered a very interesting discourse of faith. Remember that he was talking to a people who were penitent and had begun to have faith in God. To them he said: Now as I said concerning faith—that it was not a perfect knowledge, even so it is with my words. Ye have not known of a perfect knowledge. But behold, if ye will avail yourselves of a perfect knowledge, otherwise the exhortation to have faith would be wasted.

Now if ye give place, that a seed may be planted in your heart, behold, if it be a true seed, or a good seed, if ye do not cast it out by your unbelief, that ye will resist the Spirit of the Lord, behold, it will begin to swell within your breasts; and when you feel these swelling motions, ye will begin to say within yourselves, it must needs be that this is a good seed, or that the word is good, for it beginneth to enlarge my soul; yea, it beginneth to enlighten my understanding; yea, and it beginneth to be delicious to me. Now behold, would not this increase your faith? I say unto you, Yea; nevertheless it hath not grown up to a perfect knowledge. But behold, as the seed swelleth, and sprouteth, and beginneth to grow, then ye must needs say, that the seed is good; for behold it swelleth, and sprouteth, and beginneth to grow. And now behold, are ye sure that this is a good seed? I say unto you, Yea; for every seed bringeth forth unto its own likeness; therefore, if a seed groweth, it is good, but if it groweth not, behold, it is not good; therefore it is cast away. And now, behold, because ye have tried the experiment, and planted the seed, and it swelleth, and sprouteth, and beginneth to grow, ye must needs know that the seed is good.—Book of Mormon, Alma 139-149; com. ed. 16: 22, 23; a. ed. 16: 149-159.

In comparing the word of God, when received in faith, to a seed that is planted in good ground, Alma used a striking and true illustration.

The seed of the humblest stalk of wheat contains a secret that more than one scientist would give years of his life to be able to understand and explain. That secret is the secret of life. In like manner the word of God contains the secret of eternal life.

A seed may be carried across oceans and continents, and when planted in new soil, it will grow and bear the same old fruit. There are olive trees growing in southern California to-day whose ancestors grew in sunny Spain. Catholic priests carried the seed across the ocean and planted it hundreds of years ago. The seed grew just as readily as it would have grown in the soil of old Jerusalem. The word of God, when planted in good and honest hearts to-day, in the United States of America, or elsewhere, will grow just as readily as it grew in the hearts of the apostles in Jerusalem so many centuries ago.

A seed contains power in proportion to its bulk greater than that contained in dynamite. A tiny seed, unsuspected and unobserved, lodges between two big bowlders. It takes root, springs up and becomes a tree, and quietly shoulders the rocks aside and topples them over.

We have before us a picture taken in a German cemetery. It is said that a certain German countess was an unbeliever. Not content with preaching the doctrine of doubt during life, she desired to preach it in death. And in harmony with her directions she was buried in an old burying ground in Hanover, and her grave was encased in slabs of granite, a slab at either side and at either end, and a giant slab covering all. These slabs were bound together with iron rods. And on the tombstone was inscribed in German, "This for ever bought grave must never be opened."

Here was infidelity's challenge to divinity. And a little seed was the means of bringing it to naught. Lodging in the crevices of the rocks it grew out between the upper slab and the lower stone and became a great tree. And as it grew it burst the iron bands and crowded the rocks to either side.

There is great power in a little seed, and there is great power in the word of God when received in faith; power even to open graves, in due time.

To our mind the discourse of Alma on faith is worthy of careful study. It will encourage those who are inclined to be doubtful and disheartened. And it will point out to them their line of duty in relation to the principle of faith.

ANOTHER BOOK ON "MORMONISM."

Another exposé of Mormonism has been launched upon a long-suffering public. This work is entitled Mormonism Against Itself, published by our friends of the Christian Standard, Cincinnati, Ohio. It has 321 pages and sells for one dollar.

It is a most fearsome thing. This is the way it is advertised in "Our Reading Table," the Christian Standard, September 10, 1910. Listen:

"The author completely demolishes the Book of Mormon as inspired of God. He flays the hide off of Joe Smith jr., and tears every bone out of his body, and lays his heart on the operating table, as a true prophet of God."

We learn from the above that after all this tearing and flaying it is the heart of a true prophet of God that goes onto the dissecting table. Joseph Smith was said to be ignorant; his critics know how to use language.

The bloodthirsty author of all this carnage is Samuel Traum. If all that is said about him is true he might well be termed Bloody Traum. But possibly the language of our Christian brethren is to be taken figuratively, as they take the Bible. Time was, however, when they tried their best to make it literal.

The Columbian Encyclopedia says: "March 22, 1832, a mob of Methodists, Baptists, Disciples, and miscellaneous zealots broke into the prophet's house, tore him from his wife's arms . . . and tarred and feathered him."

In these days of peace, when the Saints are more firmly established and better understood, and can claim and receive the protection of the law, our Disciple brethren use printer's ink; but we can not forget that their original choice was tar.

Some years ago Davis H. Bays came out with a book on Doctrines and Dogmas of Mormonism. Our friends hailed him as "a child of Providence." In fact the Christian or "Campbellite" Church has been acting as wet nurse for these children of Providence for many years. But there has been a fearful mortality among infants.

Bays died, and his book now reposes unforgotten on the dusty shelves of dusty Christian ministers. How is it with the church? One of his first public attacks was made at Little Sioux, Iowa. One week ago yesterday between four and five thousand people attended an enthusiastic Latter Day Saint camp meeting at Little Sioux. When we mentioned the name of Bays, incidentally, in a sermon, they looked at each other in an inquiring manner, as much as to say, "Who is this man Bays?" At the close of this camp meeting three Iowa towns, Denison, Magnolia, and Missouri Valley, appeared by representatives and competed for the privilege of entertaining the next encampment of Saints from the Little Sioux and Gallands Grove Districts. Each town offered one hundred dollars in cash, free use of parks, free lodging for invited ministers and their families, and other inducements.

Presently this man Traum will die or lapse into obscurity, together with his book. And then the particular providence (?) that has produced these children in the past will travail again. But the work of God will move right on. In the meantime this book is of passing interest to those who must meet such attacks, and we expect ere long to publish a more extended review.

TRACTS WANTED.

Some years ago a certain Doctor Wyl, writing in the interest of the Anti-Mormon League among certain Christian denominations, published a tract against Mormonism, and in denunciation of Joseph Smith and Utah polygamy. In that tract Doctor Wyl published a letter which he received from Dr. William Law, then living somewhere in middle eastern Iowa, in answer to one written him by Doctor Wyl, inquiring with reference to his knowledge of events transpiring in Nauvoo, just before and at the time of the death of the Martyr. We would like to secure a copy of this tract if possible, having lost a copy we had by the fire in the Herald Office.

Also some time before 1882, a tract bearing the title, "Why we believe in plural marriage," was written by Helen Mar Whitney, defending the practice of plural marriage in Utah, she being with the dominant church there. A subsequent tract was written by the same party along about 1882, upon the same subject. We would like copies of each of these tracts if we can procure them.

Not long after the removal of the Herald Office from Plano to Lamoni, Pres. Joseph Smith wrote a tract, reviewing one written by a Mr. Patterson, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in which the author revamped the Spalding Manuscript Story as the origin of the Book of Mormon, adopting as the basis of his theory the story of the Spalding Manuscript as used by Dr. J. P. Hurlbut and E. D. Howe in their book, Mormonism Exposed, published in 1834. President Smith has lost his copy of this review written by him and finds it essential to secure one or two copies if he can. Anyone who has either of these tracts and will inform President Smith of the fact, he will be pleased to negotiate with him for such tract.

We think the tract by Doctor Wyl was published by the Tribune Office, of Salt Lake City, but are not quite sure. Helen Mar Whitney's tract was published by one of the publishing departments in Salt Lake City, we presume. Anyone who can give President Smith any information concerning all or any one of these tracts, will confer a favor upon President Smith, who finds it necessary to secure a copy for his files. Address Pres. Joseph Smith, 1214 West Short street, Independence, Missouri.

CLUB RATES FOR "EXPONENT."

The official organ of the General Sunday School Association, The Exponent, is certainly a bargain at fifty cents a year, but the Sunday school executive board has decided to give club rates to schools as an inducement to order the magazine for the use of their teachers and officers. This should popularize the paper and place it on a permanent financial basis.

Why not order half a dozen or more copies and thus make your "helps" complete. You will get a bigger return in better prepared and more enthusiastic teachers. And what is that worth to your children? The Exponent is a 24-page monthly magazine, containing seven departments, each in charge of an experienced worker, viz: Editorial, Correspondence, Home, Library, Normal (Religio-Sunday school), and valuable information on the lessons of the Quarterly in the Primary and Lessons departments. The club rates are: Four to six Exponents to one address postpaid, 40 cents each per year; seven or more to one address, 35 cents each per year. Order from Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Elder John Shippy died September 25, 1910, at his home in Lamoni, Iowa. He was born January 26, 1823. He was an elder in the old church. He joined the Reorganization in the summer of 1860, and on October 6, the same year, was ordained to the office of apostle and was a member of the Quorum of Twelve until the spring of 1868.

Saints should remember that next Sunday, the first Sunday in October, is College Day. Collections should be taken up in all branches for the benefit of the college.

October 2 is "rally day" at the Central Church, Kansas City. Their program is as follows: Sermon by Elder F. M. Smith at 11 a. m.; an informal meeting from 2.30 to 4 p. m.; communion service at 6, and a union service of church, Sunday school, and Religio, at 7.45, with speeches from representatives of each organization.

A father of a family once said that, with God's help, he was not going to leave his children with the handicap of wealth,—and he was a man who could easily have made a fortune, and who declined at least one conspicuous opportunity to do so. He held to his resolve, and died leaving little to his children but a name that stood for Christian character and service.

THE SPICE OF LIFE.

Life's like an inn, where travelers stay.
Some only breakfast, and away.
Others to dinner stay, and are well fed.
The oldest only sup and go to bed.
Long is the bill to him who lingers out the day.
He that goes the soonest has the least to pay.

"Ah, sir, we do enjoy your sermons," remarked an old lady to a new curate. "They are so instructive. We never knew what sin was until you came to the parish."—The Sacred Heart Review.

FOUND OUT.—"Would you like to hear a secret involving Mrs. Nextdoor in a dreadful scandal?"

"Yes; oh, yes! Tell it to me!"

"I don't know any such secret. You certainly have got a mean disposition."—Punch.

We clip the following for the benefit of those who doubt the power of the press:

"Owing to the overcrowded conditions of our columns, a number of births and deaths are unavoidably delayed."

SCIENCE AND THE BOOK OF MORMON AGREE.

"And now I have told you before it come to pass, that, when it is come to pass, ye might believe." (John 14: 29.)

The history of the aborigine of America came to us in the year 1830 in the form of the Book of Mormon, giving us an account of a prehistoric people that flourished on this land for about twenty-six hundred years. It gave us an account of their origin, their history and religious worship, their wars, of the civilization that obtained among them, and an account of a personal appearance of the Christ unto them.

It locates for us the ruins of a number of their cities and strongholds, and also tells us of the use of the domestic animals among them.

A great many of these things were denied and ridiculed at the time, but we are pleased to notice that subsequent discoveries have borne record to the truthfulness of the book.

The Book of Mormon tells us of a vanished race, of which the American Indian is only a degenerate remnant. It tells us that the oldest civilization had its origin in Central America, and that the people came here from the tower of Babel at the confounding of the languages, that the later civilization came from Jerusalem in the days of King Zedekiah, about six hundred years before Christ.

Recent discoveries have testified to the truthfulness of this account given in the book published so long since. Lying before me as I write is a copy of the Los Angeles Examiner for Sunday, April 17, 1910, from which I extract the following: "The identity of the powerful race which built the wonderful cities of Yucatan and Central America—cities now buried under a mass of tropical vegetation—has never really been settled. Among the most amazing of these cities is that of Palenque, and the most astonishing of the ruins here is what is known as the Altar or Tablet of the Cross. . . . The symbol itself is found in every nation of the world, and ruined temples that crumbled hundreds of years before Christ, appear to bear it. The Cross of Palenque more closely resembles that so familiar to Christians than any other. . . . Another thing that the expedition wants to classify are certain hieroglyphs or picture writings at Palenque and Chichen-Itza, which was the holy city of the people who built the great monuments. These characters have a remarkable resemblance to the most ancient hieroglyphs of Egypt in the prevalence of the serpent symbol in the art of both races, and the striking similarity in their features and costumes, especially their headdresses. Because of this similarity many scientists have believed that there was communication between Egypt and Central America many centuries ago, and that this country is, in fact, the oldest world."

This not only corroborates the Book of Mormon regarding their knowledge of the Christ and the fact that he must die on the cross for the sins of the world, as declared to them by their prophets, but it also bears it out in the fact that the ancient American and the Egyptian originated in the same land, i. e., they both came from the tower of Babel and, therefore, would naturally resemble each other, both in the manner of dress and writing. [According to the Book of Mormon, Lehi and his sons were versed in Egyptian learning, as a result of the sojourn of their ancestors in Egypt. So that the later civilization brought Egyptian culture direct to America.—EDITORS.]

Another point of interest is that the Book of Mormon made mention of the horse among the aborigines of this country, and for a number of years it was ridiculed on that account, the objector insisting that the horse was not known on the American Continent prior to its discovery by Columbus, and some of the ignorant still hold to that idea; but we again quote from the article previously mentioned, where we have this remarkable statement: "In the odd colored figure in the right of the first page, one of the frescoes from Palenque, the figure, probably a god, is seen riding on a horse in quite circus fashion. This furnishes still another mystery. The Palenque ruins were crumbling when the Spaniards swept down on the Aztecs. The horse was unknown to the Indians and the terror the Spaniards created on their steeds was one of their best weapons. Yet the horse is seen often in these immeasurable ancient pictures."

The mere fact that the horse is pictured in the ancient ruins is a fact that it existed just as the Book of Mormon says it did, and the discoveries made by scientists confirm the truthfulness of the record.

The apostle declared: "He hath not left himself without witnesses." They who once sought to overthrow the work are our witnesses that it is true. The Lord has said, "You shall go in and out and find pasture," and surely as he has told us it has been fulfilled.

In the interest of truth,

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

Hymns and Poems

Selected and Original

A Two-Sided View.

You may rail at the wicked old world to-day,
You may talk of its vice and crime;
You may say that its sins grow worse each day,
That its goodness has passed with time;
You may rage at the taxes and rave at the trusts,
And picture the nation's fall,
But the weary old world with all its woe
Is a pretty good place after all.

For with all the shadows along the way,
There's many a sunny spot,
And for every man who breaks the law
There are ten who break it not.
There are noble souls in the world to-day,
There's a prayer for every curse;
And in spite of want and sin and wrong,
The old world might be worse.

For the same sun shines in the sky above,
* And the soft rain falls below;
And earth her harvest and fruitage yields,
And the summer breezes blow;
And there still are men who strive for right,
Who hinder their brothers' fall;
And the weary old world with all its woe
Is a pretty good place after all.

GRACE BAUGHMAN.

Washing.

As we by water wash away
Uncleanness from our flesh,
And sometimes, often in a day,
Ourselves are fain to wash—
So ev'ry day thoughts, words or deeds
The soul do sully so,
That often every day she needs
Unto her cleanser go.

Our sins purgation doth require—
Sometimes a flood of tears;
Sometimes the painful, purging fire
Of torments, griefs or fears.
And all this cleansing will be lost
When we our best shall do,
Unless we by the Holy Ghost
May be baptized, too.

Lord, by thy sanctifying Spirit,
And through my faith in thee,
Made acceptable by thy merit,
Purge, wash and cleanse thou me.
And as this water purifies
My body's outward blots,
So cleanse thou, by thy blood, likewise,
My soul's internal spots.

And since this useful element
Thou freely dost afford,
In using it let me present
Due thanks to thee, O Lord;
Though cheap and mean it be,
And do not those requests despise
Which I prefer to thee.
—(Selected by Joseph Arber.)

The Unseen Lord.

[Although Dr. Ray Palmer will always be best remembered as the author of the great hymn, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," he did not regard that product of his youth as his best piece of work in hymnody, but preferred this, which was written much later. It was the outgrowth of a sermon that he was preparing in 1858 for his people at Albany, on the text, 1 Peter 1:8. It was published in a local periodical in the same year. It belongs to the class of hymns of devotion and it is not difficult to believe that its author was heard repeating the last stanza just before he died.]

Jesus, these eyes have never seen
That radiant form of thine;
The veil of sense hangs dark between
Thy blessed face and mine.

I see thee not, I hear thee not,
Yet art thou oft with me;
And earth hath ne'er so dear a spot
As where I meet with thee.

Like some bright dream that comes unsought,
When slumbers o'er me roll,
Thine image ever fills my thought,
And charms my ravished soul.

Yet though I have not seen, and still Must rest in faith alone,
I love thee, dearest Lord, and will,
Unseen, but not unknown.

When death these mortal eyes shall seal,
And still this throbbing heart,
The rending veil shall thee reveal,
All-glorious as thou art.

THE INSPIRATION OF GOD.

Webster defines inspiration to mean "a supernatural, divine influence on the mind." Thus, when we speak of inspiration, it is that which has to do with the divine power reflected upon human thought or intelligence. And thus we find the inspired Paul writing: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." And Peter also writes that "holy men of God spake as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost." Right in this connection we wish to couple a few lines from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 68, and part of paragraph 1, given November, 1831, through Joseph Smith, the servant and prophet of the Lord, saying:

My servant, Orson Hyde, was called by his ordinance, to proclaim the everlasting gospel, by the Spirit of the living God, . . . in the congregations of the wicked, in their synagogues, reasoning with, and expounding all scriptures unto them. And, behold, and lo, this is an ensample unto all those who were ordained unto this priesthood, whose mission is appointed unto them . . . that they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost; and whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost, shall be scripture; shall be the will of the Lord; shall be the mind of the Lord; shall be the word of the Lord; shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation: behold, this is the promise of the Lord unto you, O ye my servants: wherefore, be of good cheer, and do not fear, for I, the Lord, am with you, and will stand by you; and ye shall bear record of me, even Jesus Christ, that I am the Son of the living God, that I was, that I am, and that I am to come.

Now, here the fact is strikingly held out that God and Christ change not, and for that reason they will continue to work along the same lines, precisely as they have in Bible times, and ever will until the end of the world. Still ready to give scripture, and to communicate either by dream, vision, angel, gifts of tongues, or prophecy, giving precept upon precept, line upon line, here a little and there a little. Why not believe in an inspired ministry just as well now as in Bible times? Blind unbelief among the masses does not make inspiration any the less near or real to-day. Popular opinion in the days of the early Christian church did not alter the fact that our heavenly Father did raise up men to speak and write for him as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost, as well as he did a Moses in the long, long ago. What difference does it make to the Lord if a prophet has not been heard for say a thousand years, or more. Even that is but a day with the Lord.

Ancient Israel had not always the prophets of God among them, else why the pronouncement, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord.—Amos 8: 11.

To the mind of the writer it is evident that the late C. H. Spurgeon, an eminent Baptist preacher, heartily believed in the inspiration of God for this present age, for he said,

My heart exults and my eyes flash with the thought that very likely I shall live to see the outpouring of the Spirit; when the sons and daughters of God again shall prophesy, and the young men shall see visions, and old men shall dream dreams.—History Series Sermons, p. 129.

Why not have faith in these things now? With the Old Testament Scriptures, and all the inspired scriptures of the New Testament, the first Christians believed and enjoyed these supernatural gifts or endowments of the Holy Spirit. And why can not we be believing in them, too? It seems as though the words of the great John Wesley are having their fulfillment quite largely right now. We hereby quote from him:

Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, in the third century, gives an account of his time, which in reading one would be apt to imagine was concerning the present century, so totally void of true religion that the churches of Africa were exactly like the churches of England to-day. . . . a Christian nation, a Christian city (according to the ancient pattern) was no longer to be found. Has the case altered since the Reformation? How little are any of those Reformations better than the heathen!

Back to the inspiration of God let us get. That ought to be good enough, and we believe that there is inspiration in that idea, and of the proper sort.

With infinite pleasure and satisfaction, in concluding, we present the following from the pen of Joseph Smith himself, and leave the reader to draw his own conclusions in the premises:

In this manner did the Lord continue to give us instructions from time to time, concerning the duties which now devolved upon us, and among many other things of the kind, we obtained of him the following, by the spirit of prophecy and revelation; which not only gave us much information, but also pointed out to us the exact day upon which, according to his will and commandment, we should proceed to organize his church once again here upon the earth.—Church History, vol. 1, p. 67.

THE EVANGELIZATION OF THE WORLD.—PART 3.

The Book of Mormon has been translated into seventeen languages by the Brighamites. The New York Press states: "The Salvation Army is established in fifty-two countries."

The Encyclopedia of Missions, by Dwight, Tupper and Bliss, 1904, gives the following, under the subject, "Roman Catholic foreign missions:"

It is impossible to furnish satisfactory figures as to the whole number of missionaries, because of the different views people may take as to what is understood by missionary countries and by missionaries. In the popular sense, those are missionaries who have gone to distant regions, and especially to heathen countries for the purpose of spreading the faith among unbelievers.

Taking these distinctions into consideration we may safely assert that there are at least 15,000 priests and others dedicated to the religious life, 5,000 teaching brothers, and 45,000 sisters laboring as missionaries, not to speak of the priests, brothers and sisters native to the regions where they work, catechists and others who make up the personnel of a mission, and the laborers among the Oriental Rites. Probably the estimate is much too small, but we may conclude that there are in the field about 65,000 missionaries of the Roman Catholic Church.

Under "Protestant missions" we find this note:

Non-Christian nations will one day know their peculiar indebtedness to missionaries whose laborious scholarship brought the Holy Scriptures within their reach.

This encyclopedia gives a list of 540 languages and dialects into which the Holy Scriptures have been translated, and states that scholars and missionaries are working on other translations.

In a statistical table of the operations of Protestant missionary societies in non-Christian lands, is the following note:

All Christendom is home to the Christian. To him the non-Christian lands, alone, are foreign lands. The statistics of "foreign missions" given in the following tables, therefore, relate to missionary work in non-Christian lands.

The figures in the table referred to give the total number of missionaries, men and women, 13,371, and the total number of native workers, men and women, 69,670. The grand total is 83,041. These figures do not include home missions, or pastorates in Christian lands. The Protestant missions to the Jews not included in the above statistics have 126 missionaries and 677 unordained workers.

The World Almanac, for 1909, states the number of inhabitants in the world at the present time is 1,522,700,000.

This number is distributed among the five races about as follows: Caucasians, 600 millions; Mongolians, 589 millions; Ethiopians, 185 millions; Americans, 11 millions; Malays, 55 millions.

The following estimates, by M. Fournier de Flaix, of the number of followers in the religious organizations of the world, are the latest that have been made by a competent authority:

5. Coptic Church	120,000
6. Armenian Church	1,690,000
7. Nestorians	80,000
8. Jacobites	70,000
Total	477,080,158

Frederick J. Haskin, writing in the Kansas City Journal, November 10, 1909, says:

The Lutheran Church in the United States now has nearly two and a quarter million communicants. In the sixteenth year period of religious activity recently reviewed by the census bureau beginning with 1890, it was found that the Lutheran Church was the only one of four leading Protestant bodies which had a greater relative membership at the close of the period than it had at the beginning. The Baptists, the Methodists and the Presbyterians had a smaller percentage of the total church membership in the United States in 1906 than they had in 1890. Only the Lutherans were able to hold their relative positions among the "big four" Protestant bodies. They advanced as much from their position in 1890 as the Baptists and Presbyterians went back. Scandinavian immigration was largely responsible for this growth, as Southern Europe immigration is responsible for Catholic growth.

It is interesting to note that there are only three important Protestant denominations which held a larger percentage of the total church membership of the United States in 1906 than they held in 1890. These three are the Disciples of Christ, the Lutherans, and the Protestant Episcopal Church. The fight for primacy in relative growth has been a close one between the Disciples and the Lutherans. Gauged by communicant membership the Disciples stand a little ahead of the Lutherans. In the sixteen year period the Disciples had a growth in membership amounting to 78.2 per cent. The increase enjoyed by the Lutherans amounted to 71.6 per cent, while that shown by the Protestant Episcopal Church was 66.7 per cent. No other principal Protestant church showed an increase above 56.4 per cent.

The reason the Protestant churches have found it so hard to hold their relative position as compared with the whole body of Christian people is because of the phenomenal growth of the Catholic Church. During the sixteen years that organization made a gain in membership amounting to more than 93 per cent. Added to this is the growth of Christian Science, Spiritualism, and other like sects, which recruit their ranks from Protestant soil in far greater proportion than from Catholic sources. Only five Protestant bodies have been able to show as great a relative proportion of the total church membership of the United States at the close of the sixteen year period as they showed in 1890, and of these only the Disciples, the Lutherans, and the Episcopalians advanced. The others merely held their own.

It is a strange coincidence that the two church bodies which show the greatest growth should show the opposite extremes of subdivision. The Disciples of Christ are divided into only two bodies, while the Lutherans are separated into twenty-four distinct and independent organizations. Furthermore, the Disciples represent the purely congregational form of government, while the Lutherans approximate the Presbyterian form of church policy. The third of the advancing bodies represents the third form of church government—the episcopal form. Likewise, in doctrinal matters these three church bodies represent the three extremes of interpretation. It would appear, therefore, that their relative advantage can be ascribed neither to doctrine nor to system of government, but rather to the missionary zeal of those who constitute the several bodies. Neither do the statistics point out the advantage or the disadvantage of subdivision.

CREEDS.	NUMBER OF FOLLOWERS.
1. Christianity	477,080,158
2. Worship of Ancestors and Confucianism ..	256,000,000
3. Hinduism	190,000,000
4. Mohammedanism	176,834,372
5. Buddhism	147,900,000
6. Taoism	43,000,000
7. Shintoism	14,000,000
8. Judaism	7,186,000
9. Polytheism	117,681,669
Total	1,429,482,199

Christianity is subdivided as follows:

CHURCHES.	TOTAL FOLLOWERS.
1. Catholics	230,866,533
2. Protestant	143,237,625
3. Orthodox Greek Church	98,016,000
4. Church of Abyssinia	3,000,000

It is not only in the number of communicants that the Lutherans, Disciples and Protestant Episcopal churches take leadership of all Protestant bodies, but also in the increase of congregations, church buildings, and the value of church property.

The complaint of the Protestant world to-day is that there are too few men in the church. Less than forty out of every hundred Protestant church members are men. But this complaint does not lie with such force against the Lutheran Church as a whole. More than forty-six out of each hundred of its members are men. No other Protestant denomination except the Quakers shows as great a proportion of male communicants as the Lutherans. The Baptists have less than thirty-nine male communicants out of each hundred members, the Methodists less than thirty-nine, the Presbyterians less than thirty-eight, the Episcopalians less than thirty-six, and the Reformed Church less than forty-three. In the Catholic Church the number of men is only a fraction of one per cent under the number of women.

A good summary of the present conditions of foreign missions is given in The Central Baptist, July 15, 1909, by J. C. Armstrong, under the topic of "Strong heathen religions."

By the providence of God, the whole world is now open to the missionary. A hundred years ago there were almost none who desired to go to foreign fields. There was hardly a place open to missionaries. Thus there were two barriers, apparently insuperable, to carrying out the great commission. There was indifference if not real opposition in the home land, and there were closed doors in the foreign land; but within a century there has been more change in the world's religious than in its political geography. The Spirit of God has been working at the same time on the hearts of both Peter and Cornelius. While he was persuading Peter to go, he was inducing Cornelius to send for him. In modern times the mission spirit was created just as the fields were made accessible.

VIEWING THE TASK.

At length we can survey the difficulties which are to be overcome in heathen lands. This is an advantage. To be sure, sin is the force which is to be confronted and conquered in all countries, but the heathen are more or less fortified in their religious beliefs, and these religions are to be displaced. The people will not change their faith easily. It is a slow and tedious task to prove to them that we have something better to offer, and to induce them to yield a manner of belief that has become a part of their souls. In some sense we may measure the undertaking by counting the strength of the great heathen religions. In estimating the strength of one of these religions we may count its adherents, but we must especially estimate the tenacity with which it is held. With respect to their followings, here are four of these great religions—Confucianism, Hinduism, Mohammedanism and Buddhism. Some of them are strictly religious, while others are only ethical. Mohammedanism is not distinctively heathen, and yet so far as the work of missions is concerned, it may be classed with the heathen religions.

CONFUCIANISM.

Confucius lived and died in China five hundred years before Christ. His teachings contain nothing about a supreme being or a future life, and Confucianism is therefore not strictly a religion, but it answers for one in the face of a missionary. Aside from Jesus Christ, Confucius has a larger following than any other teacher the world has known. Probably seven eighths of the Chinese are adherents of this faith. In some respects they are more easily reached than those of any other faith. Confucianism has not been propagated among other people, but has a very strong hold upon the Chinese.

BUDDHISM.

Buddhism sprang into existence very nearly at the same time that Confucianism originated. It began in India and was a sort of revival of or protest against Hinduism. It greatly modified Hinduism, but could not displace it. It was missionary in its spirit and extended southward to some extent and swept northward through China and Japan. It is estimated to have a following of 250,000,000. With its priesthood, its temples, its books, and its hopes for the future, it presents a formidable front to those who preach the gospel. It has a number of sects, but usually these get along harmoniously with each other as well as with Confucianism.

HINDUISM.

This is the original and subtle religion of India. It has been very much modified through the centuries by contact with other religions and especially by Buddhism. It teaches transmigration of souls and establishes castes among its followers. Originally monotheistic, it has come to be polytheistic and is heavily loaded with ritualism. The Hindu deals in speculative philosophy and metaphysical thinking. It claims nearly 200,000,000 followers. Recently some of its teachers have sought to engraft the principles of Christianity into the old system, but thus far it has been found practically impossible to put new wine into the old bottles.

MOHAMMEDANISM.

Of these there are about 225,000,000. They occupy North Africa, Arabia and Turkey, besides a large following in India and in China. Mohammedans are not strictly heathen, since they worship our God. Christians, Mohammedans and Jews are theists. All of them accept the Old Testament and the worship of Jehovah, but when it comes to propagating Christianity, there is not a more difficult field in the world than among Mohammedan people. They are imbued with the wild Arab blood and with the fanaticism of their remarkable leader. Thus far missions have made very slow progress among them, and it seems that this will be the last and hardest field for those who are seeking to win the world to faith in Jesus Christ.

THE MAGNIFICENT BATTLE.

There are places in the old country which are spoken of as the world's battlefields. They are the places where hostile governments border on each other and where their contending armies would most likely meet, but there is no struggle on earth so significant and so momentous as that which goes on in silence between the cross and these human religions. The weapons are bloodless, the spirit is love, the issues are eternal. The conflict will not end in a day or in a century. The promise of our King is that some day and in some way the earth is to be filled with the knowledge of God, and the deserts shall be made to blossom. To be a partner in such a work and to have a larger share in it ought to be the ambition of everyone who professes loyalty to our Sovereign.

The Central Christian Advocate, October 20, 1909, gives the subject attention by saying:

Conditions in Islam have not as yet quieted down. It may be of interest in this connection to note the number and distribution of these believers in Mohammed. The total Islamic population of the world is placed at 223,985,780 out of 1,500,000,000 total population. These are distributed by continents as follows: Australia, 18,000; America, 66,000; Europe, 13,- 000,000; Africa, nearly 53,000,000; Asia, over 158,000,000; Of these 160,000,000 are under Christian governments—England naturally in the lead with over 83,000,000 in her vast empire. Certainly there is here a force to reckon with in the efforts to evangelize the world—for of all religions none are held with such fanatic zeal of faith and practice.

According to the 105th report of the British Foreign Bible Society, the Bible will soon be printed in every language and dialect known throughout the world. Complete Bibles or portions of the Bible were issued last year in 418 different languages. During the year six new translations were added to the list. Besides these languages, there are complete Bibles or portions of the Scriptures made in embossed type for the blind in thirty-one different languages.

The Central has, also, this editorial:

Some denominations solve their part in the city "problem" by sleeping over it. They sell out the downtown church and put in into a fine plant in the residential district. But that does not solve the "problem." It runs away from it.

Dr. Robert Forbes understands the gentle art of sarcasm, and he puts it in this light:

"What folly! We are sending missionaries to the foreign fields from which the downtown people come, and when God in mercy has simplified our problem by sending the foreigners to our shores. 'No downtown church for sale' should be our motto. Keep the churches which the fathers built, and let a mission be established in which services shall be conducted in the language spoken by the people who live near the church. We have read somewhere of one congregation reduced in numbers, who sold their church because foreigners had settled around it and they gave their money to a foreign missionary society. What folly!

The Catholic Church does not commit such folly. We say, "But the people have moved away." So? Have not more people taken their place? It is not the part of good soldiers to run away from the strategic point of battle.

The Kansas City Post, March 7, 1910, reports as follows:

Union of all churches in Kansas City and the adoption of a system of religious centers, modeled after the public schools of the city, was the sermon theme of Charles Reign Scoville at the Linwood Boulevard Christian Church last night.

He declared that thousands of persons in Kansas City are never reached by Christian teaching because pastors and the different church workers become too much interested in denominational lines.

If such a scheme were carried out all over the country, he said, the saloons would be driven out of America within a year.

"The Savior prayed that his people might be one," he said. "And I say that if this prayer were answered to-night it would be but a short time until that six hundred millions of men who have never heard of him would be brought to the Master.

"There is too little organized church work in Kansas City. With a united church we could have a congregation in every sufficiently large district of the city, much as the ward schools are. In this way we could look after the spiritual needs of the people, just as the public schools look after the intellectual needs.

"Too many churches are moving out into the fashionable districts. Jesus would be displeased with this. There is need of religious instruction in the north end just as much as there is south of Thirty-first street. Out into the highways and byways, say the Scriptures. That means out into the avenues and into the alleys.

"There are thousands of persons in Kansas City no one is trying to reach for God. One pastor thinks an individual is under the ministry of another pastor and lets him alone, while that other pastor is laboring under a similar mistake. With a united and organized church, this condition would be impossible. If the churches would quit their bickerings, their backbiting, their folly, and stand together, with one Lord, one faith, and one baptism, they would soon accomplish the work they were set to do.

"I know a little town that has one thousand population and eight churches, none of them bigger than a wart on a pickle. If these were united into one church, instead of a lot of feeble, sickly denominations, there would be one powerful influence for good in that town. Salaries of seven ministers, janitors' fees, cost of lots and buildings and church millinery could be saved. Out of this saving the one church could be supported comfortably, with enough money left over to carry evangelism to another needy community.

"If the churches would unite in Chicago, in a month there wouldn't be a saloon in that city. With Christian union, the saloon would be driven out of America in a year. The other interests are united, you may be sure. The breweries and distilleries are working together. And against this solid opposition, the church is turning a broken and divided front.

"But you say we don't all see alike? The only thing we have to see alike is to believe in the divinity of Christ, stand alone on the Bible as the only creed and do simply what it commands. Business men get together even if they don't agree exactly as to methods.

"If we preachers don't get together, the laymen of the churches some day are going to get together for us. There is nothing to this talk of an invisible union. Might as well talk of one's invisible husband or invisible wife. Theologians will never bring us together. They are like the six blind men of Hindostan who came away with six different ideas of an elephant.

"As for me, I am willing to unite with any people at any time upon the Bible. I am in favor of taking all the good in all the churches, and there is no reason why the good in all couldn't be blended in one great church."

Doctor Scoville has been conducting a series of revival meetings at the South Side Church for three weeks. More than three hundred persons have been converted.

An idea of the financial expenditures is given in this press item:

The Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church in United States of America (Northern) has an income of $1,347,265, the second largest, the Methodist coming first and the American Board third. Approximately $21,000,000 is given by the Protestant churches of the whole world annually for foreign missions, almost one half from the American churches.

William D. Whitney, the author of The Life and Growth of Language, declares:

There are about 900 languages and 5,000 dialects known. By dialects we mean local forms of language, or branches of a language, where the forms are mainly the same, but differing in minor particulars.

Thus, while the people of Great Britain and Ireland speak the English language, they do not all speak it exactly alike, the peculiarities being either (1) in different pronunciations of certain words, as the Irishman would say "bowld" for "bold," and the Scotchman "bauld"; (2) in different grammatical forms, as in some parts of Scotland and England the plural of "eye" is "ey'en," or "een"; or (3) in the use of different words, or what are known as provincialisms, as the Scotch say for "child," "bairn."

William McAdams, in his Records of Ancient Races, 1887, pages 118-20, quotes Lyell's "Antiquity of Man" and Max Muller's "Comparative Mythology" and relates his own observations which I present in association with our subject:

Linguists to-day do not know any original language. All languages seem to be made up from fragments of others. Even Latin itself, as well as Greek, Sanscrit, Zend, Lithuanian, Slavonic, Gothic and Armenian, are varieties of a common and more ancient type, and no one of them could have been the original from which the others could have been borrowed. They all have a mutual resemblance to, a more ancient language, the Aryan, and those who spoke this unknown parent speech, of which so many ancient tongues were offshoots, must have migrated at a remote era from widely separate regions of the Old World, such as North Asia, Europe and India. Races change much more slowly than language. Some believe that there are from four to six thousand living languages. It is believed by many that the languages of modern Europe are not more than a thousand years old. A popular English scholar has said that probably no one, who has not given himself up especially to the study of Anglo-Saxon, can interpret the documents in which the chronicles and laws of England were written in the days of King Alfred; so that we may be sure that none of the English of the nineteenth century could converse with the subjects of Alfred if the latter could be restored to life.

They who now speak German, if brought into contact with their Teutonic ancestors of the ninth century, would be quite unable to converse with them, and in like manner, the subjects of Charlemagne could not have exchanged ideas with the Goths of Alaric's army, or with the soldiers of Arminius in the days of Augustus Cæsar.

So rapid indeed has been the change in Germany, that the epic poem, called the Nibelungen Lied, so popular and only seven centuries old, can not now be enjoyed, except by the erudite.

Even in Rome, where there had been no permanent intrusion of foreigners, such as the Lombard settlers of German origin on the plains of the Po, the common people of the year 1000 spoke quite a distinct language from that of their Roman ancestors, or their Italian descendants, as is shown by the celebrated chronicle of the monk Benedict, written in such barbarous Latin, and such strange grammatical forms, that it requires a profoundly skilled linguist to decipher it. Strabo informs us that in the limited area of the Caucasus alone, there were spoken at least seventy languages.

In France the Chevalier Pertz has printed a treaty of peace a thousand years old, between Charles the Bald, and King Louis of Germany, dated A. D. 841, in which the German king takes an oath in what was the French tongue of that day, while the French king swears in the German of the same era; and neither of these oaths would now convey a distinct meaning to any but the most learned in those two countries. The documents would have to be translated.

A German colony in Pennsylvania was cut off from frequent communication with Europe for a quarter of a century, by the wars of the French Revolution, between 1792 and 1815; and when the Prince Bernhard traveled among them, a few years after the peace, he found the peasants speaking as they had done in Germany, the century before, retaining a dialect which at home had become obsolete.

Anyone who has heard the Irish and Scotch, and the Welsh, speak English in America, so as to be scarcely understood at all by an Englishman, can imagine how a dialect might, if isolated, soon become a language totally unlike the original. In fact, at this day, in Scotland, Ireland, and even England, an American can hardly understand the native dialects, and his experience there is very similar to that undergone in any other foreign country, with an unknown language.

It is easy to understand why each Indian tribe had a different dialect, and, if separated for some years, would have a different language. We have, ourselves, seen white men in the Rocky Mountains, who, although their parents were Americans, and they had first learned the English language, having spent the main part of their lives among the Indians and French traders, spoke a patois of their own, that was almost wholly unintelligible to us. They had a language of their own. Old trappers, on the frontier, soon acquire a dialect of their own, intermingled with signs and Indian words. Our own knowledge of the Indians has convinced us that no tribe would long sustain a language without interpolations and changes; and we are not at all surprised that each tribe had a different one. They have no literature, no books. Some leading orator, however uncouth in words and manners, would be followed for a while, until another was heard. There is absolutely no guide. The one with the most impressive manner, would convey the meaning quickest.

So we have concluded nothing can be learned, bearing on the origin of the Indian, from his language.

When Latter Day Saints contemplate the magnitude of the task set before the church, in the great commission given to the priesthood in the revelation of September 22, 1832, we are made to realize that it will never be accomplished by any human means or organization. But our Holy Church, with sixty thousand members, working in obedience to God's commands, can achieve the desired result in this generation, which five hundred million people have not reached in nineteen hundred years.

The evangelization of the world must be accomplished by the demonstration of divine power, bestowed on Christ's ministers as promised in the Holy Scriptures. In that way the gospel must be preached, with the full significance and meaning of the words of Jesus: "Whosoever repenteth, and cometh unto me, the same is my church."

The present age is one of progress in many ways. Many questions are being discussed and they are being decided. The religious mind of the present age is active enough, but its activity does not seem to lead to any result. It is like the activity of a locomotive on a frosty morning. A great deal of steam is let-off, and the wheels run around furiously; but they slip on the track, and the train does not get ahead. There is plenty of discussion about religion, but no decision; there is plenty of exertion, but little progress is made. So, at least, it would seem. It is better to go ahead slowly, than to go around and around ever so fast.

Progress in religious knowledge consists in developing and restoring the old faith, not in changing it or adding to it something new. The attempts that are being made to solve religious problems will result in good, because the intellect is strengthened by the exercise, and important discoveries are being made in these channels and knowledge obtained which is of vast importance to mankind.

Thus, like the vain attempts of ancient chemists to discover the "Philosophers' Stone," which they thought would turn everything into gold, resulted in the discovery of many new substances which were of great value to men. But these substances existed before their discovery. So the discussions of these religious questions and theories have developed, no doubt, many true principles, and much important truth in religion has been the result, to say nothing of the general awakening of thought among the great masses of readers. But these principles and truths always existed. Anything which will arouse the minds of the people and lead them to spiritual truth is in that sense commendable.

GRACELAND'S POULTRY DEPARTMENT.

A few months' work in Graceland's new department, poultry, has been very progressive, and we have a department in connection with the college work, as a self-help department, that we can well feel proud of. Although it has not yet been able to give very much employment to student help, the time has arrived and as soon as more houses can be built, the young stock sorted and put into the laying houses, employment can be given to a few more students; and this will start what will be made a great self-help department, in connection with the already established industrial department.

The intentions are to carry between four and six hundred laying hens, this depends upon assistance in constructing more houses, and this will also govern the amount of student help we can employ. With this number of laying hens it will give us a sufficient number of fresh eggs to get a select market for all we have at a fancy price, and make shipment two times a week.

At the present time we have four laying houses 10x18 feet, two pens to the house, well constructed and painted, with yards connected; a small brooder house, feed house, colony houses, five incubators, brooders, trap nests, galvanized feed and water troughs, water fountains, all necessary equipment and stock to the total amount of over nine hundred dollars.

This equipment has been secured through exchanging advertising space in Graceland's poultry journal, Poultry Pointers, donations of stock and eggs from some of the best and largest breeders in different States, and some money, growth of stock, and this first year's work in the new department.

We now have several hundred head of young stock, and among the number are about one hundred and fifty males which we do not need and must dispose of. These are worth more money than would be possible to secure as market poultry. Then, they are more valuable and should be used as breeders, as many could not be purchased for even five dollars each from large breeders. They are nearly full grown and are extra fine, but in order to move them quickly, as we must do, it has been decided to sell them for two dollars each, one or a dozen. This will give our people a chance to secure some good stock cheap, and help the new department at Graceland.

We have the following breeds:

Rose and Single Comb Rhode Island Reds, Rose Comb White Leghorns, Single Comb Buff Orpingtons, Light Brahmas, and Anconas. The first four breeds we have the most of. In Brahmas we have a fine pen that we would sell for twelve dollars, worth nearly as much at market poultry prices. In Anconas have six fine males to sell. These males will be shipped by express as ordered, and the rates are but a little more for three to four than for one. They can be shipped anywhere with safety.

How many will help the department in this way? Many have given and sent us money to help in the building of the new houses needed. Most of these donations have come from the Michigan Saints. To those who have and to those who will help, you are helping a department that will be a great assistant to Graceland, and one that will help many, as the experimental work here is building the journal Poultry Pointers, which promises to be a leader among that class of journals; and the Experimental Poultry Farm is playing a prominent part in building this journal. The proceeds from the journal will be used in the college work. The suscription price is twenty-five cents per year, and at this writing we have about 12,000 subscribers. The publication has already done considerable to help the department, but, with the business, when permanence is established, a bigger income will be made for the department.

With the bright future before the department, with assistance from those who can help and are interested to assist to build the needed buildings at the present time, the sale of the extra stock will place lacking for the popularizing of the flying machine.

Is safety on the way? It can not be doubted. The skill that has made railroad travel luxurious and secure and that has robbed ocean voyages of their terrors will make man's artificial wings as dependable as those of a bird. One of the greatest of the aviators at the Squantum meet told a newspaper man that he was convinced that several of the builders of aeroplanes knew at this very moment how they could produce absolute stability in air craft, but that they preferred at present to make flight seem as difficult as possible for the financial benefit of professional aviators. When the first novelty of the spectacle had worn off, they would begin in earnest to make practical machines for the many.

Whether that is fanciful or not, no one with a spark of imagination can dare to say that we shall not one day cleave the air with serene confidence in the reliability of our ether riding craft. The analogy from every great invention proclaims this truth. Having attained actual flight, human ingenuity will not be content to leave it full of its present hazards. "Must we give in," asked Darius Green, with his famous grin, "that the bluebird 'nd phebe are smarter'n we be?" Not a bit of it. And the fine old creator of Darius has lived long enough to see that we need not.

When the aeroplane has been tamed and trained into docility as well as great speed, what then? Its qualities for war are already admitted; they may be so appallingly fine as to end war. Then its social and practical side must be developed. If it is to rival the automobile in public favor, it must make its carrying capacity equal to that of the motor car, whose strong appeal is its ability to take whole families for delightful tours into the open. As cities are now constructed it is impossible to think of the aeroplane as a vehicle for shopping or afternoon calls; its field must be the broad realms of space, with power to travel immense distances far above the grubbing world.

Less than seven years ago the first successful man-flight in history was made by Wilbur Wright. It covered a distance of 852 feet, and civilization rose to its feet at the marvel. Now we hear without special emotion of voyages of scores of miles. The steamship, the torpedo boat, the carrier pigeon, have all been beaten in speed. Save for the one element of safety the triumph of the aeroplane is complete.

But the great mystery of sustained air flight has been solved. Henceforth comes only the perfecting of the conqueror. At any instant we may expect some genius to flash into view and give mankind what it has longed for since the first human being beheld the birds of the air.—Boston Post.

THE FUTURE OF AIR FLIGHT.

Probably not one of all the thousands, even the least serious-minded, who have been enthralled and delighted with the aerial evolutions at Squantum during the past week but has asked his own intelligence what was to be the future of the great game of air flight; has wondered whether the aeroplane was destined to be a short-lived toy for the amusement of gaping spectators or to become a useful and fascinating factor in the solution of the problem of transportation.

His determination of the question very likely varied with varying circumstances. As he beheld Grahame-White soaring off over the waters of the harbor into the unseen and his beautiful monoplane reappearing to the vision like a huge dragon-fly he doubtless felt that all was well with aviation. But when the machine of some less skillful or fortunate airman fell in a tangled and inglorious heap to the ground, a somewhat radical revision of opinion was visibly necessary. Safety, he must have concluded, was the one tremendously important element still

IN THE HEART OF THINGS; THE MAJESTY OF THE MORNING.

Here we stand upon the earth, enveloped, surrounded, canopied by the narrow horizon of night.

The "fireflies of the skies"—the stars—are blazing and blinking their drowsy torches after an all night vigil.

No hint of sunshine in that dimly star-lit prison cell of a shriveled up world.

No sights or sounds to indicate that the world lives, or ever will live again. All is steeped in the deep repose of the hours just preceding the dawn.

We know that away out there beyond the eastern sky, beyond that point where the seven stars composing the "dipper" swing so jocosely in the dome—away in the east the sunshine is spreading its splendors, and the throb and roar and pulsing life of the human world are in full headway, doing the strenuous work of existence.

We know that in London and Paris, although it's but 5 o'clock in Kansas City, yet in those cities it is near the noonday hour.

How majestic the cloudless morning looks with its stars—those beaming mysteries of the night—sparkling Imperial Diamonds studding the Diadem of the Infinite!

How serenely calm and unruffled is this fresh new morning, which ushers in a day of doom for some and a day of gladness for others.

Ah, the relentless march of the centuries!

How many millions of mornings have dawned upon this earth—how many millions will yet dawn—each bringing into being new born babes, each escorting into the shadowland of the Unknown the aged, the tired out, the infirm and the sick unto death.

But, after all, death is nothing. There is no problem involved in the final demise. The great problem is to live. How to live comfortably and be useful, these are the problems ushered in by the Majesty of the Morning.

How to avoid baneful suspicion, carping criticism, the acidity of cynicism, distrust and doubt of the world, and the inhabitants thereof; how to keep shining in our hearts and dominating our actions the love of our fellow-men, the purpose to uplift, to make happier and better, all those with whom we come in contact; that's the problem which glorious Old Sol will soon usher in with only half of his big round face peeping at us above the level of the low lying eastern horizon.

THE BUILDING OF A COMMONWEALTH.

The dedication of the Pilgrims' Monument at Provincetown recalls us to the fundamentals of our national entity. Perhaps this basis is most clearly defined in the dedicatory address of Dr. Charles W. Eliot.

"The Pilgrims," he said, "established a community and a government solidly founded on love of freedom and belief in progress, on civil liberty and religious toleration, on industrial coöperation and individual honesty and industry, on evenhanded justice and a real equality before the laws, on peace and good-will supported by protective force."

Three centuries, or thereabouts, have elapsed since these few and poor emigrants from England by way of Holland set up here their tentative commonwealth. They suffered, cruelly and with decimation, in their purpose; but they planted the seed.

How far have we progressed from this ideal of the men and women who landed upon Plymouth Rock in 1620? Every step in advance has been along the lines of the eternal principles for which they stood as exemplars. Where we have stepped aside from this path—as in the recognition of manhood slavery in the South—we have suffered and have been compelled to retrace our steps with painful consequences.

The monument at Provincetown certifies as eternal the fundamental principles of social and political rights. It is a monument to civilization as extended over the new continent of the Western Hemisphere. It marks an era in the uplift of the race.

Since the Pilgrims landed there, three centuries ago, the idea of democracy has spread and controlled the development, north and south, of the continent upon which these were the pioneers of the Aryan race. Commercial enterprise had already found more or less profitable intercourse. But with the Pilgrims of Plymouth was brought the ethical and eternal idea of government by the people, of possession in common, not by selfishly authorized monopolies. And the basis of the development of later centuries was laid by these men. Our great republic exists to-day upon this foundation.

The Commonwealth, the union of the States, the most magnificent and powerful integer in the congeries of world-powers, is nothing more than the evolution of the idea which subtended the declaration on the Mayflower and the more particular exposition of this purpose in the constitution of the Plymouth colony.

From such a small beginning has a great nation developed. We celebrate the later demonstration at the same time that we memorialize the inception. "With long suffering devotion and sober resolution," says the inscription on the Pilgrims' Monument written by Doctor Eliot, "they illustrated for the first time in history the principles of civil and religious liberty and the practices of a genuine democracy."

Conditions are changed to-day, in the evolution of centuries from a small community to a vast nation. But the fundamental requisites remain the same. These are the equality of privilege and the equality of protection. This involves, necessarily, cooperation. Distinctions of social order have been obliterated; none such remain recognizable. Distinction as to the returns from labor and promotion remains to be entirely adjusted, as recent industrial difficulties indicate.

So far we have not attained the standard of the Plymouth company. But we have made advance. When the ideal of equality in opportunity between labor and capital is reached we shall have crowned the building of the perfect commonwealth whose origin we now celebrate.—Selected.

The Mystic Sign.

Oh, gorgeous poppy, of great renown,
Show us the way to Sleepy Town.
Baby must go; he's tired of play,
But yet, I think we have missed the way.
Then tranquilly up and down
Waved the flower of great renown—
And softly it seemed to say:
"This way—this way—this way—
Is the way to Sleepy Town."

Oh, whispering wheat, all golden brown,
Show us the way to Sleepy Town,
How shall we find where the starlight gleams
On the city of sleep, in the land of dreams?
Then soothingly, up and down,
Went the wheat all golden brown—
And, whispering, seemed to say:
"This way—this way—this way—
Is the way to Sleepy Town."

Oh, little one with curly crown,
Show us the way to Sleepy Town,
Where the faintest music and softest light
And the sweetest blossoms enchant the night.
Then drowsily, up and down,
Went the beautiful curly crown—
While the tired eyes seemed to say:
"This way—this way—this way—

Heredity and Environment.

Heredity and environment are but half truths, and the part they play in determining a man's career are as nothing compared with the influence he can himself exert, if he so prepares himself that he is ready when opportunity knocks at his door. The greatest figures in human history are men who have risen above their environment and who have succeeded without the influence of illustrious ancestors, and some of the most pitiable figures in history are men who have fallen in spite of hereditary attainments and environment that should have lifted them up.

These were salient points in the sermon of Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis of Brooklyn, who preached yesterday morning at the Central Church, his charge before he went to Brooklyn. Doctor Hillis said that God placed in man the divine genius, and the men he thus favored set aside all doctrine of heredity and environment and carved their names in bold letters on the tablets of time by the efforts of their own naked hands and their own indomitable wills.

POVERTY NOT A HANDICAP.

"If you think environment brings success, look at the men who have sat in the halls of Congress, widows' sons, like Henry Clay and William McKinley, reared in poverty and hardship. If heredity brings success, why did Abraham Lincoln rise to his high estate? Benedict Arnold and Aaron Burr were surrounded by all the influences that should make men great, but they flung aside the greatest opportunities given to man and their names are recorded in history as traitors.

"Men rise to greatness by their opportunities, but there are thousands of opportunities and only a few men who are ready to take advantage of them. Whenever a chance suddenly throws upon a man the spotlight of success it is because he, while his companions were idling, had prepared himself for the chance that he knew some day would come."

The world without temptations would be a hell. Temptation and the struggle against it is absolutely necessary for moral character. If man could be righteous without effort his life would be meaningless and monotonous. There would be nothing to resist, hence nothing to gain. Life is a moral gymnasium; and it is because temptation is a universal necessity that it has been made a universal fact, like sorrow and death.

RULES OF RIGHT LIVING.

"Know thyself. A correct understanding of the physical facts of our natures ought to be a part of our armor in meeting the world's temptations. False modesty on the part of parents resulting in a neglect to instruct them in self-knowledge, is a serious handicap to our children. The truths of nature are bound to reach the children's ears sooner or later, but instead of being whispered in words of love they come too often distorted from the lips of shame.

"Study vices less, and virtues more. I do not believe that a knowledge of the wrong side of life, gained through the process of 'sowing wild oats,' is necessary to any man. If he will confine himself to the study of truth and virtue, he will find himself perfectly able to handle whatever vice comes his way, in the course of his life's duties.

"Resist the beginnings of evil. They may seem harmless enough, but they soon develop into habit. Bear in mind the Spanish proverb: 'Sow a thought, and you reap an act; sow an act, and you reap a habit; sow a habit and you reap a character; sow a character, and you reap a destiny.'

IDLENESS BEGETS SIN.

"See that you have no idle hours in your life. It is so easy for sin to slip into an empty life. If your business does not keep you sufficiently occupied cultivate a hobby.

"Overcome evil with good. Evil is practically irresistible if fought with its own weapons; but there is an antidote for its poison which, if used, will never fail. Virtue will triumph over lust; the truth will pluck the sting from a life; reverence will shame blasphemy. The secret of self-control is not to resist evil but to overlook it. Fix in the mind some object other than the temptation that threatens, and you are safe.

"Add to your self-control Christ control, for without Christ the highest life is impossible."—Selected.

Letter Department

SWEENEY, SOUTH DAKOTA, September 15, 1910.

Editors Herald: Would like place for a few lines to tell the Saints of South Dakota that I am still battling for the cause we ought all to love, not in word only, but in deed and in truth, and as the Bishop has intrusted me with the financial interests of this State, except Gregory County, I will be pleased to receive all tithes and offerings that you want to consecrate to the Lord's work. Until October 15, address as above, and after that date at Madison, South Dakota, 706 West Sixth street. Your brother in gospel bonds,

EDWARD RANNIE.

SAULT STE. MARIE, ONTARIO, September 18, 1910.

Dear Herald: We are still in the faith, and are trying to forward the work; and we know that we can not do anything successfully without the aid and assistance of him who is the Author and Finisher of this work. Truly it is a marvel, and we wonder why people do not see as we do.

We have been greatly edified and benefited by the visit of Elder Frederick A. Smith. We were sorry that he could not have stayed longer with us. He was just able to occupy three nights with increased interest. Many outsiders came to hear him. Remarks were made to the writer after the services, that they could not see any difference between us and any other religious denominations. "Eyes they have and they see not; ears they have and they hear not." This is the statement of Christ; as it was then so it is to-day.

Our missionary, G. C. Tomlinson, was called home very suddenly, receiving a telegram that his son Charlie was very sick. He left at once and on reaching home found his son had passed away, which was very sad indeed, for he was a very promising young man. The Saints voted a resolution of sympathy and forwarded it to the bereaved parents.

Yours for truth,

J. R. TOMLINSON.

WILBURTON, OKLAHOMA, September 8, 1910.

Editors Herald: The reunion here was a success, as twelve were baptized during the reunion and meeting following. We had lots of good preaching done during this time. Some people heard the angel's message, that would have heard it in no other way.

The writer and Bro. E. A. Erwin left on the 30th of August for northeastern Texas, where we held a ten days' meeting with good success, baptizing six noble people down in Bowie County, and one was baptized on our way down to the place where we held the meeting, which made seven good Saints added to the roll. I never in my life heard so much demand for preaching. We would get invitations from every side. People would talk and beg for preaching with tears in their eyes, but my time was up, as I had to return home and take charge of my shop, so that left Brother Erwin to battle alone. I hated to have to leave him, as he was not very well, and so much preaching needed to be done. "The harvest is great and the laborers are few." I feel if we would all do as we are commissioned, and pay our tithing, the Lord would send more laborers in the field.

Down where we just closed our meetings, one time was a dangerous place for a missionary, but to-day some of those same people are friends to the work; so you see we are gaining with the people. We had good attendance at every service. People would come for eight and ten miles to church.

My prayers are for the good of the work and all of the Saints.

Yours in Christ,

V. L. LUM.

EAU CLAIRE, WISCONSIN, September 19, 1910.

Editors Herald: It is one month to-day since I left Lamoni. I don't know of any branch any nearer here than Chetek, Wisconsin, fifty miles away, so I am isolated and have no conveniences for associating with the Saints. I am in better health than when I was in Lamoni, having gained ten pounds. If you know of a branch nearer than Chetek, you will do me a great favor by publishing it in the HERALD, as it is a welcome visitor every week, as is also the Ensign, both of which are strengthening and encouraging in the restored gospel as brought forth by Joseph Smith, the Martyr.

I shall distribute my papers here among the inhabitants of Eau Claire, that all may read that will, and be convinced of the true church of God. In my isolated condition, I need the prayers of all the Saints that I may hold fast to the rod of iron, as found in God's word.

Yours for the true faith,

JAMES M. BLOOD.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, September 15, 1910.

Editors Herald: Southern California district conference was held in Garden Grove, California, August 12 to 22, on the grounds purchased by order of the conference of last February.

The grounds had been nicely prepared and cleaned up for the occasion; also Mr. Beardsley, owning the adjoining property, had kindly given us free use of his eucalyptus grove in which to pitch our tents.

The attendance was fair, all things considered; good spirit and harmony prevailed.

Bishop Kelley and F. M. Sheehy were with us, and some extremely interesting and educational meetings were enjoyed by the Saints. Many beautiful phases of the financial and temporal laws were elucidated by Brother Kelley in sermons, and opportunities given for questions by the people, the effect being to build up and strengthen the faith of the Saints and encourage them to higher attainments in this branch of our faith.

The drawback of the distance from the electric car line, one and one eighth miles, was almost altogether overcome by the transportation furnished by Bro. William Mills, Nat. Carmichael, and Bro. Powell's automobile.

The reunion was formally absorbed by the conference as an organization and action prevailed to take over a tract of fifteen acres of land at Shakespeare Beach, which had been secured and held by a number of the brethren and sisters; anticipating such action by the district; seven acres to be held by the district and improved with an auditorium, cafeteria, parking, walks, lawns, etc., and the balance sold off in lots, thus raising sufficient means to pay for the land and improvements. The plan is meeting with pronounced success, and already nearly sixty lots are sold at prices from $95 to $125 per lot.

Bro. T. W. Williams was reelected president of the district; Nathaniel Carmichael, vice-president; R. T. Cooper, secretary. Fred Adam and C. E. Crumley were sustained as Bishop's agent and district historian, and George H. Wixom was elected district librarian.

The following ordinations took place: Fred Adam and F. B. Van Fleet to the office of elder; R. T. Cooper to the office of priest and first counselor in Eighth Quorum of Priests.

W. O. Wetherbee, president of the Eighth Quorum of Teachers, and H. S. Pankey and Wilford A. Boren, his counselors.

R. T. COOPER, District Secretary.

1648 MILLARD AVENUE.

MILLSTONE, INDIANA, September 19, 1910.

Saints' Herald: I thought that a few lines from the Millstone Branch would be of interest to some of the Saints. We are not making the progress that we should, as some are careless and indifferent as to their duty, while others are trying to do what they can to help the cause.

We do not have the privilege of hearing very many sermons, and we enjoyed the two-days' meeting in July. Bro. Jacob Halb and John Harp were the speakers, and the sermons were interesting and much enjoyed by the Saints. Last winter Brethren Halb and D. W. Dowker preached several spiritual and interesting sermons, and we hope some elders will come this way again and preach for us.

Dear Saints, we must all try to live as our heavenly Father wants us to live, and be prepared to meet the Bridegroom in peace and hear his blessed words to us: "Enter into the rest prepared of my Father."

Your sister in gospel bonds,
MRS. H. A. HUFF.

FANNING, KANSAS, September 22, 1910.

Editors Herald: At the request of the branch president I came here on the 16th instant, to hold a two-day meeting on the 17th and 18th. Bro. Swen Swensen joined me here on the 17th. Meetings are to be continued during the week. Attendance and interest good. One name, a Mrs. Blanton, has been given for baptism; others are near.

The work at Atchison seems to be looking up somewhat. They have had an accession of good help in the persons of Bro. and Sr. Fred Cool, who have recently located there. Now that the busiest part of the season will soon be over, we hope that we will have opportunity of reaching more of the people.

Brother Twombly was called to Osborne to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. May Nunamaker, of Manhattan. The report of her death came to us almost like a shock, as she was young and apparently in the best of health. Her father and mother have our sympathy in this sad bereavement.

Nothing is so sweet and reliable as this gospel of the Son of God, whether in life or in death.

H. E. MOLER.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Editors Herald: There are but a few Saints in Vancouver, yet we strive to meet together every Sunday for preaching and Sunday school. We do not have the missionaries very often, although last year we had Elders George W. Thorburn and J. D. Stead with us for about four weeks, preaching on the streets every night. We have not seen any fruit as yet, but hope to some time.

Since then we have been alone, until Bro. Sam Pope and family came to make their home in New Westminster, and since then he has been a great help to me. Again last week we had a visit from Elders Johnson and Thorburn, also Brother and Sister Dickout, of Hamilton, Ontario, who cheered our hearts by some good sermons. About forty came out to the services on Sunday, meeting in Bro. George McMullen's house.

We are alone again, our visitors having left for district conference, which convened at Seattle, September 17. Bro. Dickout will visit us again on his way home. He is on a pleasure trip to the West, also doing some missionary work. We have enjoyed their stay here, and pray for their safe arrival home.

Quite a number of Saints have come to Vancouver to make their home this summer. Brother and Sister Duckworth and family, Brother and Sister Spargo, and Brother Rothwell, of Manchester, England; and, through the HERALD, we see that W. C. Reid, of Owen Sound, is coming, or is here already. Have tried to find him, but have not succeeded as yet, as he gives no address. Hope he will see this letter and hunt us up, also any others who are here, or who contemplate coming. We will be glad to see them and do all we can to help them to get work.

We have a city of one hundred and ten thousand people. Surely some more Saints can come here and earn a living and thus be a help to us in opening up the work. We are happy in this latter day work and hope to endure to the end.

ISAAC McMULLEN.

EIGHTH AVENUE EAST.

RED LODGE, MONTANA, September 8, 1910.

Editors Herald: You are all aware that my last year's field of labor was Montana. On account of my wife's delicate health in Arkansas, our sons suggested that she accompany me and they would pay her way; so it was that we reached Philipsburg, Montana, about the first of June, 1909, where we visited my sister, Mrs. Hawkins, whom we had not seen for about thirty-five years.

Mrs. Baldwin preferred to remain at Philipsburg, so I proceeded to do missionary work at various points in the State, including Ellison, Deer Lodge, where I attended our district conference, Victor and vicinity, Helena and suburb, Jefferson City, Corbin, and in October, by request, I came to Red Lodge. In November I preached at several points near Luther, about fifteen miles west from Red Lodge.

In all these places I saw many things of interest that I would like to tell you about, but I can not do so, for if I were to pass by the great smelters and mining interests of the State, the twenty-five thousand acre farm of Mrs. Dailey, the big crops of grain and fruit, and potatoes, and onions, and the good people who grow them, it would give the Bitter Root Valley a world-wide fame. If I were to mention the lofty mountain ranges whose peaks are hooded with eternal snow, and just attempt the description of the grotesque wonders of one half day's exploration of a deep cut canyon in the Bitter Root Mountains, our church paper could not find the space required, so I must be satisfied by saying that at all these places I met warm-hearted Saints, who not only anticipated the missionaries' necessities, but in numerous ways forged ties that time can not destroy.

I was surprised at Luther, by learning that many ranchmen had harvested and thrashed forty bushels of wheat, and sixty bushels of oats per acre without irrigation; and to see these oats weigh out forty pounds to the bushel. Remarkable crops of potatoes and vegetables are also grown. I saw that the old-time stockmen are being crowded to the wall on account of the lack of pasture for their flocks and herds. They are now fencing the land for new settlers for the use of the pasture two years. They are eager to pay from one to two thousand dollars for these 160-acre homesteads when patents are secured. All this started a train of thoughts, for I saw there was intrinsic value in Carbon County land; so I wrote these facts to my sons, together with the glad news of the improved condition of their mother's health, and asked them to come to Montana. All seemed pleased at this, and the younger boys agreed to come.

At this time there were large areas of beautiful, rich, tablelands in this country, and on investigating the recent enlarged homestead act, I saw that such tablelands were therein described, but those of Carbon County had not been designated. I conferred with the county and State officers relative to getting our tablelands brought under said act; but they did not think it could be done, because of the peculiar manner in which these lands were ceded to the Crow Indians.

On the 20th of December I wrote a private letter to the Secretary of the Interior, asking him to look into the propriety of designating these bench lands to which I received a favorable reply; later I arranged a petition to which I secured many signatures, and sent it to Washington by the hand of Senator Myers, who promised to use his influence in favor of the petition, even if it called for a new act of Congress. In due course of time, I was officially apprised that on the 9th of April, 1910, my petition was honored by the Secretary, who ordered about three hundred thousand acres of Carbon County bench lands placed under the 320-acre homestead act.

This news spread like "wild fire," and business at our several district land offices were at once revolutionized, and long ere our boys had arrived, the best of the land was filed on. My prayers to the heads of the Nation were answered all too soon to suit me.

Now the time came when I could no longer successfully divide my energies between preaching the gospel and locating my family, so about the last of February I notified Bishop Reese that I would soon be off duty, and requested him to hold the allowance that he had been sending my family. I bought a team, rented a small place, and commenced action along another line.

Coming from Arkansas to Montana was a great change, and after spending nine years in the itinerant ministry, it was no small change to get hold of the plow handles. Some of you will not be surprised when I tell you that on account of cheapness I bought a refractory mare; an outlaw on account of her kicking proclivities, who furnished me plenty of diversion. I had been preaching for months without seeing any results, but now I knew full well that there was something doing.

On the 26th of May, two of our sons arrived, who in company with my sister from Philipsburg, and a niece, Sr. Ina Shelley, from Michigan, and myself, filed on land, so now we have five houses to build, over an acre of potatoes to dig, and oats to thresh; so we are not likely to get into mischief for some months to come.

We are forming a nucleus around which we hope that the preaching of the gospel may develop the work of the Lord. A little later on all missionaries and preachers of the gospel will be more than welcome. Ever praying for the disruption of selfishness in the church, and the indwelling of perfect love, I am as ever,

Your brother,

D. R. BALDWIN.

WESTON, IOWA, September 22, 1910.

Editors Saints' Herald: I arrived at Provo in time for the opening service of the reunion. There I had the privilege of meeting Saints, and rendering a little assistance in the meetings. Though the attendance was small, good feeling prevailed and the elders manifested a desire to get their message before the people. Each evening before the preaching in the tent, short services were held on the street, where the truth was spoken in plainness to Israel astray, at the conclusion of which an invitation was extended to all to come to the tent. A few came, but the majority thought it wisdom to leave us alone.

Brother Chase and family during the reunion were located in the property owned by the church, and here was headquarters for the ministry, among whom may be mentioned Elders J. D. Stead, John Davis, M. F. Gowell, and H. N. Hansen. Brother Gowell and wife arrived after the opening of the reunion and are now located permanently at Provo. The condition of the work there is such that it will require his constant watchcare, and his appointment there will undoubtedly prove for the good of the work.

The week following the reunion, in company with my father, I visited Salt Lake City and Ogden. During our stay in the city we visited the temple grounds and attended the organ recital, and listened with interest while one of the authorities addressed the tourists upon some of the principles of their faith, at the conclusion of which he gave opportunity for questions. The Josephites, as they call us, are always ready for such privileges, whereupon Elder Hansen asked one or two questions. Then the police appeared on the scene, ordering the questioner to leave the grounds at once. The elder consented, but replied, "He gave liberty for questions." To this was replied, "You didn't ask the right kind."

I thought of the Master's statement, "For everyone that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light lest his deeds should be reproved." There was danger the crowd of tourists might hear something.

Thank God, we of the Reorganization are not afraid to have our position examined. Elder Chase is holding services in the city each evening, and he, too, gives opportunity for "questions." But because certain "kind" are asked he does not refuse to answer, nor does he have an officer order them away. Truth always shines the brighter after a little rubbing.

Elder Chase and family are now nicely located in Salt Lake, and if they continue their activity they will surely do all the Lord requires of them in calling man unto repentance. I enjoyed my visit and association with them and feel that they and the other elders of that mission need our prayers. Truly that people is in a darkened condition; not able to see the weakness of their position.

At the close of one of the services on the street a brother of the dominant church secured the privilege to ask a question, but instead of doing so, bore testimony to the work in which he was engaged. He knew that Joseph Smith was a prophet, that Brigham Young was one also, and the others in succession, Joseph F. Smith as well. This testimony was soon destroyed when attention was called to the fact that Joseph F. Smith had testified before the Senate Committee that he had received no revelations since occupying as prophet, seer, and revelator, and that he had impressions of the Spirit just as any good Methodist. The poor man knew Joseph F. Smith occupied as a prophet of God, while the said prophet denied it.

At Ogden we visited a few of the Saints and attended their branch business meeting. Our Brother Abels, who a few years ago came out of darkness into light, was placed in charge of the branch, and he is not "able" by name alone either.

Altogether I enjoyed my visit among the Saints, and shall remember this trip as one of the pleasant experiences of my life.

Now a word to the Saints of Pottawattamie District.

Please remember I am still the Bishop's agent, and desirous of seeing all the Israel of God eventually receive the crown promised the faithful. We may be laborers together, then shall we share together the joys of eternity, the glory of which Paul wrote, "eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the glory God hath prepared for those who love him." Trusting we shall all be so diligent now that we shall partake of this glorious condition.

Yours in gospel bonds,

J. A. HANSEN.

NORDEUTSCHER LLOYD, BREMEN,

Dampfer "Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm," September 15, 1910.

Editors Herald: We are nearing the shores of England. We expect to land this afternoon. We have had a pleasant voyage. A little cloudy, cool, windy and wet part of the time, but no storms. I am a little disappointed in consequence, as I have always wanted to see a storm at sea. I may be gratified yet. Neither of us were sick. We did not miss a meal.

Most of the passengers on board are Germans, so we saw plenty of wine and beer drinking, but no drunkenness. They are rather a nice class of people, but seem to care little for religion. The Catholics held mass early Sunday morning. But the priest, so we heard, was in the smoking room most of the afternoon, drinking beer and playing cards for money.

We had no chance to preach, but wife and I held a song service in the dining room, at the piano. A number listened to some of our beautiful hymns from Zion's Praises and expressed themselves as being pleased. They were delighted with Rosa's playing. The Germans love music, and Rosa was recognized as the best pianist on board. We gave them some of our hymns each evening. Sunday evening after a little song service in the dining room we retired to our stateroom, and held a little prayer service by ourselves, and enjoyed the presence of the good Spirit. I am a little sorry that we did not take an English steamer rather than a German, as I believe we would have been able to accomplish more good. So few on board are able to talk English. We got better rates on this line than we were offered on the others.

I had hoped to stop off at Plymouth a day or two, but learn that there is a special train for London that meets our steamer, and it will be necessary for us to go right on. It is just possible, however, that we will be able to get our ticket extended. We shall see.

Our London address will be 137 Leyton High Road, Stratford, London, England.

Reunion of Kewanee and Eastern Iowa Districts.

The second annual reunion of the Kewanee and Eastern Iowa districts was held at Prospect Park, Moline, Illinois, August 12 to 22.

Our reunion this year was delightful from start to finish, notwithstanding the fact that on one or two occasions we were awakened in the middle of the night to discover that the rain was falling in torrents and that beds and clothing were drenched. It was not very pleasant, but it afforded a great deal of amusement and everyone seemed to take it good-naturedly. Those who were fortunate enough to occupy tents that were water-tight "doubled up" and shared quarters with less fortunate ones. In the morning the sun came out bright and beautiful as ever; tents were thrown open, bedding and clothing hung out to dry, and in a few hours everything was just as good as new. The gentleman in charge of the park remarked, "Well, you are certainly the most adjustable, best natured crowd I ever saw."

There were forty tents on the ground and about two hundred campers. Numerous calls for tents were received after the reunion began, but it was impossible to fill these orders and, consequently, those who could not be fitted into tents already on the ground had to secure lodging elsewhere. MORAL: Send in all orders next year as per instructions of committee.

The spirit of peace and harmony prevailed throughout the reunion and God's favor and blessing was apparent, not only to those within the camp, but to those who watched, with critical eye, from without.

A business session was held on the afternoon of August 17, for the purpose of perfecting a permanent organization to be known as The Joint Reunion Association of the Kewanee and Eastern Iowa Districts. The following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, Amos Berve; first vice-president, C. G. Dykes; second vice-president, O. E. Sade; secretary, Clara M. Johnson; treasurer, C. E. Ball. These officers, together with J. B. Wildermuth and George Sackfield, constitute the reunion committee for 1911. Prospect Park was selected by the body as the place for holding the next reunion, with but three dissenting votes.

Perhaps just a few words regarding our experiences in obtaining the use of the park, and subsequent happenings, may be of interest. When, a little more than a year ago our committee interviewed the superintendent of the Tri-City Railway Company, to whom the park belongs, they had no other thought than that they would have to pay for the grounds; indeed, they entertained very little hope of securing permission to occupy even for a liberal consideration, because of the strong prejudice existing here in the Tri-Cities. The committee was pleasantly surprised, however, to receive the information that we could use, free of charge, not only the grounds, but the buildings as well, including one large pavilion, with a seating capacity of about two thousand, and one smaller building.

As soon as people became aware of the fact that we were to occupy, all sorts of tales and warnings were poured into the ears of the park manager, with the result that our committee was asked to sign a very rigid set of rules. At the close of the 1909 reunion this same park manager, a Mr. Freed, apologized for having required us to sign such a set of rules. He said that he and his family had enjoyed our stay with them and hoped we would come again and stay twenty days instead of ten. He stated that never in the history of the park had so orderly a crowd of people occupied the grounds, nor had things been left in such splendid condition. Special comment was made on the spirit of unity and love that existed among the people in the camp. These statements made us feel just a little proud; because the grounds are occupied yearly by numerous gatherings, such as Chautauquas, camp meetings, etc. A set of resolutions expressing our appreciation of courtesies extended was sent to the Tri-City Railway Company, and to Mr. Freed and family. The superintendent of the railway company said that similar favors and courtesies had been extended to hundreds of other organizations, most of them religious, but that we were the only ones who had been thoughtful enough to say "Thank you."

This year when Brother Berve called the superintendent over the phone and asked if we might use the grounds again, the request was granted without question, and we were offered a choice of dates. We were not required to sign a single agreement, and instead of being charged seven dollars per night for electric lights in the pavilions and on the grounds, as is the custom, we were not charged a cent, and we were supplied with ice for the dining hall and camps, free of charge.

Thus, though Satan, through his agents, did his utmost to thwart our plans and keep us out, and it seemed for a time that he would be successful, yet God was with his people and opened the way before them, and the Saints were not unmindful of the fact that they had a duty to perform in maintaining the splendid record of the preceding year.

News From Missions

MISSOURI.

DAGONIA, MISSOURI, September 16, 1910.

Dear Herald: The glad news of the angel's message is winning its way into the hearts of many of the honest in this southern clime. The missionary has plenty to do. We could use two dozen men in this field, if they could be secured. The cry of Macedonia is heard upon every hand, and we have four missionaries appointed for this vast region comprising about thirty counties. Recently one young man, Elvin Winegar, a priest, has enlisted as a missionary soldier, to make it his life work. He is meeting with favor from all, and it makes one wish he were young again.

Our gospel tent has been a great advantage to us in spreading the good news of the kingdom this season. Bro. C. L. Snow ably assisted us in Springfield with the tent for three weeks. In connection with him a remarkable case of healing and the casting out of an evil influence from a certain lady was experienced. This woman had been attending our meetings and learned that we believed that the signs would follow the believer, and she arose in our meeting and requested us to administer that she might be relieved. We made it a subject of prayer and next day went down. We found the woman in a terrible state of mind, and had she carried out the presentiments given to her, no doubt would have committed some terrible deed. We administered, and when we had taken our hands from her head she offered one of the most beautiful prayers of praise and thanksgiving that I ever heard fall from mortal lips. But she was only partially healed at this time, and about two o'clock at night, two nights after, we were called to her bedside and found her under this evil power again. We talked with them until the morning light began to dawn and tried to dispel this power of darkness, so that we might administer with faith. Then we administered, and in the name of Jesus Christ rebuked this evil influence, and it departed. She has not been bothered since, and this had been troubling her ever since she was thirteen years old. The woman was baptized, and stands as a living monument of God's mercy.

I remained at Springfield until the 17th of July. During this time thirteen were baptized. The Saints supported the effort reasonably well. From here I moved the tent to Ava, Missouri, where in company with Elder J. C. Chrestensen we held forth about ten days. No baptisms. But we closed with the tent full and crowds on the outside.

From here we went to Rome, Missouri, and we were joined by Brother Snow. Here we had a two weeks' meeting. Preaching three times per day, with dinner on the ground. Four were baptized, and we left about a dozen earnest souls under conviction; we expect to get them in the kingdom before Christmas. Here is where you can hear the distant rumblings of Campbellism and the muffled drums of the Baptists in their hastening retreat.

Our next point was at Tigris, Missouri, where our quarterly conference convened. The most unpleasant thing here was too much "discussion" in our business sessions. Otherwise we had a refreshing time. Six precious souls were led into the "new and living way."

This present writing leaves me in one of the most interesting meetings I have ever been in. This point was opened up by Brother Bootman last year. Seventeen were baptized and a branch was organized in the fall. Great opposition was manifested here at first. But the other night while extending the invitation one of their preachers that opposed us so bitterly came up and gave his hand for baptism—Frank Randolph. Six have been baptized and four more have given their hands, and we expect a dozen before Sunday. By the way, we extend the invitation every night and call them to repentance. I think sometimes our ministers are afraid some will obey, they seldom give them an opportunity.

Bro. R. H. Counts lives here and his influence is felt for good. He used to be a reckless man, but now he has changed and the people have confidence in his repentance. We ordained him to the office of elder the other day, and he is coming to the front rapidly; is a product of this country, and just the kind of a man to do missionary work in this southeastern Missouri country. We are going to organize a Sunday school for them next Sunday.

The missionary work in this land has only just begun. We are embarrassed here considerably financially at times. But we expect to see improvement before many months, as we expect many of our new members to take up the tithing proposition. And we hope to be able to convince the older members that it is necessary to do some "good thing" in order to obtain eternal life.

I am rejoicing in this angel's message. May the Lord bless the true and faithful is my prayer.

WILLOW SPRINGS, MISSOURI.

News From Branches

BURLINGTON, IOWA.

The Religio has had something of a struggle to hold its own during the summer, especially while Brother Fry, who is our president, was in attendance at the Montrose and Thurman reunions. A plan was suggested in the spring of having a series of church history programs. There has not been much done in that direction during the summer, though it may be commenced again.

The Sunday school seems to have done rather better than last summer, as we have kept pretty close around the "fifty" mark for some Sundays past, and the "red letter days" (none tardy) are by no means as rare as they used to be. The Christmas Offering also is growing, and there seems to be hope that we may reach the "fifty" mark in that also, which is our aim this year. Children's Day was observed on June 26, and while nothing elaborate was planned, the variation was pleasing, and all did well. Brother McDonald, who was here for the day from Montrose, by request of Brother Fry, who was absent for the day, gave a short and pointed address, emphasizing the need to bring—not send—the children to Sunday school.

The district reunion was held in the park at Montrose this year, and while there were not many campers, a good time is reported, as also a good attendance of outsiders at the preaching services. Brother Fry and family, and Brother and Sister Buchanan were there from Burlington for a part of the week, and others went for the two Sunday sessions.

Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, who attended the reunion, came to Burlington for Sunday, August 7. He spoke morning and evening, and also made good use of the review period at Sunday school.

Bro. and Sr. Elbert A. Smith, and son Ronald, who were at the reunion, came through Burlington on their return trip, and visited here three days. An informal picnic was hurriedly planned in order to give as many as possible opportunity of seeing them. The crowd was not large, but all present seemed to enjoy themselves.

Our pastor, Bro. Charles Fry, attended the Thurman reunion as one of their speakers. There being no one here to speak during his absence, prayer service was held in the mornings, and evening meetings were dismissed.

Bro. J. C. Crabb, who was some years ago in the Nauvoo District, was in Burlington over the Sunday just previous to the reunion at Montrose, where he went from here.

On Sunday, September 11, Brother Fry visited the Farmington Branch. The regular sacrament service was observed in the morning. There was no meeting in the evening. Brother Fry was chosen district president at the June conference, and we understand he is trying to make the rounds of the various branches before the coming conference, which is to meet at Farmington, October 1 and 2.

FIRST KANSAS CITY.

We are all looking forward to our second annual rally-day services, which are to be held Sunday, October 2. It will be the event of the year. This is to be a union rally of the branch, Sunday school, and Religio; Pres. F. M. Smith will be the speaker at 11 a. m.; at 6 p. m. sacrament meeting; at 7.45 the church, Sunday school, and Religio will each be represented. The program will be about as follows: A ten minute talk by our pastor, "The church and its auxiliary societies"; "Some results of Sunday school work," by D. J. Krahl; "What the Religio is doing," Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser; fifteen minutes each. Also five-minute talks by our Sunday school superintendent, A. G. Larkey; the attendance committee, D. H. Blair; and Seth S. Sandy. All of these services will be enlivened by plenty of music, both special and congregational. The afternoon from 2.30 to 4 will be taken up with short speeches. No one can afford to miss any of these services, and a special invitation is very cordially extended to those whose places are conspicuous by their absence.

At the last special business meeting of the branch called previous to the conference, showed twenty-two additions to the branch by baptisms, two by certificate of baptism, forty-seven by letter, a total of seventy-one since March; fifty-one letters of removal have been granted, making a net gain of twenty. The total membership of the branch is now three hundred and forty-four. The following letters of removal were received: Lida F. Zuelzke, from Lees Summit; Cora D. Bowen, from Denver; Guy Miller, Second Kansas City; Walter Ingoldsby, from Armstrong, Kansas; also Sr. Marion Cairns-Cane was received on a letter of removal granted in 1877 at Des Moines, Iowa. It may be of interest to the Des Moines Branch to know that Sister Cane has finally become identified with a branch. Letters were also granted to Bro. and Sr. C. F. Rehwald, to Los Angeles, California.

Since last writing the following have located with us: Bro. and Sr. L. A. Duvick, at 2308 Prospect; Sr. May Ross, at 1525 Troost; Bro. and Sr. A. V. Armstrong, at 3017 East Twenty-second street. We trust all these newcomers may feel that they are one amongst us.

Our pastor was the speaker at the morning hour yesterday, and the Rev. Albert Bushnell, of the Anti-Saloon League, spoke in the interests of the prohibition movement in Missouri. It was a very interesting as well as instructive talk, and left no question in the minds of his hearers as to the righteousness of the cause of prohibition.

The stake presidency have arranged for a series of special meetings, to commence Sunday, October 23.

We are to lose one of our Sunday school pupils; Sr. Gertude Walker and Mr. R. J. McVey are to be united in marriage Wednesday evening of this week at the close of prayer service. They will reside in Saint Joseph, which is our only regret. Saint Joseph Saints will please look them up. We extend our congratulations.

Space will not permit much mention of the progress being made by the Sunday school and Religio, but both are very much alive and we will have something special to mention next appearance.

The Eureka Candy Company, fostered by Sr. Rachel LaRue and Bro. W. E. McKindsey will open at 121 West Ninth street on or about the 23d. They will be prepared to supply their patrons with a first-class line of sweet stuffs. Call and see them.

TORONTO.

The work in Toronto is still growing and the president, C. W. Sage, unabated. Our large church has been filled to the doors with interested listeners, and fifty-three have been baptized since the beginning of the year.

Quite a number of Saints took advantage of the cheap rates during the great fair just closed, to visit the Toronto Branch and take in some of the meetings which are always well attended, and expressed themselves as refreshed and encouraged by seeing the grand progress the church is making in Toronto.

Bishop Evans was kept busy last week tying matrimonial knots. Wednesday afternoon, September 7, Sr. Margaret Smith, daughter of Elder W. R. Smith, of Manitowaning, and Bro. Maurice J. Kelley, were married at the home of the bride's brother, on Baldwin street; also Sr. Leila Bentley and Bro. George Taylor, Wednesday evening, same date; and last but not least, Sr. Laura Greenaway and Bro. Ernest Oliver, two of our highly esteemed young people, were happily married Thursday evening, September 8. We should have been busy reporting such occurrences all summer, as quite a number of very interesting events have taken place during the season.

It will be of interest to many of your readers to know that Elder George Virgin, who for many years carried on the work in Toronto, when our numbers were few, passed away to his reward, Friday, August 12. He was afflicted with a cancerous growth in the stomach, and suffered for several months prior to his death. He leaves a widow and grown-up family. The funeral, which was conducted by Bishop Evans, was largely attended, the church being almost filled, and a great number of strangers listened attentively while the Bishop took advantage of the opportunity to explain our belief and our hope in the resurrection.

MRS. A. F. McLEAN.

SAINT LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Every moment of our sacrament service, which was held the first Sabbath of the month, was well occupied. A goodly portion of the Spirit was present, which cheered and strengthened us for the battles of life. The earnest testimony of Brother Peat of Lamoni had the pure gospel ring. One of our noble young men was told to prepare himself for greater work in the Lord's kingdom.

Our district conference, which convened here September 17, 18, was indeed a spiritual feast. We had a splendid attendance. The afternoon prayer service was profitably occupied in prayer, testimony and song. Our young people were admonished to seek for a knowledge of the divinity of the work. The morning speaker was Brother Guthrie, of Nebo, Illinois. He ably discoursed on the subject, "Ye are the light of the world." In the evening Bro. R. Archibald delivered an edifying discourse, one thought especially dwelt upon was, our financial duties to the church.

Three dear little babes were blessed under the hands of Brethren Cooke, Burgess, and Barraclough. They were the daughter of Brother and Sister Archibald; son of Brother and Sister DeKoster, of Saint Charles, Missouri; and daughter of Brother and Sister Peglar, of Oak Hill.

Conference adjourned to meet in Saint Louis, December 10, 11. The district choir rendered some fine singing, which we know was appreciated. The Ladies' Mite Society, and the brethren who assisted in serving the good substantial lunches at noon and evening, are to be commended for the success of their efforts. The district priesthood meeting was held about 4.15 p. m.

We separated in the evening after a day of activity from 9.50 a. m., feeling strengthened in spirit and rejoicing in the love of God, which seemed to be the main thought of the day. Our missionary force are actively doing what their hands find to do, and we are pleased to hear that they feel encouraged in their efforts.

Brethren Dowker and Paxton have been doing tent work. Brother Sparling, we understand, has been engaged in debating with some able ministers of other beliefs and Brother Sawley has created an interest and brought a number into the kingdom in his efforts in new openings in Illinois and around in Booster. So all are working with a united effort to do the Master's will.

Your sister in Christ,

Sunday, September 18. Elder Tanner discoursed on the "Resurrection" in the morning and "The spiritual gifts" in the evening. Some outsiders are interested and the Saints surely are learning, so feel that our special meetings are of great benefit.

Sr. Marguerite Wickes returned home Sunday evening, much to our regret, as her services as director of the choir were much appreciated. Solos were sung in the morning by Sister Wickes and Bro. Leroy Wood.

The special meetings are continuing this week. Tuesday evening topic, "Baptism for the remission of sins," Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings the different gospel dispensations. We suppose Friday evening will be the last sermon, and trust all may have a feast on "the fat things" we have heard for some time to come, and strive to do more in the Lord's work.

Wednesday evening the male quartet from the West Side favored us with a selection.

The Gleaners met at Sr. W. I. Cochran's home, 6551 Justine street, to elect officers for the ensuing term.

"The best men doing their best,
Know peradventure least of what they do:
Men usefulest i' the world are simply used:
The nail that holds the wood must pierce it first,
And he alone who wields the hammer, sees
The work advanced by the earliest blow. Take heart."

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

Since the 6th the sun has not failed us and has brought delightful weather, favorable for carrying on individual work and the city improvements which are constantly being made.

The sounds of industry are heard in the land, and especially so on South River boulevard; and the puffing, clicking, humming steam roller and mixer, with the shouts of about thirty dark and light complexioned workmen, just now fill the air with no unwelcomed inharmonies.

Vieing with the few city streets made new and solid in the last year or so, namely: North River boulevard, and Walnut, Osage, and North Liberty, the South boulevard, and Blue avenue covered with the firm, bright Hassam pavement are the last two highways to help embellish the "center place."

And on these stand the Saints' Home, the Sanitarium, office of the Order of Enoch, and many dwellings of our people, with their pleasant surroundings, among them the Temple Lot.

Two or three notable events of the last fortnight are the Religians' picnic on the 17th, at Budd Park; Sr. Laura B. Kelley's farewell concert at the Central Church, on Tuesday evening, the 20th; and the gala day gathering on the 17th of our townspeople at the dedication of the new Jackson County Home,—a building costing $342,000.

Another event of importance to the Saints was the laying of the corner stone of the South Side Church, on the 18th. The ceremonies were presided over by Pres. Joseph Smith, Pres. F. M. Smith, Apostle I. N. White, and Elders A. H. Parsons, and M. H. Bond, who made addresses.

On Sunday, the 11th, the meetings, although they were all interesting and lively as usual, seemed to be poorly attended on account of quite a delegation from our branch visiting snake conference at Knobnoster.

The 18th was a delightful day, and a calm, restful spirit pervaded the atmosphere. Beginning with a comforting early morning prayer meeting, the Sunday school took up its precious burden, and with a sweet song service, a fervent prayer and responsive reading, the study hour with its eight hundred participants, save one, was opened quietly, and orderly; each class in its proper place, three young people's classes and the secretaries occupying the platform, and fourteen senior classes studying the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Church History in the galleries. The primaries and little tots were busy in the assembly hall and annex.

At the morning service, at which there were thirty present in the choir, Elder G. E. Harrington presided, and his sermon was an earnest appeal to all to attain the mastery over self. The evening sermon was by Elder John Kaler, his text from Mark 1: 22, being, "And they were astonished at his doctrine, for he taught them as one that had authority and not as the scribes." Our brother's theme was the resurrection, and, filled with inspiring hope, it was delivered with the power of the Spirit, while his closing words seemed to thrill the hearts of all present, and with the Spirit filling their souls with joy and comfort, they arose in parting to sing,

"I know that my Redeemer lives,
And ever prays for me,
A token of his love he gives,
A pledge of liberty.

Thou wilt return, and, claim me Lord,
And to thyself receive."

Conference Minutes.

WESTERN OKLAHOMA.—District conference convened September 10, 1910, near Clinton, Oklahoma. Brethren Curtis and Case were chosen to preside. Bro. S. S. Smith reported having been quite busy and much blessed since coming to Oklahoma. Elder Hubert Case reported having acted as Bishop's agent, local historian, and assistant missionary in charge, but had found time to preach 172 times, and assisted 71 times. He said the work was progressing, but branches were widely scattered. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Brother McGeorge, president; Bro. M. Moldrup, vice-president; R. B. Brown, clerk; Sister McGeorge, librarian. It is voted that the next district conference convene at Seiling, Oklahoma, the first Saturday after the new moon in February. The reunion and conference was a success in promoting friendship and acquaintance and in increas-

EASTERN OKLAHOMA.—District Sunday school convention met with the Wilburton school August 19, 1910, with superintendent in charge. Reports of different officers of the district were read, also reports of different schools, as follows: Harlequin, Wilburton, Fanshawe, Manning, and Jacksonville. Our next conventions will meet a day previous to our next district conference. Lula Perkins, secretary.

Conference Notices.

The Montana district conference will meet at Race Track, October 15, 16, 1910. Dinner will be served in the hall both days. J. P. Wyckoff, district secretary.

Clinton, Missouri, district conference will be held with the Coal Hill Branch, October 15, 16, 1910. Branch clerks are requested to send all reports to John W. Noyes one week before conference convenes. John W. Noyes, secretary, 611 North Main street, Nevada, Missouri.

Far West district conference will convene with the Far West Branch on Saturday and Sunday, October 15, 16, 1910. The nearest and best point by rail will be Cameron, Missouri. The branch is ten miles to the southeast of Cameron. In order to get to the morning sessions of the conference, the representatives and delegates will be met on Friday, October 14, at 10.30 a. m., at Cameron, where teams will convey the visitors to the branch, and where the Saints can visit the old landmarks of sixty years ago. It is expected by the committee on arrangement that the greater number will come on Friday morning. One team will meet the train at 10.30 a. m., at Cameron, Saturday, but no teams will meet the train on Sunday, nor will any delegates be taken to the trains on Sunday. Notify the committee, Bro. Samuel H. Simmons, by mail if you are intending to attend the conference, so that the number of teams needed can meet the visitors. The Saints of the Far West Branch will entertain all who come. Please do not neglect to notify Bro. S. H. Simmons. As in former times, send your reports and credentials to the secretary, Charles P. Faul.

Florida district conference will convene with the Santa Rosa Branch, October 15, 1910, at 10.30 a. m. Please let each branch in district take notice, and have your branch reports on hand. You may send them at once to the undersigned at Dixonville, Alabama. E. N. McCall, district secretary.

Southeastern Illinois district conference will convene with the Poplar Creek Branch, in Wayne County, on October 15 and 16. All coming by rail will get off at Xenia. Branch clerks please mail their reports to me at Xenia, or send by some one coming to conference. Do not forget to make up assessment for district treasury, as we are needing funds for the district work. We hope to see, or at least have a report from all those of the ministry in the district. Arthur H. Burroughs, secretary and treasurer.

Little Sioux district conference will meet at Pisgah, Iowa, October 1, 2. James D. Stuart, secretary.

The quarterly conference of the Northern Nebraska District will convene at Decatur, October 8, at 9 o'clock a. m. Branch presidents and clerks are requested to have their reports to the undersigned by the 1st, if possible. Anna Hicks, district secretary, 3019 Pinkney street, Omaha, Nebraska.

Convention Notices.

The Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district Sunday school convention will convene on Friday, October 21, 1910, one day previous to conference, which will be held with the Lansing Branch. Trusting all may come with the Spirit of the Master, and take part in those services. Mrs. J. W. McKnight, secretary.

The first Religio convention of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District will meet at Lansing, Michigan, at 10 a. m., Friday, October 21, 1910. Locals will please lodge reports in hands of secretary, Mrs. Elsie Lockerby, Coldwater, Michigan, before that date. Please see to it that delegates are sent to this convention. Elect on the basis of one delegate to every ten members. (See Constitution, page 13.) A good program has been provided.

Clinton, Missouri, district convention of the Sunday school association will meet at Coal Hill chapel, October 14, 1910, at 10 a. m.

Clinton, Missouri, Religio association convention will meet at Coal Hill chapel in the afternoon of October 14. Please have all credentials and reports in. Zora Löwe, secretary.

Notices.

By the report of Birmingham, England, conference, appearing in HERALD of August 3, on the fifth line, the name of Robert Tabbiner appears as assistant, with William Ecclestone, as the president of the conference. Robert Tabbiner was assistant secretary to Joseph Ecclestone at that conference. This will save any confusion among those who were not present, but who are interested in its work.

Delegates to the London district conference please take notice: One third reduction of fare on the return journey will be allowed by the railway, on the certificate plan, providing fifty delegates attend the conference; from 50 to 300 delegates, one third reduction; above 300 return free. If all the branches in the district will take immediate steps to ascertain how many delegates intend going to the conference and advise the undersigned there will still be time to publish a notice

Died.

SMITH.—Ephraim Henry, the husband of Sr. Martha Lillian Smith, September 17, 1910, aged 44 years, 6 months, and 17 days. Buried September 19. Elder John Smith was the speaker, assisted by Rev. R. M. Shipman. He leaves a widow, and a daughter aged seven, and a son aged four. There was a large attendance at the funeral, and the sympathy of many was shown by a profusion of flowers.

SCOTT.—Mrs. Isaac F. Scott died at her home near Pardeeville, Saturday, August 20, 1910, aged 86 years, 5 months, 18 days. Miss Sarah S. Hall was born in Sutton, Massachusetts, March 2, 1824, and was married to Isaac F. Scott, March 17, 1844, at Nauvoo, Illinois. They lived there about two years and then moved to Burlington, Wisconsin, where they resided eighteen years, coming to their home north of Pardeeville, in the spring of 1866, where she lived until summoned by death. She was the mother of seven children, all of whom survive. They are: Calvin and William, of Washington; Edwin, of Montana; Charles, of Delton, Wisconsin; Frank and Winfield, of Pardeeville, and Martha at home. At the time of her death, the family represented five generations. Mrs. Scott was a member of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints for sixty-five years and remained true to the faith up to the time of her death. The funeral was held Monday from the home at 2 o'clock, Rev. Coonratt officiating. She was laid at rest in the Pardeeville cemetery, beside her husband, who died October 30, 1890.

TOMLINSON.—Richard Charles Tomlinson, who was formerly employed with Mr. W. G. Kenny, but for several months engaged as ticket agent at Brantford, died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Tomlinson, Widder street, east, on Saturday, August 27, at the age of 19 years, 7 months, and 1 day. Mr. Tomlinson had not been feeling well for some time, but did not give up his work at Brantford until two weeks ago. On Tuesday of last week he was taken to his home, ill of typhoid fever, and on Saturday he passed away. The deceased's father is a Latter Day Saint preacher, and had been engaged in ministerial work in Manitoulin Island and Sault Ste. Marie, and the news of his son's death came to him very unexpectedly on arriving home on Sunday. Charles was held in high esteem by his many friends, who will regret to hear of his death. He was an exemplary young man, and his passing away in his early manhood makes the sad occurrence all the more sorrowful. There were many floral offerings on the casket, including wreaths from the deceased's young friends in town, and from the members of the Latter Day Saint Church, with which he had been connected, and a bouquet from his friends in Brantford. The funeral took place from the home of his parents on Monday to Saint Marys cemetery.

GOODWIN.—At Lamoni, Iowa, September 12, 1910, Sr. Ann M. Goodwin, aged 82 years, 5 months, and 4 days. By a fall last October one thigh was broken and she has been helpless since then. She united with the Reorganized church at Malad, Idaho; baptized by Bro. William Woodhead. She was the mother of twelve children, seven of whom survive her. They live in California, Montana, Utah, Nebraska, and Missouri. Funeral services at her late home in charge of Bro. John Smith, prayer by Bro. J. R. Lambert, and sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins.

THE CHURCH AS A BENEFACTOR.

Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation. Then they that gladly received his word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles. And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need. And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

I have read a part of the second chapter of Acts. It tells us about the condition of the church in Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost and immediately thereafter, and before I close I shall read from the Book of Mormon an account of the church as it existed in America at about the same time or a little later.

My subject to-night is, The church as a benefactor. A benefactor is one who bestows a benefit or benefits. What are the benefits that the church is prepared to bestow upon the children of men?

My text is found in Matthew 10: 8 where the Master says, "Freely ye have received, freely give." What is it that the church has to give freely to the people?

We may say that this suggests the spirit of true service. The spirit of the world always says, "What can we get?" But the Spirit of Christ says, "What can we give?" The Master said, "It is better to give than it is to receive."

THE CHURCH AS A BENEFACTOR.

Now I presume that there are a great many people in the world who do not think of the church,—any church,—as being a benefactor. They regard churches and preachers as beggars. They are accustomed to seeing the collection plate, and being solicited for money from day to day and in a thousand diverse ways, and so in many places they have come to regard religion as being synonymous with graft and beggary.

I presume this state of mind is a result of the conduct of an apostate, sectarian clergy that has been more concerned with drawing large salaries and building large churches, than they have been concerned about preaching the gospel of Christ. That is partly the cause, and the other cause is that they have been trying to get money out of an unconverted and sectarian membership that think more about the almighty dollar than they do about character building. So as a result of the frantic efforts of the clergy to get blood out of a turnip, the church is regarded as a beggar.

One individual in commenting on the story about the man who fell among thieves and was afterwards cared for by the good Samaritan, says that the only reason that the priest and the Levite passed by on the other side was that the man had been robbed already. They would gladly have gone through his pockets themselves, but those ungodly Gentiles got the start of them, and as we say now, beat them to it.

But the Church of Christ in the days of the apostles was not a mendicant. It was not a beggar; it was a benefactor.

SPIRITUAL BENEFITS.

What is it that the church of Christ has to give to the people? Now we notice that on the day of Pentecost, as we have just read, there were at least three thousand people, Jews from all over the world, as it was then known, who were touched in their hearts. They recognized that they were sinners. They saw that they had crucified the Son of God. They perhaps were among the people who had said, "His blood be on us, and upon our children," and they in their great concern and in their repentance cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" And right there the Apostle Peter, as the representative of the church, stepped in and bestowed a great benefit upon them when he told them what they should do. He told them that they should repent, and be baptized everyone of them, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of their sins. This they did gladly and received the promised salvation.

And so we find that the church is the instrument through which God extends salvation to man. When a man realizes his sinful, degraded, and lost condition and wants to get out of that condition, he is in such a mental state sometimes that he will become insane unless he gets satisfaction and consolation. Right then the church of Christ steps in and offers him the terms of salvation, the greatest benefit that we can conceive of as being bestowed upon the children of men. Of course we realize that "every good and perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of lights," and so we realize that these blessings come from God, but they come through the church, and the church under God is the benefactor that bestows the benefits upon the individual. So we find Christ saying to his disciples that "whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

Now he did not mean that whatever they bound on earth should be bound by the edict of some pope or priest, but when the church should lift up its hands against an individual, that act would be recorded and recognized in heaven. And when men should be set free from their sins through gospel ordinances, through faith and repentance and baptism by water and the Holy Ghost, that act would be recognized in heaven, and that which was made pure on earth would be recorded in heaven as being purified.

We notice further that the Apostle Peter said:

Repent, and be baptized everyone of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

So we learn that on the earth, under the administrations of the church, men received the gift of the Holy Ghost, and under its influence they received those manifestations that are named in the Corinthian letter, where it is said that the manifestations of the Spirit of God are given unto every man. To one man is given wisdom, to another knowledge, to another the gift of tongues, to another prophecy, to another the working of miracles, and so on. And in the Galatian letter we are told that the fruits of the Spirit are love and joy and peace, and temperance, and all those blessed gifts that go to make up a beautiful Christian life and character.

Then the church, under God, is the means of giving to repentant sinners, those who will come into the church, the Holy Spirit, and through it all those gifts that we have enumerated. And in the closing verse of the chapter that I have read we find a statement made that confirms me in the argument that I have made, where it is said that "God added daily to the church such as should be saved."

The church, then, is a benefactor in spiritual matters. It extends to the human race salvation. Those who want salvation get it through the church, and we have no promise that they can get it anywhere else.

People say, "Why, I can be saved outside of the church just as well as inside the church," but by so saying they place themselves opposite to God, who said that he added daily to the church those who should be saved.

PHYSICAL BLESSINGS.

But not all of the blessings that the church bestows upon men are spiritual in their nature. Some of them are more physical in their character. Now I realize, it is true, that we can not draw a sharp line between that which is spiritual and that which is physical, because we are told that the spirit and the body of man constitute the soul of man. There is nothing that happens to the body that does not affect the spirit; there is nothing that happens to the spirit that does not affect the body. But some blessings are more spiritual and others are more physical; and the church bestowed blessings that may be termed physical in their character. For instance, in the third chapter of Acts, I read where Peter and John, on a certain day went up to the temple to pray, and as they approached the temple they saw lying on the ground at their feet a man who from his birth had been a cripple, and every day he was brought and laid at the gate of the temple that he might receive alms. He wanted alms of Peter and John. Peter and John had no gold or silver to give him, but Peter, looking at him steadfastly, said, "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." And the man arose. He received strength, and he arose and walked. Now, tell me, was not that a great benefit that was bestowed by the church of God on this man? A great physical benefit, if you please.

And so I read that on the day of Pentecost, or shortly afterwards, there were many, many of those signs and wonders that were wrought by the hands of the apostles. And this is right in harmony with the closing promise that the Master gave when he said,

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.—Mark 16.

And also the promise found in the fifth chapter of James where it is said,

Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick.

Thus, I discover, that it was designed that through the organization of the church man should receive many physical blessings in answer to the prayer of faith. Now, my friends, I believe that to-day you have but to cast about in your minds and you will remember instances that have come under your own observation wherein you have seen great benefits bestowed upon individuals by the church and through the ordinances of the church, when they have been taken to God in prayer. I myself remember one in particular that came under my own observation. It occurred in a family that is connected with me by the ties of blood. The sister had been afflicted by a cancer on her breast. She had been operated on two or three times, and like the woman mentioned in the scriptures, she had suffered extreme agony at the hands of the physicians. She was a mother and a wife. If she were taken away, the children would be left motherless, the husband would be left without a companion, and the home probably would be broken up. They were isolated from the Saints. But in this condition they went to a certain branch at or near Cherokee, Iowa, and the Saints appointed a day of fasting and prayer, and the elders laid their hands upon this sister and prayed for her, in connection with the membership of the church, and a few hours later that cancer came away, and shortly thereafter it healed up, so that she is free from it and alive at this day. That must have been some ten or twelve years ago. She is living to-day in the city of Cameron, Missouri, and a member of the branch at that place.

Now you will notice there was a great physical blessing bestowed through the church and through the prayers and fasting of the membership, and the administration of the elders in the ordinance that God had set in the church for his people to observe.

I am reminded that those things are miracles. They are what we at least call miraculous, and they require a high degree of faith. They ought to require a high degree of living also, and the Saints do not always, all of them, occupy on that high plane of faith. Not all of us have reached it. Possibly no one of us occupies there all of the time; but the Lord recognizes our weakness, and he has ordained, in the Book of Covenants, that those who have not faith to claim these miraculous benefits shall be nursed in the household of faith,—shall be properly nourished and be doctored and treated with mild herbs and other medicines. A little later on in our history he directed that we should have a physician in the church, and still later he told us to build a sanitarium, where the sick should be treated according to the laws of health and along the lines of spiritual treatment. So that not only will the church bestow upon the people benefits that are miraculous in their nature, but by cooperating with God and the laws of nature, in the sanitarium and in the home, under the direction of God, the people can receive physical blessings that are not miraculous. And for that purpose also the word of wisdom was given, and the instruction that we should retire early to our beds.

TEMPORAL BENEFITS.

I notice that when the church was in this high condition on the day of Pentecost, and immediately following that day, they received these blessings. But these were not all the blessings that they received. They received blessings that were temporal in their nature, and what the world to-day might term industrial blessings—temporal blessings of a material nature. Now I know that as soon as we begin to mention material things in connection with God it jars upon the sensibilities of some people. They do not like to have God mentioned in connection with the material things of this world, and so, in Nauvoo, when God commanded them that they should build a boarding house, some people were shocked and horrified, and their faith was shaken at the idea that God would consent to take notice of things of such grossly material nature. That may have been the result of the education that we have received at the hands of those who in the past have taught us that God is an intangible, incomprehensible essence having no body, parts, or passions.

One of our sisters in the church, a sister of one of our prominent elders, says that when a little girl she attended a Sunday school where they tried to explain to her what God was. And the Sunday-school teacher, to make it plain, told her that God did not have any arms, ears, or eyes as she had, and so on. The result was that she formed in her childish mind the idea that God must be a great big soap bubble. That was all she could conceive of that would meet the definition that had been given her.

Now a soap bubble, as nearly as I can define it, is a very thin film, in a globular form, that is filled with hot air. When we reach out and try to grasp it, though it may look very nice, it loses all its beauty, and we find that we have nothing left. And I believe that those old definitions of God are something like the girl thought about God, they are theological soap bubbles. When you touch them with the scriptures they explode and then the theologians have got to blow another soap bubble, and so they have been blowing soap bubbles for many centuries past.

But we believe that God is an individual, and takes recognition of all of our conditions, material and spiritual. It is no desecration of him to say that he takes recognition of material things, and the use that we make of money and houses and lands.

And so I find that after the day of Pentecost when men in the church were in need, other men who had possessions to spare went and sold those possessions and gave to those who were in need. They gave it in an orderly way by placing it at the feet of those who were properly appointed to distribute to those who had need.

Now, my friends, what is the condition of the world to-day? Is there any need of such a religion now? When we look at the world to-day we discover there is great inequality in the distribution of material things. We are told that ten per cent of the people in the country own ninety per cent of the wealth, and ninety per cent of the people own ten per cent of the wealth. Now I do not know whether that is absolutely correct or not, but even the most ardent advocates of the "god of things as they are," admit that there is great inequality in the distribution of wealth.

Admitting that this statement is approximately correct, what do we have? We will suppose that we have here ten men and yonder ninety men. Every time those ninety men get hold of ten dollars, those ten men get ninety dollars. What does that mean? Why, that these ten men will own the factories, stores, steamships, railroads, mines, and land. They may drink champagne and eat porterhouse steak. They can afford to buy strawberries in December. They can clothe their wives in silks, and buy them diamonds as big as walnuts; and if they want to charter a train to take their dog for a pleasure trip, they can do it. They can own private hunting grounds big enough to support hundreds of farmers or fruit growers.

But how about these ninety? Why, to the ninety it means that though they work hard, even in prosperous times, they will never have much of a surplus. They may get some of the luxuries of life, but it means that if one of them falls sick and loses his job, in a very few weeks his family is in want. If he dies the widow must earn her living at the wash-tub. In prosperous times they may get on very well, but if there comes a business panic, the great majority of them are immediately out of a job, and as they have no reserve force, they are soon in great want and distress. "Well," you say, "these men waste a good deal on tobacco and drink and such things." But so do the rich men, and so they are even on that score. And it means more than that. It means that the great majority of these men can not own their homes. They are transients and live in rented houses, which is a very unfortunate condition to have in the land of the free and the home of the brave. Patriots are men who own homes and have something to fight for.

Perhaps others could paint this picture in a more harrowing manner, but possibly the picture that I have presented fairly represents society as we have it in the United States of America to-day.

Now the wealth of those ten men will certainly corrupt and destroy some of them. I would not go on record as saying that all rich men are bad, because some of them are good. The poverty of these poor men will certainly destroy some of them and their children.

This condition is undesirable. It is more than that; it is absolutely unnecessary. The Lord says in section 101 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants that the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare. Now that is the word of God; it is not my word. He says the earth is full and there is an absolute abundance for all. If these ninety men and these ten men would merge their interests and be something more than Christians and brothers in name only, there would be enough to supply all with the necessities of life.

This condition is unnecessary and it is extremely unsatisfactory in the eyes of God, because I read in the Book of Covenants, section 70 and paragraph 3, where the statement is made, "In your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld."

We find there that God wants the people, in his church at least, to be equal. Inequality is unsatisfactory outside the church and it is even more unsatisfactory inside the church. God says we can not receive the abundance of the Spirit until we are equal. On the day of Pentecost they were ready to comply with that law, and therefore they received the abundance of the Spirit. Of course conditions in the church are not so bad as in the world; our poor are many of them cared for; and our rich men are not Rockefellers. We have very few extremely rich men. None of them that I know of got his riches dishonestly. Some of them are using their wealth in many ways to advance the cause of Christ, possibly better than you or I would were we in their position. But still we have not reached equality, and the abundance of the Spirit is waiting for us until we reach that condition.

If conditions in the world are unsatisfactory in the eyes of God, they are also unsatisfactory in the eyes of men, for I find that these two classes, these ten men and these ninety men, are arrayed against each other, and there is a great bitterness of feeling growing up throughout the country. People always were unequal. But in the past they did not think so much about equality. On the hill was the lord in his castle, and in the valley were his serfs. They never read, they never studied, they seldom thought. But to-day everybody reads, everybody studies, almost everybody is thinking, and people are saying of this condition that they are not satisfied with it. I hold in my hand a clipping containing a statement made by one of the ninety men, a socialistic writer, a sensationalist, perhaps, by the name of Jack London. He professes to speak for the laboring man and to address the capitalist, and he says:

No quarter! We want all that you possess. We will be content with nothing less than all that you possess. We want in our hands the reins of power and the destiny of mankind. Here are our hands. They are strong hands. We are going to take your governments, your palaces, and all your purpled ease away from you, and in that day you shall work for your bread even as the peasant in the field or the starved and runty clerk in your metropolises. Here are our hands. They are strong hands.

Now that is what the ninety men are saying (some of them). "We want your money, our hands are strong, and we are going to take it." What are the ten men going to say? They will say, "Your hands may be strong, but we've got the money, and money is power. We can buy muskets and we can hire all the men we want to stand back of those muskets and defend our wealth." There never was a strike yet that men could not be hired to break. Then will come the time spoken of in the Book of Covenants where it is said that if a man will not take up his sword against his neighbor, he must needs flee to Zion for safety.

Of course we have other remedies suggested besides that of violent revolution. Many of these men do not advocate violent revolution, they advocate peaceful revolution, but this prophecy indicates to me that all their plans will come to naught, because if these plans for peaceful revolution should be successful there would be no necessity for such a condition of violence to arise. But all the wisdom of men will fail to solve this problem. The clash is inevitable. God has said so. It is coming. And we must flee to Zion. In Zion will be found the only solution of this great problem. We must work it out for ourselves, no matter what the world does.

Well, what is God's solution? I turn to section 45 and paragraph 14 and I find one of the steps that will be taken in working out this problem. Now tonight, I propose only to outline some of the leading and cardinal principles that God proposes to use in bringing about equality. I do not profess to be posted on all of the details of this law,—I am simply a student of them, and there are those in the congregation who can explain the law far better than I; but I want to present to you, some of the plainest of the main principles that God proposes to use. In section 45, paragraph 14, I read:

And it shall come to pass that the righteous shall be gathered out from among all nations, and shall come to Zion singing, with songs of everlasting joy.

That is one of the first steps that God proposes to take. He proposes to gather the righteous together in Zion. Men of talent and wisdom in the world have recognized the need of a gathering. They did not recognize it, however, as soon as God did, because he used the principle of gathering away back in the days of Enoch and Abraham.

I hold in my hand a clipping taken from an article in the Arena, June, 1907, from the pen of a Fabian Socialist named James MacKaye, author of the Economy of Happiness. He says:

The desires of each individual for wealth to be consumed by himself rather than by some one else can be eradicated only by replacing his egoism with altruism. That would be an excellent thing to do, but how is it to be done? As many unsuccessful experiments have proven, the theory of communism will not work except among a selected community of marked unselfishness and exceptional habits of mutual toleration and concessions.

This man says that we must remove human selfishness and put in its place unselfishness. But how is this to be done? Here we stand face to face with a great problem. How is it to be done? We believe that it can be done by the gospel, and I know of no other way. The communism here referred to perhaps is not our ideal, yet the principle is similar and here we have the word from this student of socialism that what he terms communism will not work except among a select community composed of men of great unselfishness and marked habits of mutual toleration. For similar reasons God says that he would gather together the righteous, men of great unselfishness and marked habits of mutual toleration. He will gather such to Zion to form a select community. There is the principle of gathering, and the kind of men and women that are to be gathered. No other kind can succeed in Zion.

The next step we notice that he will take, we find suggested in section 101. "It is wisdom in me; therefore, a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship."

Now here is a great principle, that of organization, and next, that of stewardship. We find that they organized themselves in Kirtland, and they have more recently organized themselves in the city of Independence, that they may be prepared to carry out the law, as it was told you yesterday by Bishop Hilliard. Correct organization spells efficiency.

The idea of stewardship is one that we must grasp. In the past, men have thought of their property as being absolutely their own. For instance, a man might say, "I have here a five dollar bill. I worked for it. I earned it. It's mine, and it is nobody's business what I do with it. I can spend it or I can light a cigar with it, or, in fact, do what I please, and it's nobody's business." And if that principle would apply to five dollars, it would apply to five million dollars. But now we come to understand it is everybody's business what a man does with his wealth. No man ever got rich without the help, support, protection, and coöperation of the community. No man gets rich without using powers of body and mind and laws of nature that God has created, and these things with the resultant riches belong to God. And so we find God saying here that men shall be stewards over their property, and that it is the business of God what they do with it. Away back yonder God said that the earth was the Lord's and the fullness thereof. So we learn that in the church people must be educated to the thought that they are stewards, that what they own they own under God, and that God has a right to direct them in the use of their wealth.

Now God proposes to bring about a condition of equality. He says that "the poor shall be exalted; in that the rich are made low." (Doctrine and Covenants 101:2.) That does not mean that the rich shall be dropped down where the poor are, but that while one comes down, the other comes up, and thus they meet upon a common level of plain but wholesome living, which can be maintained and enjoyed by all, excepting the indolent and unworthy, who shall be cast out. No one has said that the rich shall give all they have to the poor. The law says: "If any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment."

Now what this "portion" is, is determined by the law, and it is governed by the law, and in the church we find the organization by which the law shall be administered. If the rich man should take all he has and give it to the poor, he would immediately become poor himself, and some one else would have to give all that he has to him, and we would have a merry-go-round of giving and receiving. But things must be done in harmony with law, and every man should give his portion or receive according to his need as the case may be. Now this is the plan and it seems to me to be an extremely simple plan by which God proposes to bring about equality.

I have not time to dwell longer upon that thought. In the church we find the organization by which these things shall be bestowed upon the people, these blessings, these benefits. The church is a benefactor. But some one asks, What will you do with these people who have no great surplus to give, and at the same time they do not need to be given anything. They are working along, making their living, not very much more, nothing less. Will they have any place in this work? I think that they will, because only a part of the work is to receive or bestow money or goods. It is also to educate people in coöperation along business lines, to bear one another's burdens, to eliminate harmful competition among Saints and substitute coöperation and mutual support.

But I must hasten and bring my subject to a close, because I want to read, as I promised, from the Book of Mormon, an account of the people at the time when the church in America was at the Zenith of its usefulness. The Book of Nephi, Son of Nephi, first chapter, says,

And it came to pass that the thirty and fourth year passed away, and also the thirty and fifth, and behold the disciples of Jesus had formed a church of Christ in all the land round about. And as many as did come unto them, and did truly repent of their sins, were baptized in the name of Jesus; and they did also receive the Holy Ghost.

Here the church was a spiritual benefactor, giving salvation,—giving the Holy Ghost.

And it came to pass in the thirty and sixth year, the people were all converted unto the Lord, upon all the face of the land, both Nephites and Lamanites, and there were no contentions and disputations among them, and every man did deal justly one with another; and they had all things common among them, therefore there were not rich and poor, bond and free, but they were all made free, and partakers of the heavenly gift.

Here the church became an industrial benefactor, organized society, and did away with the evils incident to poverty and corrupt riches.

And it came to pass that the thirty and seventh year passed away also, and there still continued to be peace in the land. And there were great and marvelous works wrought by the disciples of Jesus, insomuch that they did heal the sick, and raise the dead, and cause the lame to walk, and the blind to receive their sight, and the deaf to hear.

Notice here the conditions, and that the church at the height of its greatest power was a three-fold benefactor to the human race, giving spiritual, physical, and industrial blessings.

And now in conclusion, when men were living in such close touch with God, we are told here in the Bible that God added daily to the church at Jerusalem. The church was growing and it was adding to its numbers constantly. And the Book of Mormon records a similar condition in America where it is testified that the people all were converted.

In the Bible it says that many miracles were done by the hands of the apostles. In the Book of Mormon we are told that they did many signs and wonders, healed the sick, raised the dead, and so on.

And there is one other very pleasing feature to which I call your attention. In the Bible it says that at Jerusalem they continued to eat their meat "with gladness" and singleness of heart. And the Book of Mormon comes right up along that line and says of the church in America, "And surely there could not be a happier people among all the people who had been created by the hand of God." Not a happier people anywhere than the people who were under these conditions. There were the three fold conditions, of growth, of spiritual power, and of supreme and overflowing happiness.

Now that is the condition that our men and women have looked for and have sung about. For this Joseph and Hyrum Smith and W. W. Blair and Alexander Smith and all the Saints gone over on the other side, labored, prayed and waited; it was the dream of their hearts, and now we are nearing the time when perhaps we can begin to realize it. But let us be patient and not too exacting or harshly critical if we do not reach perfection at a single bound. Only three times, once in America, once in Jerusalem, and once under Enoch,—only three times so far as I know,—in all the history of the world have the people of God risen to the heights outlined in my scriptural readings. May it be our happy lot to work up to that condition and to see the church occupying fully its place as a benefactor to the people.

GRACELAND.

BY VIDA E. SMITH.

Tune: Nellie Gray.

O Graceland, happy Graceland,
On the hill-crest in the sun,
Where the free winds are singing all the day.
With thy corner stone laid firmly,
And thy story just begun,
We would write thy deeds of honor all the way.

CHORUS:

O fair Graceland, like the blue
Of the heavens over you,
And as faithful as the seasons we behold;
May thy sons and daughters ever
In their heart of hearts be true
To the honor of the Navy and Old Gold.

O Graceland, happy Graceland,
Our own Mater Queen uncrowned.
We are waving a laurel wreath for you.
With your feet in meadow grasses
And your glad hills guarding round,
All serene be your life and calm and true.

CHORUS.

O Graceland, busy Graceland,
Let no hand in weakness fall,
Let no voice now be silent all the day.
Let the well trained mind be listening,
For the souls of men will call
To the skilled sons of Graceland, come away.

CHORUS.

Then when our voices tremble
With the cadences of age,
And the pages of thy glory be unrolled,
We will here again assemble
Every white-haired, wise-browed sage,
With a blessing for the Navy and Old Gold.

CHORUS.

THE GIFTS AND GIVING.

Had I all tongues that men and angels seek
To send abroad an ever pleasing din,
And be my bearing gentle not, nor meek,
I but proclaim my weakness and my sin:

Like some great bell, melodious of sound,
That sends a warning, reverberating clear,
Until the day its brazen lip is found
Riven and rift, its voice henceforth a jeer!

A sounding brass and cold, the note but mars
And jangles on the spurning atmosphere;
So must our brooding, shaping characters
Round out the words that on our lips appear.

O, tongue of olden day, ere Babel reared,
Presumptuous, in the vale of Shinar there;
Desire of Jared's brother he who feared
His Maker, and obeyed with jealous care.

All that was given for the setting forth
Of humankind unto a more blest land,
The sifting out of everything of worth—
In language pure that was its own command!

So now the pleading, teaching Spirit calls
Unto the soul, unsatisfied, within;
With understanding let us batter down the walls
Of our entombed hearts and gather in

With reaching, eager arms the searching Hope,
The cheering Faith, the gentle Charity,
And weave these strands into a silken rope
That leads to God and all Security.

The wide, wide world cries out for Peace,
That warring kin their quarrels cease,
That mighty lords their prey release
And let the light of Reason shine!

The wide, wide world bespeaks a truce,
It pleads that parliaments reduce Their snarling dogs-o'-war—too loose
That roam o'er this fair world of thine!

The wide, wide world in travail groans,
From festering gutter and gaudy thrones;
Its scales of Customs false bemoans
And prays for the rule of Right Divine.

But the wide, wide world must take its time,
It will not grasp the Truth sublime;
It dallies with Sin and Death and Crime,
Yet must be cleansed for his will divine.

Oh, the wide, wide world reaps a judgment plain;
Thou hast bartered for folly and squandered again;
Death must thou reap, thou hast sowed it amain.—
Life is sacred for Life is mine!

WHY SOME PREACHERS SUCCEED.

Some preachers succeed because they love common things and common people. A scholastic preacher wrote a friend of mine: "Charley, what am I to do? These people of mine are so far beneath me that when I look into their faces they remind me more of so many pumpkins than anything else. I am heartily sick and discouraged." My friend wrote him a sensible and encouraging letter, and ended up by saying, "Remember, . . . the best part of the pumpkin is always inside." I think that the first preacher's heart was more like a pumpkin than the people's heads. He did not know, and perhaps never will, the difference between a sermon and a "message." That preacher had opportunities in that congregation angels would covet. "It is in the great congregation where heart beats with heart and breaths conspire, and common beliefs and experiences draw the children of toil and pain into close, dear fellowships of sympathy and hope, that those messages will be best given." Again, "Ah, no, while man sins, suffers, while there is blood-tinged sweat upon his brow, while there is misery in his home and anguish in his heart, that voice can never lose its music which speaks, not through preaching merely, but through personality and worship as well, of the comfort and everlasting gospel of Christ, which seems to tell the sin-tormented spirit the tale of the infinite pity, and to bid it lay its sobbing wretchedness to rest on the bosom of the infinite love." The preacher who succeeds, then, is the one who adapts the message, and coins the message to suit the needs of his congregation, and who lifts up Him who has "lifted with his pierced hands empires off their hinges, turned the stream of centuries out of its channel, and still governs the ages, and who, when lifted up, will draw all men unto himself."—James Small.

THE BIBLE.

"I entered this wonderful temple called Christianity with the Holy Spirit as my guide. I entered at the portico of Genesis, walked down through the Old Testament art gallery where the pictures of Noah, Abraham, Moses, Joseph, Isaac, Jacob, Daniel hang on the wall. I passed into the music room of Psalms, where the Spirit swept the keyboard of nature and brought forth the dirge-like wail of the weeping Prophet Jeremiah to the grand impassioned strain of Isaiah, until it seemed that every reed and pipe in God's great organ of nature responded to the tuneful harp of David, the sweet singer of Israel. I entered the chapel of Ecclesiastes, where the voice of the preacher was heard, and into the conservatory of Sharon, and the Lily of the Valley's sweet scented spices filled and perfumed my life. I entered the business office of Proverbs, then into the observatory room of the prophets where I saw telescopes of various sizes, some pointing to far-off events; but all concentrated upon the bright and morning star, which was to rise above the moonlit hills of Judea for our salvation. I entered the audience room of the King of kings, and caught a vision of his glory from the standpoint of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John; passed into the Acts of the Apostles, where the Holy Spirit was doing his office work in the formation of the infant church. Then into the correspondence room where sat Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, Paul, Peter, James, and Jude, penning their epistles. I stepped into the throne room of Revelation, where all towered into glittering peaks, and got a vision of the King sitting upon his throne in all his glory."—"Billy" Sunday.

THE EVANGELIZATION OF THE WORLD.—PART 4.

BY JOHN C. GRAINGER.

Isaiah, the silver tongued prophet of God, speaking of the ambassadors for Christ, who shall operate in the priestly offices of his church in this twentieth century, states:

Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing; for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion.—Isaiah 52: 8.

Which means that the priesthood will be united in teachings; they will be perfected in the understanding of their ministry in all their several callings and offices; in theory, in principle, and in doctrine; in all things pertaining to the kingdom of God on the earth. Through this unity, the Master will bestow such endowment of spiritual power on the church, that temporal and eternal salvation will be given to Zion, and the nations of Israel and of the Gentiles, as many as will believe.

Through this unity, every nation, kindred, tongue and people shall be enabled to hear the fullness of the gospel in its own tongue, and vernacular; the idioms and phrases, which they understand, through the administration of those who have been, are now, and shall be ordained unto this power and authority by the administration of the Comforter. The gospel should be preached to-day, with the same convincing spiritual power as that bestowed on the apostles of the early church.

The incident of the pentecostal gift of tongues, described in the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, is an example of the conditions that will prevail in Christ's priesthood when the church is gathered together "with one accord and in one place."

The people of the seventeen nationalities mentioned, had the gift to hear in tongues. Peter preached one sermon, and "every man heard in their own tongue wherein they were born." The language they heard was intelligent and reasonable. They were convinced, they were "pricked in their hearts."

In "The solemn assembly of the school of the prophets," our Lord has outlined the plan whereby we may arrive at that "one accord" necessary for the reception of the endowment of, spiritual power, which will enable his missionaries to touch the hearts and understandings of men, so that they will confess their sins and repent and be convinced that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God.

By means of the school of the prophets, the church can establish a basis of authoritative interpretation of the Scriptures. A standard of ethics can be established. Controverted points of theory or doctrine can be settled, and the General Conference could ratify the decisions of the school.

Such proceeding would harmonize with the evident practice of the primitive church, as recorded in Acts 16: 4, 5:

And as they went through the cities they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem. And so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily.

The gospel is the basis upon which all true believers will eventually be united. What constitutes the fullness of the everlasting gospel? Jesus Christ said:

Behold, this is my doctrine: Whosoever repenteth and cometh unto me, the same is my church: whosoever declareth more or less than this, the same is not of me, but is against me; therefore, he is not of my church.—Doctrine and Covenants 3: 16.

Sainthood in Christ's church carries with it peculiar responsibilities that rest on no other organization on earth to-day. We are close communionists, and we do not recognize the acts of representatives of other denominations as having binding or pardoning power, when they presume to officiate in the ordinances of God's house.

The members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as a people, hold that a man to preach "this gospel of the kingdom" in its fullness, must have a commission from Jesus the Christ, to represent, authoritatively, the kingdom of heaven. We believe that the church organized by our Savior, when he was on earth in the flesh, apostatized from his instructions, and consequently the spiritual power and authority to preach the gospel, mentioned in Mark 16, Matthew 10, and Luke 9, which was given to the church in that age, had been taken away from the sons of men on earth. The commission was repealed because of transgression. We believe that God, through the power of the Holy Ghost and the administration of his holy angels, has restored the power and authority of his holy priesthood to men on earth to-day, whereby they may stand and occupy as Christ's duly commissioned ambassadors, as found recorded in present day revelations:

Therefore, go ye into all the world, and whatsoever place ye can not go into, ye shall send, that the testimony may go from you into all the world, unto every creature. And as I said unto mine apostles, even so I say unto you; for you are mine apostles, even God's high priests; ye are they whom my Father hath given me; ye are my friends; therefore, as I said unto mine apostles, I say unto you again, that every soul who believeth on your words, and is baptized by water for the remission of sins, shall receive the Holy Ghost; and these signs shall follow them that believe: in my name they shall do many wonderful works; in my name they shall cast out devils; in my name they shall heal the sick; in my name they shall open the eyes of the blind, and unstop the ears of the deaf; and the tongue of the dumb shall speak; and if any man shall administer poison unto them, it shall not hurt them; and the poison of a serpent shall not have power to harm them.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 10, 11.

We maintain that no man or set of men have the right to take upon themselves this authority except those who are called of God as was Aaron. (See Hebrews 5: 4.) Aaron was called by direct revelation through a living prophet. (See Exodus 28:1. Numbers 16: 5-40. 1 Chronicles 23: 13.)

Therefore all ministers, priests, or representatives of religious organizations, who are not working under the commission given to his church by Jesus Christ in September, 1832, are usurpers and interlopers, and, like Uzziah the king, mentioned in 2 Chronicles 26: 18, it appertaineth not unto them to burn incense unto the Lord, but to the priests, the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense.

Those unauthorized priests and preachers have trespassed and their work shall not be for their honor from the Lord God. They are not sent from heaven, they can not give pardon in the name or by the authority of Jesus Christ, and their followers can not receive an entrance into the celestial glory where Christ and his Father are, but must take a lesser glory according to their works, because a man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven. (See John 3: 27.)

This establishment of authorized priesthood does not prohibit the development and exercise of human endeavor, in the cause of righteousness, by unordained men and women; but it promotes, encourages, and stimulates legitimate efforts in service to mankind, for the advancement of the kingdom of God. We are not dominated by any form of priesthood, but we are obedient to legitimate authority in its proper place. We have equal access to the source of knowledge as that of other organizations. Our reasoning abilities are not dormant, and our faculties of observation and preception are as keen as those of any other people. In view of the fact that the greatest and most sanctified of men are still mortal and fallible, we do not accept all of any man's teachings without question. We never grant that any man's doctrine of salvation is superior to God's word, in that it might be better adapted to man's understanding and needs. Nor do we admit that any one man's teachings are coördinate with the Scriptures, in that they state all of the truths embodied in holy writ. We hold ourselves open to the reception of truth in any form. We indorse all the good they are doing and reiterate all the known truth taught by all other churches, societies, associations, or individuals.

Our creed is, All Truth; moral, scientific, divine. We can often put the same truth into different words, just as we can mold the same clay into different forms, though it always remains the same clay.

People have the right to their opinions, but they have no right to teach them or to make other people pay the cost of circulating them, in the guise of divine truth.

We believe that the various religious organizations have many good people in them, and they are doing good according to the light they have, and they will be rewarded according to their works. But God's plan for man's salvation requires a united people to work under his guidance. Men should not attempt to lead people to the kingdom of heaven and make them citizens thereof until they are appointed to do so by the King of heaven.

Behold, I command you, that you need not suppose that you are called to preach until you are called; wait a little longer, until you shall have my word, my rock, my church, and my gospel, that you may know of a surety my doctrine; and then, behold, according to your desires, yea, even according to your faith, shall it be done unto you.—Doctrine and Covenants 10: 8.

The foregoing statements should be borne in mind when reference is made in this paper to the missionaries and representatives of other denominations or churches. And while the various churches are not preaching the fullness of the gospel of the kingdom, they may be used opportunely in the cause of truth as Paul used the temple "to the unknown God" at Athens. (See Acts 17: 23.)

The following quotations from latter day revelations, indicate our Lord's plan for the evangelization of the world in our day:

And I will show unto this people, that I had other sheep, and that they were a branch of the house of Jacob; and I will bring to light their marvelous works, which they did in my name; yea, and I will also bring to light my gospel, which was ministered unto them, and, behold, they shall not deny that which you have received, but they shall build it up, and shall bring to light the true points of my doctrine; yea, and the only doctrine which is in me; and this I do, that I may establish my gospel, that there may not be so much contention; yea, Satan doth stir up the hearts of the people to contention, concerning the points of my doctrine; and in these things they do err, for they do wrest the scriptures, and do not understand them; therefore, I will unfold unto them this great mystery; for, behold, I will gather them as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, if they will not harden their hearts; yea, if they will come, they may, and partake of the waters of life freely.—Doctrine and Covenants 3: 15. (See also Alma 10: 1; Doctrine and Covenants 16: 4; 63: 7; 41: 2.)

Our blessed Savior has told his church to "call a solemn assembly."

Behold, I will hasten my work in its time; and I give unto you who are the first laborers in this last kingdom, a commandment, that you assemble yourselves together, and organize yourselves, and prepare yourselves; and sanctify yourselves; yea, purify your hearts, and cleanse your hands and your feet before me, that I may make you clean; that I may testify unto your Father, and your God, and my God, that you are clean from the blood of this wicked generation, that I may fulfill this promise, this great and last promise which I have made unto you, when I will. Also I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall continue in prayer and fasting from this time forth. And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand; of things both in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; things which have been; things which are; things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home; things which are abroad; the wars and the perplexities of the nations; and the judgments which are on the land; and a knowledge also of countries, and of kingdoms, that ye may be prepared in all things when I shall send you again, to magnify the calling whereunto I have called you, and the mission with which I have commissioned you. . . . Therefore, verily I say unto you, my friends, Call your solemn assembly, as I have commanded you; and as all have not faith, seek ye diligently to teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning even by study, and also by faith. Organize yourselves; prepare every needful thing, and establish a house, even a house of prayer, a house of fasting, a house of faith, a house of learning, a house of glory, a house of order, a house of God; that your incomings may be in the name of the Lord; that your outgoings may be in the name of the Lord; that all your salutations may be in the name of the Lord, with uplifted hands unto the Most High. Therefore cease from all your light speeches, from all laughter, from all your lustful desires, from all your pride and light-mindedness, and from all your wicked doings. Appoint among yourselves a teacher, and let not all be spokesmen at once, but let one speak at a time, and let all listen unto his sayings, that when all have spoken, that all may be edified of all, and that every man may have an equal privilege. . . . And again, the order of the house prepared for the presidency of the school of the prophets, established for their instruction in all things that are expedient for them, even for all the officers of the church, or, in other words, those who are called to the ministry in the church, beginning at the high priests, even down to the deacons; and this shall be the order of the house of the presidency of the school; he that is appointed to be president, or teacher, shall be found standing in his place, in the house, which shall be prepared for him; therefore he shall be first in the house of God, in a place that the congregation in the house may hear his words carefully and distinctly, not with loud speech. . . . And ye shall not receive any among you into this school, save he is clean from the blood of this generation; and he shall be received by the ordinance of the washing of feet, for unto this end was the ordinance of the washing of feet instituted. And again, the ordinance of washing feet is to be administered by the president, or presiding elder of the church. It is to be commenced with prayer; and after partaking of bread and wine, he is to gird himself, according to the pattern given in the thirteenth chapter of John's testimony concerning me. Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 20-46.

The presidency of the church holds the keys to this important organization. God speaking to Joseph Smith, jr., said:

And again, verily I say unto thy brethren Sidney Rigdon and Frederick G. Williams, Their sins are forgiven them also, and they are accounted as equal with thee in holding the keys of this last kingdom; as also through your administration the keys of the school of the prophets, which I have commanded to be organized, that thereby they may be perfected in their ministry for the salvation of Zion, and the nations of Israel, and of the Gentiles, as many as will believe, that through your administration, they may receive the word, and through their administration, the word may go forth unto the ends of the earth, unto the Gentiles first, and then, behold, and lo, they shall turn unto the Jews; and then cometh the day when the arm of the Lord shall be revealed in power in convincing the nations, the heathen nations, the house of Joseph, of the gospel of their salvation. For it shall come to pass in that day, that every man shall hear the fullness of the gospel in his own tongue, and in his own language, through those who are ordained unto this power, by the administration of the Comforter, shed forth upon them, for the revelation of Jesus Christ.—Doctrine and Covenants 87: 3, 4.

When a stake is reestablished there, the Kirtland Temple could be used for the school.

All the important advances made by the Reorganization, have been the results, of obedience to direct commands from God. The building for the school of the prophets could be erected on the church property adjoining the Rock Church on the east at Independence, Missouri:

Verily I say unto you, that it is my will that an house should be built unto me in the land of Zion, like unto the pattern which I have given you; yea, let it be built speedily by the tithing of my people: behold, this is the tithing and the sacrifice which I, the Lord, require at their hands, that there may be an house built unto me for the salvation of Zion; for a place of thanksgiving, for all saints, and for a place of instruction for all those who are called to the work of the ministry, in all their several callings, and offices; that they may be perfected in the understanding of their ministry; in theory; in principle and in doctrine; in all things pertaining to the kingdom of God on the earth, the keys of which kingdom have been conferred upon you. And inasmuch as my people build an house unto me, in the name of the Lord, and do not suffer any unclean thing to come into it, that it be not defiled, my glory shall rest upon it; yea, and my presence shall be there, for I will come into it, and all the pure in heart that shall come into it, shall see God: but if it be defiled I will not come into it, and my glory shall not be there, for I will not come into unholy temples. And now, behold, if Zion do these things, she shall prosper and spread herself and become very glorious; very great, and very terrible; and the nations of the earth shall honor her, and shall say, Surely Zion is the city of our God; and surely Zion can not fall, neither be moved out of her place, for God is there, and the hand of the Lord is there; and he hath sworn by the power of his might to be her salvation, and her high tower; therefore verily thus saith the Lord, Let Zion rejoice, for this is Zion, THE PURE IN HEART; therefore let Zion rejoice, while all the wicked shall mourn; for, behold, and lo, vengeance cometh speedily upon the ungodly, as the whirlwind, and who shall escape it; the Lord's scourge shall pass over by night and by day; and the report thereof shall vex all people; yet, it shall not be staid until the Lord come; for the indignation of the Lord is kindled against their abominations, and all their wicked works; nevertheless Zion shall escape if she observe to do all things whatsoever I have commanded her, but if she observe not to do whatsoever I have commanded her, I will visit her according to all her works, with sore affliction, with pestilence, with plague, with sword, with vengeance, with devouring fire; nevertheless, let it be read this once in their ears, that I, the Lord, have accepted of their offering; and if she sin no more, none of these things shall come upon her, and I will bless her with blessings, and multiply a multiplicity of blessings upon her, and upon her generations, for ever and ever, saith the Lord your God. Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 94: 3-5. (See also 92: 2, 3.)

The fullness of the gospel will be preached to all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people through the plan outlined in the above quotations. God is ready to bestow the endowment mentioned, and it will be received by the church, when the church executes her part of the contract.

It is the duty of the church to provide means for the temporal salvation, as well as the spiritual salvation of the Saints. This salvation is through Christ on God's plan for the redemption of mankind. That plan must be followed implicitly or the work will not be acceptable to the Master. Some churches designate their theological seminaries as Schools of the Prophets.

Alterations of the divine plan of the ages may be suggested by men or devils, but such salvation will not stand the test on the day of judgment. "The law of the Lord is perfect."

It is a general law of nature that like causes produce like results. Therefore, when the church is "gathered together with one accord," that is, united in faith, love, and doctrine, then the pentecostal endowment desired by so many Saints will be given as it was given to the primitive church. Whatever happens in one case will happen in all like cases, provided that they are really like, and not merely apparently so.

Let the church continue to progress, and not mistake self-approbation for the full restoration. The Spirit of Jesus repeats his prayer to our heavenly Father, for his Saints in this age:

As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world. And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth. Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one: I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me. Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me: for thou lovest me before the foundation of the world. O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee: but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me. And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them.—John 17: 18-26.

We believe in all-humility the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints contains the means and force that shall bring about this happy union of the hearts of all who love the eternal truth of Christ.

We live in the most important period of the world's history. The subjects pressing upon the attention of the Saints of Christ call for prompt and decided action. They can not be ignored without guilt and loss; to treat them with indifference is perilous and ruinous.

To evangelize the world in the present generation is our vocation and duty. Solicitude for mankind prompts us to obey the behest that comes to us by reason of our acceptance of the gospel as a rule of action in life. To treat that call and duty with indifference at the present time is perilous to ourselves, and would be ruinous to the church.

In no dispensation since apostolic times has there been the tremendous responsibility laid on any people as that which now devolves upon us. We are confronted with privileges and opportunities such as the church has never known, God alone can measure the peril of indifference to present duty.

There are thousands of people who still seem to be ignorant of, and hence indifferent to, the awful conditions of the heathen world.

We believe the Lord is inspiring men to translate the scriptures, and thus open the way for the true gospel and the true interpretation of the Scripture, to be presented to the nations of the earth. Hymn two hundred and eleven, in the Saints' Hymnal expresses our sentiments exactly:

Yes! we trust the day is breaking;
 Joyful times are near at hand;
 God—the mighty God is speaking
 By his word in ev'ry land;
 When he chooses, when he chooses,
 Darkness flies at his command,
 Darkness flies at his command.

While the foe becomes more daring,
 While he enters like a flood,
 Christ, the Savior, is preparing
 Means to spread his truth abroad:
 Ev'ry language, ev'ry language
 Soon shall tell the love of God,
 Soon shall tell the love of God.

The fields everywhere are white unto harvest. It needs only that the sickle be thrust in. On every hand are those who should be numbered among the believers. If we could but have our ears attuned to the yearnings of their hearts, we should hear them saying: "Men and brethren, what shall we do to be saved?" The salvation of Jesus Christ is for all, and men and women on every side are seeking the way and asking for the word that shall open unto them the mysteries of the kingdom of God. It is the hour of opportunity, the hour of responsibility. Let the ministers and the people have great faith, earnest purpose, consecrated hearts, and a consuming desire to know and to do the will of God; and then let them go forth into the vineyard of the Lord to labor wherever he commands, and according as he gives opportunity, and the glorious work of the salvation of souls will fall upon the church like a gracious benediction.

Our duty as stewards of the word of God directs us to preach the whole gospel to the whole world.

There is a world beyond our own circle, a great, throbbing humanity of multiplied millions, with hearts and natures just like those about us, toiling and traveling up and down the broad road of life's activities. These were not forgotten in the blessed atonement of Gethsemane and Calvary, and the eye of God is upon them to-day; he does not forget, although others do. He is not indifferent, although others are. He still loves, although others have prejudices and need the "sheet" experience which God gave Peter on the housetop. Come, dear Saints, let us arouse and not sleep on our rights in this matter.

Providential hindrances may have excused our indifference to this great question in the past, but these have been removed, and we are now confronted with the one question, "Shall we create the conditions necessary for the proper establishment of the school of the prophets?"

(Sang in tongues by Bro. J. H. Lake, at reunion near New Philadelphia, Ohio, August, 1910.)

Tune: Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing.

Come, ye people of my choice,
 Hear the Spirit's warning voice;
 Be united and rejoice
 While ye listen to my voice.
 With your humble prayers and fasting
 Ye to me have turned your heart
 Therefore I with you am meeting
 That ye may receive in part.

Oh, the blessings that await you
 In the gathering of my Saints;
 Greater blessings in the future
 According to your needs and wants;
 For the day is surely coming
 When the Savior shall appear;
 Be ye faithful, kind and loving,
 Then for his reign he'll you prepare.

EVIL EFFECTS OF IDLENESS; NO WORK IN THE HOME.

We live in a beautiful world, a wonderful world. It is filled with many things for our enjoyment and benefit. The good Father has given unsparingly, that is, he has placed within our reach, through reasonable effort on our part, countless blessings and pleasures. But always plainly discernible is the need for personal effort. We enjoy the fruits of the soil, the many flowers of varied hues, and the countless forms of pleasure and profit that present themselves. But experience teaches that we enjoy these much more intensely when we share in the labor which brings these results. Thus we know that industry is divinely ordained. The smallest plant life, the tiniest insect and all earth's myriad forms of existence have something to do; some mission to perform. They all naturally have periods of rest and times of occupation, but there is the never failing, universal, industrious existence. Each individual being accomplishes a mission—it dies; and largely so is the existence of man. And when, individually, we have mentally grasped the importance of each individual life we shall be able to see the need of purposeful living. Then and thenceforth this world is full of things to do, things to be accomplished; and a conscientious being can not be idle under such a realization. There are many spheres in which man exists, and there is that endless opportunity for action, for industry, which leads him to accomplish something. God has originated this plan, it is clearly to be seen, hence no argument is needed to establish its wisdom.

The important idea then, is to establish habits of industry in our children as early as possible, placing no limitation as to years. The earlier the training is begun the more fixed the habit will be; and the home is the place where this training must be commenced, and diligently pursued. The little toddler can be taught to perform small tasks at times and his energies be devoted to them. As he grows and develops he is apt to form and establish habits of useless, aimless living if he has no work to do. Labor is not always required in order to have good results, but occupation is necessary, and it should be directed occupation.

Labor has its place from childhood to old age, tasks being carefully suited to strength and ability. An unoccupied mind is apt to be filled with evil. As a Spanish proverb has it, "Men are naturally tempted by the devil, but an idle man positively tempts the devil."

Idleness is very fruitful in discontent. The baby just able to sit alone, is made infinitely happy if given something to do which actually calls for labor, always, however, suited to his undeveloped mind and body. So we are led to believe that what we call play in childhood occupation, is often labor, as serious as any we perform. It is appropriate to his strength and development, and necessarily so if any fruitful results obtain. This is what we must study to furnish the child, as he unfolds and grows, in order to establish the beneficial and necessary habits of industry. This should be the study of the parents and not their incidental thought.

Helping mother is one of the first and most pleasant modes of teaching children habits of industry. Show a small child a dusty chair, perhaps his own little chair, which he likes very much. Do not simply tell him to dust it, but teach him to do so. Be pleasing, leisurely, and careful in teaching him how to do it and do it right. Then call attention to the marvelous change in its appearance. How pretty its bright color since the dust is removed! What little hands to have done such a wonderful thing! He will be almost sure to respond and respond heartily to the suggestions, and quickly acquire a liking for the work. By all means guard against the creation of the impression of drudgery in connection with labor. Teach the child to love it, and such will be his attitude in years to come. This can be done if the teaching is carefully accomplished. "Watch and pray always" can be applied as needfully here as in any other situation.

This is a serious question and one not to be incidentally considered. Regularity of labor is needful if good habits are founded. This responsibility rests on the parent, and is a duty, not to be avoided nor its neglect excused by any circumstances.

As a child grows old enough to do a number of tasks he will often show a real liking for work and have a desire to help. This is the time that many a father and mother make a fatal mistake, much to the disadvantage of the child and secondarily to the loss of the parent as well, resulting to him in lack of assistance many times when he should have it. When such emergencies arise it is no longer a question of privilege but one of duty. It is often very tempting to a busy parent to do a task himself rather than stand by and teach the unskilled child. He can do it better and in less time, because of his experience. But this difficulty can not compare in results with a proper start made towards teaching the child. Most children learn quite readily if patience and thought are used by the teacher. But if a child learns slowly he surely ought to have a very patient, careful effort made to teach him. It is his right; and the parent has not done his duty until he has given him every advantage of patient effort in his behalf.

The training of the mind, the body as well, by means of useful occupation, is the greatest safeguard against the evils in the social life. Vicious habits are often formed simply from an idle atmosphere, and can always be successfully kept out of thought and mind by planning the proper use of the child's time. The proper balance of mental and physical is important along this line. Right training and instruction should be accompanied by enough occupation to tire the body sufficiently to induce healthful sleep at proper hours. Then after proper rest a child will have energy generated in such quantity as to make him anxious to be busy. Then comes the opportunity for the parent to direct.

While we are children we should be prepared, in a general way, for whatever will be required of us when we are grown. If a child is not taught the right use of time, by training and example, while he is growing and forming his life habits, he will be at a great loss when he finds himself required to meet life's demands. Does a mother, therefore, have a right to continually perform tasks which her children could easily be taught to do? She will be held accountable for neglect of duty to some extent if she overlooks this important idea in the training of her child.

The world is so full of wondrous things, calling for action of brain and muscle, that the moment our hands are loosed from common toil they can be full and yet more left, always.

Letter Department

GOOSE CREEK, WEST VIRGINIA, September 24, 1910.

Editors Herald: Just closed a week's meetings at this place; had full house, and good interest and order were manifested by the people. Parties were present who have not been out before to hear what the Saints teach. I don't know that I ever enjoyed better liberty in presenting the gospel than at this time, so have reason to believe good will come from it. Bro. B. Beall has charge of the work here and is a man of good report among his fellow-men.

There are some who are called Saints who absent themselves from the means of grace, who stay at home, do not come to church, and if you talk to them they say their hope is in the ultimate triumph of this work, and hope to be saved by it, and all the time they sit on the stool of doing nothing, finding fault with those who are doing what they can for the work. I have come to the conclusion that these are the ones who will be numbered among the foolish virgins, who will not have the Spirit of God when Christ comes, so will have to serve a time in the prison for their indifference. I hope that all who profess the name of Christ will awake to a sense of their duty, and the work will go on a lot faster; but I guess we will have to bear the discouraging features as well as the good ones, as it is written, The battle is not to the strong, nor the race to the swift, but he that endureth to the end shall or may hope for salvation.

The work moves on slowly in this part of the vineyard. Laborers are few and we have no local force to help out, so it is more difficult for the missionary. There are some young men of promise; if they will but move out, they will undoubtedly be instrumental in bringing about much good. The only way I see out, is for each one holding the priesthood to get out and do something; then they will receive spiritual strength and comfort, and the favor of God will be on them.

Hope that our conference at Clarksburg will prove a success. The Saints of that place have got the foundation of their church built, but will not have it ready for the conference, which convenes the first Saturday and Sunday in October. It is understood that the Saints at Cabin Run intend to have their church dedicated the second Sunday in October, and after that I expect to go into Virginia for a time to see what can be done for the work in that State; so I would kindly ask all who have an interest in the work, as to good being done by my presence and preaching, address me, Waynesboro, Virginia, care Isaac Coffman, R. F. D. 4.

In gospel bonds,

SAMUEL BROWN.

NEBO, ILLINOIS, September 23, 1910.

Editors Herald: The work moves about as usual here. I attended Baptist Association some few weeks ago, in August last. It was amusing to witness some of the peculiarities I came in contact with. One good old sister said she heard I preached Baptist doctrine, and she thought I would come back, etc. I told her I preached the doctrine of Jesus Christ, and if they wanted to accept it I had no objection, even though they might call it Baptist doctrine, and that I hoped for that union on the gospel plan, and then it could be seen who had done the coming. One Baptist preacher asked me why I left the Baptist Church. Of course this started the ball. When I contrasted the Baptist Church and the Church of Christ, he offered me money if I would go with him to one of our apostles and have that apostle perform a miracle for him.

I told him if he could find me a parallel to his proposed feat in apostolic work, I would take the job. He said that

The inexhaustible supply of fields of labor and their infinitely varied character, plainly proves our predestined adaptability to a sphere of usefulness. When we do not act in this God given sphere we suffer, and consequently cause others to suffer. We also rob the world of the little we might do to further its rightful development.

In church work activity is plainly essential. Lack of interest and loss of faith are often the results of no personal effort. And one of the great beauties of the plan that the Lord has marked out for us, is its perfect adaptability to all classes and conditions of life.

Let us therefore, as parents, set a blameless example, as to proper use of time, it being the outgrowth of thought and planning rather than a haphazard ordinary way of doing things. Then let us not forget for a moment that the industrious parent does not make the industrious child, as our own efforts alone, can not develop our children. But rather let us teach them personal industry and a love for it. This will grow into a firm and fixed habit, making a child good and useful in his own life career. Do not be discouraged if some of your plans seemingly fail. Be resourceful, and study to be successful. Then do you think the Lord will deny you success in that which is positively ordained by him to be essential to our growth and development? We can succeed in training our children to be industrious, and we must have faith that we can do it. That all children are not so trained is very evident, hence we need more persistent and continued earnest effort, accompanied by systematic planning. Let us remember that "there is a past which is gone for ever, but there is a future which is still our own."

Questions on October Reading.

How are many of the blessings of God to be obtained? What is intensified by these efforts on our part? What is apparent in regard to plant and animal life? What impresses the need of purposeful living? When this is realized, to what does it open our eyes? What call does this make upon the conscience? What are we led to believe with reference to the plan of industry? What, then, is of great importance in the early life of the child? Where should this training begin and how should it be continued? What habits result if a child has no work to do? How should children be directed in their occupations? How should tasks be allotted to a child? To what danger is the unoccupied mind open? Why? What results from idleness? What benefit accrues from the child's labor in play? What thought should parents give to this? How may the child's love of helping mother be employed to his advantage? Give examples of work that children may do? What should be the parents' attitude in teaching children to work? In what do parents frequently make a fatal mistake? How is a busy parent often tempted? What is his duty? What is the right of the child who learns slowly? How are habits of industry a safeguard to a child? For what are these preparing him? What indicates our adaptability to usefulness? What loss is suffered from lack of industry? What example should parents set as to proper use of time? Are the children of industrious parents necessarily industrious? What encouragement is there for parents who diligently, considerately, and prayerfully seek to establish their children in habits of industry?

was only a hole to get out at, for he was in earnest and would on these conditions join our work at once. I told him there were two kinds of seekers, too; once Jesus said "a wicked and adulterous generation seek after sign, etc." To the other James said, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not," and if he belonged to the latter, God would show him the truth in his own way, and not by me escorting him to the presence of a later day apostle to have a miracle performed, to satisfy his morbid curiosity. He further offered if I would meet Bogard, Moore, or some one of his picking, to pay our expenses to his place and furnish house, etc. Haven't heard anything further from him.

I closed a five days' debate with Elder H. S. Derr, Baptist, at Beardstown, Illinois, September 9, with satisfaction to our people, but Elder Derr's people seemed to have forsaken him, so different from what it was at our last debate. At our former debates they seemed to stand by him, but this time he stood almost alone. It is a picnic to meet Elder Derr. He challenged me to work a miracle. I met this by telling him what Jesus said, and further, that this was a revelation that the Baptists weren't as sure of being right as they pretended to be, for on other occasions and more than once they had proffered to join our church if they could witness a miracle. And further, as this proposition was peculiar to the methods of the opposers of Christ and his work, and was never used by Christ or his disciples, I filed this very proposition as an infallible witness against the claims of the Baptist Church. The Devil said, "Perform for me a miracle and I will believe." The wicked Pharisees said, "Master, we would see a sign." The infidel thief said mockingly, "If he be the Christ, let him save himself and us."

How few note this fact. They claim to be the continuation of the church of Christ. Neither Christ nor his disciples ever offered to give up their faith to the Devil or his coworkers at the sight of a miracle; but the Devil and his coworkers did offer and challenge Jesus and his disciples to perform a miracle, and that they would then believe. Therefore, we must place Brother Derr in his own crowd. Elder Derr had written an article to an Illinois Baptist, telling what a wonderful victory Moore had won over Brother Curtis, etc. Well, it was amusing; as I referred to the article, Derr suggested that I read all of it. I said, "I'll do it, provided you will give the time." "Certainly," he would do that. The article closed with these words, write it down, "Victory for the Baptist."

At the conclusion I turned to the elder and said, "You didn't say we baptized eight at the conclusion of that debate; you didn't say three of that number were Baptists; you didn't say one of them was a sister of Elder Tucker, Moore's moderator. (Brother Curtis baptized eight at close of said debate.) This gave considerable merriment for the crowd. Although this debate was not very well attended, except by the Saints, some few attended that seemed to be interested; one, especially, a Freewill Baptist minister.

Bro. R. T. Walters acted as moderator for me and did his part well. We were well sustained by the Saints of Beardstown. If the Baptists had stood by Derr as well it would have been more interesting.

The Saint Louis District conference convened last Saturday. Myself and five of our young people from here attended. We certainly had a feast; were well cared for temporarily, and throughout the day there was a spirit of oneness on the part of Saints. Especially I would mention the prayer meeting, which was well attended and spiritual. The preaching was by the writer and Brother Archibald. Brother Archibald did well.

J. R. DICKSON.

Editors Herald: How often we become discouraged with the things of this life and wish we were most anywhere but the place we are. We sometimes complain of the trials and struggles we undergo and create within ourselves a feeling of disgust toward our surroundings, but when we permit these feelings to grow we are doing a great injury to ourselves. Many times I have so felt and have nurtured those feelings until I became the most miserable being on earth. I realized the foolishness and harm it had done me, and so am trying to overcome.

If we would but stop to think, I believe we would see that our life is in a great measure what we make it. When trials and burdens confront us, why not put on the face of cheerfulness and try to smile our trials away. Can't do it? Why, yes, we can. For can't, you know, as we were oftentimes told when children, "Can't never did anything," and I am sure we don't want to be classed among the do nothings. When we have these feelings of depression, and our burdens bear down heavily upon us, let us go to our heavenly Father, and ask him to let his Spirit dwell with us that we may have that strength needed to overcome and bear up under our trials. He will not turn us empty away.

While writing this song came to my mind:

"Oh for a faith that will not shrink,
Tho' pressed by every foe;
That will not tremble on the brink,
Of any earthly woe."

I wish we could all have just such faith. But if we sit idly by and say, "I can't," we can never expect to have such faith. So many times we hear the Saints say while praying; "Lord, that we may become as burnished gold." How can we become as burnished gold, unless we are first put through the fire. Those trials and troubles are like fire to us sometimes; so if we come out victorious we must have something for which we are to fight. So, Saints and friends, when these troubles confront us, let us try and think thus, that this is one more thing to overcome, and I am going to try my best to come conqueror over it.

And if we become valiant soldiers in our endeavors to overcome trials, we must wear the smile of cheerfulness, until we will find it will become a contagious disease, and will so develop that all around us will feel the smiling influence, and burdens will become lighter, and our desires for right stronger.

I am ever striving to do that which is right and want to go "onward and upward." Please pray for me.

OLLIE DERRY.

SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI, September 21, 1910.

Editors Herald: We have just moved from southern Illinois to Springfield, Missouri, and can say for the time we have been here, we like the place fine. We attended church Sunday and heard Brother Sparling preach, and I must say that I felt to rejoice within my heart to have the privilege of attending church once more. My one desire is to do something to help the cause of this grand and glorious latter day work. I love this work and I have never regretted the step taken when I obeyed the gospel, but I feel sorry that I haven't lived a more humble life than I have. My desire is to live better than ever, and by the help of the Lord I feel determined to do so.

I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints, that I may hold out faithful to the end, and that I may do something for this work, that the Lord may direct by his Holy Spirit, that I may be the means of bringing souls to Christ and be a shining light to those around me.

Ever praying for the redemption of Zion,

MRS. ELLA NORMAN.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, September 23, 1910.

Editors of the Saints' Herald: Perhaps it is about time we were writing to let your readers know that we are still living and fighting. We reach our field of labor July 27, stopping in Ogden one night, where, as usual, we were made to feel decidedly at home by Bro. Wells Chase and family. There we met Brethren Stead and Davis, and in the evening repaired to the court-house square, where we held a very interesting street meeting. We could but think of the times about eight years since when we used to play the same game, only minus the help of our brethren.

We reached the city the 28th. Securing a room and getting our baggage from the depot kept us busy the rest of the day. From then until the first Sunday in August we hunted up Saints, etc. On the date given we were placed in charge of the branch and on the 9th took up the burden of the street work. Bishop Kelley paid us a visit here from the 10th to the 12th, and since his visit we have been supplied with an auto, from whose decks we have carried on a continuous campaign on the streets of this and surrounding cities. This may seem to some as rather extravagant, but when you consider the fact that there are four of us in this missionary work, all doing our part, praying, preaching, singing, distributing tracts, etc., and that that part has required us to travel a little over a thousand miles since August 14, we know of no other way in which the same work could have been done by us, neither could it have been done more economically.

We find the conditions in the work here are encouraging and the interest manifest in our street services is intense, and the attendance is good, and of a marked character. When we say of a marked character, we mean those that to a large degree make up the audience come night after night watching and waiting for our appearance.

We have only lately received our tracts which were ordered a month ago, and it seems to us that the people were never so hungry for reading matter as now. Now we are not casting reflections on the HERALD Office when we say that our tracts were so long on the way. The delay was en route. From the time taken one would think that progress from the old prairie schooner to "Nahum's chariots" was not so great as it might have been.

From August 22 to September 4, inclusive, we were in Provo. There, in cooperation with Brethren Hansen and others we carried on a week's street meetings, followed by our reunion, which was not largely attended, but we felt was profitable to all who were present.

Our branch work here is moving along but slowly, yet we feel we are making some progress. Sister Chase, with our daughter Alice and our son Charley, besides assisting us with all of our missionary endeavors, has revived the Religion work, and established a Sunday school normal training class, and are working in the Sunday school. In fact we all have our hands full; but that is what it takes to make life worth living. Of course our street work brings some opposition, but the opposition only serves to emphasize the truths presented.

We feel the Master is blessing us in this work here, and are glad that we are accounted worthy to labor in the cause. Our address is 171 P street.

A. M. CHASE.

MYRTLE POINT, OREGON, September 21, 1910.

Dear Herald: We have thus early succeeded in raising some trouble with some people in this district. One G. W. Taylor during our reunion circulated R. B. Neal's literature, thinking to curtail our influence. We approached him in reference to it, which finally culminated in a scurrilous effort by Taylor through the town paper against our people. F. J. Chatburn, as president of the branch, replied with an open challenge, asking Taylor to make good his assertions. Taylor has not yet answered, and his members, Presbyterians, are not well pleased with his spectacular effort. He may crawl out through that avenue.

Brother E. Keeler, our worthy patriarch, was preaching in Brewster Valley; a few adventists took exceptions and sent for one F. S. Bunch, the apostle of adventism in Oregon. We were notified and went to aid our brother in forming question, and the necessary arrangements for discussion. We finally succeeded, the question being: "Ten commandments in full force and binding on all Christian people." Time set for September 14. We were on hand at the set time. County superintendent, moderator for M. Bunch, and ye "Jots man," for patriarch; a nonchurchman for chairman, and the battle of words was on for six days.

Mr. Bunch is at the head of the Adventist's College of Oregon, and noted for his prowess as an educator and debater, and we give him credit with being a scholar and a gentleman. Brother Keeler was in striking contrast with the fine rounded, grammatical sentences of the Oregon teacher, and his ability to put together, twist and turn to, make his points; but our plain spoken, honest brother had the truth, while his opponent had the education only, and under the sledge hammer blows and sound reasoning of plain, untwisted scripture, the old law went down "abolished, nailed to the cross," and better things obtained under the gospel law. "The Sabbath" was the "Gibraltar" of the college man, but it, too, went down, unretrievably so, by Christ breaking it and teaching others to do so, as positively stated in John 5: 18, and other texts.

Brother Keeler improved from start to finish, while the Oregon man weakened from the first to last, and looked worried and wearied with the conflict; while our old farmer preacher, in thundering tones and with scathing denunciation, objected to the dial of time being turned back two thousand years to live under a law that made nothing perfect. Adventists who wearily listened to the doctrine of Christ hurled against the Mosaic death trap in this contention, went away with a confused (to say the least,) sense of their unworthiness in keeping the seventh day, and the vigorous appeal of the learned man fell flat, as being essential to future happiness.

We have another debate brewing with one O. A. Houghten, who is indorsed by R. B. Neal of Kentucky. Mr. Houghten challenged me through the paper. We have accepted under the usual conditions, if complied with. This man is a Christian, so called, "So it is war to the knife, and knife to the hilt." Brother Keeler has licked Bunch, F. J. C. will do the same trick with Taylor, and ye "Jots man," will attend to the Campbellite's case.

T. W. CHATBURN.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, CANADA, September 26, 1910.

Editors Herald: As I enjoy reading the articles and letters in the HERALD, I feel obliged to contribute my mite, that perchance some one may be edified.

I left home the 13th of June for my mission field in Canada, expecting to be gone until April, 1911, but on the 9th of August I received a telegram from home saying, "Your house badly damaged by fire, come at once." Two days later

I arrived on the scene and as soon as an adjustment with the insurance company could be had, I began making repairs. Our house being uninhabitable we erected a tent on the lawn and enjoyed a month's enforced outing. Having completed repairs and moved in again, I bade adieu to loved ones on the 20th inst., and started north again.

Prior to my coming north, I, like many others, had the Canada fever, but after a little experience, and observing the havoc wrought on the crops by the Chenook winds, the fever has subsided. Then to think of miles and miles of country without a fruit tree of any kind is a poor stimulant to encourage admiration in the heart of a "Southerner." We love the land of "big red apples" and when I read the editorial in the late HERALD on "Life in Lamoni," I felt to exclaim, "Those are my sentiments too." Hurrah for Lamoni!

But the Chenook winds, hailstorms, and cold winters are not the only barriers to happiness and progress up here. The talebearer, the scandal monger, the backbiter, and other pests common to most communities are in evidence. For some cause the minister in charge sought to wreak vengeance upon me during my absence, and places me in charge of the work in Winnipeg and vicinity. If everyone felt as I do concerning the matter there would be another feature to the controversy as to who shall preside.

I find some noble Saints here in Winnipeg, and other points I have visited, but there is a visibility of dead timber that needs to be removed before desirable results can be expected. We are hampered for the want of a suitable meeting place. An effort will be made at once to provide commodious quarters where we can meet unmolested and invite those who become interested in our message, after which we expect to set about regulating affairs as per instructions, and unless there is speedy repentance on the part of some, we will have to apply the "pruning knife."

Bro. Fred A. Smith spent some two weeks in the city and so far as I have been able to learn, made a favorable impression; his work being appreciated by all except—well, I'll tell him all about it when we meet. I forgot to mention that Bro. Davis Smith and the writer, assisted by the local brethren, have done considerable street work in the city, as a result of which some good people are investigating and some about ready for baptism. Hopefully in the strife,

E. E. LONG.

WORK IN TORONTO.

With the passing of the hot weather comes that old feeling of "Push on the great latter day work; arise and let us be doing." Down every street and through every avenue must we herald the angel's message; and as this missionary zeal intensifies, our people turn to our well tried warrior, and Bishop Evans is again called to the front. As a preliminary to the coming season's campaign a reception was given Brother Evans on September 1, 1910. In order that he might be taken by surprise, he was asked to act as chairman. The program consisted of music, recitations, and speeches. Bro. Will McCarthy's name appeared on the list for a solo; but instead thereof, he read the following address to the Bishop:

"TORONTO, September 1, 1910.

"Dear Brother Evans: The young people of the church desire to take this opportunity to express their appreciation of your interest and cooperation in their work and welfare, for the life that now is and will be hereafter, we have often heard you say that your most valued reward and deepest source of encouragement were the assurance of having been a blessing to humanity and having power to scatter sunshine upon lives that were otherwise dark and cold. For this reason, perhaps, it is superfluous here to remind you that you have done us good; the evidences of it are everywhere apparent to all; however, our gratitude prompts us to the expression of it and we trust that the encomium, though poor, may prove words fitly spoken, which as King Solomon said 'are like apples of gold in pitchers of silver.' To enumerate the many ways in which you have helped us young people is too long a story to tell here; suffice it to say that your influence has been felt in every auxiliary of the church; in our educational work you have been there to teach and advise; in our devotions, to counsel and lead us; and in our amusements to make us laugh; and thus in all things you have been the solar center of our success. We trust you may long be spared to assist us in our work and play. May time lay its unwelcome hand upon you graciously, and as the years come in and the sands run out, may there be added to your crown of blessings, jewels richer than before, and to your pathway, light growing brighter and brighter until the perfect day.

"Given on behalf of the Toronto Branch."

Brother Evans was completely taken off guard, but replied, assuring us that the latter day work was his first care, and all his energies would be spent in the furthering of its interests. He stood ready and anxious to lay hold of every opportunity to advance the work in Toronto, and with the assistance of the Saints he hoped to make this the greatest season we have yet known.

The branch president, Bro. A. F. McLean, was called upon for an address. He reviewed the work done since January 1, 1905, the beginning of the Majestic Theater services. We give below a synopsis of his address:

"Prior to January 1, 1905, the Lord by revelation had notified the little band of Saints that he had a great work to perform in Toronto, for he had much people in this city. Through years of adversity and trials their hopes, clung to those prophecies; and their expectations ran high; what seemed to them almost beyond hope. The speaker thought, that had the Lord in those promises given the figures which he (Bro. McLean) had compiled from the branch records and was about to read, few would have had sufficient faith to look for their fulfillment. But the Lord had a great work to do. He selected a servant to do it. Bishop Evans, then of the First Presidency, came to Toronto again, and by inspiration the great work opened before us. In the contemplation of a great work and the selection of a servant, it was reasonable to suppose that God would direct that servant in the carrying out of the same. Some may have thought Brother Evans was hard to approach; but probably in that point lay our assurance of success. Had he listened to the various opinions of how the work should have been conducted, he might have swerved from the way the Lord desired it done. So whether the methods used suited our ideas or not the wonderful results seemed to justify the course taken by Brother Evans. The figures will not be as interesting to those who have come into the church during the progress of the work, as to those acquainted with our struggle for an existence in a stall in the market on Maud street. The effort to pay $2 per month is present in the mind of the speaker, and no doubt others here remember it. In our minds does this work appear in its full and true magnitude, and from the bottom of our hearts we thank God we have lived to see this day. Never in the days of privation, poverty, and promise, did our fondest expectations venture to picture anything approximating the figures which I now give you covering a period of five years and eight months, January 1, 1905, to September 1, 1910.

"FINANCES.

Paid on church debt	$11,533.81
Paid on Theater Services	5,171.64
Paid on branch expenses	3,378.29

Total$20,088.74

"Average per month, $295.35.

"The collections on the plates at the Sunday services in the church show the increase has been steady and is not the result of a short boom, but of a gradual growth.

Collections, 1906	$344.17
Collections, 1907	577.41
Collections, 1908	724.10
Collections, 1909	836.05

"Six months ending June 30, 1910, $501.50, as compared with $406.37 for corresponding six months in 1909.

"None of these figures include the cost of the three nights in Massey Hall, where Brother Evans addressed thousands of people, the collections paying the expenses. As the speaker was confined to his home with smallpox during those services, and so is not in possession of those particulars, neither has payment of tithing been considered, but the bishop has remarked on several occasions that the Toronto Saints are second to none in Canada in paying tithing, notwithstanding the great amount of money they were raising and paying on local work.

"ADVERTISING AND LITERATURE.

"There has been displayed throughout the city, 800 large fence posters, 5,150 billboards, 300,000 lithograph bills placed in windows and on fences, 25,000 dodgers put in letter boxes and shoved under doors, 250,000 tracts and sermons have been given away free. Thus not only by Brother Evans' voice have thousands heard the gospel, but by his printed sermons have hundreds of thousands read the glad tidings; also a large wagon sign has been driven through the main streets every Saturday afternoon preceding each lecture in the theater. We have gotten into every paper in the city (with one exception) either by way of paid advertisements or a write up.

"MEMBERSHIP.

Baptisms 1905	35
Baptisms 1906	61
Baptisms 1907	81
Baptisms 1908	73
Baptisms 1909	69
Baptisms eight months of 1910	51

"Should we keep up our present monthly average to the end of this year, it will be our second best year.

"While we rejoice in the number who have accepted the gospel, yet we should figure in the results, those who have rejected it. Eternity alone will reveal those figures. The thought is, How many have heard the gospel in its fullness and plainness? These figures show how abundantly God has fulfilled his promises, and they cause us to trust him for the fulfillment of still greater promises, which he has made us.

"That the determination to continue the work might remain with us, is the prayer of the speaker."

Your correspondent may add that the Sunday night services pack the church, and as soon as Canadian conferences are over, the bishop will again enter the opera house, when once more we hope to see thousands flocking to hear the Old Jerusalem gospel.

Before the close of the reception, a motion prevailed that the above address and figures be sent for publication to the HERALD, Ensign, and Canadian Mirror.

Secretary Toronto Branch.

News From Branches

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Cleveland Branch is in good condition.

We have Bro. O. Miller and his bride with us since the reunion. He is helping the branch a good deal.

We are continuing the street preaching and have commenced cottage work. It is the intention of those in charge to move forward, and the coöperation of all members is desired, as we are looking for openings.

Our force of ministers has also been added to by T. W. Topping being ordained elder, and B. C. Keck being ordained priest.

Our street work is being carried on by Elders O. Miller, F. T. Haines, and John W. Topping, assisted by R. V. Miller and F. Webbe, teachers. We hold forth at two different places Saturday nights, in the down town district. Our regular meetings have been well attended and are at Wade Park avenue, near Seventy-first street.

Pastoral.

To the Ministry, Saints, and Friends of the Southern Missouri District, Greeting: Having been appointed and placed in charge of the above district, with Elder J. F. Cunningham, of Thayer, Missouri, as my assistant, I pray you that in order that we may accomplish the good and purpose of our calling, that we may have the hearty cooperation of the local ministry, Saints, and friends, and that we may all work together to the selfsame end, carrying out the angel's message, that will give life and salvation to our fellow-men. Let every officer in or out of branches, be busy doing good. This is the hastening time, and to God we must answer for our stewardships.

To the scattered Saints, let me say, Do all you can to secure places for the missionaries to occupy; letting either of us know as to the prospect of gospel work in your neighborhood, and as soon as possible your requests for labor will be complied with. Shall be thankful for a report of your labors just before each district conference.

Your brother, colaborer, and partner with God in accomplishing his marvelous work and a wonder.

TESTIMONY IN CONFLICT.

"I bear my testimony that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God; and that Brigham Young was his legal successor."

Not long ago an elder of the Utah Mormon church, whose name is immaterial to the issue presented, stood before us in private conversation and bore the above testimony three separate times. What may have been in the mind of this young elder to cause him to bear such a testimony at such a time it is unnecessary to inquire. It may have been a thought prevailing that his duty to his church organization as an elder sent out to present the gospel and evangelize the world justified him in bearing such a testimony to those who might differ from him upon the faith and doctrines of the denomination which he represented, as well as to those to whom he might preach in his itinerancy, in order to secure adherence to their faith. The statement, as it is given, is a peculiar one.

Mentioning the circumstances to a few others of our own way of believing one of them from the Middle West stated to us that he had heard that testimony borne probably a thousand times by members of the Utah church. It would appear that it is the shibboleth of those that are sent out from the Utah church and forms the basic statement upon which their faith and church allegiance are founded. As such it will repay some thoughtful consideration. For instance; we accept the first statement as true, that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. This is broad in its character, and applies only to Joseph Smith and the legitimacy of his labors under the angelic message contained in the revelations given to the church in its formative periods. We can have no fault to find with this statement.

The second statement, that Brigham Young is his legal successor, is a subject for just dispute. It is crafty in its spirit and would seem to carry the idea that if Joseph Smith was a prophet, so also was Brigham Young a prophet; but this is successfully disputed by Pres. Brigham Young himself, who said more than once, "I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but I have been profitable to this people." If the intention of those who formulated this testimony to be borne by the neophytes in the Utah Mormon church was to bear the inference that Brigham Young was the successor to Joseph Smith as president of the church, those thus formulating it forgot that Joseph Smith had not been president of that church in the West, and that Brigham Young was virtually the first incumbent of the office of president of a polygamous church; and these young men, like the one who so ostentatiously bore testimony to us, that Brigham Young was Joseph Smith's legal successor, have not been correctly informed as to the history of their own organization. If they had been they would have known that on the 6th day of August, 1847, Brigham Young baptized those of the Twelve who were associated with him in the pioneer company into the valley of Great Salt Lake, and was himself baptized by one of those whom he had baptized; and on the 8th day of August he baptized the whole band of pioneers into a new regime; and that subsequently every person reaching the valley over "the rim of the basin," (meaning those who came into the valley over various passes through the mountains,) were required to be baptized, upon no other order or precedent than the one established upon those two days, the 6th and 8th of August, 1847.

These young men should also have known that in the December following this extraordinary action upon the part of Brigham Young and his associates of the Twelve, upon Brigham Young's return to Winter Quarters, near Omaha, Nebraska, and Council Bluffs, Iowa, Brigham Young was first chosen by his associates in the Quorum of Twelve, with two others, to form the presidency of a new church under the regime of Brigham Young, he choosing Heber C. Kimball and Jedediah M. Grant as his counselors, and proceeded to fill up at that time and afterwards the Quorum of Twelve.

The order for the rebaptizing of all those who crossed the mountains into the valley was enforced by President Young; thus baptizing the adherents to that faith, including polygamy, as practiced by them, out from under the presidency of Joseph Smith and the faith which he had established and in which he died, and into the church whose shibboleth we have quoted at the head of this article. The statement in this testimony that Brigham Young was the legal successor of Joseph Smith is a subject of jurisprudence in both ecclesiastical and secular law. The issue has thus been joined in the courts of the United States, and public notice served upon the Utah Mormon church. Twice has this joining of issue before these courts resulted disastrously to the claim; for twice have the courts decided that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, whose president is the son of Joseph Smith the Prophet and at the time of the holding of the courts, was the legal successor of the original church. The claim in regard to organization is thus established in the secular courts of the land. This decision of the court, establishing the identity of the church presided over by Joseph Smith the Prophet and the one by his son, Joseph Smith, establishes the fact that the son of the Prophet was and is the legal successor of his father.

The testimony in these two separate actions before the courts was based upon the spiritual law and ordinances of the church, its faith and its practices as given by revelation of God, through Joseph Smith the Prophet, and while the courts were what is known as secular courts, the evidence upon which the judgment and verdict of the courts were founded was the ecclesiastical law, and every lawyer acquainted with jurisprudence is well aware of the fact that such conclusion based upon such testimony was inevitable and must stand against all contradiction and dispute.

The Reorganization stands ready, and has always stood ready, in forensic disputation anywhere, before any people, under fair and equal conditions, to defend the claim to legal succession as made by its officers and members, from its institution to the present moment, and throw down the gauntlet of challenge to those who may claim adversely.

Perhaps the main vital point on the spiritual side of the controversy is this: Jesus said to his disciples on one occasion, "Whom do you say that I am?" The reply to this question was this: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." (Matthew 16: 16, 17.) Jesus at that time said to these men, his disciples, speaking definitely to Peter, that it would be upon this rock, (the fact that is stated by Peter) that he would build his church. As a consequence of this the testimony of the disciples as a whole was subsequently borne, as stated in the Acts of the Apostles, to the same general principle, that "Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God."

The Utah Mormon polygamous church may conscientiously, devoutly, and possibly sacredly bear testimony that Brigham Young was the foster father prophet of the church to which they belong, and make the statement that he was the successor of Joseph Smith the Prophet; but the claim to the prophetic office being refuted by the statement of President Young himself, that he was neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, and the claim to legal successorship having been successfully disproved in the courts by both ecclesiastical and secular law, the testimony fails of any other effect than to show that they who make it are both members of the church of Pres. Brigham Young and his successors, under the polygamous regime. Each of Brigham Young's successors so far has been a polygamist, and the last incumbent of this office is notable in this distinction, in that the wives who have borne him children have been polygamous wives, and the children whom they have borne have been polygamous children; and if any of them are now legitimate by the law, it has been through the action of polygamous associates, who have been made lawmakers in the State of Utah.

The church of Christ anciently established bore this testimony, that Jesus was the Christ and the doctrine was true. This was the promise of the Scriptures. The church established by Joseph Smith and his associates in 1830 bore this testimony, that Jesus was the Christ, and the doctrine was true. This was the testimony of the Scriptures to them. This was the testimony of the Book of Mormon to them. This was the testimony of the revelations of God to them. The church under Joseph Smith did not stand upon the testimony (of the membership) that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. The Reorganized Church does not stand upon the testimony of its membership that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and that his son is his legal successor; but it stands upon the common testimony of the membership of the church during the days of the disciples, subsequent to the death of the Savior, upon the testimony of the church on this land under the prophets from Lehi down to Moroni, and upon the testimony of the same Spirit now borne to the Reorganized Church, that Jesus is the Christ and the doctrine is true.

This is the safe ground, and no matter how strongly these representatives of the polygamous believing and polygamous teaching church may testify, it must be clear that they come very nearly, even quite under the condemnation of the ancient prophet who said to Israel, "Though ye swear that the Lord your God liveth, ye swear falsely."

TONGUES AND INTERPRETATION.

PROPHECY GIVEN AT REGULAR PRAYER MEETING AT BAY CITY REUNION, AUGUST 21, 1910, BY APOSTLE J. W. WIGHT.

Yea; thus saith the Spirit. Many have been doubting. Many have been distrustful, but for your good I say unto you as my people, that which you have doubted has had no foundation for doubt. For I, the Lord, your God, have done many things in a way ye know not of, but with which the people should be concerned.

While the church has been heavily burdened in a financial way, ye are to remember that as my people have gathered together from time to time, to testify of their love to me and of their willingness to do for me, herein will lie your opportunity to show your faith by your works. So far as the college is concerned, the homes, the sanitarium, and the various auxiliaries of my church, they have been of my right hand planting. They are a help and a gift unto my people.

And inasmuch as my people will put forth diligent effort in maintaining them for the sake of the young as well as the needy, they will be blessed in such efforts.

And I also say unto you that my handmaiden, Etzenhouser, and my servant Gunsolley, and many of my people have been called forth as helpers to the young of my people, and to encourage them to a greater diligence. Let my people continue to be diligent in the maintaining of these auxiliaries and my blessings will attend and there will be a manifestation of unity of spirit, never before known, or a realization of such power.

Be not in doubt; be not suspicious. Let my people come down to a spirit of humility and put forth their best efforts and energies, for the upbuilding of my work, and my glory will be made manifest and my people will be comforted and strengthened. Thus saith the Spirit. Amen.

A COMMUNICATION FROM THE EDITOR OF THE EVENING AND MORNING STAR.

We are in receipt of the following communication from Mr. John R. Haldeman, editor of the Evening and Morning Star, Independence, Missouri:

MR. ELBERT A. SMITH,

Associate Editor SAINTS' HERALD, Lamoni, Iowa.

Dear Sir: I wish to call your attention to an erroneous statement which appeared in the SAINTS' HERALD for June 8, 1910. The misstatement occurs in an article headed, "The Book of Commandments and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants rendition of the revelation contained in section forty-two."

The article is signed by W. E. Peak, George Jenkins, and J. E. Vanderwood; a committee acting for the Quorum of Seventy of the Reorganized Church. The article contains what purports to be an extract from the consecration law, printed in part in the Evening and Morning Star for July, 1832, at page 30, volume 1.

The writer has recently examined two copies of the Evening and Morning Star, for July, 1832, one of the copies being in the possession of Elder Fred M. Smith, Independence, Missouri, and finds that the issue mentioned does contain an extract from the consecration law, but fails to find the language there that your paper says is there.

Instead of the language in the Star for July, 1832, agreeing with the Doctrine and Covenants, it does the very opposite claimed by the committee and agrees with the Book of Commandments.

I have repeatedly compared the extract given by your committee, with the Evening and Morning Star, and unqualifiedly state that your article does not state the truth when it claims the rendition of the consecration law, as given in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, agrees with the revelation as first printed in 1832, in the Evening and Morning Star, for July of that year.

The Evening and Morning Star has the extract as follows:

"If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments; and behold, thou shalt consecrate all thy properties, that which thou hast unto me, with a deed and a covenant which can not be broken; and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church, and two of the elders, such as he shall appoint and set apart for that purpose."

There is a so-called "reprint" of the Evening and Morning Star in existence, and it contains the revelation like it is in the Book of Covenants. The men who wrote your article must have used the garbled reprint instead of the original.

I sincerely trust that you will print an ample correction in your next issue, as I wish to refer to the matter in the October issue of our paper, and prefer that your readers should get the correction from you before it appears in the Evening and Morning Star.

Faternally,

JOHN R. HALDEMAN,

Editor Evening and Morning Star.

ITEMS FROM THE PAST.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

The following is taken from the HERALD for October, 1860:

"A NEW HYMN BOOK.—The minutes of the late conference will show what arrangements have been made for the publication of a hymn book. Presidents of branches are requested to forward subscriptions as the minutes direct. Where it is convenient they may send by drafts. Individuals may also send their subscriptions without the intervention of a president, where it is more convenient. It is expected that the price will be fifty cents per copy. If there should be any variation from this sum, it can be afterwards rectified. Sister Emma Bidamon was appointed by a revelation in July, 1830, to make a selection of sacred hymns. Book of Covenants, section 48, paragraph 3 says, 'It shall be given thee, also, to make a selection of sacred hymns as shall be given thee, which is pleasing unto me, to be had in my church, for my soul delighteth in the song of the heart, yea, the song of the righteous is a prayer unto me, and it shall be answered with a blessing upon their heads.' She has therefore been reappointed to the performance of this work."

"Those who have hymns which may be deemed suitable for this purpose are requested to forward them to her at Nauvoo, Illinois. If they are written, they must be plain and legible."

"This number will be the last one which we shall send to those persons who have paid nothing for it, except in those cases which are specially provided for."

"We can supply no more copies of No. 1 and No. 3, and not many of No. 4 and No. 5 unless some of our friends can return some of these numbers."

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

The following is taken from the HERALD for October 10, 1885:

"We expect to get the Spalding 'Manuscript Found' on the market in a few weeks, and will announce its issue in due time. We have much other matter to publish that should have precedence; hence the delay. Be patient."

"Pres. Joseph Smith was at Stuart, Montana, the 23d ult., and had held services there with fair sized congregations of attentive listeners. He and Brother Luff would soon start for Malad City, Idaho, en route for Salt Lake City."

"We have just received letters from Elder T. W. Smith, Society Islands, dated April 15 and 17, also July 19 and 26. They will appear in due time in the HERALD. He says there are now about twenty-five branches, and nearly one thousand members in that mission, and thinks the mission will be self-sustaining."

"Bro. S. F. Walker in this issue furnishes another interesting paper on the 'Origin of all things,' giving some valuable facts in respect to Hebrew and Christian civilizations on this continent prior to its discovery by Europeans. Evidences of this class are multiplying, and now if another Champollion should read the silent records chiseled on the temples, tombs, and other monuments of Central, South, and portions of North America, the world might learn the great truths held by the Latter Day Saints for the past sixty years in respect to the inhabitants of Ancient America."

"By letter from Elder M. T. Short we learn the Saints had 'a nice camp meeting' at Park Bluff, near Montrose, Iowa, from the 20th to the 28th ult. We have received no detailed report of it up to this writing."

It will be of interest to HERALD readers, we believe, to give the names and addresses of those who had letters in this same issue of October 10, 1885. They are as follows: T. W. Smith, Matea Island, South Seas; Robert M. Elvin, Elmwood, Nebraska; G. T. Griffiths, Wheeling, West Virginia; Aaron Burlison, Parrish, Illinois; C. G. Lanphear, Obi, New York; Peter Anderson, Richfield, Utah; Arthur B. Pierce, Plainville, Massachusetts; G. H. Hilliard, Jeffersonville, Illinois; John C. Foss, Cormorant Mills, Minnesota; J. A. Robinson, Mattoon, Illinois; J. T. Davis, Pittsburg, Kansas, and A. H. Parsons, North Branch, Kansas.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

We wish to thank the brethren who have replied to our request for mission news for our new department. Those who have responded are Brn. A. M. Baker, O. B. Thomas, J. E. Vanderwood, William Johnson, R. W. Farrell.

Elder T. W. Williams writes as follows: "Inadvertently, when reporting our reunion I failed to state that our Bishop's agent was one of the speakers. He preached on the law of finance and gave one of the best sermons of the reunion. Even the Bishop sat up and took notice, subsequently commending him."

The Associate Editor was privileged to occupy the pulpit at Independence, Missouri, Sunday morning and evening, October 2. The morning hour was devoted to the interests of the College. The attendance was good. We were pleased to have Pres. Joseph Smith with us in the stand at both services, also at the afternoon prayer service. He seems to be in excellent health, much better than during the spring conference.

Bishop E. L. Kelley will meet with the Saints of Lamoni, Sunday, October 16. He is expected to occupy the pulpit in the morning and evening, and will meet with the priesthood of the Stake in the afternoon. The Order of Enoch will be the subject for discussion, probably during the entire day.

Professor J. A. Gunsolley reports a total enrollment at Graceland College of one hundred and five. There are twenty-eight students from Lamoni and vicinity, and fifteen from Independence. The Industrial Department has sixteen girls and thirteen boys. Twelve States are represented in the College, and two foreign fields. Over four hundred of the temporary endowment cards have been signed.

Marked copies of The Daily Eagle and The Evening Record, both published at Traverse City, Michigan, reach our desk. The Record (September 26) contains a lengthy write up of the work and their coming district conference, distinctions between us and the Utah faction, extracts from speeches of Senators Burrows and Dubois, and pictures of Brn. J. J. Cornish and Graceland College. The Eagle (September 28) writes up the first sessions of the conference and has a picture of Bro. J. W. Wight. It is a splendid thing to have impartial representation in the newspapers.

All missionary enthusiasm is born at the foot of the cross. It is because we ourselves have stood there and looked into the face of the love of God who died for us, that we feel sure of the evangelization of the world.—W. T. A. Barber.

LEAVES FROM LIFE.—THE LIFE OF A HEROINE.

BY CHARLES DERRY.

In giving a brief sketch of the life of my departed companion, I must necessarily touch upon some items connected with, and forming a part of, the life of the writer. In journeying with his little family to the West in 1854, it was his misfortune to be deprived by death of his beloved and faithful wife, the affectionate mother of his children. He felt all the bitterness of his terrible bereavement, which was worse than death. In a strange land, in the bleak and Rocky Mountains, among strangers, with two sweet little babes to care for, the youngest of whom had been sick during a great part of the journey across the plains, and seemed now at death's door, I repeat, the pain and anguish of soul was worse than death. The charms of life were gone, as he laid her lifeless body, with only a winding sheet to cover her, in the cold and cheerless grave! In two hours from the departure of her loving and gentle spirit, he was compelled to leave her silent abode, and march on or be left alone on the mountains with his dead. Other hands kindly offered to care for his little ones the remainder of the journey, but no other hands must care for her loved ones but his. They were all that was dear to him on earth, and they were too precious to be intrusted to the care of others until their destination was reached.

After three weeks more the tedious journey was ended, and he found himself in a strange city and among strangers. It is true there were some there that had heard his voice and received the truth from his lips in his native land, who bade him welcome to a temporary shelter; but now, if possible, he felt his lonely condition more and more, and the care for his children pressed heavily upon his heart. He was unfitted to care for them as they needed, and to put them out to strangers, he could not. He had been an outcast all his life and had deeply drank of the bitter cup. He resolved never to subject his precious babes to such a condition; but he must labor for their support, and this he could not do and properly care for them. A kind friend offered a temporary asylum for himself and babes, so that he could labor through the day and have the care of them through the night.

While his faith in humanity had been somewhat shattered, his faith in God was strong; and as he had proved the loving-kindness of God in leading him, in answer to his prayers, in the choice of a companion, and had given to him the loved one whom he had now taken away, he believed that the same divine Father would now, in the hour of his necessity, hear his prayer and guide him to one who would be a mother to his little ones, as also a wife to him. Accordingly he sought unto the Lord for guidance in his choice. It is no vain, egotistical utterance to say there were maidens and widows who had known him in former days, that gave evidence of sympathy and a willingness to assume the care; but it was not a wife alone that he wanted, but also a mother to his motherless babes, and not every woman is fitted to care for another woman's children. He did not plead with the Almighty in vain. As he was working one day he saw a train of emigrants coming from the mountains into the valley, and the suggestion came, and with it the resolve, to go and look for a wife! He met the train. It formed a corral; he met several people whom he knew, male and female, and while conversing with a young woman whom he had formerly been acquainted with, another young lady passed before his eyes whom he had never before seen; and the moment he saw her, the impression came forcibly to his mind that she would be his wife. He did not hesitate, but went to her; told her who he was, and his condition; that his wife lay on yonder mountains; had been dead seven weeks; he had two little children, but no home, nor means; but he thought he could make a living for his family; and if, under those conditions, she would become his wife and a mother to his children, he would be a husband to her in every sense of the word.

Reader, that may not sound romantic, but every word is true. Some may laugh at the idea; others may think him superstitious. If it is superstitious to believe in a kind and loving God, who hears his children's cry, he pleads guilty! He believes, too, if in anything pertaining to this earth life, mankind needs infinite wisdom to guide them, it is in the choice of a companion for life. He knows nothing of matches being made in heaven, but he does verily believe, that if the race sought unto God for wisdom to direct, and were willing to follow his lead instead of following their lusts, there would be no need of a law against divorce.

But to return: Time for due reflection was given, and when he returned his heart was made glad by an acceptance of his hand and heart, and she giving hers in return. They, together, sought the proper authorities, and they were made one according to the laws of the land, and in harmony with the law of God. Having given this preface, I now proceed to give a sketch of the life of our beloved heroine.

I have called her a heroine, because it requires more than ordinary courage for a young woman to undertake the cares of a family not her own, and that family destitute of a home or means; and when, as I knew, there were more flattering offers for her, and grander opportunities than he could possibly offer; for the only part of his life that he could call his own, except six months (the time between his coming of age and being called to the ministry) had been devoted exclusively to the gospel ministry, and every Latter Day Saint knows what that means, as far as acquiring the wealth of this world is concerned. Hence it is evident that our heroine must have been moved upon by a nobler spirit than that of selfish desire, and a higher motive than that of merely settling down for life. It was the spirit of self-sacrifice for others' good.

Eliza Herbert was the youngest daughter of John and Mary Herbert, and was born on or about the 1st of August, A. D. 1831, in the village of Castle-Eaton, Wiltshire, England. Her mother died when Eliza was about three years old. Her father never married again, but kept the family together, sustaining them until they were able to provide for themselves, by his occupation as a baker. The gospel, as restored in these last days, reached their ears. The father, the two daughters and one son embraced it, and believing it was their duty to gather with the Saints, they, with the exception of the son, in March, 1854, emigrated to America. The father died on the way, leaving the two daughters alone (I should have stated that neither of the sons came with them), but the daughters, after the death of their father, continued their arduous journey across the plains and arrived at the place which they had been taught was "Zion" about the 26th of October, 1854, when she saw, for the first time, the one who sought and obtained her hand and heart.

On the 28th of October, 1854, as before stated, they were made husband and wife, according to the law of the land, and in harmony with the law of God. He obtained possession of a room, and took his wife and his children there. Furniture was scant, and provisions were far from plenty; nor will this be any wonder, when it is remembered that he landed there penniless, about three weeks before, and the condition of his helpless babes hindered him greatly in making proper provision, or seizing opportunities that were open or unencumbered. To one who had been reared in comparative plenty, and who had never known want, it was enough to test her courage, the strength of her love and true womanhood.

She was beautiful in form and feature and her manners such as to attract those who love true modesty and womanly dignity, and in that land where all men, from the young and stalwart to those bent with age, gray-headed, and with one foot on the verge of the grave, was constantly on the outlook for a wife, if they had none; or if they had one or more, were hunting for others to fill up their harems and increase their kingdom, and were prepared to and did, make far brighter offers than was in the power of the penurious suitor with his tale of woe. Nothing but the most unselfish spirit and self-denying, heart-felt kindness, could have induced her to accept the hand of poverty amid so many apparently brighter opportunities, hence we think her entitled to be called a true heroine, and a recital of her life will prove that she lived and died one.

Winter was soon upon us, and only those who have passed through a winter in the West, and a newly settled part at that, know what winter really is, especially to people unprepared for it. Our stock of provisions consisted of potatoes and salt; of the latter there was no dearth. It was salt land. Of the former I had laid in a good supply by digging them on shares. So we were sustained through the winter and suffered no inconvenience from a diet of potatoes and salt, and if there was any murmuring outside of my own lips, it never reached my ears.

The spring of 1855 opened. I obtained work on the "Public Works" as they called them. It was really for the church. I had to go some three miles to work every morning. My wages were reckoned two dollars a day, but my pay consisted of flour, potatoes and other vegetables. Occasionally a little butter, but other luxuries were not ours to enjoy, and very little butter fell to our share.

That year, 1855, grasshoppers devoured the growing crops, and famine stared the people in the face and gnawed at the vitals of hundreds. But the leaders, in whose hands the tithing fell, knew no want. The tithing of former years, stored away, supplied their needs. But many of the masses suffered. In the meantime I was sent to Cache Valley, some ninety miles from Salt Lake City to secure hay for the "church cattle." I was away three weeks, and when I returned, my wife told me she wanted me to quit the public works and gave as her reasons the following: When I was absent from the city, she had to go to the tithing office to get provisions which I had earned and she could not get butter, sugar, tea, coffee, or anything but a little flour and vegetables, because the leaders with their numerous families, must be first served; and they left nothing for the families of the workers on the public works. Moreover, Heber C. Kimball had taken occasion to abuse the men and their families, because some of the former complained that they had to work hard on dry bread, and he graciously (?) told them, "Damn it, dip it in City Creek and wet it then. You need not eat dry bread while there is plenty of water in City Creek." Then he abused the women because they applied at the tithing office for the miserable pittance due for their husbands' labors.

This was more than her noble spirit would submit to, and I complied with her request, and removed up in the north country. The devastation caused by grasshoppers now told with terrible effect. The sufferings endured by thousands can not be told. She endured without murmuring the sufferings caused by the famine, but the unjust and uncalled for insults and denunciations of those men who posed as our shepherds, she would not brook. The truth was as dear to her as ever, but she could not reconcile the injustice she saw and felt with those truths; hence her request that I should quit working on the public works. The destruction of the crops rendered it impossible for men to obtain employment, and in the face of another hard winter, only hardships awaited us, but she met them with the fortitude of a true woman. Too proud to beg and too honest to steal, she submitted to the conditions without a murmur. I will not harrow up the feelings by relating the particulars of our sufferings that winter. Suffice it to say we lived through it; but when the spring of 1856 dawned upon us, the moderating of the weather was the only betterment of our condition, since we had to wait for the maturing of the next crop before we could hope to have our necessary wants supplied.

When the spring opened I rented a few acres in the "big field" at Ogden, but having no team, I hired a team to plow the ground, for which I paid by working out the tithing of the owner. I got in my little crop of corn, then went to making adobes. During this time, for some reason then unknown to the writer, Brigham gave orders for the drilling of the "Nauvoo Militia" two or three times a week, and every able-bodied man was expected to join them, and of course I had to join. One evening as I was returning to my cabin from my adobe yard, I was notified to be at the Colonel's office by nine o'clock that night. I obeyed and found that the militia was ordered into the mountains to drive back the United States Army, whom we were told was coming to invade our territory, to destroy our leader and use our wives and children as they pleased; and if any man refused to go, he was to be treated as an enemy. I informed my wife. She cooked up some provisions, such as she had, and I bade farewell to my wife and children, for aught I knew, for the last time in life. Having committed to her the care of the children and the gathering of our little crop, our separation is more easily imagined than described. For her, it meant care of the family and hardships that should never be laid upon a woman to bear, and possibly separation by death of husband and father. But she assumed the care and labor without regret, only at my absence.

I was absent three months, in the mountains, marching through rivers, over mountains and through canyons covered with snow, but thank God, I was not called upon to fire a gun. I had determined, however, not to shed human blood, be the consequences what they might be. This was what was called the "Mormon War."

I returned home the day before Christmas of that year, where I was received with wide-open arms and hearts by both my wife and children. The latter had been faithfully cared for by her; and she had gathered in, by her own hands, the little crop and made all the provision she could for the winter. I may here state that the United States Government had appointed a governor to succeed Brigham Young, as governor of the Territory in Utah, against which appointment Brigham rebelled and proclaimed war against the Government; that is, he determined to oppose the installment of the new governor: and for this cause he had called out every able-bodied man to oppose the army of the Government.

We were more than a thousand miles from civilization and had no means of knowing the real purpose of the Government, as we could get no knowledge of the state of affairs only as it was filtered through Brigham's channels. When Brigham saw it was useless to further oppose the entrance of the new governor, he gave orders for all the people to move south, under the threat that men should be detailed to burn our houses over our heads if we refused to leave them. To this we reluctantly submitted, but as we had no team, we had to get away the best we could, having to leave what we had behind us, and were compelled to sleep on the ground at nights; but we were permitted to halt about fifty miles south of Salt Lake City, making our journey nearly one hundred miles from our residence. I will here state that Brigham had boasted that he knew of a place in the White Mountains where he could hide his people up so that the United States army could not find them in twenty years. He sent out a posse to locate it, but they failed and Brigham had to submit to the humiliation of seeing the new governor come in, in spite of his boast that the "United States Army should melt away as the dew before the morning sun."

In all these troubles our heroine never flinched from her duty as a wife and mother, and a child of God. We never returned to the little cabin we had left in Ogden, but wintered about ten miles north of Salt Lake City, I leaving wife and children in the south until I could hire a team to fetch them, which I did from a Gentile named James Lemon, a kind-hearted man, but who stayed on his own farm, either by permission obtained or by refusing to move, I know not which; but he was rich, and friendly to the ruling powers there, and his wife was a member of that church. Others, whom Brigham found it was to his interest to favor, were permitted to stay on their farms, and they raised crops, though Brigham had declared that nothing should be planted; but the masses had been compelled to move south.

My mind was now made up to make one more move as soon as I could, for I was satisfied that Brigham and his colleagues had departed from the truth, and that that whole system was corrupt. I counseled with my wife; she answered in the language of Ruth to Naomi, and dear as she had been to me, she now seemed dearer still, and unitedly we planned and worked, I to earn and she to take care of my earnings, until we had scraped together enough to buy a yoke of cattle.

Learning of others who were intent on leaving, we joined teams with a man and his wife who had a wagon, and in the month of June, 1859, we bade adieu to the salt land. I have omitted to detail the struggle we made and the privations undergone to accomplish our purpose, because it would occupy too much space, but this is told in my journal, already written.

When it became known to the bishop of the ward we were stopping in, he came and inquired of my wife if she was going away of her own consent, or was her husband taking her contrary to her wish. She answered him, "Where my husband goes I will go; his people shall be my people, his God my God." This silenced them; they saw they had no influence to prevent her from leaving, and this answer was evidence of her courage and the integrity of her heart. Had it not been for her loyalty to me it might have cost my life; for some time prior to this, before we moved from Ogden, I was at a meeting called by Loren Farr, president of the Weber Stake, in which meeting it was declared by one of the leading men of the stake that "No man will be allowed to leave the——Territory; and if they attempt it, they must leave their wives and children behind, for the wife and children are the Lord's." I leave it to the reader to judge how far a man would be permitted to go who had been deprived of all that was dear to him. But now, at the time of our leaving, the United States Army had come in, and they gave protection to such as desired to leave, and it was stated that five thousand availed themselves of their protection and left Utah that year (1859).

We crossed the plains with our ox team, there being ten other ox teams with us, seeking the land of freedom. We arrived at Fontanelle, Nebraska, in the month of August, being nearly three months on our journey. Here we found my brother and mother, whom my letters had prevented going further west, and with them we found a temporary home. The hardship of the journey and the lack of suitable food had weakened us, and we all succumbed to disease, but were kindly cared for by our friends, until we could begin to help ourselves. Of course we were destitute of means, having sold our cattle to pay our good brother, Robert Holt, who had loaned us means to finish paying for our outfit. Nebraska was a new country, thinly settled; the winter was a hard one, to us at least; our long sickness had prevented me from earning the necessities of life in the fall, but with the blessing of God we got safely through.

and wife took in what sewing she could get, and that was but little, as the farmers were but few and sometimes miles apart. But the spring of 1860 at length began to show signs of appearing.

We "squatted" on a piece of land on Maple Creek, and my brother and I together put in a crop, but as the season was dry we did not raise much grain. Winter came on and we were forty miles from a mill; and I, having no team, it was impossible to get to it with a grist through the snow. We ground our wheat on a coffee mill, and finally, by going about three miles, I borrowed a larger hand mill, which answered our purpose better, because it was bigger. I got work several miles from our cabin, and of course had to leave wife and children in the little cabin, without a floor, for timber was scarce. Nor was there a door, but we hung up a quilt to keep out the cold. The snow would blow in and cover the bed and the floor; and there they were, on the wild prairie, where wolves howled and Indians sometimes prowled around! The situation was anything but pleasant. It requires no argument to prove that a woman who had the moral courage to endure it without a murmur was a heroine of the "first water"!

The spring of 1861 came, and reports came to my ears of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. But I thought it was another trap laid by Brigham Young to get those back who had left Utah. But the Spirit of God had not forsaken us, and was working with us to lead us into the true fold. Elder E. C. Briggs, whom we learned afterwards was preaching in Iowa, and had heard, by some means, of our presence in Nebraska, had sent by one of our few neighbors a copy of the HERALD, containing an account of Joseph Smith, the eldest son of the martyred prophet, who had been called to the head of the above-named church, and was calling back into the fold those who had wandered, not knowing where to go after the prophet was slain. The Spirit bore witness to me of the truths contained in that HERALD, and with a glad heart, and truly repentant of every wrong I had done, I returned home, called my wife and children around me, craved their pardon for my neglecting to teach them the right ways of the Lord.

I read the HERALD to them and we all bowed in solemn prayer for his forgiveness and guidance. My wife heartily united with me, as did the children, in seeking God. After counseling together we determined that I should leave them, and start into Iowa, to find, if possible, that people who had refused to go to Utah and follow the pernicious ways of Brigham Young.

This was the latter part of February, 1861. Snow was eighteen inches deep on the level. Wife fixed up a few cookies, and early one morning I bade them farewell, and commenced my weary march. Our cabin was about fifty or sixty miles west of the Missouri River. The ice in the river was rotten and covered with water about four inches deep. After wading shoe deep in water on the ice, across the river, I landed safely on the Iowa side, then waded through six miles of mud and slush to Council Bluffs. Here I found a member of the Saints' church, who kindly sheltered me for the night, and in the morning directed me where to find the elders of that church, whom I found after ten or twelve more weary miles of travel, such as I had experienced during the last day or two of my journey.

The elders were W. W. Blair and E. C. Briggs. Suffice it to say, that after a proper investigation I was baptized and ordained an elder by Elder Blair. But the Missouri broke up the second day after I had crossed it, and it was impossible for me to get back to my family until the ferry could cross in safety.

I hired and paid Philip Gatrost (by labor) to take his team with me to fetch over my family, for I wanted to get them back to civilization, and so did they wish to return. In due time I got them safely on the Iowa side of the big river. Philip Gatrost kindly permitted us to go into a log cabin of his, and furnished me with work, and wife began to feel at home for the first time since she had left her comfortable home in her native land.

My purpose was now to make a permanent home for my family. In a short time Elders Briggs and Jairus M. Putney visited me and told me the Lord wanted me in the active ministry. I told them I must provide for my family, for they had suffered enough and it was my duty to provide for them. They insisted the call was from God, and my family's wants should be provided for. I counseled with my wife. She told me she believed the call was from God, and if I would respond she would trust in God and care for the children. I confess the outlook was dark—the friends of the cause were few, and far from rich, and the church very poor, but my wife's heroic courage gave me courage, and I had many times proved God was true to his promise, and I accepted the call to go as I had gone in my native land, without purse and scrip, to aid in calling back the wandering sheep into the fold of God. But much as I loved the truth and desired the salvation of my fellow-men, I could not have left my family but for the true heroism of my self-sacrificing wife.

The year 1861 passed away. Wife found many friends; in fact everyone who knew her was her friend; they could not be otherwise if the love of God was in their hearts. The year 1862 came in, and either the hardships I had endured in the past, or the exertions put forth in my ministrations had been too much for me. I was taken down with fever, and had to seek the care of my wife. Months passed and I was too weak to labor. She was my earthly staff and stay. But I gained sufficient strength to attend a conference held at Gallands Grove October 6, where I met for the first time Pres. Joseph Smith, and many others of the leading men of the church. At that conference I was selected, with Jason W. Briggs and Samuel Powers, to go to England, but I was not sufficiently strong at that time to start on a mission, for when I returned to my home I was confined to my bed until the 6th of December, when I started on that mission, leaving my wife and children near Glenwood, Iowa, in a log cabin twelve feet square on the outside, kindly tendered by Bro. William Brittain and his noble wife as a home for my family during my absence, free of charge.

Here was another test of my wife's fidelity and heroism. My departure meant for her not only the prolonged absence of her husband, for whom her married life had given ample proof of her undying love, but the care of his children, still of tender years. There was no church treasury for her to draw from, as the church was poor and its members few. Half a dozen brethren had given me their word that she should not suffer for the necessaries of life, but our united trust was in God. Nevertheless, these brethren faithfully kept their pledge, as her letters to me amply proved, and this was a source of great strength to me, for had I known that she was neglected, I should have worked my way home to them as speedily as I could. During the year and nine months of my absence there came no word of complaint or distrust, but every letter breathed encouragement, love and confidence in God and in his cause. I received kind letters from the brethren in America, but none cheered my heart and gave me as much strength as did the letters of my wife and children. I here insert a letter dated

My Dear Charles: I received your letter to-day, after waiting so long. You can only imagine my feelings when the children came home from school, "No letter, mother"! The thought would run through my mind, "Where is my dear Charles? Is he sick, or where is he? Fifteen days and not a word from him!" But all is right now; thank God!

I was happy to hear you were well and so far on your journey. The children are improving in their studies. They take a delight in going to school; they are clothed warm and have plenty to eat. Charles, do you know what good it does me to get a letter from you? First, it cheers my heart, then it grows sad, for a moment, and then the tears flow freely and a silent prayer is offered up to God that he will bless you on your mission, and preserve you from the allurements and vanity of the world and fill you with truth and wisdom from on high, that you may fill your mission honorably before God and with honor to yourself. For this I pray, and will while God gives me life and being on earth. Charles, your portrait affords me great pleasure; I take it from the shelf every night and look at you, and the children will, and they will watch me to see if the tear starts from my eyes. I feel like being humble before the Lord, watchful and obedient to the Lord; for this I pray at all times. Then, will not my feet be directed aright? All the Saints wish to be remembered to you. They all miss you.

Your loving wife,
E. H. DERRY.

In another letter she tells me that God has given her the assurance that I shall be spared to return to her and the children; in fact, every letter breathed her trust in God and confidence in the divinity of the work in which we are engaged. Thus my hands and heart were strengthened to endure the hardships of the mission and give greater zeal and energy to the work. She cared for my children as though they were the fruit of her own body, not only their physical, but also their mental and spiritual welfare, and I owe it largely to her that my children to-day are loyal members of the church and kingdom of God. The best evidence of her motherly care for them is the filial love they have always borne towards her, and to-day, while she is with us no more in this life, her memory is cherished by them, with all the strength and sacredness of filial love.

I now quote from my diary: "On Tuesday, September the 6th, 1864. After an absence of one year and nine months. Memorable day! Day of safe return to my loved ones, in fulfillment of God's promise"! I found my wife and children about 3 o'clock p. m. in the same little cabin in which I had left them, and was welcomed with all the wealth of love that a truly loving, loyal, and God-fearing wife could give a husband. She and my daughter sang me the "Wife's welcome," and never was music sweeter to the ear and heart than was their song of welcome to me! My boy was herding sheep several miles away for Bro. Jairus M. Putney, a true friend of the family, but on hearing of his father's return he soon found his way home—"the one missing link" in the domestic circle.

From that time until her last sickness came upon her, her life was one continual sacrifice and self-denial for the cause of truth. She raised four children to honorable manhood and womanhood, for God had blessed us with two more children beside those I had committed to her care. She had not given them birth, but a loving Providence had placed them in her care from their infancy, and they are living monuments of her faithfulness to her trust, and their feet directed, under God, by her hand, are found loyal members to the cause of truth.

As the years rolled on, the trials, privations, and burdens she had endured so patiently began to tell upon her weakened frame, but no thought or word of complaint against God escaped her lips, and not until her final sickness came upon her did she suggest the propriety of my staying by her side: then she requested that I leave her no more, with which request I felt it my duty to comply. This was the first time in forty-four years of her life as a missionary's wife. During the winter of 1905-6 she showed signs of physical disability which increased until her demise.

It is proper here to say that God has blessed us with a guardian angel in the person of our daughter, Alice Amelia, who gladly sacrificed her own interests to care for mother and father, who were grown old and feeble, and she cared for mother as only a loving daughter can.

While wife's strength remained, her home and the best of comforts that she had, were always open, and free to God's ministry of every grade, for with her there was no respect of persons. Her delight was in the society of the Saints, and her hand was open to every good cause. She loved her church services and was scarcely ever absent from them, whether the preacher was eloquent or of stammering tongue. She considered the weakest needed her prayers the most, and in the social service she took delight; very rarely did she withhold from taking part, either in prayer or testimony, and her voice gave no uncertain sound, as to her faith in God and his cause. She could truly say with the Psalmist, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go to the house of the Lord."

Just prior to her departure she gave me the comforting assurance that she was at peace with God, and that for her death had no terrors. In fact, as a wise woman she had builded her house on the rock of eternal truth. She made no claim to perfection, but she tried to live so that the children committed to her care might be influenced for good by her example, and that her life might be approved of God, and that the church might never be reproached on account of her life. May her example be a blessing to all who have seen her life.

After two years of suffering, more or less, she was called away to the rest which God had prepared for those who live godly in Christ Jesus. In the loving-kindness of God she was permitted to retain her mental faculties, and only desired to be with Christ and the just and true of all ages. It had been her desire to pass to the beyond before I did. In fact, that had been our united desire, for I could not endure the thought of leaving her behind. She availed herself of the healing ordinance a number of times, and often obtained temporary relief, but it was only temporary. The unchanging laws of nature demand our removal from this life to a higher and a better life; this she ardently desired. As I look back at the nearly fifty-three years of our wedded life, recount the sacrifices she made for me and mine, the many and great privations she endured for the cause of truth and of God, her life of purity and integrity, leaving an example of godliness worthy for all to follow, my greatest desire is that I may leave a record as clean and as blameless as hers; then I shall have no fears when the books are opened, but what my name will be found with hers in the Lamb's Book of Life!

Her work on earth was nobly done,
For her death had no sting.
Her childlike faith the vict'ry won
Through Christ, her Savior King.

Her life was one example bright,
Of faith and hope and love;
She lived in Truth's effulgent light;
Dwells in that light above.

I would not call her back to earth,
To suffer grief and pain.
Sweet as her love, priceless her worth—
My loss is her great gain!

Then I will bow to his decree
Who blest me with her love
For nearly fifty years and three,
Then bore her soul above.

I only ask that I may live
Worthy with her to be,
When I am called this life to yield
To Him who gave it me.

FORGIVENESS.

Forgiveness is taught extensively through the Scriptures. It is commanded that we must forgive as we hope to be forgiven; but I fear that we do not at all times think as deeply on it as we do on some other commandments. The Savior was of a very forgiving nature, even to the asking the Father to forgive those who killed him. The Scriptures teach that if we have not the Spirit of Christ we are none of his. We believe it to be among the sacred things. The Spirit should prompt both the asking and the answer.

If I have been wronged by a brother or sister, and they come to me in sincerity and humility and say, "I beg your pardon; I am sorry if I have offended you," and after some entreating I say, "I forgive you," and they seem happy to think I have forgiven them, and feel that everything is all right, but presently they notice that every opportunity I have I give them a stab, and also that every time I hear some one else speak disrespectfully about them that I show marked evidence of pleasure, would they not soon grasp the idea that the forgiveness was not genuine?

Paul, in speaking on this subject, or in regard to matters of this kind (2 Corinthians 2:7) says, "Ye ought rather to forgive him, . . . lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch grief."

Some years ago I offended one in speaking harshly. I did not know much about forgiveness then, but I felt that it was unjust, and I was sorry that I did it. They did not ask me to apologize, but I did. I said that I was sorry and asked pardon, but instead of saying a word of forgiveness, they gave me a lecture which left no doubt in my mind that they had need to apologize, and it made me feel so rebellious that I said, If that is the way of forgiveness, I will never ask again while I live. It was a person belonging to the Latter Day Saints' Church, but I did not belong. So let us be careful. I at that time was swallowed up with overmuch brief, for I expected to be forgiven, as they seemed to be a meek follower of Christ, and were teaching his doctrine at this time. "Oh," says one, "I will forgive, but I can not forget." Just one way of saying, I can not forgive. It is much owing to the spirit that is cultivated whether we forgive or not.

If a brother has offended me and comes to me asking pardon, I can only feel pity for him. They are grieved, and at once I can pardon the offense, and wish them every blessing, and if the old offense comes to mind at any time, I thrust it aside, and soon it fails to appear again. If on the other hand, when it comes up, I think it over, or so to speak, cultivate the other spirit, it will return and finally will grow so large that it will be worse than at first. So let us think more deeply as to what forgiveness is and cultivate the right spirit. As has been said, "We can not hinder the birds from flying over our heads, but we can hinder their building nests in our hair."

We are to forgive everyone. God says so; also says, I will forgive whomsoever I will, and we are of the opinion that he will not ask us to do more than he will do himself. He also says in the Doctrine and Covenants that he who will not forgive his brother his offense is worse than the offender. If God can forgive me my many wrongs, am I better than he, that I need not forgive my brethren?

IOWA'S OPPORTUNITY.

It has been said that it is not always the things we do for which we are held accountable before God, but sometimes it is for things we leave undone. I love this latter day work, and I do not want to leave anything undone that I should do, though I fear I sometimes do. Our last two issues of the Gospel Quarterly contained lessons on strong drink and tobacco. The Lord has given a Word of Wisdom to Latter Day Saints, which we should all strive to heed.

In the first sentence of the revelation we find a reason assigned for its being given,

Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, in consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarned you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation.

I am thankful to God for this revelation, and oh, the benefit we could obtain from it, more and more each day, if we only would hearken unto the warning the Lord has given!

I believe it is the duty of all parents to teach the Word of Wisdom to their children each day; it contains so much good. The good Lord has promised us grand blessings if we only keep those commandments. The educated and wise men of to-day are teaching against the use of tea, coffee, tobacco, and strong drinks. How injurious and harmful these things are to the body. How thankful we Saints ought to be that God gave us this revelation, and it was given to us before these men ever knew how harmful it really was. We Saints are often very slow to hearken unto the voice of the Lord, and then we wonder why there are not more of the sick healed. God is always the same and his promises are sure when we do our part—he is bound. Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God. The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak.

God has blessed me many times, and has heard and answered my prayers in some marvelous ways. I have a good home and a good husband,—one that loves this latter day work. God has blessed us with two strong and healthy children. We strive to teach them as best we know, how to observe the Word of Wisdom. All has been peace in our family so far. But yet in my heart, I have had great trouble and sorrow. In my father's family, we had trouble worse than death, and all because of the "liquor traffic." There was a large family of us, and we lived in a community where the environment was very bad. We children had no such company and advantages as the young people of Lamoni have, yet everything went on very nicely in the family until we were all grown up, and most of us married. We had a good father and mother, and they had good, obedient children while at home. I have heard mother say many times that the boys never gave her a saucy word.

In the town where we lived we were surrounded by saloons. The brother next older than myself took to drinking. He was the favorite of the family. He had always been so good and kind to us, not one of us ever had a quarrel with this brother. He was married to a handsome young lady, as good a wife as any man could ever ask for. To them were born three smart and beautiful children before we found he was seriously drinking. When this was discovered everything was done that could be done by father and mother in the way of advice and warning. With tears in my brother's eyes he would promise never to drink again. But, alas! it was too late. He had lost all will power and could not pass a saloon without going in. Oh! what sorrow this was to us all! We would rather have buried our dear brother than to have had him caught in a trap like this. Finally his wife was baptized into the church. Soon after this, as we were preparing to attend a reunion, my brother took a notion to leave his business and go with us. While attending this reunion, he was converted and was baptized; at the confirmation a grand blessing was pronounced upon his head while he remained upon the earth, and in the life to come, if he would continue faithful. He received a great blessing at once, for after this he lost all desire for tobacco and liquor, even the smell of them was offensive to him. God had heard our prayers. What joy this brought to the family!

Some time after this his little boy came running home one day and said, "Oh, mamma; there was a man in the store with a bottle and he had papa by the neck and was trying to make him drink. Papa told him he would not, he had quit." You see he was in business at this time; had the same company and environment, until he finally gave away to the same old temptation. What a disappointment this was to us all, and especially to our dear old mother, who has since passed over to the other side, where sorrow is no more. He was a bright boy and was a good business man, but he went on in this way until he lost all his property,—several thousand dollars.

Now, Saints, just think of it, and you voters that go to the polls, think of this brother of mine! Many times I have lain awake at night with tears in my eyes, thinking of our happy childhood, when we went to school together. He was kind, innocent, with a good disposition, and then turned out like this!

It seems to me that strong drink has eaten his mind so that he has no love for his wife and family. Satan has been going to and fro upon the earth to seek whom he could devour. He has a chain bound round my brother that no one but God can break. The voters of this country and those that enact our laws are to blame for it. That rotten liquor traffic is a shame and disgrace to this Christian nation, this boasted land of freedom. I do not see any Christianity or freedom about the liquor traffic. Think of it, in this land of Zion, a thing is permitted to exist that is worse than slavery to the wives, mothers, and children of this nation. If the Christian people of this nation should hold their peace, the very stones will cry out. The prayer of every Christian heart should be that the day may soon dawn when the rum business shall be down and out, when every State in the Union will go dry. The people of America have already been cursed by rum in the weakening of the race, filling our institutions with criminals, imbeciles, and insane people.

The liquor traffic is dragging thousands and thousands of mothers' darling good boys down to hell. Across the top of every saloon ought to be written, "Crime and disease sold here. Our goods guaranteed to maim and destroy unto the third and fourth generation."

I was reading the other day of a drunkard. He had a sick child. The wife had taken in washing and bought the child a pair of shoes. This little child died, and the father, in order to drown his trouble, stole the shoes from the wife and pawned them to buy liquor. I do not doubt it, either, for I have seen things with mine own eyes that were worse. "Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath babbling? Who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red; when it giveth his color in the cup. At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

Voters of Iowa, I plead with you, take our sons and neighbors to the polls and vote to hold the constitutional convention, making possible a prohibitory amendment. Do not stay at home if it rains on election day. Remember, it is not always the things we do for which we are accountable, but the things we leave undone. The following is quoted from a letter sent out by the Anti-Saloon League of Iowa:

Just now the time is critical and the temperance cause needs your support. The general election is at hand and every voter will have an opportunity to register himself for or against the saloon by voting for or against the following question: "Shall there be a convention to revise the constitution, and amend the same?" You must vote "yes" if you vote at all, for the reason that if a majority vote in favor of the constitutional convention, then such a convention will be called in 1911, and that convention will decide whether or not a prohibitory amendment will be submitted to the people. If we pile up a strong majority in favor of the convention, we need fear nothing, the State will go "dry."

Three States, namely: Ohio, Iowa, and Arizona are fighting for the same proposition, and the question upon the ballot in these three States will be voted for, or against, this fall. The purpose is the same, constitutional prohibition for these three States. News just comes from Arizona that the election is over and the constitutional convention is assured by a majority vote. Ohio and Iowa must follow and succeed.

Remember that this opportunity to vote upon a constitutional convention comes to Iowa but once in ten years. This is the tenth year, and we must show the strength of the prohibition sentiment by a tremendous vote. It is a thoroughly non-partisan effort, and the party prejudices will be eliminated both at the polls and in the convention. We shall face but one foe and that foe is our arch enemy, the liquor traffic.

May God speed the day when every State in the Union will go dry, is my prayer.

A SISTER.

He that giveth his time to prayer, shall have his life sweetened with the perfume of heaven, and multiplied blessings will crown his efforts, but he that saveth his time from prayer, shall lose it, and find his path strewn with disappointment and failure.

"Joy Cometh in the Morning."

Oh! tried and tempted one, look up!
These trials shall not long endure;
The bitter draught that fills thy cup
Is not for punishment, but cure.
Take heart of faith, misgivings scorning;
Rejoice! "Joy cometh in the morning."

Oh! tearful one, see through thy tears
The light that falls a rainbow makes,
Which spans with promise future years,
And brighter grows till hope awakes—
The bow of promise, not of warning—
Rejoice! "Joy cometh in the morning."

Oh! lonely one, of all bereft
That made life sweet and bright to thee;
Look up! the many blessings left
Thy heavy eyes have failed to see.
Unshrinking trust be thine adorning;
Rejoice! "Joy cometh in the morning."

Dear heart, however great thy fears,
However great thy sorrows be;
Look up! the swiftly coming years
Have better things in store for thee.
Stand firm, let faith be thine adorning;
Rejoice! "Joy cometh in the morning."

Fiction.

Dear Sister: I have often thought I would write you something of my experience, thinking perhaps it might be of some benefit to some one. I used to like to read stories so well, and for many years I could not see the harm in it that I now do. Waste of time from our work is much, but not nearly so bad as the waste of time which should be spent in teaching our children the ways of truth. Oh, that I could recall the time when my children were small and liked to hear me read the Bible and talk to them about it. How much more of it would I do instead of wasting time reading something which was of no profit! They then had faith to ask to be prayed for when sick, and they were healed, too; had I done more to lead them in the right way, they might now be in the church. But having lost their father while they were mere children, and because of not being strong myself, they have had to be away from home at work, most of the time since they were left fatherless two years ago. They are among wicked people much of their time, sometimes coming home once a week and sometimes once in two weeks for a few hours. True, I talk to them about their soul's welfare, but it does not have the impression it once had, it seems. Once they talked of coming into the church, but now they do not say much about it.

I have long since quit reading fiction, but to say that the remorse is hurting me still is putting it mildly, for when I lie awake at night thinking of the past and what might have been, with only heartaches for company, it is simply awful. Oh, dear sisters, if any of you indulge in worthless reading, let me beg of you to stop and think, especially if you have children; yes, think before it is too late what a responsibility rests with you. It is only a few short years we have our precious children with us at most, and we should put in good time teaching them while they are with us.

Now, dear sisters, and all readers, please pray for me and my children that they may yet come into the church, for I feel that if one of them should die outside I would lose my reason.

Your

SAD HEARTED SISTER.

Letter Department

BEMIDJI, MINNESOTA, September 25, 1910.

Editors Herald: Not until we opened the last HERALD did the sad news of the death of our colaborer and associate reach us. While it was not unexpected, it was nevertheless a cause of grief to us, and, we feel, to the Saints throughout the district, and sympathy has been expressed and petitions to the throne of grace offered in behalf of his bereaved family. Brother Stedman was selected as vice-president of the district at our last spring conference, and though, through the Father's will he was permitted to occupy only so short a time, and his ministrations during that time confined to two or three places, yet we feel that his selection and labor, though limited will, when the final accounts are rendered, be found to have been a benediction to the whole district. Brother Stedman did much pioneer work in this State, and was instrumental in opening up new places, and raising up branches, and as a missionary has occupied a place in the hearts of the Saints perhaps second to none. While laboring amongst us this summer he was burdened to some extent with affliction, and frequently expressed himself as being ready for the change whenever his work was finished and the Lord should call. It may well be said of him that he fought a good fight and kept the faith.

Elder Stedman preached the first sermon in our new church built by the Saints here, and though the day was stormy and the attendance small, the discourse was inspirational. And, by the way, the Saints appreciate the privilege of worshiping in a home of their own, dedicated to the service of God, as well they may, having labored faithfully and sacrificed freely to accomplish the work. The cost was something over four hundred dollars, we believe, and one notable feature as compared with reports from other places was the entire absence of sociables, suppers, and parties for raising funds for the work. The feeling seems to prevail that they would rather give for the work's sake than for their stomach's sake—a dish of ice cream for every quarter,—“otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven.” Those whose love for God and his work is such that their purse strings can only be loosened when their palates are tickled, well, “Verily, . . . They have their reward” here. Yes, they get their quarter's worth at the time. We are glad this little chapel was not built upon a palate and stomach foundation, and consequently neither Saints nor outsiders imbibed the thought that the edifice was being erected for the purpose of continuing in that service. The building committee seemed to have peculiar notions, and instead of scouring the country to see how much could be raised among outsiders, they went quietly to work with what they had, and, with little soliciting, neighbors and friends contributed of time and money, some of them very generously, and means came to hand to carry on the work almost as fast as needed.

Owing to an unprecedented drought this summer, crops are short, yet the little band of Saints here are cheerful as a rule, conscious of the loving watchcare of a heavenly Father, and with an increasing trust in him. For while the outlook was very dubious for a time, results are far better than might reasonably have been expected under the circumstances, and none need suffer for the necessities of life. The quality of vegetables, fruit, grains, grasses, corn, etc., exhibited at our county fair, held in Bemidji September 14 to 15, would certainly be a surprise to many an Iowa man could they have seen the display. Dent corn and grapes that would compare favorably with Iowa products. When we state that the fair paid over eleven hundred dollars in premiums, Lamoni people will see that it rather puts their annual Harvest Home gathering in the shade. [Harvest Home Festival at Lamoni is a local—not a county fair.—EDITORS.]

The settlers in this section have been, and are for the most part, those of limited means, who saw no opportunity for getting a home in places where land was valued at fifty, seventy-five, or a hundred dollars an acre, and took advantage of the homestead law, or of the low price of land, from five dollars an acre up, and are struggling to make for themselves homes in the forest. With little but their bare hands to work with, progress is naturally slow. Bemidji, named after a Lamanite chief, is a town of over seven thousand inhabitants, a good market for farm and garden produce, and with three railroads running through (the steel being laid on the third one this fall) has excellent outlets to the Twin Cities and the Twin Ports.

Hopeful for the triumph of truth,

LEON A. GOULD.

PEORIA, ILLINOIS, October 3, 1910.

Dear Readers of Herald: Many of you will be glad to know some of the particulars of our district conference, held at Dahinda, October 1 and 2, and so I write to tell you about it.

When we reached there, about 2 p. m. on Friday, we found only a very few delegates and visitors had come. Brother Arber, who was to have had charge of the Sunday school and Religio work, was not there, and word had been received that he could not be there. That left us without a program or any definite plan of action. But as Brother Sade, the district superintendent, and Sister Cady, the secretary, were present, together with fifteen or twenty others, it was decided to hold a session. A reasonably good and profitable time was had. A reading from the Exponent was followed by short talks upon home department work, in which two took part. We also had a short address by Brother Berve upon Sunday school work in general, the need for it, and the results from it.

Friday evening there was preaching service, and Saturday, at 9 o'clock in the morning, we met for prayer and testimony meeting.

In the meantime incoming trains had brought a number of Saints, but nothing like the usual gathering was present. Missionary in charge, Brother Wight, was not there, and only one of the district missionaries was with us. So some of us began to fear the conference was going to be a disappointment. But the weather was delightful, and the surroundings were pleasant, and as we entered the plain little church and took our seats in soberness, a brooding peace hovered over us.

The opening hymn was announced and we sang No. 73.

"Lead me, O my Savior, lead me,
Closer would I cling to thee,
Ere the shadows gather round me
And my way I can not see.

"Lead me, lead me,
Grant thy strength and grace divine;
Let my thoughts on thee be centered,
And my will be lost in thine."

These words seemed to go up as a prayer from that congregation, sang with the Spirit that made them the petition of our hearts, "our way could not be seen," "our desire was to closer walk" and "our effort was to let our thoughts be centered upon His work."

The result was that the petition remained not unanswered, but prayers were offered, testimonies borne, praises sung by the aid of the Spirit that were comforting and inspiring. Brother Sade bore witness that the information for which he had been seeking had been given, and I think at the close of the hour many felt with the writer "that a good conference does not depend altogether upon the number there are in attendance, and that our God is able to perform marvelous things with but the two or three of his united followers, while with the hundreds who are at variance with each other, he is powerless to work."

At 10 o'clock the business session opened, and it lasted through the day. The peaceful Spirit continued and the usual business matters were soon attended to and the day was closed with a sermon by Bro. Charles Holmes.

Sunday, the crowning day of all, dawned fair and clear. It seemed that nature was helping the Saints to get ready for this meeting, for the hills all about us were covered with trees whose many colored leaves shone in the warm sunshine. The sky seemed even bluer than usual, and the air grew balmy as spring as the day advanced. So, with hearts filled with gratitude and praise, we began the day's worship.

At 9 a. m. Sunday school was in charge of the local officers and teachers, except that Brother Berve and Brother Sade each taught a class. Following the Sunday school Brother C. E. Ball, of Rock Island, preached, and very feelingly bore testimony to the work.

Two were baptized at 1 o'clock and confirmed at the afternoon prayer and sacrament service, which lasted a little over two hours. During this meeting seven prayers were offered, twenty testimonies borne, and a number of hymns sung. The presence of the Holy Spirit was even more sensibly felt than at the previous prayer meeting. Testimonies of divine help, of healing, of guidance, of knowledge were borne with an earnestness that left no room to doubt their genuineness. An instance of a remarkable restoration of voice to one under the administration of Brother Sade, at which time angelic voices were heard, was attested by two. And as the Spirit spoke comforting words to some through one of the presiding elders, and the purpose of trials and darkness was made plain to all, we felt to rejoice, and hardly think anyone there will soon forget that Sunday afternoon prayer meeting.

In the evening came the closing service, when Brother Sade preached. The key-note to the sermon was, "Resist the Devil and he will flee from you," and "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise."

At the conclusion, conference closed with singing No. 73. And we separated as we begun, with the prayer upon our lips,

"Lead me, O my Savior, lead me,
Till at last, my journey o'er,
I shall see, adore and praise thee,
With the ransomed evermore."

MARY E. GILLIN.

STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA, September 27, 1910.

Editors Herald: The Northern California and Nevada reunion, for 1910, has now passed into history, and was characterized by a large attendance, and a marked degree of the Spirit. The musical features were especially good this year. A splendid choir of young people, who took right hold with a vim, was accompanied and assisted by an orchestra composed of piano, three horns, violin and cello, and besides having vocal solos, duets, male quartets, etc., we were also favored with beautiful and inspiring instrumental selections at nearly every preaching service. It is gratifying, indeed, to see the young people heeding the admonition of the Lord, and taking hold of the musical part of this work. The young people of Irvington also rendered some assistance in a musical way that was greatly appreciated.

Besides the missionary force of the district, there was present with us to assist by their wise counsel and inspiring sermons, Bro. E. L. Kelley and F. M. Sheehy. Quite a number of Nevada Saints were in attendance, proof that the work is not entirely lost in the sage bush up there. The last day, Sunday, September 11, at high noon, two of our young people, Bro. W. H. Dawson and Sr. Rose Post, were united for life by a beautiful and impressive ceremony, performed by Brother Hawkins, step-father of the bride, and it rained—rice and congratulations.

The reunion over, we returned to Stockton to assist in dedicating their beautiful new church, which took place on the 18th. Brother Sheehy and Parkin came over from San Francisco, and we tried to induce the former to preach the dedicatory sermon, but he refused on the ground that he did not look a bit like the picture on the bills (of which he was probably glad), but he took charge of the meeting, conducting it in his characteristic way, and after the dedicatory prayer, so eloquently offered by Brother Parkin, we all felt that God had indeed accepted of the sacrifice of his people, and that it was now in fact the "house of God." The services were quite well attended; some from San Francisco, San Jose, Ripon, and Irvington being present. With the dedication we began a series of meetings, and have been preaching to increasing crowds for the past week, quite an interest being aroused. As soon as we finish this series of meetings, the writer will try and answer as many of the numerous calls for help as it is possible for him to reach. Truly the harvest is great, and the laborers few.

Hope that our friends back East will not think that because they haven't heard or seen much about us in the church papers, that we have dropped into the Pacific Ocean, or quit the field. The fact is, we were too busy to write much, but still in the faith and still ready to battle for the cause.

Your brother in Christ,

FRED B. FARR.

ISABELLA, COLORADO, September 28, 1910.

Dear Herald: After reading the letters in your dear columns I think of how strong they make me feel; how cheering and comforting they are. I am one of the isolated Saints and am lonely sometimes. My husband is not a member of the church, and is opposed to religion of any kind. He has not yet seen the light, and I fain would let my light shine enough to put him in the light; but I can not without help. I am asking you, dear Saints, to make his redemption a subject of your prayers. Bring it up in prayer meeting, some one, please, as I have the greatest faith in prayer, especially when a number of us are praying together. In my weak way I have been struggling for six long years trying to teach him, but God has not seen fit to lead him on as yet; however, my faith is still strong.

There is a great deal of good Government land about here, and anyone with three hundred dollars or more to invest would help plant the seeds of righteousness and bring many blessings by spreading the gospel word if they would but go in isolated districts and settle.

Ever for the gospel cause and for bringing new lambs to the fold, and ever praying for my dear one's conversion.

Your sister,
Mrs. R. S. TROSPER.

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, September 22, 1910.

Dear Readers of the Herald: I feel that you would like to hear something from this part of the vineyard, and especially at the close of another conference. The conferences of this western country are not what they are in the East, and for more than one reason. One is, that the Saints are scattered so widely, and another is, there is a spirit of indifference that is sad to see. It is true in almost every department of the work, and I believe it is folly to try to make ourselves believe that all is well.

The Religio convention was a failure; there were not members enough present to do business. The Sunday school convention was better attended, and evidently all enjoyed themselves. The entertainment on Friday evening was the marked feature of the conventions. It consisted of singing, recitations, a drill by the girls of the intermediate class, a tableau entitled, The ten virgins, by young ladies of the church. It was very impressive. We are indebted to some young ladies, and young men not members of the church, for the part they took in making the occasion a success. The sisters who had the arrangement of the whole matter in hand are entitled to great praise.

The district conference was not as largely attended as some conferences have been, but those who attended to enjoy the association of the Saints, and the Spirit of the Master were not disappointed. Bishop Kelley was with us, it being his first visit to the Sound country. His counsel in the conference, testimony of his experience in the work, and his clear explanation of the law, made it a profitable conference to all who would receive it.

Brn. E. L. Kelley and G. W. Thorburn were the speakers in the preaching services, with comfort to all.

Brother and Sister Dickout, of Hamilton, Ontario, was in attendance, and we have reason to believe they enjoyed themselves, Brother Dickout doing some missionary work. I hope that we may see the necessity of assuming the duties that have been placed upon us. Let us remember, brethren, we are "laborers together with God."

WM. JOHNSON.

CORYDON, INDIANA, September 27, 1910.

Editors Herald: Will write a few lines to let you know how things are progressing in the old Hoosier State. We have not had meeting since last fall. We are trying to run a home class Sunday school, and are looking for the elders now at any time. They are to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Mary Hannel, who died in July.

We have a lady in our neighborhood that believes the Brighamite doctrine, and they have gotten her tangled up considerably. She wants to hold to them and to Christian Science. She is sadly in the dark. We give her literature to read. She says the Brighamites have a sanitarium at Independence, Missouri, dedicated in the spring of 1908. Would really like to know if they have, or if the Brighamites are trying to claim ours. It might interest more than us to know. Will you answer through the HERALD?

This lady also said she was in Independence; said they showed her the Reorganized church, a little, old, shabby, dilapidated building; and the Brighamite church was a large, fine structure; and she said, too, there were not many members of the Reorganized Church there. We know the latter is a falsehood, for we read in the Ensign where the majority are members of the Reorganized Church.

They sent us a couple of tracts, and in our estimation, they are to the end of their row. We also got a couple of tracts in reply to theirs, which we appreciated very much.

Yours for truth,
JAMES M. WYM AND FAMILY.

FLINT, MICHIGAN, October 2, 1910.

Editors Herald: It has been some time since I sent any news to your columns. I have been very busy and then there was not much to write.

We have been blessed richly since I last wrote to you. We have had pleasant weather; only two rainy Sundays. On August '98 Elder Dowker was with us, and he preached several sermons during the week. On September 18 Miss Electa Grimshaw was baptized by Elder D. E. Dowker, and is now rejoicing in the knowledge of the truth of the everlasting gospel as restored in these the last days.

September 25 Elder J. J. Bailey was with us, and we certainly enjoyed a spiritual feast, for at the morning service the Spirit of the Lord was poured out upon Elder D. E. Dowker and it called Bro. George Burns to the office of teacher. Our joy was soon turned to sorrow, for at the close of the service, we heard the sad news of the death of Sr. Sophia Collins, who had been ill for nine months. She was the wife of Elder William Collins, and is survived by two sons, Frankie and Ether, her mother and four sisters. She was a faithful worker for the cause of Christ, and she died firm in the faith.

Last Thursday evening Elder Arthur Allen, of Detroit, was with us and preached a fine sermon, and we also saw the pleasant face of Elder James Davis at that meeting. We have the basement to our church nearly done. Our Sunday school and Religio are progressing finely. There is always good attendance and a fine interest shown. I will now bring my letter to a close and will try and send news oftener.

Your sister in Christ,
JENNIE BENJAMIN.

JOURDANTON, TEXAS, October 3, 1910.

Dear Herald: It has been some time since I have had the pleasure of regularly reading your pages, and a few borrowed copies made me realize what I have missed, so I have resolved that hereafter, the Lord being my helper, I will not miss one copy.

I belong to the First San Antonio Branch, but seldom have the opportunity of meeting with the Saints at that place.

We have recently moved to this place from Ballinger, Texas. If there are any Saints living here or near here, I would be glad to find them, that we might cooperate in introducing the gospel in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

I feel to rejoice in this glorious latter day gospel, and fully realize that if we would be blessed as the Lord has promised to bless us, we must do our part. Let us not cry, Oh, Lord! oh, Lord! and stand still, but let our every thought be for the advancement of his cause. Let us each strive to keep his commandments in temporal things as well as spiritual; then the redemption of Zion will indeed be a reality. I have neglected paying my tithing, being told that I was not subject to tithing, as my companion is not a member, and poor in this world's goods, but I realize that that idea is a mistake.

I have not neglected to pray and fast for his soul's salvation, and many, many times have I been blessed with the presence of His Holy Spirit, but I feel that my prayers would probably have been answered ere this, if I had been keeping the whole law. There are none of us so poor in health, but can find some little work to do some time in the year whereby we can earn a few cents for the Lord, and none of us so poor in this world's goods but can give a few cents toward his cause.

Then, Saints, we will wax stronger, our health will grow better, and the Spirit of God will dwell in our hearts and shine in our faces; yea, we will be doubly blessed when we live as becometh Saints.

My father, A. B. Kuykendall, and Bro. Glaud Kuykendall, of San Antonio, have just returned from a visit to this place. Brother Glaud preached two nights in the schoolhouse to an audience of between twenty and thirty persons with good attention.

He has an invitation to return, so we will likely have him and Bro. D. S. Palmer, our missionary, who is at the present near Pearsall working for the cause, with us again some time this fall.

My great desire is to so live that I may by my Christian conduct lead others into the light; also that I may be able to raise our little boy up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

I ask the prayers of the Saints in behalf of my companion, that he may believe the angel message and become a child of God.

May God's Spirit dwell in the hearts of his people and Zion soon be redeemed is the prayer of your sister in the one faith.

PEARL RICHARDSON.

LYNNVILLE, KENTUCKY, September 30, 1910.

Editors Herald: Here I come once more. I am still alive and feeling happy in the work of the Lord. Well, that big debate on Cone Island, Arkansas, is all over and the victory won. My opponent was a Mr. W. G. Tucker, of Campbellite fame. The debate was set to commence September 5, and last six days, two sessions per day. The Reorganized Church was on trial the first three days, and we rejoiced in the defense of the angel's message. Bro. H. M. Daniel, of Jonesboro, Arkansas, acted as my moderator. Bro. G. W. Clemen had put out a big watermelon crop, with honey in abundance, and plenty of fish.

We entered the front of battle at 10 p. m., September 5, and held the fort against all efforts of the "Mogul" of Campbellism. Reverend Tucker had supplied himself with an abundance of paper scrolls which he used to show up "Old Joe Smith," etc. In his first speech he sailed into the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith in great shape. But as we had three days to our proposition, we gave him an exchange of views upon that subject, and in so doing broke down much of the long standing opposition to our work.

Tucker read a "shut-in" letter in the Ensign, and then went off into a boisterous denunciation of the Reorganized Church for not going and healing that fellow, but I gave the people to understand that this "shut-in" writer was not a member of the church, that for all we knew about him he might be as bitter against healing as my learned opponent.

Mr. Tucker dealt in Braden hash, and called the Saints a "God-dishonoring, hell-desiring outfit," all because he had not seen a sign. Tucker's moderator, Mr. Mitchell, seemed to doubt the chairman's ability to keep the time, and got Sister Tucker to help him. I let this run until Sister Tucker got to waving her watch on my time as much as five minutes before the chairman would call the time. But at last Mr. Mitchell called the chair in question, in a roundabout way, and then I set my foot on that trick good and hard. Mitchell got mad, and Tucker came near fainting, but I had the chair on my side, so did not apologize for the blister.

We closed our proposition with the crowd coming our way. Tucker could see this so plainly that he abused the Methodist people, the Baptist, and everybody else. He declared against the Holy Ghost, and all the blessings of the gospel, and made war on the Saints to the astonishment of the people. But it came to pass that I did take the word of God, and show therefrom that God had promised the Holy Ghost to all them who obey him, and thus I did slay this mighty warrior with the word of God before all the people.

And it came to pass afterwards that this man of war did take courage and did go to the front of battle with the weapons of another man. Yea, even the weapons of Alexander Campbell, and did try to build him a church in harmony with the New Testament, without apostles, without prophets, without the Spirit, and thus did the people wonder with great admiration.

The chairman of the debate was Mr. West. He says I "killed" Tucker in my first speech on his proposition; that if I did not do any more Tucker was ruined. I told Tucker that I did not intend that he should have one quotation of God's Bible in support of his man made church, eighteen hundred years this side of Christ.

I showed from their own books that the Christian world had all they ever claimed long years before Alexander Campbell was born into the world. So when the debate closed there was a great crowd of people came forward and sang a song and placed upon my head a crown wreath of roses. Then I was put into a decorated rig and driven around the camp ground, while a crowd of singers followed in wagons singing, "God be with you till we meet again." This closed one of the most complete victories that I have ever witnessed for the truth.

God bless that host of young people who stood so unflinchingly by me in my defense of the gospel. Since the first of this conference year, I have preached in four States; in fifteen different places in those States, preached one hundred and twenty sermons, assisted thirty-six times, baptized eight, confirmed eight, and administered to sick ~~nine~~ times and held one debate of twelve two-hour sessions. Was called home in July, and found a big fat boy there—hallelujah, and am still feeling "fine and dandy."

CASTANA, IOWA, September 28, 1910.

Editors Herald: Inclosed find a clipping from Gospel Trumpet. I wish you would please give the appeal for Christian teaching place in the HERALD, that the Saints may have the opportunity of sending the angel's message to these hungry souls; and if any of our elders are near there, or could find time to go and get the true gospel of Christ before these people. A sister of ours sends us the Trumpet and for this one article, I am truly thankful. I haven't anything at present to send them, so I simply send this on that others may have a chance to send reading of the right kind to them. I have decided, however, to write letters to each of the ladies named, and by so doing help to point them to the true and living God and his own church.

Please pray for me that I may be a help to them in their need of Christian teaching.

Ever your sister in the one faith,

SADIE BURCH.

[The clipping is as follows:]

"PLEASANT VALLEY, MONTANA, August 7.

"I hope, dear Editor, that you will let this cry from the wilderness go out to be heard by all readers of the Gospel Trumpet.

"While Christian missionary help is going out to all foreign countries, there remains in Montana a territory one hundred miles square and more, with numerous families and many children, in which there is neither church, Sunday school, nor other Christian teaching. Look at the map of Montana and note the distance from Kalispell, in Flathead County, to Libby, in Lincoln County, and from Eureka to Plains, and remember that in all this great county there is no house in which to worship God, nor Christian teaching of any kind. Many families, but no Christian teaching is provided for the children.

"Good Christians have sent some Sunday school literature to Mrs. Lizzie Orr, but she lives far from some other families. Christian papers, books, and Sunday school literature, even if they have been used, would do great good if mailed to either Mrs. G. A. Lynch or Mrs. Isaac Jackson, and the senders would receive God's blessing.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, October 3, 1910.

Editors Herald: A few lines to inform you that, as gospel literature superintendent, I am busy in the work and rejoicing in the onward march of the gospel.

In the October number of Hampton's Magazine there is a splendid article on "The head of the Reorganized Mormon Church." The article is ably written. Every family of Saints should have at least one of this number. About the best of the latest photos of Brother Joseph is produced. A few excerpts from this article may be appreciated by those who can not secure the magazine: "He is no religious faker." "A poor man, despite that for half a century he has had the administration of the tithes which his followers devoutly contribute." "He is a man of large parts and high character."

The writer has something to say about the "Utah Mormon hierarchy." The elders in the field should find this article valuable, especially in debates.

Last Sunday we journeyed to the union depot in Kansas City, and placed on sale a number of Daniel Macgregor's Marvelous Work and a Wonder. This news company (Van-Noy's) has sold nearly one hundred of tracts Nos. 20 and 209. Any of the Saints in coming to Kansas City may purchase Bro. Macgregor's work at the news stand in the depot for the same price asked by the Herald Publishing House—ten cents. I am happy in seeing the efforts made by the Saints to sow the good seed. May the Lord strengthen his children, and may the honest and dishonest of the earth hear the saving truths of the gospel from those authorized to proclaim it.

In bonds,

JOSEPH A. FERRIS.

From the Lamanites to the Saints.

Now that I am in the land of the Lamanites, and being in a position to know what I can do through your financial as well as prayerful aid, for the best interests of this people; also knowing the time has come that this gospel and the record of our fathers is going to be presented to them, whether we advance our part in the great work or not, I make this appeal to you.

Thousands of Lamanites can be reached if means are forthcoming. Thousands of Books of Mormon ought to be placed in the hands of those who work among this people. As for me, I would be content should you grant me the privilege of presenting one hundred to each tribe. That would represent many of the reading class, who I think will read and tell it to others.

I came to Pawnee three weeks ago to-day with twenty-eight Nephite records. I do not want to claim too much honor for myself as to guidance by unseen power, but I believe that every book that I have given to my Lamanite brother or sister, has been given by a higher dictator to my mind than self, and that, too, under conditions of mental stress that I never passed through before. But I have not let those vexations stop my labor among the Lamanites or on the street in Pawnee.

I have talked with the heads of the church, and we thought a Book of Mormon fund might be kept up by selling the book, but as yet they will not buy the book. While they are interested and almost believe it, there is a power that holds them back as a body of people; also other churches and many other things that would take too much space to tell. I believe the God of this dear people requires us to make haste and distribute at least a few more books among the different tribes and bands. Do not let some one else be the advance guard with Books of Mormon. I find now and then one of these books from another camp. They are the best as to binding, etc. My advice would be not to furnish less than a fifty cent book. However, I do not believe we ought to leave the church with a lot of cheap books in hand, but I do not believe they will be appreciated by the Lamanites as will a better book. I assure you that I will not turn them down should they come to my hand without any cover on. I would like for each one who pays or sends for books to have their names placed in the books. Other churches furnish this people with Bibles; we must furnish them with Books of Mormon and fulfill prophecy. Many of us could furnish thousands of books, many hundreds, and many dozens, and not be a sacrifice to do so, and those that can, ought to.

Pray that laborers among the Lamanites may be sent quickly. I believe the times demand it.

P. S.—Since writing you last evening, it has been presented to me not to give a paper covered Book of Mormon to the Lamanites. This has always been my mind, as some know, but to reach those who want to give a book that would cost less money, and my desire to get the record among the Lamanites, is why I wrote you as I did. Give your order to the HERALD and Ensign and I will order when and where sent. J. E. P.

The Irvington Reunion.

The reunion at Irvington, California, has passed into history, but the blessings received and the happiness experienced by the large assembly of Saints will never be forgotten. The word was dispensed by Elders J. M. Terry, E. L. Kelley, F. B. Farr, C. A. Parkin, C. W. Hawkins, F. M. Sheehy, J. C. Clapp, J. A. Anthony, and Priest C. J. Cady.

There were 6 baptisms, 164 testimonies, 18 prayers, 49 hymns, 6 prophecies, 5 tongues, 9 prayer services, 47 sermons, 36 young people's prayer services. Worthy of mention are the two testimonies of little George Huston, a lad of about ten years. He stated in firm, audible tones that he, with some companions, were out for a ramble over the hills, and he divested himself of his coat, not noting the place where he threw it. He searched in vain for it; then, becoming distressed, knowing that his mother would surely punish him for his carelessness, suggested that they all kneel down and ask aid from their heavenly Father. They did so, and found the coat easily. His last testimony was to the effect that the Saints should be thankful for being supplied with good clothes, for one of his companions at school was poor and ragged, and when the school entertainment was to take place this boy could not attend for want of proper raiment. He went to the teacher and obtained permission to take up a collection to purchase clothes for the poor child, which he first declined to accept, but finally accepted.

A very pretty and interesting wedding took place at high noon on the last Sunday of the reunion, when Bro. W. H. Dawson, of Sacramento, was married to Rose Post, of San Jose. After the ceremony they were pelted with old shoes, and a copious shower of rice.

The Sunday school gave a very fine entertainment, under the superintendency of Sister Saxe. In every way the reunion was a decided success. A goodly number of outsiders attended, and some seemed much interested. The weather was propitious, and a truly uplifting, spiritual time was greatly enjoyed. It was decided to hold the next reunion at the same place.

Yours in gospel bonds,

EDWARD F. ADAMSON, Secretary.

SEPTEMBER 21, 1910.

Eastern Michigan Reunion.

The first reunion of the district convened at Port Huron, situated on Saint Clair River, at foot of Lake Huron, September 2 to 12. It was conceded by all present to be an ideal camping ground, and one of the most central points in the district. It can be reached by five lines, steam railroad, and one trolley. Those present were so well pleased they voted to come again in June, 1911, for twelve days.

There were 10 social services, 26 preaching services, 4 Sunday school normal sessions, 1 Sunday school and 1 Religio convention, 1 conference session, 1 sacrament, 1 Sunday school session. The preaching was by J. J. Cornish, R. Etzenhouser, William Fligg, F. Gregory, J. W. Wight, William Davis, William Dowker, J. A. Grant, A. Leverton, and A. Allen. Sunday school normal work in charge of A. Allen. Conference in charge of J. W. Wight, W. Grice, and William Davis.

The organization for reunion were: Presidency, A. Allen, J. W. Wight, William Grice, William Davis; secretaries, Joseph Carpenter, H. E. Muir; music committee, J. J. Emlaw, Jennie Hunter, Fred Gregory; janitor, George Myers; police, A. Kessler; ushers, Roy Yeager, G. McDonald; press committee, E. B. Blett, Joseph Carpenter. The local paper gave us daily service which was fair and impartial. The most important business transacted at conference was the appointing of a music and reunion committee for district.

The music committee were: D. E. Dowker, Sister Terry, Jennie Hunter. The reunion committee consisted of the district president as and ex officio member, and the following: A. Allen, of Detroit, and H. Houston, of Allerton, for the term of one year, and J. A. Grant, of Detroit, and C. C. Whitford, of Port Huron, for the term of two years.

E. B. Blett represented the Herald Office and Graceland College, giving one lecture on college work. J. J. Bailey was in charge of patriarchal work, being assisted by Sr. Blanche Allen, stenographer.

There were 26 campers' tents, 1 dining, and 1 preaching tent. Meals were served by reunion committee for 15 cents. The grounds furnished free by local real estate agent.

News From Missions

ILLINOIS.

Responding to an invitation to attend a Sunday school rally at Buffalo Prairie, we left the smoky city of Kewanee to breathe the pure, fresh air of the country for a day or two, arriving at Joy on Saturday evening, September 17, where I was met by Elder C. L. Holmes, with whom I enjoyed a ten-mile drive to his beautiful home on the farm, and where an appetizing supper awaited us. Although the hour was late, it reminded me of the supper hour in good old England. One never forgets his native land and its customs, though he will decide this is certainly "Joseph's land;" the choice of all lands.

Sunday morning, the long looked for time came, accompanied with the warmth of the beautiful sunshine. Saints, friends from far and near, gathered together to enjoy the day's exercises. It began with the regular Sunday school session at 10 a. m., with Sr. Florence Holmes, the superintendent in charge. I was requested to take the reviewing of the whole school for the past quarter. At 11 a. m., preaching hour, I occupied at the request of the "powers that be." A basket dinner had been arranged and all were invited to partake. The Union and Baptist schools of the township were present and seemed to enjoy themselves.

Promptly at 2 p. m. we took up institute work for nearly two hours, when an enjoyable season was spent by all. Thus closed what the superintendent chose to call an "Arber" day. It was my first visit to this part of the country. The Buffalo Prairie church, I am told, is the second oldest in the Reorganization.

Bidding adieu to the Saints and friends, I left at the close of the meeting in the afternoon to fill an appointment at Joy. Bro. Floyd Holmes kindly took me down there, arriving just about in time to go right into the stand to address a very appreciative audience. I was made welcome to the hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. J. W. Bean, whose kindness will not soon be forgotten. In fact, I was treated with kindness by all. I preached Monday and Tuesday evenings in the neat little church, and also spoke once upon the street to a large, attentive crowd. Bro. O. E. Sade, the district president, assisted in this meeting, and we thought it commendable for him to step right out of his shop door, and help us to sing; also offer the opening prayer. Bro. Joseph W. Bean, too, did nobly, as did Sr. Malvin Holmes and her son Glen, also Sister Reynolds. It takes a certain amount of courage, and grit to stand upon the street to present the angel message, but since we can not reach the people by other methods, I believe the day is not far distant when more street work will be done. We have taken up this line of work in Kewanee, speaking on the main street, where we are listened to by a great many that we could not otherwise reach.

Our effort in the city continues about as usual, and to say we were doing anything great would be drawing upon our imaginative powers; but we believe we are holding our own, with some little prospects ahead. We have a nice Sunday school, presided over by Bro. Richard Norris; also a small Religio.

The minister's wife, too, is trying to assist all she can, having organized the young sisters into a sewing society, known as the Kewanee Young Ladies' Fancy Work Club. They intend having a bazaar about the first of December, the proceeds to go toward branch expenses.

It was our privilege to attend the reunion at Moline, which was a spiritual feast. The Sunday school and Religio work was placed in charge of Sr. M. A. Etzenhouser and myself. Everyone regretted that our sister had to leave so soon, we having her service for three days. Her work was enjoyed by all.

A few weeks ago two Utah elders visited town and spoke upon the streets. I replied to them, quoting from their books. I have an old Doctrine and Covenants published in Liverpool, England, in 1852; also a copy of their Book of Mormon, which I could use to good advantage. The editor of the local paper here gave us a good showing. I believe if the line of demarkation was drawn more, we would be much better understood. I called upon these elders when I got through and asked them if they had any reply to make, and they shook their heads. I further stated our church door was open to them if they wished to reply. They declined the offer. In my heart, I can not help but feel sorry for them. I trust the day may come when those who are honest in heart amongst them will come out of Babylon.

Indications are that we will trouble the waters before many days. We have fond hopes that we may always be found occupying, that we can pray that "God will speed the right." May the day hasten when there will be "Peace on earth."

Yours for the spread of the angel's message,
JOSEPH ARBER.

KEWANEE, ILLINOIS, September 26, 1910.

ARKANSAS.

For those who are especially interested in us and the work here, I write. The long looked for debate has passed, but I will not attempt to give the details in full. Suffice it to say, Bro. J. T. Davis was our representative, and the cause suffered no harm from the Campbellite opposer, W. G. Tucker. He became so enraged he overruled the chair, the people, and all, on his last speech; however, J. T. has the respect of all outside that faction, and the people, not us, crowned him with flowers, covered him with ribbon, paraded him into decorated buggies, and sang to the honor of his conduct and the spirit of the work.

We are feeling good in our isolated condition; only three of us at this place. However, we have had the bread of life broken to us by Elders D. R. Baldwin, W. P. Pickering, J. H. Grimes, Henson, Moler, and Davis; also J. T. Riley, our present missionary. And to all those of our acquaintance into whose hands this may come, be it known unto you that we still remember you with love and best wishes. Long life to the HERALD, and its staff.

G. W. CLEMENTS.

CONE ISLAND, September 27, 1910.

WASHINGTON.

Editors Herald: I arrived in my mission field June 1, Seattle being my first stopping point. A few days after I arrived Bro. William Johnson and myself started some meetings on the streets, during which time we came in contact with the Utah elders.

One night after they closed their meeting, I undertook to tell the people who we were, and in so doing, we gave them a brief talk on the history of the church. Of course that included the latter day apostasy. After I got through, one of the Utah elders stepped into the ring and, instead of trying to refute my argument, he challenged me to a public debate. Next night we made it a point to again meet this elder on the street, and told him that inasmuch as he was the challenging party, we presumed he had propositions drawn up for us to sign, so we could fix a date for the debate. Then he astonished me by saying he never challenged me to debate. I told him if he did not have propositions, I did, and I handed them to him to read. When he told me they were counseled not to debate, I told him he made quite a break last night for a man that was counseled not to debate. He said he did not intend to be bluffed down.

The whole matter is just this, he could not meet the argument, so he had to do something to make good with the people. But the debate never came off. For two nights at the same place the challenge was made. Brother Stead spoke on the differences between us.

I spent most of the summer in northern Washington and British Columbia. My first stop was at Langley, Washington; held a little over two weeks' meetings there, baptized four and left some of the best people of the town interested in our work. From Langley I went to Everett; found a nice band of Saints there; nearly all sisters. My ten years' experience in missionary work has taught me that if it were not for the sisters in a good many places, our work would suffer.

After leaving Everett, I went to Snohomish; held some meetings in Sister Scott's house, baptizing her little boy and girl. Brother Johnson joined me at Snohomish; from there we went to Clayburn, British Columbia, held a few meetings and had a nice visit with the Saints there.

Our next stop was Chilliwack, where we were met at the boat by Brother Stade and taken to his comfortable home. While there our best meetings were held at Rosedale in Bro. James Muirhead's house. The Saints did what they could to make the meetings a success. We then came to Westminster; held some few meetings in Bro. Thomas Butterfield's house. The Saints in Westminster are fortunate to have Elder Pope, wife, and family located in their midst. They are a good help to the branch.

We also held some meetings in Vancouver; the meetings were held in Bro. Isaac McMullen's house, only the last Sunday we were there, the Saints coming over from Westminster, we held it in Bro. George McMullen's house, it being larger. We had a good time, the good Spirit being felt in all our meetings. We were also glad to have Brother and Sister Dickout with us from Hamilton, Canada.

We had a good conference the 17th and 18th of this month. Bro. E. L. Kelley went with us and gave us two good sermons.

GEORGE THORBURN.

2030 INGERSOLL P., SEATTLE, WASHINGTON.

MISSOURI.

Perhaps I have been a little negligent in writing to your pages, but I would rather read what others have to say. My field being a new one for me, I have labored at some disadvantage, but have been nobly assisted in the work of acquainting myself with the needs of the work by the officers of both district and branches. We have had some very pleasant and, we hope, profitable meetings, since coming into the field, May 4.

In August I was permitted to visit my family and attend the reunion held at Eldorado Springs, Missouri, in the Clinton District, where I labored for more than twelve years. It was one of the best reunions I have ever attended. There were present of the ministry: Apostle I. N. White; Patriarch Ammon White, Elders J. C. Foss, George Jenkins, W. S. Macrae, James Moler, and C. J. Peters. Sr. Flo McNichols was in attendance and was of great assistance to the success of the Sunday school and Religio departments of the work. Bro. Charles Erwin represented the interests of Graceland College in an able manner.

The work in our field is moving nicely. Five precious souls were added to our number at the Ross Grove Branch recently, when my colaborer, J. D. Shower, and myself held a two-week meeting. I expect to begin meeting to-morrow night at the Fair View Schoolhouse, near Barnard, Missouri.

Will just say in conclusion, to the scattered Saints of the Nodaway District, if you want your neighbors and friends to hear the gospel, address me at Guilford, Missouri, and I will arrange to hold meeting in your vicinity at my earliest convenience.

Yours for the upbuilding of the work,

A. C. SILVERS.

CLYDE, MISSOURI, September 27, 1910.

OHIO.

It is not that I do not wish to write that I have been so dilatory in furnishing something for the columns of the HERALD, and so tardy in responding to the gentle reminder received recently, but an uncertainty concerning the "general" interest in what I could write.

However, upon an impression of the thought that the progress of the gospel work in any locality is of interest to the "whole" church, I venture a brief account.

The interest taken in our humble work in a new place, last fall, about three miles from where our tent now stands, was such that during a three weeks' meeting held in an unoccupied Methodist church on the corner of Bro. James Lacy's small farm, on which he settled the previous spring, we were invited to partake of the repeated hospitality of some twelve other families, supplemented by an urgent request to return.

Pursuant to our promise to do so, a tent meeting was, in due time announced to be held in August, in a grove fitted up by Bro. Hiram Remy, who, with his estimable wife, was baptized during the tent meeting. Brother Lacy's son, of eleven years, being obedient to the gospel at the same time.

It may not be amiss to say that the arrangement for the tent meeting was due to the fact that the old church we had occupied was nailed up, and the statement given out, that the "Mormons" could not have it again; evidently because so many became interested in the true and everlasting gospel. As the time for our tent meeting drew near, a few of the members of the Christian Church thought something must be done to rescue some of their brethren who were interested in our work.

Accordingly Elder Jameson was secured to lecture against "Mormonism" in their church, some two miles from the building we occupied on the former occasion. To the scene of attack the writer hastened, being so directed by Bro. F. J. Ebeling, assistant in charge. Four long evening sessions we sat under the random fire of "shot and shell," more "bomb" than logical, unflinchingly taking notes; forbidden, however, in the outset to say a word.

The cowardly opponent gave us to understand that he had control there for four evenings, and that there would be "no public utterances" allowed but those he should make. He stated that he must go as soon as he was through, then had the audacity to add, "I suppose they will have something to say after I am gone."

It is needless to say that the tent was erected next day, and reply begun at once. Some of his members who were our friends, were, from the first, so out of sympathy with the attack that they would not attend the bombardment, but got a good part of both sides in the reply. Some of them have already declared their intention to come into the true church, ere long. Others, who were not members of any church, were our friends before the conflict, and are so yet. Still others have since become friends to our work.

During our second series, held some two miles from the first place, to accommodate those still more distant, five more were baptized. A number of others are very near the kingdom.

A new church building is contemplated, and liberal donations proffered, without a word of solicitation from us. Ground is offered by three persons. One has already requested a deed formulated.

The interest in our meeting at the third place is increasing. A goodly number being present since the first two evenings, when a sales show was on the street. Sunday afternoon a large and attentive audience greeted the speaker, Bro. A. B. Kirkendall, who was present for the day. At night the tent was full and others listening outside. Bro. F. J. Ebeling and N. L. Booker have been participants in this work, the latter performing three of the baptisms.

MAINE.

The mission work in this extreme northeastern corner of the United States is, in the main, like mission work in other States. There are few persons who find the narrow way. In some towns quite a number listen attentively till they catch sight of the distinctive features of the angel's message; then good-bye! However, as a rule, each town contains a few persons who obey; only a few compared with the multitude who reject. This is one side of the picture. More interesting will be a view of what we had done and are doing.

The minister in charge, Brother Greene, is an energetic and conscientious man, trying to push the work into new fields and to strengthen the standing work. Lack of men is the greatest obstacle; this being true everywhere. There are many places in Maine where the gospel could be introduced, but results are uncertain. It is hard to dodge the fact that this is the time of Gentile rejection, and even God's people are slow to come out of Babylon. (Revelation 18: 4.) When we consider that the entire State of Maine contains only a seventh more population than Boston, one can imagine what a large and peculiar territory it is.

The somewhat unique and unusual work of Brother Macgregor at Stonington is new to some. A word relative to it will be of interest. The writer lived there many years. The latter day work has been represented there since the civil war closed. Over fifteen years ago the Saints erected a large church. Some thought the building too large, but subsequent development proves the contrary. When Brother Macgregor went there last fall, he became somewhat in doubt as to the advisability of continuing his series, but the tide turned in his favor, and with much praying and preaching, the interest resulted in many baptisms. In the interest of truth, I wish to say that the gospel net was dipped deep and gathered of such kind as the Master said.

Two other instances of reaping seed sown many years ago, are those of the work of Brethren Greene and Foss around Jonesport and Machias. In these places the rough edge of the gospel had been removed by parents, Sunday school teachers, and past preaching. In Stonington, a certain percentage were outsiders. As it is, however, in the past twelve months, Maine has witnessed upward of two hundred baptized into the true church. Out on the firing line quite a number are convicted, but only a few converted. Gross skepticism is prevalent and it takes hours of praying and preaching and talking in order to wrest one soul from the grasp of Satan. It seems to me that the chief fault lies with the people; they do not investigate prayerfully. If a person is not willing to do this, he must die in ignorance; for the Spirit can not accomplish its work in a stubborn heart.

Not long ago the Utah missionaries located in Portland and began to radiate two by two. They have traveled through certain parts of the State, eating the food of the "Reorganite apostates," and leaving tracts at houses. They are doing some street preaching in the cities, often holding aloft the "three books" as the standards of their faith. We may have an opportunity of exposing their duplicity by turning the light on page 116 of the Book of Mormon, where it speaks of but "one wife," for one man. They claim they disposed of over seven hundred Books of Mormon in the East last year.

Perhaps the missionary in the East labors against special odds. For instance, many persons seem to be entrenched behind the walls of deep seated sectarian bigotry. There is less willingness to hear than in the West. Interest is generally centered in a few, and the elder needs to spend weeks preaching to a half dozen. He often wins them. In many sections religious indifference is appalling. The majority are not sufficiently moved to even slander. As is common in other countries, lodges, dances, card parties, and worldism by the wholesale, are no small enemies to cope with; but in the midst of it all, some honest souls are receiving the message of peace.

Of course the future of Maine is in the hand of God; how he will shape it is unknown to us. There are many places unopened, and many places that yield small results when opened. Efforts bring success; yet the chief success that we can expect is to warn the world and to gather a people prepared to meet the Bridegroom.

In July, Brother Hull opened the work in Bar Harbor, one of the world's most fashionable summer resorts; but don't think any of the fashionable people come to hear the gospel. A few people, comparatively, attend his series in a mission hall. The local paper gave place to a correction of its mistake in connecting Brother Hull with the Utah people. After his departure a woman was hired to lecture on (and it is understood, against) "Mormonsim." She was to enact the scene of Moroni's visit to Joseph Smith. I could not attend, but presume the usual effect was produced.

People in Maine have scarcely recovered from their political shock. Contrary to the rule of thirty years the State went Democratic. This gives prohibition a stinging blow in the face, as the Democrats are in favor of license and will work to that end. Your writer and two others were the only ones in this town who rode the water wagon to the polls. The enforcement of prohibitory laws in this State is almost a farce, but the principle of prohibition is correct. Statistics, unanswerable, so prove.

However, my thousand word limit must be up; and yet I have given our readers only a glimpse into the vast field that is known as Maine. The missionary must go on and on, invoking the spirit of Christianity; clothed with the garment of patience, hope, charity, and faith; so laboring that at last, without fear or shrinking, the arms may be placed around the pillars of Death, while the soul wings its way to the presence of God.

RALPH W. FARRELL.

[The "thousand words" was only suggestive, Brother Farrell, and we appreciate your hearty response.—EDITORS.]

News From Branches

DES MOINES, IOWA.

The interest is increasing in the Des Moines Branch. One was baptized a week ago last Sunday, who was seventy-eight years old; and one last Sunday, eight years old; and others to be next Sunday. We have a few strangers to our service now and then.

Those who have been ailing are improving. Sr. C. R. Johnson, who had an attack of typhoid fever, and Sr. M. E. Wicker, who has been very ill, were both at sacrament meeting last Sunday. Bro. A. J. Wicker is still affected with sore eyes. The choir have erected and seated a platform for their use in the church.

Bro. and Sr. John Vice are here from Rocky Ford, Colorado, on a visit to their daughter, Sr. Bertha Charters. They expect to return in a few days. Trust the ministry will visit them when they return.

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

CENTRAL CHICAGO.

Friday, September 30. We were glad to again attend Religio, as we had missed two sessions on account of the special meetings. Elder Tanner conducted a very interesting parliamentary practice, as our new quarterlies had not arrived.

Sunday, October 2. Sacrament service quite well attended, and a good spirit manifested. The following were visitors: Sr. E. H. Lacey and Bro. H. E. Jarvis, of Burlington, Iowa; Bro. M. J. Chapman, of Grant Park, Illinois; and Sr. W. E. Williamson, of Mission, Illinois, whose husband is confined at the Wesleyan Hospital. Elder Pement occupied in the evening. Elder Tanner left Sunday evening for Saint Louis, for a two weeks' stay. We regretted his departure, but arrangements have been made for Elder Cooper, district president, to occupy during his absence.

We are glad to report that Bro. and Sr. J. J. Oliver are now located at 6610 Paulina street.

Wednesday evening prayer meeting was not attended by many, but everyone present offered prayer, and nearly everyone testified, so it was a profitable meeting and all were benefited. Our pastor asked us on Sunday to pray for those who were spiritually sick, and I believe that the majority of us feel that we are not nearly as healthy as we should be. May we all endeavor to pray for one another and be faithful day by day.

The Gleaners met at Sr. H. P. W. Keir's home on Thursday. The officers elected last week were: Mrs. James Lang, president; Mrs. T. Vanderhoof, vice-president; and Mrs. Keir, secretary and treasurer. We who work in an office or store feel that the housekeepers have an excellent opportunity to assist in these societies.

"What doth the Lord require of us, but to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God."

Notice of Restoration.

As a committee appointed by the Northeastern Illinois District to inquire into the expulsion of Bro. Alfred Tarling, with authority to act for and in behalf of the district, we find as follows:

1. Brother Tarling was one of the most active church workers in the branch of which at the time he was a member, which branch has since been disorganized, thereby leaving the matter entirely in the hands of the district.

2. That by virtue of existing conditions at the trial the court was compelled to find against the brother, though contrary to its own convictions in the matter at the time. And had the case been appealed we believe that the brother would not have been expelled.

3. Believing that his punishment has been greater than his offense demanded, he having been debarred of church fellowship for twenty years, and even now, after a lapse of so long a time, still maintains his integrity in the church and a godly walk before the world,

We are, therefore, of the opinion that said court action should become null and void, and that the brother should be restored to full fellowship in the church. And by virtue of the authority granted to us as noted above; that is, being empowered to act for and in behalf of the district, we hereby declare the action of the court that found him guilty to be set aside and Bro. Alfred Tarling to be restored to all the rights and privileges of church fellowship, and recommend him to such branch of the church as he may apply for fellowship.

THE HEALING OF ROBERT FOWLER.

A REMARKABLE CASE OF HEALING CERTIFIED TO BY THE PASTOR OF THE CHURCH AT PHILADELPHIA.

They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.—Mark 16: 18.

In the SAINTS' HERALD, July 6, 1910, we published the following letter from Joshua P. Fowler, telling about the remarkable manner in which his son Robert had been restored by the power of God after having suffered a terrible accident:

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, June, 1910.

Dear Brothers and Sisters: Having passed through trials and sorrows as well as joys in this latter day work, and not seeing any account of the loss that came to me and my family in any of our church papers, I thought I would write to you and let you see that although the dear Lord saw fit to let us go through a severe trial, yet in his great mercy he also poured out his blessings on us.

On the 7th day of December, 1909, two of my sons (George A. and Robert E.) were installing an acetylene gas generator for welding purposes. This was their last day to be at this place where they make safes, and the firm that was buying the welding plant wished it for welding certain parts of their safes together. I had been talking to my son George at 1.15 o'clock p. m., and when he bade me good-bye, he told me that he was going up to the safe works to put on a safety valve on the generator and then they would be ready to turn the plant over to the owners of the safe works. My youngest boy, Robert, had been there two or three days showing their people how to work the plant for welding.

After I bade my son good-bye, I had to meet a party from New York who came to Philadelphia to see me on business. We did not get through our business till 6 p. m. I lived near the church, which is about an hour's ride from my office, so when I got home it was about 7 p. m. I did not know what was wrong, but I could see by their faces that there was something wrong. One of the sisters of the church and my oldest daughter and her husband were there, but I did not see my wife. I asked for her and they said she had gone up stairs and for me to get my coat off first as they had something to tell me. I took off my coat and they told me that my two boys had been blown up in an explosion, killing George instantly and burning Robert almost into a crisp. You may judge what a blow this was to me, to know that when I bade George good-bye near my office, it was the last time I would ever see him alive in this world, and to think that Robert, though his life might be spared, yet he would be disfigured for life and blind, for they said his eyes were blown out.

After I had spoken to my wife, with very poor comfort, as I had none to give, I got ready to go to the hospital to see them and claim George's body. Bro. W. W. Smith came in.

He had been down and claimed George's body for us and had seen Robert. When he met me he could hardly talk. He just took me by the hand and said that Robert was still alive, so I went to the hospital and what a sight! Robert was covered with bandages from the top of his head to below his knees, and the doctors told me it would be better for him to die, as his eyes were gone, both blown out of their sockets, and that his back was broken and large holes were cut and burned into his body. While they were working with him he came to and when he did he told them not to bother about him, but to go to his brother George and save him, for he had a wife and child. George was twenty-five and Robert was

George's wife and then came and told my wife, and after he had sent some of the sisters to stay with my wife, he went back to the hospital to see Robert again and to administer to him. Dear brothers and sisters, you will wonder where the blessings of the Lord comes in when here is my oldest son killed and my youngest son with his eyes blown out, his back broken, and his body all cut and burned; but God is good and his promises faithful and true to his children.

When Brother Smith (though tired and worn, for he is not strong in body, but faithful to his calling) went back to the hospital the doctors would not uncover Robert's head for him to anoint him. He found a little spot on his neck that was bare so he anointed him there and prayed over him that he might by the Lord's will and power come out of this with his body in perfect health and strength, with all his faculties. The brothers and sisters were gathered at the church for teachers' meeting but they turned it into a prayer meeting for our boy, and glory be to God, their prayers were heard and answered, for when I went back to the hospital in the morning, the first thing the doctors and nurses told me was that my boy's eyes were all right. They said it was something that they could not understand. They knew his eyes were gone, for when they cleaned his eye sockets out there was not an eyeball to be seen and that they were positive his back was broken, but now it seemed to be all right. This happened on December 7, 1909, and it was not two weeks when I brought my boy home with perfect eyesight and a perfect body, and not anything on his body to show that he had ever been burned.

The eyes he had before were somewhat weak, but the set he has now is sharp and strong, so you can see that the dear Lord will and does hear and answer the prayers of his children. Dear Saints, is it not worth all our sacrifice to get to serve a God and Father like this, and to give even our life to his service?

My son George makes four boys we have on the other shore to meet us when we come.

We ask an interest in your prayers that we may prove faithful and be able to receive a crown of glory. After the debris was cleaned away, it was found that the plant my boys were installing did not explode, but that a man that worked at the safe works lit a match over a can of benzine, and it was that which caused the explosion.

Yours in gospel bonds,

JOSHUA P. FOWLER.

We received so many inquiries from individuals who desired additional witness to this case of divine healing that we wrote to Elder Walter W. Smith, pastor of the church in Philadelphia, who officiated in the administration, and from him we have received the following letter:

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, October 10, 1910.

Editors Herald: The work is just as interesting, and the Lord just as considerate as ever before, which is saying as much as we are able, for since we became acquainted with this latter day work it has been all absorbing. During the last year we have had renewed reasons to rejoice many times; rather it should be said I have had continued reasons for rejoicing, though some of the time we have been incapacitated for active service, which has been a source of regret, as there is so much to do and there is opened before us in the City of Brotherly Love such an unusually good opportunity for service that it seemed extremely untimely to be ill and have a forced idleness.

We are sincerely grateful for our return to comparative health and the prospects of complete recovery ere long. We are doing again what our hands find to do, and find the same joy in the doing and have had little time for writing. Will all those who have written me please be kind enough to accept my sincere thanks for thoughtful consideration, and some time, when I have gone through the accumulated letters, I hope to renew my correspondence with them.

The work in this neighborhood during the summer (for I have not been far away) has progressed nicely and every sign of growth is visible. The Philadelphia Branch continues to grow, both in numbers and in interest in all its departments, and we have very large attendance of nonmembers, many of whom are much interested. I should say we have about twenty-five per cent outsiders at evening services, and good spiritual interest among the membership. In the church work here I have been nobly supported by the local ministry, and powerfully upheld by the Spirit of the Lord. For all this we feel particularly thankful when it has been so much needed as it has been during the last year. There have been special manifestations of the power of God, and some sadness mixed with it all.

Much inquiry has been directed to us regarding the healing of Robert Fowler, which occurred during last December. The history of the occurrence was in this wise. Bro. Robert Fowler was working with his brother, George Asa Fowler, in setting up or rather testing out an acetylene gas generator which the firm they worked for had just finished for the Stiffle and Freeman Safe Works. The plant was to be used in welding and brazing metals in the manufacture of safes. When they had about finished their inspection an explosion occurred in the room in which their work was going on, they were both burned, and in the falling of the building, Bro. George Fowler was instantly killed and Brother Robert seriously bruised.

As soon as they were dug out of the debris they were taken to the Episcopal Hospital, only a few blocks from where they were working. I was notified by a son of Bro. A. D. Angus within a few minutes of the accident, and arrived at the hospital shortly after their arrival. The doctors and nurses were working on Bro. Robert Fowler when I went in. The chaplain of the institution welcomed me, as Robert was thought to be in a dangerous condition, and his brother, before referred to, was dead. I assisted what I could, which was but little, only to speak to Brother Robert and cheer him up as much as one could. His hearing was much impaired by the concussion accompanying the terrible explosion.

I had no opportunity to administer at this time, but made diligent inquiry as to the extent of his wounds and was told by the staff doctor who dressed him and the intern who assisted him, and in the presence of the nurse, who helped, that he was terribly burned about the face and shoulders, so that he would be badly disfigured, and that both eyes were destroyed, having been both burned and broken, so much so that no hope would be entertained for his sight; that he might recover, but nothing could be certainly said as to that at that time.

I claimed the body of Bro. George Fowler in the name of the family and hastened to tell the relatives, who as yet knew but little of it, only such as the bungling police had conveyed to them in death notices. This had occurred between 3 and 5 o'clock p. m., on December 7, 1909.

When I had visited the family of the deceased and injured I returned to the hospital and found Brother Robert resting, apparently asleep. I made no attempt to awaken him, but administered to him by anointing the side of his neck and top of his left shoulder, the only bare spots I could find near his head. I was particularly moved in the ordinance by the spirit of liberty in prayer and intrusted him by the ordinance to the care of our Father, and returned to the bereaved family.

On the next day when I visited him the compress on his eyes was removed and he recognized me at once. I was, of course, much surprised and greatly pleased. I had no opportunity that day to speak with the physician, but remarked to the nurse that it was wonderful that he could see. She said it was wonderful, she could not understand, for surely his eyes were out when he was dressed.

Brother Fowler recovered remarkably fast and was soon with us again in the church work, being one of our active Sunday school workers and a regular attendant at all church services. His eyes are perfect, which could not be said of them before the accident, as he had a disposition to near-sightedness and a bad defect in one eye, which rendered his vision rather indistinct. Now they are sharp and clear and perfectly free from any defects. His burns healed without leaving a scar, the only marks of the accident being two or three cuts which were sewed, slight colorings of the skin reveal the places, but his recovery has been remarkable, and entirely complete. He is at work with the company filling now the position his brother held before, and profoundly grateful to God for his recovery.

I have since called on the hospital authorities, and made inquiry as to the history of the case, and in the presence of Bro. Joshua Fowler, the father of Brother Robert, the staff physician, who dressed him on the night of the accident, told us he would have sworn before any court on earth that Robert's eyeballs were both broken and burned when he dressed him, that he wiped the sockets out, and that there seemed no possible hope for his sight, as the eyes were broken; but that upon subsequent examination he found that his eyes were absolutely perfect, not even injured, and he could not account for the discrepancy, that he had spoken of it to the house physician who assisted him, and he likewise could not account for it.

When asked to certify that the eyeballs were broken he said, "Well, in the light of subsequent and revised diagnosis, I could not do that. How could I account for the fine pair of eyes he has now?" He suggested that "if the days of miracles were not past" he might understand it better.

It is wonderful how God has come to the rescue and so perfectly restored our brother. We rejoice with him in this great manifestation of God's care for his own. The brother who was killed was a beautiful character, clean and fresh in the bloom of young manhood, a priest, and a young man apparently with a very bright future. We regret his sudden departure, but hope and fully expect to meet him in the first resurrection.

I write this thus fully in answer to the many inquiries regarding the matter. If I had time and sufficient strength I would have answered all directly, with an individual letter, but hope this will suffice. I am, as ever, in full hope of success.

Your brother in Christ,
WALTER W. SMITH.

112 WEST ONTARIO STREET.

While such a manifestation of power is very comforting to the Saints, it need cause no especial surprise. One of the features of this latter day work, indicated by the prophecy of Isaiah, was that the "eyes of the blind" were to "see out of obscurity." That prediction has been fulfilled both literally and spiritually, and on numerous occasions.

It is perhaps only a coincidence that this case of healing occurred in the Episcopal hospital. About four years ago the Emmanuel Movement had its origin in Emmanuel Church, Boston, under the ministry of Reverend Worcester, an Episcopalian minister. It spread rapidly among the ministry of that church, their plea being that the church must again take up her work of healing the sick. However, they have drawn a line between functional and organic diseases. They will not undertake the treatment of organic disease. If the ailment is merely functional, they will take it to God and see what he can do for it.

Having heard the diagnosis made by the attendant physician, no advocate of the Emmanuel movement would have asked for or expected the restoration of sight to Robert Fowler through divine aid. The fact that the affliction involved the organic structure of the eyes would have removed it from their domain as church workers and advocates of the power of God to heal.

However, we are glad that the people of God have drawn no line and set no bounds to the ability and willingness of God to heal. God himself has laid down certain laws, and those it is our duty to obey.

ON CHURCH UNION.

"All churches and creeds should unite, because this is an age of combination and conservation for economic reasons," said the Rev. J. A. Schaad, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, in his sermon yesterday morning. "While the world's great business enterprises have recognized the urgent need of getting together, the Christian churches have disintegrated and differentiated and indulged in a wicked and wasteful extravagance in church building. Scarcely a town in this country, no matter how small, but has two or more churches when one would easily suffice."

To illustrate the tendency of Christians to disagree and form different creeds, while hoping for the same end and worshipping the same God, the Reverend Schaad introduced these figures:

"For 1,000 years the church was a unit as to government, and for 1,600 years it was a unit as to doctrine. Now Christendom, composed of 550,000,000 people, is divided into two great parts, Catholicism and Protestantism. Catholicism is divided into three parts, Roman, Greek and Anglican, and Protestantism into 200 disagreeing segments. And yet there are 350,000,000 Catholics and only 200,000,000 of Protestants.

"At present there is a change of sentiment toward church unity coming over Christendom. The wastefulness of the present system is almost universally recognized. It would do away with the duplication of missionary boards and a superabundance of church edifices.

"That the world does not now believe is owing to the fact that Christendom disagrees as to what it believes and leaves those in darkness without the light the Lord intended should be kept burning.

"Such a reunion would mean a return to originals in doctrine, discipline, and worship, and an abandonment of all we now have that conflicts with those first precepts. Pan-Protestantism would not be reunion. If all the Protestants in the world should reunite it would still exclude 350,000,000 other Christians.

"The layman's missionary movement, which began last January and has spread with such popularity everywhere, marks the greatest epoch in the history of Christianity for 500 years, because it teaches that different religious organizations can meet on friendly terms and perform business without conflict."

The foregoing clipping is from the Kansas City Daily Journal for September 26. It is one of the straws which indicate the way in which the winds of contention are trending in the ecclesiastical world, especially the Protestant portion of it. We welcome this as a healthy sign, but the reverend pastor of the Grace Episcopal Church would not be likely to admit all that could be claimed legitimately from his sweeping assertion, that a unity of the Protestant churches would necessitate eliminating from their creeds all that did not conform to the doctrine set forth in the statements of the primitive gospel of the Son of God.

We hail it as a token of the fulfillment of that prophecy found in the Book of Mormon in which the prophet states that he beheld until the Spirit of God moved upon the people and they gathered together and held converse in reference to what should be believed among them. We have believed that this language of the prophet foreshadowed not only the moving of the Spirit of the Lord among the remnants that were left of His people in ancient and modern times, but that it also has reference to the fact that the Spirit of God would be moving upon the people not of the faith in the church relationship, but who were of the churches of men.

And it is a fact that since the instituting of the church in 1830 there has been a constant trend among many of the religious denominations toward the acceptance of the principles of the doctrine advocated by the early elders of the church, and which have been continued as the foundation principles as stated by the Savior to his disciples. Here and there among the Protestant churches there has been from time to time a man who has unwittingly uttered sentiments similar to those expressed by this pastor of the Grace Episcopal Church, as stated in the clipping above—perhaps none more sweeping than this; perhaps none so frank. But as great events may be preceded by slow approaches to right conclusions with reference to the causes for these great events, so in this case what began as but a murmur many years ago, as foreshadowed by the Wesleyan hymn, "From favored Abram's seed the new apostles choose," and expressed by other different occupants of the Protestant pulpit, who deplored the apparent degeneracy and failure of their adherents to come up to the scriptural requirements, could only lead to the final expression, broadly stated, as is this one of which we take notice.

We gladly give this space as indicating that the Spirit of the gospel economy is still spreading, and it is our business and our duty to recognize it when we can discover it. We believe that other demonstrations in this regard will occur, and the good work will continue until men's minds will be opened for the reception of the complete truth in the matter; as truth only is intended to survive "the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds."

But what a comment is found in the statistics offered in this clipping—550,000,000 professed believers in Christianity or in the Christ idea. 350,000,000 of these are under the rule of Catholicism, divided into three branches: the Roman Catholic, the Greek Church, and the Anglican Church. The conflict between the Roman and the Greek churches began a great while ago, and finally fate decided on the plains of Germany, through the efforts of Gustavus Adolphus, who triumphed in the fatal battle between the forces sent into the field by the two churches, which resulted in the right of the Greek church to its separate existence from the Roman Catholic domination. The Anglican church will probably deny its identification with Catholicism, but that would be useless in the light of history; for it required the personal defection of King Henry VIII and the parliamentary action of 1531 to separate the Anglican church from Catholic rule, and give the church its separate identification and the king the title of "Defender of the Faith." It might take two elements more to complete the entire separation, and that might be said to be the privilege granted King Edward VII from the taking of an oath at coronation, required, touching the maintenance of the catholicity of the faith and the final elimination of this requirement in favor of King George V. But of that hereafter.

We welcome the spirit of inquiry and hail the day fast approaching when the question of the Prince of Peace must be answered, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"

NOTICE.

Saints will please take note that Bro. A. A. Reams has resigned as agent for the Herald Publishing House. All orders taken by Brother Reams will be filled.

Our brother made a very successful canvass for business and his work proves that there are too many of the homes of the Saints who have not the necessary books to enlighten them regarding the latter day work. With developments along the economical lines containing some of the most stupendous and gravest questions to be solved that have ever faced the church, all should earnestly try to acquaint themselves with the laws governing. To do this the Saints must be supplied with the necessary literature. Fill up your libraries, Saints, with good books.

The Herald Publishing House would like to get a couple of the Saints' Harmony's, now out of print. Write Herald Publishing House.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

We regret to learn that Bro. U. W. Greene is suffering greatly with an abscess, having been seriously ill for some two or three weeks. His new home address is 29 A. Walter Street, Winter Hill, Massachusetts.

Bishop Kelley occupied the pulpit in Lamoni Sunday morning and evening, his subject being, The Order of Enoch. The attendance was very large. The evening service was occupied almost entirely in answering questions. He met with the priesthood of the stake in the afternoon. There was a large attendance of the priesthood, probably one hundred or more. The meeting adopted a resolution expressing the idea that the time has come to organize in the Stake as directed in section 128, and asking the Bishop to proceed with the necessary preliminary steps. The motion prevailed by a vote of sixty-seven for and five against. Some who did not fully understand the question refrained from voting.

NEEDS OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AS SEEN BY AN OUTSIDER.

I do not know the needs of this Sunday school because I am not intimately acquainted with it, and hence what this hastily prepared paper contains in the way of suggestion must be regarded as intended to apply only to Sunday school work in general; as having no reference whatever to this or any other particular school.

The first requisite of any school is good discipline. The reason for this is perfectly apparent. Without good order attention can not be secured, and without attention instruction is unavailing. The attempt to teach a class, any portion of which is permitted to disturb the rest and draw attention away from the matters under consideration, is not only a foolish thing, but a very pernicious thing also. Sunday school superintendents and teachers should stand upon both their moral and legal rights, and insist upon keeping in proper order the children intrusted briefly, each week, to their care.

It is strikingly inconsistent to carefully instruct children in the laws and ordinances of heaven, concerning which it is said that order is its first law, while those children are permitted to conduct themselves in a manner well calculated to convince them that the first law of earth is disorder.

Good order is best secured, firstly recognizing the rights of the child, respecting those rights and doing so gladly, by patience, inexhaustible kindness which is as an everlasting fountain, and firmness which knows no bounds, except those of reason. Patience will enable us to bear with the peculiarities of children; kindness will win their hearts, and firmness will both win the respect essential to good control, and help materially to just dealing under whatever critical circumstances may arise.

The second essential is a good superintendent and a corps of competent teachers. I do not mean so much that they shall be good in the sense of possessing unusual ability as organizers and instructors, as that they shall be good in their lives and good in the sense that they believe the latter day work in all its fundamental features, and are prepared to teach it with heart as well as with lips and tongue.

I do not mean that they have no need to be good organizers and instructors; for these are very important, but I place faith with its legitimate fruitage of righteousness, as the prime qualification of one who is to teach faith and point out the path to heaven.

The third essential is a good course of study. The prominent essentials of this are, as little dogmatism as possible consistent with a clear statement of the few received and declared doctrines of the church. Doctrine, and things of which the church has not spoken, should not be included in a Sunday school course of study except as matters for investigation. Doing otherwise, we may educate into the children what we shall be anxious after awhile to educate out of them; for our domain, like that of the scientist, has its unknown as well as its known, and the former may be, and probably is much larger than the latter. So it is wise to do no dogmatizing where matters are in an embryonic or chaotic state.

The moral standard of the New Testament Scriptures should be accentuated more than anything else; for while the initiative ordinances of the gospel are not to be regarded as of secondary importance, they are so well understood so far as the essentials of an understanding are concerned, and so well and generally appreciated, that there is more need that the child should understand and have fastened upon it as a prime requisite the doctrine of a life of personal righteousness as indispensable to acceptability with God.

Good organization is essential to the success of a Sunday school. By this I mean good classification; and by good classification I mean a proper grouping of the members of the school with reference to their age, education, natural and spiritual attainments. Just here without further explanation, I should be understood to mean exactly the opposite of what I do mean. I do not mean such an organization of classes as will put elements of the same kind in each class and nothing else; but such a commingling of elements as will tend to bring all nearer to the same great elevated plane, for I believe that equality of opportunity is given solely for the purpose of securing equality in fact.

It is objected that such a classification as is here suggested would practically destroy the grading of a school. This difficulty, however, is met with in the entire realm of spiritual organization and work, and seems to be ordained to be there. It is met with in the prayer meeting, where all grades of the spiritual school attempt to recite at once. It is found in the branch, district, stake, and general organizations; and finds its most pronounced exemplification in General Conference. A whole class of the right kind of critics is none too many; but one merely captious, carping critic is enough for any class.

The Sunday school should provide for the exercise of right spirited criticism. Righteous judgment is God's method of reforming the world, righting wrong, dispelling error, establishing truth, saving mankind. Everything that God wants done in the earth for the salvation of mankind, he has commissioned men to do just as soon as they are able to do it. We learn to do by doing after the reception of instructions as to how to do. We have been specifically instructed as to how to judge. Our responsibility attaches with reference to obeying these instructions. But while all this is true, there is a kind of criticism which is not good, and should not be encouraged; instead, it should be positively and fearlessly discouraged. Criticism which is intended to destroy the truth, rather than discover it and assist in its establishment, it not worthy the robe it tries to appropriate as a hiding place, and should receive scant consideration in the Sunday school or anywhere else.

FAITH.

This is an old and very familiar subject, but, if you will permit me, I would like to offer a few thoughts upon it, though at the outset I must confess that I do not fully understand what faith is, or have an understanding of it, perhaps different from that of some others. I will try to give some idea of faith as I have come to regard it. I know, of course, that it is the vital principle without which it is impossible to please God, and by the right exercise of which miracles are wrought, but what is it? I believe that I have a degree of faith, but the faith of some of my brethren and sisters is greater, or it may be of a different quality; for instance: in the case of sickness I dare not ask God directly to heal the afflicted one without always leaving it for Him to decide whether the blessing of restoration from suffering or disease would be best. I know there are Saints with such faith that they can make such requests without this proviso, and their petitions are granted "according to their faith." If they are prompted by God's Spirit to pray in this way, it is all right; otherwise I would be fearful—not from lack of faith in our heavenly Father, but because I know that I can not look into the future (as he can) and see the result of receiving what we naturally look upon as a great blessing. Health is a great and desirable blessing, but sometimes our Father in his wondrous foreknowledge and wisdom sees that we can receive a greater blessing by suffering for a time; then would we not be frustrating God's purposes, and hindering our own development by mustering all the faith we can command to get him to relieve us at once? The answer may be made that the Almighty will act according to his wisdom anyway, and will heal or not as he sees will be best. Then why not leave the decision to him in the first place? I believe, however, that he does grant what we ask sometimes when it would be better for us not to have received. To illustrate: I heard a well-known elder relate in prayer meeting an instance of a man who, after a severe spell of sickness, died, or as far as human knowledge could judge, seemed to be dead. In their anguish of grief the family called an elder, and this elder laying his hands upon the dead man, in the name of him to whom is given all power, commanded the spirit to return. Obedient to the summons it did return, but what was the result? Whereas that man had died apparently firm in the faith of the gospel, a good, faithful Saint, yet after his return to this life he grew indifferent, and finally left the church. This example is not given to prove that the elders should never call down the power of God to raise the dead, neither is it an attempt to point out the duty of those who know what their duties and privileges are. The writer is just now trying to get down (or up) to the groundwork of faith to see what it consists of, and to point out the fact that we certainly need a higher, diviner wisdom than we naturally possess in order to pray aright. Let me illustrate still further: I heard a mother tell of a time when her child lay sick nigh unto death, and she plead with God to spare his life, (what mother could do otherwise?) but in the agony of her longing, she declared in her prayer that she would neither eat nor drink until she should see an improvement in her child's condition. Well, the child's life was spared, but health was withheld; he grew to manhood always afflicted, and when the mother looked upon her son with a family which he was unable to properly provide for, she cried again unto the Lord in his behalf, that he might be healed. In answer to this prayer she was shown a vision. She saw herself kneeling by the bedside of her sick child; heard again the prayer she had offered so long ago, and was told that if the Lord had taken the little one then, he would have had place in the celestial kingdom, but the only way for him to reach that place now, was through affliction and suffering. This experience is purely a personal one, and might not apply to others, yet does it not convey a lesson to us? Are we able to tell what will be for the eternal good either of ourselves or those we love? I have heard dear faithful Saints pray for "a faith that will take no denial." Perhaps I do not understand just what is meant by that expression, but if it be taken literally it seems more like a lack of faith, or as though we would make up our minds that what we are asking for is right; we are sure God is going to grant our request, and we are going to have faith enough, or want faith enough, to keep right on asking till he does. It must be admitted that there are times when the assurance is given by the Spirit that the petition is pleasing to the Lord and will be granted, but if we are left to our own judgment as to what is best for us to receive how can we make the decision? We simply can not do it wisely alone. We have been promised great blessings if we will cultivate faith "of a divine nature," which apparently means faith like that exhibited by our Savior when in an extremity of anguish he cried: "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass by," but immediately added: "nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done." Oh, for a faith like this! To be willing even under the most trying conditions that his will be done who can not err in ordering the experiences and events in the lives of his children, and who, we know, doeth all things well because he knows what the result will be of all he permits us to experience. Again: regarding faith in connection with temporal affairs. In the 6th chapter of Matthew the Savior is speaking with his disciples, and the subject of food and clothing comes up. The disciples seemingly thought it would be impossible for them to give all their time to preaching, because they would be obliged to provide for the physical needs of the body the same as others. The Lord's answer was: "Behold, I say unto you, that your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. Wherefore . . . seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matthew 6: 37, 38, I. T.) This instruction and great promise was given to the apostles, but may it not apply to all Saints in a measure? I believe firmly that it may, and that inasmuch as we do make the advancement of God's work our first and dearest thought, he will see that we do not lack what is necessary for our temporal as well as spiritual welfare. I would not appear to mean that we should all quit work and go preaching, or that we should sit around watching for a chance to do some good turn for the church. Oh, no; each in his own place, doing his own work faithfully; not afraid to give liberally of what he has when the need arises; not afraid even to deny himself of some necessities if need be, that he may give when the work he loves needs his help. He will not even call it a sacrifice to do so, because he will find his greatest joy in denying himself to help that which he loves better than he loves himself. Dare we do this, and risk privation for ourselves? Well, there is the promise; but have we faith sufficient to trust in that promise, or the Giver of it? We do not question the fact that God has "all power both in heaven and on earth"; that "the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," and that he "willeth to provide for his Saints," yet how often we hesitate to give lest we should suffer for lack of what we have given. Some of us are not afraid, however, to pay monthly dues to an insurance company to protect us from loss by fire, storm, accident, etc., but I will venture to make the assertion—let me do so reverently before the almighty Creator of his vast and unfathomable universe, the same who is our loving and compassionate Father—that if we will get down upon our knees in fasting and prayer oftener, striving earnestly, humbly, and diligently to learn and to do all his requirements, if we do not already love his work above all else, we soon will learn to do so, and we will not fear to put his promise to the test, because we will know without a doubt that he will order our lives and all events for our eternal good.

Dear brothers and sisters, this is not written in the spirit of criticism, nor with the thought of being able to teach others, but with a sincere desire that we may all come to a better understanding of the eternal principles of truth; and if in any point I have fallen into error, to be frankly corrected.

Yours in the pursuit of knowledge,

CLARA M. FRICK.

A MESSAGE TO THE INDIAN.

"The Book of Mormon contains God's message to the Indian."

Naturally Latter Day Saints are deeply interested in gospel work among the Lamanites, and will be glad to note any forward movement along that line. Brethren Yates, Case, Page, and others are pushing the work in the Southwest and are meeting with a degree of success. To help them in their work they are getting out tracts addressed directly to the Lamanites. The following article is one that is to be issued in tract form. The Herald Office has it for sale, five cents for one dozen copies, thirty-five cents for one hundred.—
EDITORS.

To Our Indian Brethren: God made all nations of one blood, therefore, no matter what our color may be, we should feel that we are brethren. We, your white brethren, have a message of great interest to you. Hundreds of years ago your fathers and your brethren wrote a book which was hidden in the ground to keep it safe. When the Lord saw fit, he chose a prophet, and directed that prophet to where the book was. The prophet found the book in the Hill Cumorah, in the State of New York. The book was written on metallic plates.

The Lord commanded his prophet to translate the book. The prophet was not a learned man, but God enabled him to do the work, as predicted in Isaiah 29: 11-14.

After the book was translated, it was printed, and the Lord commanded that it should be taught to your white brethren, and that they, in turn, should take it to you. This is the message we come to you with, to tell you about the book.

There is no other book that tells who the American Indian is. There is no other book that tells you who your fathers were, and where they came from. This book says that you are of the house of Israel; that you are descended from Abraham, whom the Lord loved so much. Your forefathers came from Jerusalem. God led them to America about six hundred years before the birth of Jesus Christ. In the book you are called Lamanites, and your brethren are called Nephites. You and your brethren lived together in America for nearly nine hundred years. God did not leave his people in the western part of the world in ignorance during all that time. He blessed them the same as he blessed his people in the eastern part of the world, because he is no respecter of persons. Prophets were sent to the ancient Americans, and God's law was taught to them. Jesus told the people at Jerusalem that there were "other sheep," not of that fold. He referred to branches of the house of Israel scattered in other parts of the world. (Jesus was sent in person only to the "lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matthew 15: 24.) He said he must go to them, also. (See Saint John 10: 16.)

So Jesus visited his people in America, and taught them the same things that he taught the people at Jerusalem. The words of Jesus and the teachings and prophecies of God's servants were written, and are contained in this book about which we are telling you. You see the book is another witness that Jesus is the Christ. If any doubt the Bible on this important matter, they have the testimony of this other book, besides.

It is sometimes asserted by the enemies of the book of your fathers that it teaches polygamy, but that is not true. It declares: "There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none." (See Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.)

This book which was written by your fathers and brethren teaches nothing that is not in harmony with the will of God as revealed through the Bible.

To go back to your history: as we told you before, you and your brethren, the Nephites, lived together in America nearly nine hundred years. The Nephites became very wicked, and were destroyed. The Lord spared you, because you did not have the opportunities of knowing the Great Father's will that the Nephites had. God promised that he would watch over you in this land, and would not permit your enemies to destroy you. He also promised that in the last days he would cause that the book of your fathers should be brought forth and taught to you. The all powerful, loving Father has kept his word, and we write this to tell you about it, and hope you will read the book.

We call the book of your fathers and brethren the Book of Mormon. Mormon was a good man who, about four hundred years after Christ, wrote a brief record, or an abridgment, of the history of the Nephites and Lamanites, and of the teachings of Jesus and the servants of God. For this reason we call the book after Mormon.

Your fathers were not the only people in America before Columbus discovered it. A people called the Jaredites lived here before the Nephites and the Lamanites. The Jaredites came from the Tower of Babel. You read in the Bible that God scattered the people who tried to build the tower "upon the face of all the earth." (See Genesis 11: 8.) The Jaredites were destroyed because of their wickedness, and God then brought your fathers to America.

We, your white brethren and sisters, believe the Book of Mormon to be a true record of your fathers, because we find in the United States, Mexico, Central America, and South America ruins which correspond with what the book states. For instance, the book says that there were three nations in America anciently, viz, the Jaredites, the Nephites, and the Lamanites. All travelers and writers tell us that the ruins of America show that different peoples lived in America before Columbus came.

The book says that the first people, the Jaredites, lived in North America; that they did not go into South America. Now it is a fact that there is a feature about the ruins of North America that is not found in South America, and that is the mound.

The Book of Mormon says that the Nephites and the Lamanites were troubled by robbers, who lived in the mountains, and whose dwelling places could not be found. Does not this statement answer to the description of those peculiar ruins in the West, called cliff dwellings? Who, but hunted robbers, would seek such difficult, secret places for homes?

The Book of Mormon says that the Nephites and the Lamanites became very numerous, occupying South and Central America, Mexico, and the United States, and that a high state of civilization flourished. All who write about the ancient people of America tell us that the ruins denote these things to be facts.

The book says that when the people of whom it is a record went into transgression, they began to worship idols, and to offer human sacrifices. All through the ruins of Mexico, and Central and South America, signs of this sad truth are found.

There are many other external evidences to which we might call your attention as proving that the Book of Mormon is true, but we will mention but one other. The book tells us that God was not going to permit all the Lamanites to be destroyed. You are living testimonies to the truth of that promise. The descendants of the Lamanites, the Indians, were scattered all over South and North America when Columbus came, and hundreds and thousands of them are living to-day.

We, your white brethren and sisters, believe the Book of Mormon is true because no other book of religious faith agrees so perfectly with the truth as taught in the Bible.

Another reason we believe in the book of your fathers is because the Bible refers to such a book. Isaiah prophesied about it, as we mentioned before. The Psalmist said that truth should spring out of the ground. (See Psalm 85: 11.) The people of whom the Book of Mormon is principally a record were descended from the house of Joseph. (See Book of Mormon, 1 Nephi 1: 47; 2: 1; Alma 8: 1.) Ezekiel foretold another book, the "stick of Joseph," which would be a witness for the Bible, or the "stick of Judah," and prophesied how these two books would be one in God's hands in bringing about the restoration of the house of Israel.

We might go on giving you evidence after evidence that the Book of Mormon is true, but we have made this pamphlet large enough. We hope that we have said enough to interest you in this book, and to lead you to read it and learn for yourselves of God's love for you, of the provisions he has made for you, and the grand promises recorded if you will embrace the truth as taught in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, and serve the God of your fathers.

LOUISE PALFREY-SHELDON.

It is claimed on good authority that in America about two hundred lives are sacrificed each week to violence, and that our country in the conviction and punishment of criminals, pays a toll of a half million dollars per day, or $182,500,000 annually. Still more startling is the assertion that crimes and criminals are on the increase, the ratio now being four and one-half times the number of twenty years ago. It has been suggested that "the only way to stop crime is to put an end to the conditions that breed crime and criminals." As a crime-breeder the saloon has no equal.

"Time can have no END; it must go on for ever. Time could not possibly have a beginning."

BAPTISTS HEAR OF MIRACLES.

MR. ELBERT A. SMITH, LAMONI, IOWA.

Dear Brother Elbert: I am sending you a clipping from the Boston Post of April 19. I think it a very good article, and considering the one from whom it came, it seems to me a very good defense of our position as Latter Day Saints. At first, I thought I would write an article on it but I do not feel able to handle the subject justly, and am going to ask you to make mention of it if you think it worthy of comment. If Archbishop O'Connell had made such a statement in 1830 or 1844, he would have been classed as a heretic, thief, liar, and almost everything under the sun that was mean and despicable; but our beloved leaders, Joseph and Hyrum, and many of their followers took the stand boldly and contended that Jesus Christ was the same yesterday, to-day and for ever, and that his teachings, life, and acts of love and mercy were for us to enjoy in our day, as well as for former day saints, that miracles were for the confirmation of the believer, etc., and they were despised and persecuted even unto death. And so on down through time, we as a people (a peculiar people as the world calls us) have maintained the precious truths of God and Jesus Christ; and revealed words both in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants have verified these things to us. The American Archæology Society with their wonderful research is daily proving the divinity of our precious book, until to-day people of all classes are awakening to their senses and are more liberal in their belief, and a Latter Day Saint is not looked down upon so much.

But to God all praise be given, for all that we are or ever expect to be. I am making an extended trip through the Eastern and New England States. My work now takes me into every State in the Union. I have met with the Saints wherever it was possible for me to do so, and am trying in my weak way to do all I can to help in the work.

Yours in the bonds of the gospel of Jesus Christ,
FRANK W. BRIGGS.

PAPER BY ARCHBISHOP O'CONNELL READ BEFORE BIBLE CLUB.

"Professed exponents of Christianity in Boston pulpits," were denounced by Archbishop O'Connell in an address yesterday afternoon before the members of the Bible Club of Boston in Gilbert Hall, Tremont Temple.

The address of the archbishop on "The Miracles of the Bible," was delivered at the invitation of the organization. In the absence of Archbishop O'Connell, who has been away from Boston since shortly after Easter, the address was read by the Rev. David J. Toomey.

The Rev. Dr. O. P. Gifford of the Brookline Baptist Church, president of the organization, presided and introduced the Rev. Dr. Toomey.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S ADDRESS.

The archbishop, in his address, said in part:

"I have approached the task with which you have honored me to-day with the conviction that nothing could be more timely, nothing perhaps more welcome, than a succinct setting forth of the position of the Catholic theologian, scientist, critic with regard to Biblical miracles.

"When I speak of the misunderstanding of religion I have in mind revealed religion. No man who pretends to be a Christian can have any other in mind. By revealed religion I mean one which is based upon God's manifestation of Himself, of His will, His truth, His goodness, to His creatures by other than the normal forces of nature.

"Such was the religion of the Hebrew; such the religion established by Jesus of Nazareth.

BELIEVES IN REVELATION.

"Let us at this point understand each other frankly. I believe in a personal God and in revelation. I conceive of Christianity as a revealed religion. I presume that you do, too. I would like to believe that every professed exponent of Christianity in Boston pulpits believed so. But I am forced to conclude that some do not. For so completely has Christ been divested of the supernatural by them that naught remains but His title to be ranked with those who by their philosophies influenced the religious beliefs of mankind, a Zarathustra, a Confucius, a Gautama, a Mohammed.

"With 'Christians' such as these, who arbitrarily cast out of the gospel of Christ whatever does not suit their passing fancy and then read into his character and into that of the God of whom he taught whatever accords with their present philosophical conceits, I have no word to say on miracles. I can have none.

NO COMMON GROUND.

"For we have no common ground to stand upon; no more than have atheists and believers. For totally to deny to God the power to act on his creation, save through laws that scientists and philosophers have framed in laboratories of physics and psychology, is just as fatal as a denial of a personality to wield the power, and even more foolish.

"Whatever we may think of the deistic or atheistic Frenchman, we can not but admire the logic that carries him, in his apostasy, at only one step from belief in revelation to extremest rationalism. There can be no lasting middle ground. Those who want to find it evince a pitiable want of logic as well as a pathetic esteem for the title of Christian.

"Granted, then, that God has, at any time and in any way, revealed himself to man other than by the merely normal laws or processes that govern mind and matter, it follows that these laws may suffer exceptions. And to admit it in one instance is in principle to admit it in a thousand.

"To serve the purpose of a sign, God's action must necessarily be out of the ordinary, and incontestably so.

PRIMARILY A SIGN.

"Since, then, the miracle is, primarily and essentially a sign, an evidence of revelation, it follows the laws of revelation. It does not occur without plan or purpose.

"On the contrary, miracles have their economy, and though, in the very nature of the case, we can not fully understand it, it lends itself to a very satisfactory analysis.

"If we examine the Biblical miracles in detail we may divide them into three groups. There are those by virtue of which God exercised some special protection or directive providence with regard to His chosen people; the miracles of the Old Testament are largely of this sort.

"Secondly, there are the signs by which He revealed His more personal intervention, as when He appeared in the burning bush or on Sinai, or confirmed the mission of His messengers by remarkable facts in their own lives independently of their influences on others; thus, for example, the Virgin birth and the resurrection of Jesus, and the conversion of Saint Paul.

MIRACULOUS INFLUENCE.

"In the third place there is the miraculous influence exercised on behalf of individuals or groups, such as the diverse miracles of healing so numerous in the New Testament.

"With regard to all, but to this latter class particularly, I would call your attention to the fact that miracles are not performed to enforce belief in God; but rather that they may confirm the faith of the witness or beneficiary.

"Why is this so? Why did He not perform a miracle that would startle the world and compel belief in even the most incredulous? Or, as some would put it, why would He not dispel all doubt by performing such a miracle here in Boston?

"The answer to these questions throws into yet more conspicuous relief the part played by the miraculous in the economy of revelation. Revelation itself is not a compelling force. It makes its appeal to the intellect, but it does not inexorably compel intellectual consent. Were it to do so the intellect would cease to be what God had made it.

"So too with the will. Revelation does not force its action that it ceases to be free.

"In no sense then does revelation force its credentials on the mind of man. No one is perforce compelled to believe; even as no one is compelled to be saved; for faith and grace leave intellect and will in possession of their native functions and freedom.

MIRACLES PERFORMED.

"Applying these principles to the miraculous, we can readily see that if the stupendous all-convincing miracle had been performed in such circumstances of publicity as would compel conviction in the mind of every man, the liberty to choose would be denied to men in circumstances where free will is absolutely necessary, that is in affairs of salvation. Only a logical predestinationist could ask for such a miracle; only such a miracle could produce a logical predestinationist.

"There is no better evidence of the misunderstanding of the miraculous than the complaint so often made in literature on this subject that no one miracle has left undeniable evidence of its occurrence; as if indeed miracles were like the fossil fauna of the glacial epoch! Like revelation, of which it is an adjunct, the miracle is not meant to force conviction; it is merely meant to help it.

"God will force no one, least of all the critically curious, to accept Him, His truth or His salvation. But he is generous to one who brings a docile spirit, even if such a one in presence of stubbornly lingering doubts 'kicks against the goad.'

ALLEGED IMPROBABILITY.

"The case against miracles to-day rests on their alleged improbability. The argument against them takes ordinarily two forms. The first is based on the constant uniformity of nature, by virtue of which science has been able to formulate laws which experimentation throughout the entire domain of exact knowledge has found to be absolutely invariable.

"The second, virtually an amplification of the first argument, is based on the laws of historical criticism. It is maintained that paucity of witnesses for the biblical miracles, their lack of scientific training and spirit and their consequent credulity, divest their testimony of any worth in view of the non-corroboration of their stories and the universal counter-experience.

"There are indeed scientific laws expressive of a metaphysical, an absolute, necessity from which God himself can not escape.

"The laws of mathematics for example, are immutable.

"But there are besides these the physical laws, which are contingent. They are based upon experience and induction; that is, a series of observations has demonstrated that in given conditions a certain phenomenon occurs always in a certain order.

"But, and here is where the argument limps, this confidence is based upon experience alone; and all must concede that, apart from this experience, there is absolutely no reason for concluding that the order of nature must be uniform.

DOCTOR GORDON'S BOOK.

"Dr. George A. Gordon, in his book, Religion and Miracle, tells us on page 29 that dogmatic denial of miracle on the ground of natural law can not be justified by logic, while on page 32 he concludes that 'to minds impressed with a profound sense of natural law . . . the miraculous is an intrusion if not an impertinence.'

"This is not historical criticism; it is not even intellectual honesty. Voltaire himself was more honest when he said: 'If I were given assurance that a man had been raised from the dead at Passy I would take care not to hurry out to see him; for I would become, perhaps, as much a fool as the rest of them.'

"This systematic denial of the miraculous is destructive of all the laws of historical criticism. The witnesses to the facts were numerous, of every age and social condition, of both sexes, of different nationalities and schools of education. To brand them all, in the name of an assumption of scientists, as victims of blind credulity or hallucinations, as impostors or fools, is destructive of the basic principles of historical criticism.

"But now note the strangest inconsistency of all. Though the miracle stories in the gospels are denied credence, the gospel story yet remains. Though the miracles attributed to Christ are declared to be fictions, yet the character of Christ is still revered. That he went about doing good is not denied; nor that he spake as no man ever did; nor that he suffered a life of pathetic sacrifice and died like a malefactor.

"But who saw his going about? And who are the witnesses to his benefices, his privations, his death? Who heard him speak and who cherished up his words that to-day bring comfort to our wearied souls? Who indeed, but the very same witnesses who are branded as liars or visionaries when they tell of something that does not fit in with the confessedly limited experience of science.

"I have no patience whatsoever with those who in pulpit or press pose as the champions of the cause of Christianity, but false to their sacred trust, yield its most cherished principles. Fearing to be thought unscientific in the age when science is the fashion, they acquiesce to the empty claims of ephemeral scientists; but because they are in truth unscientific they can not see that the call that beckons them is false."—Boston Post.

WAVE OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

Infantile paralysis is most common in early childhood, with the exception of the first year. The greatest number of cases occur in the third and fourth years. This disease appears from three days to a month after exposure, usually before the tenth day. For many years it was impossible to say definitely where the seat of infantile paralysis was located. However, to-day, with all the auxiliaries of modern technique, and a careful study of the blood vessels which supply the spinal cord, we have positive proof that the disease is an inflammation of the gray matter in part of the spinal cord, and in the small blood vessels leading to this area.

The early symptoms of this disease, in many cases, are characterized by the child complaining of headache, listlessness, weakness of the limbs and loss of appetite. This condition is followed by fever (from 101 to 103 degrees Fahrenheit), distress in stomach and intestines and vomiting. The fever lasts from one to four days. In other more severe cases, the disease begins early with fever, followed by marked disturbance in the brain, accompanied by spasms or convulsions. Another uncommon type is where a child will go to bed apparently in perfect health and awaken in the morning paralyzed in one or more of its limbs.

The symptom of the second stage is paralysis itself. Generally speaking it is rather extensive. In many cases, all four limbs are involved, and sometimes the muscles of the nape of the neck. In other cases, the paralysis involves only a group of muscles of one or both legs.

The extent of the immediate damage from the paralysis is usually complete within a few hours, although it may extend over a period of three or four days. In a week or ten days, some improvement begins, and this continues usually until only a small degree of paralysis remains.—Samuel G. Tracy, M. D., in The Christian Herald.

CASTLES OF MYSTERY.

To ninety per cent of the mothers and practically all of the fathers, the schools in which their children spend their days are but castles of mystery.

School buildings externally attractive, beautiful piles of brick and stone approached by cement walks and surrounded by velvety lawns that must never be profaned by a childish foot, are the boast of all cities and the pride of individual taxpayers, but how much do these same taxpayers know of the actual life lived within the walls?

Their children come and go, bringing all sorts of rumors of the doings of the days and of the individuals in charge. There are tales of tyrants who rule without mercy, of absolute monarchs from whose will there is no appeal, of ogres whose only pleasure is the torturing of youth, of taskmasters who expect the impossible. Occasionally we hear of a man in authority who is considerate, who remembers that he, too, was once a boy; occasionally of a woman who also understands. These become respectively hero and fairy princess. Sometimes there are tales which make one wonder if the characteristics of demon and angel are rolled into one individual teacher.

Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John all gave different accounts of the life and death of Jesus Christ. The world has been through the ages, hunting for the truth that lies somewhere among these varied accounts. Out of the same conditions and about the same school organization, the children bring into the home conflicting accounts of the same circumstances. But these are all rumors, based upon a child's point of view, and tinged with his strong personal feeling. Without the slightest intention of deceiving, these reports are often misleading, often entirely unjust.

An early breakfast, a scramble for wraps, and possibly for a book brought home for some reason unknown to the parent, and the child rushes off into the unknown, there to stay until late in the afternoon, with perhaps a hurried run home at noon for luncheon, if the home happens to be near enough.

Few would let their children wander at will through an unbroken forest, yet for twelve or more consecutive years, five days in the week for ten months, the majority of parents leave their children to the mercy of a school system of which they know absolutely nothing, and to the care of teachers whom they do not know by sight, and whose names, even, they do not always remember.

You may answer that the public school system of America is the finest in the world. Perhaps it is and perhaps it isn't. Some of the best educators in the land are very seriously asking themselves whether we may not be utterly mistaken in the high commendation we have bestowed upon it.

But granting that it is the best the world has yet developed, the fact still remains that the schools are not nearly as good as they should be. The people pay enough for the best, but that money is disbursed, sites are selected, buildings are erected, teachers appointed, text-books bought, janitors hired by men elected by a so-called vote of the people, when a very large majority of the men and women who have children in school, never take the trouble to cast a vote for or against these same men.

That the schools are as good as they are, is due not to the personal interest of the parents, to the conscientiousness of the voter, to the integrity of the school boards; not always to the efficiency of superintendents, but to the high character of the individual teachers. No one profession or group of people shows a more unselfish devotion to their work than the teaching body. In this statement exception need scarcely be made of the mothers. Because of this devotion, because of their conscientiousness, results have been reasonably satisfactory. They have supplied in countless instances the shortcomings of the school system. They have stood between the child and incompetent supervision, and, sad to say, they have over and over again, stood between the child and the ignorance or indifference of the parents. But how much better might be the results, if these same teachers could always be sure of the cooperation of the home, the sympathy and assistance of the parent, instead of, as is too often the case, being compelled to work in opposition to both home and parent.

Some one has said that the education of the child should begin with the grandmother. The teacher of to-day would be reasonably well satisfied if she could have a little to do with the education of some of the parents.

No teacher ever had a visit from a parent, even when that visit was prompted by indignation because of some supposed injustice, without gaining from that visit new light upon the especial pupil. When the visit is made in friendliness, the gain to both parent and teacher is inestimable.

Young people are queer creatures. A boy or girl, more frequently a boy, will reveal at school an individuality differing markedly from the one shown at home. The teacher sees one side of a pupil, sometimes several, but every conversation with a parent brings to light some characteristic that is bound to modify that teacher's attitude toward the youth in question. Parents do not always know their children as well as they think they do, and a detailed knowledge of how those children conduct themselves in school, may result in some surprises.

Parents generally have an idea that their presence is not desired in the schoolroom. If that is true, then there is certainly good reason why a visit should be made. The well-ordered household is not thrown into commotion if an unexpected guest arrives; the same is true with a good school. One rightly organized and properly conducted should not be disturbed by visitors, always, of course, understanding that the visitor does not demand the personal attention of the teacher.

It should be possible for parents to go naturally into a schoolroom, meet the teacher as one would any other person, state briefly the wish to visit the school, and then sit as long as desired and watch the work go on. The few parents who dare trust themselves in these mysterious castles, come in fear and trembling, and this timidity does not always escape the notice of the children.

One little Chicago girl has a mother of whom she is very proud. This mother has the habit of going, each fall, to school, meeting her little daughter's new teacher and so putting herself in a position to communicate with her later, if communication becomes necessary, on a personal basis.

The child enjoys her mother's visits and has contrasted the manner of them with that of others.

"Most mothers," she once said, "when they come to school, act as if they were afraid. Now my mother comes in like a robin and talks like a parrot." All of which, to her mind, was high praise, as indicating the ease and naturalness with which her mother made her calls.

When once the ice is broken, a visit should prove intensely interesting; it will be full of surprises, for a school is a little world in itself, with a life quite apart; and to anyone who has spent no time in one since his own student days, will reveal an unknown world.

A mother once went on an errand to a school of high school grade which her son was attending. She had some slight acquaintance with the woman in charge of the study room where the hundred and fifty or more boys were assembled, and with whom this teacher lived from eight o'clock in the morning until late in the afternoon. Upon urgent invitation the mother entered the room and, with a decided show of timidity, followed to a seat at the desk.

The teacher went on with her work as though no stranger were present, occasionally turning to her guest to explain a change in classes or to say something that would convey new light on the spirit of the school.

The lady had insisted that she could stay only a few minutes, but one hour passed, two hours passed, and she still sat fascinated by the mystery of this big crowd of boys, all going eagerly and definitely about their business, evidently contented and happy.

Noon came and still she tarried.

The school all had luncheon in the building and the mother accepted the teacher's invitation to remain, thus seeing another phase of her son's daily life.

When work was resumed after luncheon, she was in her place by the desk, and sat out the afternoon with constantly increasing interest. She learned by sight her boy's companions, some of whom she had before known only by name; she saw deeper into the relation existing between teacher and pupil; in fact she learned many things of which, that morning, she had not even suspected her ignorance.

At half past three, as the school passed out, she rose with the remark, "I suppose there is nothing more to see, so I shall have to go home now."

"No," replied the teacher, "we have a base ball game. I think you would like to see that, for we count all our athletic sports a real part of the school life."

So they attended the game, and the visitor went home at six o'clock, a wiser woman and a happier one.

Each mother would do well to put to herself a series of questions, and base future action upon her answers to them:

1. Do I know just what studies my child is pursuing and to whom he recites?

2. Do I know my child's teacher personally, and is that teacher, in mind, manners, and morals, worthy the responsibility?

3. Is the child's standing in class above, below, or just about the average?

4. Do I know from the teacher, how much time should be spent in study at home?

5. Do I see that he is protected from all interruption when he is doing that home study?

6. Is the light of the room in which he passes five or more hours each day, adequate, and is the ventilation good?

7. Do I know whether the entirely different and wider influence of school life is developing tendencies which the home has not brought to light?

8. Are these tendencies desirable?

9. Am I working in harmony with the school?

10. Am I fulfilling my whole duty in the education of my child, or am I expecting of the school, training which belongs legitimately to the home?

The mother who is unable to answer these questions and others that will occur to the individual when once she gives her attention to her own shortcomings, should set aside household cares, social demands, and even religious duties, until she can give an intelligent answer to most of them. Her steps should be immediately turned toward the particular castle in which her child is confined, perhaps wandering in darkness or chained in a dungeon of dullness, when a little care from the mother might give that child freedom and joy in what should be a princely palace.—Florence Milner, in American Motherhood.

Questions on November Reading.

How many fathers and mothers do you know who visit the schools attended by their children? What do you know of your child's school life? How may you know for a certainty what are the conditions of his schoolroom? How should reports brought by the children be received? What interest should the parent take in books brought home at night? Have you realized the amount of time spent by your children in surroundings unknown to you?

What is your estimate of our school system? On what knowledge is it based? To what extent have you used your influence to turn the vote in the right direction in school affairs? How does the teaching body compare with people of other professions? Has it been necessary for the teacher to stand between you and your child's best interests? What is to be gained by friendly visits between parent and teacher? In what manner should a parent be able to visit the school? Are the benefits to be gained by visiting the school confined to those who are parents? To what extent should parents be interested in the sports of their children? Might it not be well to preserve this list of questions and keep them in sight until you can answer them creditably to yourself? What sacrifice should you make for your child's good in this matter?

Dear Herald: You are a welcome visitor at our home every week, and how I do enjoy reading the good letters from the brethren and sisters! They are very encouraging, especially since we are isolated. We still try to let our light shine as best we can.

Dear Saints, if we are not privileged to meet together to worship our heavenly Father, we still have a work to do. We must not forget to fast and pray often, and read the church papers. We all can find comfort in them. I feel lonely sometimes, and my mind is oftentimes carried back with my brothers and sisters and father, (C. B. Givens,) in Ohio; thence to Wheeling, West Virginia, where we often met with the Saints.

I am in poor health and the doctor has advised a change of climate for the winter. I will ask if there are any Saints living at or near Pomona, California? Also I would like to know the price of land. We would be glad to hear from any of the Saints, personally, or through the HERALD, as we want our next move to be near a branch. I desire an interest in the prayers of the faithful.

Your sister,

MRS. ELIZABETH BLAIR.

Reunion of Eastern Michigan District.

The first reunion of the Eastern Michigan District, which was held at Port Huron, Michigan, has passed into history, and in the opinion of the writer it was a decided success in every way; so much so, in fact, that those who attended it were unanimously in favor of repeating it next year at the same place, commencing on June 23 and continuing until after July 4. The reunion committee, as well as all who had to do with the management of it, are deserving of much credit for the efficient manner in which they conducted the affair throughout. While at no time, perhaps, did the number of campers exceed the hundred mark, yet the sessions were well attended; in the evenings frequently the seating capacity of the preaching tent was taxed to its utmost.

The organization effected was as follows: Presidency, A. Allen, J. W. Wight, William Davis, and William Grice; secretary, Joseph Carpenter; organist, Sr. Jennie Hunter; choristers, J. J. Emlaw and Fred Gregory; police, A. Kessler; janitor, George Myers; press committee, E. B. Blett and Joseph Carpenter.

The following is a summary of the work done: Preaching services 19, social services 7, normal sessions 4, Sunday school sessions 1, Graceland Lecture by E. B. Blett 1, historical lecture by R. Etzenhouser 1.

During the second Friday of the reunion, September 9, the Sunday school and Religio conventions were held. On Saturday and Sunday, September 10, 11, the conference of the district was held, presided over by J. W. Wight and William Davis. The credential committee reported the following branches duly represented: Minden City, Port Huron, East Fremont, Lang, Saint Clair, Valley Center, Applegate, Cass River, McGregor, Evergreen, Cash, Belle River, Buel, Huron, Bay Port, Pigeon River, Sandusky, Black River, second Detroit and Saint Gideon.

Bishop's agent reported as follows: On hand last report, $2,064.06; receipts plus balance, $3,131.12; expenditures, $2,051.29. Balance due church, $879.83. Following are some of the more important items of business: The establishing of a more permanent reunion committee of four members: A. Allen and C. C. Whitford for one year, and J. A. Grant and H. H. Huston, for two years. Election of delegates to General Conference, leaving time and place of next conference in hands of minister in charge and district president.

The matter touching the scattered Saints of near Vassar who have no baptismal certificates was left in hands of president and secretary of the district. A committee consisting of Sister Plato, D. E. Dowler, and Fred Gregory was selected to confer with committee of the western district, looking toward the organization of a musical association in Michigan. The vote charging ten cents a meal at conferences location was so satisfactory and the people of the surrounding branches at Allenton and Caseville was left in the hands of the presidency of the district.

APPLEGATE, MICHIGAN, September 17, 1910.

Reunion at Bass Point.

The first reunion of the New York and Philadelphia District convened at Bass Point, a beautiful pine grove overlooking the Manasquan River, at Manasquan, New Jersey. The location was so satisfactory and the people of the surrounding country so friendly, that the Committee was instructed to and has hired the grounds for the summer of 1911, when, it was decided, another reunion will be held.

The Saints of this district were with one accord in this place from August 23 to September 5. The last meeting of the reunion being Saturday morning, September 3, the remainder of the time was occupied by the meetings of the district conference. Those chosen to preside over the reunion were Elders U. W. Greene, William Anderson, and A. D. Angus, as a presidency. The presidency were empowered to prescribe the necessary rules for camp regulation and appoint other necessary officers. Bro. Paul Craig was appointed chorister; Sr. Ella Squire, organist; Bro. Charles Scott, chief of police; Bro. Ephraim Squire, postmaster; and Bro. O. T. Christy census taker. The Sunday school and Religio interests were cared for by a committee of five, and the interesting items of the two auxiliaries were sent to the Exponent, to be published in the October number.

The afternoons from 2.30 were spent in playing baseball, in fishing, crabbing, bathing, rowing, and sailing.

Did we have a good time? Did we enjoy the Spirit's presence? Do we feel that it was a success? Has the district been benefited, the gospel spread? Do we feel to rejoice and praise God? YES!

Fifty small tents, and three large ones. About two hundred Saints during the week and 25 more during conference. Many nonmembers from the near by and some from far away towns at the services. Favorable mention in the local and metropolitan newspapers. Interest warranted the missionaries' stopping to do street preaching in Manasquan after the reunion closed; a number of new openings made; two baptisms. A deeper and broader conception of the gospel and of our privileges and opportunities to do our Master's will. Do we rejoice? How can we help singing praises to His holy name?

Among the elders not hereinbefore mentioned, there were present, Bro. F. G. Pitt, W. W. Smith, William Hawkins, Daniel Carter, Bishop Zimmermann, Thomas Truman, James Wilson, and D. T. Shaw.

Sister Copeland was a first-class chef, Brother Shaw a capable quartermaster, and Brother Lawrence took the change over the counter of his general store in a most businesslike manner. Everyone tried to make the reunion a success. If we were to try and mention all who assisted to this end, it would be necessary to print the names of all those present, even the babies that slept during the services. I am sure that no one will feel offended because it is not mentioned that he was present, as each soul in attendance rejoiced in contributing his presence and helped to make all the others happy.

Well, very good! How did you come out financially?

We paid expenses, and have a clean sheet for next season.

At the reunion business meeting a committee of seven was elected, consisting of the missionary in charge, district president, Bishop Zimmermann, and Brethren John Lawrence, John A. McGuire, George Potts.

To our many brethren and sisters who read this: May the good Spirit that was ours to enjoy bless you. We feel we shall receive an interest in your prayers that our zeal and capacity to do God service will be commensurate with our opportunities.

B. R. MCGUIRE, Secretary.

News From Missions

NEBRASKA.

In the present age persons who have reached the age of maturity, though they are not old, have lived a long time. We are confronted with wonderful achievements, marvelous discoveries, political disturbances, social disquietude, and the most casual observer can not but note a general indifference to sound religious teaching. And so the world moves on. Anything in the form of a show makes the strongest appeal. But it should not be forgotten that the things which are seen are temporal; the invisible forces are what give shape to the material things, and, for that reason, should not be given secondary consideration.

I am filled with optimism respecting Zion and her cause. Even now Zion is being redeemed. It is decreed that the Lord's people shall be gathered together, and his power shall be over them. And so I rejoice in the latter day glory. What I have done, or may do is naught compared with the loving-kindness which comes from the Father, the light of the church, and Zion's cause. Even the stones of Zion's foundation are precious to me, and I am made happy in the contemplation of her glories.

Good news comes from abroad. From a New Zealand paper I learn that Elder Robert Hall delivered a lecture in Kaitangata, dealing with the subject of the Book of Mormon, the paper commenting very favorably on the effort. Brother Hall is one of the converts who entered the church soon after the arrival of Bro. D. E. Tucker and the writer in the colony. How pleased I would be to see the church able to maintain field workers in every mission ever opened by it.

And from Jerusalem come encouraging words. I am inclined to believe that the time is near when our work shall be established there. The witness of the Spirit to me when there was that the sound of the everlasting gospel should soon be heard in that land; which means that a work identical to what was offered to the world in New Testament times would again be represented in Palestine.

The great work of the Lord looms up before me, and I am anxious to do what I can in its interest; the remote parts of the earth have not seemed too far for me to go with the glad tidings of great joy; and now as I look out upon the harvest fields I see in many parts of the world a need for laborers. May the Lord come into the lives of the Saints, the church be strengthened financially, infused with the true missionary spirit, and the nations of the earth be visited by the power of the Spirit and the ministrations of the elders of the church.

In this district many of our Saints are sacrificing and devoted to their faith; others, indifferent, half converted, on whom environments tell, their energies and means not being consecrated to the church or to hardly any department of it, all spent for self and things that pass away. And in the homes of the dilatory the Spirit of the Lord does not abide. The happy Saints are those who give supreme thought to the church, and the result of their devotion and intelligent zeal is that, as a rule, their children are growing up strong in the Lord.

My mission address is Nebraska City, Nebraska, 1207-3 Corso.

PAUL M. HANSON.

FAIRFIELD, October 6, 1910.

KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.

I have just closed an interesting meeting at this place; baptized three this afternoon, all heads of families. Bro. Jesse Sullivan, wife and sister. The first two were led to investigate the angel's message through the efforts of the Brighamite elders, who had been visiting them regularly for three or four years. Elder J. A. Dowker and the writer were the first of the Reorganized elders they have met. We visited that place last fall, by invitation of Bro. George Brush, who had secured the Macedonia schoolhouse, where we held a few meetings and met these people, who became very much interested in our claims. They were persuaded to believe that Joseph Smith, Junior, was a polygamist. When Brother Dowker and I found them they were about ready to accept the doctrine as taught by the Brighamite elders, believing that Joseph Smith had made a mistake on the polygamy question, but otherwise was a true prophet of God. So we taught them the true origin of polygamy, and they began an earnest investigation of our claims.

While the Brighamite elders visited them often and tried hard to prove to them that Joseph Smith, junior, was the author of polygamy, after reading "Corner stones of the Utah church" by Elbert A. Smith, they were fully convinced that the Reorganized Church was the true church in succession.

The drought was broken here Monday night, when it began raining and continued for forty-eight hours almost without ceasing, and much of the time falling in torrents; consequently our meetings have been hindered. I am to begin a meeting at Bethel Church, near Cottage Grove, Tennessee, Saturday; will probably continue until the 15th, when our district conference will convene with the Foundry Hill Branch. We have many calls for preaching, more than we can possibly answer; only two missionaries in the Kentucky and Tennessee District, Elder J. T. Davis and the writer, and but little local help.

The 1st of September Brother Davis went to Arkansas to hold a debate with the Campbellites, while I went to Lexington, Tennessee, to visit the Liberty Hill Branch, it being nearly two years since I visited them. Held a week's meeting, with good interest, and left the Saints rejoicing in the faith. I was invited to come to Polk Station on the 24th and went down and began meetings in an arbor built by the Holiness people, and was assisted by the Holiness preacher and several of their members in song service, which was much appreciated. Held forth day and night, baptizing one at the close, and left a fine interest.

I wish to say to the Saints of the Kentucky and Tennessee District, that any desiring to pay tithing should not wait till I visit you, but send it to my address, Fulton, Kentucky, and I will receipt you for same. I expect to visit all the branches in the district between now and the end of the year. Quite a number have filed inventories and have begun paying tithing, while some have not.

If all would do their duties along this line, we could support at least two more missionaries' families. May the Lord help us to see the importance of keeping the whole law.

Your colaborer in the gospel,

J. R. McCLAIN.

SWEDEN.

As it is now a good while since anything appeared in your pages from this far off place, this southern part of Sweden, where I have been doing missionary work the last three years, I thought it would be of interest to send you a few lines. Part of the first year myself and Bro. Swen Swensen labored together, he being here then, but since that time I have been all by myself. I have labored in several places, against much opposition, yet I have made some friends to the cause, but only a few have accepted our message.

By advice of Bro. Peter Anderson, missionary in charge, I have moved my family to this town, and it is my intention to labor here this conference year. I have lived here only about three months, yet I did some preaching here last winter and spring, and I have succeeded in making many good friends.

Last week I had the pleasure of baptizing two noble souls, a man and his wife, and others are almost ready. I have baptized two before this summer, the result of our Sunday school where I lived before. One of these was my own daughter.

We have rented a place where we are having our meetings, and I went to work making the seats myself. I am preaching there Sundays, and sometimes a good many come out, although there have been times when only a few have come, and a couple of times none. I did not get discouraged, but kept right on, and now some are beginning to think there must be something in it, or else I would give it up; so I think a good work will be done here, and my prayer is that the Lord will move among this people with his Spirit, that they may wake up to a realization that the Lord is working a work in our days, a marvelous work and a wonder.

It seems like this people are somewhat slow to take hold of it. I have worked hard among the people ever since I began, about three years ago, and comparatively few have accepted it. Yet I am hopeful, and intend to labor on, because I want to be among the faithful ones, and gain eternal life.

When not otherwise engaged, I have thought to make myself useful in translating some of our books and tracts into this language. I have just finished translating the Book of Mormon, after having worked on it for about two years, and will submit it to proper authority for consideration and printing if they so decide.

Have also succeeded in getting the Voice of Warning printed in Swedish, and it is a good help to us. I mention this because if some one thinks it could be of any use in the States, it can be had by addressing me at Helsingborg, the price being thirty cents.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

C. A. SWENSON.

HELSINGBORG, September 25, 1910.

COLORADO.

Somewhat slowly, but surely, the latter day work is moving forward in Colorado. The State is crowded with people with various purposes in view, mostly of a temporal character, and per consequence religion comes last, and occupies but little of their time and attention. Speaking of things in general, people are restless and excitable; are moving to and fro, reminding us of the angel that spoke to the Prophet Daniel of conditions to prevail "in the time of the end." "Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall increase."

The whole world is on the move, like the ever restless ocean tides, and not knowing why; and Colorado, as a part of the whole, must move also. Recent bringing of the ends of the world together by recent scientific developments, and rapid transit, such as will enable us to know to-day that Portugal, a kingdom of yesterday, is a republic; and that Spain may be changed from a monarchy to a republic tomorrow or next week, keeps the whole world in an unduly agitated state of great unrest, all of which makes it seem that the gospel plow covers the land slowly.

Colorado has now seven general missionaries at work within her borders, representatives of the Reorganized Church, besides local and branch workers, and it can not be but that the gospel influence is reaching out to some extent, and Saints are striving to keep the camp fires blazing and gospel light glowing. We hear of but little agitation on the part of the Brighamite faction in Colorado this season, but it is being published throughout the State that they are to largely abandon the State of Utah and make a settlement in Old Mexico, or enlarge their borders down there, with the understanding with the Government of President Diaz, that Brighamite peculiarities of religion, including polygamy, can be cultivated and flourish there!

Mexico is largely Catholic, however, and it may be harder than they anticipate to set the civilization of Mexico so far back into barbarism, and the darkness of past dark ages. If this should occur, it will show the difference between the Brighamites and the Reorganized Church to the people of the United States, including Colorado people, beyond question.

People are beginning to surfeit on divorces, even in Colorado. A case of bigamy has just been concluded before Judge Lindsey's Juvenile Court, of a Colorado miner and a sixteen year old girl, and the man sentenced. The girl is likely to be sentenced, and is the daughter of a once Latter Day Saint mother.

The law relating to foreigners becoming citizens in this district, including Utah and Colorado, forbids those in polygamy, or who believe in, or who anticipate entering into it, from becoming citizens in the two States. This may largely account for the abandonment of Utah by our Brighamite neighbors. This will surely mean progress for the Reorganized Church.

Events are surely moving the work in Colorado, and, as society becomes more settled down, will make openings for preaching easier to obtain. Our people are coming to see more fully the necessity of circulating our church literature as freely as possible among the people surrounding them. Some will do a little reading at least, and some are attracted to the work in this way. We are expecting our other missionary in charge, Apostle John W. Rushton, soon, and with his supervision and additional labors, an additional impetus should be given the work here.

So far as debates here are concerned, they are few. The one began last March between Bro. Jacob Curtis and Elder Frichu, of the Church of Christ, so called, was brought to a premature end by the latter, because, as then made clear, the Saints believe the Bible so far as it is correctly translated, and he was unable to convert Brother Curtis otherwise, while at the time he carried a copy of the American Standard, revised translation. And he backed out, and refused to conclude the debate at Denver, and scattered his little paper over the country containing the false statement that he refused to finish and repeat the debate at the city of Boulder, as he agreed to do, because the Saints refused to state that, they believe the Bible to be the word of God, as a whole, without modification. And under this glaring misrepresentation refused to discuss the issue at all, while at the same time one of the rules to govern the debate was: The Bible is to be the final standard of evidence to be accepted for what it may be worth. How inconsistent men who fear the truth can be! But debates along the lines of gospel faith attract but small attention in Colorado.

The gospel seed is being sown in Colorado, so strenuously as the circumstances will permit the laborers to find openings for preaching. A number of young men have been ordained to the ministry in various capacities, which seems encouraging for the cause here.

The Sunday school and Zion's Religio-Literary Society both have district organizations, and the work of both is being pushed by the officers of each, and their borders are being enlarged, and they are moving forward at a moderate pace. All seem earnest and manifest a zeal becoming knowledge. Financial aid for the work was at least forty per cent more in 1909 than any previous year in the history of the work in Colorado. Most of the Saints are willing to do in this respect, as they come to understand the law governing. This is one of the evidences of growth, we think, in this marvelous work and a wonder. We think we can see the work, on the whole, is moving onward and upward in Colorado. COLUMBUS SCOTT.

DENVER, October 7, 1910.

DESERET.

About three weeks since, we were preaching on the street of Murray, and at the close of our meeting a Mr. Sanders challenged us to answer, at our next meeting there, a list of fourteen questions that he would submit to us in writing. Of course we consented to the proposition and the following Tuesday received his questions, with a challenge to publish the same in our paper. On account of this challenge we made answer in writing with a counter challenge as you will note. This challenge of ours was not accepted,—as we were sure it would not be—on the grounds that while his questions "could be read in ten minutes, it took an hour and a quarter to deliver my answer"; of course we laughed at the excuse, and showed the audience that it was simply a "Play to the footlights."

We are under no obligation to publish these questions and answers, but I submit them that you may have them; and if you think it profitable to publish them, you may do so.

The big event of the fall, in the general conference of the dominant church, as well as the state fair, is on now. The fair closes to-day and the conference to-morrow, meanwhile, with Brn. H. N. Hansen, J. D. Stead, and John Davis, we are busy with the street work, holding two meetings each day.

Some of the speeches during the conference have been very significant. This was especially true of the opening speech by Joseph F., sr., one yesterday by Joseph F., jr., and one by Apostle Orson F. Whitney. In the first two speeches, the matter of criticising the president of the church was the theme, as also his innocence of the things for which he was criticised. In the last we were given to understand that we could not judge the church to-day by the "gospel of the Nephites" nor by the Bible, but, (as I have it in my notebook, though it may not be his precise words, as I do not write shorthand) "We receive commandments from the Lord today, and we must obey." "He has the right to command one thing to-day and another to-morrow."

Well, we won't take up more of your time in this communication; we are in the fight, and the battle is not simply one for show.

We feel that we are making progress. Only yesterday, as we were standing in front of the Information Bureau, a stranger to us stepped up and introduced himself, saying that he had listened to us the night before on the street; he then asked us a question, and as we were answering, and a small group of perhaps a half dozen were listening, the one in charge of that institution—an Elder Goddard—ordered us to get off of the grounds to talk such things. Well, we told our questioner to come down to Lamoni or Independence and he would not find such a rule. Next we stepped over to where Elders Hansen, Stead, and Davis were standing, and were listening to Elder Hansen recount some of his experiences in a recent encounter with our Mormon friends in the southern part of the State, where he lately was engaged in discussion with one of their men. I noticed the "Elder"—(Save the mark!)—Goddard sidle up and listen for a moment or two. I thought I knew what was coming, so (though there were no others near, or whose religious thought we were corrupting, as it was early in the morning and the crowd had not yet gathered) I was not surprised when he ordered us off of the grounds, threatening us with an officer. As we were disturbing no one, and they had no signs up forbidding us to visit, nor were there signs to the effect that their theology was fragile and easily broken, though "Handle with care" would be an appropriate sign to erect on those grounds, we,—no, Brother Stead told him that we were American citizens, and we paid no more attention to him.

Well, we hear something, occasionally, of the signs of the times, and this is one of the hopeful ones out here, and we are reminded of the question, "What have the righteous to fear?" And so sure as fear hath torment, will the "fearful and unbelieving have their place in that lake that burns with fire and brimstone." We only pray for grace to assist the honest ones to come to that point where they will have nothing to fear.

We promised to stop, so here we say, May God hasten the day.

Yours for the spread of the truth,

A. M. CHASE.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, 171 P STREET, October 8, 1910.

THE WORK IN ARIZONA, AS WE SEE IT.

Comparatively speaking, Arizona is a new field for the gospel. At this writing we have but one branch organization in the State, but we hope ere it is published we will have increased one, as we intend to organize a branch soon at the capital city, Phoenix. The one already organized is at Bisbee; organized in June of this year by Bro. W. S. Pender.

Prior to our arrival in this field on the 15th of last June, we knew but little about the work here, so will only speak of it as we see it. Arizona, not unlike any other part we have labored in, has a great variety of people, good, bad, and indifferent, but in the main we consider it equally as favorable for gospel work as any other part of the world we have been permitted to labor in. At Bisbee, the Saints through their energy, frugality, and sacrifice have a little chapel in which to worship.

The branch there is presided over by Elder John Lamb, T. W. Davis (a brother of our missionary, John Davis,) is priest, and Bro. James Farley is deacon. The Bisbee Branch is largely the fruits of the labors of our devoted and energetic Bro. and Sr. W. S. Pender.

Personally we labored at Bisbee and vicinity for about three months, street preaching being the principal part of the work. A goodly amount of literature was distributed, and several gospel visits were had with the people there.

The work at Phoenix is also largely the result of the energetic and self-sacrificing efforts of Bro. and Sr. Pender; however, we have been informed since coming here that a public debate was held here last winter between Bro. F. M. Sheehy and an infidel, whose name we do not now remember, but was no doubt a factor for good here.

Since arriving at Phoenix, on the 17th of September, we have been quite busily engaged in street work, and am glad to report it promising, have made a folding street stand, the Russell-Bailey pattern, and have held some very successful street meetings; have already created quite an interest, and have some investigating and not far from the kingdom.

We are very much encouraged in the work at Phoenix, with the interest manifested and the liberty had in delivering the angel's message to the people. We have a membership of about twenty in Phoenix, and environ, and while they have not a permanent home in which to worship, they have the use of the "Labor Party" hall on Sundays. Of course they have to pay rent for it, but it is within their reach, so they are cheerful. However, we look for a time when the work will be permanently established here, and that not in the far distant future. Tempe, the town in which the State Normal School is situated, is about nine miles east of Phoenix, and Mesa, a thrifty Mormon settlement, is just a few miles further east, and we anticipate opening up the work in both those places before our conference year is out. The greatest handicap we have in this part is the lack of laborers, and we hope the time will be hastened when more laborers can be sent, for the harvest truly is great. We hope the young men of the church will prepare themselves for the work, that they may enter in and reap where we older ones have sown.

There are people in Arizona who are languishing for want of spiritual food, and we seem to hear a cry, "Come over to Arizona and help us." May the Lord send forth the laborers is our prayer, daily.

Respectfully,

OCTOBER 4, 1910.

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

News From Branches

FIRST KANSAS CITY.

You will recollect we announced in our last report that we might have something interesting to say about the Sunday school and Religio, and we have. October 6, 1907, the attendance was 41; October 4, 1908, 74; October 3, 1909, 185; October 2, 1910, 291. Of course, the last two years, rally day occurred on the first Sunday of October and had something to do with the attendance. Yesterday the attendance was 223. The average attendance at Religio is also climbing; each month showing an increase over the preceding since January 1, 1910. The average for September was 70. This is a very good showing so far as numbers are concerned, but are we keeping up the standard of work accomplished? that is the all-important question. We believe we are; we must, or in a short time our attendance will dwindle.

Our fondest hopes were realized on rally day; the attendance at all meetings was good, better than last year; the program was better than ever. Pres. Fred M. Smith was the speaker at 11 o'clock; 2.30 to 4, experience or informal meeting. Mother W. W. Blair, of Lamoni, who is visiting relatives here, spoke very encouragingly; Sister Strickland, who was present at the reorganization of the church in 1860 also spoke, besides a number of others. Space will not permit us to mention all. The sacrament meeting at 6 was the largest ever held in the church, 185 partaking of the sacrament. From 7.45 to 9 the time was occupied very profitably. Outside speakers were J. A. Gunsolley, president of Graceland College, and Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, of Independence, who represented the Religio; D. J. Krahl, superintendent of the Independence Sunday school, represented the interests of the Sunday school. It was certainly a big day for Central, and a very enjoyable time was had. The Ladies' Aid looked after the physical needs of the people, and all were bountifully supplied; we could hardly get along without the Ladies' Aid.

Yesterday morning Bishop Kelley was the speaker and Pastor LaRue in the evening. The attendance and interest were good at all meetings.

Since our last report the following have moved here from other parts: Bro. and Sr. Henry Smith and Bro. and Sr. G. G. Buell, from Bemidji, Minnesota; Sr. W. E. Park has moved back from Dubuque, Iowa; Bro. and Sr. F. E. Gray from Pittsburg, Kansas; Bro. and Sr. William Rippey.

Bro. and Sr. Charles Zerr have a baby boy, born the 24th ultimo, at the Sanitarium, at Independence, Missouri.

Bro. C. P. Faul, of Stewartville, was taking in the sights P. O. P. week, and incidentally making one of his usual calls. We are always pleased to meet "Uncle Charley."

Bro. Earl Stoker surprised his many friends by taking unto himself a much needed companion on Monday evening, the 3d instant. Daisy Robinson was the lucky one. Bro. W. E. LaRue said the words that made them one. Here's congratulations and good wishes to all.

We are glad to report that Bro. John Givens, who was so seriously injured in a railroad wreck about two months ago, has sufficiently recovered as to be about on crutches, and was greeted by his many friends at Sunday school yesterday.

Our special meetings commence Sunday, the 23d, and continue two weeks, closing November 4. The speakers will be A. H. Parsons, G. E. Harrington, M. H. Bond, Ammon White, and possibly others. Institute work every afternoon at 2.30. You can not afford to miss these meetings.

The directory made its first appearance last Sunday. It is a very useful book and should be in the hands of each member. You ought to know who the members of the church are and where they live. Ask the committee or the pastor about it if you want one. Price 15 cents.

OCTOBER 10.

FALL RIVER, MASSACHUSETTS.

The Fall River Saints extend the best of wishes to their brothers and sisters in other localities. Since our last communication we have been trying to do some little good each day, and to refrain from dreaming of great things to do bye and bye.

During the past summer months we have been holding open air services in various parts of the city. Sunday afternoon we would gather at the North Park while Bro. R. B. Howlett would preach a doctrine sermon to all who would stop and listen. Tuesday evening we would assemble at the South Park for the same purpose; Thursday evening at Ruggle's Park, and Friday evening at the Eastern Playgrounds. Brother Howlett was ably assisted by his son and our pastor, Horatio W. Howlett, who preached when his father had to be elsewhere. Occasionally the priests and teachers were called upon to deliver the sermon. We young fellows furnished the vocal music. Our audiences were, as a rule, very attentive, and not once do I know of an insulting remark being made. After each sermon we would pass out tracts, gratis, to all who desired them, excepting, of course, small children. The children were very attentive listeners, and after awhile became so familiar with our hymns that quite frequently they would sing them with us. More than once when going to work a child has asked me if she could look on my book when we came preaching again. I believe that a great deal of good was done by the services. I am certain that we shall never regret having made this effort to bring the truth before the people. 'Tis said, "Great oaks from little acorns grow," and perhaps our efforts may bring forth results equally as great.

"Grandma" Sinclair, of the local branch has been suddenly called to Canada to care for her son's wife and children, who are very ill. We of Fall River hope that her children may soon be restored to health and strength so that sorrow may not again darken her declining years.

On the first and second of this month conference was held in New Bedford. Saturday afternoon, business meeting began at 2.30 p. m., Bro. U. W. Greene being the presiding officer, assisted by his counselors, M. C. Fisher and Horatio W. Howlett. Business was transacted in an excellent manner; in fact, I believe it was transacted without a dissenting vote.

Sunday morning, being the first Sunday morning in the month, sacrament was served. As there were about two hundred in attendance, the partaking of the sacrament lasted somewhat longer than usual. After the sacrament thirteen of our young brethren were ordained to various positions in the priesthood to which they had previously been called. Three young brethren were ordained to the office of deacon, three were ordained to the office of teacher, two were ordained to the office of priest, two were ordained to the office of elder, two were ordained counselors, and one was ordained president of the Nineteenth Quorum of Teachers. Those ordained from Fall River are as follows: John F. Sheehy, elder; George Sinclair and James W. Heap, priests; William Roberts, teacher, and Charles Cockcroft and Alma M. Coombs, deacons.

Following the ordinations, prayer service was held, which remained in session about one hour and thirty minutes. Many and varied were the testimonies given during prayer service, and which combined, greatly strengthened the faith of the Saints. Excepting reunion, there's no place like conference that so strengthens a Saint of God for his daily battle against the ridicule and antagonism of the world. The Saints make a special effort to come to conference, and from Cape Cod on the east to Connecticut on the west, and from New Hampshire on the north to Nantucket Island on the south you will find Saints there.

During the afternoon Bishop M. C. Fisher delivered a fine sermon in which he spoke words of encouragement and also warning to those who had just been called to uphold and defend the banner of Christ. He told us that we should be Christians, not only on Sunday, but seven days a week. Those of the world do not judge us by our deportment on Sunday but by our conduct during the other six days of the week, when we are brought face to face with opposition in our daily struggles to obtain the necessities of this life. If at any time we are perplexed we should inquire of the Lord, for, "God wants us to take him into all of our confidences." After the service he came to us and said, "If there is anything I can do for you boys, or any way in which I can help you, do not be afraid to come and ask me"; but thoughts of Myron and fear do not go well together. To know him is to love him. He does not let his position in the church form a barrier between him and God's people.

Sister Whiting sang a solo in the afternoon, the words and music of which were composed by Bro. A. B. Phillips. Brother Phillips spoke in the evening along Book of Mormon lines. One statement that he made is still quite fresh in my mind. It was that "No published book in all the world condemns polygamy as strongly as does the Book of Mormon." I have not yet heard the Book of Mormon defended in a more able manner than the way Arthur defends it.

Bro. R. B. Howlett, who has been laboring during the summer at or in the vicinity of Fall River, will soon leave us to labor for the Master on Nantucket Island during the winter months. He will also visit and preach at Wareham and New Bedford. While we, of Fall River, would like to have him remain still longer with us, we realize that there are other places to be visited, other Saints to be comforted, and other souls to be sought for than what dwell in Fall River. So we must not monopolize his services.

To-morrow night, Class No. 4 of the Sunday school gather at the home of their pastor and class president to honor the anniversary of his birth. He will be, but why tell his age; he says he feels just as young as he ever did, and we certainly consider him as being "one of the boys." These little birthday gatherings by our class are always eagerly looked forward to. We, of course, take our lady friends for the simple reason that they will not let us go without them. Quite recently we visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Millward for the same purpose. We consider George as being one of the bravest of our members. Why? Well, because he has done what so few of our number have had the courage to do. He is a married man.

To-day Sr. Lucy Sears, of New Bedford, and Sr. Susie Jordan, of Haverhill, are visiting the Fall River Branch. Sister Sears represents the Sunday school, being superintendent of the district, and Sister Jordan the Religio, as president. We hope that they will be pleased with the manner in which the Sunday school and Religio of Fall River are conducted, and show us wherein we can improve.

In conclusion, permit me to say that we are trying to obey the commands of our heavenly Father, so that those of the world may realize that we are not "hearers of his word alone, but doers of it, too." Personally, I believe that the pure life of a Saint will do more toward bringing souls into the kingdom of God than any argument that could be presented. No matter how strong our arguments may be, if we are not living as we should we will always experience difficulty in winning converts. With the best of wishes for the success of this great latter day work, and a desire at all times to do what little I can, I consider it an honor to be known as your brother,

ALMA M. COOMBS.

82 BARRE STREET.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

Growth and development seem to be going on both within and around us, and while a few weeks ago we suffered from the heat, now the coolness as well as the fading brilliancy of Indian summer is here, and the sweetness of Nature's violets has changed to the gaudy beauty that clothes the russet ash and maple trees; and even the morningglories of the byways and hedges, while they deck the moldy fences, tell of development going on.

People in the church and Sunday school are also making changes and moving to and fro. Some have left us for the winter and are now in California; others have moved on to the farm they lately bought, and some have lately departed on their missions.

Something good is on every hand being wrought out. Great events like the ceremony attending the laying of the corner stone of the new thirty thousand city hall, on the 12th, and the passing of the electrical parade which all Independence attended in a body, on the 4th, have occurred, but they are soon forgotten.

Less showy occurrences in the interest of the church are certainly of greater importance to the Saints, and we remember that on Graceland day, the 2d, the offering of the Sunday school was $29.20, which was donated to the college, and also that at the Sunday school business meeting on the 14th, four scholarships to the college were awarded by the executive committee.

Just as great an event as any of these occurred on the 3d inst., when, at the branch business meeting, a preamble and resolution was presented by Pres. Joseph Smith. It stipulated that all collections, donations, or subscriptions taken in the branch, the Sunday school, Religio, Men's League, Athletic Club, Daughters of Zion, Ladies' Aid, or any society be turned over to the Bishop or the committee and the necessary expenses of each be paid out of this general fund, and the residue be applied on the dining hall debt. This order to continue till the debt is entirely liquidated.

The Saints are responding to this important call faithfully. As to the Sunday school, the amount on hand of its building fund, $150, and also the future third Sunday collection for this fund was voted to be turned over toward the debt referred to.

On Graceland day a collection of $117 was taken up, in harmony with an earnest appeal made on Sunday, the 2d, by Pres. E. A. Smith. Our brother's theme was "Ideals of the early church," and with much zeal he discoursed on good citizenship, temperance, home influence, and education, which led up to the consideration of Graceland College, in which Independence has fifteen students.

This institution, the speaker said, is conducted in conformity with the church ideals.

At the close of Elder I. N. White's sermon on the 25th ult., wherein he set forth the necessity of keeping the commandments, touching impressively upon the subject of the Order of Enoch, Bro. F. M. Smith spoke earnestly in favor of the college, stating some of its present needs and urging the Saints to be helpers financially in this direction and in all needful things.

Also, on the 9th, Bishop G. H. Hilliard preached on the subject of an unselfish life, and in no uncertain tones told of the duty of the Saints, which was to strive to reach "the perfect condition" set forth in the word of God. His text in Matthew 19:20: "What lack I yet?" The meeting was closed with an appealing invocation by our beloved president.

Disorganized branches: Douglas 13, Pawtucket 6, Plainville 62. Scattered 1. Net gain 20. Membership of district, 1,012. The Nineteenth Quorum of Teachers reported: Sermons, 17; meetings presided over, 32; services attended, 951; assisted in services, 25; social calls, 16; official visits, 13; cases adjusted, 7; cases pending, 6; literature distributed, 45. President, W. A. Sinclair; secretary, John Heap. The following ordinations took place: W. A. Sinclair, Boston, elder; John F. Sheehy, Fall River, elder; George D. Sinclair, Fall River, priest; James W. Heap, Fall River, priest; William J. Roberts, Fall River, teacher; James W. Heap, Fall River, priest; William J. Roberts, Fall River, teacher; Herman A. Chellin, Providence, teacher; Abraham Law, New Bedford, teacher; George F. Robley, Providence, deacon; Charles Cockcroft, Fall River, deacon; Alma Coombs, Fall River, deacon; John Siddall, Attleboro, president. Nineteenth Quorum of Teachers; William Wylie, Fall River, first counselor to the president of Nineteenth Quorum of Teachers; Henry Arnold, Providence, second counselor. Treasurer's report: Balance last report, $23.05; income with balance, $71.42; expenditures, $5.65; balance on hand, $65.77. Next conference to be held with the Boston Saints, February 1, 2, 1911. A profitable time was had by all. This was the first conference held in New Bedford for a number of years. Everybody was anxious to attend so we had a large delegation; the local Saints cared for the visitors in royal order, and all felt that they would like to return again to worship in conference with the New Bedford Saints. W. A. Sinclair, clerk.

KEWANEE.—District conference convened with the Dahinda Branch, at Dahinda, Illinois, October 1, 2, 1910. Elders Oral E. Sade, Charles L. Holmes, and Amos Berve presided. Mary E. Gillin and Maud Dawson acted as secretaries. Statistical reports from branches were Kewanee 140, gain 4; Millersburg 123, gain 1; Joy 85, gain 2; Twin City 66, gain 1; Buffalo Prairie 61, gain 1; Dahinda 51, gain 1; Peoria 50; Media 21. Ministerial reports were read from C. E. Willey, seventy; O. E. Sade, elder; Oscar Harter, priest. The district president's report showed that twenty-three were laboring as branch officials; that they had preached 92 sermons, held 104 fellowship meetings, visited 58 families, administered to sick 58 times, and baptized 6. The district librarian reported the purchase of one new library of sixteen volumes, this making four now in circulation. Statistical report of district showed Kewanee District to include all or parts of eighteen counties in northwestern Illinois. The nine branches within this territory have 671 members. Since last report there have been 5 baptisms, 4 marriages. Priesthood numbers 57, including 1 high priest, 4 seventy, 18 elders, 13 priests, 12 teachers, 9 deacons. Three of these are General Conference appointees. In the last ten years the district has gained one branch and lost one. The membership in 1900 numbered 476. The gain has been just 5 short of 200. Bishop's agent's report showed total receipts with balance, $468.99; total expenditures, $421.75; balance September 1, 1910, $42.24. Treasurer's report: Receipts, $28.23; expenses, $28.23; no balance. Missionary fund, unchanged. All these had been audited and found correct. Resignation of C. E. Ball as Bishop's agent and district treasurer was accepted and vote of thanks tendered for faithful service. Charles L. Holmes was elected treasurer and recommended to the Bishop to act as agent. Amos Berve, C. G. Dykes, and C. E. Ball, of the reunion committee, submitted financial reports which were referred to auditing committee appointed last year. These reports showed balance due committee, $58.30. A motion to approve the action of the committee in calling upon the several branches to help make up this deficit was carried. Delegates to General Conference of 1911 were chosen as follows: J. L. Terry, O. H. Bailey, C. E. Willey, Joseph Arber and wife, Oral Sade and wife, Charles M. Gillin and wife, Amos Berve and wife, Alfred Needham, Anna Amos, William Norris and wife, Kitty Pine, John Hyett and wife, Edith Cole, Clara Davis, George Sackfield, Harlan Cady, E. C. Dillon and wife, Myra Cady, Oscar Bogart, Bertha Mahaffy, Della Sackfield. Two were baptized during conference. Preaching was by Elders Berve, Holmes, Ball, and Sade. Adjourned to meet at Joy, June, 1911. Mary E. Gillin and Maud Dawson, secretaries.

INDEPENDENCE.—The nineteenth semiannual conference of the Independence Stake was held at Knobnoster, Missouri, September 10, 11, 1910. Organization was effected by electing G. E. Harrington and W. H. Garrett to preside; W. S. Brown, secretary; W. H. Deam, B. J. Scott, and L. A. Fowler credential committee; George Hancock and G. J. Pierce, ushers; George Jenkins and J. C. Grainger, press committee; Bertha Grimes, chorister; Mabel Redfield, organist, and F. C. Warnky and John Lovell, administration committee. Presidency reported a successful season with tent among branches of the stake (in lieu of annual reunion), and by vote, they with the stake bishopric were given full charge of tent work and were authorized to procure a larger tent. Presidency also reported the establishment of the Order of Enoch, which was considered a forward step, and that it was slowly and carefully moving forward. Sixty-eight of the local ministers reported 83 baptisms. Stake bishopric reported, including the balance last report, $459.24; receipts, $8,605.82; expended, $8,252.09; balance on hand, $352.73. Sixteen branches reported a net gain of 248, of which number 146 were by baptism; present membership, 4,639; two branches organized, one in eastern Kansas City, Missouri, and named the Centropolis Branch, with 40 members; the other in south Independence and named the South Independence Branch, with 125 members. A committee of five brethren appointed at last conference to consider and report on entertainments in churches of the stake, stated it was their opinion that where such are held, only those of an intellectual and helpful character should obtain, and that they look with disfavor upon suppers and all socials in the churches, where eatables are sold, or any entertainment where an admission fee is charged. Their report was adopted. Ordination of Rothford E. Bozarth to office of elder was referred to stake presidency and president of Knobnoster Branch. Ordination of L. A. Fowler and Thomas Newton to office of elder was referred to missionary in charge and stake presidency, they to confer with Fourth Kansas City Branch and proceed accordingly. Ordination of W. A. Bushnell and J. C. Nunn to offices of first and second counselors to president of First Quorum of Priests was disposed of by indorsing the ordination of W. A. Bushnell, who had been previously ordained, and by ratifying the choice of J. C. Nunn. The committee in whose hands the ordination to office of elder of J. W. Wilson was placed at last conference, reported not ready. Next conference to be held at Independence, Missouri, March 11, 12, 1911. The conference indorsed a resolution passed by the stake Sunday school association favoring state wide prohibition in the State of Missouri. Preaching by R. May, A. H. Parsons, B. J. Scott, W. S. Macrae, Ammon White, and George Jenkins. W. S. Brown, secretary.

NAUVOO.—District conference convened with the Farmington, Iowa, Branch, October 1 and 2, with Charles Fry, the president of district, in charge, associated with James McKiernan, the missionary in charge of the district. M. H. Siegfried, the district secretary, acted as secretary of the conference. The minutes of last conference were read and approved. Reports were received from Rock Creek, Farmington, Keokuk, Burlington, and Montrose branches; Ottumwa and New London not reporting. Of the ministry present and reporting were George P. Lambert, Charles Fry, James McKiernan, F. M. McDonald, and M. H. Siegfried; present and not reporting were O. H. Bailey and W. T. Lambert. The district treasurer reported: Balance on hand June 5, $15.06; total receipts, $24.30; expenditures, $28.47; balance on hand, October 1, $10.89. The report was audited and found correct. The following preambles and resolutions concerning reunion work were adopted: Whereas, The reunions held in our district for two years past have, in our opinion, been productive of much good, and Whereas, The last reunion at Montrose, Iowa, at its business session August 6, favored the holding of a reunion in 1911, and Whereas, We believe the prospect for good to be done by this means is worthy of our best effort, and that in order to make our efforts more effective, provision of a more permanent character should be made; Therefore, Resolved, That a board of five, to be known as The Reunion Board, be established, composed of the district president and district secretary who shall occupy during their tenure of office and to be succeeded by their successors in office, and one to be elected for a term of three years, one for a term of two years, one for a term of one year, and that hereafter one be elected annually. This board shall be privileged to choose its own officers, and shall have full power to decide as to the advisability of holding a reunion each year, and to make all arrangements, such as appointing time and place, securing grounds, providing board and lodging, obtaining speakers and distributing money for the purpose herein named, and to take charge of all property acquired for reunion purposes. It shall also be the duty of this board to keep a record of its proceedings and finances, such record to constitute a history of the reunion work in this district; and to make a report to each fall conference, and at other times if deemed necessary by them. Resolved further, That this board being a creature of the district conference shall be so considered, and subject to further or special instruction by the conference. In harmony with the above resolutions F. M. McDonald was elected for the three year term, James McKiernan the two year term, and L. H. Haas the one year term. A report was read from the secretary and historian and a bill of $2.59 was allowed him. The district president occupied about forty minutes during the afternoon business session in discussing points pertaining to offenses and the reconciliation for them. Bishop George P. Lambert preached Saturday evening on the law pertaining to temporalities. Sunday school was held Sunday morning at 10 a. m., in charge of the district superintendent; Charles Fry preached Sunday at 11 a. m., and O. H. Bailey at 7.30 p. m. A good sacrament meeting was held at 2.30 p. m. The conference was spiritual and uplifting all through. Adjourned to meet in Burlington the first Saturday and Sunday in February, 1911. M. H. Siegfried, secretary.

The Bishopric.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

To Whom These Presents Shall Come: This is to certify that Bro. Charles L. Holmes, Joy, Illinois, has on recommendation of the district conference, Kewanee District of the Reorganized Church, been duly appointed Bishop's agent in said Kewanee District in place of Bro. C. E. Ball, resigned on account of having to be absent from the district.

We commend Bro. Charles L. Holmes to the Saints and friends of the Kewanee District and trust the Lord will especially bless him in his labors, and bespeak for him the assistance and cooperation of every lover of the truth and the Master's work in said district.

Bro. C. E. Ball has been good and faithful help to the Bishopric in and for said district in the past, and we take pleasure in commending his faithfulness as he retires from the office as agent. Trust the Lord will especially bless him and those of his family that he must specially care for and require his absence at the present time from the district.

Trusting every member in the district may be alive to performance of the duties required by the Lord of his children, and that no one may be found a laggard in the work, I am

Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

You are coming back now from summer play and idleness, from the sweet green woods and the blue ocean, from lake or camp, back to the towns and cities, to school and work, to long winter evenings and busy winter days. You will find it good to read some of Lincoln's writings, with their high appeal to all that is most generous and elevated and human, in its best sense, within us. A half hour every now and then spent in his society is surely worth an effort—what would you not give to sit with him just one half hour in life? And yet there is so much of him in the words he left behind that too often we let pass unread and unnoted. The Gettysburg address is probably the most perfect specimen of his style, of the clarity, consciousness, and universality of his mind, and of the tenderness and beauty of his heart: but everything he wrote is worth reading, as everything he did is worth re-membering.—From Hildegarde Hawthorne's "Books and Reading" in October St. Nicholas.

Tuberculosis News.

DES MOINES, September 15.—News from various parts of the State confirms the fact that much progress is being made in the fight against tuberculosis. The people are becoming so generally aroused that one has but to be a casual observer to see that practical steps are being taken by the rank and file of the people to protect themselves against this disease. It is the exception for one riding on a train to see the public drinking cup used. The individual drinking cup is now generally carried by all classes. This is significant, as there is no more pernicious, disease-scattering agency to be found, and it is gratifying to know that the public drinking cup is fast falling into disrepute.

For the past three years this department has maintained an exhibit on tuberculosis at the State Fair. In addition to the fact that thousands visited this exhibit, there were many who made the exhibit a particular point of interest at the fair.

The suppression of tuberculosis is now becoming a matter not of sentiment but of business sense. This was evidenced by a visit to the exhibit of a gentleman who undoubtedly will be a member of the next legislature. This man spent consid-erable time in viewing the charts and pictures, and made copi-ous notes, and informed me that he came to the fair for prac-tically one thing, to get information on tuberculosis.

Not only did thousands of people visit the tuberculosis ex-hibit at the State Fair, but they took the free literature which was on distribution. Very little of this literature was destroyed or thrown away as was disclosed by a careful in-spection of the grounds. A very interesting fact was noted, that a large number of young men not only took the literature for themselves but secured additional copies for friends in trouble.

Now that the thousands of boys and girls of Iowa are in school again the sanitation and ventilation of schoolhouses should be carefully inspected. It should be remembered that much tuberculosis has been induced by the insanitary, unven-tilated, unwholesome schoolroom and sleeping apartment. Abundant exercise and fresh air for children can not be divorced from good health.

It will be interesting news to tuberculosis workers that The American Red Cross Society has reduced its percentage on Christmas stamps from twenty per cent to twelve per cent. This gives local committees a much larger income on the sale of Christmas stamps and offers an ideal method of securing funds for local work. Any persons or committees desiring Red Cross stamps will address Department on Tuberculosis, State House, Des Moines.—A. E. Kepford, Lecturer.

In the October "Century."

The last—and the most sensational, if one may use the word in that connection—of the "Holy Land" papers, which have been running through The Century, will appear in the October issue. It describes Holy Week in Jerusalem and the wild ceremonies in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. "Hav-ing watched the people on this extraordinary occasion at close quarters," writes Mr. Hichens, "I am unable to doubt that hundreds, probably thousands, of them, do believe they are assisting at a miracle. I can not otherwise account for their frantic excitement—an excitement such as I have never seen in any other crowd not intent on violence or slaughter. After the working of the 'miracle,' delirium is the only word that accurately expresses the condition of the multitudes."

Holiday Offers

"At Last."

This book was put out especially for the holiday trade. It is an illustrated poem of David H. Smith. It is put up in a dainty form and would make a nice present. The number is limited, there being about one thousand copies left. No more to be printed. Order "At Last," price 25 cts.

The Instructor.

The Christian Sabbath, or Weekly Rest Day

is a complete refutation of the claims of our Seventh Day friends. It is brief, but comprehensive. You ought to be able to give some good reasons why you do not keep the seventh day. Get posted on this much discussed subject. No. 133, 40c.

What is Man,

by Elder J. R. Lambert. This little book is without doubt one of the biggest little books ever printed. It completely routs the fallacious idea of soul sleeping. It fairly scintillates with its clear cut reasoning. If you want to think, buy this book. You will never regret what you have spent for it. No. 140, cloth, 50c.

Compendium of Faith.

Gives a splendid arrangement of our faith as stated by the three books, i. e., Inspired Translation, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. You need this book. It is of inestimable worth to every Latter Day Saint. No. 141, cloth, 75cts, No. 141½, leather, $1; No. 174, flexible, $1.50.

Objections to the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants Answered and Refuted.

It is almost impossible for the average Saint to be able to meet the many objections urged by our opposers against us, on account of lacking the necessary books and information. This work just fills the bill. You have a complete refutation of many of the so-called objections against us in a concise and handy form. Order No. 143, cloth, 40c.

Joseph Smith and his Progenitors.

This book gives an intensely interesting account of the early days of the church. It has convinced many of the truthfulness of the latter day work. It is written in a plain, simple, truthful style; it appeals to the best elements in man. Don't fail to send it for you library. It is also a splendid adjunct for missionary work. No. 150, cloth, 75c.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

A book for the student who wishes thoroughly to post himself on the question of the true successor of the Martyr Joseph Smith. Order No. 153, cloth, 50c.

Rules of Order and Debate.

All our church business meetings as well as those of the auxiliaries, are, or ought to be, carried on by a close adherence to parliamentary usages. This book is the official parliamentary book of the church. You can't get along without it. No. 161, cloth, 40c.

Fireside Talks With Our Girls.

is a book put forth by the Daughters of Zion. Its name should bespeak a ready sale for it. Every parent should see that his girl has one of these books. To fail to properly instruct you children is criminal. Order No. 213, limp cloth, 30c.

The Truth Defended.

is a book carefully written, expressly to meet an attack upon our faith. Our work is a positive one, and as such, we are bound to strike no uncertain blows at error wherever found. This means that we must be as good anvils as we are hammers. This book prepares you to be both. Order No. 215, cloth, 50c.

Autobiography of Elder R. C. Evans.

This very interesting work should be read by every Saint, and it is a splendid work to put in the hand of an investigator. The many marvelous manifestations of God as recorded in it are a source of strength to the readers' faith. Order No. 216, cloth, 75c.

Divinity of Book of Mormon as Proven by Archaeology.

is a book written for the archaeological student. It forms a scientific basis for the defense of the Book of Mormon which is simply unanswerable. Order No. 234, cloth, 50c.

Book of Mormon Lectures.

This book contains a series of lectures, proving in a convincing manner that the Book of Mormon has a divine mission to perform. These lectures are given in an interesting style, and hold the attention of the reader throughout. A splendid book to put in the hand of the truth-seeker. Order No. 235, cloth, 50c.

Joseph Smith; Who Was He?

So many books have been written unfairly concerning the Seer of Palmyra that it is only justice that a book should be written explaining fully his mission and placing him before the world in a proper light. This book does this work. Order No. 238, cloth, 50c.

Joseph Smith Defended.

A companion book for the above. This book fearlessly takes up the many so-called evidences against the Seer and riddles them with clear statement of facts. Both this book and the preceding one are well worthy a place in your library. No. 241, cloth, 50c.

With the Church in an Early Day.

is an absorbing story of the lives of a few who were connected with the church at its commencement. The unanimous verdict of those who have read this work and who know, is that it portrays truthfully the condition incident to those who sacrificed all, and united their fortunes with the angel's message. This book will make its readers better for having read it. Order No. 243, cloth, 75c.

Memoirs of W. W. Blair.

This book will increase your faith in the promises of God. It portrays vividly the stirring events incident to the Reorganization. No. 249, cloth, 50c.

THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH ON HEALING.

That the onswEEP of the movement in regard to the principle of healing by faith which has been and is being manifested among religious circles is destined to meet strong opposition, and to win its way slowly, is discoverable by the following clipping, taken from the Kansas City Journal, for October 12:

CINCINNATI, OHIO, October 11.—Giving the sanction of the church to the healing of the sick by prayer was proposed to the Episcopal convention in a report of a committee of which the Right Rev. William Crane Gray, bishop of southern Florida, is chairman. It was argued in the ensuing discussion that a belief in the supernatural power of healing is widespread in the church.

"A jewel which the church cast away and a woman picked up," was the way in which one speaker referred to Christian Science.

The report of the committee made the following recommendations:

"In view of the widespread desire and earnest longing for some recognition of the possibility of healing the sick through the power of prayer with symbolic anointing, manifested by bishop, presbyters and laymen of the church, and in view of the general seeking after divine healings by faith-cure people, Christian Scientists, followers of spiritual healing and others, it seems eminently fitting that a suitable, proper and wisely prepared office for the unction of the sick should be put forth by the church on true lines:

"First—Looking to and praying for a restoration to health, not in anticipation for death.

"Second—Avoiding the comparatively recent diversion toward the idea that the scriptural unction of the sick is a true 'sacrament' in our Anglican use of that word."

"Your committee, therefore, would recommend that a commission of two bishops, two presbyters and two laymen be appointed to prepare and report an office for the unction of the sick, on the lines of the scriptural and Catholic usage, avoiding any appearance of a sacramental rite immediately preceding death."

A resolution giving the sanction of the church to the healing of the sick by prayer was adopted in one section of the house of deputies of the Protestant Episcopal convention in session here to-day, but was defeated in another section of the house by the narrow margin of five votes, voting being by dioceses.

That a majority of the house of deputies were in favor of the report was shown clearly when the clerical branch adopted it by a vote of 41 yeas to 17 nays, with nine dioceses not voting or divided. The laymen of the house, however, killed the report by a vote of 27 yeas to 32 nays, four dioceses not voting.

It required a majority in both orders of the house to carry the report, and while the matter will come up before the house of bishops at some future date, it is regarded as improbable that the upper house will take any action on it.

While the large vote polled for the resolution came as a surprise the belief prevailed to-night that the subject is dead so far as this convention is concerned.

The Reverend Bishop Gray, of the southern district of Florida, is with the movement and will eventually see that the only possible true solution of the difficulty is to adopt the declaration of the Savior to his disciples, as found in the sixteenth of Mark. It is a trite saying, that man proposes and God disposes, and this is true of this great movement. The one who said that this healing principle was a gem thrown aside by them and picked up by a man, referring to the Christian Science movement led by Mrs. Eddy, was only half right in this. The gem may have been thrown aside by the churches, but the gem was not picked up by the woman, as she has made no pretense to an action and direct application of the scriptural ment in its reality, but has so spiritualized the ings of the Savior as to rob them in this part of their beauty and force of their character as the teachings of the divine Healer.

It is astonishing to us everyday thinkers, who believe that God sent his Son into the world to heal his people both in spiritual and a literal physical sense, the idea of introducing something else as an equivalent for the Master's direct teaching. It would appear silly if it were not too pathetic. The committee which reported and preceded their resolution with such striking arrays and the naming of anointing of the sick by introducing "unction" as apparently held by the Catholic Church, seems to show a fear of using direct terms in treating of the subject. It is well enough for the Episcopal Church to avoid a too close analogy to its predecessor, the Catholic Church, in adopting rites and ceremonies; but how they can account in a reasonable way for their failure to recognize the anointing of oil and laying on of hands for the sick is a curiosity indeed. The ministration of the Spirit of the Master when the rite of laying on of hands was administered by himself and by his immediate disciples was as real to the receiver of the benefit, which was designed to follow the administration, as was the same Spirit given in acceptance and obedience of the believer when the rite of baptism by water was administered. What other reasonable conclusion a plain reader of the word could obtain is one of the mysteries which has followed the departure from the truth for a long, long time.

It is curious that when the committee were seeking for a true way by which to make use of the sacred rite, they did not quote directly from the Scriptures, "They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover," coupling it with the injunction of James, "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord," and thus give the Master's words a literal application, to aid them in their search.

The saying, "Great is the mystery of Babylon," is exemplified in the episode, that there was not one brother in this convention of clerical and lay deputies, or officers of the Episcopal Church, assembled at Cincinnati, Ohio, who should have been willing not only to introduce such a resolution, but to vote for it, and is a potent sign that the end of the spirit of inquiry poured out upon the people has not yet been reached. One by one have the principles of the doctrine of Christ been forcing themselves into the attention of the ecclesiastics of the present period, though a resolution introduced at this convention to change the name of the Episcopal Church to that of the Holy Catholic Church, seemed to show a willingness on the part of some to strike hands in unity with the Roman Catholic Church. It is not strange, for it is indicative of a backward movement, and that when it finally culminates it will not stop at the adoption of name only but must result in the acceptance of the distinctive articles of faith and doctrine which marked the primitive church and which have been left on record for us. It is well enough for men to have a decent respect for that which age has made reverent and holy, but the healthier minds of these latter days are wont to lift the mist and hanging moss by which they are made holy, to look beyond, to see what is natural, what has been concealed, nor are they content or dismayed by the uplifting of hands in horror and cry of deception or blasphemy, but are willing to take those that are of real worth and stand or fall by that which has been established as truth by the word of God.

Let us hope then, that sooner or later the Board of Bishops will take up the healing principle and be led by a wiser counsel to a reasonable and effective conclusion.

ITEMS FROM THE PAST.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

The HERALD for October 24, 1885, appeared in mourning, having all rules turned, in memory of, and announcing the death of Bro. Josiah Ells, at Wheeling, West Virginia, on the 15th of the same month.

"Pres. J. Smith, writing from Malad, Idaho, September 29, says they had full and interesting congregations there."

"Bro. M. R. Scott, of Galena, Indiana, writes that the Methodists of that place have excluded him from Christian courtesies, though with some others he finds favor, and at Edwardsville, was invited to address an assembly of near one thousand at a Union Sunday school celebration. He wishes to obtain a good work against atheism."

Contributors to this number of the HERALD were J. S. Patterson, J. F. Burton, J. J. Cornish, J. R. Badham, E. W. Lloyd, J. T. Davis, Oliver Hansen, and Mary S. Gill.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

"The unfit die; the fit both live and thrive.
Alas, who say so? They who do survive.

"So, when her bonfires lighted hill and plain,
Did Bloody Mary think of Lady Jane.

"So Russia thinks of Finland, while her heel Falls heavier on the prostrate Commonweal.

"So Booth of Lincoln thought; and so the High Priests let Barabbas live, and Jesus die."

Bro. Hubert Case writes from Weatherford, Oklahoma, under date of October 20, as follows: "While preaching at Weatherford, Brother Curtis and the writer visited the Indian Fair. Forty-seven hundred red men were in attendance, most of whom were Cheyennes and Arapahoes. There were a few of other tribes. We distributed tracts among them, and talked with some who are much interested in the Book of Mormon. The lecture which I delivered to the educated Indians at Kingfisher in June is talked of far and near. We met one from Darlington, who has the Book of Mormon, and has read it for four years. She says it is true, and corresponds with many of their traditions. The leaven is beginning to work and we feel that God's former love is about to return to his ancient covenant people. There are about thirty-one tribes in Oklahoma, consisting of one hundred thousand Indians. We feel we need a special endowment of power to fit us to cope with the powers of evil and darkness in gathering out the Israel of God. The Saints need to live nearer to the great gospel standard, in humility and in unity. Brother Curtis baptized two fine people last Sunday, Sisters Goad and Richards, and more are to follow soon, I believe. Bro. W. R. Smith baptized three near Anadorko last Sunday, and reports a good interest. May the Lord ever bless all the household of faith."

The local newspaper of Blenheim, Ontario, gave a column and a half to a very fair report of the recent conference of the Chatham District held at that place. The conference was presided over by the missionary in charge, Elder F. A. Smith, and one of our correspondents writes from that place, stating that the people there have greatly appreciated his labors. A more recent personal letter from Bro. Fred A. speaks highly of the Canadian people and the general outlook for the work there.

Elder J. E. Vanderwood writes from Phoenix, Arizona, under date of October 15, concerning a recent baptism as follows:

"I herewith send you items of a baptism performed by me yesterday. Floro Flordelis, born August 24, 1888, at Cebu, Philippine Islands, was baptized October 14, 1910, at Phoenix, Maricopa County, Arizona, by J. E. Vanderwood, confirmed same day by same person. He is in this country to be educated, and came here a few weeks ago for his health, and, as he said to me yesterday, it proved to be for his spiritual health, which was the greatest blessing. He heard my first sermon on the street here and has missed but one night since. He said the message came to him in power and filled his heart. He is being educated for the governmental service. His father was a general in the Spanish-Philippine war, and was killed by the Spaniards. He was raised a Catholic, but after coming to this country joined the Presbyterians. He says, 'I did not feel any different when I joined them than I did while I was a Catholic, but I feel so much better now, since I am baptized.'"

Next week we will begin the publication of an article, entitled, "Polygamy from the viewpoint of a non-Mormon." This article was written by Mr. C. L. Crow, of Logan, Iowa, in answer to the tract bearing the same name, recently issued by the Northern States Mission of the Utah church. It is a spicy article, and will be read with interest. Later it will be issued in tract form.

In order to systematize their office work, the Herald Publishing House requests all agents to send in a monthly report, giving invoice of books, etc., on hand, and remit with cash statement any cash on hand. All Herald Office agents please take notice of this. We will furnish all agents with blanks for reporting.

In the last paragraph of the editorial in the HERALD of October 12, the clause, "Even quite under the condemnation of the ancient prophet," should read, "Even if not quite under the condemnation of the ancient prophet."

We have received a copy of the Walkerville, Michigan, News, in which we find the following item:

"THE MORMON HAS GONE."

"Such is the remark we have heard the past week. In addition to that one of our earnest church workers was heard to remark 'that is more Bible doctrine than I ever heard before.'

"Elder B. S. Lambkin closed his services Sunday evening, as he was called to Traverse City, where their conference is on. It was on this evening the subject of polygamy and plurality of wives was brought up, disproving such and taking scripture as proof. Very clearly he explained that the 're-organized' faction was not the sect which sanctions such. Upon closing he remarked that many thought otherwise and spoke in part as follows:

"There are individuals who will always believe we do. The person who will ever turn a deaf ear; who will not investigate and through ignorance, or who have investigated, maliciously lies."

"Much interest was shown, throughout the week, and he was asked to come again. This he would not promise, but he would do what he could to influence a more able speaker, and if successful same will be made public prior to arrival."

Elder J. Charles May writes from Papeete under date of September 25, saying that things are moving nicely in that field. Brother Savage and his bride are on the island of Tubuai, some three hundred miles from Tahiti. He expresses a hope that Bro. Charles Lake may recover so that he can return to the islands, as he was a very zealous and faithful laborer and is missed.

We again call attention to our column, "News from Missions." Since writing last week's item the following brethren have responded to our personal request for contributions for this department: Brn. Columbus Scott and J. E. Wildermuth.

Elders' Note-Book

THE LEAKAGE.

The natural tendency of mankind is self preservation. To eat, drink, and have something to wear is the born instinct in man. To hinder his exercise of any portion of this tendency would crush out his idea of existence; and while every ability of man may be used to an extreme, and to the exclusion of others, it is the balancing process of faculty that makes him harmonious with fixed laws.

To sustain himself is man's highest ideal, and if there is no hindrance to this, his generosity increases, but the first attempt to hinder his progress lessens his generosity and finally culminates in selfishness, a condition he rarely, if ever, emerges from. Understanding the conditions, the Lord tells us in section 127, paragraph 7, of the Doctrine and Covenants: "The spirit of speculation, the exhibition of greed for gain is unseemly in the Saints and officers of the church, and should be avoided. It has the appearance of evil."

The "spirit of speculation" is no doubt used in a commercial sense, and implies the purchasing of goods, chattels, or land, with a view to advancing the price, which would make more money for the purchaser. This act within itself does not represent labor in any form, either with hands or brains; it only represents the power of money.

The "exhibition of greed for gain," coupled with the "spirit of speculation" are two things that make men selfish. For example, we will say: I have $50,000, and live somewhere in the Kewanee District, and being acquainted with the larger portion of the Saints there, and hearing them discuss the matter of gathering in the regions round about Zion, we will say Knobnoster, Missouri, and feeling quite sure that several families will go there next spring, I go to that place and spend my money in all the available property there is there, and then advance the price fifty per cent. I have simply hindered those people fifty per cent from coming up to the land of Zion.

"But," says one, "brother, they don't have to move there, they can go to some other place." But suppose that ninety-nine and three fourths per cent of the other places are fixed the same way; then where? There is speculation; there is greed.

Now go back and talk with the man who is outside of Zion's stakes. Says he: "I can't see any more generosity (not greed) in one place than in another, and I think I'd just as leave stay here as there." He quietly settles down to his selfish way of doing business, and the more he deals with that kind of a world the more selfish he becomes, until his tithes and offerings come like squeezing honey out of a basswood stump. Why is it so? Because some one tried to hinder him by an advance of fifty per cent and his generosity became a blank: Who suffers for it? The man spiritually, the church financially. This is one place where there is a leakage.

I am accosted on almost every hand with the question, "Do you think it right to insure one's life and property?" And invariably I feel as though I wish they had not asked me. It costs money to insure one's life and property, and that money must go to some concern outside the church. The church has another leakage there. Now just here we are met with what at first seems just the thing. "Why, brother, have you no faith in God?" "Yes, plenty of faith in God, but not so much in man: because, you see, I am the fellow they advanced the price of land fifty per cent to. You don't blame me, do you?"

"Well," says one, "if you pay your tithing and offerings, the church will take care of your needs." Now, let me say this: There is no man who wants to sit down and be fed for nothing when he has come to want, excepting a tramp. There is no man or woman who can take his ease, feeling he is totally dependent on those around him. You who have plenty now; think how you would feel reduced to circumstances where some one else had the right to say the kind of a hat you should wear for the next two or three years, or just what room in a certain house they had picked out for you, that you should live in. You don't aim to be there, do you? Neither does the man or woman who insures his life and property.

Of course we can say in theory, the church will take care of every want, insomuch as the wants are just; but at the same time we know if a brother's barn burns down the church can't make that, as well as many other losses of a like character, good. I believe the church should establish some sort of insurance in the church among its members, not for speculation, but for the benefit of all its members. Every member should pay his tithing; that is true, and it is right. But to get them to feel free to do so, is the thing. To tell one it is right, does not mean anything to him, but to create the feeling within him that he will be benefited when the time comes, not only spiritually, but by something that he may use materially while here on earth, does mean something.

So long as the money power of any organization asks its members who have less than they to pay the "speculation advance" that organization will not prosper financially. The money power may prosper, but the organization never will.

Christ's church was not established with a money power. The only object in gathering goods in this world by the members of his church should be to assist the less fortunate, whose ability has been small and whose burdens have been heavy, to make life less a burden. This does not mean that if I should have the milk, that I am to drink the cream and feed the skim milk to my brother. If I do that I go just a little beyond greed, and become gluttonous. Jesus said one of the things that choked out the growth of the good seed was the cares of life. Lessen the cares of life and allow the seed of truth to grow.

There are many who in theory are just waiting to do something for the church, but consider it is not time, until everybody else has done as he thinks they should. He just can't make himself believe that the other brother will do his duty. He loves him in prayer meeting, but can't have any confidence in him outside.

If we are laborers together, why separate our efforts? Speculation and greed are unseemly. Let us avoid both, keep the law, lessen the burden of life of others, restore confidence and stop the leakage.

O. H. BAILEY.

WAS ONE OF GOD'S ELECT DECEIVED?

In one of the late issues of the island mission paper of the Brighamite Church in the Southern Pacific Ocean, was printed an article headed with the statement of Paul in which he said to the Romans, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect,"—Romans 8: 33; after which the writer endeavored to establish their claims in regard to Brigham Young, stating that he was one of God's elect, having been chosen of God to be president of the twelve apostles in the year 1841, and that anyone who charged Brigham Young with having deceived the people would stand condemned before God. However, it will be remembered that Christ himself charged Peter, who is supposed to have been the president of the twelve in his time, and also that Judas, one of the twelve, apostatized, as did Brigham Young and others in the latter days. Thomas B. Marsh, who was also president of the twelve in the early church, apostatized.

Let us give this question a candid consideration. Does this statement of Paul to the Romans, shield Judas Iscariot, Thomas B. Marsh, Brigham Young, and others who were formerly chosen of God, afterwards deserting the faith? It certainly does not, but it is hardly probable that a person who is an elect of God and who abides continually in the doctrine will be deceived, and undoubtedly this statement will apply to them.

Is it possible for us to point out any one person chosen of God, and called by him an elect person, of whom it can be proved remained in favor with God from the balmy days of youth until death found her head adorned with gray hairs? Unhesitatingly, we answer, yes.

We read in the Doctrine and Covenants 24: 1, that

Emma Smith was called by the Lord, "my daughter." "And a revelation I give unto you concerning my will, and if thou art faithful and walk in the paths of virtue before me, I will preserve thy life, and thou shalt receive an inheritance in Zion. Behold, thy sins are forgiven thee and thou art an elect lady, whom I have called."

In this verse, Emma Smith, the wife of the martyred prophet is called a daughter of God, and an "elect lady," and it is said that if she would walk continually in the paths of virtue before the Lord her life would be preserved and she would receive an inheritance in Zion.

We are assured, therefore, by the nature of this promise that it can be easily ascertained as to whether Emma remained an elect lady in the sight of God through the things that came to pass in her lifetime after said promise was given.

This promise was given to her in the State of New York, but she with the family moved westward, afterwards locating in Nauvoo, which was called by the Lord, "the corner stone of Zion." She was there given an inheritance upon which she lived until she died. Her life having been preserved, she reached the seventy-fifth milestone of life's journey. This is conclusive evidence to the unprejudiced reasoner that she remained under the election of God until death overtook her.

There are other evidences of her having remained an elect lady in the sight of God. It was promised that the Inspired Translation would be given and preserved in safety (Doctrine and Covenants 42: 15). It was given and was preserved in safety, that is, through the hand of Emma, which was a place of safety in the mind of the Lord, according to the revelation, for twenty-three years after the death of Joseph the Martyr, when it was turned over to the Reorganization for publication, and from that time forward, Emma and the Reorganized Church have received it as the word of God. We are told that it was given for the salvation of God's "elect," (Doctrine and Covenants 35: 4,) therefore, the elect must be found among those who receive it, and those who reject it can not be truly considered the elect. How about Brigham Young, who is said to have called Orson Pratt to task for accepting the same and preaching from it; also his followers who now reject it? Another thought in regard to Emma Smith: We are told in Doctrine and Covenants 64: 7, that the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these the last days, and that the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and not inherit the land, also that they shall know those who are not apostles and prophets.

Did Emma not eat the good of the land of Zion from the day this revelation was given until her death? When Strang went north, Rigdon, east, Wight, south, and Brigham Young, west, and their followers, as it were, scattered to the four winds, having been cut off and sent away out of the land of Zion, because of rebelliousness, did Emma follow them? Did she not know those who were not prophets, as the above verse states?

Christ also said that false christs and prophets should arise and if possible shall deceive the very elect. There seems to have been some doubt in the mind of the speaker as to whether the elect could be deceived, also informing them that if they should say he is in the desert they should not go there. While we know that this has a very broad meaning, meaning undoubtedly, here or there, yet we know that Emma was told that a prophet was in the desert, and it is also a fact that she did not go. We are also informed by the Deseret News of January 5, 1883, that the elect are almost in danger of being led astray, by the false prophets of the last days.

We are also informed by Jedediah M. Grant in Journal of Discourses, volume 2, page 15, "Let Lucifer mix in truths with error and work great signs and wonders to deceive the very elect, but it is not possible." He evidently lost sight of this in Emma's case.

Orson Pratt said in his works, under the subject, "More revelation is indispensably necessary," article 24, "The elect can not be deceived; for they have the infallible detector of all delusions, however cunningly devised; they have a test by which they can try all things, prove all things and overcome all things not 'ordained' of God.

"Could Emma the 'elect' have been deceived? Did she not have the infallible detector of all delusions, though they were cunningly devised? Did she not as one of God's elect have the test that proved all things, judged all things, and overcame all things not 'ordained' of God? Was she deceived by the one who went to the desert lands of Utah, whose followers stated that he was the true prophet and that they saw the mantle of Joseph fall upon him, yet he afterwards confessed that he was not a prophet like unto the martyr?"—Millennial Star, volume 16, page 442. According to Brigham Young they must have been deceived in the "mantle," and in his succeeding Joseph as well. Brigham Young admitted that he was not ordained and that he was elected by the Twelve and was the choice of the people, therefore Paul's question has no place in the consideration of Brigham Young, for the reason that it does not read, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of the twelve's elect and the people's choice."

Thus as Orson Pratt said, so was Emma's experience, she "overcame all things not ordained of God, insomuch that he was but the choice of the people, neither being ordained of God nor by men to the presidency, an assumed position only.

Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? Yet Emma is charged with having sanctioned her husband in the receiving of many wives, when she testified to the fact that her husband had no other wives to her knowledge than herself. Who is it that also charges her with having been deceived by her seed, whom the Lord said would become a blessing unto the kindreds of the earth?

Were they to become a blessing unto the kindreds of the earth by deceiving God's elect? May these few thoughts comfort the hearts of those agreeable to the defending of injured innocence and afford enlightenment to the minds of all in search of truth.

LOVE OF GOD AND MAN.

From Matthew 22: 35-40 we learn that the greatest commandment in the gospel is to love God with all our heart, mind, and strength; and the second commandment is like unto it—love your neighbor as yourself.

What is it to love God? John declares, "If you love me, keep my commandments." So it means much to love God and to worship him without any reservation. These idols on the shelf behind the door have all got to be cleaned out. The shelf must come also.

Men may break forth in streams of eloquent oratory about their love toward God, but if we have not love for our fellow-man how can we have love toward God? John the Beloved has said: "If a man hateth his brother whom he has seen, how can he love God whom he has not seen." Again the Apostle James says: "If a man has the abundance of this world's good and seeth that his brother has need and shuts up his bowels of compassion against him, how dwelleth the love of God in that man."

God has made of one blood all nations of men. Like Abraham said to his nephew, Lot: "Let there be no strife between my herdsmen and your herdsmen, because we are brethren." This "almighty dollar" oftentimes alienates man from the love of God and his brethren. James has said: "The love of money is the root of all evil." Men have always been willing to risk their lives for money. But oftentimes we find they are not willing to spend a little time and labor to bring the true riches to the hearts of the children of men. "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul." A man may have all of this world, and if he be destitute of the love of God he would be naked, wretched, poor, and miserable. Friends, let us be sure that we buy the true riches. Lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven, where moth and rust doth not corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal.

In Matthew 19: 16-26 we have an account of the young man that came to Jesus and inquired: "What good thing must I do that I may have eternal life?" This young man had some way obtained one good idea, that it was necessary for him to do some good thing. But when he found out what it was he was not prepared to do it. I believe it is like Robert Collyer has stated, "that God hides some ideal in every human soul. At some time in our life there comes a fearful, trembling longing to do some good thing. Life finds its noblest spring of excellence to do our best."

Jesus said to this young man, that he should go and sell all he had, and take up his cross and follow him. Jesus, by the Spirit of inspiration, could see the principle of selfishness in this young man's heart, and he knew this was the only way for him to get rid of it. This was his idol. No man can be saved with the principle of selfishness in his heart. It must come out. This young man turned away in great sorrow, because he had great possessions. He was not willing to serve God with all his heart. He had not made a complete consecration.

What temporalities we hold in this world should be considered only a trust. Riches are all right in this world, if we use them for the right purpose—the honor and glory of God. "The love of money is the root of all evil." A young doctor was practicing medicine in one of our large cities. At one time he was visited by his father from the country. "Well, how are you getting along, son?"

"Not getting along at all. Nothing doing."

Next day the father went with the son to one of the free dispensaries, where the son went daily to practice for one hour—an unsalaried position. During the hour perhaps twenty-five people were benefited by the prescriptions, and consultations with the doctor. The father was a silent but interested spectator. When the door had been closed on the last one, he spoke to the son and said, "I thought you told me you were not doing anything. If I had benefited as many people in the last month as you have in one hour, I would thank God that my life counted for something."

"Oh," says the son, "there is no money in this." "Money; money! What is money! in comparison to being of benefit to your fellow-beings?" That is the thought.

The keynote of religion is helping some one who needs help, like the good Samaritan. The priest was too good to think about helping this distressed pilgrim, and edged away out around him. The Levite did the same. But the good Samaritan went to him and ministered to his wants. Poured oil in his wounds. Took him to the inn and saw that his needs were supplied. Which of these three manifested the part of a neighbor?

When a man is converted he needs to be converted all over, even down to his pocketbook. Peter said to the Savior, when the dark clouds of despair came to the disciples: "We have left all to follow thee." "Oh," says one: "All Peter had to leave was the fish net and his boat." If this was his means of obtaining a livelihood, and he left this vocation to preach the gospel, then he made just as great a consecration as though he had endowed the church with millions; so far as individual reward is concerned.

A man may give much to the poor and the needy, and still not have the love of God. As Paul has said: "Though I give my body to be burned, and give all my goods to the poor, and have not charity [love] it profiteth me nothing." Then we become as the sounding brass and the tinkling cymbals. Charity and almsgiving is all right in its place; but the best way to help a poor man that is able to work, is to place him in a condition where he can help himself. This is one of the conditions we are striving to develop among the Saints.

In the church on the day of Pentecost a similar condition existed. The record says they had all things common. Of course they had their individual homes. For the book declares they met from house to house and broke bread. Neither did any man say the things which he possessed were his own. You see they had their individual belongings, but they did not worship them. They considered they could be used for the good of God's work.

Now Christ sanctioned the law of tithing in Matthew 23: 23: "Ye pay tithe of mint . . . and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, . . . these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." Genesis 14: 18-20 teaches that Abraham paid tithes to Melchisedec. The Inspired Translation reads that it was over and above that which he did not need. His tithing here must have been a surplus.

In Genesis 28: 10-22 we have an account where Jacob vowed to commence paying his tithing. He laid that night with his head upon a stone, blanketed with the heavens, yet his slumbers were refreshing and his dreams sweet. He saw a ladder reaching unto heaven and the angels of God descending and ascending; and Jacob came to his senses and said: "Surely God is in this place." And here is where he made a special covenant with God, and told the Lord if he would preserve his life, and permit him to return to his father's house, giving him bread to eat and raiment to put on, I will give you a tenth of all that thou shalt give me. So, according to this, every man is supposed to live, and if he makes an increase one tenth of it belongs to the Lord. This is a very small interest. Of course God wants his people to do this willingly and with a free mind and heart. Then, if a person has paid all his tithing and is really anxious to do something for the Lord's work, perhaps he can make a free will offering.

Our Holiness friends oftentimes refer to this experience of Jacob's as where he received the second blessing, or the second work of grace, and I am convinced that this is a good place for the second blessing to commence. This harmonizes with what Malachi teaches, that if the law of tithing and free will offerings is observed, the Lord has promised to pour us out a blessing that we are not able to contain. May the Lord help all his Saints to observe this law until Zion may be redeemed and the gospel preached to all the nations.

Yours in gospel bonds,

A. M. BAKER.

LEAVES FROM LIFE.

A BRIEF SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF SISTER ELSIE FYRANDO, OF MAGNOLIA, IOWA.

Believing that every good example which is set furnishes a useful lesson to those who have seen or read of that example, and especially when that example has extended through a long life, and has been made a blessing to those with whom the exemplar has been surrounded in life, I conclude that a brief record of the same may be made a blessing to the present and coming generations. Hence I have felt it my duty to write the following short sketch of the life of our beloved and aged sister, Elsie Fyrando, the widow of the late Elder Magnus Fyrando and mother of our beloved Bro. Alma Magnus Fyrando and Sr. Josephine Chambers, of Magnolia. It was my sad duty to deliver the memorial sermon over the remains of our aged sister, named above.

Born in Sweden, she there first heard and received the everlasting gospel, unmixed with the errors of polygamy, and other false doctrines. The pure angel message was received by her, as by one hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and her soul was satisfied. Her husband received it at the same time, and for many years was a very earnest and successful minister of the gospel. Together they made sacrifices and endured much for the cause of Christ. They heard of a so-called "Zion," where the pure in heart were supposed to dwell, and they left their native land, braved the dangers of the deep and of the desert and mountains, only to find to their deep regret that the pure stream had been corrupted; the water of life no longer flowed in its heavenly, crystalline purity! Their hearts sickened as the horrible consciousness burned itself into their souls. They would feign have turned away and fled from the loathsome conditions, but their means were exhausted, and there were over a thousand miles of mountains and desert between them and any place where they might expect to find true civilization; hence they must remain until a kind providence should aid them to accomplish the desire of their hearts.

The lamp of eternal truth never ceased to burn in the heart of our beloved sister, but with a Job-like patience she endured the terrible disappointment, still trusting in God, that he would deliver them in his own due time. That time came, and they wended their way to the East. On arriving in Omaha, Nebraska, they heard the glad news of the Church of Christ reorganized, the sound of the gospel trump as first proclaimed in the angel's message. They knew its sound and felt its power and, anxious to taste its sweetness and partake of its blessedness once more, they determined to be buried with Christ in baptism, that whatever of uncleanness which might have attached to them in that quagmire of iniquity might be washed away, through their faith in Christ, and they be delivered from the bondage of a false system. Hence our sister determined not to await the morning's dawn, but then, beneath the rays of the beautiful moon, to renew her covenant with God. She did so under the hands of one of God's consecrated servants, Joseph Gilbert.

They now employed their energies with the self-same spirit of sacrifice and devotion with which they had embraced the truth in their earlier days. She yielded up her only earthly stay and staff, that he might go forth to proclaim the glad message committed to the Reorganization, to the people of her native land; and again, also, to those of the salt land who had lost their hold of the rod of iron, that he might call them back from their wanderings to the way which leads to the tree of life.

In yielding up her husband to this God-given task she was compelled to look stern, gaunt poverty in the face and provide for herself and children by her own feeble exertions. The church was poor and its treasury low, and scarcely any help could be expected from that quarter, yet no murmur escaped her lips, no gloom shadowed that brow. A smile of sweetness and content always greeted her visitors; she labored as best she could and trusted in God.

Upon one occasion the wife of the writer visited her while her husband was on a mission in their native land, and the writer was on a mission in the salt land. Both these sisters then lived in Magnolia, Iowa. Everything was neat and clean in our sister's home, and to a close observer there was no evidence of poverty. But it did not take long for my wife to discover that her friend was destitute, yet no complaint had been uttered, no desire to murmur was manifest; she remembered the greatest missionary of all had once said, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." But her hungry babes caused her to disclose the true condition. My wife, whose heart was tender as that of an angel, soon found the way to apprise the Bishop, Israel L. Rogers, of the destitution of her friend, and as quickly as the mail could carry it, relief was obtained, for the Bishop had a large and generous heart.

Mr. Editor, I read a fine article from your pen on the subject of heroes, but I want to say that the true heroic spirit is not confined to the sterner sex, nor are the men who obey the call to preach the gospel to the nations, without purse and without scrip, the ones who make the greatest sacrifice. I know something of the world's hatred of the truth, its bitter opposition, its cold, unfeeling heart, and its stern, repelling influence; but harder is the lot of the wife and mother, left behind, with a family to care and provide for, both physically and mentally, in sickness and in health, with but little means at her command, hence dependent upon the church treasury, which is by no means full—her motherly heart full of care for the spiritual as well as temporal welfare of her children, and the world with its subtle influences in ten thousand ways seeking to influence those little minds in its own corrupt and devious ways. Added to this is the bitter envy of some who profess to be Saints, who if they see a new dress upon the mother or her children, or a new carpet on the floor of their humble cot, or her children more neatly dressed than theirs, let loose that member of which James speaks as being "set on fire of hell" and every word burns like fire and cuts like a sword. I say, to bear all these evils would test the courage and endurance of the most devoted and heroic missionary that ever obeyed the divine call. Yet the tender and delicate woman whom he loves to call and honor as his wife, and the mother of his children, is often compelled to drink the bitter cup to the dregs!

Our departed sister endured all these evils and murmured not. But God loved her and sent his angel to strengthen and comfort her in life's darkest hours. I remember visiting her in Blair, Nebraska, as I was passing on my ministerial rounds. She had two children, a girl and a boy. The boy was about four years old. Her heart's desire for her children was that they might grow up in usefulness to the cause of Christ, and, telling me of the birth of her boy, she said that she desired that he should be made an instrument in the hands of God in the building up of the kingdom of God, and to this end she dedicated him to the Lord at the time of his birth. All who know Alma M. Fyrando have evidence that God accepted the offering of that faithful mother. She not only dedicated him thus, but she taught him to walk in the path of righteousness, as she did her little daughter, and continually prayed for their guidance, by the Holy Spirit, and watered her efforts with her tears. Oh, that every mother and father would do likewise!

The husband and father was in due time called to his rest. The little boy grew. Disease fastened upon him and weakened his frame, but his mental powers were strong, and as he grew he applied himself to the cultivation of his mind in order that he might be useful to himself and those around him; and as God has blessed his parents with better conditions, the boy, as he grew, realized that it was his duty to seek to repay his widowed mother for her loving care of him and his sister. God prospered his efforts, increased his substance, and thus he was enabled to bless and comfort his mother in her declining years, and, unlike many others, he waived the tenderness of connubial joys while his sainted mother lived. He watched over her in her long and painful illness, and although racked with severe pains in his own body, he nerved himself for the loving duty of caring for her, and his hand performed the last sad duties to her lifeless frame, and this at her earnest request ere her spirit had departed.

A true and noble spirit has gone to rest, awaiting the great reward promised of God to the pure and true. May her blessed example of unyielding faith, enduring patience, firm integrity, constant devotion, and godlike love inspire our hearts and impel us on to the same holy, enlightened zeal, that our lives may be made a blessing to all around, that though, like her, our names may not be known beyond the narrow circle in which we move here, yet, like hers, they may be for ever recorded in the Lamb's Book of Life, among the redeemed of all ages, is the prayer of your humble brother.

CHARLES DERRY.

A good story is told of a great man in India, who was so careful in the education and training of his son that he engaged an old servant to be constantly in the presence of the boy for this purpose—that whenever he was keenly enjoying some pleasure, the old man might say, "The day hath but twelve hours," and whenever the lad was sick or in trouble, he might repeat the comforting message, "The night is but twelve hours long." A strange and yet admirable idea. The first message would rouse the youth to make the most of time and opportunity, the second would console and cheer him and show him that the night of suffering would soon end. Would not that first motto be a good one to hang up before our desks? The day hath but twelve hours. Then why waste any of them? Twelve hours will be enough to accomplish all that needs to be done, if they are well used and carefully planned.—The Canadian Epworth Era.

FLETCHER'S RULES.

John Fletcher was a man of deep piety. He drew up for his own guidance the following rules for daily self-examination. They help me. I pass them along to others.

1. Did I awake spiritual, and was I watchful in keeping my mind from wandering this morning?
2. Have I this day got nearer to God in prayer, or have I given way to a lazy, idle spirit?
3. Has my faith been weakened by unwatchfulness, or quickened by diligence?
4. Have I walked by faith and seen God in all things?
5. Have I denied myself in all unkind words and thoughts? Have I been delighted in seeing others preferred?
6. Have I made the most of my time as far as I had light, strength, and opportunity?
7. Have I kept the issues of my heart in the means of grace, so as to profit by them?
8. What have I done this day for the souls and bodies of God's dear saints?
9. Have I laid out anything to please myself when I might have saved the money for the cause of God?
10. Have I governed well my tongue this day, remembering that in a multitude of words there wanteth not sin?
11. In how many instances have I denied myself to-day?
12. Do my life and conversation adorn the gospel of Jesus Christ?—Selected by Ida W. McNeal.

POLYGAMY.

It is twenty years since the Mormon church repudiated the doctrine of plural marriages which resulted, shortly after, in the admission of Utah as a State in the Union. If the doctrine of Brigham Young had not been repudiated, there would be no State of Utah to-day; there would be no members of the United States Senate from such a State.

Since the Republican organization contrived to turn the Democratic majority of that State into its partisan support, there has been a recurrence to earlier practices. The polygamous character of the domestic relations of a member of the United States Senate has been called in question, and the whitewash brush has been applied with sufficient formal effect.

So far, indeed, has the license of Republican control been allowed that, at the recent conference of the Mormon church at Salt Lake City, it has been necessary to declare that plural marriages since the manifesto of 1890 are contrary to the rule of the church.

There have been one or two "ex-communications" of members—one was a "bishop" and another was a "patriarch." But the conclusion is evident; namely, that the pretended suppression of a practice inimical to the social conditions of people in the United States is a farce continued for partisan political purposes.—Selected.

POLYGAMY AMONG MORMONS.

President Smith of the Mormon church has just notified the Latter Day Saints that polygamy must cease as contrary to the rules of the organization. Shortly after this pronouncement two members in high standing, one a polygamous bishop, the other a patriarch who had officiated at a polygamous marriage, were excommunicated. What will surprise most persons in the East is not so much the attitude of President Smith as the necessity for such an attitude. Twenty years ago, after the very drastic legislation against the Mormon church and when Utah was hoping for early admission to the Union as a State, President Woodruff issued a proclamation to the Saints forbidding polygamous marriages. Six years earlier the Supreme Court had held the Edmunds Law against polygamy constitutional, and about one thousand Mormons were punished for violation of the law, while many of the guilty, but unconvicted, went into hiding. The law of 1862 against polygamy had been openly defied for more than twenty years, and when the Edmunds Law was enacted polygamy not only was flourishing in Utah, but was spreading into neighboring Territories. Utah came into the Union eight years after President Woodruff issued his proclamation, and immediately controversy arose over Representative Roberts, who was accused of polygamy. As a matter of fact, the Woodruff proclamation resulted from a sort of compromise agreement between the Federal administration and the Mormon leaders, in which assurances were given that no new polygamous marriages should take place. The bargain was not kept, however, upon the part of the Mormons, and Mormon society continued to be honeycombed with polygamy. In the early nineties some of the most conspicuous men in the public affairs of Utah were known polygamists, and even the educational institutions of the Saints were tainted with the evil. Now at length, more than ten years after the admission of Utah to the Union, we have the official admission of the church that the practice continues. The hopeful fact, however, is that President Smith's proclamation, accompanied as it was with the reported acts of excommunication, comes without known pressure from the Federal Government or any hostile action upon the part of the Gentiles. Polygamy is apparently still rife in Utah, but the church may perhaps be sincere in its renewed disapproval of the practice. If so, we may be near the end of a national disgrace.—Boston Herald.

ASKS JUSTICE FOR JEWS.

CINCINNATI, October 10.—“Do not try to convert them at all, but be just to them,” was the comment of the Rev. William Grosvenor of New York on a committee report on “How to convert Jews to the Episcopal faith,” in the Episcopal convention to-day. The committee recommended “not to teach the Jews morals, but to teach them that Jesus is the true Messiah,” should be the object of the church. Mr. Grosvenor opposed the report, saying in part:

“The Jew knows what the Christian has been to him through the centuries. He has been herded into pales and ghettos and suffered inquisition and persecution. In America he is doing his best to fit into American institutions. After the Jews have enjoyed a long period of Christian mercy, justice and brotherly love, then the Christian church may well look to them for converts.”

Action on the report was deferred.

No longer will Episcopalians in their prayers on Good Friday refer to “Jews, Turks, infidels, and heretics.”

A resolution to alter the phrase to read: “Those who are without the true faith,” was introduced a few days ago in the Episcopal convention and received a favorable vote to-day. There will have to be further technical legislation before the change becomes effective, but final passage is assured.—Sel.

RELIGIONS OF THE CHINESE.

The demonological aspects of Chinese religion were impressively brought out in Huntington Hall, last night, by Dr. J. J. M. Groot, professor of archaeology at the University of Leyden, in his first Lowell Institute lecture, on the “Development of religion in China.” The speaker began his address by explaining how it happens that three religions exist in China side by side—Taoism, Buddhism and Confucianism.

“As a matter of fact,” he said, “the only state religion, the only true and orthodox religion, is Confucianism, and it is bound to persecute the two others. In consequence of its intolerance, Taoism and Buddhism have nearly disappeared as churches; they survive only in the form of countless sects.

“There are three religions in China,” continued Doctor Groot, “but they are like three branches growing from a common stem which has existed as such from prehistoric times, and that is why every Chinese feels himself at home in all three. This ancient stem was the religion of the universe, being originally what is now called Taoism, meaning the order of the universe. Taoism is a system of ethics and discipline, based upon divination and the observation of nature. There is a Tao of heaven and a Tao of earth, and creation is the spontaneous work of the two. By the Tao of man is meant his adaptation of himself to the Tao of heaven, and the Tao of earth to the end that he may secure the fullest life and the greatest happiness. Heaven is the highest god for the Chinese. Besides the Tao there are ‘Ghen,’ spirit gods, and ‘Kwei,’ spirit specters. All good comes from the ‘Ghen’ and all evil from the ‘Kwei.’

“The two classes of spirits are continually in conflict, and the universe is crowded with them. The ‘kwei’ not only attack and harass man; they inflict disease and death upon whole communities and have to be driven away with gongs, spears, and flaming torches. They take the form of animals and sometimes that of men. The Chinese thus live in terror of the specters and demons whose existence and evil powers are vouched for by their religion. The supreme heaven sometimes permits or even authorizes the attacks of the ‘kwei,’ and worship is a means of obtaining the aid of the gods against the evil spirits.”—Selected.

LIQUOR DEALER SCORES SALOON.

George B. Hugo, whose family has been in the liquor trade for three generations, and who himself is one of the largest bottlers in this State, declared as a speaker in the pulpit of the Maverick Congregational Church in East Boston that the drink evil must be exterminated and that it is due to the existence of the criminal saloon. He said the retail and wholesale liquor trades should be separated, and that the sale of liquor in places where no food was served with it ought not to be permitted under the law.

Intemperance was not to be prevented by prohibition, he thought, and the saloon, which was the product of centuries, could not be wiped out, as zealous sentimentalists imagined, with one blow. He derided the saying that the saloon is “the poor man’s club” and said it was a poor club for any poor man to belong to. He said saloon keepers should not be taken seriously in the argument that shutting up saloons is interference with personal liberty.

“Putting down the gates at a railroad crossing interferes with personal liberty,” he said. “So does compulsory vaccination, but both are necessary to protect the individual. Society has the same right to prevent contagion and the evil results of drunkenness.

“The saloon as a proposition is undoubtedly the most dangerous part of the liquor traffic. Seventy-five per cent of the evils connected with the liquor business can be traced directly to the saloon. The drink evil must be exterminated and it will be exterminated. Economic necessity now demands it. No longer is it a moral issue. Moral suasion and restrictive legislation will solve the liquor problem.”

He said economic necessity demanded the extermination of the drink evil for the structure of morality had to rest on economic foundations to be permanent.

“Not until religion is manifested as the power that is able to subdue the kingdom of the world, will it command the respectful attention of men. And when you have made it mean all this — nay, when you have even made it manifest that this is what you mean by it, and are bound to make it stand for, the question about reaching the masses will drop out of your programs; the masses will come as clouds and doves to your windows.—Washington Gladden.

Should Boys be Taught to Sew?

BY KINOKA.

"Why, of course they should," we hear some mothers say. "Oh, pshaw! What do you want to make mollycoddles of the boys for?" we hear some of the fathers say.

Well, now, let us just talk it over and see. When there comes a rainy day and the little boys and girls are obliged to stay in the house, the mother can say to the little girls, "Now, it is a good time to make dolly a new dress, and that will teach you a good lesson. Later on you can make yourself a dress."

Now the little girls get busy, and soon are enjoying the pleasure of seeing the garments grow under their busy fingers. Time passes swiftly and the rainy day is forgotten.

But what about the boys? Maybe they will read awhile, whittle awhile, and yet they feel like they haven't accomplished much, and, as they want to be with mother and sisters, for they do not like to be alone, there commences a sort of teasing, till mother and sisters hope rainy days won't be very many. While, on the other hand, if mother gives Johnny a piece of linen with a pattern to outline with bright colored thread, or even checked gingham to cross-stitch a pattern, and teaches him, he or most any boy will soon busy himself trying to see how well he can follow the pattern.

Or if the mothers would say, "Johnny, I am going to make you some new waists; you come and fill me some bobbins and thread my needles, for your eyes are so strong and bright, then you can try sewing some of the straight seams," he may be a little awkward at first, but have a little patience; you have your boy with you, and in a little while he will take an interest in his work and be a great help to you. No time is wasted, and he learns the use of needle and thread, and all of this is done before he is old enough to take his place among the wage-earners in the drama of life. Nor does it make him less manly to learn these little things, and many times when he is away from the home he can mend his own clothing, and when he enters college he can be envied, even by the young ladies, because he can neatly darn his own socks if his washer-woman forgets it.

Now I know one boy that learned to sew when he was a little fellow with his mother and sister, and it proved quite a pastime for him in later years. One time after his marriage he contracted a contagious disease and was quarantined away from his family. Not sick enough to stay in bed all the time, he read for several days, did wood carving, and time grew very monotonous. Then he said, "Oh, if I had some fancy work!" So some embroidery hoops were found, some Har-danger cloth procured for him, and he was soon deep in the mysteries of a beautiful pattern, counting threads and weaving a beautiful design.

Now was he less manly for doing such work? As he said, it was very fascinating and helped to pass the long, tedious hours, and was a piece of work prized by wife and daughters. He often remarked he was glad he had been taught to use the needle. Many times when baby was cross he could deftly mend a rent in his own clothing.

In this day man tailored garments for ladies command high prices, too. Everyone knows these tasks are learned easier in childhood, and stay with us longer. The same of evil things. They are harder to overcome the longer they stay with us.

Now, mothers, encourage the boys, and get them interested in making things for their own room. Beautify their homes, and thereby lessen the desire to run down town where too many evils await them, and where they go just for the sake of doing something to pass away time on a rainy day. By all means, I say, teach the boys to sew.

RUSHVILLE, ILLINOIS, October 5, 1910.

Dear Herald: I humbly ask a little space in your dear pages to write a few lines to ask each and everyone of the Saints to pray for me. I have been sick four weeks and have asked God to help me and give me strength that I might have a chance to obey God.

I was baptized about thirteen years ago, but my husband was against the work, and there is no Latter Day Saint church here, and I am sorry to say that I have drifted far from God. But I have six children, and have promised God if he would spare my life to raise my children, that they may not drift apart in this sinful world, that I would obey him, and do as he wished me to do, and teach my children the right way, that we may be ready when called to go.

Pray for my husband that he may do better and be shown the right way, and pray for my sisters.

I will close by wishing to be remembered in the prayers of God's people.

MRS. STELLA ARGANS.

CLANDELL, NEW MEXICO, October 12, 1910.

Editors Herald: Starting from my home, Tucumcari, on the 4th, traveling across country by team, I find myself today one hundred miles south, in Roosevelt County, sixty miles north of Roswell, New Mexico. I preached at Jordan, Tolar, and this place; at all of these places I have had the pleasure of telling the angel's message to good crowds, which have given the very best of attention, but I want to speak a word especially of the people at Jordan which is the home of our young brother, Charles Stringer, who was absent when I visited that place, yet his quiet, exemplary life has made lasting friends for any of our brethren who may pass that way.

I was cared for at the pleasant home of Father Jordan and his noble companion, in whose home abides the Son of peace. To-day I had the pleasure of leading one noble woman into the waters of baptism, Mrs. Namius Myers, who is a daughter of old Uncle Dickie Boren, of Montague County, Texas, who has now gone to his reward.

Some of these elders will remember the kindness of Uncle Dick in opening his home for the preaching of the gospel and making welcome the elder in his home. Sister Myers has the confidence and respect of all her neighbors, and we bespeak for her a bright and useful future, if she remains faithful. May God's divine Spirit attend the lonely ones who are scattered in these lonely parts till others are raised up to stand with them in defense of the truth.

Yours for gospel truth,

T. J. SHEPPARD.

DOW CITY, IOWA.

Editors Herald: Would you be kind enough to say through the HERALD that if Sr. Phoebe Jane Baker will be kind enough to send me her address, I will send her blessing? Her blessing was given by the undersigned at the Moline, Illinois, reunion last August. It was completed soon after the reunion and sent to Clinton, Missouri, which was the address she gave at the time, but her paper has been returned. She gave me neither street nor number of house, and there was no rural free delivery number given.

I have tried to find this sister without troubling you, but thus far I have failed.

Yours in gospel bonds,

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

BERRYDALE, FLORIDA, October 17, 1910.

Editors Herald: The First Quorum of Seventy appointed a committee, during the last General Conference, to examine the Book of Commandments and report as to the difference between some of its revelations and those in the Doctrine and Covenants.

This committee was composed of W. E. Peak, George Jenkins, and J. E. Vanderwood.

Before the committee met W. E. Peak was called home by the sickness of his child. The remaining two of the committee did the work and made the report, and sent it to me for my signature.

I signed it through courtesy, as requested, but failed to state that I had nothing to do with its preparation. So I here disclaim any credit for the report that bears my name.

Yours truly,

W. E. PEAK.

NEW DECATUR, ALABAMA, October 16, 1910.

Dear Herald: We are among the isolated, and are the only Saints here. My brother and I attend the Baptist Sunday school and church. I was baptized in 1904. A short time after we moved here and stayed four years. Papa's work closing down, we moved to Louisville, Kentucky, and stayed seven-months, and last November moved back here again. I feel lonesome at times, but when I read the HERALD or Autumn Leaves, I feel encouraged to go ahead. If there are any Saints living near New Decatur I would like them to write me or give me their addresses through the HERALD. Should any elders pass through here, I would be glad to have them stop here several days.

Dear Saints, pray for me that I may be faithful to the end.

RUTH RIGGLE.

CLARKSBURG, WEST VIRGINIA, October 11, 1910.

Editors Saints' Herald: The district conference held at Clarksburg passed off pleasantly. The preaching was counted good and of a spiritual character; three were baptized, and a good feeling prevailed. On Sunday a basket dinner and supper were served by the sisters, and all enjoyed it. The writer had the honor of being chairman, having as his associates D. L. Shinn and J. M. Stubbart, it being the first conference held in that place by the Reorganized Church. It adjourned to meet a year hence at Indian Creek, in Ritchie County, at a place where the Saints are building a church.

On the 8th I left for Cabin Run, to attend to the dedication on Sunday of a church in that place. Bro. Charles Williams having given a clear deed for it, on Sunday we dedicated it to the Lord. Bro. D. L. Shinn preached the sermon, as per request of some years ago. Bro. Charles Williams presented the deed and key to Bro. B. Beall, who represented the Bishopric. He gave a very fitting address with reference to the church and its object, after which the writer offered the dedicatory prayer, presenting it to the Lord and his work. Bro. L. R. Devore is credited with doing the first missionary work in that place, in the year 1880, as per request of Sr. Eliza Jane Leeton, now a resident of Shinnston. The day's work was one to be held sacred in the memory of the Saints, and friends to the cause.

The church at Clarksburg is moving on nicely towards completion, under the management of Brn. Frank L. and Charles Shinn, who are builders and contractors of a hustling kind; the brick work, as done by Bro. Charles and his force of bricklayers, is like a mushroom, of a night's growth. The size is 28 by 40 feet, about fourteen foot walls, with three windows on each side, two in the front, a double door, the roof shingles dipped in red paint before being laid, and a rake cornice of about eighteen to twenty inches projection, with a square belfry of about six or seven feet square, inclosed with shingles; the brick, as well as the mortar, is red, the cornice and window frames to be painted white, so when done it will be of a neat appearance and its builders will feel that they have done their duty. A baptismal font will be installed within its walls. They are greatly in need of means at the present, and I might add that anyone having a desire to assist can do so by sending same to Bro. Frank L. Shinn, 404 Staley avenue, Clarksburg, West Virginia, as some have expressed their willingness to me to do so. I leave this afternoon for Waynesboro, Virginia.

In gospel bonds,

SAMUEL BROWN.

THAYER, MISSOURI, October 19, 1910.

Dear Herald: I desire to acquaint your many readers with some of the advantages and opportunities that are offered to the people in this southern Missouri country, where land is comparatively cheap, although the land values are rapidly increasing. Of course this is a broken country, with plenty of rock, hills, and timber, and we would always advise people to come and look for themselves before purchasing, and remember that we have no ax of our own to grind. I have received letters of inquiry from different ones concerning this country, and I take this means of informing all that are interested.

I have lived in this country all my life, and I ought to have a better understanding of what the country can produce than some who have passed through the country on an "excursion." To my mind we could get an Order of Enoch established in this southern clime, where land values are not so high and such a large capital would not be required. However, there is splendid opportunity here for individual investments, where every man may own his home. I know of one tract of land, one thousand acres in the body, twelve miles from the railroad, and about eight miles from the county seat, which can be purchased for ten dollars per acre. I own a three hundred acre farm adjoining this land, and the land is just about like mine. It is what we call table land. Any kind of farm machinery can be run over this land after it is cleared, and put into cultivation. Corn, wheat, and oats; in fact all the cereals can be raised here; and fruit is raised in abundance, such as apples, peaches, cherries, pears, grapes, and all kinds of berries and small fruit. Hay is one of the staple crops also.

There is another five hundred acre tract lying south of this that can be bought for five dollars per acre. It is not quite as good land as is this. Then there are small farms, improved and unimproved, which can be purchased. There is no organized branch in this locality, but there are a few scattered members. I would be glad for Saints who have money to consider this proposition and see if we can not get an Order of Enoch under headway, and build up a society of the Saints in this country which will be of spiritual benefit to all who would desire to come. To my mind we can start an enterprise here that will not only benefit the members in a spiritual way, but temporally also, and by observing God's law the church would have its share of benefit.

I know of many Saints in this district that are isolated, without church privileges, who are not able to go into better developed countries, but here they could come and partake of the good that the society would offer. Is not this worthy of our thought? I would be pleased to correspond with any that are interested. Just inclose stamp for reply.

Yours truly,

J. F. CUNNINGHAM.

LENORA, KANSAS, October 17, 1910.

Editors Herald: We are out here in western Kansas, where there is no one to defend the cause. We are but lay members, but we are embracing every opportunity we get to say a word in defense of the cause, which I deem is the duty of every Latter Day Saint. About all that the people out here seem to care for is worldly amusement. They turn a deaf ear to everything that is calculated to make better men and women of them and prepare themselves for the life to come.

Last spring there was a reverend divine from Denver, Colorado, out here, and he dedicated a Methodist church. He announced that on Sunday night he would lecture on Mormonism. For some reason he postponed the lecture at that time, but said he would come back some time in October. October came, and he notified the pastor of the Methodist church that he would be on hand October 14, on Friday, so we went out to hear him. He had a big audience—something like two hundred and fifty. All through his speech, the audience would applaud him by clapping hands and stamping their feet. I thought the house of God was a house of order, not of confusion.

He commenced his lecture with Joseph Smith, giving dates which were correct. He went on to tell about the angel appearing to Joseph and giving him the plates from which the Book of Mormon was written, then went on and told the same old story about the Spalding romance and Joseph Smith, that Sidney Rigdon got the document and wrote the Book of Mormon, and then tried to palm it off on the people, claiming the plates the book was written from were gold plates that the angel gave him. He said it was a fraud, a delusion, and a lie. I thought the way the divine acted, with the assistance of the audience, the floor might need the attention of the carpenter; but no damage was done.

The speaker followed the church from the death of Joseph Smith, telling about the Saints being driven from Illinois and Missouri; then after Joseph and Hyrum were killed, Brigham Young became his legal successor. He took the lead of the church and led it into the Salt Lake Valley. Then he went on to tell of the different crimes they committed, giving a history of polygamy, not telling any difference between the Brighamites and the Josephites.

I attended the lecture with the intention of defending our side, if the speaker would allow me the privilege. While the lecture was coming to a close, I felt that I could not arise to my feet, if I was granted the privilege to talk. But I sat in silent prayer, and asked God, if it was his will for me to defend his cause at this time, to give me strength to arise. As soon as the speaker closed, I arose and asked the privilege to say a few words, which was granted by their pastor, and can say that the Lord was with me, and I felt as though I could have given them a long talk if I had been allowed the time. I gave a little history of the church in Utah, which pleased them. I think if I had stayed with the subject I could have held the audience, for I hear the divine was pleased with what I said. He said that was true.

I then started to take up the subject of Joseph and follow the speaker. I did not get to hold the floor very long. As soon as he saw where I stood, the divine jumped to his feet and said I did not have any right to hold his audience, for he had held them for one and three fourths hours,—“We will close.” I still was on my feet, and I asked privilege to say a few more words, which was granted. I asked if he was acquainted with the Reorganized Church?

He said he was; he had nothing against us, except that we believed Joseph Smith to be a prophet.

I said, “Yes, sir; we believe that.”

He said he had met the head men of the church, and had talked with Joseph Smith and Joseph Luff, and we were good, law-abiding citizens; and he told his audience to treat us as such. I thanked him for this, then the benediction was offered, and we made our way to the front and had a chat with him in regard to the differences between the two churches. He said he did not have the Josephite church under consideration; it was the Brighamites he was dealing with.

My nephew, Arthur Boyd, and I, challenged him to meet one of our elders and prove whether the Book of Mormon was a fraud or not. He said we would not believe it if he did prove it. We told him we would leave it to the audience, but he refused. So we asked the use of their church to preach in, but he said, “No, sir; build your own church.”

The Reverend divine claims he has been in Salt Lake City thirty years.

If any of our elders come out this way, we would be glad to entertain them. Notify me at Lenora, Kansas, Route 2. I will meet them. While in town call on W. A. Steunkel; he will tell them where to find me.

Your brother in the faith,

J. N. BOYD.

I have just closed a debate with one Reverend Etter, of this place, who represented the Missionary Baptist Church. The propositions called for each disputant to affirm his respective church four sessions, each speaker to occupy alternate half hours.

After urging every available excuse for a back down, he consented to discuss for three two-hour sessions, but after he had occupied three sessions without putting up his church, only with an attempt to trace its succession back to New Testament times, he was then very anxious that I should affirm for the church which I represented the full four two hour sessions, which I did.

He and his moderator would not consent that a third man should be chosen as moderator and to act as chairman, as per signed articles of agreement, unless said moderator was either a minister, other than one representing our faith, or else a lawyer. Of course they knew that no such man was available at that time and place.

Blackguard arguments, slander and vituperation were the stock in trade used by my opponent, and the Braden witnesses as found in the Braden and Kelley debate were put to the forefront for all they were worth.

We heard the first day of the debate that we were to be treated to "canned goods" and were also told the nature of said goods; and sure enough, in his last session the Reverend (?) Gentleman produced his strong argument. As he brought it forward he said: "I have here a hissing, writhing argument, and I want to see the gentleman meet it." So he unwrapped a two quart glass fruit can containing a live serpent, a spreading adder, also produced a vial containing what he said was poison. He said, "It will kill you if you drink it; but if you are what you claim to be, drink it, and handle this snake, and I will present myself up to your church in Pana next Sunday and you can baptize me into your church." This was of course a clincher with him and the class he represented. Latter Day Saints, draw your conclusions.

The Pana Daily Palladium of Saturday has a column article from the pen of one Reverend Fuson, pastor of the Missionary Baptist Church at Pana, and his moderator, and that article, is as void of truth and as abundant in falsehood and misrepresentation as the arguments made by his colleague.

CHARLES H. BURR.

PANA, ILLINOIS, October 17.

Two-Day Meeting at Allenton, Michigan.

The Allenton two-days' meeting convened October 1, 2. The attendance was not as large as hoped for, but all present apparently enjoyed themselves. The peaceful influence of God's Spirit was present at all services to enlighten, cheer and strengthen, and during intermission the pleasant spirit of sociability.

All were well cared for as to lodging and food, and that gratuitously. There was plenty to spare. We were sorry that more of the Saints did not avail themselves of the last opportunity for this year of attending a district gathering at which we can all give and receive benefits that help us onward and upward in the divine life, for we need all the help we can thus obtain in order to keep growing spiritually.

The meetings were held in Bro. R. H. Huston's hall, on the second floor of his large store building, dining hall on same floor. They were quite well attended from the outside, especially on Sunday. Some very good sermons were delivered. The speakers were: Brn. J. J. Bailey, William Dowker, J. A. Grant, William Grice, and R. H. Huston.

Brother Grant remained at Allenton after the close of the two-day meeting and conducted a series of meetings there. The two social services were good. On Sunday morning it was above the average. The song service rendered during the meetings is worthy of comment, for it was above that which we usually hear at our district gatherings. The Allenton Branch, prospective, can well be congratulated on their development in musical talents. We wish that more might thus be heeding the oft repeated admonition, "to cultivate the gift of music and of song," but not forgetting to sing with the Spirit and with the understanding.

We feel grateful for the privilege of attending the above meetings; though we felt physically weak some of the time and not able to indulge in the exercises as we wished, yet we were strengthened spiritually during our pleasant and quiet visits with the Saints there and at Port Huron.

During the following week we were benefited both physically and spiritually, so that on our return home we felt cheered and renewed in gospel courage, able to take up duties with a greater pleasure and with a stronger determination to do our very best. Hoping that when the Allenton Saints have another two-day meeting it will be our pleasure to be there.

News From Missions

BELLAIR, ILLINOIS.

I left home, the land of the big red apples, (Springfield, Missouri,) the queen city of the Ozarks and metropolis of the southwest, which also contains an attraction for one Englishman if no other. But I see by the government census report we have 35,201, a gain of 51.3 per cent in the last ten years. We have a nice, healthy city; a nice church house, a few good Saints, and would like to see many more. If any are looking for a southern home, none better can be found, and I will gladly answer any questions if you address me R. F. D. 10, Springfield, Missouri.

On my way here I called and preached at the progressive Lansdowne Branch. Though few in numbers it does an elder good to see such a spirit of hospitality and earnestness on the part of most of the Saints. It makes an elder feel good, and we were more than glad to also hear of the improved conditions of things in Saint Louis, and to learn that the last district conference was one of the very best ever held in the district, both in attendance from other branches and in the good spiritual time which was had.

The Bishop's agent reports Saints paying their tithing much better, and the further prosperity of both branch and district looks much brighter. The organization of a new branch at Bourbon, Missouri, is provided for, which will start out with a membership of thirty-five. Prospects for other new organizations seem good. The prospects are good for the reviving of the old Kibbie Branch. The brethren Shannón Harris and Martin Edmunds, who were ordained here to help the work along, keep the camp fire blazing by doing all they can preaching, keeping several places supplied monthly.

There seems to be a greater desire on the part of most all our local force in both districts to keep busy; glad to see it, and everything seems good for a banner year.

Yours for the good of Zion,

HENRY SPARLING.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

It may be time for me to let your readers know a little about conditions here "in the top of the mountains," or, speaking more correctly, in the "Salt Lake Basin." Together with Brethren Stead, Davis, and Chase I have attended the semiannual conference of the dominant church which closed day before yesterday, after having been in session three days.

There was nothing new or unusual, but it was much like other sessions of the past that I have attended. The business was all disposed of in less than ten minutes, and consisted only in granting the congregation the privilege of "sustaining" what was "proposed," and which had beforehand been cut and dried. Not a single vote in the negative on any proposition; and this was afterward referred to by some of the speakers as a wonderful manifestation of the spirit of unity that had characterized their gathering, when in fact the good members understood that to vote in opposition would be considered as an act of rebellion against "the Lord's anointed," and the whole thing can only be regarded as a farce and a useless form.

Sixteen men, that is: The Presidency, the Quorum of Twelve, and the Presiding Patriarch, were sustained as prophets, seers, and revelators; but, judging from the speeches made, the only revelations looked for were the high sounding and boastful assertions, that fall so copiously from these so-called "living oracles."

Pres. Joseph F. Smith had, since his return from Europe, been confined at home on account of bodily ailments, but had so far recovered as to be able to attend the conference. He made the opening address, in which he informed us that early in life he had made the pledge to be true to God and the Latter Day Saints; and he felt sure that no man or woman could point to an instance where he had violated that pledge. He repeated: "I have been true to my God, to his people, and the world." He claimed to have been wrongfully accused of being a hypocrite, but said such unwarranted accusation must cease, at least as far as the Latter Day Saints are concerned. He concluded by bearing testimony that Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God, and that Brigham Young, John Taylor, Wilford Woodruff, and Lorenzo Snow had been pure, upright, and worthy men.

Nearly all the succeeding speakers testified to the truthfulness of the testimony of President Smith, but none of them could outdo the young apostle, Joseph F. Smith, jr., in this line. He pronounced a curse upon all who would dare lift up their voices against the Lord's anointed, saying that the judgments of God would overtake all such. He was convinced that there was not a person in the house but felt that the brethren of the presidency had spoken by inspiration and had told the truth. He and other speakers referred to meetings that had been held on the street,—evidently alluding to our efforts, as we held two meetings daily during conference,—at which meetings it had been declared that they had received no revelations; but said he, "We have received revelations; some have been published, while others have not." He thought that those street preachers ought to preach their own doctrine, and let them alone.

Apostle Whitney gave us a spicy and old fashioned discourse that was a reminder of the old times when Brigham Young declared that the church books were not worth the ashes of a rye straw. His text was: "Obedience is better than sacrifice." He claimed the Lord may command one thing to-day and another thing to-morrow, and the latest received is the law under which we live. He came out and stated plainly: "We are not governed by the commandments from the Bible, nor by the gospel to the Nephites. No man in our day can stand up and claim justification because he is doing what the Nephites were commanded to do, and because he condemns what the word of the Lord to them condemned; but present day revelation is our law."

Pres. Joseph F. Smith evidently believed in the doctrine, "the first shall be last," for as he had made the opening address, so he also made the closing speech. He bore testimony to the truthfulness of the testimony of the brethren, saying he could indorse every word; so it was indeed testimony upon testimony, made doubly sure.

The Senator Apostle Smoot did not miss it far when he said, "The distinctive feature of this conference has been the many testimonies that have been borne concerning the authority of the leaders of the church." A stranger could not help but wonder why all this was necessary at a conference of believers in God's work. Must we take it to mean that they recognize their spiritual structure is so insecure against the storms of life that it must constantly be propped up by a repetition of testimony, and that these leading officials feel the weakness of their claims?

Pres. Joseph F. Smith somewhat surprised us when in his closing remarks he made the assertion: "Our enemies have abandoned the thought that they can meet us on scriptural grounds." He said their only stock is ridicule, misrepresentation, and slander, for upon scriptural grounds they will not now try to meet us. If Mr. Smith means to apply this to the elders of the Reorganization he is apt to find that he is laboring under a delusion.

It is only two weeks since the writer met Elder J. E. Hickman in a four nights' discussion, at Greenville, Utah, and he is not yet so discouraged but what he is willing to meet him again. I am, however, informed that the Deseret News has published that it resulted in a great victory for their side; but I very much doubt that they care for another such victory. The discussion was on the question of successorship in the presidency of the church. By succeeding in getting a Mormon for chairman, I was prevented from bringing in the doctrines taught by Brigham Young, but it was publicly agreed by Elder J. T. Tanner, who acted as moderator for Elder Hickman, that we should afterward discuss the doctrinal points upon which we differed, yet in this he finally failed and publicly refused to carry out his own offer. It is strange that while they claim such a grand victory, and while their chieftain boasts of their willingness to meet their "enemies" on scriptural grounds, that they fail to carry out agreements along that line, already made. Must I think it is out of pity for me; or have they had all the discussion they want for the present?

It is true the Mormon people are not easily reached with either evidence or argument. It is as was stated by a Mr. Connell, a teacher in the public school at Greenville and himself a Mormon: Elder Hansen may talk about the revelations, the law and the Scriptures all he will, yet Hickman need only to arise and deny the same and to bear his testimony, and the people will without question believe Hickman and take his word." This is true as regards the masses of the good Mormons; but I am glad that there are a few among them who can not be fooled that way, but who will think and consider for themselves, and not be led as dupes. Of course it is only that class that will ever be benefited by the preaching of the truth.

Your columns have already contained an account of my eviction from the tabernacle grounds simply because I ventured to ask questions which the speaker himself had invited. I was informed that it was not the right kind of questions, hence was ordered to leave, which I did. I had asked if the Book of Mormon taught polygamy, which was answered rather reluctantly, but we were finally informed that it rather condemned that practice. When I asked from whence came the doctrine of polygamy and celestial marriage, I was informed, from modern revelations. But when I asked if we were to understand that there was a conflict between the teachings of the Book of Mormon and modern revelations, the climax was reached, my question declared out of order, and I was condemned as only seeking for contentions. A special police was on hand and displayed a badge showing his authority, and I was ordered to leave the grounds forthwith.

It is not a little amusing to see with what care the "Josephites" are watched. They are evidently afraid that some word may be dropped which will lead their people to think. When during conference Elders Stead, Chase, Davis, and myself were on the tabernacle grounds, they had their eyes upon us, as if we were wolves among the sheep. When we were standing conversing among ourselves, we were informed that such must stop, as they had already had trouble enough and wanted no more. Evidently, if they had the power, "Josephites" would not be permitted to preach in Utah.

While I have no great progress to report, I am glad to say that the outlook seems brighter, and we feel hopeful. Our street meetings during the conference week were largely attended, and many tracts were distributed that will reach distant parts of the State, as well as other States; as people were here from many parts of the country.

Brother Chase is active in the work in this city, and his family is rendering valuable help, both in the Religio and Sunday school, and especially in the song service, which lends quite an inspiration to the street services, as well as to the meetings in the hall.

Bro. J. D. Stead is looking after the work at Ogden and the northern part of the State. He reports good interest at Brigham, where some may unite with the fold.

Bro. J. Davis is on the warpath at Malad, and southern Idaho, and there is no danger of him offering any compromise with the errors of Brighamism.

Bro. M. F. Gowell has only been in the field a little over a month, but is getting acquainted with the situation. He is in charge of the work in Provo and feels hopeful. He is nobly and faithfully assisted by his companion.

Some of the local elders are rendering some valuable help in the work, and among them we will mention Bro. G. J. S. Abels, the Bishop's agent. He will endeavor to visit most of the Saints in the district this fall, in the interest of his department of the work. But if he should fail to call upon some, let them not feel slighted, or for a moment entertain the thought that their help is not needed; for it is desirable, and in keeping with God's plan, that we should all be laborers together in the grand and good work. Just remember that Brother Abels' address is 420 Twenty-fourth street, Ogden, Utah, and he will be pleased to hear from you, and to credit you with such as you can contribute for the upbuilding of the kingdom of God.

Though we may meet with opposition and the scorn of men, we feel hopeful, and certain of ultimate triumph for the cause of truth, and for those who continue faithful.

In gospel bonds,

H. N. HANSEN.

NORTH DAKOTA.

This is the land of wheat and small grains; but this year the yield was very poor. There are many faithful and sacrificing Saints scattered over these northern prairies. So the Lord's work has not suffered financially here, and we have faith to believe that it will not.

The frosty nights and some cold, windy days tell us that our cold season will soon be here to stay for six or seven months. But yet we look for many weeks of fine, bright days, for this is surely the land of sunshine.

Our "pioneer missionary," Elder William Sparling, has of late bought a home in Minot, the Magic City. It will be convenient to the northwestern part of the State, where he does the greater part of his mission work. But the Fargo Saints are disappointed that he did not decide to make his home in the Biggest Little City on Earth, as it is called.

Elder Alonzo Whiting, who for a number of years was associated with Cutlerites, has spent most of the summer doing missionary work in the central, western, and the southern parts of the State. He reports some pleasant and profitable work.

Some baptisms and good interest at Anamoose, as also other places. The long continued dry weather seems to have caused considerable sickness in this usually healthful country. Fevers and pneumonia have been most common. And in many cases, the Saints being subject to the same conditions, have been attacked with the same diseases as those around them. But we are thankful to report that through the gospel ordinances some have been wonderfully blessed and restored. At our district reunion the Lord promised his Saints relief from the trying conditions that are and would come upon the world as the result of the wickedness of the world, if they would remember to call upon him and try to be worthy of his promised blessings. And many can testify that he has verified his wonderful promise.

During the latter part of the summer a finely dressed, distinguished looking man began preaching on the streets of Fargo, the principal city of this State. His wife and daughter were with him, one holding a large United States flag and the other a gasoline torch attached to a staff. One peculiar thing about him was that every night he brought four books and spread them out on the pavement, calling them the "Four Bibles." They were the common King James Translation, the American Revised, the Douay, or Catholic, Translation of the Bible, and the Book of Mormon. The latter he sometimes called the American Bible and sometimes the Mormon Bible. He continually attacked the Christian world and said it was ruled by priestcraft. Especially did he attack the Catholics, but said all were in the same boat. He claimed to believe the books, but said there was no resurrection of the dead, and that man had no individual existence after this life; he denied the existence of a devil, and the personality of God; said that we were as much God as anything, and if we were good we were good parts of God; if bad, then bad parts. He denied the second coming of Christ to be a literal coming, saying that he had already come,—that "quickly" was past. Before he left he proclaimed himself "an Isaiah to the people of this age." He said he was out to San Francisco shortly before the earthquake and they rejected his message, and that he told them that a great destruction would come upon them. Then he warned the people of Fargo that they would be visited with something terrible if they rejected him. He threw out great challenges that their greatly educated men could not meet his propositions and that to talk to him a man must be able to use all four Bibles.

When I came home our brethren wanted me to go and hear him. I did so, and at the close offered him a copy of proposition to discuss on the streets. You see I was willing to use the "Four Bibles," as he called them. He read it over and saw Latter Day Saints, and turned and looked at me and said, "Let me alone; I have nothing to do with you," and turned and walked away. So I turned and told the crowd that I would take the opposite street corner and commence answering him the next night. He soon left town, only coming out about three times after. But we continued our street meetings for some time.

We are planning a district conference in January sometime. This will be the first time a winter conference has been held in this State. The exact date has not been set yet, but will be announced later.

JEROME E. WILDERMUTH.

MEXICO AND TEXAS.

Just now boarded the train for Torreon, Mexico, where we will join Bro. W. S. Pender and wife in the first mission work of that republic. Our party includes Bro. Pender and wife, and myself and wife.

I hope for a reasonable opening, although our southern Saints seem to shudder at the thought of our preaching across the border; however, I find that our own United States is not yet free from religious intolerance. Three weeks ago, on returning from our night service in Saspamco, Texas, Bro.

A. R. Wheeler and myself were visited with a shower of stones. No bodily injuries were sustained, but if the rocks that hit his sleeve and scarred my hat had struck us squarely we would have been badly hurt.

Following this we made a new opening of nineteen days' duration, in San Antonio, where we established a mission for the local brethren to preach every Sunday night.

Your brother,
W. H. MANNERING.

OKLAHOMA.

That the Saints who are interested in this Oklahoma field may know how the cause is flourishing here, and for the encouragement of all who love to learn of many true hearts responding to the Lord's latter day call, this brief letter is written.

Covering my own very busy campaign of the last ten weeks, and a portion of the labors of the brethren with whom I have been permitted to labor with a part of that time, we have the pleasure to report such a continual stream of baptisms and beautiful spiritual confirmations as is seldom experienced in just such a volume.

Beginning at Holdenville, in the eastern part of the central district, in August, and covering various points from there to Seiling, in the western part of the State, during the ten weeks following, and including a baptismal service at the river here at Ripley yesterday, I have officiated or assisted at the brink of some Oklahoma stream in the sacred ordinance of baptism each consecutive week, excepting two. These baptisms, thirty-four in number, besides the many others brought in at different points in the State, are not usually the result of the labors of any one man, but in many instances are the harvest of former gospel sowing, which has been done by faithful and sometimes weary hands. Neither is it altogether due to the ministry, but to each faithful Saint be the credit, and God giveth the increase.

Let me counsel the Saints everywhere that if you would see the work move on in increased numbers and renewed spiritual power, cease to be overly anxious concerning the conversion to our faith of those who, because of their social standing, would seem to add prestige to our cause if converted. Their self-sufficiency is too often against them. The power of this gospel can not work effectually upon a proud or a haughty spirit. Seek out the poor and the oppressed, and we may do the most wretched sinner more good with the gospel than these self-sufficient ones, whose polished exterior, or real morals, supported by a good bank account, command general respect and make them desirable marks. It was the common people who heard Christ gladly. He came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. Are you, dear reader, seeking the welfare of that one whose life is being blighted and seared by sin; that one whom you may have access to? Have you been guilty of thinking "Well, what good could such a one be to the church?" If so, you should banish that thought immediately, or trade it for, one which puts the other end to, and asks, "What good can the church do for this sinner?" And if it is not the duty of the church and its members to try to get this sinner out of darkness and into light, whose duty is it? Get interested in the down-trodden and those who are under the blight of sin and its curses. And remember, when doing personal labor with such, that our interest in his welfare must be real, and that none will detect a sham or mere pretense quicker than he; and as for the honest-hearted among those of better advantages and higher standing in general, they are finding us out and knocking for admittance faster than we could, by choice and selection, drag them in.

And as was suggested by a writer of the work in the State of Maine, Sometimes the gospel net dips deep. We say, Let it continue to be so, for if the applied regulations of the great gospel school which God has given us place in as teachers and classmates can not in the due process of time educate a sinner to separate from his folly, no other school need attempt it.

Let not the experienced Saint expect the beginner to measure up to his own standards in every instance at once. It will take experience and the help of the Saints to bring him there. Herein are we laborers together with God.

JAMES E. YATES.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Northern California is one of the outskirting American missions of the church, and being the natural inlet door for the orientals, we find here a cosmopolitan people. In fact, on our city streets one hears some foreign language about as often as he hears the English. We have Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, Italians, Turks, Medes, Persians, Brahmans, and all kinds of heathens.

With these we have the descendants of the forty-niners to the fifty-eighters who came as adventurers, drawn hither by the wealth of gold discovered. As time passed new features peculiar to this coast were noted, such as climatic conditions, productiveness of the soil, and the wonderful adaptation to fruit raising, all of which have drawn here the admirers of these things; so, as we look out upon California to-day, we see a remarkable field for missionary work. Instead of going to all nations, all nations come to us.

However pleasing this may look, the fact remains that the people are slow to accept the truth; but when we consider the prejudice and superstition of Catholicism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Socialism mingled with the common prejudice, climaxed by the prevailing indefinite, we have the reasons.

Yet this mission is salted with a goodly sprinkle of good Saints, the strength of which was shown at our late reunion. We are and have been very deeply interested in this mission, and love dearly our work and calling, and appreciate the hand of kindness and welcome that is extended wherever we go. There are many true, noble-hearted Saints in California. What is gained here is by dint of persistent effort. There is not so much persecution as indifference, and indifference is felt by all the churches. This is the ninth year for wife and I in this field, and there seems work enough ahead for ninety more for some one.

We have reasons to believe the Father's hand directed in the appointment, and we are anxious that the same hand shall guide our future, as it has done the past. The most trying feature of the work is the dragon of indifference which, unless watched, insinuates itself into the church. We are at constant war with it within and without.

Some of the more pleasing features are the annual gatherings in our reunions, which are growing in interest and good results. The last one was the best. The gathering was larger and the general spirit of love and patience was greater. Among the veterans who were present, and gave grace and strength to the meetings were Elder J. C. Clapp, who for over forty years has labored up and down the coast in the direct interest of the work. He related some striking testimonies of the work, and was, as he expresses it, waiting in sore affliction "for the curtain to drop and close the drama of mortal life." Sister Knight was there in her invalid chair and rejoiced in all the meetings. She was baptized in the days of the Martyr.

Elder W. O. Clark, ninety-three years old, was there and gave us a good temperance lecture. He was an elder in the days of the Martyr and was closely associated with him. The most of his life has been spent in the temperance work. He has not yet identified himself with the Reorganization, but we hope he will before passing on.

Bro. Timothy Cook was there, and though weakly in body was strong in the faith of the latter day work. Just nineteen days after the close of the services he was carried by the angels to a better reunion in the paradise of God. We committed his mortal remains to the pleasing embrace of Mother Earth on last Saturday, at Irvington, where he had lived for ten years, and leaves behind a good name.

We never before sensed the strength of the work in this district as we did at one of the prayer meetings, when the tent was well filled with Saints with countenances beaming the love of God. "Oh, what an impressive scene it was to me! Our worthy and well beloved minister in charge, Bro. F. M. Sheehy, with Bishop E. L. Kelley, who also held the highest esteem of the Saints, were in attendance, and we hold them largely responsible, under the providence of God, for much of the good resulting from the meetings. Aside from these ministers may be mentioned Brn. F. B. Farr, C. W. Deuel, C. J. Cady, Bishop Parkin of the missionary force, also Brn. J. A. Saxe, J. A. Lawn, C. W. Earle, Jacob Smith, J. A. Anthony, E. Ingham, C. W. Hawkins, and others of the willing local force, each of whom added his quota to the success of the meetings. We noted the general spirit of unity and love among the members from the various parts of the district, and the absence of sectional strife and bitterness. To God be praise and honor for this. It is becoming quite unpopular here to be cranky and faultfinding, and it should be more and more so, till trouble makers will be chased from our ranks or reformed.

As a mission, it is difficult to get into new fields to break up the fallow ground, on account of the expense of halls and the lack of homes for the missionary. How this is to be overcome is an important question, worthy of consideration. My own dullness and slowness along this line often causes me regret, but I am always ready to appreciate and encourage the brave missionary who can cope with the situation. We have two places in view, new fields which we hope to reach before long. We find lodged here and there considerable driftwood from the first church and from the Utah departure; people who have lost the spirit of the work, yet who retain the faith in a skeleton form. Some revive and others remain as they are.

Some may incline to the belief that Zion should have been located over on this coast, but while we love the climate and admire the scenery, yet we think no mistake was made in the location of Zion. We are convinced there are yet many here who will embrace the truth ere long. A number are investigating, within our knowledge. This district has a membership of over one thousand Saints, with branches at San Francisco, Oakland, San Jose, Chico, Sacramento, Stockton, Santa Rosa, Ceres, Modisto, Tulare, Lower Lake, with a remnant in Modoc and Humboldt counties, also at Monterey and Santa Cruz. The shepherds of these flocks are respectively: J. A. Lawn, J. M. Terry, C. W. Hawkins, J. S. Hommes, T. J. Lawn, A. Kern, B. N. Fisher, I. A. Phelps, J. B. Carmichael, E. Ingham, E. F. Adamson, all of whom are men of integrity and worthy their calling, with possibly one exception. Our missionary force is small, there being now but five active workers in the field, but perhaps enough to fill all the demands for preaching under present conditions; but the need of the mission is men and means to press out and open new fields, not waiting for calls, to press out and find work.

What we need is "a gospel extension fund" to be created and maintained by collection or taxation, to be used expressly in opening up new fields by way of hall rent and other necessary expenses. Aggressiveness should be our shibboleth. It is easy for me to sit here and write what should be done, but am I willing to be one to do it? I think I am.

News From Branches

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK.

August 27 found about thirty-five Saints from this city either at camp or on their way to the first reunion that our district has held at Bass Point, Manasquan, New Jersey, a small town about sixty miles from New York on the Jersey coast. The location was ideal, being a point of land on both sides of which flowed the Manasquan River. The tents, of which there were about fifty, were so arranged that all commanded a view of the river.

To the visitor it was impossible to discern this as the first-born reunion of our district, so well were all arrangements made, reflecting credit on the reunion committee.

The services, which were of the usual character at such gatherings, were such as to make the attendants wish to be present at them all, and the rule was good congregations. The census taker reported one hundred and thirty-five visitors in the camp on the last Sunday. The owner of the grounds, a Mr. Osborn and his family, were amongst the regular visitors, and at the breaking up of camp expressed himself as being favorably impressed with what he saw and heard.

The missionary in charge, U. W. Greene, and an able corps of workers, dispensed the word to attentive listeners, and all felt that good was done. It was decided to "reune" next year at the same place.

It was indeed pleasant, on the 11th ult., to meet the Saints who had kept the "camp fire" burning at home, and as we related the pleasant experiences of our reunion vacation we detected an "I'll not miss it next year" expression in many faces. We hope it will be so, as the results from a ten-day association with church, Sunday school, and Religio workers are not to be overestimated. Wish it were possible to have canned all the good thoughts and ideas we heard, and taken them out one by one and enjoyed them all over again.

An echo from the Eastern Reunion says that "enthusiasm is keeping everlastingly at a thing," which I guess is what our chorister caught in the woods down there at Manasquan, as every Tuesday, Thursday, and Sunday evening there's music in the air at the church. Strangers admit they are attracted by the singing, and what sounds sweeter than Zion's songs sung with the Spirit? Bro. Paul Craig deserves our support for his "sticktoitiveness."

We note with pleasure that our Wednesday evening prayer services are being attended by greater numbers of late, as some one has said that the popularity of Jesus Christ with the congregation is to be estimated from the attendance at these services. This service opens at eight o'clock sharp.

During the past month we were favored with a visit from our patriarch, F. G. Pitt, and his companion, who remained in our city a few days after attending the reunion previous to sailing to foreign ports. Ye writer bade them "bon" voyage as they sailed out of New York harbor on the beautiful morning of September 8, and have since noted their safe arrival, for which we are glad. We also had the pleasure of meeting Charles Craig, brother of our chorister, who was a visitor to our city recently, and all Saints visiting here please note that we would be pleased to welcome you at any of our services.

P. Carlile appointed to audit accounts for 1910. Preaching by Elders J. C. Crabb and Joshua Carlile. Conference adjourned to meet the second Saturday in February, 1911, at Underwood, Iowa. J. Chas. Jensen, secretary.

Conference Notices.

Western Maine district conference will convene with the Mountainville Branch, Saturday and Sunday, December 10, 11, 1910. Please send all reports to Florence Wallace, Stonington, Maine.

The Minnesota district conference will be held at Clitherall, Minnesota, November 5 and 6. Prayer service at 9 a. m., Saturday, in charge of L. Whiting. Business session at 10.30. Leon A. Gould, district president.

Convention Notices.

The joint session of the Massachusetts district Sunday school and Religio association will convene in Fall River, Massachusetts, Saints' church, Claffin street, November 12, at 2.30 p. m., continuing over the 13th. Ira Viola Holmes, secretary, 141 Prospect street, Providence, Rhode Island; Mary Ocelia Lewis, 202 School street, Winter Hill Station, Massachusetts.

Died.

BOYD.—At her home near Hill City, Kansas, Sr. Carrie Boyd. She was born March 4, 1878. In early life she formed a disposition to follow her Lord and Master, and for some time was associated with the Methodist Episcopal Church. April 15, 1901, was married to Bro. Arthur Boyd, who was the instrument in God's hands of leading her into the fold of Christ, and on April 3, 1904, was baptized by Elder John A. Teeters. She departed this life September 24, 1910, firm in the faith of the restored gospel, and was highly esteemed by her many friends. Funeral sermon September 25, 1910, by Elder James J. Teeters.

LLOYD.—Albert Lloyd was born February 17, 1892, at Macedonia, Iowa. Was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, December 8, 1907, by Elder James W. Davis. On August 28, while walking from the home of his sister, Grace Webber, 1020 East Fifteenth street, to his home on Arlington avenue, Davenport, Iowa, he had proceeded only about two blocks when he fell on the sidewalk and died immediately of heart failure. He was 18 years, 5 months, and 11 days old. The sermon was preached by Elder Amos Berve, assisted by Elder C. E. Ball. He will be missed very much by the branch, Sunday school and Religio, but most of all at his home, by his parents and sister, to whom he was a loyal son and true brother.

THOMPSON.—At Liberty Home, Lamoni, Iowa, October 11, 1910, Mads P. Thompson, who was born at Landomsgaen, Hjørring, Denmark, January 1, 1828; baptized at Nebraska City, Nebraska, July 6, 1870, by Paul C. Peterson, confirmed by R. C. Elvin. He held the office of teacher. He leaves a wife, two sons, and three daughters. Funeral in charge of Pres. John Smith, sermon by Robert M. Elvin, prayer by George Kemp at the Home, and at the grave by John Smith. An honest, good man hath gone to rest at the age of 82 years, 9 months, and 11 days.

KNAPP.—Sr. Meleda Knapp was born in Putnam County, Missouri, March 20, 1863, died September 25, 1910, at her home in Maxwell, Nebraska, aged 47 years, 6 months, 5 days. Baptized at the age of fourteen years at Wheeler Grove, Iowa, by Elder George Campbell. Married August 15, 1882, at Wheeler Grove, to Frank Knapp, by Levi Graybeal. She leaves six children, who were all present at the funeral. Their names being Myrtle M., George E., Frank D., Bernice V., Bertha G., Edith D. The funeral sermon was preached September 27, 1910, by Elder G. W. Johnson, of Eustis, Nebraska.

SHIPPY.—Elder John Shippy died at Lamoni, Iowa, September 25, 1910, aged 87 years, and 8 months. He was born in Canada and lived there the most of his life. In 1886 came to Lamoni. Obedied the latter day message in 1842, and joined the Reorganized Church in 1860. Was an apostle from 1860 to 1868. In 1862 organized the first branch in Canada, now called Blenheim. Married in 1843, and his wife died in 1905. Five sons and daughters living. Funeral sermon by H. A. Stebbins, prayer at the house, the church, and the grave by Heman C. Smith, R. M. Elvin, and John Smith.

CORLESS.—Erwin G., eldest son of Hiram J. and Ada Corless, was born in Quincy Township, Branch County, Michigan, November 10, 1884. Died September 9, 1910, at his home on the old homestead of his father and grandfather, where he had spent the brief 25 years and 10 months of his life. His disease was pronounced spinal meningitis. After his death, the physician was puzzled as to what it was, but the family believed it to have been from a strain, received when he was weak. He was only sick three days, and no one realized it to be serious. His trust was in God, having asked his family to pray for him many times during his sickness. He was baptized when ten years of age by Bradford Corless, and lived, loved and defended the work at all times. He was married February 7, 1906, to Lulu Long, and they have spent 4 years and 7 months of very happy married life. A baby daughter was born to them January 16, 1909, being twenty months old at the time of her father's death. These, with the parents, an aged grandmother, a brother, three aunts, one uncle, numerous cousins, and many friends, mourn their loss, but not as those who have no hope. Funeral services by Elder Samuel Stroh. Interment in Lake View Cemetery, Quincy.

JACKSON.—Sr. Susan Jackson was born July 15, 1870, at Louisville, Kent County, Ontario. Baptized March 16, 1885, at Louisville, by Elder Gordon E. Deuell; confirmed by Gordon E. Deuell and Richard Coburn. She was married to Mr. Jackson October 3, 1888. Her maiden name was Mackenzie. She died May 30, 1910, at Louisville, Ontario. Funeral sermon by Elder Samuel Brown, assisted by Elder J. H. Tyrrell, from 1 Corinthians 15: 22. She leaves a husband, a number of children, a father, and two sisters to mourn.

SMITH.—The funeral services of Sr. Sarah Smith, of Union, were held in the union ward meetinghouse, Saturday, October 1, at 1 p. m. Elder A. M. Chase, of the Reorganized Church, conducted the services. Sister Smith died at the home of her daughter, September 26, 1910. She was born in Waplode, Lincolnshire, England, March 4, 1825, being 85 years, 6 months old at the time of her death. She joined the Methodist Church when a girl and later the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, after which she and her sister came to Utah. They crossed the plains along with an ox team company, known as the Ten Pound Company, arriving in Utah in the fall of 1853. In the spring of 1854 she married Joseph Griffiths, of Union. Three children were born to this union, Josiah, Lucy A. and George Henry, the two boys dying in their infancy. Mr. Griffiths died in 1860. For seven years Sister Smith supported herself and child by sewing, often having to endure many hardships. In 1867 she married William P. Smith, of Union, and lived with him until his death in 1893. Two children, twins, were born to this union, Isaac and Sarah. Isaac died when 8 days old, Sarah lived to the age of seven years. In 1870 Sister Smith and her husband joined the Reorganized Church, being dissatisfied with many of the teachings of the Utah church. To the very last Sister Smith never lost faith in her religion. She was greatly respected by all who knew her, and has the name of being honest, charitable, and loving. One daughter, Lucy A. Smith, wife of Hyrum Smith, six grandchildren, fourteen great-grandchildren, and her sister, Elizabeth P. Anderson, who now lives at Lamoni, Iowa, are left to mourn their loss. She was laid to rest in the South Catherwood cemetery. Rest in peace, dear mother, till the resurrection day.

"Kate" the "First Citizen of Oklahoma."

"When the politicians of the now sovereign State of Oklahoma want something done that is really worth the effort," says the Woman's Home Companion for October, "they always make a trip to Guthrie, the capital city, and present themselves at a little office on the top floor of the Senate building. There they shake hands with a graceful little dark haired young woman, on whose door is the legend 'Commissioner of Charities.' This is Miss Kate Barnard, familiarly known as 'Kate.' She is to Oklahoma what Jane Addams is to Chicago, its First Citizen. The politicians see 'Kate' first, and the governor and the other State officials afterward. Through her little office there pours a steady stream of people all day long, people whom she has met or people who want to meet her. 'Kate' is, and has been for several years, one of the controlling spirits of Oklahoma. This Nebraska girl of Southern parentage began her interest in Oklahoma by winning against three hundred and fifty competitors the position of manager in charge of the exhibit made by Oklahoma (then a territory) at the Saint Louis Fair. Then she started a charity organization with the object of finding employment for the stranded people on the newly-opened lands and the newly-built cities of the Territory. She soon became almost the patron saint of the human driftwood of the city slums. These moral derelicts all obeyed her implicitly on election day. 'Where are you going, boys?' she would ask a group of toughs in tow of a saloon-keeper. Then she would remind these human wrecks that she had sent Jack's little daughter to school, had nursed Bill's wife through typhoid fever, and had found a suit of clothes for Jim's boy. Further, she would tell these outcasts that they must vote against the saloon candidate and for the decent man who was a friend of hers. Then, while the saloon-keeper looked on helplessly, the boys would follow 'Kate' to the ballot-box. When the State Department of Charities was established, she received a majority of fifty-six thousand votes for the position of Commissioner. She is now (so runs the rapturous comment of one Oklahoma editor) the incarnate spirit of the new State."

A Little Lady of Mercy.

It was chiefly due to Florence Nightingale that the profession of nursing has become the noble work it is to-day. For many years she was one of England's most famous women. King Edward singled her out as the one woman to receive the Order of Merit, and the people of London gave her the freedom of their city. She died last August, having celebrated her ninetieth birthday in May. The Dean of Westminster Abbey asked that she might be buried in England's temple of fame, but in her will she left other directions. Her memory does not need that honor, for her monument stands in the record of her noble life.

The story of the work of this woman who tended the sick and the poor is one of the most beautiful in history. She asked nothing but the chance to serve, and thereby won the love of all the world. To tend her flowers, to nurse the sick, to serve her fellow-creatures, were the dearest wishes of the girl of Lea Hurst Manor and of the woman we know as Florence Nightingale.—Rupert S. Holland in November St. Nicholas.

The Personality and Career of Professor James.

William James was an unusually charming and lovable personality; a friend as few; a student without bias or fear; a born teacher; an artist possessed of a rare power to move and inspire. He was the modern American thinker whose name appears with greatest frequency in European works of learning. But he was something much more; a prophet in the highest sense—one of those epoch-making men in whom the advanced ideals of vast social groups and whole periods become articulate. The intellectual brilliancy which enabled him to see a little more deeply and to think a little more clearly than the rest of his generation would not suffice to explain his position as one who, according to G. K. Chesterton, was "really a turning point in the history of our own time." For such an explanation we must bear in mind the presence within him, from first to last, of a living fire, a passionate attachment to real life, that made him a natural leader in—to quote his own words—"the long, long campaign for truth and fair dealing, which must go on in all the countries until the end of time."

THE TWO STORY BOOK.

This is a splendid book to hand inquirers. The Old Gospel is told in a fascinating story. No. 247, cloth, 50 cents.

Like most men, he had his sorrows and his joys, his rewards and his regrets. But, taking it all in all, his life would have been called uneventful by most men. There was an excursion into art during early youth; a tropical expedition under the great Agassiz somewhat later; and, throughout the entire initial period, the stirring influence of his father, the elder Henry James.

But the greater part of his life was almost wholly given up to quiet, patient, unostentatious study, leading him by degrees from chemistry through biology, medicine, physiology, and psychology to philosophy. And for more than forty years his life was largely confined within the sheltered precincts of old Harvard—as student, instructor, assistant professor and professor of psychology and philosophy. But, as the course of his life began to slope downward, while his spirit kept soaring to higher and higher altitudes, there came at last calls from the outer world, showing the men in many lands had caught his voice and felt its message.—From "William James: Builder of American Ideals," Edwin Bjorkman, in the American review of Reviews for October.

Easter in Jerusalem.

After the wonderful midnight mass on the eve of Easter, when at 12 o'clock bells sounded within the church, and, as each one of the thousands assembled lighted his candle, the cry went up, "Christ is risen!" came the Easter morning ceremony in the court of the Holy Sepulcher.

Ah, how gentle, how tender, how touching, how vital it was, that simple greeting of the wonderful morning after the delirium and the fury of the holy fire! All hearts were excited to frenzy by the holy fire. The Easter morning procession moved hundreds to tears, held them tensely silent. Instead of the blue dome, spangled with artificial stars, a faint blue sky was over our heads. Instead of the glare of the torches, the sunbeams fell mildly upon us. Instead of the yelling multitudes, we heard the sound of the wonderful bells. They began to peal forth just before the procession entered the court from the city. By the door of the church the Abyssinians, in white and black, were already waiting. And the bells, one deep and booming, the others lighter in timber, were harsh and very barbaric, but thrilling and full of meaning—bells never to be forgotten. They sounded like strange, emotional voices of living things, proclaiming a great, a superb truth. Down below me I saw tears streaming over the seamed faces of many Russians as they signed themselves, kissed one another, told one another, "Christ is risen!" answering to the triumphant proclamation of the bells, which, unwearied, reiterated their marvelous message to the children of men. And the cavasses in blue and red and gold came slowly into court, and a man carrying the cross, and boys in red and in gold with swinging lamps on chains, and many priests in black. And there followed a priest with his arms full of flowers, and behind him another bearing on high the risen Christ crowned with a halo of gold, and framed in a glory of blossoms. Then there rose from the thousands of pilgrims a cry of sweet exultation, and the bells seemed to grow louder as they told Jerusalem that the marble house was empty, that the stone had been rolled away. The bishops appeared in pale yellow, pearl color, and gold, all holding lighted candles. And last of all came Damianos, bearing a staff and a jeweled picture of the risen Christ. The procession stopped. The bells were silent. There was a pause. Then the patriarch took a step forward, gazed at the immense crowd of adorning pilgrims, lifted the jeweled picture of Christ, held it out toward them and said, "Christ is risen!"

As his voice died away, the priest with the flowers raised his arms and showered blossoms over the crowd; the bells pealed forth again; the procession moved on; and the pilgrims, eagerly lighting their candles and embracing one another, closed in behind, crying, "Christ is risen! Christ is risen!"

And so into the darkness of the great church, quietly, softly, the procession gradually vanished. The gloom was lit up by the candles of priests and pilgrims. Through the doorway I saw Damianos in his gorgeous vestments sink humbly down to kiss the stone of unction. Then the Russians, weeping with joy, moved forward and hid him from my sight.

The crowds melted away; but the bells never ceased proclaiming their message. It was as if they knew that their voices were destined not only to tell to Jerusalem, but to all the world that lay beyond the confines of the city of Jesus, the truth of the resurrection—"Christ is risen! Christ is risen from the dead!"—From Robert Hichens's "Holy week in Jerusalem," in October Century.

Joseph Smith; Who Was He?

So many books have been written unfairly concerning the Seer of Palmyra that it is only justice that a book should be written explaining fully his mission and placing him before the world in a proper light. This book does this work. Order No. 238, cloth, 50c.

Joseph Smith Defended.

A companion book for the above. This book fearlessly takes up the many so-called evidences against the Seer and riddles them with clear statement of facts. Both this book and the preceding one are well worthy a place in your library. No. 241, cloth, 50c.

With the Church in an Early Day.

is an absorbing story of the lives of a few who were connected with the church at its commencement. The unanimous verdict of those who have read this work and who know, is that it portrays truthfully the condition incident to those who sacrificed all, and united their fortunes with the angel's message. This book will make its readers better for having read it. Order No. 243, cloth, 75c.

Memoirs of W. W. Blair.

This book will increase your faith in the promises of God. It portrays vividly the stirring events incident to the Reorganization. No. 249, cloth, 50c.

Editorial

A MORMON EXODUS.

After years of planning and experiments in various directions the Utah Mormons have solved to their own satisfaction at least the problem of finding a place of residence where the members of their sect will be free to practice the tenets of their religion in peace and quiet, without the interference of outside authorities or the violation of the law of the land. About three years ago the Utah hierarchy established a colony in the State of Chihuahua, Mexico, as a test basis for the study of conditions in that country, the treatment which might be expected of the Mexican Government and to pave the way for the acquisition of more land if the experiment proved satisfactory. This test colony flourished to such an extent that it was decided to purchase 65,000 acres in the State of Coahuila and to move the colony there. They also acquired another tract of 50,000 acres, with options on nearly 500,000 acres more in the immediate vicinity. The colony's new site is opposite Eagle Pass, Texas, and, according to a report from Prophet Smith, President Diaz has promised the Mormons full liberty for the practice of their religion, which means polygamy without interference. The church officials announce that in the near future Utah and Idaho will be abandoned by the Mormons, who will find more profitable homes in Mexico where they will no longer be subjected to government regulation. It is further stated that the Mormons do not really intend to return to plural marriages, but that it is a part of their religion which has been forbidden in the United States and they desire to be free in all things pertaining to their religious creed. It is planned to have fifty families leave Utah within the next few weeks for their new homes in Mexico, and it is expected that five thousand Mormon families will follow within the next eighteen months.

If this movement proves successful and the polygamous Mormons of Utah, Idaho, and adjacent States abandon their homes in the United States, there will be left in this country only the non-polygamous branch of Latter Day Saints, who make their headquarters at Independence, Missouri. This branch has flourished and increased in wealth and numbers in the past few years, until they now feel able to undertake the accomplishment of their long cherished dream to build a great temple at Independence, which will be the largest and finest religious edifice in the world. The building of this temple, it is claimed, is enjoined in the religious works discovered by the founders of the church in New York almost a century ago. This sect of Mormons are almost invariably honest, industrious citizens who practice charity to others as well as among themselves.

The clipping which we give above is from the Kansas City Journal for October 19. Whence the inspiration by which it was written we do not know, but some weeks since a similar statement was made in the Saint Louis Republic, which paper has for many years had, every now and then, a Mormon fit, almost amounting to a scare, in which peculiar statements have been made with reference to the future movements of the Utah Mormon church.

There are a few statements in this article, which appeared in the Journal as an editorial, that challenge belief. For instance, the church in Utah has been building at a great deal of expense large buildings to accommodate their present and future needs and their church offices, and at present are engaged in the erection of a great hotel on the site of the old Deseret News publishing offices. There is not the remotest probability that the authorities of the Utah Mormon church contemplate removing from the State of Utah in a body. How men of ordinary understanding can get such ideas into their heads and spread them before the public can be accounted for on one hypothesis, and that is, that when either the clergy or the newsmonger undertakes to write about the Mormons, their belief or their movements are full of misrepresentation invariably interpreted and greatly distorts the facts and discolors the truth.

There are four large temples in Utah which have been built by the people, and in three of which settlements where the temples are built, there is not a very great admixture of the Gentile element. These are: Logan, in Cache Valley on the north; Manti, in San Pete Valley, and Saint George, in the extreme south. In the Salt Lake Valley, where the great temple is built, there is a strong admixture of the Gentile element, and several large churches, together with a cathedral, have been built by the Gentiles, and the American party is securing rapidly the preëminence in political and municipal affairs in Salt Lake County.

It is not to be supposed that a people so strongly entrenched in their settlements, the majority of whom are peaceable and fairly good law-abiding citizens, will be expected by their leading authorities to abandon their well established homes and seek new ones under the Mexican Government. The chances are that the main administrations of the church affairs of the Mormon church will be maintained in Utah. The laws of that State make the living in a condition of polygamous marriage a misdemeanor punished upon conviction by a comparatively light fine,—a penalty which any of the leading authorities who are still living in the practice will readily pay, even if by any means they are informed upon and are found guilty of living in what is called in the law, "unlawful cohabitation."

The fact is, that the arable portions of Utah as a State are pretty well occupied, and every nook and corner nearly of the State have been ransacked for eligible locations for settlements. Years ago the authorities found it necessary that settlements should be made elsewhere. Hence their attempting to colonize in the British possessions, in Alberta for instance. The laws of Great Britain, however, enforced in the Dominion of Canada, are strongly at variance with the practice of polygamy or plural marriage, and the practice as it exists among the Mormons in the Dominion has only a precarious lodgment, and if it be discovered would lead to a rapid and vigorous enforcement of the law against wrongdoers.

It is not credible, either, that President Diaz should have so publicly pledged the Mexican Government not to interfere should the Mormons colonize in Mexico, in the provinces of Chihuahua and Coahuila, with the understanding plainly stated upon the part of the Mormons, that they would introduce the practice of polygamy as one of their church tenets. Besides this, Diaz is an old man and he will be succeeded by some one else, and the Government will very likely be administered under the domination of the Catholic Church, which as a religious body is largely in excess of all others in the republic. The Catholic Church has no favor to show to polygamists. Its strong adherence to the holiness of the marriage relation is well known, as divorces are not provided for in their church curriculum, and separations between Catholic husbands and wives are very rare, and if they occur do not meet the sanction of the church, either local or general. To believe then that these colonists from Utah would have a clean bill of health to practice polygamy under the Mexican Government seems to us to be largely a myth.

That the Utah people are acquiring land and colonizing in Mexico is not strange. Land is yet cheap there, and it is within the Mormon program to colonize with those for whom there is not room in Utah and the near adjoining States where such colonies can profitably be planted; and there is no reason why they should not do so in peace under the Mexican Government, if indeed the statement is true, that they do not really intend to introduce the practice of plural marriage into the settlements in that country. That there may be families moving out of Utah, Montana, Colorado, and other States adjoining Utah, into Mexico is possible, under the shifting spirit of the times. Families are growing larger, and young people growing up means "find room," and the church authorities in Utah, under the example set them by Pres. Brigham Young, evidently contemplate making provision for those becoming members of the faith, where they may control the local affairs and thus live among themselves as nearly as practicable.

We do not believe in painting the Devil blacker than he is, and we believe that the exercising of fairly good common sense would give the people so written about the credit for what they do.

That the writer of the clipping is given to drawing upon his imagination is clear from the statement concerning the non-polygamous body contemplating the building of the largest and finest religious edifice in the world, at Independence, Missouri. That is not the first time that this statement has been made concerning the non-polygamous Latter Day Saints. It used to be stated, that this "peculiar people" believed that such a magnificent building was to spring up in a night upon consecrated ground; but the lapse of time and the prevalence of common sense among observing neighbors has put a fairly good quietus upon such a strange misrepresentation. We know of no branch of believers in so-called Mormonism that have even thought that the temple, to the erection of which they looked forward, was to be accomplished in such a miraculous manner. Such a temple, if it is ever built, will be built by labor and by sacrifice, not of the rich, but of the resources of a comparatively poor people.

We feel grateful for the good word of the writer, testifying to the good character of the non-polygamous Mormons, as he styles them, and hope they as a people will continue to bear such praise worthily.

We are skeptical in regard to the misrepresentations against the Utah Mormon church authorities, or a people so strikingly apparent as the statements made in this clipping appear to be. The time is coming, and now seems to be rapidly approaching, when only the truth should be stated of any people, religious or otherwise, as truth only will be permitted to survive and triumph. We believe in the motto, "Great is truth and it shall prevail."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

On slender stalks that softly sway
And gently nod,
We see the annual display
Of goldenrod.

As to its merits few agree.
The bards assume
The nodding goldenrod to be
A lovely bloom.

The farmer's views are rather grim,
Severe, indeed.
The goldenrod is but to him
A pesky weed.

A "mixup" occurs in the report of the Eastern Michigan Reunion, in the HERALD for October 16. The closing lines should read: The vote charging ten cents a meal at conferences was rescinded. The matter regarding the organization of branches at Allenton and Caseville was left in the hands of the presidency of the district.

An exchange has the following news item: The longest step which has yet been taken towards the unity of the Protestant denominations of Christianity was accomplished at the annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church at Cincinnati last week. Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan was appointed treasurer of the movement, and he announced his suscription of $100,000 to the fund. The purpose of the Episcopalians is to raise a fund sufficient to meet the expenses of a world's conference of Protestant denominations, with a view to uniting all of them under a common head and the adoption of a common creed which will settle the denominational differences that now divide them.

The Gospel Trumpet, October, 1910, takes a fling at the Latter Day Saints, in answer to an inquiry sent them. The Gospel Trumpet people may have occasion some time to change their attitude in regard to the question of future probation. We quote:

How do you explain 1 Peter 3: 19, 20? The Mormons claim that Jesus preached the gospel to the spirits of the departed while his body lay in the tomb, and that after death there will be a chance of salvation.

T. C.

The Mormons claim many things that are not true. Whatever be the meaning of these verses or whatever be the nature of the preaching referred to by Peter, it is certain that such a doctrine as the one they seek to base upon this text has no place in the Bible. While this obscure text, taken alone, might seem to favor the idea of gospel preaching to some people after death, the whole tenor of the Bible is against it. Gospel preaching and salvation are now, in this life, or never. The means and motives to induce a change of heart from selfishness to benevolence are all here. It would be only unalloyed selfishness that would prompt men in hell to lay hold of an offer of salvation from their torment. No such offer, therefore, could ever be made by a God who can have no pleasure in a surrender and service founded in selfishness. Noah preached to the disobedient people in his day.

Elder Columbus Scott desires us to correct an unfortunate error appearing in his letter in the SAINTS' HERALD for October 19. The words "The Bible is to be the final standard of evidence, to be accepted for what it may be worth," should read, "The Bible to be the final standard of evidence, other evidence to be received for what it is worth."

Graceland College puts out a football team that can play a game without drinking, smoking, or swearing. This peculiarity has attracted some favorable comment in neighboring towns. Saturday last they met a visiting team of heavier and older players. The visitors were liberal in their use of profanity. Further, deponent saith not. At the end of the game the score stood thirty-six to nothing in favor of Graceland. This shows that young men can be decent and yet be men. In fact that is the only way to be men. After the visitors had received a severe drubbing, one of them strolled over to a group of Graceland students, and in an evident attempt to be funny, said, "Somebody pray." Quick as a flash came back the reply, "No use, you're too far gone."

Confidence.

The author of this hymn, Helen Maria Williams, probably was born in London in 1772; she died in Paris in 1827, after a life of more than usual interest and usefulness. In her own day she was known both as a polished writer and a capable translator of scientific works. She also was a political leader, being concerned at first hand in the French revolution. When we picture her imprisoned in the Luxembourg during the reign of terror and read this hymn in the light of those events it acquires a new interest.

While thee I seek, protecting power,
Be my vain wishes stilled;
And may this consecrated hour
With better hopes be filled.
Thy love the powers of thought bestowed,
To thee my thoughts would soar;
Thy mercy o'er my life has flowed,
That mercy I adore.

In each event of life, how clear
Thy ruling hand I see!
Each blessing to my soul more dear,
Because conferred by thee.
In every joy that crowns my days,
In every pain I bear,
My heart shall find delight in praise,
Or seek relief in prayer.

When gladness wings my favored hour,
Thy love my thoughts shall fill;
Resigned, when storms of sorrow lower,
My soul shall meet thy will.
My lifted eye, without a tear,
The gathering storm shall see;
My steadfast heart shall know no fear,
That heart will rest on thee.

Elders' Note-Book

SOME DAY.

Some day I'm going to study,
Some day I'm going to learn
Of doctrine I've accepted,
Not choosing it to spurn.

Some day I'll test its proof, and Its every claim I'll try,
By delving into scripture
I'll study, by and by.

Some day when I am idle,
With nothing else to do,
I'll search for every passage
That proves the gospel true.

Some day I'll heed the sermons
By chosen men of God,
When I am not so sleepy,—
My head is bound to nod.

Some day I'll be more faithful,
And testimony bear,
By word and by example,
That I'm the Savior's heir.

Some day I'll be as active
As any in the work,
Because I feel so zealous
I do not want to shirk.

In days that still are future,
For which I ever pray,
I'll be a faithful servant,
For I'll have time some day.

Some day, among the righteous
And resurrected throng,
I'll dwell among the perfect,
If I wait not too long.

WHAT DID THE WOMAN OF REVELATION 12 GIVE BIRTH TO?

We shall take the position the woman carried out the law of her being; that she reproduced her species. The majority of the elders, I believe, preach that the woman is the church and that she brought forth a child—the priesthood! I don't know where the authority is found for such an illogical, unscientific interpretation. "And the woman being with child, cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered. And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up unto God and his throne."—Revelation 12: 2, 3, Inspired Translation.

Did this woman, this church, have the priesthood? Yes. Then it was already in existence and was already born. The priesthood could duplicate itself. If so, our argument will hold good that the whole church could also. The church went into the wilderness. Did it go in with or without the priesthood? Can there be a church of Jesus Christ without the priesthood, without the gospel? We are told in Doctrine and Covenants, sections 5 and 32, that the Lord is going to bring the church out of the wilderness.

Now, in these latter days, where did this church come from? It came from heaven, where the child, the undeveloped form, was taken as the woman gave birth to it. Was the church called out of the wilderness with or without the priesthood? The facts are, the form of church organization, the gospel, the priesthood were revealed before the church was organized in 1830. The revelation came from heaven. It takes not only the priesthood to make the church, but also officers, and the message—the gospel. Can we imagine a church of Christ not having the gospel?

When the woman gave birth to a child, was the law of her being carried out or was it not? If the law which was instituted at creation and which has been going on ever since, was recognized by heaven, that woman reproduced her species! She didn't give birth to an arm only, but a duplication of her species. Hence the church reproduced her form and life. The child was caught up into heaven, but it was to come back to earth again, as a little child—a little church!

This interpretation may sound like heresy, but the Inspired Version is clearly in harmony with truth when it says in verse 7, "And the dragon prevailed not against Michael, neither the child, nor the woman which was the church of God, who had been delivered of her pains, and brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ."

The little church was to come from heaven. It did come in 1830, as a little stone cut out of the mountain without hands, and is eventually to fill the whole earth with its power. Revelation 12 leaves no room for apostolic or church succession, as the woman was to go into the wilderness and her offspring was to come from heaven. The woman gave birth, not only to the priesthood, but the entire kingdom of God, as she herself was.

FAYETTE CITY, PENNSYLVANIA.

According to a report found in the Kansas City Journal, October 12, the convention of the Episcopal Church recently held in Cincinnati, Ohio, took up the question of divine healing. A resolution was presented giving sanction to the doctrine of healing of the sick in answer to prayer in connection with "symbolical anointings." The resolution was lost. A majority of the clergy favored it, but a majority of the laity opposed it.

POLYGAMY FROM A NON-MORMON VIEW POINT.

BY CHARLES L. CROW, OF LOGAN, IOWA.

Notwithstanding that polygamy is condemned and prohibited by every State in the Union save one, abhorred and condemned by every religious organization in the Union save one, yet V. S. Peet, in a booklet published and circulated gratuitously throughout the Northwest, by some unnamed publisher and organization, seeks to justify, dignify, and beyond doubt to obtain tolerance, sanction, and an enlarged field in which new adherents to the practice of polygamy may be found.

As there are no tribes, save the savages, no citizens of the United States, save those of Utah, no religious organization save those who indorse the belief and wish to follow the practice of Brigham Young and his so-called religious organization which he and his kind established after the death of Joseph Smith, it is not difficult to see and to understand which of the two, savages or Brighamites, may be responsible and sufficiently interested in the spread of polygamy to finance the publication and circulation of the booklet purporting to have been written by V. S. Peet, a non-Mormon.

Notwithstanding that polygamy finds acceptance and maintenance among the lowest and most bloodthirsty tribes of darkest Africa, cannibals of the islands of the sea, bloodthirsty, half-civilized nations of the Orient, aborigines of the American Continent, and later, Brigham Young and his followers, yet V. S. Peet would have us believe that polygamy is of divine origin and sanction, and he holds up for our admiration Solomon, whom he affirms had seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines, as a verification of his assertion!

Among the wandering tribes of Asia, Africa, islands of the seas, savages of the American Continent, polygamy was and is practiced for one, or for all of the following reasons: 1. Gratification. 2. Escape of physical labor on the part of man, and imposing the same on woman. 3. Increasing the numerical strength of the tribes reduced by warfare. In such conditions, under such influences, and under such circumstances, the debauching of women, the treating of them as beasts of burden, the breeding, buying, selling, trading of women as so many head of live stock, is a matter of common history. But Mr. Peet would have us believe that polygamy is of divine origin, of divine sanction.

We read, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth," and then God created Adam and placed him in the Garden of Eden, after which God created, not seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines, but Eve, a helpmate for Adam and the mother of the human race.

"Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh."

After Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord and had built the ark God said, "Thou shalt come into the ark, thou and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee. And of every living thing of all flesh, two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark to keep them alive with thee: they shall be male and female."

In the creation of the human race, God created man, and then he created not a plurality of wives, but one wife. In the preservation of the human race and animal kingdom, at the time of the flood, Noah, who had found favor in the eyes of the Lord had but one wife, and he and his household were saved; and the remaining portions of the human race, because of their sins, were destroyed.

Marriage is of divine origin and sanction, but polygamy is without recognition by the Creator of the human race. When a boy is born there are not seven hundred girls and three hundred affinities born as helpmates, but on the contrary, while the births of boys and girls are almost equal in number, the boys slightly outnumber the girls, as may be shown by the following reports of county superintendents of schools to the state superintendent of schools of Iowa, showing the number of males and females between the ages of five and twenty-one:

BIENNIAL REPORT, 1895.

Counties.	Males.	Females.
Hamilton County	3,214	3,111
Hancock County	2,161	1,938
Hardin County	3,828	3,525
Harrison County	4,299	4,178
Howard County	2,485	2,420
Humboldt County	2,019	1,926

For the same year of which the foregoing is a part, there were 362,364 males and 350,577 females between the ages of five and twenty-one in the State of Iowa.

Most certainly it may be seen that nature's God makes no provisions for plurality of wives. None was made following the creation of Adam, just Eve as a helpmate and no others; none were recognized at the time of the flood, male and female, two and two, went into the ark.

Bringing the comparative number of males and females to date, we have in Iowa:

BIENNIAL REPORT, 1909.

Counties.	No. of persons between the ages of 5 and 21.		No. of persons between the ages of 7 and 14.
	Males.	Females.	Males.	Females.
Hamilton	3,012	2,945	1,724	1,695
Hancock	2,314	2,213	1,245	1,239
Hardin	3,231	3,265	1,871	1,872
Harrison	3,832	3,812	2,052	2,071
Henry	2,407	2,419	1,299	1,330
Howard	2,237	2,061	1,239	1,160
Humboldt	1,982	1,952	1,100	1,063

Total number of persons between the ages of 5 and 21, in Iowa, 1909, males, 346,123; females, 338,623. Total number between 7 and 14, males, 181,623; females, 179,796.

Especial attention is called to the law of relative proportion of births of boys and girls in the Joseph F. Smith family (Utah church): 21 boys and 21 girls. (Latest additions to his entirely polygamous family not known.)

Different pupils enrolled in the public schools of the following cities shown by last census:

REPORT OF COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION.

	Males.	Females.
Boston	46,394	44,212
Detroit	19,974	19,176
Sioux City	3,237	3,273
Indianapolis	17,214	17,408
Chicago	127,394	128,467
New York	264,167	259,803
Philadelphia	91,574	90,877

For companionship and the perpetuation of the human race God created male and female and placed them in the Garden of Eden; at the time of the flood God saved "male and female," and by the foregoing, it may be seen that the ratio in the creation of males and females, six thousand years after it was established, is still unchanged. If polygamy is God ordained, it is without record in the Bible; if God sanctions the practice of one man taking ten, twenty, or one hundred wives, why has not God changed the ratio of the birth of males and females correspondingly?

Professor Milton S. Terry, D. D., Garret Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois, writes: "Herodotus tells us that each Egyptian had but a single wife, and George Rawlinson says, 'There is no instance on the monuments of Egypt of a man having more than one wife at a time.'

"Monogamy seems also to have been the common practice among the kings of Assyria.

"Plato speaks of marriage as a matter of great importance, of which men are hard to persuade. He goes through pages to portray a marriage union based 'on loving with the soul, and living chastely with the chaste object of his affection.'

"Aristotle also writes, 'It was for the sake of the gods that man not only took to himself a wife, but also gave himself over to honor his bride next to his parents. But that which is most precious in the eyes of a prudent wife is to see her husband preserving himself entirely to her, thinking of no other woman in comparison with her, and regarding herself above all other women, as peculiarly his own, and faithful to him.'"

Notwithstanding that the members of the Utah church, which Brigham Young established, style themselves Latter Day Saints, and notwithstanding the acts and practices of David and Solomon have been condemned by the Book of Mormon, one of the standard books of the church, translated and published by Joseph Smith long before Brigham Young became president of the Utah branch, yet he and his followers justify polygamy because Solomon, David, and others practiced it centuries ago.

The quotation from the Book of Mormon is as follows: "And now I make an end of speaking unto you concerning this pride. And were it not that I must speak unto you concerning a grosser crime, my heart would rejoice exceedingly, because of you. But the word of God burthens me because of your grosser crimes. For behold, thus saith the Lord, This people begin to wax in iniquity; they understand not the scriptures: for they seek to excuse themselves in committing whoredoms, because of the things which were written concerning David, and Solomon his son. Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which was abominable before me, saith the Lord, wherefore, thus saith the Lord, I have led this people forth out of the land of Jerusalem, by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch from the fruit of the loins of Joseph. Wherefore, I, the Lord God, will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none: For I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women."

If in the days of the Prophet Jacob those who sought to justify themselves because of the acts of David and Solomon, understood not the Scriptures, what shall we say of the Rev. Martin Madan, et al, including Brigham Young, V. S. Peet, and Company.

V. S. Peet again justifies the practice of polygamy because it is written, Isaiah 4: 1, "And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, . . . let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach." Mr. Peet might find seven women in the red light district of our great cities who would be willing to make the same proposition, but certainly such a deplorable state of affairs would not justify polygamy. In the first line of the fourth verse we find a sentence which does not help Mr. Peet in his extremities: "When the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters."

Mr. Peet is guilty of misinterpreting the Scriptures in stating that "In marrying two wives, Joash did that which was right in the sight of the Lord." The Bible reads, 2 Chronicles 24:2, 3, "Joash did that which was right in the sight of the Lord," but "Jehoiada took for him two wives; and he begat sons and daughters."

This productiveness is a peculiarity of polygamists, as may be verified in Utah.

In Deuteronomy 17:17: "Neither shall he multiply wives to himself, that his heart turn not away," is authority for polygamy, according to V. S. Peet; a fair interpretation would prohibit plurality of wives.

Again Mr. Peet says: "Let it be remembered that when Congress admitted Utah into the Union of States that it studied the polygamy phase very carefully, and it did ordain in the enabling act, passed in 1894, that 'polygamous or plural marriages are forever prohibited.' Not one word about polygamous cohabitation, because Congress readily understood as well as nearly all orthodox religious organizations, that when a man has married more wives than one, when he thought he had a right to, he may be allowed to keep them all."

In the foregoing, Mr. Peet misstates law, and historical facts. It is a well established rule of law that a man may be required to support the woman from whom he is divorced, but thus supporting her carries no right for him to occupy the relations that existed prior to the date of his divorce. In the event he disregards the laws of divorce, and an issue results, the child would be regarded by all laws as illegitimate, and he and his consort guilty of adultery.

"When a man has married more wives than one, when he thought he had a right to, he may be allowed to keep them all," was what sent S. E. Tidd to the penitentiary from Harrison County last year. The court's ruling was that Tidd could not plead "what he thought" to escape punishment. Provision made for the sustenance of polygamous wives or polygamous children neither carries with it an indorsement of polygamy, nor makes lawful polygamous relation or practice. As well might Mr. Peet claim that the laws of the land justify adultery because a man should and may be compelled under law to care for his illegitimate offspring.

When Utah was seeking admission into the Union as a State and was finally admitted in 1896; also when the Government restored church property, October 25, 1893, it was with the express understanding "that the church had discontinued the practice of polygamy and no longer encourages or gives countenance in any manner to practices in violation of law or contrary to good morals or public policy." Hence by their own concessions as well as by the demands and direct understanding of Congress, the polygamous members of the Brigham Young church of Utah were divorced from their many wives, precisely the same, in effect, as a divorce granted to an applicant in the State of Iowa.

Not only was the enabling act so understood, but also was the manifesto Pres. Wilford Woodruff issued in 1890 so defined and interpreted by the leading authorities of the Utah church. Mr. Peet's defense and justification of polygamy is most certainly contrary to their own interpretation of the Woodruff manifesto issued in 1890, and in open, willful conflict with the express understanding by which the church of Utah secured the restoration of certain church property, and also by which the admission of the Territory of Utah into the Union was secured.

In the suit brought before the Master in Chancery by the church in Utah to secure the restoration of church property, in the hearing before Judge C. F. Loofbourow, October 19 and 20, 1891, several of the church authorities declared that the manifesto prohibited polygamous cohabitation as well as polygamous marriages.

Pres. Wilford Woodruff's testimony was as follows:

Q. Did you intend to confine this declaration (the manifesto) solely to the forming of new relations by entering new marriages?

A. I don't know that I understand the question.

Q. Did you intend to confine your declaration and advice to the church solely to the forming of new marriages, without reference to those that were existing plural marriages?

A. The intention of the proclamation was to obey the law myself, all of the laws of the land on that subject, and expecting the church would do the same.

Q. Let me read the language, and you will understand me, perhaps, better: "Inasmuch as laws have been enacted by Congress forbidding plural marriages, I hereby declare," etc. Did you intend by that general statement of intention to make the application to existing conditions where the plural marriages already existed?

A. Yes, sir; that is, to the obeying of the law.

Q. In the concluding portion of your statement you say: "I now publicly declare that my advice to the Latter Day Saints is to refrain from contracting any marriage forbidden by the law of the land." Do you understand that language was to be expanded and to include the further statement of living or associating in plural marriages by those already in the status?

A. Yes, sir; I intended the proclamation to cover the ground to keep the laws, to obey the law myself, and expected the people to obey the law.

By Mr. Dickson of counsel for the church.

Q. Your attention was called to the fact that nothing was said in the manifesto about the dissolution of existing polygamous relations. I want to ask you, President Woodruff, whether, in your advice to the church officials and the people of the church, you have advised them that your intention was and that the requirement of the church was that polygamous relations already formed before that should not be continued, that is, there should be no association with plural wives, in other words, that unlawful cohabitation, as named and spoken of, should also stop, as well as future polygamous marriages?

A. Yes, sir; that has been my view.

At the same trial Apostle Lorenzo Snow (afterwards president of the church) testified as follows:

Q. Do you believe that the association in plural marriages by those who are already in it is forbidden by the manifesto?

A. Well, I can not say what was in the mind of President Woodruff when he issued that manifesto touching that matter, but I believe from the general scope of the manifesto that it certainly embraces the plural marriage, because it is clearly an intention, as indicated in that manifesto of President Woodruff, that the law should be observed touching matters in relation to plural marriage.

Q. You mean the law of the land?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you understand now that the manifesto covered that prohibition—the prohibition against the association in plural marriages between those who had already entered into it at the time the manifesto was given, as well as a prohibition against the contracting of future plural marriage relation?

A. Well, I do; I thought I had explained that; perhaps I might be unhappy in my expression, but as I said, the intention and scope of that manifesto was expressing President Woodruff's mind in regard to himself and every member of the church, and that was, that the law should be observed in all matters concerning plural marriages, embracing the present condition of those who had previously entered into marriage. Is that a plain answer?

Joseph F. Smith, the present president of the church of Utah, said:

Q. Do you understand that the manifesto applies to cohabitation of men and women in plural marriages where it had already existed?

A. I can not say whether it does or not.

Q. It does not in terms say so, does it?

A. No. I think, however, the effect of it is so. I don't see how the effect of it can be otherwise.

To show how the Utah church has kept faith with its own interpretation of the manifesto, terms by which the Territory was admitted into the Union as a State, and have observed the constitution of the State of Utah, your attention is called to the speech of Julius C. Burrows, United States Senator from Michigan, made in support of the resolution reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, "That Reed Smoot is not entitled to a seat as a Senator of the United States from the State of Utah:

"The first witness called in behalf of the protestants was Joseph F. Smith himself, the head of the church of Utah, who, from his position, would be more apt to be cognizant of the fact if it existed than anyone else, and could therefore speak with greater accuracy in relation to the continuance of these crimes. He testified as follows:

"Mr. Tayler. Is the cohabitation with one who is claimed to be a plural wife a violation of the law of the church as well as the law of the land?

"Mr. Smith. That was the case and is the case to-day. . . . I have cohabited with my wives; not openly—that is, not in a manner that I thought would be offensive to my neighbors; but I acknowledge them; I have visited them. They have borne me children since 1890, and I have done it knowingly.

"Mr. Tayler. In 1892, Mr. Smith, how many wives did you have?

"Mr. Smith. I had five.

"Mr. Tayler. How many children have been born to you by these wives since 1890?

"Mr. Smith. I had eleven children born since 1890.

"Mr. Tayler. Were these children by all of your wives—that is, did all of your wives bear children?

"Mr. Smith. All of my wives bore children.

"Mr. Tayler. Since 1890? [Date of manifesto.]

"Mr. Smith. That is correct.

"The Chairman. How many children have you in all?

"Mr. Smith. I have had born to me, sir, forty-two children—twenty-one boys and twenty-one girls.

"Mr. Tayler. The revelation which Wilford Woodruff received in consequence of which the command to take plural wives was suspended did not, as you understood it, change the divine view of plural marriages, did it?

"Mr. Smith. It did not change our belief at all. . . .

"Mr. Tayler. You continued to believe that plural marriages was right?

"Mr. Smith. We did.

"Mr. Carlisle. Do you not believe in the principle of plural marriages—that is to say, . . . do you or do you not believe it is right in and of itself?

"Professor Linford, president of Brigham Young college. Yes, sir, I believe it is a correct principle to-day."

So from the head of the church and the head of the University comes the common affirmation that belief in polygamy as a principle of human conduct is still adhered to and maintained as a true tenet of the Utah Mormon faith.

Hon. Charles B. Landis, of Indiana, House of Representatives, having under consideration the matter of expulsion of Brigham H. Roberts, a Utah polygamist, in speaking of the president, professors, and trustee of the agricultural college at Logan, Utah, said: "The president of that college is a polygamist, living in open, notorious polygamy with three wives. One of the leading professors is a polygamist, living in open and notorious polygamy with two wives. A trustee who guides and directs the business interest of that college is a polygamist, living in open and notorious polygamy with seven wives, and they have blessed him with thirty-nine children.

"The courts in my State in divorce proceedings issue decrees for separate maintenance. If a man becomes the father of an illegitimate child, he has to make provisions for that child. Every instinct of nature says no, leave not these plural wives nor their children without support. But there is nothing in the sentiment of civilization, either here or in Utah, that compels the production of all of these illegitimate children, a thousand of whom, by reliable accounts, were born there to polygamous wives within eighteen months after January, 1896, when Utah was admitted as a State. There are two thousand polygamous families in the State to-day."

Your attention is again called to the remarks of Senator Burrows, of Michigan: "In spite of the manifesto, 1890, in spite of the most solemn pledges made by the convicted and imprisoned leaders in order to secure amnesty for past offenses; in spite of the express inhibition of the constitution of the State under which they live and upon the faith of which Utah was admitted into the Union; in spite of the statutory prohibition of the commonwealth, it appears that a majority of the members of this hierarchy have continually and persistently lived in polygamy, and are to-day openly and confessedly defying the laws of the land prohibiting such crimes."

LEAVES FROM LIFE.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER J. S. ROTH.

Elder J. S. Roth, the subject of this sketch, was born in Union County, afterwards called Snyder County, Pennsylvania, on the 8th day of September, 1842. My parents were German; father was of royal descent, a fine scholar in German, and a school-teacher in German, and a preacher in German and English, first for the Lutheran, later for the United Brethren Church. To them were born seven children, one of them died in infancy, six grew to maturity, and five are still living.

When I was about six years old my folks moved to Peru Mills, Juniata County, Pennsylvania. Then my father began traveling and selling books for the American Tract Society, of Philadelphia. That left my brother, four years my elder, and my good mother to look after the newly bought farm, so we all had to work very hard to pay for it. We lived about three miles from the old log schoolhouse, with slabs, the soft side up, for benches, and a board on pins in the wall for a writing desk, and there we were, happy that we had so good an opportunity to go to school. My first, second, and third readers was the New Testament, but I loved to go to school. As soon as I was large enough to stand the trip, I would not miss a day when the weather was fit for me to go. But we had only four months of free school a year; the rest of the time we had to pay extra, that is, a dollar a month for each scholar.

When I was sixteen, we got a schoolhouse built half a mile from our house. Oh, how I rejoiced at that: and then luck seemed to favor us, for we got the best teacher in the county. He had been in the schoolroom twenty-nine years; and after the best class went to him three terms, we were all examined, and got second grade certificates. I began teaching at once. After I had taught a while, I concluded that I would work my way through college, and study for a Lutheran minister; for it was my ambition to be a preacher. I well knew that my father could not help me, although he was very willing, yes, anxious for me to do so. So I started to go to the Muhlenburg Lutheran College, at Loysville, Pennsylvania. As soon as I had learned to read, before I had started to school at all, I, according to church rule, had to begin to study the catechism; then at the age of fourteen, I was confirmed by the laying on of hands as a member of the Lutheran Church; for when one answers all the questions in the catechism he is converted, but just how the conversion takes place, I am not able to say.

I continued my college and teaching work alternately, till 1864; then the war fever got so high that it disarranged everything. My older brother went at the first call for seventy-five thousand men. I was almost wild to go, but being only nineteen years old, my parents positively forbade me going; so I gave it up for that time. But in 1864 the president of the college (Prof. D. L. Tressler, who after the war organized the Lutheran college at the famous Carthage, Illinois,) raised a company of volunteers at the college, and he was chosen their captain. He was a brave, good man, and the best orator I ever heard. I was sworn in on the first day of February, as a private in Company E, One Hundredth Regulars (or better known as the roundheads) of the Ninth Corps of Pennsylvania Volunteers, to serve one year or during the war. In five days after, my regiment was in front of Petersburg, and was in that siege till the 2d of April, 1865. Then we took the city, then Richmond, then went after Lee until he surrendered. I was honorably discharged on the 24th of July, 1865.

My army life and experience was not very profitable to me in spirituality. Our chaplain would preach, swear, drink, gamble, and I do not know what he would or would not do. I hope none will call me egotistical, for I aim to tell the truth, and as I write this all from memory, there may be some minor inaccuracies, but in the main it is correct.

From my boyhood on, my character and reputation were dearer to me than life, and although I was in the toughest (if there was a toughest) company in the army, yet I never smoked, chewed the weed, to this day never touched a cigarette, never drank liquor, notwithstanding it was furnished to us while in the front, never gambled, don't know one card from the other now, never swore but twice in my life, (once was at a preacher,) and I always despised a man who had no respect or regard for his character.

After I came back from the army I continued my school work till 1870. I made my home at my father's house, and that was the preacher's home. It would have been better for me, (for I was a close observer) if I had not been in their company quite so much, for I was compelled to doubt their sincerity, and placed many of them on the list of hypocrites. Their actions made me very skeptical.

On the 26th of October, 1866, I was married to Miss S. B. Garber. In March, 1870, we moved to Scranton, Iowa. That was on the frontier of settlements. In 1875 my father urged me to come and take charge of his farm in Poweshiek County, Iowa, twelve miles northeast of Grinnell. I did so.

While living there, I got more disgusted with all that was called religion than ever before. But, (I am almost ashamed to tell it now) after a while the Methodist Episcopalians began a protracted meeting in their church not far from us, and, to satisfy my wife, we attended, although I had no faith in them. But after several weeks the excitement and the power (?) got so high, that it actually excited me, too; and, shall I tell it? yes; the truth must be told, no difference how hard it hits. I got so excited that I went to the mourner's bench. I hope and believe that God has forgiven me, for I did it ignorantly. The third night that I was there the class leader came to me and said, "Neighbor Roth, what are you doing here?"

I said, "I am trying to get religion."

Then he said, "You've got religion, but you don't know it. Get right up, now, and confess Jesus; that is all that you must do now."

Well, I thought, if I can get religion and not know it, I can lose it and not know it. And that proved true with me; for I got religion and did not know it, and I lost it and did not miss it; and when I lost what I did not have, I had as much left as the man who teaches that kind of balderdash. That episode confirmed me that religion was a farce, and I was done with the churches and their delusion.

In 1879 I moved from my father's farm to Tama County, on my own farm, which I had just bought. In June of this year my neighbor, R. Goreham (and I always loved that man, from the very first time I ever saw him, yet I did not know why till later on,) came to me in my cornfield and wanted me to come to preaching that night. I told him no; I was done with that kind of work. "Well," he said, "it is a new kind of preacher; he is a Latter Day Saint."

I said, "A Latter Day Saint; what is that? What is a Latter Day Saint?"

"Well," said he, "they are called Mormons. The Methodist Episcopalians will not let him preach in the church, so he will preach in our schoolhouse." That at once aroused my sympathy, for I favored liberty and equal rights.

I said, "All right, Rube, all right; I'll be there. A Mormon, a Mormon; yes, I must hear a Mormon, sure."

I went, and quite a good crowd was there, and I was glad, too; for if there had not been a good many of my neighbors there, I would have felt ashamed to be found in company of those degraded Mormons. So I felt somewhat relieved, at least, for I always prided myself on my standing in society.

After a while the Mormon preacher came. Well, he was only a man after all, and a fine looking one, too. Neighbor Goreham told us that the preacher's name was I. N. White. I thought that the name was all right, although the man was not so very white.

Well, he preached; yes, he preached; and in all my life before, that was the first sermon I ever heard from the Bible. I said right away, If the Bible is true, that man has it, Mormon or no Mormon. The more I attended, the more I wanted to hear. After some time, W. C. Nirk and D. C. White came also, but they all told the same story, and among other things the most prominent to me was a quotation they very often used, and said it was found in John 7: 17: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." And then the preacher would urge us to take the Savior at his word; try him; obey him; and find that God is the same to-day that he has always been, and that the same gifts and blessings do follow the believer to-day, just as they did in Christ's and the apostles' days.

After they preached a while, the very old Devil seemed to be let loose. That is, just as soon as some of the other church members began to talk of being baptized. I have often, since I obeyed, thought of an expression made by Professor D. in a debate with

E. L. Kelley once. It was this: "When the Latter Day Saints get into a new place, they claim to heal the dead, cast out the sick, and raise the Devil." And I came to the conclusion that the last one was surely true.

So one day the Methodist Episcopal preacher announced that he would expose all the Mormon frauds. We all went; the excitement ran high. And he did expose Mormonism, but not one word had he to say against the Reorganized Latter Day Saint Church, individually. But in ignorance he classed us with the Mormons of Utah. His whole stock in trade came from Ann Eliza, Beadle, etc., etc. But not one word from the Bible to prove them wrong. After he was through with his harangue and abuse, Elder White asked permission to correct some of the mistakes he had made. But the answer came in thunder tones, "No, sir; sit down; you can't talk here." So Elder White answered him on the next night in the schoolhouse, to the satisfaction of most all who were there, and to all who were looking for light.

But the Methodist Episcopal preacher, in concluding his harangue, said, "I admit that when the Mormons preach here among you, they preach nice, smooth sermons; but just wait till they get you into their meshes; then they take you out west; you will then get the rest."

I could not get rid of that; it stuck to me like a leech. I thought, Is it possible that they withhold some things here? For by this time I was deeply interested. Therefore I concluded to go to the bottom of it, and, like Nicodemus of old, I was a little ashamed to let the people know that I was so deeply interested. I made business for myself out in Woodbury County, so that I could attend the fall conference of 1879 in Gallands Grove; for I wanted to see what they got out west.

Ever since I can remember anything, my good mother would read in the Bible twice a day to her children, and many, many a time when she read about how the Savior talked to the children, and laid his hands on them and blessed them, did I from the very depth of my soul wish that I had lived when he did, so that I could have had that grand blessing, too. And then, when she would read how God had organized his church with apostles, prophets, seventies, and so on; and how the Holy Ghost used to come on them and they prophesied, spake in tongues, and interpreted the tongues, the thought would come to me, Why has God so changed? Oh, why can not or does not God give us such blessings now? I could not understand how God could be unchangeable, and at the same time the churches were entirely different from what they were in Bible times, and none of the spiritual blessings could be seen or heard now. I never for one moment thought that man had changed, and not God, but I took it for granted that it was all God's fault, for we were told that those things were not to continue, but were only given to establish the early church, and were then to cease; and, of course, as we did not have them we had to take it for granted that it was so, and that they were not for us. But when the Latter Day Saint elders came, they told us that God had not changed, but that man had changed, and by transgression lost the authority of the priesthood; and that God had restored the authority, with the officers, gifts, and blessings. When I heard it, it brought back to my mind, very vividly, my boyhood desires; and that was a stunner to my skepticism, for it was on the ground that God had changed, and would not bless his children now, as he did anciently, that I had stumbled.

When I was on the way to Gallands Grove, I stopped between trains at Jefferson, to visit Rev. Charles Eckles. He used to preach for the United Brethren, then the Methodist Episcopalians offered him more money and he went to preach for them. I used to see him at my father's house in Poweshiek County, and I counted him a smart young man, and was well acquainted with him, so I stopped with him several hours. I took good care not to tell him where I was going, but, "from the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh," so in our talk I ventured to say to him, "Mr. Eckles, please tell me why do the churches of to-day not have apostles, prophets, seventies, and all the officers that God set in the church? And why do they not have the gifts and blessings that we read of in the Bible?"

His answer was, "Mr. Roth, you are too inquisitive; we have outlived and outgrown them, as they were only for the early church. We have the Bible, and that is enough. So you ought to be satisfied with that, and not long for, and seek after that which is not for us."

Well, I had heard too much Latter Day Saint preaching, and believed too much Bible now, to believe all that. But of course I did not dare to go into an argument about it with him, for fear that I might give myself away as to where I was going. But I really wish that I might have a talk with Mr. Eckles now. Perhaps I might be able to give him some light on that subject. I would try, at least.

When I was on my way back from Sargent's Bluffs to Dow City, at little Sioux, an old, venerable looking man got on the car. I thought that it might be old Abraham, of Bible times. I gave him part of my seat.

The first thing he said was, "Where are you going?" I could not evade so straight a question, although I did not want to tell him, so I said, "I am going to Dow City to-day."

"So," said he, "perhaps you are going to attend the Latter Day Saint conference?"

That was another stunner for me, so I answered straight, "Yes, sir, for a few days at least."

"Are you a member?" came next.

"No, sir; but I am investigating their claims." I saw that I was into it, so I was going to make the best of it. As I was not known out there by anyone, I did not care so much.

Then I said, "Are you a Latter Day Saint?"

"Yes, sir; I am an elder in the church. My name is Josiah Ells. I am on my way to Dow City, too, and I shall be glad to have you go with me, and I will see that you are cared for."

Oh, I thought; how kind of you, good old Abraham; and the lump was all gone out of my throat. So we talked like old-time friends. I told him all about Brother White's work, and the terrible persecution that was aroused against it, and why I was going so far to investigate still further into the work.

We arrived at Dow City in a terrible rain. Joseph Luff was at the depot to meet those coming to conference. Brother Ells was the only Saint that got off the train, so Brother Luff said, "Well, come, Brother Ells, let us go."

"Oh, hold on," said Ells; "here I have an investigating brother; we must take care of him, too." Then Brother Ells introduced us to each other, and Brother Luff took me along to Elder J. R. Lambert's. Of course I got a Latter Day Saint welcome. We had not been there long till Bro. D. C. White and wife came in on the train from the east. He had been to my place, so I felt a little more at home. They had started to drive through with a buggy; but on the way their little girl had taken deathly sick, so they had to leave their rig in care of the rest of their party, and they took the train to get there in time to save the child's life. As soon as possible the elders present had prayer, then anointed the child with oil, as James says to do; then they laid their hands on her and prayed earnestly for God to heal her, and in less than ten minutes the child was perfectly well, and playing on the floor. I thought, is it possible that the Methodist Episcopal preacher meant that, when he said we would get the rest out west? I concluded if that is what we would get out west, I could endure all that, and more like it without shame. But the shame was on him, that he denied all that. That instance strengthened my faith at once, and I knew that the Methodist Episcopal reverend had misrepresented them.

Soon the teams came to take us out to the camp grounds. I wish I dare use the space I need to tell you how I was impressed with the kindness of all the Saints, and especially with the care I got from dear old Brother and Sister Pett and their fine family; God bless them. For I knew that they were God's true children by their actions, and their treatment to me made me love the gospel for their sakes, though I had been an entire stranger to all of them.

When I left the conference I had made up my mind that I would obey, at a more convenient season; but persecution ran high when I got home, and I felt discouraged. I began to lose interest, or rather the desire to obey, yet I believed it to be the truth, still by times my old doubts would loom up, mountain high, and I would say, Is there a reality in anything called religion? Are they not all humbugs? for I had seen much of humbug in what was called religion.

About this time I had a dream; I can give only part of it, for want of space. I thought some strange men came into our town; everybody set them down as terribly bad men, and anybody found in their company when they would be arrested would be sent to prison with them; and yet it seemed that I was inclined to be with them. What a disgrace it would be to me, should I be found with them when caught. So I kept back far enough just to be in sight of them, and yet not in their company. Some one, I knew not who, gave me a sharp ax to defend myself with, should I need to do so. I was told by some one that the test was soon going to be made, so as to see whether those men were cutthroats, and the test would be like this. That there was an exposition building erected and the outside door was so built that no one could tell where it was, but when those who were worthy to enter would touch the door with a finger, the door would open of itself at once, and as soon as they had entered, the door would close again; and no unworthy person could get in, for the door would not open for them. And if the door would open when those suspicious men touched it, then that was sure proof that they were honest men. So when I saw that they were going to enter the building, I kept a close watch on them, I kept back a block or so, so that I was not with them, and yet not so far away that, if the door opened for them, I could run and enter the building with them; but if the door did not open for them, I would be far enough away so that no one would suspect me of knowing anything about them. I followed along at a safe distance, so that I could see them plainly, and just as soon as they got in front of the building, one of them touched the door with his finger, and it opened so quickly that I hardly saw it. I said, They are all right; they are going in. So I started to run with all my might, in order to get in with them before the door closed. But, to my horror, before it was possible for me to get there they were all in and the door closed, and I outside. Oh, I suffered the horrors of hell! What was I to do? Will there ever be another chance for me to enter that grand building?

When I was in the deepest agony, a person appeared from somewhere, and asked me what my trouble was? I told him of my disappointment. He said, "You have delayed," and that being my own fault, gave me very little consolation. But after a while he said for me to wait a little and perhaps there would others come who were worthy to enter, and the door would open for them, and if I were ready, I could enter with them. In a short time some more of the Saints came. I stood close to the door. One who had the authority to do so put his finger on the door, and at once it opened, and they all passed in; I among them. Oh, glory; how happy I was! I was inside now; the door closed after us, and we seemed to be in a new world. Oh, how grand, no tongue can tell; no pen can describe the beauty and grandeur, but just inside of the entrance there were small apartments or rooms, one for each person who entered the building; and before anyone was allowed to go farther through the building, he had to go into his own room and there change his habiliment, from the top of his head to the soles of his feet, and put on the suit especially prepared for him, all uniform. Then, after he was adorned with his new suit, he was prepared to associate with the inmates. Well, I changed; I was in now, and I was happy.

I will leave the remainder of the dream and come back to this life again. I became more and more indifferent about obeying. But that dream made a deep impression on my mind. For a long time I could not get rid of it; I would hear that voice say, "You have delayed," but I shook it off, and it kept getting fainter and fainter. Still I kept going to hear the elders every time they came, for I loved to hear them, but it did not take hold on me as it did before. I realized that the Spirit was gradually withdrawing itself from me, yet I believed, just as much as ever, that it was the truth from high heaven restored again. But I realized, too, that if ever I was baptized, it would be by the principle of doing right, and doing my duty, and not because that I had a desire to be, for the desire was all gone.

On the 18th of January, 1880, Elder I. N. White was to preach again in the Bown Schoolhouse, eight miles from my place, as that was where most of the meetings were held; but we never missed a meeting. I told my wife before we started that morning, that if I did not change my mind, I would be baptized that day; but I had no desire to be. Oh, how I hoped that she would say something to discourage me, so that I would have an excuse. But she said, "You can do just as you please," so that threw the responsibility all on me. I took my clothes along, but after meeting I had given it up again. Brother Goreham came to me and said, "Well, Neighbor Roth, what do you think of it, now?" He was anxious to have me obey.

I said, "Well, I believe it is all right."

Then he said, "Well, if it is all right, what are you delaying for?" Delaying,—that word came like a thunderbolt to my soul; that was the word the person used against me who stood at the door of the exposition building. He said, "You have delayed," and oh, what misery it caused me. I did not want to go through the same ordeal again. And I answered Brother Goreham, "I am ready." We immediately went two miles south, to Walnut Creek, and I was baptized. An hour later, at Brother Lyke's, Brethren White and Lake, I believe, confirmed me. After confirmation we had a testimony meeting. During the meeting a very strange, but very pleasant feeling came over me. I did not understand it at the time; it was something different from what I had ever known before. One of the brethren arose and said that the spirit of prophecy was resting on some one who refused to yield to its promptings, and he turned and said it was me, and that the Lord had a great work for me to do if I was faithful. I began to feel as I did when I got into that grand building. Yet it was all so new, so strange, so different from what I had ever felt before, that I did not understand it. But I was satisfied that it was the work of the Lord, and that I had done his will and my duty.

The news spread like wildfire that Roth had joined the Mormons, as some had said, "He will be the last one that they will ever get." I stood high in society, held an office, and was township treasurer.

Three days later my father (then a United Brethren preacher) heard of it. Immediately he sent my sister to tell me that if I did not renounce Mormonism, he would erase my name from the family record, disinherit me, and never own me as a son any more. And that neither I nor one of my family should ever set foot on his premises again. But I told my sister to tell him that if he had the State of Iowa to give to me, he could never change my faith. What made it still worse for him, I had lost all confidence in his kind of religion. He erased my name from the record. His will read, "John shall have ten dollars and no more, because he joined the Mormons." If anyone would inquire for John Roth, he would say, "I don't know a John Roth. There is a John Mormon living over there; I guess that is the man you want to find." He would not notice me as we passed each other on the road. He never spoke to me after I joined the church, excepting once, and that time he wanted to read my title not clear to me. And in part he said, "You have made your father and mother out liars."

I said, "How so, father?"

He said, "You deny your baptism, and we had you baptized when you were a baby; and now you deny that, and went and got dipped by those C— Mormon.

I said, "Father, you won't allow me to come to your house, but I want you to come to my house, and fetch your Bible along; and if you can show me one place in your Bible where it intimates that they sprinkled babies for baptism, then I will return again."

He replied, "Oh, you little snot nose; you; you, you try to teach your father Bible. You, you ought to be ashamed. You ought to know better. I taught you better than that."

But that did not convince me that he was right and I wrong. But he clung to it till his death.

About sixteen years later, my good old mother, (she never was prejudiced against me,) took sick. Doctors and all thought she would die. They sent for all the children, except me; but she wanted to see me, too. But no, the verdict stood that John is a son no more. I got home on Tuesday from the Logan reunion. My sister saw me go by father's house, she told mother that I was home. Mother said, "Oh, call him in; I want to see him." My sister watched my return, and told me that mother had been longing to see me before she died. She wanted me to come in. I told her to go in and ask father whether he would allow me to come in to see my dear old mother? He said, "No; not until he renounces Mormonism." The next day he took sick, the next day he was delirious, and did not know anyone. I went to see him and mother then, but he did not know it. On the second day following he died, a bitter enemy to the true gospel, restored by the angel.

But the work spread, more were baptized every time the elders came, (or nearly so,) till perhaps thirty or forty were baptized. Then late in the fall of 1880, the subject of organizing a branch came up. Bro. I. N. White took it to God in earnest prayer and asked him to direct in the organization. I will give his own words, as nearly as I can remember. He said, "I asked God who wilt thou that shall be ordained to the office of elder, to preside over the branch? And I saw a light as bright as the noonday sun come down and rest over Brother Roth's house." I believe he said he heard a voice saying, "He shall be the elder." Then a light inferior to that came down and pointed out the next officer, and so on till all the officers were pointed out. Brother White told the vision to no one concerned at the time. The time for organization came, we met at Bro. J. C. Reams' house, Brother White in the chair. He first called for a vote for the elder. Who shall it be? and so on till every officer was chosen; and in every instance the choice was without a negative vote, and it was just precisely as was shown to Brother White. Then he told us how the Lord had shown him just what had been done now. And that was a great confirmation to all of the Saints, that God was directing them in the work. On the 12th day of December, 1880, I was ordained an elder by I. N. White and W. C. Kirk, at Newton, Iowa. I was immediately chosen as branch president. I served for several years, and my constant prayer was, Oh, my God, give me wisdom, so that I may be able to understand thee and thy word, and be able by thy wisdom to do that which will be for thy glory, and for the good of thy work restored again to man. I was always afraid that I would do something that would not be pleasing to God, which would injure his work.

I went to work at once with a will, and God blessed me. It was no task for me to get up before a crowd, for that was not new to me, having been before the public for some years. The first sermon I preached a full hour, with good liberty. I was happy. The happiest hours of my life are when I am preaching. All was peace and harmony in the branch; God was with us by his Spirit, and blessed us. But the Devil saw that that would never do, so he began to throw obstacles in the way in order to discourage me and to hinder the work. Too much peace and unity among the Saints to suit him. So he sent a man by name of P—t, (a member,) to sow discord and contention among the members. And he began to whisper to me that I was not called of God; that it was all man's doings; that they had done so, only to keep me in the church, so that I would not go out and contend against them.

About this time, when Satan was trying me the hardest, to quit the ministry, for I had been very zealous in the work, and made great sacrifice; paid all my own expenses, etc., etc., Brethren Goreham and D. C. White went with me eighteen miles south to open a new place, and continue for a week or more. Brother Goreham spoke on Saturday night, I on Sunday morning, and Brother White Sunday night. At the close of the Sunday night meeting, I surprised the brethren when I announced that the meeting was closed. Oh, I was in misery. I had no liberty in talking, and they none too much. I came to the conclusion that I was not called, and that I would quit, and never try to preach again.

So we started for home, eighteen miles away, in my cutter, on a bitter, cold, winter night. A deep snow was on the ground. After we got away from the crowd I told the brethren that I was going home, and to stay there, too; that I would never preach another sermon unless I got more evidence that God had called me. I had no doubt of the work; the only doubt was of my call. The previous evidence of my call was all gone from me. I could not recall a single evidence of my calling. When we got to Brother Goreham's it was very late in the night, and yet two miles to my home. I was heartsick; had the "blues" terribly. I was disappointed. So Brother Goreham persuaded me to stop till morning. We put up my team. I went to bed heartbroken, and I had a talk with the Lord about the matter. I told him that I was going home to stay unless he gave me an unmistakable evidence of my calling. I soon found myself at the foot of a very high mountain, I had just started up. I had gone only a few rods; had made the start, but had stopped; the road seemed very solid and safe, but very steep. While I was standing there I noticed that Brother White was close to me. I looked ahead up the road, and there I saw a man coming directly towards me, and I knew him at once, and said, That is the Savior. He came directly to me, reached out and took me by the hand and said, "I have called you to preach my gospel. Warn the people of their wickedness; tell them that I am coming to take vengeance on them in — years, — months, and — days, (these figures were taken from me again.) I will stand by you and bless you."

Well, from that time to this I have never doubted my call. I started again; he has blessed my feeble efforts. He has enabled me to baptize nearly five hundred. I immediately went to work again, and in a short time after this presented myself to General Conference for the field. I was appointed at once.

On the 14th day of April, 1884, I was ordained as first counselor to I. N. White, president of the Second Quorum of Elders, by E. C. Briggs, J. H. Lake, and J. R. Lambert. On the 10th day of April, 1886, I was ordained a member of the First Quorum of Seventy, by C. Scott, E. C. Briggs, and J. W. Gillen. And now for more than twenty-six years I have been sounding the gospel trumpet, and it is my heart's delight to do so. May God give me strength to continue for some time yet, for I dread to think of the time when I shall have to lay down the armor. For the Lord has fulfilled his promise to me, and has stood by me in various ways. When I was surrounded by a mob he took all fear from me, and I received no harm. When threatened with tar and feathers, knives and revolvers, he protected me. Why should I not serve him?

I would like to give many, many instances to show how God has blessed my work, but space will only allow me a few.

On one occasion, when Sister Perry's child was dying with a dread disease, she prayed with all the zeal of a devoted mother for God to send an elder to her before her boy should die, as all the children in town who took that disease died. The doctor said there was no help for them. God heard her supplication, and moved me to go to Oskaloosa at once.

I did not know why, but I had to go, and I went. I found the child dying. I anointed the boy with oil and administered to him as we are commanded in James 5: 14, and the Lord heard us. The boy was instantly healed. Also a boy at Mount Pleasant who had a deformed foot. The foot was all out of shape, and he hobbled along on the ankle. Mrs. Miller, the mother of the boy, was not a member, but she had faith in God's work, and she asked me to administer to the boy. Brother McDonald and I anointed him with oil and administered to him, and the bones were all straightened out, each one to its proper place, and the foot was well, and he was happy. The mothe. was baptized afterwards. God can and does answer prayer now, as well as in the past. He has not changed.

I want to give just one more. When Brother and Sister W. H. McCoy lived south of Grinnell, their daughter Mabel took very sick, I believe it was pneumonia. The doctors said she could not live, and gave her up. They sent for me. I went out there after dark, and the child seemed to be dying. I anointed her according to God's law, and prayed for her, and she was instantly healed, went onto the floor to play, and wanted something to eat.

Oh, how good God is to his people! Mabel is now grown up, and is a fine Latter Day Saint.

I could write much more, but I have gone over my allowance of space. In conclusion I want to say, this work is of God; let us all be faithful to our calling, and win a crown of eternal life in the celestial glory of God. I hope that I shall be able to bring still a few more souls into the kingdom of God. I only wish that the five hundred that I baptized were five hundred thousand, and all of them would prove faithful to the end. May God bless his people, and all be ready for Christ when he shall come. Come quickly, Lord Jesus, come.

A minister for Christ.

J. S. ROTH.

October 5 the branch of the church at Los Angeles, California, adopted a resolution expressing condemnation and abhorrence of the terrible outrage in the dynamiting of the Times building, and extending sympathy and financial aid to the bereaved families of those who were killed as a result of the explosion. Copies of the resolution were furnished the press and the mayor.

Oh, I wonder, wonder when I see so many good ministers at home, crowding each other, I wonder that they will not part with their home privileges, and go out to the heathen world, and reap a joy like this,—the joy of the Lord.—John G. Paton.

Infidel Eloquence.

On the 8th, the eloquent Ingersoll was called upon to deliver an address at the grave of the dead child of a friend at Washington City. In a remote corner of the Congregational cemetery a small group of people, with uncovered heads, were ranged around a newly opened grave. They included Detective and Mrs. George O. Miller and family and friends, who had gathered to witness the burial of the former's bright little son Harry, a recent victim of diphtheria. As the casket rested upon the trestles there was a painful pause, broken only by the mother's sobs, until the undertaker advanced toward a stout, florid complexioned gentleman in the party and whispered to him, the words being inaudible to the lookers-on. This gentleman was Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, a friend of the Millers, who had attended the funeral at their request. He shook his head when the undertaker first addressed him, and then said suddenly, "Does Mrs. Miller desire it?" The undertaker gave an affirmative nod. Mr. Miller looked appealingly toward the distinguished orator, and then Colonel Ingersoll advanced to the side of the grave, made a motion denoting a desire for silence, and in a voice of exquisite cadence delivered one of his characteristic eulogies for the dead. The scene was intensely dramatic. A fine drizzling rain was falling and every head was bent, and every ear turned to catch the impassioned words of eloquence and hope that fell from the lips of the famed orator. Colonel Ingersoll was unprotected by either hat or umbrella, and his invocation thrilled his hearers with awe, each eye that had previously been bedimmed with tears brightening, and sobs becoming hushed.

THE COLONEL SAID:

"My friends: I know how vain it is to gild a grief with words, and yet I wish to take from every grave its fear. Here in this world, where life and death are equal kings, all should be brave enough to meet what all the dead have met. The future has been filled with fear, stained and polluted by the heartless past. From the wondrous tree of life the buds and blossoms fall with ripened fruit, and in the common bed of earth patriarchs and babes sleep side by side. Why should we fear that which will come to all that is? We can not tell. We do not know which is the greatest blessing, life or death. We can not say that death is not as good. We do not know whether the grave is the end of this life or the door of another, or whether the night here is not somewhere else at dawn. Neither can we tell which is the more fortunate—the child dying in its mother's arms, before its lips have learned to form a word, or he who journeys all the length of life's uneven road, painfully taking the last slow steps with staff and crutch.

"Every cradle asks us 'whence?' and every coffin 'whither?' The poor barbarian weeping above his dead can answer the questions as intelligently and satisfactorily as the robed priest of the most authentic creed. The tearful ignorance of the one is just as consoling as the learned and unmeaning words of the other. No man standing where the horizon of life has touched a grave has any right to prophesy a future filled with pain and tears. It may be that death gives all there is of worth of life to live. If those who press and strain against our hearts could never die, perhaps that love would wither from the earth. Maybe a common faith treads from out the paths between our hearts the weeds of selfishness and hate, and I should rather live and love where death is king, than have eternal life where love is not. Another life is naught unless we know and love again the ones who know us here.

"They who stand with breaking hearts around this little grave need have no fear. The large and the noble faith in all that is, and is to be, tells us that death even at its worst is only perfect rest. We know that through the common walks of life—the needs and duties of each hour—their grief will lessen day by day, until at last this grave will be to them a place of rest and peace—almost of joy.

"There is for them this consolation: The dead do not suffer. If they live again, their lives will surely be as good as ours.

"We have no fear; we are all the children of the same mother, and the same fate awaits us all. We, too, have our religion, and it is this: Help for the living, hope for the dead."—Selected.

The Best.

Mother, I see you with your nursery light,
Leading your babies all in white,
To their sweet rest;
Christ, the Good Shepherd carries mine to-night,
And that is best.

I can not help tears when I see them twine
Their fingers in yours, and their bright curls shine
On your warm breast;
But the Savior's is purer than yours or mine—
He can love best!

You tremble each hour because your arms
Are weak, your heart is wrung with alarms,
And sore oppressed;
My darlings are safe, out of reach of harms,
And that is best.

You know, over yours may hang even now
Pain and disease, whose fulfilling slow
Naught can arrest;
Mine in God's gardens run to and fro,
And that is best.

You know that, of yours, the feeblest one
And dearest, may live long years alone,
Unloved, unblesed;
Mine are cherished of saints' around God's throne,
And that is best.

You must dread for yours the crime that sears,
Dark guilt, unwashed by repentant tears,
And unconfessed;

Mine entered spotless on eternal years—
Oh! how much best.

But grief is selfish; I can not see Always why I should so stricken be More than the rest;

But I know that, as well for them, for me
God did the best.—Helen Hunt Jackson.

COLORADO CITY, COLORADO, October 24, 1910.

Editors Herald: One evening of last June when looking for something suitable to present to the public in replying to the Brighamites or Disorganites, (why not call them by that name? it is a suitable exchange for "Reorganites.") I came across the statement of Brigham Young as copied in True Succession in Church Presidency, page 125, which reads, "I have many a time in this stand, dared the world to produce as mean devils as we can. We can beat them at anything. We have the greatest and smoothest liars in the world, the cunningest and most adroit thieves, and any other shade of character that you can mention. We can pick out elders in Israel right here who can beat the world at gambling; who can handle the cards, can cut and shuffle them with the smartest rogue on God's footstool. I can produce elders here who can shave their smartest shavers, and take their money from them. We can beat the world at any game. We can beat them because we live in the light of the Lord; we have the holy priesthood and hold the keys of the kingdom of God. But you may go through all the sectarian world, and you can not find a man capable of opening the door of the kingdom of God to admit others in. We can do that. We can pray the best, preach the best, and sing the best. We are the best looking and finest set of people on the face of the earth, and they can begin any game they please and we are on hand, and can beat them at anything they have a mind to begin. They may make sharp their two-edged swords, and I will turn out the elders of Israel with greased feathers and whip them to death. We are not to be beat. We expect to be a stumbling-block to the whole world, and a rock of offense to them.—Deseret News, vol. 6, p. 291; Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 77.

I decided not to use this claim of rascality, and demoralizing corruption; so base and foreign to even secular civilization, much less that of the kingdom of God. It did seem to me, that to a thinking man of just ordinary ability this open confession to sin and crime of almost every character would appear too absurd to credit as being truly said by the man. And besides, it was just the statement of one man and without sanction of the church over which he was presiding. But with other books I put True Succession in my book satchel, but with a firm resolution not to use this seemingly incredible claim. But to my surprise that evening on the street of Colorado Springs, before a large crowd of people, the Spirit directed me to read that statement concerning liars and mean devils; accordingly I did so, and just as I pronounced the last word, that same directing Spirit said: "Now read 132:26, Utah edition of Doctrine and Covenants." I read as follows:

"Verily, verily I say unto you, if a man marry a wife according to my word, and they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, according to mine appointment, and he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood, yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter into their exaltation; but they shall . . . be delivered unto the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemption, saith the Lord God."

I was then directed to offer the following: Now, if the claim of having liars, etc., was but the words and claim of one man, though he was president of a church, I would not think of presenting it here, because of its ridiculously silly and sinful aspect. But here, in one of their standard books, accepted and fully indorsed by the whole church, a book you will never find a Mormon elder minus of, is something back of Brigham Young, a doctrine permitting the commission of any and all crimes, save one, the shedding of innocent blood (polygamous blood). It is no longer chargeable to one man, but to the Mormon church, who, when they said, "He or she shall commit any sin or transgression," said as did Brigham, lie, steal, gamble, and be as mean as the devil himself in any shade of character mentionable. The point was well taken by the bystanders. Some said aloud, Good; others, Let the blame go where it belongs; and I felt rejoiced and thankful to God for the evidence that he does help in time of expediency, for I had not seen this connection before.

I have followed those "Disorganites" in reply several evenings on the street, have given that part of their doctrine to the public that they invariably fail to present, reserving it for private proselyting; and even then, as Peter says, with "pernicious ways" they leave out "blood atonement"; that is, that the blood of Christ is inadequate to cleanse from all sin, and hence requires the shedding of the sinner's own blood; and the Adam-god theory, which is that Adam was God, and the only God with whom we have to do; also the denial of the Holy Ghost conception, but liberally open the beauties of polygamy. I can say for one, that always under favorable circumstances I shall make reply to these people who deny the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ; Jude 1:4.

Peter said, "And many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evilly spoken of."—2 Peter 2:2. "Pernicious: having the quality of destroying; producing great injury, or mischief; deadly, tending to injure or destroy."—Webster.

My observations of late cause me to conclude that of all evils that those "Disorganites" have done, the bold and unwarranted assumption that God and Joseph Smith are responsible for the induction into the church of polygamy, is the most pernicious. And Peter declared that many should follow their mischievous, injurious, and deadly way. So we find men and ministers of every shade charging God and Joseph Smith, just as do the Utah Mormons, declaring that when they testify before a notary public that they, Mormons, can not be mistaken, as in the case of R. B. Neal in Sword of Laban leaflet No. 10, commenting on the oath of Lucy Walker Smith, reputed wife of Joseph Smith, jr. But her testimony turns the "sword" upon him, for she says therein that God gave her a powerful and irresistible testimony of the divinity of polygamy. Now, Mr. Neal and his church can not accept this. But his like swell the number of followers in the pernicious way.

FULTON, IOWA, October 19, 1910.

Editors Herald: We had one of the best conferences of the Eastern Iowa District that was ever held. The Sunday school convention was well attended. At night the local Sunday school rendered a very nice program.

Saturday morning there was a prayer meeting appointed at 9 o'clock; business at 10, and all went along nicely. Sunday at 9.30, Sunday school in charge of the district Sunday school superintendent, Elder C. G. Dykes, and the local superintendent, Clarence Heide. At 11 o'clock was the dedication of the church. John Heide, president of Fulton Branch, in charge. Elder James McKiernan preached the dedicatory sermon, which was indeed cheering, and Elder J. B. Wildermuth, district president, offered the dedicatory prayer. In the afternoon a sacrament meeting was held, in charge of Elder Warren Turner and Elder Ira Chamberlain, and at 8 o'clock, preaching by Elder Hills. We had a feast of good food all day Sunday; the good Lord cheered us, and the conference goes down in history as the best we ever held in this district. Saints came from all over the district, and we had a very large attendance, both of Saints and outsiders. The house was too small to hold all who came.

The Fulton Saints feel thankful that they have such a nice place to worship in. Brn. James McKiernan and L. E. Hills are here holding meetings, with a fair turnout, hoping that good will result from our conference and the continuing of the services since.

We have a nice Sunday school, and the attendance is fair. The last quarterly report shows an enrollment of fifty, an average attendance of forty-five. We feel cheerful here, hoping for good in the future. The Saints of the Eastern Iowa District are helping and sustaining the temporal arm of the work by their tithes and offerings, but there is still room for improvement.

JOHN HEIDE.

DENISON, KANSAS, October 21, 1910.

Dear Herald: Dropping in at Topeka on the 15th, we found a large convention of the Disciples assembled, and availed ourselves of the privilege of attending some of the few remaining meetings. On Saturday afternoon we saw the parade of the "Men's Bible School," headed by a squad of police, the city marshal, Topeka band, and Governor Stubbs. In the parade were men from seventeen States, carrying their respective banners and mottoes, many of which were attractive and interesting.

After the parade, Governor Stubbs delivered an address in the auditorium, where the main meetings of the convention were held, on the subject of good citizenship. But his talk was mostly on the temperance question. This being the first privilege we have had of hearing this noted governor, we were especially interested, and were impressed with his frank, earnest manner, and the straight, plain way in which he deals with the question. He referred with apparent pride to what had been done in Kansas, and said: "I don't know of a single open saloon or joint in Kansas, and if any man in Kansas will show me an open saloon or joint running in this State, and I don't close it up, and close it up quick, I will resign my job as governor." Now, that does not mean that there is no whisky sold here, for we have a few bootleggers and people who peddle whisky in satchels, and men who drive over from Missouri under the protection of the interstate commerce law."

While listening to the governor, we only wished that he might be able to spend the rest of his time in the Missouri campaign till the day of election. If people everywhere could only hear this chief executive of a State where they do things, it would have a great influence in favor of prohibition. I hope that not one Latter Day Saint in Missouri will fail to go to the polls on the 8th day of November and vote for the tenth constitutional amendment, which provides for state wide prohibition.

That part of the convention referred to which we attended, was the "Brotherhood of Disciples," an organization of men. Some of the chief things set forth by the different speakers as mostly demanding their attention, were the following: A necessity for more temporal work in connection with religious work. Temporal salvation as well as spiritual. Social conditions to be considered and dealt with. Politics should not be neglected by Christian people. A decline in the number of men entering and occupying in the Disciple ministry. The cause assigned,—“salaries are too small.”

We notice that many of the problems that are being considered by our people, (and we have the plan by which these problems can be solved, if we will only make use of it) are also being thought about by others. It seems that almost everywhere people are seeing the need of a religion that is more practicable. Oh, that we might more fully conform to that plan God has given us, and thus become "the light of the world"!

I have always believe that it helps us to appreciate the truth we have received, when we go and see what others have, and what they are doing.

We found Brother Okerlind holding meetings at Topeka, but he had to leave for home on Sunday afternoon.

We remained in Topeka, holding some meetings, till Thursday night, and on Friday came to this place. There is a Union church four miles south, where we will try to commence a series of meetings on Sunday.

Still in the conflict,
H. E. MOLER.

SHARON, PENNSYLVANIA, October 19, 1910.

Editors Herald: I thought a few lines from the Sharon Branch would be of interest to some of the Saints. The work is still gaining in this part of the vineyard. We have over a hundred members in our branch, and about one half of them attend. Bro. R. Baldwin has been holding street meetings, with good crowds and much interest. Bro. T. V. Thomas has also been holding street meetings at Middless, with good crowds, and as the good seed has been sown, we pray the honest in heart may see the light and be gathered into the sheepfold.

I have been only engaged two years in this glorious work, and I feel that I am one of the weakest of Saints, but my desire is to do what little I can for the advancement of this cause. I have never regretted the step I have taken, but have been made to feel glad that I ever embraced it. I have seen the power of the Lord made manifest in my home. I had a little boy lying very sick, and as my husband belonged to the church, we sent for Bro. T. V. Thomas to administer to him. He slept all that night, and in a few days he wanted to play. That shall be a testimony to me as long as I live that this is the work of the Lord.

I ask the Saints to pray for me, that I may hold fast to that which is good and endure to the end.

Your sister in the one faith,
MRS. HELENOR RICHARDSON.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, October 12, 1910.

Editors Herald: I feel constrained to encourage you, by complimenting the Sunday evening effort of August 21, 1910, HERALD editorial, October 5, 1910. Subject, "The church as a benefactor." It did my heart good to read it. I thought if we could only see eye to eye on the fundamentals of the temporal law, as we all see eye to eye on the fundamentals of the spiritual law, we would as a church go ahead by leaps and bounds; but the Lord is working and will cut his work short.

Truly the church is a benefactor in more ways than one. Your position is correct. After reading the sermon through, during the quiet moments, I tried to mentally and spiritually digest it. To one like myself, who has been prostrated upon the burning sands of affliction, flat on my back for three months, it was as a luscious feast of new hay to some poor, famishing animal. It did my hungry and thirsty soul good. It cheered and strengthened. May the God of our fathers bless and keep you as a choice olive branch, that you may bear much precious fruit. The following verses are the products of the sermon:

EQUALITY.

Tune: America.

Our Father hear our plea,
Author of equity,
To thee we pray
That thy great will be done,
Commenced by thy dear Son,
To make us all as one,
Be soon fulfilled.

Thy law, we do regret,
Is unfulfilled as yet,
But still we pray,
Oh, give thy people strength
To banish self at length,
Nor from this task to shrink,
Till victory's won.

Thy golden rule would we,
Be oh, so glad to see
Kept by thy band,
That all the world may know,
We are thy people true;
So help us thus to do
On this blest land.

Except ye equal be,
In earthly things, said he,
I will withhold.
Now thus my people you,
Should all your journey through,
Not only say, but do
My will. Amen.

Your brother,
SYLVESTER H. GARNER.

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

Editors Herald: I have been back to Brookfield, Ohio, where I once lived when a boy. I have a love for that place for several reasons; it was there I first remember hearing the gospel. Although I was born in the church, I can not say I remember much about the church until I heard it in Brookfield, as preached by W. W. Blair and Elijah Banta, who were on a mission, if my memory serves me right, in the year 1866. They were hunting for those who belonged to the church in earlier days, and they had learned that there were a few scattered sheep on those hills in Ohio, so they came and stayed for some time with the Saints there, and preached for us. I well remember those brethren, although Brother John Phillips and a Brother Anderson had been there and had done considerable preaching before Brethren Blair and Banta came.

There used to be a good branch at Brookfield, and when I went back there, September 23, it all came back to me. How sorry I felt when I saw the little church that was built by those good Saints who once worshiped there. I thought about my mother who had been in that building many a time; also my father. They are now with the faithful, I believe. Perhaps it was childish in me to look into the building on tip toes, and there picture in my mind where once those good Saints sat and worshiped.

It was there that I first heard the gift of prophecy and the gift of tongues. How strange it was for me to hear those speak in other tongues, when I knew that they could not speak but one language, and that was Welsh. I also remember seeing little g' 's trembling under the power of God's Spirit. It was a feast for me to have those days come back. I thought about Brother William, but a boy that he was, called and ordained in that church to the office of elder, and how glad I am, and how proud that he has been faithful and is to-day numbered among the patriarchs. He is living to-day in Cameron, Missouri.

There are others that come to my mind, who are still holding fast to that rod of iron, which, if they are faithful, will land them among the blest. I visited the old log cabin where my best friend died, and oh, how I thought about her! I went to Sharon and got a man to go out to the old home and take a picture of what was left, and then I went to the graveyard, standing by that tombstone, and had my picture taken; and what thoughts came over me! After they all left I went back again to the grave, and I thought I heard her say, You have been gone nearly forty-three years; now sit down and rest yourself. I sat and thought I shed a good many tears, and then I knelt with hat in hand and offered up a prayer, hoping that when my days were over it might be as well with me as with mother.

In order that I might learn who was living I went on Sunday, September 25, to the Welsh Congregational Church, and I was surprised that I was allowed the privilege to make inquiries about some I wanted to find. I was treated kindly, and at the close of the meeting quite a number came and took me by the hand and were glad to see me. In the afternoon, in company with a Samuel Jones, one of the sons of the Saints, I went to Sharon to worship with the Saints. Brother Sam seemed to enjoy the meeting.

One word I want to say about Sharon Branch. It is a good, spiritual branch, Bro. T. W. Thomas is in charge. October 1 and 2 they had a two-day meeting, and I will say it was a feast for me to be there. Brother Thomas makes a good president, a spiritual man, and is able to fill the place. One thing noticed in the government of the prayer meeting was, when one knelt, all knelt. I was pleased with that.

On Sunday I was there all day; at prayer meeting at 9 a. m., Religio at 10 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m., Sunday school at 2 p. m., prayer meeting at 3 p. m., preaching at 7.30 p. m. How is that for meeting; and mostly all the young were present. Brother Thomas is district president. I also heard Brother Baldwin preach Sunday evening. He is indeed able to tell the gospel story.

Now, dear Saints, when I was but fourteen years of age, and had not heard much about the gospel, I could see that God's hand was over me, and he has protected me many times since. The Lord did not want me to die at that time, and he protected me; he wanted me to live and embrace the gospel. He had a work for me to do, and whether I have done or am doing that work I know not; but one thing I do know, he has always been near me, and he has watched over me many a time. Once I remember I became despondent and vexed with myself because I could not do better, so I came to the conclusion to give up the fight and keep away from the Saints, for I felt that I was a disgrace to them, and I resolved to quit trying. In this frame of mind I retired to bed and had a dream that I was traveling in a strange country, but in the distance I could see a large building and men and women were going in. I did not know the nature of the gathering, so I resolved to investigate, and in I went. My custom when I go into a strange church is to sit in the back part, but in this case the seats were all taken, so I made my way up the aisle; but all were taken even on the platform. No seat for me; so I was about to turn back, when some one started to sing a favorite hymn of mine, and he broke down; so he called me by name and said, "Brother Lewis, sing that hymn," and then Joseph, who was in charge, arose and said, "Yes; Brother Lewis," and handed me the Hymnal, and I sang: "Let us shake off the coals from our garments." I awoke to plead with God for help, and ever since I have been trying in my weak way to please God, who is ever watching over me, day and night.

I am still in the faith,

Your brother,

JOSEPH R. LEWIS.

Extracts from Letters.

Benjamin Pearson, writing from Tigris, Missouri, says: "We appreciate the good work you are doing, as we read the editorials first, then the items of business throughout the church, and judging from them we realize that the work is advancing, and we pray that it may continue."

Bro. J. W. Morgan, Colorado City, Colorado: "I have just returned home from Raton, New Mexico, and Trinidad, Colorado. During my stay of ten days I held four preaching services and blessed two children, presided over one prayer service, administered three times to the sick. I was called to Raton by telegram to conduct the funeral service of our young brother, Levi Turner, son of Bro. John and Sr. Maggie Turner, of Yankee, New Mexico."

News From Branches

CAMERON, MISSOURI.

Your pages contain valuable information, and food for thought. With interest I search from week to week the contents of the same. I have been a constant reader of your columns for over forty-five years, and you have long since become one of the essential things of our home, and without you we certainly would be very lonesome. You are a great power for good, and no Saint's home should be without you. Long may you live!

As there are many inquiries about the price of land, church and school privileges, etc., I will answer through your columns. This is a good farming country; also fruit and stock; healthy; good water. Cameron is on the main line of the Burlington, and the Chicago, Rock Island Railroads, thirty-five miles east of Saint Joseph, fifty-five miles northeast of Kansas City, with Chicago and Saint Louis on the east. In those four cities we have an excellent market; as good as can be found in the United States. Farms can be had from fifty to one hundred dollars per acre, depending on improvements and location. Cameron has a population of four thousand and five hundred. It has good schools and good society. Building lots can be had from one hundred to five hundred dollars, fifty by one hundred and fifty feet, in the residence parts. Homes from one to three thousand dollars. Some good homes with two lots, for sale at fifteen hundred dollars. There is a good branch here, with a neat church building; membership about one hundred and twenty. There are two services Sunday, besides the Sunday school and Religio; mid-week prayer meeting.

The crops here this year are good, including fruit. The first frost of the season was October 21. Ice in some places. My advice to all contemplating locating in the regions round about, either in the country or town, is to rent for the first year. That will give ample time to look around, and locate where it suits. Do not buy in haste; nor because some one thinks you have a bargain. Satisfy yourself first. Farms rent for half the crop, or from three to five dollars per acre cash. Town property, three and four room cottages, five to six dollars; five and six rooms, eight to twelve dollars, close in.

On October 10, seventy of the Saints by actual count, old and young, gave Bro. and Sr. J. C. Elvert a surprise. It was their forty-second wedding anniversary. In a short but impressive speech, in behalf of those present, Bro. I. McCord presented the highly respected, aged couple with a handsome library table, as a token of the respect and esteem in which they are held by their friends. Brother and Sister Elvert expressed their gratitude in words, with tears of joy, which were very impressive. Refreshments were served from well-filled baskets, brought by the good-natured company, and the evening was spent in a social way. The time to return to their respective homes came much too soon. Evidently there were many present that did not wish to retire, for the clock was put back two different times; but fortunately for those who did not believe in being out after midnight, some carried the correct time; so, after wishing them many happy returns, the good old hymn, "God be with you till we meet again" was sung, and the benediction was pronounced by the writer.

I am pleased to say that the spiritual condition of the work in Far West District is very satisfactory, and it is encouraging to see so many of the young renewing their diligence in the work. I wish to say to the various branches that have kindly answered my former letters, relative to the holding of meetings, that I have been delayed some in getting out to my field, owing to the necessity of getting my home completed before cold weather. I shall soon, however, be at liberty to enter upon my work.

The reunion held at Stewartville, Missouri, was a success in every respect. A request came from the citizens of Cameron, asking the Saints to hold their next reunion, 1911, on the Chautauqua grounds, near this place, which is provided with plenty of good water, electric lights, and good sidewalks. A vote of thanks was extended to the citizens for their kindly offer, but it was decided by small majority that the next reunion be held at Stewartville. I believe, however, that a mistake was made in turning away from this open door; nevertheless, we are submissive to the will of the majority, until such time as we will be able to convince them of their error.

Your brother,

WILLIAM LEWIS.

SEVENTH AND HARRIS STREETS, October 24.

CENTRAL CHICAGO.

Sunday, October 16. Elder F. M. Cooper was called to Mission, Illinois, to preach two funeral sermons; so he did not occupy the pulpit as was announced. Elder Pement preached an excellent sermon on the seriousness of the work we are engaged in, that we do not fully appreciate our privileges and are not improving the opportunities as we should. We were pleased to have Bro. A. N. Hoxie, jr., with us Sunday morning. His talk to the Sunday school was much appreciated; also his violin solo and talk to the young folks in the evening.

Wednesday evening the services were quite well attended.

in charge of Elder Cooper and Bro. James Lang. We were quite pleased to have Sister Cooper worship with us.

The Gleaners met at the home of Sr. H. P. W. Keir Thursday, and it was previously decided to postpone the Pioneer Social indefinitely.

Friday evening the subject, "Does it pay to be popular," will be discussed by representatives from the West and South Sides, at our Religio session. Although many may not consider it proper to gain popularity, yet we all desire to be popular, or held in high esteem.

BAY CITY, MICHIGAN.

As it has been a long time since anything has been said of Valley Branch, perhaps a few words will not be amiss. Bay City is said by some to be the county seat of Satan; and yet all of the eldership have stayed entirely away, or nearly so, for a long time, excepting during the reunion which convened here in August, from the 12th to the 22d. Some good was done; some are investigating the work, from what was taught at that time.

It was the privilege of the writer to attend the Whittmore conference, and our worthy leader, Elder J. W. Wight, came home with us and tarried four days; and it was surely a source of comfort to the Saints of Bay City to receive the good instruction and wise counsel of Brother Wight.

Bro. H. A. Doty came and tarried till Thursday morning, when he, in company with Brother Wight, went to Lansing to attend the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana conference.

While Brother Wight was with us he set in order our branch, by way of ordaining the proper officers, to more perfectly carry on the work of the Master. The writer was ordained to the office of elder, and Bro. John Bellenger to the office of priest. This will give Valley Branch a full quorum of officers, and so we hope to improve every opportunity, as our church work here has passed through some discouraging times. We hope to rebuild the waste places, and again establish the Religio work, and we invite the elders to come and assist. Ever praying for the redemption of Zion, I am your colaborer,

E. S. WHITE.

COMINS, MICHIGAN.

The branch business meeting was held October 1; was well attended, and a good spirit prevailed. The Saints are waking up to the fact that it is their duty to be present at business meeting. It makes us feel glad to see Saints coming along the line of duty. We are glad to report that the secretary of the Religio and Sunday school said her reports showed the largest average attendance she has ever reported.

Our members are scattered from one mile to nine miles. We are glad to note the zeal of the Saints who live so far away. Our deacon, Bro. Delmont Marshall, is about the farthest away, but most always has the schoolhouse open on time. The sacrament was well attended and enjoyed.

October 9, E. D. Fultz occupied the speaker's stand. The writer had the pleasure of meeting with the Saints at Hillman, attended the morning meeting, and prayer meeting in the afternoon. I went to the high school and preached at 3 o'clock, and at 7.30 in the evening occupied the stand at the Rea schoolhouse with good attendance. We were glad to meet with the Saints at that place again. Bro. Emory D. Fultz started Wednesday for the Whittmore conference.

INDIANA.

Writing last to your pages found me at Wirt, Indiana, getting ready for the two-day meeting, which was held there July 2, 3. We were all glad to see Elder John Harp back in time for the two-day meeting, as he had been called home in May to lay away his beloved wife and daughter. We had a good time with the Saints there.

Our next two-day meeting was at Byrnesville, where we also had good meetings, and Elder Harp baptized a sister. As Elder Harp was called to Bicknell to baptize a sister, the writer and Brother Zahnd took charge of the two-day meeting at Leavenworth. The writer continued the meeting through the week and baptized three before leaving, and at the next two-day meeting, at Derby, was met by Brother Harp, and we continue the meetings for a week. As we had a very good interest the writer stayed a week longer, while Brother Harp went to Millstone to hold a two-day meeting.

While at Derby the writer was privileged to baptize two more into the kingdom, and the writer joined Brother Harp at Millstone, where we had large, interested crowds. After leaving Millstone, we held two-day meetings together at Lamar, New Harmony, Hyatt, and Clay City, with fair interest. While at Clay City, Brother Harp baptized three, a Brother and Sister Russell, and a Sister Hyde.

After leaving Clay City, Brother Harp took charge of the two-day meetings at Indianapolis, New Trenton, and New Albany, and the writer held some meetings at Bicknell, Leavenworth, and Milltown. While at Leavenworth the writer baptized two more, a Sister Allen, and Frank Lahue, a promising young man.

Last Saturday and Sunday, October 15, 16, we held our district conference at Byrnesville. The conference was a spiritual one; some said the meetings were the best they ever attended. Brother Harp is still continuing the meetings there, preaching to interested crowds.

The writer arrived here yesterday and spoke to an interested crowd last night; and after he had closed the meeting questions were put to him from every side, and we had an interesting time for a while. There is more work in the district than we can attend to. Pray the Lord of the harvest to send us more laborers.

As ever in gospel bonds,

JACOB HALB.

CORYDON, INDIANA, October 20, 1910.

SOUTHERN KANSAS.

I read with much interest the news of the different missions. I thought a word from southern Kansas might interest others. I entered the mission field with Bro. F. C. Keck July 1, to labor in southern Kansas. We started operations at Wichita, first preaching in private houses, then in front yards of Saints, and finally on the streets. The result was that we baptized a fine young man and his wife. Many heard the word preached, and we got the Saints together and organized a Sunday school of more than thirty members. We hope to see the work grow there till a branch may be organized, and we are going to work to that end. There are others there who are interested and investigating.

From Wichita we wended our way to the western part of the State, Lakin being our first stop, where Brother and Sister McLain, with their son, live. We started immediately to secure a place to occupy. Found five churches, only two with pastors, but all too good for a servant of God to preach in. However, the Methodists, after voting us out, reconsidered and allowed us to preach Sunday night, which we did, showing them the difference between us and the Utah Mormons, as the cry had gone over town that two Mormons were in town seeking a place to preach.

Our effort, we believe allayed much prejudice. As we attended their Sunday school the following Sunday, and while the pastor gave us the cold shoulder, the young people came to me and said that everyone in the class had voted to have me teach them. Well, the owner of the opera hall heard of us and sent us word we could have his building to preach in as long as we wanted it. His name is Snow, and is a nephew of Pres. Lorenzo Snow, of the Utah church. He told me President Snow came to him one time and told him if he would join the church they would ordain him a bishop and give him charge of a ward—and they preach a God-called ministry.

We got out bills and advertised our meetings. But few came out, and at the end of two weeks we closed our effort. One of the business men of the town, belonging to the Christian Church, attended some and bought a Book of Mormon and other literature. I saw him a month later, and he told me he believed the Book of Mormon, and that he had showed it to as many as sixty persons since he got it, only a very few had ever seen the book, and the few who pretended to know all about it, his minister among them, when asked their opinion of it, he could tell right away they knew nothing about it, before they had said a half dozen words.

Having earned some money here working, and the railroad offering reduced rates to Denver, Colorado, we took advantage of it and made a flying trip and attended the Colorado district conference at Denver, held September 8 and 9, which we enjoyed very much. Brother Keck had a pleasant visit with his brother, A. J., and we enjoyed the wonderful scenery that country afforded; especially the mountains, the first we had ever seen.

In a week we were back in our field and started preaching in a schoolhouse near Kendall, Kansas, having arranged for it before going to Denver. Here live two noble sisters, Helmick and Clayton, and here we experienced a real taste of missionary life. The first two weeks everything went well, the house was full nearly every night. A Holiness preacher asked permission to occupy Sunday night, stating it was his regular appointment. We gave way to him, and he attacked our position, but I must say it was the weakest effort I ever listened to. But this stirred up Satan's hosts, for they sent us word that they were going to mob us the next night. We were not to be scared by threats, so on Monday night our crowd was as large as ever, and a good majority were our friends and they dared them, the mob which had come, to start anything. Realizing their position, they kept still. We continued till Thursday, when we closed our effort there.

Brother Keck baptized three, all heads of families. One of them, Bro. Thomas Dodge, owns the land on which the schoolhouse stands. He has a lovely family of wife and six children and by the Spirit, through Brother Keck, he was told he would live to see everyone of his family in the church.

Many others were convinced we have the true way, but put it off. We sold them supplies to start a Latter Day Saint Sunday school, in place of a union one which they were carrying on. We were receiving so many calls for preaching that Brother Keck and I had decided to separate, and just before leaving Kendall, received word from Brother White that he was transferring Bro. R. F. Slye from the Far West District to this field, and instructing that Brother Keck could go alone, while Brother Slye could be associated with the writer.

Brother Slye came to Wichita; I met him there, and after preaching to the Saints there over Sunday, October 9, started together for Winfield, where we are now domiciled at the pleasant and hospitable home of Bro. J. J. Boswell, preaching in a schoolhouse near his home, and having fair attendance and interest.

Brother Keck went south, into Stevens County, where several had written for preaching. We have several places ahead of us that are looking and waiting for us to visit them. We will get to them as soon as possible. I have had good success in selling Brother Macgregor's work, A Marvelous Work and a Wonder. I consider it very good in setting forth the claims of the restored gospel.

Hopefully in the work,

Conference Notice.

The Southern Missouri district conference will convene with the Thayer Branch, on Saturday, November 12, 1910, at 10 a. m. It is essential to the best interests of the work that every branch be represented at the conference, sending full and correct reports, also their quota of the assessments, to help pay the district expenses. Reports sent by mail should reach the undersigned by November 9, at the latest. Benjamin Pearson, secretary.

The Presidency.

To the Presidents of Districts and of Branches not in Districts: Kindly send me the following information: A list of all the branches in districts and the name of the town nearest to the branch, also the name and the town nearest to your branch, not organized in a district. Further, I wish the names of all towns where we have Saints living, not in branches, as far as you may have knowledge of the same.

Respectfully,

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

The Bishopric.AGENT'S NOTICE.

To the Saints of the Portland, Oregon, District, Greeting: Having my hands tied so I am not able to meet with you personally, I take this means of letting you know the condition of your Bishop's agent. Last month the families' allowances overlapped our bank account about fifty dollars, and another month's allowance is about due.

I raised the money myself last month, and expect to this month if some one does not respond, for I can not think of our missionaries having their self-sacrificing wives communicate the news to them that they are deprived of their scanty allowance. You Saints who have any heart in you, and have been blessed with the good things of earth, think of this; especially those who have not paid their tithing. God has said that he has created sufficient for all, and to spare, and he who will not impart of his substance to the poor and needy shall lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment.

While in conversation with one of our elders a short time ago, I asked if he was teaching the law of tithing. His response was that he did not know as it was wise to teach it, for fear of doing harm; and here our salvation is hanging upon it. I believe this financial law should be taught by every traveling elder. Let us all wake up to the fact that we are robbing God by withholding our tithes and offerings. We say we love God, and the plan he has given to save us. Then who should be backward in teaching it?

True, many of the Saints in our district have done well. So remember the law is not for the righteous, but for the transgressor. Saints, I do not write this to scold, but it is your duty to pay your tithing. We need your tithing to help carry on God's work.

My address is,

L. STOVER, Bishop's Agent.

VANCOUVER, WASHINGTON.

Pastoral.

To the Officers and Saints of the British Isles, Greeting: I herewith inform you that the following brethren have been appointed as assistants in charge of the following territory: G. W. Leggott, in the Manchester District and the former Leeds District; J. W. Taylor, in the Birmingham District; E. B. Morgan in Eastern and Western Wales Districts. All matters requiring the attention of the minister in charge should be communicated to these brethren. Bro. Rees Jenkins, until further notice, will have charge of the work in Leeds, acting as pastor. Thomas Jones will labor in southwestern England, and Eastern Wales District. Thomas Taylor will labor in the Sheffield District, with Sheffield as the objective point.

The London District will be provided for in the near future. I desire to give a hearty invitation to the local ministry to give assistance in the various localities of the mission. We feel grateful to those who have already endeavored to do their duty in this respect. I am sorry to say that but one third of the Saints have already responded, and as a consequence the failure of the other two thirds to do their duty in this regard has left the mission hundreds of dollars in debt. If all the membership could see their way to sacrifice a shilling per month, sufficient money would be in hand by which we should be able to maintain the work and to be independent of any outside help.

Now, dear Saints, there is much required of us, both in the way of sacrifice and labor, to make the work of the Lord a success in this land. I feel confident that if we will only work harmoniously, each doing his work faithfully, that great good will accrue to the church. There are many obstacles in the way of progress. Utah Mormonism has to be contended with. They have about three hundred missionaries in the British Isles. When God and his people are working together, there is no power that can impede its progress. Let us combine our efforts, and press forward with greater diligence in the conflict against sin, and bring victory to the cause of our Redeemer.

Trusting that we will have the blessing of God to attend our future efforts, I remain,

Your well wisher and colaborer,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

Marriages.

(The following marriage notice was received some time ago, but was delayed in the business department of the office by being mislaid. We trust this will satisfy the recent inquiry from Brother Hawkins.)

A beautiful wedding, with a very impressive ceremony, was one of the closing features of the reunion of the Northern California District, held at Irvington, September 2 to 11. The contracting parties were Bro. William H. Dawson, of Sacramento, and Sr. Rose A. Post, of San Jose. The wedding took place at 12 o'clock, noon, on the last Sunday of the reunion: Elder C. W. Hawkins, stepfather of the bride, officiating. The bride and groom left on the afternoon train for Los Angeles; and on their return will make their home at 610 Thirtieth street, Sacramento.

CONCERNING COMMUNICATIONS TO THE PRESIDENCY.

We have thought for some time that a few words of instruction touching matters of complaint and letters asking for information as to church procedure might be effective of good and in some cases relieve the situation to a degree at least.

All persons writing the Presidency for information or instruction, especially officers in the field and men in charge of local work, should keep copies of their letters and not request that those they write be returned to them, as such letters are kept on file in the office of the Presidency both for reference and for security in case controversy should arise on the matters involved in the correspondence. We have neither the disposition nor the time to copy such letters, and if matters of importance are involved the safety and good will of all parties will be best maintained by those who write keeping copies of their own communications.

Officers writing to the Presidency asking for the expression of opinion or for decision, said opinions or decisions to be based upon suppositious questions, will do well to remember that the Presidency can not justly express such opinions or render such decisions where it is obvious they may be made applicable to actual existing conditions in cases which may in time come up in controversy before the High Council.

Officers should not take up stories of ministerial misconduct or charges of immorality, and send these stories and charges to the Presidency without securing the statements of complaint and the charges made in writing, together with the names of such witnesses as may have actual knowledge of the matters stated. They should not listen to charges against others for misconduct unless the parties making such charges reduce them to writing with a view to their being lodged with the proper officers of the branch, district, or general church, with a view to action against such wrongdoers. Elders in the field should neither listen to stories of evil about their compeers, unless the parties telling them are willing to reduce them to writing, nor should the elders if they do listen to them relate them in the hearing of others. Mischievous gossip is bad enough in anybody, but it is far worse and more despicable among those who are associate officers in the general work. If anybody offers an evil tale to an officer in the field of a fellow officer he can without discourtesy at once refuse to hear.

Copies of important papers lodged in the hands of the Presidency may be obtained if the demands for such copies are legitimate, by request made in writing to the proper officers in whose custody the papers are held. Copies of papers in final cases before the High Council will not be granted to those who may desire them, except upon request to the Presidency and their direct order upon the secretary of the Council, for the making and delivery of such copy. Original papers will not be allowed to be withdrawn from the custody of the secretary.

The Presidency is willing to give such information concerning procedure in stated cases as may be within their power, but must not be expected to express opinions or to give decisions upon ex parte statements; that is, statements made by those on one side of the controversy. This is based upon the unfortunate failing of humanity which causes every man to state his case most favorably for himself. He may do this unconscious of any intent to really injure his neighbor or the one with whom he disagrees, though he may be just as unconsciously biased in his own favor.

By remembering the foregoing, individuals sending communications to the Presidency will be better able to keep within the lines of propriety in their communications. It is a safe rule in private or general correspondence to observe this rule, not to write to another person that which the writer would be ashamed or afraid to have read by a third party, should it fall into such hands. Especially is this true if writing with reference to the conduct of others. A word to the wise is sufficient.

JOSEPH SMITH, for the Presidency.

LIPS THAT PRAY AND HANDS THAT HELP.

Some one has said that it takes at least three individuals to live the Christian religion—two men and God. Perhaps there is a degree of truth in that statement.

"What," we are asked, "Can not one live his religion alone?"

No, one can not live the Christian religion without coöperating with God, which makes two, and Christ said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There we have the other individual, making the three, two men and God.

In one of the poems written by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll we find these lines:

The hands that help are better far
Than lips that pray.

That sentiment may have pleased the great agnostic, but there is a higher ideal than that. We say let the lips that pray and the hands that serve be united in one individual.

Belief in the fatherhood of God inspires those words of song and prayer that spring from the lips that pray. Belief in the brotherhood of man leads to those acts of service that give employment to the hands that help. The man who believes in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and so shapes his life that it expresses such belief, is the true Christian and the best citizen.

It is not enough that we shall worship God; we must administer to the needs of our fellows; and not spiritual needs alone, but temporal needs as well. "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves," is the scriptural injunction.

It is charged that right at this point the Protestant churches have broken down. They have no message for the poor and the oppressed. They have not emphasized the brotherhood of man. In his article on The Spiritual Unrest; Ray Stannard Baker said:

One of the most evident tendencies of Protestantism in New York City has been the movement of the churches up town, or out of town, following the movement of the rich or well-to-do people. In fact, the Protestant churches for over a century have been in a constant condition of flight away from the common people. When poor people, or foreigners, or Jews moved in, the Protestant churches moved out.—American Magazine, June, 1909.

On the same subject, Rev. Charles Stelzle, superintendent of the labor department of the Presbyterian Church, said:

Nearly every city in America is witnessing the removal of its churches from the densely populated sections where the church is most needed. Within recent years forty Protestant churches moved out of the district below Twentieth street in New York City, while 300,000 people moved in. Alarmed for her safety and her very life, the church has sounded a retreat in the face of the greatest opportunity which has ever come to her.—Ibid.

These conditions moved the Reverend Dr. Crapsey to say that we "are standing at the deathbed of a great religion."—Everybody's Magazine, April, 1906.

The churches have withdrawn from the poor, and the poor have lost confidence in the churches. Wage earners are joining labor unions and fraternal societies, but they are not joining the church.

What is the attitude of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints on this question of brotherhood? Our position is outlined for us in the revelations of God in which we learn that class distinctions are not to continue in the church. There are to be no bond or free, Jews, or Gentiles, but all are to be citizens of one kingdom, 'children of God and brothers in very deed, having not respect of persons, being mutually helpful and full of love.

If this be true, then let us consider the following questions: What shall we do for the woman whose husband dies and leaves her with five children to support? What shall we do for the man who is stricken with tuberculosis, who will die of consumption if he continues at his present work, and will die of starvation if he quits it? What shall we do for the man who is down and out? What shall we do for the wage-earner who is thrown out of work during a business depression?

We do not refer to tramps or beggars. We refer to worthy people who are unfortunate. They are our brothers. Shall we wrap our cloaks around us and hie away lest they get a dollar away from us? Here is work for the hands that help.

What is the solution of the problem? The old Jerusalem church had the solution. Those members who had possessions that they could spare sold them and gave to those who were in need. The same plan will work to-day, with modifications to meet changed conditions. It matters not whether that which we can spare be goods, or land, or labor. In the church there are hundreds who earn daily a little more than they need, some of them earn much more than they need. They are strong and capable. To keep all that they earn might be pleasant; but what was the injunction:

"We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves." If we do not do that we had better cease to pray, lest in the absence of the hands that help the lips that pray be accounted blasphemous.

We have every reason to suppose that this work was done in a systematic manner in the Jerusalem Church. When possessions were sold the means secured was placed in the hands of the proper individuals to be distributed in a just and equitable manner on the basis of needs. The Lord has outlined to us a systematic and orderly plan for the carrying on of such work. To cast nickels or dimes to blind people on street corners by no means meets the needs of the situation.

The mere giving of money is not all that is contemplated. Often the best way to help individuals is to help them to a place where they can help themselves. That is all that many unfortunate people ask for. To help them in a practical way is applied Christianity.

A part of the work of the church is to extend financial aid to the needy in such a way as not to destroy their self-respect and natural independence, but rather in such a way that in time they may become self-supporting. It is a part of the work of the well-to-do to contribute of their means so that the church may be equipped with the necessary funds with which to carry out such a program in a systematic and lawful manner, thus giving employment to the hands that help as well as to the lips that pray.

NOTICE TO THE ELDERS.

A letter recently received by a member of the Presidency from a man not a member of the church calls our attention once more to the matter of the recent "finds" in Michigan of archæological significance. For some time we have felt disposed to issue a word of warning to the elders in this direction. Inasmuch as various leading authorities in American archæology have pronounced these Michigan finds frauds, we think it inadvisable for any of the elders to advance these finds as evidence, in debate or otherwise, as the statements of the authorities thereon would at once be offered in refutation. If these finds are genuine "relics of the past" we have nothing to lose in awaiting proper and complete determination thereof. If they should finally prove to be frauds or "fakes," then present caution will prove future satisfaction.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Next week we will begin the publication of a series of six articles from the Presiding Bishop, Bro. E. L. Kelley. This series will include articles on Surplus, Consecration, the Order of Enoch, etc. The first will be entitled, "The discharge of duty."

Every reader of the HERALD should read the advertisement of the circulation department on next to the last page of this issue. After reading it please hand the HERALD to some Saint who is not a subscriber, calling his attention to this announcement, and thus "warn your neighbor." Let every HERALD subscriber become a "booster" for the next two months and note the splendid results. Does this mean YOU?

A letter from Bro. F. G. Pitt, dated at London, England, October 23, received too late for publication says that he and Sister Pitt are about to leave for Marseilles, thence to Alexandria about November 2, by steamer. They proceed from Egypt to Palestine. On account of cholera in Naples they will abandon their proposed visit to Italy. Bro.

Pitt's letter will appear in full next week. His address in Jerusalem will be, Jerusalem, Palestine, care Thomas Cook and Son, Tourist Office, David Street.

We are also in receipt of a letter from Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths, from London, England. He was to have sailed with Brother Pitt, but could not secure passage on the same boat, so sailed one week earlier, October 25. A card received at about the same time announces his arrival in Marseilles. He will visit Port Said, then take steamer to Jaffa, and from Jaffa proceed to Jerusalem by rail. He reports that Brother and Sister Pitt accomplished good by their labors in England. He also reports that Brother Rushton and family sailed for America on the Ivernia, October 11. Brother Griffiths' letter will appear next week.

The Macomb Journal, Macomb, Illinois, October 28, contains an excellent four column article from the pen of Elder Mark Siegfried, historian of the Nauvoo District. The article is entitled, "The Smiths were not polygamists." This is the second article to appear in the Macomb Journal, from Brother Siegfried, and we trust will be productive of good in correcting popular errors.

A Christian man was being urged to invest a small sum of money in an enterprise which was perfectly legitimate, and which gave strong indications of earning inordinate returns for all who helped to establish the business by their investments. As he weighed the matter, and discussed it with some friends who, like himself, were considering investing in it, one of them asked him whether he hesitated because he was afraid that the enterprise might fail. "No," was his answer, "I am afraid that it may succeed." In astonishment, they asked him if he was joking. He replied that he was perfectly serious; and then he explained how he meant literally and exactly what he had said: that he feared for the effect upon himself if, by the investment of a small amount of money, he should receive a return that would be so out of proportion to the investment that it would amount to wealth for him; he feared the unsettling influence of such speedy and disproportionate dividends; he feared the effect of wealth won in that short-cut way, and by his own seeking; he was ready to accept the responsibility and stewardship of wealth if God wanted to send it to him unsought, but he hesitated to seek it in any such easy-going way as this.

"His grace turns our grief to glory."

"The new life is full of new beginnings."

"Christ answers our heart-cries; not our words."

POLYGAMY FROM A NON-MORMON VIEW POINT.

—PART 2.

BY CHARLES L. CROW, OF LOGAN, IOWA.

V. S. Peet justifies polygamy because David practiced it. Why does not Mr. Peet justify murder because David committed it?

Though Joseph Smith and his followers were and are of the belief that salvation was and is attained through righteous obedience to God, yet Brigham Young promulgated a different doctrine to his followers: "Verily, verily I say unto you, if a man marry a wife according to my word, and they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, according to mine appointment, and he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder, wherein they shed innocent blood—yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter their exaltation."—Utah Doctrine and Covenants 132: 26.

Here the innocent are understood to be the followers of Brigham Young; those who rejected Brigham Young, the sinners.

Though divine and statutory laws forbid murder, yet Brigham Young taught "a saving ordinance." "This is loving our neighbor as ourselves; if he needs help, help him; if he wants salvation and it is necessary to spill his blood on the earth in order that he may be saved, spill it."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 220.

Just how this blood spilling salvation was to be accomplished, was set forth in the following direct language by one of the high counselors of the Utah church: "I say that there are men and women that I would advise to go to the President immediately, and ask him to appoint a committee to attend to their case; and then let a place be selected, and let that committee shed their blood."—Deseret News, vol. 6, p. 235.

"The Danites," "the blood atoners," and "the destroying angels," under varying pretexts, caprices, or whims, or for greed or direction, according to a preponderance of evidence, have committed almost every crime known on the calendar of crime.

Respected citizens of Iowa and Nebraska, who were once residents of Salt Lake City, but became disgusted with the loathsome practice of polygamy, and horrified at the atrocious acts of the "destroying angels," tell of their flight from Utah and of their narrow escape of the cold steel of the pursuing so-called legions and destroying angels of the Lord at Utah.

Said Mrs. J. Chatman, for many years of Harrison County, "I, with many others, heard Brigham Young direct that certain apostates be cut off from the church, and suiting the action to the word by drawing his finger from ear to ear, said: 'Cut them off here.'"

Says Mrs. Blair, of Harrison County: "We shipped our household goods to Utah in advance of our crossing the plains; my husband died en route, and when I reached Salt Lake City I found much of my household goods gone, including five swords which had been given my husband while in the British army for acts of valor; however, I had the satisfaction of unbuckling two of the swords from officers of Utah legion."

Government officers came to western Iowa, some years ago, to act as a guard for a man wanted as a witness against a leader of one of these bands of "destroying angels" to be placed on trial for murdering, in cold blood, a helpless young man bound hand and foot and completely at the mercy of the captors who, after taking his life, marched by in single file, and each one of the destroying angels fired point blank into the bloody and lifeless body of the young man.

While with a surveying party some twenty years ago, the writer was shown a crevice in the rocks in the mountains where one of the surveying party had secreted himself from the destroying angels when he was not wanted as a witness. And while the writer was in a little town in Idaho, a young man who had become an informer of polygamists was waylaid by a committee of six, but before the blood spilling act could be administered, he, with almost superhuman strength, flung his self-appointed executioners aside and escaped under a moving train of cars.

Says Senator Burrows: "From the hour they took possession of the Territory the domination of this Mormon hierarchy in civil as well as so-called 'religious' affairs has been absolute and supreme, and there was then inaugurated and carried on for over forty years a carnival of crime in the Territory unexampled in the history of a civilized State. The armies of the United States were forbidden to come within its borders; federal judges and other government officials were driven from the Territory; the statutes of the United States spurned and trampled on; the minister of the law insulted and defied; lawlessness ran riot and there was no authority in the Territory respected or enforced but that of the Mormon hierarchy."—Congressional Record, December 13, 1906.

The Mountain Meadow Massacre and other similar atrocious crimes were but the natural results of the teachings of Brigham Young and his immediate associates, hence the instituting of polygamy with all of its repulsiveness, and attempting to justify its practice by alleging its divine origin, by direct revelation, which he and his associates had kept from the world eight or ten years after the purported revelation was alleged to have taken place, was but one of the many attending acts resulting from a depraved nature, corrupted by all that is wicked and loathsome.

In the Life of Brigham Young, by Edward W. Tullidge, page 395, memorial to Congress by the church of Utah, we read: "We believe in the pre-existence of the spirits of men; that God is the author of our being; that marriage relations exist and extend throughout eternity, and that without it no man can obtain an exaltation in the celestial kingdom of God.

"The revelation commanding the principle of plural marriage; 'Behold, I reveal unto you a new and everlasting covenant; and if ye abide not that covenant, then are ye damned; for none can reject this covenant and be permitted to enter into my glory.' With this language before us, we can not view plural marriage in any light than as a vital principle of our religion."

Again quoting from Utah authority, Doctrine and Covenants, Utah edition, 132:6, 7: "And as pertaining to the new and everlasting covenant, it was instituted for the fullness of my glory; and he that receiveth a fullness thereof, must and shall abide the law, or he shall be damned, saith the Lord God.

"And verily I say unto you, that the conditions of this law are these: All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations, that are not made, and entered into, and sealed, by the Holy Spirit of promise, of him who is anointed, both as well for time and for all eternity, and that, too, most holy, by revelation and commandment through the medium of mine anointed, whom I have appointed on the earth to hold this power, (and I have appointed unto my servant Joseph to hold this power in the last days, and there is never but one on the earth at a time, on whom this power and the keys of this priesthood are conferred,) are of no efficacy, virtue or force, in and after the resurrection from the dead; for all contracts that are not made unto this end, have an end when men are dead."

The references to several societies quoted by Mr. Peet alleged to baptize polygamists and allow them to live with their plural wives, but exclude them from holding office, is not parallel to the question at issue in any sense. With the member of the Utah church, no restriction was placed upon men who practiced it; but on the contrary, it is taught to be a religious duty, even enjoined under penalty of damnation.

Page 12, V. S. Peet says: "When the Mormons first settled in Utah in 1847, it was then a province of Mexico and there, in accordance with the teachings of the Bible and to multiply and replenish the earth, that is to populate the then great and unsubdued West, they married into polygamy and reared large families as a rite of their religion."

In the foregoing, Mr. Peet, unwittingly, but accurately locates the beginning of polygamy,—Utah. However, on page 13, Mr. Peet alleges that polygamy did not originate in Utah, but was the outgrowth of the teachings of Joseph Smith, at Nauvoo, Illinois. "To populate the great and unsubdued West, they married into polygamy," would not apply to the church in Illinois in Joseph Smith's lifetime.

As "sibboleth" for "shibboleth" betrayed the Ephraimites so does "Reorganites" for "Reorganized" betray the Brighamites as the author of "Polygamy from a non-Mormon viewpoint." Why? Because the Brighamites are the only ones who use the term Reorganites in alluding to the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, the followers of Joseph Smith.

The affidavits from the Nauvoo Expositor, published June 7, 1844, are used to show a harmony between them and the so-called revelation first made public in August, 1852, in Salt Lake City, Utah.

There is no question but there are certain points of agreement, and one document was evidently based on the other. It appears, too, that the most feasible solution is that when the Utah authorities conceived the idea of writing a revelation to justify immoral acts already committed, and date it back to Joseph Smith's time and forge his name to it, that it occurred to them to make it conform in some essential features to these affidavits, so that they could be used to bolster up their crookedness. These very affidavits were condemned and branded as false at the time by some of the very men who subsequently quoted them as evidence of the existence of polygamy in the days of Joseph Smith. The Expositor was destroyed by order of the city council, after declaring it a nuisance.

Men who used those affidavits to bolster up their contention, condemn them still and justify the destruction of the Expositor press.

As a case in point of their condemning testimony and then using it for their purpose, attention is called to a letter dated Carthage, Hancock County, Illinois, October 8, 1888, and signed Andrew Jensen, Edward Stevenson, Joseph S. Black. These men were historians of Utah. They say regarding these same affidavits:

"Mr. Sharp was kind enough to show us a bound volume of the Warsaw Signal for 1844, and by looking over the file we soon found that extra number issued in June, 1844, in which the editor called upon the old citizens of Hancock County to exterminate the Mormons! The readers of the News will remember that it was this article which was read to the Saints in Nauvoo, June 18, 1844, on the occasion when Joseph delivered his last public address, speaking to the Nauvoo Legion from the frame of the unfinished building.

"Bound together with the Signal was a copy of the Nauvoo Expositor, that infamous sheet which was published by the apostates in Nauvoo, June 7, 1844, and which three days later was declared a nuisance by the city council and abated as such. We had long desired to peruse a copy, but never saw one until today, when we were permitted to see the one in Mr. Sharp's possession. After reading some of its filthy contents we could not blame our friends who sat in the Nauvoo city council for doing what they did. It was indeed a nuisance. But nasty as the sheet was, it nevertheless contains something which now can be used for altogether a different purpose to that which was originally intended."—Infancy of the Church, page 58.

After declaring the Nauvoo Expositor an "infamous sheet" and its contents "filthy" "indeed a nuisance," "nasty," etc., they deliberately proceed to quote the affidavits published and circulated in the V. S. Peet booklet, to sustain their contentions.

Regarding the article of Elder Isaac Sheen, published in the HERALD, volume 1, number 1, there is nothing that partakes of the nature of testimony. Elder Sheen simply makes an argument based upon the story circulated by Brigham Young and his adherents to the effect that Emma Smith, wife of Joseph Smith, burned the alleged original revelation concerning polygamy. He does not claim to know anything of the facts. Besides, it was not written for the HERALD, but was copied into the HERALD from the Saturday Evening Post of October 9, 1852. It was written at a time when the stories of Young and company had not been sifted, and Sheen doubtless accepted them, and based his deductions upon them.

But the stories have since been exploded by the very best testimony.

Mrs. Emma Smith, who was reputed to have burned the document, testified. In April, 1867, Elder Jason W. Briggs sought and obtained an interview with Mrs. Emma Smith, (then Mrs. Bidamon,) and the following is her statement as published in the Messenger, several years before the death of Mrs. Bidamon:

J. W. Briggs. Mrs. Bidamon, have you seen the revelation on polygamy published by Orson Pratt, in the Seer, in 1852?

Mrs. B. I have.

J. W. B. Have you read it?

Mrs. B. I have read it, and heard it read.

J. W. B. Did you ever see that document in manuscript; previous to its publication, by Pratt?

Mrs. B. I never did.

J. W. B. Did you ever see any document of that kind, purporting to be a revelation to authorize polygamy?

Mrs. B. No; I never did.

J. W. B. Did Joseph Smith ever teach you the principle of polygamy as being revealed to him, or as a correct and righteous principle?

Mrs. B. He never did.

J. W. B. About that statement of Brigham Young that you burnt the original manuscript of that revelation?

Mrs. B. It is false in all its parts, made out of whole cloth, without any foundation in truth. —The Messenger, vol. 1, p. 23.

The foregoing clearly shows that Elder Sheen's conclusion was based upon wrong information.

Elder William Marks' statement, as quoted in Mr. Peet's booklet, pages 15 and 16, shows that polygamy existed in theory at Nauvoo in the lifetime of Joseph Smith, but had Mr. Peet quoted Elder Marks' statement in full, instead of in part, it would have shown Joseph's attitude towards it and his determination to expel its advocates.

Elder William Marks' statement, not only in part, but in full, is as follows:

"A few days after this occurrence, I met with Brother Joseph. He said that he wanted to converse with me on the affairs of the church, and we retired by ourselves. I will give his words verbatim, for they are indelibly stamped upon my mind. He said he had desired for a long time to have a talk with me on the subject of polygamy. He said it eventually would prove the overthrow of the church, and we should soon be obliged to leave the United States, unless it could be speedily put down. He was satisfied that it was a cursed doctrine, and that there must be every exertion made to put it down. He said that he would go before the congregation and proclaim against it, and I must go into the High Council, and he would prefer charges against those in transgression, and I must sever them from the church, unless they made ample satisfaction. There was much more said, but this was the substance. The mob commenced to gather about Carthage in a few days after, therefore there was nothing done concerning it. After the Prophet's death, I made mention of this conversation to several, hoping and believing that it would have a good effect, but to my great disappointment, it was soon rumored about that Brother Marks was about to apostatize, and that all that he said about the conversation with the Prophet was a tissue of lies. From that time I was satisfied that the church would be disorganized, and the death of the Prophet and Patriarch tended to confirm me in that opinion. From that time I was looking for a reorganization of the church and kingdom of God. I feel thankful that I have lived to again behold the day, when the basis of the church is the revelation of Jesus Christ, which is the only sure foundation to build upon. I feel to invite all my brethren to become identified with us, for the Lord is truly in our midst."

Is it reasonable to suppose that Joseph Smith would publicly proclaim against the doctrine, prefer charges against those in transgression and demand that they be expelled from the church, if he had been in transgression himself, or even taught it to the guilty parties?

Though it is alleged by members of the Utah church that Joseph Smith was the founder of polygamy, and that he had twenty-seven wives, yet Wilford Woodruff, when president of the Utah church, also all others who have given the matter investigation, have been compelled to admit that Joseph Smith had no children by any women save his legal wife, Emma, whom he married January 18, 1827.

Not one published word favorable to polygamy alleged to have emanated from Joseph Smith, has been found; but on the contrary, "there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife" (published in 1830), "thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else" (published in 1831), "marriage is ordained of God; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife" (published in 1831), were handed down by Joseph Smith, accepted and followed by the church at Nauvoo until his death, June 27, 1844, and are still accepted and followed by all members of the church of Latter Day Saints, except the Utah church, which through Brigham Young as its president publicly indorsed polygamy and its practice at a special conference held at Salt Lake City, August 29, 1852.

It may thus be seen that Brigham Young was the Mephistopheles who sowed the valley of the American Jordan with dragons' teeth; it was he who authorized and practiced polygamy; it was he who created and sanctioned the accursed practice of deification and enthronement of human passion in lusts and blood atoners; it was he who authorized and sanctioned the importation of women from foreign countries and sealed them to himself and other officials of the church and the laymen "to populate the unsubdued West," and "to silence in death the voice of apostasy" and terrorize those who hesitated to surrender their property or daughters at the caprice and fancy, and for the gratification of a corrupt and lustful priesthood.

"That the 'peculiar institution' was the cross of the sisterhood in those days, it would be heartless to attempt to conceal."—The Women of Mormondom, by E. W. Tullidge, Salt Lake City, 1877, page 293.

"She (Mrs. Alice Young Clawson) was always very fond of dress, and was somewhat loud in her style. She was dressed this day to pay some visits and was finer than usual. Her father looked at her from head to foot, then said, in the most contemptuous manner which he could assume,

"'Good heavens, Alice! What are you rigged out in that style for? You look like a prostitute.'

"She faced him with an expression so like his own that it was absolutely startling, and, with terrible intensity replied,

"'Well, what else am I? And whose teachings have made me so? . . .'

"Not long after, she was found dead in her bed, with a bottle, labeled poison, by her bedside."—Wife No. 19, Ann Eliza Young, page 482.

"Suspicious, jealousies, heart burnings, strifes of all kinds are engendered by this system, and it serves to lower the moral tone of women as well as of men. Both are sufferers alike in this respect, although possibly in a different degree. The women have all through the more conscience in the matter, though they grow bitter, and spiteful, and revengeful, while 'bearing the cross.'"

"I (Brigham Young) wish my own women to understand that what I am going to say is for them as well as for others, and I want those who are here to tell their sisters. . . . And my wives have got to do one of two things: either round up their shoulders to endure the afflictions of this world, and live their religion, or they may leave, for I will not have them about me. I will go into heaven alone, rather than have scratching and fighting around me. . . . I want to go somewhere, and do something, to get rid of the whiners. If my wife had borne me all the children that she would bear, the celestial law would teach me to take young women that would have children. . . . But I do know that there is no cessation to the everlasting whinings of many of the women of this territory. And if the women will turn from the commandments of God . . . I will pray that the curses of the Almighty may be close to their heels . . . those that enter into it and are faithful, I will promise them that they shall be queens in heaven and rulers for all eternity."—Judge Cradlebaugh: Life of John D. Lee, p. 24.

Pres. Heber C. Kimball in discourse delivered in the tabernacle, November 9, 1856, (Deseret News, vol. 6, p. 291): "I have no wife or child that has any right to rebel against me. If they violate my laws and rebel against me, they will get into trouble just as quickly as though they transgressed the counsel and teachings of Brother Brigham. Does it give a woman a right to sin against me because she is my wife? No. . . . It is the duty of a woman to be obedient to her husband, and unless she is, I would not give a damn for all her queenly rights and authority, nor for her either, if she will quarrel and lie about the work of God and the principles of plurality. . . . The principle of plurality of wives never will be done away, although some sisters have had revelations that when this time passes away, and they go through the vale, every woman will have a husband to herself. I wish more of our young men would take to themselves wives of the daughters of Zion and not wait for us old men to take them all. Go ahead upon the right principle, young gentlemen, and God bless you and make you fruitful that we may fill the mountains and the earth."

Following his Prophet's lead comes Jedediah Grant, in this fashion: "We have women here who like anything but the celestial law of God; and if they could break asunder the cable of the church of Christ there is scarcely a mother in Israel but who would do it this day."

"There was not a woman then who would not have broken her chains if she could, let the church call these fetters what they might, and there is not a woman among them to-day who would not slip her fetters if she knew how."—Wife No. 19, Ann Eliza Young, pages 391-393.

"Women are the greatest sufferers. The moral natures of the men must necessarily suffer also; but to them comes no such agony of soul as comes to women. Their sensibilities are blunted; their spiritual natures deadened; their animal natures quickened; they lose manliness, and descend to the level of brutes; and these dull witted, intellectually dwarfed moral corpses, the women are told, are their only saviors."—Wife No. 19, Ann Eliza Young, page 591.

Senator Burrows contrasts the two churches as follows: "Judge Phillips in the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Missouri, . . . Temple Lot Case, said: Beyond all cavil, if human testimony is to place any matter at rest, this church was one in doctrine, government, and purpose from 1830 to June, 1844, when Joseph Smith, its founder, was killed. It had the same federal head, governing bodies and faith. During this period there was no schism, no dissensions, no parting of the ways in any matter fundamental or affecting its oneness.

"The death of Joseph Smith in 1844, however, carried dismay and demoralization throughout the entire membership of the church, scattering the adherents in divers directions. . . . Recovering, however, from the shock, the scattering bands soon reappeared in the various parts of the country, promulgated their doctrines . . . and reorganized their scattered forces in what is now known and recognized as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa, and presided over by Joseph Smith, a son of the Prophet. The courts have repeatedly declared this organization to be the legitimate successor of the original Mormon church, and its adherents, numbering some 50,000 peaceable, patriotic, and law abiding citizens scattering throughout the United States in small societies, conforming to the laws of their country wherever they may be and adhering to the faith of the founder of their creed, repudiating and denouncing the doctrine of polygamy and its attending crimes."

And in speaking of the Utah church, the Brigham Young branch, Senator Burrows said: "An organization that fosters and encourages crime, tramples upon law, human and divine, practices polygamy, and polygamous cohabitation, desecrates the home, debases man, degrades womanhood, debauches public morals, strikes at the Christian civilization of the age, undermines and shakes the foundation of society and government, destroys the sanctity of the marriage relation, defies the authority of the state and national government . . . and brings the name and fame of the good people of Utah into disrepute, and shame and humiliation to the American people."

PATRIARCHAL BLESSINGS; THEIR DESIGN AND INDIVIDUAL EFFECT.

While it is true, as the writer sees it, that the giving of patriarchal blessings is not the leading and most important work of a patriarch, it is, nevertheless, important; and this work, as well as the blessings which are given, should be much better understood, and more fully appreciated than they are.

In one of the sacred records of the church, containing the word of God to us, is found a plain provision for the ordination of patriarchs, and the bestowment of patriarchal blessings. (Doctrine and Covenants 104: 17; 125: 3.) Therefore, so far as divine authority for the patriarchal work is concerned, (which includes the giving of blessings,) it would seem that all Latter Day Saints should be prepared to accept it without question. But there are additional proofs which make the chain of evidence complete. In this article, we will try to indicate some of the evidences, while treating on the character of patriarchal blessings, and their effects on the persons receiving them.

DEFINITION.

What is a patriarchal blessing? It is a spiritual blessing, conferred by the laying on of hands, and through the instrumentality of a patriarch. (See Doctrine and Covenants 107: 29, 38; 125: 3.) However, the writer is not prepared to say that, in cases of emergency, there are not other ministers in the church who may bestow patriarchal blessings. Probably the First Presidency and Twelve, and, possibly, others.

Thus it may be seen, first, that God calls these patriarchs to do special and important work belonging to their office and calling, which is not only in harmony with his character but with his dealings with his people from the beginning, as shown in sacred history. And, second, that the blessings which they are authorized to bestow, are given through the laying on of hands; the very ordinance through which spiritual blessings of various kinds, and very precious, are bestowed. For, according to the Bible, the ancient patriarchs bestowed blessings by the laying on of hands. (Genesis 48: 9-20.)

Through the laying on of hands the Holy Spirit of promise was given, which is the greatest blessing mortals can receive in this world. (Acts 8: 14-17; 19: 1-6.)

Men were blessed by the laying on of hands and set apart in different offices of the ministry, to officiate for God and Christ. (Numbers 27: 18-20; Deuteronomy 34: 9; Acts 6: 5, 6; 13: 1-3; 1 Timothy 4: 14; 2 Timothy 1: 6.)

"Little children," or "young children," were blessed of God by the Master himself, and in the restoration of the gospel, this blessing of children is revealed as one of the ordinances of the church. (Matthew 19: 13-15; Mark 10: 13-16; Doctrine and Covenants 17: 19.)

In the administration to the sick, by the servants of God, is another way in which physical and spiritual blessings are bestowed by the laying on of hands. (Mark 6: 5; 16: 18; James 5: 14, 15.)

So far, then, as the provision for giving patriarchal blessings is concerned, we find it to be in complete harmony with God's word. And we say now, as we have said before, That which is in harmony with God is right; only that which is in conflict with God is wrong.

PURPOSE AND CHARACTER.

When any doctrine or ordinance claims to be divine, it is entirely pertinent to ask: For what purpose was this instituted? If divine, the purpose will of necessity be in harmony with the character and ways of God; and when we find the purpose or purposes, so defined by God himself, it is certainly good evidence that the doctrine or ordinance is of divine origin.

We have accepted the ordinance of patriarchal blessings as a part of the restored gospel, just as we accept the blessing of children who have not reached the years of accountability, or the laying on of hands and anointing with oil for the benefit of the sick. If we have been right in this, then the purpose of the ordinance is to contribute its part to the salvation of all who place themselves in a position which entitles them to its benefits.

The word of God to Hyrum Smith, when he was called of God as a patriarch, to succeed his father, quite clearly reveals the character and purpose of the ordinance:

First, I give unto you Hyrum Smith to be a patriarch unto you to hold the sealing blessings of my church, even the Holy Spirit of promise, whereby ye are sealed up unto the day of redemption, that ye may not fall, notwithstanding the hour of temptation that may come upon you.—Doctrine and Covenants 107: 38.

From this statement we infer that the leading characteristic of a patriarchal blessing is the sealing power of the Holy Spirit, (Ephesians 1: 13,) that those receiving the blessings "may not fall, [not can not fall] notwithstanding the hour of temptation that may come upon" them. All this is in the way of salvation, and is, therefore, in harmony with God.

Right here, while considering the purpose of patriarchal blessings, we propound the following pertinent question: What is the design of the whole gospel plan? Answer, to bring us to God, and thus enable us to secure, through its ordinances, provisions, and promises, the "great salvation." Under all, we find the atonement of Christ, which makes every part of the divine plan efficacious.

Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things.—Luke 24: 45-48.

For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God.—1 Peter 3: 18. (The italics are mine.)

Therefore, in the ordinances thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest to men in the flesh; for without this, no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 3.

It may be easily seen from the above that the leading purpose of a patriarchal blessing is that we may receive a greater degree of the Holy Spirit of promise, hence more of the light of God; more divine knowledge and wisdom; a better understanding of God and Christ, and our own duty to God and each other. In a word, it goes a long way toward enabling us to make our "calling and election sure."

We are quite willing to admit that there may, sometimes, be a conflict between a patriarchal blessing as it is, and as it should be. But is not this equally true in every department of church work? A patriarchal blessing, proper, is one given through the instrumentality of a patriarch who is striving, every day and every hour, to be a true spiritual father in the church,—one who keeps himself near to God, striving to act wisely and carefully in all things. The quality of the work done is far more important than the quantity performed.

But the character of a blessing does not depend altogether upon the patriarch. There must be a proper candidate. One who understands that the benefits of this ordinance, like all others, will be enjoyed in exact proportion to our efforts to render more perfect and complete service. The blessing is not given to take the place of gospel conditions, but to help us, under all conditions and at all times, to more fully and perfectly observe them. God, we know, will not fail to do his part faithfully and well.

Now the question is, Do we need all the helps which God has provided for his people? Or, in other words, Do we need more light, knowledge, wisdom, strength, etc., in the service to which we have been called? I fear that this important department of church work is too little appreciated by some, and hence too much ignored. Here, as elsewhere, "to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." (Romans 8: 6, 7.)

The character of the work belonging to the patriarchal office, and the special provision made for the bestowment of blessings by the laying on of hands, indicate the high and spiritual character of patriarchal blessings.

We are more and more convinced of man's fallibility and weakness, no matter to what office he may be called in the church of God; but actual experience in the patriarchal work has convinced us, again and again, that the work is divine. Many of those who have received blessings at the hands of different patriarchs, have been similarly confirmed and blessed in the work. "If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine," etc. In submitting ourselves to these provisions of the word, which claim to be divine, the promised knowledge has been graciously given.

A LEADING OBJECTION.

But here is one of the leading objections urged by some, which is thought to be a valid one. "No provision for patriarchs, or the giving of patriarchal blessings, can be found in the Book of Mormon, though this book is declared to contain the fullness of the gospel!" This objection seems to be founded upon the belief that God can not, or will not, give a revelation to his people, except when the same revelation, or a similar one, has already been given, and preserved in some of the sacred records of the church. This is too absurd to require extended notice. Traced to its logical limit, this position will require us to reject every revelation which has been given by the divine Being, till we come to the first, and of course we would have to reject it, with the entire doctrine of divine revelation to man, because, in the very nature of the case, no other revelation could be found as a divine precedent! That is, no other revelation had been, or could have been, given!

When a purported revelation from God is presented to us, we are not under obligation to show that it, or a similar one, has already been given, before we can properly accept it; but, rather, to see that the provisions and promises of the new are made with a view to meet true and important demands, and that the revelation as a whole, is in complete harmony with God and that portion of his truth which is already in our possession. This position is scriptural and logical, and, therefore, absolutely safe.

As to that tortured and much abused phrase, "the fullness of the gospel," we can not do better than to incorporate the writer's reply to this objection, which is found in the doctrinal part of "The Patriarchate."

But we are told by the small class who reject the work of patriarchs, and yet claim to be believers in the latter day work, that they are justified in rejecting them because they are not even mentioned in the Book of Mormon, which is said to contain "the fullness of the gospel."

If on this ground we may properly reject the calling and work of patriarchs, why not, on the same ground, reject the calling and work of bishops, seventies, and deacons, as set forth in the Bible and Book of Doctrine and Covenants? The Book of Mormon fails to specifically state that any such office as that of bishop, seventy, or deacon, was established in the primitive Christian church on this continent.

It must be admitted, that while the Book of Mormon is plainer and much more complete, on some important matters of history and doctrine, than the Bible; on other matters, including church organization, it is very incomplete. Mormon, who abridged the record, so far as it was abridged, says: "And now there can not be written in this book, even a hundredth part of the things which Jesus did truly teach unto the people."—3 Nephi 12: 1.

Is it wise and safe to reject the provision made in later revelations for the office and work of patriarchs, because they are not mentioned in the record which does not contain a hundredth part of what Jesus taught the people? We think not, provided this provision is in harmony with the word of God.

That phrase, "fullness of the gospel," has been almost as badly used, or abused, by some Latter Day Saints, as Revelation 22: 18 has been by those who reject all present revelation. The Doctrine and Covenants teaches that "the fullness of the gospel" is contained in the Bible and Book of Mormon. (Doctrine and Covenants 42: 5.) It also states that the Book of Mormon, by itself, contains "the fullness of the gospel," (17: 2, 26: 2.) It must be admitted then that the Bible, when properly translated, contains the "fullness of the gospel," as well as the Book of Mormon; and inasmuch as each book contains important matter which the other does not, and the usual interpretation is that the phrase denotes that the Book of Mormon contains all gospel truth, then, upon this ground, are we not driven to the conclusion that each book contains more than "the fullness of the gospel," or each one contains less than the "fullness"?

What, then, are we to understand by the much abused phrase, "fullness of the gospel"? We are to understand this; and this only: In the Book of Mormon, also the Inspired Version of the Bible, is contained the gospel as it was given of God to those ancient worthies, who wrote and spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, without garbling or loss of "plain and precious parts."

The statement of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants is, "The Book of Mormon, containing the fullness of my everlasting gospel."—Doctrine and Covenants 26: 2.

There is a difference between "the fullness" and all "the fullness." Let the Doctrine and Covenants explain itself on the use and meaning of this phrase. In the vision seen by Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon (see 76: 3), speaking of Christ, we read:

Of whom we bear record, and the record which we bear is the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ, who is the Son, whom we saw and with whom we conversed in the heavenly vision.

Their testimony is a presentation of the truth, as it is with God, concerning Jesus Christ and his gospel; nevertheless, there is much valuable information concerning Christ, the ordinances of the gospel, and the work of the ministry, which is not found in the vision.

A witness, when in court, is sworn to tell "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth"; that is, he is to tell the truth in its fullness; and yet, all the truth he knows, at the most, is a very small fragment of what exists in the universe of God.

We believe that this exegesis of the phrase referred to, is correct, and if it is, it will stand the test of all proper criticism. And, as a consequence of this belief, we also believe that the use which is being made of this phrase, "the fullness of the gospel," in "Anti-Mormon League" literature, is erroneous and anti-Christian.

From what is written in latter day revelations, concerning the calling, duties, and privileges of the office, including, of course, the bestowment of patriarchal blessings, as well as from experience and observation, we justly conclude that the character and purpose of patriarchal blessings, like all other parts of the divine plan, are such as to bring us in more complete rapport with God. In other words, this ordinance does its full share in increasing our usefulness in this world, and in preparing us for the enjoyment of true bliss in time and eternity. The ordinance is so much like God, as he stands revealed in his word, that we are compelled to believe that its effects, individually and collectively, are good and important.

The very work which is so plainly indicated as belonging to the patriarchs, (not exclusively, but as specialists in this line) is that which is most needed in the church to-day, in order to bring her up to that high standard of moral goodness and spiritual power, without which Zion can never be redeemed, and the great battle of God Almighty for truth and right can never be fought and won.

Somebody Cares.

Somebody knows when your heart aches
And everything seems to go wrong;
Somebody knows when the shadows
Need chasing away with a song;
Somebody knows when you're lonely,
Tired, discouraged, and blue,
Somebody wants you to know Him,
And know that He dearly loves you.

Somebody cares when you're tempted,
And the world grows dizzy and dim;
Somebody cares when you're weakest,
And farthest away from Him,
Somebody grieves when you've fallen,
Though you are not lost from His sight;
Somebody waits for your coming,
Taking the gloom from your night.

Somebody loves you when weary;
Somebody loves you when strong;
Always is waiting to help you,
Watches you—one of the throng
Needing His friendship so holy,
Needing His watchcare so true.
His name? We call his name Jesus.
His people? Just I and just you.

The Reward of Virtue.

It is a very strange fact, like other curious facts of our exceedingly curious human nature, that while we were all brought up on the proverb that virtue is its own reward, and all repeat it glibly, we seldom learn or accept its truth. It may be proved to us in our own experience a hundred times over; that goodness in ourselves or others does not pay, except in being goodness. But we always expect it to pay next time; we are inwardly rebellious minded because it does not pay; we wonder whether Providence really is watching, and why the laurel wreath is not forthcoming. And meanwhile the wicked flourish like the green bay tree, and selfishness luxuriates in the good things of life, and popularity comes to those who are anything but upright, and, altogether, we feel like the old woman who said that there was one promise in the Bible that she had never found to fail, though she had leaned on it a hundred times, and that was, "In the world ye shall have tribulation."

Out of this recurrent frame of mind comes the popular insistence that virtue is actually rewarded. The "industrious apprentice," as set forth by Hogarth, pleased his age and all succeeding ones. To-day every periodical in the land that looks toward the great American idol, Success, repeats constantly that diligence, punctuality, accuracy, temperance, thrift, etc., are rewarded by high positions and growing wealth. Young America is exhorted to believe in these rewards of virtue. There is a great deal of truth in the exhortation. But nevertheless, there are two evident drawbacks to its doctrine. The first is, that the higher virtues of faith, hope, and love, the most noble and generous ideals of self-sacrifice and brotherhood, are entirely left out of the calculation. The second is that young America may pick up the next public spirited magazine, or look out into the nearest market place, and see the great successes and the big prizes in the hands of the most unscrupulous tricksters and traders of the lot. If a long line of our Cræsus, our best paid lawyers, our senators, our ruling politicians and even our "popular" preachers, were to be marched before us, could we believe for one moment that they were living examples of the reward of virtue? A child of twelve would know better than that. Respectability is eminently successful, but virtue—that, as Kipling puts it, is quite another story. It is a characteristic of virtue, rather, that it is always out somewhere in the thick of the fight, uncomfortable, hard pressed, and battling against odds.

Yet, why not, since that is what it is here for? Once make up our minds to that, and follow virtue with our eyes open, and things are greatly simplified.

"The wages of sin is death; if the wages of virtue be dust, Would she have heart to endure for the life of the worm and the fly?

She desires no isles of the blest, no quiet seats of the just,
To rest in a golden grave, or bask in a summer sky;
Give her the wages of going on, and not to die!"

That ringing last line shows that Tennyson agrees somewhat with the wisdom of Bacon, wisest of modern men, who was afraid to endure the hardnesses of virtue himself, but saw clearly its nature when he wrote, "Prosperity is the blessing of the Old Testament, but adversity is the blessing of the New." Bacon's marvelous sagacity showed him that virtue did not and could not bring worldly reward, and he let it alone accordingly, while admiring it genuinely in the abstract. In that, at any rate, he was honest; and the great queen he served was like him. Elizabeth was a splendid success, imperious and imperial; but truth and love were not in her, let alone humility or generosity.

If there is a bedrock fact in history, indeed it is that virtue appears to be always getting defeated—the highest virtue, that is. There is no reason to suppose that it ever will win material rewards. It is an intruder in material things, anyway. That it lives on and on, that it grows and strives forward, so that the world, in spite of all its crucifixions of virtue, has to take account of it and respect it, is a continual and mysterious fact that few of us think about. Why are we good, when we keep finding it doesn't pay in terms of material pleasure and prosperity, except that virtue itself is a reward that draws our hearts after it? Those who love virtue, love it more passionately than ever after their hardest trials. They do not want ease nor rest; they want to press on, with perfect indifference as to earthly rewards. It is the innate, divine pleasure of goodness that endears it to the good. The robust saints who were willing to be damned for the glory of God, were really not in the slightest doubt of their everlasting bliss if their willingness was accepted. When we once get to the point of accepting virtue as its own reward and not asking anything further, we step into a joy beyond the world and not of it, transcending it, and not affected by its gifts or withdrawals.

The Chinese have a saying: "He who finds pleasure in vice or praise in virtue, is a novice in both." The beginner in loving his fellow-men expects gratitude—and does not get it. But the pain and disappointment of that early novitiate fade away as the love grows toward the gospel standard of enduring all things, hoping all things, being kind to the unthankful and the evil, forgiving enemies—and dying for them if need be. As long as we expect any reward from goodness except the opportunity to do good and be better, we shall be rebellious minded and doubting. As long as we believe and teach that goodness pays in terms of success, we will train up weaklings in virtue, "goody-goody" types, triumphant neither in this world nor the next. "Learn to do right, and suffer for it," is teaching that puts iron into the blood and backbone into daily religion. Then we can complete the old woman's quotation (of which she quite forgot the important clause) and lean on the mighty promise, "In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." The world crucified the Speaker of that promise next day; but every saint and martyr since has entered into his joy.—Priscilla Leonard in Christian Home.

HOLLISTER, CALIFORNIA, October 23, 1910.

Dear Herald: I am a subscriber to the HERALD, and enjoy reading it very much. Our little town has six churches, but none of them are ours. We have a few Saints here, but no branch, so it is hard for us to live as we should.

Sometimes I go to church here, but do not enjoy it as I do our own.

There are nine in our family, and three belong to this church, and the others do not belong to any church. But I hope that some day we will all be of one mind. I am teaching a country school not far from home and like it fine. I keep my horse and buggy and drive around a good deal, as that is about all there is to do unless one goes to dances or theaters, and there is a plenty of both here. There is one moving picture show and one opera house now and they are building two theaters.

I sometimes feel like I am not doing anything for my Master's cause, but I do what I can, and hope that some day I may be able to do much more. I wish one of our ministers could preach here occasionally. I know it would help the Saints and might interest others.

I pray that we may have more knowledge of the truth and that others may profit by our example. It is my desire to be faithful always.

BERTHA GILBERT.

Dear Herald: It has been a long time since I have written to your pages, and I can say that the HERALD is worth its weight in gold, and I long for it to come every week. I have heard some make the remark that it is the only preacher we have. I can not say that, as we have some good preachers in this branch; some old ones and some young ones also. We have two young brethren that were called into the ministry less than a year ago, that would make some of the older ones blush; these young men are in their teens yet: Bro. Clyde Ellis, son of Elder W. D. Ellis, and Bro. R. D. Davis, son of Elder James Davis. It is a positive proof that God is in this work, that the gospel has been restored and is now being preached in its fullness.

Bro. Clyde Ellis was our speaker last Sunday evening, the 23d. His subject was, "If a man die, shall he live again?" and before he was through with the subject, on the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust, he certainly proved that a man may die and will be resurrected again. And he also proved to the satisfaction of the audience, or at least of all the Saints, that he was a servant of God and his calling was sure.

We have many faithful workers in this branch; a good orchestra, and a Sunshine Band organized and in good working order. There are many who are not in the church who attend. The Sunshine Band has done much in bringing young people into the church, who are not of our faith, and by their coming in and joining the band, it will have a tendency to bring them into the true church to stay. And I would say this much, that in every branch of Saints who have not yet organized a Sunshine Band: do so at once, especially for the young, and it is a good thing for the old—a good thing to help us get over our bashfulness.

Bro. James Davis has again left us and gone to Canada to fulfill his calling; we miss him very much.

Bro. John Hanson, recently from Sweden, is with us now, but away most of the time. He certainly had a hard time in Sweden, and needs a good rest. Brn. W. D. Ellis and Brackenbury are now in the field laboring for the Master. May God bless these brethren, as they are faithful workers for their Master, and for the upbuilding of the church and kingdom.

A few of the Saints have left this place; some have moved to Canada and some to Washington. We wish them all success, and hope before long some will come here to fill their places, and whoever will come will find a good live branch of Saints of the reorganized class, full of love and hospitality. May God speed the day when we may all be united.

Your brother in bonds,

WILBURTON, OKLAHOMA, October 10, 1910.

Editors Herald: The work here is moving off very well; Saints here as elsewhere are, some of them, careless about their soul's salvation, while others seem to be earnestly engaged in the work. I find the Saints wherever I go striving to come up higher; showing they want to let their light shine.

I am only a local worker, and have only been ordained fourteen months; have done some preaching since my ordination. Brother Erwin and myself just closed a meeting in northeastern Texas with good success. My wife has an aunt, Mrs. Lizzie Ensey. She lives at 1551 Moss avenue, Indianapolis, Indiana, and she would like to get acquainted with the Saints at that place; so if there are any there who see this, she would like them to hunt her up or write her. She is not a member of the church, but wants to be baptized. She has been acquainted with the work for several years, as she used to live in Texas and Oklahoma, where the gospel has been preached to her.

I find there is lots of room for preaching. I can always find a place to preach whenever I can get away from my work to go, for most of the people here have to work for a living. I am a blacksmith by trade, so you see I can not shut my doors any day, as can the man who plows. I only get loose Saturday nights and Sundays, but put in most of that time.

Ever praying for the welfare of the work,

V. L. LUM.

ASHTABULA, OHIO.

Dear Herald: I have not before written any for your columns. I love this gospel work and can say that it is the true work of God for I have seen the power of God manifested many times. Let us not be like the parable of the sower, Then cometh the wicked one and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart; but let us be like the good seed that fell in good ground that heard the word and understood it. Let us be faithful to the Lord, for the time is too short to lay up our riches here; pay our tithing and send more laborers into the field; be up and doing while it is day.

MRS. C. C. DAWSON.

COLDWATER, MICHIGAN, October 26, 1910.

Editors Herald: Am to meet Bishop Dillon, of the United Brethren Church, in discussion at South Boardman, Michigan, the coming month. This engagement will consume more than twenty days, as there are four propositions to discuss. We then are held to account with a Mr. Walker, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, "President of State Association of Spiritualists," on two propositions. Our conference was fine; one hundred and seventy-two dinners were served by the sisters in dining hall on Sunday. One of the largest representative gatherings we have held in years. Seven were baptized Sunday afternoon. The State Republican, and Lansing Journal gave excellent write-ups, and on returning to Coldwater yesterday, our eyes were greeted with copy of same in Daily Reporter. I inclose you clipping from the Lansing Journal, Monday, October 24.

We think a fine impression was made at the Capital City of our State, and credit given to the local branch for rendering it so practicable, comes not untimely.

Your brother,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

PHOENIX, ARIZONA, October 25, 1910.

Editors Herald: In your issue for October 19, page 1029, article, "The work in Arizona as we see it," the fourth line from the bottom of the page has an error in it. It has the name James Farley, which should read John Farley. Both brethren live at Bisbee, but Brother John has the responsibility of the office of deacon. Please make the correction and oblige.

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, October 29, 1910.

Saints of Southern Indiana District: As the financial law is not regarded as it should be, by money being collected as tithes against my consent and spent without my authority, I wish to state to one and all that I will not write receipts for anyone, unless the money comes through my hands. The only authorized collectors I have in the district are as follows: Jacob Halb, E. O. Byrn, E. A. Jeagers, D. H. Baggerly. Either pay your tithes to the above brethren or mail them direct to me. In complying with the above you will all be aiding the Bishopric in their work.

Trusting God may prosper you all in the keeping of his will, I am, as ever,
JOHN ZAHND.

BULWELL, NOTTINGHAM, ENGLAND, October 17, 1910.

The HERALD dated September 28, 1910, has an editorial article under the caption, "On the road from Bethany to Jerusalem," by E. A. S. I can not help taking exception to its teaching. As a Latter Day Saint I, with others, am not perfect, either in understanding or knowledge, teaching or practice; otherwise the Church of Jesus Christ would not require the officers set in it, as stated in Ephesians 4:13, "till we all come unto or in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ"; and verse 14, "that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine." Mind, this is not with any spirit of controversy, but that unity of understanding may prevail.

In the second part of HERALD, the letter part, however, the fig tree is to be pardoned, for it is not the time of the year when figs are to be gathered. Now I contend that the fig tree is not to be pardoned, but condemned, as our Lord condemned it.

Leaving for a short while the lesson our Lord intended to teach us, let us imagine ourselves of the party, (and as is well known, the fruit of the fig tree sets before the leaves unfold.) We are walking along, hungry, and on lifting up our eyes behold a fig tree with rich, large leaves on it, which could or might be taken to imply it to be fruitful. Eagerly pressing forward to appease our appetites, lo, nothing but leaves greet us—a tree apparently most vigorous, but fruitless. A tree, according to appearance, which should be expected to have on it the delicious balkooroth, or first ripe spring figs. Being thus deceived we lift up the large leaves, expecting to find the kermouses hidden underneath them; but again we are disappointed. These kermouses, or autumn figs, often remain hanging on the trees all through the winter, even until the new spring leaves come. See Josephus, by William Whiston, on the war of the Jews, book 3, chapter 10, paragraph 8, as follows: "The country also that lies over against this lake hath the same name of Gennesareth; its nature is wonderful as well as its beauty. Its soil is so fruitful that all sorts of trees can grow upon it, and the inhabitants accordingly plant all sorts of trees there for the temper of the air is so well mixed that it agrees very well with those several sorts. Particularly walnuts which require the coldest air, flourish there in vast plenty. There are palm trees also, which grow best in hot air; fig trees also and olives grow near them, which yet require an air that is more temperate. One may call this place the ambition of nature, where it forces those plants that are naturally enemies to one another to agree together. It is a happy contention of the seasons, as if everyone of them laid claim to this country, for it not only nourishes different sorts of autumnal fruit beyond men's expectations, but preserves them a great while; it supplies men with the principal fruits, with grapes and figs continually, during ten months in the year, and the rest of the fruits as they become ripe together through the whole year." Now had the tree borne fruit last year there would be every chance of finding the violet colored kermouses or the spring balkooroth figs, thus proving the tree to be barren; and our God being the same yesterday to-day and for ever, the everlasting fiat had gone forth, Cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground.

In same paragraph, just previous, it says, "Like some Christians, it is profuse with promises, but empty of good deeds."

Would it not be more correct to say, Like some so-called or professing Christians, but not possessors or practicing it, or in the word of James, "Not hearers only, but doers."

This fig tree being a symbolical emblem of the nation of Jews, laudatory professors, Pharisees, the whited sepulchers full of dead men's bones, without life, profess unto perfection, who had tithed mint and cummin, and had left the weightier matters undone. But seeing such a profusion of leaves, our Master might reasonably expect to find the last year kermouses, autumn figs, or the balkooroth, spring figs, but finding neither, the tree was therefore barren; the curse was then pronounced upon it, and the lesson or application to everyday life may be deducted as follows:

First. The uselessness of the professors without possessing that spirit which will bring forth good fruit through repentance unto good works.

Second. A warning of the peril and uselessness of the cloak of hypocrisy, or Pharisaical doctrine and practices.

Third. An illustration of the mighty power given through faith in God, as we are taught that faith is the moving principle of all action.

Let each one of us ask ourselves the question, To what extent have I faith in God? Am I keeping his commandments? and, as John in his epistle says, doing those things that are pleasing in his sight?

May we each desire the help of God to be consistent in all things, having a unity of the faith in the bond of peace. I pray no one will think this in a spirit of controversy, but with a desire to obtain perfection in all things, even Christ; serving him with fear and trembling, lest we become a cast-away. I desire knowledge, but rather wisdom to do, or put my knowledge into practice. May the kermouses and the balkooroth abound in each of our lives is the continued prayer of your brother in the restored gospel.

Respectfully,

GEORGE GAYDON.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, October 21, 1910.

Dear Herald: In giving the names of speakers of our late reunion at Irvington, I see the secretary has unintentionally omitted the name of Bro. Edward Ingham. In justice to the brother, I write this card, as I am sure the secretary did not intend to slight him, and especially as he preached one of the best sermons of the reunion. Pardon me, Brother Adamson.
C. A. PARKIN.

CHARLES CITY, IOWA, October 26, 1910.

Editors Herald: From time to time the Saints say to the missionary, "Why don't you write? We would like to know what you are doing," etc. So for the benefit of all who may see these lines, I will say that the past two weeks have been spent in this State. Sr. S. K. Foye, of Lime Spring, an aunt of my wife, has often desired me to come their way; so for a week I was made welcome at their home, and although W. W. Foye, her husband, is not a member of the church, yet the missionary is ever made welcome. And by the way, he remarked the day I left, "Tell any of the boys that the latchstring hangs out." I preached three sermons in their roomy house, but by that time Sunday came and the pastors said, I think, "Beware," for only two came the following night.

I have been at the home of Bro. and Sr. H. S. Ott, in Charles City, for nearly a week, and have been holding preaching services in their house with some success. There are only five members here. Beside Brother and Sister Ott, there are Thomas Spencer, who with Brother and Sister Ott were all baptized in Madison, Wisconsin, Mrs. Alice Hering and her brother, Albert Horn. These five are all active members who are anxious to see the cause of Zion move forward, but they have to labor against heavy odds, as the only way they can get a public place for services is to hire a hall, and that takes too much money. As a missionary, I believe it a good place for a tent in warm weather, and I think by planning ahead this can be accomplished, as Sister Hering's husband, "Irving," as everyone calls him, while he is not a member to-day, we all hope and pray that he may be soon. He has a large lot where they live, in the central part of town, and it would be roomy enough for a tent. This city is growing fast, and is composed of people who have moved here from other cities and States to make their homes here.

The Hart-Parr Company is a thrifty company, and is affording lots of employment in up-to-date shops with good wages. I expect to return to Wisconsin Friday, and will try and answer some of the calls for preaching there. We are thankful to have Bro. E. J. Goodenough in Wisconsin again, as the laborers are few and plenty to do.

Hopefully laboring,

JASPER O. DUTTON.

P. S.—Since penning these lines, the name of "Irving" came in for baptism, so that the prayers of the Saints are answered and there are now six members in Charles City, but no officers; so for a branch they must wait a while. However, there are young men here who, if faithful, will be called to labor in the vineyard of the Lord.—J. O. D.

WEST DERRY, VERMONT.

Editors Herald: The dear HERALD comes each week, sent by some kind one, and I am very grateful. I wish there were some Latter Day Saints at West Derry. I get very lonely, as we live out of the village and seldom see anyone, but we are trusting in our Savior's blessed promise. I want you all to pray for us, that we may be blessed with health and means of living.

I am able to sit up a little, but unable to work, and my husband has only done a few days' work in the past year. We would like to take up the prison work once more, as we have lots of good reading to pass them, and many a weary heart may be reached by a paper or a good letter. So, sisters, let us scatter what sunshine we can, as we shall pass this way but once, and may we each be the means of brightening some saddened soul. Stamps and stationery will be gratefully received.

Your sister in the faith,

MRS. ROY COWLES.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA.

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

How many of us take heed of the foregoing and set our light up high, so its rays may penetrate far into the darkness that we see all around us, that by those rays some soul may find the way to salvation.

Dear brothers and sisters, let us keep our lights burning brightly at all times and everywhere we go; let it shine forth by every word and every action, for we never know how much influence we have over those with whom we come in contact in discharging our daily duties. How do we know but what some of our associates have taken us for an example, as a sort of standard which they are trying to live up to? In such cases, many a word can be spoken and much seed sown, and who can estimate the fruit of it?

Let us try to live our gospel every hour in our lives, no matter where we are, among the Saints or among the worldly. If we are laughed at, ridiculed, and abused, it can but confirm us in our faith, for has it not truly been said, "everywhere this sect is spoken against." Let us put on the armor of God and battle on in spite of all our fellow-men can do or say, for we will not lose our reward; we must be brave; have courage to confess Christ to all the world and not be ashamed of him. "Whosoever, therefore, shall be ashamed of me and of my works in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels."

We should always be ready to acknowledge ourselves children of Christ, and always be looking for opportunities to put in a word or two for his cause, in which way we will be warning our neighbors of their danger, when the appointed day shall arrive that all our works, good and bad, will be brought to light.

I will now relate how I came to investigate the claims of the Latter Day Saints and to obey this glorious gospel, which now I esteem and love above all else. Just about two years ago, I returned home from a few months' sojourn in Fort Stanton, New Mexico. I decided to stay out in the country with my mother through the winter, and not try to get work in town until spring. There was not much affection lost between us, that is, between work and me, and as hunting promised to be good sport, I thought I would enjoy shooting much better than work. How little I thought of the great blessing that was in store for me at that time.

I owned a Bible which I had purchased some years before, and much against my will, I now regret to say; and as I had read all the old papers and novels in the house, and some of them twice, I took to reading the Bible to pass the long winter evenings, but did not find it very interesting. I knew no more when I laid the book down than when I took it up, for I did not know how to study to get any sense out of it.

There was, at that time, a faithful sister teaching school in that district, a Sr. Helen Cator, who was staying at the home of one of my friends. It was there that I met and got acquainted with Sister Cator, and in course of time our conversation drifted to religion, and she told me that she was a Latter Day Saint. It was beyond me. I had heard of many denominations, but nothing like that. When she told me that some people called them Mormons, I thought then it must be the Utah church, and when she mentioned prophecy and gift of tongues, I thought of Spiritualism. You see I had been confirmed in the Presbyterian Church, and consequently did not hear much Bible preached, if any; and going to church had been only a form with me, and for years I did not even do that.

Well, I was positive that the Saints had the gospel twisted and I undertook to straighten it out for them, so I got some literature from Sister Cator, and got to comparing it with the Bible. At first I hardly knew how to go about it; I was looking for the New Testament books in the Old, I did not even know that the Bible had an index that showed what pages they were on. One of the first things I learned was to pray to God for light on the subject that I might be guided into the way of truth, and I was guided aright. The more I studied the more I wanted to know. Some things that I could not see through I went with to Elder L. E. Hills, at Marion, Iowa, and he explained all to my satisfaction. When I saw that this "marvelous work and a wonder" was the true work of God I was anxious to obey. I thank God for the way I have been blessed in this great work, and I pray his blessings on those who were instrumental in my being led to the truth, and buried in the waters of baptism, which ordinance was administered by Brother Wildermuth.

Dear Saints, my case can be but one of many, where just a word or two dropped was the cause of a soul finding the gate to salvation; so let us be diligent in working for the cause of Christ, and he will surely bless our efforts.

R. E. MOTEJL.

CASTANA, IOWA, October 24, 1910.

Editors Herald: I will trouble you for a little space, as I wish to ask a very great favor from some of our ablest writers. My letter writing is getting me into a squabble with some of the various religionists. The Ahma Publishing Company takes exceptions to a letter of mine in the Ensign. They say some one has sent them a copy of a paper called Zion's Ensign, and "our attention is called to a letter by you. There is just one item to which we take exception, and that is where you say we are striking at the heart of your beloved religion." They say they are not fighting anyone's religion, but are simply presenting God's truths as they appear to them.

Now the stuff and nonsense I referred to was their explanation on "temples" and "temple building." They give a mythical meaning to every passage of scripture they quote. I suppose they will be teaching next that heaven is a place where disembodied spirits with wings to support the weight of their disembodiment are flying around through endless space singing praises to a God without body, parts, or passions, sitting on the topmost top of a topless throne, casting poor sinners to the bottom of the bottomless pit, which is filled with the darkness caused from never ending fires of damnation, and if there are any more contradictions to their imaginary religion I leave them to find it out, for they are full of contradictions.

They say they are thankful to me for writing the letter, and very, very thankful to the Ensign people for publishing it, as it gives them lots of free advertisement, and they are already receiving letters asking for their literature on account of it. They say, "May God bless you, dear lady, and give you a heart to prove all things and hold fast that which is good," and I say, "Amen," real Methodist like.

About six weeks ago I wrote a couple of letters to the Gospel Trumpet, asking them to explain Isaiah 29: 4; 11, 12; 18; Psalm 85: 10-13; Ezekiel 37: 15-21; Ezekiel 17: 1-24; Isaiah 37: 31, 32; Genesis 49: 22-26; Exodus 14: 22; Genesis 49: 22; Genesis 15: 18-21; Genesis 49: 26; Deuteronomy 33: 13-17; Psalm 80: 1, 2; 8-12, 16; Jeremiah 49: 30-32; Isaiah 16: 8; Isaiah 18: 1; Zephaniah 3: 10; Matthew 15: 23, 24; Ezekiel 34: 6; John 10: 16; Jeremiah 22: 3; Acts 17: 26, 27; Genesis 11: 8, 9.

I gave them a brief explanation to each quotation as we understand them, and asked them for their light on the subject as they claim to be the church, or church of God.

Now, I wish some of our more able writers would expound these quotations to the Trumpet family. I do not think they will ever answer any letters personally or through the columns of their paper, but there are very many honest hearted Saints being deceived by them. They call them out of great Babylon and turn them loose without a shepherd. I think we ought to make an effort to get the truth before these people. Let us unitedly bombard them from every quarter. Address all letters to Gospel Trumpet Company, Anderson, Indiana, and join with me in prayers to God for results.

In fighting harness,

SADIE BURCH.

PLAINS, KANSAS, October 24, 1910.

Saints' Herald: We were glad to have Bro. F. C. Keck with us recently. We enjoyed three good sermons from him while he was here. Some few nonmembers were interested. This little village is not very religiously inclined, but it does very well considering that there are eleven real estate firms here, with only three stores. The people here did not know the difference between the Utah church and the Reorganized Church, so I ordered one hundred copies of the October issue of Hampton's Magazine, which gave a nice writeup about the Reorganized Church. I also sent and got one hundred tracts, "Latter Day Saints; who are they?" by T. W. Williams. I gave a tract out with each magazine. Being in business and dealing in magazines and books, I had a chance to put them out where I thought they would do the most good.

I am inclined to think we will get my brother Dick, (R. M.) and my friend and brother, James E. Yates, up here this winter to warm the people up with a few sermons.

I would like to state, through the HERALD, that I can give employment to a young man and wife without children if they can take the kitchen, and do the cooking and so forth, for about forty people, with some short order work. Could use three people by taking in the dining room. Am paying twelve dollars a week for a cook, and if there are any of the Saints within a reasonable distance who want a good all winter's job at good wages, let me hear from you at once.

Yours in bonds,

W. S. MALONEY.

NOVEMBER 1, 1910.

Editors Herald: I come again, asking the prayers of the Prayer Union in behalf of my sister-in-law, Mrs. Sadie Kerney, who requested me to write for her. She had to go to the hospital about eight years ago, and fears that she will have to go again, except God in his mercy will heal her of her afflictions. Pray that she may have faith to be healed, and that she may be led to accept of the true gospel, so she may enjoy the blessings of God, and become a worker for him.

I thank all who remembered my boy in their prayers. I feel that God heard and answered your prayers, as my boy is feeling better at this writing.

Your sister,

MRS. ALEX MELLON.

NEWARK, NEW JERSEY, October 25, 1910.

Editors Herald: Since I came to Newark I have not been able to locate any Saints, and the last two months I have not had much chance to hunt for any, as I have spent the time here in the hospital.

I was baptized at Comins, Michigan, in 1904, by Elder G. W. Burt. Since that time I have made many mistakes, but I am striving to overcome my faults, and I ask my brothers and sisters to remember me in their prayers.

If there are any Saints here, I would be pleased to have some of them call and see me. I am very lonely, and anxious to meet some of God's children. Will close by asking the Saints to pray for me, that I may gain my health and strength.

Yours in gospel bonds,

DAVID R. HOLLY.

Florida Reunion.

Florida reunion convened at Santa Rosa church, October 14, at 10 a. m., Bro. F. M. Slover presiding. The reunion held forth for ten days, giving way the 15th for district conference. There were two business sessions, two sessions of Sunday school, sixteen sermons, six prayer and testimony services. Friday, the 21st, was spent in temperance lectures.

Brn. F. M. Slover, J. W. Peterson, W. E. Peak, A. Van Cleave, of the missionary force were with us, and they with Bro. G. T. Chute did the preaching. The preaching was of a high order; spiritual and instructive.

The Saints seem to be encouraged, strengthened, and therefore glad we had the reunion. We trust that all the Saints will heed the grand instruction given to live meek and Christ-like lives, so that we may be worthy an inheritance in Zion. W. A. West, W. M. Hawkins, and missionary in charge were appointed as the reunion committee for 1911.

E. N. MCCALL, Secretary.

News From Branches

SAINT LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Strength and encouragement was received at our regular sacrament service, also through the word as received from Brn. T. J. Elliott, our pastor; Charles Jones and Bishop Anderson of Lamoni; J. A. Tanner, our former pastor, now of Chicago; and Brn. Rhoades and Davis of the Saint Louis Branch.

We esteemed it a great favor and received much strength and comfort through the visit of our Brethren Jones and Anderson and Tanner. We trust they will soon come again.

The tent services now held in Saint Charles have been having good interest. The Saints there entertained the Saint Louis choir the evening of the 18th, with an ice cream social, and they report an enjoyable time.

The district Sunday school and Religio held a joint session recently and an instructive program was rendered.

Bro. R. Walters passed through the city, October 20, en route to his home in Eldorado Springs.

Brother and Sister Radford are rejoicing in the arrival of a sweet baby boy, and Bro. and Sr. R. A. Lloyd in that of a sweet little girl. May God's blessings attend them.

Your sister in Christ,

2739 DEJONG STREET.

E. M. PATTERSON.

NORTHEAST MANCHESTER.

As members of above branch we ask with your kind permission to publish the following letter and appeal. Ever since the latter day work was established in this part, we have felt concerned about having a place of worship of our own, but realizing this could only be accomplished by real, practical effort, it was resolved on April 3, 1910, that we commence a new building fund, and for those who were able and willing to pay the sum of three pence each week, which has continued up to the present date, not one having withdrawn their name of support; but our membership has greatly increased at the present time, our members number twenty-six, paying their weekly contribution.

In the year 1903, we purchased our present place of worship, which is a wooden erection, but as we had to pay the sum of five shillings each week for the land which the building stood upon, we came to the conclusion it was not to our gain and interest to continue to do so; so we purchased the same from the owner, paying him the sum of two hundred pounds, and as land has become very scarce in this part, it adds to its value. And thus having land we are very earnest and anxious to place upon it a good, plain, substantial building which will be capable of holding the largest gathering the Manchester District can command. And if this is accomplished, which it surely will be, by our continued effort and the help we plead for, it will stand to the everlasting credit of the members who have paid so long and so well.

We have no selfish motive in the matter, but we do long to see this great need met, which might have been accomplished years ago had the early Saints in this part given it their thought and put the same into operation; but it is never too late to mend; thus our ambition and effort to see a building fully paid for and dedicated to the service of God and in due time, I believe, handed over to the church.

May say for the information of the Saints at large, since we commenced this fund we have raised the sum of about three hundred pounds, which has come from the effort of the branch, save it be for three gifts of five pounds, one from a brother in Birmingham, one from a brother in Manchester, and one from a sister in Kent; and four pounds seventeen shillings and six pence which was the proceeds of a collection box which was placed on the table in the house of a brother and sister in Manchester, for which we were truly thankful, and which inspired us to continue our effort, though we realized we had a long way to go; but truly, in this case we might say, Now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed. So with your permission we make an appeal to the Saints throughout the church for help and support, that we might more speedily accomplish it, by the help of God through his people, and to those who feel our effort is worthy of sympathy.

The undersigned will be pleased to receive donations, however small.

THE foregoing appeal has been duly considered by the Bishop's agent, of Manchester, England, District, Joseph Dewsnup, who is also knowing to efforts of the brethren of the Northeastern Manchester Branch, and he cheerfully indorses the same.

Approved and recommended,

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, October 25, 1910.

CENTRAL CHICAGO.

October 23. Elder Cooper occupied in the morning; theme, to be truly converted we must set our affection on things above. "Faith without works is dead." Human affection should be controlled by divine love. "To be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life eternal."

Sermon in evening was by Elder James Keir, showing that we all should have a high ideal. With Christ as our example we should endeavor to make progress day by day.

Wednesday evening prayer meeting in charge of Elders Tanner and McGahan. We are glad to welcome Brother Tanner to our city again, as he was greatly missed when away.

Sr. H. Bradbrook has been on the sick list for a few days, but is much improved. Sr. W. I. Cochrane also felt the need of the elders, but was much improved after the administration.

"The great Physician now is near,
The sympathizing Jesus,
He speaks the drooping heart to cheer,
Oh, hear the voice of Jesus."

To those in search of entertainment there recently have been events of much interest; namely, the annual track meet, at the fair ground, of the pupils of the high and ward schools, with their rivalry in contests and their varied assortment of yells and pennants; the Central High School morning assemblies,—at one of which a few days ago one of our Sunday school pupils gave an interesting lecture on mythology; and the evening speeches by campaigners on their way to Congress, also by men like Breckenridge and Borland, W. S. Cowherd and Governors Francis and Stubbs.

News From Missions

COLORADO.

Then there have been the gatherings of the Socialists and Synods, the Rebeckahs, and Royal Neighbors, the Homesteaders' Brotherhood, Bible classes, and Bankers' convention, and with the rest, the Jackson County teachers' two-day meetings, and most important of all, the mass meetings and cottage prayer meetings of the Ministers' Alliance and W. C. T. U., both of which are being held at this momentous time in the interest of the great state-wide prohibition movement.

On the afternoon of the 30th ult., many of the adult Saints, together with the Sunday school, met at the church and marched in a line about two blocks in length to the Christian church, which we helped fill to the doors, and then there was given a fine program of singing by the host of children present, and an address on prohibition by Doctor Palmer, an eloquent speaker from Kansas City.

"Missouri's going dry," was their favorite gospel hymn, and they sang it to the tune of "Bringing in the sheaves," with a zeal worthy of the occasion.

In the evening an educational and interesting temperance lecture with stereoptican views was given before an immense congregation at the Stone Church by Pres. F. M. Smith, on the theme, "Why I shall vote 'Yes' on the 8th of November on the question of state-wide prohibition." Our brother, also Bro. Ammon White, are well fitted for temperance work, the one being a logician, and the other a revivalist, and both being strong and forceful in speech.

November 1, under the auspices of the Ministers' Alliance, an all-day meeting was held in the basement, the following elders of the churches taking charge: I. N. White, B. J. Scott, L. E. Floyd, Baptist, G. E. Harrington, F. F. Walters, Christian, and D. J. Krahl.

A few fervent prayers were offered and many earnest talks given by the thirty or forty Saints there—all in the interest of state-wide prohibition, and the singing of our favorite hymns, "God is marshaling his army," "Awake, ye Saints of God, awake," "Oh, God, give strength to all thy Saints," and a few others enthused our friends, and gave much pleasure, as they so expressed it. Pres. Joseph Smith was present during the last hour, gave an interesting account of his labors in the temperance cause, and with his wonted fervor pronounced the benediction.

In the opening prayer, at the morning service of October 16, in charge of Brother Joseph, Pres. F. M. Smith petitioned that "the burden of years might be rolled from his shoulders and the vigor of life return" to benefit and bless the hearers of the venerable speaker, and the prayer was answered as he launched forth, so to speak, into a world of "fads."

All the church services and Sunday school exercises have of late, as usual, been well attended; the prayer meetings, especially those on Sunday morning and afternoon, are always full of spiritual life, although too frequently some think they are not patronized by the younger Saints as they should be.

On the 16th, Elder A. H. Parsons lectured on the subject of the Order of Enoch, to the edification of all present; also on the 23d Bishop Kelley took up the same theme: He said, "It is a benevolent and helping order in the church, the object of which is to so arrange for the Saints that they may develop and be built up in the proper way."

Our brother held forth again the following evening and with untiring patience answered more than thirty questions on this subject.

Bro. William Newton from England preached for us on the 23d.

ABBIE A. HORTON.

Seek happiness for yourself, and you will lose it; seek it for others, and you will find it.

Hath any wounded thee? Soft language dresses it, forgiveness cures it, and oblivion takes away the scars.

A year ago last spring, I came out here on business at my cattle ranch, eighteen miles south of Holyoke, and was invited to preach in a large schoolhouse, just built nine miles east of our ranch, where they had organized a union Sunday school. I preached three sermons, and had the assurance that it was a ripe field, and so stated to my son Walter and wife. Therefore, on my return here last spring, I felt I should hold a protracted effort, and did, just before going to General Conference. But in the meantime, while away, two elders, brothers, by the name of McDorman, one being a Quaker and the other one being a faith missionary, had come in and held a series of meetings, and organized a class of sanctified believers; therefore my son and wife supposed that all my interest was killed. But on preaching the first sermon, I had the assurance that God's people were still there, hence I continued my meetings from August 20 up to the time of our conference at Denver.

Just before going to our Denver conference, one night in a dream I saw myself feeding a large pool of fish. I held a loaf of bread between my hands and crumbled it, by rubbing it, and watched the fish eat it. Most of them were deep in the water, but as the bread sank down they ate it, while a few were very hungry and caught their food at the surface of the water. Therefore, while at Denver, I insisted on the presidents of the district coming to help me; but their minds seemed to be bent in other directions, hence I was compelled to labor alone; and yet not alone, for I never enjoyed better liberty and the interest increased, notwithstanding the report had gone out that I was a Salt Lake Mormon and did not use King James' Translation, etc. But as I had my horse and buggy during the day, I drove around and visited those who were the most prejudiced.

On visiting one man and wife of considerable note, who had been on a visit out West, and had visited Salt Lake, they informed me that the reason they had not attended my meetings was because they had been informed by those who had attended my meetings, that I was a genuine Salt Laker and preached everybody to hell who did not accept of our faith; but I informed them differently; told them that the Bible taught that every man would be saved in his own order except the sons of perdition, etc.

I took dinner with them and preached them a sermon, since which time they have been attending my meetings, and stated in our last meeting that they were almost persuaded. He examined my Bible and found it to be a copy of King James' Translation.

On October 15 I baptized four, and on the 22d one more, all heads of four different families, while there are as many more at the door awaiting my return. One excellent lady, who is very highly respected by all who know her, and would have been baptized this time, was opposed by her husband; but she is fully converted to the faith by reason of a dream she had some time back, when she saw the world all on fire and everybody terrified and running in all directions, except the writer, who was calm and could pass through the fire unharmed.

Before I met the reverend gentleman, Robert McDorman, he had stated to some that he would be glad to get hold of Curtis; so, after I had preached a week and came up to his appointment on Sunday, he invited me to open with prayer, and I soon discovered that from his heavy thunder, with very little lightning, that he was loaded for bear. He informed the people that we were no longer under John's baptism, but Christ's only, and if baptism was for the remission of sins then we should keep paddling in water all the while, etc., and he had no use for church unity; all that was necessary was to come to the altar and get sanctified, etc. He said that baptism for remission of sins was nonsense. When he got through he said I could have the floor and I occupied to the satisfaction of all but his class. I shamed him for perverting the Scriptures and said, "I hope you will never be guilty of such a thing again, and that God may have mercy on you," etc. I asked him to meet me in joint discussion, but he declined.

Well, what seemed to me to be providential, just a day or two before I baptized any, two elders of the Utah faith were passing through and heard of my meetings and stopped over to attend. I met them before entering the house and they informed me as to who they were, etc., saying that they had never had the privilege of hearing one of our elders. I told them that I was pleased to meet them, and for them to feel at home, as I presumed my subject for the night would be of interest to them. I had announced the evening before "False Prophets" would be the subject for the next evening. I had excellent liberty, and Brigham Young came in for his share. At the close I announced for the next evening, "The Authority of the Reorganization," and as they seemed to be anxious to get to the fresh air I caught the ablest one by the arm and held him, and told him that the subject I had announced for to-morrow night was for their benefit, and as several were almost persuaded I would give them one half of my time to inform the people as to their authority, etc., but they were undecided as to whether they could stay or not, but wanted to know how long I would be here. I informed them about a week longer. They said they would see me by that time: the time has expired, but no return. However, they informed my friend with whom they stopped that they thought it advisable to go on to their Denver conference and get a man there to come back and look after me. They stopped over with a thrasher crew who insisted on their attending my meeting, and dividing time with me, but to no avail. Some who were present told me, after they were gone that now they were satisfied as to the difference.

In conclusion I will say that Brother Aaron Sweet, formerly of Iowa and lately of Oklahoma, and family are here, and he ably assisted me. He is a deacon, and I am leaving him to take charge in my absence. Last Sunday I administered the sacrament to the Saints, and arranged for them to meet every Sunday at 11 a. m., at some house for prayer. The Saints and those almost persuaded are anxious to have me come back between now and Christmas. They say they think if I can do the preaching for nothing that they can pay the railroad fare; and I agreed, as I feel that the good Lord has a work for me to do in this vicinity. Where our faith has never been known I never had better liberty, and I am determined, God being my helper, to labor on until the end of life, and make the cause honorable. My two sons, Walter and Edward, who are still interested with me financially, say to me, Go ahead in the field.

I beg to remain, your colaborer,

EMSLEY CURTIS.

Agreeably to your request, I pen a few lines to your valuable columns. Sitting on the northwest corner stone where at one time the Saints started a temple, but just the excavation of the same and the corner stones remain to tell the story, outside of history. Just across the road on an eighty acre farm owned by the Reorganized Church, stands a church building owned by our people.

The conference of the Far West District met at this church, October 15 and 16, and had an enjoyable time; as well as a profitable time. Several Saints visited this historical place; a place that has endeared itself to the Saints because of memories of the past, according to history. Many of the visitors carried away souvenirs. We visited the old spot pointed out to us as being the place where the house of the Prophet Joseph at one time stood, and our departed and beloved patriarch Alexander was born. An old well is still visible, and by it remains two stumps, and from these stumps Bro. J. A. Roberts and the writer obtained pieces from which souvenirs were made, and we are proud of them.

The Saints of Far West were pleased to have our Historian and his wife in their midst a few weeks ago. They said his visit was too short, so, H. C., come when you can stay longer. Nothing of the city of seven thousand remains, excepting history and a few landmarks.

We have a fine class of people in Far West District, who are, I believe, making progress toward the standard hoisted by the Christ. I think of the opportunities and privileges one time held out in the gospel of Christ, and they polluted their inheritances by their jarrings and contentions. Will we do likewise, or will we profit by the mistakes of the past? When we think of the greatness of God, and the weakness of man, I see no possible chance for a single individual to make a success in the gospel warfare, regardless of what our name may be. Our name merits us but little if we fail to take hold of the gospel in a proper manner. As Jesus made it so plain when he said, Without me ye can do nothing. We can not afford to stumble because some other brother does; but the man who stumbles and falls and wants up, we should assist to get up. I believe the Order of Enoch is the opening wedge to better conditions. Men will have opportunities given them now, that they can prove their faith by their works.

The situation, as I see the work, is in fair condition. Some of the branches are hungering for spiritual food, very much so. We had six different invitations to come and hold meetings. Why proselyte continually and neglect the sheep? The Master insisted on Peter feeding the sheep.

The ministry present at the conference were: I. N. and J. A. Roberts, Swen Swensen, and Charles P. Faul, Bishop's agent; District President T. T. Hinderks, S. H. Simms, the assistant; V. M. Goodrich, pastor of First Saint Joseph Branch; W. P. Pickering, Third Saint Joseph Branch; David Powell, A. W. Head, Coleman Snider, B. J. Dice, Charles Householder, J. C. Elvert, Elza Adkins, John Argnotine. Bro. Adkins used his automobile as conveyance for several of the ministry, as Far West is ten miles from Cameron, where we were to get off.

The noise of battle is heard in the distance from the now progressive wing of Campbellites. One feature of said conference that is out of the ordinary: Sister Seeley, living at Kingston, seven miles away, walked over to the conference. She is past seventy years of age. What think you of that sisters? And in the afternoon she bore a strong testimony of this gospel.

I will close by saying I am in the faith of the angel's message, satisfied it will accomplish all designed by it having been sent. I hope to be able to endure to the end.

CHARLES E. HARPE.

FLORIDA.

Florida is growing. Our reunion in Florida closed yesterday, October 23. We had a very excellent time. Seven were baptized at this reunion and about the same number at McKenzie. Outside of Tennessee and Kentucky, the Southeastern Mission has members only in a circle of about one hundred and fifty miles, comprising southern Alabama, northwestern Florida, and southeastern Mississippi, about two counties in Florida, and perhaps three in Mississippi. There are three districts. The Alabama, the Florida, and the Mobile. There are two working branches in Florida, about three in Alabama, and about four in the Mobile District.

About thirty-one persons have been baptized in this section in the past two months, and a majority of them in Florida. Some of the discouraged missionaries have been revived, and the work in general is improving. Bro. Moroni Hawkins, formerly a priest, was recommended by the Santa Rosa Branch for ordination to the eldership, and the recommendation ratified by the conference. Bro. Emmet McCall, Bishop's agent, was ordained to the office of priest, with indications of greater privileges if diligent. Bro. Decatur Allen, who for a number of years was a conference appointee, and district president, but later grew inactive, because of mistreatment, as he thought, has renewed his covenant and desires from this on to do all he can for the Master.

Bro. L. F. West, who for nearly half a century has been one of the wheel horses of the South, together with his good wife attended the reunion and grew more and more interested in the work. Brother West would be an excellent man as a bishop in the South; a man of excellent judgment and considerable means. One of Brother West's sons will doubtless be elected to the State legislature this fall. Four sons and a daughter of Bro. O. O. Simmons, postmaster at Botts, were baptized, thus bringing all the family, except one, into the bond of the gospel covenant. Brother and Sister Simmons appear exceedingly happy. For a number of years Brother Simmons was inactive, but one time after hearing a number of men ridiculing the church, he was ashamed to make himself known as a member, and that night the Savior appeared to him and said: "You have been ashamed of me, and I am ashamed of you." Since then Brother Simmons has given no occasion for anyone to think he is now ashamed to be a Latter Day Saint.

The church is proud of him and his family, and no doubt the Savior is, too. What an influence a true, zealous, and wise father can exert over his family! On the other hand, what little confidence children will have in the church if their parents are faithless and workless!

During the month of September, I preached a sermon for every day, and baptized nine. Have baptized five since. There are many calls for preaching here, and the example and influence of former missionaries are telling for good.

Financially the people in the South are poor compared with those in the North. The land is sandy and unproductive, and it requires several dollars' worth of fertilizer to the acre to raise anything. The climate is splendid, excepting some of the hot days. There has scarcely been wind enough here to blow a hat off during all the summer and autumn. Such a pleasant, balmy air, and gentle showers are almost a curiosity to an Iowa man. The recent Florida gale did not reach here. The day was as calm as any, and the reunion wore on apace. Peaches are out in bloom, and woodland flowers are in evidence everywhere. The western snowstorm lowered the temperature here to very near the frost point.

Besides holding two reunions and three conferences in the territory described above, we have enjoyed a discussion between Doctor Love, of the Christian Church, and Bro. F. M. Slover. Be it said, to the credit of Mr. Love, that his deportment was all that could be expected of an opponent; however, he says he has a chip on his shoulder for every Mormon elder who comes down the pike, and challenged us to meet him any time or anywhere. Bro. W. E. Peak accepted his challenge, and asked him to meet him in his church in Pensacola. Arrangements are not complete yet. Brother Peak was called home before the reunion ended.

J. W. PETERSON.

FLORIDA.

We have good reasons for believing that the work of God is moving on to victory in some places in the sunny South. Reunion just closed here, which is said to be the best ever held in the Florida District. Seven were baptized. Five were baptized at the Alabama district reunion, which was held at McKenzie, August 12 to 21. Saints said it was the best reunion they ever attended. Here we have the largest branch in the Southeastern Mission, and quite a number of excellent people, but we have some excellent Saints here and there in different places, with whom it has been a great pleasure to be associated. Several good people have been brought into the church lately, and there are many opportunities for presenting the gospel, which is the very thing to keep the missionary from getting homesick and downcast.

The missionary force who have been laboring in this part of the mission, consisting of W. E. Peak, J. W. Peterson, and A. VanCleave, have all done well, and God has blessed them in their labor, and the work has been built up as a result. Brother Peterson has done very effective work here in the Florida District.

The writer lately met J. L. Love, M. D., of the so-called Church of Christ, in eight sessions of debate, on church propositions, at Finklea, Alabama. Brethren Peak and Peterson rendered valuable aid in the battle for truth. This debate was brought about by reason of a public challenge to the writer, and afterward a series of lectures against the faith, and finally a writeup by Doctor Love, to their church paper, stating that I had backed down. All of this placed us on the defensive. I had good liberty most of the time, and our people felt well over the result. This was his fifth debate with our elders, and he is about as strong a man as any that they have among his people; but he is very weak, as they all are. The weather here is very beautiful.

Hopefully in the faith,

BERRYDALE, FLORIDA.

F. M. SLOVER.

KEWANEE, ILLINOIS.

Those of the Saints and others who are interested in the work of the Lord in this corner of the vineyard, may be pleased to hear that the work still progresses. While it is but slow, yet we trust it is of a permanent nature.

We closed a protracted meeting a week ago Sunday evening. While our church was not overcrowded, yet a number who are without the fold, heard the gospel sounded; and if they really desire salvation they will, ere long, unite with us. Truth is mighty, who can stay it, is still as forcible as when first expressed. One was baptized, and a number of church publications were sold, totaling nearly twenty dollars. We believe good was done, but much more could be accomplished if all who have named the name of Christ, would let their "lights" shine. The work then of necessity will grow, not only in this city, but everywhere.

The apostle gave expression to a truism, when he said they would be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. The Ministers' Association of this city are complaining that the theaters and other places of amusement are robbing them of their audiences, and they are seeking redress by appealing to the city council, that they might close these places on Sundays.

We are contemplating holding some meetings this month in Galva, nine miles west of us, where we have a few members. Perchance some good may be done.

Though we may have to meet with opposition, we are still hopeful of success.

NEBRASKA.

The field seems to be widening, and the opportunities for preaching seem to be more frequent. The people appear to be more liberal in their views and the call comes to us, Come and preach in our church or our town, for we have heard that which is uplifting and satisfying to our souls, and our faith in God has been strengthened by listening to you preach. And so we have been holding forth in the Christian Church of Brownville, Nebraska, with good sized crowds and attentive listeners, and we trust good was done for the cause of truth, as some have been moved upon to unite with us.

Thus far we can record sixteen baptisms and the outlook for the future is very favorable, as we have the work firmly established in several places and the Saints are doing their part in various ways; and we believe as the Saints may more fully comply with the law of God in spiritual and temporal things the work will advance and good will be accomplished in a greater measure. Life is too short to lend our energies to that which will profit the work of God and truth.

We should always bear in mind the work of God should have first claim on our talents and energies, that they may be brought to bear upon the cause of Christ, and that our usefulness may be felt by many and our work approved by God. W. M. SELF.

Dice, district treasurer, reported receipts $37.94; on hand last report 42 cents; disbursement, $37.94; on hand, 42 cents. Summarized reports, as presidents of branch: A. J. Seely for Kingston Branch; V. M. Goodrich for Saint Joseph; T. T. Hinderks, German Stewartsville; J. L. Bear, jr., Second Saint Joseph; S. H. Simmons, Far West; W. P. Pickering, Third Saint Joseph; John Piepergerdes, Dekalb; B. J. Dice, Stewartsville; Coleman Snider, Oakdale; L. L. Babbitt, Pleasant Grove; Frederick Palfrey, Cameron; Benjamin R. Constance, Delano; E. F. Ferguson, Norborne; T. J. Mauzey, Edgerton Junction. Missionaries reporting: Charles E. Harpe, J. A. Roberts, Swen Swensen, W. P. Pickering. The Pleasant Grove Branch sent in a recommendation for the ordination of Bro. S. J. Hines to the office of elder. This was left to the presidency and missionary in charge; Far West Branch also recommended the ordination of Bro. Samuel Andes to the office of elder. This was granted, and the secretary of the district was requested to notify the missionary in charge of the Montana District of the action of the Far West district conference, Brother Andes having moved his family to that State. The secretary consented to so notify. A collection was taken on Saturday for the purpose of purchasing a suit case for the carrying of the district records; $8.76 was the amount collected. Preaching on Saturday, by I. N. Roberts, assisted by W. P. Pickering; Sunday by T. T. Hinderks, assisted by D. E. Powell. Branch meeting at 2 p. m., in charge of A. W. Head and Coleman Snider; preaching at 7.30 by Charles E. Harpe, assisted by Charles P. Faul. Adjourned to meet with the Saint Joseph Branch the first Saturday in March, 1911.

FREMONT.—District conference convened at 10 o'clock a. m., president, T. A. Hougas; secretary, C. W. Forney. Prayer by N. L. Mortimore. Minutes of last conference read and approved. T. A. Hougas; Elders D. Hougas, James Comstock, N. L. Mortimore; Priests C. W. Forney, H. N. Pierce, John Huston, L. C. Donaldson; Deacons S. S. Clark, G. Fred Skank. A motion that each branch be authorized to purchase its own blanks was made, and after some discussion was lost. Report of T. A. Hougas on Hamburg matter was presented: "Hamburg, Iowa, October 15, 1910. To the Fremont district conference; Brethren: The matter of elders' court for matters referred to us was disposed of as follows: The court appointed was Paul M. Hanson, Frank Goode, and M. W. Gaylord. The court fixed September 23 for trial of the cases. They met at Hamburg with all present but M. W. Gaylord. The cases were called and disposed of. They sent reports to me and I in turn forwarded to the Hamburg Branch. We find that the records of the Hamburg Branch fail to show that Sr. Ella Vanderpool was ever received a member of the branch, though her name stands on the record. We recommend that a committee be appointed by the conference to investigate the matter and report to the session this afternoon, if practicable. Respectfully submitted, T. A. Hougas, president of district." The report was adopted by a vote. C. W. Forney, James Comstock, and H. N. Pierce were chosen for the committee. Short speeches were made by H. N. Pierce, James Comstock, John Huston, N. L. Mortimore, and T. A. Hougas. Adjourned to meet at 2.30. At 2.30 conference assembled. Committee's report presented and read: "Hamburg, Iowa, October 15, 1910. To the conference assembled: We, your committee, having carefully examined the records and evidence concerning the name of Mrs. Ella Vanderpool, find that there is nothing to show that she is, or ever was, legally accepted as a member of the Hamburg Branch, and recommend that her name be stricken from the record. Signed, C. W. Forney, H. N. Pierce, James Comstock." Motion to adopt the report carried. Moved that the time and place for holding the next conference be left to the district presidency. Carried. A motion that T. A. Hougas now take up the subject of the Standard of Excellence in Sunday school work, prevailed. T. A. Hougas then led in a discussion of the ten points in the Standard of Excellence. At 7.45 preaching by H. N. Pierce, assisted by John Huston; at 9.30 Sunday school; at 11 preaching by T. A. Hougas, assisted by M. W. Gaylord. At 2.30 social meeting, in charge of C. M. Roberts and J. B. Cline; at 7.45 preaching by H. N. Pierce, assisted by N. L. Mortimore. Adjourned. C. W. Forney, secretary.

Convention Minutes.

KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.—District Sunday school association met in convention with Foundry Hill Branch, near Puryear, Tennessee, October 15, Superintendent J. R. McClain occupying the chair. Bro. B. F. Webb acted as secretary for the meeting, owing to the absence of the secretary. The convention was opened at 7.30 p. m. Remarks by the district superintendent, after which a short program was rendered by the Sunday school students. At the business session, Bro. J. R. McClain offered his resignation as district superintendent, which was accepted, and Bro. O. S. Caldwell was chosen as our district superintendent, Sr. Lou Seay, assistant superintendent. Convention adjourned to meet again at the next conference, which will meet at Bethel, near Cottage Grove, Tennessee. Alma Snow, secretary.

LAMONI STAKE.—Sunday school and Religio associations met, October 20, 21, at Oland, Missouri. Reports were read from the various officers. The president of the Religio association, Roy M. Young, tendered his resignation, and W. E. Shakespeare was elected to fill the vacancy. C. I. Carpenter was then chosen as vice-president of association. Adjourned to meet again at the same place as and just prior to next stake conference. Martha Martin, secretary.

The Bishopric.

To the Saints in the Spokane District; Greeting: The present year is drawing to a close. Will it be success or failure on your part? You have done well in the past and many have done well this year; let us all remember the Lord's portion is needed to carry on the work. Our records will not be complete without your name. Saints living in the following counties please send tithes and offerings to me: Stevens, Ferry, Okanogan, Chelan, Douglas, Grant, Lincoln, Spokane, Whitman, Adams, Franklin, Kittitas, Walla Walla, Columbia, Garfield, Asotin, Benton, Yakima, and Klickitat; in Idaho, Bonner, Latah, Kootenai, Shoshone, Nez Perce. We hope to hear from all before the close of 1910.

The Sunday school and Religio associations of the Mobile District will convene on Friday, the 9th, at 3 o'clock p. m.

Addresses.

Elder J. M. Baker, 2914 North Twenty-fifth street, Omaha, Nebraska.

Graceland College.

WINTER TERM BEGINS NOVEMBER 29.

At this time of the year there is always a number of new enrollments. Many people enter for a short course in review of the common branches. Some of these are teachers desiring a few weeks' review; some are prospective teachers desiring to prepare for examination; some are persons who have failed in entrance requirements and enter to "make up"; and some are individuals who have not had opportunity of attending school in former years, or who have neglected to improve the opportunity, and now realize the necessity of making use of the time.

Classes will be formed to meet the needs of these various classes of people so far as possible.

Excellent facilities are offered to pursue work in Piano and Voice, Oratory, and Manual Training. Our Commercial School will give you the best of opportunity to train for business.

Our rates are low; our instruction excellent; our surroundings unexcelled.

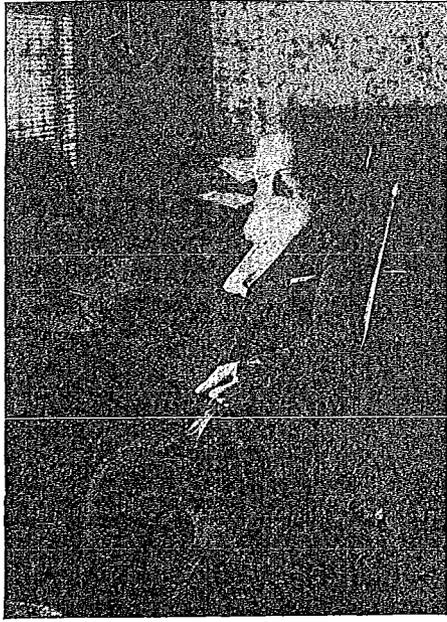

Write for catalogue, and then come on November 29, and prove our claims.

Address Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa.

The contribution plate in church very often comes back nickel-plated instead of silver-lined.

If you are seeking your own glory, rather than the glory of the Lord, you are on the wrong track.

Do you ask me, beloved, what it is that chiefly strengthens faith? It is having much to do with Jesus.

VOLUME 57

LAMONI, IOWA, NOVEMBER 16, 1910

NUMBER 46

Editorial

"THE JEWS RETAKE JERUSALEM."

The Saints used to sing a familiar and favorite hymn, beginning:

Go on in faith, ye Saints, go on,
Fear not, the cause is good,
The Jews rebuild Jerusalem,
As prophets said they would.
The prophets said in latter days,
The Jews would once again
Return and build their city up,
Their loved Jerusalem.

The Jews rejected their Messiah, crucified him, and scattered his followers from the city of Jerusalem. Shortly afterward they were themselves scattered far and wide, their city destroyed, and their temple torn down, as Jesus had predicted. For many centuries their city was trodden down of the Gentiles. The Jew remained an outcast, a man without a country.

But the Scriptures were replete with prophecies that the Lord would again remember his covenant people, and gather the children of Israel back to Jerusalem. In the eleventh chapter of Isaiah it was stated that God would set his hand "the second time" to gather his people from all parts of the world, gathering the "outcasts of Israel" and the "dispersed of Judah" from the "four corners of the earth."

Joseph Smith declared during his lifetime that the angel that appeared to him during the night of September 21, 1823, referred directly to this prophecy and said that it was about to be fulfilled. This testimony was often delivered orally and was published at least as early as 1842 (see Times and Seasons, volume 3). There seemed at the time little prospect of its fulfillment, but since that day wonderful changes have taken place.

As evidence that the prophecy is indeed being fulfilled we note an interesting article from the pen of Frank G. Carpenter, entitled "How the Israelites are to-day retaking the Holy City," published in the Omaha Bee, October 30, 1910, also in the Kansas City Journal of the same date. In part the article is as follows:

JERUSALEM.—(Special Correspondence of The Bee.)—The Jews are rapidly coming into their own. This holy city now contains more than 60,000 of them, and they form over two thirds of its whole population. By the new constitution of Turkey they have acquired the right to own land in Palestine, and they can come and go as they please. This has not been the case until now. Jewish immigration has been prohibited, and such Jews as bought real estate have had to purchase and hold it under other names. This was so not only here, but all over the country. But, notwithstanding they acquired land, and I am told that some of the best farming properties of the plains of Sharon are in their lands, and that they own the most valuable business sites of Jerusalem. The new constitution gives them other advantages, and it is probable that they will rapidly increase in number and wealth.

The Jews of Palestine are not like those of America. They have a costume of their own, and come from so many different localities that it is not always possible to tell who they are. Among them are Persians, Spaniards, Russians, Bohemians, Poles and Germans. There are many Algerians and Moors, and I have seen some from Abyssinia and Egypt.

They speak forty different languages, and there are many whom the others can not understand. In the main there are just three different classes. First is the Ashkenazium, made up of Jews from Russia, Poland, Austria and Germany. These people are much like the lower class Jews of America, and their common language is Yiddish. The second class is of the Sephardim. They are Spanish Jews, descendants of those who came here centuries ago. These Jews speak a mixture of Spanish and Jewish. The third class is the eastern Jews, made up of Israelites from Syria, Persia, Arabia, and central Asia. They speak Arabic and look much like Moslems.

As to the American Jews, they are comparatively few, and it is seldom that you meet one that has been born in America. Those who claim to be such are chiefly natives, who have gone to the United States to get their naturalization papers, and then return here to live. Many of the latter are frauds, and our consul believes that some of them have bought their naturalization papers, and have never been out of the country. American citizenship is a valuable badge of protection in the lands of the sultan; and for this reason naturalization papers have been sold by returned Jews who have again left this country.

As far as I can learn the American Israelite does not stand high among his fellows of Jerusalem. The most of the Jews here pride themselves on their piety. They think themselves above the Jew who has suffered long contamination by mixing with foreigners and they especially despise the American. Meeting one on the street they may slap him on the stomach and sneeringly ask how much pork he ate when he was in the United States. In this I refer to the fanatics, who are composed more especially of the Spaniards and the members of the Ashkenazim. These people have inner circles of religious aristocrats, some of whom are supposed to have magic powers of healing. Among them are many men of education and culture, men who know the Bible from beginning to end, and who speak several languages.

One can tell nothing of the Jerusalem Jew by his dress, for a dirty, ragged old man is often a scholar.

And still the dress here is about the same among all classes of the Israelites. The boys and men wear coats without belts, which reach from the neck to the feet. They are full, and are slightly open at the front, showing gowns under them. Many of the Spanish Jews wear black turbans or velvet caps, with a wide fringe of fur outside. Some wear broad-brimmed felt hats, which come far down over the forehead, half hiding the ears. They do not shave, and a long beard is a sign of wisdom, dignity and piety. They wear the hair long, and each has a long, curly lock on each side of his face, in front of the ears. These locks often reach down to the breast, and are allowed to grow, according to a saying in the scriptures, which states:

"Thou must not mar the corners of thy beard."

Many of the Jews never cut the hair in front of the ears for fear of touching the beard, and I see boys with the rest of their head shaved and these two earlocks left.

These Jerusalem Jews have fine faces. Many of them have high foreheads, strong noses and mouths and beautiful eyes. Some are fair and others have olive complexions. Their hair is of all colors from jet black to blonde and fiery red, and there are many old men with beards of silver.

Indeed, the most of the Jews of the Holy City are old men and old women, many of whom have come here to die. Jerusalem is to the Jews what Benares is to the Hindoo. They hold a superstition that this city is on the direct road to heaven and that they must come here in order to attain the latter place. I am told that many of the Jews of this city believe that if they should die in other lands they will be dragged under the earth through the globe to the Mount of Olives, where the resurrection is to take place. There is a Jewish cemetery on the side of that mountain which contains thousands of tombs, and it is there that the Jews are laid away. It is said that soil from that spot is sent all over the world in order that it may be put in Jewish coffins. Not a few of the old men who live here have left their businesses to come. Some have given their foreign estates to their sons and relatives, and receive allowances from them. Not long ago one such came to the American consul and said he would like to leave some money to found a synagogue in Jerusalem. He looked dirty and ragged, and the consul asked what he had to leave. He replied that he owned under other names six good houses in Jerusalem and that the money from these had been saved out of an allowance of a thousand dollars a year which his sons in New York had been sending him.

The Jews of Jerusalem are far more particular as to the observance of their religion than are the Jews of America. There are more than one hundred synagogues in this city, and in all of these worship is held. I have attended many of the services and find the churches usually full. The men read Hebrew aloud. They come in their best clothing, and some of the old men are gorgeous in rich gowns of velvet and silk.

The Sabbath here begins Friday night, and it does not end till 6 o'clock Saturday. The beginning is just as soon as the stars can be seen Friday, after which no work of any kind must be done. Neither fire nor lamp may be lighted, and the most of people light their lamps before the dark comes and hire Gentiles to come in at bedtime to blow them out. The meals for the Sabbath are all cooked beforehand, and if there are any hot dishes they must be cooked by the Gentiles.

The orthodox Jew will not carry a bucket, an umbrella or even a baby on the Sabbath day. I have just heard of a boy who was given a new suit of clothes Saturday, his Sabbath. The gift was made by one of the American colony outside the walls, and the people there watched to see how the boy could keep his religion and still carry them home. He pondered some time, and finally put the clothes on and wore them, thus escaping the sin of carrying them on God's holy day.

It is on the edge of this Jewish quarter, just below the Mosque of Omar, where Solomon's Temple once stood, that the Jews come weekly to sorrow over the loss of Jerusalem and pray God to give the land back to them. The custom has been observed since the middle ages, and it is still celebrated every Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. It takes place in a narrow alley surrounded by miserable houses. One side of this alley is walled with great blocks of limestone, which form a part of the temple area. Against this wall about fifty men and women were leaning when I visited the place last week. They had their heads bowed, and many of them shook with emotion as they prayed, sobbed and wailed. The most of them were old, and the long curly locks which fell down in front of their ears were of silver. Others were just in their prime. There were also young men and young girls. Not a few of the male mourners wore European clothes, and I saw one woman wailing in a hat and gown of Parisian construction. Most of the women, however, were dressed in Jewish costume with shawls wrapped around their heads.

Each of the mourners had a book in his hand and read the Lamentations of Jeremiah, swaying back and forth as he did so. Now and then the whole party broke out into a chant, a gray-haired rabbi acting as leader and the rest coming in on the refrain. The substance of one of the chants was as follows.

O Lord, we pray Thee have mercy on Zion,
Gather the children of Jerusalem together!
May the kingdom soon return to Zion!
Comfort those who mourn over Jerusalem,
And let the branch of Jesse spring up in Zion!

The Jews of other lands are liberal in their gifts to the Jews of Palestine. They have established schools and hospitals in and about Jerusalem, and have agricultural colonies scattered over the country. These colonies already comprise 5,000 members, and they own something like 100,000 acres of land. Some are in Galilee, some in Judea and a very large one is not far from the seaport of Jaffa.

The latter is known as the Rishon le Zion. It supports a village of 500 people, who cultivate 2,500 acres of rich vineyards and orchards. This colony annually makes millions of gallons of wine and it has a large export of Jaffa oranges. It was founded by the Rothschilds and afterward managed by the Hirsch colonization fund. It is now said to be run at a profit. The other colonies are similar to it, and some of them nearly as large. Each has a school, a drug store, a hospital and a synagogue.

The Sir Moses Montefior colonies and schools here at Jerusalem are doing good work, and the French-Jewish society, which has 1,000,000 members, is now maintaining 140 schools, including manual training schools for girls and boys. If the students do well they are given a capital to start out with and are established in little shops of their own. In some of these schools the children are so poor that they are furnished one meal a day, and one suit of clothes every year.

In addition to the above there are many other sources from which money comes here. There is one fund collected from the synagogues of the United States, which is regularly sent from New York to the holy land. It is contributed to by Jews all over our country. I understand that there is some question as to whether this fund is as well managed as it should be and it is said that our consul has been asked to investigate its distribution. There are so many Jews here that the greatest care should be taken that the money sent should reach the right parties.

ITEMS FROM THE PAST.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

(Taken from the HERALD for November, 1860.)

"ELDERS ABROAD.

"Brother James Blakeslee started on his eastern mission November 16, and arrived that day at Galien, Michigan, where he tarried, and over two weeks after he was yet preaching there. We suppose that he will next visit Whitestown, and Franklin, Indiana, and this city, and afterward Syracuse, Ohio; Wheeling, Virginia; Alleghany City, Elizabeth, Pennsylvania; Kirtland, etc. He says: 'I have received a letter of November 16, from my son Harvey, from Franklin, Iowa. He and Brother Blair had baptized four at that place, and expected to baptize more before they leave for Pleasant Plains. They had good success in their mission.'

"Brother Lanphear has started on his mission. He was at Troy Grove, Illinois, and intended to go to the north part of Iowa.

"Brother I. L. Rogers wrote, November 22, that Brother Powers expected to start in a few days. He expects to go to Canada."

"The numerous letters, which we have received recently show that the branches of the church, generally, are blessed with prosperity, and the outpouring of the Holy Ghost. Many Saints, who were heretofore unacquainted with the resuscitated latter day work, have been made to rejoice in the glorious news."

"The annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is appointed to be held at Amboy, Lee County, Illinois, April 6, 1861. Strangers on their arrival at Amboy can inquire for Bro. Edwin Cadwell."

"The Latest Utah News.—We received a letter, just in time to extract a few highly interesting statements from. It describes a small settlement in Utah, in which it is stated that there are about forty families believing in the new organization. There are about two hundred souls in these families, who are mostly from Wales. At least three of these Saints have been presidents of conferences in Wales. The majority of them intend to emigrate eastward in the spring."

COLLEGE LOAFERS.

President Lowell of Harvard notes a growing contempt among college students for scholarship. Formerly this contempt found expression in the epithet "grind." With increasing contempt the hard-working student has now come to be called a "greasy grind." Every thoughtful man at all familiar with college communities has noticed this tendency. The college hero is the football man or the baseball man or the society favorite or the college politician. The student who looks upon the college as an institution for serious, laborious, intellectual culture is a "greasy grind."

The remedy for this situation lies in the hands of college authorities. College authorities should elect; if colleges are to be mere social and athletic clubs—pleasant loafing places for athletic young men and socially attractive young women—let it be so determined and announced. Then when philanthropists and taxpayers are called upon for funds they will know what they are doing. And parents, when they send their children, will know what to expect.

If colleges are to be institutions of learning, institutions for hard, stern, intellectual and moral training and culture, radical reformation is needed of college "spirit" and college sentiment.

The sentiment to which Doctor Lowell alludes is created at Harvard and Yale by rich young loafers who congregate there for sporting purposes and because it is the fashion to go to college, and because their fond parents don't know what else to do with them. These loafers should be sent home. They are doing themselves harm and the institution harm. It is a rank breach of trust to spend money on them. They don't belong in college. They contaminate their fellow-students. A man who looks on the college mainly as a place to acquire athletic fame or in which to have a good time should be promptly driven out, even though he be making "passing" grades. He is injuring himself. He is injuring his fellow-students. He is vitiating public sentiment. Hundreds of young men are ruined by being allowed to "dally" four years in college. They read an hour or two a day and persuade themselves they are "working" when in fact they are only acquiring habits of laziness and self-indulgence and a small, deceptive, surface conceit of knowledge which is much worse than ignorance. When they get out of college many continue to dally and indulge themselves. They never learn to work. The college student who has not learned to do hard intellectual work—who has never sweat intellectual blood—has wasted his time. It is these loafers with nothing else to do who created the fashion of despising scholarship.

The trouble with the colleges is that they have given way to the materialistic spirit of the time. They must "succeed." They must have numbers. They don't care to put in the knife and reform the college "spirit." It is almost true now that the athletic associations run the colleges. The spirit of rivalry, the desire for buildings and money and numbers, run the colleges. The thoughtless crowds gathered to see the great spectacular games run the colleges. The materialistic mob spirit of the day controls the very institutions which ought to curb and temper the materialistic spirit. Scholarship, science, culture, religion, are merely for the "greasy grinds."

There are exceptions, of course. The evil is greatest where students are richest. But the evil has touched the entire country. And the "greasy grind" comes quite naturally along with the glorious athlete."—Kansas City Journal.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

We learn that the Saints of Toronto are engaged in the work of enlarging their church. The building was erected comparatively recently, but is not large enough to accommodate the increasing audience. Bro. R. C. Evans is to commence winter meetings in the opera house Sunday, November 20. Evening meetings are in the opera house, Sunday morning, afternoon, and week evening services in the church.

At the recent election Bro. I. A. Smith, of the editorial staff was elected, on the Republican ticket, to the state legislature as representative from Decatur County.

The editors are arranging to issue another Magazine Number of the SAINTS' HERALD. This will be a holiday number, to appear December 21. As announced last week, new subscribers will receive the HERALD from now until the close of the year free. This will include the special Magazine Number, a fact that should interest new subscribers. In the past our magazine numbers have been something fine. They have been very popular. We are confident that this will be no exception to the rule. Some of our very best writers will contribute.

"In the days of my childhood and early youth, I made a pledge with God and with his people that I would be true to them. In looking over the experiences of my life, I can not now discern, and do not remember a circumstance, since the beginning of my experience in the world, where I have felt, for a moment, to slacken or relax in the pledge and promise that I made to God and to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in my youth. If there is a man or a woman in the world who can point out to me an instance, in all my life, where I have been untrue to my pledge or promise or covenant, I shall be glad to receive that information from that man or woman."

The foregoing challenge was delivered by Joseph F. Smith, president of the dominant church in Utah, in an address at the opening of the semiannual conference, October 6, 1910, as published in the Improvement Era for November, 1910. In reply to this challenge we cite Joseph F. Smith to his own confession before the United States Committee on Privileges and Elections, in the Reed Smoot Case, that he had not been true to his God. We quote from volume 1, page 334, where Mr. Smith explains why he does not obey the law and sever his polygamous relations:

Mr. Smith. I have chosen not to do that, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman. You have chosen not to do it?

Mr. Smith. That is it. I am responsible before the law for my action.

The Chairman. And in not doing it, you are violating the law?

Mr. Smith. The law of my State?

The Chairman. Yes.

Mr. Smith. Yes, sir.

Senator Overman. Is there not a revelation published in the Book of Covenants here that you shall abide by the law of the State?

Mr. Smith. It includes both unlawful cohabitation and polygamy.

Senator Overman. Is there not a revelation that you shall abide by the laws of the State and of the land?

Mr. Smith. Yes, sir.

Senator Overman. If that is a revelation, are you not violating the laws of God?

Mr. Smith. I have admitted that, Mr. Senator, a great many times here.

THE UNCHANGING LOVE.

[Cowper published this hymn in 1768. It is at this day one of the most familiar and best loved hymns in the churches of Great Britain; indeed, it was one of the hymns taught in the schools there. Cowper hardly would be called the poet of cheerfulness; he was of an erratic and melancholy disposition. Yet his hymns have become a rich heritage of strength and comfort to many people, perhaps because they contain the healing which he applied to his own inner wounds.]

Hark, my soul! it is the Lord;
'Tis thy Savior, hear his word;
Jesus speaks, he speaks to thee!
"Say, poor sinner, lov'st thou me?"

"I delivered thee when bound,
And, when bleeding, healed thy wound;
Sought thee wandering, set thee right,
Turned thy darkness into light.

"Can a mother's tender care
Cease toward the child she bare?
Yes, she may forgetful be,
Yet will I remember thee.

"Mine is an unchanging love,
Higher than the heights above,
Deeper than the depths beneath,
Free and faithful, strong as death.

Thou shalt see my glory soon,
When the work of faith is done;
Partner of my throne shalt be:
Say, poor sinner, lov'st thou me?"

Lord, it is my chief complaint
That my love is still so faint;
Yet I love thee and adore:
O for grace to love thee more!

—William Cowper.

Original Articles

THE LAW OF CHRIST AND ITS FULFILLMENT.

AS THAT LAW RELATES TO DUTIES WHICH MAY BE TERMED BOTH SPIRITUAL AND TEMPORAL.

BY E. L. KELLEY, PRESIDING BISHOP.

This is written pursuant to resolution of the bishops and agents in their meeting, and approved by General Conference in April last. When published, it will be put in pamphlet form, so those may have it who wish. It is treated of under the following heads:

Chapter 1, The Discharge of Duty.

Chapter 2, When to Render the Account.

Chapter 3, Tithes and Offerings.

Chapter 4, Special Consecrations and Surplus Properties.

Chapter 5, Special Benevolent and Helping Work.

Chapter 6, The United Order of Enoch.

Chapter 7, Special Articles Reflecting the Law Heretofore Published.

CHAPTER 1.

THE DISCHARGE OF DUTY.

Fulfilling of the Law of Christ touching Duties, whether relating to Spiritual or Temporal things, is Essential to a Truly Religious Life and Character.

It is a fundamental principle of divine law, that God "will render to every man according to his deeds." (Romans 2: 6.) And again it is said: "So then everyone of us shall give account of himself to God." (Ibid., 14: 12.)

Jesus taught:

Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock.—Matthew 7: 24.

The Apostle Peter commends the principle of doing in the following language:

Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently.—1 Peter 1: 22.

James points out particularly the value of the performance of duty to a truly religious character, in what may be termed the everyday work of life. He says:

Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.—James 1: 27.

Now it is granted that many persons may be found who appear to be very religious, and yet claim that doing, that is fulfilling the law, is unnecessary. But they forget that religion is one thing, and that "Pure religion and undefiled" is a very different thing. There is plenty of sentimentalism in the world that people mistake for true religion; but the religion of Jesus Christ is founded in the principle of doing. He taught:

Verily I say unto you, it is not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, that shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven.—Matthew 7: 30, Inspired Translation.

The Apostle John in later years applying the principle as a test to the true religious life, says:

He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.—1 John 2: 6.

Jesus ever walked in accordance with the law, never disobeying; Adam disobeyed; but in nothing did Jesus, and so he may well say referring to his Father, "I do always those things that please Him." There is no room to make the claim of being children of our heavenly Father unless we are "doers of the word," and not "forgetful hearers." Whatever we do touching the religious question, we can not afford to let self, the pleasures of life, the love of money or of friends cheat us out of the reward which comes by reason of a faithful performance of duty. This is worth all else, and the apostle warns the churches in this language:

Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.—Galatians 6: 7.

Wherever and whenever in the world there has been an accepted church, men have recognized and honored God by faithfulness to duty in rendering their accounts to him, through those whom he has chosen. Abraham honored the servant the Lord had appointed, Melchisedec, and paid his tithes to him. (Hebrews 7: 6.) Jacob, his grandson, recognized the justice of the rule and the divinity of the law and covenanted with the Lord at the altar at Bethel: "And of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee." (Genesis 28: 18-22.) This was under the gospel economy, that being presented as the order of life in Abraham's time.

And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed. So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham.—Galatians 3: 8, 9.

And when Jesus preached the gospel in his time the same principle was recognized and reaffirmed. He taught:

For ye tithe mint, and rue, and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment, and the love of God; these ye ought to have done, and not to leave the other undone.—Luke 11: 43.

The people then, as now, were prone to think that if they did a few of the things directed in the law, the others might be safely overlooked, or omitted; but Jesus ever taught the reverse of this, and so in the matter of the tithes: "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." The condemnation was in consequence of a failure of duty in some of the things.

Jesus is ever in harmony with himself; again he taught:

Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so to do, he shall in no wise be saved in the kingdom of heaven.—Matthew 5: 21.

The only true order is this clearly set out by Jesus and later specifically enjoined by the apostle in his instruction to Timothy:

I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality.—1 Timothy 5: 21.

The recognition of the sacred order of the tithe was also fully given in the church in the wilderness, and all were required to observe and keep it, because it was founded in righteousness. The law reads:

And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord. . . . And concerning the tithe of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatsoever passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto the Lord.—Leviticus 27: 20-32.

This was for the benefit of the Lord's work and his children who might need; and the truly religious man will remember God's children when they are in need. The promise is:

Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble.—Psalm 41: 1.

God is interested in his children in this world as in the next, and commends those who make efforts to care for them. In the midst of the fasting and feasting of Israel in the time of the prophets the Lord spoke to them disapprovingly, directing the messenger to "Show the people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins." The instruction follows:

Is not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke? Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? when thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh?—Isaiah 58: 6, 7.

The instruction under the restoration of the gospel in our own time is positive in enjoining upon the people the necessity of complying with "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." It reaffirms the instruction of Jesus contained in the records of the past and gives additional and specific direction in the present, looking to the fulfilling of the law revealed, thus furnishing an additional witness to the sureness of the law, being directly in keeping with the instruction of Jesus, "That in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established."

In the special instruction to the elders August, 1831, the following is urged:

Behold, they have been sent to preach my gospel among the congregations of the wicked; wherefore, I give unto them a commandment thus: Thou shalt not idle away thy time;

neither shalt thou bury thy talent that it may not be known.—Doctrine and Covenants 60: 3.

In January, 1832, further urgent instruction in keeping with the thought of being diligent in the observance of duty was given in this language:

Behold, I say unto you, that it is my will that you should go forth and not tarry, neither be idle, but labor with your mights, lifting up your voices as with the sound of a trumpet, proclaiming the truth according to the revelations and commandments which I have given you, and thus if ye are faithful ye shall be laden with many sheaves, and crowned with honor, and glory, and immortality, and eternal life.—Ibid., 75: 1.

There is no promise of reward for the elder who tarries at home when he should be in the field; nor for one who leaves home and sits around whiling away his time, idly visiting and gossiping, instead of being earnestly engaged in the Master's business who sent him forth to labor, not to look up a light job.

Again speaking to all, we are charged:

Let every man be diligent in all things. And the idler shall not have place in the church, except he repents and mends his ways.—Ibid., 75: 5.

In December 1832, other special instruction was given calling attention to many things that are oft-times deemed unimportant or unnecessary, but which must have been looked upon as essential to the good, development, and success of his children, or the great Teacher would not have communicated it.

Read particularly:

See that ye love one another; cease to be covetous; learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires; cease to be idle; cease to be unclean; cease to find fault one with another; cease to sleep longer than is needful; retire to thy bed early, that ye may not be weary; arise early that your bodies and your minds may be invigorated; and above all things, clothe yourselves with the bonds of charity, as with a mantle, which is the bond of perfectness and peace; pray always, that you may not faint until I come; behold, and lo, I will come quickly, and receive you unto myself. Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 38.

In February, 1831, less than one year from the time the organization was effected with but six members, the following instruction was given, showing the Saints what to do, and how to do. It embodies so much in a few words, of the merit of performing duty and the method of procedure contained in the testimony and practice of the church under past fruitful conditions, but which at the time had become obsolete, or wholly unknown, that the stamp of divinity is borne upon the message given. God ever speaks like himself, and his commands harmonize with that which he has before spoken, whatever the age or whoever the children addressed. And here he speaks:

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8.

The necessity of fulfilling every duty of the many enjoined under the law, whether relating to matters which are termed spiritual, or temporal, is unwaveringly set forth in the divine records; the witnesses are accessible to all and the law is binding upon all. Let us examine these, then, doing so with the like frank inquiry of the young man who came to Jesus, pleading: "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?"

MONEY.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—There are some very excellent ideas presented in the following article. They will furnish valuable food for thought for those who are inclined to be extravagant, wasteful, or thoughtless in the matter of incurring financial obligations. But we suggest that the strictures contained therein be not made to apply to those individuals who are plunged into debt by sickness or misfortune, who lament their condition and will escape from it if given a chance; nor yet to those missionaries whose families are in debt because the allowance that they receive is inadequate to meet present conditions. There are hundreds of families in the church that would be dumbfounded and utterly at sea if they were required to live on the allowance that a missionary's family of equal size would receive. Let more people pay their debts to the Lord and the missionaries would find it easier to keep clear of financial entanglements. The church as a church has always stood for honesty. At a general conference held in Nauvoo, in 1840, the church passed a resolution to disfellowship those Saints who should gather to Nauvoo without settling with their creditors in their home towns. And April 8, 1871, the Reorganization adopted the following resolution: That members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints shall not be counted in good standing who shall contract debts without a fair prospect of being able to pay the same." That resolution is still in force.—E. A. S.

Should Saints go in debt? The money question, in these last days, is the chief theme of the press and the statesman, the merchant and the mechanic, the clerk and the farmer.

Money seems to be the main source of power and standing in social life, and the foundation of business in all lines.

This being true, it would seem to be a proper subject for counsel and prayer. The Holy Spirit, speaking through Paul, in 1 Timothy 6: 10, 11, Inspired Translation, gives warning and counsel in these words:

For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness.

These words spoken to Timothy apply to every child of God. But whether from love of money, covetousness, or some other cause, it is a fact that many Saints are deeply in debt, and that to the serious injury of their life and testimony. Now a scriptural solution of this question is presented. All we should want to know, as Saints, is, What saith the Scriptures? and then cheerfully and faithfully obey; for in no other way can we manifest our love for Jesus. But it may be that the subject of indebtedness by the Saints is not supposed to have reached that degree of injury to our testimony as would justify such special consideration. This is a great mistake.

Debts are being effectually used by Satan to injure, and in many cases, utterly break down the testimony of Latter Day Saints. This is true of ministers, Sunday school superintendents, Religio presidents, teachers, officers, and members of the church.

Ministers have been known to boast of their financial incapacity, and some have been known to manifest astonishment at being called on at maturity to pay a just debt, seeming to forget the message of the Holy Spirit in 3 John 4, wherein he says, "I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth." Being a Saint means restitution, and righting wrongs. Debt is theft when bills are contracted without prospect of paying possibility, and debt goes along with vanity, pride, personal indulgence, and covetousness. It is easier to get into debt than out of it. Debt hinders the "testimony" of the Saint and the church of Christ.

There is a right place for credit in business, and it is justified to a limit, but a man ought to be taught to look upon debt with horror and often as a sin. Notice what the Holy Spirit says to all of us in Romans 12: 17: "Provide things honest in the sight of all men." This indicates that all men are looking at us, and a failure to keep a promise to pay is like a dark shadow thrown over our light. Thus is that sweet command of Jesus ignored in Matthew 5: 18 wherein he says, "Therefore, let your light so shine before this world, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven."

If it is a Saint we owe, he may at once stumble and fall into Satan's service, and if it is a sinner, he may be lost, all because of our offending. Excuses, in such cases, do little to mollify the offense; they are too often untrue in fact; then they add greatly to the offense. If really true, excuses do not save the untold evil consequences of a broken promise.

"Therefore owe no man anything, but to love one another; for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law." That is, do not contract any financial obligations that you are not able to pay.

Most people of the world measure Latter Day Saints by their faithfulness or unfaithfulness in paying debts, in keeping financial obligations. Bishop Hilliard says, "Keep your credit good." Herein we have one of the causes of so much lethargy and indifference in Christian service, and so little results from that service.

God can not honor a messenger fed and clothed with false promises; nor can he fully and freely give a message through lips freighted with deception. God wants undefiled sowers to scatter his seeds, and clean vessels with which to water his lilies, although the vessels may be frail and small.

No man will likely be able to point a lost soul to Christ who has broken a financial promise to him or within his knowledge. Imagine a man, reeling under the influence of liquor, trying to instruct people on the virtue of temperance; or a tobacco slave with a chew, or a cigar in his mouth, warning men of the fearful ravages of the tobacco poison, (which perhaps is the greatest now in use among men), and we will get a fair sample of the result of a Saint behind with his debts, trying to persuade his creditors, or their friends, to become Saints. They are likely to think one of two things, either that we, who thus act, do not ourselves know Jesus and are therefore hypocrites, or that Sainthood is a sham.

If a stranger, who knew all about Christ from the word, should hear that he was in our town in person, and should come there to see him, would such stranger likely mistake one of us for him?

Then, if Christ should come to-day for the Saints, what would be the condition of our finances? Would we have to blush for shame on account of unpaid debts, which we could then never settle?

And now, little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.—1 John 2: 28.

The borrower is servant to the lender.—Proverbs 22: 7.

The wicked borroweth and payeth not again.—Psalm 37: 21.

Another great evil from going into debt is the encouragement that such a course gives to extravagance, which is also a sin. We always spend more on credit than we do for cash. This comes of our always hoping for better times in the future, and the fact that it puts out of sight the evil day, pay day; and out of sight soon puts it out of mind, and in we go again, deeper and deeper. And oh, how our Father must be grieved when he sees us plunging into this whirlpool of sin, where deceit and false promises enthrall us on one side, and wrecked Christian character dims or puts out our light for Jesus on the other.

Then, Saints, going into debt constitutes one of the great obstacles to tithing, in at least two ways. When the Lord calls on his child for a gift, he at once finds ready excuses for not giving at all, or giving with stint, by looking at his debts, and saying, "Oh, I am so deeply in debt, my interest is eating me up," and so on. And thus God is robbed. Secondly; many preachers and teachers are so involved in debt, their own testimony is thus so injured that they are unable to preach and teach tithing. Ground down with their own financial mistakes, they have no heart, or conscience, to teach others the blessedness of giving to a Father who has done so much for us. And herein lies the chief cause of the financial dearth that now has settled down on the church.

There will be little giving without the people are taught to give, and very little teaching from those who can only teach by precept, and still less, the effect of such teaching. What has been said against individual Saints going in debt may be said with greater emphasis against branches going in debt. No branch needs a thing it can not pay for, and no branch can be fully used with such a cloud over it. Far better use the old church house than create a debt to build a finer one. God does not promise to bless those that worship him in a fine church.

And the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him.—John 4: 25.

As proof that church debts are dishonoring, no respectable financial institution will accept a church mortgage or loan. This comes of the fact that they are not paid on time, and, too often, never paid at all.

The Holy Spirit speaking to the church through Joseph Smith, on April 14, 1906, said: "In the establishment of the sanitarium and the home for children debt should not be contracted nor too large nor expensive buildings be built at the outset," thus indicating that the Lord has not changed his mind since the time when he first said, "Owe no man anything."

Apostle I. N. White says, "Get out of debt and keep out."

What has been heretofore said about Saints going in debt is not intended to puff up those who by accident, good judgment, or faith, have kept out of debt. Let such a Saint deal gently in his criticism with poor, debt ridden Saints, lest in his own heart and life there be a sin of equal or greater magnitude, (if such is possible): that is, the sin of being a proud, selfish Saint, or a miserly Saint; heaping up dirt in this world to leave for the disturbance and ruin of others, and not laying up any treasures in heaven. Between the debt ridden Saint, the proud, selfish Saint, and the miserly Saint, Satan will, in all probability, get the most out of the latter, and God will get little or nothing out of either.

Let us, as the children of God, humbly seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit in all of our financial affairs, whether in our income, or in our investments; in our spending or in our saving; in our debts or in our dealings; in our getting or in our giving; and he will guide us into all truth. Close economy in all things, with much earnest and faithful prayer, will bring speedy and certain relief from all our financial embarrassments, and this will bring sweet peace and rest.

Of General Interest

RACE POISONS.

Alcohol, tobacco, opium, tea and coffee, all recognized narcotic poisons, have within the last fifty years come into such general use in all countries and by all classes of people as to be properly designated "race poisons"; and the effects of this wholesale poisoning are apparent in every civilized land in the obvious race degeneracy which is taking place.

Of these several poisons, alcohol is the most ancient enemy of the race, having been used as an intoxicant from the earliest times; but it is only in recent times that its toxic effects have been recognized. Until the contrary was proved by the exact-laboratory researches of modern times, alcohol was supposed to be a stimulant and a food. Its ill effects were supposed to be due to excess, just as any food might be used in excess. Now alcohol is known to be a narcotic and a poison in all doses and under all conditions. The results of modern scientific inquiry leave no foundation for its use in any dose or at any time. It is a poison pure and simple, and in no proper sense a food in any quantity or under any circumstances.

And yet its use is increasing. If the present wide agitation of temperance and prohibition have to some degree restricted the use of the drug in this country, this small falling off is more than made up by the increase in other countries.

The poison appetite appears to be growing. Tobacco, always known to be a poison, has steadily gained ground among civilized nations since the discovery of its use by the American aborigines four centuries ago. The increased use of tobacco, especially by women, in civilized countries is a most alarming and surprising fact, to which the serious attention of sanitarians and sociologists should be directed. The tobacco habit is a filthy and destructive practice which civilized man has adopted from savagery in return for the many evil habits which he has taught the savage.

Tobacco is a poison in all doses and to all persons. It is a poison to animals and plants as well. It is one of the few universal poisons. The man who says, "Tobacco does not hurt me," might just as well say, "Gravitation does not attract me. I am an exception to all other material bodies. I am exempt from the operation of a universal law."

Tobacco is a muscle poison. It is especially a heart poison. No man in training for an athletic event of any sort is ever permitted to smoke. All trainers and athletes are perfectly well acquainted with the weakening and paralyzing effects of tobacco in every form.

Opium is another poison which is gradually bringing every civilized nation under its spell. China is just now making a desperate effort to free herself from this awful curse, but civilized nations are doing nothing to stop its insidious advance. Every year thousands of new victims are added to the tens of thousands already enslaved.

A peculiarity of the opium habit in all lands is that it finds its victims almost wholly among the educated, intelligent and refined. Professional men, cultivated women, physicians, lawyers, teachers, are the chief patrons of this enthralling drug, whose victims rarely escape when once the soul and body destroying habit is well formed.

Still more universal than any other poison habit is the use of tea or coffee; whether the leaf of the tea plant or the berry of the coffee tree is used, the poison is the same—we are dealing with the caffeine habit. Cocoa or chocolate is another source of a poison which is practically identical with that just named.

The theory promulgated half a century ago by the late Doctor Hammond that tea and coffee are really foods in the sense that they prevent the destruction of tissue and so save food, is now so thoroughly discredited that it has ceased to appear in scientific treatises. The contention made by the editor of Good Health thirty-five years ago in writing against caffeine, that any effect it might have to limit tissue activity must be due to a toxic action, has been fully substantiated by modern scientific inquiry and is now universally admitted.

Probably ninety-nine per cent of the entire population of the United States and of other civilized countries are habitually addicted to the use of one or more of these poisons. In not a small proportion of cases all are in use.

All of these drugs are nerve poisons. Their continued use weakens nerves and nerve centers, muscles, heart, digestion, liver and kidneys, and disturbs every vital process. All tend to produce the most terrible and incurable of all degenerative processes, hardening of the arteries, so-called arteriosclerosis, with its associated decay of brain, heart, liver and kidneys.

The poison habit has fixed itself upon our modern civilization like a great vampire which is sapping the vitals of the race and leading the way to race extinction.

Here is to be found one of the causes of the astonishing increase in the mortality from diseases of the heart and blood vessels. Here also may be found, in part at least, the explanation of the enormous increase in insanity and other forms of brain disease and degeneracy. Here, too, we may find a legitimate cause for the growing army of neurasthenics and incapacitated business and professional men who haunt the watering-places, health resorts and sanitariums of the country.

Here may be found also one explanation of the increasing prevalence of crime, the record of which in the United States eclipses that of any other great country of the world.—Good Health Magazine for November.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

(The following interesting writeup of President Smith is taken from Hampton's Magazine for October. We do not know who the writer was, but we wish to thank Hampton's for the manifest fairness of this sketch.)

THE HEAD OF THE REORGANIZED MORMON CHURCH.

Those good ladies who believe it is undesirable to be only a fraction of their husband's wives, also those who dwell upon the present high cost of living, may read with mixed emotions the name of Joseph Smith, son of the founder of the Mormon church, and President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. That, however, is because too few people understand that Joseph Smith, of Independence, Missouri, President of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints, is the head of an organization which does not believe and never has believed in polygamy.

The Mormon church which the original Joseph Smith founded not only did not accept polygamy in its tenets, but forbade it with more rigorous and insistent prohibition than you will find, unless you carefully search, in the Old Testament. Polygamy was no part of the original creed of Mormonism as written into Joseph Smith's Book of Mormon. When Brigham Young became head of the church following the murder of its founder and the hegira from Nauvoo, Illinois, he inserted in the Mormon scripture an indorsement of polygamy. The church split on this and other issues, and while the larger body followed Young to Utah, a minority established another branch of the church in northern Missouri and southern Iowa, where it still flourishes.

Joseph Smith was called in 1860 to be President of this church and has been its head ever since. The Utah Mormon Hierarchy is called The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; the Missouri-Iowa branch, The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Joseph F. Smith, president of the Utah church, is the nephew of the Joseph Smith who founded the church, and the cousin of Joseph Smith, President of the Missouri-Iowa branch.

Joseph Smith's branch of the Mormon church has to-day in all parts of the world some two hundred thousand communicants. To these good people—for they are good, devout, thrifty, earnest, and conscientious people—the word of Joseph Smith comes as near to being law as is the word of any spiritual ruler to any body of highly intelligent religionists in the world to-day. He is no religious faker. Like most of the men who have succeeded in founding religious sects, he has the business, the organizing, the financial faculty well developed. As a religious leader he is sane enough to reconcile religion and science, progressive enough to be always abreast of the times, and conscientious enough to be, at seventy-eight years old, a poor man despite that for half a century he has had the administration of the tithes which his followers devoutly contribute.

If you call on him at his office at Independence, Missouri, or at Lamoni, Iowa, you will be impressed with the fact that he is surrounded by none of the pomp and show with which men thus elevated are wont to robe themselves. The interesting little church of which he is head is a business as well as a religious establishment. At Independence, Missouri, it has built a splendid temple, and at Lamoni, it has a most interesting group of institutions, including Graceland College, a splendid home for aged people of the church, and a great printing establishment from which are turned out huge editions of the Book of Mormon and tens of thousands of religious documents, Sunday school lesson leaves, quarterlies, hymn-books, and like religious literature. This product is sent literally to every quarter of the world, for missionaries for The Reorganized Mormon church are maintained everywhere.

The Mormon communities of southern Iowa and northern Illinois are notable for their thrift, their good citizenship, Missouri are notable for their thrift, their good citizenship, their interest in the diffusion of education, and their day by day living of the life.

Joseph Smith was trained at Nauvoo, Illinois, to be a lawyer. He has been all his life a student and a thinker, as well as a man of affairs. He is a real modern patriot. His splendid figure, more than six feet tall and still straight despite his burden of years; his fine luminous eyes, still shining with earnest purpose to serve his people; his flowing white beard; his direct, keen manner in dealing with all the affairs that come to him day by day for the word of final authority—these and the fact that, if your taste leads that way, he will talk philosophically with you of the Book of Mormon, the Bible, the Koran, the Talmud, of Buddha, Confucius, Socrates, Kant, Huxley, Darwin, Spencer, Swedenborg, or Doctor Koch can not fail to convince you that he is a man of large parts and high character.—Hampton's Magazine.

EPISCOPAL BAN IS PUT ON DIVORCE.

CINCINNATI, October 13.—The House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church to-day placed a ban upon the marriage of divorced persons. The church canons relating to marriage were voted on during to-day's session of the triennial convention of the Episcopal Church, and the result was the addition of stringent rules.

Clergymen of the church are now forbidden to unite divorced persons in marriage under any circumstances. Formerly clergymen of the Episcopal Church were permitted to remarry divorced persons if they were parties to divorces obtained upon statutory grounds.

It was expected that the House of Bishops would to-day place its official seal upon faith cure and healing by prayer.

The House of Deputies was expected to put its official seal of approval on faith cure and healing by prayer at a late session to-day when the matter of the "unction of the sick" will again be brought up in consequence of the present indorsement by the House of Bishops.

At their afternoon session the prelate voted three to one in favor of the resolution. Although the original resolution favoring the anointing of the sick with holy oil to further their recovery was lost in the House of Deputies by a non-concurrence of the clerics and lay deputies another resolution of a less pronounced character was later favored. This resolution asking that a committee be appointed to "revise and enrich" the office of the visitation of the sick is now in the hands of the committee on prayer books.—Selected.

"Modern Savonarola" Tells Eucharistic Congress Men and Women Feed on Garbage and Live in Legalized Vice.

"Truth is truth wherever found,
Be it on heathen or Christian ground."

[To our readers we commend the following article, taken from a speech made at the recent Eucharistic Congress, held in Toronto, Canada, and we fully indorse the words of the one who sent us the clipping: "I am thankful that one man at least has courage enough to speak the truth."]

While we may not indorse, as "the Church of Christ" the identical church to which he refers, neither regard as infallible the church we do indorse, yet it is sure that the one refuge, the one place of safety from the tidal wave of corruption now deluging the land, is this Church of Christ.—EDITOR.]

FATHER VAUGHAN'S DENUNCIATION.

"A tidal wave of paganism is sweeping the world."

"The one cry beating the air is 'hurry up.'"

"Old ideals are yielding to pressure for creature comforts."

"The sense of sin is being regarded as a superstition."

"The relations between the sexes take us back to pagan times."

"Marriage has become debased and defiled."

MONTREAL, September 8.—"The Eucharistic Life, the Antidote for Modern Life" was the subject of an address delivered to-day before the Eucharistic congress by the Rev. Father Bernard Vaughan, of England, brother of the noted Cardinal Vaughan and a preacher whose sensational attacks on modern society have stirred London and caused him to be likened to Savonarola.

The speaker painted a vivid picture of modern conditions as he saw them, and pointed to the church as the refuge from the direful consequences he foresaw resulting from what he described as a "tidal wave of paganism" now sweeping over the world.

"We are living," said Father Vaughan, "in a day of headlines, snapshots, taxicabs and music halls; in a day when the scramble for the prizes of life has become a mad passion. It is a day of fever, fret, and fume, when competition for earthen toys is so keen, and the margin of profit in commerce has become so fine that the one cry beating through the air is 'hurry up.' No one seems to have time for pause till, worn out in the pursuit of gewgaws and vanities, a real cure becomes imperative, the clock is stopped, and all action, mental and physical, must be proscribed as prohibitive for an eighth part of a year.

"We are living in a day when the high ideals of old are fast yielding to the pressure of creature comforts, when principle is being exchanged for expediency, in a day when self-sacrificing Catholicism is being bartered for self-centered materialism, when the Christian sense of sin is being regarded as a bygone superstition; in a day when it matters not what you believe, but only what you do, and when you may do what you like, provided you are not found out; in a day when the relations between the sexes takes one back to pagan times, while the garbage on which men and women feed is as foul and loathsome as the stuff over which they gloat and chatter; in a day when marriage has become so debased and defiled that not even the pledged truth can make it long and endurable without change of prospective partners in a life of legalized vice; in a day when there is no empty place but in the cradle, no room in which to move but in the churches. Well may a leading Parisian physician sum up the situation, exclaiming: 'It is a mass of rottenness.'

"Observe that the cleavage to-day, as in no previous time since the dawn of Christianity, is between God and Mammon; or shall I say, in language more definite still, between Catholicism and Agnosticism, if not evolutionary materialism itself? For confirmation of my strong assertions read the story of present day life, as it is reflected in society, as it is mirrored forth on the stage, as it is shown up in the law courts, as it is writ large on our book stalls, or, if you will, as it is published in society journals, in the monthly magazine, in the weekly pictorial and in the daily press.

"With Mammon, then, asserting itself, as it does amid all sections of the community in this twentieth century, with home life gone, with social life demoralized, with our marts of industry like gambling hells, and the very streets like a nightmare, what I ask is to lift up and proclaim the interests of God against the devastating plague of frivolity, folly, and riot.

"Note well that before this tidal wave of paganism, stretching from sea to sea and river to river, everything is going under with one exception, and that is our holy religion. The Church of Christ indissolubly one, infallibly true, indestructibly good, is the one and only institution that is holding her own and is unchanged and unchangeable, amid all this wreckage and ruin littering the spaces of the world, like Christ, the church too remains yesterday, to-day, and the same for ever. Her center of gravity never shifts."

Letter Department

COLTON, CALIFORNIA, November 2, 1910.

Dear Herald: The longer I defer writing to your pages, the harder it is for me to do so. Sometimes while reading the good things you bring to us, and those of the Ensign also, I feel impelled to respond, and let it be known how greatly I appreciate the reading matter. But instead of carrying out my good intentions, I read on, then let other matters occupy my time, or perhaps write some and leave it till it gets out of date. Thus the words that might have encouraged are never heard and I continue to receive and enjoy, but render nothing in acknowledgment.

It has been my privilege, this year, to attend the reunion of both southern and northern California. Both were unusually good and uplifting; at least the spirit of them was (I heard very few words), the Saints were strengthened, and made to rejoice in the good, peaceful, happy spirit that prevailed. The financial side of the law of God was taught to the Saints by Bishop Kelley, in great plainness. By request of those of the northern district he continued the subject from day to day. The interest was so good throughout, that one can not doubt but both the Saints and the church will reap the fruits of it.

I heard four sermons of the northern reunion, which seemed indeed like getting out into the living world. Yet, just the mingling and talking with the Saints, and partaking of the spirit of the occasion, was very enjoyable, so like the dear old life again, notwithstanding I sense my loss more keenly at such places, yet could realize more clearly that my loss was his gain. Therefore, why should I mourn. When one gets out of the rut of everyday life, and drinks in the spirit of the work, and sees more plainly the spiritual side of life and its real duties, one feels like making a renewed effort to serve God and keep all his commandments; to endure cheerfully whatever comes in the path of life, that God's will may be done in us. Yes, it is good to meet with the Saints in those annual gatherings, where all are reminded of duties, responsibilities and obligations already known, perhaps, but too often lost sight of.

I, for one, feel that the time is near at hand, if not already here, when the Saints can not trifle with their opportunities as they have in the past, without sustaining greater loss; for there is something for all to do, who will keep pace with the onward march of this great, latter day work. And the young people have no thought of being left behind; they are taking their part nobly in the work, especially in northern California, where there are a greater number of them. May they continue faithful, to be ready to buckle on the armor and go forth in the service of the Master when he shall call.

The love and unity among the Saints is pleasing to witness, and to the writer they were very, very kind. We hope that some of the good friends at Irvington will receive the gospel in its fullness. They treat the Saints kindly, but as yet have not seen the kingdom.

The writer did not learn the number of persons on the grounds, but there were fifty tents, besides the large one, and streets and avenues named. There was Terry street, and Lawn avenue, Bush street and San Jose avenue, and others. A brother, George Driver, I think, donated several pieces of second-hand furniture in the way of spring seat chairs, lounges, and settees, which furnished comfortable sitting for several of the aged and afflicted ones, besides furnishing the missionary's tent, quite comfortable and home-like.

On returning home I found that the prayer meetings were kept up here in Colton during my absence. I left the house all arranged for them, and daughter Addie either came or sent one of the children to open and light the house.

The Tuesday evening after I came home a lady from Texas, who was visiting her son who lived near, came to meeting with Addie. There being few to take part, and the writer wishing to let the stranger know something of our faith, took the liberty to speak of the latter day work, giving some instances where it was identical with the church nineteen hundred years ago, both in its claims and in its operations, in its powers, gifts, and blessings. Brother Crumley also gave a good talk on the inception of the latter day work, and after meeting he talked long with her on the subject. She was deeply interested in all. She had never heard of it before. I gave her some tracts and Ensigns, and by request called on her the next day and had another good talk. She left the place the day following. Should the missionaries of that field see this, and it is in their power to call upon her, I hope they will do so. Her address is Mrs. Mary Trafton, Graham, Texas. Tell her by whose suggestion you called, and I am sure she will receive you kindly, and I hope your words will be blessed to her, that she may be led into the kingdom.

EMMA BURTON.

LONDON, ENGLAND, October 23, 1910.

Editors Herald: Our brief sojourn in England is fast drawing to a close. Next week we leave for Marseilles, and from there take steamer, November 2, for Alexandria.

Our tickets called for passage by steamer from Naples, but on account of the cholera we had to abandon our contemplated trip through Italy. We expect to make a brief visit to Egypt, then on to Jerusalem, where we expect to arrive about November 15. We expect to remain in Palestine about seven weeks, then take steamer from Port Said, January 11, for Australia.

Bro. G. T. Griffiths had intended to have accompanied us, but on account of the crowded condition of the steamers, we were unable to secure accommodations on the same vessel, so he starts one week ahead of us.

We have just received a letter from Jerusalem containing disappointing news. One of the party desiring baptism has died, and the others are about to leave Palestine; they may be gone before we arrive. It is possible, therefore, that our efforts in the Holy Land will not be as fruitful as we had hoped; but of this we can tell better later on. If the time has come to begin a work in Palestine, the Lord will open up the way, otherwise we must abide the Lord's time.

While in England we have visited Plymouth, Bristol, London, Birmingham, and Manchester; and in Scotland, Glasgow, Douglas, and Ayr. We have been well received everywhere we have been, and have tried to tell the gospel story to the best of our ability. Where we could not preach, we sang. Some have told us that our songs were whole sermons in themselves.

We are made sad to see the poor condition of the work over here. Brother Griffiths has a difficult mission, and needs all the support the church can give him. While in Palestine, address us, Jerusalem, Palestine, care Thomas Cook and son, Tourist Office, David street.

In gospel bonds,

F. G. PITT.

LONDON, ENGLAND, October 23, 1910.

Editors Saints' Herald: I leave this country the 25th for Marseilles, by way of Paris, and will sail from that city, Wednesday, the 26th, on the steamer Prinz Heinrich, North German Lloyd, for Alexandria, Egypt. From there by train to Port Said, thence by steamer to Jaffa, and from there by train to Jerusalem. Am very sorry that Brother Pitt and wife and I couldn't have gone on the same steamer, but by reason of circumstances over which we had no control, we could not make connections; principal reasons being that we could not procure berths on same steamer. However, they sail one week later, and I am consoled in the thought that I will have their associations soon after arrival. It is very difficult to predict at this juncture what the result of our visit there will be, as time alone will have to develop.

Conditions in this mission are not very favorable at present, but I am in hopes they may be more encouraging later on. If we have means and men at our disposal, could soon make a change for the better, but the trouble is, we are creatures of circumstances; so we are praying that deliverance will come soon from these conditions. We are reminded of the maxim that all things come to those who wait; but patience is required to do the waiting.

Brother and Sister Pitt have visited a number of our branches, and their presence has given some impetus to the work, and encouragement to some of the Saints. We regret that he and his wife could not have remained in this mission for a year or two, as their labors here would have been an advantage to the church. We have thought of making an effort to have them assigned to this mission for a while. Perhaps this is selfishness on our part, at least Brother Butterworth would think so. We feel confident that they will do good to the cause wherever they may go, and wish them abundant success in their far away mission.

I was sorry to bid farewell to Brother Rushton and family on the 11th inst., and must confess that it made me feel a little lonesome as the Ivernia pulled out from the dock. They will be missed by many in this mission, especially by myself, but we think and feel the move is for their good, and in the interest of the church there.

Wishing all success who are called to labor in the interest of the church, and salvation of men, I am,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

OTTUMWA, IOWA, November 5, 1910.

Editors Herald: I am sorry to tell I was hurt by the street cars on the 1st of November; had my right limb hurt, so am laid up. In reading the SAINTS' HERALD, the first thing I saw was Bro. Joseph R. Lewis's letter. It made me shed tears, for I was raised in dear old Brookfield, and it brought to mind my childhood days. I have loved ones in the old graveyard, too. Just as I got through reading it, Brother Lewis's only sister came in to see me, and I read the letter to her. You can imagine how we all felt. We were all school children together. Brother Lewis's father and mine were among the first families there. Sam Jones' father and Bro. William Lewis administered to me when at Ottumwa, and I had a grand blessing. I was reared in the Congregational Church at Brookfield, and remained a Congregationalist until I married Bro. D. T. Williams; then I began to seek for the true gospel, and I found it and obeyed it, and have had many grand blessings.

Your sister in the faith,
MRS. CASSIE WILLIAMS.

EDGERTON, ALBERTA, November 3, 1910.

Editors Herald: My missionary experiences this summer are not what might be termed encouraging. We find this a very hard field for various reasons. Prejudice is prevalent everywhere, and people do not seem to want anything in a gospel line. It is a very rare thing to find an inquiring mind. So we talk, talk, and preach when we can effect an opening, and do the best we can, leaving the results with God. Looking back we can say we have done some good. We have caused some to respect the name Latter Day Saint, which had formerly been held in contempt.

The Saints in the various branches are prospering very nicely. Trusting God may assist us in our efforts and that we may occupy when and where opportunities present, I am,

Your colaborer,
FRED A. ROWE.

CORYDON, INDIANA, October 31, 1910.

Editors Herald: Here we are again with good news from the old Hoosier State. Brn. John Harp and Jacob Halb closed a two weeks' meeting last night; had a good interest and large crowds; some are almost ready for the water.

The funeral sermon of Sr. Mary Hannel was preached yesterday, October 30, at our house. Her father was refused the use of the Lutheran church.

These Hoosier hills are full of religion, but Christianity is scarce.

The elders wished to meet the Lutheran preacher, but he kept shy of them. Brother Halb had a talk with him last fall. It was not long till he was ready to go. He affirmed the prisoners would never come out of the prison house. Bro. Halb quoted where Christ went to preach to the spirits in prison. The Lutheran preacher said Christ just went to tell them they were in prison.

Love to all the Saints; and also asking an interest in the prayers of all God's people.

Your sister in Christ,
EMMA E. WYM

WEBB CITY, MISSOURI, November 5, 1910.

Editors Herald: I am a constant reader of our much beloved weekly visitor, the SAINTS' HERALD. I always find something in its columns to cheer, and gladden the heart; its pages are full of good instruction, and as I read I can feel the influence of the Spirit, so I can rejoice with those who rejoice and weep with those who weep. I do not believe any Saint can keep pace with the work and not read the HERALD. The articles of a newsy character from the branches are of interest, as I believe everyone interested in the work feels that they are acquainted with the Saints. The letters expressive of the heart's desire, are strengthening and upbuilding, the same as similar thoughts expressed in testimony meeting.

I have a desire to be placed in life so I can do more to build up the kingdom of God than I can under present conditions. As it is now, the cares of life weigh heavily on me, and it seems that I am not able to extricate myself. Very poor health adds much to already heavy cares, yet beyond all I have hopes and take pleasure and comfort in the promises of the gospel.

I long to see the time when the Saints may arise and shake off the old habits and customs of following after some one, and not thinking and acting for themselves. Instead of taking the Holy Spirit as the man of their counsel, they take some brother or sister. All such, I understand, will be with the foolish virgins. Take heed that no man deceive you, is the word of the Savior. Now let every Saint heed the counsel and the church will be on a much higher standard than now. This work is an individual work and it is absolutely necessary to our salvation to receive our instruction from God and not from our fellow-men. If we fail to commune with the Holy Spirit, we fail altogether—no light in us. No oil in our vessels, so we will not be permitted to enter.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,
N. J. RANDALL.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, October 26, 1910.

Editors Herald: On last Wednesday I was visited in my repair shoe shop, by old Elder Benjamin Davis, of Parsons, Kansas, formerly seven miles south of Mound Valley, Kansas, where he baptized my father, mother, youngest brother, and sister Mary, and naturally we had a little talk over the past. It reminded me of, as we sometimes sing,

"How will the Saints rejoice to tell, and count their wanderings o'er,
When they upon Mount Zion dwell, and view the landscape o'er."

So I write to tell you of some of the many things that gladden our hearts and cause our souls to rejoice in the goodness of the mighty God of Israel, who has restored the everlasting gospel in its fullness, (Revelation 14: 6, 7,) as in days of old, confirming through the faithful and obedient.

The food our silent messenger is laden with weekly is what we hunger for. We have feasted on the word rightly divided, in editorials, letters, sermons, etc., since the early seventies, when it was more like the Hope for size; coming twice a month, at $2.50 per year; and now see what a square meal it brings weekly for $1.50 per year. Oh, what we will and do miss by not reading its pages. We have been compelled to borrow it for a long time. True, it is just as good; but when we get real hungry, we don't want to wait, unless we have been compelled to. So, many thanks to the Giver of all good, my family and myself are in better health and favor; also we have more shoe repairing, and dressmaking, etc. Our oldest daughter, Sr. H. E. Band, has helped us, so once more we feel that by denying ourselves, we can spare $1.25 for HERALD and Leaves for six months, and trust the good Lord will help us with health and favor, so we may be able to pay the next six months. We pray, and are willing to work, yea more, anxious to work, for, oh! what a blessing we have enjoyed since we espoused this great latter day work. Such wonderful confirmation the good Lord gave to us at the time of confirmation, and at the same time I was ordained to the office of teacher.

My oldest brother, Phineas, was a chronic, rheumatic cripple, who had spent all his living with the doctors. I went with him to town, and he went in to see the doctor. By this time the affliction had left his left limb and gone to the right knee, which had become twice its usual size, bent and stiff, so he had to use a cane and crutch to walk with. The doctor looked at it and remarked that he had consulted the best authors, and that there was but one other treatment, and that was to apply medicine powerful enough to remove all the callous, and he would have but one chance in ten, for if the remedy got into the joint it would be stiff ever after; so brother's answer was that he would wait.

There were four families of Welch Saints located near us. They said they would like to preach if they could get a place. I said they could use my house; it was a small log cabin, but as people used to take out the beds to have dances in, I thought we might be willing to do so for preaching; and so we did. Notice was given and some came. The Presbyterians had been holding meeting from house to house, and I had asked them to come over, if the preacher would come, come, and stay with us, reading and reasoning for two weeks. But no, they thought me a tough disciple of Col. R. G. Ingersoll.

So we had meetings, and an English elder and family were found some four miles down the creek, the elder being J. S. Hart, and he preached and I and wife went to spend the evening with Brn. J. F. and J. A. Davis, and we talked and reasoned. I denied the existence of the God of the Bible. Well, I asked, have you any conditions we can comply with, that we, too, may come to know that there is a God, as you say you know? and they said, Yes, sir. And they referred me to Hebrews 6: 1, 2, with other scriptures, as also the saying of our Lord, "Let any man do the will of the Father, and he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." And we are authorized to say, Let any man do the will of God as it is in his revealed word, believe, repent, and be baptized in water for the remission of sins, be confirmed by the laying on of hands for the baptism of the Holy Ghost, by one called of God and ordained to officiate in these most holy ordinances, and he shall know whether it is of God or of puny man. Well, it came to us with much force and power. I said, I am a candidate. We soon repaired to the water as did the Philippian jailer, not to wash any stripes, but many sins.

My wife and I were baptized by Elder John T. Davis, and the next morning my oldest brother and his wife, of Pittsburg, Kansas, were baptized and confirmed. Promises were given to cheer and confirm. If my memory serves me correctly, my brother was administered to. The next meeting was at our house, and they coming took the west way, and while crossing a boggy place, his crutch stuck in the mud, and he left it. We had a good meeting. The gifts of the gospel were manifested. Brother was administered to, and on their return he left his cane, and was made sound and well. In some months I was called and ordained to the office of priest, and he to the office of teacher. So, through the goodness of Israel's God, he lived and enjoyed life for many years.

I had the blessed privilege of going out with Brethren T. and John A. Davis, A. J. Cato, D. S. Crawley, and others. Eternity will reveal the good done. Your brother.

C. M. FOULKES.

AYLBURTON, LYDNEY, GLASGOW, ENGLAND, October 19, 1910.

Editors Herald: I wish to express my appreciation of the good articles and encouraging letters that appear in the HERALD from week to week.

We saw a correspondence debate a little time ago between some of our Utah friends and a Church of England clergyman in the "free press of Monmouthshire." The one party was pulling cheese cutters through the God of the other party; namely, that God without body, parts, or passions. We endeavored to persuade the Utahists to make comparisons between that bodiless, partless, and passionless thing, that goes when it moves, and that marvel that Brigham taught them to have to do with; that brought one of his wives with him into the Garden of Eden.

Our articles were published, but no replies came to hand; our articles were rich with promise, foreboding a more difficult task than smashing at that anglican creed which Saint Athanasus is charged of making. It was suggested—backed home with quotations that the influence of Brigham Young's God ideas were more corrupting upon the morals of mankind than the anglican creed God. Sad to say, I was as the voice of one crying in the wilderness. How soon is the bright gold become dim! When will these people denounce these wretched doctrines? How fitting is the story of the mote and the beam.

The work goes on in this land; a few now and then have obeyed. I have heard it said by some of our brethren that "John Bull is hard to move." Yes, he is stubborn about receiving the gospel; so is Dame Wales. Neither of them call with open schoolhouses for the elder to go in and occupy. There is just that difference and more in presenting the gospel in this land and what it appears to be in America. However, we are anxious that all nations should become affiliated with that family that should know no national pride nor disdain toward any of the units which compose the human race.

I trust that Brother Rushton has arrived safely to the land of the stars and stripes, with his family. I do not need to talk or beg the question, Brother John will find a welcome over there, as Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths has, and will find in this country.

I would suggest to some of my own countrymen that in the future they should not undertake to speak for Wales on this and the other question unless they are so authorized. Because all people are not good at saying what they want to; and comparisons are odious, according to an old adage. It sometimes means the rising of one and the sinking of another. A word of commendation is the due of each and everyone who is worthy. We have a custom here of flowering the graves of our departed friends. It may be a kind expression, but I have often thought of the words of my father. He used to say, "Give me the flowers now; I can not appreciate them on my grave." But there is danger of overcrowding the frailty of man with too many flowers. We need to always strike the happy medium. In my time several of the missionaries from America have brought their wives and families here at their own expense, so as to stay right here. I state this to enlighten some that it was a sacrifice to those brethren or their friends there, not here, that made it possible. Saints, in these matters of living for the wives of missionaries, it is not a case of asking the bishop, and you shall receive, knocking and it shall be opened immediately.

We had a nice time at Aberaman the early part of October, at our reunion; good was accomplished. I hope to see the work, by the cooperation of all in that love which is boundless, go on to victory over self, for the emancipation of our fellow-creatures in Adam. Your brother in the one and only true faith,

THOMAS JONES.

DETROIT, TEXAS, November 5, 1910.

Editors Herald: Will write to you to-day as I have never written before. Will tell you of a dream I had the other night. I thought that Bro. P. B. Bussell and myself were walking through the woods, and looking around I saw a long funnel come down from heaven, and I said, "Let us go to it"; and we went. Brother Bussell stopped before we got there and I went on. When I got there I heard some singing and told Brother Bussell to come there, and he came and listened and said it was up above us. So I looked down at the bottom of the funnel and saw it was hollow, and looked up in it and saw many people and said "Hello" to them, and a woman answered me. I asked her what they were doing? She said they were having a meeting. I asked her what kind, and she said, "Latter Day Saints, for that is all the kind there is up there." I asked her what about Joseph Smith, and she said not to bother about him, for he wore a crown; for me to be a good boy and I would wear one, too. I asked her if I was right, and she said, "Go on, and do not join anything else," and I said to her, "I believe it is true." She said again, "Be a good boy," and we walked away and I could not see her any more, so Brother Bussell and I walked away.

I pulled the Saints' Hymnal out of my pocket and said to Brother Bussell, I will hunt that song they were singing, but could not find it. I have not belonged to the church very long. I belonged to the Baptist Church six years, and now I know I am right, for in my dreams I shall sing, Nearer, my God, to thee.

Yours in gospel bonds,

J. C. Cox.

WORK IN THE TEMPLE.

As my second season's work in the temple is drawing to a close, a few lines in regard to my work therein may be of interest to some of the HERALD readers.

Last season, during the five months I was in charge of the temple, one thousand, four hundred and thirty-six people visited the temple, from many different States in the Union, and from foreign countries as well—England, Ireland, and France. Many bought cards and photos of the building, which together with the tracts given them, will help to advertise our work, as well as the temple, in different parts of the world.

My work along gospel lines this season was better and more successful than last, though many visit the temple who have not time to talk gospel or hear it, but simply wish to walk in and look, and then walk out and go.

Among the number who visited the temple most regularly this season was Mr. John D. Rockefeller, who came quite a number of times, bringing a different crowd of seven or eight each time. He likes the temple and location, and the workmanship of the building, and seemed to take pleasure in telling the people that all the work about the building is hand work; and that which astonishes him is how they raised the $60,000 to pay for it out here in the woods. He also tells the people this church has no connection or affiliation with the church in Utah. On one or two occasions he has quite ably defended that position with some who hold opposite views. On one or two occasions, while in the temple, he has taken the privilege to tell the people that this church is organized after the same pattern as the church we read of in the New Testament, with all the officers that church had, and of the incident of the little infant child praising the Lord at the dedication of the temple, who had never spoken a word up to that time.

It is better to have the good will of the richest man in the world than his bad will; especially when we do not have to compromise truth with error to get it. He says he likes to stop at Kirtland because our people seem friendly and sociable, and this such a beautiful place for a church.

Mr. Rockefeller is now in York State, and will go south for the winter, but intimated to us he would visit the temple again next season, and left a standing invitation to Sister Tucker to go with them to Chardon next summer; but she told him she did not know she would be here next summer. He asked if it would do one any good to be baptized if he did not repent. He is good and kind to children; he will allow as many to get on his auto as can stand on any part of it, and will take them down the hill from the temple for a ride.

Temple work is growing more important to the church each year. Many are made acquainted with the fact that there are two churches styling themselves Latter Day Saints. The one in Utah being an offshoot and not entitled to the church property, having gone away from the original church and its teachings, while the Reorganized Church is in succession and entitled to the church property.

I had the privilege of conducting Mr. Cowdery, son of Oliver Cowdery, through the temple. Who knows but some of the sons may return to the faith of their fathers and become helpers in the good work, just before the work is fully accomplished? We do not know whom the Lord may add to his church in order to bring about his righteous purposes in the earth.

November 3. I am now in New Castle, Pennsylvania, having closed my work in the temple for the season. During the six months I was in charge of the building, one thousand six hundred and sixty-five people visited the temple. The contributions to the church will be $10 per month for the eleven months I have been in charge of the temple, clear of all expense. I love to see every business of the church prosper, in a financial way as well as in a spiritual way. And if it prospers in a spiritual way it will in a financial way; and if it does not, there is something wrong and needs looking into. No one should find fault with the one who looks in and discovers the wrong, because we are all interested, or should be, in the prosperity of the church, and in her work, for we missionaries, especially, are dependent upon the church for support; and if we, through neglect, or the spirit of timidity allow the church to suffer loss financially, we suffer loss, also, financially and spiritually. So we as watchmen in the towers, should "keep our posts with sleepless eyes," "while the private out on picket, guards against the least surprise." I hope to be able to accomplish something in New Castle, but hope sometimes ends in despair.

Your colaborer in the world,

D. E. TUCKER.

WILLOUGHBY, OHIO, October 19.

ILLINOIS.

As an individual I have been much interested in the News from Missions department. It has furnished an idea of what is going on in all parts of the world in the missionary line. The work in this district is improved, seemingly, from what it was a few years ago, and we hope it will continue, as there is much room for improvement yet. This year we have three missionaries appointed to our district. Two of them came directly here from General Conference, this being their homes, and they have been almost constantly in the district. The other one has attended our conferences and reunion, and assisted in holding three series of meetings.

Our conferences were both spiritual and uplifting. They should have been encouraging to all who attended. The only regret of a serious nature was that one branch has been entirely unrepresented in both of them. We think they should have been represented there and received the strength that might have been derived had they come praying for light and strength.

Brethren Bailey and Fry held a very successful series of meetings at New London, Iowa, (where Brother Bailey met W. G. Roberts in debate last winter,) there being from one hundred and fifty to two hundred and fifty out to hear the preaching. None were baptized, but much good will surely result, in the own due time of the Lord, from the preaching of the gospel to so many listeners.

During the time these meetings were being held, our reunion began at Montrose, July 29. The reunion can surely be said to have been a decided success. It was spiritual all through. The work of the auxiliaries was good, the preaching and prayer meetings spiritual and enlightening. Not so many were out during the day, but a goodly number gathered to hear in the evenings. It was a decided improvement over the one held last year, though it was good. We hope to make the one next year better yet. After the close of the reunion here the writer and Brother Bailey attended the reunion at Moline, while Brother Fry, the president of the district, having been elected in June, attended the one at Thurman, Iowa.

The work of the Sunday school is looking better than during the past year we think, and we hope the Religio work will improve also. The serious drawback to both is the lack of young local workers in most of the branches. Several Sunday schools show a decided improvement, and one new Religio has been organized. Also one new school, at Montrose, the result, largely, of home department and the reunion auxiliary work.

The fall conference was held at Farmington, Iowa, after which Brethren Bailey and Siegfried held a series of meetings with good interest and attention and one baptism at the close, and with several others seriously thinking. We hope they will be found willing to be led farther and farther into the light.

The financial condition of the Bishop's fund is better this year than for several years. Several reasons might be assigned for this. Quite a number are willing to sacrifice to the interests of this work, while others seem to be a little selfish. Some pay their tithing but fail to support the missionary when he meets with their branch, and others assist him but fail to pay their tithing. If both were properly attended to, much more good could be accomplished, because the hearts of those thus complying would be much more easily touched. Some branches are neglectful of their duty to the missionary, allowing him to leave them not knowing whether he has enough to go to the next place or not. What the cause is we are unable to say, but surely it is as bad as thoughtlessness, to say the least. Remember, the missionary is making a great sacrifice. Being associated with the bishopric of the district, I feel like talking plainly.

The president of the district, Brother Fry, and his associate, the writer, are planning a trip around the district during the winter. We hope to spend about two weeks in each branch and teach them their duties where they seem to need it, encourage and strengthen wherever possible. It seems that many of the branches have been neglected in the proper teaching individually, in the past; and while we do not intend to put anyone in the "straight jacket," we hope our visit will result in good to them as well as us, and the work thereby be built up. Mutual improvement is what we need and want. The branches seem to need building up, so that when sheep enter the fold they need not starve.

Our great need in the district is local men for the ministry to look after and care for the branches, and our hope is that the Lord will hear our pleadings in this matter and raise them up to that work.

Only one debate has been held during the conference year. Three during last winter. Nothing of importance concerning other churches has taken place in the district, that has come to our notice. The Mintun-Roberts debate has been well written of in your columns. There might have been another had the president of the Utah conference covering this territory not flatly prohibited any debates with elders of the Reorganized Church, as he did Elder Meacham, who has been located in Nauvoo during the summer, now removed to Chicago, farther from danger. They held their conference here during September. Nothing of importance happened, that we know of, only all who spoke testified that Brigham Young did not tell the truth when he said he was "not a prophet nor the son of a prophet," for they said he was a prophet of God as well as Joseph Smith.

The historian of the district has written two lengthy articles for a widely circulated paper in McDonough County, next to Hancock, on the "History of Nauvoo," and "The assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith," and has one yet to write on the "Fall of Nauvoo." Possibly others. The article on the assassination was published in the weekly as well as the daily, and thereby reached about four thousand and five hundred readers. Friends were made, and prejudice broken down as a result, we think.

Yours for a final victory,

M. H. SIEGFRIED.

NAUVOO, ILLINOIS, November 5, 1910.

SCANDINAVIA.

It is more than nine years since I was sent to Norway, my native land, in order to do missionary work, and during that time I have tried to interest the people in the gospel from heaven. In this I have partly succeeded, inasmuch as some few, about fifty, have accepted our message, of whom the greater number are striving to live worthily. Some are excellent people, whose life and example are worthy of imitation, and it is a source of joy and satisfaction to realize that our work is not in vain even if we are not able to gain the hearing of the masses or convert a great number.

We have here as elsewhere the same opposition to meet, mainly on account of the Brighamite apostasy, a work known everywhere; and to get the people to see and admit that their work is an apostasy from the original latter day work is next to impossible. It is a peculiar inconsistency, that the people have no faith in the Utah representatives at all, only with regard to their testimony of the Prophet Joseph Smith being the author of their abominations, and consequently a bad man. That part of their testimony the world has believed almost unanimously, and in this the Brighamite church may boast of success. Consequently it must be a slow work, demanding much love, patience, faith, and determination, to gain the people for the true latter day work, at least under present conditions. But I have been made to feel, often in a very marked degree, the blessings of the good Master and his watchcare over me and his interest in my effort; and this is a sufficient reward to give courage for continued service.

The spreading of suitable literature is an excellent way of making the people acquainted with the truth, and a way that will reach those who can not be reached otherwise. It is not very often that we are able to draw large crowds to our meeting, hence, it is only a few we can reach in this way. We have therefore printed small editions of tracts on the principles of the gospel, and one on the difference between us and the Utah church, but our means of supply have been too small. This has hindered our efforts and curtailed our usefulness.

We wish therefore now to appeal to the Scandinavian Saints, those who have means and are able to help us, to send us some of their earthly means for the furtherance of God's work in Scandinavia, in exchange for heavenly riches which he has promised all those who will give out of love for him and his cause. We need your assistance, dear Saints, and whatever you send us, it being little or much, shall be used as wisely and carefully as we know how. We are on a far mission, placed under very trying conditions at times, and while our families are supported by the church we desire to be so supplied in our work, that the most good possible may accrue to the people, and the latter day work be made known. It is such a glorious privilege to be permitted to be collaborators with the great Jehovah, that all who are able—and everyone is in some degree or way—should do all in his power to further the cause among the children of men. It brings peace, joy, and comfort here, and an eternal glory and happiness hereafter. Please let us hear from the Saints as soon as possible, as we desire to do what we can while we are here.

We are now trying to get a foothold in the three capitals of Scandinavia. Bro. Peter Anderson is now on his way to Christiania, Norway; Bro. Oscar Johnson is in Stockholm, Sweden; and the writer is in Copenhagen, Denmark. You may send to any of us at our mission addresses, which are given below, or to my home address, as I am the financial agent for this mission: P. Muceus, Ravnsborggade 5 A 1, Kopenhagen, N. Denmark; home address, Poisgrund, Norway. Peter Anderson, Postrestante, Christiania, Norway. Oscar Johnson, Plogkatan 12, 3; Stockholm, Sweden.

Upon the part of all the Saints in Scandinavia I can send you our best wishes for the work in Joseph's land, and our heartfelt thanks to all who thus far have aided us and our little mission paper. May we all unitedly strive for the honor and glory of God and the salvation of his people is our humble prayer. P. MUCEUS.

IOWA.

Since writing aside from the short notice that appeared in the HERALD of recent date, duty has made it necessary that I pass over a good deal of territory, and I have mingled with the Saints at distant points. It is a year to-morrow since I started to Saint Louis, Missouri, to do some special work in the Saint Louis District, at the request of those in authority. I remember the assistance and kindness of J. A. Tanner, and the good Saints where I stayed, and the special assistance furnished me by the brothers and sisters who acted as my scribes, as well as the pleasant services I attended while there. The kindness of all is appreciated, and will be long remembered by the writer.

My return home from this trip early in December seemed very providential, as I found Sister Butterworth in a very critical condition, and I thank God that I was permitted to be by her side when most needed.

While in Saint Louis, in company with Bro. Henry Roberts, we visited some of the scenes of my early childhood. My folks resided in the city from the spring of 1851 to the fall of 1854, when they moved to Crawford County, Iowa, and first located within a mile and a half of where I now reside, in Dow City. It was in Saint Louis that I lost my dear mother and sister and brother of cholera; about three weeks after the family located there. The time and experiences of this early bereavement is still fresh in my memory, and I can scarcely think about those early experiences without feeling the pangs of sorrow peculiar thereto. Time does not erase the deep impressions made in early childhood. How sweet the meeting will be in the world to come, when sorrow, death, and separation shall be gone for evermore.

My labor in the Des Moines District this year has been quite pleasant, all things being considered, and the Saints have been kind. I trust good has been done. I expect to continue my labors there at once, and letters addressed to me at Dow City, Iowa, will reach me quicker than any address that I could give in that district, as Sister Butterworth is very careful and prompt in forwarding my mail.

On my way to the Moline reunion, I made a short stop at Iowa City to visit son Julian and wife, which visit I enjoyed very much. The reunion at Moline was, in some ways, the best I have attended this year. The meetings that I was permitted to attend were spiritual, and of a very high order. Their hospitality was ample, as it was at the other reunions I have attended.

Saints who have not received their blessings that were given at the Moline reunion will please be patient, as the stenographer reports having been very busy and is doing the work as fast as she can, without neglecting other duties. I will forward to each their blessing, as soon after I receive it as possible. All other blessings have been forwarded.

From Moline I went to Menomonie, Wisconsin, for the purpose of calling upon my son Willie, whom I found not so well as last year, and he needs the prayers of the Saints and the help of God. Who will remember one of the members of the church who can not well help himself, owing to conditions existing?

The scenery that may be viewed as one passes from Menomonie to Madison, Wisconsin, over the Chicago North-Western Railroad is very grand. Indeed the scenery at Menomonie and vicinity is very beautiful, but as one passes through or by the side of those high ridges of rock the scenery becomes grand. However, one can notice that the tooth of time has left its mark, even upon the rocks that form these ridges. The cliffs are full of seams and seem ready to topple over at the shake of the earth, as the heavy iron horse and its load passes along. Indeed, if my eyes did not deceive me, some of those high cliffs have been shaken loose by the locomotive, and rocks of all sizes and shapes have rolled down the steep hill by the thousand train load.

At Madison, Wisconsin, J. W. Wight, W. A. McDowell, and J. O. Dutton were in charge. We had a very pleasant reunion, and the kindness of those who assisted the writer, and those whose hospitality the writer shared is remembered with gratitude. Madison, with a beautiful lake of clear water on the north and another on the south, is very pleasantly situated.

The State University buildings are located on a gentle slope from the top of which one has a fine view of one of the lakes, and of a part of the city, and judging from what I could see as I passed through one building after another, without a guide, I judge they have a very fine institution of learning.

Sister Butterworth accompanied me to the Little Sioux, Iowa, reunion, where we were royally cared for, and the good services, and the rest of ten days, did the good sister a great deal of good.

We read in the good book that when the Israelites were on their way to the promised land they "rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings; and the people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play."

Under the Christian system the eating and drinking, and the offering of peace offerings, may be, in a sense, all necessary and good in their place, but the time for the true disciple of Christ to play is very limited indeed. The order seems to be watch, pray, wrestle, fight, labor, bear and forbear; if we shall ever succeed, and be permitted to wear the crown of righteousness.

Yours in bonds,

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

DOW CITY, IOWA, November 4, 1910.

ONTARIO.

We have just arrived home from Stonington, Maine, where we labored again this year for ten weeks.

Arriving there in the fore part of August, our hearts were made glad in meeting and greeting the many dear Saints of that place. They who have never experienced such meetings, after months of separation, can not estimate the peculiar joy and satisfaction that surged through our beings as we took by the hand one after another of those we had labored with and prayed for in bringing them into the church. And when we found them still rejoicing in the great cause of Christ and grown and advanced in the work by what they were when we last saw them, we were happy indeed. For of the seventy-nine baptized into this branch last fall, not more than three were lagging in the work, and the advancement of many was surprising to us. Two of the number were manifesting the gift of prophecy, while healings, visions, and inspired dreams were the common diet of the Saints, and faith and faithfulness were seen on every hand.

Time and again as we sat in the prayer and testimony meetings and heard those who less than a year ago were living without God and without hope in the world, arise and testify of the goodness of God and their satisfaction in the gospel, we have been thankful that we were the privileged instruments in raising them to the higher life.

Another pleasure which came to us was this: In visiting among those not of our faith we have heard them express themselves as follows: "The Latter Day Saints are doing well; they are the best living people in town." "They are all, so far as we know, living all right." "They are the happiest people I ever knew." "I like to go to your church, the people are so friendly." "We do not mind going there though we have no good clothes, for we are treated so nicely." These expressions and many more of a like character were especially pleasing to us, from the fact that last year the general cry among them was: "Oh, yes; you are getting a lot of people in now, but when Mr. Macgregor is gone they will go back to their old ways—they will not stand."

During the first few weeks in the place we had much opposition from the outside, especially from the religious element. The meetings were held on the street, and while large numbers came to hear, Satan came also. Loud-laughing young women, and rude men and boys played their part in the disturbance, while from open doors and windows near by the loud playing of a piano accompanied by shrill, high pitched feminine voices saluted our ears nightly. This continued for a number of evenings, and so did the preaching. But one night it came to a head when a band of young lads interested themselves by running almost up to the speaker and cheering and then racing off again. The names of the lads were taken and it was found that they were being encouraged in their conduct by leading men of the town. But when they realized they might have to answer to Uncle Sam for their actions the boys apologized for their conduct and we had no more trouble from that source.

The spirit of mobocracy followed. Threats came in from several quarters, and one night, as we afterwards learned, all things were ready for action. A dreadful storm gathered just before time for service, but Dan felt restrained from coming, and looking at the threatening clouds remained away. Not so with the mob, however. They were there in force, and stayed for nearly half an hour after time for meeting to commence; never moving, in fact, until the storm burst upon them. That night the Congregational church was burned, presumably struck by lightning.

The mob spirit prevailed for some time, but through the goodness of God and the watchfulness of the Saints, and many friends who were raised up, they were restrained from doing any violence, except throwing a few stones, rotten peaches, mud, etc., none of which did any material damage.

Then another difficulty arose. The damp atmosphere, and talking against so much opposition, was too much for Dan's throat, and he was threatened, with an undesired rest. The Saints unitedly prayed for his recovery and he was immediately restored; he continued preaching out-of-doors nightly, his voice being stronger and better than ever before.

Finding dishonorable means frustrated on every hand, the church-going people sent for a minister to come and champion their cause. He came in the person of Mr. Robinson, a Congregational minister, noted for his historical information and oratorical powers. He was heartily welcomed by all, the Saints being joyous in the presence of this kind of opposition, and our opponents uplifted in the anticipation of a glorious victory over Latter Day Saintism.

He utterly refused to sign propositions, but made a speech at the close of the sermon. It was delivered in a very confident manner, full of gush and assertions, but entirely lacking in proof of any kind. His strong arguments were that Joseph Smith was a sheep thief, and we are all Mormons, no matter by what name we go. In this he was loudly applauded.

When Dan replied Mr. Robinson began to shrink until finally he burst through the crowd and ran off shouting to the people, "Go home, go home," but they did not go; and the parson never came back. This little skirmish did our cause a great deal of good and made us lots of friends.

The Saints stood by us nobly, and their efforts were very helpful. Every morning at 10 o'clock the sisters met in their various neighborhoods to pray for the progress of the work. We felt so blessed in these little meetings that we would rather have gone without a meal than to miss one of them. Truly the fervent, effectual prayer of the righteous availeth much. The Spirit of the Lord was poured out on the community to a wonderful degree.

Twenty-eight were baptized, many friends were made to the cause, and the branch came into a spiritual condition such as we have never witnessed in any place in the past.

We have often seen the sisters leave the washtub and run to the place of prayer, fervently, and without bustle or hurry take part in the service, and return to their labors happy in the consciousness that they were permitted to aid in so grand a work. At different times in these little meetings the Lord manifested his approval in promises to hear and answer our prayers.

Many of the Saints are poor in this world's goods, but oh, so rich in faith! What they lack in temporal blessings is certainly made up in the abundant manifestations of the Spirit. Their prayer meetings are heavenly seasons. Almost every meeting the Spirit is present in vision, in healing, or in prophecy. On one Wednesday evening seven distinct gifts of prophecy were given, besides other manifestations of the Spirit.

We would that every branch of the church were like Stonington, and that we could ever labor to win souls for Christ supported by such wholesouled efforts, and that all those who are brought into the church would magnify their calling to be Saints as these do.

The closing down of the quarries has driven a number of the Saints to other places to seek work; but they are holding the light aloft where they are. At Winterport, where we called after leaving Stonington, we found nine of them. They were holding three prayer meetings a week, and Religio and Sunday school. They assured us that when they met for prayer and testimony there were nine prayers and nine testimonies offered every time. Eight of these nine are only a year in the work, and two of them are children.

Your sister,
MAGGIE MACGREGOR.

News From Branches

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS.

Time flies, and we can hardly realize it has been so long since you last heard from Boston. Our winter season is opening up, and we are made to pause a moment to look back over the summer now past, golden opportunities either utilized or wasted. Our ideas regarding Boston Saints may be slightly distorted, from constant association with them for several years, but it is our candid opinion that an alien or Saint could scarcely fall into better hands than among the Boston Saints. The early part of the summer saw an exodus, as usual, of a percentage of our people to country and seashore. Interest kept up, but not as we might wish.

Prior to the eastern reunion, Brother Macgregor came among us with a couple of weeks to spend with us in interest of our spiritual welfare, and proclaiming of the truth to outsiders in our city. As it happened, nearly every day of those two weeks was intensely hot, and the evenings as well. Owing to this, and the fact that preparations for the coming reunion were going on, not so much was accomplished as perhaps might have been at some more convenient season. However, good was wrought. Under the circumstances the Saints turned out well. Brother Macgregor told us our duty as Saints, in plain language, and we surely appreciated his noble efforts. We strongly desired that many of our friends might see their way clear to come with us to hear the angel's message told in such a splendid, convincing manner; but few came.

About this time, four ordinations took place in our branch: Alpha N. Baker and Lloyd Newcombe to the office of priest, and Wallace Carter and Cecil Knowlton to the office of deacon. We surely have a retinue of officers in the Boston Branch, and they will come in handy soon, we believe. We are in a big city, on the borders of a still bigger city; many to be warned, many honest hearts to be gathered out. The sooner we get to greater activity along this line, the sooner will greater blessings be ours.

The eastern reunion this year, of which you have heard reports before, was an impetus to better work along all lines, and we have been benefited as a result of it.

In September, Bro. U. W. Greene, with his family, came to Somerville to live. Mildred, the older daughter, is studying at Winter Hill Business College. She and Marion are both musicians, and will be a help to us, we anticipate. Brother Greene has been sorely afflicted with a carbuncle on the back of his neck, at the base of the brain, which has kept him in the hospital since about October 11, until November 1, when he was permitted to come home for a few days, returning for further treatment, skin grafting, November 5. Hopes to be home for good in about fifteen days. His family express themselves as quite at home in Somerville, and happy, which makes us glad.

Bro. Harry C. Smith, of Independence, is back with us again this year, attending "Tech." He and Bro. Harry Kozman both make their home at the Greene's.

At our late branch business meeting, October 28, C. H. Rich was elected president of the Boston Branch. A vote was passed authorizing Brother Rich to organize a missionary club among our young men of the priesthood. Class No. 4, Bro. M. C. Fisher's class, were given the privilege of furnishing a chandelier for the center of our chapel.

A motion recently carried in a special business meeting that those Saints whose names are on our books and who live near another branch, be requested by the clerk to obtain letters of removal. Hear ye this, ye wandering Boston Branch Latter Day Saints? Last Sunday, while visiting another branch the clerk informed a sister belonging to us, but who has been gone for some time, of the action taken by the branch, and she immediately replied, "No, you can't get rid of me so easily as that, I am returning to Boston to-morrow morning, where I have a position." Consequently we are glad to welcome back to Boston, Sr. Anna Thompson, of the Cape. If the trouble of ye scribe was all overcome as readily as this case, she would have little writing to do, and Boston's "absent from branch" list would be slim.

Doctor Sinclair, the chairman of our delegation to the late conference at New Bedford, reported a good conference, the most remarkable feature of it being that thirteen ordinations took place. The entertainment of the New Bedford Saints was all that anyone could ask, and all agreed they would like to visit there again.

The stork has lately visited the home of Alma and Mary Nickerson. Sr. Genesee Lewis Enos also has a little girl born in July. If he has any more calls to make we will let him record them.

So many of our people were either teaching or studying at the Fisher Business Colleges, (at night school,) which are open three nights a week, including Wednesday, that the branch voted to change our mid-week prayer service to Thursday night until April 1. Visiting Saints will please take notice.

Much business was transacted at the business meeting before referred to and the Spirit's presence prevailed throughout. We hope such unity may exist through the entire administration of Brother Rich. A rising vote of thanks was tendered Bro. E. H. Fisher, our retiring president, a brother of whom we sometimes speak as being "good as gold"—a man who has the love and respect of all who know him. He took the opportunity of making a few remarks which we will not soon forget, admonishing us to be united, cease finding fault, and anything else we might be doing that would interfere with our spiritual progress collectively and individually. He said he felt a heavy burden rolled from his shoulders; expressed himself as satisfied with our choice of Brother Rich. His experience as president evidently caused him to review the past and experiences of other branch presidents, speaking especially of Brother Bullard, and his earnest and splendid work among us in years gone by, and we were made to wish we could, one and all, at that very moment express to him our appreciation of him and his work. He is absent from us, but not forgotten.

Our Sunday school and Religio are both increasing in interest and attendance. A novel feature of our Religio now is a monthly Surprise paper (its full title has escaped my mind) contributed to by our Religians, and edited by our president, Bro. C. H. Rich. A still more important feature instituted by the president is a drill each night on the officers of the two priesthoods, their duties, the principles of the gospel, and scriptural passages to substantiate the same. Surprising, how badly we as Latter Day Saints need such lessons.

We are fortunate in having still more young people with us for the winter; in fact, we are delighted with our nice band of young men and women. Our choir is starting its work to add interest to our services. You will undoubtedly soon read of Brother Sandford's wonderful class and its workings in the Exponent. The young ladies' organized class, about fifteen in number, is of no less importance we believe, if they are single; they can't help that, or at least they don't seem to. Sr. Rena Rich has taken Sr. Ada Newcombe's position as their teacher, and Sr. Clara Johnson is president of the class. The class meets every two weeks, and at the present time are spending the evenings making some clothes for a poor family of children. Sister Johnson is teaching in the new Fisher College, in Roxbury, which opened up in September, and which has succeeded splendidly. M. C. holds forth at the new school, and E. H. at Winter Hill.

Yours for the work,

MARY O. LEWIS.

Conference Minutes.

SEATTLE AND BRITISH COLUMBIA.—District semiannual conference convened with the Seattle Branch September 17, 1910, at 10 a. m., with William Johnson in the chair and Frederick W. Holman at the desk, both being subsequently sustained in said positions by motions. All visiting Saints were granted deliberative privileges. Branches reporting: Seattle with a total membership of 217, net gain 1; New Westminster 29, loss 3; Chiliwack 37, no change; Nanaimo 10, loss 1; making a total of 293 members as reported. Adding this to enrollment of Castle Rock and Tacoma branches, now disorganized, having a membership of 33 and 25 respectively, makes a grand total of 351 for the district. Bishop's agent, Frank Holmes, of Roslyn, Washington, reported an amount of cash on hand February 12, 1910, $216.35; subsequent receipts $280.45, making a total of $496.80, leaving a balance of $58.86 on hand September 17, 1910, after deducting disbursements. Reunion board reported a shortage in funds as cause for not holding reunion this year, also an indebtedness of $52.79 incurred by the purchase of the new, large assembly tent, which amount was very nearly covered by general collections taken during some of the services. Ministry reporting in writing were Elders William Johnson, George W. Thorburn, Samuel Pope, and D. W. R. Davis. Also Teacher T. R. Davis. The presiding authority of the Aaronic priesthood as compared with that of the Melchisedec was profitably discussed in the afternoon service, in which Bishop E. L. Kelley, with others, took prominent part. Second Saturday and Sunday of February, 1911, at Seattle, was fixed upon as time and place for holding next conference. Brother Kelley ably presented portions of the temporal law on both Saturday and Sunday evenings, and Brother Thorburn forcefully proclaimed the gospel theme at 11 a. m., Sunday. Members enrolled upon the records of Castle Rock and Tacoma branches, now disorganized, may obtain letters of removal therefrom by applying to Frederick W. Holman, secretary, 4106 Sixth avenue, N. W., Seattle, Washington, or to William Johnson, president, 611 Bell street.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.—District convened with the Poplar Creek Branch, October 15, 1910. District President I. A. Morris and H. Sparling, missionary in charge, were chosen to preside. Ministry reporting: Elders Henry Sparling, I. A. Morris, Samuel Hoover, F. M. Davis, M. R. Brown, P. T. Plumb baptized 2, J. F. Henson baptized 12; Priests Fred O. Prickett, R. H. Henson, A. H. Burroughs; Teachers J. W. Slover, L. M. Edmonds. Branches reporting: Poplar Creek 59, Dry Fork 51, Parrish 106, Springerton 146, Bungay 50, Tunnel Hill 175, Kibbie 56, Brush Creek 370. Assessments paid in to district treasury by branches: Brush Creek $1.40, Dry Fork $1.45, Tunnel Hill $1, Parrish $1.15. Bishop's agent's report: Receipts, $359.88; expended, $296.54; Balance due church, $63.34. The following brethren were recommended for ordination by the branches where they belong: Walter E. Burroughs, Brush Creek Branch, office of priest; William G. Smith, Dry Fork, office of elder; S. J. Harris, Kibbie, office of elder; L. M. Edmonds, Kibbie, office of priest. A motion prevailed that the conference provide for their ordination. Walter E. Burroughs and W. G. Smith were ordained in afternoon at the sacrament service. The preaching was done by Brethren Davis, Sparling, and Plumb. Adjourned to meet at Brush Creek the first Saturday in January, 1911. A. H. Burroughs, secretary.

LONDON.—District conference convened in the Saints' church at Stratford, Ontario, on Saturday, October 15, 1910, Elder R. C. Longhurst, president of the district, calling the assembly to order at 10 o'clock a. m. Bishop R. C. Evans, with Elder F. A. Smith, was chosen to assist the district presidency, Elders Longhurst and McKenzie, in presiding over the conference. The chief cause of delay in writing up the minutes of the conference has been the waiting for reports from two of the branches of the district. No report has been forthcoming to date. In all, twelve of the branches of the district have reported to date, and there remain two branches to hear from. The present membership of the branches having reported is 861; with or including a ministry of 59 persons. Of these brethren, one is a high priest, four are seventies, 17 are elders, 17 are priests, 10 are teachers, and 10 are deacons. Number at last report of the two delinquent branches was: McKillop 29, including a ministry of 1 elder and 1 deacon; and Selkirk with a membership of 15, including 1 seventy, 1 elder and 1 teacher. The gain of the branches reporting has been, by baptisms 36, by letter 7; total 43; the loss, by removal 22; by death 14; total 36. Leaving a net gain of 7 members. The branch at Walsingham Center was by resolution of the conference declared disorganized. The district president stated that according to the resolution of the previous conference, he had gone to Walsingham Center and had done or sought to do what could be done to revive the branch there, but the priesthood were all gone and he could find only one family of Saints left in that section of country; and it was absolutely useless to continue having a branch upon the district records which really had ceased to exist. A further resolution prevailed that the district presidency and the secretary be authorized to issue letters of removal to all the members of the Walsingham Branch, to the nearest or most convenient branch to their locality, as the law directs. Other important items of business done by the assembly were: To abolish the present system of handling the finances of the district by appointing an officer as the treasurer of the district. It was resolved that we observe the General Conference ruling, No. 260, adopted in 1882, and that henceforth the Bishop's agent be the treasurer of the district. It was moved that we do not sustain any officer holding license who uses tobacco, or liquor as a beverage; this motion prevailed. The election of officers for the district for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Elder R. C. Longhurst was sustained as president; Elder J. L. Burger was chosen vice-president; Bro. P. H. Phillipin was sustained as secretary; library commissioner, Bro. B. Richardson; Bishop's agent, Elder J. L. Berger. Delegates to General Conference: Apostle F. A. Smith, and Bishop R. C. Evans. One other important resolution carried. It was, that we accept an invitation from the Toronto District presented by Bishop R. C. Evans, to meet and cooperate with the Toronto District in a ten days' reunion, beginning with the last Sunday in June of next year. The matter of two-day meetings for the London District was relegated to the missionary in charge and the presidency of the district. The conference resolved to take up a special collection as a donation to the Stratford Branch, to apply upon the debt of the building, which was much appreciated. The Bishop's agent's report concluded as follows: Balance at last report, $187.50; amount received, $1,675.44; total, $1,862.94; expenditures, $1,291.93; present balance, $571.01. Treasurer of district reported: Receipts, $22.41; expenditures, $18.17; balance, $4.24. The conference resolved that when we adjourn we do so to meet again in October next, time and place to be left to the presidency of the district and the missionary in charge. The entire proceedings of this conference seemed to be conducted under the influence of the sweet Spirit of the Master. Not a jar occurred to mar the general enjoyment of the occasion. The preaching was of an unusually high order. The speakers appointed for the various services were: Elder J. Pycock, Saturday evening at 8 o'clock; Elder J. T. Thompson Sunday at 11 a. m.; Bishop R. C. Evans at 2.30 p. m.; Apostle F. A. Smith at 7 p. m. Bishop R. C. Evans was appointed as the speaker for the Sunday evening service, but as he had appointment in Toronto for that hour he requested appointment for the Sunday morning or afternoon service, so that he might reach Toronto in time to fill his appointment in that city. There was a meeting of the priesthood following the Sunday evening preaching service, over which Brother F. A. Smith presided, and it was certainly a treat seldom enjoyed, by the writer at least. Brother F. A.'s counsel was indited by the Spirit of God. He talked to us for over two hours, and we are safe in saying that everyone present was made to realize the sacredness of the trust reposed in the priesthood as never before, and left that little building nearer to God, and a better man for having heard the godly counsel and wisdom, touching the work of the ministry given to us by Brother Smith. A unanimous vote of thanks to the Stratford Saints for their hospitality and cheer, and to the press of that city for their disposition to fairly represent us in their columns, was the final resolution of the conference. P. H. Phillipin, district secretary.

IDAHO.—District conference convened at Hagerman, Idaho, October 15 and 16, 1910. S. D. Condit was chosen to preside, assisted by E. Keeler. J. E. Condit was chosen secretary and A. J. Layland chorister. Branch reports were read and approved from Boise Branch, gained 15, Hagerman Branch, gained 2, Leton Branch, no change. Elders reporting: S. D. Condit baptized 3, Adolphus Hendrickson, Robert Owens baptized 1, A. J. Layland baptized 14, J. H. Condit and William Glauner. Priests reporting: T. B. Jackson. Teachers reporting: J. O. McKnight and J. E. Condit. The Grove City Branch was declared disorganized. Conference to meet at call of district president. J. E. Condit, secretary.

CLINTON.—District conference convened October 15, with the Coal Hill Branch. Brn. James Moler and W. S. Macrae were chosen to preside over the conference. Business session opened at 10 a. m. Reports were read from the following branches: Lowry City, present number 96, gain 1; Taberville, present number 58, loss 2; Veve Branch, present number 94, no change; Rich Hill, present number 157, gain 2; Coal Hill, present number 62, gain 1; Eldorado Springs, present number 149, gain 8; Fort Scott, present number 102, gain 23; Walker, present number 17, no change. Ministerial reports were read from the following brethren: James Moler, of the High Priests, W. S. Macrae of the seventy. Elders reporting were: C. H. Athey, W. E. Reynolds, S. C. Williams, G. W. Beebe, Abner Lloyd, W. H. Lowe, C. M. Schroder, T. R. White, C. J. Peters. Priests reporting were: E. E. Morman, John W. Noyes; Teachers T. L. McCormick, J. Sandage. Auditing committee's report on Bishop's agent's books was as follows: Since last report, total receipts, $452.31; total disbursements, $448.58; balance on hand, $3.73. The place chosen for our next conference was Eldorado Springs. Preaching by W. S. Macrae and James Moler. John W. Noyes, secretary.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.—District conference met with the Lansing Saints at 9 a. m., October 21. After an hour's prayer service in charge of J. W. McKnight the business session opened with district president, S. Stroh, in the chair. An organization was effected as follows: For president, J. W. Wight, assisted by district presidency; secretary, Mrs. J. H. Royce, assisted by John H. Royce; organists, Srs. J. Dean Corless and Carrie Brand; choristers, S. W. L. Scott and Charles Doty. Eleven branches reported, with a net gain of 21. Present membership 814, entitling district to 32 delegates to General Conference. Said delegates duly chosen. Ministerial reports showed 261 sermons preached, 122 administrations to sick, 26 baptisms, and much other work. Bishop's agent's report gave a showing of $464.53 receipts, with a balance on hand October 17, of $18.71. John L. Roark, of Lansing, was ordained priest under the hands of J. J. Bailey, E. K. Evans, and J. W. Buckley. Preaching services were conducted by E. K. Evans, J. W. Wight, and S. W. L. Scott. J. W. Wight gave a very pointed talk on the "Word of Wisdom," expressing it as his opinion that many were now ill and others slept in the grave by reason of failure in observing its divine teachings. The consideration of a state musical association was taken up. Purposes of same were presented in writing by Brother Doty, some of which were to arouse the latent musical talent of our people, to magnify the injunction as found in Doctrine and Covenants 119: 6, and by so doing enlarge our scope of usefulness. The discussion resulted in the selection of a committee of three, viz: S. W. L. Scott, Mrs. Lou Sinclair, Ralph McElherrie. Said committee to meet in joint session at the reunion of 1911, with similar committees from the western, the central, and the northern districts. Seven were baptized. A spirit of unity prevailed throughout. Conference adjourned to meet at Clarksdale, Indiana, at call of district president. Officers chosen for ensuing year: President, G. A. Smith, Ray, Indiana; Mrs. J. H. Royce, secretary, Three Oaks, Michigan.

EASTERN MAINE.—District convened at Jonesport, October 15, 16, 1910, with Elder U. M. Kelley in the chair. Brn. S. F. Cushman and E. C. Foss were chosen to preside. E. M. Walker, secretary. Branches reporting: Olive Branch, Jonesport, 192; Indian River, 61; Little Kennebec, 72. Official reports: Elders S. O. Foss, S. F. Cushman, U. M. Kelley, E. C. Foss; Priests F. P. Smith, L. W. Hinkley; Teachers B. F. Foss, A. D. Mattatal, W. E. Rogers, W. C. Smith. The Bishop's agent's report, S. F. Cushman's, was read and approved. It was as follows: Receipts from June 19 to October 1, $177.95; disbursements, $194.70; due agent since June 19, $16.75; due agent from last quarter, $25.85; total due agent, $42.60. U. M. Kelley was sustained as district president, with Bro. F. P. Smith as assistant. It was moved and carried that Brn. U. W. Greene, S. O. Foss, J. A. Koehler, S. F. Cushman, and Srs. E. R. Koehler and Bertha Woodard be delegates to represent this district at the General Conference of 1911. A vote of thanks was extended to Jonesport Saints for their entertainment of Saints and friends during conference. Expressions that this was the best conference in the district for some years were heard at the close. Conference adjourned to meet with Little Kennebec Branch, June next, at the call of the president. E. M. Walker, secretary.

EASTERN IOWA.—District conference convened at Fulton, Iowa, October 15 and 16, 1910. Branches reported: Marion, Baldwin, Green Valley, Clinton, Oelwein, Davenport, Ostedock, Fulton, Muscatine. First Seventies reported: James McKiernan, J. B. Wildermuth, L. E. Hills; Elders E. W. Voelpel, John Heide, Edwin Lowe, jr., Ira A. Chamberlain, Robert Smith; Priests D. L. Palsgrove, A. W. Heide. Notice.

In several instances persons sending for Daughters of Zion leaflets according to notice lately published in HERALD and Ensign, have sent much more postage than was required for the order. If such persons wish more leaflets or would like us to make any other disposition of the excess and will let us know, we will do with it as they direct, otherwise it will be turned over to the general fund of the Daughters of Zion and we will thank those sending it.

We can still supply orders for leaflets except two or three numbers.

The H. P. Annual, 1910.

To the Brethren of the Quorum; Greeting: Have mailed to each member of the Quorum of High Priests a copy of our 1910 Annual to your last stated permanent postoffice address. If you are absent from home, make inquiry of home folks if the Annual be there. Should any fail to receive their copy, and will so notify me, another copy will be mailed you. I find it a heavy task to get the brethren to report changes of their postoffice addresses.

Our Boys.

A BOOK FOR FATHERS AND MOTHERS.

There will soon be issued from the Herald Publishing House a book bearing the title, Our Boys, which will contain a revised edition of articles written by Sr. Marietta Walker, better known to many of our readers as Frances. These articles have appeared in the Home Column as two series of Daughters of Zion readings, and are now offered in book form with some additional matter for the benefit of those who have appreciated them in the past, and in the hope that they may reach a host of new readers.

The book opens with these words from an eminent writer:

"Parents everywhere, be they rich or poor, read or unread, in the city or in the town, in the village or in the woods, with anxious arms are reaching out for something to cooperate with them in the guidance of their boys, who to-day may be bent, but to-morrow will be rigid men, set in the stillness of adulthood."

If this anxiety has found place in your heart, would it not be worth while to read this book for the portion of help it may afford you? A thoughtful reading will convince you of its merit. Not only should parents of boys read this book, but all who are interested in the mission of the home should have the inspiration and help to be gained from it.

Died.

HOVENGA.—Trientje Hovenga was born January 17, 1843, in Germany. Came to America in 1866; married Elsa Hovenga. To this union were born four children. Two died in infancy. She leaves to mourn her loss one son, John Hovenga, and one daughter, Hattie Constance; one stepdaughter, Rachel Wilke; four grandchildren; two brothers, Casper and T. T. Hinderks; two sisters, Leana Rasmus and Ann Jensen, and a large circle of friends. She was a faithful Saint. In 1881 her husband died; she has remained a widow until death. Was baptized August 10, 1873, near Burlington, Iowa, by Elder John G. Bauer; died October 22, 1910, aged 67 years, 9 months, 5 days. Services in charge of I. N. Roberts, William Lewis preaching the sermon to a large audience. She was laid to rest in the German Cemetery, near Stewartsville, Missouri.

ELEFSON.—Ann Elefson died at her home in the town of Miller, LaSalle County, Illinois, October 12, after an illness of about three weeks, at the age of 79 years, 2 months, and 5 days. Deceased was born in Telsmarken, Norway, August 7, 1831, and came to this country with her parents when eleven years old. They first located near Milwaukee, Wisconsin, but about two years later settled in LaSalle County, Illinois, near where the village of Danway now stands. Sr. Ann Hayer was united in wedlock with E. H. Elefson, December 19, 1852; to this marriage were born eleven children; three sons and eight daughters. One son died when 18 years old, and a little daughter at the age of 7 years. Nine children are living; Oliver, Woolstock, Iowa; Louisa, Osborne, Missouri; Julia A. Teal, Daroline Hougas, Martha Johnson, Alice Anderson, Ellen Williamson, Sarah A. Olson, and Andrew Elefson, all reside in the vicinity of their parental home. At death, Grandma Elefson had forty-five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. She united with the "old church" when a child, but became a member of the Reorganization by baptism administered by Elder W. W. Blair, October 20, 1878. Through her life she was recognized in the community as a person of sterling worth and invincible purpose in the practice of those Christian virtues which give to life its true worth, and qualifies the soul for a more glorious existence in the better world. Her upright life, her patience and devotion to duty, her virtue and honesty as a neighbor and Christian mother, endears her memory to all that knew her, and her good life on earth will entitle her to a home in the heavenly kingdom. Funeral services were held in the Saints' chapel, Mission, Illinois, Sunday, October 16, 1910, in charge of Elder Thomas Hougas. Elder F. M. Cooper, of Plano, Illinois, delivered the funeral address before a large audience.

Holiday Offers

"At Last."

This book was put out especially for the holiday trade. It is an illustrated poem of David H. Smith. It is put up in a dainty form and would make a nice present. The number is limited, there being about one thousand copies left. No more to be printed. Order "At Last," price 25 cts.

The Instructor.

One of the very best books to have for ready reference on any of our distinctive, doctrinal features. No library complete without it. It saves you hours of weary research. No. 126, cloth, 75c; No. 127, leather, $1.00; No. 128, flexible, $1.50.

The Christian Sabbath, or Weekly Rest Day

is a complete refutation of the claims of our Seventh Day friends. It is brief, but comprehensive. You ought to be able to give some good reasons why you do not keep the seventh day. Get posted on this much discussed subject. No. 133, 40c.

What is Man,

by Elder J. R. Lambert. This little book is without doubt one of the biggest little books ever printed. It completely routs the fallacious idea of soul sleeping. It fairly scintillates with its clear cut reasoning. If you want to think, buy this book. You will never regret what you have spent for it. No. 140, cloth, 50c.

Compendium of Faith.

Gives a splendid arrangement of our faith as stated by the three books, i. e., Inspired Translation, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. You need this book. It is of inestimable worth to every Latter Day Saint. No. 141, cloth, 75cts, No. 141½, leather, $1; No. 174, flexible, $1.50.

Objections to the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants Answered and Refuted.

It is almost impossible for the average Saint to be able to meet the many objections urged by our opposers against us, on account of lacking the necessary books and information. This work just fills the bill. You have a complete refutation of many of the so-called objections against us in a concise and handy form. Order No. 143, cloth, 40c.

Joseph Smith and his Progenitors.

This book gives an intensely interesting account of the early days of the church. It has convinced many of the truthfulness of the latter day work. It is written in a plain, simple, truthful style; it appeals to the best elements in man. Don't fail to send for it for you library. It is also a splendid adjunct for missionary work. No. 150, cloth, 75c.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

A book for the student who wishes thoroughly to post himself on the question of the true successor of the Martyr Joseph Smith. Order No. 153, cloth, 50c.

Rules of Order and Debate.

All our church business meetings as well as those of the auxiliaries, are, or ought to be, carried on by a close adherence to parliamentary usages. This book is the official parliamentary book of the church. You can't get along without it. No. 161, cloth, 40c.

Fireside Talks With Our Girls.

is a book put forth by the Daughters of Zion. Its name should bespeak a ready sale for it. Every parent should see that his girl has one of these books. To fail to properly instruct you children is criminal. Order No. 213, limp cloth, 30c.

The Truth Defended.

is a book carefully written, expressly to meet an attack upon our faith. Our work is a positive one, and as such, we are bound to strike no uncertain blows at error wherever found. This means that we must be as good anvils as we are hammers. This book prepares you to be both. Order No. 215, cloth, 50c.

Autobiography of Elder R. C. Evans.

This very interesting work should be read by every Saint, and it is a splendid work to put in the hand of an investigator. The many marvelous manifestations of God as recorded in it are a source of strength to the readers' faith. Order No. 216, cloth, 75c.

Divinity of Book of Mormon as Proven by Archaeology.

is a book written for the archæological student. It forms a scientific basis for the defense of the Book of Mormon which is simply unanswerable. Order No. 234, cloth, 50c.

Book of Mormon Lectures.

This book contains a series of lectures, proving in a convincing manner that the Book of Mormon has a divine mission to perform. These lectures are given in an interesting style, and hold the attention of the reader throughout. A splendid book to put in the hand of the truth-seeker. Order No. 235, cloth, 50c.

Joseph Smith; Who Was He?

So many books have been written unfairly concerning the Seer of Palmyra that it is only justice that a book should be written explaining fully his mission and placing him before the world in a proper light. This book does this work. Order No. 238, cloth, 50c.

Joseph Smith Defended.

A companion book for the above. This book fearlessly takes up the many so-called evidences against the Seer and riddles them with clear statement of facts. Both this book and the preceding one are well worthy a place in your library. No. 241, cloth, 50c.

With the Church in an Early Day.

is an absorbing story of the lives of a few who were connected with the church at its commencement. The unanimous verdict of those who have read this work and who know, is that it portrays truthfully the condition incident to those who sacrificed all, and united their fortunes with the angel's message. This book will make its readers better for having read it. Order No. 243, cloth, 75c.

Memoirs of W. W. Blair.

This book will increase your faith in the promises of God. It portrays vividly the stirring events incident to the Reorganization. No. 249, cloth, 50c.

NUMBER 47

Editorial

SAINTS' HERALD DOCTRINAL SERIES FOR 1911.

One of the special features of the SAINTS' HERALD for 1911 will be a doctrinal series to run during the entire year.

In response to invitation from the HERALD editors capable writers from various parts of the world will contribute to this series.

Following is a partial list of subjects. Other subjects will be assigned later:

1. The character of God; his attributes.
2. Jesus Christ as the Son of God.
3. Jesus Christ; his mission to destroy the works of the Devil.
4. Faith; its necessity, how obtained, etc.
5. Repentance.
6. Baptism; its object.
7. Baptism; scriptural mode.
8. Baptism; prerequisites.
9. The Holy Ghost; its office work.
10. The Holy Ghost; can men receive it now?
11. The Holy Ghost; its gifts.
12. Laying on of hands; for the healing of the sick.
13. Laying on of hands; for the bestowal of the Holy Ghost.
14. Laying on of hands; for ordination, blessing of children, etc.
15. The priesthood; Aaronic and Melchisedec.
16. Authority; who may preach and in other ways represent God?
17. The Lord's supper.
18. The resurrection.
19. The eternal judgment.
20. Second coming of Christ; will it be literal?
21. Second coming of Christ; signs that indicate its approach.
22. The millennial reign; its nature; conditions then to obtain.
23. The new heaven and new earth.

This will be a very interesting and valuable feature of the HERALD during the coming year, and in connection with many other valuable features of the paper ought to hold our old friends and win us many new ones.

A LETTER FROM ABROAD.

A letter received from Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths, en route to Palestine, comes too late for space in the regular letter department, so we give it place in the editorial columns, feeling sure that it will interest our readers. The reader will note that like Paul Brother Gomer is all things to all men:

On board the steamer Prinz Heinrich, Mediterranean Sea, two days and two nights from Marseilles, France, October 28, 1910:

Editors Saints' Herald: I left England on the morning of the 25th inst., for Palestine, via Paris, Lyons, and Marseilles. After about ten hours' ride by train and boat I arrived in Paris on time. What a wonderful city. I doubt if there is another city that can compare with it in all the world for beautiful, clean, and wide streets; also fine buildings. Paris is a continuous revelation of grandeur. If you want to see the latest styles and fashions of the day just visit Paris. Leaving this city at 7.20 p. m., I reached Marseilles at 9 o'clock next morning, after about fourteen hours' travel on the fastest express train I ever rode on in any country. I was very favorably impressed with the country that I passed through.

Lyons is a lovely city and the French people have cause to be proud of their lovely France. Marseilles is the second most important city in France and the first commercial port in the country and the whole Mediterranean region. It has 500,000 inhabitants. Some very strange looking people were wandering about on its streets, and the town looked as queer to me as some of the people that I met; however, I was very much interested in many things that I saw, as I journeyed in an old queer rig that they called a carriage, from the central station through Boulevard D'Athènes and the Allies des Capucines and Meilhan to the Rve Noalles, said to be the most interesting and beautiful streets in the world.

On board the ship we had panoramic views of the whole port, the great docks crowded with ships from all countries, also the broad quays, with their warehouses and cranes. Then there is the old fort and the old town with its picturesque houses and its quaint life, and above the fort is the new cathedral; in fact there are beautiful views to be seen from all sides of the ship.

At 3 o'clock the steamer starts, towed by two tugs. She carefully and slowly passes through the sluices of Adene de'l Abbatoir, which are both provided with swing bridges. She makes a slender curve southward at the head of the city, and once more the city lies before us in its full beauty. We pass by islands and mountains until dusk. After seven next morning we approach the Corsican coast Saint Aquila, at the entrance to the Straits of Bonifacio. The journey through these is very interesting, as we can distinctly see varied coasts on both sides for a long part of the way. Early on the second morning the Lipari Islands appear, that wonderful volcanic group whose highest summit, Stromboli, rises from the waves directly in front of us. We sail close to it and can see the fire and smoke issuing from a chasm in the side of the volcano. One hour and a half later we enter the straits of Messina and on either side of us are good sized towns; namely, Bognara and Messina, which were almost completely destroyed by the awful earthquake of December 28, 1908.

The ship passed close to the shore, which gave to us a grand view of the towns on both sides of the strait. The sights that I saw here will never fade from memory. Most of the towns have been rebuilt, but we could see a number of tumbled down buildings. We also had a fine view of the Sicilian Mountains. The face of the country is very rough and brown. I did not like the appearance of it, and was glad that I did not have to live in such a country. I noticed a few orange groves alongside of the water.

Saturday, the 29th. We are now sailing near the coast of Greece. For two days we were traveling near the coast of Italy. We expect to land in Alexandria to-morrow evening (Sunday). We have had a fine voyage. No seasickness on board as yet. Am enjoying the best of health. I have enjoyed the journey so far. We have all kinds of people on board, but all are friendly and cheerful. I was very sorry that I could not have the company of Brother and Sister Pitt on this voyage; however, they will soon follow. I have met with friends all along the route. Germans take me for German; French for a Frenchman; when I get to Egypt I will pass for a Turk; and the Jews say to me, "Don't you was a Jew?" So you see I am all right. I have no trouble in making friends wherever I go. I sincerely trust that our trip to Palestine will be blessed of the Lord and that we will find people there who love God and the truth.

Good-bye for the present. I will write again after Jerusalem has been reached.

Your brother in Christ,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

My address is Jerusalem, Palestine, care Thomas Cook and Son, Tourist Office.

FAITH.

The Saints freely confess that at times they must walk by faith and not by sight. Others there are who profess to walk by sight alone, and reject all that can not be demonstrated to the mind through the five senses. Perhaps such men do not realize to the extent to which even men of science have been obliged to move by faith in their investigations; as the Honorable David Brewster says, "First a thought, a wish, then a faith, next a struggle, at last a fact." A writer in the Youth's Companion presents it in this way:

"The trouble is," said Harold Raymond, on his return from his second year in college, "that when you enter the sphere of religion, you deal with something quite different from anything that you meet in science. In the one you move step by step along lines of induction or deduction, and in the other you fling a highway through the air, in a bold and beautiful manner, but in a way quite different from that of science."

"I am not sure that the difference is so great as we are accustomed to suppose," replied his friend. "I have been thinking how scientific faith is, or, rather, how large a part faith plays in science. No man ever made a great discovery that was wholly an accident. Even if he were seeking the Northwest Passage and found America, it was faith that was guiding him."

"But it is a very different thing from what you call faith, isn't it?" asked Harold. "Faith seems very vague as compared with the processes of science."

"I don't think so. I have wondered how it would seem if we were to try to add some modern names of science to the great muster-roll of faith in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews."

"I should like to hear how it would sound."

"By faith Columbus, when he was called of God to discover a new world, went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sailed strange waters, with Cabot, Magellan, Vesputius and Balboa, the heirs with him of the same promise.

"By faith Copernicus lifted the earth from its solid base and set it to moving in rhythmic order round the sun; and all the suns and sons of suns with planets in bright array that circle round the throne of God. This he beheld by faith.

"By faith LaPlace understood how the worlds are made from star dust; and Newton beheld in the fall of the apple a force that holds the worlds in place, and that not by things that do appear.

"By faith the men of science, who did not always call themselves men of faith, found substance in the things hoped for, and moved from experiment to hypothesis and from hypothesis to theory, and from theory to fact, and from fact to sight; and all these were the children of faith.

"And what more shall I say? For time would fail me to tell of Stephenson and Fulton, of Morse and Roentgen and Edison and Lister; of Cyrus Field and Alexander Bell and Marconi and Wilbur Wright, who through faith made iron float, yoked chariots to the invisible power of steam, caused the voice of man to be heard by his fellow-man at a distance of a thousand miles, filled the air with voices inaudible to the ear, but intelligible to the mind of faith, and lifted the bodies and the minds of men on wings of wonder, and set them to sailing amid the clouds.

"By faith they built railways, irrigated deserts, crossed the trackless ice to the poles; subdued climate, overcame hardship and incredulity; out of weakness were made strong, and added to the space and comfort of human life, and gave wonderful analogies to those who seek the farther knowledge which is by faith.

"Now they who do such things all die in faith, and none of them fully receive the promise, God having provided some better thing that we too, should learn the lesson of faith, and follow their steps.

"And wherein we have learned from saints and apostles, and the Lord of life, and have found sure footing for faith, let us not count it unreasonable that still we follow, and live the life of faith."

MODERN PHARISEES AS WELL AS OLD.

CHRIST, WERE HE TO COME TO DES MOINES, WOULD PROBABLY BE FORBIDDEN SOME OF THE CHURCH PULPITS.

Had Christ postponed his advent on earth a little more than 1,900 years and chosen the twentieth century as the time and Des Moines as the place, he would have met the same kind of Pharisees as he did on the streets of Jerusalem, according to the speculation of the Rev. W. B. Gage, of the Highland Park Presbyterian Church.

That the Pharisees of Palestine have their prototypes on the streets of Des Moines, believes the Rev. Mr. Gage. The amount of local pharisaical bigotry may be easily attested by anyone who dares to stand for some new phase of religious truth, declared the Rev. Mr. Gage in his morning sermon.

PRESENT DAY BIGOTS.

"Fascinating is the speculation as to what would have been the fate of Jesus had he chosen Des Moines and the twentieth century as the place and time of his advent," he said. "In arriving at some conclusion it must be remembered that Pharisees of modern stripe still tread our streets and find their way on the Sabbath day into our places of worship.

"The amount of present day pharisaical bigotry can only be estimated by one who has dared to stand for some new but true phase of truth, being brought thereby into contact with it. The church to-day, as of old, grows rank with weeds of conservatism. There is a vast deal of suspicion as to anything new. Because of its very freshness it seems hard for many people to believe that it is true. Hence, did Christ come to teach theological and religious truth in all of its ultimate splendor, piercing the mists, and rubbing clouds from the sky, how great the opposition he would have to meet. His earthly bark would certainly find no smooth seas for life sailing.

"There would be also those whom he would be compelled to condemn. Upon their heads he would heap the woes of his denunciation. We refer not so much to the poor, wretched drunkards, or to those whose hands are stained with evil doing, and whose hearts are black with crime. To such, when on earth, he was always considerate and exceedingly kind. But there are so many who sin and are not sorry; who live in evil and do not sincerely desire a better way of life.

CONDEMNNS INDIFFERENCE.

"These usually plume themselves on their morality and are proud of the virtue possessed. Be that as it may, they are supremely indifferent to him. They resist every approach he may make. And to them, as to the Pharisees of old, he would probably some day speak, exhausting the vituperative adjectives of his vocabulary. He would, without doubt, call many modern men "wolves in sheep's clothing"; style them "oppressors of the poor"; proclaim that they were members of "an adulterous generation," possessed of "eyes but see not—of ears but hear not," "blind leaders of the blind." Thus speaking, truthfully, fearlessly, how great the opposition he would have to meet. I am sure that he would be excluded from many of our pulpits and perhaps, as of old, be compelled to preach in the streets. Soon there would be formulated plots and plans. Persecutions would thicken, and only the progress he has instituted would prevent the reënactment in Des Moines, in some form, of the tragedy of Calvary and the cross."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

An editor, in one of our western cities, not a member of the church, sends us a letter that he has received from an individual who offers to come and lecture against the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, providing he is supplied with a hall, "board and lodging," and the privilege to "take up a collection." He says that he has tried to induce leading elders to meet him and has failed, brands the Book of Covenants as a set of lies, and offers to drive all Latter Day Saint elders from the town. To this the gentleman replied that the lecturer was at liberty to come, as the Saints came, secure his own hall, and look out for his own lodging. That the Saints of the community were good citizens, and their church, as nearly as he could judge, more nearly than any other church in accord with the Master's teachings. Our correspondent does not reveal the name of the braggart who thus promises to eliminate Latter Day Saint elders from the landscape, but we feel sure that we could name the man. We will not do so, because we wish to strike at the principle and not at the man. We wish him no ill; but despise his conduct. He is a man who some years ago was expelled from the church for adultery. His present denial of the faith is the result of the working out of that immutable law found in the book that he brands as a mass of lies: "He that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit." It has happened before that such men when expelled because of their crimes have turned to be most bitter enemies of the church. The blacker they paint the church the worse they fare themselves; for if the brethren are bad, how much worse are they who are too vile to hold fellowship with the brethren. This man labored in the church for years and found nothing wrong until he was caught in a disgusting crime and expelled. So long as he could draw his bread and butter from the church he defended it. If the church would admit an error and restore his former official standing he would return to-morrow to its defense. But when his efforts to hold membership failed he turned against it, and is willing to fight it for the privilege of "board and lodging" and the chance to "take up a collection." We submit the thought that the elders are under no obligation to meet such a man in debate. He represents no one but himself. He is not indorsed by any other church; neither by man nor God. Every argument that he has to present has been met repeatedly in public. There are other men of some character, honor, and moral standing who will meet us in debate if we wish debate. The elders may meet this man if they choose, but they are under no obligation to do so, and if they do they confer upon him an unmerited honor.

"The Kansas City Times of last Thursday said: 'Independence went "dry" by a majority of 207. That vote is explained by the stand taken by the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, whose members, including five hundred voters, declared for the abolition of saloons. The surprise of the election was that while Independence voted dry, Mount Washington and Maywood, with their residence population, voted "wet" by large majorities.' The vote here referred to includes all Blue Township, and there is good evidence that Independence city went dry by 400 majority. In sending out 'dry' literature the committees, both here and at Holden, omitted sending to Latter Day Saints, because they said the Saints would vote 'dry' anyway. This is a high tribute to the Saints. One prominent gentleman in Kansas City said to us that he thanked God the 'Latter Day' people could be depended on to vote 'dry.' We wished he might not be mistaken in a single instance. Saints, let us hold fast to that reputation, not only as regards the abolition of the liquor curse, but as regards every other good work. How could the Saints be in harmony with their profession and do otherwise?"

"In working and donating money in the cause of prohibition there was not a selfish interest involved. It was all done for the good of humanity, for reducing crime and suffering. They were actuated by noble principles. What actuated those on the other side? Was it dollars and cents? Was it anything of a noble character? Was it for the good of humanity, that there might be less poverty and suffering? Can these questions be answered without equivocation and without a blush? The Kansas City brewers boast that they defeated the prohibitory amendment, and that they will make Kansas 'wet' in the next two years. God forbid that these home-destroyers and poverty-making concerns be allowed to pervert contented, prosperous Kansas for their own greedy desires for gain."—Zion's Ensign.

The following comments from Leon, Iowa, papers speak much for Graceland College and Graceland students. These appeared in write ups of the recent game of football between the Leon High School and Graceland College teams:

"The members of the Graceland team are to be complimented on their sportsmanlike conduct during the game and to their absence of rough or dirty tactics. If there were more teams like the Graceland team no one could have any objections to the modern game of football."—Journal.

"The Graceland boys are gentlemen, everyone of them, and are to be complimented on their absence of 'dirty work' in the game."—Reporter.

The Herald Publishing House is giving away teacher's Bibles selling at $3 and $4 each, as premiums for securing subscribers to Poultry Pointers, the poultry journal published by Graceland College. An excellent chance to exchange a little spare time for a Bible. Those who are interested may write to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, for particulars.

We are in receipt of a letter from a correspondent, a member of the Utah church, who writes from Salt Lake City, as follows: "Have read several of your tracts given to my son by one of your elders who is preaching here. I find they are only too true. I would like if you would send me a catalogue of your books. Please to mail it under cover; if you don't, we are liable not to get it."

Fear is not caused by the difficulties that confront us, but by the spirit in which we confront our difficulties. Before the same set of difficulties one man goes down in abject failure, another rises to greater manhood and strength than he ever had before. It was not the difficulty that unmade the one, or that made the other: it was what each man saw in or through the difficulty. "Fear sees giants, but faith sees God." That is the secret of the difference. To God, there is no such thing as difficulty; therefore to one whose whole life is God's, and to whom God has pledged his own powers and resources, there is no fear or hold-up in difficulty, but only an opportunity to draw in faith upon God's overcoming power. To one who is trying to live without conscious and continued dependence upon God, every passing year exposes more of his own weakness, and the giant in every fresh difficulty looms larger and larger. The slavery of fear or the freedom of faith is ours for the choosing.—Sunday School Times.

Prejudice.

Up from the bogs of Indolence,
And the bitter stream of Inference,
It rises, gaunt, a fit incense
Unto the goddess Ignorance.

And with its damp and chilling mists
It settles thick where e'er it lists,
And with a legion phantom fists
Enslaves and blinds what e'er it wists,

Fit potion of Satanic brew,
Instilled within the heart of you,
To make appear of loathsome hue
The crystal drops of Truth—God's dew.

Fling back the clammy shroud which lies
Above the mires of Prejudice;
Breathe in the air of free, blue skies,
And let your prayer for Wisdom rise!

Elders' Note-Book

THE ADVANTAGES OF A NON-FLESH DIET.

(Read and presented by John Scholefield before the Birmingham District, England, priesthood association, at Sutton Park.)

Food is a main source of energy in the human body. Energy is in great demand at the present day. This is a competitive age when "the pound of flesh" is exacted. We need to be at our best physically and mentally to cope successfully with the conditions of life as we find them to-day, as Saints, and the priesthood of God especially.

I hold that the continued use of flesh meat as an article of food is a hindrance to our acquiring a sound and healthy physique capable of endurance. To the average man meat seems to be the source of all strength, other foods being only incidental. "The man who eats meat is never stronger than his neighbor who does not eat meat, other things being equal, and he is notably inferior in point of endurance." This has been proven in scores of instances.

The most recent tests of this kind were those of Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale University, applied to some of his students who were athletes. As a scientist he was unbiased either by personal prejudice or accepted tradition, and was one who had no ax to grind.

The first test was holding arms horizontally, in which forty-nine persons took part, representing two types of dietetic habits, those who ate flesh meat and those who did not.

Second test, deep knee bending.

Third test, leg raising with the subject lying on his back.

The first test showed a great superiority for flesh abstainers, even the maximum record of the flesh eaters was barely more than half the average of flesh abstainers, only two of fifteen flesh eaters succeeded in holding their arms out over a quarter of an hour, whereas twenty-two out of thirty-two abstainers of flesh meat surpassed that limit, none of the flesh eaters reached half an hour, but fifteen of the thirty-two exceeded that limit, of these nine exceeded an hour, four exceeded two hours and one exceeded three hours. In respect to deep knee bending, if we take No. 325 for reference, we find that of the nine flesh eaters only three surpassed this figure, while of the twenty-one abstainers from meat seventeen surpassed it. Only one of the nine flesh eaters reached 1000, as against six of the twenty-one abstainers, none of the former surpassed 2000, as against two of the latter. The next feat showed little difference, but I pass on.

Note carefully the dyspeptics among your friends or acquaintances and you will probably find that in nine out of ten cases they are practically inclined to the use of meat. It is true there are other contributing causes to their ailments, but if meat possessed the strengthening and vitalizing influence ascribed to it, we would not expect such an extensive amount of sickness amongst its consumers. Listen to what Adam Smith, a Scottish Political Economist, and once professor of Glasgow University, extracts from the book, "Inquiry into the nature and causes of the wealth of nations." The peasantry of Wales, Norway, Sweden, Russia, Denmark, Poland, Germany, Turkey, Greece, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal and almost every country in Europe subsist principally, and most of them entirely, on vegetable food.

The Persians, Hindoos, Burmese, Chinese, Japanese and in fact most of the Asiatics live upon vegetable productions. The great body of the ancient Egyptians and Persians confined themselves to a vegetable diet, and the Egyptians of the present day as well as the negroes whose great bodily powers are well known. The brave Spartans, who for muscular power, physical energy and ability to endure hardships, perhaps stand unequalled in the history of nations, were vegetarians.

The departure from their simple diet was soon followed by their decline.

The armies of Greece and Rome in the times of their unparalleled conquests subsisted on vegetable productions. In the training for the public games in Greece, where muscular strength was to be exhibited in all its various forms, vegetable food was adhered to, but when flesh meat was adopted afterwards those hitherto athletes became sluggish and stupid.

From two thirds to three quarters of the whole human race from the creation of the species to the present time have subsisted entirely, or nearly so, on vegetable food, and always when supplies of this kind have been abundant and of good quality and their habits in other respects correct, they have been well nourished, and well sustained in all the interests of their nature. So much from outside sources against the use of meat and advocating the advantage of abstinence or very moderate use of the same.

Last but not least; the Lord has spoken, and as Latter Day Saints we profess to believe it. Doctrine and Covenants, portion of 86:2:

"Yea, flesh also, of beasts and the fowls of the air, I, the Lord, hath ordained for the use of man, with thanksgiving. Nevertheless, (don't forget that word, Saints,) they are to be used sparingly; and it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used only in times of winter, or of cold, or famine. All grain is ordained for the use of man and of beasts, to be the staff of life."

All Saints who remember this one thing, not forgetting the rest in this section, shall receive health, and finally "health is the first wealth."

FUNERAL SERMON OF ELDER ELI A. STEDMAN.

PREACHED BY H. A. STEBBINS, AT LAMONI, IOWA, SEPTEMBER 11, 1910.

(Reported by Sr. Annie Allen.)

When I was in this house at prayer meeting a week ago this afternoon I had no idea that but one week would pass until we would be called to such a sad event as this, even the funeral service of one who, it seemed to me then, might live for some time yet, and all of us hoped so.

I will read the items of Brother Stedman's life that I have gathered and written:

Bro. Eli A. Stedman was born near Henrietta, Lorain County, Ohio, November 7, 1840. Died September 8, 1910, aged 69 years, 10 months, and 1 day. In January, 1862, when past twenty-one years, he enlisted in the army, serving three years, guarding rebel prisoners on Johnson's Island in Lake Erie. While on one trip south for prisoners the fever seized him and he was brought to his parents' home in Ohio, and was sick eight months before he could return to duty.

After his discharge on February 28, 1865, he went to Minnesota, and on December 18, 1866, at Redway, was married to Miss Adelia L. Cole. In May, 1892, they came to Lamoni to dwell. To them were born five children; one son, Squire, and four daughters, Srs. Marie Buffum, Ruby Cummins, Retta Robinson, and Ruth Schoolcraft. All are present to-day, from Missouri, Iowa, and North Dakota.

Brother and Sister Stedman obeyed the gospel in Minnesota, in 1869, being baptized by Bro. W. H. Kelley. In 1875, he was ordained an elder, and a large part of the time he has been engaged in the work of the ministry until his health failed. He held the offices of a seventy, a high priest, and a high counselor in the Lamoni Stake; also at death he was Post Commander of Lamoni G. A. R.

He was a man of pure mind and of noble character, one who kept his promises and met his obligations honestly. Was not proud or dictatorial in manner, but kind and friendly. Did not surmise evil, nor insinuate wrong, nor hold animosity. We shall feel his loss greatly.

I will also read from the Psalms certain prayerful exclamations made unto the Lord. It seems to me that they are such as our brother would make and doubtless has made in his devotional thoughts and meditations before God.

Unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul. . . . Show me thy ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths. Lead me in thy truth, and teach me. . . .

Judge me, O Lord; for I have walked in mine integrity: I have trusted also in the Lord; therefore I shall not slide. Examine me, O Lord, and prove me; try my reins and my heart. For thy loving-kindness is before mine eyes; and I have walked in thy truth. I have not sat with vain persons, neither will I go in with dissemblers. I have hated the congregation of evil-doers; and will not sit with the wicked. . . . Lord, I have loved the habitation of thy house, and the place where thine honor dwelleth. . . .

The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid. . . . One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life. . . . Hear, O Lord, when I cry with my voice; have mercy also upon me, and answer me. When thou saidst, Seek ye my face; my heart said unto thee, Thy face, Lord, will I seek.—Extracts from Psalms 25, 26, 27.

Probably they have been read and spoken of by Brother Stedman many times during his life, when his heart yearned towards God.

And now it is fitting that we should speak and think upon those things for which this man stood for over forty years in the earnestness and integrity of his heart and of his life. There comes to my mind in the beginning this scripture:

What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands.—Psalm 8: 4-6.

These words are significant and full of meaning. Evidently they were inspired by the living God as given to his servants the prophets in days of old, and they inspire us to believe in God and in his love for man. They give us sublime thoughts about the Lord and his purposes, his motives, his intentions. They give us exalted ideas of the possibilities for the created being called man. And indeed there come joyful thoughts about God, and angels, and men, who are spoken of here as associated beings.

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands.

And although man fell afterwards, and the race has not yet risen to its destined place, yet it was a great creative act when God made man a perfect being in his own image; when he sent him forth as the crowning piece of his workmanship on earth, the one far above all the other forms of life. And although man's body was mortal like those of the lower orders of creation, yet there was something within man that was not in the others. And that was the intelligent mind, the immortal spirit which came from God, one into each of these tabernacles made in God's image. And thus God created man to dwell upon the earth, to have the rulership, and to have happiness and joy. The Book of Mormon says that "Man is [or exists] that he might have joy." And therefore God created man for man's happiness both here on earth and in the eternal world.

The foregoing texts also bring to us the glad truth enunciated by the Savior that "God so loved the world." Not hated it, but loved it. Also another, that "Like as a father pitied his children so doth the Lord pity them that serve him."

And surely we can believe that Brother Stedman did love God and his cause during his life, perhaps from his youth. He and I did not know each other as boys, but we were in and near the same town, Henrietta, Ohio, when he was seven years old and I was four. I was born in Toledo but afterward my mother removed to Lorain County, and for a time we small boys were near each other, but we were not acquainted until after we had heard the gospel and obeyed it; he in Minnesota and I in Wisconsin. However, I am satisfied that the Lord guided him, and that he had the principles of honesty, integrity, nobility, and such love for truth that it caused him to obey the gospel when he heard it. Had he not such principles in youth he could not have come out from three years of army life so uncontaminated, with his ways clean and right, as I believe they were, and such as he maintained through the years since he accepted God's work.

What is man, that thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that thou visitest him. Thou madest him a little lower than the angels.

Yes, and also God said, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and it was so." Evidently he spoke to his Son, who was with him "in the beginning." He was the Master Workman under the Father's instruction. Therefore Jesus said in word and meaning, "My Father is greater than I. The works that I do are done because my Father sent me. I and my Father are one." Yes, they are one in purpose and in plan, one in their exclusive work, both intent on carrying out the great plan of salvation for man. We are told that they are working "to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." Not the immortality of the spirit, as some say. For the spirit is already immortal and can not cease to exist. But if the spirit alone is to live hereafter, then there would be no redemption of man as he was created, no salvation of man as man. But Christ's atonement was instituted for the redemption of the entire man, body and spirit, as Christ demonstrated by his own resurrection from the tomb, also by his prophecy that the time is coming "when all who are in their graves shall hear his voice and live."

But I want to speak more fully about the "inner man," the spirit. It is written, "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." Also when Jesus died he said, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." And when Stephen was stoned to death he looked up into heaven and saw God and Jesus Christ at his right hand, and he said, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Then he gave up the ghost (or guest), he gave up that which went back whence it came, even "to God who gave it."

Another thing: It is evident that the spirit of man is in the form of the body of man, as angels are also. When the disciples looked out upon the water and saw Jesus walking there they recognized him. Yet because he did not sink, they thought it was only his spirit. But he assured them that he was in the mortal body yet. Likewise when he had risen from the dead they knew he had died and they supposed that this was only his spirit. But he said, "Handle me, and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as you see me have." Thus, notwithstanding the fact that it was his resurrected body they saw, yet his language shows that he knew it might have been his spirit without the tabernacle. The Jews in general, except the Sadducees, understood the truth that the spirit is in the form of a body and that it exists independently of the body, when separated. It can not be otherwise and God's word be true.

In 2 Chronicles 18: 18-21 is also clear proof that spirits without bodies have the power of sight, of hearing, and of movement. The spirit mentioned stood before God; it was seen, it heard, it spoke, it was an intelligence, although evil in its nature. Many scriptures cause us to know that the body is but the outer form for the living tenant. When the spirit departs the body is indeed dead, as James wrote. "And we fly away" when the spirit departs, as Psalm 90: 10 relates.

And Brother Stedman, the real, living entity, who spoke the words of love to wife and children, who declared the message of eternal truth from the desk in many places, in earnestness and sincerity, in purity of thought and speech, the tenant who looked out of those eyes and heard with the ears, and spoke with that tongue; that intelligent entity has gone on and left this mortal tabernacle that is here before us. The thinking, speaking, acting person has departed and gone to a happier company beyond. That which controlled this body, which told it what to do and what not to do, has left the mortal tabernacle. The body is but the machine under the governing and controlling authority of the ever living soul. Though the body is dead the spirit is not dead. Brother Stedman is now among those who await the giving of immortal, eternal bodies. Let us think of this as a very important and a very happy truth.

Go to the piano there and strike the keys. Do the keys cause the music? One not knowing better might say that they do. A child may suppose the keys make the sweet sounds. But we know that what is back of or behind the keys produces the music. Take the soul out of the box and one may strike the keys all day and there will be no music. So with the human ear, and eye and tongue. You may call now in the ear of this body before us, but it no longer hears anything. The loving family have cried out and mourned by his side; but there has been no answer, because the person who before this heard their calls has now moved out. That which once could speak by the use of that tongue has departed. The tongue itself did not speak. It was only the instrument for the use of the one who dwelt within, as the keys move to let the music come forth.

But I want to say to you, to the widow and these daughters, and son, and sons-in-law, and daughter-in-law, that if the curtain were drawn aside to-day; if you, Sister Stedman, could see Eli over yonder, where I am satisfied he now dwells, you would say, "Why, Eli, what a happy home you have." And the son and daughters would say, "O, father, what a glorious place you live in; how lovely it is, and how happy the people are." And your tears would dry and your hearts would be filled with joy to know that he has gone to such a happy country, to dwell with such a glad company as you saw him with.

I remember well about the experience of Bro. John Pett, of Gallands Grove, Iowa, some fifteen or eighteen years ago. They had traveled from England to Utah in belief that there was the true church. On the plains in an unknown grave lies the body of one of their children. They continued on, and in Utah found the evils existing. Then they returned east in the faith of the Reorganized Church and located in Crawford County, Iowa. During a conference held in Gallands Grove, over thirty years ago, Bro. W. W. Blair and I were bedfellows at their house. Their home was a place of peace and love. By and by Sister Pett died and Brother Pett was bereft after fifty years of companionship. And he grieved so much that he asked the Lord to permit him to see her happiness on the other side, that he might be content. He prayed in earnestness and the Lord was good to him in giving him a view. He wrote me about it.

He saw that she was not as in youth, but on her mature countenance there was a radiant joy, such an infinite peace and the brightness of a supreme content, such a look of eternal happiness, that he could not be other than completely satisfied as to the glory that she had share in over yonder, where dwelt the blest who die in the Lord. The face was hers exactly, but it had no longer the marks of care, or toil, or pain, or old age. It made him so happy to see her so, that he did not wish her to return to him, but only that he might be permitted soon to go and dwell where she was.

And I say to you to-day that if the veil could be drawn aside and you could behold the obedient and faithful ones who have gone over, you would cry out, "Oh, what happiness they have there," and it would cause you to want to be worthy to be with them.

Indeed, it is where all are invited to go and to be prepared.

Those before me who have sons or daughters who live in happy homes of their own, you rejoice that it is so and do not expect them to come back and live with you. You say, "They have good companions and obedient children, and even if I do not see them I know they are comfortable and happy; I am satisfied." Then why should we not think of those who go from this life to far happier homes than our earth affords anywhere, even though it be a six hundred room palace like the one recently finished at Posen, Germany, by the emperor. It is the fifty-first palace of royalty in Germany. It is occupied by one of the princes. But we common people would not want such a house on earth. We would not know what to do with all those rooms, any more than we would with the fifty thousand dollars daily income of Mr. Rockefeller. We could use a part and we could help the church and give to the needy, but the immensity of the home and of the income would overcome anyone of us who might receive the burden.

But the eternal home and the everlasting possessions prepared for those who live for them here, they are what we want. All of you are invited to share those happy conditions which God has provided, which he has promised to give his people. So we believe of Bro. Eli A. Stedman, that he has passed over to that happy waiting place.

The scripture says, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; yea, saith the spirit, they shall rest from their labors and their works do follow them." Therefore make yourselves ready. And our homes should be houses of faith and of prayer, houses of study and of learning, learning about God and his plan of salvation for mankind. What can I speak of better than this glad message that the Son of God gives warrant for saying about the dead that "die in the Lord," the death that I believe Brother Stedman died after a noble and worthy life here. I do not think that I say too much in this. I enjoy speaking of the virtues and merits of people, of those who are honorable and clean, without dishonesty and deceit. Indeed, to give credit to everyone according to the good in each one, but not to praise the corrupt or the evil. And I rejoice that so many good men and women are earnestly making themselves ready for the paradise of God and for the resurrection of the just.

May God comfort you, Sister Stedman, and you, the son and the daughters. May you so live as to be prepared to join the husband and father over there. May we all have help to work righteousness, to have pure motives, and to live so as to obtain everlasting life when our time shall come to pass over. In Christ's name, Amen.

WHEN TO RENDER THE ACCOUNT.

BY BISHOP E. L. KELLEY.

CHAPTER 2.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE STEWARDSHIP SHOULD BE RENDERED IN THIS PRESENT LIFE, NOT POSTPONED UNTIL THE NEXT.

The principle which exacts obedience as a means of perfection and condition of reward, must have associated a standard by which to determine the fulfillment, and an authorized administrator who must instruct in and pass upon the act of compliance. The rule in the law of Christ holding out a certain attainment of perfection in order to meet the approval of the final Judge, demands teachers and advisers along the way, to whom reports may be made, the bearings taken, and without which no man can be said to "walk in the light."

It is illustrated in the parable of the vineyard:

When the Lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen? . . . He will destroy those miserable, wicked men, and will let out the vineyard unto other husbandmen, who shall render him the fruits in their seasons.—Matthew 21: 41-43.

Properly speaking, men in this life are stewards, not owners, and they should recognize the condition as it is, and not assume ownership, when that relationship does not exist, but render the account of the stewardship in the season thereof. The strictly honest tenant in this life does not seek to put off the settlement of the rent with his landlord from year to year; and the strictly faithful steward, after that he is advised, will not defer rendering his account, but whether intrusted with much or little, will render the account "in the season thereof"—in the proper time; why not?

It is in keeping with such illustration and the rendering of such account that Jesus says:

He who is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much; and he who is unjust in the least, is also unjust in much.—Luke 16: 10.

The test of worthiness is made as we move along in life and not left to be determined and fixed in some future by and by. Do not overlook the important lesson to be had from the instruction. Faithfulness is shown in rendering the account here, not by waiting until we shall have reached the other side. It is too late after we have passed to the other side to do this, for we are already dispossessed of the things of this present life then, and can not re-adjust our work, if we would, but must answer for what we have done, or what we have failed to do. Hence the instruction: "If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches."—Ibid., verse 11.

It is a false position to assume that we will wait till we pass to the other side, and then answer to God; the time of the trial and testing passes as the acts of life are wrought. If you have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will give to you the true riches?

The character has already been formed, and if not found perfected under a compliance with the law, not by the failure to obey, it is found wanting. To such, the true riches can not be intrusted. There is a good and wholesome reason then for the scriptural instruction:

For, for this cause pay ye your consecrations also unto them; for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. But first, render to all their dues, according to custom, tribute to whom tribute, custom to whom custom, that your consecrations may be done in fear of him to whom fear belongs, and in honor of him to whom honor belongs.—Romans 13: 6, 7.

The Apostle again makes more prominent the office and work of the minister of the law here in this present time, when he contrasts the work of Melchisedec with that of Abraham. He writes:

Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils. . . . But he whose descent is not counted from them received tithes of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.—Hebrews 7: 4-6.

This further stamps the strictness of the justice of God in rendering to every man, place according to his works. Merit is attained by faithfulness on the part of the children here, and each is promised that he shall receive according to his faithfulness, with the assurance to all set forth in the Roman letter, 2: 11, "For there is no respect of persons with God." With such a rule of life, and under such covenant of promise, everyone should strive in the race that is set before him, and whatever others may do, make a faithful account.

The necessity for special effort in fulfilling the law and making answer for our work in the present life is definitely set forth in the divine instruction to Israel in later times. The command given December, 1831, is as follows:

For verily thus saith the Lord, It is expedient in me for a bishop to be appointed unto you, or of you unto the church, in this part of the Lord's vineyard; and verily in this thing ye have done wisely, for it is required of the Lord, at the hand of every steward, to render an account of his stewardship, both in time and in eternity. For he who is faithful and wise in time is accounted worthy to inherit the mansions prepared for them of my Father. Verily I say unto you, The elders of the church in this part of my vineyard shall render an account of their stewardship unto the bishop which shall be appointed of me, in this part of my vineyard. These things shall be had on record, to be handed over unto the bishop in Zion; and the duty of the bishop shall be made known by the commandments which have been given, and the voice of the conference.—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 1.

There is complete order and harmony of work in the household of faith and no one can properly ignore the office work, or administrative authority, of another. To do this is to hold lightly, or ignore, the Lord who appoints these messengers, and thus lose the blessing accompanying, as stated by Jesus, "He that heareth you heareth me."

No one is so great by birth, or calling, as to be exempt from the law of duty, or of recognizing and properly answering to the authority and place of others. Jesus set the unparalleled example when he came to John, and demanded that he humbly comply with the rule of baptism in water, that John had been sent and authorized to administer. When John recognized the special worth of the great character who came to him, he refused to baptize Jesus; but Jesus answering said, "Suffer me to be baptized of thee, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him."—Matthew 3: 43.

What a great impetus, to the great work of the church, if Christ's professed children to-day would heed the example; all come to God's authorized ministers and ask to comply with the divine order, if anything has been omitted, thereby living by "every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God," instead of, as may be observed occasionally, trying to change the order and direct the administration of the law after the peculiar notions which have "crept in," and in a manner "perverted the right way." We plead for a holier and heartier desire to move the Saints universally to fulfill the entire law of Christ; and that they shall for their own good, and the glory of God, earnestly strive, in this present time, to render to the Lord that which is his own.

Of General Interest

DID THE GREEKS DISCOVER AMERICA?

The Greeks discovered America. They were the first to discover it, so far as the records of history go. Long before Leif Erikson, the hardy Norseman, sailed with his vikings across the North Atlantic; long before the days of the Irish Saint Brendan, or the Welsh Prince Madoc, or the Genoese Columbus, the Greeks discovered the Western Hemisphere. It was 2,228 years ago, during the reign of the great Alexander, that Ptolemy, a Greek navigator, was swept by storm and wind with his sailors to the shores of Uruguay, South America.

The evidence of the discovery is incontestable. It came to light in 1827, at a time when little attention was given to archæology, and when few Americans ever had heard of Leif Erikson, the Norse discoverer, or of Prince Madoc, the Welsh discoverer, or of Saint Brendan, the Irish discoverer.

The land reached by the Greeks of old is not familiar to us, though it is associated in the mind with Garibaldi, that hero of two worlds to whom the Italy of to-day is so greatly indebted. For Garibaldi, in his youth, fought bravely for the independence of Uruguay. This South American republic lies in about the latitude of Cape Colony, in South Africa, and extends even farther south than Cape of Good Hope.

FARMER FOUND RELICS WHILE PLOWING.

Not far from its stately capital city of Montevideo, in the year named above, a farmer of influence in the community near the city came upon a strange discovery. Making a slight excavation in a field, he discovered a large, flat stone. Scraping the dirt from it, he found to his surprise that it contained some lettering carved on its surface. On removing the earth about it the stone was found to rest upon a stone vault, or cellar, of small dimensions. The tablet stone was removed, and the contents of the vault were brought to light. These included a large earthen vessel, two ancient swords, a helmet, and a shield. It was at once apparent that these relics, with the possible exception of the urn, were of ancient Greek pattern.

Despite the dryness of the climate and the care with which the walls of the vault had been sealed to exclude the air, the metallic articles were for the most part deeply rusted. But fortunately it was possible to make out clearly the designs which they bore in relief.

HEAD OF ALEXANDER ON SWORD HILT.

On the handle of one of the swords was molded the head of a Greek, supposedly Alexander the Great, whose profile is familiar to students of antiquities. The helmet was elegantly wrought in bas relief, and the scene which it portrayed was unmistakable. It represented the "stock" picture of all lovers of the "Iliad"—the picture of Æneas dragging the dead body of Hector around the walls of Troy.

Nothing more was needed to demonstrate the Greek character of the relics, but a further revelation was made when the inscription on the tablet was studied. It was in Greek characters, neatly done. But it seemed at first impossible to demonstrate anything more than this single fact. The weathering of the stone had so obliterated the characters that but few of them could be read with certainty. A careful cleaning of the stone brought out more of these, and the initial words stood out pretty clearly.

OBVIOUS ERROR IN TRANSLATION OF DATE.

The inscription was translated thus:

"In the Reign of Alexander the Son of Philip, King of Macedon in the Sixty-Third Olympiad, Ptolemy"—

Here the letters became so obscure as to be undecipherable.

Let us be thankful, however, that we have the date and the subject of the story which the tablet sought to tell, although we have not one word of the story itself.

First let us note the date. Alexander reigned from 336 B. C. to 324 B. C.—that is to say, from the 110th Olympiad to the 113th. The Greeks used letters for figures. The letters “xi,” and “gamma” represented 63, and the letters “rho” “iota” and “gamma” 113. Evidently in the first reading of the inscription “rho” and “iota” were mistaken for “xi,” and the reading should have been “in the one hundred and thirteenth Olympiad.”

This would mean some time within the last four years of Alexander's reign. That wonderful reign of twelve years was so filled with great events that it captivates the boys and girls in the history classes of all our high schools. It will add to their interest in that period to note this evidence of another achievement.

ALEXANDER MAD TO SUBDUE THE WORLD.

Alexander was absorbed in the story of the Trojan war; he slept with his book of Homer under his pillow; he delighted in everything Greek; he burned to conquer remote lands and to spread the Greek civilization over the world. Goldsmith represents him as looking out upon the moon with longing eyes, and lamenting that he could not extend his conquests beyond the ether, to include that heavenly ball.

But Alexander's conquests were not all of war. among the ornaments of his reign was the Greek Pytheas, a geographer and astronomer, who became, under the royal patronage, a navigator as well. The Greek writer, Eratosthenes, who is second only to Aristotle among the philosophers of the old Hellenic world, tells us that Pytheas made several voyages into the Atlantic.

Doubtless we should have heard more of these voyages but for the convulsions of the era in which they occurred, when Alexander's arms and fame were advancing through the old nations and making changes everywhere.

Who was the Ptolemy of which the Uruguayan tablet sought to tell us?

Evidently he was a Greek navigator and warrior. Whether he sailed in a little fleet commanded by Pytheas, or independently in his own vessel, he was doubtless carried by wind and tide to the southwestward, never to return. The student of physical geography will see how Ptolemy's course was marked out for him by the trade winds and the ocean currents.

The Ptolemys became a famous family, and this man probably was the first of his name to win high distinction. His discovery of America never could have been announced to the Greeks. To them he was a lost man.

STORY CAME TO LIGHT AFTER TWENTY CENTURIES.

For twenty-one and a half centuries his story remained untold. Another Ptolemy became great in the army of Alexander; and when the Macedonian empire so suddenly broke to pieces, he became king of Egypt, founding a dynasty of Greek kings which lasted three centuries in the land of the Nile, terminating with the famous Cleopatra, who died in the year 30 B. C.

As if this were not glory enough for one family name, the great astronomer and geographer Ptolemy arose in the second century after Christ, to set forth the theory of the universe which obtained with scarcely any modification for fourteen centuries. How grateful it would have been to him to know that a hero of his own illustrious name had borne the arms of Greece to a New World beyond the Western Ocean!—By Hubert M. Skinner, in the Chicago Tribune.

TESTIMONY BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1910.

I am thankful for this opportunity to meet with you and partake of the solemn ordinance of the sacrament on my birthday. I may never again be permitted to do so, and I do not remember when this has occurred before.

I desire to manifest by my presence and by my partaking of the sacrament with you that I have nothing to prevent me from offering a gift at the altar. I have no remembrance that I have wronged anyone. I have no remembrance that others justly have cause for complaint against me. If they have, they have failed to make manifest to me in order that there might be a reconciliation.

I need not say that I love the gospel. I believe that it is the power of God unto salvation, and if my belief is sufficiently strongly grounded, I feel that I have no cause to fear. What my merit may be at the close of my life and when the judgment takes place, I do not know. It is not for me to say; it will be for the Judge that sitteth upon the throne and before whom I must answer, to determine whether I am to receive the reward of merit or whether I am to suffer the loss of demerit, having come short of doing what I should have done in my day and in my calling.

Now, praise God, I have eaten with you the bread, I have drank with you of the wine, emblems of Him whose service we thus record. It witnesses to you that I have no charges to prefer against any of you, either in public or in private. I have no word of fault-finding, I have no right to speak ill of you, or to call your defects up in private conversation with any, by which it might be possible to hurt you. I have publicly partaken of the emblems of peace with you. None of us have a right to carry out from this assembly any cause of fault-finding, any cause of ill will or any reason to bring the church or the courts of the church against a brother or a sister, or reiterate any tale of evil that we may have found or heard, of which we have not made a practical complaint before the proper officer.

Too many of us forget that in this sacred ordinance we put to our hands and witness before God that we not only remember Him whose flesh suffered upon Calvary's Cross for us, and whose blood was shed for us, but that we should also remember those with whom we are associated, and blessing them by our life, by our precept and our example as we were striving to walk uprightly, fully answering unto the understanding that we have, that in thus partaking of the emblems before each other and before God and the angels, we have partaken of that that increaseth and sustaineth our spiritual life, and retaining thereby a remission of our sins from sacrament time unto sacrament time. I believe that to partake of this sacrament service is for the purpose of giving us spiritual food, partaken in the spirit of the emblems and the office work of the Holy Spirit in attending upon it. I believe that.

Hence, to-day, I renew my covenant before God and before my brethren, and hope to stand steadfast whether my life now be long or short from this time; and so, desiring that I may walk carefully the ways of life with each and everyone of you and when the time shall come for my departure I shall be able to look up, and conscious of all my defects, of my shortcomings, of my secret sinning, I have the confidence to put myself in the hands of a just God and trust him for what may await me.

May God, in his infinite mercy, enable each one of us to understand the sacred character of the work we have been doing this day in thus partaking of these emblems, that they may be blessed to each of us, that we may walk the ways of life with such carefulness that we may indeed witness to them that are without and those that are within, that our lives are before Him and that they may be known and read of all men—all things of lovely repute, things that are lovely, of good repute and of good report, that we may think upon them and make them a part of our inner life and our manifest life before each other and the world. May God add his blessings as he sees that we need, in Jesus, our Lord. Amen.—Zion's Ensign.

THE BOY IN HIS 'TEENS.

Among the perplexing questions that assail a mother at a certain point in the home history, the "boy in his 'teens" is most insistent. A lad between fifteen and eighteen has arrived at a place where his life is beset with difficulties. Transitions are proverbially embarrassing.

When a boy resents being called "Master So-and-So," yet is not sufficiently grown up to be addressed as "Mister So-and-So," there are moments of awkwardness for all concerned. The tactful mother knows how to smooth these away. She can talk on subjects he likes, without obvious effort or offensive patronage. She recognizes his dawning manhood and never wounds his self-esteem.

Mothers are about the only ones it seems who take the trouble to understand boys at this age; fathers and elder men in general, either purposely or through heedlessness, snub the hobbled boy, treat him with arrogance, and heedlessly ignore the fact that he is leaving the plane of childhood and shuffling forward to the levels where they already stand. . . . The mother's attitude toward her boys is one of pride, and she longs to let every friend see them as she does. A boy in his 'teens is often shy and retiring, often clumsy, often ill at ease in society. He sidles out of the room when company enters. He goes off to the barn, or hangs about the corners of the street with his boy friends. Girls are alarming creatures, and he keeps out of their way. How shall he be coaxed from the diffidence and reserve which are his shield, and yet make him appear forbidding and awkward? Certainly not by direct attacks upon the defects of his temperament, or the immaturity of his character. A mother does well to accustom her boys to being her escorts when she goes out. Women are unwisely independent. They lose some very precious things by their lack of—shall we say, selfishness. A mother should never go out alone in the evening when there is a son under the same roof. Even if such going forth be perfectly safe and proper, she should expect Joe or Frank to attend her. For if a mother takes her young sons out with her, they will unconsciously learn the little ways of social grace. They will cease to be hobbledehoys and become young gentlemen.

Next let the anxious mother provide for her sons pleasant girl companions, encouraging a healthier intercourse, which never tends towards the dangerous ground of love.

Young people ought to enjoy each others' society in the years that precede the twenties, without a single thought of anything except good comradeship. They should go together in groups, rather than by twos, and mothers have it in their power to forward agreeable acquaintance between their sons and daughters, and those of others, and to promote innocent merrymakings. Fun and frolic belong to youth, and laughter then "doeth good like a medicine."

The self-conscious, possibly timorous boy, has his counterpart and opposite in the self-conceited and over aggressive lad, who often arouses antagonism through his positive air of knowing all that is to be known. With this type of character, strong and determined, and likely to make its mark in the future, the mother's province is to exercise a gentle repression. This boy must be curbed, held back, restrained, lest his impetuous rush be misunderstood, or his eager actions result in some perplexing complications. The time is passing swiftly. A little later his energy and resolution will enable him to take an important place among the workers, if not among the leaders of the community.

Now, though he may make large demands on maternal patience, mother must stand beside her boy, straighten out his tangles, and make friends for him on every side. This is a home question; mothers can not ignore it. It means not only a happier present for the growing boy, but a happier future for the man, a happy home life for the woman he marries, and the right kind of a father for his children.—Harry E. Adams in American Motherhood.

Questions on December Reading.

What transition takes place with the boy in his 'teens? What are some of the characteristics of this period? How will the tactful mother deal with his self-esteem? How may this be curbed at times without offending his developing manhood? What may be the effect of snubbing a boy during this period? What is accomplished for the boy by feeling that he has his mother's confidence? What habits may result from a boy's hanging around the street corners? How may this be avoided? What help may it be to a boy to feel his mother's dependence upon him? What may be gained by accompanying her in the evening? How may our boys be kept from becoming so-called "hobbledehoys"? Should the effort to provide suitable companions be allowed to become apparent to the boys and girls themselves? What should be the status of association between boys and girls under twenty? What treatment should be given the aggressive, self-conceited boy? In what manner should they be repressed? What are the possibilities for such a boy if rightly curbed? What is the boy's need of his mother at this time? What is involved in the right solution of the boy problem of this period?

Thankful's Thanksgiving.

Only a few days remained until Thanksgiving, and the little town of Whately was alive with interest in the coming feast day. The air was redolent with the odor of mincemeat, and preserves, and pumpkins simmering into sweetness.

The hard times seemed only to have increased everyone's appetite and hospitality, and Mr. Hodges, the veteran store-keeper, was authority for the statement that there had not been, for thirty years, so many orders for turkeys.

Thankful Bean lived right in the center of the village, and many an anxious matron had consulted her judgment in the festal preparations. Bags of sage and summer savory from her garden, waited in many a pantry for the grand turkey stuffing, and every family for a mile around had her recipe for plum pudding, which had been given her by Governor Nashaw's wife, and had been the standard recipe for Thanksgiving pudding, in his family, for years. Thankful had helped them all, as they desired, no more and no less, but she had gone about with a stern look on her face, and with no pleasant thoughts for the near Thanksgiving Day.

Ever since she was born the day had always been sacredly observed at Thankful's home. Time was when the dining room table had to be reinforced by the kitchen table and two light stands, to make room for the large family and the invited guests. But the number had gradually grown less until, for years, Thankful had kept the day alone in the silent, old house, browning her turkey and steaming her diminutive pudding, and eating her dinner, with no company but her memories.

This past year, as Thankful looked back upon it, seemed to have brought nothing but trouble and loss. A bank in which some of her money had been deposited had failed, and other investments had kept her constantly anxious. Then Millie had gone away with the summer. The very thought of her made Thankful's heart sore. Millie was an orphan niece who had come last winter to live with her aunt. She was a sweet young girl, and, in the few months of her stay, she had grown into Thankful's heart as no one ever had before. Her bright presence had brought an unwonted softness into Thankful's face, and her dainty touches had transformed the house.

The girl seemed happy and contented, until the city people up at Hudson's had chosen to be attracted by her pretty face and winsome ways. They had fascinated her with their stories of city life and of the art schools where her talent could be cultivated.

When the city people went back to their homes, Millie went with them, and Thankful said good-bye with a steady voice and went back to the old life, and no one knew the bitterness in her heart.

Then followed a slow fever, days and nights of sleeplessness and pain, and the torture of having to accept the unloving service of an ignorant girl. Thankful's strong constitution had triumphed, and she was about again, but it had been in spite of utter indifference.

So, with Thanksgiving near, Thankful, knitting by her fire, thought the whole year over, and she said to herself that for once in her life this day should be the same as every other day. The outward observance of it would be hypocrisy, for the year had brought nothing but trouble, and she had no thankfulness in her heart.

Thankful had just come to this decision when she heard a knock at the door. A little boy stood on the step. He had an honest face, framed in a shock of red hair, which fairly lifted up his small cap. His gray, threadbare coat had black sleeves in it, and his shoes were patched.

"Mother told me to tell you I was Mary Ellis' boy. My name is Billy Peters. Can't I come in?" he said.

Thankful led the way into her sitting room, with a little more warmth of manner than she usually showed to boys of Billy's age. Mary Ellis and she had been nearest neighbors and intimate friends in girlhood, but after the former's marriage her home had been a mile away, and, as the cares increased with the years, she and Thankful drifted apart. Her husband had died recently, leaving her penniless, with four little boys.

Thankful had heard sometimes of her friend's brave struggle to keep the wolf from the door, but her own misfortunes had absorbed her mind so completely that she had little place for thought of others.

"I'm a committee," said Billy, settling himself in the big chair which Thankful drew out for him, and holding his hands up to the cheerful blaze of the hearth.

"You are?" said Thankful, putting on her glasses to examine him more minutely.

"I be." And Billy drew himself up proudly. "You see it's like this: There's ten poor children down to the country farm this year, and Mr. Walker, what manages the farm, says he nain't got 'thority to git up 'Thanksgivin' dinner for 'em. So, down in 'our Sabbath school, some committees was chose, to go round and see what folks would give towards gittin' 'em a 'Thanksgivin' dinner. We want 'em to have a first-rate one—turkey, 'n' cranberry sarce, 'n' onions, 'n' pumpkin pie, 'n' a puddin' chuck full o' raisins, 'n' an orange apiece."

Billy dwelt long and lovingly on each item of the Thanksgiving dinner.

"Are you going to have all those things yourself?" said Thankful, looking keenly at the poorly clad child.

"No'm, not this year; but we have had 'em some years. Father's dead, 'n' the rent's high, 'n' mother don't get much washin' now. But she says things might be a good deal worse. 'Tain't as though we were poor, like them children. We're goin' to have some fried liver. We ain't poor," he said, stoutly.

Somehow Thankful's glasses needed wiping as she looked at Billy, who had his mother's eyes. Indeed, he was not poor! His bravery and utter forgetfulness of self were possessions a king might envy!

"How much shall I put you down for?" said Billy, taking down his little stump of a pencil from behind his ear. "Some folks gives five cents. Mother give ten, and she said she guessed you'd give that."

"You may put me down for twenty-five cents," Thankful answered, with a burst of generosity.

Billy almost bounced out of his seat at the munificence of the gift, and he mentally resolved to add nuts and raisins to the Thanksgiving bill of fare of the county farm children.

Long after Billy's sturdy figure was out of sight, Thankful sat idly with folded hands, gazing into the fire. Billy's earnest little soul had awakened new thoughts within her, which were destined to change the current of her life. Could she, too, not be thankful that things were no worse? She had lost her small deposit in the bank, but another investment had proved successful beyond her expectation. She had got up from her illness better than she had been for a long time before. Millie had gone, it was true. But had she not cause for thankfulness that the bright young life had touched her own, even for a little time? If she so willed it, might not this tender memory keep her heart from being quite the withered thing it was?

Now that Thankful was in a softer mood, there came to mind many little causes for gratitude which she had not reckoned before. How they grew as she thought of them, everyone standing out clear and beautiful, a gift of a Father who never forgets his children!

At length Thankful arose, and, going to her desk, she wrote in a fine, old-fashioned hand, an invitation to Mary Peters to come with the boys and take Thanksgiving dinner with her. Then she went out and ordered the largest turkey Mr. Hodges could procure. After that her kitchen was a scene of unusual activity. Cranberries popped and sizzled, pies and cakes baked into odorous richness, and jellies quivered in the most approved way.

Early Thanksgiving morning a little procession of red headed boys, led by Widow Peters, wended its way toward Thankful's home. Billy meant to be decorous, but just as they passed the kitchen window, Thankful had opened the oven to give the turkey a basting. It lay in full view, in all its grand proportions, and was a sight to turn an older head than Billy's.

Thankful's currant cookies kept the boys in a state of bliss till dinner time. And that Thanksgiving dinner! It stands out clear and delicious in the mind of everyone present. Thankful heaped up the plates and filled them again and again, and when, from sheer exhaustion, the boys had to stop, the turkey seemed hardly worsted by the encounter, so gigantic he was!

At last it was all over. Thankful watched the happy company going homeward, Billy bringing up the rear with a basket containing the remains of the feast. Long after they were out of sight she sat with folded hands, gazing after them. Her house was in a state of wild disorder. There were three sharp dents in the carved legs of her dining room table, where little Joe Peters had pounded with his boots to express his delight at the sight of the steaming plum pudding. Joshua, her pet cat, had taken to the woods, and she knew it would require a great deal of diplomacy to bring him back again. It had been a busy, anxious day, and she was tired from head to foot. But there was a strange warmth in Thankful's heart, and, looking back upon the day, she felt that it was the pleasantest one she had known for years. She had entirely forgotten her own troubles in looking after the comfort of her own guests, and she was conscious of having given them an unusual pleasure.

Thankful did not hear the whistle of the incoming train, nor the light step on the garden walk. Some one opened the door softly, hesitatingly, but she did not hear. Then Millie knelt down beside her, and Millie's voice said, tremulously: "Oh, Aunt Thankful, I've been so homesick. Won't you take me back again?"

And, with Millie's arms around her neck, Thankful felt that the day had, indeed, been a blessed one.—Martha H. Pillsbury in The Household Journal.

LEES SUMMIT, MISSOURI, September 26, 1910.

Dear Herald: There are many untold benefits to be derived from the children of men having faith in God and his laws. As we go through the world and see the degradation and sin, the troubles and sickness of humanity, the low and base condition of many, we are truly made to realize the many benefits in Christ, and appreciate the many blessings and favors to those who trust in him.

In the life of perfect peace and victory the will plays a most important part. True religion resides in the will. As long as we entertain the thought that salvation resides in the feelings or emotions, we can never be settled in our actions. The will is that faculty of the mind by which we determine either to do or not to do an action. The will is the real man. When we choose to quit sin and serve God, it is the will that does it. It is not how we feel about it. We do it from a different standpoint than feeling. As long as we will to serve God, we can do it, and as long as we will, all we hand over to the Lord he takes it as his own and cares for it; nothing can alter this, our feelings may clamor against it, or rebel, or be indifferent about it, nevertheless, if we will ourselves to the Lord, we are his anyway. Here is where many are accused. If they are sensible of a certain duty and their feelings rebel or rise against it, they instantly conclude that they are not going to ignore that feeling. Hold fast to that will and go ahead and do that which God wants you to do. You see it is how our will is, and not how we feel about it that counts with God. Which shows the greater fidelity to God, to do God's will even if we do not feel like it, or do God's will because we feel like doing it? Which is the best developer of character?

Some people wait to feel like it. The will plays an important part, especially when we are tempted to doubt. If doubts come up we trust God, and pray for faith and light and decide, I will press on. The decision of the will is what counts. The will holds fast and wins the day. You come off more than conqueror. Do not forget that patience is a great help to holding the will steady, and that humility also will be a great help to patient faith. Then it will not be long, dear reader, if you thus fasten your will, until your feelings will become natural and soon will contribute to your enjoyment.

May this gospel spread and take root in the hearts of honest men and women. Your brother,

W. R. RUSH.

MULBERRY, CALIFORNIA, November 11, 1910.

Editors Herald: I desire the prayers of the Saints in behalf of our aged and afflicted mother, Sr. R. A. Lawn, who has been in very poor health for more than a year, that if it be God's will she may be restored to health.

I also wish to add that although being isolated we are striving in our weak way to let our light shine, and to raise our children up to fear and love God. I realize there is a great responsibility resting upon parents. May we all do our duty is my prayer.

With love to all Saints,

MRS. H. L. WATERS.

PERRY, IOWA, November 9.

Editors Herald: In writing to you again we can tell of joys commingled with sorrows. The sad news came to us on Thursday morning that Sister Emberling's husband was killed by the cars. The trucks struck him just above the knees. He lived twenty minutes, was not a member of the church, but considered our elders the best posted men in the world. His people, however, are very bitterly opposed to the Latter Day Saints' Church, and demonstrated the fact at the funeral. Brother Salisbury of Des Moines was called to preach the sermon, and his effort was grand. "No human tongue can express the beauties of the beyond as does the record called the Bible." "If a man die can he live again?" and "reward comes to all in some manner in that all men do some or much good and will be so rewarded," was the embodiment for his sermon. People were astonished and are still asking who was the man, where from, and will he preach some again. The result was very gratifying to our people here.

Sr. Chloe Grigsby of Woodbine had charge of the singing and rendered a solo for the occasion that was much appreciated. It seems that Brother Salisbury's sermon fitted into the song perfectly and that each sentiment in it was enlarged to all the beauties that could be brought out.

Those of whom we wrote you would soon be baptized have all come into the church. One of the ladies was a leader in the Campbellite Church, and her departure from them has caused much grief to that entire body. She is honorable, a worker, and has a very pleasing personality along with her depth as a thinker. One of the other ladies is one of Perry's most respected and wealthiest widows. Her step toward the happy future caused them to say: "Oh, what a shame. Do you suppose she will give her money to the Latter Day Saints? Wouldn't that be awful!"

This makes eleven new members and we will surely have some more soon. Many are investigating. We now have forty dollars saved up toward a tent meeting here in June. We will make a house to house canvas with invitations extended in the most inviting manner.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON, October 27, 1910.

Editors Herald: I surely enjoy reading your dear pages; so much to encourage us, so much to help us live better lives. The Mothers' Home Column is very interesting. All who have the talent to write on home training, do so. You help many mothers who are busy attending to the children's needs and have hardly time to think of so many little things that will make our boys and girls better men and women.

I would like to help others by writing to the Home Column, but I feel that I have not the talent.

Ever praying for the redemption of Zion,

SISTER JANE.

GALENA, KANSAS, November 11, 1910.

Dear Herald: It has been a long while since I have penned anything for your pages. I see from to-day's HERALD that there are some who don't think that the Book of Mormon says anything about patriarchs. There are some of the finest patriarchal blessings in the Book of Mormon, in the Second Book of Nephi, chapters 1 and 2 and a part of 3. To my mind they are fine.

MELVINA ULMER.

BILOXI, MISSISSIPPI, November 13, 1910.

Dear Herald: I thought a few lines from this part would be gladly received by some of your readers. It seems that our missionaries have forgotten that there are a few lost sheep in old Biloxi, as none of the force, except Brother Vancleave, have visited us this year. He preached twice for us in June, I think it was, but has not been back since. He passed through Biloxi twice not long since, but failed to stop off for a cause we do not know. We wish they would send W. L. Booker back to us again. May God bless him, wherever he is, for he never forgot there were a few Saints in old Biloxi, and he would stop and break the bread of life to us.

Biloxi is a hard place to make a living this winter, as all of the oyster factories excepting one have shut down for two years.

Your brother,

GEORGE W. ENTREKIN.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

Saints' Herald: Many of our friends will be anxious to know how we are, and how we fared in the long journey from England to this place; and we therefore ask the privilege of using your columns to inform them of our condition and whereabouts.

After taking part in a most enjoyable conference with the Saints of the Manchester District, where we also had the pleasure of renewing the friendship with Brother Pitt and making the acquaintance of Sister Pitt, also meeting with Brother Griffiths, we enjoyed a splendid day's outing along with our host and hostess, Bro. and Sr. William Worth, of Stockport. At noon, Brother Griffiths accompanying us, we all were seated in a very handsome motor car and had a most interesting ride through part of Lancashire, Cheshire, and Derbyshire.

In the evening we called at the home of Bro. and Sr. James Clarke, of Manchester, with whom we have so often sojourned, and on this occasion it was with profound regret we realized that this was probably the last occasion we should all be enjoying the hospitality of "127 Stockport Road."

Tuesday, the 11th, we were up early, and after packing our valises and grips we were driven down to the station by Brother Worth and met Brother and Sister Isherwood and Sister Nodin. Again sorrowful good-byes were said, and we were on our way to Liverpool.

En route we "picked up" Brother Chandler, the jovial and tactful president of the Warrington Branch. We reached Liverpool central station, about noon, and were met by Brother and Sister Pitt and Brother Griffiths. We then met a number of Saints from Leeds and Bradford, Bro. and Sr. F. Issolt (our sister and husband,) with their little son Norman, Sisters Wormald, Schofield, Horton, Mandefield, Aikken, and Bro. and Sr. Thomas Taylor. We all repaired to a restaurant and enjoyed a farewell dinner, and then went down to the landing stage. By this time the rain was falling heavily, and the general depression of our party was increased.

The steamship Ivernia of the Cunard Line was anchored in the middle of the estuary of the Mersey on our arrival, but shortly the anchor was weighed and by almost imperceptible motion, she swept up alongside. After tedious waiting the passengers were embarked and then friends who had passes were permitted to come aboard.

By and by the special London train came and the bell sounded; then the stewards began to call, "All ashore!" It was hard to see the sorrow which was in evidence as friends and loved ones were separated and those "going ashore," percolated slowly through the covered gangway, every few steps turning to look backwards, through the heavy tears, and wave "good-bye."

Our party of friends stood in a group and we gathered on the deck and we looked at each other with straining eyes. All was bustle and turmoil while the big ropes were cast off, and soon the great liner was gradually widening the distance between us. We all were waving our handkerchiefs and trying to identify our party.

We were now speeding seaward, and the great city of Liverpool, with its environs of Bishershead, Leecombe, and New Brighton, conspicuous by reason of its steel columns which tower up over five hundred feet, slipped away very rapidly.

The gong sounded for tea, and as we were booked for second sitting, we took advantage of the opportunity to wash and prepare ourselves for the voyage. After tea was over, we went on deck and enjoyed the weird spectacle of a night at sea. We could see green lights, red lights, and white lights, which denoted ships passing us, and along the Welsh coast one could see reflections of lights which denoted towns, then nearer a long row of electric flares which spoke of the promenade of some pleasure resort. Then we saw the beams of light from lighthouses, which at regular intervals would stream across the waters and billow away beyond us for miles.

The awful quiet, the sense of isolation from the world, the subdued throbbing of the sea quails and the hum of conversation from within the brilliantly lighted saloon had a peculiarly solemnizing effect. Our first night at sea was not spent in sleep, but in meditation and thought of our friends who were left behind.

The next day we arrived at Queenstown and took in the Irish contingent and the mail, so completing our cargo and company. The boat was full, having 1,500 steerage, 380 second cabin, and 160 saloon passengers.

We met Mrs. and Miss Delorma, relatives of Brother E. A. Webbe, of Cleveland, Ohio, who were going to take up their residence in Collinwood, and had arranged to be our fellow-voyagers. It was a lovely day and the Irish coast was looking very beautiful in its October dress, and the white buildings showed up very quaint and bright in the morning sun. About four hours steaming from Queenstown brought us into the rolling billows of the Atlantic Ocean, and as we crept away from the Irish coast we began to feel the force of the north-west wind, and seasickness thinned out our company.

Tea time found the writer in his bunk. The children, except Frankie, were also sick; but Sister Rushton was successful in resisting the attacks of seasickness. Our log shows that every day we had heavy seas, strong winds to gales, until within one day's steaming of Boston.

Sea life is very much the same, so will not consume space to describe it again. On Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, on October 20, we safely berthed in Boston and after passing the doctor and other officers we finally landed and then commenced the tedious business of gathering up our cases and baggage for inspection. Never before have I known the officers to be so strict and thorough in their examinations.

Owing to the kindness of Brother Salyards, who had put the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad people in touch with me, one of the officials of this line was there, and he rendered valuable assistance in consigning our goods and also securing our tickets for the railway journey. We had the pleasure of renewing our acquaintance with Brother Webbe, who came to meet his relatives. We bade them good-bye at the south depot. At 6 p. m. we left for Fall River, and embarked in the magnificent steamer Commonwealth, and at 8.30 we were steaming for New York. Promptly at 7, on the morning of the 21st, we were berthed in New York and were met by Bro. and Sr. George Baty, late of Stockport. We were taken to their home and made welcome. We stayed here until the 26th ult. We enjoyed our association with the Saints in Brooklyn and were privileged to preach the Rally Day sermon on the Sunday. Brethren Christy, of Philadelphia, and James Wilson, our old friend late of Glasgow, were in attendance.

We shall not forget the many kindnesses we received and enjoyed in company with our brethren and sisters in Brooklyn. The branch seems to be in a very good condition. Brother McGuire is ably assisted by faithful men and women; and especially did we enjoy the singing, under the leadership of Paul Craig of Independence.

I could not begin to recount all we had to say to Brother and Sister Baty; we had much to say and tell of the many friends in England, and they enjoyed learning the latest news.

Our next stop was Columbus, Ohio, where we arrived Thursday morning, after riding from Wednesday noon. Sr. G. T. Griffiths met us at the station, took us to their home, and made us very welcome.

We were very pleased to meet Brn. A. J. Becker and H. E. French, also Brother Matthews, the energetic branch president; also Brn. Wynne and Lewis. It was a most enjoyable visit for us in this pleasant city; we enjoyed the prayer services, the Sunday school and the Religio service, besides preaching at the Sunday evening service to a large and appreciative audience. We also attended a baptismal service on the Sunday afternoon, when Brother Matthews baptized four souls into the church, including one sister who is seventy-three years of age. We visited the South Mission, in charge of Brother Neomans, and enjoyed our association with the little band of earnest workers.

In Columbus we met Bro. and Sr. Charlie Foster and their two little ones, Bro. and Sr. Nathan Wrote and their little ones, also Sr. Wrote and Alma. All were well and comfortable. We also met Bro. Nephi Mills, the son of Bro. Thomas Mills late of Manchester. Nephi has grown to be a fine, tall young man, and is well spoken of. Brother Mills we were sorry not to see; he was in Canada at Lathbridge.

Hallowe'en was enjoyed by us at the home of Sister Farnham in a social gathering. We had ice cream, and so one, at least, was happy. We felt sorry to leave Columbus when Tuesday came, but we had to board the 5.15 train for Cincinnati, en route for Kansas City. Owing to being an hour late we missed the connection and as a consequence had to wait until Wednesday evening at 9.10 to get out of Saint Louis.

We arrived in Kansas City Thursday morning at 7.30, November 3, and were met by my mother and father, who were glad to see their grandchildren for the first time.

On our arrival in Independence we were met by Sr. E. L. Kelley, who took us to their home and made us very welcome and comfortable. Bishop Kelley shortly took us in the buggy to see a house, and it suiting us, we engaged to have it, and we hope soon to be settled in our new home.

We had the pleasure to meet Brother Joseph Smith and were glad to see him looking so well, considering his advancing years. He remembers still with remarkable accuracy the many happy times and experiences enjoyed during his visit there with Brother Evans in 1903. He inquired after many of the Saints and was deeply interested in the account rendered of them.

We have been very kindly received by the Saints here and appreciate all the interest shown in us. We have had the pleasure of meeting Brother and Sister Bowker, Brother and Sister Howden, Sister Barrett (formerly Dalley), Brother and Sister Sneyd, and others from the homeland; all seem well and happy.

I will now close this long letter with best wishes to our dear friends in England and Wales, praying that prosperity and peace may attend each and all in the cause.

Our address will be 701 North Cottage, Independence, Missouri. Sincerely,

JOHN W. RUSHTON.

LORAIN, OHIO, October 23, 1910.

Dear Herald Readers: Having read the remarkable case of healing in the HERALD of October 19, I wish to relate the healing of our daughter Hazel, who was taken sick the 15th of last April with what is known as Graves' disease, or exophthalmic goitre. We summoned the best medical aid in Lorain, who after having treated her for several weeks said they could do nothing for her, as their efforts to help her retain their medicine were of no avail.

She grew worse rapidly, her pulse reaching 180 a minute, and when we called an osteopath he did not expect to be able to help her because so many of the symptoms characteristic of the disease were present. Hazel had always given careful acceptance to the gospel from childhood, and when first taken sick I asked if we might send for an elder to administer to her, as we are commanded to in James 5: 14. She protested against it, saying she was unworthy. As she grew worse I plead with her again, and she gave consent to send for Bro. F. T. Haynes, president of Cleveland Branch. Brother Haynes' work in the shops prevented him from coming during the week, so he asked Brother Farnfield to come, and a blessing was given inasmuch that she called for food and ate. But in a few days she again grew worse, saying her faith was too weak. Our hearts were breaking, for we felt the end was very near. Brother Haynes came the 29th of May, and through administration she seemed to get relief. The same again the next day, and while his hands were upon her head she fell into a peaceful sleep, such as she had not known during her sickness, and the night following she slept so quietly we thought she was departing this mortal life.

But it was the healing power of God according to promise, and when she awoke she raised her hands and exclaimed, "Oh, mamma, I am loosed from prison, and it is all of God!" The nausea ceased and she began to mend from that hour. Elder Haynes came each week, and sometimes oftener, as circumstances would permit. He did not consider his need of rest from physical labor, or the excessive heat, for he realized as did we, that God was working with us, and the prayer of faith was saving the sick. Although in bed five months, with the worst case the doctors said that they had ever read or known of, and that she had had heart lesions (of which there are no traces now), she did not suffer, as grace and returning strength were given each day. Her average weight being one hundred and sixty pounds in health, was reduced to about eighty. She is now well and quite strong. I have written this, hoping others of the faith may be strengthened. We find "these signs" do not make believers, but they strengthen those who believe.

In gospel bonds,

KITTIE M. MINKLER.

CASTANA, IOWA, November 14, 1910.

Editors Herald: I am sorry to bother you so often, but the Lord's interests are being overlooked in Castana and vicinity. There is only a handful of Saints there, and most of them poor but faithful.

Bro. W. A. Smith held meetings there last winter for about four weeks with fairly large, and I believe interested audiences.

He baptized two young ladies, and others expressed a desire to obey the gospel. If one may judge from appearances, he won the love of most everyone who met him, both Saint and sinner.

Castana is a fruitful field, and the fruit is ripe, ready for the gatherers; and if some of God's servants do not come in and do the gathering, some other servant will, to our loss. Brother Smith told them he (or some one else) would come back this summer and do the watering where he had done the sowing. Precious souls are thirsting for the truth and waiting a chance to obey the everlasting gospel. Will not some of our missionaries try to get away for a time and attend to this very important matter? There is a woman (Church of God) in there who is trying to spread the Gospel Trumpet religion. She has written to me, stating her intentions of sending for a Holy Ghost man to come in and preach the pure gospel. I call it a will-o'-th'-wisp doctrine, it is so very deceptive and delusive.

O, brother missionary, my heart is so burdened for the people! Won't you come to the rescue at once, and strike while the iron is hot, and reap a rich reward.

Praying for the cause of Christ, I remain,

SADIE BURCH.

WOODFORDS, MAINE, November 10, 1910.

Dear Herald: I am an isolated member of the church. It has been eight years since I heard preaching by an elder, with one exception. About a year ago I heard Bro. U. W. Greene speak at Dixfield Center. My faith in God's work is still strong, but not being in touch with the preaching or in fellowship with the Saints, I am often discouraged, and can only get light and comfort by prayer.

I was told by a sister a few weeks ago that you have a Prayer Union in the church. I am greatly in need of help; although I am poor in this world's goods, it is not for gold or silver that I ask, but such healing power as you have I pray you give me. I am the widow of W. W. Blanchard, who died nearly four years ago. We spent eleven of the sixteen years of our married life in the active ministry, but for some misunderstanding, or misdemeanor on his part, I never knew the reason why, he was put out of the field. Since his death God has seen fit to afflict my body with the terrible cancer disease, and unless I receive help from the only source from which help comes in a case of my kind, I will be obliged to give up trying to make a home for my three children, who are still in school.

My boy is sixteen, and in the high school, the second year, Ralph W.; and a girl fourteen, and one twelve in grammar school, and if God can see fit to heal my body and cleanse me from all sin so that I may be a blessing to my whole family for a few years to come, I would be very thankful, for it is hard to leave any of my loved ones; more especially the younger ones, who will have no home when I am unable to keep it for them.

Now, if you will offer my name to your Prayer Union, or have an elder call on me if one is passing through Portland, Maine, I shall be grateful to you. I am not able to pay the traveling expenses of an elder; if I were I would gladly do so. They can find me by taking a Deering Highland or Westbrook Vie of Woodfords car, at the corner of Congress street and Preble street. Get off at Glenwood avenue. My number is 296 Woodfords street.

Yours in the faith,

Mrs. W. W. BLANCHARD.

SOUTH AUBURN, NEBRASKA, November 14.

Dear Herald: I will write a few lines, for I know I can say this great latter day work is of God. Our heavenly Father has revealed it to me. I know that God is confirming his words in his church. I have seen the sick healed and I have been administered to by the elders of God and have been healed. I am thankful to God for his blessing. To Him be all the glory.

Dear Saints, pray for me that I may live faithful to his cause. Bro. William Self has been preaching here. He baptized five this summer.

Your sister in Christ,

MARY UMLAND.

STROMNESS, ONTARIO, November 10, 1910.

Editors Herald: I have just returned from the northern part of Michigan on a visit, and believing that there is a good work to be done there would like anyone traveling that way to call on friends of mine in Manton, a village in Wexford County and in Mesakie County. Names of those friends are William MacDonald, Ensign MacDonald and Robert Runchey, as they have agreed with me to give our elders a hearing.

Your brother in the gospel,

HIRAM MACDONALD.

Ministerial Labor and Reporting.

Jesus said: "The night cometh, when no man can work."—John 9: 4. Lying before me are the reports of 75 men, and altogether for the three months ending September 30, we have preached 2,760 sermons, or an average of 86, plus. Of the number reporting 42 are seventies. Of these, just half have fallen below the average, 9 preaching less than twenty sermons each for the quarter. In most every instance, however, these latter have had sickness and other hindering causes to contend with. Eighteen have gone above the average, while but 10 have preached fifty or more sermons during the three months. Some of those preaching the largest number of sermons have done so in some of the poorest parts of the mission. There are but four who have preached as many as sixty sermons each. These range 63, 66, 76, and 90, respectively. On the other hand, there are 3, and all able-lodied men, one of whom has preached but 18 and the other two 21 each for the three months.

Turning to the high priests and evangelists, (one of the latter though superannuated and eighty-four years old has yet reported 19 sermons,) of whom there are 15, 9 are below the average, while one only has reached over fifty (56), none of the other 5 reaching higher than 43. Of the 17 elders, 6 have fallen below the average and 3 have over fifty each to their credit—53, 62, and 66, respectively. Of the three priests, but one has gone over the average; the others 8, 14, and 17 respectively.

The above is but the revelation of figures, with no thought of casting reflections; rather a desire to stimulate to greater activity. Judging from the standpoint of personal effort, it would seem that more might be accomplished, for during the same period and occupied the entire time in either reunions or conferences where and when there are so many others present to share in the number of sermons preached, there were a total of 59 sermons to individual credit. This accomplished, besides all the traveling and volume of correspondence necessary, it would seem that able-bodied men ought to make as good a showing, and especially when not burdened with these two latter duties.

The serious question confronting all of us is, Can I afford to be other than energetic in laboring for God and his church? With me it is a matter of conscience as well. The church tells me that a family "allowance" will be given for my service, and it is not a question of a nonsufficiency that offers any excuse for lack of diligence, for I know the price when I make the agreement. Let greater diligence be the watchword.

As to promptness of reporting: Though I have notified through both HERALD and Ensign prior to the time on both occasions, it has yet been a fact that the reports were not all in so that I could report to the Presidency until near a month had elapsed. This is not right. Charge the memory with the fact that January 1 and March 1 are the two next times for reporting. Delinquents need not be surprised to see their names published hereafter! For better reports and the obliteration of tardiness entire,
Yours in bonds,
J. W. WIGHT.

Book of Mormon Vindicated.

The morning of October 21, I was out hunting—Lamanites. I was armed with a Book of Mormon presented by L. J. Johnson, 1887 Terrace street, Kansas City, Missouri. Wending my way northward across the Black Bear River, then through the woods, on the side of a beautiful, tree-covered hill I found a modern home belonging to one of the wealthy Pawnee Lamanites, Charles Knifechief. I found eight Lamanites there, and through the kindness of Mrs. Knifechief, who gave me the front room parlor to talk in, the hour was spent profitably; perhaps more so to me than to them.

One Lamanite to whom I had presented a Book of Mormon, said the book was in harmony with a tradition of four brothers who tried to come from heaven. The oldest started, and he could not get out; the next one the same; the third the same, but the youngest finally succeeded.

I turn to my Book of Mormon, first chapter of 1 Nephi. I find that it was just four times that all the brothers come away from Jerusalem. First, with their father Lehi; the next they cast lots, and it fell upon Laman, the oldest brother; the next time, they all went into Jerusalem, unto the house of Laban, and Laban thrust them out, and robbed them of their gold and silver, and precious things and sent his servants to kill them; the fourth, and last time, Nephi goes into the city alone. How beautifully they fit together!

Nephi was the youngest of the four brothers who, from the oldest to the youngest, had striven and risked their lives for the then wicked city of Jerusalem, the beloved city spoken of in Revelation 22; also by Moroni, and Ether, as found in Book of Mormon, Ether 6, as seen by the prophets coming down out of heaven, a name given to lands and cities on this land. The four brothers loved their home at Jerusalem. They also were taught, as people in all the generations of the past, in all gospel dispensations, of the city New Jerusalem in heaven, that should come to earth. Thus we can see where the Lamanites get their heaven tradition. According to the tradition after they come to earth, it took them some time to come around the mountains of ice. We read in the Book of Mormon that the Nephites were in the wilderness several years before they came across. It proves that the fathers of the Lamanites were taught that there were people in the north country, as found in Doctrine and Covenants, section 108, as spoken of by Jesus when on this land; the Lamanites getting the two accounts mixed. The facts are strengthened by tradition, and that too, being handed down through fifteen hundred years of darkness.

The last little find on the Teahuanco Island in Lake Titicaca, of a temple built like Solomon's temple at Jerusalem; rocks fastened by bronze pins inserted in holes drilled in upper and lower surfaces, the account of which is found in Wonders of America, by James P. Boyd, page 535, is what brought forth this tradition from our Lamanite brother, when we read the account of the temple that Nephi builded after the manner of Solomon's temple. It only pleased our Lamanite congregation to put them in a corner, as it were, the thought dawning upon their minds that it is possible that the book is an account of our fathers, as I believed I could read behind their eyes while telling them the old Jerusalem story.

News From Missions

OKLAHOMA.

This is the day that some of the States are making the final fight for the prohibition amendment. Not so with Oklahoma; she has a prohibition clause in her constitution; but there is an amendment to be voted on to-day for local option and high license; that is, it claims to be, but it is one of the most nefarious documents I ever saw put before any people to vote upon. If it passes it takes the matter completely out of the country people's hands and puts it solely in the hands of the mayor, and four committeemen whom he may appoint, of the incorporated towns. And then the whisky element can petition and force an election, at least three times a month, till they get saloons in their town. I have known of lots of tricks; but I believe that to be the trickiest trick I ever heard of. I do hope and pray that the people of Oklahoma will set down on it so hard that it will be many a year before the whisky element will try for another amendment of its kind. As it is, there are lots of bootleggers in Oklahoma; but it is not on account of the prohibition law, it is because the officers fail to do their duty; and lots of times they are connected with the bootleggers in the cursed traffic.

I have tried to do what little I could against it, in talking with the people; and I also had the opportunity of making one public talk against it, and for prohibition, in the fullest sense of the term.

I am glad that our people are standing almost as a unit upon the side of right. That is, that prohibition shall prevail.

I came into my field of labor, western Oklahoma, in May, and have been in new places most of the time, only visiting one branch,—that of Davidson.

I was called home the 1st of August on account of sickness of our babe, which was very low for quite a while. While there I was taken down with congestion of the stomach and liver, and have not entirely recovered. Every three or four weeks I will have an attack of it. But I am slowly gaining. I have had some very fine meetings in this district, while in some places the plan of freezing out has been adopted. I am now at one of those places; but very few come out.

We have no Saints here; but a family (J. C. Woolf's) are friends to the cause and care for us while here. I hope they will feel to obey ere long.

I held a fine meeting at Cogar, where Bro. and Sr. A. M. Whitlow live. They had not seen a Latter Day Saint minister for the past seventeen years. I left them greatly encouraged and strengthened in the work, and feeling that good will be accomplished in that community. Brn. I. N. White and Emsley Curtis will remember them, in southwestern Missouri, some twenty years ago, where they found a welcome to open up the work in that vicinity.

I have been forced to labor by myself all the year, which has been very discouraging at times when I was hardly able to go, and one time I had to close my meeting and go under treatment of a physician for ten days. I see the need of the elders traveling two and two, and would be glad indeed if I could have some one with me all the time.

Ever praying for the ultimate triumph of Zion,

W. R. SMITH.

ALDEN, OKLAHOMA, November 8.

WEST VIRGINIA.

This is one of the oldest missions of the Reorganized Church. Brother Ells lived and died here, and his memory is cherished by many of the Saints. Many of the followers of Rigdon, known in later years as Bickertonites, lived in this State. Some are still to be found in the northern part of the State. From them some of our able workers have come, such as Elder D. L. Shinn, who has been a father to the work in a number of places. Brother Devore was very active in establishing the work in many places in the State, and his memory is held in high esteem by the older members of the church. Brother Godby spent much time here in the missionary work of the church, and many of the Saints speak highly of his efforts. Many other elders are mentioned by the Saints as efficient workmen.

This mission has been the field of many a forensic battle. Among the defenders of the faith are mentioned Brn. Devore, Shinn, J. F. McDowell, R. M. Elvin, and others, who successfully routed their opponents. But no debates have been held in this State recently.

There have been a good many converts made to the cause in this State, and a goodly number of branches organized with large enrollments; but time has worked changes here as elsewhere, and in places where once were flourishing branches, now scarcely a member is to be found. Many have gone to Missouri, or other points in the West; others are scattered about in different points in this and other of the surrounding States, and a few have denied the faith.

This State has had its share of bitter opposition to the gospel; eggs and stones and threats have been freely used in places to hold the gospel in check. Brother Odell had his jaw broken with a stone, and others escaped with less serious injury; but the Saints have not been the only ones to feel the dire effects of bitter persecution. This fall a Holiness preacher was nearly whipped to death for preaching in the county where I am laboring at the time of this writing.

Out of the number of branches organized in this State,

Wheeling, Gleneaston, Clarksburg, and Mount Zion branches are the only ones that can be said to be in effective working order. There are four or five others that act somewhat spasmodically. The local officers, in these, are not strong in defense of the cause, and seldom get the Saints together except when a missionary comes. Some, before being visited by the writer, had not held meetings for from one to several years.

The Saints are widely scattered over the State, and for a missionary to hunt up all the scattered ones and impart to them and their neighbors the bread of life, would require his entire time for a year, and he would have little or no time to make a second visit.

There are but two missionaries this year, for this State and Virginia, except for the Panhandle of this State, which is included in the Pittsburg District. Bro. S. Brown and the writer have been able to labor but a short time together, owing to the many demands on our labors. Shinnston, Clarksburg, Cabin Run, and Indian Creek are the only places where we have been able to keep the injunction that says to go "two and two."

At Shinnston we did some street preaching which was encouraging to the Saints, and gave some an opportunity to hear the gospel that could not be reached in any other way.

At Clarksburg, the conference was held, and a time long to be remembered, by many of the Saints, was enjoyed.

The Cabin Run Saints succeeded in paying off the debt on their church and had it dedicated. Bro. D. L. Shinn and Bro. S. Brown were the principal ones in officiating. Brother Shinn preached the dedicatory sermon, Brother Brown offered the prayer and preached that afternoon and night. The writer was at Orlando at the time, attending to other duties.

At Clarksburg, the Saints are building a nice brick church that will be a credit to the cause. It is going to be a heavy burden on a few Saints, and they are surely very courageous to have undertaken it; and if more of the Saints and friends do not come up liberally to their support, there will be a grievous debt to be borne by the building committee. I hope all the Saints near there will do their full duty in the matter.

The Saints at Indian Creek have tried unsuccessfully at different times, to build a church. They have most of the material on hand and the prospects, at present, are that they will succeed in the near future. They need a church very much, as they have no access to any public building, and it is difficult to get even a private house to worship in.

I think the Saints have but four church buildings in the State, and other public buildings are seldom accessible, so that the Saints, in most places, must occupy private houses for religious purposes.

As the gospel has been presented for a good many years, in most places where there are any number of Saints, and meetings can only be held in private houses, the result is, audiences are usually small, and but few non-members will attend. This is very discouraging to the Saints and the minister, but as the members need spiritual food and a little is being accomplished in the spread of the gospel, we press on, leaving the results to the "Judge of all the earth, who will do right," and "reward all according to their works."

May the good work go on, and eternal blessings come to all the faithful, is the desire of your humble servant.

J. M. STUBBART.

BIG SPRINGS, WEST VIRGINIA, November 8.

KANSAS.

This year my appointment by the Twelve is as sub-minister in charge over the twenty-five counties in southwestern part of Kansas. It is in unorganized territory. We have new ground to work in. Since June we have been busy as we could be in our line of work.

Bro. J. C. Page has been with me from July until fore part of October, then we separated. Bro. Roy Sly, of Far West District, was sent to labor in this district, so we associated them, and they make a nice pair, and I am proud of them. They are doing good work, preaching to crowds of interested listeners near Winfield, Kansas.

We have many calls for preaching in this field, and every place we have been, excepting one, have had a fine interest. While preaching in Kearney County Brother Page and I came very near getting egged. We baptized three heads of families and Satan raged. Some eggs were brought to the schoolhouse, but our friends protected us and they were not thrown. Our friends protected us the last four nights. We believe more would have been baptized if it had not been for the excitement. Two nights we came near having a riot. Brother Page tried to reason with a professor, and the way he swung his fists I thought he was going to hit him, and the way I was falsely accused, I feel sure they were trying to get to whip me. The same spirit that crucified the Savior was there.

Brother Page and I ran out of money and we went into the alfalfa hay field and pitched hay; and we pulled broom corn and did some carpenter work to keep up our expenses. Brother Page is a fine young man, is going to do a good work, and is developing finely.

It is more expensive in this field than any I ever have labored in. I am way off from the railroad, at Brother Kramer's, preaching at their schoolhouse, full of interested listeners. Some of my mail forwarded from home has never come to me, and if any letters are unanswered, the Saints will understand why. I have answered all I have received. Bro. Charles Barmore is assisting me in the meetings, which I appreciate very much. I am enjoying a large measure of the Spirit in all my work, and while in the pulpit, under the power of the Spirit, the audiences are held spellbound.

Saints are very much scattered in this field, few and far apart. Bro. Hubert Case, I stepped over the line and held one series near Boyd, Oklahoma, by special request of Sister Dowers, whom I was acquainted with in Missouri. I hope you will forgive me.

This is a very dry country. They have good crops of their kind, great broom corn country. Milo maize and kaffir corn are the main crops, and alfalfa where they irrigate, and I have had the experience of stopping in sod houses and dug outs. This is the sandiest country I ever saw; many homesteaders here. I wished I could have been at home in Missouri, and voted dry. I am hopeful of the triumph of the angel's message.

In gospel bonds,
F. C. KECK.

Report of committee on arranging two days' meeting read, accepted, and the committee discharged. Report of committee on compiling new district record was read and accepted; and as requested, further time was granted the committee. The matter of branch organization at Indianapolis was presented, and it was moved that the district officers be authorized to organize said branch; and a substitute prevailed, that the missionary in charge be authorized to organize said branch. Report of the organization of Zion's Religio-Literary Society of district was made to conference by Bro. Charles H. Fish, president of the association. Upon motion the following named persons were chosen as delegates to the next General Conference: Jacob Halb, Edward Martin, D. H. Baggerly, John Harp, John Zahnd, Erma Zahnd, Charles H. Fish and wife, Edwin Perry, G. B. Miller, Sr. Nettie Martin, Sr. Charles F. Davis. Delegates were authorized to cast majority and minority vote. The Woodside Branch, at Clay City, Indiana, was chosen as the place for the next conference: The 7.30 hour, October 15, was given to the district Sunday school association. October 16, the meeting was called to order by Elder Jacob Halb. Upon the recommendation of the Byrneville Branch, Bro. John Harp presented the name of Bro. Charles H. Fish for ordination as an elder, and upon motion such ordination was ordered. Conference voted thanks to the Saints of Byrneville Branch for their kindness in caring for the Saints in conference. It was moved and carried that the Oriole Branch be disorganized. The various officers were sustained in their places, and a collection of $2.85 was taken up to support the district treasurer.

FLORIDA.—District conference met with the Santa Rosa Branch October 15, 1910, at 10 a. m., W. A. West presiding; O. O. Simmons, secretary; Bessie McArthur, organist; W. M. Hawkins, chorister. Ministry reporting: Elders W. A. West, B. L. Jernigan, F. M. Slover, A. Vanleave, W. J. Booker, J. W. Peterson baptized 9; Priest W. M. Hawkins, preached 8 times; Teachers Willoughby Dixon, J. G. Dixon; Deacon Mack Barnes. Bishop's agent, E. N. McCall, reported receipts 35 cents, expenditures 35 cents. Ruby McCall, district treasurer, reported receipts 25 cents. A communication from Santa Rosa Branch was read in which it was recommended that Bro. W. M. Hawkins be ordained to the office of elder. Motion prevailed that the recommendation be ratified. Motion also prevailed that E. N. McCall be ordained to the office of priest. Both ordinations were attended to during conference. Branches reporting: Santa Rosa 85, Calhoun 74, Coldwater 81. Coldwater Branch is to be the place of next conference, to be held the Saturday before the second Sunday in February, 1911. The following officers were elected: W. A. West president, E. N. McCall secretary, Ruby McCall treasurer. A motion prevailed to appoint a committee of three to look after reunion in 1911. W. A. West, W. M. Hawkins, and missionary in charge, were selected, and the committee empowered to select place and time of next reunion. O. O. Simmons, clerk.

CHATHAM, ONTARIO.—District conference convened at Wallaceburg, June 11, 12, 1910. Anthony R. Hewitt; treasurer, J. W. Badder; member library board, A. R. Hewitt; Bishop's agent, J. H. Tyrrell, was sustained. On Saturday evening, his worship, the mayor, was present and welcomed the Saints to the city. Fellowship service was in charge of Elders Leverton and Snobelen. Preaching during conference by Elders W. L. Bennett, George M. Shippy, David Smith, and Arthur Leverton. A suitable resolution of thanks was presented to Elder Leverton, the retiring president of the district. Conference adjourned to meet in Blenheim, October 9, 1910. Anthony R. Hewitt, secretary.

NODAWAY.—The Nodaway district conference convened with the Sweet Home Branch at 10 a. m., October 15, 1910. Elders E. S. Fannon and A. C. Silvers were chosen to preside over the conference. W. B. Torrance was chosen as secretary, Sr. Mae Jensen as organist, and Bro. A. C. Silvers as chorister. Brn. T. A. Ivie, J. T. Ford, and W. T. Ross were chosen to act as credentials committee. Statistical reports showed the following: Guilford 83, loss 6, by letter; Bedison 73, loss 9, by letter; Ross Grove 53, gain 5, by baptism, 2 by letter; Sweet Home 54, gain 3, by baptism. Tent fund committee reported through Brother Silvers; $10 collected, and $9.88 expended, leaving a balance of 12 cents. The balance of $36.70 of the reunion fund, which was turned to the tent fund by last conference, was not needed, so it still remains in the care of Bro. R. K. Ross, Bishop's agent. The reunion committee reported that no suitable place could be secured either in Barnard, Guilford, or Ravenwood, and the extreme dry weather and busy condition of the farmers, etc., prevented the holding of a reunion in Nodaway District. A suggestion was offered by the committee as the sense of the district that we go to the northwestern Missouri reunion. By motion the report was adopted and the committee was honorably discharged. The auditing committee filed an incomplete report with the conference. The books did not show a complete record, stubs for receipts nor all of the vouchers for moneys paid out were not present. Following the report the Bishop's agent reported as follows: On hand January 1, 1910, $86.50; received since, $309.25; total, $395.75; paid out, $404; balance due agent, $3.25. Moved that the same committee be retained another quarter to audit the Bishop's agent's books. A substitute was offered that the chairman appoint a new committee to audit the books. Substitute prevailed. Brn. A. Jensen, John T. Ford, and C. C. Nelson, were accordingly selected as this committee. Ministry reporting were: Elders A. C. Silvers, baptized 6; E. S. Fannon, T. A. Ivie, Joseph Powell, baptized 3; C. C. Nelson, J. T. Ford, R. K. Ross; Priests W. T. Ross, I. M. Ross; Deacon Robert Nelson. Bro. R. K. Ross presented to the conference a recommendation from the Ross Grove Branch to ordain Bro. John Rowlett to the office of teacher. Moved and seconded that this matter be referred to the Ross Grove Branch and the district president. Preaching during the conference was by R. K. Ross, A. C. Silvers, and E. S. Fannon. Conference adjourned to meet with the Bedison Branch, February 25, 26, 1911. W. B. Torrance, secretary.

CHATHAM, ONTARIO.—Conference convened at 10.30 a. m., in Blenheim, Ontario, District President David Snobelen calling the meeting to order, Apostle F. A. Smith was elected to preside over the conference, with the district presidency to assist. Branches reported as follows: Blenheim 49 members, loss 2; Cedar Springs 26; Chatham 205, gain 1, marriage 1; Green Valley 34; Lindsley 47, gain 8, ordination 1; Ridgetown 126; Stevenson 50, gain 8, ordination 1; Wabash 81, gain 1; Wallaceburg 67, gain 15; Zone 119, gain 4, marriage 1. Ministerial reports were read from High Priest D. Snobelen; Elders S. Lamont, R. Coburn, J. W. Badder, J. H. Tyrrell, and D. W. Johnston; and Teacher A. R. Hewitt. The district secretary reported as acting under the instructions of last conference of making a comparison of branch records and to date had covered Blenheim, Cedar Springs, Lindsley, Olive, Wabash, Wallaceburg, and partly covered Zone. The new records had been procured and the work of recopying would soon be under way. The district treasurer reported: Balance on hand last report $38.04; received since $32.55; expended $65.27; balance on hand at present $5.33. Bishop's agent reported; total receipts including balance on hand last report $801.58; expenditures $565.48; balance on hand at present $236.10. It was decided to have a reunion next year either acting in conjunction with the Toronto and London districts or to have one separate, as the presidency of the district may decide best. To get into harmony with General Conference Ruling No. 260, it was resolved, That henceforth the Bishop or his agent be the financial agent of the district. By resolution the Rising Star Branch was declared disorganized. Officers were all reelected for the coming term. The following were chosen delegates to General Conference: D. Snobelen, D. W. Johnston, J. H. Tyrrell, Arthur Leverton, Stewart Lamont, George M. Shippy, Richard Coburn, John C. Dent, A. R. Hewitt, John W. Badder, David Thorpe, Sr. Thorpe, Sarah I. Shippy, Agnes Shaw, G. Orlo Coburn, Lizzie Leverton, W. H. Taylor, Mary Vince, Elizabeth Tyrrell, Isaac Andrews, Elsie Edmunds, Mary E. Dent, Mary Dent, Apostle F. A. Smith, F. A. Smith (Essex), Leah Veale, William E. Hewitt, Thomas Vince, jr., Sr. M. A. Coburn, Charlotte Kimball, and Henry Atkinson. They were instructed in case of division to cast the majority and minority vote. By order of General conference and by consent and approval of district conference, and Bro. Stewart Lamont having stated his willingness, he was ordained to the office of High Priest by Apostle F. A. Smith, Evangelist A. Leverton, and High Priest David Snobelen. Preaching during conference by Elders G. C. Tomlinson, John Shields, F. A. Smith, and A. Leverton. Fellowship meeting Sunday morning in charge of Presidency of the conference. Conference adjourned to meet at the time and place selected by the district presidency. Anthony R. Hewitt, district secretary.

Convention Minutes.

TORONTO.—The district Religio convention met at Port Elgin, Ontario, September 30, 1910, with Vice-president J. T. Whitehead in charge. The following district officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, Floralice Miller; vice-president, J. T. Whitehead; secretary, Victoria Snell; treasurer, N. E. Leader; librarian, Will McCarthy; home class superintendent, Lizzie Morrison. Convention adjourned, leaving time and place of next convention in the hands of the executive. Victoria Snell, secretary.

CLINTON.—Sunday school association of the Clinton, Missouri, District, met in convention October 14, 1910, with district superintendent in charge. All active schools reported. Each district officer reported to the convention. The assistant superintendent, Ira W. Roberts, resigned, and his resignation was accepted. John W. Noyes, Nevada, Missouri, was elected to fill the unexpired term. A resolution concerning state wide prohibition was adopted by the association. The Sunday school known as the Rock Ridge Sunday school of Mapleton, Kansas, having an enrollment of forty-eight, was received into the association. A peaceful convention was enjoyed. Zora Lowe, secretary.

CLINTON.—Religio association of the Clinton, Missouri, District met in convention October 14, 1910, at 2.30 p. m. As president or vice-president was not permitted to attend the convention, Pleas Budd was chosen to preside over the session. The regular business of the convention was transacted. Miss Jessie E. Higdon, of Fort Scott, Kansas, was elected as home department superintendent. Zora Lowe, secretary.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.—The first district convention of Zion's Religio-Literary Society for the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District, met with the Saints at Lansing, Michigan, October 21, at 10 a. m. The district president, Bro. Ralph McElhennie, called the meeting to order, after which he was chosen to preside over the convention. Four locals reported, viz: Blissfield, Galien, Coldwater, and Clear Lake. The reports showed a total membership of 103. There were two locals having home department classes; viz, Coldwater, 11 members; Clear Lake, 8. Bro. S. W. L. Scott read a paper on the critical periods through which the Bible has passed. Another paper was read, showing the difference in the rendering of certain passages of Isaiah, between the King James' Version of the Bible and the Book of Mormon. Sr. Lou Sinclair sang a solo. Should there be other locals in the district not represented at the conventions, please notify the secretary and blanks will be supplied for reporting. Let us be prompt and accurate in keeping our records. Adjourned to meet at Clear Lake one day previous to district conference. Mrs. Elsie Lockerby, district secretary, Coldwater, Michigan.

Died.

WINE.—Samuel Wine was born May 23, 1826, in Rockingham County, Virginia, and baptized July 1, 1889, at Mount Sidney, Augusta County, Virginia, by James Moler; he died March 29, 1910, at Seawright Springs, Augusta County, Virginia. Sermon by Peter Barber, of the Dunkard Church, as no elder of the Latter Day Saints could be had. He lived a Saint and died in the faith.

ANDERSON.—Margaret Anderson died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Helen Peterson, Ellsworth, Iowa, October 8, 1910, aged 81 years, and 23 days. Deceased was born September 15, 1829, at Nestrán, Norway. With her parents she emigrated to America in 1846. Her maiden name was Gunnerson. Her parents located near the present site of Danway, LaSalle County, Illinois. Margaret Gunnerson was united in marriage to Ener Anderson June 23, 1847; to this union were born eleven children, six of whom are now living. Andrew H., and Jeremiah, live in the town of Miller, LaSalle County, Illinois; Cornelius resided at Riverside, California; and William, the youngest, at Ellsworth, Iowa. The daughters, Mrs. Martha Hanson, resides at McCallsburg, and Mrs. Margaret Peterson at Ellsworth, Iowa. Two brothers also survive her, Fulton Gunnerson, Riverside, California, and Gunner Gunnerson, Hershee, Illinois. "Grandma" Anderson leaves thirty-two grandchildren and twenty-nine great-grandchildren. She was a firm believer in the Christian religion, and in her earlier life affiliated with the Lutheran Church. In later years she was associated with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Through the strength of her moral fiber and her faith in God the world was made better by her having lived. She was buried from the Latter Day Saints' chapel, Mission, Illinois, October 14, 1910. Funeral services were in charge of Elder Thomas Hougas. The sermon was preached by Elder F. M. Cooper, of Plano, Illinois.

REYNOLDS.—William H. Reynolds was born in Conquest, New York, October 1, 1827. He was married to Mary Jane Corless, May 17, 1854. Two sons were born to them, May 26, 1864. He united with the Latter Day Saints' Church and was ordained an elder June 2, 1864. He was chosen to be first president of the Coldwater, Michigan, Branch. He died at his home October 13, 1910, aged 83 years. His wife and eldest son preceded him in death. He was a devoted Christian to the end. Sermon by Elder Samuel Stroh, assisted by Rev. R. D. Freeman.

Apple Growers Attention

Read what Professor Aven Nelson, State Horticulturist of the State of Wyoming, says regarding

The Big Horn Basin Country

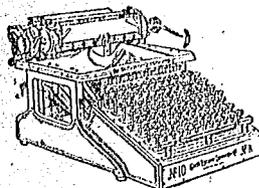

"I beg to state that my visit of inspection to the fruit section of the Big Horn Basin was exceedingly satisfactory. The orchards that I visited along the Big Horn River are in full fruit, even this year. I regard the outlook for the lands along the river from Worland to the Canyon and the lower course of the Shoshone from Cowley to Ionia as exceedingly promising. My observation leads me to believe that these lands will become as valuable for the production of high grade apples as even the best of those in Idaho and Montana. Shell Creek this year was certainly a surprise to anyone who visited the locality. I think anyone would be justified in predicting that these lands will very shortly become more valuable for fruit than for any other crop that might be grown." Such expert opinion as the above, given by an unprejudiced State official, should have weight with those looking for orchard lands. WRITE TO-DAY for our illustrated literature and you will be surprised how cheaply these choice apple lands can be purchased.

LAMONI, IOWA, NOVEMBER 30, 1910

NUMBER 48

Editorial

A BIRTHDAY GREETING.

On the evening of Friday, November 11, a number of the Saints, friends of Pres. Joseph Smith, gathered at his home, 1214 West Short street, Independence, Missouri, in a kind of afterthought reception and birthday greeting, he having attained his seventy-eighth birthday on Sunday, November 6. They began coming at 7.30 in the evening, and kept coming and going until some one hundred and more had been present.

The evening was a delightful one in more than one way. The air was pleasant and balmy without, and the atmosphere of friendship, love, and deep-felt esteem was within the rooms where this assembly was gathered.

The affair was under the management of Sr. Eva Short, wife of Bro. Ellis Short, who gave notice of the gathering, and issued a hurried invitation to many nearby neighbors and associates in faith with President Smith, which met with a cordial response, resulting in a very gratifying and entertaining visit to the one whom they sought to honor, in thus gathering at his home.

The services, aside from the handshaking and usual congratulations by the individual members present, were in charge of Bro. Myron H. Bond, of the Stake Presidency, who at a proper moment called the assembly to quiet, the buzz of conversation ceased, and stillness ensued, when the following poem by Dr. Joseph Luff and the address of congratulation by Brother Bond were read, to which President Smith responded as given below.

The event closed by the singing of two hymns, "I know that my Redeemer lives," and that plaintive, prayerful, "Father, when in love to thee," and a short but impressive good-night prayer by President Smith. These beautiful hymns were sung effectively under the lead of Sr. Wallace N. Robinson, the choir leader of our people at the Central Kansas City Church. It is unnecessary to name those who were present, but it is only fair to presume that these gave expression to the feelings of the entire membership at Independence and Kansas City. Long live Pres. Joseph Smith, who though suffering somewhat from the increasing weight of years, still retains his cheerfulness and good will toward his fellow-men, and especially those engaged in the Master's work.

The purse referred to in Brother Bond's address was delivered at the close of his speech.

ONE WHO WAS PRESENT.

POEM BY DR. JOSEPH LUFF.

What is here in sight
Is only a mite,

And, perhaps, would the scales hardly turn,
But what is behind it
(Though lens might not find it)

We leave for your heart to discern.

The motive impelling
Must fail in the telling,

For (unless it be mansions above)
No place hath the mold
That can shape or unfold

The ample dimensions of love.

Read, then, brother dear,
'Twixt the lines that appear,
And accept this diminutive token
As a suggestion merely
Of what we sincerely
Feel—the volume unspoken.

ADDRESS OF BRO. MYRON O. BOND.

To President Joseph Smith: By those having the matter in charge we have been selected to offer you, in behalf of your brethren and sisters in church association and fellowship, your neighbors and friends, a brief statement or address by which we may in our own poor way express to you our appreciation and estimate of yourself, as a man of God, chosen of God, and indorsed by his people as the chief elder and leader of his people, a revealer of the will of God to his church; one who has served God and the people long and well; one who "when the enemy came in like a flood" to overthrow the pure standard of the gospel of the Son of God, the cause of truth and humanity found in you a sufficient and courageous defendant of the message from the angel world first delivered to this generation by your illustrious father, whose favor must augment as the coming years and generations of men will demonstrate in its repetition of history, that that which is great and lasting and permanent in human affairs is not begotten or born or reared to its final accomplishment in a day or a year.

We are all filled with a sense of the profound significance of the calling and mission of your father and yourself, and we feel sure that honors now withheld by the sons of men and of men of the world will yet be accorded and recorded in future history to the man and his legitimate successor, the worthy son of a noble sire, men who have offered to the generation in which they lived the priceless boon of absolute religious liberty and freedom untrammelled by the craft, cunning, or ignorance of men, or the subtle doctrine of devils.

We are glad to-night, President Smith, and expect to be always, and more glad in the coming years, to have had the honor of calling you brother and friend; for, with gratitude and a measure at least of appreciation do we record to ourselves the fact that not in the spirit of autocratic assumption of the rights belonging to your high office in God's church and among his people have you ruled among us; but, on the contrary, with forbearance, long-suffering, in the humility with which the divine imitation of Jesus Christ finds so large an exposition in your life work, we have found in you a friend to the friendless; a defendant of the weak and defenseless; quick in your sympathies in answer to the call of distress; a servant of God, and for all the people.

But, President Smith, and Brother Joseph, we are pressed somewhat in what might be an otherwise and altogether joyous occasion, by a spirit of sadness which we may not altogether restrain, as we contemplate with sorrow the patent truth that we can not hold you always among us; but we are really anxious that you should be made to know and feel, while you are yet with us, how much and by what strong ties you have attached yourself to us. We shall all be very sorry and very sad, all of us who remain behind in the struggle and fight for truth, when you are called from us, to go away from us. But the blessedness of memory of yourself and our relations together as workers in so glorious a cause, a cause so profoundly and strongly entrenched in God's eternal and unchangeable truth, must be our consolation; and the anticipated associations in the great future with the general assembly of the church of the First-born and the hosts of the redeemed through the blood of the covenant revealed to us by the will and power of Almighty God in our day and generation that gives us sure anchorage for our hope in the wisdom and province of God for all the races of man.

And now in a closing word, and as a feeble expression of the truth of what we have said or may say, we want you to accept this purse of money for uses such as your thought and wish may suggest, and from your friends and brothers and sisters of Independence, and with prayer for your health, comfort, and a life prolonged to the limit of God's good pleasure and will concerning you and yours, and all of his people.

RESPONSE BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

Words are but the outward symbol of what may be in the mind and heart, and a celebrated French writer has said that language was invented for the purpose of concealing thoughts rather than revealing them. I have prized exceedingly, not the wealth of the world nor the praise of the world, and I have never feared, consciously, its frown or its antagonism; but the wealth of regard of those with whom the words honor, virtue, integrity, faithfulness, and steadfastness of purpose were of value, recognized of value, and not subject to shift or change to suit the unworthy burdens which men in their criminality choose to carry. It is this that makes me prize this assembly to-night, having attained the years to which I have come.

I regret my infirmity more, that I can not see the new faces with whom I am being surrounded from year to year. The old ones I can recall. They live in my memory, and it is with gratitude to God to-night, that as I regard your presence here I remember one of the mottoes with which I undertook my public work—it is suggested by the words anciently written: "Remember the quarry whence thou wast hewn, the pit whence thou wast digged." No man is well prepared to live and work among his fellows who is not willing to share the foothold on which he stands, to any who work with him, who are associated with him on equal terms.

No man is worthy to stand among his fellows as a worker who is not prepared to give every man his just due. And in this spirit I have tried to remember in my public career, my brother as my friend. He may differ from me in opinion, but he is my brother; and notwithstanding he may differ from me, associated in the cause and moved by the Spirit, he is my friend. I have no wish, no business to hurt his sense of friendship, or to throw doubt or stigma upon his work and his integrity.

Thank God, I have proved many of these friends. I know them. I may never see the faces of some of them here, but if God is willing, I will meet them hereafter. No man's merit, established by himself, is to be the criterion by which he shall be judged by and by. It must be that his merit will be determined by one greater than he. And fortunate is it for me, fortunate will it be for many, if He judges me leniently; and for this reason, I could not afford, nor can I now, to judge my associates harshly.

I thank you more than I can express, as much perhaps as you have expressed in your language to me, that which you have done for me—above all the motive that lieth beneath. I remember a favorite quotation by our whilom brother, Zenos H. Gurley:

"Cruel and cold are the judgments of man,

Cruel as winter, cold as the snow;

But, by and by, will the deed and the plan

Be judged by the motive that lieth below."

May God help us that we may be so judged and continue steadfastly forward. I had hoped that the prophecy might be fulfilled that I should live to see the name of Latter Day Saint made honorable. Thank God I have lived to see that day, to perceive it, to acknowledge it before God, and to be assured of it in the midst of my brethren. When I go, I hope, I trust, I believe that it will be but the sinking of a pebble in the wave, lost for a time, but that the currents will move just as smoothly, the surface unruffled, the work accomplished as God has intended it shall be done, though thousands perish, those who remain unmoved, immovable, steadfast, to the honor of God and the glory of his Son.

May peace rest with you all, is my prayer. Amen.

AMERICA.

It was not a mere accidental fact that for numbers of succeeding centuries this Western Hemisphere was withheld from the eye of civilization. In a sense profoundly true it was up to four centuries ago a virgin continent—an untraveled land—and in the then bringing it within reach of civilization there was some purpose, which will be accomplished. If I should state in a single sentence that which seems to me the great purpose, it would be that here was to be developed a society and a government based upon the brotherhood of man. All through the Eastern Hemisphere, during its centuries of struggle, the underlying political facts had been the rule of a chief or king, and the organization of tribe or nation on the selfish basis of personal interests. Each nation lived for itself, prosecuted wars with other states and nations to satisfy the ambition of its rulers or to promote its selfish interests. The idea of humanity, bound by any obligation of any of its members to all the rest, was a thing unknown in practical life and almost unmentioned in the theories of social philosophers. In consequence, everything was determined by the mere matter of might. Ignorance and superstition prevailed. The great masses of humanity were the spoil and prey of a few individuals. Government of and by the people was a thing undreamed of. But about the time of the discovery of America came the invention of printing, which opened the doors of knowledge to all. The Bible was unchained and with it the bondage of superstition was thrown off. The common people began to assert themselves and claim the right to control their own government and society. There was fluttering through the world the ever-growing thought of personal, political, social, and religious liberty. It is not strange that as this continent was settled, and social and political conditions were established, a republic, the common school, and the free Bible became the recognized rules and bases of life. All these are significant of and affirm the brotherhood of man.

Another thing which affirms the same is the mingling of races. The allegory of the dispersion of Babel presaged the national life of the Old World. During all that life the human family lived in isolated and antagonistic races and nations. It still remains there the significant fact. You go to China, and the Chinese have monopolized that country; into Spain and only Spaniards are found. In France and Germany are French and Germans. Single races form not merely the numerical majority, but they are, if not the sole inhabitants, the controlling factors. Locally every race held to its own place on the face of the globe and maintained its isolated life. But this republic is a new experience. We have every year and for a century past have had great streams of population flowing in from every race, the Anglo-Saxon, the Frenchman, the Teuton, the Scandinavian, the Italian, the Japanese, the Chinese and the Ethiopian. They have gathered here not merely as visitors or travelers, but to stay and become citizens. The dispersion which began at Babel has ended on the banks of the Hudson and the Mississippi. All races are mingled in our citizenship, a conglomeration of heterogeneous elements, but all part and parcel of the life of the republic, here to live and work out with us the destiny of this nation. Statistics illustrate the significance of this: By the census of 1900 the total population was seventy-six millions, of which nine millions were colored. Of the other sixty-seven millions ten millions were of foreign birth and sixteen millions more of foreign parentage. So that out of the sixty-seven million whites there were only forty-one millions of native parentage, and they, as we all know, trace their ancestry back, at longer or shorter distances, to the several races of the Old World. These heterogeneous elements are to fuse into one national American life. By association in work, in business, in political life, in the schoolroom, and a little through inter-racial marriages, the brotherhood of man finds its best illustrations in American life. The Bible, which is the great American book, affirms the unity of the race, proclaims the brotherhood of man.—Hon. David J. Brewster, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, before New State Association, Atlantic City, June 12, 1909.

TUDY AND PREPARATION.

One of our correspondents, Sr. A. McKenzie, of Saint Clair, Michigan, contributes the following words of advice, that if heeded will be of especial value to our young people:

There is looming upon the horizon of the not far distant future, the outlines of a great drama, the actors in which in the nature of things, come from the auxiliary societies of the church. This great work will require preparation and study to be successful, success will not follow a poorly prepared part. The door of opportunity stands wide open, great responsibility rests upon each and every one in this work, and much will depend upon the amount of preparation now being made. A patient, painstaking effort in study is required to be successful in any line of work, then how much more is preparation necessary in a work of such great proportions.

Those who will be called upon to take a part in this great arena will not be those who keep posted on the latest score of the baseball game, or the latest freaks in fashions, but those who prepare themselves by reading and study. The Lord is looking for such and has a watchful eye on them and when the time comes they will be in demand. Lukewarm Saints are not at a premium in this work. They can never accomplish anything. What the Lord is looking for is Saints who are filled with celestial fire, who are fearless and faithful and can be depended upon in an emergency.

This is a work of progress. Onward is the word, and it is of the highest importance to make ourselves acquainted with all that is good in literature. We are commanded "to obtain a knowledge of history and of countries and of kingdoms, of laws of God and man, and all this for the salvation of Zion." It is vain for us to try to meet the prejudice of the world with ignorance; the Lord knew this when he said that knowledge of history and laws was for the "salvation of Zion."

Again, he said "Study out of the best books words of wisdom." The fullest knowledge available is necessary to meet the prejudice of the world. There are many departments being formed in this work for advancement and filled with busy, successful workers. There never was a time in the history of our church when so many avenues were open to the worker, and no Saint who aspires to become a factor for usefulness in this work can afford to neglect the church publications.

Consecration is what we need to enable us to "come up higher." Cultivation of talents for God's work. The world has no temptations alluring to the Saints with this one object fixed firmly in his mind; he has no time to waste, his thoughts are on eternal things. We can not afford to neglect the pursuit of knowledge. Knowledge is power, and there is no limitation to the number of subjects for study in the great universe of God.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Herald Publishing House wishes to call the attention of all purchasers of books to the fact that number 179 in Herald Publishing House catalogue has been changed in price. This book is now $3.50. Number 155 is now $2.90. In addition to this change in your catalogue note that number 179½ (new) is a better grade Bible, price $5.00.

The Saints will please take note that Bro. Hale W. Smith has been released from the missionary force and is now engaged as a traveling representative of the Herald Publishing House. Brother Smith is working for the Herald Publishing House on the same basis as a missionary. He gets no salary, and we commend him to the Saints wherever he goes. Brother Smith will take subscriptions for all church papers and also orders for books and job work, both in printing and binding.

One does not need to make a great show of fighting sin in order to be on his guard against it. Those who talk most about the evils of dishonesty are not always the safest persons to deal with. It has been said of Paoli, the French Republic's official guardian of visiting kings, by a writer who described him in McClure's Magazine, that, "his art was always to appear ignorant of the fact that there were anarchists in the world, while at the same time keeping the strictest watch upon them." Those members of Christ's Kingdom who are keeping the strictest and most successful watch against sin in their own lives, and who are doing the most to guard others from its attacks, work in the same way. They talk little about it; they watch and pray much. Their conversation is of a healthy, whole-souled, sunshiny sort, interested in the interests of others, not dwelling on the sin-darkened gloom of life. But they are sensitive and instantly alert to the actual approach of sin, and rigid in opposing its entrance or attack when the time comes. Paoli never carried a weapon,—of the ordinary police sort. It was hard for the King of Siam, for whose safety in France Paoli was responsible, to understand this. "But where are your weapons?" the king repeatedly asked. Paoli's weapons were of a more effective sort than revolvers, daggers, or bluster; they were weapons of intellect, foresight, planning, and knowledge. The Christian's weapons of faith and prayer do not impress the world very much, and they are quiet and unseen in their working; but they have never been known to fail.—Sunday School Times.

Endurance is a high test of character. To keep up and keep on; to stand up under pressure; to bear strain without giving way,—these are the marks of the kind of strength that counts for largest service. The woman who can take care of her several little children and her sick husband and helpless father-in-law all day long, day after day, and then appear at a formal dinner in faultless attire and with cheerful words for everyone, and not one word about her burdens, has character marked by an endurance that the hardiest athlete might envy. The man in business who braces his energies against the onset of almost unbearable shocks of disappointment, and pushes on and on, never yielding to the tugging grip of discouragement, shows character by his endurance in toil and struggle. It is not that these brave souls rise to the occasion, perform sudden feats of strength, do brilliant work for a single shining hour. But day after day, week in and week out, endurance is the habit, the atmosphere of their steadfast duty-doing. Character has not met its severest test until it has proved its ability to endure.—Sunday School Times.

Hymns and Poems

PATIENCE.

I must learn to love the gall,
Knowing sweet is not for all;
Not my will but thine be done
Till a crown of life I've won.

I must learn to face disaster
With that courage of my Master;
If he wills me trials and pain,
I should bear and not complain.

I must learn that greatest pleasure
Comes to him who bears his measure
Of earth's hardships with least shrinking
From the bitter cup he's drinking.
Patient I through life should run,
Worshiping the Patient One.

LEONARD S. RHODES.

A CLOSING HYMN.

Author of every good, once more before we part
We raise to Thee our voice in song, a tribute from the heart.
We praise Thy wondrous name for gospel light restored,
Through all the world let Thy great name be honored and adored.

With pleasure we have met with those we love so dear,
But more than all the joys of earth we've met Thy Spirit here,

Bless Thou with richest grace, the message from Thy word,
May every waiting Saint that's here with holy zeal be stirred.

Guard us from every ill, until we meet again,
Let Thy pure Spirit still be near to comfort and sustain,
Guide safely through life's maze, then take us home to Thee,
To bask in radiance divine, through all eternity.

THE ABOVE POEM'S PLEA.

I am a new born hymnlet, and not so very long,
The height of my ambition is, to praise the Lord in song.
Will some L. D. S. musician who these lines may chance to see Take pity on my ignorance and make a tune for me.

Elders' Note-Book

"HE HATH NOT LEFT HIMSELF WITHOUT WITNESSES."

In our labors we have many times been made to rejoice because of the goodness of God and the plainness of his law, and during the last month we were confronted with a new question to us, one that had never in our labor before been asked. Thinking others might be confronted with the same kind of a question I furnish it here with the answer we gave and the evidence supporting our answer.

We had been speaking on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and giving evidences both scriptural and scientific to support it, and as we gave opportunity for questions an old gentleman asked: "How many tribes remained at Jerusalem under Rehoboam, and who were they when the other portion of the tribes followed Jeroboam to Samaria." Of course we answered, two tribes, Judah and Benjamin. The question then came quickly: "Now you have stated that the Nephites left Jerusalem about 600 B. C., and that the Nephites were descendants of Manasseh, and I believe you so read from the Book of Mormon. Now since the ten tribes were carried captive by Shalmaneser about 721 B. C., and only Judah and Benjamin remained, how could the descendants of Joseph or Manasseh be at Jerusalem in the year 600 B. C., when they had been carried away at least one hundred and twenty-one years before? This proves your Book of Mormon a fraud."

Answer. There was a remnant of the tribe of Manasseh still at Jerusalem. Proof. In the days of the good King Hezekiah, a proclamation was sent to all Judah and Israel to come to Jerusalem and celebrate the feast, and worship the God of their fathers; and while the text informs us that the majority of Israel treated it lightly I read this statement: "Nevertheless divers of Asher and Manasseh and of Zebulun humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem."—2 Chronicles 30:11. Here is a plain statement that Manasseh or a part of his tribe at least, returned to Jerusalem about five years before the captivity of Shalmaneser, and if we turn to the works of Flavius Josephus, Antiquities of the Jews, book 9, chapter 13, paragraph 2, we read this:

"However, many there were of the tribe of Manasseh, who were obedient to what the prophets exhorted them to do, and returned to the worship of God. Now all these came running to Jerusalem, to Hezekiah, that they might worship God (there)."

So that we not only have the Bible, but the History of Josephus also, to bear witness to the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. Surely there is no weapon that is formed against it can prosper. The Lord has been true to his promises and he has not left himself without witnesses.

May the honest hearted be brought to the light and truth is my prayer. J. E. VANDERWOOD.

AS I SEE IT.

After reading and rereading Bro. C. Ed. Miller's article in the HERALD of November 2, upon the subject of the woman (which was the church), as referred to in the 12th chapter of John's revelations, I will give my views upon the same subject, for what they are worth; as Brother Miller said, they may seem to be heresy to some.

"And there appeared a great sign in heaven in the likeness of things on the earth; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars."—Revelation 12:1, Inspired Translation. John surely saw in heaven the things that would be transacted upon the earth; John tells us that the woman (church) went into the wilderness; let us see if we can not find out what is meant by the term wilderness, and where it is located.

Look to Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, and you will see that the only definition that can be applied to this term, as here used, is disorder. We see that the church went into disorder. Where did she go? To a place that God had prepared for her in this world; for it is written that the world did help her. Any person can see that if she went to heaven, that the world could not help her.

How long was she to remain in the wilderness? Twelve hundred and sixty-three years, says the Inspired Version.

I will now call your attention for a brief period to the man child that the woman was pained to be delivered of. This man child was Jesus Christ, that pained the church so badly to deliver him up; he it is that will rule the nations with a rod of iron. Yes, when the kingdom is established that Daniel saw, as it is recorded in the 2d chapter and 44th verse of the prophecy of Daniel. After Christ's ascension he sent the Holy Ghost to occupy his position in the church; his church. "There are save it be two churches, one is the church of the Lamb and the other is the church of the Devil"; they both exist at the same time here on earth. So the war is on now, between right and wrong.

We see that after the woman fled into the wilderness, the kingdoms that Daniel saw in vision were to materialize on the earth; and by reference to Daniel 9:7 and following verses (Inspired Translation), we learn that Michael or ancient of days is to come before the advent of Christ, and there is to be a great battle fought by him and his associates and the wicked, and the judgment is to be set; and then Christ will come and reign, from the rivers to the end of the earth. We see that the dragon will not prevail against Michael, nor the woman, nor the man child.

I have passed over the ground occupied by the church, and will be until the final triumph over all that it is opposed to.

I will now notice the claims of a number of the elders as to the man child referred to in Revelation 12. As Brother Miller said in his article, I do not believe as many do, in this matter. I will now proceed to give my reason for not believing as some of the elders do. It is claimed that the man child was and is the priesthood of God, and that he took it from the church about the year 570, and it was restored in the year 1830; while I have read this position without numbering the times, for the last twenty-five years; yet I have never seen it proven by the Holy Scriptures or reliable history. We are to prove all things, and hold fast the good. If the man child is the priesthood of God, when it was taken from the church, there was no authority left in the church or out of it, in all the world, to teach the gospel and administer the ordinances; for a period of twelve hundred and sixty years; the whole world was turned over to the Devil exclusively; no one in the whole world could hear, believe, or obey the gospel or God's law, for the very good reason that he had no representative in all the world. It seems to me that any person of common sense can see that the people had no law in operation; and a law without an executor is equal to no law; Paul said where there is no law there is no transgression, and of course there could be no condemnation; then all that lived in that period, were saved; for they all lived and died without a knowledge of God's law. After the man child was taken from the church, she went into the wilderness (confusion or disorder). Brother Miller says she went to heaven, to remain for twelve hundred and sixty years; afterward she came back to earth again. John the revelator said while she was in the wilderness the earth helped her; I can not see how the earth could help her while she remained in heaven. I understand that she was in the wilderness (in disorder) here on the earth all these twelve hundred and sixty years; and at the end of that period she was to come out of the wilderness. Some say that Christ did not have a church on earth for 1260 years, but as for me, I can not see how the church could be, and not be, at the same time; I can not see how the church could go into the wilderness and remain 1260 years, and then come out and not be in existence all the time; if any person can show me how anything can be, and not be, at the same time he will show me something I have never seen.

Yours for truth,

E. W. NUNLEY.

LOYALTY.

Loyalty: faithful to plighted love and duty.—Webster.

In this paper the writer wishes to call the reader's attention to the important events of the very near future as foretold by the spirit of prophecy, and endeavor to point out the great need and the importance of being loyal to each other so that we might the more successfully carry on the "marvelous work and a wonder."

From Doctrine and Covenants section 45, paragraphs 2 (latter part), 3, and 4, we glean the following: It represents Christ as telling the church of to-day what he told his disciples when he was with them during his ministry with them in Jerusalem. They wanted to know the signs of his coming. They were deeply concerned about it, and one reason that seemed uppermost in their minds was that they looked upon the long separation of their spirits from their bodies as a bondage; they were looking forward to an early death, at least some of them, and the thought of being so long away from their beloved Master bore heavily on them. He told them he would show them how the day of redemption would come and also about the restoration of Israel. The enemies of Christ and his disciples, they were specially the Pharisees, said the temple would not fall. He said desolation would come on them as a thief in the night, which came to pass when Jerusalem was besieged and captured by the Roman army in A. D. 70.

He told them the temple would be destroyed, and in that generation the Jews would see every desolation fulfilled that he had told them about. He told them a remnant would be scattered among all nations and that they would be gathered again, but it would not take place until the times of the Gentiles would be fulfilled. Wars and rumors of wars, and commotion and distress among the nations would precede, and be when the Gentiles' times came in.

When the times of the Gentiles were come in a light would break forth among them, and it would be the fullness of the gospel, and it would not be received, which is a well-known fact after eighty years of missionary work. It is an easy matter to locate the time when the "times of the Gentiles would come in." It could not have been later than 1830; that is the year when the church was organized, and from that time the fullness of the gospel was preached.

In Luke 21: 32 in the Inspired Translation, we are told as follows: "Verily I say unto you, this generation, the generation when the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, shall not pass away till all be fulfilled." That fixes the time very definitely when the work of Christ, as it affects this present generation, will be finished, and he will come to his people. The generation in which the Jews as a nation were destroyed was seventy years, reckoning from the birth of Christ. The four generations which Paul referred to in connection with the children of Israel in Egyptian bondage averaged $107\frac{1}{2}$ years. The four generations of Nephite history when they were destroyed as a nation was 384 years, or an average of 96 years. It is now 80 years since the church was organized, and taking the greatest number of years for a generation, $107\frac{1}{2}$, it would leave only $27\frac{1}{2}$ years to complete the generation when all things would be fulfilled.

Christ taught that no man would know the day or the hour when he would come, but the three books give us a great deal of light, so that we can know when the day is "nigh at hand" and "even at the door." (Doctrine and Covenants 34: 4.) "Those who treasure up his word will not be deceived."

Having approximated the time in which the work is to be accomplished, we will now notice the very important things that are to happen in that seeming short time. In Doctrine and Covenants 87: 3, 4, we have outlined the magnitude of the missionary work. The "word is to go forth unto the ends of the earth," to the "Gentiles first," as we have been sending it for eighty years. After going to the Gentiles, "Lo, they shall turn unto the Jews."

Two years ago at General Conference in a prayer meeting in a tongue and prophecy given by Bro. J. W. Wight, it was said, "the time is near at hand when the gospel will go to the seed of Abraham." When this event takes place the revelation says, "then cometh the day when the arm of the Lord shall be revealed in power" in convincing the nations, the heathen nations, the house of Joseph, (Indians) of the gospel of their salvation. The people are to hear it in their own tongue and language. How is this great work to be accomplished? Paragraph 4 says "by the administration of the Comforter, shed forth upon them, for the revelation of Jesus Christ."

The history of the past tells us what followed the bestowal of the Holy Spirit upon the ministry of the people. On the day of Pentecost, Peter's great sermon, accompanied by the power of God's Spirit, converted three thousand. In the fourth chapter of Acts an account of Peter's preaching and persecution is given, which resulted in five thousand converts. In Helaman 2: 80-82 (authorized edition of Book of Mormon) an account of the preaching of Nephi and Lehi is recorded, in which the Spirit of God was given in great power and eight thousand were baptized. A conservative estimate of the average number of baptisms in the church from 1830 to 1844 is about one thousand per month. If we have any doubts in our mind about the success of the work it is because of a lack of faith, for the history of the past abundantly proves that God is able and does his work according to his promises.

Another important event is the building up of Zion, of the success of which some seem to be doubtful. Moses, with God's assistance, led nearly three million Hebrews out of Egyptian bondage to the promised land. The promise to us in this day is that, "I will raise up unto my people a man who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel," and the promise is further made that "mine angels shall go before you, and also my presence, and in time ye shall possess the goodly land." (Doctrine and Covenants 100: 3.) Where is there room for doubt with these facts and promises before us? It can only come from a lack of faith in God, and that kind of a person can do but very little to advance the work intrusted to our care. If there is any man or set of men in the way of the accomplishment of the work before us, God will find a way to remove them so his work will not be hindered.

In 1831 (Doctrine and Covenants 57: 1) the Lord said the land of Missouri was the place he had appointed and consecrated for the gathering of his Saints; he said it was the land of promise and the place for the city of Zion, the place for the temple. The Saints were commanded to purchase all the land west of Independence to a certain designated line. In 1833 the Saints were driven out of Jackson County by the mob, and went north across the river into Clay County. In December, 1833, (Doctrine and Covenants 98: 1-4,) the Lord said he permitted the Saints to be afflicted because of their transgressions, and at the same time he comforted them with the thought that Zion would not be moved out of her place. Her children would be scattered, but after many days (verse 8) they and their children would return and build up the waste places. Where would the waste places be? In Jackson County? That is where they were driven from, so while there are other places where they afterward suffered a like fate, it is certain that that is one of the places appointed for the return of the Saints. It further says there is none other place appointed than that which he had appointed, and would not be until there was need for more room, and then he would enlarge the territory, and then purchases would be made in the regions round about Jackson County, as stated in Doctrine and Covenants 98: 9.

Because of the persecutions of the Saints the work of the Lord was temporarily hindered, and so that we need have no room for doubt as to his purposes. He has revived by command all that was contemplated in the past, which is very clearly set forth in Doctrine and Covenants 122: 6. The salvation of his people, the gathering, the temple, and the city of Zion are all to be realized according to his promises, and it must be accomplished during this generation. There is one class of people that are to be very prominent in this latter day work. They appear so insignificant in the eyes of the public that it seems as if sometimes we have forgotten the promises concerning them. I refer to the Indians. There are about 100,000 in Oklahoma; in all the States west of the Missouri River the aggregate number is many thousands; all of whom have come under the influence of civilization, and most of them have had the advantages of education. They are not confined to our own nation. Canada, Mexico, and South America have many who are among the advanced thinkers of our day, occupying positions of influence in their respective countries.

The promises of God to the Indians are very great, as found recorded in the Book of Mormon. In Jacob 2:56 the Lord said he would not destroy them; he would extend his mercy to them because they had kept sacred their marriage vows, and the promise is that "one day they shall become a blessed people." In 3 Nephi 10:1, 2, 3, and Ether 6:6, 7, 8, we are told they shall help in the building of the city New Jerusalem. That city is to be in Zion (Doctrine and Covenants 57:1). It is reasonable then to expect that many of the Indians will accept the gospel and will be gathered among their white brethren. We will have them as neighbors, and it is quite certain that history will repeat itself. In former times when they were converted to Christ they became examples to their white brethren. They will perhaps give us examples in the simple life, how to live without being carried away with the vanities and frivolities of the world; show us how to pay tithing, and consecrate of their surplus to accomplish God's great work. Perhaps they will make us feel somewhat ashamed to see a class of people one generation removed from savagery, surpass us in those things that go to make up the character of a true disciple of Christ.

From these facts, gleaned from the scripture, it is very evident that there lies before us in the near future the accomplishment of the greatest work ever committed to the human race, and it must be accomplished in God's way or it will prove a dismal failure, so far as we are concerned; for if we are not willing to do the work we will be pushed aside and some one else found to take our place. While it is enjoined upon us to give faithful support to those who have charge of the work (Doctrine and Covenants 122:1, 2, 3) as leaders, and the same spirit should extend to the branches and auxiliaries, there is at this time a special need of loyal support to the bishopric. We are entering into a transition period which will result in a gradual change of our social and economic conditions, and to juggle the boat means an upset and disaster. It must not be that blind, fanatical loyalty that comes from ignorance and fear, but that which springs from a heart imbued with the thought that order and system is God's way of doing things, and where wrongs exist they must be removed in a lawful and orderly way.

In Doctrine and Covenants 128:2, 3 we are told that this special line of work belongs to the bishopric, and in consultation with others of the eldership they would be "guided by the spirit of wisdom and revelation to do the work intrusted to their care." In Doctrine and Covenants 129:8 the Lord admonished the Saints as follows: "The church has been directed to accede to the rendition of the bishopric with respect to the temporal law; and until such heed is paid to the word which has been given, and which is in accordance with other revelations given to the church which had been before given, the church can not receive and enjoy the blessings which have been looked for, when Zion should be fully redeemed." What kind of a charge would an army of soldiers make if one bugler sounded the charge, another retreat, and another the sick call, and still another, breakfast? Had such calls been made at Gettysburg the high tide of the civil war, our Nation, our beloved Union, would not exist as it does to-day.

The Bishop has sounded the call for a forward move in the redemption of the land of Zion by purchase, so that homes may be found for our people and industries established to give employment to the hands that toil, and farms for the husbandman to feed the many thousands that will yet be gathered to the promised land. When elders or others sound the call, "Come to this locality; we have land for $10 per acre"; "Come to this country, we have orange groves and perpetual summer," they create confusion and hinder the work of the building up of Zion. While every Saint has the right to live in this broad land wherever he chooses, if they want to help build up God's work they must work according to his plan, which says "they are to consult with the elders and bishops before removing into those regions" (Doctrine and Covenants 128:4).

I once heard a sister say, "Why, my husband is a business man, and the idea of him consulting the Bishop about moving into Zion is ridiculous." Her husband might have been very wise in worldly wisdom, but Paul tells us (1 Corinthians 1:20): "Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" What do we want to go to Zion for? Is it simply to be where there is a large number of Saints, so that we can worship where there is a large branch? If that is our idea, we have a misconception of our calling. It is the Lord's purpose to establish a community where the social and economic conditions will be in harmony with his will, where righteousness will prevail, thereby creating an environment that will conduce toward the development of the Christ character within us. In order to do so God has a plan founded in wisdom and justice, and to carry out his purposes he has selected certain brethren as leaders, and if we want to be "workers together with him" (2 Corinthians 6:1) we should give them our loyal support. The work will not be accomplished in any other way, and all our efforts to work in some other way hinder the Father's work. Sometimes some of the Saints go to Zion, look around a little and secure a home, and by and by they say, "Well, I don't like this country," and they are soon gone east, west, north, or south, looking for another home, and by their conduct they injure themselves and God's work also. Is that the way we will do when we get to heaven, if we are so fortunate? "Lord, this is so much different from what I expected to see, I don't think I will stay." Did Lehi and his family leave Jerusalem for America because they liked it, or was it in obedience to God's commands? When our Government sent an officer to take care of the Island of Guam, a coaling station for the navy in the Pacific Ocean, did he go because he liked it, or was it in response to the call of duty that he owed as a soldier to his country? God is calling for loyal men and women to stand at the post of duty, who will not be swayed by the sentiment of likes and dislikes, but who will respond to the sentiment, "I will go where you want me to go, dear Lord." If we have no higher motive in going to Zion than because "we like it," we had better stay away; our going should be in response to the call of duty and loyalty to God and his work.

Your brother in gospel bonds,
EDWARD RANNIE.

TITHES AND OFFERINGS.

BY E. L. KELLEY, PRESIDING BISHOP.

CHAPTER 3.

THE LAW OF TITHES AND OFFERINGS. WHAT IS IT, AND HOW AND BY WHOM IS IT ADMINISTERED?

Wherever in the world the gospel has been preached, of which we have any history, there has accompanied the same a financial system forming a part of the gospel plan, and consequently ordained as the just and impartial means of sustaining the work, giving to those who love the truth an opportunity to help it along, and thus manifest by their works that they are "laborers together with God."

In this work as with any other part of gospel labor it must be a voluntary one on the part of the people, but being left to each to act for himself it is evidence of the greater merit attaching to the law, as is also shown in every other gospel principle.

The apostle referring to the plan says: "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel."—1 Corinthians 9:14. It is not a man's system that we shall look for, then, but one ever submitted with the gospel itself, ordained of God.

In the time when Jesus of Nazareth was the preacher, it was taught and practiced, the record revealing quite clearly that those who gave of their means shared the labor, the favor, and doubtless the perplexities, of the gospel preacher: "And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God; and the twelve who were ordained of him, were with him. And Joanna the wife of Chusa, Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, who ministered unto him with their substance."—Luke 8:1 and 3.

As we might expect to find in a divine plan, the system is a means of development and growth, and men and women are blessed under its operation, being tested and tried in its keeping, and rewarded and strengthened according to its provisions. It is that part of the law of life that brings out and develops the noblest character, and corrects the evils of selfishness and covetousness; thus bringing up and rounding out the higher and better qualities, distributing the burdens of life, as it is written: "For every man shall bear his own burden."—Galatians 6:5.

The first gift according to the books required under this provision of the law of life is the tithe, or tenth. Also that of freewill offerings, hence the formal statement: "The law of tithes and offerings."

The word tithe signifies a tenth, or to give a tenth: "For you pay tithe of mint, and anise, and cummin, and have omitted the weightier things of the law; judgment, mercy, and faith."—Matthew 23:20. "To whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all."—Hebrews 7:2. Specifically the tithe is a tenth part of the increase, and would not include a tenth of property a person may have and upon which there is an indebtedness, but the net, after deducting the indebtedness. Neither would it include property upon which the tithing had already been paid; if so, by tithing the same property over each year for ten years there would be but little left. The object of the law is not to impoverish, but to afford opportunities to God's family to help, that they may approve themselves and be blest.

The early history shows, "that when Abraham came up out of Egypt, he was rich in silver, and cattle, and gold." This was increase. And he gave to Melchisedec, the high priest, "a tenth of all." The Lord had blessed him with this while he was in Egypt, and when opportunity offered he rendered the account.

Jacob, the grandson of Abraham, who had accepted the gospel as preached by these great men, was taught the principle of tithing also, for as he journeyed down to Padan-aram he erected an altar and worshiped God and entered into this covenant with the Lord: "And the place of this stone which I have set for a pillar, shall be the place of God's home; and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give a tenth unto thee."—Genesis 28: 22. This would be in strict harmony with the law of increase. Whatever was added to Jacob,—“all that the Lord should give him.”

The law is affirmed and set forth through the prophet Malachi in this language: “Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.”—Malachi 3: 10.

Here again the tithe is strictly a tenth of the increase. A tenth of the fruits of the ground, and a tenth of the fruit of the vine.

Jesus speaking of the law states: “For ye tithe mint, and rue, and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment, and the love of God; these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.”—Luke 11: 43.

The tithe is a tenth of the increase, so used scripturally. It is a tenth of what a person is able to make when he lives economically, by diligence and industry. For illustration: A young man without others to support, labors and makes fifty dollars a month and his board. His increase is fifty dollars, the tithe would be five, the amount being increase. But should he have to pay ten dollars a month for his board during the time, this sum would be deducted to get the true increase. Also a man with a family, if he received fifty dollars per month and forty dollars of this amount is required for the living for the time, the family during the time having done its part toward the living as is right, the increase would be but ten dollars.

It is found a wise and satisfactory way of estimating, to exempt the living; all may properly determine this; but when it comes to saying what would be the necessary clothing, incidental expenses, etc., for the time, the views are so variant and in many instances so extravagant, that the only certain way not to use up the Lord's portion is to furnish these things from the nine tenths with which the Lord has blessed us, and given us as our own.

The reference to the tithe, in the record of the people upon the Western Continent, is quite clear, and in harmony with the Bible teaching. It reads: “And it was this same Melchisedec to whom Abraham paid tithes; yea, even our father Abraham paid tithes of one tenth part of all that he possessed.”—Book of Mormon, Alma 10: 8.

Some have hastily concluded that the tithe was an institution started in Moses' time and to be found in Moses' law, and that it terminated with the entrance of the gospel under Christ and the apostles. Nothing is much further from the facts. It was introduced with the gospel at least four hundred years before Moses was born; taught under the prophets; taught and indorsed by Jesus, and extended after the ascension of Jesus into heaven, and of which the apostle writes: “And here men that die receive tithes: but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that he liveth.”—Hebrews 7: 8.

How does Christ receive tithes now? By the appointment of officers whom he authorizes to receive for him and his work, and which with other offerings and consecrations are placed in the hands of the Bishop or his agents. See Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8. Are there any withholding the just tithe from Christ now, and yet hoping to be commended by him by and by? No wonder he said: “It is not everyone that saith unto me Lord, Lord, that shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven.”—Matthew 7: 30.

Under the restoration of the gospel the law is specifically set forth and enjoined: “Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after to-day coming the burning: this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, To-morrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of hosts; and I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon. Wherefore, if ye believe me, ye will labor while it is called to-day.”—Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5.

The suggestion is often made that this does not mean the tithe, a tenth, but consecrations. The correct view is that the Lord meant just what he said. Jesus taught and approved the tithe, tenth as we have before cited. He also taught the principle of consecration. “This he spake unto his disciples, saying, Sell that ye have and give alms; provide not for yourselves bags which wax old, but rather provide a treasure in the heavens, that faileth not; where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth.”—Luke 12: 36.

Under the restoration of the gospel the same principle is found and plainly set forth as not only being applicable to the minister but to all. “If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose.”—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8.

Jesus ever teaches the same and he does not hold forth one thing in one age as having a place in the gospel system and then in another, renders it nugatory.

His special instruction upon this is: "That the Book of Covenants as accepted by the church was to guide the advice and action of the bishopric, taken as a whole, each revelation contained therein having its appropriate bearing upon each of the others and their relation thereto."—Doctrine and Covenants 126: 10.

This is in harmony with the character of God. His word is ever the same. It is puny man who picks up one idea, or thread, and runs wild, concluding all else are NONESSENTIALS.

In section 106 the law of consecration is further explained showing the disposition of surplus property. This is in strict harmony with the law of consecration set forth in section 42: 8, before referred to, for sections 9 and 10 of the same are sufficiently explanatory to show that the law refers to the surplus, although it does not set it forth under such name.

Speaking of the surplus tithe, or consecration, in section 106, the supplemental instruction is given of the tithe in this language: "And after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually." Whatever may have been thought then, by parties, that the tithe, the tenth, no longer has place in the law, is clearly erroneous.

In the instruction to the church upon this part of the law in 1861, we have as follows: "In order to place the church in a position to carry on the promulgation of the gospel, and as a means of fulfilling the law, the twelve will take measures in connection with the bishop, to execute the law of tithing; and let them before God see to it, that the temporal means so obtained is truly used for the purposes of the church, and not as a weapon of power in the hands of one man for the oppression of others, or for the purposes of self-aggrandizement by anyone, be he whomsoever he may be."—Section 114: 1.

The work was to be carried on then in the Reorganization, and nothing left the obedient to do but to move forward and fulfill the law. The law must be fulfilled, if we are to be accepted as the children of God, otherwise we are no better in our works than others, "who leave undone the things that they should do."

Objection has been made that the tithing could only apply in Zion and her stakes, so declared, it is claimed, in section 106.

But our heavenly Father enjoined the administration of the law when there was no membership in Zion or any stake. See section 114: 1, just quoted. The trouble then is in the private interpretation that some have placed upon section 106, and not upon the law in the section. Let us not forget the instruction of the Master to consider "the revelations as a whole," in arriving at our conclusions.

The declaration already quoted, section 64: 5, making it obligatory upon all to obey the law of tithes, if they are to escape the calamity referred to, does not limit it to Zion and her stakes. It reaches everywhere. And it is a misconception of what is really taught in section 106, that leads to the idea that the law of tithes and offerings is binding only in Zion and her stakes. According to such reasoning better that nobody go to these places and then all may escape the burning, and not fulfill the law either.

The statement in section 106 is made in answer to an inquiry by the Saints at Far West in 1838, as to what was required of the properties of these people for a tithing. The answer comes specifically to this same people who were then within a stake: "Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to put into the hands of the bishop of my church of Zion, for the building of mine house, and for the laying the foundation of Zion, and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the presidency of my church, and this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them for ever, for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord."

The interrogatory was by this special body that had been under the law of tithes and offerings several years; the answer was for this special body and made specially applicable; for they were to "build a house"; and pay the "debts of the presidency," as well as perform general work, and evidently although they had been under the law of consecration for several years, they had not complied with it, for section 102 shows wherein they had come short.

They stood in a similar position to the young man who inquired of Jesus, "What lack I yet?" "Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go, sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven, and come and follow me."—Matthew 19: 21.

This was the special work for the young man to take up at that time, but it was not the beginning of the law. The paying of the surplus tithe was the duty of the hour for the Saints at Far West, and it is the duty of others, too, as duly provided in paragraph 2, but it is not the beginning of the law of tithing.

BY WHOM IS IT ADMINISTERED?

According to the Scriptures it is by the keeper of the storehouse, and referred to as follows:

"And he lifted up his voice, and he blessed Abram, being the high priest, and the keeper of the storehouse of God; him whom God had appointed to receive tithes for the poor."—Genesis 14: 37, 38.

In our own time the church is instructed as follows: "And again, let the bishop appoint a storehouse unto this church, and let all things, both in money and in meat, which is more than is needful for the want of this people, be kept in the hands of the bishop."—Doctrine and Covenants 51: 4.

Again it is stated December, 1831, "For verily thus saith the Lord, it is expedient in me for a bishop to be appointed unto you, or of you unto the church, in this part of the Lord's vineyard; and verily in this thing ye have done wisely, for it is required of the Lord, at the hand of every steward, to render an account of his stewardship, both in time and eternity. For he who is faithful and wise in time is accounted worthy to inherit the mansions prepared for them of my Father."—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 1.

Upon the calling of George Miller to the office work of a bishop the statement is made: "My servant George Miller is without guile; he may be trusted because of the integrity of his heart; and for the love which he has to my testimony, I, the Lord, love him: I, therefore, say unto you, I seal upon his head the office of a bishopric, like unto my servant Edward Partridge, that he may receive the consecrations of mine house, that he may administer blessings upon the heads of the poor of my people, saith the Lord."—Doctrine and Covenants 107: 8.

The church is further instructed in 1873, touching administration of the law, as follows:

"It is expedient that the bishop of my church shall choose two counselors, and that they be ordained to their office as my law directs, that there may be henceforth no caviling among my people. The bishop of my church may also choose and appoint bishop's agents, until it shall be wisdom in me to ordain other bishops, in the districts and large branches of my church."—Doctrine and Covenants 117: 10.

It must not be lost sight of that this is applicable to the administration of the law of tithes and offerings as set forth in the books. It does not take away the right of the people to make an offering to help along any special work, in which they may be engaged, or to help specially the work of the gospel minister by extending him an offering as they are able to do so, thus aiding the work and encouraging the minister in the performance of his duty. All should remember and perform such work as this, and in so doing they are laborers together with the Master, and have the direct promise of the Master that such offerings and such remembrances of the work of the Lord will not be forgotten by him, not even in the time of the final judgment, for referring to such offerings he says himself: "Inasmuch as ye did it to one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it to me."

These offerings, necessary, essential to the development of the people and the good of the Lord's work are a special gift of the people for the special objects that come under their observation as they move along the way, much as the special prayer of the minister, the special administration of the elder if he is called on to perform such work. The Apostle Peter showed this when he was confronted by the crippled beggar: "Such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk," is the answer he made.

It will be noticed, then, the administration of the law interferes with no good work that any person may do. God has given liberty to his children that they may move out and walk in the light, proving themselves to be the salt of the earth.

To those who bring forth fruit he has promised to strengthen and bless, "that they may bring forth more fruit." The man who fails to do, gathers no strength from his inaction. Jesus further says: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples."—John 15: 8.

Of General Interest

They are trying to revise the fine old hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," and there is general protest from the Atlantic to the Pacific. A writer in the New York World says: "The revisionists take the ground that the hymn in question deals rather with the sublimities of natural scenery than with the omnipotence of a Creator. Perhaps by no other plea could they reveal more definitely the weakness of their case. They have submitted the hymnal lines to the cold analysis of the study table. Setting aside the obvious fact that few compositions in the book of song would pass unscathed through this form of censorship, we may remark that the committee has by its method of criticism lifted itself entirely out of the congregational spirit. True believers do not worship by construing the lines in gospel minstrelsy; they do not dissect while they sing. Left to themselves, we believe they would have sung of icy mountains and coral strands to the end of time without discovering the worldly point made by the revisionists. It is a question, indeed, whether the mere words of hymns have not lost place in the congregational mind to the tunes with which they have long been associated. Melodies can inspire without words. They also can repeat inspirations absorbed from words grown familiar. The 'Old Hundred' on the organ is impressive without the chorused 'Doxology.' We do not believe any revision committee can keep the churches from singing 'From Greenland's Icy Mountains' to the old tune, or could lead them to sing it to a new tune."

Referring to the famous old hymn a Lock Haven (Pennsylvania) reader of the Philadelphia Public Ledger says: "In connection with the current talk relative to the famous hymn, 'From Greenland's Icy Mountains,' by Bishop Reginald Heber, which a certain Episcopal bishop proposes omitting from a proposed new hymnal, and which has created a very great deal of adverse comment, permit me to give you the origin of said hymn, as found in the Rev. Edwin M. Long's Hymns and Their Authors, page 208: 'Of the fifty-nine elegant hymns written by Bishop Heber, none are so widely known or so frequently sung as his missionary hymn. In 1819 a royal letter authorized collections to be taken in every church and chapel in England connected with the establishment, in furtherance of the society for propagating the gospel. On the evening of Whit Sunday, which was the day appointed for this purpose, Heber had engaged to deliver the first of a series of Sunday evening lectures in the church at Wrexham, which was in charge of his father-in-law, the Rev. Dr. Shipley. On the Saturday previous, as they were seated around the table in the parsonage, the dean requested his son-in-law to write something for them to sing in the morning that would be suitable to the missionary service. Heber at once retired from the circle of friends to a corner of the room. After a while his father-in-law inquired, 'What have you written?' Heber then read the first three verses, which he had already produced. 'There, that will do very well,' said the dean. 'No, no,' said Heber, 'the sense is not complete.' Accordingly he added the fourth verse, commencing, 'Waft, waft, ye winds, His story.' Next morning it was sung in the church at Wrexham, and soon after caught up as the grand missionary hymn of the church universal, reaching 'from pole to pole.' The Rev. Dr. Raffles was in possession of the original manuscript, from which it is seen that so accurately was it written at first that he had occasion to alter but one word. It would seem from the above that our modern bishop has set his opinion over against that of a very much greater man in his own communion."—The Commoner.

What Should Our Children Read?

This subject is of such great importance that I do not feel competent to handle it as it should be; but, nevertheless, will do my best.

Human minds have been likened unto the potter's clay in the molder's hands, and as the molder forms the rude clay into beautiful figures of statuary, so likewise the human mind may be developed to a very high degree morally, scientifically, and spiritually, or debased and stamped by crime and debauchery by the early impressions which, if left to grow, form habits hard to change. These impressions are made by our associations with one another, and also by the reading on which the mind is fed. We can not always have control over our environments, but we can and should exercise complete control over our reading matter, that our minds may be fed on that which would be elevating; for in that way we can rise above our environments and stand out as beacon lights to others, encouraging them to strive to come up higher, thereby blessing the human family.

Children should be encouraged to read from the time they first begin to learn how to read; but great care should be taken in what is placed before them, that the desire for the right kind of reading may be developed along with the desire to read.

In this day and age of the world, when there are so many free public libraries, and when books are no more a rarity, but can be purchased so cheap that almost every home can have a library of its own, we see more and more the necessity of a careful selection of the reading matter placed before our children.

The reading of fairy tales, which is so much indulged in to-day, even in our public schools, I think should be discouraged, as it tends to develop the imaginative faculties far in excess of what they should be, even to the extent of untruthfulness. If we can develop in them the desire to read true stories, we will find it less difficult to teach them to be truthful. As our creed is "All truth," and we are taught to accept truth wherever found, we must develop the desire for that class of reading that will store our minds with the kind of knowledge that will elevate us not only spiritually, but morally, intellectually, and scientifically as well.

We have among our juvenile books of to-day a large number of books on the different subjects of nature, such as plant life and animal life, which are gotten up in very interesting stories, by which we, as parents, can develop in the little tots, too young yet to read for themselves, a love for nature, and plant the first seeds of the gospel by instilling in them faith in the God who created all things good. Then as they grow older there are the books on geographical, historical, and biographical subjects, gotten up in story style, which not only make them interesting, but help to impress those topics upon their minds, and thereby become quite a help to them as they take up those subjects in school.

As the desire for fiction begins to manifest itself, let us be very careful in the selections, that only the best authors are placed before our children.

If we have succeeded in creating a desire for the more solid reading matter, or that which not only strengthens the memory, but develops the mind, we will not find it so difficult to get the children to read the church papers and books which are necessary to their spiritual growth; and as the habit of reading only good books is formed while young, we will not find it hard to obey the divine injunction as found in 2 Timothy 2:15, which says: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

Request for Prayer.

I sincerely ask your prayers, dear Saints, in behalf of my sister who is sick in North Dakota. She is a nonmember, but she said she would very much like to have an elder come and visit her. Her name is Mrs. Hattie Peterson, Bluegrass, North Dakota. She was sick all last winter, and has a family of little ones. Pray that she may be spared on that account.

BRIDGEFORD, CONNECTICUT, November 20, 1910.

Editors Herald: Allow me a line or two to express to you my appreciation of the SAINTS' HERALD, and the pleasure I take in reading it each week. I am especially pleased with the current issue. It contains several articles both interesting and instructive to those interested in this latter day work. I refer in particular to the letter from Sr. Margaret Macgregor, dealing with the past year's work in and around Stonington, Maine.

The Lord has certainly shown his hand in a wonderful manner in that little place and through the efforts of Mrs. Macgregor and her preacher husband, great good has been done there. To this I can testify, as I am one of the "79" who were brought to a knowledge of the restored gospel through their untiring efforts.

I do not exactly agree with the sister in giving so much of the credit for the good done, to the assistance rendered them by the Saints there. I venture to say that, were it not for the forcible, aggressive, and permit me, inspired preaching of our brother Daniel, not a soul of the "79" would have accepted the work. Although the Saints did much good work, it was he who woke them from their slumber, organized their Sunday school and Religio in a systematic manner, and in various ways aroused their interest in their branch.

There are many in Stonington who formerly regarded the Saints as a band of crazy fanatics, but who now, though they love them none the better, have considerable respect for the faith of the Latter Day Saints.

The article on "Race poisons" was also timely and interesting. The prevalence of the tobacco habit among men and boys to-day is appalling. In the factory in which I am employed and which employs a large number of young men and boys, about nine out of every ten either smoke or chew tobacco, and many of them have both habits. The younger boys seem to have the idea that in order to be manly it is necessary to acquire these habits, and it is worse than useless to try to convince them to the contrary. A person who can exist without the use of the weed is quite a novelty to them, and more or less of a mollicoddle, too.

I notice with pleasure that the article on "The head of the Reorganized Church" which appeared in the October number of Hampton's Magazine has been brought to the notice of the editors of the HERALD and that they have seen fit to publish it for the benefit of those of the Saints who were unable to secure a copy of the magazine. It is the fairest write up I have seen for some time, and I should think it would make an excellent tract. For the benefit of the one who inserted the article and who stated that he did not know who wrote it, I add the following information. It was written by three different people. Part of the data was secured in Mr. Smith's home town, part from New York, and part from a representative of the magazine in Washington. It was rewritten twice.

Wishing the HERALD continued success in its work, I am,
Your brother in the faith,

Editors Herald: I noticed in the HERALD for October 12, the letter of a sister who is much troubled thinking of her dear sons who are not with her. If she will give me her full address I will try to drop her a few lines. I have two sons who have homes of their own, and I do not hear from them and do not know where they are. They are on my mind much of the time. The sister signed her name, "A sad hearted sister."

CAIRO, EGYPT, November 2, 1910.

Editors Saints' Herald: The steamer Prinz Heinrich arrived in Alexandria on Sunday evening. We gained from twelve to fifteen hours by passing Naples,—cholera at the place being the reason for passing. Alexandria is the second town of Egypt as to size, and its chief port. It has about three hundred and twenty thousand inhabitants. Sixty thousand of these are foreigners. There is a governor, a Coptic, archbishop and an international court of arbitration for disputes between Egyptians and foreigners.

The town was founded by Alexander the Great, on the verge of the sea, and the country all around it is flat. The buildings, or the houses, are in the Egyptian style. At the first view of the city it is disappointing to the foreigner, however there are many things to be seen that are of great interest and worth seeing. Alexandria is up-to-date with its modern appliances. They have electricity, but I was greatly amused on landing, as the steamer had no more than come to a standstill, until she was filled up with Arabs, dressed in all manner of styles and colors and all talking at once. They flocked around us like a swarm of bees all trying to get hold of our baggage. As I was going up the steps on deck, one of those Arabs had a trunk on his head and a box in front of him. As he was nearing the top his foot slipped and down he came, baggage and all, but that didn't discourage him in the least. He was soon up again and off. I really thought I would never get off that ship. Of all the confusion that I have ever run up against in my time, this excels all, and I don't care to have another such experience. In about an hour and a half I finally reached the custom house, and I was no wiser when I got through than when I was in, as I did not understand one word of what the officers said to me. One of the Arabs grabbed my satchel and took me by the hand and led me on to the train. My word, I was glad when I got there! Of course, he demanded five piasters, and I gave it to him freely. I was fortunate in meeting a young Englishman on the train, who was going to Cairo. He took special pains to give me the needed information about hotels and so on. I wish to state at this juncture that they have fine trains in this eastern country. Second class accommodation is superior to what you find on the English trains. The conductor was a large, fat fellow, Egyptian, with a blue uniform, white vest, and stand up collar, and a very dignified appearance. They also have a ticket collector who was dressed in khaki. I was greatly surprised to see such dignity and style displayed by the Egyptians.

We arrived in Cairo at 12 o'clock at night, but had no difficulty in finding a suitable place to stay at a very reasonable rate. As you enter the city, the railroad on either side is lined by beautiful gardens, and the trains enter the splendid new Cairo station which is built in arabesque style. The city of Cairo is situated ten miles south of the Nile and is the capital of Egypt, called by the Arabs simply Masr or Masr-el-Kahira, meaning victorious. It is the greatest town of Africa, and its population is half a million, of which about twenty-five thousand are Europeans.

The native population is composed of Fellahs, Copts, Turks and Jews, to which must be added negroes, Bedouins, and people from the neighboring countries. The history of Cairo begins with the Arabs in A. D. 638, founded on the spot of the ancient forest of Babylon. The town of Fostat named thus, because Amr-ibn-el as having invaded Egypt on the date above given pitched his tents and called it Fostat. The stranger is amazed at the variety of wonderful scenes that are to be seen in and out of the city, a few of which I will call the attention of the reader to. First the tombs of the Khalifs. On the east side of the town at the foot of the Mokattam Mountains are the tomb mosques of the Circassian Mamelu Re Sultans who reigned over Egypt from A. D. 1381-1517, known by the name of the Tombs of the Khalifs. These fine buildings with their bold and elegant domes and slender minarets may be numbered among the most beautiful examples of Arabian art, and deserve to be visited.

Next are the tombs of the Mamelakes. Then comes the citadel which dominates the town, constructed in 1166 A. D. by the order Saleheddin. The stones were taken from the small pyramid at Ghizeh, a beautiful site, and must be seen to be appreciated. The Arab museum, which is another great attraction of the city, contains mummies of most of the Egyptian kings and other precious curios. The Ghizeh zoölogical gardens are visited by everybody as much for the history as well as the beautiful variety of animals to be found there, as it was at one time part of the pleasure gardens of Ismal Pasha Khedive of Egypt. But the most wonderful of all sights are the pyramids, the sphinx, the tombs and the temple, which are close together. The greatest of the Ghizeh pyramids was erected by Chufer (the Cheops of the Greek) the second king of the fourth dynasty, B. C. 3783, the present measurement of each side is seven hundred and fifty-five feet at the base, and four hundred and fifty-one feet high. The blocks of stone of which it is constructed are from the quarries of Mokattam and Turra. The blocks average three feet high. The top is about twenty-five feet square space. Many tombs are to be found in the interior and some mummies have been taken out, and put in the museum. There are three close together, and five in the Sahara a short distance away.

The Sphinx is near by to the large pyramid and just a few yards away is to be found the temple of granite. The Sphinx is most famous and interesting. It is cut out of the natural rock, and represents a crouching lion with a human head. The body is one hundred and fifty feet long, the paws fifty feet, the head is thirty feet high and fourteen feet broad. The Arabs call the Sphinx Abou-el Hon, Father of Terror, and believe it has power to protect the crops from the encroachment of the sand. The origin of the Sphinx is surrounded by mystery, but it is certain that it already existed in the time of Chufu, as proved by our inscription found by Mariette. One of the inscriptions mentions the restoration of the Sphinx by Thothmes Fourth, B. C. 1533. I visited the tombs near one of the pyramids that had been hewn out of a solid rock, out of which many kings and queens have been taken. You can see the pictures of animals cut in the rocks and also names of kings and queens. Some of these had been buried here between four and five thousand years ago. I experienced a very strange sensation as I wandered to and fro in those tombs. It brought to mind very vividly the fact that we all have to succumb to the same old enemy—death! There is a tower in the citadel said to be built by Joseph and a well, too, called to-day Joseph's well. Rhoda Island about ten miles out from Cairo in the River Nile is supposed to be the place where Moses was rescued by Pharaoh's daughter and raised. One remarkable scene we witnessed here was the cafés in front of the buildings, where both old and young feast and drink until the early hours of morning. The morality of most of the people is way down the scale. The sights all along the Esbekieh are so bad that they can not be described. I leave Friday morning for Port Said, Jaffa, and Jerusalem. Wishing all farewell, I am,

Yours hastily,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

BURLINGTON, KANSAS, November 11, 1910.

Editors Saints' Herald: March 9, 1909, you promised me to place my request for "a list of facts contained in the Book of Mormon, unknown at the time of its publication, which have since been verified by archaeological research," in the hands of some of your church representatives who might be able to compile such list, and you would publish it, and try to remember and send me a copy. Has such a list been published yet? If so will you kindly forward the same to me and oblige.

DES MOINES, IOWA, November 25, 1910.

Editors Saints' Herald: The Home Coming Social Day at Des Moines, Iowa, October 9, should be noticed as one of the historical events of the year, and while over a month has passed since, yet there is sufficient of importance associated with it that it should even now be considered. Some reasons not necessary to mention have caused the delayed items relating to it.

Notices and programs had been sent to all the members of the church who had ever been associated with the branch or work in the city of Des Moines, whose addresses were known, and several of those who do not live in the city were present. The day was an ideal one, and the local Saints enjoyed the privilege of social enjoyment thus afforded, while spiritual food was secured. Three were baptized during the noon intermission, who bid fair to become a help to the building up of God's kingdom on earth. The program was fully carried out, except in the five minute talks and one duet.

The effect of this event has been for good, and will be remembered as one of the pleasant spots in the life of this branch of the church.

Your brother,
J. F. MINTUN.

An Alabama Thunderstorm.

The first week of September, 1910, I was preaching near Dixonville, Alabama, when one afternoon a small cloud arose in the southeast and after passing over the residence of Bro. Emet McCall, where I was staying that day, it began to thunder terrifically. The storm had almost passed out of memory when Bro. W. E. Peak and myself were passing through, about six weeks later. Noticing a number of dying pines I remarked about the storm. We began counting the trees, and in the short space of about one mile we counted twenty-one that had been killed with lightning, and none of them much over two hundred yards from the road. A week later Bro. W. A. West and myself were driving through the same place, and I called his attention to the trees, told him about the storm, and asked him to help me count them, for I intended to publish an account of it as a partial fulfillment of the following prophecy: "After your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes. . . and also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunderings, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests."—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 25.

By a correct count we numbered thirty trees; but as two of them seemed more dead than the others we concluded they were not struck at the same time. We also excluded three others that we thought were more than two hundred yards from the road. We also took notice of the distance and figured that the distance through the belt of the storm was about a mile. Thus within a space of timber a mile long and four hundred yards wide the lightning had struck twenty-five trees. There were also dozens of old dry trees on the same space of ground, and doubtless a number of them were struck which we did not observe. Quite likely not every stroke hit a tree. I inquired if there were any mineral in that country, and was informed that there were no signs of mineral of any kind. That some hidden mineral was not the cause of such an electric display is evident from the fact that no such signs remain of any previous happening. The dozens of varied trees I mentioned were not killed by lightning, but by fire years ago. Throughout all this southern country there are thousands of dead trees, caused usually by fire. The mile we traveled through is no exception either way.

During the progress of the storm we had remarked as to the terrific thunder and when Brother McCall returned that evening from teaching school, I asked him if his school was in the path of the storm and he remarked: "Not exactly; but I never heard such terrible thunder." That was the verdict of all of us.

At the rate we counted, the lightning struck about one hundred and forty times on a section. Think of the lightning striking one hundred and forty times in the town of Lamani. If each time it struck a house, it would make a big hole in the town and the rest would burn up with fires. No fire protection would be adequate to stop its spreading. If Kansas City is ten miles square, think of the lightning striking one thousand and four hundred times in that city. May not Sodom and Gomorrah have been destroyed in a similar way?

Surely such a thing could occur any time and any place, seeing it has occurred one time in one place. How much we are dependent on our Maker for protection, and in this time of God's judgment how should we live, not alone for physical protection but for righteousness' sake as well! At least when living right before God no harm shall befall us.

Was Joseph Smith inspired or not?

News From Missions

AMONG LAMANITES.

My letter of October 12 has only caused fifty books to come to light, but maybe there are a few more. There are seventy or eighty thousand Lamanites in Oklahoma. I figure two cents per head for the church, traveling expenses, book, and all, giving or selling fifteen books to each thousand, you will find five times that many learned men and women in each thousand, but the church has moved in the right direction, as a starter; you have got to start somewhere. I have studied this book question from all sides. To talk Book of Mormon to the Lamanite without leaving the record with a few of the learned ones is the height of folly. Send your book money to Herald Office and my expense money to me or the Bishop, at Independence, Missouri. I do not care which way, so you will let me move in this matter. I think you can or ought to see the situation and the momentous hour in which you are living.

You are living in an hour when your wealth will not amount to the ashes of a rye straw, only as the God of heaven may preserve it for you. On the night of the 9th of November, while in a dream or vision, a Lamanite worker saw the heavens lettered, unwarranting the abominable wickedness in the land, and it was right at the door of present time. Pestilence, storm, earthquake, and these like words were a part of the writing that was seen in the heavens. "It must needs be that I destroy this people."

Let us remember the prayer that was offered up throughout all the generations of the Nephites and Lamanites for their children at this very moment. Will we cast our all at the feet of the Bishop, and the God of heaven, and have respect for the prayer that was offered up in such great faith, and in part fulfilled?

We have laid all at the Master's feet, for this cause, can you not sacrifice some?

Yours in gospel bonds,

JEROME E. PAGE, among the Lamanites.

OHIO.

I have been highly entertained by the many letters, and other good things from your columns, and have not in any way done anything myself to let others know what was being done in that part of the field in which I have been laboring. I also know that there are those of my friends that wish to hear from time to time as to what is being done, though it be but little.

Having been assigned to the Pittsburg District by General Conference, I took the field about the middle of May; but with little success, perhaps owing to the time of the year. I found it almost impossible to find places in which to preach. This may have been in part, owing to the fact that I was unacquainted with the territory, for when I came in contact with the Sairits I was well received.

After trying what could be done along the Ohio River, I went to Fayette City, Pennsylvania, and met with the Saints there, which was a treat, I assure you. I did not stay in that neighborhood long as the reunion was to take place at New Philadelphia, Ohio, and I wished to attend that.

On my way to the same I had an invitation to stop off and visit a brother at Monesson, and this nearly proved my undoing, as I met with an accident that might have proved very serious, but which is now almost overcome. Anyone that has been in that part of the country knows of the many steep hills there are, and in order to reach some parts of the country it is done by means of stairs. In some instances these are quite steep. Well, in going down one of these with two suit cases in my hand, I tripped and fell down eighteen steps. To say that I was thoroughly shaken up would be putting it mildly, for I was all that and more, as I received some ugly cuts, and my whole internal system seemed to be disarranged. But I went to the reunion, and as my wife was there I had good attention; and at its close I was glad to get home for a time that I might get in shape for a new field of labor.

After staying home two weeks I again took the field, having been sent by the missionary in charge to the western part of Ohio. In response to a call for an elder I went to Portage Center, Ohio, and had the pleasure of again meeting with old friends, as I had reached there nearly four years ago; in fact had opened up the work there. I am pleased to say that I found them all well, and a few of them hungry for the gospel. They had secured the town hall and we started in to tell the story to a good audience; and as there are but five Saints here, it shows that those that came were mostly outsiders. We continued here for five weeks, holding forth each night, and while we had great hopes of at least inducting some into the kingdom, we failed to do so because of the opposition of their friends. Three had expressed themselves as being fully convinced of the necessity of being baptized in order to enter into the kingdom, but the influences that were present held them back.

We then went to a place called Jerry City and secured a place to hold forth. This was new ground entirely, as the attempt had been made a number of times to get in here, but without success. Suffice it to say that we had good attendance each night and on the Sunday night on which we closed there were sixty-three present. We would have continued these meetings longer but for the fact that we had to travel back and forth each night, and pay hall rent as well, but we have promised to return in the near future when we hope to continue for some time.

In response to letters sent out, I came to this point on October 29 and held services twice the following day to a very interesting audience. Like many other places, the Saints are few here, but most of them are Saints indeed, and a few, though they do not belong to the church, are in full accord in desiring to see the work grow. They ought to be inside, and I hope will be soon. This is a place that has been given the word in the past by some of our most able men, but seemingly they have been unable to bring many into the church. I can not say what may be done in the future, but hope that the seed sown may bear fruit soon. I had poor success in the hall which had been secured, as politics had the right of way; so we decided to hold meetings from house to house, and I am satisfied it was a wise move, as the attendance is good and new homes are offered continually. I know good is being accomplished.

IDAHO.

Permit us to hand you some inklings from Idaho which may indicate interest in Zion's weal.

Bro. B. F. Benson and wife are affording us hospitality while we are occupying a few nights in their schoolhouse, and waiting the coming of Dr. Joseph Benson, who has promised to fit us up better for the eating habit. Brother Joseph enjoys a good reputation for such work. I observed in report of college endowments in a HERALD a while back that Idaho got but little of the credit due her. Should not the score of unmentioned supporters receive recognition even though a little tardy with subscriptions? We were told authoritatively that if all did as well as Idaho the financial question for Graceland would speedily be settled, but no word of approval through the church organ.

Bro. E. Keeler was a welcome visitor and worker in Idaho during a part of October. A half hundred or more of the Saints receiving their blessings and became witnesses to the divinity of this feature of the church work. From the forecasts we may expect Idaho to contribute her proportion of field-workers by and by. Boise and Hagerman were benefited by his visit. By the way, in "Current events," July Journal of History, we hoped to have seen among branch organizations that of Boise Branch, but were disappointed again. It is not an insignificant affair, and the Saints there are alive.

The same can be said of the Saints at Weiser; a month of tent work there closing with an eight-night debate with Denton Collins, Campbellite, and nine baptisms, also the organization of a Sabbath school, and a semi-Religio organization, have assisted to put the Saints there to the front as workers.

Perhaps to cover the defeat, Brother Collins prepared further debate with us on Book of Mormon propositions, and arrangements were seemingly completed for a six-night debate to be held at Midvale, beginning October 3, but he proved equally as ingenious as his colleague, S. O. Pool, in wriggling out of a situation of his own choosing. Elder Pool wanted to meet us at Portland or any place but Chitwood, and so with Collins, any place but Midvale. Too many of their people there, and their protest may have accounted for the back down.

Rev. L. G. Dix, a Christian Adventist debater, after much correspondence and bluff, has withdrawn their proposal for a debate at Weiser on church, immortality, and Smith propositions, on the plea that Weiser does not seem to want to bear the expense of a debate now. He says, "Yes, I fully intended to have a friendly debate with you, but am not able to bear my own expenses, so will have to call it off for the present, at least." Not very complimentary to the pastor of their church at Weiser, who proposed this debate and wrote Mr. Dix, then at Spokane.

The Oriano, published at Vale, Oregon, October 28, is just received, containing a communication from Sr. O. W. Propst, explaining that the two Mormon elders who have been distributing tracts there, and the Reorganized Church of which she is a member, are distinct organizations, we accepting Joseph Smith, son of the translator of the Book of Mormon, as our president and prophet, and challenging any elder of the Mormon church or any other church to prove that Joseph Smith, the translator of that book, was a polygamist.

October 30 found us, in company with Sisters Gill, of Heyburn, and Shively and her husband, of Hanson, driving from their pleasant home through seven miles of finely cultivated farms of fruit, grain, hay, etc., to the city of Twin Falls, teeming with its thousands of population, beautiful and costly buildings, paved streets, etc., supported on all sides by the successful farmers, where six years ago as the traveler passed through this country an unbroken waste of sage brush country greeted his vision as far as the eye could reach. We were truly amazed at the wonderful transformation brought about by the application of water under the Twin Falls project.

But our visit here was to find Saints and, after some inquiry and driving about, we were successful in finding Bro. Albert Faucett and wife, and his mother and sister, recently from Independence, Missouri, where they had passed through the trying ordeal of laying to rest a loved husband and father; and in her hour of grief she has returned to weep with her sons and daughter who had remained in Idaho.

We held services with these Saints, administering the sacrament, and being mutually cheered by the presence of the Spirit and testimonies and associations of these isolated Saints. Another road back via the Great Shoshone Falls, where the waters of Snake River plunge two hundred and ten feet deeper into the rock chasm that confines her waters here for miles, and this adds interest to this trip and pleasant visit with our new friends and coworkers of Hanson.

We should add that an immense power plant at the foot of these falls furnishes light, heat, and power for towns, cities, and factories for miles.

While visiting Albion Saints and relatives, we learned that Sr. Pearl Albertson was teaching school at Twin Falls. It would have been a privilege for the Saints to meet her also. Saints desiring to hear from us can address us at Logan, Utah.

In bonds,

S. D. CONDIT.

MINIDOKA, IDAHO, November 12.

SOCIETY ISLANDS MISSION.

We are pleased to inform the Saints that the work is progressing very nicely in the southern seas, and we feel much encouraged at the present outlook.

We have again commenced the publishing of the island mission paper, the Orometua, and through its columns we are endeavoring to enlighten the minds of those desiring the gospel, and we trust that in due season it will bear good fruit.

There are many islands inhabited by the Saints, and but two white missionaries to do missionary work, therefore it is thought wisdom that one of us remain in Papeete, the headquarters, to look after the work of the mission and to print the paper which is a twelve page paper printed once a month, and is, as it were, a missionary which arrives at the various islands each month.

Although I had not been here quite a year when I undertook the work as its editor, I feel encouraged in all of the efforts put forth, and trust that through continued assistance of the Lord and his servants here that the printed word may be an edification to all, even as it was under the labors of Brother Lake.

I am especially pleased that it has so far been unnecessary to hire an interpreter.

The Brighamites are upholding their blood atonement theory before the natives in their periodical here, but the Orometua is endeavoring to enlighten the people as to the teaching of Brigham Young upon that proposition.

I have just finished printing a tract in the Tahitian language entitled, "Joseph (the Martyr) wounded in the house of his friends," in which I endeavor to prove that Joseph did not enter into its practice, but condemned the same very emphatically, as did also the early church; also that the contradictory testimony of the women of Utah was but an evidence that their charges were like under the word of David, which says, "False witnesses did rise up; and they laid to my charge things that I knew not."—Psalm 35: 11.

I hope that this tract may result in good. Brother and Sister Savage are now upon the island of Tupuai, which is about three hundred miles below us. They arrived there in safety and are endeavoring to build up the work there more firmly. They may return to Tahiti next month and go to the upper islands.

The Saints are very active in the building of the wall around Taronia which is the "Saints' home" in Papeete. They have now completed 440 feet, and are continuing the work. One of the Saints has built a new house in Taronia which adds much to the appearance of the church property here.

In the island of Makatea the Saints are building a new chapel and next month, on Christmas Day, a new chapel is to be dedicated upon the island of Rairoa.

This letter leaves us all well in body and encouraged in spirit, for which we are truly thankful.

My wife is able to converse somewhat in the language and hopes soon to be able to take up part of the work which was done by Sister Lake while here. Little Paul is singing songs in the Tahitian tongue already. We hope to become efficient workers for the Lord and live exemplary lives before this people, that they may become a "delightful people," that when the time comes for the gathering that there might not be few but many who will be in a condition in due time to march into Zion, the gathering place of the Saints, singing songs of triumph and everlasting joy.

Trusting that we may be remembered of the Lord's people in connection with our endeavors, I am

J. CHARLES MAY.

PAPEETE, TAHITI, November 3.

COLORADO.

Responding to your request, I will send you a brief report, or outline of the work as I view it from this mile high position.

There has been a commendable activity among the servants of the Master this conference year, and we believe, a corresponding response to the labor performed, in winning souls for the kingdom of heaven, not as numerous as in some parts of the vineyard, but still gratifying to those who understand the conditions existing in this peculiar section of the Lord's earth.

There are certainly many places opened for the preaching of the word, and an interest manifest in the hearers that is encouraging to those with the message of life to the people.

Brn. C. Scott and Emsley Curtis have reported at length of the work in this State, so little remains for me to report along the same lines. The condition of the Saints generally, from a spiritual standpoint is that of lethargy; surely many are sleeping on their rights and privileges, hence dull, unspiritual meetings, and not the hearty response to the financial demands of the work that is so much needed now. There are good, faithful Saints here as in all places where the work has been established, but there are many who seem to be in no way interested in the welfare of Zion's redemption, and altogether indifferent to the call of the Lord, repeated again to us through the Presiding Bishop. How long will our heavenly Father withhold chastisement from his heedless children, when so often reminding them of their duty?

I want to commend the faithful ones, who have done so well for the cause of God, and my criticism is not directed to them, and I feel sure they will not think I lack appreciation of the faithfulness they manifest to the work.

There are scattered Saints who sadly need the care and labor of those who can strengthen them. Such is the case at Fox, Falcón, and other places. Who is sufficient for these many demands?

I wish I could report all well among the sons and daughters of Zion, in all places; but it can not be done while indifference prevails to the extent it does, and I can only report honestly and make mention of these conditions that are apparent.

To smooth these matters over and report only the pleasing features of the work, seems to add encouragement to the prevailing conditions.

Brethren Russell and Curtis, who are laboring together in the southwestern part of the State, report good prospects ahead, and have baptized several; Brother Holloway is doing a good work in the eastern part of the State, and reports baptisms. So the good work goes on.

The Saints of Colorado Springs need help to finish the new building on their lot; no city in the United States has greater need than at that resort, and mecca for the afflicted and diseased, that throng for relief and cure. The few struggling Saints there should be assisted in their effort to fill the long known need.

The work is onward and if we should all put to with all our might the redemption of our beautiful Zion is assured, and the preparation required by the Master of his people, will become a reality, and the reign of peace will begin. Thus may it be.

R. BULLARD.

MISSOURI.

As it has been some time since I added anything to your columns I will drop a few lines from this part of the vineyard.

Sunday, October 9, Bro. E. A. Davis and the writer assisted Bro. I. N. White in organizing a branch at Purcell, Missouri, of twenty-eight members. Bro. W. B. Mullen was ordained an elder and chosen president. Bro. J. Worren called and ordained a priest and chosen to preside as priest of the branch. Brother Lowe ordained teacher and chosen to preside, and Bro. A. A. Walters ordained deacon and chosen to preside. This branch was organized principally of the members belonging to the Webb City Branch. From this place we went to Webb City preaching Sunday at 7.30 p. m. Monday and Tuesday, Bro. I. N. White gave us two excellent sermons, making all rejoice. Brother White knows where to find the anvil and how to place the iron on and strike, for I think all caught a spark from the gospel anvil as he wielded the hammer of truth.

From here we attended the Spring River district conference. The church house proving too small for the congregation, the I. O. O. F. hall was secured for the Sunday meetings. I think I am safe in saying that this was the best conference I ever attended in the Spring River District. Leaving Joplin we went to Fairland, Oklahoma; held a meeting at that place, with good interest. From this place I went to Pleasant Valley, continued at this place several evenings, giving a temperance lecture, as the State of Oklahoma would vote on constitutional amendment so to make the State "wet" instead of being "dry."

Monday, October 7, at half past seven I went to Fairland and gave another temperance lecture; large crowds were in attendance and so far as discernible I think much good was accomplished. Returns show that the infant State is still dry and in the lead, unlike old Missouri. She is weaned from the bottle—too big in morals to be climbing to and sucking the bottle which kills the brain for activity, man for usefulness, degrades society, debauches humanity, breeds profanity, robs man of reason, makes brutes of husbands, wives widows, children homeless. Drink destroys the happiness of home; it takes the bread out of children's mouths, causes mothers to weep for their lost and ruined boys. Saloons make drunkards; it can not run without them. The mother who has boys is the one who suffers with her daughter-in-law, because the saloon has made her boy a drunkard. He that votes for open saloon, votes to make his boy a drunkard, a gambler. We will continue the fight until the stuff is driven from the nation.

November 8, in company with Bro. J. T. Riley we went to Springdale, Arkansas, some ten miles west of this place, on White River. Some sixteen Saints had been baptized by Brn. Smith, Riley, and Reecer. The gospel was brought to them through the effort of G. C. Connelly.

Sunday, the 13th, we organized them into a branch, Bro. J. T. Riley assisting in organizing. The branch is named the Lowell Branch. The officers are Brn. W. J. Robinson, priest; A. D. Nelson, teacher; Alfred Lauber, deacon; W. J. Robinson, the presiding officer. The day was spent in fasting. All the Saints fasted all day, eating nothing for breakfast or dinner. This was commendable for young Saints, as all had been baptized since September, excepting Brother Connelly and family. Sunday morning Brother Robinson took Brother Riley and the writer out to the cave where he and his brother have been at work off and on, for two years, taking away a wall in front of the cave. The walls are about twenty-five feet long and twenty feet or more high, several feet thick, made of cement and stone; one layer of stone, then cement. After it was completed the surface of earth and rock above the wall had been shot down to cover up the wall they had built so it would not be noticed by the passers-by. Brush and trees were growing on top of it, having the appearance that it had been built centuries ago. Some think the Spaniards have a hidden treasure in it. The brethren will soon have the wall all removed so they can enter the cave.

Wife and I have secured a room for the winter of Brother and Sister Hutchinson, at 2226 Pitcher street, Joplin, Missouri, so this will be home for the present. We are kept busy all the time—no time to stop and look back, but just keep plodding along.

Ever laboring for the building up of Zion,

GEORGE JENKINS.

JOPLIN, MISSOURI, November 17, 1910.

INDIANA.

No doubt a few lines relative to the Southern Indiana District will be of some interest to some that have labored here and lived here in the past. The work is progressing as nicely as can be expected under the existing conditions. At Wirt, Indiana, where we have the Union Branch, the work has prospered fairly well, having a Sunday school, and considering no presiding officers live there, the Saints seem to hold up well.

At New Albany, Indiana, the branch is in a very nice condition. Of course, there are times when difficulties arise, but are overcome, and the work which is in immediate charge of that noble and trusty brother, E. A. Jeagers, moves along nicely.

At Byrneville there is of late an increased tendency for the advancement of the work, having of late revived the Sunday school work, and we trust that it may prosper. At Derby, Indiana, the Saints are holding out loyal to the work, and the Sunday school as well as other interests are not lost sight of, which is pleasing indeed. At Millstone, while the branch has fallen away some of late years, we still hope that the few loyal ones there will remember that God can do much if even the few are willing.

At Leavenworth some have been baptized of late, and we are glad to note that there is a reviving of this old branch. Quite a nice Sunday school work was done there the past year, and we hope same will continue. A new branch was recently organized at Bicknell, Indiana, and quite a nice little band of Saints have moved there from Ohio, and together with a few baptisms make the prospects good for renewing the work which is near the old Plainville Branch.

A Sunday school was recently organized at Clay City, and we hope a greater interest will be wrought on account of same in this branch. While the New Harmony Branch was disorganized a few years ago, there still exist some loyal soldiers of the cross at this point. Some loyal Saints still remain at the old New Trenton Branch.

The Oriole, Mount Eden, New Morion, and Lillydale branches have been disorganized, but yet a few scattered ones remain. Prospects are fairly good for the establishing of the work in Indianapolis at present; regular meetings, and a small Sunday school and Religio are being held with good interest.

We were pleased with the presence of our worthy missionary, J. W. Wight of the Twelve, who came to our district November 17, and will visit as many places as possible with the short time he has to stay. Taking it all in all, we can see a gradual increase in the work, and while some old branches have been lost to view, others are being raised up. The financial law is better responded to than it has been for a long while; however, same can yet be very much improved. Hoping that as the year will soon come to a close, that we may yet hear from many.

Ever hoping for a better day,

JOHN ZAHND, Bishop's Agent.

News From Branches

CENTRAL CHICAGO.

Sunday, November 13. Services in charge of Brother Fred Johnson, Apostle J. W. Wight discoursing on the text, "Judge not that ye be not judged; but if ye judge, judge righteous judgment." A truly great man or woman will not become affronted if they are not called upon to occupy in a prominent place. We should always hear both sides of the case before forming an opinion or passing judgment.

Elder Tanner occupied in the evening, to the edification of his audience, on "Sanctification," and many good points were brought forth.

Beginning Thursday, the 17th, we were asked by our pastor to consider the time until Thanksgiving as denial week and bring our offering to the church on that memorial day to assist in defraying the branch expenses, etc.

The gleaners met on Thursday of this week at Sister Pe-ment's, 5217 South Forty-fourth avenue.

"The soul reposing on assured relief,

Feels herself happy amidst all her grief,

Forgets her labor as she toils along,

Weeps tears of joy, and bursts into a song."

ALICE CARY SCHWARTZ.

6549 MARSHFIELD AVENUE; Phone, Wentworth 8731.

TRINIDAD, COLORADO.

It is not often that anything appears in your columns from southern Colorado. We thought maybe a few words from this locality might be of interest to some. There are a few Saints here who are trying to keep the banner floating to the breeze, but under very adverse circumstances. The work is in charge of Bro. H. W. Berry, a young priest, who is doing the best he can. The writer having visited this locality several times while under General Conference appointment, and realizing the need of the work, a few weeks ago decided to take up his abode here and do what he could toward getting the gospel before the people.

On the 11th of last month we drove the laundry wagon into the barn and took train for Trinidad; arriving here, we at once found employment at the carpenter trade, and began preparations for public services. By the assistance of a few in a financial way, we secured Castle Hall, for Sunday services, at a very reasonable rent, and we are holding forth there every Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m.

While the hall is not crowded, yet some attend every service, to whom our explanation of the Bible is new. The writer has felt impressed for some time that there was a work to be done in this city, and we still believe there will be an ingathering in time. We have enjoyed excellent liberty in presenting the word, and have some interest manifest on the part of strangers.

Surely, with the terrible accidents that have taken place in this locality of late, the people ought to begin to awaken to the fact that life is very uncertain. On October 8 there was an explosion in the Starkville mine, about eight miles from here, that snuffed out the lives of fifty-six miners, and last Tuesday, the 8th of this month, an explosion at the Delaigua mine, twenty-two miles from here, caused the death of over eighty, and the death roll may reach over one hundred. The city of Trinidad has been the scene of the saddest occurrences ever noted by the writer. There has been almost one continuous funeral procession for a month; as high as six and eight hearses in line at a time. One night last week there were thirty-two bodies taken to the Catholic cemetery on transfer and express wagons, the undertakers not being able to furnish a sufficient number of hearses to accommodate so large a funeral. Last January the Primero mine, near here, had an explosion that killed seventy-six miners, to say nothing of the few that have been killed in other ways in these coal mines.

While these things are terrible to note, and may not be of interest to many, yet it is very evident that we are living in perilous times, and it is an evidence to us who believe the prophecies that the end is near. We contemplate moving the family here soon and making this city our abode for a while, as we think we can make a living here as well as in other parts, and hope to be of benefit in church work. S.

DES MOINES, IOWA.

Des Moines is now in the midst of a bitter fight. The saloons have only till July 1 to enjoy the privilege of conducting a legalized criminal business, and can only continue thus longer by the voters of this city saying that they have their consent to break the statutory laws of the State of Iowa, by the payment of a certain amount of bribe money, which the State of Iowa has said they will take providing the majority of the voters consent that they shall, and to let this criminal business continue. Some of those who are numbered with the Saints have been made to think, that so long as intoxicating liquors are made, therefore they will be sold, but they forget that by not filing their protest against the sale of it they are consenting to the existence of the sale of it, for the enrichment of the few to the despoiling of the homes of the many. They are also consenting to a business, the proceeds of which are found in poverty, filth, and crime; in divorces, theft, lying, and murder, in sapping society of its peace, our young men of their manhood, and giving to the fair daughters of our country for husbands this blighted manhood, and to business those incapacitated for the best service, and many of the defaulters of the country. Shall we who worship the God of temperance consent to let such business exist that tempts our neighbor's son, if not our own, and brings him to a drunkard's grave and the father and mother to a premature death, preceded by days of blighted hopes, and grief for which there is no healing? The name Saint would very illy apply to one who would thus consent, and those who will not come out openly against such a grave evil, will not be considered valiant in the faith that leads the child of God to add to his faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and such very crudely represent the golden rule, to do to others as they would have others do to them, for we would want our neighbor to consent to nothing existing that would tempt our boy or bring sorrow to a single brow within our home. We know that there are in nearly every home those who are easily tempted by the saloon and those who frequent such places to their enslavement, making it impossible for them to be truly happy themselves or to make others happy. To sign a mulct petition is to consent to the legalizing of a crime, and who would want to meet such a record at the judgment of the Lord? I do not expect to see a single name of a Latter Day Saint published as attached to a petition that legalizes a crime, any more than I would expect to see their name appear on the docket of the police courts as a criminal,—a self-confessed criminal. Many prayers are ascending to the God of nations that he will overrule that our city will be freed from the saloon, and much of money and time is given freely by the business men and women, to give us freedom from this germ of crime and poverty.

Sunday, the 13th, the district presidency and assistant minister in charge were at Boone, and enjoyed spiritual liberty in an all day service, during which time three sermons were preached and a Sunday school session was held. The liberality shown at this place among the Saints is exceptional, and to be commended. We feel sure that something better awaits this branch and people.

Bro. Adam Wylie, of Perry, with a stranger associate, was at the evening service last Sunday. There was also present at the same time an old gentleman who knew of the Saints in Ohio, when a boy, then moved to near Nauvoo when the Saints were there, and lived a neighbor to Elder Jason Briggs for several years in this State. He has nothing but commendation for the faith of the church, even expressing belief in it, but has never obeyed it. He remembers Brother Roth, who lodged at his home while holding meetings in Hardin County, and has nothing but a good word for him. He may be remembered by others of the Saints to whom he has shown kindnesses. His name is Calvin Jones. At the close of the service last night he remarked that he had heard the first sermon since he had heard the Latter Day Saint elders before. He does not attend the services of other churches very often, but he says when he wants to hear a sermon he comes to the Latter Day Saints.

Since writing the above I have enjoyed a visit from the one above referred to, and learn that he was baptized a member of the church, by Brother Wilsey many years ago, but through the teachings of Brother Jason Briggs after he fell into spiritual darkness, he stumbled, yet always retained belief in the gospel principles, and has tried to live an honorable life. He rejoices, he says, to be permitted to hear another gospel sermon, and to enjoy the association of the Saints. The fires that have remained latent for years have again sprung up, and he hopes to live in the light of them the few remaining years of his life.

A very commendable effort is being continued to reclaim the wayward members of this branch, and we are thankful to record that some are returning to confess their waywardness, and to begin anew, but some are quite determined in wrongdoing. Mercy is being shown, but when it is known that they care nothing for the church and can not be awakened to the necessity of repentance the law will be honored. How sad to know that any one of God's children will so far be overcome that he loses all interest in the loving work of the Savior!

The Utah elders have been and are very active in this district and city, and have darkened counsel with words without knowledge, and brought confusion to the minds of some who had become somewhat unfaithful to their covenant.

A special effort is now being made to unite all the churches in one missionary effort, to have one mission house centrally located to be supported conjointly by all the churches, in which the unfortunate will be cared for; and while being cared for temporarily they will be taught the better things of the kingdom. This is commendable from a charitable and social point of view, but since they have not the bread of heaven to minister to their poor souls it is but a partial relief. Could we have a public place where such an effort could be made, I am sure that much good could be done, and many be brought to see the beauty of the kingdom of God.

Reports referred to auditing committee, who reported them correct. Chose officers as follows: District president, G. H. Knowlton; councilors, J. J. Billings, James H. Robbins; secretary, W. A. Small; treasurer, Pearl F. Billings. Above elected for six months. Voted to hold next conference at Stonington on Saturday and Sunday before the full moon in May. Chose for delegates to General Conference: E. B. Hull, J. J. Billings, G. H. Knowlton, Arthur Koehler, Augustus Koehler. Those attending to cast full vote of district, and in case of a division to cast individual votes. Time and nature of meetings left with the presidency. Voted that money received from Brother Koehler for organ fund be placed in district treasury. Voted to furnish money to help defray expenses of the Rockland debate if such should take place. W. A. Small, district secretary.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.—District conference convened with the Saints at Lagonda, Missouri, August 27, 1910. Brn. E. L. Henson and F. T. Mussell presiding, William C. Chapman and William B. Richards secretaries. Bevier, Higbee, and Green Leaf branches reported. Ministerial reports were read from Elders William B. Richards, F. T. Mussell, F. A. Evans, and Ed. E. Thomas; Priest George Essig; Teacher C. A. Brown. Bishop's agent, William B. Richards, reported: Balance due church at last report, $21.60; receipts, $312.48; disbursements, $318.60; balance due church, $15.48. District treasurer William C. Chapman reported: On hand at last report, $14.99; receipts, $16; expenditures, $18.27; balance due district August 14, 1910, $12.72. These reports were audited and found correct. Bro. J. A. Tanner having resigned as district historian, a motion prevailed extending to him a vote of thanks for his long and faithful services. Bro. William C. Chapman having been chosen as district historian, a motion was passed indorsing the choice made by Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. Bro. F. T. Mussell was elected district president for the next year; William B. Richards vice-president; William C. Chapman secretary and treasurer. Preaching by E. L. Henson, William B. Richards, and F. T. Mussell. Adjourned to call of district presidency.

FREMONT.—District Sunday school association met in convention at Hamburg, Iowa, October 14, 1910. At 10 o'clock a social service in charge of N. L. Mortimore and James Comstock was held. At 11 o'clock joint business session in charge of Supt. C. W. Forney. C. W. Forney reported having attended to the duty of superintendent of the district and had organized one Sunday school in Tabor City. Sadie Leeka, district librarian, reported having exchanged the books for the circulating library, and several new books had been added. A large number of books had been read, and those who had access to public libraries were requested to take advantage of the opportunity to read as many good books as possible, to find new books for libraries. Reports were read from the following schools showing enrollment; Glenwood 26, Shenandoah 51; Henderson 43, Thurman 73, Tabor 23, Zion's Hope (Hamburg) 44. A bill of printing programs was presented by superintendent, one dollar and twenty-five cents, which was allowed and ordered paid from treasury. A motion that we provide for an institute session, the time, place, and nature to be left to district officers, carried. At 3 o'clock institute session in charge of superintendent, in which the points in the standard of excellence were discussed; the blackboard work was by T. A. Hougas. At 7.30 an instructive and entertaining program was rendered. Adjourned to meet just prior to and at same place of holding next district conference. C. W. Forney, district superintendent; Roy Dunsdon, secretary.

AGENT'S NOTICE.

Dear Saints of Chatham District, Canada: The year of 1910 will soon be closed; kindly ask yourselves the following questions:

1. Have I individually paid my tithing and offering?
2. Am I keeping my tithing and offering back for the lack of faith in God and his church?
3. Am I satisfied to see others pay in their tithing and offering and get their reward, and I have a burned conscience, losing my reward both here and hereafter?
4. Am I an honest Latter Day Saint and not paying my tithing and offering?
5. Can I truthfully say I love this latter day message and not pay tithing and offering?

These are very important questions to you, my dear Saints, individually. The work of God needs your financial help and you need the help of God and his church.

Others paying in their tithing and offering will not pay yours, even supposing millions were paid in.

Our Bishop's agent's books close on the 15th of December, 1910, and it would be well to see your name appear on the 1910 report.

You will feel better and be enabled to have faith to ask the Lord to bless you in your basket and store.

Your brother,

J. H. TYRRELL.

CHATHAM, ONTARIO, 197 King Street West, Oct. 31, 1910.

The Bishopric.

To the Saints of the Nauvoo District, Greeting: The year 1910 is drawing to a close. Only about one and one half months till our report to the presiding Bishop must close,—January 1. We should like to have every Saint whose name is on our branch records respond before we close our books; if possible. If you have no tithing to pay, perhaps you can spare an offering of either a great or a small amount. It will do you good; it will do us good; it will help the work. Your help is needed and always appreciated. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." He has promised to reward those who do give. Has he rewarded you? It is a day of sacrifice and of tithing. What can you sacrifice? Are you willing to give up that you want for yourself in order to help the work? Let us examine ourselves. The work needs your assistance along this line, and you need the assistance the church can give you in a spiritual response. Let our labors be mutual.

GEORGE P. LAMBERT,
DON C. SALISBURY,
MARK H. SIEGFRIED,
Bishopric of the District.

Conference Notices.

The Spokane district conference will convene on Saturday, December 10, 1910, at 10 a. m. at the Spokane chapel, corner Third avenue, and Smith street. It is essential to the best interests of the work that every branch be represented at the conference, sending full and complete reports, these sent by mail should reach the undersigned by December 8, at the latest. W. W. Fordham, secretary.

Resolution of Appreciation

OF THE SERVICES OF ELDER ARTHUR LEVERTON AS PRESIDENT OF THE CHATHAM DISTRICT OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

Whereas, God, in his infinite wisdom and goodness has called our beloved brother to the sacred office of patriarch, and,

Whereas, The duties of this office open up a new field of spiritual labor for our brother, causing him to retire from the district presidency;

Therefore be it resolved, That we take this opportunity to express our warm appreciation of his long and faithful service in the interest of this district, and,

That our prayers be unanimous that God's choicest blessings may attend his labors in his new calling.

Signed on behalf of Chatham District,
 G. M. SHIPPY,
 DAVID SMITH,
 STEWART LAMONT,

A Wonderful News Service.

Have you ever paused to think what a marvelous organization must be necessary to lay before you each day an accurate account of the happenings of yesterday in Europe, Asia, Africa, South America, Australia, the islands of the sea, and the whole expanse of our own continent, all in a single newspaper? The intricate network of cables and telegraph lines, the complicated chain of news-gathering agencies stretching across continents and oceans, the innumerable reporters working daily for you under tropic suns and over arctic snows—have you ever felt the romantic thrill of it all in reading a great modern newspaper such as The Chicago Record-Herald? We mention this paper especially because of the completeness of its domestic and foreign news service. It has a correspondent in every town or city of importance in the United States, a veritable army of them in all. In addition it has the benefit of the foreign news service of the New York Herald, famous for its world-wide cable system, and for the reliability of its foreign news; also that of the New York World and the New York Journal of Commerce, besides that of the great co-operative news-gathering organization, the Associated Press. With such a vast and complete news service it is not strange that The Record-Herald so easily holds its own as one of the great newspapers of the world.

THE CHURCH IN COURT.

DECISIONS OF UNITED STATES AND CANADIAN COURTS AFFECTING THE STANDING OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

(This article will be published in tract form.)

INTRODUCTION.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized April 6, 1830. Joseph Smith, sometimes known as Joseph Smith the Martyr, was the chief instrument in the hands of God in perfecting this organization.

Joseph Smith was slain June 27, 1844. A period of confusion and disorganization ensued. Ambitious leaders arose. Among them was Brigham Young, who led a certain number to Utah, where they acquired more or less temporal power, and where they began to promulgate certain doctrines, such as polygamy, that had been no part of the belief of the church in the days of Joseph the Martyr.

Other members of the original church came together and reorganized on the original plan, forming what has since been termed the Reorganized Church. Joseph Smith, the oldest son of Joseph Smith the Martyr, took his place at the head of the Reorganized Church April 6, 1860. He had received a divine personal call to that position, besides having been blessed and set apart for that work by his father.

The Reorganized Church claims to be in fact the church of Christ. It claims further to be the legal heir, and in succession to all rights, privileges, and properties belonging to the church established in 1830.

These claims have been challenged, and on several occasions the question has been carried to the civil courts, where evidences could be weighed before unprejudiced tribunals and where an authoritative decision could be rendered.

THE KIRTLAND TEMPLE SUIT.

February 23, 1880, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by its attorneys, appeared before the Court of Common Pleas, Lake County, Ohio, (see journal entry, February term, 1880,) as plaintiff, asking for possession of the Kirtland Temple, an edifice erected during the early days of the church, and prior to the death of Joseph Smith the Martyr. The church in Utah, then presided over by John Taylor, was named with others as defendants.

Judge L. S. Sherman rendered the following decision:

Now at this term of the Court came the Plaintiff by attorneys, E. L. Kelley, and Burrows and Bosworth, and Defendants came not, but made default; and thereupon, w the assent of the Court, and on motion and by the consent of the Plaintiff a trial by jury is waived and this cause is submitted to the Court for trial, and the cause came on for trial to the Court upon the pleadings and evidence, and was argued by counsel; on consideration whereof, the Court do find a matters of fact:

1st. That notice was given to the Defendants in this action by publication of notice as required by the statutes of the State of Ohio; except as to the Defendant, Sarah F. Videon, who was personally served with process.

2d. That there was organized on the 6th day of April, 1830, at Palmyra, in the State of New York, by Joseph Smith, a religious society, under the name of "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," which in the same year removed in a body and located in Kirtland, Lake County, Ohio; which said Church held and believed, and was founded upon certain well defined doctrines, which were set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

3d. That on the 11th day of February, A. D. 1841, one William Marks and his wife, Rosannah, by Warranty Deed, of that date, conveyed to said Joseph Smith as sole Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, being the same Church organized as aforesaid, the lands and tenements described in the petition, and which are described as follows:

[The description of the land is omitted.—E. A. S.]

And upon said lands said Church had erected a church edifice known as The Temple, and were then in the possession and occupancy thereof, for religious purposes, and so continued until the disorganization of said Church, which occurred about 1844. That the main body of said religious society had removed from Kirtland aforesaid, and were located at Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1844, when said Joseph Smith died, and said Church was disorganized and the membership (then being estimated at about 100,000) scattered in smaller fragments, each claiming to be the original and true Church before named, and located in different States and places.

That one of said fragments, estimated at ten thousand, removed to the Territory of Utah under the leadership of Brigham Young, and located there, and with accessions since, now constitute the Church in Utah, under the leadership and Presidency of John Taylor, and is named as one of the defendants in this action.

That after the departure of said fragment of said church for Utah, a large number of the officials and membership of the original church which was disorganized at Nauvoo, reorganized under the name of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and on the 5th day of February, 1873, became incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois, and since that time all other fragments of said original Church (except the church in Utah) have dissolved, and the membership has largely become incorporated with said Reorganized Church which is the Plaintiff in this action.

That the said Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is a Religious Society, founded and organized upon the same doctrines and tenets, and having the same church organization, as the original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, by Joseph Smith, and was organized pursuant to the constitution, laws and usages of said original Church, and has branches located in Illinois, Ohio and other States.

That the church in Utah, the Defendant of which John Taylor is president, has materially and largely departed from the faith, doctrines, laws, ordinances and usages of said original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and has incorporated into its system of faith the doctrines of celestial marriage and a plurality of wives, and the doctrine of Adam-god worship, contrary to the laws and constitution of said original Church.

And the Court do further find that the Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is the True and Lawful continuation of, and successor to the said original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, and is entitled in law to all its rights and property.

The leading points sustained by the above quoted decision may be summarized as follows:

The Reorganization is the legal successor to the church organized April 6, 1830, under the leadership of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

That polygamy and kindred false doctrines were first promulgated and adopted by the church in Utah, such doctrines not having any place in the faith of the original church during the days of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

That the Reorganized Church, being one with the original church in organization and doctrine, is the legal continuation of said church, and heir to all its rights and properties.

THE RULING OF A CANADIAN COURT.

May 19, 1893, Hiram Dickout, a regularly ordained priest of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at Niagara Falls, Canada, solemnized the marriage of Abraham H. Taylor and Alice E. Vance.

Priest Dickout was arraigned before a police magistrate and fined ten dollars. The charge in effect was that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was not a Christian denomination, and hence under the laws of the Dominion (R. S. O., ch. 13, sec. 1,) a minister of that church could not legally solemnize a marriage.

An appeal was taken and the case came before Chief Justice Armour, at Toronto, November 27, 1893. The following decision was rendered by Judge

Armour, as reported in the Toronto Mail, November 28, 1893; also in the Globe:

We think it quite clear that this conviction can not be maintained. The defendant was clearly a duly ordained minister of this religious body, and there is no doubt that it is a religious denomination within the words of the statute. Assuming that Christianity is the law of the land in a sense, there is nothing contrary to Christianity in the tenets of this body. It is true they have something supplemental to the Bible, but that is the case with every church or denomination. The Church of England has its creeds and the Presbyterian Church its confession. That does not make the church an anti-Christian one. The statute does not say "Christian," but "religious." If it said "Christian" it would exclude Jews. The fundamental law of the country makes no distinction between churches or denominations. Every person is at liberty to worship his Maker in the way he pleases. We have, or ought to have, in this country perfect freedom of speech and perfect freedom of worship. Conviction quashed.

Under the above decision Latter Day Saints enjoy equal rights with other churches in Canada and retain their standing as a religious body. Enemies of the church sometimes charge that it is not Christian, but the charge can not be maintained before an unprejudiced court.

THE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This case was tried before Judge John F. Philips, in the Circuit Court of the United States, for the Western District of Missouri, Western Division, at Kansas City, Missouri.

The property involved was a tract of land in the city of Independence, Missouri, known as the Temple Lot, acquired by the church in the early thirties, and at a later date claimed by a body of people known as the Church of Christ, more commonly called "Hedrickites."

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ appeared as plaintiff, the Church of Christ or "Hedrickites" as defendant. The dominant church in Utah came to the aid of the defendant, not openly, but to such an extent that Judge Philips in his decision spoke of it as "the power behind the throne." They furnished many leading witnesses, including Wilford Woodruff, president of the Utah church, Lorenzo Snow, president of the Utah Twelve, and at least two of the women who had become notorious by reason of their claim that they were plural wives of Joseph Smith the Martyr.

Able attorneys represented both sides, and many witnesses were summoned. An abstract of the evidence fills a book of five hundred and ninety-seven pages. The decision of the judge occupies an additional twenty-eight pages.

The question was largely one of doctrine, and a desperate attempt was made to prove that Joseph Smith the Martyr taught polygamy. Every effort possible was made to break down the claim of the Reorganized Church to succession.

The judge sustained the Reorganized Church on every material point. On an appeal to the Appellate Court the decision as to the possession of the property was set aside and the defendants were permitted to retain possession of the Temple Lot, solely on the ground that the Reorganized Church had not moved soon enough, a question of laches. The decision of Judge Philips as to the weight of evidence presented and the standing of the Reorganized Church as the legal successor to the church established April 6, 1830, was never reversed and still stands. The Reorganized Church was merely unfortunate in not presenting its claims at a date sufficiently early to come within the statute of limitation.

In his decision, rendered March 16, 1894, Judge Philips said:

Beyond all cavil, if human testimony is to place any matter for ever at rest, this church was one in doctrine, government, and purpose from 1830 to June, 1844, when Joseph Smith, its founder, was killed. It had the same federal head, governing bodies, and faith. During this period there was no schism, no secession, no "parting of the ways," in any matter fundamental, or affecting its oneness.

The only authorized and recognized books of doctrine and laws for the government of the church from 1830 to 1846 were the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. The Book of Doctrine and Covenants, which consisted principally of claimed divine revelations to Joseph Smith, was the edition published at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1835, and at Nauvoo in 1845. . . .

There can be no question of the fact that Brigham Young's assumed presidency was a bold and bald usurpation. The Book of Doctrine and Covenants (printed in 1846) page 411, containing a revelation to Joseph Smith, January 19, 1841, gave unto them "my servant Joseph, to be a presiding elder over all my church, to be a translator, a revelator, a seer, and a prophet." . . . The book clearly taught that the succession should descend lineally and go to the first-born. Joseph Smith so taught, and, before his taking off, publicly proclaimed his son Joseph, the present head of Complainant Church, his successor, and he was so anointed. . . .

The Book of Mormon itself inveighed against the sin of polygamy. . . . Conformably to the Book of Mormon, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants expressly declared "that we believe that one man should have but one wife, and one woman but one husband." And this declaration of the church on this subject reappeared in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, editions of 1846 and 1856. Its first appearance as a dogma of the church (the dogma of polygamy) was in the Utah Church in 1852.

Claim is made by the Utah Church that this doctrine is predicated of a revelation made to Joseph Smith in July, 1843. No such revelation was ever made public during the life of Joseph Smith, and under the law of the church it could not become an article of faith and belief until submitted to and adopted by the church. This was never done. . . .

The Utah Church further departed from the principles and doctrines of the original church by changing in their teaching the first statement in the Article of Faith, which was, "We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost," and in lieu thereof taught the doctrine of "Adam God worship." . . .

It has introduced societies of a secret order, and established secret oaths and covenants, contrary to the book of teachings of the old church. It has changed the duties of the President, and of the Twelve, and established the doctrine to "Obey Counsel," and has changed the order of the "Seventy, or Evangelists." . . .

A considerable number of the officers and members of the church at Nauvoo did not ally themselves with any of the factions, and wherever they were they held onto the faith, refused to follow Brigham Young to Utah, and ever repudiated the doctrine of polygamy, which was the great rock of offense on which the church split after the death of Joseph Smith.

In 1852 the scattered fragments of the church, the remnants of those who held to the fortunes of the present Joseph Smith, son of the so-called "Martyr," gathered together sufficiently for a nucleus of organization. They took the name of "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," and avowed their allegiance to the teachings of the ancient church; and their epitome of faith adopted, while containing differences in phraseology, in its essentials is but a reproduction of that of the church as it existed from 1830 to 1844. To-day they are twenty-five thousand strong.

It is charged by the Respondents, as an echo of the Utah Church, that Joseph Smith, "the Martyr," secretly taught and practiced polygamy; and the Utah contingent furnishes the evidence, and two of the women, to prove this fact. It perhaps would be uncharitable to say of these women that they have borne false testimony as to their connection with Joseph Smith; but, in view of all the evidence and circumstances surrounding the alleged intercourse, it is difficult to escape the conclusion that at most they were but sports in "nest hiding." In view of the contention of the Salt Lake party, that polygamy obtained at Nauvoo as early as 1841, it must be a little embarrassing to President Woodruff of that organization when he is confronted, as he was in the evidence in this case, with a published card in the church organ at Nauvoo in October, 1843, certifying that he knew of no other rule or system of marriage than the one published in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and that the "secret wife system," charged against the church, was a creature of invention by one Doctor Bennett, and that they knew of no such society. That certificate was signed by the leading members of the church, including John Taylor the former President of the Utah Church. And a similar certificate was published by the Ladies' Relief Society of the same place, signed by Emma Smith, the wife of Joseph Smith, and Phoebe Woodruff, wife of the present President Woodruff. No such marriage ever occurred under the rules of the church, and no offspring came from the imputed illicit intercourse, although Joseph Smith was in the full vigor of young manhood, and his wife, Emma, was giving birth to healthy children in regular order, and was eniente at the time of Joseph's death.

But if it were conceded that Joseph Smith, and Hyrum, his brother, did secretly practice concubinage, is the church to be charged with those liaisons, and the doctrine of polygamy to be predicated thereon of the church? If so, I suspect the doctrine of polygamy might be imputed to many of the Gentile churches. Certainly it was never promulgated, taught, nor recognized, as a doctrine of the church prior to the assumption of Brigham Young.—Decision of Judge Philips in Temple Lot Case, pp. 20-26.

By reading the foregoing decision the reader will discover the following facts:

Brigham Young's assumption of the presidency was a bold and bald usurpation.

He it was who introduced polygamy and kindred false doctrines.

These false doctrines are denounced by the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, which three books were the standards of authority in the church during the days of Joseph Smith, and are still standards of authority to the Reorganized Church.

An effort to prove that Joseph Smith was a polygamist can not successfully be made before a competent court that is capable of weighing evidence, not even when his reputed plural wives are present.

The Reorganized Church is in line of succession and has kept the faith, having shaped its course in harmony with the word of God and in such a way as to merit the approval of all good men.

A STATEMENT BY HON. JULIUS C. BURROWS AND THE HON. FRED T. DUBOIS.

Reed Smoot, a member of the twelve apostles of the dominant church in Utah, having been elected to the United States Senate, took the oath of office, March 5, 1903.

A protest against the seating of Reed Smoot having been filed with the Senate, the matter was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

This committee, composed of leading senators of the United States, summoned many witnesses, including the president of the dominant church in Utah, investigated a great mass of documentary evidence, and made a thorough and exhaustive investigation of "Mormon" history. Their work of investigation continued until June, 1906. A transcript of the evidence taken and speeches made fills four large volumes.

The Committee on Privileges and Elections was not a court, in the strict sense of the term, but it had some of the functions of a court. The Reorganized Church was not directly involved, as it had no interest in the seating of Reed Smoot, but the matter was overruled, divinely or otherwise, so that it terminated to our favor.

For these reasons, we have decided to use in this connection certain statements made by the chairman of the committee, United States Senator Julius C. Burrows, while reviewing the matter before the United States Senate, December 11, 1906. The position of the man making the statements, the unusual opportunity that had been his to discover the truth, the great publicity of the utterance, and the fact that it was made before one of the greatest legislative bodies in the world, gives great weight to that which we shall quote.

Concerning the origin of polygamy Senator Burrows said:

In order to induce his followers more readily to accept this infamous doctrine, Brigham Young himself invoked the name of Joseph Smith, the Martyr, whom many sincerely believed to be a true prophet, and ascribed to him the reception of a revelation from the Almighty in 1843, commanding the Saints to take unto themselves a multiplicity of wives, limited in number only by the measures of their desires. . . . Such the mythical story palmed off on a deluded people.—Congressional Record, December 13, 1906.

Concerning the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, he said:

The death of Joseph Smith in 1844, however, carried dismay and demoralization throughout the entire membership of the Mormon church, scattering its adherents in divers directions and for the time being seemed to presage the complete overthrow and dissolution of the organization. Recovering, however, from the shock, the scattered bands soon reappeared in various parts of the country and promulgated their doctrines with increased zeal, and set to work to reassemble and reorganize their scattered forces, resulting finally in the formation of what is now known and recognized as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa, and presided over by Joseph Smith, a son of the Prophet. The courts have repeatedly declared this organization to be the legitimate successor of the original Mormon church, and its adherents, numbering some 50,000 peaceable, patriotic, and law abiding citizens scattered throughout the United States in small church societies, conforming to the laws of their country wherever they may be and adhering to the faith of the founder of their creed, repudiating and denouncing the doctrine of polygamy and its attendant crimes, without temple, endowment house, or secret order, worship in the open like other church organizations, unquestioned and unmolested.—Congressional Record, December 13, 1906.

Another member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, Senator Fred T. Dubois, in a speech before the United States Senate, December 13, 1906, confirmed the statements made by Mr. Burrows. Senator Dubois said:

It is only fair, I think, for me to say—and I am glad the distinguished Senator from Michigan (Mr. Burrows) treated upon it the other day—that there is a branch of the Mormons, called the "Josephites," who ought to be separated clearly in the minds of all Senators from the Brighamite Mormons. The Josephites claim that they are the custodians of the church as it was founded. They claim that Brigham Young has interjected doctrines into the church which the Mormons did not accept in the beginning. At any rate, however that may be, the Josephite Mormons, with their headquarters at Lamoni, in the State of Iowa, and wherever they are, no matter in what part of the country, are among the best of our citizens in all respects.—Congressional Record, December 17, 1906.

Elders' Note-Book

CITY MISSIONARY WORK.

Every organization has its beginning in what may be properly termed missionary work. So the church, both in its local and general organic forms, has had its existence in special missionary work.

Missionary work comprehends in its entirety the work of the Christ, and may be divided into the general and the local departments of that work.

City missionary work is much misunderstood, some gathering their understanding from what they have known of missionary work in the country or in country towns, and others from what they have known of missionary work in the years past. City missionary work of to-day is vastly different from what it was ten and more years ago, and it is very much different from country work or work in country towns. In the country places where the elders have gone there is generally some Saint located to furnish a home for the missionary, and to use influence and time in securing a place for services; and generally the places secured are inexpensive, while in country towns there is generally a hall secured by a small rental paid by the located Saints or secured without expense through the influence of some member of the church or friend of the missionary.

In the city, if a hall is secured it is quite expensive, and the Saints have but little time to spend in securing a place for service, or for attending; or so it has been in some of the cities in which I have labored. To hold services in private houses is not like it is in the country, for in the country the neighbors are all acquainted and feel free to attend such services, while in the cities the acquaintance of the Saints is not so extended, and there is a timidity about attending services in a private home, and a timidity about permitting a private home to be used for services.

In the cities the tension is great upon every member of any church to meet every obligation socially, financially, and religiously of the church of which they are members, and they have but little time to attend other services, and but very little time to read if literature is furnished them free; while in the country there are not so many demands made upon members of other churches, and by society upon others, and therefore they have more time to read, and to attend the services when held.

City missionary work in cities where there is a branch partakes, more or less, of both the local and general missionary features, and a uniting of those who are selected to care for the local organization and the missionary in all the work that is done, the extent of the missionary efforts depending very largely, if not altogether, upon the conditions of the local work and the help rendered by the local organization either as an organization or as individuals composing it.

The first missionary work done in this city and vicinity was by Elders Ebenezer Page, John Swain, and John A. McIntosh; then followed William Stephens, who was appointed the first mission in "Des Moines and vicinity" specially. Then followed Elder Gordon E. Deuel, who did very efficient work, and for quite a length of time; then Elders I. N. White and W. C. Nirk, in about 1868 to 1870, associated at times with Elder N. Stamm, a man of great faith, through whose administrations many have been healed. The work of Father Nirk was so acceptable that he was continued in responsible positions in the district till his age and health forbade his trying to do more. He lives in the memory of all who know him, whether in the church or out, as "Father Nirk," "Daddy Nirk," or some very familiar title, that shows that he has been ever near the people in all his ministrations. Following them was Elder A. White, and later Elder R. Etzenhouser. From a letter of his of late date I read: "I think my first advent there was in 1880, in winter. Bro. I. N. White and I labored near Brother Vice's. A distant appointment had been made. We started by cutter to fill it about 5 o'clock p. m. Reaching the schoolhouse, no one was there or came later, the house was locked, and we in the storm, an Iowa blizzard. Had we been soldiers inclined to retreat, our course would have been easy. A twenty-five mile drive in pelting sleet that almost cut our eyeballs open, landed us at the friendly home of Bro. C. F. Merrill, at a late hour. The next morning Brother White departed for home, leaving me to begin work in the city. The team was fed from Brother Merrill's crib, I at his table, and those of other Saints. Our church was anybody's parlor, or kitchen, as it happened. Some baptisms occurred. Among others old Sister Parmenter, about seventy-five years of age. With ice house tools it took half a day to locate and make ready a place, because of the varying depths of the water and two feet of ice. The day was fiercely cold, the mile and a half drive did not deter the earnest candidate, and all went well. Among others, at another time, a colored lady was baptized, whose name I do not recall. Neither do I recall the number. The services lasted some weeks. While much had been done before, there had come a lapse. From this time the progress, I believe, was more steady. The summer of 1881 Bro. I. N. White arranged to hold three open air services on Governor's Square, not far from the State Capitol, on a given Sunday. Circumstances defeated his attendance, so it fell to my lot to fill the appointments. I felt about as well as Jonah with his undesirable job. To add to my discomfiture some of the Saints (?).

said they would not go; nor did they. They did not want to be humiliated by a green boy. I was compelled to, in a way, admire their judgment, but could not appreciate their help. Old Bro. Robert Young, a fine appearing man, a good singer, and eloquent and earnest in prayer, aided me, as also the Saints generally. The attendance was good, the hour was filled, God's blessing attended, and the interest of the cause was maintained to the degree that the venture was repeated with the same preacher. Even those Saints (?) who had taken leave of absence from the first occasion were there. They were usually loyal, and later removed from there and aided elsewhere. . . . I have noted events as they have transpired there and rejoiced at their success. My largest pleasure, perhaps, issuing from there was that from the young, efficient workers have arisen to aid in the work of the Lord."

Elder J. R. Lambert assisted in the work here in his duties to set in order, in 1885, as an apostle, followed by Elder E. C. Brand. The next two, Elders W. T. Bozarth and James McKiernan, were for a time presidents of the branch during 1888 and 1889. Then came Elders O. B. Thomas and C. Scott, and along during these years Elder J. S. Roth came to minister from time to time. Elders D. M. Rudd and F. A. Smith ministered in the year 1894, and rendered some valuable help in adjusting conditions that had become quite complicated. In 1898 and 1899 Elder T. J. Sheldon labored and acted part of the time as branch president.

The next missionary that the records make special mention of in the city work was the present incumbent, who was first appointed to the district, with special instructions from the minister in charge to minister principally in the city of Des Moines during the latter part of the year 1900, and then followed the further appointments growing out of what seemed to be a necessity that continued missionary work should be carried on in the city.

What might have been the result had perfect unity existed among the children of God in support of the missionary efforts of the past we can only conjecture, but that the church here would have been much advanced numerically and spiritually we are safe in deciding. To show the conditions that have confronted some of the missionaries who have been sent here to regulate and set in order according to their office and duty, I only quote a brief statement from one of the letters received from one who has labored here. He says in answer to my request from him for a brief history of his missionary work in the city of Des Moines: "My earlier years of service in Des Moines were most anything but pleasant experiences; I don't think it would make good reading." I believe that the city will not require any future missionary to make such a historical statement. This experience was the result of some not wishing to be set in order, and as a result some went out of the church, and without being within the order of the church passed from this stage of action.

With the many opportunities now lying before the missionary, the prospects are encouraging, are bright for seed sowing in the private home of those from whom invitations have come, and invitations coming every day or so to make visitations where the party or parties are somewhat interested.

A person to do effectual missionary work in the city must be very humble, quick of discernment, patient, yet firm, and one with a general knowledge of men and conditions that prevail in cities, and with the many religions and religious influences that have their influence upon the people, and able to give an answer to everyone with meekness and fear, relating to our hope, and to the history of the church growing out of the sins of the past.

However much I may lack in being what a city missionary should be, yet these are some of the special qualifications. May God grant to prepare many who may be more effectual to minister in city missionary work than those who have labored in the past, and give to such ones added power, is my earnest prayer.

UTAH CHURCH DOES NOT WANT TOURISTS DISTURBED.

While on our way to this mission field, Bro. Charles May and I stopped for a few days in Utah to see how the dominant church there flourished "in the parched places in the wilderness in a salt land." This was in July, 1909. Upon entering the temple lot, Brother May became interested in conversation with some man, and I strolled on to see all the wonderful things which Adam, their God, had enabled them to produce.¹

Following a large company of tourists I soon found myself in the Tabernacle, where a man stood nearly two hundred feet away and dropped a pin on the floor which we heard quite plainly. We did not see the pin and do not know how large it was.

Our guide, a lady, then told us the story of how the Saints were persecuted and driven over the mountains, about the Book of Mormon, the building of the Temple, which was forty years under construction, and after covering briefly the history of the church from Joseph Smith's first vision down to date our guide gave a liberal opportunity to any and all of us to ask questions of any kind about the church. Your writer availed himself of the opportunity and the questions ran as nearly as I can remember as follows:

¹Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 50.

Q. Does this Book of Mormon, of which you have been telling us, teach polygamy?

A. No; it does not. It emphatically forbids it.

Q. Do the people of this church practice polygamy?

A. No; we do not! (This short and curt.)

Q. Do you people not have a revelation on polygamy? Did not this people practice polygamy at one time?

A. Yes; formerly there was a revelation given through Joseph Smith, the Prophet, commanding the practice of polygamy, and it was practiced to some extent; but the Manifesto was given later, which prohibited the practice.

Q. When was this polygamous revelation given?

A. It was given soon after the organization of the church; about 1832, I think, but do not just remember the date.²

Q. And the Manifesto, when was it given?

A. It was given in 1890.

Q. So as a result of this Manifesto you ceased to practice polygamy as a people?

A. Yes; there is no more polygamy here now.

²August 29, 1852, the revelation on the celestial law of marriage was first made public. Hand Book of Reference, page 72. Juvenile Instructor Office, Salt Lake City, Utah, 1884.

At a conference in Salt Lake City, August 29, 1852, Orson Pratt said: "It is quite unexpected to me, brethren and sisters, to be called upon to address you this forenoon; and still more so to address you upon the principle which has been named, namely a plurality of wives. It is rather new ground for me; that is, I have not been in the habit of publicly speaking upon this subject; and it is rather new ground to the inhabitants of the United States, and not only to them but to a portion of the inhabitants of Europe, a portion of them have not been in the habit of preaching a doctrine of this description; consequently we shall have to break up new ground. . . ."

Brigham Young said the same day, "You heard Brother Pratt state, this morning, that a revelation would be read this afternoon, which was given previous to Joseph's death. It contains a doctrine a small portion of the world is opposed to; but I can deliver a prophecy upon it. Though that doctrine has not been practiced by the elders, this people have believed in it for years. . . . The principle spoken upon by Brother Pratt, this morning, we believe in. And I tell you—for I know it, it will sail over, and ride triumphantly above all the prejudice and priestcraft of the day; it will be fostered and believed in by the more intelligent portions of the world, as one of the best doctrines ever proclaimed to any people. Your hearts need not beat; you need not think that a mob is coming here to tread upon the sacred liberty which the Constitution of our country guarantees unto us, for it will not be. This revelation has been in my possession for many years, and who has known it? None but those who should know it. I keep a patent lock on my desk and there does not anything leak out that should not."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 119.

When in Utah I did not know that the above notes existed in their own literature, and my object in putting them in here is to expose the false impression conveyed to the public. Quoting M. H. Siegfried, "If they have any truth on the inside why do they shut it from those who are willing to turn on the light."

Q. Is it not a fact that Joseph F. Smith, the president of your church, is now living here in this city with five wives?

A. Yes; but there is a provision in the law passed by Congress which permits those who had a plurality of wives before the Manifesto was given, to retain the same; as you know it would be very unjust for Congress to pass a law which would compel a man to turn his wives out-of-doors without shelter or means of support.³

Q. Is it not a fact that Joseph F. Smith is a man possessed of considerable wealth, and could he not put these superfluous wives away and feed and clothe them without living with them as wives; and at any rate, did not Abraham turn Hagar out without shelter or means of support? See Genesis 21.

A. I am not so well posted on that, but you may be a "Josephite" trying to defend your position, and we do not wish to discuss these matters with you at all. But if you want any information go to the bureau of information and they will tell you anything you want to know.

Q. Did Joseph Smith, this so-called Prophet, whom you say received this revelation, practice polygamy?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything to prove it?

A. Yes; his history.

Q. Are you acquainted with the Times and Seasons, the official paper of the church in 1844?

A. No; I am not very well acquainted with it.

Q. Do you have access to it?

A. I could if I wanted to.

Q. Do you know what is written on page 423, volume 5 of that paper?⁴

A. No.

³The "Edmunds Bill" is recorded in their Hand Book of Reference, page 34, thus: "It proposes to disfranchise and disqualify from holding office, without judicial conviction, all who have a plurality of wives, though their marriages may have been contracted before the first law here mentioned; all such are to be held equally guilty and are to be punished alike under its provisions." For the first law herein mentioned see page 32 of same book: "In 1862 a law was passed making it criminal for a person to have more than one wife."

⁴*Times and Seasons*, volume 5, page 423: "City of Nauvoo, Illinois, Tuesday, February 1, 1844. We have lately been credibly informed, that an elder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by the name of Hiram Brown, has been preaching polygamy and other false and corrupt doctrines, in the County of Lapeer, State of Michigan.

This is to notify him and the church in general, that he has been cut off from the church, for his iniquity; and he is further notified to appear at the special conference, on the 6th of April next, to make answer to these charges."

JOSEPH SMITH,
HYRUM SMITH,
"Presidents of said Church."

Q. And page 474, same volume? ⁵

A. No.

Q. Do you know what is on page 500 of that volume 5? ⁶

A. No! but we do not want to discuss these things here with you at all; and I shall see that another party is not interrupted in this manner!!

Thus reminded of the party which had been interrupted I turned to them and began to apologize for having taken up their time. But they would not have it so, and said they had been very much interested and shook hands very heartily, though they were all perfect strangers to me.

Leaving the Tabernacle the party scattered in all directions, and the guide, with irritated step and poised head, walked straight for the bureau of information. Two persons very much interested in what had just passed walked with me and we read from Times and Seasons as we strolled toward the gate of the temple lot. Just as we paused on the sidewalk outside the gate, a big man, a bishop, to whom I had been formerly introduced, came out of the gate after us and showed a policeman's star pinned on his vest inside his coat, and said to me, "Young man, I am an officer of the law here, and I want you to get right off these grounds; and don't come back. This is private ground, and we do not permit anyone to distribute literature, express an adverse opinion, or interfere in any way whatever; so you must leave the grounds at once, and don't come back." I ventured one question: "Is this private ground, this sidewalk and street here?" "Yes, sir;" said he, "this is private ground right to the middle of the street; now go right away, and don't come back."

The police star pinned on such a portly looking gentleman had to be respected. So I said, "All right, sir," and walked off like a little man. But that half of the street on the south side of the temple lot in

NAUVOO, March 15, 1844.

"To the brethren of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, living (on) China Creek, in Hancock County; Greetings: Whereas Brother Richard Hewett has called on me to-day to know my views concerning some doctrines that are preached in your place, and states to me that some of your elders say, that a man having a certain priesthood, may have as many wives as he pleases, and that doctrine is taught here; I say unto you that that man teaches false doctrine; for there is no such doctrine taught here; neither is there any such thing practiced here. And any man that is found teaching privately or publicly any such doctrine, is culpable, and will stand a chance of being brought before the High Council, and lose his license and membership also: therefore he had better beware what he is about.

"HYRUM SMITH."

⁶ This is what we had in mind: "The law of the land and the rules of the church do not allow one man to have more than one wife alive at once."

Salt Lake City is, in the mind of the writer, disputed territory. Methinks it public ground.

Very respectfully,

H. W. SAVAGE.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

Christian Union is in fact the union of the followers of Christ, and not of the professed followers of Christ,—the former is a possibility, the latter is not. Union can never be brought about by every man following the word of God as he understands it, unless that understanding is obtained by the enlightening power of the Holy Spirit, which Spirit guides into all truth. When thus guided all will understand alike, for they will be in possession of that which was in the mind of God when he spoke.

There should be more consideration shown to those who differ from us in belief, but the fact of a difference existing is evidence that union does not exist, and our efforts should be in a Christian way, to present the evidences why we believe that we are followers of Christ and they are not.

There is but one creed recognized by the divine, and that is the truth. Jesus declares, "I am the truth." He was the living activity of what truth requires, and unless we as an individual or a collection of individuals, follow him as living activities of all that truth requires we are not followers of Christ,—hence not Christians.

The heart may be right in its desire for truth, and in a desire to do right, but unless the head, or intellect, is enlightened so that correct understanding is had the heart may be deceived in what it desires, or how to accomplish it. If the head is right it makes it possible for the heart to be right in a complete sense, but yet it may not be, for the heart may turn away from that which is known to be the truth; but if the heart is actuated with a pure desire for the truth, though the mind may be darkened by credal tradition, superstition or priestcraft, yet so long as that heart is open to receive truth from whatever source it may come God will continue to give light, here a little and there a little, till the darkness resulting from past environments will be displaced and prejudice give way to a just consideration of all that claims the element of truth, with a devoted petitioning interest, asking God for that wisdom needed to rightly determine what is truth, and to be equally able to eliminate error when error exists in the mind, or to determine what is truth in that which professes to be.

The expressed opinion, either written or spoken, of an individual or a collection of individuals, is a formulated creed. Only when this opinion results in everyone speaking "the same thing," and that expressed opinion be the same thing which God commanded Jesus Christ to express, will this formulated creed bring about the union that Christ has required, —when all will “be one, even as we are one.”—John 17: 21.

I have yet to become acquainted with a single church organization which has not a formulated creed, even though some claim they have not. The very claim not to have a creed is a part of a formulated expression of their belief. In order to lead another to believe as we do, there must be a formulated expression of that believed by some one, with whatever proof we may have to prove that our belief is correct and in agreement with the word of God.

The fellowship of every church is bounded by the ideas of her representatives in regard to what the Scriptures teach. The fellowship of those who were members of the Church of Jesus Christ in New Testament times was bounded by the ideas of her representatives and their interpretation of the Scriptures upon every doctrine and commandment taught, and that fellowship accepted of only such as believed in their interpretation of what was required to be Christ's. It is true that those who do not or did not believe in the doctrines, commands, ordinances, and laws of organization as taught by Christ and those qualified by the Holy Spirit to represent him, have no true fellowship with him, and they can not be correctly called “followers of Christ,” however honest and sincere may be their desires and intentions to follow him, for wherein one deviates from the formulated system of salvation, or “that form of doctrine which was delivered,” in the least degree, they are in that degree not following Christ. To say we accept Christ as a “personal Savior,” and to accept him in fact as such, are widely differing propositions.

The Catholic Church has ever plead for Christian Union, and their devotion to the faith they advocate, as they claim to have gathered it from divine sources, is very much in evidence by reason of the sacrifices they make for its advancement. What we have said of the Catholic Church may be said of nearly every organization calling itself the fellowship of those who believe in Christ as a personal Savior, as interpreted by them. The great difficulty with all organizations, wherein difficulty exists, is in that which is not after Christ, that in which they do not follow the formulated doctrine taught by him, and of which he became the author. The interpretation of the Christ and the apostles, under inspiration, upon every principle of truth was and is narrow, for they taught the way that leads to life, and Jesus said “narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.”

Again, since there is no other name “under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved” it must be true that if a person is saved it will be in the church that acknowledges that it is the Church of Jesus Christ, while at the same time it must teach the same principles of truth which he taught who bore that name, and that they taught in past ages who were inspired by the Holy Ghost to correctly teach in that sacred name.

Some even claim that the term “Christian” refers only to character, and not to those who accept of some particular belief, and yet such ones will strongly affirm that Jesus Christ came to teach a particular belief; and so particular was God in regard to what he taught, that Jesus says, “For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting; whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.”—John 12: 49, 50. This proves to a certainty that Jesus Christ was sent to teach a particular belief or doctrine, of which he says in one place, “My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me,”—John 7: 16; and that the command of his Father who sent him as to what he should say and speak was “life everlasting.” Then had he not have spoken as his Father commanded, no one could have secured through him “life everlasting” by believing what he taught. Only those ministers, then, who teach the same belief or doctrine as he was commanded of God to teach are Christ's followers, and only when men thus teach do they bring to others the basis upon which “life everlasting” is predicated. This is supported by the inspired utterances of John the Baptist,—“He whom God hath sent, speaketh the words of God.”—John 3: 34.

The term “Christian” was first used as a term of ridicule or opprobrium, being used by the enemies of Jesus Christ, though now it has been accepted as a term of respect and to be associated with holy thoughts by all who claim to believe in Christ; but the term can not be applied to character without representing the particular belief advocated by Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit through men who were sent to represent him. Furthermore, character is the result of belief, and unless our belief is what Jesus Christ taught we do not and can not represent the fruits of the Christ life, for his life was spent in representing a particular belief both by word and deed, and his character is reflected in this, and we can not consistently concede that anyone is a Christian in the sense of representing the Christ character unless he believes, teaches, and practices the same doctrinal principles which He did.

The union represented at Pentecost, when the “one Spirit” held control over men's minds and hearts, and controlled their characters was in what was taught as well as what was done. All the one hundred and twenty were as one because they were filled with the "one Spirit"; but were such experiences claimed to be enjoyed now, the majority of those who profess to be Christian and Christian representatives would cry "delusion," "away with such deceptions," and would compass sea and land to keep them out of their ministerial alliances or associations, on the claim that they are not evangelical. What was this unity at Pentecost? What are the conditions that must obtain, that we may be in unity now, as they were, and in unity with them? Can we be in the enjoyment of such union now, unless like them, we enjoy the same spiritual experiences and teach, believe and practice the same things which they did? Were they not Christian in the sense in which we would desire to be Christian, and in the only way that one can be a true follower of Jesus Christ?

An examination of the conditions upon which their union was enjoyed on the day of Pentecost discloses that the ministry spake in other "tongues" than the one with which they were naturally acquainted, that they declared, under the influence of the Spirit with which they were filled, unitedly, the wonderful things of God, and represented that Jesus of Nazareth was approved of God by miracles, wonders and signs; and although persecuted to his death by the ministry of that day, because he did not teach what they believed, yet God raised him from the dead; that while his soul was in hell it was not left there; and that he was raised from the dead to sit, at some future time, "on David's throne," which is the place where Solomon's temple was builded, but that this will not occur till "I make thy foes thy footstool." We learn that he is now at the right hand of God, so that the time when he shall sit on David's throne will be yet future, and when he "shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever," as declared the angel to Mary, his mother. These truths were advocated by those who held apostolic authority, sent as Christ was sent and endued with the same Spirit with which he was anointed "to preach the gospel to the poor;" and their testimony then was that "God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ." There accompanied this testimony such power, such convincing power, that it caused those who heard it to inquire, "What shall we do?" and by this same spiritual power the apostles gave the particular instruction, "Repent, and be baptized everyone of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, etc." Unity existed in the minds and hearts of those taught as well as those who taught them, and with the Holy Spirit that guided them to present this particular belief to be obeyed; and those who believed were baptized, as instructed, as a result of their repentance, "in the name of Jesus Christ," and this, too, "for the remission of sins," believing that God would fulfill his promise to remit sins repented of, did they comply with the conditions; and all this was done that they might present themselves as fitted for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit as a gift, which "gift" was promised to all, "even as many as the Lord our God shall call." To be in the same Christian Union they were, we must agree to all this and show a practical faith in this particular belief. They who were at this time baptized continued in this unity by "continuing steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship," as well as "in breaking bread and in prayers." At that time the ministry of this union in Christ had power from God that when righteously exercised soundness of body was given to cripples, sight restored to the physically blind, and the sick were healed; and this was surely the heritage of the United church of our Lord Jesus Christ, and is its heritage to-day.

This was at a time when Jesus revealed himself to those whose minds were darkened, because their hearts were right before him, as he did also to Saul of Tarsus, whose mind was darkened by erroneous traditions to that extent that in him was stirred up such a prejudiced and persecuting spirit, that he even consented to the death of God's servants. The revelations of Jesus Christ is what sets the mind right, by giving it a proper understanding of errors believed, and the truth to be followed, as was done in the case above referred to, and to Ananias, the latter being instructed to minister to Saul, although his mind was darkened as to the condition that Saul's mind was then in, insomuch that Saul might "receive his sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost," and this was done, so the Scriptures say, by Ananias "putting his hands upon him." All this represented the "unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace," and it must be conclusive in the minds of Bible believers, that if any deviate from this belief or course, they are not the followers of Christ.

There is but one body, or church, acknowledged in the Scriptures as the body of Christ, and this church was organized under the direction of God, through Christ Jesus, out of those who were united in this one particular faith advocated by inspiration, and who had become subject in mind as well as in heart to the "one Spirit," having the "one hope" of our calling. Every church claims for itself to be the body of Christ, the church, or did at its origin; but because it would be to them trouble of quite a serious character, as is evident, for this claim to be proven true by the word of God, and because there are good-hearted, well-meaning, devoted people in other churches that have become somewhat popular, which class of people they do not desire to decide will be lost, there is an argument made of a compromising character, that we can have "Christian Union" while believing contrary the one to the other, and it matters not what is believed, or in what church we are members, just so we are honest. To a careful thinker this argument had its origin in and its continuance with those who are not sure that they are in unity with Christ in belief, and in being part of "his body, the church," for if they were sure, they would contend for the faith they advocate, believing it to be "the faith once delivered to the saints," (Jude 1:3,) and this contention would spoil the possibility of such a union as was experienced on the day of Pentecost.

Every church that advocates "Christian Union" does so with the thought that they are the church that should formulate the nucleus of that union, and wherein others differ from them, these differences should be laid aside in their favor for the sake of union. This would be a correct position to take if that particular church was in union with Christ, in belief and works, which, if the representatives of that church are honest, they believe to be the case. But whether this is the case or not, is the question to be proven before we can hope to realize the union that all true worshipers desire to see.

The only way that union will or can be represented is by organization, and this organization must be as perfect in its general and local character as God is perfect, for it is to represent Christ's body. It is this kind of an organization that was represented in New Testament times, and so far as a record is made of what then existed we can understand what kind of an organization should exist now, or when Christlike unity exists. This would necessitate an agreement as to this organization in the following particulars: 1. Who should be accepted into membership; 2. Who should represent it in an official way; and 3. How such ones should be selected and authorized to act. This the New Testament teaches, yet those who claim to believe it are not agreed upon these matters of first importance. Even those who claim to take the "Bible and the Bible alone" disagree upon the points to be first decided,—I say first to be decided, because these questions are of first importance. The church being the body of Christ, it must be decided which is the church, before there can be a start towards unity, and if the church of Christ does not exist upon the earth in an organized form, then such a condition as "Christian Union" can not obtain. Now, if we are not of the body of Christ, if we are not a part of that organization of which the Spirit of God is its life, then we certainly can not claim to be a part of this Union that is in Christ. Are we "in Christ," and have we "put on Christ," should be the questions that every honest, devoted man and woman should be fully decided upon, and not cease an untiring, prayerful investigation of every organization with which they come in contact that claims to be the Church of Jesus Christ until they find the one, the doctrine of which they know is divine, and the offices of which they know God has set there, and that the officials are divinely appointed and qualified.

To such an organization I invite the attention of the reader when I invite you to an investigation of a church that advocates as its doctrine what is taught in Hebrews 6:1, 2; Mark 11:22; Hebrews 11:6; Luke 13:3, 5; Mark 16:15-18; Acts 2:35-38; 19:1-6; 1 Corinthians 15:12-26; John 5:28, 29; Matthew 16:27; 2 Corinthians 5:10; and Revelation 20:1-15; that advocates as its organization what is taught in 1 Corinthians 12:28; Ephesians 4:11; Acts 20:17, 28; Titus 1:5; 1 Timothy 3:1-10; Luke 10:1-16; and Hebrews 5:4; and is in the enjoyment of all the assurances of its divinity experienced by the saints of God, in every previous gospel age. This church is the Church of Jesus Christ composed of Saints in latter days, and is now acknowledged by the ordinances of men, to which the church has become subject by incorporation, as "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," under which name we can legally hold title to properties that may be laid at the apostles' feet, to be used for the benefit of the individual members of that organization, or for others when thought advisable, so that every man may have as he has need, and the conditions be brought about represented as "all things common," and thus perfect unity in temporal as well as in spiritual things be realized.

It will be this condition and this condition only that will lead the world to believe that Jesus Christ was sent of God, to redeem and save the entire race through the one means provided,—the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ,—the word of God,—the truth. When this condition prevails, then will all speak the same thing; no divisions will exist; and the children of God will be perfectly joined together, in the same mind as well as in heart and judgment.

Nothing short of this condition of things will be Christian Union.

Even a little effort on our part is multiplied by the outpouring of God's power in our behalf. The man who makes an honest effort to break with a bad habit finds that he is at once in the sweep and lift of a power not his own. His ability to resist, to get a new viewpoint, to make a brave stand, he can not account for by anything of his own. God is at work, with limitless resources, for his upbuilding. Encouragement is on every hand. The struggle may be severe, but it is not heading toward failure. And the more a man puts into the struggle, the more he is conscious of the presence of God in every moment of it.—Sunday School Times.

Of General Interest

Service for the Pulpit.

"Decline in the authority of the pulpit" and "the intolerable demands upon his profession" are given as reasons why a Chicago Protestant clergyman has resigned his charge. This minister finds that it does not matter much to public opinion what he says, however earnestly; and that the calls upon him to be a charity trustee, bond broker, gymnasium director, chief settlement worker, corresponding member of the American Peace Society, member of the Civic Federation, and trustee of the boys' athletic field, are too exacting and not altogether to his taste. So he has doffed his "customary suit of solemn black," this Chicago clergyman, and will look about for secular employment.

Complaint about the waning authority of the pulpit is not new and the occasion for it is, perhaps, the highest tribute which can be paid to the free press, the free school, and to free speech. A theocracy, to be a successful one, must count upon a certain degree of superstitious acceptance, not to say credulity, among those who receive the pulpit's message. No one knows this better than the Vatican, which keeps its followers ignorant where it can, and where it can't, seeks to supplant the influence of the common school and the free college with that of parochial schools and church universities where knowledge is elaborately misdirected. In New England and the communities derived from it, the Protestant pulpit held its supremacy so long as the Sunday school influence could be extended to public schools and the colleges were kept sectarian; and while the press, for business reasons, did not dare express itself on religious questions in a way not pleasing to the presbyteries. Over a large part of the East the atmosphere was pretty black with sermons even into the 'sixties, and in the 'seventies also until, at last, the prosperity which vanished in 1873 came back in quadrupled volume and turned human interest to the more material things of life. Then there came a visible decline in the influence of preaching. Schools multiplied and expanded and the protests of Roman Catholic taxpayers did something either to take scripture readings and hymn singing out of them or to render the usual morning services perfunctory. In the older universities attendance on chapel was made elective. State colleges or universities grew in number, and these, of course, had to be non-sectarian. They loosed a host of young investigators who would not take the Bible, least of all the theological speculations derived from it, for granted. Cornell University, founded in 1868, never required compulsory religious attendance, but employed the greatest preachers of whatever denominations would lend them in turn Sunday mornings. Even Catholics were not disbarred, but they held aloof. Finally Ingersoll took the popular platform, and his influence, which grew more expansive with every year until his death, had much to do with the spread of agnosticism in the pulpit under the guise of Higher Criticism, which has sapped the old foundations of theology and left the Protestant minister without a definite answer to the questions of the inquiring soul. And the minister without a gospel which he believes himself and which he can impress upon others has no reason to wonder why his authority is gone. When the pew can reply to its own spiritual inquiries as well as the priest, it has no use for the priest as a teacher.

This state of dissatisfaction or apathy in churches makes it difficult to get the best class of young men to enter the ministry, and this, in turn, adds to the causes of pulpit decadence. It is noticeable we have no ministers left who are intellectual rivals of our statesmen, our university presidents, our political leaders, our best editors, or our captains of industry. The Beechers and Spurgeons, the Channings and Cuylers, of America and England, have left no spiritual descendants of their own stature. At the great crises who wants to hear the word from the pulpit? Generally the solvent phrases come from the editorial rooms, to which the seats of the mighty have long since been transferred.

Yet in the very complaint of the Chicago clergyman—the "intolerable" call for the things which direct and ameliorate the life of the young and the poor, is revealed a mission for the ministry—one which is needed and for which the ministry is fit. One may no longer reach the people with the relics of an outgrown theological dogmatism. The pew may no longer feel interested when a preacher takes a mindless flight into the unknown. Dogma, dealing in miracles and relying upon credulity, may no longer loosen the devotion of men and women who think. But, for all that, the pulpit has its mission of good, its revelation to humanity, its appeal to the higher nature, its function of relief for mind and body. The Chicago pulpiter, now happily out of an uncongenial life, had no reason to sneer at the pursuits of charity, which were those of the Master; he could have been in much worse work for his kind than to inculcate the sound mind in the sound body; settlement work is a process by which the apostles made their proselytes among the lowly and the poor; the inculcation of peace is labor worthy of the followers of the Prince of Peace; all these semisecular activities which the Chicago man found too exacting are those which mark some of the spheres of influence in which the Protestant minister may still be of service and gain reputation. Nor need he cease to be a spiritual force while the worship of God remains common to all religions and all sects. But let him for ever dismiss the hope, if he holds it, that he will rule from a high pulpit as Cotton Mather and Jonathan Edwards did or even as Finney and Moody did, spiritual popes whom their followers bowed down to as to those who could loose or bind in the world to come. The day for that illusion has gone; the day of reason is here; and if there is not so much faith as there was in old forms of biblical interpretation, there is still the opportunity to lift men to higher levels and nobler altitudes of life—to make them better fitted, not for a problematical future world, but the world they live in.—The Argonaut.

Mothers' Home Column

At This Christmastide.

There is in the very atmosphere of the Christmastide, as well as in the days which precede it, an influence which melts and softens the heart; an influence which makes us susceptible as at no other time to emotions of gentleness, of loving-kindness, and charity towards all.

It is largely owing to this influence that to-day in almost every home in the land busy housewives, loving mothers, aunts, and grandmothers, to say nothing of sisters, brothers, husbands, and wives, are planning or going about from place to place in search of gifts for friends and loved ones.

How near the Savior seems to come to those who open their hearts to the gentle influence of his Holy Spirit at this season!

John says of the Master, "having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." Loved his own! What a world of meaning in three short words.

"If ye were of the world, the world would love his own," Jesus had said of his disciples. And to-day these thoughts have come with peculiar force to our mind. Thoughts of his undying love for his own, a love which must be and is different from that love felt for those who as yet are not adopted children—not in his kingdom. A love which enjoins good unto all, but especially to the household of faith.

His cause is needing our aid. The world does not love it, will not aid it. At this time when we are seeking for and planning what we shall give to our friends and dear ones, are we remembering our own publishing house? The world at large has small interest in it, and this ought most strongly to appeal to us in its favor. Can we afford to buy from the world booklets and have the one thousand of our own upon the Herald Office shelves, unsold?

"At Last" is a strong, beautiful, comforting poem, written by David Hyrum Smith, our own "sweet singer in Israel," and illustrated with pictures taken from life. It is neatly bound and worthy a place among the most select holiday gifts. We mention this especially because it is a holiday book, but if you will read over carefully the list of books recently sent out from the Herald Office, you will find many others mentioned which would make most acceptable gifts, especially to your friends in the church.

Let us, as far as we possibly can, remember the needs of the church when making our Christmas purchases, and in this way manifest that we are not forgetful of Him, who, "having loved his own which were in the world, loved them unto the end."

Too Late.

Too late! What terror these short words strike to one's heart, when after hours of mental agony we reach a loved one's deathbed only to be told it is "too late," the dear one has passed beyond our reach and can not hear or appreciate a kind, loving word, or an agonized plea for forgiveness for some wrong done. It is too late! Oh, then how memory goes back over the past, the cruel, unkind word, the neglect or willful sin against the dear one all come up so vividly! And oh, how our heart aches, and how we would gladly undo them; but, alas, it is too late!

And still, day after day, we go on, laying up bitter remorse and heartache for "our reaping by and by." Why, oh why will we, while we have our loved ones with us, be so heedless of the pain we cause them? For we, too, must pay the penalty by our remorse and heartache when it is too late.

There are so many ways we may lay up heartache for ourselves when it is too late to undo them. It may be neglect or thoughtlessness of a dear mother or father, and oh, how it all comes back to us as we stand by the open grave, but—it is too late. Then they need none of our kindness, but we must bear the bitter remorse. It may be a cruel, unkind word to a dear, innocent little child, a betrayal of a dear friend who has loved and trusted us. It may be a sister or brother that has proved untrue. And how many of us that have seen once happy homes that are now only skeletons of what once they were, from the breaking of the marriage vows such as is filling our divorce courts day after day, when it is too late for forgiveness. And many homes are ruined by this sin, even though there may not be a divorce and the home still kept together for the mutual love for the children, or the dread of the disgrace. But the old confidence is gone, and the love can never be the same. It is too late! For where there is not perfect confidence, perfect love can not exist, and so at least one life is ruined. And what an abundance of heartache and bitter remorse (unless dead to repentance) the other must suffer when he stands before the one he has so cruelly wronged as that one lies "at rest," and it is too late to undo the terrible sin or bring back the life that has gone out, perhaps hastened by the suffering that he has caused, who should instead have loved through life, in death, and all eternity. But—alas, it is too late, and no need to break the alabaster box on the dead heart. It is the living, loving, feeling heart that craves truth, love, and loyalty and fidelity. Life here is too short to ruin one life or to lay up bitter heartache and remorse for our own reaping. Oh, that each would live every day as if it were the last one we expected on earth with the dear ones! for

"Oh, our incense has no meaning to the still unconscious clay,
Yet its perfume might have cheered the lonely years;
Why not lavish on our dear ones all the wealth of love to-day,

Why not save ourselves the heartache and the tears?
Why not bring our cherished to the sunlight of the day,
And bestow our hidden treasure on our friends along the way?"

Letter Department

6 JANUARY STREET, C ON M, November 11, 1910.

Editors Herald: This is the first time that I have written to your columns. I was baptized into the church on June 8, 1905, by my father. I want to be a good member of the church and do what I can to help it forward. We have a very good Sabbath school. Bro. J. W. Greene is our superintendent. It is well attended, and we have experienced teachers. I have learned many useful lessons there. We have a Religio, too, where we study the Book of Mormon under the direction of Bro. N. J. Weate. I like to attend, for it is of interest to me.

A sewing class has been organized in our branch. Its object is to obtain money to enable us to buy a plot of land on which to build a house for worship. This class is in charge of our dear sisters M. and A. Lenton. We pray continuously for our heavenly Father's blessing on their sacred work.

Our Sister Alice has recently undergone a severe operation, but the Lord has brought her safely through. We all prayed earnestly for her and the Lord heard us. We are glad she is better. She will soon be able to help the good work on again. Our Bro. G. T. Griffiths has been staying with us, but he is now in Palestine. We have also had our dear Brother Pitt and wife with us. They have cheered our hearts with their sweet music and sacred songs. They, too, have sailed for Australia.

Hoping the Saints will specially remember the work of the Lord in the British Isles is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

CYRIL F. ARMSTRONG.

NEBO, ILLINOIS, November 22, 1910.

Editors Herald: The work is not altogether dead here, nor yet as lively as it might be. Some things are indicative of further developments nearing. On last Sunday night I preached to a full house near Nebo, in a large schoolhouse where I used to go to school. I enjoyed good liberty and was treated with due respect and given attention for nearly one hour. It has not always been that favorable here.

One party asked me if they could get our church to hold some lectures on Mormonism, the lecturer to be the Reverend Moore, Baptist. I told him so far as I was concerned, if equal time were given to us, I would vote favorably. Now the facts are these, the Reverend Moore has advertised in Illinois Baptist for a job and has been indorsed by Doctor Throgmorton, its editor, and I suppose there may be a two-fold object in view. First, this party thinks we are having too much success here; and second, Elder Moore needs a job. He said he "could make twenty-five dollars," and would give five out of his own pocket, notwithstanding he was a poor man and his family needed all his earnings. I suppose if he comes to these parts he will come with another bottle of poison and one of Elters spreading adders, or invite ye scribe to the pinnacles of the hills and with great swelling emphasis and defying tauntings characteristic of the author and originator of that oft repeated proposition, "Show me a sign and I will believe," demand that the long plunge be displayingly made, that he may peradventure believe. However, we bide the time until the purse is made for Moore. We will be there if the Lord is willing.

On October 12 last I was at our county seat as juror, but knowing or hearing of an advertised lecture to be held in Presbyterian church on "Mormonism," I attended. It was a Presbyterian stereotyped stereopticon piece of entertainment, "The Smith family, noted for their lying and stealing, the six original members a tramp outfit, Smith accustomed to hearing Spalding read his manuscript," etc. Said, "In a hundred years hence it would be believed as divine and he would fix it up," etc.

He made but one distinction between us and Utah people, and that was polygamy. "This evil was fast getting its hold on the people." Reverend Sager was the parrot, with the use of his stereopticon machine; he before this crowd of his own and in his own building refused to discuss or defend what he'd aped and was to ape over the county. I, however, got a few minutes' hearing, and I told them where I was from, who I was, and that the lecture was a mixture of truth and falsehood; and as Reverend Sager was to repeat it, I challenged him to public discussion and he could go on collecting and keep the proceeds provided only the time was divided. But no. I told the story of the Spalding manuscript finding, etc., dates of Smith's birth, and Spalding's death, Smith but eleven years old at his death; rather a young chap to plan such a stupendous fraud!

The tendency and trend of these lectures is to laud the Presbyterian Church and warn the people against the coming political forces of Mormonism; how political parties pander to them for their support, to place all factions as resting on a rotten anti-God, anti-Christian, anti-citizen, ungodly foundation.

I got one partial explanatory article in one of our county papers, with promise of continued space. My second article went to the waste basket, but through the first article I challenged him to meet me on the ground where he delivered the lectures; but no. Some inquiry was aroused, and during my stay and talks with different people, and being acquainted with most of our county officers and some of the members of the bar, it was a missionary trip for me. One of my associate jurors invited me to come to his home and preach in the schoolhouse near his place, where I had preached before. Although he had not heard me or any of our elders, yet his nice home was open for me as a result of our association at court.

I boarded at a place where one of the lawyers did, and maybe you think there wasn't wind and noise as the result of that collision. Wife said she wouldn't like to have been there. He had heard our people preach in Pittsfield, Illinois, and said it was the ablest he ever heard. Our people are Bible students and scholars.

I believe the time is ripe for a good work in Calhoun and some places in Pike County. As for me, it isn't a problem of where to find a place to preach, so much as what to do; how can I find time to meet all of the demands of temporal business and the spiritual. I do not need General Conference appointment; the opportunities are within a radius of not more than one hundred miles. There are hundreds of thousands of good men and women that would favorably consider this message if we could only reach them with this wonderful work.

May the Saints wake up to these conditions which prevail all over this world; I presume more can be done than by those giving their entire time. Saints, have more prayers, more consecration of self, more money, and more wakeup! How can any of us have the presumption to ask God and his Son's coöperation in our behalf, while we with one hand up, and the other in our pockets, hold fast to the dollar that they tell us is theirs, and repeatedly tell us to hand over? May the work advance and the Lord's people cease to find excuses. We are expecting Brethren Sawley, Paxton, and Sparling here before conference year closes, and take this means to invite Brother Dowker to make arrangements to visit this part.

Yours for victory,

W. A. GUTHRIE.

GARY, COLORADO, November 22, 1910.

Dear Herald: The gospel net is gathering a few honest hearted souls into the kingdom of God here in this district, but not the number we would like to see accept the angel's message. It seems hard to persuade men and women to accept the gospel plan, that will not only give encouragement here in this life but will guarantee them eternal life in the presence of the infinite One.

Since August 1, we have been trying to do what we could in active missionary work, having entered the field at that time. My labors have been confined to the eastern part of the district, and I have been encouraged in the work by knowing that some have entered the fold under my ministrations. I rather transcended the territory lines assigned me and for two weeks preached in Kansas, and as a result of my labors I baptized Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cottrell, who are the first in a large circle of relatives to accept the gospel. I feel sure they will prove themselves loyal soldiers of Christ and will help in getting the gospel before others.

I also held a series of meetings about twelve miles from Wray. The greater part of the time the attendance and interest were good. If I remember rightly the name of the schoolhouse was "The Starr." I left some interested, whom I think in time will accept the truth.

Some were anxious that I preach in Haigler, Nebraska, and thought the Methodist church at that place could be had for our services. I assured them that I would be glad to hold a series of meetings, but did not think they would succeed in getting the church, judging from past history. An effort was made to procure the house, but to no avail. The reason given was that our conception of the gospel was so much different from theirs that it would produce a division in their church. Some, learning that we were refused, thought it strange that we could not use the church when other denominations had been granted the privilege of using it, and so arranged for the use of the Odd Fellows hall and offered it to us for our services. Circumstances were such that it was thought best to wait until a later date, when I expect to return and avail myself of their kindly offer. The Lord never made cowards of his Saints, so that they were afraid to listen to what other men had to present against his work, and that which had been accepted by his disciples as the means of salvation.

I am more and more convinced that the gospel as accepted by the Reorganized Church can be defended from every standpoint, as far as the church being in harmony with the Scriptures is concerned. It is true that the falsehoods that are hurled against truth are the hardest things we have to combat. We have them to meet wherever the gospel is presented. The most powerful weapon that Satan ever hurled against the work of God is lying, evil speaking, etc.

Truth has nothing to fear, so we are always ready to compare our work with any system that professes to be the plan of salvation. Ignorance is one of the hardest conditions to meet in connection with falsehood. They go hand in hand. I spoke a few times in Wray and was pleased to find Bishop R. Bullard holding up the gospel banner in a series of meetings at that place. I understand he also held some meetings near Fox, some fifty miles south, and baptized some while there. The work seems to be in fair condition in the Wray Branch, under the direction of Bro. A. E. Tabor as president of the branch. He is ably assisted by other officers. We failed to state that Bro. E. D. Bullard helped us some in the meetings while in Kansas. Bro. C. Scott is kindly spoken of in that section of country.

Here in this locality nothing has been done along gospel lines, none of our representatives having been here. I have preached in two different schoolhouses with fair success. There are two other places where we expect to hold meetings in the near future. In both places there seems to be some interest, or desire on the part of some to hear our work, as I was urged to come and preach for them. One gentleman offered to board me as long as I wished to preach, and seemed very much interested. The last named place is in the town of Gary.

This is a new homestead country, and several of the Saints are located on homesteads. In fact, ye missionary is holding down a claim. There is almost enough material to organize a branch, which may materialize in the near future. Several Saints from near Lamoni are located here. Among the recent arrivals are Bro. Arthur M. Smith, son of Bro. Alexander H. Smith (our late beloved Patriarch), and Bro. M. J. Danielson, also Brother Lambkin from Wray. Brother Danielson's daughter Pearl, also filed on a claim. They expect to move on their claims in the spring, and no doubt when Uncle Sam gives them a deed they will be ready to return to Zion.

We are glad to note the progress made with those who are identifying themselves with the Order of Enoch. May the time speedily come when Zion may be redeemed, and only the pure in heart be found within her border. We have much to encourage us and so move on in the conflict that is being waged against the powers of darkness.

In the conflict,
L. G. HOLLOWAY.

SHAWNEE, OKLAHOMA, November 24, 1910.

Dear Herald Readers: Having a desire to send a few words of greeting to the dear sisters of the Prayer Union and Ladies' Aid Society of Independence, with many others there and at various branches to whom I have become endeared by the ties of friendship, kinship, and above all by the ties of the glorious gospel, I take this means of writing to each one.

I have been with the family of my son (James Yates) at Ripley, this State, for the past two months, and although somewhat afflicted for a time, have felt encouraged by the association of Saints and seeing ten fine people enlist in the army of the Lord. Through the mercy of our heavenly Father and the prayers of the Saints I am again well and back with my son Ernest in Shawnee. We are having our Sunday school and prayer meetings in private houses, and are patiently telling the gospel story to as many of our neighbors as seem to take an interest.

I have one dear old lady neighbor who came from Grinnell, Iowa, and having known some of the Saints personally has no prejudice. She says that Brother Condit used to visit them when her husband, James Johnson, was living. She says they used to say to Brother Johnson, We need you in the church with us. I believe if she lives until it is warm weather again and has an opportunity she will obey the gospel, and I have hopes of her son also. I take solid comfort in reading the HERALD and Autumn Leaves and feel often lifted above the cares and sorrows of this inconstant world. How anxious I felt that dear Brother Gould, of Palestine, should be spared to receive baptism, but God's will be done. I have been led to rejoice greatly in reading news from every part of the field, and to know of the miraculous power of the Lord being displayed in an unusual manner.

Dear Saints, let us lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that no weapon formed against the truth shall prosper, but by united prayer and faith Zion will put on all of her beautiful garments, even the righteousness of Saints, and we shall receive such blessings that there shall not be room to contain, which shall cause the enlargement of the borders of Zion, until we shall be made worthy to see the King in his beauty, and meet to dwell for ever with the Lord. It matters not so much where we have to lay our armor down in this life, as to be ready for the change. This is a beautiful Thanksgiving Day; warm enough to have the doors open and no fire this afternoon. We are rejoicing over prohibition of saloons, and every open door for reaching the people with the truth.

With love to all the household of faith, I am yours in hope of eternal life.

MRS. HARRIET A. CRAWLEY.

SAINT CLAIR, MICHIGAN, November 22, 1910.

Dear Herald: I feel as a writer to your pages has written, "The longer I defer writing to your pages the harder it is for me to do," and having deferred from time to time "the words that might have encouraged are never written," and I continue to enjoy what others have written and give nothing in return. I feel sometimes that the beautiful, spiritual letters from all parts of the world are so much better than anything I could say that I let the opportunity go by.

I would that I could give expression to the fettered longings of my soul for communion with the beyond, but in secret prayer my thoughts can wing their way to the great, white throne, and here lies our only strength and safety—in prayer. Neglect of this duty opens the flood-gates to disaster and ruin, for Satan is not slow to take advantage of our neglect and prey upon our weaknesses. "Satan trembles when he sees the weakest Saint upon his knees," and well he may, for eternity alone can reveal the wonderful things that have been accomplished through earnest, pleading prayer. Prayer can turn aside the lightning shafts of Satan and they will fall harmless at our feet. What a privilege is yours, ye Saints of God, that the great heart of our loving Father can be touched by the feeble prayers of his humblest child! Even the elements are subject to our prayers. There is nothing that united prayer can not do; but what a terrible loss to the soul who neglects to pray, roaming in spiritual darkness, without God or hope in the world. "Let us pray for one another, for the day is fading fast."

MRS. A. MCKENZIE.

ORONOGO, MISSOURI, November 24, 1910.

Dear Herald: The desires that I have had in the past to write for your pages have never been complied with, but as this is the fiftieth year of the the HERALD's publication, I do not want the year to pass without writing a few lines, and with others bearing my testimony to the truthfulness of this latter day work. Not only do I know it is true by the written word, but by the Holy Spirit, which has brought assurance to me that the work is divine.

Fifty years ago my home was in Utah, a fact which has been very repulsive to me, and if I could avoid it I would not tell that I had ever lived there. Little did I think the time would ever come when the Lord would require of me not only to tell but to write my memories of Utah for the church publications. So must the time come to all when our will must be brought into subjection to the will of God. There was a time when I did not care to read the HERALD, when in its pages were written the names of Brigham Young and Utah. I thought those names should be for ever barred from the pages of the HERALD. But I have learned to know that as long as the HERALD bears the message of truth to the nations of the earth, so must it ever tell of the wrongs of those who brought reproach upon the church and caused the way of truth to be evilly spoken of, and thus defend the name of the church and the honor of our martyred prophet.

At times when reading those controversies in the HERALD, I have felt to say, How long, O Lord, how long must thy people bear the reproach of those who have brought a stigma to the nation? While so meditating, these words of God spoken in prophecy some years ago came forcibly to my mind: "Mine angels are waiting to pour out the vials of wrath of an offended God upon the wicked inhabitants of the earth; but my Beloved is pleading before my face saying, Father, spare them a little longer until my servants shall have gathered out the honest in heart from their midst."

When first the HERALD came to our home I was too young to understand the message that it brought; too young to know why mother wept for joy; but the time came when I knew why that message brought joy and peace to our home, as well as others. It told of a call that came from heaven, naming young Joseph as the seer to take his father's place and call the scattered, wandering Saints back to the true principles of the gospel. In those intervening years he has been faithful to his mission and he still teaches the same eternal truths of heaven. And how faithfully he has obeyed that call during those fifty years of service was well portrayed at the last General Conference, by the honor and esteem shown him one special day; also portrayed by the great advancement the church has made in its different departments and by the peaceful spirit which prevailed through that large congregation.

Still walking in God's holy ways
May years be added to his days.
Oh, may he live to see the time

When the dispersed of Judah will with reverence say,
Your Savior too, is mine.

Your sister in the gospel,
LOTTIE J. HARTMAN.

WEATHERBY, MISSOURI, November 20, 1910.

Editors Herald: As it is a long, long time since I wrote to your valuable paper, I will write a few lines now to tell you that the good Lord has blessed me very much this summer. I left home about the first of June, and was gone about five months. During that time I preached one hundred and twenty-five sermons, baptized twenty-two, administered to fifty-five, blessed ten children, and organized a Religio at Boone, Iowa. I have had better health this summer than I have had for ten years, and the Lord blessed me wonderfully when preaching the word, and also in administering to the sick.

When I closed my last meeting at Hiteman, their large church was packed full, and I was told that quite a number who came could not get in at all and had to leave for want of room. We had the best interest there that has been there for a long time. There is a noble class of Saints there, hospitable and liberal. I baptized five there.

I then held a series of meetings at Ward mission and baptized three there. They ought to be organized into a branch. There is plenty of good material there for an organization, and they have a good large church moved from Cleveland there.

Held a series of good meetings for the noble Saints at Perry, also a mission, and baptized six there. Brethren Clark and Salisbury look after the interests there. I hear that five more were baptized there since I was there. I assisted Brother Mintun at a tent meeting in Des Moines, where Brother Chandler baptized five nice Sunday school scholars (not only one, as somebody made me say in my letter in the Ensign).

Held some meetings at Boone, and had the pleasure of baptizing Brother and Sister Robert Chenise, a Brighamite elder and his good wife; fine, intelligent folks. The Lord, through Brother Mintun, has designated Brother Chenise for the Melchisedec priesthood. Organized a Religio at Boone, which is doing fine, with good officers at the head of it.

By request of the reunion committee, I assisted at the Fraser reunion, which was well attended at evenings. Two were baptized there since the reunion, which were fruit of the reunion preaching. Then the district officers requested me to take the tent to Tama County. We set it up in a very prejudiced neighborhood, about four or five miles from Montour. Threats were made that the tent should not be permitted to stand, but it did, except when the storm of wind and rain tore it down, and tore a large hole into it.

Here an old Dunkard preacher threw the Book of Mormon on the floor in the schoolhouse and jumped on it with his feet. In this he was almost as bad as W. G. Roberts, at Ottumwa. After he and Brother Mintun got through with their debate, I was told that Roberts told the people one night in his sermon that he would show them the quickest way to dispose of the Book of Mormon. He then took it and tore it all to pieces, and threw it down. It seems to me that it is almost impossible for a man to get so wicked as to do that; I hope that it is only a rumor.

I began the tent meeting with about fifteen, and closed with about one hundred and twenty. But it was the most uphill business I struck in thirty years of work in the ministry. One fine old lady was baptized, a Mrs. Harris. Mr. and Sr. V. Kennell, and Mr. and Sr. L. Houghton gave me a good home while there, and did all they could for the success of the meetings. Many friends were made, and good was done. But it was just in threshing time, and it was so cold and rainy that we almost froze out, and were rained out three Sunday evenings.

I had intended to set the tent up in Boone, but it got so cold and rainy that the majority thought it would not be wise to set it up so late. So it was stored for winter I suppose.

I must not forget to mention the splendid meeting at Runnells. I was told that it was the best attended meeting held there for fifteen years. One was baptized there. We made the appointment to meet at the river about two miles from town, at 2.30 p. m., for baptism. When we had been there about three minutes, another crowd came also. They stopped about two rods from our crowd. I was told that they were the Campbellites, that they were going to baptize some also, so I called to them and invited them to come on and join with us, and they then came close to our crowd. I gave them a sermon on the "laying on of hands" as well as "baptism." Was I mean to take them so unawares? After I had baptized Sr. Charley White, I told the Campbellite preacher that he was at liberty to go on now and do his baptizing. He addressed the people, advising them to remember what they had heard, that there was no other way for salvation than to be baptized for the remission of sins, but he did not say a word about the laying on of hands. Then they sang the hymn:

"Shall we gather at the river,
Where bright angel feet have trod;
With its crystal tide for ever
Flowing by the throne of God.

CHORUS:

"Yes, we'll gather at the river,
The beautiful, the beautiful river;
Gather with the saints at the river,
That flows by the throne of God."

Oh, I wish you could have heard the Saints sing, "Yes, we'll gather . . . with the Saints at the river, that flows by the throne of God." They made the very waters ring. I thought they could not have selected a more appropriate hymn for that occasion. Yes, they gathered with the Saints at the beautiful Des Moines River, but I fear that if they do not teach and practice more of the teachings of Christ than they do now, they will not be permitted to gather with the Saints at the river that flows by the throne of God.

Well, the Lord blessed me wonderfully while preaching at Runnells. The house was well filled almost every night, and a fine crowd the last night. There is a class of good, liberal Saints there. God bless them for their kindness.

I will be at home for a few days, then out again to work for the Master. I love to work for him.

In bonds, I remain,

J. S. ROTH.

News From Missions

CANADA.

In response to your request for news from this mission, I must confine myself to the city of Winnipeg, as I am not in touch with the work at other points, and I will have to say at the outset that news of "general interest" is scarce.

The work here has been at a low ebb for some time, owing to adverse conditions, and we are making strenuous efforts to recuperate. Because iniquity did abound the love of some "waxed cold." How hard it is to build up the work again, when it has been brought into disrepute by the unchaste conduct of some who had espoused the cause! "It must needs be that offenses come," said the Master, and a "woe" was pronounced upon the offender. Repentance, however, is a merciful provision of the gospel economy by which the offender may become reconciled; but what of those who by reason of the offenses have been made to stumble and lose their hold on the "rod of iron," and perhaps lose their souls also?

But since it was "news" you ask for, perhaps I should not sermonize, though I feel more inclined that way just now.

We are doing big things in Winnipeg; that is, a few of us are. The long talked of effort to secure a permanent place of worship has taken concrete form, and we have the building under way. We are building a nice little church, thirty by forty-two feet, just outside the city limits in the parish of Saint James. The weather has been cold, and the ground covered with snow, yet it is said we are having fine weather for Manitoba—your peach blossoms would lose their fragrance up here, J. W. P.,—the mercury hanging around the twenty mark; but we are pushing the work with all possible speed in hope of holding our Christmas entertainment in the new church. The work is being done mostly by the brethren; they are nearly all carpenters, the writer acting as a roustabout and "boss." I am good at that, so things certainly do move.

During the summer Bro. David Smith and the writer conducted street meetings on the Market Square with good results, a man and his wife being baptized who there heard the gospel for the first time, and others were interested. Brother Smith started homeward October 10, since which time we have been trying to improve local conditions. We expect, however, to prosecute the missionary work with renewed zeal as soon as we are in our new church.

Brother Smith writes me that he did some preaching at Emo, Ontario, and "troubled the water." We found him to be a genial companion and an earnest gospel preacher.

We were given quite a treat recently in the way of an illustrated lecture by Dr. Edgar L. Hewitt, Director of the School of American Archaeology, of Sante Fé, New Mexico. The illustrations were the best I have ever seen, and the facts relative to the advanced culture of the ancient Americans clearly brought out, nicely corroborating the Book of Mormon story, and only ten persons present who could appreciate it fully. The audience, though small, was composed of doctors, lawyers, preachers, college professors, and others, who pronounced the lecture "fine"; and as I sat there and noted their expressions of belief in what was being told, I wondered how much credence they would give to the same lecture coupled with the Book of Mormon. Surely the understanding of the "prudent" is hid in this thing.

Well, I think I have exhausted my supply of news, if it may be called such, unless I should mention the fact that we are to have a wedding soon; but I presume that would be considered "purely local," so we will pass it up. The writer has the "job," anyway, though we have been told that an American could not perform the ceremony in Canada. But wait and see.

E. E. LONG.

736 SINCO STREET.

PENNSYLVANIA, OHIO, WEST VIRGINIA.

Because of the environments of the church becoming more unfavorable every year, the Pittsburg Saints concluded to sell their house of worship, and have disposed of the property to a Jewish congregation, and have purchased a lot in the desirable suburb known as "Beechview." It is expected a number will move near the new church in the spring, when the building will probably be erected. The branch is holding meetings at the home of Brother and Sister Dershinier, 263 Dinwiddie street, near the old church. A number have expressed a desire to get away from the regulation small church architecture, and are talking about a "bungalow church" with "mission" interior finish.

Apostle R. C. Russell has been acquainting himself with conditions in Ohio, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia of late, by personal observations. The writer has had the privilege of some of his congenial association. We left Pittsburg together, then to Steubenville, Ohio; Wheeling, West Virginia; to the Fairview Branch, Glen Easton, and are now in Sharon, Pennsylvania, the home of our silver tongued brother, Richard Baldwin. Brother Baldwin's parents are demonstrating their ability to make the missionaries feel at home. While at Wheeling, Brother Russell had two Utah elders in the audience. "R. C." didn't know (?) they were there; but they got so much to think about they concluded to return the following Sabbath in double force; but Bro. F. J. Ebeling will be on hand with plenty of ammunition.

Brother Baldwin has been holding services at Fairview, Glen Easton, baptized seven, and more are to follow. Brother Russell preached once at "Easton" as he passed through. The services there are being held in the Methodist church, before good audiences. After hearing Brother Russell one of the "big" men of the town wanted to know if Canada could produce any more like him. The sermon made a "hit." Elder A. M. McVey, of the Campbellite Church, of Fayette City, Pennsylvania, has challenged Brother Russell to debate; propositions have been signed for twelve evenings, commencing January 26. My address hereafter will be 233 Diamond street, second floor, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

C. ED. MILLER.

SHARON, PENNSYLVANIA.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

A mission letter! How many things flood one's mind in an attempt to respond to your kind invitation! Instantly the revered names of Mills, Burton, Clapp, Uncle Alexander, Father Brush, Heman C., and D. L. Harris appear in emblazoned letters. Southern California has a church history second to none. In the early days the Rockies formed an almost impassible barrier and this mission was more inaccessible than the British Isles. However, this was the land of faith and power. Some of the greatest miracles of modern times were enacted here. The traditions of the faithful abound with a staying of the deep; a resuscitation of the apparently dead; faith as an antidote to poison; eyes of the blind opened; ears of the deaf unstopped; broken bones made whole; prophecies remarkably fulfilled; tongues through ignorant instruments identified by scholarly auditors.

The early California elders were men of sublime faith, great courage, indomitable will, and unmeasured energy. Ofttimes, even now, the experiences of those early days are recited at eventide, when family circles form.

Here now reside the marital companions of several of our pioneer missionaries and workers. Sisters Burton, Mills, Harris, Badham, Schnell, and others; all devoted, loyal Saints. The years have left their impress, but their hearts and minds are still young and buoyant. It is an inspiration to us younger men to spend an hour with them.

The history of this mission is one of growth and expansion; difficulties have been met and overcome. Our expansion may not compare favorably with the land of Zion, but conditions are different here. For a number of years we had only three branches; Los Angeles, San Bernardino, and Newport. San Bernardino was one of the pioneer branches of the Reorganization. Originally it was a Brighamite colony; a "Mormon" legend has it that Brigham, moved by inspiration, sent a colony to the "Pacific Sea," and with instructions that when they came to a fertile valley where an "Arrowhead" was clearly outlined on a northern mountain side there they were to abide. It would be interesting to behold a transcript of that prophecy; more convincing if we could have a copy in Brigham's handwriting, for not many years afterwards an inspirational call came from Brigham for the faithful to return to Zion or disaster would overtake them; only those "weak in the faith" remained, but some of these became the backbone of the Reorganization; and what stalwarts they were! At one time the branch numbered between three and four hundred. To-day it has a membership of about two hundred and fifty. The expansion of civilization and the opening up of California resulted in the scattering of the flock throughout the land. On looking over the old branch records one finds inserted under the "removed, expelled, or died" column these suggestive words, "Gone to the upper country." It is presumed that those expelled would go down rather than up; the term would not apply to letters of removal, for such go everywhere. In trying to solve the matter I was left to decide that this was a delicate way of recording the death of the righteous. I was, however, doomed to disillusionment, and was later informed that whenever a member moved to northern California the clerk inserted, "Moved to the upper country." One of the unfortunate results of this general scattering is that many, very many, of the children have grown up without church influences and are practically lost to the church.

Newport is the modern name for the old "gospel swamp" colony of Saints contiguous to Newport Bay. Everybody in California knew of Gospel Swamp. The Saints at this point approximated more nearly to the "all things common" plan than anywhere in the land. They lived almost as one big family,—"each for all and all for each." Some wonderful experiences are related of these olden days. Los Angeles can not boast of so great antiquity. One comes across the names of Badham, Schnell, Bosshardt, Howland, Dana, Earl, and Van Fleet in reviewing this branch history. There are many others equally honorable. They used to hold their meetings on Monday instead of Sunday. Cause,—most of the members were women whose husbands did not belong to the church, but who insisted that their wives should spend their Sundays with them, hence the Monday meeting. Leave it to the sisters to find a way to do right. God bless them all.

During the past few years branches have been organized at Santa Ana and Cucamonga, with a promising mission at San Diego. We hope to see a branch there in the near future. Bro. T. G. Brown has purchased a schoolhouse and fitted it up for Sunday school and church at Hemet. We are planning to make a concerted effort there shortly.

In this district, we have quite an array of men holding the priesthood, yet the engrossing cares of life seem to overwhelm most of them, precluding extended service. This, coupled with an indifference on the part of many, necessarily weakens our forces. As elsewhere, the people here have grown accustomed to having the missionaries among them, and the general acclaim is, "We want a missionary to preach for us." I assure you, I would much prefer to listen to any of the local force than one missionary, with whom as yet I am not very well acquainted. We have a number of exemplary young men coming to the front who are developing forensic and executive powers which promise well for the future.

The San Bernardino church owes its success and preservation largely to the untiring, persistent presidency of Bro. Alonzo E. Jones. His entire life was spent in church work here, most of the time as pastor, which in those early years meant a general roustabout, deacon, janitor, doctor, nurse. Certainly the San Bernardino Saints in grateful remembrance should for ever appreciate the service of this estimable, meek, and loving brother. And there is William Gibson, the staunch, unyielding "Scotchman." God bless the dear old man! To-day he stands like a lone oak in a forest of growing, tender saplings; the result of an abstemious diet. For forty years he has refrained from eating any meat or any animal products. He is strictly vegetarian and abstemious. Many men of stronger physique have minimized their usefulness and hastened their demise by a failure to observe these great laws of nature. Brother Gibson's record is a synonym for lofty purpose and high living. He has been a father in Israel indeed. If every man, woman, and child, to whom he has ministered, in word or act, could bring a blossom as a token of affection, our brother would be buried in a sea of flowers.

Under the presidency of our well known brother, Charles E. Crumley, San Bernardino church is forging ahead. They are adopting advanced methods and taking advantage of every facility for progress. They are now busy shingling, painting, papering, and varnishing the chapel.

Los Angeles, the metropolis of the Southwest, presents a problem in church work. The phenomenal increase in population, the cosmopolitan character of her people, create conditions to be met not found elsewhere. We are now inaugurating a plan whereby we can hold monthly meetings throughout the district at every strategic point where we have a number of members. If our plan materializes we will have from twenty to twenty-five points where local workers can busy themselves. Brother and Sister VanFleet reside here, both pioneers in church work. They have been pillars in the church. Their unswerving adherence to the faith once delivered to the Saints has been of incalculable value in southern California. The name of Carmichael hath charm for the Garden Grove Saints; Albert, once pedagogue, then pastor, subsequently bishop, and now business manager of the Herald Office, presided over the destiny of the Saints at this point for many years. When he left, Bro. Nat Carmichael was selected in his stead. What can I say more? To mention all who have served the purpose of God's work here would fill a volume. If I have overlooked any, take consolation, read 1 Corinthians 12: 23, and be pacified.

Our Sunday schools are up-to-date and progressive. The Los Angeles Sunday school has nearly doubled in attendance the past year. Religio work is advancing. As to the needs of the mission, they are many. We need more consecrated men, a more complete surrender to God and his work; more love for him and more love expressed towards each other. May Jesus be our ideal; his life our pattern. May we emulate his unselfishness, make his devotion our watchword. Brethren, in spite of vicissitudes and trials, in the face of difficulties and distress, environed as we are in a world of sin, injustice and wrong, yet I can say we are in the faith, and the little band of loyal workers of this glorious, sun-kissed land are doing something to keep the camp fire burning. To each and all we send greeting, and good cheer.

Situated on the western slope, where the sun sinks daily in a sea of blue, yet even now we see the gray streak of the eastern morn. Hope rises in our bosom, and a still small voice whispers low and sweet, "The day is almost here." A day of peace and of plenty; a day of justice and love; a day of service and of song; a day of joy and happiness, of fellowship and good will. Take heart, my comrades. The aims and aspirations of all the ages focus in this our day. Six thousand years of faith and service look down on us. Our responsibilities are enormous, yet strength comes with the task. To love God and fellow-man is the object of our being. May this be our united aim.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

MICHIGAN.

For several years I have contributed but little to our several columns. My present purpose is not to apologize, though it might be in order. If in not writing more I erred, and I may have, others, perhaps too numerous, have also erred. An increased ministry, as also membership, has made correspondingly less space. This has not seemed to dawn on some minds, as reference to index pages will reveal. The recurrence, not seldom, of, "We make extracts of letters crowded out," I think has not affected some in the least, and they give us about the "same old thing in the same old way," at about regular intervals.

Michigan, I believe, has no very persistent contributor. Events there, perhaps, average with the rest of fields. The last two summers two reunions were held. In a brief write up of the one of 1909 at Cadillac, I made the blunder to say it was the first one in Michigan. Our genial S. W. L. Scott very properly corrected me. If those people had hustled up and held another one, perhaps my dullness would have been avoided. The project was approached with some misgivings in the more northern districts, but a success was made in the initial efforts of last year, and a measure more of success this. Beginnings are but beginnings, and of course can only yield corresponding results.

Reunion opportunity and processes should result in large returns to those of the church, affording as they do, time, opportunity, and conditions that no other gatherings afford. Two-day meetings are excellent, conferences also, and accomplish a purpose, but are too short to accomplish needed results. The church progressed without either Sunday school or Religio, but they now rate as indispensable helps. It was largely in western Iowa that the work of the Reorganization developed. There, too, the reunion developed and has been persistently maintained; its benefits realized. Many other localities have taken up the work of reunions; few have discontinued. If these on examination should be found to be otherwise more progressive, then it would certainly score against the project.

It is just possible, the mission of the reunion is for the church rather than others; and hence, if no great number of additions result it need not alarm. The ever increasing entanglements of the world, especially to entrap the youth, makes indispensably necessary safeguards, sufficient. Places to go, outings, are more and more the order. Young people will go more or less, and the reunion opportunity will partly provide for this, and its helpful, developing opportunity is afforded beside.

Ohio, this year, tried a longer reunion and, according to one report, proposes a shorter one next time. Ohio has not been engaged in it so long as some other localities. The Eastern reunion, as it is sometimes called, on the reverse, proposes a longer session next year. Can they stand more of the instituted sports? And also more church work? Localities and people differ. Why not? It is just possible reunions can be improved on the whole. Some comparisons of what was reported will be made by many and will do to think about.

For instance, at the Northern California reunion they reported less than one hundred and seventy testimonies as the total. At a meeting of ordinary duration at each of two Michigan conferences eighty bore testimony. Two, three, or more on the floor at once was common. All but one, waiting modestly their turn. Where wisdom and consistency held so high a place it is almost needless to say that wisdom and consistency also manifested itself in what was said.

At both the Ohio and the Northern California reunions there were evidently more of the outward manifestations, prophecy and tongues, than the conferences and reunions of Michigan. Why? It will do to think about. Prophecy and tongues are by no means always imperatively necessary, neither the spirituality always higher where they occur, but usually where they do occur there is the higher degree of spirituality.

At the October conference at McGregor, last year, it is safe to say the highest general spirituality was reached in three districts referred to. This was the concensus of opinion. It applied to all sessions, which is not often experienced so generally. Among the other spiritual manifestations there were the outward gifts. The reunion occasions scarce exceeded the conference occasions, though they might, because of more time and other opportune conditions, and perhaps will, when the "beginning stage is past."

It is common knowledge from experience that work produces hunger and thirst. "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled." Spiritual work produces spiritual results. To promote musical interests special organization was effected at the reunions, to be continued at the home stands. This is well; it was badly needed. Library work, sought to be established by a few earnest workers, has but little recognition as yet here, as well as in some other parts, and for two reasons; first, it is but partly understood, and then, it means work; and present day tendency and inclination is largely to leave the work to others. The Master laid out a large course of study when he said: "I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture." "In," must have meant all that could be found within. "Out," must have correspondingly meant all out that would contribute to that end. Hence the command to the Seer for the study of all good books.

Our Sunday school, Religio, and all allied lines, normal work, and other features should have fullest attention. Neglecting them will not only be present, but eternal loss. To appear well in face, attire, and form, is one of the special ambitions of the time. Intellectual attainment on spiritual lines is a higher achievement and ordained of God in order to secure celestial life. How much energy there is devoted to the passing, transitory, lesser. How little, comparatively, to that of eternal duration and importance. The library work comes in for consideration and use to this end. Think it over. How appropriate the injunction of the Master, "Seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness," etc.

Many Michigan Saints are trying to make the necessary advancement, others should fall in line and fulfill their heaven-imposed responsibility. Well done, awaits the faithful; Weighed and found wanting, the heedless. The times are portentous. The end nearing. The "perplexity" and "commotion" due to nations according to Christ's announcement is here. The late political landslide of the United States is in evidence. The mighty fall at times. Commotion, perplexity, fear are experienced, religiously and politically.

And now as to the "relics," the "Notice to the elders," in late HERALD is quite in harmony with proper carefulness, especially if it had occurred a good while ago. I have counseled to that effect from the first, in the light of conditions stated, and for other significant and prudential reasons, but not for one moment because there was something "shaky" in the case. Different brethren wrote me as to using in the way of evidence. My uniform answer to all was that it was not as yet timely; nor is it now. That, however, did not forestall the development of it as evidence, which is the proposition in hand; hence, none should lessen, but enlarge their support. Last year will be replete with more when all returns are made. The latest, from a "probationer," if not recent "convert," is: "If scientists knew of this they would run over each other to get on the ground." He is, perhaps, the peer of any of them, came onto the ground and made the necessary spade examination.

Among the tasks of the year was to locate the opposition through the papers they have written. This is done and they have been submitted to some of the principal brethren, if we have such. Those brethren are supposed to be well along with their work, hence it may not be inopportune to say those papers have the full tensile strength of any rope of sand. The men behind the papers who avoided getting onto the ground say, Farce, forgery, fake; just half as many, of same standing from scientific point of view, who made "on the ground" investigation say, Fact. Take your choice. The finds of last year were more than thirty. So far there have been more than twenty-five this year. This means for all engaged at it.

This will, as a report, be viewed as dark sayings by some. I have reported as deemed expedient. No one is more anxious for the entire completion of it than I. Time and tide are said to wait for nobody. Some events, at least, are not much more controllable in some phases. We, at times, must wait for events. My patience, perhaps, has been drawn upon as heavily in the matter as anyone may have experienced. Patience is supposed to be inexhaustible; our stock may be too limited. Though by no means so intended, that "Notice" will handicap considerably. Let those aiding rally with the fuller help.

Scientific indorsement for some things comes slowly. The creation story has not received the full scientific O. K. as yet. Some other matters of fact are as yet short such indorsement. Facts are facts, and will remain as such, when much of the so-called scientific will come up as much missing as the poor tail of Halley's comet.

There was published in Ensign last spring and later in Glad Tidings the data for previous photographs and book. Was supplied at General Conference and other gatherings, sent in quantity to branches where sales had been made. Any unsupplied sending address and two cent stamp will receive it. This is the last notice.

Yours in the conflict, and in full hope for success.

In bonds,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

News From Branches

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

One week ago yesterday Bishop Kelley spoke in the evening, and gave us a very interesting as well as educational sermon on temporalities, more especially stewardships. The following Monday night he spoke to the Seventh Quorum of Priests on the subject of the Order of Enoch. This was an open meeting, and quite a number were present besides the members of the quorum.

Yesterday morning and evening we were given a treat of good things from our brother, Apostle John W. Rushton. After hearing these sermons we could but feel proud of the fact that we are members of an organization that stands for such a high and noble cause.

The Sunday school fell away some in attendance yesterday; that is, we mean, the dry weather members. They all stayed at home; and our attendance was but 145.

As stated in our last report, we were then endeavoring to raise two thousand dollars towards the church debt coming due soon. We are pleased to state that through the strenuous efforts of our pastor, the goal has been reached. This is an increase of some seven hundred dollars over what was raised in the branch last year. So, as long as we are climbing some, we should not complain.

The Sunday school is making preparations toward a Christmas entertainment. Announcements later.

At our last regular quarterly business meeting of the branch, all the officers of the branch were sustained.

A committee composed of J. H. McVay, F. P. Hitchcock, and Robert Winning was appointed, whose duty it shall be to draft rules and by-laws for the establishment of a bureau for the temporal helpfulness of our people. This committee is to report soon and we will be able to give a more comprehensive outline of what is to be accomplished by the bureau, which is to be known as the Information and Employment Bureau of Central Latter Day Saint Church.

A committee composed of Robert Winning, Dr. Charles Sandy, and S. Dempsey was appointed to draft resolutions indorsing and commending the non-smoking order of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company.

An historical committee, of which the pastor is chairman, was appointed, whose duty it shall be to make and keep an accurate account of all matters and events pertaining to the branch.

Through the initiative of our choir, we have taken one more advance step. At one of its recent meetings the choir appointed a nursery committee, whose duty it is to take charge of the babies and small children of mothers who come to church, especially those inclined to be restless and disturb the preacher in his line of reasoning, and prevent the mother from getting the benefit of the sermon. It has been a decided success so far, and no mother need be denied the privilege of hearing a good sermon in quietude, if this committee may be intrusted with the care of the children. With few exceptions, all mothers are glad to avail themselves of the opportunity, and we want to thank the choir for it.

Some of the members of one of the Sunday school classes conducted a rummage sale at Nineteenth and Oak streets last week, and notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions, $52.10 was cleared, which will be applied towards paying for the piano recently purchased for the parlors of the church, and other needed improvements there.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.—District conference convened with the Thayer Branch at the Cone Hill Schoolhouse, on Saturday, November 12, 1910, with vice-president J. F. Cunningham in the chair. On motion Elders A. M. Baker and James T. Davis were chosen to preside over the conference. Minutes of last conference read, corrected, and approved. Statistical reports were read from the following branches: Beaver, last report 78, gain 9, present number 87; Springfield, last report 169, no change; Thayer, last report 29, no change; Pomona, last report 86, gain 1, present number 87. Branches not reporting: Aya, Grove Springs, Denlow, Woodside, and West Plains. Ministry reporting: Elders A. M. Baker, C. Quick, J. F. Cunningham, J. W. Quinley, Fred Moser, jr., T. D. Williams, Benjamin Pearson, G. W. Bootman, G. A. Davis, J. C. Christensen, and A. J. Fletcher; Priests H. W. Winegar. Bishop's agent reported balance and receipts $196.95; expenses $162.95; balance on hand $32. This was referred to an auditing committee, consisting of J. F. Cunningham, Fred Moser, and Benjamin Pearson. District treasurer reported balance and receipts $57.69; expenses $64.32; balance due treasurer $6.63. A collection was taken up to defray district expenses, $5.47. Preaching on Saturday night, Sunday at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., by Elders J. W. Quinley, A. M. Baker, and J. F. Davis, in the order named. At 1.30 p. m. on Sunday, the social service was in charge of Elders G. A. Davis and Benjamin Pearson, the sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered. Bro. Riley Cunningham was ordained to the office of teacher by James T. Davis and A. M. Baker. Five children were blessed under the hands of Elders Baker, Cunningham, Quinley and Moser. During the service 10 prayers and 23 testimonies were offered, and the whole company of Saints were moved to tears of joy by the influence of God's Holy Spirit, which spoke in unmistakable words to those who know this work is true. At the close four gave their names for baptism. The auditing committee reported the Bishop's agent's book and report correct. A vote of thanks was extended to the Saints and friends for their kindness to visitors, and conference adjourned to meet at Springfield, on the last Saturday and Sunday in March, 1911. Benediction by G. W. Bootman. Benjamin Pearson, secretary.

LITTLE SIOUX.—The conference of the Little Sioux District, was held at Pisgah, Iowa, October 1, 1910. Opened with prayer service at 9 a. m., during which the time was fully occupied with prayer, song, and testimony, attended also by prophecy, exhorting the Saints to diligence. Business session began at close of prayer service, District President Sidney Pitt, jr., and his assistants, James A. Donaldson and Joseph W. Lane, placed in charge. President Pitt reported little of discouragement and much of encouragement in the affairs of the district. The statistical reports from the twelve branches of the district showed a total membership of 1,917, a gain of 23 over last report. Membership included one patriarch, one high counselor, 4 high priests, 3 seventies, 42 elders, 32 priests, 32 teachers, and 20 deacons. A gain of 41 by baptism and 3 by letter, and a loss of 13 by letter, 1 by expulsion, and 6 by death, 5 ordinations and 4 marriages. Thirty-one ministerial reports were made, showing 310 sermons, 365 times assisted, 46 priesthood meetings attended, 19 official visits made, and 1,216 other services attended. Twenty-five baptisms reported, 37 confirmations, 5 ordinations, 8 children blessed, 2 marriages solemnized, and 249 administrations to the sick. The committees appointed to solicit funds to assist the Missouri Valley Branch to erect a church building reported progress, but not in condition to report. They had authorized William R. Coffman to act as committee at large to solicit. The Bishop's agent reported receipts in tithes and offerings from June 1 to October 1, $800.15; on hand from previous reporting, $221.56; total cash, $1,021.71; expended, $388; remitted to Bishop Kelley, $575; balance on hand, $108.71. Moorhead and Sioux City branches each asked for the next conference. A vote resulted in the choice of Moorhead by 10 majority. February 4 and 5 was the time set. A petition from the priesthood of the Logan Branch asked that proper steps be taken to organize the elders, priests, teachers, and deacons of the Little Sioux District into quorums. The conference adopted a resolution which provided that the conference request the proper authorities of the church to enroll the priesthood of the district into quorums at their earliest convenience. The list is to be furnished by the district clerk. The present method of ministerial reporting was ordered changed to the method in vogue just prior to present method. Preaching by J. A. Donaldson, Charles Derry, Alvin Knisley, and Sidney Pitt, sr. James D. Stuart, clerk.

Convention Minutes.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.—District Sunday school convened October 21, 1910, at Lansing, Michigan, with district superintendent in the chair. All active schools reported to convention. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Bro. Star Corless, superintendent; Bro. Ralph McElhennie, assistant; Sr. J. W. McKnight, secretary; Bro. O. H. Story, treasurer. If there are any schools in the district that are not represented, please write Mrs. J. W. McKnight, Galien, Michigan.

MASSACHUSETTS.—District Sunday school and Religio societies met in joint convention November 12 and 13, 1910, at Fall River, Massachusetts. Sunday school business session at 3 p. m., was in charge of Superintendent Lucie H. Sears. Local schools all reported and were well represented by delegates. Election of officers resulted in the reelection of Lucie H. Sears as superintendent; E. A. Fox was elected associate superintendent; Ora V. Holmes reelection secretary and treasurer. Reports from the various schools were encouraging. Religio business session was held in the evening in charge of Pres. Susan Jordan. Officers for the convention chosen by the Sunday school were elected to serve the Religio. Statistical reports of locals and written reports of presidents of all locals but one, as well as written reports from the district officers were in. Next convention was voted to be held at Providence, Rhode Island, in May, 1911, second Saturday and Sunday. The delegates to General Convention were instructed to endeavor to have the basis of representation changed from one for every ten to one for every six, in accordance with a vote passed at our last convention to ask the General Convention to do this. Election of officers resulted in choice of Susan Jordan, president; Frank Dobbins, vice-president; Mary O. Lewis, secretary; George Robley, jr., treasurer; member library board, E. M. Brown; home department superintendent, Emma Dobbins. A communication of greetings and god-speed was received from minister in charge, U. W. Greene, confined at Massachusetts General Hospital. M. C. Fisher and E. N. Brown were chosen to frame resolutions of regret and sympathy to be forwarded to Brother Greene. The convention moved the adoption of certain resolutions sent in by the Boston local, who had tried both, first: that they recommend to the district convention to donate ten dollars per year for a Graceland scholarship; also that the convention recommend to the locals to take similar action; second: that they recommend to the locals of the district through the convention that each local devote ten or fifteen minutes of each session for a drill on the officers of the church and their duties. The remainder of the evening was devoted to the reading of the district paper, The Gleaner, by the editor, Lucie H. Sears. Sunday was devoted to a prayer meeting, Sunday school session, institute work, papers, talks, and a cantata in the evening by the Bethel Sunday school. Further details can be obtained in the Sunday School Exponent at a later date. Mary O. Lewis, Press Committee.

The Bishopric.

TO THE SAINTS OF LITTLE SIOUX, IOWA, DISTRICT.

We all desire the best results obtainable. All should seriously consider every duty, under the law of God. Our earnest hope and effort should be for gospel extension. Help to the needy, and our final victory, and eternal life. Do you work as you pray? Do you know that tithes and offerings are a part of the gospel law? Are you willing to comply with it? Consider prayerfully, then act truly. Let us hear from you before December 31, and as much earlier as possible, and record your name on our books before our annual report.

MAGNOLIA, IOWA.

NOTICE OF APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

The Saints and friends of the Winnipeg District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints please take notice that upon the resignation of Bro. L. H. Carter, as Bishop's agent for said district, Elder William I. Arnold, 736 Simcoe street, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been duly appointed in and for the said district.

Brother Carter has performed his work well, and it is with regret that we have accepted his resignation, but conditions are such that he is leaving the northwest; hence his resignation.

Brother Arnold has been a supporter of the work for many years, both in Manitoba and Ontario, and we feel sure that the Saints of the district will find in him an efficient agent, and we trust that the urgent calls for help will be answered by you as a district, so that the work we all love may find its way to every home in your great country.

R. C. EVANS, Bishop of Canada.

AGENT'S NOTICE.

To the Saints of Western Nebraska and Black Hills; Greeting: Having changed my address from Belmont, Nebraska, to Lees Summit, Missouri, you will please send all tithes and offerings to Lees Summit, Missouri. I hereby sincerely thank each and every one who has assisted me in my labors as agent, by their kindly offerings, and as we have another month ahead of us in 1910, I hope to hear from you all in a substantial way before the year's account closes. Let us all send in what we can and make a banner year for Western Nebraska and Black Hills in 1910. Please remember my address, and in case you send postal order make it payable at Lees Summit post-office.

Your servant in gospel bonds,
NOVEMBER 20, 1910. R. S. MENGEL.

Conference Notices.

It has been found wise to make the time for the North Dakota district conference to be the first week in March instead of in January. Watch for the detail notice later. J. S. Wagner, district president.

Convention Notices.

The Saskatchewan district Sunday school will convene Friday, December 30, 1910, at Vanscoy, Saskatchewan. They will be occupied somewhat as follows: Morning social service, business meeting; afternoon, Sunday school session; institute work, also papers and talks on different subjects; evening joint program of Sunday school and Religio. All officers not intending being present, please send in your reports and credentials to the undersigned not later than the 25th. Minnie Smith, secretary, Ribstone, Alberta.

The Nodaway district Sunday school convention and institute will be held with the Bedison school on Saturday and Sunday, December 17 and 18, 1910. All are invited to come. Let the schools select their delegates and all reports and credentials be in hand on schedule time. W. B. Torrance, superintendent.

Error.

In the minutes of the Nodaway district conference published in HERALD of November 23, 1910, there occurred two errors, caused by myself by an oversight. In the twenty-third line where you read, "The auditing committee filed an incomplete report with the conference," should read, "The auditing committee filed a report with the conference." The report was as complete as could be on account of the books being incomplete. Also where it says, "Conference adjourned to meet with the Bedison Branch, February 25, 26, 1911," should be February 11, 12, 1911, it being Saturday and Sunday just before the full moon in February.

W. B. TORRANCE.

Missionary Release.

At his own request, made necessary because of sickness and physical disability, Elder S. M. Reiste has been released from missionary appointment for the remainder of the conference year, and will be at liberty to return home.

FREDERICK M. SMITH, For the First Presidency.

JOHN W. RUSHTON, Minister in Charge.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, November 25, 1910.

Died.

TROSPER.—Violet Kemba, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Trospier, was born July 5, 1910. She was a sweet, cheerful child, and is missed greatly by those she left behind; but we must not let selfish grief mar her present happiness. She died of cholera infantum on Sunday, November 20, 1910, after an illness of three days. May her life be an example to us older ones, always patient and loving. She left three brothers and one sister and her parents. May her life be an example.

BAKER.—Charles W. Baker, little son of George L. and Amanda Baker, of Pisgah, Iowa. He was born September 28, 1909, blessed February 13, 1910, by Elders Joseph Land and W. W. Baker, and died October 24, 1910. The remains were laid to rest in the Magnolia Cemetery. His little spirit has gone to mingle with the blessed in the paradise of God, to await the resurrection morn. Funeral services conducted by Joseph Land.

months, and 2 days. She was a granddaughter of Bro. John Landers, so widely known in the early days of the Reorganized Church. She leaves two sons and one daughter, and two sisters, Sr. Anna Salyards and Mrs. Lottie Hopper, and three brothers; also her mother, Sr. Catherine Stedman, survives her. Funeral in charge of John Smith; sermon by H. A. Stebbins. She and her four children were baptized in 1903 by Brother Stebbins.

ATTLEBERRY.—Lee Orin, infant son of N. L. and Eunice Attleberry, passed from this earth life, Monday, October 21, 1910, aged 1 month and 15 days. Interment in Rose Hill Cemetery, Lamon, Iowa. Services in charge of Elder Joseph Roberts.

HINTON.—Bro. Mark Hinton was born October 24, 1887, at Ellensburg, Washington. Baptized February 3, 1907, and died October 31, 1910. He came to Seattle several years ago and was baptized by Bro. J. E. Rhoads. Was united in marriage to Iva Line, December 25, 1908, by Elder D. W. Davis. To them was born one child. The brother leaves wife, son, father, mother, two brothers, three sisters, and many friends to mourn his departure from this life. He was killed by two large logs which rolled over him. Funeral sermon preached by Elder William Johnson, with Elder D. W. Davis in charge.

WHITEHOUSE.—Bro. Thomas Whitehouse was born June 4, 1861, at Princes End, Staffordshire, England; baptized May, 1875, at Kewanee, Illinois, by Elder Thomas Charles; departed this life October 23, at his home in Barbeton, Ohio. The remains were brought to Kewanee for burial, where he was laid peacefully away in Pleasant View Cemetery. He leaves to mourn, wife, daughter, and two sons, also two brothers, Alma of Chicago, and George of Barbeton, Ohio; one sister being in Oregon, and one half brother of Springfield, Illinois. He was a good father, a patient husband. Those that knew him best, loved him most. The funeral services at the grave was in charge of the Odd Fellows, and Elder Joseph Arber.

CALKINS.—Sr. Olive Almira Calkins died in Portland, Oregon, October 2, 1910. She was born April 26, 1845, and was married to William R. Calkins in 1867, March 7, at Pottawattamie, Iowa, and baptized by W. W. Blair. Nine children were born to this union, eight of whom, with the husband, survive her. Funeral sermon by Elder W. A. Goodwin, at Sherwood, Oregon. Said sister lived and died a faithful Saint, and we hope to all so live that, when the trumpet sounds calling the dead to come forth out of their graves, we may meet her again where death shall never be known.

TROWBRIDGE.—Sr. Emma A. Trowbridge was born at Sydney, Iowa, October 10, 1867. Died at her home in Staples, Minnesota, October 26, 1910, being 43 years, 16 days old. She came with her parents, when a child 3 years old, to Clitherall, Minnesota, where she spent her girlhood days. She was married to Bro. Albert H. Trowbridge, February 13, 1888. To this union were born nine children; eight still live to mourn the loss of a devoted mother, as do also the husband, her mother, several brothers, one sister, and a large circle of friends. She lived an honest, saintly life, and was beloved by all who knew her.

Do You Know that one of the very best apple-growing districts in this country is being developed in the Big Horn Basin of Wyoming? This is a district now in crop with alfalfa, grains and small fruits. People are just wakening to the great possibilities of this industry. NOW is the time to investigate, because land that can to-day be bought as ordinary farm land will soon be recognized as orchard land, worth many times its present value.

YOU will be surprised how cheaply these choice apple lands can be purchased. It is one of the great opportunities of the day. Any one looking for property of this kind should write me at once for illustrated literature, telling the story of this wonderfully attractive country. I am prepared to furnish complete detailed information.

V. S. PEET, "NON-MORMON," COMES TO LIGHT.

Some time ago we reviewed a little tract sent out, as we believe, by the Northern States Mission of the Dominant Church in Utah. The tract was entitled "Polygamy from a Non-Mormon Viewpoint," being a transcript of a lecture delivered in Philadelphia in 1906, by one V. S. Peet, who posed as a non-Mormon. The tract was very evidently one of a series sent out by the Northern States Mission, but in this instance their mission address and publishers' notice were omitted in an effort to conceal their connection with the tract and make it appear that it was solely a non-Mormon affair. This underhanded effort to teach the doctrine came as a climax to their series of tracts, and when exposed effectually, defeated their efforts at proselyting among fair-minded readers.

At the time we did not know just where to locate the corporeal Mr. Peet, though we ventured the assertion that he was either a Brighamite or else hopelessly under the influence.

Now, however, we know where to find him. He is editor of a little eight page paper published in Salt Lake City, called the Utah Independent. The paper is now in its second volume, so it will be seen that since the delivery of his lecture in 1906, he has gathered to "Zion." That need not surprise one, because his defense of polygamy indicated the tendency of the feet of Mr. Peet.

In his paper for November 24, Mr. Peet has this to say of the "Reorganites," as he has been trained to call us:

It is strongly in evidence that the Reorganized Mormons have received a severe shock that has caused them much pain, by a little pamphlet on polygamy. It appears that the Reorganites do not have any gospel of their own to preach. They are church wreckers, like the house wreckers in our cities, they live on what they pull down. A house wrecker would much rather tear down a good new building than an old one, because there are more spoils for him. The Reorganite Mormons, living among "holy jumpers," "the sanctified," "the baby roasters," and scores of other sects that live by begging and graft in Ohio and the Eastern States, overlook that lower class of religionists and come way out to Utah to vilify a religious sect that has done something for humanity on this side of the pearly gates. Nearly all other religious sects prepare their people to occupy mansions in the skies after they have passed through the dark and forbidding valley of death, while the Utah Mormon leaders teach their people to own good comfortable homes and well tilled farms and to enjoy the "here and now," rather than to tell them about the "golden hereafter"—that imaginary country "on the other side of Jordan" of which so little is known. Not only do the Reorganites take supreme delight in slandering the Utah Mormons, but to vilify and injure Utah is heaven itself to them. When it comes to polygamy the Reorganites talk it all the time. They seem to know its length, breadth and thickness; they claim to know its origin, its end and its specific gravity. To hear a Reorganite talk you would be led to believe that he had even wallowed in polygamy all his life, as he talks of it so freely. He has it for breakfast, dinner and supper, and indulges in it at night. I have never heard a Reorganite talk but what he spent most of his discourse on that subject, and I have heard them in Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Iowa and Utah. Polygamy is their stock-in-trade, and they use it as a fractional currency when they exchange thought. Their teachers use it as a punching bag when they train their missionaries for the field. The Reorganites talk polygamy one thousand per cent more than their Utah brethren, and should a Reorganite attempt to preach without polygamy he would be as weak as Samson was when Delilah relieved him of his long, bushy, hairy waterfall.

Polygamy and the Reorganites appear to be twins, and they both blow hot air through the same quill.

To yell polygamy at a Reorganite makes him as hilarious as a young pup with a ball of yarn, but when you speak to him about the awful destitution, crime, immorality, poverty, rags, almshouses, intemperance, and the price of coal in Utah, that was "directly" caused by polygamy, he will get as solemn, meek and mournful as an undertaker at a Dunkard funeral.

With all the solemnity of a Quaker and with the meekness of Moses, a Reorganite will declare that polygamy originated in Utah, and that Brigham Young started it. I heard that statement made so many times by the Reorganites that I began to believe that the Reorganites had become so calloused in telling that falsehood that they actually believed it themselves.

Now let us look into their story a little. The first plural or polygamous marriage of which there is any record occurred six thousand years before Brigham Young was born, and that marriage is recorded in the fourth chapter of Genesis, the nineteenth verse, which reads as follows: "And Lamech took unto himself TWO WIVES: the name of one was Adah and the name of the other was Zillah."

In the little old red schoolhouse in Burlington, Pennsylvania, we sang when I was a boy, "I want to see father Abraham, and I'll praise him till I die."

And I learned in Sunday school in that same schoolhouse that father Abraham had a wife named Sarah, and then there was Hagar who bore Abraham a son, and then a little further on it is recorded that "Then again Abraham took him a wife and her name was Keturah." I also learned that Jacob had two wives and two hired girls, and that David had many wives, and David pleased God in all that he did except in one instance. And then we came down to Solomon.

In 1 Kings 3: 5, "In Gibeon the Lord appeared unto Solomon in a dream by night, and God said, Ask what I shall give thee." Solomon asked God for wisdom. In 1 Kings 4: 29 and 30, "And God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the seashore. And Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of the east country, and all the wisdom of Egypt. For he was wiser than all men." "And he spake three thousand proverbs; and his songs were a thousand and five."

You see that Solomon was the wisest man of all times. His wisdom was God given and he was also a thirty-third degree Free Mason, and with his great wisdom he was the greatest polygamist of all times. At one time he had 700 wives and 300 concubines.

Again, in the New Testament it says that a bishop must be the husband of one wife, which plainly shows that the members of the church had more than one.

With all of the polygamy I learned in that good old-fashioned Methodist Sunday school; and then years afterward to hear a Reorganite speaker say that polygamy originated with Brigham Young in Utah. I knew that the Reorganite was either a liar or a fool, or both. Then, again, I thought that there must be some record of polygamy during the time between the Bible and Brigham Young in Utah.

To satisfy myself on that subject I visited the National library in Washington, District of Columbia. There I learned that polygamy has been in practice since it was first recorded in the fourth chapter of Genesis down to the present time. I also learned that good Methodists, Presbyterians and Lutherans, long before the Mormon church was founded, sanctioned polygamy, and down to the present time nearly all orthodox religious societies will admit polygamous converts as members, and allow them to retain and raise children by their plural wives. I recorded all I learned on the subject and put it in the form of a lecture, which I delivered, by invitation, before the Friendship Liberal League in Philadelphia. I gave good and sufficient reasons some time ago in the Utah Independent why I had that lecture put in pamphlet form. I also told them who had sent many of the Reorganites a copy of that lecture. That little pamphlet feels as hot on a Reorganite's cranium as a mustard plaster on one's chest in a Turkish bath. To offset it the Reorganites have published a little cheap, weak pamphlet, in which it states that Mormons are responsible for my polygamy lecture in the following:

"Why do elders of the Northern States Mission put it up to V. S. Peet, a non-Mormon, to tell of the joys of 'celestial marriage'? Let Brigham Young tell it; he had experience at first hand."

Here the Reorganites tell another whopper, for there is not one word about the joys of celestial marriage or one word about any celestial marriage in the pamphlet. There is not one word where I approve polygamy. I do not approve of anything I do not believe in. I simply told the story of polygamy as I found it recorded, and let my hearers use their own judgment in regard to it. To tell the story of a war, or intemperance, or of a wedding, is no sign that the writer believes what he records is right, although it is true. The Reorganites better knock the balls off from their heels and back up and take another start.

V. S. PEET.

We wish to note a few facts in connection with the above quoted ebullition. With all due regard to the veracity of Mr. Peet we do not believe that he ever in all his life heard a representative elder of the Reorganized Church teach that polygamy originated in Utah or with Brigham Young. He may have heard such a statement regarding the origin of polygamy in the United States, or more especially the origin of polygamy among professed Latter Day Saints.

Our elders have not been obliged to take a trip to Washington to discover that polygamy existed in other ages and lands before Brigham Young lived. We have often traced it back to the Lamech, mentioned by Mr. Peet, whose deeds are recorded in Genesis; and going a little further than the discreet Mr. Peet, we discover that said Lamech was a murderer and had covenanted with Satan. Thus we learn a fact carefully concealed by Mr. Peet in his lecture, namely that polygamy originated among criminals. It is still maintained by criminals; the chiefest exponents of it having confessed before the United States Committee on Privileges and Elections that they are living in violation of the laws of God and the laws of the land and intend to so continue.

Mr. Peet complains that elders of the Reorganized Church talk too much about polygamy. In his heat, Mr. Peet forgets that his pernicious activity in teaching it, has rendered necessary some of this talk against the doctrines of Lamech the murderer. But how about Mr. Peet? He seems always to have had a tender spot in his heart for the doctrine. He studied about it away back in the "little old red schoolhouse in Burlington, Pennsylvania," when he was a lad. Years later he was deeply grieved to hear the "Reorganites" attack the doctrine. To satisfy his restless longing he made a pilgrimage to Washington (probably at the expense of the Northern States Mission) where he could delve among the musty tomes and find all that Martin Luther, Reverend Madan, and others had written in support of the institution. He searched the Scriptures, and was mightily impressed with the family of Solomon, a "thirty-third degree Mason." Finally he arranged a lecture on the subject. Next he claims that he caused a report of the lecture to be published in pamphlet form. Now he appears in Salt Lake City, under the shadow of the "Beehive," and still he is thinking and writing about polygamy. We have heard from Mr. Peet all the way from Philadelphia to Salt Lake City and we have never heard from him when he did not "spend most of his discourse on that subject."

Mr. Peet complains that we are wreckers, that we are destructive. This charge is true. Jesus Christ was destructive. Listen:

For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the Devil.—1 John 3: 8.

We are also constructive, in line with the commandment found in the Inspired Translation of the Scriptures (not had by Mr. Peet) where it says:

Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness.—Matthew 6: 38.

Whenever we attack the spiritual edifice of the Utah Mormons or others we invariably offer them a better building.

Mr. Peet says that he did not defend polygamy in his lecture. We say that he did. Whenever a man arranges a lot of quotations and cites a number of precedents, all favorable to polygamy, and excludes all those that are against it, artfully weaves the whole into a lecture, and then permits a church that is an ardent advocate of polygamy to publish the lecture in tract form for wide, free, distribution, that man is defending polygamy. And Mr. Peet can not evade that fact by weakly insinuating that after all he does not really believe all that he has said.

THE WORK OF THE UNITED ORDER OF ENOCH.

THIS IS THE BENEVOLENT ORGANIZATION OF THE CHURCH FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE POOR AND NEEDY.

We are often asked, "What can I do to help along the Order of Enoch in its work?" Well, now just think a moment. What is this order? Answer, it is the special organization for benevolent purposes in the church in the interest of the poor. This being true and the society fully organized for its work for more than six months past, should not everyone have put forth an effort of some kind to furnish it means to carry on its work?

Other benevolent societies in the world are all the time soliciting the people for help and nothing can be done without the help. The United Order of Enoch does not go out into the world in this way soliciting its funds. Its mission, however, is acknowledged to be more important, and purely charitable and helpful when carried out, than they all; why then should any member or friend fail to comprehend just what his duty is to the order?

No institution can perform the work outlined for this without due capital as a basis for its work. This is the preparatory step. For the work of this order it should be a good basis too; at least one half million dollars. With this amount the work can be safely, justly, and fully carried forward. The amount can easily be furnished and without injury to the church treasury by everyone doing his duty, but not otherwise.

We are in this regard where the Saints were in 1832 to 1834. (See Doctrine and Covenants 102: 1, 2.) The opportunity is open to us, but it is for the entire body to answer to the occasion. Now there is no one, nor no ten nor twenty persons who can do this; but all can, and without injury to any; on the contrary, it will be to the special blessing and good of those who put forth the helping hand for them to do so.

There are quite a few who could give to this one thousand dollars each. Many who could spare five hundred dollars. Many more who could give one hundred dollars, and several thousand who could send in ten dollars each. Once the proper basis had, we move forward to the full accomplishment of the work which will bring peace, favor, and true equality in the Lord's time, and without which effort we wander in the wilderness.

Before the closing of the year 1910, we ought to hear from five thousand Saints touching this special work. Shall we? And may the Lord and his blessing guide you.

Address The United Order of Enoch, Box 52, Independence, Missouri, or the undersigned. Ever, with confidence in the Saints performing their work,

Very respectfully submitted,

E. L. KELLEY, President United Order of Enoch.

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN: Christmas Bells; Two Incidents in the Life of President Smith.

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY AND ECONOMICS: The Brook Farm Experiment, by Elbert A. Smith.

A PROPHECY OF VICTORY.

"Turn now to the temperance revolution. In it we shall find a stronger bondage broken, a viler slavery manumitted, a greater tyrant deposed—in it more of want supplied, more disease healed, more sorrow assuaged.

"By it, no orphans starving, no widows weeping; by it, none wounded in feeling, none injured in interest.

"Even the drammaker and dramseller will have gilded into other occupations so gradually as never to have felt the change, and will stand ready to join all others in the universal song of gladness."—Abraham Lincoln.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The December number of Everybody's Magazine contains the first of a series of articles by Frank J. Cannon, called, "Under the Prophet in Utah." Frank J. Cannon is the son of George Q. Cannon, formerly first councilor in the Utah church. As senator from Utah he played an important part in helping to secure statehood for Utah under a pledge that the church would thereafter obey the law. He now holds that the pledge then made has been grossly violated. He further holds that the church leaders in Utah have established a sort of religious despotism over a people whose sincerity and religious fervor make the despotism more secure, and that they are using the financial resources of the people to their own enrichment.

Mr. Cannon was excommunicated some years ago because of his opposition. He edited the Salt Lake Tribune for a time, and is now engaged in newspaper work in Denver. He has a pleasing style and makes his article as interesting as fiction. As his story develops we may be able to give our readers some parts of it that will be valuable. Of course we would take exception to his position that Joseph Smith the Martyr was the instigator of polygamy in the church. Mr. Cannon may be a good witness regarding things that transpired in Utah in his personal experience; his testimony would not be so valuable regarding things alleged to have transpired before he was born. We must have other evidence than his unsupported word in matters of that nature.

The Christian Standard for December 3 contains a letter from R. B. Neal, of Pikeville fame, concerning the recent debate between Dr. Jesse F. Love, of the Christian Church, and Elder F. M. Slover, in which Mr. Neal takes unto himself most of Doctor Love's glory, Mr. Neal being a sort of "power behind the throne." Mr. Neal needs no press agent.

The Deseret Evening News for November 29 contains an editorial notice of the work of Elder J. E. Vanderwood in Arizona. They complain of his methods. The Utah faction always complain when the facts concerning their own leaders and history are shown. The Reorganization has never feared the truth.

According to the North American for December 4, considerable indignation is felt in Utah among non-Mormons over the alleged fact that money raised in the State by subscription for the purpose of presenting a silver service to the battleship Utah is to be expended for a service bearing a design showing as its most prominent feature the figure of Brigham Young. The majority of the committee appointed to select a design were Mormons and it is charged that they secretly selected this design and arranged for the making of the service without the knowledge of the Gentile member. We can not vouch for the truth of the story.

Elder Frederick A. Smith, minister in charge of Canada, desires us to insert the following notice: Until March 1, my field address will be 95 Sanford avenue, North Hamilton, Ontario. Home address, Box 225, Lamoni, Iowa.

Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, founder of Christian Science, passed away December 3. News of her death reached us too late to appear in our issue last week. Thus ends a strange and eventful life. It remains to be seen how Christian Science will prosper devoid of her personality.

The editorial appearing in our issue for last week, entitled "The Church in Court; decisions of United States and Canadian courts affecting the standing of the Reorganized Church," will be put in tract form as soon as possible. This tract can be secured for twenty cents per dozen. Orders sent in now will be filled as soon as the tract can be plated.

Elder H. O. Smith has a valuable three column article in Pearson's Magazine for December. It is in the form of a letter and appears in the editor's department. It is a refutation of the charge that polygamy was introduced into the church by Joseph Smith. The editor commenting on it says that it sets straight what may have been misunderstood by many readers.

Brother Griffiths reports than on the 16th of November he and Bro. F. G. Pitt each baptized two people in the River Jordan. These, we believe, are the first baptisms to be performed by representatives of the Reorganization in Palestine. Letters from Brethren Griffiths and Pitt received too late for insertion will appear next week.

The best evidence of loyalty to truth is liberality enough to give all truth a chance.

It's no use talking about the peace of God if your life is a provocation to your neighbors.

The man who is only marking time is most likely to be singing about marching to Zion.

Elders' Note-Book

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE DES MOINES BRANCH.

A correct history, no matter however much abridged, contains both the good and the bad, the pleasant and the unpleasant. It has ever been thus, whether the history given was of angels or of men, so it will be with the history of the work of God among men in Des Moines. Do we want to hear only pleasant things when history is given, we should be more careful to so act and so speak as those who are to be judged by the "perfect law of liberty."

In writing a history covering a period of such length as that covered by the work of the church in Des Moines and vicinity to be read at an assembly like this it necessarily must be very much abridged, but to make it a truthful outline of what has transpired in the conflict of truth against error, of the struggles of the divine against the human as it now is affected by sin, there is necessarily a commingling of facts unpleasant as well as pleasant to be related. Desirous of making this brief outline as profitable as possible, an effort is made to make it comport with the facts as they are found on the pages of the past, as handed down to us, yet only touching upon the more prominent points contained therein.

Beginning as early as 1862 missionary efforts resulted in the baptism of a few, Bro. William Stephens being the first fruits. He was soon after ordained an elder and appointed to labor in "Des Moines and vicinity" the following year.

Among the first laborers in this part of the Lord's vineyard were Ebenezer Page, John Swain, and John A. McIntosh, all of whom have passed from this sphere of action. The labors of these men of God resulted in the organization of a branch at Fort Des Moines, consisting of six members, on July 10, 1864, and called in history the "Polk County Branch," or Fort Des Moines Branch." Of those who were members of this organization only one remains a member of this branch, Sr. Elizabeth Sheeler, then Sayer. One, who was a member of this branch before its disorganization, which occurred in the latter part of 1866, Sr. Emma Young, yet remains a member of this branch, though not present with us to-day.

During the time of the existence of this first organization one was baptized in 1863, five in 1864, and four in 1866. The historian's record states that "discord and strife entered in among the people of God." This is as it was in Galatia, when Paul furnishes us the history that some were "soon removed from him that called them into the grace of Christ."

Some time prior to 1873, probably about 1868 to 1870, a branch was organized in the vicinity of Des Moines, known as the Pleasant Grove Branch. This branch had in its membership several who afterwards became a part of the Des Moines Branch. It was disorganized in 1877. Of its members who are now living and members of the Des Moines Branch are William R. Vice, C. F. Merrill, Jacob Shelhart and Sr. Elizabeth Hufford.

It is recorded that from 1870 there was a branch organization in Des Moines. As to just when it was organized or disorganized we have no data; but we are informed from the report to district conference in 1870 that the branch consisted of sixteen members, with R. Young as president. This branch must have been disorganized prior to 1875, as the records show that a branch was organized in the city in that year with John Watkins as president. Three of those who were among the first members of this organization are still living and members of the Des Moines Branch: M. T. and Sarah Cracraft, and C. F. Merrill.

The records show that since 1884 the branch has been organized at least three times, disorganization resulting from the same cause that the historian records early entered the church here,—the same condition that we learn existed in New Testament times for which they were reproved by the Apostle James in the following language: "From whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members?"—James 4: 1. It is an historical axiom that in an organization where envy, jealousy, anger, and hatred are permitted to exist to any degree, the seeds of disorganization already exist, and it is only a matter of time, except these evils be subdued and overcome, that a disorganization will ensue. Paul so understood this when to the Galatian church he says, "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another."—Galatians 5: 15. While the branch has been consumed by disorganization, the gospel of the resurrection caused the seeds of organization to develop, and to-day can be seen what the gospel has accomplished, even though adverse conditions have prevailed for a time; but what might the gospel have done if each one had wrought to the sacrifice of himself for the others' welfare.

Since September 1, 1884, the following brethren have occupied as presidents of the branch, some of whom occupied several terms, and in faithfulness till circumstances made it necessary for a change, while others failed or fell by the way: M. T. Cracraft, C. F. Merrill, Joseph P. Knox, W. N. Ray, H. M. Daniels, N. A. Baker, W. T. Bozarth, R. Young, James McKiernan, V. W. Gunsolley, Joseph Lilly, William Johnson, M. H. Cook, E. O. Clark, E. Curtis, and O. Salisbury; while at the same time the following have served as clerks: George Wyman, William M. Emslie, W. R. Chandler, C. F. Merrill, D. W. Thomas, M. H. Cook, S. Armstrong, S. L. Ades,

George Davis, Fred Chandler, E. F. Hall, Ray Chandler, C. Skinner, and G. F. Mintun.

At one time the branch had a presiding clerk, and twice were vice-presidents elected, but these are some of the historical peculiarities.

The branch has been outspoken in regard to the position the church occupies in regard to the social evils and immoralities that do and will exist in the present evil world. In 1883, when an effort was being made to adopt constitutional prohibition, this branch with the others composing the district adopted the following:

"Whereas, we, as Latter Day Saints in conference assembled at Edenville, Iowa, representing the interests of our church in central Iowa, do believe in constitutional prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all intoxicating liquors as a beverage, as the only safe and true policy of the state and church, therefore, be it Resolved, That we, so far as practical, will not support by our voice and vote, any man or party that is not in direct sympathy with the true spirit of prohibition."

In harmony with this, the branch, with very few exceptions, opposed the establishment of a brewery in Des Moines; the president of the branch and the city missionary assisting in every way possible to make it impracticable for such a corrupting institution to exist, and two of the members of the branch are state trustees of the Anti-Saloon League.

The branch has spoken very plainly about gaming on the Lord's Day. As early as 1887 there seemed to be a necessity for some action to be taken in which the branch decided that it was a "desecration of the Lord's Day: therefore, is unchristian conduct."

When Roberts and Reed Smoot, of Utah, sought to occupy as legislators in the United States Senate the branch uttered its protest in unmistakable terms. While the spirit of adultery and fornication has affected some who have been members of the branch, yet the records show that active steps have been taken as soon as it was known, to eliminate this evil, and to give no encouragement to its existence, not even shunning to declare against undue intimacy of the sexes whenever known to exist.

In 1882, the church took formal steps to build a place of worship, having previously worshiped in private houses or public halls. In this church erected on East Sixteenth and Des Moines Streets the local organization continued to worship till 1904, when the present building was secured, and at a commendable sacrifice it was paid for within two years, with such improvements as were necessary to make it a comfortable and convenient place in which to worship, and November 12, 1905, it was dedicated to the worship of God.

Some of the peculiarities noticed in the records, such as will bring to memory old experiences, are:

1. A part of the branch acting for itself without a vote of the entire branch.
2. The branch electing the officers of the Sunday school, and deciding that, "No presiding branch officer shall hold office in the Sunday school."
3. Dropping members from branch membership by a vote of the branch without a trial.
4. At one time adopting the following: "That we table the Rules of Order."
5. Electing officials by drawing names from a hat.

The branch has had as auxiliaries to their work the Prayer League, (one hour for prayer, and a half hour for theology), Sunday school, Gospel Research Society, Zion's Social-Literary Club, Religio, Ladies' Aid Society, and the Choral Society, all of which have been of great assistance to the local and general interests of the church.

To-day we are making history. Every day we are making history. The sins of the past may be forgiven of God and man, but they are on record as a part of the history of our organization. We should be more careful to make history the entirety of which will be pleasant as well as profitable, to be read by our children. Although an acquaintance with our mistakes may be somewhat profitable, yet not altogether pleasant, the best and most satisfactory monument to be erected for all future beholders is an uncheckered history of a righteous life, of which intelligences governed by purity and virtue can and will say, "well done."

CONSECRATIONS.

BY E. L. KELLEY, PRESIDING BISHOP.

CHAPTER 4.

Those who devote their time and energies, or their means as they can spare the same, to the service of God, are consecrated to Him and the holy life.

Gifts, donations, offerings set apart for the worship and service of God and duly placed in the hands of the ministers whom God has authorized to receive for the uses of his work, are consecrations:

For, for this cause pay ye your consecrations also unto them; for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.—Romans 13: 6, Inspired Translation.

Again, the word consecrate means to dedicate, devote, or appropriate to sacred uses:

Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh.—Hebrews 10: 19, 20.

Referring to consecrations of property, Jesus taught as follows:

This he spake unto his disciples, saying, Sell that ye have and give alms; provide not for yourselves bags which wax old, but rather provide a treasure in the heavens, that faileth not; where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.—Luke 12: 36, 37.

In keeping with this the instruction to the church in the present age is:

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8.

In performing this special work we may gain the special favor and approval of the Lord:

Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble.—Psalm 41: 1.

To let the light of Christ shine in upon this world men must not live to themselves nor simply for themselves; the way of life is a truer and better way than the way of self and selfish pleasures. How much more like Christ is the discipleship brotherhood: "Every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God."

Men and women in this life should not make the fatal mistake of living for the world, which with all its pleasures is sad and disappointing at best, when they have set before them the royal way of usefulness and good works which fit and qualify for a fullness of joy and happiness in everlasting life. Jesus, at the beginning of his personal ministry taught:

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal. But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal.—Matthew 6: 19, 20.

In this we find the highest and best ideals of life. The world is before us; we all have our opportunities and it is left with each one to occupy in accordance with these. The person, however, who uses these opportunities to gather worldly things for himself and neglects to lay up more enduring treasures as he engages in life's warfare, makes a failure. Jesus, the great witness of what is highest and best in making up the successful life, taught:

Take heed, and beware of covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.—Luke 12: 17.

The man who has gathered much of this world's goods then can not truly have it said that he has made a success, until he has used properly the things which have come into his hands, and hence our heavenly Father has revealed through his word the divine plan of consecration. In other words, as we move out in life's battle we must be willing to extend our energies to the development and growth of what we meet with, that is the highest and best, and the man who will not do this through covetousness, or for fear of losing hold upon some of the treasures of this world which he has gathered, proves himself unworthy, and must lose all by and by. Who can say that God's way is not just?

The law of consecration opens up the way then for usefulness and good works on the part of men. Neither is it the correct thought that in the consecration, persons shall dispossess themselves of all they have, so that they shall not have control over anything, or ample for themselves.

Such a consecration as this would only take away the ability of the people to do, and the little or great amount turned over would pauperize the donors and consecrations would stop, for nobody would have anything to give.

A better idea is the procedure pointed out in the law:

And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8.

The law is plain and definite then; besides, it is just and right, and no one should think for a moment of failing to comply with, or seeking to evade the same. The language is, "consecrate of thy properties," for the good of the poor. How much of it? Answer: "That which thou hast to impart." The man, or the woman, who is not willing to do this, is serving himself, not the Lord. We must help along the work of the Master if we are to receive from him on the other side the approval, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

In the administration of the law it is evident that justice and right are the objects sought and not simply to get all possible from a person.

Doctrine and Covenants 42: 10, giving further direction states:

And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue, to be consecrated unto the bishop, it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants.

The law affords opportunities to help in the service of God, and in this help others are blessed so they may have an opportunity, and in their turn assist and bless others of the worthy, needy in this life.

That which has been presented is referred to under the law under the term consecrations. The same instruction, however, is presented to the Saints under the name of surplus properties. Under the term consecration is presented the thought of a first, and also a second consecration. The first, is set forth in paragraph eight, section forty-two. It is, "consecrate of thy properties" . . . "that which thou hast to impart." Then after this first consecration if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individual of it, more than is necessary for their support, the second consecration is made; this, in fact, includes all of what is properly termed surplus property, hence this section and section 106, are in fact one law presented at different times and under different conditions, and in different language, yet in strict harmony.

The surplus property called for, section 106, is that which a person can spare without injury to himself or his business. In other words, "that which he can do without and yet perform all of his duties to himself, his family and his creditors." Some have interpreted the term surplus properties as being all a person has over his day's rations. This is as far short of being right as is the idea that under the "distribution to every man as he had need" it simply meant feed him when he was hungry.

Surplus means excess, over-plus, or above, and a man's surplus coat would not be the only coat he had, nor would his surplus properties be all the possessions he has. Surplus is the amount which he has that he can do without, without injury to himself or business, and this he should turn over to aid the Lord's work; to so do is to walk in the path of duty and wisdom.

The manner and method of dispensing these gifts, offerings, consecrations or surplus properties, however, is just as special and important a matter as is the gathering under the law, and requires equal watchcare and diligence on the part of those having the matter in charge, and herein lies their responsibility and the strict account they must render to God of their work.

The question of uses and disbursements we will treat of under the terms used in the law of "stewardships," and "all things common."

1. STEWARDSHIPS.

The question has already been asked, how do you harmonize the doctrine of stewardships, as taught in the revelations, with the condition of "all things common" as set forth in the New Testament? Parties making the inquiry seem to have overlooked the fact that if they see a conflict in the two positions, that it must be in the interpretation they have given to one or the other of these conditions. Our heavenly Father never contradicts himself, nor is his law found out of harmony with itself. The question of stewardships was not introduced into the church through the revelations of our own time. These revelations only reflect light and direction upon the methods to pursue under the law as it is set forth in the Scriptures. Early in the teaching of Jesus we have clearly set forth the condition of men in this world and their duty in connection therewith under the parable of the wise steward. (Luke 16: 1-12.)

While men have place and opportunity in this life to make themselves useful and beneficial not only to themselves but others, they are not placed here as owners wherein no responsibility, or account, is to be rendered; but they are stewards, and as such they must answer by and by for whatever comes into their hands and however well they may have used the same.

The principle of stewardships is not only set forth in this Scripture lesson, but it is plainly shown also that in the work of these same persons is formed the character that stands for their approval or disapproval in time that is to come. The language is:

He who is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much; and he who is unjust in the least, is also unjust in much. If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches.—Luke 16: 10, 11.

The plan of extending to all, stewardships, is set forth further by Jesus and recorded in the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew. Jesus here is giving instruction with reference to the conditions which were to obtain in the church and uses this language:

Now I will liken these things unto a parable. For it is like as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway went on his journey.—Matthew 25: 13-15.

When did the church or kingdom of heaven take upon itself the work as outlined here by the Master? What were the arrangements for the distribution of the goods to every man, according to his several abilities, and when was this made? It can hardly be said that Jesus was talking idly or with reference to a work that had no part nor lot with his church; but the reasonable side is, that like himself, he wrought out or revealed a system for his children that would work to perfection if they would live in accordance with that system, and the system pertains, as we may gather from the reading or the teaching itself, to the work of the church, as he says of this "man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants and delivered unto them his goods." He did not call anybody; servants that were not his own. He is representing the work that is among his own disciples, and it is in agreement with the doctrine of consecration that we have already seen set forth in other parts of the Scriptures.

The object of the experiences of this probationary life is that the people may gather and develop strength and character, thus doing much good themselves, and it ought not to be thought that our heavenly Father has ever adopted a system which would take away the agency, the responsibility, and the free action of any of his children. He gave proper dominion to man; put him in position to overcome with reasonable energies and activities, if he would. Man may through his own misdeeds and evil works close up these avenues, to an extent, against himself; but God has extended the opportunity. It is men and the powers of evil that shut off the light and turn away the people from the way of life.

Referring to the history of the church a short time after the illustration of the parable of the man traveling in a far country, we find that certain changes were made. The disciples had been together a number of days waiting and preparing for the special work that had been outlined that they should perform. Pentecost Day finally came. With it more light and judgment to act and the church was blessed and the people moved out in the work that had been outlined by their great Leader. And among other things which they engaged in was the distribution of the earthly effects in a manner that doubtless was pleasing to God and just to themselves. The statement is made and "distribution was made unto every man according as he had need." Upon what basis in the law was such a distribution as this made, if we discard the law of stewardships as it is set forth in the teaching of Jesus in the record? Persons have misunderstood and miscomprehended the statement on account of the fact that they have supposed that the distribution referred to was to individuals as they might need a meal's victuals, or a day's rations, and they would come and get it. This is the erroneous side of the picture.

"Distribution was made unto every man according as he had need." The work is in keeping with the illustration in the twenty-fifth of Matthew, where the outline of the church in this part of its work is set forth. Among other things was that of stewardships, providing that the membership should have an opportunity, "every man according to his several ability," and according to his needs. If we compare this rendering with modern revelation touching the work of the church in its development and organization, we have a complete antitype. The instruction is:

Every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration, inasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family. And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue, to be consecrated unto the bishop, it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 9, 10.

Under the New Testament church it is said: "And distribution was made unto every man according as he had need." In the church of the present time, the direction is: "It shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants." The Master taught the same in both instances. It is men who don't see. Sometimes because they are looking the wrong way.

Turning to the record, which shows the organization and work of the church as it was in the time of Enoch, we read as follows:

Therefore, a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship, that every man may give an account unto me of the stewardship which is appointed unto him; for it is expedient that I, the Lord, should make every man accountable, as stewards over earthly blessings, which I have made and prepared for my creatures.—Section 101: 2.

Under what has been termed the perfected church under Enoch, the law of stewardships is strictly applied, and it must not be lost sight of that in the statement the Lord uses this pointed language: "For it is expedient that I, the Lord, should make every man accountable, as stewards over earthly blessings, which I have made and prepared for my creatures." This makes an end of controversy with man. If it is expedient, or necessary, for the Lord to do this, man can not approve himself nor fill the measure of the creation, in which he has part in this world, without it.

The question of stewardships then, is a settled question introduced by Jesus into the church in the first century, introduced under him in the present time, made the order of the church in the time of Enoch, of which it is stated that this instruction was given to Enoch concerning the order of the church for the benefit of the poor, setting out clearly that the object of these stewardships is to give every man an opportunity; and our heavenly Father has expressed his special pleasure at men and women having an opportunity for themselves in this present life. But again the inquiry is made, how do you make this harmonize with the doctrine of

ALL THINGS COMMON.

It is suggested first that "all things common" as the same is set forth in the law of Christ, and in the work of his church, is one thing, and the common view in the world of this term "all things common," is quite another thing.

The trouble is that people have had an erroneous idea of what the conditions were under the doctrine of "all things common" as they have had erroneous ideas of many other conditions and of many other statements that are found in the word of God. The teaching in the law is plain and direct, and when comprehended, every part agrees with every other part. It is only when our ideas in some particular thing are wrong that we seem to have found the clash in the teaching of the word. The clash, however, is in the man and not in the law of life.

Turning to the fourth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, thirty-second verse, we read:

And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

It does not state that they did not have anything; but that they had risen to the height of the teaching of Jesus in the law where they considered the doctrine of stewardships and did not claim that the things were their own. They were simply stewards of God over the things which they possessed.

In the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth verses it states:

Neither was there any among them that lacked; for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet; and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

Now those who may have thought that the law as outlined here was that everyone should bring all that he had and lay it down at the apostles' feet and go away without possessing anything, we think are mistaken in their comprehension of it. A better thought is that brought out in section 42: 8:

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken.

The consecration was made by laying all things before the apostles in a proper statement. We perform this work in the church to-day by our inventories which contain the proper statement. The statement is made in the law: "Every man that cometh up to Zion must lay all things before the bishop in Zion." He lays everything before the bishop, however, by making a correct statement of what he has. Now if we take the record of the work accomplished in the first century as set forth by the Apostle Peter in the fifth chapter of the Acts, we have it clear that there was no law then of the church requiring these parties to give everything they had to the church, any more than there is in the church to-day. He says:

While it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.—Acts 5: 4.

Ananias was not compelled to sell his possessions and bring the money, and after he had sold the property he could do with the money as he thought proper, but he could not come and cover up, through falsehood, a part of the proceeds and find favor in the sight of God any more than could Achan in the time of Joshua, who violated the covenant that he had made, and took and hid the gold and silver underground in his own tent.

A view of this is given by noticing the history set out in the first five verses of the sixth chapter of the Acts, and it is clearly indicated that there was a daily ministrations to certain persons in the church. They were not those who could help themselves, however. They were the widows, and when there came complaint of the Grecians against the Hebrews because of the neglect of these widows in the daily ministrations, then the apostles took the matter up and arranged for the carrying out, in a more perfected way, of the rules that had been adopted.

By turning to the record in the epistles it is shown very clearly that there was an arrangement made for those who were widows indeed, necessarily such, and the arrangement was different to those who had received their stewardships and who could stand responsible for themselves. The statement is clear:

Let not a widow be taken into the number under threescore years old, having been the wife of one man, well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' clothes, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.—Timothy 5: 9, 10.

The society of widows and the ministrations to such society, however, was a different distribution than the distribution made to the people, "unto every man according as he had need."

Again the apostle states:

If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.—1 Timothy 5: 16.

This shows that under the law of the church in the first century everyone stood responsible for his own, and this was under the direct teaching of the apostles themselves. It is in harmony with the doctrine set forth by the apostle as follows:

But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.—1 Timothy 5: 8.

It is not the doctrine of Christ that men shall not look after their own and feel the responsibility of so doing in this world, nor is there any arrangement of the church that will bring about such a condition as this, nor would it be a Christlike condition if it were brought about.

"All things common" then does not mean that the people do not possess anything, but it refers to the fact that what the people do have in their possession is used for the benefit of their neighbor as well as themselves, and thus all things are done to the glory of God. Instead of breaking up homes and sending forth families tramping over the world, the provision is that every man shall have his inheritance and his stewardship, his place of living and the opportunity under which he may make his living.

In the time of the New Testament church "all things common" found men under responsibility; they did not claim what they had as their own, but they claimed that they were stewards of the same, stewards unto God, and they made use of these things as good and wise stewards should, not only helping themselves, but helping their neighbors.

If we turn to the law of the church where all things common was carried out upon the Western Continent, it is in strict harmony with this work upon the Eastern. The statement is:

And many of them saw and heard unspeakable things, which are not lawful to be written; and they taught and did minister one to another; and they had all things common among them, every man dealing justly, one with another.—Book of Mormon; authorized edition, page 672, paragraph 11.

"All things common" where every man dealt justly one with another shows that every man had his stewardship, and he could have some credit for dealing justly with his neighbor under such circumstances as that.

But to say that every man dealt justly one with another when no one had anything to deal with, would simply be putting the matter in a wrong light, and make a farce of the boasted oneness attained under the law of all things common.

Under the management of all things common there is a treasury, storehouse, also called "The Lord's storehouse," the same as is provided in the giving of stewardships. This treasury or storehouse contains the common property of the whole church and those who are stewards, and the poor, may properly look to this for assistance when such is needed, but it does not contain the individual possessions of the people, except under such instances as where a brother or sister through inability to continue to act longer for themselves, desire that the church hold for them, when due account would be taken and the possessions placed in the storehouse.

Referring again to the arrangement as it was in the time of Enoch, set forth in Doctrine and Covenants 81:4:

And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just; and all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundredfold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.

Here is contained a definite statement of the work of stewardships, and all things common, carried out for the same purpose by the same people at the same time, and the order is spoken of in the subsequent paragraph as being "an everlasting order."

If the Saints attain to the standard of perfection, as did the church in Enoch's time, there is no question but that the entire law will be carried out since it is for the good of the people, and betterment in every way, and the sooner that each person moves in the matter the better for him and the better for all.

The question is asked again, How much is necessary to the stewardship? We can only answer in the language of the law. People who wish a more definite answer than our heavenly Father has furnished are not satisfied with the word. They have some purpose in view that is special to themselves. The language of the law is, "ample for their needs and according to their wants." That does not mean, first a stingy supply and, secondly it does not withhold the proper help to carry on the business of the stewardship. The words "according to our wants" refer to what people may ask and think they should have for carrying on their work. For illustration, one man might want an extra team, another a few hundred dollars to assist him, and another to change from city to country life so that he could carry on the work of farming. All of this comes under the head of "wants" and we must not forget that the wants are to be supplied providing that the "wants are just."

The amount of the stewardship is to be determined by the individual and the bishop and his counselors having charge of the matter. If they fail to agree upon this then it is referred to a high council. This is the method given in the law for determining the amount. It is not left for any person to judge for himself what amount another should have, no one should judge of these matters unless he is put in the judgment seat. If the matter could have better been determined in some other way than by leaving it so that each instance should be passed upon by those who are placed as judges, no doubt our heavenly Father would have given the direction, but this is the Lord's plan. Men ought not to want to change it to some other way, because it would not stand approved of him if they did carry it out some other way.

The object in the exposition of the law is to show what the law is, not what somebody thinks the law ought to be, or what somebody would like to have the law to be. There has been too much of that kind of teaching in the world. The question is, What is the law? and let us abide by that, and no man's views are to be followed if they are outside of the law or contrary to the same, whatever his place in the church.

The theory that the living priesthood do not have to move in harmony with the law is not the Christ theory. That is anti-Christ. When any person claiming to be of the priesthood does not move in accordance with the law of Christ, he is not moving with Christ. He is at variance with him when he is at variance with his law. The true doctrine is, "He that transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God." Who? Anybody; whatever official place he may hold or claim to hold. The law tries men. Men do not try the law. Christ was subservient to the law in all instances. He did not make the law subservient to himself.

We bespeak then for the carrying out of the law of consecration as it is revealed in all the books, not waiting for some other people to perform the work, or promising ourselves to do it at a later time. True faith is, and it should be manifest on the part of every member, to move forward according to the direction in the law. Then we may expect to reap. Shall we do so?

COX MAKES STATEMENT.

M. L. Cox of the state municipal examining board to-day issued this statement comparing the finances of dry towns with wet ones:

"Answering your request for a statement as to the financial condition of the different cities of Iowa, making a comparison of those which desire a revenue from the saloon business with cities which have no saloons, I will say that after completing the examination of all the cities of the State of Iowa for the second time (under the direction of the auditor of state) I have discovered that a saloon revenue is not necessary for a city's maintenance; instead I have found, as stated to you before, that from a financial standpoint, saloons are a menace and hindrance to the welfare of any city. Having formed this opinion after making a comparison of cities of near the same population and surroundings, one with and the other without saloons, I found that without exception the city without saloons was in the better financial condition. After discovering that this condition existed I undertook to find out the reason for it.

"I will state further that there are two or three cities in Iowa which have a larger city debt than Des Moines and each of these cities has more saloons than Des Moines. About the time of the closing of the saloons in Muscatine I visited that city. My attention was called to the vacant buildings caused by the closing down of the saloon business, and I will admit that the old town did look bad, for the breweries had placarded the windows of these buildings calling attention to the deplorable condition of things. Two years from this time I again made an examination of the accounts of the above city. I found every one of those empty buildings occupied by some legitimate business, new business blocks had been erected, one banking interest had already erected a very commodious cement structure, and another had its foundation started. A business man told me conditions were better, as the laboring people were able to pay him for what they bought. I asked one of the city officials as to what he thought of the change and he said he had been converted to the change, as he was an officer in one of the banks and the small savings deposits in his bank had increased over one hundred thousand dollars, and by inquiry had found the other banks had increased accordingly.

"After discovering the facts I have here enumerated I am convinced the saloon is a curse to any city." (Signed by) "M. L. COX,

"State Municipal Examiner."

RAIN IN JERUSALEM.

Just now the Holy Land is suffering from drought and the people are praying for rain. We have had one or two showers in the past few days, but more is needed or the crops will fail. The most of the inhabitants here are religious. They believe in prayer, and Mahometans, Christians, and Jews are now all holding services at which they ask the Lord to send water.

We had a slight rain yesterday and more is expected. The people evidently think their prayers will be answered. As I walked through David street I heard two Mahometans talking. Their language was Arabic, but my dragoman told me that one had just said to the other:

"How good God is, after all. We have prayed for the rain and, lo, it has come."

When the first shower began to fall I was standing at the door of my hotel. A little girl passed. She had a platter of bread on her head and the rain was pouring down upon it. She was wet to the skin, but nevertheless she was singing. I asked my guide the words of her song. He replied: "She cries: 'Praise God for the rain! Praise God for the rain! Praise God for the rain!'"

This little girl was perhaps eight years of age.—Frank G. Carpenter.

DOCTOR MYERS FLAYS THE BLASPHEMERS.

"The foul language by which a man won the presidency of a London club of atheists might go for some political conventions in Boston," declared Courtland Myers, D. D., in his address last night in Tremont Temple on the third commandment.

In his usual emphatic phraseology, Doctor Myers flayed the blasphemers, declaring that the sin was one peculiar to America, and comparing it to a subterranean fire which would ultimately consume towns and cities. "Profanity is the fool's dress, the gentleman's shroud, and the sinner's nakedness," said he, "and shows the truth of the quotation, 'Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.'"

"Our life to-day has little reverence for parents, old age, religion, or the Bible. Even a religious service is touched with little reverence to-day. Many persons interrupt the sermons of the prayers; overcoats, umbrellas, and hats are seized in a mad effort to be the first out of the door of the house of God, while in the midst of the prayer you can hear the whispers of the irreverent."

Passing then to the topic of actual profanity, which he characterized as insincerity, Doctor Myers continued: "It is the wickedness of a man's life revealed. Men, who are in this house of God to-night to-morrow will use profanity ten thousand times, ten thousand times a day. Not a man would be mean enough to want his worst enemy to be damned. He's trifling with God. God never damned a man."—Boston Journal.

Dear Friend: In your Christmas giving you will not forget, will you, the one thousand unsold copies of that beautiful poem "At last"? It is full to repletion of comfort and hope. Thousands in the church are not able to afford a copy but would appreciate one, more than you can imagine. Do you know of one such to whom you can send a copy? It contains besides the picture of David Hyrum Smith, that of his only son, Elbert, his wife, mother, and little son, and the very best picture of Brother Joseph ever taken. These groups, with others of his relatives, have been used in illustrating this neatly bound booklet. You can not find in any bookstore in the land a more suitable holiday gift, not to mention the fact that in ordering this you are patronizing your own publishing house.

Only twenty-five cents. Order right away or you may be too late.

To the Daughters of Zion.

Dear Sisters: I want to ask your candid opinion as to what should be taught the children in regard to the nativity of Christ. Should it not be the truth as we find it written? The children's minds have been disabused concerning Santa Claus, and yet there is not a Christmas but what an error is plainly taught them concerning the star. Sometimes it appears in either poetry or prose that the star appeared with the angel, lighting up the plains where the shepherds were watching their flocks. And again that it led the shepherds when they went to Bethlehem to see the infant Christ, and from some that the star went before the wise men on their long journey from the east of Bethlehem.

It always makes me feel sad, because there is no foundation in the New Testament for either of the foregoing statements, and some day the children must learn that they have not been taught correctly about the star. You will see that in the beautiful narrative that Luke gives of the nativity there is no mention made of the star, neither of the wise men being present with the holy family at the time the shepherds were there. It seems to me if the star guided the shepherds to Bethlehem Luke would have said so, and if he did not, should anyone else add to his words? The shepherds would be perfectly familiar with the way to their own town Bethlehem, and the angel told them how they should know the babe. There is no mention in the New Testament of the star being in Bethlehem until it went before the wise men after they had left the courts of Herod and stood over the house, not the manger where the young child was.

According to Smith's Bible Dictionary it was two months after the birth of Christ that the wise men came, and they came in February. But that is not the question now. It is: Shall we teach the children what is not found in the New Testament concerning the birth of Christ? The star was the token to those wise men that dwelt in the east that the Messiah of the Jews was born, and it was in the east that they saw it, which would be just as interesting to the children as to say that it guided the shepherds to Bethlehem.

By a careful reading of the third chapter of Matthew (Inspired Translation) one will find that there is no intimation of its having guided the Magi to Jerusalem.

Yours for truth,

E. B. BURTON.

P. S.—Now for just a little on that supposition. I am of the opinion, not to say belief, that the Magi were representatives of the people in the east who were looking for the birth of the Messiah, and very probably the descendants of Ishmael the son of Abraham, and though not of the seed of promise, except that God would make of him a great nation, some may have obtained the knowledge of and held to the faith in the God of their father Abraham, at least in that one great promise. And it is not incredible to think that God would nurture that belief and give them a sign of the birth of the Messiah who was to be the Savior of all mankind, as well as to the believing seed of Abraham on this continent. At least the Magi knew enough about the "Messiah of the Jews" to speak very definitely when they came in search of him, and very positively of their knowledge of his having been born. "For we have seen his star in the east," as though that was evidence that none could gainsay, nor were they daunted when they found no such child in Jerusalem. They also knew that he was the Son of God, and of his mission, or they would not have called him the "Messiah of the Jews."

Requests for Prayer.

Sr. Jennie Milner, of Johnsonville, Illinois, writes: "My father, also our brother in Christ, Henry Ayers, desires a special interest in the prayers of all the Saints, even in the prayer meetings. He requests the prayers in this way, that if God can see fit to heal him, pray for it to be so; if not, pray Him to be merciful, and if this affliction is to be his final suffering, that God in his mercy could see fit to relieve him of his suffering and to bless and help him to be removed from all earthly ties, and be perfectly resigned to our worthy Master's will. Pray that God may bestow a special blessing on him in some way, whatever may be pleasing to him. Anyway, so he may know. God is the author and has recognized and owned him enough to bless him or manifest himself to him that he may be comforted thus, as his heart seems to be mourning and longing for."

Brother and Sister Albert P. Langdon, Dickinson, North Dakota, write as follows: "Dear Saints, will you please pray for our darling baby of whom God has given us charge. She has ruptured herself, and is sorely afflicted with skin trouble. She is two months old and weighs four and one eighth pounds. Her name is Beulah. We are isolated Saints and have not the pleasure of meeting with God's people."

Letter Department

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

Dear Saints: I have just arrived in Houston, Texas, where I expect to remain during the winter months and, if there are any Saints here, I wish some of them would write to me, general delivery, giving address, as I would like to associate with the Saints as much as possible. It has been a little over fourteen months since I have had the privilege of being in a branch of the Saints. It is with sweet memories that I think of the branch at Lees Summit, Missouri, where I last had the pleasure of associating with the Lord's people. I have often thought of, and prayed for the Sunday school class I loved and taught there. Some of the Saints may be interested to know that my health has greatly improved since I those who have gone and those who will go hereafter, that they may be more able to battle with the world.

I have had many enjoyments in the service of the Master, though I have not taken up all the duties that rest on me. God knows why, and in his own due time will give me strength to do those things that are most needful. I feel my weakness and many times feel unworthy to take my Maker's name on my lips, but I hope and trust you will aid me by your prayers.

Your brother in the one faith,

WILLARD GREEN.

Editors Herald: I wish to present a few lines relative to conditions where I have labored since the April conference. I have spent some time in localities where our work is new and prejudice is strong against us, and in a few places succeeded in stirring the opposition to activity. At Gordon the Presbyterian minister announced a lecture on "Mormonism" after I had preached a few times and left the town. Sister Baber notified me of the proposed lecture; I was present and took notes, and gave notice of reply, inviting the minister and his congregation to hear the reply. I had a full house at the reply and am persuaded much prejudice was removed.

The theory that Joseph Smith wrote the Book of Mormon while under the influence of epileptic fits was advanced with as much gusto as though it were true. I am more and more convinced of the divinity of the work when I see the methods resorted to by those who oppose it. Also I learn that it is true now as in the past, "Ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither enter yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in."

At Chadron some interest was manifest while holding meetings in private houses.

My personal needs have been cared for wherever I have been, but one occasion deserves special mention. Before my coming to a wild locality in the sand hills a lady dreamed of my coming, and as it seemed to me was thus wrought upon to entertain me while in that locality, for it was done at a great sacrifice of comfort to the family. Surely such will not lose their reward, and I hope to be always appreciative of the motive that prompts such sacrifices.

I would again remind the Saints of the Central Nebraska District that our church funds in the district treasury are exhausted, and if I shall be able to pay the allowances to families of missionaries and the poor, some one must put the means in my hands. Do not wait till you can pay all you owe to the Lord, but send what you can to the Bishop's agent by draft, post-office or express money order, to Inman, Nebraska, and you will receive your receipt in due time.

We ought to have the name of every Saint of mature age on the record as contributing to the advance of the Lord's work.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

LEVI GAMET.

JOHNSONVILLE, ILLINOIS, November 28, 1910.

Editors Herald: I certainly feel my weakness and inability to write to you, but through the wish of my dear, old, afflicted and suffering father, as well as the desires of my own heart, I shall do the best I can, that you may know that I am among the many who are trying to do all the good they can for the upbuilding of the cause of Christ and for the salvation of souls that have never accepted the truth, and became obedient to the commandments, even before we can justly claim a blessing of everlasting life with Christ and his angels. I am so thankful that I ever heard the gospel preached in its fullness, and that God blessed me with the understanding to believe, accept and, better yet, obey it; and best of all has given me strength to stand firm for the truth, though opposition and persecution have pressed greatly upon me. I do not care how hard I may be pressed, how hard the trials may come, if God will help me ever to look to him, and deliver me as he always has; and I know God will ever do his part, if we will do ours. I know, as well as I know I now breathe, that this latter day work is true. I know that is the selfsame gospel that Christ taught when here on earth, also that same gospel which he commissioned his apostles to go and preach. I know it is the gospel that calls us to the straight and narrow way, and they that climb up any other way are the same as thieves and robbers, but Saints have much to do after becoming obedient to the gospel, for then we are only on the first round of the ladder, and we can never leap from the bottom to the top, but must come step by step.

Let us constantly watch and pray that we may never be guilty of a work that will bring reproach upon the church, for we will certainly be held responsible if we do.

May God help us so to live that we can easily be pointed out by the world, whenever we go, and be marked as a Latter Day Saint, Mormon, or whatever they see fit to call us; so we live in a way that we are not one of the number walking in the broad way.

Let our daily walk be by dress, actions, and conversation, such as Christ demands of his people, therefore be known by our fruits.

I ask an interest in the prayers of all the Saints that I may ever be found faithful in doing my duty, and that God in his mercy would spare me, even though it may not be for my good to be healed of my many afflictions, spare me to overcome every weakness and help me to do much good in and for his cause. Pray with me that I may know how to come to Him, how to praise him and that I may never be deceived in myself and think I am doing his will when I am not, and that I, alone, may not be found faithful, but that my husband may continue to grow rapidly into spiritual knowledge and that our house may be a house of prayer and of sunshine to all that may enter with us. My husband is the only one of his family or relatives on either side, so far as we know, that has ever accepted the truth of the gospel.

We trust he may be found faithful that many others may be brought to the fold by and through his works and to God be all the praise. May God help us, each and all, to so live that when done with this life we may be worthy to inherit everlasting life in God's kingdom, is the prayer of your unworthy sister.

JENNIE E. MILNER.

COOKES POINT TEXAS, December 1, 1910.

Saints' Herald: I will write you a note to let you know that I am not dead yet. I left home last Saturday for Falls County, to visit and preach to the Philadelphia Branch; I preached Sunday and at night to fair audiences, which gave good attention and interest. There is great need of pastoral work in this branch.

I next went to Texas Central Branch. There I met Bro. E. Bates. I visited most of the members at their homes; I found that they still had an interest in the work and seemed very anxious to have me preach to them. I visited Bro. William Dotson, who lives near Hearne, twice. He is very low with Bright's disease; I don't think he can live very long.

I returned home by way of Hearne. Here I met a doctor by name of Irvin, who don't belong to any church, but had belonged to the Baptist Church. He told the people in my presence that there were some traits of character that the Latter Day Saints had that he admired; one was, when you found a Latter Day Saint you found him opposed to whisky; they are Prohibitionists. He also said that a few nights before he had passed by one of our church houses, and it was standing open, and it made an impression upon him that the Latter Day Saints surely had a spark of religion, as they did not try to make a display in the sight of the world. Another thing he noticed was, that they would assist one another in need. At that juncture a bystander remarked that was his religion, but he was not a member of any church; he was an old Federal soldier.

I appreciated the high compliment payed our church and people. If we live our religion it will tell, no matter how great the prejudice is against the church on account of the doings of the Brighamites, who are apostates from the church. There are many honest people that don't know the difference in the doctrine of the Brighamites and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Yet they can and do see that we do not practice the doctrine of the Brighamites. The divinity of this work is of God, and will triumph over all that oppose it. In view of this let us continue to fight the good fight of faith, and earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the Saints, and practicing in our lives the religion of Jesus Christ, and the victory will be ours through him.

I am still in the conflict and expect to remain until I obtain the victory and crown. E. W. NUNLEY.

KINROSS, MICHIGAN, November 30, 1910.

Editors Herald: The HERALD is the only minister of the true gospel we have here in Kinross. Brethren Cornish and J. Goodman were here one week this fall and gave us some good sermons, and have promised to come again in the spring. There seems to be quite an interest. I think some will be baptized in the spring if the elders come. I am anxious to see a branch of Saints in this place, as there is no place I enjoy myself as I do among the Saints of God. I am striving to do what good I can, although it seems but little. I hope some time to be able to do more.

Your brother,
WILLIAM DUNLOP.

NORFOLK, VIRGINIA, November 26, 1910.

Editors Herald: I hope you will not consign this to the wastebasket, as I want to let the Saints know that I am still interested in the gospel of Christ, and I think the signs of the times herald the near approach of the coming of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I know that if I had not received the evidence I have while in this great work, I would likely have been an infidel or taken my own life, as there are thousands who have not passed through half I have, and are putting themselves out of the world. I have been worse off (I think) than Job, as I have lost all I had three times, besides a companion whom I loved better than my own life, of whom I often dream, and whom I hope to meet in the better world. She was indeed a faithful Saint.

I am over four hundred miles from home, as I can not get work at home on account of the persecution subject to a Sajt; and also the smallness of the town, there being only six hundred people. I have only been home twice in three years. My wife says if she can get where the church is she will join, but it is hard to get the means to move so far. I have no church privileges, and ask the prayers of the Saints as I have trials without end.

Yours in gospel bonds,
WM. C. CUMMINGS.

LOWER LAKE, CALIFORNIA, November 27, 1910.

Dear Herald: As I was appointed superintendent of Gospel Literature Bureau for the Northern California District, I realize that a great responsibility rests upon me, the work being a broad one, and humanity will be blessed more or less, according to my efforts in circulating good literature. I beg to say that I am not very well versed in the work. Bro.

Joseph Ferris gave me some valuable instructions by letter, for which I am thankful, but conditions here are not to be compared with the environments of his locality. We are isolated, living on a small farm, three miles from the little village of Lower Lake, so it will be impracticable to do as he suggests, but I am doing what I can to distribute good literature, where I think it may do the most good. But as to visiting local branches, it is seldom that I can avail myself of the opportunity, as there are too many miles intervening.

Brother Farr and wife have just returned to their temporary home at Stockton, after a stay of three weeks with us. We enjoyed their company, and would that they could have remained longer. While here he preached eighteen grand and convincing sermons. Although no one was baptized they made many friends and much prejudice was removed, and all, both Saints and outsiders, were sorry when the parting came. May God's blessing attend them wherever their lots may be cast.

While here Brother Farr reorganized our little branch of thirteen members, and organized a Sunday school of eleven pupils, all bright and well behaved children, and they are all very much interested in their little work. One of the pupils, Sr. Gladys Hinton, is organist and secretary. Bro. E. B. Hinton (priest) speaks alternately on Sundays with the writer.

Yours in gospel bonds,
EDWARD F. ADAMSON.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

Editors Herald: I have been reading the Herald, and when I read the sermon of Pres. Joseph Smith, I thought of the first sermon I heard him preach in 1879. The text was, "The world owes me a living." I thought that was a funny text, but he made a sermon out of it. I have been in the church for thirty-three years and until that time there was nothing that troubled me and I thought it was foolish to be in trouble, but I have found that when we try to serve the Lord the opposite power can cause trouble.

I feel thankful to God now that he has guided me from my boyhood, as my blessing tells me, and that he has given his angels charge over me, and they have been true to their trust. I believe them to be true and that he is well pleased with me. That was told me by one elder that administered to me and that my name was written in the Lamb's book of life. These four promises cheer me to stand the persecution that has been heaped on me.

In 1897 it seemed that something said to me, "You don't go to church; your deafness does not hinder you, and you are not obeying the law that God has given." Then I went; but a few would speak to me and others would seem to shun me; but there was something that would prompt me to go. Now things have changed, and I go to church and I have no such feelings. I don't know that I have wronged anyone. If I have and they will let me know what I can do to make it right, I will do it with gladness.

I have no ill will against anyone, and I don't think I have many years yet to stay here, and I want to be ready when the time comes. May God's choicest blessings rest and abide with all.

Your brother,
F. T. DORIE.

SUTTON IN ASHFIELD, ENGLAND, November 19, 1910.

Dear Herald: I am a little girl, twelve years old, and proud of being a scholar of the Sutton in Ashfield Sunday school. At the request of our superintendent, Sr. Mary Jane Rallings, I am trying with the Lord's help to write a little in regard to the history of the church, which my father, Elder John Holmes, is teaching us from time to time.

EFFIE HOLMES.

SUTTON IN ASHFIELD, ENGLAND, November, 1910.

Dear Herald: I am a little sister, aged twelve years, and a scholar of the Sutton in Ashfield Sunday school. At request of our worthy superintendent, Sr. Mary Jane Rallings, I am trying with the Lord's help to write a little essay on the history of the church, that our brother, Elder John Holmes, teaches us from time to time.

Your sister in the gospel of love and peace,
MARY JANE WESTON.

A Tithe Paying Working Girl.

While reading my HERALD to-day and noticing the article, "Tithes and offerings" by Bro. E. L. Kelley, I took especial notice of the illustration he gave: "A young man without others to support labors and makes fifty dollars a month and board. His increase is fifty dollars, the tithe would be five. But should he have to pay ten dollars a month for his board during the time, this sum would be deducted to get the true increase." This is so plain we can not help but understand, and because I have had some experience and my sentiments are the same I felt as though I should write and tell my experience, which perhaps might help some one.

I am a working girl. At present I work at the Saints' Home here at Lamoni; but prior to this time I worked in the silk mills at Belding, Michigan. I have, since I began to work for myself, paid one tenth of what I have made above my board for tithes and I am sure I have received blessings for so doing. It would be impossible for me to name them all. When I first began to work for myself my health was very poor indeed. I did not make very much, but I willingly gave one tenth of what I did make. I did not feel as if the Lord was under obligations to me because I paid my tithes, but I felt as if I owed him the one tenth. In his own time he gave me perfect health.

I do not believe that if we keep the law of tithing and do not keep the rest of the commandments we are entitled to the full blessings of God, and of course "God is no respecter of persons," and if we are not entitled we will not receive.

I have heard remarks similar to this: "We can not expect a very poor person to be spiritual because the cares of life and how they can make a living occupies their mind." I do not believe a person who is not spiritual when he is poor will be spiritual when he is rich. The cares of life will still engross his whole attention. It has been my experience that when I have trusted fully in God, my work has been made lighter, my cares have been fewer, and my soul has been more satisfied.

I have only begun to walk the pathway of life, and realize that I have much to learn, but I am sure that God will be with me to guide me if I only live close to him. I am not entirely satisfied with the records that I have made, but I hope that each year I can see where I have gained. A true Christian life is not reached by a single bound.

The gospel is indeed worth living, either for the youth or the aged. I fear my life should have been dark indeed had it not been for what the gospel has done for me. I trust none will think I have said what I have in the spirit of boasting. It is only to help other working girls and boys see that God recognizes the gift, no matter how small it may be.

Ever praying for the welfare of the people of God, I am, VIVIA DAVIS.

LAMONI, IOWA, December 1, 1910.

Reunion of Eastern and Western Wales District.

A reunion of the Eastern and Western Wales districts convened at Aberaman, South Wales, October 1 and 2. The Saints there secured for the two days fine accommodations in the public hall. A resolution was passed that Elder G. T. Griffiths, with J. W. Rushton, preside at the reunion. Pres. A. T. Trapp was elected secretary. Reunion opened with the singing of a hymn, followed with prayer by G. T. Griffiths, who afterwards made a few remarks; the remainder of Saturday evening was taken up with business relative to the reunion, and a permanent committee on same was appointed, viz, the assistant missionary in charge, together with the president and secretaries of both districts.

Sunday meetings were Seventh Quorum of Elders' meeting at 9 a. m., Elder J. E. Meredith, president, in charge; priesthood meeting at 10 a. m., Elder G. T. Griffiths in charge; preaching at 11 a. m., Elder J. W. Rushton; priesthood meeting at 1.30 p. m. to 2.30 p. m., Elder G. T. Griffiths in charge; social meeting at 2.30 p. m. At this meeting many testimonies giving encouragement were uttered.

Elder J. W. Rushton, who was on his last visit to Wales before leaving for America, occupied the evening hour. His discourse was much enjoyed. A. T. TRAPP, Secretary.

News From Missions

THE MEXICAN MISSION.

It is too soon to give much definite information respecting the above named mission; however, I am glad to comply with your request, and let HERALD readers know what we are doing and how things look to us.

Wife and I arrived in Torreon, Mexico, October 21. We were preceded by Bro. W. H. Mannering and wife over two weeks. We first intended to locate in Durango, the home of Bro. David S. Anthony, but through advice of the minister in charge, Bro. F. M. Sheehy, Torreon was selected instead.

The first meeting attempted was held in one of Brother Mannering's rooms Sunday, October 23, at 7 p. m. Brother Mannering was the speaker, but only a few children ventured within the room. After the meeting was regularly closed, a few adults came, but only one came in. We decided our meeting was too early and so held another, the writer speaking at Brother Mannering's request. I think we had two good listeners, one in the room; the other leaning against the door jamb.

The Lord had something better than this for us to do, but we did not know it then. A small congregation, perhaps fifty or sixty, counting the children, worship in a hall in the same block in which we rented rooms. Wife and I attended one of their meetings; and, having no organist, they invited her to play. This, of course, she did. They seemed to greatly appreciate this help with the music, and insisted on us returning to other services. She soon became their permanent organist.

They had no pastor and had been praying for the Lord to send them one. They invited us to preach for them. This we did, Sunday, October 30, at 7.30 p. m. The writer spoke first and Brother Mannering followed. I explained to them in detail why I had begun the study of Spanish and why I was trying to preach the gospel to the Mexican people. I also called attention to facts which indicated that we had been sent to them in answer to their prayers. After Brother Mannering had spoken, three of the leaders spoke, indorsing the idea that we had been sent to them by the Lord, and approving much that was said by us both.

Sunday, November 6, Brother Mannering spoke, the writer also making a short talk by invitation.

We are now regularly installed in the worship and service of this congregation. We are active participants in all the services. Sabbath school 10.15 to 12; practice of music in one of our rented rooms, at 4 p. m.; preaching at 7.30 p. m.; prayer meeting every Wednesday evening. So well were they pleased with the pulpit work, there was quite a sentiment last Sunday in favor of a preaching service Sunday morning; but this did not prevail. They are the most friendly people I have ever met. I make no exception. At the close of the meeting the most of the people, including the children, come and shake hands with us and bid us "buenas noches." Even strangers will sometimes come forward and smilingly shake hands with us, as though we were old friends, whom they were delighted to see. Where do you find such friendship manifested among the Americans?

The hall is carpeted and has a neat pulpit decorated every Sunday with two fine bouquets. At the close of the evening meetings, the bouquets are given to the sisters, Mannering and Pender.

Our little band of workers have all we can do and all feel perfectly satisfied. A better opportunity to win the love and confidence of the people, to become acquainted with their customs and to learn their language better, could hardly be asked for. In pulpit work in the Spanish language we have already attained some competency. Of course there is much room for improvement. Brother Mannering has improved much since General Conference.

Our greatest deficiency consists in our inability to understand the language when spoken to us. Not much difficulty to communicate in Spanish, but considerable effort required to receive communications from them. This is particularly true of the writer. Partial deafness hinders. But he does not feel so depressed since being informed by the Adventist Mexican preacher here that the uneducated Mexicans abbreviate many words. He gave illustrations, of which was Colorado, red, which they pronounce colored, omitting the final "o." No wonder the student is confused! However, we are all improving, and no doubt will soon understand the spoken language better. At present, Sister Mannering excels in this.

The above named minister made us a friendly call and gave us some valuable information. He claims Torreon is the best city in Mexico for missionary effort. There are Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Adventists, an Independent Congregation, not connected with any church, to whom we are preaching, Catholics and perhaps others.

In our Sunday school, the Senior Quarterly is up-to-date, equal to English quarterlies published by the nominal churches. I have had no opportunity to examine the intermediate or primary, but the exercises are too lengthy and too prolonged, occupying from 10.15 to 12. The same criticism applies to most, if not all their services; too lengthy. But this feature, I am told, characterizes the services of the Mexican Protestants generally, in this city.

I will close this narrative by relating a dream the writer had shortly after arriving in Torreon. I saw myself in a room waiting to converse with an individual, but understanding there was a waiting congregation in an adjoining room. Presently a party entered, opened the door of the adjoining room, pinned back a white curtain, but in such a way I could not see the people. But referring to them he said: "These are Israelites. They come next."

WILL S. PENDER.

P. S.—Later: Our friends have arranged for two sermons each Sunday. The Adventist minister is a pleasant little fellow, but very aggressive. No more so, though, than we. He wishes to preach one of those two sermons, and succeeded in doing so yesterday. However, the time was mine, the writer having been announced a week before. I think he lost with them, however I had put an outline of my intended sermon on the blackboard. This of course was noticed. So at the close a brother called attention to this fact, and they announced I would speak Wednesday night, instead of prayer meeting. We do not know just how soon we will be called on to clash with Adventism, but sooner or later the contest must come. It is to our interest to defer the conflict till we are better equipped with the Spanish language. To do this we propose using diplomacy with our friends and try to keep the Adventist minister out of our way for a while. In the meantime, I am preparing a tract on "The law" and intend writing another on the "Sabbath" and publish same here, as will not cost so much to publish here.

At the prayer meeting Wednesday evening, November 16, the writer, assisted by Brother Mannering, blessed a child, probably the first ever blessed by elders of the Reorganized Church in Mexico. Its name is Joel Rosales, born in Torreon, Mexico, January 18, 1910. The father is a barber.

The following prayer meeting November 23, the writer, by invitation, took charge. I would conduct the meeting in my own way. I did, and one of the leaders criticized departing from the usual plan. But he excused me, saying "the brother did not understand." They are certainly our warm friends and I recite these facts to show this.

KANSAS.

Bro. Roy Slye and I came to Wilmore November 11, upon invitation of Bro. and Sr. Earl Redfield, who live three miles north of town on a farm. They were baptized this summer by Bro. C. J. Scott. They have been workers with the Baptist people here, the only church in town, and had been promised, should the elders of their church come, they might use the church here for meeting. But upon our arrival the minister advised against it. We asked them Sunday night to announce our meeting for Monday night, at their meeting, if we could have the building. We were there Sunday night and waited in vain for the announcement of our meeting, and when the minister announced the closing song, I arose and asked what they had decided to do about our using the church, whereupon the minister informed me that they had decided to refuse us the use of it (and that, too, after two of the trustees had told Brother Redfield he might have it). I then asked the privilege of making a few remarks. This was granted. I told them what I thought of such procedure and quoted several injunctions of the Scriptures that they were not living up to.

I told them we were not Mormons, and briefly explained the difference. I told the people we had a message for them from God, and that we would proceed to secure a place to hold meetings, and invited them to come and hear the truth. The minister said they had been hearing the truth, and he hoped they would all abide by it. The next day we saw the school board, got the consent of each one. They have a lovely building, just finished at a cost of over five thousand dollars. We commenced our meeting next night, November 15, to fair audiences which have increased till we could not seat them all. Our preaching has stirred the whole community, and is the subject of discussion among all the people. One man said he had heard all kinds of comment on our preaching, from one extreme to the other.

The Baptist minister tried to refute our position in his service Sunday morning, but he was weak. His own members told me it was a failure. He asserted the Baptist Church existed all the way since the days of Christ, and urged them to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints. He quoted Jude, third verse, and said Paul wrote this to Jude. He said the words for ever in the Bible meant always, without an end, and all you had to do was to pray and read the Bible, and you could not go wrong.

Now the Christians say they have sent for a man to come and show the people we are preaching false doctrine. We intended closing last night, November 27, but we felt the interest demanded a continuance, as several came to us and asked us to continue. Some of them took us to the hotel, and told the landlord to keep us as long as we wished to stay, and charge same to them. There are some fine, noble people interested. So we will continue leaving the results in the hands of the just Judge.

We hope to keep ourselves in a humble manner, that the Lord may use us to bless others and glorify his name and principles among the children of men.

Your brother in Christ,
JAMES C. PAGE.

MONTANA.

Seeing reports in the HERALD from other fields reminds me that Montana District is not altogether asleep, and that some things are being done that are worthy of a place in the dear old HERALD.

Our district conference was held at Race Track, October 15 and 16. This was the first conference ever held at Race Track, and it was the largest gathering of Saints I have ever seen in the State. Arrangements had been made to have dinner in the hall, both Saturday and Sunday, and we took supper in the hall, too, on Sunday evening. This arrangement, besides making it much easier on the sisters living near there, gave the Saints a better chance to visit. At the social meeting Sunday afternoon Brn. John E. Eliason, of Race Track, and Jerome P. Wyckoff, of Deer Lodge, were ordained elders. They are both good men, alive in the work, and will be a great help to the Saints in that part of the district. A good feeling prevailed throughout the entire conference, and the social service on Sunday afternoon was especially uplifting and encouraging.

On November 4, I received a phone message from Reese Creek asking me to come there, November 8, and assist Brn. A. J. Moore and Gomer Reese in a series of meetings. I went as requested and stayed with them until November 21, helping what I could. A good attendance greeted us, most every service, and many were interested in the preaching. Ten were baptized, and one (Bro. Dan Moore) was ordained a priest. The best interest at Reese Creek I have seen there since I first came into this field, more than four years ago.

Saints at Bozeman are still working, trying to hold the fort, spiritually, and pay off the financial obligations hanging over them, also. Yes, and they are making some headway, too.

Brn. W. P. Bootman and Thomas Reese (our Bishop's agent) have been working together of late, teaching the Saints the financial law, in different parts of the district. They have had good success, too, along that line, and have baptized some. Montana will show up more tithes, offerings, and consecrations this year than ever before; and I think the number baptized will be greater than for several years past, at least. Yes, and I think there is a general forward movement along spiritual lines, too, although it is not so pronounced as it should be. The victory is not yet fully won, and there is no place to stop—onward is the watchword.

In gospel bonds,
ISAAC M. SMITH.

CENTRAL CHICAGO.

Sr. Laura Sherman, eldest daughter of Bro. and Sr. A. F. Sherman, was married Thursday evening, November 24, to Mr. Alfred G. Boehm, at her home, 3630 Rhoades avenue, Elder E. J. Lang officiating. About sixty guests were present.

Sunday, November 27, Elder Tanner occupied in the morning, discussing on baptism, and showing how the Father will feel after us when we are careless and indifferent, and if are sincere we will return.

Bro. A. F. Sherman preached to quite a small audience in in the evening, partially due to the very heavy rain in the afternoon.

Wednesday evening prayer meeting in charge of Brother Newton. As the weather was very cold not many were present.

The Gleaners met Thursday of this week at Sr. George Warlick's. Sister Warlick has been on the sick list for a number of weeks, but is now improving.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

The speakers at the Stone Church during November were Elders J. W. Rushton, G. E. Harrington, Alvin Knisley, G. H. Hilliard, M. H. Bond, W. H. Kelley, R. M. Elvin, and Hale W. Smith; also, Pres. Joseph Smith delivered an address on Thanksgiving Day; and Dr. Edgar L. Hewitt gave an archaeological lecture, with stereopticon views, on the 28th, which was a grand effort and highly appreciated.

The morning prayer meetings and Sunday school, together with those of the Religio, the enrollment of which, with Home Department is six hundred, and average attendance two hundred and sixty, Ladies' Aid, Laurel Club, and Daughters of Zion, with the Men's League, all continued their regular sessions; also the athletic clubs, Sunshine Band and Band of Mercy, the Boy Scouts and, last though not least, the Sisters' Surprise Visiting committees, all continued to pursue their laudable and varied vocations.

The special events occurring were the march of the Sunday school and others, old and young, to Brother Joseph's residence on the morning of November 6, the occasion being his seventy-eighth birthday.

Then in the evening the Saints attended the two big church rallies held at the Christian church, and First Presbyterian, the former being a Prohibition mass meeting for men, addressed by Dr. Samuel M. Néel, of Kansas City, and the latter, one for women, Mrs. Katherine L. Wolfex of Chicago, a zealous temperance worker, being the speaker.

To the ladies of the W. C. T. U. is due much credit for their efficient service at luncheons given during the week, also on the 8th when they also visited en masse the polling booths, singing such songs as "Rescue the perishing" "Where is my wandering boy to-night" and other gospel hymns, as they distributed their state-wide prohibition literature, humbly assisted by one Latter Day Saint sister, and members of the Ministers' Alliance. Among the pleasant social events we note the marriage in their cozy home on the 12th, of our young brother and sister, Hugo Kepley and Dorcas L. Carson; also Brother Joseph's anniversary reception on the 11th, which was attended by a large number of Saints who presented him with the love token purse of about sixty dollars, accompanied with a poem from the facile pen of Dr. Joseph Luff, Brother Bond making a fine speech in behalf of the donors, and 'it was responded to in an impressive manner by the venerable recipient.

In filling up the measure of happiness for about thirty of the elderly ones, on Thursday, the 17th, Bro. and Sr. Ellis Short entertained them with cheer and good-will and an accustomed annual dinner, the ages of those present reaching a total of one thousand six hundred and ninety-five years.

Added to these have been the greetings and "showers" of the Surprise Visiting Committees, showing the Saints' appreciation of the homecoming of some of "the family" from abroad, and of others among us also. Through the kindly offices of the Sunshine Band twenty-nine families on Thanksgiving Day were the happy recipients of their loving bounty and good wishes.

The Laurel Club held a bazaar on the 24th, continuing from 5 until 10 o'clock, and serving supper also; and the result of this delightful occasion was a free-will offering of about $260, contributed to the dining hall fund.

The Boy Scouts likewise helped to make the day one of joyfulness, for with Bro. W. O. Hands as their Count master they hiked early in the morning to McCune Farm, only seven miles away, and ere they returned were the means of adding to a farmer's store of cheer by saving much damage to his fields by fire.

The Thanksgiving sermon by Pres. Joseph Smith was a true thank offering to God for all his mercies. He spoke before a large audience of the sterling quality of character of our forefathers and of the men of this republic,—Washington and Lincoln,—and rendered due meed of praise for all who had held for a true and noble citizenship in this choice and gracious land of plenty and freedom.

At the close of this eloquent address the congregation joined in singing the oft-repeated prayer

"Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light,
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King."

ABBIE A. HORTON.

SAINT LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Our speakers during the past month have been Brn. S. A. Burgess, T. J. Elliott, George Reeves, C. J. Peat of Lamoni, Iowa, and Brother Barron of Kansas City, Missouri. Some of the subjects discussed were, momentous times; prohibition; the price of peace; give thanks to God; all of which were edifying and instructive.

The district priesthood meeting was held the evening of November 21. The subjects considered being, public speaking, gifts to-day as formerly, all gifts of God.

District conference will convene December 10 and 11, in Saint Louis. The district priesthood meeting will be held some time during the afternoon of the 11th.

The Mite Society gave a fine turkey dinner and oyster supper Thanksgiving Day, also bazaar and entertainment, which were highly appreciated, and a decided success, as the Mite Society affairs usually are.

The Religio and Sunday school had a rally day in Belleville, Illinois, November 13, at which time subjects of interest were discussed and benefit was derived, both socially and spiritually.

A thanksgiving prayer service was held Thanksgiving morning, when the Saints were given the privilege of acknowledging God's goodness to them during the year. While some of us have had much of trial and sorrow still we know we have had much to be thankful for. As Latter Day Saints we can "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON.

A few words from this part of the field may be of interest to the readers. We have little to say in a general line, that is, for any great development, but we have something to say in a special way that is noteworthy. One year ago Bro. Fred A. Smith and the writer, with the consent of the majority of the Saints of the Seattle Branch made the initial payment of twenty-five dollars on a church building that the Presbyterians had for sale. The purchase price was two thousand five hundred dollars, to be paid off at five hundred dollars a year, at seven per cent interest. The outlook was anything but encouraging. Because of the attitude of some towards the payment of it, it looked at one time like failure; and some that could have done a great deal to promote the success of the undertaking, have seen fit to ignore all appeals for help. Had it not been for some of the Saints in the district we should have failed in the first payment. One friend, a nonmember, gave us great encouragement, not only in word but in deed. He said, "You will pay for it and will never miss it."

The second payment looked an impossibility, but there are some sisters called the Ladies' Aid in Seattle, who took it upon themselves to do what they could, not knowing how much they could accomplish. They thought they might raise one hundred dollars, by sewing and selling articles. They continued work, and as a matter of fact produced a surplus. A bazaar was held in the church the 17th of November and the result was sales aggregating ninety-six dollars for the day. To date there have been about sixteen hundred dollars paid in principal and interest, and repairs, the Ladies' Aid having paid about two hundred and twenty-five dollars. They are worthy of greater praise when it is understood that there are only about six who contributed towards this achievement.

I wish we could say as much for the spiritual feature of the work. "A little leaven, leaveneth the whole lump." This is true in more respects than one. The Lord has said that the purchase of this building, "will be a place where many will be brought into the work if the Saints are faithful." May God enable us to realize that what we lack in obedience here we shall lack in reward in the sweet by and by.

With a prayer for the ultimate success of the "marvelous work and a wonder," I am as yet a lover of truth.

WILLIAM JOHNSON.

Christmas.

Along the slopes of Olivet
A hush and halo linger yet;
A whispered homage stirs the trees—
Vocal through twenty centuries.

The stable where the oxen stood
Left us Life's best beatitude,
Where, in a manger, it gave breath
To Him of lowly Nazareth.

And still Wise Men come from afar,
To seek there that strange, unmapped Star;
To Bethany wend, and Galilee,
Some tracteries of His steps to see.

His Life is now a diadem
For quiet, nestled Bethlehem;
Though crushed on cruel Calvary,
What greater on this earth can be?

Hallowed is Kedron's pensive stream;
 No room remains for doubt or dream,
 Since the World's Hope, dear and divine
 Gilds thus—for ever—Palestine.

Ode to a Star.

O yon bright star, so far away,
 The only one I see,
 Who cares enough to peep within
 This lonesome cot for me!

Tell me, O star, art thou too far
 To see and sympathize
 With lonesome man here on this earth,
 Or care thou if man dies?

I wonder me if where thou art,
 They have these whitewashed walls,
 With rows of cots all standing close,
 And nurses' waiting calls.

Ah, no! I hope that where thou art
 There's neither pain nor woe;
 For when I leave this sin-cursed world,
 To thee I wish to go.

That God is good, there is no doubt,
 He placed us where we are,
 But, when I leave this world of pain
 I'll go to thee, O Star.

Compensation.

If earth's flowers never faded,
 If earth's fruitage never failed,
 If the glad and golden sunlight
 Of earth's summers never paled;
 If no blighting breath of winter,
 Ever brought the frost and snow;
 We would miss the sweet contrasting
 That the changing seasons show.

If life's pathway ever led us
 Through a smooth and flowery mead,
 Or through quiet, peaceful valleys,
 Vine embowered, it should lead;
 With no need of toilsome climbing
 The desired goal to gain;
 We would miss the glorious outlook
 Those who scale the heights attain.

If earth's wealth would never vanish,
 If earth's gems ne'er turned to dust;
 If earth's treasures fondly cherished,
 Could escape the moth and rust;
 We might miss the heavenly treasure
 That has never yet grown old;
 Jewels of unchanging luster,
 Star-gemmed crown and harp of gold.

If earth's friendships never failed us,
 If earth's loves were always true,
 If life's wine was never wasted,
 Or was never wet with due;

We might miss the lasting friendship
 Of the Changeless One; nor taste
 The wine of joy and bread of heaven,
 Whereon now our souls may feast.

So I hold that over yonder,
 When we see with clearer eyes,
 We shall learn in all our losses,
 Some sweet hidden meaning lies.
 And we'll find our compensation
 Far outweighs the pain and loss;
 And our missed and mourned-for treasure
 Will appear as worthless dross.

Conference Minutes.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA.—The semiannual conference of the Central Nebraska District convened at Clearwater, August 13, 1910. Called to order by district president, Bro. J. H. Jackson, at 11 a. m. There being but few present the hour was spent in prayer and testimony. A good spirit prevailed. In the afternoon the conference was organized by choosing the district president as the chairman, and W. E. Kester as secretary. The minutes of previous meeting were read and approved. Branches reporting were Bonesteel, Inman, Meadow Grove, and Clearwater. Bonesteel, number at last report 75, present number 84; Inman, number at last report 69, present number 69; Meadow Grove, number at last report 56, present number 55; Clearwater, number at last report 81, present number 81. The ministry reporting were: Elders J. R. Sutton, Levi Gamet, J. F. Grimes, J. H. Jackson; Priests C. H. Derry and W. E. Kester. Bishop's Agent, Bro. Levi Gamet, reported having received $1,127.68; expended $943.50; balance due church $184.18. Brn. J. F. Grimes and J. R. Sutton were appointed to audit the agent's books, but on account of not having all the stubs of receipts given by the agent they recommended that the auditing be deferred until next district conference. There were two contestants for the February conference, viz, Round Park Branch, and Bonesteel. The vote resulted in the choice of the latter named place. The date to be fixed by the district president, J. R. Sutton. Recommended that with the sanction of the Clearwater Branch, W. E. Kester be ordained to the office of elder and Bro. Thomas Rutledge to the office of teacher. After due consideration it was deferred until the next regular business session of the branch. It was moved and seconded that the chairman of the conference name the nature of the meetings and the speakers. The preaching was by J. F. Grimes and J. R. Sutton; a sacrament and prayer meeting was held, and the conference adjourned. W. E. Kester, district secretary.

Conference Notices.

In accordance with pursuant action, the conference of the Southern Nebraska district will meet at Eustis, January 15, 16; opening session, prayer service, 10 a. m. Let an effort be made by as many as possible to attend. Paul M. Hanson, district president, 1207-3 Corso, Nebraska City, Nebraska.

Conference of the Southeastern Illinois District will convene with the Brush Creek Branch, Wayne County, on Saturday, January 7, 1911, at 10 a. m. Branch clerks, please send reports to me at Xenia, Illinois, in time for the conference. Also send assessment along. Hope to have reports from all the ministry in the district. A. H. Burroughs, secretary and treasurer.

The Saint Louis district conference will convene at Saint Louis, Missouri, Saturday and Sunday, December 10 and 11. Election of officers, and other matters of importance to the district, and work in general will come up. Let as many in the district attend as can, so the entire district may be benefited. Do not fail to send or bring your branch reports. C. J. Remington, secretary.

Died.

NEWKIRK.—Isaac B. Newkirk was born July 3, 1834, in Fairfield County, Ohio, and died October 6, 1910, at Richland Center, Wisconsin. He was married February 25, 1866, to Louvenia Newkirk, who with four children still survive him. Was baptized by Z. H. Gurley. His companion says of him, "He was faithful to the end. He always loved that faith and no other." Services by Reverend Warren.

BATES.—Sadie, daughter of Bro. and Sr. William Hawley, and wife of Bro. John Bates was born February 19, 1887, and died at Hubbard Lake, November 11, 1910. She was baptized July 4, 1895, by Elder R. Davis, and was a firm believer in the faith. A husband and two small children survive, also her aged parents, one brother, and one sister, all believers in the restored gospel. The funeral was conducted by Elder E. N. Burt, brother-in-law of the deceased.

DILLON.—At Lamoni, Iowa, November 15, 1910, Bro. James D. Dillon, aged 50 years, 10 months, and 16 days. For two full years his health declined. He was baptized in 1871 by Elder Z. H. Gurley, and lived a worthy and honorable life. He leaves wife and one daughter, an aged mother, three brothers, one sister, and two half brothers. Funeral sermon by H. A. Stebbins. Service in charge of John Smith, prayer at residence by F. A. Smith, and at church by J. R. Lambert. As a member of the Odd Fellows Society, and of the Rebekah Lodge, and of the Modern Woodmen, he received aid and attention from them during his illness; also a large number from them attended the funeral and marched in a body from the residence to the church and to the cemetery.

BROAD.—William Richard Broad was born May 10, 1910, and departed this life October 30, 1910. He was the only child of Edward and Ada Broad, of Fort Dodge, Iowa. Though his life was short, yet it was hard for our brother and sister to part with him. Funeral sermon was delivered by John Jordison, of Coalville, Iowa. The many relatives and friends present at the services gave evidence of great respect had for the parents of the deceased.

TAYLOR.—Wallace Taylor died November 9. He was born November 29, 1836, at Greenack, Renfue, Scotland, and was baptized and confirmed by John Taylor.

STEVENS.—Charles Marshal Stevens, at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, in the hospital, November 24, 1910, aged 31 years, 8 months, 14 days. He was the son of Bro. H. D. and Sr. Hattie Stevens, of Madison, Wisconsin. He was accidentally shot by a companion while in the woods deer hunting. His body was brought to his home at Madison, Wisconsin. The funeral was held November 27, at the chapel near their home. A very large gathering of friends and neighbors assembled. He leaves to mourn a father, mother, four sisters, one brother, and many relatives. The family were all present at the funeral excepting one sister. Marshal was loved and respected by all who knew him; was honest, kind hearted, and true in all his dealings. Brother and Sister Stevens have the sympathy of all who know them. Sermon by W. A. McDowell, assisted by J. O. Dutton.

LADUE.—Kathryn M. LaDue was born June 13, 1882, in Calhoun Township, Harrison County, Iowa. Married to Roy E. Adams, October 26, 1906, at her home in Missouri Valley, Iowa. She united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, on June 9, 1907. She died at her home, Logan, Iowa, November 17, 1910, aged 28 years, 5 months, and 4 days. She leaves to mourn a husband, mother, three brothers, and many other relatives and friends. She was conscious to the end, her last words being, "Abide with me," and "Think thou of me," these being favorite hymns with her. She bade her relatives good-bye, saying, "Bid all inquiring friends good-bye. Tell them not to mourn for me, for I am relieved of my suffering." She always expressed her heartfelt gratitude to God for leading her by his Spirit to see and obey the gospel, as revealed through Jesus Christ. She trusted in his merits alone. In Him she found sweet repose. She waited patiently for the change and was ready to welcome the pale messenger without a dread. For two years she had suffered without a murmur. She honored God's ordinances and was grateful for the help received from medical aid. "For her to live was Christ, for her to die was gain." But her loss to loved ones and the church was and is deeply felt. The funeral sermon was preached in the Saints' Church, Logan, by Charles Derry, assisted by Elder W. W. Baker. She was laid to rest in the Logan cemetery.

COOK.—Timothy Cook was born October 21, 1834, at Wandsworth, Surrey County, England; was baptized into the Reorganized Church, May 26, 1891, at San Lucas, Monterey County, California, by Elder J. F. Burton, and ordained a teacher the same day. In 1895, he was called to the office of priest. Up to the time of his death he was stanch in the faith. He was loved and esteemed by all who knew him. A wife, two sons, and a daughter survive to mourn the loss of a kind and loving husband and father.

Manchester, England, December 24, 1864. Six children were born to them; Alfred, of Denver, Colorado; John and William H. of Saint Joseph, and Frederick W., of Hamilton, Missouri, who with the wife and mother and a granddaughter, Jennie, a member of their family from infancy, are chief mourners. Two daughters, Amy, born 1866, and Alice W., born 1875, died in infancy. Deceased joined the Utah church in England, and removed to Utah where he soon discovered that he had been cruelly deceived, and in August, 1870, at Heniferville, Utah, he was baptized into the Reorganized Church, by Elder E. C. Brand. The same year he made his way across the plains arriving at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, the latter part of the year. September 3, 1871, he was ordained.

London, Sewell Ford, Cyrus Townsend Brady, and Roy Norton are counted among the contributors to a Sunday paper its triumph can no longer be doubted.

The Sunday Magazine of The Record-Herald is far and away the best literary treat offered to newspaper readers in the United States to-day. The largest monthlies and independent weeklies can not surpass it in quality or sustained interest. You will always find one of the finest serials of the year in its pages, often captured from the big monthlies at record prices. Its short stories, including those of the delectable Shorty McCabe, can not be surpassed.

The Daily Capital until 1912 for $2.00.

The Des Moines Capital can be secured from now until January 1, 1912, for $2. This gives new subscribers the balance of this year free. This is their annual Bargain Period offer. The Capital is published six days a week. It stops when its time is out. It publishes no liquor advertising. It will cover the big events of the year 1911 in a thorough manner. Its market reports are unexcelled for accuracy and detail. Its leadership for the upbuilding of Iowa is beyond price to the people of the State. Good roads, better seed-corn and improved conditions on the farms, more interurbans, better schools and colleges, and publicity of Iowa's superior virtues are important efforts. Let us send in your subscription.

The Triumph of a New Idea.

About the quantity of reading matter furnished in the average Sunday newspaper there is no reason to complain—unless it be on the score of too-muchness—but the quality often leaves much to be desired. The only shining and unqualified exception to this rule is found in the unique Sunday Magazine of The Chicago Record-Herald. There is nothing else like it in the whole range of American journalism. It is a real magazine that is regularly issued as a part of the Sunday paper. It is filled with first-class fiction, able articles, choice pictures and a wide range of good miscellany, all by popular or really famous authors and artists. When writers such as Conan Doyle, Anthony Hope, Rudyard Kipling, Jack

It holds first place for magnificent scenery and for comfort, too, for those who take advantage of the opportunity to join one of the BURLINGTON'S through-to-destination-under-personal-escort parties.

Some folks fear being snow-bound via this route in winter. This is a great mistake! Because, in Colorado there is more sunshine than in Florida, and less snow than in any State east of the Missouri River. There is less delay from snow blockades on this route than on other, less attractive routes.

Get a copy of our "California Excursions—Personally Conducted" folder. It will tell you a whole lot of things about California. Then ask me how to join one of these special parties.

The glory of the Lord shone round about; and we beheld the glory of the Son, on the right hand of the Father, and received of his fullness; and saw the holy angels, and they who are sanctified before his throne, worshipping God and the Lamb, who worship him for ever and ever.

And, now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father.==Doctrine and Covenants.

HOLIDAY SPECIAL

Hymns and Poems for the Holidays.

New Year's Day Poem.

Year that is passing away,
Fold up the robe and be gone!
Numbered at last to a day,
Thy work and pleasure are done.
Thou hadst never been before,
And never shalt come again;
A wave on Eternity's shore,
Rolled up, but not to remain.

The things that were done in thee—
The mighty deeds and the small,
Are graven in history,
For ever beyond recall.
And many a year to come,
Shall weep for deeds thou hast known;
While others shall glow with bloom,
From deeds of worth thou hast sown.

What good to weep o'er the grave,
The passing year has made?
What good to grieve o'er the wrongs,
That thick in its path are laid?
Let them sleep—but gird the heart,
The coming year to own;
Its joy to share, its work to bear;
With lessons the past has shown.

Its steps start with the snow,
And pass through springing flowers;
Over the summer harvest glow,
And fruits of autumnal hours;
The leaves fall round its steps,
In the Indian summer clime,
Till trailing its robe and garnered load,
In snow the second time.
But its lips refuse to tell
Of the joy or grief it brings;
Whether its song have a major swell,
Or moans in the minor strings.

DAVID H. SMITH.

Peace on Earth.

Bloodshed and fear and cruelty ran rife,
To "sacrifice" meant take another's poor life,
Till God sent his Son to teach them that strife
Was never a part of his Holyrood!

And what did they do with the Prince—tell me?
They spat in his face—he was slain on the tree!
"As a Lamb to the slaughter," all innocently!
Did the Lord say that was good?

But he left us this—"I will come again;"
Then the lamb will nestle in the lion's mane,
And never the blotch of a bloody stain
Shall hinder our vision of God.

EARNEST A. WEBBE.

Precious Name.

Bow, ye mortals, bow before him,
Bow and keep his sacred word;
Bow in reverence and adore him,
Bow, confess your Savior, Lord.

Bow, ye angels, chant his praises,
Strike your lyres with one accord,
While each voice melodious raises
Pæans unto Christ the Lord.

Men and angels, seraphs joining,
In one grand, harmonious chord,
Voice and instrument combining,
All, confess that Christ is Lord.

MARK H. FORSCUTT.

"Peace on Earth; Good Will to Men."

'Twas night; night dark and lone.
On each Judean hill,
The sleeping flocks were silent;
The watching shepherds still.

When, from the sable, starlit sky
A golden path was laid,
And angels swept from heaven to earth,
With songs by seraphs made.

Lo! in yon stall a baby sleeps;
A babe of royal birth;
This message bearing unto man—
"Good will," and "Peace on earth."

Where shadows lay, outside that scene,
A cross loomed, veiled with tears;
But far away, above, beyond,
The Christ enthroned appears.

VIDA E. SMITH.

Welcome Song.

Welcome, welcome friends of Zion,
We await your joyful lay;
Touch the lyre in mournful gladness,
Help us celebrate the day;
Heaven bends with golden glory,
Come and join the grand amen;
Do you ask, "What is the story?"
'Tis the babe of Bethlehem.

Hark! what melting strains of music,
Greet the lonely shepherd's ear;
'Tis the midnight song of gladness,
Hear it echo far and near;
Now its melody betokens,
Theme of joy so seldom told;
Will you tell us, choir of angels,
How you strike your lutes of gold?

Death, with all your dark'ning legions,
Look upon your conqu'ring King,
Cradled low within a manger,
He will life and blessing bring;
Oh! how joyful is the era,
Pris'ners loosed from bondage free;
Jesus reigns, the King eternal,
Captive leads captivity.

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT

PREACHING JESUS.

The great lesson of the Christmastide is the fact that Jesus was the Son of God. That is the underlying fact of Christianity. It is the very rock upon which our faith is predicated and upon which our church is builded.

It is the mission of the gospel to teach men this

THE CHRIST.

"Mine eyes pierce the obscurity and I see the lineaments of his dear face."

fact. It is our work as his followers to help men to see that he is indeed the Christ. But how shall this be done? How shall we preach Christ?

We may place the Bible in their hands and they may read all the record of his matchless life; but the infidel does that and so does the Unitarian, and neither discerns anything but the record of a good and great man.

We may travel to the Holy Land and retrace every step that our Master took, thus imbuing our minds with the spirit of the past; we may study well the history of our Lord, and then from the pulpit, with all the eloquence of Savonarola or Paul, preach to the world the fact that he was the Son of God. The crowds may listen spellbound; but what do they hear? The history of a man—nothing more.

How shall I preach Christ?

In desperation I may invoke the aid of art. I prepare my canvas and my paints and bestow upon my work the best labor of a lifetime. I think about my Lord by day, and I dream of him by night, until mine eyes pierce the obscurity and I see the lineaments of his dear face, and with all the skill of Raphael of Hofmann I faithfully outline my ideal upon the retentive canvas.

Then I turn to the world and say, "Come and see the picture of the Son of God." They look, and what do they see? The picture of a man!

It is useless!

Tear the canvas asunder.

Let us go back, if we may, to the days of Christ himself. For us let time be reversed. Back to the days when America was born. Back to the days

SEEKING JESUS.

"Let us go back, if we may, to the days of Christ himself. Let us seek Jesus."

when Britain was born. Back to the days when Rome fell. Back to the time when Christ called his twelve apostles. Let us seek Jesus. And as we enter the narrow streets of Jerusalem, and thrill with the life of the Holy Land, we come upon the object of our search. It is ours to touch his hand, to listen to his voice. Eagerly we turn to the throngs of by-standers and in the language of John cry, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

They look, and what do they see? They listen, and what do they hear? Having eyes they see not. Having ears they hear not. "Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph? His father and mother are well known to us. Why then say that he is the Son of God?"

In despair we cry out, "O God, if they are to see this great fact you must reveal it to them! We can not."

Ah! there is the secret of it all. For the Master himself said that flesh and blood had not revealed that fact to Peter—nor indeed could it do so.

Therein is shown the need of present revelation. Without a constant revelation to each generation now born into the kingdom, there would soon be a church composed of members who would be ignorant of the great fact on which the church rests. For it is not a fact that can be made known by word of mouth alone, or by written word or by art or science. "No man can say that Jesus is the Christ but by the Holy Ghost."

Therein is revealed the coöperation between man and God. It has pleased God to save the world by the foolishness of preaching, and to that end preachers are sent; yet it is equally true that no man can discern the Son excepting as divine influences make him known.

The apostles had been with Christ. They could tell of his life and teachings down to the minutest detail. They were those "who from the beginning were eye-witnesses," they told what their "eyes had seen and what their hands had handled" of the word of life. Yet these facts did not qualify them to present Christ to men. They had to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endowed with power from on high, so that when they preached Christ that Spirit would whisper to the hearer, "It is true," and being powerfully drawn he might obey and be born again by that same power from on high.

Let those who preach Christ ever bear this in mind. The Comforter is sent to testify of him and without its coöperation we are commanded that we shall not teach—it is useless and even dangerous to attempt to portray divinity to humanity unless divinity shall aid us.

HOLIDAY SECTION

CHRISTMAS COMES.

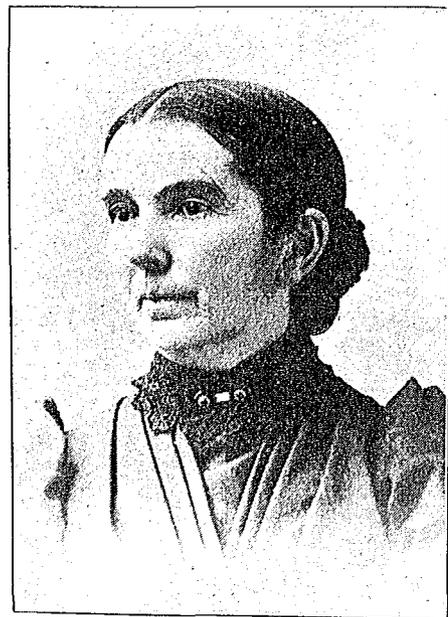

By Mrs. M. Walker, founder and for many years editor of Autumn Leaves.

Christmas comes again! It comes but once a year, but ever comes as fresh in its associations as though it came but once in a lifetime. It comes to stir, to waken the better part of our nature, to touch the tender impulses of humanity. It comes with all its festivities, the most picturesque customs and happy fancies of our race. It comes with such dreams of delight to the little folk and such tender memories to those older grown!

It comes with its holly, its mistletoe, its divertive cheer ever new. It comes with its chants of the nativity, with its anthems and carols,—that first were sung by the angels on the plains of Bethlehem. It comes with new repeatings of that ever strange, ever wonderful story of the shepherds watching their flocks by night—of the light that shone upon them, of the message, "Peace on earth; good will to men," of the star that led the wise men to the Savior that was born—a babe in a manger.

It comes with its family reunions, with its restorations of friendships and peace, where the heart fires of love are fanned and made to burn more brightly; comes with its impulses of charity, and fresh desires to make others happy and brighten their way with our sympathy and good will.

It comes with special attention to the hearts of the little ones, to make their little spirits happy with

MRS. M. WALKER.

"Christmas comes with special attention to the hearts of the little ones . . . to give them such proofs of love as time shall never dare to touch."

délight, to give to them such proofs of love as time will never dare to touch, as memory will ever delight to recall;—comes with all its suppression of self, with its lessons of generosity, with its true ideas of happiness, its best conceptions of living, its awakening of kindness, its outgoings of love to others—comes with the name of Christ to make men better than before; lift them higher, to learn love, peace, and good will; to bring forth holy impulses, to sweeten trouble and pain; to bless mankind.

It comes with all these boons and blessings—yet comes as it always has since God revealed himself in his Son as the embodiment of infinite tenderness, pity, and love:

"All hail to its brightness, its infinite glory,
All hail to the beams of its wondrous star,
Let it shine o'er the world in its unrivaled splendor,
Diffusing its gladness both near and afar.

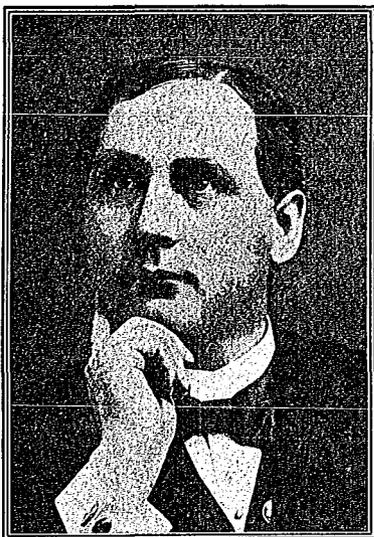

"Cold, cold lay the world in the dawn of that morning,
And colder the hearts of the children of earth;
All hail to the message, the angel-brought tidings;
All hail to the matchless, mysterious birth."

A CHRISTMAS MORNING REVERIE.

By Bishop R. C. Evans.

BISHOP R. C. EVANS.

"I would like to enter the grotto at Jerusalem where the manger-cradled King first blessed the world with his baby prattle. Oh, that I could go to the hill crest where stood the old carpenter shop in which he toiled at Nazareth."

world with his baby prattle while nestling amid the straw. Oh, that I could go to the hill crest where stood the old carpenter shop, in which he toiled at Nazareth, to keep the grim wolf of poverty from his widowed mother's door. Gladly would I take that long walk over the hills and through the valleys, an hundred miles of stony toil, over which Mary hurried to tell Elizabeth of her condition and to hear her

AT THE OPEN SEPULCHER.

"Mary was made the honored instrument, to become the first missionary of the grandest story that ever thrilled the heart of humanity,—the resurrection from the dead."

story of the coming of the one to prepare the way of the wonderful unborn child.

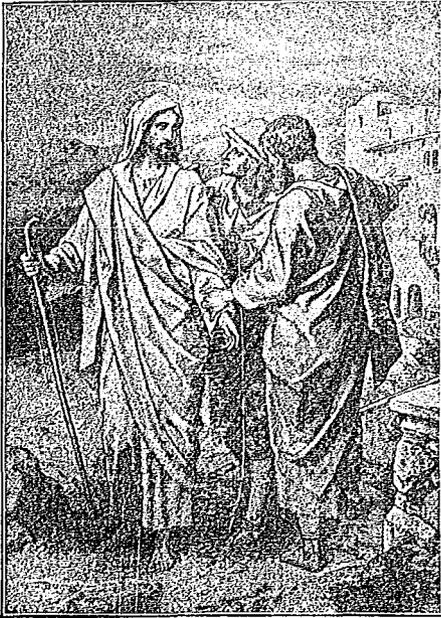

I would suffer much could I rest upon the well of Jacob where the weary Master of men leaned, hungry and tired, and told the fallen woman the greatest love story her ears had ever heard—the story that changes life.

Oh, to stand in the room where the last supper was eaten and the last hymn sung, while throats were bursting with the lump of sorrow that human tongue has never been able to describe.

Oh, think of it; to stand gazing on the spot where the three apostles fell asleep while He suffered the pains of the world; to go to Gethsemane; to listen to the echoes from the rocks as they come back from the dead past, the agony clothed in the saddest words that ever were uttered; "Oh, my Father, if it be possible let this cup pass from me." Only to kneel where he bowed when the weight of the world's sin was upon his head. Just to stand upon the spot where he met the midnight mob, headed by the selfish Judas. To hear again those words, as he calmly faced the assassins, saying, "Whom seek ye? I am He. Think ye not that I could pray the Father and he would send me twelve legions of angels?" Oh, what power. Even when he submitted to become their prisoner he stood in all the majesty of a king, —surely his captors were his slaves.

Would I, Peter-like, follow him afar off? No; a thousand times no. If I went to that garden to-day

ON THE ROAD TO EMMAUS.

"Oh, could I follow with him as he talked with the two disciples by the way! Could my heart burn with theirs!"

I would gladly place my feet in his footsteps and go to the judgment hall with Him. Heaven grant that no cock will ever crow as the signal of my profanity and base denial. Poor, impetuous Peter. How gladly would I go to the spot where he fell beneath the cross. Oh, that I could be Simon of Cyrene to help him as he went his weary way up the hill to Golgotha. I would sooner have a piece of that cross he carried than a king's royal palace.

Just think of it, to stand on the ground where they cast lots for the seamless coat that poor fallen Mary made for him in her little home at Bethany, after he had bathed her tarnished head in the pure waters of his unexampled love; to perhaps gaze upon the hole made by the cross in the rocky place on Calvary's hill; to witness again, as back through the ages we travel, the grand sacrifice to save the world.

Oh, to walk through the grass with Mary, and the other Mary, as they neared the sacred spot where lay all that was dear to their broken hearts. I seem to see them, in the semidarkness, nearing the tomb. Ah, Joseph of Arimathea, could I but place my head in thy new tomb, given to the dead son of Mary.

That night the stars hid for shame and the pale queen of night refused to shine, when rended rocks and tattered temple vale bore testimony to the death of God's greatest child.

But, thank God, that darkest of nights gave birth to a day whose sun will never know a setting. Sunday morning came at last; the twilight morn revealed to Mary him whom she supposed to be the gardener. One word from his blistered lips dispelled the night of sorrow from her life,—"Mary." Oh, to see her spring forward to press a warm kiss upon his once dead brow. Thank God woman has redeemed herself. True, she made the mistake that brought death and sorrow into the world; but has she not made atonement, not only by her sufferings, but she it was that brought the Light of the World to redeem man. And in that garden, just merging from the night, Mary was made the honored instrument to become the first missionary of the grandest story that ever thrilled the heart of humanity, the resurrection from the dead.

Oh, could I follow him as he talked with the two disciples by the way. Could I sit with him at the table as he asked the blessing upon the common meal. Could my heart burn with theirs. Could I go to the seashore and watch him make breakfast for the hungry fishermen of Galilee. And last, could I go to the mountain crest where he gave his last blessing and see in memory those clouds receive him out of their sight.

OUR MISSION; OR, THOUGHTS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

By H. O. Smith, Editor of Zion's Ensign.

Ever since I can remember, whenever missions or missionaries were mentioned, visions of foreign lands and savages called heathen would come to my mind. But as I grow older each succeeding year more firmly impresses upon my mind the fact that to be missionaries we do not need to go beyond our own doors to find all the missionary work that we are capable of doing.

There is an old saying, and a true one, "Charity begins at home"; and we might say with equal truthfulness that "missionary work begins at home," or at least that it should begin at home. All are, or can be, missionaries if they will. God tells us in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants that men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness; for the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good, they shall in no wise lose their reward. And Peter says we should be ready always to give a reason for the hope that is in us to every man that asketh us.

If we follow these injunctions we will become promulgators of the faith, and in consequence missionaries for Christ and his gospel. I am sometimes, (yes quite frequently when I solicit the aid of some one in my church work) met with the declaration,

ELDER H. O. SMITH.

"If by teaching and example I shall be able to greet my neighbors and friends around the glorious throne of God, I shall be satisfied, even though the conversion of nations be denied me."

"Oh, I can not do that." But in a Saint's vocabulary there should not exist the words can not. I think that it is Shakespeare who says:

"Our doubts are traitors,
And make us lose the good
We oft might have
By fearing to attempt."

The same author also says:

"He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister,
So Holy Writ hath babes in judgment shown,
When Judges have been babes; great floods
Have flown from simple sources,
And great seas have dried
Where miracles have by the greatest been denied.
Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
When most it promises.
And oft it hits
Where hope is coldest and despair most fits."

So, in this work of God, none need fear for the qualification necessary for the work, if they go humbly and prayerfully at work, doing whatever presents itself, seeking for opportunities to do good. Do not neglect the little things that lie around your daily path, and above all do not dream and build castles in the air of what you will do upon the morrow.

"There's a young man on the corner,
Filled with life, and strength, and hope,
Looking far beyond the Present;
With the whole world in his scope.
He is grasping at To-morrow,
That phantom none can catch;
To-day is lost. He's waiting
For the eggs that never hatch.

"There's an old man over yonder,
With a worn and weary face,
With searching, anxious features,
And weak, uncertain pace.
He is living in the Future,
With no desire to catch
The golden Now. He's waiting
For the eggs that never hatch."

Do not wait for the magic wand of the priesthood to be waved over your head. Do not think, as thousands think, that otherwise you have nothing to do. Some of the grandest achievements that the world has ever seen have been worked out by men who did not know the meaning of the magic word, and God has without doubt approved their actions. I believe that everyone has a mission to perform in this world, and everyone is born for a purpose, and unconsciously we work out that mission, or that purpose. I was reading not long ago one of T. S. Arthur's matchless temperance novels, and in it he narrates the saving of a man bound in the toils of the demon drink, by the influence of a little child who, all unconscious of its power, crept into the open door of the man's room. So we, passing through the world all unconscious of the influence we exert, leave along our pathway that which leads to a higher and a nobler life, or that which blights and destroys.

If you should ask me in what way you could best become a missionary for Christ, I should unhesitatingly answer, by example. It is in this way that the most eloquent sermons have been preached, and are being, and will be preached. A good example has saved thousands from evil; a bad example has driven thousands to evil. The effect of some of the most powerful sermons has been destroyed by the daily life of the sermonizer, or some of his followers, as Solomon says, one sinner destroyeth much good.

"Go forth with a smile for the weary,
Go forth with a word for the sad,
A sweet song of hope for the mourner,
An anthem of peace for the glad."

In this essay I have confined myself entirely to the everyday work that surrounds us, because I consider that these are within the reach of all; and further, because I believe that this is the grandest missionary work that can be done; and I am sure that when I stand before the one Great Judge, that the approval of those that have been most intimate with me in this life, will be far sweeter than the plaudits of the nations for great deeds done; but of course if we can receive both it will be far better, but if either be lacking, let it be the latter.

If by teaching and example I can be able to greet my neighbors and friends around the glorious throne of God, I shall be satisfied, even though the conversion of nations be denied me.

THE HOLIDAY SEASON AT GRACELAND COLLEGE.

WHAT IT MEANS TO THOSE WHO MUST REMAIN IN LAMONI, AS WELL AS TO THOSE WHO CAN VISIT HOME.

By Roy V. Hopkins, professor of Ancient Languages and director of athletics in Graceland College.

To one who has lived the college life with the students of Graceland, who has been intimately associated with their home life at the dormitories, whose sorrows have been his sorrows, and whose pleasures, his pleasures, the subject assigned by the editor is one which appeals to the human heart and to human sympathies.

If there is any period of life that requires love, kindness and sympathy more than another, it is that of youth. Youth is tender, trusting and confiding, and there are many who unconsciously abuse it because they have let advancing years and the cares of life callous their hearts to the fresher and sweeter impulses of youth. Unkind, unjust, endless criticism, ceaseless harping, will never reform. It can never accomplish what reason, patience, and a true appreciation of the principles of the doctrine of Christ will. The writer has seen the evil effects of these things in a number of cases among our own boys and girls, and can not refrain from here mentioning it, although the matter may appear to be foreign to the subject. Yet not so much so when we consider that a sympathy with the inner impulses of the lives of our students is necessary, so as to understand what are the pleasures and disappointments of the holiday season to them.

We are glad that our environments have been such as to enable us to understand these things, and to have been thus associated with the young men and young women of Graceland College, and we venture to say that nowhere upon earth will you find so many of the young gathered, who are so united in one common purpose, of common preparation to serve God and man. To find so many in one body whose lives are clean and pure is as beautiful to behold as it is remarkable, when compared with other institutions of like nature. We do not feel this to be a rash statement, or one born of superfluous enthusiasm; but one based upon experiences gained from several of the colleges and universities of our country where the writer has attended and visited.

The furtherance of this common purpose is what binds us together in one family here at Graceland; and so when the happy Christmas time rolls around we rejoice with those who can participate in its pleasures with loved ones at home, and mourn with those whom circumstances force to remain. That is why the subject appeals to our sympathy. It means much after a separation of four months to be able to look forward to spending the Christmas at home. How many times that thought has comforted and cheered us in hours of sadness; for such hours do come even at college. The greeting of mother, father, brothers, and sisters, the little presents, sweet tokens of love and kindness, found in their purest form in the home circle; the Christmas dinner prepared as mothers only can, with an extra dish or cherished dainty saved until the absent one comes home from college; these are pleasing anticipations, to say the least.

But there are those who must miss all this, and to them our sympathies go out. Arrangements are usually made for some entertainment for such, during the holidays, and many who are not able to go home on account of the distance, knowing it beforehand, become reconciled: just as one student remarked a few days ago: "Whether I am happy or unhappy while I remain at Graceland during the Christmas vacation, depends largely upon myself."

Graceland has representatives from several States, from parts of Canada, and even from far away across the Pacific; from Saskatoon, three hundred miles north of the Canada line, where the thermometer sometimes registers as low as fifty degrees below zero, to the balmy shores of the Gulf of Mexico where it scarcely ever even freezes; from the mountains of Montana to the Rhode Island shores of the Atlantic. Graceland claims one representative from faraway Japan, the land of flowers. We have students also from Illinois, Iowa, Tennessee, North Dakota, South Dakota, Missouri, and from the Golden Gate of California.

Perhaps it may be interesting to some to know what the Christmas holidays mean to these students so widely separated, some of the anticipated pleasures of those who can go home, also the pleasures and regrets of those who must remain. Then, too, the manner of celebrating Christmas in different sections of the country is interesting. We thought it would be more acceptable to our friends to hear these things from the students themselves, so we asked one from each State and district to write us a short article on the subject, so we could get at it from all standpoints.

One of our industrial students from Missouri, while he dreams of home, fireside, and the family circle is inclined to look at it from a practical and philosophical standpoint and says emphatically: "I say the student who works his way through college should consider seriously the advisability of spending $12 or $15 of his hard-earned money only for a trip home," and consoles himself with the thought that "the faculty who remain here spare no effort to make the time pass pleasantly, and indeed they certainly succeed, for the time passes rapidly away, occupied as it is by little parties and other social events."

Several of those who were obliged to remain expressed the thought that the holidays would be pleasant or dull just as they chose to make them. One who lives in Lamoni is certain that she can keep the time from becoming irksome by completing some of the tasks she has left over for the vacation.

A young lady who expects to go to her home in Illinois to spend Christmas takes pleasure in the task of "helping to provide amusements for the little folks of the church," who are in a measure dependent upon her for their Christmas enjoyment. Surely a noble ambition.

One from the snowclad prairies of North Dakota misses the coasting, skating and sleighriding and the visits to the neighbors, adding that upon one such occasional, the snow was so deeply packed around the house that the visitors were obliged to gain an entrance through a hole cut in the roof.

The voice of one of our big, good-natured boys comes rumbling down from the mountains of Montana. His Christmas ambition is a big deer hunt on the mountainside, camping in abandoned cabins, which he shares with the horses, and breakfasting upon prairie chickens and rabbits, shot just as occasion required. (I fear we Iowa hunters would have to fast.) After three or four days' sport he would go home and regale himself on fat venison, during the remainder of the holidays.

One of our boys from away up in Saskatoon speaks of the hockey games, and the carnivals at the skating rinks. He mentions one thing that may seem strange to some, stating that the principal and most cherished Christmas gift to his English friends there is a plum pudding sent from "Merrie England," clear across the ocean. He says that last year just before Christmas a special mail train left Montreal bound for the western provinces bearing nothing but plum puddings, unloaded from a steamer from England. This is quite unique. We have heard of Christmas trains from Saint Louis and Milwaukee bearing nothing but bottles labeled "glass"; bound for Kansas, but never before of plum pudding trains.

Michigan also claims its share with its "beautiful lakes covered with snow and ice," its skating and sleighing parties and its beautiful and fragrant Christmas tree of evergreen gayly decorated and lighted with candles.

A rosy cheeked lad from Rhode Island gravely asserts that the Christmases in his State are like those "pictured by Washington Irving in his Sketch Book for England," and thinks he detects a tendency in the race toward a lack of appreciation in the celebration of the happy Yuletide as it was formerly revered.

Another boy from southern Canada, of a serious strain of mind at first debates with himself thus: "Is education worth this separation? but when we think of the hope of future usefulness and the value of preparation, every other consideration is outweighed."

A student formerly from Tennessee remembers the big free-for-all hunts, and a little girl from still further south, away down where the Mississippi tongues its way into Louisiana, says Christmas is celebrated there with firecrackers and noise much the same as we celebrate our Fourth of July, and ponders within her own mind as to whether that is a "fitting way to celebrate the birth of Christ." Such is the softening influence of the gospel.

Last, but not least, is Christmas in Japan. What it means to a Japanese boy who has been converted to Christianity, and how it is celebrated by Christians in that country will perhaps be interesting to the most of us, so we shall let him speak for himself in his somewhat quaint but clear English.

"In Japan Christmas is celebrated only by Christians, and there are many who do not even know what is 'Christmas.'

"Children of Christian parents enjoy Christmas just as they do in this country. On Christmas Day there is special service for the day at every church. From several days before some of young members are employed busily, to decorate the church with Christmas tree and other things. In the evening there is very brief service, and after that whole evening is spent for various programs and entertainments. While the programs are going on we are served with Manjew and tea. Manjew is a kind of steamed rice-cake; remember candies are not very popular in Japan, in such case at least with tea. As the number of Christians is comparatively small, there is not any sort of feeling on the day as to national air. This is one difference we feel on the day here and in Japan, and one more difference is, in this country they prepare so-called Christmas dinner, and invite friends or relatives, and celebrate the day at home; but in Japan all families gather in the church on the evening, and celebrate the day together. This I think is due to the fact that the number of the members is small and they are attached to one another so well."

I wonder if any of us could do as well in Japanese composition after a residence of only four years.

We have tried to give you a "cosmopolitan" view of the holidays at Graceland, and trust that our humble efforts in attempting to help the HERALD celebrate may not have been in vain.

THE VALUE OF CO-OPERATION.

By Frederick M. Smith, of the First Presidency.

(Read before the Men's League, Independence, Missouri.)

It seems useless to speak of the value of coöperation, so widespread and omnipresent are its manifestations and blessings; but that we have not yet learned to coöperate to the extent we might or should, may be sufficient excuse for a few thoughts thereon.

If we admit with one writer that it is "unity of effort that makes society," the importance of coöperation is at once apparent. On every hand are its fruits; every social convenience exists because of it. To deny oneself the results of coöperation would mean complete isolation. Outside the breath we draw our every want is supplied by coöperation, and even the air we breathe in some places is supplied through coöperation.

If we accept the Bible theory of the creation of man, coöperation began in the Garden of Eden; or if we hold to the idea of the evolutionist, then coöperation began when precivilized man began to collect in groups or even in pairs. It has ever furnished the power of social progress. Even in the processes of differentiation and integration which have ever been successively going on in social affairs coöperation has been an always present factor in the equation of progress. Indeed, as man has scaled the heights of intellectual and social progress coöperation has ever been a factor of increasing magnitude in human attainment; and in the solution of the great problem facing the present generation, the establishment of industrial or economical liberty, its value as a factor can not be less but greater.

These are general truths perhaps generally admitted, and it is not necessary for us to go further into a discussion of the pure sociological functions of coöperation, but we shall try to make application more or less specific.

It may be that we shall fly into the face of tradition or belief when we say the sum total of righteousness is on the increase,—that good is gradually predominating over evil. Akin to this or as an outgrowth of it is the belief that the majority of people prefer to do good. At first thought it is a startling proposition that an increase of crime statistically might mean social progress or a higher moral standard of society. That is to say, because of the changing "attitude of society towards human conduct, it is well within the limits of possibility that a community might become, generation by generation, more moral, and produce increasing crops of the 'peaceable fruits of righteousness,' and yet show in its moral statistics a steady increase of crime, in excess of the increase of population." Not that an increase of crime in excess of increase of population according to an old or a fixed standard would indicate moral progress, but because as society progresses the category of crime expands, and acts are now considered criminal and punishment administered to the perpetrator which only a few years ago were tolerated complacently by society.

If, therefore, a community is characteristically bad it means the bad elements are coöperating to a greater degree than the good, if we accept the idea that the majority prefer to do good. Righteousness is a distinct community asset—a community is rich or impoverished to the degree that righteousness or right doing exceeds or is less than wrongdoing.

² F. H. Giddings, introduction to Crime and Social Progress.

And furthermore righteousness is or ought to be something concrete, not an abstraction to be learnedly discoursed upon in pulpit or Bible class but not made a factor in community life. Hence every minister, every Bible student, every Christian especially, should be actively about adding to the community's stock of righteousness,—making it a concrete manifestation.

It can hardly be denied that in America, the boasted land of liberty and "natural born statesmen," we have the worst governed communities or municipalities in the world. There must be a reason for this. Perhaps there are many reasons. One may be that Americans have not made sufficient study of civic affairs and government; but another and we moral standards, learning to cooperate, control civic affairs and reap the "spoils." Intelligent, much-needed cooperation of the religious or moral elements in the various communities of this country would speedily decapitate the hydra-headed monster, civic graft, that greatest of curses in American government to-day. Whether it be commission form of government, the old ward system, unicameral, bicameral, or what not, the one great thing needed for success is cooperation of the elements of the community standing for righteousness.

The basic principle of Christianity is cooperative, for it takes at least two men and God to live the Christian religion, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," and "No man lives unto himself," make it a community and social factor.

With constantly increasing intelligent cooperation, well seasoned with the characteristically Christian principle of altruism (without which there is not the higher form of cooperation), a pure and righteous civic government becomes possible and a broader, more significant social life is ushered in. Without it any even admirable form of government will be a failure; with it any reasonable form will become a success.

Let us hail with delight the present day movements looking towards the cooperation of men of morals in civic reform and community cleanliness. Before such cooperation lie almost untold possibilities. Let the men of the churches forget their sectarian quarrels and as religious men and Christian citizens work for purer, cleaner civic and social conditions; let them actively and intelligently cooperate against the forces of graft and community vice and it will not be long till America's cities would be the best governed in the world, not the worst.

GOD WITH US.

By John F. Garver, of the Lamoni Stake Presidency.

The story of the virgin birth of the child Jesus is told with a straightforwardness and a simplicity at once impressive. No persuasion, no argumentative style—nothing suggesting that there is the least thought in the minds of the biographers that their story was in any wise to be discredited. So imbued with the idea of the Christ are they that their narrative is childlike in its earnestness.

Angelic messengers, singly, and in hosts, appear as heralds and directors of the coming, the birth, and the protection of the baby King. A heavenly body is created or awakened, and sweeps athwart the skies, leading unknown peoples to the new shrine. And, lo, most wondrous of all, from the councils above appears one to the foster father of this Jesus to be with the declaration: "They shall call his believe a fundamental reason is the lack of cooperation of the religious or moral element of the various communities. Because of this lack of cooperation among the better individuals of the community, brought about by indifference, sectarian quarrels, or from whatever cause, politicians and citizens of low name Emmanuel which being interpreted is, God with us."

Amid all this splendor the baby comes, of humble motherhood, born among beasts, and cradled in a manger. Yet to his lowly couch journey wise men from afar, laden with their gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh; and here among the beasts of the stall they worship before the little prince, returning to their own country with the beautiful story of the guiding star and the coming of the anointed into the world. Here come the believing shepherds, telling to the glad ears of the blessed mother the appearing of the heavenly messenger and the accompanying host, not forgetting the wonderful words: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." An unusual baby this, a heavenly baby this,—designed to fill no mean place in the great world drama,—a place hidden wholly or in part from those touched by skepticism, scientific conclusion, so-called, and kindred influences; but sensed to a degree, at least, by those believing like the shepherds and willing to be led like the Magi.

"The child grew and waxed strong in spirit," until at the age of twelve years he was able to declare with firmness, "I must be about my Father's business." Following this conviction that he was the Son of God, sent on the business of his Father among men, while increasing in stature, Jesus increased "in wisdom" and "in favor with God and man"; and, finally, unswerving in purpose, with untold devotion he moves out into the broad field of his work upon earth.

His words fall with no uncertain sound upon the ears of Israel, "He spake as one having authority"; "The father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak." As he declares the father to be the author of his words, so he proclaims him to be the director of his works—works as assertive as his words were indisputable: "I do nothing of myself"; "The father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." In the synagogue, on the mountain side, in the crowded thoroughfares, apart from the press of the ever increasing multitude, everywhere Jesus gave forth the words of God and performed the works of God. Thus in the person of him of whom he himself said "This is my beloved Son," "God was manifest in the flesh"; of a truth Jesus became "God with us."

In another sense had we "God with us." Jesus entered sympathetically into the lives of the people about him. He was gladdened by their joys; he shared their sorrows; he held himself not aloof from their social standings; he participated in their social functions; and in every instance he ministered to their needs. He attended the wedding, partaking of the joy and adding to the pleasure of the occasion; he wept with and comforted the sisters of Lazarus; he abode with Zaccheus, the rich publican; he dwelt among the poor; in each instance delivering words of correction, words of life. By these and many other associations did Jesus reveal his mission among men: To temper their pleasures with wisdom; to soothe their sorrows with comfort; to call them from evil through love.

Little wonder the apostles were saddened at the departure of this companion and friend. Yet in the hour of despair these consoling words are spoken: "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you." While it was expedient that Jesus go away, his friends were not to be left without God in the world. By the indwelling of his Holy Spirit was he to continue in their lives. And even by this divine influence were the disciples thereafter directed and comforted.

This hope was in turn planted by the apostles in the hearts of "all that are afar off." The promise of the angel had been that the tidings of great joy were to be "to all people." Indeed, an occasion for joy—"God with us!" Not only during the lifetime of his Son among men, but on through the ages by his holy influence; again in the person of his Son during the thousand years; and finally by his very presence in the New Jerusalem. This, then, is the great purpose of God: The preparation of man for companionship with him.

At the Christmastide, when our thoughts turn in reverence to Christ the Son, and to God the Father, how good it is to realize that God is with us not only in the cold letters of the law, but that he is with us by the presence of his Spirit in our hearts. As Jesus ministered among Israel, so God desires to minister among us. In joy and in sorrow, in prosperity and adversity, in everything God may be our helper. Our pleasures need to be directed; our sorrows to be softened; our riches to be guarded; our poverty to be overcome. The experiences of the human family teach us that this can not be done by man alone; but the achievements of the especial people of God assure us that all may be accomplished through the presence of God in the lives of men; for where God is, there all things are possible.

Have you joy? Take there the companionship of God, that your joy may have its proper limitations. Have you sorrow? Permit the holy presence of God to pour into your bleeding heart the healing balm, that bitterness of spirit find not lodgment there. Have you riches? Let God's Spirit shed the light of love abroad in your heart, that selfishness take not hold therein. Have you poverty? Let contentment through God's influence fill your soul, that the seeds of covetousness bury not themselves therein.

The simple faith of the shepherds, the willingness to be led of the Magi, bring into our lives the unmistakable presence of God. Others may doubt, others may scoff, but acting upon that "wisdom" within us and that "grace" "upon" us we move along among men as conscious of the "God with us" as were the disciples of old. Permitting this presence to perform its work with us we shall learn wisdom in our joys, comfort in our sorrows, unselfishness in our riches, and contentment in our poverty; there will come gradually into our lives a knowledge of God that shall eventually open up to us the personal presence of the Son and the Father; and in the New Jerusalem, where tears shall be wiped from all faces, our lives will find their completeness.

THE MISSION OF JESUS CHRIST.

By Daniel Macgregor, superintendent of the General Sunday School Association.

As a leader, legislator, and benefactor, the mission of Jesus Christ can not be compared with the carnal conqueror crimson with the blood of his brother; with the lobbying politician wire pulling in the councils of a nation; nor yet with the hypocritical philanthropist doling out a few dollars to a frenzied humanity. It was nobler than all these.

His was not a mission pandering to the prejudices of the people, and courting the fancies of the fickle.

It was a mission simply incomparable with the brightest and best that man has produced, and is gauged the better by contrast.

It was one that stood forth isolately grand, for he was interested in the welfare of all and promoted it by those broad, underlying principles that remodel empires, alter ages, and harmonize the vicissitudes of time with the raptures of eternity.

It was a mission that reached and reaches into every avenue of society, benefiting in a particular way the minutest veins of the lower stratas. Behold the King of kings, the Creator of all creation, disrobing himself of royal attire and descending among the most polluted and perverse of all his subjects,

ELDER DANIEL MACGREGOR.

"The brief ministry of our Lord was but the planting of the acorn from whence must proceed in later years the giant oak of storm resisting strength."

for no other purpose and for no other reward than to please the Father and bless mankind.

It was not for the hope of earthly gain that he entered upon the labors of his life, nor yet because enticed by an ignoble death which he foresaw and foreknew. The efforts of thousands to make him king he frustrated, preferring rather the unpopular path his inimitable proclamation had mapped out: "He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised."

In this there was no seeking for favor, no deep laid scheme to corral the public vote and public purse. No price was put upon his service and no salary was asked for a consultation.

It was not a mission of promises alone. It was demonstrated by deed. We shall not attempt a recital of those innumerable mercies extended the sick, the suffering, the poor, the needy, the burdened and the bereaved. Every shade of society felt the edifying and vivifying influence of his dynamic presence, from the beggar Bartimeus who lived by the wayside, to the robber Baccus restoring his steals fourfold; from the rich young man of moral goodness, to the unfortunate female of immoral practice.

It was a mission fragrant with favors for others from first to last. Yes, to the very latest and most agonizing hour of his life, when he was found invoking blessed benedictions—"To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise."

His mission was not crucified with his person. It had but begun. The cross was the mainspring setting in motion all the marvelous mechanism of gospel machinery.

We see him resurrected from the tomb. In this he demonstrated his power over that which had hitherto exercised unconquered control, and he arose with mightier strength. It was almighty and justly proportionate to the great love he bore for perishing humanity. Indeed, it has always been that power for good has been limited only by lives of love. No longer were his blessings to be confined to his own who received him not, but rather "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature." Assuring us of his predestined plan to accomplish all his pleasure he himself hastened away to his "other sheep" situated at the utmost bound of the lasting hills. It was a mission universal.

Nor did he overlook the interests of the dead and of those imprisoned in "the nether parts of the earth"; and "for this cause was the gospel preached unto them that are dead that they might . . . live according to God in the Spirit."

He ascended to heaven,—and was it that his work was finished? Ah, no. The retrenchments of Satan and sinners reinforced for four thousand years were well nigh impregnable and their occupants could scarcely be persuaded to surrender after so short a siege of three and one half years. This brief ministry of our Lord was only the breaking up of the fallow fields of unfruitful centuries. It was the planting of the acorn, from whence must proceed in later years the giant oak, of storm resisting strength.

The power of Jehovah is not limited. He could have accomplished all his purposes long, long ago, if consistent with his counsel, but pledged as he is to a policy of saving only such as sincerely seek it, he must bide the time, for surely,

"Time and ages must roll round
Ere man will yield an inch of ground."

The mission of Christ continued. We behold it in the commissioning of a ministry, in the preaching of the word, in the baptism of the unsaved, in the healing of the sick, in the bestowal of gifts, and in the helping of the poor, for surely all things were once held in common.

Success has attended that mission. Nations and empires to-day reverence that name which is above every name, where once he was unheard of. And while that reverence may not be as unalloyed as we could wish, yet the wondrous transformation of faith and the unreserved surrender of Baal and kindred gods for whom myriad generations had developed an almost indissoluble attachment is in itself an amazing stride toward the goal of a full salvation. Aside from this, revelation's story tells us of "a great multitude which no man could number" clothed in white robes and shouting hosanna to the Lamb.

The weapons used in the prosecution of his mission were neither crude nor carnal. Prayer and preaching, faith and fasting, was the shining cimeter for ever in his hand. He carried no shield; he needed none. The power of scintillating truth, so dazzling, turned and returned every shaft of the adversary, boomeranging his opponents. Thus the battle of the Universe was fought, not by a display of might, not by threat or destruction; and not by the shedding of blood, save that of his own.

The work goes on, and while we can not follow with prophetic eye the details of progress through approaching ages, yet we know that ultimately there will be a happy attainment of all that is couched in that enduring declaration, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

THE MESSAGE OF CHRIST TO THE CLASSES.

By Bishop C. J. Hunt.

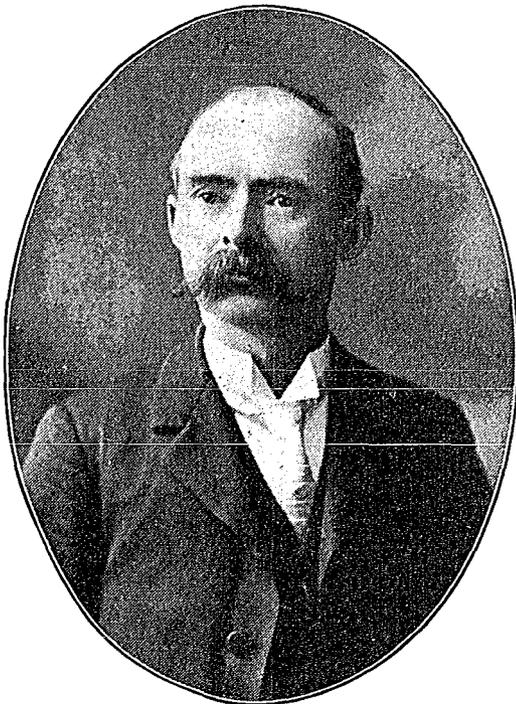

The hills and the valleys of Judea were fertile. The plowmen overtook the reapers. The herds and flocks grazed "upon a thousand hills" and were carefully watched day and night by shepherds and wage-earners. The vine dressers prided themselves in the wealth of their cultured enterprise. The tax gatherers diligently sought to please the appointing powers. The money lenders, "takers of usury" of that time, watched with keen interest the industrial enterprises. The energetic rabbis were found daily in the temple teaching "the law and the prophets" according to their ideas. Faithful and persevering also were the housewives, the beloved mothers in Israel, who performed well their consecrated duties in the historic country of Palestine and the beloved city of Jerusalem.

Yet with all these blessings and home comforts there was everywhere felt the need of a Savior, for their joy and hope was not full. Their longing in this respect was provided for, however, for the prophets of God had carefully written of His birth, which place of his mortal life should be heralded from Bethlehem, near Jerusalem, and his very works were known in all their midst.

IN ANTICIPATION.

The world's calendar now showed that for nearly four thousand years people who believed in the heavenly instruction to Adam and Eve regarding the promised Redeemer, from generation to generation had kept that blessed assurance ever bright by observing the sacred law which pointed to His coming, i. e., selecting the firstlings of the flocks and the herds, killing and making sacrificial offerings. This pledge made by the Creator of a Universal Benefactor, and the observing of that law of "types and shadows" was for the rich and the poor alike for all should take part in the altar service without class distinction, pointing as it did to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world," the very "Bright and Morning Star."

THE ANNOUNCEMENT.

The announcement of Christ's birth was not unlike other great events that had blessed the world, for the enunciation was made by those of the humbler walks in life. How precious to the shepherds on the hills of Judea while watching their flocks on that cloudless night when they saw that long promised star and heard the joyful news from the angel who sang the sweetest words and music that the heavens ever gave to men.

All people ought to have received this blessed proclamation with gladness, but it was not so. When that news was taken to king Herod "he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him." How strange it was that He who would so soon be "a witness, a leader and commander to the people" in all righteousness, should in his infancy be sentenced to death by a worldly ruler; but such was the case.

However, his life was miraculously saved by the loving hand of God, and at the age of twelve we learn of his being in the temple at Jerusalem, "sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them and asking them questions," and the record further says, "All that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers," for said he, "I must be about my Father's business," which unselfish labor he freely gave for the benefit of the world's rich and poor alike. He also said, I am come that you might have life, and that you might have it more abundantly, which love, service, and glory he afterwards demonstrated to the world. In our lives to-day we should with gratefulness to Him grasp and live in accord with the words of the poet, who wrote:

"Were the whole realm of nature mine
That were an offering far too small,
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my life, my soul, my all."

THE CHRIST NOT UNDERSTOOD.

A cold and unbelieving world was experienced by the Prince of Peace. It should not have been so, for had all whose calling it was to be teachers of men, from the days of Malachi to the great event named above, been fully sustained as God had directed, then the king on his throne, the rich living in luxury, and the peasant, (the bone and sinew of the nation) would all have known the very day the sacred star would appear. But they lost an opportunity, a blessing, and the signs of failure to receive began to be manifest over four hundred years earlier, when their fathers foolishly said, "It is vain to serve God: and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts?"—Malachi 3: 14.

Those ordinances and requirements that should have been faithfully observed, that the Levite ministers and others might have magnified their calling in preaching and building up the kingdom of God, so the church could have continued in an unbroken organization with prophets, and other officers in it, till the Lord's forerunner came; but, alas, the Prophet Malachi had written, "From the days of your fathers ye are all gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. . . . In tithes and offerings." "Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation."—Malachi 3: 7-9.

Here is a lesson to be learned to-day, for duties were left undone, and the failure to do these duties gradually brought darkness to their minds, the teaching lost its power over their hearts; hence, long before the fourth generation had passed, Judea and Jerusalem were not ready to receive the joyous news, "the Savior is born."

TIME AND ITS CHANGES.

The loving entreaties of God were renewed to all through his prophet-forerunner John, who said of Jesus, "He shall increase." He did, for very soon he began to build his church, setting in it officers to teach and to administer "the new and everlasting covenant" to all classes, demonstrating the true meaning of the "fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man," living true lives of service regardless of man's rank and distinction. Even Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, was taught "first principles" of the Lord, while "the poor heard him gladly," and the masses finally credited him as a teacher having authority. They were made to realize that he "regarded not the person of men" but "taught the way of God in truth."

In order to eliminate that soul destroying principle of "Oh, God, bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four and no more," so often seen, the Master said, "That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven." A word of caution to those in the humbler walks of life; "Thou shalt not covet," was also fitting, for the great Teacher of men was indicating danger lines to all.

Time passed. The true leaven of the gospel was working, the Lord had just ascended to the heavens, the day of Pentecost had come and gone, and the full fruition of combined teaching and practice was being realized by the rich and the poor, for the assembled thousands at Jerusalem, "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship," and "many wonders and signs were done by the apostles. And all that believed were together and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need." And they "did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."—Acts 2: 42-47.

A QUESTION.

Who of earth's children to-day would not have willingly joined that happy throng? Does your aching heart ask for a return of those very conditions? If so, we tell you that with the coming of the latter day angel's message just such provisions and heavenly blessings are provided for. Hear the divine instruction: "If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them."—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8.

In further explanation and promise to his people the Lord said: "That you may be equal in the bands of heavenly things; yea, and earthly things also, for the obtaining of heavenly things; for if ye are not equal in earthly things, ye can not be equal in obtaining heavenly things; for if you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you."—Doctrine and Covenants 77: 1.

Dear reader, the sweet message of Jesus, that saluted the ears of his Saints at Jerusalem, Palestine, nineteen hundred years ago, has brought peace and good will to earth again, and if heeded will bless our lives. Will you, with all your "might, mind, and strength" join with the thousands to-day who are "seeking first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness," which work is truly making advancement; and to all his Saints the following heavenly words are addressed: "So be ye encouraged and press on to the consummation designed of God for his people—unity, honor, sanctification, and glory."

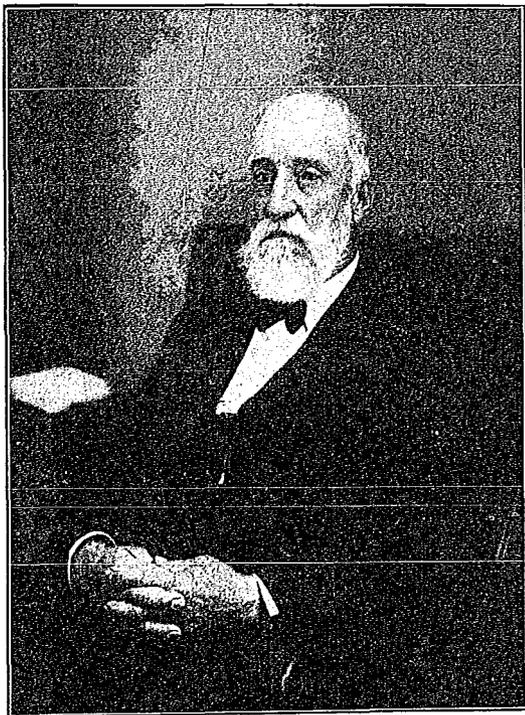

The disturbance between the Portuguese Government and the Vatican is becoming quite as complicated and sensitive as that between the Vatican and Spain. To the Portuguese Government's order canceling a Vatican decree the Vatican has replied by an agitation against the Government through clerical forces. To the Vatican's demurrer about receiving an ambassador from Portugal the Portuguese Government replies by leaving the position vacant. The Government is also promoting a measure to provide for the civil registration of births, deaths, and marriages, and as this threatens a large source of income to the clergy the fear and irritation of that body keep it in lively protest. So far the temper of the Spanish and Portuguese governments is alike in protesting against Vatican interference in domestic matters.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN

Christmas Bells.

"I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

"And thought how as the day had come,
The belfries of all Christendom
Had rolled along
The unbroken song
Of peace on earth, good will to men!"

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

"Till ringing, singing on its way,
The world revolved from night to day,
A voice, a chime,
A chant sublime,
Of peace on earth, good will to men!"

"But in despair I bowed my head,—
'There is no peace on earth,' I said;
'For hate is strong,
And mocks the song
Of peace on earth, good will to men.'

"Then pealed the bells more loud and deep,
'God is not dead, nor doth he sleep!
The wrong shall fail,
The right prevail,
With peace on earth, good will to men!'"

Many times this beautiful poem of Longfellow has caused our heart to thrill with joy—joy in contemplating the sublime truth which is breathed in every line, and in anticipation of the glad time when

"The wrong shall fail,

yet never has it so thrilled us as to-day. Never has the truth and beauty of its words so come home to us as when we turned to it after having read the two incidents given below—incidents which we deem ourselves fortunate in being able to give to our readers at this glad Christmas time, the time of "peace on earth, good will to men."

Should you ask how they came into our possession, the answer, briefly, is this: Sr. C. B. Stebbins, having some years ago heard Brother Joseph tell the first one, and wishing to have others enjoy what had seemed so fine and tender to her, so fully imbued with the divine Spirit of the Master, she wrote asking if he would not write out the incident and give her permission to use it in some one of our church publications. When granting her request, he added the other incident, and Sister Stebbins, knowing that we were in need of Christmas matter for the Home Column, kindly sent them to us.

It has been suggested, in fact Brother Joseph himself thought, that possibly if told in the third person, the interest of these simple but truthful incidents might be enhanced. This, however, is not our opinion, and we believe our readers will thank us for giving them in his own language, just as he told them. May God grant that if any who read these incidents have an enemy on earth to whom they can render good, that they, too, may heed the injunction, "Throw your log chain into the wagon."

"INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, September 16, 1910.

"In 1860 when I joined the Reorganized Church, at Amboy, Illinois, there was considerable excitement at Nauvoo, and in Hancock County, in reference to that movement. Quite a number of the citizens, especially among religious devotees, including all the Protestant denominations, met and held meetings at Carthage, Basco, Dallas, and Montebello, passing resolutions warning me against propagating the tenets of Mormonism in the county.

"Among the men who were the most outspoken in regard to the matter was a Mr. Thomas, a member of the Christian Church, as I understood. His hostility went so far that he not only said harsh things against us boys, but at a public gathering for the purpose of erecting the Fourth of July pole, on which to fly an American flag, he told a rather roistering crowd that the people who killed our father and uncle ought to have killed us boys; for they might have known if they left us alive to grow up to be men that we would take up our father's doctrine and be preaching it.

"This somewhat aroused and angered Jim MacGregor, who had married a niece of my wife, and who was present at this gathering, and he took Mr. Thomas to task and challenged him to tell what I had done that was wrong. But he kept muttering, and repeated his observations elsewhere. I had a number of friends in the township, for I had farmed in it, and I then had an interest in a farm there with my brother, Frederick. He repeated his remarks at different places in the townships of Sonora and Nauvoo; but I did not have the fortune or the misfortune of meeting him for some months, though I often heard of him.

"Just how long I do not know, but I think it was in the early fall of 1861 that I was going to town from the farm with the team and lumber wagon. As I drove up to the gate leading out of the barnyard into the lane running to the main road going into town, I opened the gate, spoke to my team, and they passed on through the gate and stopped at my command. As I began to shut the gate I heard a voice speak plainly—as plain as I ever heard anybody. I looked around, surprised, for the voice said to me, 'Put your log chain in your wagon.' There was no one on the farm but myself, no one in sight that I could see, either on the farm or in the road anywhere.

"I said to myself, 'Pshaw, it is heavy enough for the team to drag the wagon,' for it was very muddy, and rains had made the roads almost impassible, though I had a good stout team. I had nearly shut the gate when the voice repeated, 'Throw your log chain into the wagon.'

"I again questioned myself as to what business I would have with a chain. As I thought rapidly I knew of not a thing I would need that log chain for. As I started to close the gate again, the voice repeated the command, 'Throw your log chain into the wagon.' This time, like one of old, I was not disobedient. I knew of nothing for which I would need a log chain, but the voice was so imperative, that without questioning further I went to the fence where the log chain hung and threw it into the wagon.

"The summer had been a wet one, and about one half mile from the lane which led from the farmhouse into the traveled road, going east and west, there had been a very bad mud hole, reaching clear across the road. It had been an eye sore all summer, and many a team had been stalled in it. As I drove up to the east side of the mud hole going towards Nauvoo, which was west of the farm, and just before I was going to drive into it I saw a man in a buggy, driving a good sized horse, start into the mud hole. Just as he got into really the worst place in the mud hole, the horse began floundering in the mud so that she did not hear him when calling for her to stop, but was plunging in the muddy water making considerable noise. The singletree broke, the lines slipped through the man's hand, and the mare plunged out of the mud hole to the bank on the east side. The man had his overcoat on and a cap on his head, and as I came up close to the mud hole, he managed to get out of the buggy, and climbed along on the fence until he got on the east side where his horse was, then he began washing his hands and wiping the mud off his shoes and pants.

"I good-naturedly said to him, 'That is a pretty hard fix, neighbor.'

"'Yes,' said he, 'I would give a dollar if that buggy was on the solid ground here where we stand.'

"'I can put it there for one half that money,' I replied.

"I knew then what the voice had meant, and what use my log chain was. I had on a pair of tall boots. I got out of my wagon, took the singletrees off, and waded out to the buggy, laid the singletrees on top of the mud, put the chain around the chossbar, and fastened it to the doubletrees. I took my team, drove around and hitched them on to the doubletrees, took hold of the shafts, raised them up so that they would not stick into the mud, and drove out the east side of the mud hole, drawing the buggy clear from the mud out on the solid ground. I then put my team back onto my wagon, and by this time the man had gotten his horse hitched to his buggy. He called to me as I was getting in my wagon, and said: 'Hold on, I want to pay you?'

"In the meantime he had washed his hands and cleaned his shoes in the little puddles in the edge of the pond, and still he was not looking at me and did not look me in the face.

"I told him 'No, I can not charge a neighbor for helping him out of a fix like that.'

"'Well,' says he, 'I said I would give a dollar if my buggy was out here on solid ground. But you said you could put it out for half that amount.'

"'Yes, I did say that, but I had no possible thought of taking it for helping you out of that mud hole.'

"I jumped into the wagon as I was talking to him.

"He then said, 'Hold on, I want to pay you. You have earned your money and I want to pay you.'

"I then told him: 'Mr. Thomas, I charge you nothing. I could not take one cent from you. If you ever find a man in a tight place in trouble, and you can help him out, do so, and charge it to the Smith boys, and it will be all right.' As I called his name he looked up. He was the man who had for months been railing about the township about Mormonism and the Smith boys, telling lies about them, and this was the first time that I had been permitted to meet him.

"At that time I knew nearly everybody in the two townships, Sonora and Nauvoo, and I had met Mr. Thomas somewhere and knew him, as I always remembered faces and names in those days.

"I drove on, thinking that notwithstanding that it was a sloppy, nasty mud hole that I had helped this reverend gentleman out of, I had filled the scriptural injunction, helping those that are in need, being neighbor to him that was in necessity, and heaped figurative coals of fire upon his head. I heard nothing of him for some weeks, and then through the husband of my wife's niece, MacGregor, I heard that he had said to a crowd that Joseph Smith was not so bad a man as he thought he was.

"Another incident that occurred some years after may be interesting to you, Sister Stebbins, and it is this:

"In the same year of 1860 there was a Christian preacher, Lincoln by name, who lived out in either Sonora or Appanoose Township, and had a bright and intelligent son. A neighbor in the west side of the township, by the name of Putnam Yates, also had a son about the same age as Mr. Lincoln's son. There was a school near to which both these men lived, and on Friday nights they had spelling matches and there was quite a rivalry between Yates' and Lincoln's boys. When they went out to play, the Lincoln boy, who was very hot tempered, made assault upon Yates, and was worsted, but the older boys separated them and prevented any harm at the time.

"The next Sunday the Lincoln boy took an old case knife, and had his little brother turn the grindstone while he ground that knife to sharp edges on both sides, and to a point. He remarked to his little brother that that would fix him. The next Friday night when they went to the schoolhouse, at the few minutes intermission, the Lincoln boy raised the trouble again and in the scuffle that ensued he stabbed Yates to death with this knife.

"It was a terrible deed. He was sullen; went home to his father's place, and of course was arrested. The proof was especially plain, and he was sent to the jail and awaited his trial, which, when it occurred, sent him to the penitentiary for manslaughter.

"Time passed on, and I saw this Mr. Lincoln only at rare intervals. Upon one of the visits that I made to Nauvoo from Plano, I borrowed a buggy from a friend by the name of Horton, whom I had known for years, and started to go down to visit my wife's niece, Mrs. MacGregor, and two or three other old time acquaintances, whom I was anxious to see. As I turned a corner of the old farm, on the road running south, I saw a man sitting against the bank in the shade. It was nearly noon. As I got pretty nearly to him he arose to go on the road, the same way I was going, and I called to him, and asked him if he was going down the road, and he said, 'Yes.' 'Well,' said I, 'I am going as far as James MacGregor's, and I never pass a man, when I can carry him, without asking him to ride. Will you get in?'

"He looked up at me. He was thin, pale, and haggard looking. His clothes were shabby, and he had a little old clasped cloth satchel, pretty well worn, which he was carrying. He looked distressed, as if he was a man who knew both poverty and sorrow.

"I got him into the buggy and we fell into conversation, when he told me the story of his trouble, what his son had done, and the effort he had made in his behalf, first to get him clear, and afterwards to get the punishment as slight as possible; and that it had cost him his farm and every dollar that he had ever had. His wife was dead, one of his other children was dead, and the others had gone from home, and he was utterly alone, a broken down, sick, discouraged man. He was unable longer to work, had nothing, and did not know what was to become of him. He was going down to a friend's house for a little visit. I had not betrayed any knowledge of the man. I thought it strange that he should have picked upon a stranger to tell his story, but I was sympathetic, listened to him, and tried to encourage him as best I could. I had known him and known the man, Yates, whose son was killed, for a number of years.

"Just before parting with him he spoke to me in this way. He says:

"Mr. Smith, I owe you an apology. I talked very hard against you in 1860, when you began to preach. I said very hard and unwarranted things about you and your brothers, especially about you. I thought I wanted you to know the affliction and sorrow that I had passed through. I did wrong, I know I did wrong, and I am suffering the penalty. I have lost property, wife, children, and have the stain of murder upon my family."

"I tried to comfort him by telling him that he would not be held accountable for the act of his son, as he had not encouraged it, and that no one would find fault with him for protecting his son by giving him a fair trial. So far as I was concerned I had never thought ill of the man. I had never allowed it to rankle against him, and I hoped that he would so consider it, and if there was anything to pardon, it was freely granted. He alighted from the buggy at the place where he was to leave the road and went about his business and I went about mine. I never saw him after.

"It was a pitiful story, but under God, I remember the saying of the Scripture, 'Vengeance is mine, and I will repay, saith the Lord.' I never harmed the man, never said anything against him, and yet I pitied him from the bottom of my heart.

"In bonds,
"JOSEPH SMITH."

SOCIOLOGY AND ECONOMICS

THE BROOK FARM EXPERIMENT.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

During the past two hundred years there have been numerous efforts to found coöperative colonies, most of which have embraced in their scheme of affairs collective ownership of property. More than fifty such communities, of some importance, and many smaller ones, have existed in America alone.

There seems to be an impression that these experiments have invariably failed, but such is not the case. For instance, Amana, the Community of True Inspiration, still exists and prospers, as it has done since 1842, first in New York and later in Iowa. Yet it is true that the Nemesis of failure has pursued communists who have attempted to realize their ideals.

Many of these communities were founded by very sincere and earnest religionists. They were the result of man's desire to enjoy conditions that are pictured as existing in the New Jerusalem. Very talented men, and at times very wealthy men, have wrestled with the problem presented in the effort to establish a community that shall be "in the world" and yet not "of the world," and they have found it too grave a problem for human wisdom to solve. Sooner or later the world has prevailed and claimed its own.

A study of the methods employed in such communities is of interest to those who believe in any form of communism or even in the results that are sought after by advocates of communism, namely, fraternity, equality, and liberty. Though our scheme of things may differ radically from anything undertaken by any of the fifty or more communities mentioned, and though we may not at all agree with them as to what is meant by the scriptural term "all things common," and perhaps may not concede that such a condition can obtain until Christ shall come, we can with profit study these experiments with the desire to discover the factors that made for success and those that tended to bring disaster.

The causes of failure were many. In some instances there was mismanagement, lack of business ability, unwise investment. Consecrated purpose will never make a bad bargain financially profitable.

Another fruitful cause of failure was inability to hold the younger generation. The enterprise prospered during the active life of the founders, but they could not hold their children, and could not make proselytes, and so when they grew old the community went to pieces, even when there was an accumulation of property and good credit. In some instances, as with the Shakers, celibacy was the rule, which was suicidal, as there was no natural increase.

GEORGE RIPLEY.

Founder of Brook Farm.

Those communities that have tampered with marriage or the home life have especially and urgently invited disaster.

In other instances lack of unity was the rock on which the ship was wrecked. Where unity did not exist wealth could not long hold the enterprise together. Perhaps the most spectacular failure of all was the community at New Harmony, Indiana, financed by Robert Owen, a man of almost unlimited wealth and great personal ability.

Another cause of failure has been inability to find men to succeed pioneer leaders who have held the people together almost solely by their own personality and ability as leaders and thinkers. Where a few leaders do all the thinking a low level of intelligence obtains among the followers; and when the leaders pass away or go astray the masses fall helpless victims to circumstances.

One of the most noted of these coöperative societies was at Brook Farm, near Boston, Massachusetts. This movement was founded in 1841 by Reverend George Ripley, pastor of a Unitarian Church in Boston and member of the Transcendental Club. It attracted many men and women of exceptional ability and world-wide reputation, among them, Charles A. Dana, afterward editor of the New York Sun, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Doctor Codman, and many others, and had the friendship and moral support of Emerson and his following. These men sought to found a society in which justice and equality should prevail. The members sought to occupy on a common plane, making their interests all one, though there was not strict collectivism in property (there was a joint-stock dwelling, instead of separate family homes, and putting all of their eggs into one basket, finally expended all of their capital in building an enormous community dwelling called the "Phalanstery." Evidently they had neither adequate fire protection nor insurance, and this building was burned before it was ready for use, thus bringing upon the community a very severe loss.

Third, though religious people, they were of the literary-religious type, not filled with intense religious fervor, and lacking that strong tie that holds men together who verily believe that they are members of one church, and that the church of God. So they never rallied from their losses, and were soon scattered. After his own failure at New Harmony, Robert Owen declared, "It is impossible to carry out a communistic system, unless in a place utterly removed from the world, or with the help of some powerful religious conviction. Mere benevolence, mere sentiments of philanthropy are far too weak to bind the self-seeking affections of men."

The Brook Farm Community existed for about six years. In 1844 it was reorganized to conform with the ideas of proprietorship, with capital divided into one hundred dollar shares, drawing five per cent interest per annum.)

The most intellectual of the members took part in the most menial of occupations, usually without protest, though Hawthorne disliked such work, and when asked to assist in the dairy, declared that he could not endure being "chamber maid to a cow." Life at Brook Farm was very happy, and the members afterward looked back to their experience as one of great pleasure and profit.

Revenue was derived from the farm and the school, but the society did not prosper financially, and finally failed, evidently for the following reasons:

First, business was not well managed. There were plenty of men of a literary turn of mind, philosophers, poets, journalists, and story writers, but they lacked the necessary admixture of business men and laborers. The organization was not well balanced. It was top heavy. As one of the members said, "There were philosophers enough in it, but the hard-fisted toilers and the brave financiers were absent." The writer is of a literary turn of mind, but has enough saving practical sense to distrust any enterprise undertaken solely by men of his own type.

Second, they committed themselves to the idea of communal Fourierism, was incorporated under state law, and a complicated system of government was adopted. At the same time mechanical industries were established. But none of these things brought financial prosperity or stayed the processes of disintegration.

The Good Health magazine for September of the current year contained an article of more than ordinary interest giving the experiences of Mrs. Rebecca Codman Butterfield, one of the survivors of the community, now living near Boston. She thus describes life at Brook Farm:

"At five o'clock in summer, the rising horn sounded for those belonging to stable groups or engaged in teaming, also for those whose duty it was to prepare the breakfast. I often used to get up early, and go from house to house, giving a peculiar whistle, the signal for certain members of the singing group to make ready to sing under various windows from six until seven. It was soul-inspiring, indeed, to sing Mozart's and Haydn's Masses in the early freshness of the morning air. I shall never forget it!

"At half-past six a second summons came, which meant that breakfast would be ready in half an hour. It was a time of good cheer, the half hour or more spent at table.

"After breakfast men and women all started for the morning's work in class room, in field, in shop, or about the house.

"It must not be forgotten that there were some men whose duty it was to help the women in the parts of their work various subjects, which were attended by grown people as well as the young. The shoemaker often left his work to attend a class in Shakespeare, and one of the tillers of the soil would leave his task to enjoy a reading in Greek. But I never knew anyone to shirk his labor or fall short in the amount expected of him during the week.

"When supper was over, any enjoyment might be indulged in, and there was no rule regarding the hour for retiring, though the house was usually quiet by ten o'clock.

"On entering the grounds, one came immediately to the 'Hive,' where I lived with my parents and my two brothers. The Hive was a large two and a half story wooden building with a long 'ell' attached. The lower floor contained a reception room, the dining room, kitchen, wash room, and shed. There were sleeping rooms on the second floor, and others in the attic. Our family sleeping rooms were at first all on the second floor of the 'ell' of the Hive. But later the place became so crowded that my brothers were obliged to sleep in the attic. The luxury of the attic may be imagined when I tell you that my brothers would often waken in winter to find that a large mound of requiring especial strength (our doctrine of mutual helpfulness rendering it possible to work at anything without injury to our dignity).

"I do not believe that the common tasks of life have ever been done under such charming conditions as existed here. I remember that I once made one of the washing group, of which Mrs. Cheswell was chief. As I have already said, Mrs. Ripley joined regularly in this work, usually termed drudgery, though no work ever seemed so at Brook Farm. Peter Baldwin, our baker, worked the pounding barrel, and there were two or three young men to work the wringers or presses, and do other hard portions of the labor.

"Quotations from Byron and Shakespeare, and from Festus, a recent book (in 1844), made the work which I was doing no task whatever—rather, wholly enjoyable. I honestly think I should have chosen washing as my life work if I could have been certain that I might always do it to the accompaniment of the rhymes of the poets.

"At noon the horn blew half an hour before dinner, to allow plenty of time for those working at a distance to get to the house.

"At breakfast and supper, there were young women waiters, but at dinner young men waited on the table. At one time, Charles Dana was the head of the waiting group, in other words, the head waiter.

"After dinner we worked once more until six o'clock. I forgot to say, however, that there were classes all day in snow had drifted in on top of them. During all our stay at Brook Farm, my parents and I occupied the same two chambers in the 'ell' the windows of which can be seen in the paintings.

"Back of the Hive was the workshop, in which were the shoemaking, woodworking and other workrooms. (About the end of the second year of the Brook Farm community, there were various mechanical industries introduced.) In the illustration, the workshop shows just above the Hive.

"About an eighth of a mile further on, stood the Eyrie, a two story, flat roofed building, built on rocks on the highest land on the place.

"If you will look at the water color of Brook Farm, just below the Eyrie, you will see the ruins of the Phalanstery, which was burned before it was occupied.

"Near the Eyrie and at the left of it, was a small house called the Cottage, the only one of the buildings now remaining, and not far from this was another wooden house, Pilgrim talent given to them. Of course, we had many talented members, who afterward became very well known and even famous. . . .

"At the expiration of seven years, the end came, the reasons being wholly financial. The situation selected for the Farm was beautiful, but poorly suited to an experiment greatly dependent upon agriculture. Then there was no sufficiently large stream near by for water power, and so it was necessary to use steam for mechanical industries. All this demanded capital, and in spite of retrenchments the financial problems were difficult of solution. I think, however, that the majority of us would have continued somehow to remain together had it not been for the accidental burning of the Phalanstery which had been built to accommodate the entire community."

House. The longest distance between the houses was about a quarter of a mile. . . .

"I suppose our amusements will seem very simple, as indeed they were, but the entire life admitted of so much sociability that we did not feel the need for complicated amusements. You know that in many of our members there was, ability both to entertain and instruct. Our musician, John Dwight, afforded us many hours of pleasure, improvising upon the piano. I well remember one young man, unaccustomed to good music, who would sit night after night by the piano, completely spellbound. He used to say that his entire life was influenced by his entrance into a hitherto unknown world. Frequently there were talks or lectures by the members or by some visitor. Often we had dances in the large dining room, and the dancing would begin when the supper dishes had been washed and the room put in readiness, for no special changes in dress were made. Both young and old joined in the dance, and there was plenty of time afterward for good sound sleep, so there were no dull, listless people with aching heads the next morning. Dancing, as carried on there, was innocent, inexpensive, and beneficial to all, and even the ministers joined heartily with us in the amusements, and I remember one occasion when there were four ministers upon the floor. . . . Our festivals held in the pine grove were always occasions of remarkable enjoyment with musical, intellectual and dramatic

IT IS estimated by the secretary of the United States Treasury that about half a million dollars' worth of money is destroyed in our country every year by one means and another. The greenbacks disappear in various odd ways, and a large quantity of them is eaten every year by rats. Sometimes remnants are left by the rodents so that the bills can be redeemed, but often they take the money in its entirety. One specially odd case reported was where a robin, engaged in the laudable enterprise of building a nest, flew into a window and bore away a $10 bill which had been left on a table, using the soft texture for a nest. Enough of the greenback was recovered to warrant its redemption.

PAUL makes clear that the unity of the Spirit, or the unity which is by and of the Spirit, is needful to the strength and peace of the church. Outwardly there may be great diversity. There is certain to be. In the church the humble and the great, the unlearned and the wise, the rich and the poor meet together, but none of these differences have ought to do with their citizenship in the kingdom of God. The bond that holds them together is spiritual.

JERUSALEM, PALESTINE, November 19, 1910.

Editors Herald: After a stay of about seven weeks in England, during which time we visited Plymouth, Bristol, Birmingham, Manchester, Liverpool, and London; also Glasgow, Douglas, and Ayr, Scotland, on October 27 we took train for Marseilles on our way to Jerusalem. We stopped a few days in Paris, and were delighted with the beauties of that city. We visited the art galleries and other places of interest, then continued our journey to Marseilles, where we arrived about eleven o'clock at night, but had little trouble in finding a good hotel, where we put up for the night. We had intended going through Italy, and sailing from Naples, but on account of the cholera, steamers were prevented from stopping at Naples.

Our journey through France was a most delightful one. We had an apartment to ourselves nearly all the way and a good part of our time was spent in singing out of Zion's Praises. The country was beautiful, and the day fine and we enjoyed every moment, so that when we reached our destination, we were not the least tired after our fourteen hours' ride. We only remained in Marseilles two days, then took steamer for Alexandria.

Our voyage on the Mediterranean was very pleasant. The sea was a little rough at the start, but in a few hours it calmed down, and all the rest of the journey it was just beautiful. The weather was cold when we left England, but every day it grew warmer, and as we approached Egypt it was almost like summer. From Marseilles to Alexandria is a five days' trip, but every day was so pleasant we were almost sorry when it came to an end. The day previous to reaching Egypt we passed some interesting points, among which was a volcano, Mount Stromboli, which was smoking, also the city of Messina, now in ruins, the effects of the great earthquake which we read about in the papers last year.

We landed at Alexandria soon after breakfast November 7, and on going up on deck while the steamer was coming into port a wonderful sight met our gaze. Great hordes of orientals were waiting to board our ship and assist in getting the passengers and their baggage ashore. For a few pennies they would load themselves with trunks and satchels. It seemed for a time that they would take the vessel by storm. The guards had to strike some of them to protect the passengers. One Cook's men assisted us and we were soon on board train for Cairo, Egypt. It was necessary for us to go there to get to Port Said, to take steamer for Jaffa, three days later.

We found Cairo a very interesting place, and we put in every moment of our time taking in the sights which we will tell you about later. We visited, among other notable places, the house where Christ was kept in hiding from King Herod; also the place where Moses was hid in his infancy. We took pictures of the Palace. The natives of this place are very dirty, loathsome in many instances. But more of this when we have time to write up our experiences.

We arrived in Jaffa on the morning of the 11th. The morning was delightful and warm and the sea calm. As we neared the shore and our boat came to anchor, another wonderful sight met our gaze. Great hordes of natives put off from shore in row boats to take us ashore, each trying his best to be first. It was a great race. Cook's boat got in first, followed a moment later by the others, and then came the fight for passengers. We were fortunate in forming the acquaintance of a Mr. D. N. Domian, on our way to Jaffa, and for one dollar he took us in his boat, passed our baggage through the custom house without trouble, took us to a hotel where we rested and had a good dinner, while waiting for the train which left about 1.30 for Jerusalem. While at Jaffa we visited the House of Simon, where Peter had his wonderful vision on the housetop. We stood on what is said to be the same housetop.

Our train ride to Jerusalem was very interesting. The journey is only fifty miles, and yet it took us nearly all the afternoon to make it, as the grade up hill nearly all the way is very steep. Jerusalem is truly "on top of the mountains," being two thousand six hundred and seventy feet higher than Jaffa.

We first pass over the plains of Sharon. We pass the site where Samson caught three hundred foxes (Judges 5:4). The first station at which our train stops is Lydda, the site of Lod, which was built fourteen hundred years before Christ. This is where Peter visited the Saints and cured Æneas, who was sick of the palsy (Acts 9). Soon after leaving Lydda we see the site of Gimzo, one of the royal cities of the Philistines, which they took from the Israelites, in the reign of King Ahaz (2 Chronicles 28). We can also see in the distance the Valley of Ajalon, over which Joshua commanded the moon to stand still. The entire journey is filled with historical interest, which we have not time to mention here. Our train continues to climb up, winding around the mountain sides, whose great, high peaks tower hundreds of feet on either side, till we finally cross the Valley Gihon, where Solomon was anointed king. We ride along the west side of Mount Zion, near the tower of David, and our train stops at the station outside the walls. A few minutes' carriage ride brings us to Jaffa Gate, which seems to be the center of the business portion. Jerusalem is built on four hills, and yet the mountains around are higher than the city.

Brother Griffiths had preceded us about a week. He had found the few Saints here, and I found him nicely cared for in the home of Brother and Sister Floyd. I call them brother and sister, for so they have proved themselves to be to us, though not fully identified with us in the Reorganized Church. Brother Floyd was baptized by Elder Adams, and Sister Floyd by Elder Brown. They are with us in spirit, and will doubtless be fully identified with us before long. We are made very welcome at their pleasant home. Brother Floyd has gone with his son to America. We are in hopes that he will return before we have to leave for Australia.

Jerusalem, within the walls, is not what we would call a beautiful city. The streets are narrow and dirty; some are filthy. There are some spots, however, where it is not so bad, but in the main the city is anything but a desirable place to live. But on the outside of the walls it is quite different. Here there are some beautiful structures, and improvements are going on in good shape.

People are coming here from nearly all parts of the world. Many come from Germany. Some say the Gentiles are coming in here more than the Jews. One thing is very evident, many are spending their wealth in improving the place, and I am inclined to believe that before very long the city on the inside of the walls will be cleaned and built up anew. I shall not be able to say much about the city in this letter without making it too long, but will try to tell you more about it in our next.

We have been to the Jordan and baptized four. Brother Griffiths baptized Sister Carr and her eldest son, I baptized Brother Carr and their son Paul. Sister Carr is a sister of Brother Gould, of Independence. We hold preaching meetings in private houses, and have been greatly blessed. We hope to have to visit the Jordan again before we leave. But in order to get this letter off on the next steamer I must close. Our health is excellent, and I am thankful to say we have been blessed in every way. Will write you soon again. Our address is Jerusalem, Palestine, care of Thomas Cook & Son, David street.

Notice to the Priesthood of Lamoni Stake.

The general priesthood meeting of the Lamoni Stake will be held at Lamoni, on December 25, at 2.30 p. m., and the subject for consideration is a continuation of last month's program, "Who has the right to grant stewardships, the Bishop or the 'Order'?" and "In whose name should the title to the property of the stewardship be held, the name of the steward or the name of the 'Order'?"

These are vital questions and should have the careful and prayerful consideration of all. There should be a full attendance at this meeting.

PROGRAM COMMITTEE.

Died.

SANDERS.—Annie Lee, the daughter of Bro. and Sr. Jerome Middleton, and wife of Mr. C. E. Sanders, was born August 19, 1886, died at Fort Collins Hospital, Colorado, October 10, 1910. The remains were brought back to her former home, Edgerton Junction, Missouri, and laid to rest in Mount Zion Cemetery, in the presence of a large number of acquaintances and friends. She was baptized in her ninth year, by Elder William Summerfield. She leaves a husband, one child, father, mother, and three brothers, five sisters; also Grandfather Middleton, and Grandmother Gwyer. All were present; also several uncles and aunts. Services in charge of T. J. Mauzey; sermon by William Lewis.

BABCOCK.—Eliza Elizabeth Wachs was born July 26, 1833, in eastern Pennsylvania. Married to Daniel D. Babcock September 27, 1855, and baptized September 5, 1864, by Elder Nathaniel Finch. Died at Holden, Missouri, November 14, 1910, of acute pneumonia, aged 77 years, 3 months, and 19 days. Funeral in the Saints' church at Holden, sermon by H. E. Moler, services in charge of R. O. Self; interment in the Saints' cemetery. She was a true wife, an affectionate mother, and a Saint of God. She was a diligent worker in the Latter Day Saint Ladies' Aid Society. Of her it may be truly said, "She hath done what she could." Her faithfulness, patience, and humility are worthy of imitation.

CONYERS.—Sr. Priscilla Conyers was born in Kentucky, December 11, 1824; married John Conyers. Twelve children were born to this union; five survive her, her husband having departed ten years ago. They left Nauvoo in 1846, and came to Council Bluffs and later to Harrison and Monona counties. They were among the first to accept the Reorganization. Aunt "Prissy" died October 3, 1910, at the home of her son, J. J. Conyers, with whom she resided, aged nearly 86 years. Funeral sermon by Elder Mark Jensen at the family residence, and she was laid to rest in the Preparation Cemetery.

"The Advance of the Water Wagon."

State-wide prohibition is now the law of nine States, having an aggregate population of over twelve millions. "Local option" applied to communities in other States brings the total number of people living in theoretically "dry" territories to about forty millions. Temperance lectures under official auspices are being delivered in many countries abroad. The latest investigations, conducted independently in Europe and in America, show a remarkable falling off in the average use of alcoholics in medical hospital practice on both sides of the water. These and many other interesting facts will enter into an article called "The advance of the water wagon" in the November Century, in which Henry Smith Williams, M. D., author of "Alcohol," discusses the notable change of sentiment in regard to liquor drinking, and the significance of this lessening use of alcohol.

The Daily Capital until 1912 for $2.00.

The Des Moines Capital can be secured from now until January 1, 1912, for $2. This gives new subscribers the balance of this year free. This is their annual Bargain Period offer. The Capital is published six days a week. It stops when its time is out. It publishes no liquor advertising. It will cover the big events of the year 1911 in a thorough manner. Its market reports are unexcelled for accuracy and detail. Its leadership for the upbuilding of Iowa is beyond price to the people of the State. Good roads, better seed corn and improved conditions on the farms, more interurbans, better schools and colleges, and publicity of Iowa's superior virtues are important efforts. Let us send in your subscription.

Ninety-three Years of Publishing.

The death this week of Joseph Abner Harper recalls the founding of the house of Harper & Brothers. Joseph Abner was the son of Colonel John Harper, one of the four brothers who established the business of Harper & Brothers ninety-three years ago. He entered the house in 1852 under the careful eyes of his father and uncles and continued active in its counsels for over thirty-five years. His chief work was in building up the series of Harper educational books which were in common use a generation ago. With the growth of specializing in the publishing business, this feature of Harper & Brothers' business was transferred to another house, and about that time Joseph Abner Harper retired from active life. It is interesting to note that the publication of educational books, with which he was engaged so long, is now being taken up again by general publishers. Joseph Abner Harper's special qualities of character were fair-mindedness and a marked judicial temperament.

Mr. Farmer

You can get rich raising alfalfa in the Big Horn Basin. If you will go with me on the next excursion I will show you many farms where there is now enough alfalfa in stack, grown this year, to repay the owner the purchase price of the land, and in many cases far more than the original cost of the farm.

EASY MONEY. There is no other farming quite as easy as alfalfa farming. You do not have to "sow and reap" in this case, for each crop; you simply seed the ground to alfalfa once, and then reap three times each year the rest of your life.

YOU CAN HOMESTEAD 40 or 80 acres of this land under the Government Canal, repaying the Government actual cost for water in ten yearly payments without interest. Seed this farm down to alfalfa and stock it with hogs, a few milch cows, and some chickens, and you have an easy living the rest of your life.

A FLASH OF GOSPEL INTELLIGENCE.

The Pittsburg Presbytery, of the Presbyterian Church, at its late session held at Pittsburg, December 13, had a good sized pebble thrown into the even flow of its business affairs, by a resolution introduced by one of its members, the account of which we clipp from the Kansas City Journal of December 14, and give to our readers below.

PRESBYTERY REJECTS IMMERSIONAL BAPTISM.

PITTSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA, December 13.—A movement to substitute immersional baptism for the sprinkling method in Presbyterian churches was approved by a committee of the Pittsburg Presbytery to-day, but after a heated discussion was rejected.

The Rev. Dr. D. S. Schaff of the Western Theological Seminary reported the recommendation that the words "sprinkling and pouring" be stricken from the book of discipline and the word "baptize" substituted.

The Rev. W. L. McEwan, pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, cautioned against hurried action. The Rev. John Royal Harris, of the Shady Avenue Church, said: "I would not immerse in the name of the Trinity, and I would leave the church first."

The Rev. C. S. George suggested that those who desired the radical change should be sent over to the Baptist Church. Others pointed out the expense of installing baptismal pools in the churches. The change finally was defeated by a large majority.

Whether this resolution was intended as a genuine effort on the part of the persons introducing it to bring about a reform in the old-time declaration of faith of the Presbyterian Church, or was a sort of challenge to the supposed conservative element of the church to reassert its fidelity to old-time declarations we upon the outside may never know; but the peculiar vehemence of one of the speakers against the resolution, that he would leave the church before he would baptize in the names of the Trinity, and the final result of the vote conclusively that the Presbyterian Church is not yet prepared for the change that must come when every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess to the glory of God. We commend the courage of the men who introduced the resolution. It is entitled to a better fate than so inglorious a defeat. It is a straw, however, that shows that Reverend Jasper, colored preacher, was right when he said, "The world do move."

AN APPEAL FROM BISHOP EVANS.

This is the seventh winter that Bishop R. C. Evans has conducted special meetings in the great halls of the city of Toronto, and still the street cars stop at the Princess Theater doors to accommodate those attending those meetings, that seem to be growing—ever growing in interest.

We have been trying for some years to have some of the papers of this city publish the sermons of Brother Evans, but with the exception of a few "write ups" they refuse to print a line without the cash. We have written the editors and called upon them. Some have promised and failed, and others have not even promised.

Last Friday Brother Law called at the home of Brother Evans and suggested that he visit the editor of the Toronto Sunday World, the greatest Sunday paper in Canada. Brother Evans thought that Brother Law could accomplish more with the brilliant editor than he could, being a stranger. Brother Law went direct to the editor, and soon the telephone called Brother Evans to the editor's room. He went and the result is as follows;

"The illustrated Sunday World will have our Sunday night sermons reported every week in the year if we will agree to furnish five hundred subscribers to the Sunday World for one year at two dollars and fifty cents in advance."

Brother Evans at once agreed, and he here and now commences a work that he thinks will excel all his former efforts to reach the people. Just think about it a minute, and then sit down at once and send him your full address, plainly written, and inclose two dollars and fifty cents, then R. C. and the World will do the rest.

We are informed that the Sunday World has a circulation of over forty thousand in the city, and besides this it goes to every village, town, and city in the Dominion. Perhaps five hundred thousand people will read fifty-two of Bishop Evans' sermons in the next year if you will act now and send him the two dollars and fifty cents.

Just think, not five cents a week; not one cent a day to have hundreds of thousands read the gospel story as told by Bishop Evans.

If you can not read, if you are blind, if you think Brother Evans can not tell you anything but that which you already know, just sign for the paper and send it to the old home. Your father or mother may read it. Send it to some one who can not afford to pay for it or has no interest in the latter day glory. Send it to a friend. Yes, and it would be one of the best things you could do for even your enemy. Just send him the sermons; it may convert him to the truth. Now, if need be, sacrifice most anything and send the money at once. Don't wait an hour; send it at once, and have a copy sent to your city reading room. Everyone may read this great illustrated Sunday paper. The authorities of every reading room in the world will give this paper space on their files, while our church papers would not be permitted to remain on the table in many reading rooms one hour.

Now, do you love the latter day glory? If so, how much? Here is your opportunity to open the way to have hundreds of thousands hear the gospel; so if you love it, just less than one cent a day, prove it by sending the money at once to R. C. Evans, 35 Huron street, Toronto, Canada.

Your co-laborer with Christ,
R. C.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

We are pleased to note the success of Frank Jones, a Lamoni boy, son of Bro. and Sr. Daniel Jones. This year he was leader of the Iowa University debating team which met the Wisconsin team. The Iowa boys scored a signal victory. Last year Frank was a member of the Iowa team which defeated Nebraska. He is taking law and was formerly a student in Graceland College.

The Kansas City Post, December 18, has this to say about Elder John W. Rushton: "John W. Rushton, one of the Twelve Apostles of the Latter Day Saints' Church, recently arrived from London, England, is holding a protracted meeting in Independence. His evangelistic themes: "Ecclesiastical authority," "Authenticity of the Book of Mormon" and "Purpose of the Kingdom of God" are replete with references to modern situations, especially the suffragette movement in England. The Reverend Rushton knows Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst, Lady Lytton, Lady Granard, Lady Somerset, Beatrice Harraden, Mrs. Isaac Zangwill, and others distinguished in the cause."

The same number of the Kansas City Post that we have mentioned in connection with Brother Rushton contained the following item regarding Sister Horton, our correspondent from Independence:

"Mrs. Abby Wingate-Horton celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday in Independence last week. She was born on Bunker Hill, Charleston, Massachusetts, and was five years old when the famous monument was dedicated in 1843. For a quarter of a century she has sung alto in the choir of the Latter Day Saints' church at Independence."

The HERALD editors desire to secure a copy of Hesperis, the book of poems by David H. Smith. These poems are to be republished, and the book is needed to use in the work of reprinting. Will be pleased to hear from anyone having a copy to sell or exchange for other church books or periodicals. Address the editors.

Elder M. A. McConley, of the Hawaiian Mission, has an excellent article in the Sunday Advertiser, Honolulu, of recent date, setting forth the differences between the Utah church and the Reorganization.

Pres. Joseph Smith would like to get copies of tracts published by Dr. Wyl during anti-Mormon agitation early in the eighties. Address 1214 West Short street, Independence, Missouri.

For some time efforts have been made to establish the Archæological Institute of America in Independence, as an adjunct of the Kansas City society of the institute. This has finally been accomplished, and the Independence local starts out with an initial membership of fifteen, but that number will very likely be increased soon. The members in Independence will be enrolled for the present at least in the Kansas City society, but special lectures will be given before the local society, the first of which will be given in the Stone Church, West Electric street, Monday evening, November 28, by Doctor Hewett, head of the American School of Archæology at Santa Fe. His subject will be, "Ancient Cities of Central America."

Admission to these lectures is by invitation, any who desire to attend may receive invitation by applying to any of the local members. Invitation cards will also be found at the Jackson County Bank after Wednesday. It is desired to give Doctor Hewett a large audience, as he is America's leading American Archæologist, and is master of his subject. His lecture will be illustrated by lantern views from his own camera.

Names of Independence members:

E. L. Kelley, B. Zick, John R. Haldeman, F. M. Smith, C. O. Leeka, John Lloyd, Mrs. J. G. Pointer, Mrs. Doar Glines, W. A. Bushnell, Frank Rudd, Alva Christiansen, C. N. Craig, C. A. Resch, James M. Kelley, J. L. Gray.—Jackson Examiner.

(Doctor Hewett's lecture on Monday evening was listened to by a large audience).

"A godly fatherhood is the best exposition of the fatherhood of God."

Reunion of the Smith Family.

The family of Joseph Smith the Martyr held its annual meeting at the home of Elbert A. Smith, on the evening of December 23, 1910. This was the one hundred and fifth anniversary of the birth of Joseph Smith. Pres. Joseph Smith and Elder F. A. Smith were re-elected associate presidents of the family association. The association now has one hundred and two members, resident in Australia and America. Forty were present at the annual meeting.

CONSECRATION AND SURPLUS PROPERTIES.

BY E. L. KELLEY, PRESIDING BISHOP.

CHAPTER 5.

There has been in general, unity of sentiment in the church and by its officers as to what the law is upon this subject. The prime question confronting us is, have we the faith to move out and conform?

Historically, the first step taken in the Reorganized Church looking to a general administration of the law of special consecrations, or surplus properties, was in the presentation of the same by the Bishopric, December 23, 1901, in a special address entitled Duties, Responsibilities, and Faith of the Saints.

At the General Conference following the paper was taken up and discussed by a number of the quorums, and the positions duly and critically examined, as was proper to do, and finally reference had to the joint council of the Presidency, the Twelve, and the Bishopric.

This council reported and the report was printed in tract form and circulated under the title of An Address to the Saints, and subsequently the same was taken up by the quorums and also by the General Conference and adopted by a nearly unanimous vote.

If there is any specific part of the law of Christ where action has been had where there has been more complete unity of decision, I do not remember what it is. Bro. E. A. Blakeslee's signature was not attached to the first publication because his copy had not been returned at the time, but he joined in the same. It reflected the law then upon the matter treated and does so to-day. Following is the article:

"DUTIES, RESPONSIBILITIES, AND FAITH OF THE SAINTS.

"As we shall soon reach the closing of another year, it will be well to look back over the immediate past and review the work done, comparing the same critically with the written word, so as to determine whether the law of Christ has indeed been fulfilled in our work, or whether we have come short. Forty years ago attention by divine commandment was called to the necessity of 'fulfilling' the law relating to temporal matters. (Doctrine and Covenants, section 114, paragraph 1.) And it will require but little reflection on the part of anyone in order to know that so long as the law of Christ, or any part of it, remains unfulfilled, as a people we are lacking, not having performed the duties required of us.

"As children and followers of the Holy One, who became such because he was obedient in all things, we can not in any sense afford to fail in keeping the least of the commandments which he has given us. The church was advised as early as 1834 of the necessity of obedience to all the laws of God, and instruction plainly given, that 'Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I can not receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer.'—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2.

"It is not our object in this review to judge any brother or sister as to their standing, or worthiness or unworthiness, under the law. Each is to do that for himself. But it will be expected of us to point out, in so far as we are able, in much plainness, the requirements under the law, that all may have a quickened sense of duty and a clearer conception, if possible, of the law relating to the unrighteous mammon, or riches of this world, as illustrated by Jesus in the parable of the unjust steward.

"The Master taught plainly the results and consequences of both the performance and the nonperformance of duty in these things, not leaving the task to those who might err. He said: 'He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much. If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?'—Luke 16: 10-12.

"The things which we now have are not our own, but God's. Christ has wrought out for us a rich inheritance which is to be given as our 'own,' if we shall prove ourselves faithful. Each then should awake and examine himself faithfully, as the Lord shall judge in faithfulness by and by.

"Seventy years are now accomplished since the instruction was given: 'Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming) for after to-day cometh the burning; this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, To-morrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of hosts; and I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon.'—Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5.

"This harmonizes so wonderfully with the testimony given, by the inspired Psalmist, and of which he states, 'The mighty God, even the Lord, hath spoken,' that no doubt need arise as to the divine touch of the revelation. 'Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined. Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.'—Psalm 50:2-5.

"The establishment of Zion, the coming of the Lord, the terrible burning, the testimonies of heaven and of earth, and the gathering of the saints who have made a covenant by sacrifice, are all here set forth in majesty and power. Surely no faithful Saint can ever hesitate to perform his duty because it will be a sacrifice to do so, after studying this language.

"In the ministration of the law of Zion touching temporalities, as with the law relating to spiritual things, there is a proper order, and each step is taken as men and women are in condition to make the same. Faith in God is not had without hearing the word of God. There can be no true baptism without faith and repentance. But after the condition of hearing the word, faith is possible; and under the conditions of both faith and repentance, baptism may be administered; all these having been performed, another new and extended step, the laying on of hands, is provided for under the law. Should a person demand the ministration of the laying on of hands as a first step he would never gain the position of practical advancement in divine things.

"This principle is equally true in the administration of that which relates to temporal matters. Had the church, when under the form of branch and district government only, demanded the administration of the law that is made applicable in Zion and her stakes, failure and confusion must certainly have ensued. The distinctive line outlining the conditions was clearly drawn in the revealed law, so that no mistake need be made in a proper administration. The instruction is given: 'It is not expedient in me that there shall be any stakes appointed until I command my people. When it shall be necessary I will command that they be established.'—Doctrine and Covenants 117:11. If there was no necessity for a stake there was no necessity for the administration of a section of the law that was made applicable under the condition of a stake; and the work of gathering tithes and offerings would be carried on, as in the case of the preaching of the gospel by John, preparing a people for more perfect things, if they should not reject the counsel of God by refusing to obey what they could obey.

"We are called upon to occupy ground as we advance, not before. It was necessary for Israel to cross the Jordan before attempting to apply certain laws and usages to Canaan; and we have our Jordan before us and the wilderness about us in a spiritual sense, and are required to work accordingly. These conditions were foreseen and pointed out in the revelations, hence some features found in the law: 'Let Zion and her law, be executed and fulfilled, after her redemption.' This is not to be interpreted to mean that we shall wait until the redemption has been completed before any part of the law is applicable and binding, but as a step is made in the work of redemption, so the Saints must occupy accordingly and fulfill the law relating to such new condition.

"Following the order of development and growth intimated in the law, on the 15th of April, 1901, the following instruction was received and subsequently accepted and acted upon by the church: "My people are directed to establish two stakes; one at Independence, one at Lamoni, Iowa, organizing them after the pattern which is found in the law.'—Doctrine and Covenants 125:10. Authoritatively, then, we pass in part at least from the governmental forms of branches and districts to that of stakes, and by this step take upon ourselves all the responsibilities and duties incident to the new relation, and are entitled to all the privileges and blessings promised for the new order, providing we are faithful in carrying out the laws revealed for the government of the same.

"Under these advanced conditions none ought to be surprised that greater sacrifices are expected, and that a fuller consecration of our powers, affections, and interests are required to the service of God by the people than before. When a stake had been appointed and the Saints were gathering to Far West in 1838, special petition was made of the Lord to know what was required of the people: they prayed: 'O Lord, show unto thy servants how much thou requirest of the properties of thy children for a tithing.' There could have been little or no question as to what was a proper tithe under the law as applicable to the church in a scattered condition at the time, for numerous instances of precept and example are contained in the Scriptures setting forth the rule and practice. The people at this time, however, seem to have been apprehensive that the special work they had undertaken would require special diligence and sacrifice on their part, and they seem to have done that which was eminently proper under such circumstances,—appealed to the Lord for instruction and received the following: 'Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to be put into the hands of the bishop of my church of Zion, for the building of mine house, and for the laying the foundation of Zion, and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the presidency of my church; and this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them for ever, for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord.'—Doctrine and Covenants 106:1.

"The law is not local in the sense that it was for these people alone, however; for the second paragraph, like the promise of Peter on Pentecost Day, extends the application, as follows: 'Verily I say unto you, It shall come to pass that all those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you. And this shall be an ensample unto all the stakes of Zion. Even so. Amen.' This instruction more fully revealed the law applicable under the conditions named. Nearly seven years before, the Lord spoke of the work of sacrifice and gathering as follows: 'And now I give unto you further directions concerning this land. It is wisdom in me that my servant Martin Harris should be an example unto the church, in laying his moneys before the bishop of the church. And, also, this is a law unto every man that cometh unto this land, to receive an inheritance, and he shall do with his moneys accordingly as the law directs.'—Doctrine and Covenants 58: 7.

"The example here presents also another feature of importance to the Saints—that of inheritances. And the important instruction, 'concerning the residue of the elders,' as set out in the ninth paragraph, should not be overlooked. Considering the general sentiment known to have been held to by the people at the time, the statement becomes a wonderful prophecy, now literally fulfilled, showing that time would be required to accomplish the work and the necessity of carrying the gospel message to all people. It reads: 'And now, verily I say, concerning the residue of the elders of my church, The time has not yet come, for many years, for them to receive their inheritance in this land, except they desire it through the prayer of faith, only as it shall be appointed unto them of the Lord. For, behold, they shall push the people together from the ends of the earth.' No place is found, it seems, for either elder or layman in the gathering without proper sacrifice and the exercise of supreme faith in God; nor should anything less be expected. Men and women in order to inherit heavenly things should show by their obedience and fidelity to the principles belonging thereto that they are worthy. It may require great sacrifice on their part to attain it. It may demand the manifestation of great courage and faith, or all of these; but it is certain that attainment is only had under these conditions. Jesus said to his disciples: 'Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. This he spake unto his disciples, saying, Sell that ye have and give alms; provide not for yourselves bags which wax old, but rather provide a treasure in the heavens, that faileth not.'—Luke 12: 35, 36, I. T.

"To have required less of the Saints in 1838 than was asked in the first century would have been unlike God.

"It is stated in section 42: 8: 'If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose.' This applies to all the church, and in effect is much the same as surplus, as stated in section 106. In laying the foundation of Zion, lands have to be purchased, and storehouses established, and all kinds of industries set in operation as fast as possible, that there may be places for the Saints to live, something for them to do, and their necessities supplied; but this will take time. In order to have means to operate with, it will be necessary for all who can to turn over their surplus, or now make a first consecration, according to their circumstances and ability, that there may be means to establish storehouses, buy lands, and make the necessary preparation for the complete consecration of the residue as stated in paragraph 10, section 42: 'And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue, to be consecrated unto the bishop, it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants.'

"To reach this final condition and to make our work a success, this law must be fulfilled, that all things may be prepared, and nothing done in haste. When the Saints began to gather to the land of Zion in 1831, they were requested by revelation in Ohio to give of their means to buy land in Zion; all the churches being called upon to do the same. 'And let all the moneys which can be spared, it mattereth not unto me whether it be little or much, be sent up unto the land of Zion, unto them whom I have appointed to receive.'—Doctrine and Covenants 63: 10.

"This seems to be the Lord's way to establish Zion, and all should gladly labor with him to accomplish the work intrusted to the church. The apostle says: 'For we are laborers together with God; ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building.'—1 Corinthians 3: 9. Then we must work according to his direction and pattern, else we toil in vain. With the law demanding the surplus let us comply, and all everywhere make a first consecration as a beginning at least; and when there is sufficient in the treasury, those in charge will move forward with their part of the work as fast as deemed wise, or as the Lord shall direct. We do not want the cries of the worthy poor to ascend to God in vain, and we must do the Lord's work in this way. Both propositions must be met.

"In the fiftieth Psalm the Lord says, 'The world is mine and the fullness thereof.' We then, are only stewards under God. This is in harmony with what he says in section 101: 10: 'Behold, all these properties are mine, or else your faith is vain, and ye are found hypocrites, and the covenants which ye have made unto me are broken; and if the properties are mine then ye are stewards, otherwise ye are no stewards.

"The full time having arrived under God's order and blessing, the Bishopric calls upon the Saints everywhere to yield full and complete obedience to every mandate of the law, with a free heart, willingly, and as the Lord has blessed every one, whether with much or little, and all to be used for the purpose designated in the revelations.

"The presiding Bishop, therefore, will administer this law, take the testimonies and receive surplus properties and special consecrations of the Saints in every place according to the provisions of the law concerning the same. And the bishops in the Stakes of Zion will proceed to administer the law of the Lord touching surplus properties and consecrations in connection with tithes and offerings in their respective stakes according to the rules and regulations furnished by the Bishop of the church, that there may be harmony and equality in the administration of the law among the people, making due report of the same to the presiding Bishop.

"Bishops in districts, and Bishop's agents, will also carry out these provisions so far as the same are applicable, under the instruction and advice of the Bishop and his counselors. Thus the church will work unitedly for the building up and establishing of Zion, and her interests, according as the Lord has designated concerning stakes, and of churches outside as provided by section 58: 10, 11; 63: 8, 13.

"Carrying into effect these provisions will not in any manner interfere with the contributions in the way of special offerings made for college purposes. The law directs the application of the funds herein called for, and every cent of it is needed for the purposes named. The law is also definite touching the duty of the Saints to the college, and this duty should be discharged by every member, for none should neglect to heed the voice of the Master touching it, and fulfill the obligation. All unpaid subscriptions to the college should be forwarded as soon as possible, so they may be applied and the debt canceled.

"It may be said that the Bishopric is making a good many calls for money for church purposes, all of which is frankly conceded. But we ask in reply, is it not necessary to do this if the work is kept advancing toward the accomplishment of the things spoken of in the law? It is also a truth that must not be overlooked, if we would judge aright in these matters, that notwithstanding the fact that there are many calls for help for first one special necessary church work, and then another, the Saints who have sacrificed and helped in all of these things are better prepared to comply with the last call made than they were the first. It is said that 'giving does not impoverish the Lord.' True; and it may also be truly said that giving, for the benefit of the Lord's work, does not impoverish his children. This is one of the fruits of righteousness to be shown forth in the lives of God's children. Men and women glorify God by giving of their means as they may also in other work, hence, the law of giving. The apostle says: 'Let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.' Again, 'Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver.' Jesus said: 'Every branch in me that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.' This is true of the one who 'honors God with his substance' as in anything else. And instead of saying to the members who have done a good work in anything, It is enough, you need not do anything further, the promise is that the Lord will help them, that they 'may bring forth more fruit.' We trust, then, that we shall never be called upon to meet the excuse that a person has already done something, therefore, should not be called upon again. We are called upon to give as we are able, not more than we are able to give, and the motto and prayer of every member, of every elder in the field, of every general and local officer in the church should be, Lord, help me that I may be able to do more, rather than relieve me from helping further.

"We are engaged in the most important work known to man. Do we think it will be accomplished without extraordinary faith, courage, and sacrifice? Let us not deceive ourselves, and let every man and woman make choice of what they will do. Remember the exhortation of the Lord to Joshua: 'Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.'—Joshua 1: 9.

"Trusting fully in the promises of the Lord to his Saints, and that his work will be fully accomplished in his own due time, we are,

THE FATHERHOOD OF TO-DAY AND THE MANHOOD OF TO-MORROW.

A few years ago a lad I knew pretty well went out of one of the homes of this State to take a course of training in a normal school. He was then just turned seventeen, and you might look a long time and not find a more bright, active young fellow. He did well in his studies—that you might have expected; but the thing that interested me was, that when Friday night came, that boy hurried to slip his books into a satchel, board the train, and make tracks for home. After he reached the nearest railway station there were ten long miles of hilly road yet to be traveled, but it was nothing to him, for he had his wheel and it seemed only a small job, for at the other end of the trip was home, and he “wanted to help father about digging the potatoes.”

This home coming was kept up all through the four or five years of work at the normal. Home kept its place in the warm heart of the boy. When vacation came and there was a let up in the school work, home he hastened and gave the best help he could to father and the farm work.

Another thing that was worth while was this: twice a week all through the course, a letter came from the boy telling all about the work, how he was getting on and all the thousand and one things that interest such a wide-awake lad as this. And you may set it down that when a young man lays aside everything twice a week and takes the time to write home, there is a warm place for somebody at the other end of the line. Sometimes we try to figure it out why there should be such a close bond between the boy and home. We think of many things; there may be brothers and sisters; quite likely there is a good kind mother. Not always do we give the father credit for being the magnet that draws the young life home. In the case I have been thinking about, however, this was so. Not alone the farm home, dear though that was; no: the brother left behind; not alone the good mother; the father also held a place in the heart of this impulsive lad that made it easy for him to leave every school attraction and fly away homeward the moment the bell rang on Friday afternoon for the last time.

Can it be doubted that a fatherhood so strong, so winning, so all-persuasive as that would have a mighty influence on the life of a young man? If we could have gone back through the years that lay before the boy went away to school, no doubt we would have discovered the secret of this impelling force homeward. Beyond question we would have learned that between father and son there had always been the warmest kind of a link binding heart to heart. Unquestionably we would have brought to light the fact that never a day had gone by without some little heart to heart talk, binding the boy more and more closely to his father, until at last the tie became a veritable chain of steel. What could break such a bond? Does it seem as if anything short of death itself could do it?

Standing in the presence of a love like this, let us ask whether or not it is easy to find many such cases in our

The article is resubmitted in the confidence that upon the question of consecrations it just now turns in the light needed, and which all may well walk by and do much good. It was upon questions raised in the examination of this article and another which will appear in this series, that brought out the instruction touching “the gathering,” the “work of the bishopric in regard to the law of tithing and consecrations,” in the important instruction to the church April 18, 1902, as follows: “In regard to the gathering and the work of the bishopric in regard to the law of tithing and consecration, I made inquiry what should be the attitude of the church in regard thereto. To this question I was answered, that the Book of Doctrine and Covenants as accepted by the church was to guide the advice and action of the bishopric, taken as a whole, each revelation contained therein having its appropriate bearing upon each of the others and their relation thereto; and unless the liberties of the people of the church should be in jeopardy, the application of the law as stated by the bishopric should be acceded to. In case there should be a flagrant disregard of the rights of the people, the quorums of the church in joint council should be appealed to, and their action and determination should govern. I inquired what quorums of the church were meant, and I was answered, the three quorums the decisions of which are provided for in the law—the presidency, the twelve, and the seventy.”—Doctrine and Covenants 126: 10.

Few more important questions to the church and people than these were ever settled. But the manner and force of the declaration bears with it the divine stamp. In the administration of a law there must be committed authority and order, as well as the rights of the people safeguarded and preserved. Every demand is met in the instruction, and the Saints are privileged to move forward and manifest their faith in God, not man.

As in all instances, however, where the divine decree marks the way, responsibility attaches here, and the Saints must not underestimate or overlook the importance of discharging the duties enjoined. Let us rise to the supreme occasion of making the Lord's work first, in our respective efforts to push forward in life's warfare, for this should be first, and thus stand where we have the commendation of heaven, whatever shall occur. The special charge of the Master to the stewards in the time of the apostles was, “Occupy till I come.”—Luke 19: 13. Shall we not also be reminded of duty and occupy in our respective places? help his cause and be one with the workers in his household? The wise will move forward and “be ready in every good work,” and may everyone be found thus wise, faithful in his place on the Lord's side.

day and age of the world. Just put on your thinking cap now, and tell us how many fathers you know of that have such a hold on their boys. It would be interesting to know what answer would be made to that question. Perhaps for our own peace of mind and in the interest of the optimism we all so mightily long for, it is well that we can only speculate on what the answer might be. It would be better for the world if in every home a love so strong and a confidence so abiding might exist. God give us homes where the fathers are worthy to be loved and trusted by the boys and girls!

It is not an uncommon thing to hear in these days that we are losing our homes; that there is no longer in fact, a home in America. The fathers, so we are told, have substituted the club and the society for the home circle. Business claims the daytime, and fraternity, the strange fraternity that creeps into the life and wins away from the fathers the place the boys and girls ought to have, steals the nights. The mothers, these critics of American home life tell us, are so busy with their social cares that they do not have time to make friends with those who should hold the nearest and dearest place in their hearts. The boys and girls of Africa are more upon their hearts than are the little ones around their own firesides. So the lads and lasses seek the street, the school society, or the many questionable resorts that beckon so loudly for them.

Let us pass all these things by unnoticed for the moment. You and I know whether or not they are really so. Do not our own hearts condemn us sometimes when we look into them and then on into the great future lying ahead? "What," we can not help asking, "what will be the to-morrow of the American home?" Big as this problem looms before us, grave as may be the prophecies of the days to come, as they are portrayed by the Isaiahs of the present, there is still a brave hope in our hearts that it is not all strictly true; that there are still millions of homes in this country of ours that are worthy the name. That we are not growing to be a race of sojourners in tents, looking for something to take the place of home, but that our hearts are even now turning with a great yearning toward home as a place which nothing can crowd out. It may be a fact, as we are so often told, that the best and purest home life is to be found to-day away out in the country. That the quiet of the farm and its isolation from the multitude of attractions which lie in wait for us all in the city do tend to foster the real home life may not be disputed. Blessings on the farm home. It always has been a tower of strength for the nation. May it never be any the less so! But it has been my privilege to know something of the home life of many, both in city and in town, and I feel sure that there is not a city so great that it has not its thousands of good homes, where father and mother are loved and respected, and out of which there goes a sacred influence for good which will temper every wind that sweeps over our national life.

It is not my purpose to speak now of the ideal fatherhood. Rather let me say a word about the American fatherhood of the present day, the fatherhood which is now actually one of the bulwarks of our greatness as a nation. The fatherhood of America to-day that is worthy to be given the name, is a fatherhood which has something better in view than the building of a place to stay all night or the adding of a few more boys and girls to the census list. It is a fatherhood that looks beyond the present hour and sees the manhood of to-morrow. It recognizes the fact that it is only a handbreadth from the now to the by-and-by, and that the boys and girls who sit about our tables to-night will in the morning be out yonder doing the world's work. It sees that somehow these young people must be firmly grounded in principles of right. Clear views of the sublimity of life must be impressed upon the hearts of the dear ones. There is a demand for accurate knowledge of all business principles, but these are not to be the highest aim in life. Our boys and girls need to know that the poorest thing in all the world and the most dangerous thing, is the dollar that has not honesty and integrity for its wings. The true fatherhood of our times knows this and is concerned that the young shall understand it too. . . . Men who have little ones at home are not as apt to commit wrong as are those whose lives are not thus sanctified. . . .

Not in many generations has there been a more decided movement in the interest of clean living in civic and national affairs. No more cheering aspect of American life has been witnessed in this generation than this striving after purity in the political and business affairs of the nation. Just what this will lead to no man can foresee. Surely it must result in a great awakening everywhere and a consequent wholesome effect upon the hearts and the lives of the young of our day. It always pays to clean house. No matter how well regulated may be the conduct of affairs in the home, in the course of time there will be corners which should be swept and doors behind which the broom may well be called into play. It is helpful to the boys and girls to see this going on and to know that father has a hand in it. . . .

Never before have so many men been banded together in good causes as now. Take it in the field of Bible study. It is not so very long ago that it was thought a thing to be ashamed of that a grown man should have his name on the rolls of the Sunday school. The Sunday school might be well enough for the boys and girls; men had nothing to do with it. . . . It is growing mightily everywhere and is becoming a power for good all over the country. In some of the cities of this country this body of men has taken hold of civic reforms with a will that has wrought splendid results. Still greater things will surely come from this body of organized men in the future. Other bodies of men organized for the improvement of society may be found all over the country. In their influence upon the manhood of to-morrow these must be a leavening force of no slight power.

The fatherhood of our country is also making itself felt in legislation for the good of the child. In almost every State laws are being enacted to safeguard the boy and girl of tender age. No discount can be placed upon this drift toward the betterment of the citizenship of coming years. Anything which helps to give childhood a chance to make the very best possible for itself is a blessing.

Have we, then, reached an ideal condition of things in any of these particulars? Ideals are difficult of attainment. Sometimes this is discouragingly true; and yet, is it not better to try to measure up to fine things than to be satisfied with talking about them? It may be we never will see an ideal fatherhood in this country. But if we have a high standard and work faithfully toward it, that is a thousand times better than to sit down and say, "It is impossible! We would like to be brave and true, but we know we would fail if we attempted it!"

In all these things the best way to reach up to the highest possible fatherhood is to keep just as close as we can to the child. Strange, is it not, that if we would be kind and tender and loving and true we must find our examples in the little one nestling in our bosom! Wonderful that when we seek purity of heart, gentleness of life, and sweetness of soul, we must look deep into the fountain of childhood! And yet, when we do this, what are we doing but following the example of the best and wisest and the tenderest Man that ever lived? Was it not he who said, "Except ye turn and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven"?

Questions on January Reading.

Of what advantage is the frequent home coming to the boy away from home? What is the gain to parent and boy of the frequent exchange of letters? What are more frequently the attractions when a boy has love for his home? Can anything fully compensate for the lack of the strong tie between father and son? When should this bond be established? What must be started in infancy and pursued through the following years in order to hold father and son together? What place should the care of children be given in comparison with other worthy objects in life? Do we recognize danger for the home in the present conditions of the world? What encouragement do we see? In the short time allotted parents to prepare their sons and daughters for future work, what views of life should be impressed upon them? What should be the highest aim in life? What other things are also necessary? What is one of the greatest dangers? What safeguard are children to fathers? In what progressive movements should the father have a hand? What effect will this have upon the children? What is the benefit of having high ideals? What is the result of keeping close to the child?

Request for Prayer.

Dear Editor of the Home Column: My mother, Sister Quigley, is suffering from cancer. I never give up hope of her healing, however, because of our reason for faith in God. We are using remedies, but I do not think anything sufficient to heal without God's blessing or power added. I thought of the sisters' Prayer Union or Daughters of Zion, but did not decide to send in a request for prayer until after a sister suggested it to me. I then saw that it was a matter of faith just to ask their prayers, and I could see why the prayers of many would be more effective than the prayers of one, when the circumstances were such that the many could know so as to add their faith and appeal. It seems to me it is because of its effect on us, God's people. He wants us to be bound together in love and works. He wants the development in each of us that can come only through realizing we are our brother's keeper.

So, feeling this bond of love which prompts the sisters to meet and pray for all the great family of our Father, I send in a request for special prayer for my mother in your meetings and in your homes. Mother and I are the only members of our family who are in the church. I send the request with great faith, and rest in the thought that in many different parts of the world prayers will be offered for mother from the hearts of other mothers and children of the one Father, and his ears will be open to all. Mother's vitality is low now, but I know that is no obstacle to God, nor is anything hard for him to do for us. With love.

News From Missions

JERUSALEM, PALESTINE.

My last communication was written at Cairo. Took departure from there to Port Said, taking four hours and a half by train to make the journey. The landscape is somewhat interesting, the wide expanse of the flat country of the Nile delta, with its green meadows and fields, and oriental villages, with the low, mud houses, within very filthy, and the people dirty and poorly clad. I looked into several of the huts, which were minus furniture or cooking utensils. They sleep on the floor, huddled together like pigs, in their rags. These are some of the pitiful sights which the tourist has to gaze upon. I was wondering how long such conditions can continue. Surely these unfortunate creatures are just as much in bondage and slavery as the children of Israel were during their captivity, if not in a worse state, considering the advancement and boast of our Christian progress and civilization. One of the peculiarities of these people is the fact that wherever you meet them the old and young alike reach out their hands and beg for backsheesh, that is, money; and strange to say, some are amply able to provide for themselves.

The roads are in fairly good condition, which are traversed by camels, donkeys, men and women, and children loaded down with heavy burdens. My heart went out with sympathy for them many times. After the numerous sad and horrid sights that I have seen among these people, I can truly realize and sympathize with the children of Israel as never before, and do not wonder at Moses when his wrath overcame him, when he accidentally slew one of the oppressors of his brethren. The conditions referred to above were experienced in the same country where Moses lived for forty years. Throughout the delta country, cotton, corn, clover, and other grains, vegetables, etc., thrive luxuriantly; also palms, dates, figs, oranges, lemons, olives, peaches, etc., etc., are to be seen in great abundance on both sides of their railways.

As we proceed on the journey we strike the Dreary Desert and for two hours and a half suffered from the sand, dust, and intense heat, which made the passengers feel most uncomfortable, until we reached the Suez Canal on one side and Lake Menzaleh on the other—the change from the desert to this district was delightful. The canal is sixty to one hundred meters wide, and one hundred kilometers long. It connects Cairo, Ismaillia, and Port Said with the Red Sea, and was a most unique sight to see one of those magnificent steamers crossing the desert, and seems to all observers a most miraculous feat to accomplish such work. Without doubt the minds of men that designed such gigantic plans were and are inspired by the spirit of the Great Architect, God.

Arriving at Port Said I was taken in carriage by Cook's men to the steamer Equator, of French Line, sailing for Jaffa. The country around Port Said is very flat and the town is small in comparison with Alexandria and Cairo, and owes its existence to the Suez Canal. Reached Jaffa (Joppa) early on the morning of the 5th inst., in a fog, and miraculously escaped being wrecked on the rocks close to the town. Had the steamer gone a few yards further she would have stranded on the rocks. The officers were greatly surprised at the situation when the fog arose. We were taken to shore in small boats.

Jaffa is one of the oldest cities in the world, and was the port for Jerusalem in the days of King David. The cedar and fir wood cut in Mount Lebanon and used in King Solomon's Temple was sent in floats to Jaffa (Joppa). (1 Kings 5: 8-10; 2 Chronicles 2: 11-16.) Here Jonah embarked for Tarshish (Jonah 1: 3), Peter raised Tabitha from the dead (Acts 9: 36-43), and he also had a vision of a sheet let down from heaven (Acts 11: 5-9). Here is to be seen the house of Simon the Tanner (Acts 10: 6). In the division of the land by Joshua, Joppa was given to the tribe of Dan (Joshua 19: 46). This city, as seen from the ship, is beautiful in appearance, being elevated gradually from the beach, and the surrounding country is very fruitful. Extensive groves of oranges, lemons, pomegranates, apricots, and other delicious fruits are some of the sights which we see on every side.

At 1.30 I boarded a train for the Holy City, and soon we were crossing the Plain of Sharon, which was noted for its variety of flowers in the days of King Solomon (Songs of Solomon 2: 1). Who has not read of the Rose of Sharon in the Bible? We travel over this plain for about twenty miles, until we come to the base of the mountains of Judea and Benjamin. In the meantime we have passed a Jewish agricultural school, established in 1869. There are many colonies established by the Jews, Germans, Greeks, and others. Judging from outward appearances, these colonies all are very prosperous. The first town of importance is Ramleh, said to be Arimathea of Matthew 27: 57. From this summit a good view can be had of the whole plain from Gaza on the south of Mount Carmel, on the north about one hundred miles, and within this circuit can be seen Ashdod, Gath the home of Goliath (1 Samuel 17: 4).

Then comes Gezer, the town which Pharaoh took and gave to his daughter, Solomon's wife (1 Kings 9: 16). As the train speeds along we pass through a country which is full of biblical interest, viz: The town Lydda; it is here where Peter cured Æneas of palsy through the power of God; then passing through the village of Gasur on the site of Hazarshual (Joshua 19: 3). It is claimed that Samson caught three hundred foxes and tied their tails together and burned up the grain. Opposite the station a hill to the left, is Zarah, the birthplace of Samson (Judges 3), next stop is Bittin Station, which is on the site of Bethel (Solomon's Songs 2: 17). Here, it is said, that the Jews under their commander Barroch made their last stand against the Romans, and 800,000 persons were slaughtered, their blood running so strong that it carried away stones weighing 4 pounds (Robinson's Researches, volume 3, page 268). After leaving this station soon arrived at or near the fountain where Philip baptized the eunuch.

After steaming over twenty miles of plain we climbed the mountains for thirty-five miles, reaching to the height 2,670 feet above Jaffa, where we finally land in the city of the Great King. In spite of its decay, Jerusalem has an interest and a surpassing charm which no other city on earth possesses for Bible students or Christians. Although it has been destroyed many times it still retains its attractiveness to Jew, Moslem, and Christian. Here the tourist is reminded at almost every turn of the footsteps of the Savior. We know the streets have been changed; however, we also know that nineteen hundred years ago a mournful procession passed along the streets of this matchless city as the Lamb of God was led by wicked men to be slaughtered upon Mount Calvary.

Here are to be seen Mount Olivet, the Brook Kedron, and the city crowned Zion, Moriah; also the site upon which King Solomon's temple stood, now covered by the Mosque of Omar. A short distance east of this spot is to be seen the Garden of Gethsemane, and within the walls of Old Jerusalem are to be seen the church of the Holy Sepulch, Skull Hill, the House of Caiphas, the Tomb of David, the Tombs of the Kings, the Jews' wailing place, the Church of Saint Anne, the Pool Bethesda; Ecce Homo (Pilate's Judgment Hall), and innumerable other points of interest, which we will write you about later on. The conditions of most of the inhabitants and the streets are very filthy, as they have no idea of cleanliness or decency inside the old walls.

The New Jerusalem outside is very fine. Most of the buildings are substantial edifices, and will compare favorably with any modern city. The climate is superb, warm through the day and nights cool. The country round about to the observer is rather rocky and rough, with an occasional olive tree here and there. Water is very precious, having to depend on the rain for supply the whole year,—no rain, no water.

Brother Pitt, his wife, Sisters Floyd, Brown, Carr, and family, and self made a trip to Jericho, Dead Sea, and River Jordan on the 16th and 17th inst., and Brother Pitt and I had the honor to baptize four in the waters of Jordan, about ten or twelve miles from where Jesus was baptized by John the Baptist. Will send you a full account of the baptism and sights we experienced on our journey to and from Jordan and the Dead Sea, which will be of much interest to those who have not seen this country.

Have also visited Bethlehem, Bethany, and other places, an account of which will reach you in due time. Many people have requested me to write them concerning my trip to the East, especially Palestine, but having neither time nor means to comply, I herewith desire to write up an account of my travels through the columns of SAINTS' HERALD, provided the editorial staff considers it of sufficient interest to its many readers. Good-bye for the present,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

NOVEMBER 21, 1910.

Since my last communication I have made a journey to Jericho, the Dead Sea, and the River Jordan. At the break of day on the 16th inst., Brother Pitt, wife, and I, Sisters Floyd and Brown, Brother Carr, wife, and their two boys left Jerusalem in two carriages for the above places. Our route was along the north and east walls of old Jerusalem, passing Damascus, Herod, Saint Stephens, and the Golden Gates; thence along and across the Brook Kedron, and past the Garden of Gethsemane, and over a part of the west side of Mount Olivet, ascending gradually until we reach the historical town of Bethany.

A short distance this side of Bethany you have a grand view of Mount Zion and Mount Moriah; it was on the latter mountain that Abraham was commanded to offer his son, Isaac, as a burnt offering, on which spot also Solomon built the memorable temple; also from this point we have a good view of the Pool of Siloam. In Bethany is to be seen the tomb of Lazarus, whom Christ raised from the dead; also the house, or remains, in which Martha and Mary lived in whose company Christ spent many hours during his lifetime, and it was from their home he went to his death.

Leaving here we descended a long steep hill, at the base of which we arrived at the Apostles' Spring. Tradition has it that the apostles used to drink from this spring as they journeyed to and from Jericho plain. Water is very scarce in this country, and as a general thing you have to travel many miles before you can find a spring from which you can get water to drink, hence travelers are obliged to carry water with them in bottles and goat skins. I do not wonder since coming to Palestine that the eunuch said to Philip "See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?"

From this we conclude that the eunuch understood that baptism by immersion was the true mode, and took advantage of the opportunity to be baptized where there was sufficient water to be immersed in; and for the same reason John baptized in Enon, because there was much water there. If sprinkling or pouring had answered the purpose they evidently had sufficient with them in bottles to baptize without discommoding themselves to get out of the chariot; or, why should so many people flock to Enon to be baptized?

Having traveled for some miles up and down hills we reached "The Good Samaritan Inn" which is located on a high hill. Here it was where a man fell among thieves and the Good Samaritan carried him home and cared for his need. (Luke 10: 30-35.) Brother Pitt took a picture of the party as they stood around this historical spot. Our next stop is at the Brook of Cherith. At the bottom of this brook Elijah was fed by the ravens (1 Kings 17: 3-6).

Arriving at Jericho at 10.15 a. m., we proceeded to Elisha's fountain and the ruins of the old walls of Jericho. This reminded us of Joshua's victories; however, nothing remains but a few mounds and traces of ancient walls and foundations of the old city of Jericho. Here it was that the spies sent by Joshua were hid on the housetop and let down over the walls by Rahab. What confusion must have ensued when those massive walls crumbled to the earth as the priests of God blew the trumpets, and the army of Joshua shouted in triumph over the great victory gained through the power of the almighty God. In the afternoon we wended our way over the Jordan plains, which were given unto Lot for an inheritance, and here he sojourned for many years. The plain is very flat and spreads for miles around. About two miles this side of Jordan is Gilgal, nothing there but "thicket of thorn trees." It is here where the Israelites first encamped on this side of Jordan (Joshua 4: 19). Here the last manna fell, and near here Joshua saw the captain of the Lord's host (Joshua 9: 15). The tabernacle was set up and remained until the dividing of the land of Shiloh (Joshua 15: 1). Here Samuel came every year to judge the people (1 Samuel 7: 16). Saul was made king here (1 Samuel 11: 16), and here Saul disobeyed God and lost his kingdom (1 Samuel 13: 5-13). At this place Elisha paid a visit to the sons of the prophets and performed two miracles (2 Kings 4: 38-44). Here it was the tribe of Judah came to welcome David (2 Samuel 19: 15).

At 1.45 p. m. we arrived at the River Jordan, which averages ninety feet wide, and its depth is about ten feet; has a very strong current and a muddy bottom. Brother Pitt and the writer had the honor as well as the pleasure of leading four precious souls into the waters of Jordan; namely, Brother Carr and wife, and their two boys. Brother Pitt baptized the father and younger boy, and I baptized the mother and elder boy. The glorious king of day shone brightly on us, and the Spirit of the Lord was present in great power as we administered the holy ordinance of baptism. As I stood in the water and on the bank of the river my mind reverted to the time when Jesus the Christ was also baptized by John the Baptist in the same river, a few miles further up the stream, where John baptized hundreds during his ministry. I was also reminded of the fact that I was the first apostle to baptize in the River Jordan since the time of the ministry of our Lord; also that Brother Pitt was the first patriarch to officiate in like manner.

I can assure you that I felt a joyous sensation come over me when I realized that such a high honor had been conferred upon me, and I truly felt in my heart that it was a great honor to be permitted to raise my hand to heaven in the presence of God, angels and men, and be able to say: "Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ to baptize, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," and to think that after an elapse of over eighteen hundred years, during which time the authority of the priesthood was taken away from among men, that I could stand in the water of the same river and baptize by the same authority and power that Christ and the apostles baptized in their day, "for the remission of sins." I wish to state at this juncture that I greatly appreciate the honor that the First Presidency have conferred upon me in placing me in charge of Palestine; an honor which I did not anticipate to ever enjoy; as I can hardly realize that it is a reality that I am here in the land where the ancient worthies lived and died; namely, patriarchs, prophets, Christ and the apostles to whom God the Father gave of his Holy Spirit to give light and peace to a dark, sinful world. At every turn you make in this country, you are reminded of some biblical incident which enables you to better understand and study the Scriptures with new interest.

Palestine, of all countries that I have traveled in, was the only land that I had a longing in my heart to see; and I truly feel thankful to the Lord that he opened up the way whereby my heart's desire was granted. My presence here is in fulfillment of many dreams that I have had for the past thirty-five years, an intimation of the Spirit to me. From Jordan we returned to Jericho by way of the Dead Sea. Standing on its shores we are thirteen hundred feet below the level of the Mediterranean; its waters are clear and beautiful in appearance, very salty and bitter, but more buoyant than Salt Lake, Utah, and contain fifteen per cent more salt than other seas. From this point is a grand view of Mount Nebo, also the Mount Temptation, where they claim Christ was led by the Spirit to be tempted by the Devil for forty days. Ten miles eastward is to be seen "The Castle of Machæruës," where John the Baptist was beheaded. It is evident that the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah were located originally between the Dead Sea and edge of Jordan Plain, as we are informed in Genesis that they were neighbors of Lot, who at that time was in possession of the Jordan Plains; hence it is that these cities are now under the Dead Sea.

As we near the modern town of Jericho, the tree is pointed out to us in the yard of the home of Zaccheus, on which he climbed to look at Jesus as he passed by. This can be taken with a pinch of salt. The people can point out the tombs of all the ancient worthies, including Adam. For some reason, poor Mother Eve's tomb is left out. Too bad, that her earthly place of rest has been so neglected.

We spent the night at Bellevue Hotel, resuming our journey early next morning, arriving in Jerusalem in the afternoon, safe and sound, after an enjoyable trip. The sights and scenes that our eyes have gazed upon and the pleasant and enjoyable experiences of those two days will never fade from our memory. Yours hastily,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

No report received from Columbia River Branch; last report, December, 1909, gave 31 members. Ministry reporting: Elders T. C. Kelley, A. J. Smith, H. P. Hanson, Oscar Case; High Priest A. V. Closson; Priests W. Yates, L. W. Silver, W. W. Fordham; J. E. Turnbow; Teachers Evan Richards, John R. Allen. Bishop's agent reported balance and receipts, $1,007.24; expenses, $849.55; balance due church, $157.69. This was referred to an auditing committee consisting of T. C. Kelley, Oliver Turnbull, Oscar Case. The auditing committee reported account correct. A resolution from Sagle Branch was read and adopted and referred to a committee to report to conference. The committee recommends that a board of arbitration be appointed to adjust matters. On motion the following were appointed by the chair: T. C. Kelley, A. J. Smith, W. W. Fordham. Report of reunion committee read and committee released. On motion the following names were selected as delegates to General Conference of 1911: W. W. Fordham, A. V. Closson, Louis Clark, Oliver Turnbull, Emma Bell, T. C. Kelley, Frank Holmes, Oscar Case, Samuel Wood, Dora Smith, L. W. Silver, H. P.

Hanson, N. V. Sheldon, H. P. Jenkins, Jane Turnbull; those present to cast full vote of district, and in case of division, majority and minority vote. A motion prevailed that a committee be appointed to ascertain the cost of tents, etc., and make arrangements for a reunion next summer. This committee consists of A. J. Smith, L. W. Silver, A. G. Crum. Bro. A. V. Closson resigned as district president, on account of going away, and A. J. Smith was elected to fill vacancy. Adjourned to meet in Spokane the second Saturday and Sunday in June, 1911. W. W. Fordham, district secretary.

MONTANA.—District conference convened at Race Track on October 15, 1910, at 10 o'clock a. m. Called to order by Bro. A. J. Moore, district president. Bro. I. M. Smith was elected clerk pro tem, Sr. Victoria Beck elected chorister, and Sr. Earnestine Davey organist. Reports were read from the Deer Lodge and Bozeman branches. Bishop's agent's report read and referred to an auditing committee of the following brethren: W. P. Bootman, J. E. Eliason, and F. Christofferson. Priesthood reporting: Elders I. M. Smith, W. P. Bootman, A. B. Moore, F. Christofferson, A. Christofferson, A. J. Moore; Priests John E. Eliason and John Eliason; Teacher T. Reese. Petition from Deer Lodge Branch recommending that John E. Eliason and Jerome P. Wyckoff be ordained elders, was read and approved by the conference. Auditing committee reported that they found the Bishop's agent's report correct. Moved to hold the next conference on Saturday and Sunday before the full moon in March; carried. Deer Lodge and Bozeman were placed in nomination for next conference. Deer Lodge was selected by a large majority. Moved that no one be allowed to hold office in the district who uses tobacco. Carried unanimously. Sacrament services Sunday at 2.30 p. m., at which time Bro. John E. Eliason was ordained an elder by Brn. I. M. Smith, W. P. Bootman, and Jerome P. Wyckoff was ordained an elder by Brn. W. P. Bootman and I. M. Smith. I. M. Smith, clerk pro tem.

MINNESOTA.—District conference convened at Clitherall, Minnesota, November 5 and 6, 1910, L. A. Gould, district president, in charge, assisted by L. Houghton, sub-missionary in charge. Three branches reported: Minneapolis 85, Bemidji 49, and Union 159. Ministry reporting: L. A. Gould, L. Houghton, W. C. Griffin, Delbert Whiting, Alonzo Whiting, Lurette Whiting, and Arthur Whiting. Moved and carried that all holding the priesthood be requested to place with the secretary at each conference a written report of labors done since the preceding conference. Nineteen delegates to General Conference were chosen: Bro. and Sr. Lurette Whiting, Bro. and Sr. Charles Lundeen, L. Houghton, Alonzo Whiting, Hallie M. Gould, Ellen Whiting, Bro. and Sr. G. G. Buell, Bro. and Sr. W. W. Gould, Ida Horne, Bro. and Sr. Joseph Elliott, L. A. Gould, Bro. and Sr. Ralph Murdock, Ethel Tucker. They were authorized to cast a majority and minority vote in case of division. Leonard Houghton was chosen vice-president, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Bro. E. A. Stedman. Motion prevailed authorizing the secretary to purchase a branch record and make a new record of the Oak Lake Branch. The district secretary was constituted secretary-treasurer, and permitted to receive private donations to meet expenses of the office. It being considered proper and desirable that the conference issue resolutions of condolence on the death of Brother Stedman, a committee was selected who drafted the following resolutions: "We, the Saints of the Minnesota District, in conference assembled, extend to the relatives and friends of our esteemed brother, E. A. Stedman, our profound sympathy and condolence, in the loss they and we have sustained in his death. Our deceased brother at the time of his death, was vice-president of the district, and had spent many years in the Master's service in Minnesota, doing considerable pioneer missionary work, and assisting in many ways in building up the church. He is very kindly remembered by many of the Saints of this district for his faithful service. We feel assured that he has gone to the Paradise of God, to mingle there in the kingdom of God with bright spirits who have gone before. We trust that his service among us will not soon be forgotten, and pray the Master's blessing on his memory. Signed, Leonard Houghton, Leon A. Gould, A. W. Whiting, committee." The conference adjourned to meet during the reunion of 1911, at Frazee, at call of district president. Hallie M. Gould, secretary.

Worthy occupation is the best moral policeman.

Kelley assist. Evening session consisted of entertainment given by the Sunday School and Religio societies, including reading of The Outlook. A motion prevailed that the Sunday school and Religio unite in giving an entertainment at the next convention in June, 1911. W. W. Fordham, secretary pro tem.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.—Convention met with the Saints at Lagonda, Missouri, August 26, 1910, district superintendent in charge. The minutes of the previous convention were read and approved, also the reports of the different schools and reports of district officers. Bro. C. W. Miller was elected home department superintendent. Time and place of next convention were left in the hands of district officers. Christina Edmunds, district secretary.

MINNESOTA.—Sunday school convention met at Clitherall, Minnesota, November 5, 1910, at 7 p. m.; Elder L. Houghton, field worker, in charge. Five schools were reported with a total enrollment of 145. The following were chosen delegates to represent us at the next General Convention, and were authorized to cast a majority and minority vote in case of division: Bro. and Sr. P. W. Martin, Bro. and Sr. Lurette Whiting, Bro. and Sr. L. Houghton, Ellen Whiting, Hallie M. Gould, Ethel Tucker, Eva Elliott, Matthew Jepson, Delbert Whiting, Bro. and Sr. G. G. Buell, and Ruth Serrell. Only a short program was given on account of the superintendent, Kate Martin, and a number of others who were expected not being able to attend. Hallie M. Gould, secretary.

Conference Notices.

The Northern California district conference will convene at Sacramento, California, February 25, 1911, at 9.30 a. m. A complete report from each branch or fragment, also from all who bear the priesthood, in writing is desired. Important business will be presented, hence as good an attendance as practicable is desired. Send all reports to our secretary, Elder J. A. Lawn, 48 West avenue, San Francisco, California. If sent to me I will care for them. J. M. Terry, president of district, 1203 Magnolia street, Oakland, California.

Convention Notices.

All persons expecting to attend the Religio and Sunday school convention and conference near Vanscoy, Saskatchewan, commencing Thursday, December 29, are requested to notify the undersigned, as the train leaves Saskatoon every afternoon at 4.50 o'clock, on the Goose Lake line, and arrives at Vanscoy at 5.40. All comers will be met by teams at Vanscoy. A. E. Nunn, chairman of committee.

Vacancy in Board of Auditors.

Israel A. Smith having been selected as representative to the Iowa General Assembly for Decatur County, at the late November election, has tendered his resignation as a member of the Board of Auditors, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as appointed at last annual session of conference, assigning as his reason that his duties as such representative would necessarily prevent him from serving on such board at the time the work would be required. His resignation has been accepted.

JOSEPH SMITH, For the Presidency of the Church.
INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 14, 1910.

Appointment to Fill Vacancy in Board of Auditors.

A vacancy in the Board of Auditors of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints having occurred by the resignation of Israel A. Smith, appointed at the last April conference, notice of which has been given above, the committee heretofore appointed by conference to fill vacancies of said Board occurring between sessions of conference, consisting of E. A. Smith, H. A. Stebbins, and the President of the church, upon consultation has appointed George W. Blair, of Lamoni, Iowa, to fill said vacancy.

JOSEPH SMITH, Chairman for Committee.
INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 14, 1910.

Notice to All Elders.

If you have not sent in the duplicate certificates for the children you blessed during the last year, please do so now, so they may be accounted for in this year's work.

If you have baptized anyone during the year whom you have reason to believe was not enrolled and reported by a branch, please report same to this office at once, that proper credit may be given for the work of the year.

C. I. CARPENTER, Church Recorder.
LAMONI, IOWA, December 17, 1910.

Notice to the Fifth Quorum of Elders.

Report blanks for your annual reports have been mailed to each member at your latest known address. If you have not received yours by the time you read this, write at once to the secretary, giving your present address, and another will be furnished you.

A full and prompt report is desired from each member, so that the quorum may have proper credit for all work done by its members.

C. B. WOODSTOCK, Secretary.
LAMONI, IOWA, December 17, 1910.

Correction.

In the letter of Bro. R. Etzenhouser, in the issue of HERALD for December 7, on page 1200, near the bottom of third paragraph, at center of column, occurs an error. It should read: "Last year experiences were replete with sufficient establishing evidences. This year will be replete with more when all returns are made."

Addresses.

George Gaydon, 13 Martin street, Guide Bridge, North Manchester, England.

Elder F. G. Pitt, care French Post, Jerusalem, Palestine.

Died.

LASLEY.—At Lamoni, Iowa, December 13, 1910, of paralysis, Mr. Andrew J. Lasley, aged 83 years and 1 day. He was born in Ohio in 1827; had resided in Lamoni for fifteen years, and had an excellent name for honesty and integrity. His wife, four sons, and two daughters survive him. One son and one daughter obeyed the restored gospel. Funeral sermon preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Bro. J. R. Lambert.

COX.—Inez Marie, infant daughter of A. M. and Sr. Mary E. Cox, died at their home in Caldwell, Idaho, December 10, of pneumonia. She was born June 10, 1910; blessed by Elder S. D. Condit, August 3, 1910. Sermon by Elder R. Owen, of Boise, Idaho. Interment in the Canyon Hill Cemetery.

SPENCER.—Sr. Genisa Spencer died at the home of her son, Elijah Spencer, November 24, 1910. She was born December 6, 1841, and was married to George L. Spencer in 1861, and was baptized August 15, 1862, by Elder John Stevenson, at Glovers Gap, West Virginia. Funeral sermon by Thomas Park. She was laid to rest in Delta Cemetery. She leaves five sons, and three daughters. She suffered long and bore it well. She was a good mother and a faithful Saint.

CLARK.—Martha Clark was born in Manchester, England, May 26, 1884. Died November 11, 1910. Was baptized February 6, 1902. She was the wife of Bro. Fred Clark, and the only daughter of Brother and Sister Schofield. She was a most kind and devoted wife and daughter, highly respected both in and out of the church. Services were held in our church and at the grave before large gatherings, November 16, Elder Henry Greenwood being in charge. November 20, Elder G. W. Leggett preached the funeral sermon to a large gathering.

EDSON.—Ruth, only daughter of Bro. C. I. and Sr. M. L. Edson, was born November 28, 1907, and died November 19, 1910, after one week's sickness, of diphtheria. Was blessed at Minneapolis, Minnesota, by Bro. C. I. Shallbetter.

BERRY.—Sr. Jane Berry, of Atchison, Kansas, died of hemorrhage of the stomach, very suddenly, leaving one son and one daughter, two brothers, nine grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren to mourn the loss of a loving mother and sister. She joined the church in 1842 or 1843, and was baptized into the Reorganized Church September 21, 1864, at West Bromwich, Staffordshire, England, by Charles Derry, and died strong in the faith. She asked for the sacrament the last Sabbath. She was 85 years, 9 months, 1 day of age, and a member of the Atchison Branch. Funeral services at the Saints' church, and sermon by Elder Samuel Twombly.

SHUE.—At her home at Atchison, Kansas, Sr. Barbey A. E. N. Shue died, leaving one daughter and two sons, to mourn their loss. She was baptized August 11, 1895, at Atchison, Kansas, by C. E. Guinand. Funeral services at her home, Samuel Twombly officiating. Sister Shue was 44 years, 3 months, 6 days old. Sister Shue is not a member of the Atchison Branch, as she had taken her letter out when she removed to Nebraska and did not bring the letter back.

BROWN.—Edward Brown died at his home, Brooksville, Maine, December 2, 1910, aged 81 years, 8 months. He was baptized July 14, 1873, by Thomas Amos, confirmed by T. W. Smith, and has lived a good, consistent life. He will be much missed among the Saints. He leaves a wife and three children. Funeral at his home by J. J. Billings, December 4, 1910. Many Saints and friends attended.

"In the January Century."

The full story of the sensational voyage last October of the balloon America II, and of Alan R. Hawley's and Augustus Post's adventures during the days of their escape from the Canadian wilderness, has been written for the January Century by Augustus Post, Mr. Hawley's aide in the winning of the Gordon Bennett cup.

The patient housewife, who is trying to cater to the needs of her family on a moderate income, has to solve daily the same old problem, "What shall I cook for breakfast, for luncheon, for dinner?" The very monotony of the question gets on one's nerves, and there is a lot of real difficulty in planning a wholesome variety for each day. The Chicago Record-Herald has mercifully come to the aid of puzzled housewives by printing in each issue a set of three menus, with receipts, under the title, "Meals for a day." What is more, it gives four cash prizes every week for the best of these menus, and women all over the country are invited to compete. The terms of award and the names of the latest winners may be found in any Monday issue of The Chicago Record-Herald. That is the day, too, when the "Martha's Management" column appears, with its helpful hints and advice to cooks and housekeepers. Marion Harland's Sunday page also gives a group of selected recipes, which if cut out of each week and kept in a scrapbook will make a most valuable collection. Women not familiar with the prize menu feature of The Record-Herald should investigate it at once. Many have found it a handy means of getting fresh ideas and securing cash for those they already have.

The important and valuable work being carried on by "an Iowa plant breeder," Mr. Charles G. Patten, of Chester City, Iowa, is the subject of a paper in the January Century, describing new methods in plant production as contrasted with old. It is by L. H. Bailey, director of the College of Agriculture, Cornell University, and the chairman of the Commission on Country Life in President Roosevelt's administration. It is Professor Bailey's contention that the rational breeding of plants is to be a necessary part of the agriculture of the future, and that we are to look to this work for help in feeding and clothing the race.

An Amazing Success.

There never was a time in the history of the world when good stories and articles could command such prices as they do to-day. It is an extremely expensive thing to publish a high-class magazine nowadays, filled with the best work of the most famous authors and artists. Yet it is exactly such a magazine that The Chicago Record-Herald furnishes as an integral part of its Sunday issue.

The Sunday Magazine of The Record-Herald compares favorably with the best weeklies and monthlies, and has some merits peculiar to itself. Its outward form and its cover pictures in colors are beautiful. The most famous writers and illustrators contribute to it. Some of the choicest novels of the year are published serially in its columns before they see the light in book form. Its editor has secured exclusive control of the writings of the best new humorist who has risen to fame in the last decade. To furnish such a magazine with every copy of a big Sunday newspaper is an amazing venture, yet several years of complete success have proved the wisdom of the idea. Nothing else of the kind can touch the Sunday Magazine of The Record-Herald in popular interest and literary excellence.

Ventilating Living Rooms.

Minimize as we may the progressive contamination of an enclosed inhabited space, the contamination is still progressive, and without renewal of the air, in a few hours you will reach the boundary beyond which lies impaired health. Open your windows, pull up your blinds, turn up your mattresses and bedclothes, and every morning let the products of the night be swept out by the incoming currents of fresh air. Then, all through the day remember to have a small chink open at the top of your windows; or, better still, raise the lower sash, close the opening beneath with a piece of wood fitting closely, and so the air will enter at the junction of the sashes, and pass upwards without draught. The secret of ventilation without draught is: a little and constantly. Once permit the air to become close and stuffy, and the moment you endeavor to remedy this result of carelessness a cold draught will rush in, and the fear of injury will prompt you to stop it. The mere fact of living in a close atmosphere begets a shivery, susceptible condition of body, which is intolerant of the slightest sensation of chills. If you accustom yourself and your children to fresh air, you become robust; your lungs play freely, the vital heat is sustained, and even a draught becomes exhilarating.—Doctor Russell.

There is a wide difference between haphazard and exact methods. Learn to know exactly how long it takes to do things. I asked an old cook how long it took to cook a certain article, and she couldn't tell me; then I asked a young cook how long to cook tenderloin, and she told me to the exact minute. See the difference? Be accurate, and know how.

Mr. Farmer

You can get rich raising alfalfa in the Big Horn Basin. If you will go with me on the next excursion I will show you many farms where there is now enough alfalfa in stack, grown this year, to repay the owner the purchase price of the land, and in many cases far more than the original cost of the farm.

EASY MONEY. There is no other farming quite as easy as alfalfa farming. You do not have to "sow and reap" in this case, for each crop; you simply seed the ground to alfalfa once, and then reap three times each year the rest of your life.

YOU CAN HOMESTEAD 40 or 80 acres of this land under the Government Canal, repaying the Government actual cost for water in ten yearly payments without interest. Seed this farm down to alfalfa and stock it with hogs, a few milch cows, and some chickens, and you have an easy living the rest of your life.
