Uniopolis Branch has a very nice church building. Most of the Saints have moved to other parts, leaving the branch weak to some extent. Some have injured it by not living as they knew best. Uniopolis is a choice farming country and any good, live Saints who move in could accomplish a great work. Farms can be purchased at reasonable prices.

Lima Branch is located in one of the most prosperous cities of fifty thousand inhabitants in northwestern Ohio. Work of all kinds can be obtained. Any Saints wishing a location of this kind would be desired.

Saint Marys Branch is located in a very nice town. Paper and woolen mills afford much work. Sylvania Branch is located twelve miles west of Toledo, and is growing nicely. Real Saints, living their religion.

Byran Branch is in one of the most beautiful towns the writer has ever seen. Oak Harbor is twenty-five miles east of Toledo, in the peach belt, four miles from Camp Perry. This is the place where they all go to church, Saint and sinner alike. It has grown and developed amid opposition and persecution. Why? Because the missionaries were honorable God-fearing men and the Saints were "humble, full of love, always abounding in the works of the Lord." Much could be said along this line, but sufficient to say what has been said is desired to do good.

As a closing remark, let me invite your attention to the advice of Joseph Marshall Wade: "If I wanted to become a tramp, I would seek information and advice from the most successful tramp I could find. If I wanted to become a failure, I would seek advice from men who have never succeeded. If I wanted to succeed in all things, I would look about me for those who were succeeding and get into their surroundings." Jesus Christ is the only person who ever succeeded in "all things." He arose triumphant over death, hell and the grave; he conformed to that "perfect law"; he knew no failure. He came as a witness, leader, and commander. He said "study all good books." (The Herald Office has many of them for sale.)

Dear Saints, let us seek his advice and counsel while "grass grows and water flows," until "the day dawn and the day-star arise in your hearts," which shall shine forth with indescribable glory and illumine the dawn of that bright day seen "afar off" by holy men of old—the millennial rest—the Sabbath of creation. JESSE HARDIN.

UNIOPOLIS, OHIO, September 27, 1916.

Ohio

I have just returned from a short tour of the southern end of this district. Called on our worthy brother, Judge Kirken-dall, and family. They and the rest of the Saints there were enjoying the blessing of health. Creola is not a very large place, but we have some fine people there. From there I went to Limerick, one of the oldest branches in the mission, and well known to near all of the traveling ministry who have labored in this mission. At one time we had a very large branch there. It was the home for many years of such noble men as brethren T. J. Beatty, L. R. Devore and James Moler. All three were great and faithful workers during their day and they are greatly missed by the Saints and out-siders.

I visited the grave of Brother Beatty, and my mind went back to the time we first met, thirty years ago, and of the many pleasant hours we had spent together in gospel work. The memory of the faces of Brethren W. W. Blair, W. H. Kelley, E. C. Briggs, G. H. Hilliard, O. B. Thomas, Thomas Matthews, S. J. Jeffers, and the grand old man, Josiah Ells, with whom I had been associated for many years in said district, but who have passed over the "Great Divide" and entered upon their everlasting rest in the paradise of God. Though they are gone from us, they are not forgotten by those who knew them and realize what wonderful and great sacrifice they made in the interest of the church and their fellow men. I am reminded of the fact that the great majority of the ministry whom I was associated with in my early ministry have joined the Lord's great army on the other side. Brother J. R. Lambert is the only one of the twelve apostles now living who was in that quorum when I was called to the apostleship nearly thirty years ago. I can count on the ends of my fingers all the active ministers of those days now living. What a great change has taken place in the personnel of the quorums of the church within the last forty years! My mind goes back to the days of such men as W. W. Blair. I am quite confident that he and Apostle James Blakeslee blessed me during the war times, soon after Brother Joseph took the leadership of the Reorganization. I can remember old Brethren Gurley, Powers and others of the first Twelve. These brethren with Brother Joseph visited the town of Saint David, Illinois, where my parents lived for many years.

I had the pleasure of ordaining two sons of Brother Beatty, namely, Luther and Roy, to the office of elder and priest, respectively. I also ordained Brother Robert Dull a deacon. Brother Vance is teacher. We expect good reports from that branch in the near future. There are some people there who are very near the kingdom. Sister Beatty was made very happy when two of her sons were ordained. She is looking fine and seems quite well.

My next branch to visit was the Highland Branch near Sinking Springs, where I stayed about a week. Brother I. P. Wood is president and is assisted by Brother T. W. Rhoades. We have a very fine church building there and some grand Saints. The people of Highland Branch never let the ministry go away without helping them to the next point. They surely have some very kind-hearted people. Brethren H. E. Moler, Harnish and Jacob Halb have done a good work there within the last year. Quite a number have been baptized there of late. We will send a minister there soon to help them, as there are others who are interested in our doctrine. Sister Woods has been very ill, but she is much improved at present. It did me much good to visit those old friends again. Years and years have passed away since we first met, however, the same old friendship exists. It does a person good when he feels that he has true and royal friends whom he can trust always, but what about those people who seem friendly to your face and find fault with you when your back is turned? May the God of love have mercy on such and help them to repent of their evil ways.

On the second of this month it fell to my lot, and I deemed it a great pleasure, to pronounce the words that joined together in holy matrimony L. F. P. Curry and Anna May Morgan at the home of Mr. and Mrs. King, and Brother and Sister Glasford in their summer residence near Youngstown, Ohio. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends present. Both of these young people are well known in church circles for their interest in the Lord's work. We truly wish them abundant success, and much happiness and peace throughout their married life.

During the Kirtland reunion I married Brother Russell Lawrence and Sister Eva Ledsworth of Michigan. The wedding took place in the old historic temple. Both seemed to be very much interested in the church.

It makes me feel good when I see our young people seek companions in the church. The church has lost very many of the young people by reason of so many of them having married outside of the church. I am sorry that such is the case. Many of the young sisters and brothers have told me that they made a great mistake when they married those who were not of the same faith, and regretted it very much.

Wishing the people of God in all lands great success in their efforts to serve the Lord, I remain your brother in the one faith.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, 2561 Summit Street.

News from Branches

Philadelphia

Sunday, October 1, was rally day for the First Philadelphia Branch. The Saints were animated by the presence of the Spirit at the early morning prayer meeting.

The epidemic of paralysis reduced the attendance of the Sunday school to a very low percentage as children were not permitted to attend, but on rally day—the first day they were permitted to assemble for five consecutive weeks, the attendance was practically normal. Much of the credit is due those who assisted in visiting the families of the children before the commencement day. The absence of the little "joy makers" was felt very keenly.

The communion service which followed the Sunday school was also affluently blessed with God's Spirit. In these days of strife and anxiety we need considerable strength and courage to be able to live a successful Christian life. We must remain humble and prayerful if we would have our Master teach us the way of life and salvation. This meeting offers the necessary spiritual strength and encouragement to proper recipients.

Brother Koehler's logic and teacher training classes are making wonderful progress. These classes meet every Sunday afternoon interchangeably. The possibilities of this kind of work are great, and judging from the support and interest it is receiving the students fully appreciate its significance.

The evening service was certainly successfully arranged for. Brother Koehler enlisted the aid of all to help him reach the immediate friends of the Saints and as many people of the neighborhood as was possible—consequently we had a full house. Solos and selections by the choir were the musical features of the evening. The sermon by our pastor was well suited to the occasion.

The "younger set" of Philadelphia extend congratulations to Wilfred Edwards and Anna Humphreys, and to Radu Des Jardins and Anna Richards. The two marriages took place last week.

A. J. DICKSON.

Cleveland, Ohio

We are pleased to report an encouraging growth in numbers both by baptism and by Saints moving in; also that there has been marked spiritual development, and our assembly has been blessed with the aid of some talented friends in making our song service of richer quality. It is quite evident that others will become one with us through the ordinance of baptism.

Services in the parks having reached the end of the season, steps have been taken to establish a mission on the west side of our city, which will likely be the forerunner of like efforts in other directions. The branch has a good president in Elder John McNeil, and it is largely through his family life and associations that we trace our new growth in members; so the word will not return void.

Sunday school and Religio are both thriving and perform their part in imparting instruction to those who, though mature in years, yet need the sincere milk of the gospel in their new-found life.

It is easily discernible that the priesthood work of the branch will be augmented in due course of time, since the Lord has need of workers and is searching out the honest in heart for his wise purposes.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

Saints' Church, Wade Park Avenue and Seventy-First Street.

Independence Stake

The new educational movement has aroused in the hearts of the Saints a desire to read more critically our church publications, and our choice three books, and to note more carefully the chronicles of the world's current events. We cite for instance, the Negro problem which on last Friday evening was discussed by President Fred M. in the lecture on sociology, and in the news of the day we read of the unprecedented migration of Negro laborers from the South toward the North, which is attracting the attention of the department of labor.

And now we learn of the erection of a twenty-five thousand dollar institution of learning to be right here, within three miles of the stone Church, for the benefit of the Negro.

Already the work spread before the Saints here by our busy leaders does not admit of wasted time, energy, or forethought. And there is good and abundant material to work with. Our young men have now in contemplation the building of a recreation hall on the south side, and at the same time are meeting with our pastor in a class for research religious study. There are also two classes of young women studying botany and the history of education, who meet in the church hall on Wednesday afternoons.

The kindergarten of thirty-five merry little tots, with their varied equipment, meet with Sister W. W. Smith and her assistants at the same place every morning from nine to twelve o'clock. The aid society with their fine quilting is no small factor in doing honor to the Woman's Auxiliary. They meet here too, on Wednesday of each week, with Sister W. Pooler as leader. There is a very kindly spirit manifest in all the gatherings of the various branches of church work, and all visitors are cordially invited.

The mixed classes which meet on Tuesday evenings in the lower auditorium for the study of economics under W. W.

Smith, and of psychology with President Fred M. as teacher, attend each, in numbers about sixty, also Sister M. Madison a teacher of advanced English and rhetoric has a number of interested students.

An elderly sister from the Second Branch said yesterday she had joined the grammar class over there, and was much pleased with the new ideas advanced. Enoch Hill has some fine young workers, and Walnut Park is developing an excellent choir of young voices with Brother Arthur Mills and Sister Griffith in the lead. In this branch they have had new accessions lately from Idaho.

Throughout the stake the Lord is blessing his people, and at a business meeting on Monday, October 9, steps were taken toward organizing a new branch in the northwestern section of the city. This is a time for great opportunities, and all are being urged to embrace them.

On October 6 there were present three hundred at the Religio, and Mr. Cornelius, a Lamanite, delivered an address. Words fail to express the importance of his mission, and the dignity of his personality. Also Captain L. Hoisington, from the border, gave the week previous, at the Religio, an excellent address before the young people.

Let us trust in God, and go forward.

"His mercies will endure;

When skies and stars grow dim;

His changeless promise standeth sure—

Go, cast thy care on him."

ABBIE A. HORTON.

Miscellaneous Department

The Bishopric

AGENT'S NOTICE

To the Saints of the Central Oklahoma District: A few words that you might be made conversant with the pressing needs and great demands for missionary work, as well as the growing necessities along all gospel lines. We solicit the attention of every member of this district, as we earnestly wish to urge you to comply more fully with the law pertaining to your duty, along the line of temporalities.

Can you lead others further in the gospel life than you have gone yourself? Have you paid your tithing? The Lord has said: "Behold, now it is called to-day, (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people." (Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5.)

"Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase."—Proverbs 3: 9.

This is also an injunction of the Lord, reminding us of what we owe.

Again: "If you will that I give you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you."

All of us I am sure, desire to obtain the highest glory. We have learned that the funds in the hands of Bishop Ellis Short, are very low, and so much so that had it not been for him furnishing the balance the past few months, the elders' families could not have received their allowances.

As an agent for this district, I will gladly receipt for any sum, great or small, sent to my home address, 1517 West Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

May the blessings of the Lord be with you all.

JOSEPH ARBER.

Conference Minutes

TORONTO.—Opened 10 a. m. September 30, in charge of district presidency assisted by R. C. Evans and J. F. Curtis. Branches reporting as follows: Toronto 1032; Proton 158; Garafraxa 148; Owen Sound 131; Wiarton 127; New Liskeard 122; Niagara Falls, Ontario, 116; Manitowaning 113; Arthur 95; Port Elgin 94; Cameron 93; Hamilton 106; Grand Valley 91; Humber Bay 90; Davisville 71; Egremont 69;

Redickville 68; Clavering 77; Colpoy's Bay 65; Lowbanks 56; Monmouth 45; Southampton 52; Ravenna 27; Sault Ste. Marie 52; Welland 30; Gooderham 58; disorganized branches 164; scattered list 177; total 3,467; net gain for year, 144. Officers elected: President, D. Pycock; vice president, William Place; secretary, Floralice Miller; assistant secretary, C. H. Dudley; treasurer, H. C. Evans; bishop's agent, R. C. Evans; chorister, Sister M. Faulds; librarian, Arthur Wilson; auditing committee, Audrey Pycock, A. F. McLean, C. H. Dudley. A petition from some 14 branches asking for a division of the district was granted as proposed. The Toronto District as it is now stands will comprise all branches in the Province of Ontario east of the 80th meridian. Conference adjourned to meet at call of district presidency. C. H. Dudley, assistant secretary.

POTTAWATTAMIE.—At Boomer, Iowa, October 8 and 9, 1916, J. A. Hansen and J. P. Carlile in charge. Reports: Boomer 86; Carson 58; Council Bluffs 415; Crescent 170; Fontanelle 37; Hazel Dell 67; North Star 168; Loveland disorganized. Treasurer reported: On hand last report $1.30; conference collection $7.12; balance on hand, $6.72. Bishop's agent reported: On hand last report $339.77; received since, $497.70; balance on hand $89.37. Resolution to amend section 4 of district rules representation by striking out the words "in the branch" so that the rule will read: "The only qualification of eligibility to the office of delegate from a branch to the district conference shall be membership in good standing." Action was deferred until next conference. H. N. Liles ordained elder, Nels Hansen, P. T. Andersen, and E. H. Carlile appointed to audit the bishop's agent's accounts for 1916 and report to next conference on January 13, 14, 1917, at Council Bluffs. J. Charles Jensen, secretary.

LONDON.—At Stratford, Ontario, October 7 and 8, J. L. Burger, George C. Tomlinson, sr., J. Charles Mottashed, district presidency, chose J. F. Curtis, R. C. Russell, and Bishop R. C. Evans to assist. Statistical reports: Corinth, 38; Delhi 78; Ellice 24; London 389; Listowel 17; Mitchell 22; McKillop 26; Saint Marys 49; Selkirk 9; Saint Thomas 174; Stratford 48; Vanessa 50; Waterford 65; the branch at Osborne was declared disorganized by resolution of conference. Bishop's agent reported receipts $4,627.69, and a balance of $603.15. The gains to the district during the year are—by baptism 33; by certificate of baptism 6; by letter of removal 11; by correction 29. The district has lost by letter of removal 19; by death 11, a net gain of 49. District treasurer's receipts $64.83; balance of $22.22. Officers appointed for the ensuing year: J. L. Burger, president, also sustained as bishop's agent; George L. Tomlinson, sr., first vice president; W. J. Fligg, second vice president; P. H. Philippin, secretary; H. B. Doty, chorister; C. Deusling, member library board. Preaching was of high order throughout, to crowded houses. The building at Stratford proved inadequate to hold the crowds. Delegates to General Conference: R. C. Russell; J. C. Mottashed; George H. Henley; J. F. Curtis; R. C. Evans. A motion instructing this delegation to ask for the General Conference for the year 1918 to convene in London, Ontario, and to vote for no other place carried. Adjourned to meet with the London Saints, October 20 and 21, 1917. P. H. Philippin, secretary.

Quorum Notices

Priests of quorum which meets during conference at Whittemore, Michigan, will have to elect a new president. Please attend. Willis Schrock, first counselor, Beaverton, Michigan.

Priests of Northern California District who have not reported to quorum, please note the new secretary is Emery S. Parks, 1222 Forty-second Avenue, San Francisco, California. Do not forget to send dues with your report from January 1 to July 1, 1916. Five splendid meetings were held at Irvington reunion, H. V. Bates, president.

Addresses

A. C. Barmore, Roseburg, Oregon.
J. L. Parker, 1914 North Twenty-fifth Street, Omaha, Nebraska: Home address.

Correction

In Holden conference minutes in HERALD of October 4 it states that J. E. Bozarth was ordained an elder; it should read C. E. Bozarth.

Union Rally at Denver

October 28 and 29, 1916, at the First Branch Church, located on the corner of Speer Boulevard and Logan Avenue. J. E. Kelley and J. R. Sutton will be in attendance, also Evangelist Ammon White, prepared to give blessings to those desiring the same. Prayer service at 9.30 a. m. Saturday. Saints of the Eastern or Western districts are invited to attend. The Denver Saints will try to make you comfortable and want you to come and enjoy yourselves in the association of Saints. Come and get acquainted. G. F. Walling, branch president, 819 Sherman Street, Denver, Colorado.

Notice

Toledo Saints have moved into their new church on Waverly Street just off from Dow. Time of meetings have been changed as follows: Sunday: Sunday school 9.45 a. m.; Religio 6 p. m.; Preaching 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m.; prayer service 7.30 Wednesday p. m. President Willard S. Hettrick, 1709 Detroit Avenue, Bell phone, Forest 1430. Clerk, Mrs. M. M. Liston, 609 Chestnut Street, Bell Phone, Main 3146. Mrs. D. C. Morgan, correspondent.

Boise Branch

Anyone having anything to communicate with the Boise Branch in regard to letters of removal, date of baptisms, blessings of children, etc., address F. W. Brose, branch clerk, Box 733, Boise, Idaho, or George B. Anderson, R. F. D. 4, Boise, Idaho.

Died

TROTTER.—Martin A. Trotter, born in Carrollton, Missouri, September 22, 1841; died in Monterey, California, at the age of 75 years and 18 days. Baptized and confirmed in July 1879. He had been a sufferer from paralysis for several years, but the immediate cause of death was cancer. He held the office of elder, and was a man of integrity and good honorable character, beloved by all who knew him. Leaves companion, a large family of children and grandchildren to mourn their loss. Funeral conducted by C. W. Hawkins, assisted by W. A. Brooner.

COOPERATION

To the Saints Everywhere

We want your cooperation. Every book you purchase, every paper or magazine you subscribe for gives some one a profit.

Why not buy or subscribe through your own Publishing Houses and give them the profit?

Our "Book Service Department" was started to serve you. No matter what book you want order through us.

We also have a "Subscription Department" handling all papers and magazines. Just tell us what you want and we will give you prices. Order through

Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa or Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Mo.

GREENWOOD.—Alice Ann Coombs, born January 30, 1836, at New Brunswick, Indiana; died September 20, 1916, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. F. Greene, at which place she had made her home recently. When about 16 years of age she married Thomas Gipson; to this union 2 children were born, William Vincent, and Mrs. Etta Mason. Moving to Iowa, she married John Greenwood, September 1, 1870. To this union 2 children were born, Charles and Emma. She also had 7 stepsons and 2 stepdaughters. Her husband died August 16, 1900, after which she moved to Lamoni, where she lived until failing health made it necessary for her to go to the home of her daughter. Funeral services at the Latter Day Saint church east of Thurman, Iowa, by W. E. Haden. A large number of friends and relatives gathered at the church. Interment in Thurman Cemetery.

STEVENSON.—John, son of Thomas and Ann Stevenson, born at Castle Donington, Leicestershire, England, October 31, 1833. Came to Nauvoo, Illinois, with parents and only brother in 1847. Married Margaret Ellison, September 13, 1855. To them were born 9 children, 2 of whom, James and Margaret, died in infancy. Two others preceded him to the great beyond, Mary McKahan, and Susana Bottens. The living children are Thomas M., Ralph W., Emma Gunning, John F. and Nettie Hancock, all of whom reside in the vicinity of the old homestead. Baptized August 21, 1863, and has been a consistent member. A man of pure thoughts, possessed many noble traits of character. Died August 31, 1916. Funeral at Rock Creek Church before a very large crowd. Services in charge of W. T. Lambert, sermon by C. E. Harpe. Burial in Powelton Cemetery.

VAN BUREN.—Clara Louise Van Buren, born November 2, 1864, at Milwaukee, Wisconsin; died September 15, 1916, Elgin, Illinois, of heart failure. Baptized some time before her marriage to Charles M. Van Buren in 1883. Charles Van Buren died July 30, 1916, and was also a member of the church. The following children survive their parents: Frank S., Arthur M., Williard J., George E., and Juanita. Funeral at Elgin, Illinois; interment at Bluff City Cemetery. Sermon by Frank F. Wipper.

NEWTON.—Nancy R., wife of Elder Thomas Newton, born August 15, 1867, at Blenheim, Ontario; died at Saint Joseph, Missouri, September 30, 1916. Baptized by her father, George C. Cleveland, and confirmed by Joseph Shippy in 1877. Married Thomas Newton, December 25, 1886. To them were born 8 children. Two daughters and 1 son preceded her. She leaves a loving husband, 3 sons, 2 daughters. She was a mental sufferer for some time. Funeral sermon by F. C. Warnky, assisted by J. J. Teeters. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

EVANS.—Thomas Evans, born at Keb, Iowa, September 1, 1891; died at the hospital at Albia, Iowa, October 3, 1916. Married Estella Enslee, of Ward, Iowa, December 24, 1912. To them were born 2 daughters. Baptized in early youth. Wife, 2 daughters, parents, parents-in-law, and a host of relatives mourn their loss. Funeral in Christian church, Chariton, Iowa, before a large concourse of people. Over 400 members of the Miners Union marched to the cemetery. Sermon by Columbus Scott, assisted by E. B. Morgan.

SPRAY.—Marie J. Dewees Spray, born February 22, 1837, at Enterprise, Spencer County, Indiana; died at Lucas, Iowa, October 2, 1916. Married Elisha Carter at the age of 20 years. Losing her husband, she later moved to Iowa and was married to Richard Spray and here was baptized. She was the mother of 4 children, 2 of whom survive her. Sermon by Columbus Scott, Evan B. Morgan assisting. Interment at Lucas, Iowa.

Book Reviews

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN.—By Harold Bell Wright. The Book Supply Company, Chicago. Price $1.35. This is the latest of the popular Harold Bell Wright stories. It is perhaps one of the most interesting and able of his stories. Harold Bell Wright, to our mind, is not strong on character delineation. One has accused him of using his characters merely as puppets on which to hang clothing. This is too drastic a criticism, but evidently touches his weak point. His characters do not stand out like living men and women, and are not clearly and easily borne in memory. However, there is plenty of action in all of his stories, and this story being laid in the cattle country of Arizona, furnishes opportunity for considerable dramatic action and gives a very good idea of life on the range in an early day. A very readable book.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Wedded Terms—Truth and Freedom	- - -	1009
Notes and Comments	- - -	1012
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
Predestination—Foreordination, by M. H. Bond	- - -	1013
Zion in Africa, by J. W. Peterson	- - -	1016
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
Church Paper Ethics	- - -	1017
Creating the Appetite	- - -	1018
THE CHILDREN'S HOME	- - -	1018
WOMAN'S AUXILIARY	- - -	1019
Mrs. S. R. Burgess—Lula M. Sandy—Bertha L. Mader.	- - -
LETTER DEPARTMENT	- - -	1020
A. M. Chase—R. Newby—John A. Fisher—Isaac M. Smith—C. F. Pratt—William J. Landes—Robert T. Brown—Mrs. H. A. Huff—John A. Taylor—Ellen Horr—Charles Derry—T. C. Kelley—J. Charles May—N. C. Whitney—Miss F. Fay Gates—Wallace A. Small—F. L. Sawley—E. F. Robertson—Robert S. Engelman—Extracts from Letters.	- - -
NEWS FROM MISSIONS	- - -	1027
Jesse Hardin—Gomer T. Griffiths.	- - -
NEWS FROM BRANCHES	- - -	1028
A. J. Dickson—Abbie A. Horton.	- - -
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT	- - -	1029

The Best of the Bargain

You get a bargain when you get the Youth's Companion for 1917 for $2.00—52 issues crowded from cover to cover with the reading you most enjoy. But you get the best of the bargain if you subscribe the minute you read this, for then you will get free every number of The Companion issued between the time you subscribe and New Year's. If you send your $2.00 at once that means a lot of reading for which you won't have to pay a cent. And then the long, glorious 52 weeks of Companion reading to come after! Let us send you the Forecast for 1917, which tells all about what is in store for Companion readers in 1917.

By special arrangement new subscribers for The Youth's Companion can have also McCall's Magazine for 1917—both publications for $2.10.

Our two-at-one-price offer includes:

1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues of 1917.
2. All the remaining issues of 1916.
3. The Companion Home Calendar for 1917.
4. McCall's Magazine—12 fashion numbers of 1917.
5. One 15-cent McCall Dress Pattern—your choice from your first number of the magazine—if you send a 2-cent stamp with your selection.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION,
St. Paul St., BOSTON, MASS.

New Subscriptions Received at this Office.

Worth Careful Thought

Do you read the label to know whether your baking powder is made from cream of tartar or, on the other hand, from alum or phosphate?

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes, and adds to the food only wholesome qualities.

Other baking powders contain alum or phosphate, both of mineral origin, and used as substitutes for cream of tartar because of their cheapness.

Never sacrifice quality and healthfulness for low price.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

THE GOSPEL STORY AND FOOTSTEPS OF JESUS. By Frances. Charming child stories, of the birth-offering series. Adapted to the baby mind. Tales of truth that will register and remain. No. 366, cloth60c

OUR MISSIONARIES IN BIBLE LANDS. A compilation of interesting views of historic places in Palestine and Egypt, with descriptions, from photographs taken by Elder and Mrs. F. G. Pitt, instructive and interesting. No. E361, handsome heavy paper covers50c
No. E362, cloth boards75c

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY. The development of the latter-day work is put into story form, and offers the reader an opportunity of getting into intimate, personal touch with events. "Frances" has put life into her book; but the "human element" is saved from dominance by the spirituality of the work. No. 375, cloth$1.00

IN THE SHELTER OF THE LITTLE BROWN COTTAGE. The popular serial that ran in Stepping Stones during 1915, by the editor, Estella Wight. The leading character is not a Latter Day Saint at first, but eventually becomes so, and in the process a strong gospel story is told. Several characters in the book are shown laboring toward the truth, making this a fine, readable missionary medium. Cloth, 378 pages$1.25

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

FOR SALE.

Two acres of fine lying land, all set to young fruit just coming into bearing—new 6 room house, back plastered and finely finished. 2 never failing wells, new hen house 10 x 24. Located on South State St. Bargain for cash. E. F. Hall, Lamoni, Iowa. 31-tf

THE TWO-STORY BOOK. Two stories leading the reader to Latter Day Saintism, by Elbert A. Smith and Mary Leiland Carter. There is sufficient action in these gospel tales to interest the reader from a human standpoint, and it is only a step from the humanity of the book to the divinity of it. No. 372, cloth55c

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2:36.

VOLUME 63

LAMONI, IOWA, OCTOBER 25, 1916

NUMBER 43

Editorial

HOW WE GET OUR QUARTERLIES

[The following was written by request for one of the reunions held last summer. The operations involved are much the same as those of our other church papers, including the HERALD, and because we are requested to do so, we publish it with the hope that it may be of interest to our many readers who like to know the "how" of things.—EDITORS.]

In a general way at least, the author who composes a lesson or a series of them, is obeying instructions which you as a member of the association have given her. You, through your district organization and General Association decide the general plan of the course. The lessons committee, composed of the editors of the Quarterlies and three others, with the superintendent of the General Association, meet and decide the details of the course to be followed for three years. Your present Quarterlies in the Sunday school are the last quarter of the first year of a three-year course. Every three years the course is repeated, after thorough revision.

In former years the lessons were all on one subject for the various ages in the school, called uniform lessons, but the graded course is intended to supply just the matter that is best adapted to the various groups of pupils at each stage of their development.

When the author sits down to her typewriter—they all use them—she must understand all these things so well she can practically forget them and proceed with the detail work of her subjects. In order to get the present course in permanent shape so it can be used permanently and perhaps some day be bound in book form, some of the editors are revising former lessons while others are writing entirely new matter.

All of our editors are busy people, chosen by the executive council of the General Association each year. The mere pittance the association has found it possible to pay for this work is not enough to allow them to devote much time to it. It only helps them to hire housework or some like service done so they may devote the necessary time to their task.

It may seem like a simple thing to write eight or ten pages of typewriting each week, but when one considers the effort of gathering the material and presenting it properly for that grade it means something more than the mere mechanical effort. If anything happens to prevent the author getting out her lesson some week, she must double her energies some other week and get out two. The big presses at the publishing house are hungry for the Quarterlies they must grind out every three months.

There is sufficient human interest in the efforts of the Quarterly editors to make a number of good stories of real life. One lesson may come out all right and the next just persistently refuse to shape itself in presentable form. If you are writing a story, you can make it come out the way you like and the form is largely what you care to make it, but with the limitations placed before the lesson writer, many a heartsick and restless night must come to the conscientious servant of the thousands of students who are to closely follow each item of the finished product.

One of our editors who has served the church in this capacity for about twenty years, finds it possible to so prepare her material beforehand that she can sometimes sit down to the typewriter and write the entire quarter's lessons with no recopying or revision. Yet even she occasionally finds some lessons that must be written and rewritten until she feels reasonably sure they are properly presented. A wide general knowledge and detailed acquaintance with the Bible and other books are necessary. Even then some errors get by unnoticed.

When one gets up before an audience and among other things gives utterance to some unsubstantiated statements that are reasonable, seldom would he be caught up in it. One does not so easily catch minor errors made in this manner. But let some one say the same thing in cold type, where thousands may critically examine and discuss, and you have a different matter. In this respect the pulpit teacher has an advantage over the Quarterly editor.

Finally when the editor intrusts her precious message to the students of the church with a prayer for its kind and intelligent reception it is hurried away through the mails to the revising committee, all located at Lamoni.

IN OTHER HANDS

Carefully and critically these experienced elders go over each statement, to see if by any chance there are misstatements of doctrine or wrong interpretations of the Scriptures. Sometimes one will read aloud while the others listen for errors, and then at other times they will read singly and verify the references to the books. It is required that all quotations be exact, even to the punctuation used by some reliable publishers.

Leaving these men, the lessons go to the copy editor who goes over each word and marks such mechanical changes as are necessary to make the finished product uniform. Editors like to devote themselves to the thought rather than to the details of style, and in passing it might be said that to the writer's knowledge not a piece of "copy" as it is called from this time, comes into the office for any publication but requires some changes, often many, but always some.

It takes a full day or more for the copy editor to prepare a quarter's lessons of one grade alone for the printers. When he is through with it he sends it to the composing room where they hang it on the "live" hook of a big linotype machine and proceed to put the matter into type as soon as there is time between issues of the HERALD, Stepping Stones, Hope, Journal of History, and innumerable books, tracts, and jobs of all kinds. All the type of one size is set on one machine from one magazine. Then all the type of another size is set up from another magazine, either by changing the arrangement on one machine or getting it on another.

SOME MECHANICAL PROCESSES

Musically the little "mats," as the boys call the matrices, fall down and range themselves into line at the slight touch on the keys by the operator. Bump, bump, jingle, jingle, chug chug, goes the almost human machine, and out comes a hot line of type, all one piece, which prints a line just as you read it in the Quarterly—if it is set correctly. While one line is being cast another is being set—an endless procession of little brass pieces, each having a depression which, when filled, forms the face of a letter or character.

When enough of the lines have been set to make a galley full, or a length of about two feet, impressions are taken and the copy and the "proof" as it is now called, are sent to the proof readers. One of these reads the proof aloud while another holds the copy and pronounces all the punctuation and mentions the other peculiarities.

It would make you laugh to hear some one monotonously grind out something like this while another is reading right along: "Par, com, sem, period, turn, com, close, par, turn, screamer, turn single, close single and double par turn, colon low case, colon cap," on and on like one who had lost his mind. But an alert reader notes all these carefully while he marks every error the compositor has made, indicating it by peculiar marks on the margin of the proof. In the meanwhile the reading goes on with little pause.

When the galley has been read, the "copy" is filed in the room and the proof sent back for corrections. The machine operator makes all the corrections, setting each line entire, no matter if there is but one mistake. If words are left out he must run over enough lines with words closer spaced to get in the extra words or marks. The floor man goes over the type and throws out all the wrong lines and puts in the new ones. He reads the type all wrong end up and seemingly from the wrong side. Try reading your lesson from a mirror and you'll have a partial idea of how it seems, except that he sees only a mass of dark, inky metal. He "pulls a proof" of it again and sends it back for revising and rereading. If there are still mistakes—and nearly always there are some—it must be corrected again and again till the proof readers send back a clean proof.

Around and around they go, hundreds of proofs of all kinds being handled in just this way. There can be little study of any one thing. A proof of a lesson on the sacrament is just as liable to be followed by one for a plumbing catalogue or an agricultural bulletin on the best method of grub worm eradication. Like revolving sieves the readers are supposed to sift out the errors and leave the matter clean and correct. It must be largely mechanical, for mechanical errors are the most frequent in their work. In a recent lesson it was stated that the Sea of Galilee was seven hundred miles below sea level. It makes sense so well that it escaped everyone—including the author who read the proofs—and got into print, instead of the word feet. If it had been a typographical error such as imles, it would have been caught in an instant. But the hairbreadth escapes that you almost get to see would equal some detective stories. The errors made in correcting errors furnish many a joke to lighten the monotony of the steady grind—for grind it must be.

The next process is the making into pages of the long galleys of loose type lines. Carefully each page is arranged by the compositors into the proper length, with "leads" between headings to give sufficient white space, another proof taken to see that no mistakes have been made and the entire set of pages again checked by the proof readers.

When free from errors, these pages, each tied up with string to keep them together temporarily, are placed on the big stone-topped tables and locked tightly in a chase so they may be handled upside down if necessary, and sent down to the presses. To see the men hammer the blocks laid on the face of the type to settle them evenly, you would think they would all be mashed, for the type is tender like lead, but they know how and it comes out all right.

You would hardly believe that pages so mixed as they seem to be could ever be printed so they would be in regular order, but they do, somehow. It's a mystery one cannot fathom until he studies it. Always there must be even numbers of pages, even if some are blank paper.

The laying of the forms on the beds of the electrically-driven presses requires much squeezing and hammering again, so that not a piece of metal or "furniture" around them will work out of place.

The "make-ready" here is a mysterious process to the novice. The paper that encircles the cylinder is built up a little here, much there, by pasting on one or two, sometimes more irregular shaped pieces of paper, so that every part of the type or cut will print evenly and without pressing through.

The difference between good printing and poor printing is largely decided here. It is not just a putting it on and running it through, but it requires skillful attention to every detail to give you a clean, bright product.

Thirty-twos, sixteens, eights, and sometimes by fours, the pages come out of the big cylinder presses, ready for the folder that yanks the sheet one way and another, hitting it in the middle and knocking it against another place till it falls out apparently exhausted in folded form below, ready to be taken to the elevator and run into the bindery, there to be sorted out and gathered.

On the big tables the girls with deft fingers gather the forms into their order and send them to the stapling machine that puts the little wires into the back and hold the cover on and the sheets together. Clickety-click, the machine sings as the girls rapidly send the forms over the saddle and under the stitcher.

The savage-looking cutting machine slices off the margins of a hundred at a single slash and makes them all even and smooth and then great loads of the finished books go to the mailing room. A woman with a little machine that has a bill like a duck goes along and jabs the little yellow slips onto the wrappers while others wrap the proper number in the labeled wrappers and fill the numerous mail bags that are open all around the room. The post office department requires that these all be routed so they will have to be handled very little after they have been loaded onto the trains. Naturally the railway mail clerks are not very enthusiastic when they have to fill a mail car with these Quarterlies when they are put on the train. They about swamp things for a while.

It takes much time to keep the mailing lists in order. Each quarter, just before mailing, these subscriptions that you and hundreds of others send in are all corrected and changed according to the latest information.

After all these 44,500 Sunday school Quarterlies are mailed out there are many who carelessly and otherwise have delayed their orders and must be supplied by the mailing clerk in the office.

All these operations have helped to place on your library table the Quarterly that costs you from three to six cents.

Wouldn't it be interesting for you in person to follow a lesson through from the beginning till you could see the finished product? It would but it might take six weeks. Sandwiched in with six other Quarterlies and the HERALD, Stepping Stones, Zion's Hope, Autumn Leaves and Journal of History and dozens of other things, you would lose it several times. To follow it would be harder than to try to follow this very much abbreviated description.

The Sunday school officers are expected to know all these details so well that when any decision is required from them about any special feature, it may be given immediately. Constantly are there little problems coming up as to the character of a title-page, the address of some officer, the insertion of an advertisement, supplying of a cut, or something else. Then again a real, life-size proposition comes along to be solved.

When the lesson material has passed the hands of the revising committee safely, an order is issued by the secretary to the treasurer which must be countersigned by the superintendent. This instructs the treasurer to issue a check to the editor for enough to help her get out another series and she goes through the process again. Don't you appreciate her work better now? And don't you have more of a personal interest in our other publications?

E. D. MOORE.

CURRENT EVENTS

ELEVATING PUBLIC MORALS.—On the 9th General Carranza issued a decree that prohibits bull fighting throughout Mexico. He asserts that the custom, with others that endanger lives and incite men to deeds of violence, must be repressed.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA PROTEST.—Following the announcement of the recent private loan of $60,000,000 for railroad building in China, Japan and Russia have formally protested against it to our state department.

STORM AND EARTHQUAKE IN SOUTH.—Though little damage resulted therefrom, earth tremors were felt during a tropical storm on the 18th over Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee. Exceptionally high wind and heavy rains did considerable damage.

AUSTRIAN PREMIER SHOT.—Count Karl Stuerghk, was assassinated by Ludwig Adler, an editor, on the 21st. He had been for a long time prominent in Austrian governmental affairs and the cause for the attack was said to be political.

CHANGE IN MAIL POLICY.—In a recent note to the United States, the British and French Governments have promised radical changes in the method of censoring the mails. While they do not offer to abandon the rule, it is thought the proposals will be satisfactory.

NO RELIEF FOR POLAND.—President Wilson has announced that his efforts to effect an agreement between the belligerent powers in Europe whereby Poland might receive aid from the United States had failed. There was a disagreement as to terms under which relief supplies should be sent and finally distributed.

OSBORNE RESIGNS.—Thomas Mott Osborne, the man who has so changed the conditions in Sing Sing Prison in New York, has resigned to take up the work of interesting the general public in prison reform. He makes the charge that the prison department is being used by State officials for political purposes, and that promises made to him are invariably broken.

EARLY SNOWSTORMS.—Heavy snowfall was reported in upper Michigan on the 16th. A severe blizzard swept over the Dakotas and into Nebraska and Iowa. Considerable snow fell and the weather records were broken in a number of places.

PHILIPPINE CONGRESS.—On the 16th the first Philippine Congress met with twenty thousand people present. For the first time in the history of the Philippines the non-Christian tribes have had representation in the legislative branch of the Island Government.

EUROPEAN WAR.—The Rumanians have been practically driven out of Transylvania by the Teutonic forces, principally German. Russians are reinforcing the Rumanians in the effort to prevent an invasion of their western territory. On the south they are losing much ground to the Bulgarians and Germans under von Mackensen. At the Macedonian front the allies have made a few slight gains over the Bulgarians to the north. The entente allies have demanded that Greece give them control of her fleet, and also of all materials for naval operations, as well as mails, telegraphs, and railroads. The armored autoes, familiarly known as "tanks," are reported in the operations north of Saloniki. There seems no abatement in the conflict on the western front, the allies continuing their advance against the Germans with much fury, although no important places have been taken. The Russians continue their operations toward Lemberg with little results. It is reported that Grand Duke Nicholas, who has been in charge of the Russian army in Armenia has been transferred to the Balkan region. On the 4th the auxiliary cruiser Gallia, with about two thousand troops aboard, was torpedoed by a submarine in the Mediterranean, with the loss of nearly a thousand. The central powers have assumed the offensive to a considerable extent recently.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

NEW RECORD IN EXPORTS.—During September $512,847,957 worth of goods were sent out from the United States. Imports fell off sharply as compared with August. The gold that came in during September was worth $85,713,799—about twice as much as the same month of last year.

"QUARTERLY" PRICES RAISED.—The General Sunday School Association is announcing in this issue a raise in the price of all Sunday school Quarterlies, to take effect with the next issue. Naturally we all deplore the conditions that cause this, but we must take such things as they come. The difference is slight, anyway.

THE DRY BALLOT THAT ISN'T CAST.—The report comes that four Dawson ministers were away at the time the Prohibition vote was taken in the Yukon territory. The drys lost by three votes. Had these ministers been at home and voted dry, as it is reasonably expected they would have done had they voted, a large area would now be added to the dry territory of the northwest. Herein is seen the necessity for polling every dry vote in a wet and dry contest.

GAVE PREACHER A HOME.—A very pleasant surprise was given, Saturday, to the Reverend Walter W. Smith, president of the Independence Stake, Reorganized Latter Day Saints Church, and his wife, when Mr. and Mrs. Wallace N. Robinson, now living in Kansas City, handed them a deed to a house and lot in this city.

The property is at 631 South Fuller Avenue. It is a fifty-foot lot with a one and one half story, eight-room house. The house, which was the home of the Robinsons during their residence in Independence, recently was moved from its original location on the south side of Electric Street facing the car line, to its present location about a block further south. The property is said to be worth $3,500 or perhaps more.

It was a personal gift to the Reverend Mr. Smith and his wife. They now are living at 223 South River Boulevard, but in a few days will move into their new home on Fuller Avenue.—Jackson Examiner, October 20, 1916.

Original Articles

OBTAINING HAPPINESS

(Sermon by H. O. Smith, delivered Sunday, March 19, 1916, at Lamoni, Iowa. Reported by Winsome L. Smith.)

For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it. For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil.—1 Peter 3: 10-12.

I wish to reread especially the first verse, for upon that will rest the message that I have to deliver to you this morning. "For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile."

THE MOST DESIRABLE THING

I presume that if I should ask any member of this congregation, especially if that individual were to take thought in making a reply, what was the most desirable thing that could come to him here in this life, the answer would be "happiness." Our subject this morning, or our effort at least, will be to endeavor to point out some of the ways through which happiness may be obtained.

One of the statements made in the Declaration of Independence is that each man has the right, the inalienable right, to pursue happiness, or something to that effect. And we believe that it is not only the right of an individual, but the duty of every man and woman in this world to endeavor to obtain this desirable attainment. But there is one strange thing to contemplate in our observation upon humanity, and that is, that few of us go about the obtaining of that which seems to be so desirable, in the best way; by doing that which is right. It seems to me that there is no way in this world in which happiness may be obtained better than by doing that which is right.

Quoting from the Book of Mormon just a brief statement, it is declared, "sin never was happiness." Hence we would conclude that the individual who made this statement believed that the only way to obtain happiness would be to refrain from sinning, and I believe that whether we accept the Book of Mormon as divine revelation or not, any man who had had experience in this life would agree that so far as that statement is concerned the truth had been uttered. Sin never was happiness, and sin can never produce happiness; hence if we are anxious to attain to this particular condition of mind, the best way for us is to endeavor to put ourselves in a position where we desire to do only that which is right.

Hence, I believe in the statement made here in my text, "For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: Let him eschew evil, and do good," and I believe that supreme happiness to an individual in this life as well as in the life to come will be the result of following this line.

THE GREATEST MESSAGE

Doubtless you will recognize the fact because of my appearance here before you to-day in the capacity of a preacher of the gospel, that I believe in that gospel. I believe that it is the greatest message that ever came to man. I believe that it covers all of the difficulties that come to us in this life. I believe that there is no evil but what it provides for an escape from it. There is no need of redemption from anything that is wrong but what we find in that gospel the means of that redemption. I do not care whether the ills that come to us relate to the spiritual, moral, physical, or the mental, all the evils of life may be remedied by the application of the precepts of the gospel of Jesus Christ, or the precepts of the Master, as they have fallen from his lips, or have fallen from the lips of his servants who have been inspired by his Spirit.

I am going to call your attention to a few statements in the record that lies before me, that I believe will answer some of the questions as to how happiness may be obtained. The first passage is found in Job 5: 17: "Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth; therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty."

Happy is the man whom God correcteth, and I believe that it is possible to philosophize just a little bit along the lines of the statement made in this book, and I think that the more we apply our reasoning faculties to an examination of these statements, the more we will be confirmed in their wisdom. "Happy is the man whom God correcteth."

THE TEN DEMANDMENTS

I am in the habit of culling from different sources certain things that impress me and use them in the presentation of my thought, and several years ago I came across a statement that impressed me very much. It was called the ten demandments, not the ten commandments. They originated with a man who was the proprietor of a large department store and employed hundreds of men and women to serve him. These ten demandments were printed in large, boldfaced letters upon cardboard, and placed in every department and every locality in that department where they would arrest the attention of the individual who might pass through.

I can recall just now but one of these ten demandments, but they were for the benefit of his employees, and this particular demandment was this: "Don't kick if I kick. I do not spend my time picking specks out of rotten apples." It may have been expressed in homely language, yet the individual who rightly considered the meaning of the statement obtained a great deal of encouragement, or should have done so. And not only did it convey encouragement to the individual who recognized the fact that his employer took enough interest in his welfare to correct him, but by observing those corrections that individual might attain perhaps to efficiency in the service of the man in whose pay he was.

Criticism and correction are not always pleasant, but if we resent a criticism we should not hold ill will towards the criticizer, but hold ill will towards ourselves who have given occasion for that criticism; that is, if the criticism is just and we have confidence in the man who criticizes. I do not look upon an individual who criticizes me as my enemy, but I am considerably of the opinion that is expressed by Saint Paul in the fourth chapter of his declaration to the Galatians. It seems as though some had resented criticism that had been passed upon them, for he says, "Am I therefore become your enemy because I tell you the truth?"

No, we should not consider an individual in any way our enemy who corrects us, and through that correction endeavors to bring about improvement within us, but we should believe him to be the very best friend we have. So in this instance where this man made the statement, "Do not kick if I kick. I do not spend my time picking specks out of rotten apples," the individual who was approached with a criticism by his employer would understand that his employer saw within him sufficient evidence of an efficient man, or of becoming one, therefore he took pains to point out the dangers that might lie in his pathway and hinder him in accomplishing his desire.

GOD'S CORRECTIONS

"Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth," certainly should produce happiness in the mind of an individual who recognizes that God sees within him sufficient evidence of becoming a proficient servant. God seeks to correct and rightly direct him, so how gladly he should respond. How gladly he should respond to God's effort in his case. We certainly agree with the statement, terse though it may be, as declared here, "Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth," and the further injunction, "Therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty."

Chastening is not always pleasant, and we sometimes resent it, but when we come to consider the statement made here by one of the Lord's servants in connection with this thought, it may possibly produce within us a better feeling towards chastisement.

For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons. Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live? For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasures; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness. Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.—Hebrews 12: 6-11.

We see here the reason why God corrects us, that there may come to us improvements along the right lines, with a result good for us. We should be happy in the consciousness, not that it became necessary for God to correct us—that should bring to us grief—but that God takes enough interest in us to correct us when he sees that we are wrong, and gladly should we respond to the call to come up higher no matter when it may come, to occupy better and grander grounds in this world, simply for the reason that the higher and the greater our attainments along spiritual lines the greater will be our happiness here and hereafter.

HAPPINESS RESULT OF KNOWLEDGE AND WISDOM

Again I turn to another statement along this line. In the third chapter of Proverbs, thirteenth verse, I read, "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding."

I have had some experience in this life, and judging from myself (we call it righteous judgment when we judge others by ourselves) I can believe in the statement made here. Happiness is the result of knowledge and wisdom. One of the greatest things that I have had to overcome in my ministerial work, my public work, has been the fact that I have not the knowledge I should have—speaking from a secular standpoint, of secular education. I have been hindered in my work in consequence of it. I have hesitated many times to write for the press, especially for the secular press, simply because of the fact that I did not consider my education equal to the occasion. Many times the blush of shame has been brought to my face because I have inadvertently in writing to men who had good educations, made mistakes in the grammatical construction of my sentences.

I mentioned in one of the discourses I preached from this stand a few weeks ago, that I enjoyed the distinction at one time of being a member of a ministerial association in the East, and I told you some of my experiences during my occupancy there, how in consequence of my lack of understanding along certain lines I had to remain quiet—dared not undertake to discuss some of the subjects that were discussed there because of my lack of understanding of that subject.

Do you think that brought happiness to me? Gladly would I have stood with the foremost educator along the lines that had been laid before me. But when it came to the question of the gospel of Christ I did not take a back seat with these people. I found that they had crude conceptions of the message that Christ had to give to man; they had a limited understanding of his work; they had but a faint comprehension of his doctrine, and when these things were up for discussion I could take my place with them, and I could go out from those halls satisfied so far as that was concerned.

RESPONSIBILITY OF POSSESSION

So we recognize the fact here that this individual who is called one of the wise men, was right when he made the statement, "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding," but we must take into consideration the fact that knowledge and wisdom bring with them responsibility, and the question is, "Are we ready to discharge this responsibility?" If not, it is better that knowledge and understanding shall not come to us. We may look for knowledge and understanding, we may seek for them, but as we seek for these things there comes with them the commensurate responsibility attaching to the individual who understands and has obtained wisdom.

In the forty-seventh and forty-eighth verses of the twelfth chapter of Luke, we find the Master speaking of these things.

And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required; and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

Hence in obtaining learning and understanding, and especially along the lines of the gospel message to man, as we Latter Day Saints claim to have received this knowledge, there comes that commensurate responsibility. It might be possibly urged that in the statement made here by the Master he offered a premium to ignorance, it being better not to know than to know. But to the individual who has an opportunity to know the gospel message, an opportunity to know of its possibilities, will come condemnation when he stands upon the other side, if he deliberately turns his mind away from the receiving of the knowledge and the wisdom that comes with that message. Then has he earned God's condemnation, and not only will he receive the condemnation of the Lord, but the condemnation of his own mind when he recognizes that he might have known of the wonderful privileges that might have come to him had he known and made application of that wisdom, and hence can see the mistake he has made by ignorance. God requires us to be wise in regard to the things pertaining to his message, especially when that message is before us and we have the opportunity to know the things that God has prepared for us.

Christ refers to this in another instance in John 13:17. We find him speaking of this very thing, and impressing, or endeavoring to impress upon us the necessity for us to obtain this desirable state of mind of which we are speaking this morning. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

In our Sunday school class this morning the teacher was telling of some of his experiences. He told of one man who made a vow to the Lord that if he would bless him so that he could put his family in a proper financial condition he would enter into his service and remain in that service. God blessed him, and he began to accumulate the things of this life, but he forgot his promise to the Lord, and the brother asked him one day if he remembered the promise that he had made to the Lord, and he said, "I would to God I could not remember it." That did not bring happiness to him. The knowledge of the fact that he had lied to God had brought to him sorrow, and as long as the memory of that promise that he had made to God was with him, sorrow would attend him and there would be no help for it.

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." I want to make the statement here to-day, that the happiest moments of my life have been when I have felt that I was in harmony with God's will and doing that which he required at my hand, and I believe the happiest moment that can possibly come to an individual in the world to come, will be when he may be permitted to receive from his Master, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant. Thou hast been faithful over a few things." Faithful in the discharge of the duties that devolve upon us, happy are ye if ye do them.

Hence, if we are anxious for happiness, anxious for those things that make for happiness, then we should certainly be found always upon the side of right, performing those duties and those things demanded under the gospel law that we may obtain that for which we would seek, and for which we would give much.

HAPPINESS IN SERVICE

We may obtain happiness by serving others. Too many of us in our service in looking around for some way in which we may serve, make a great mistake in regard to where that service may be demanded, and we oftentimes think away off in the future somewhere, or in some distant part of the land, far from where our particular lot may have placed us, we may find the means of happiness. Some long for the days that are past, and opportunities that are gone when others have served the Master, and they think that there is no possible chance for service now like that which was rendered hundreds of years ago by men. We wish we might have been in Galilee when the Master was there, that we might have fallen at his feet and served him, while we are neglecting means for service every day and every hour of our lives. Here is a short poem that expresses a thought that possibly may be in line, and it is called "Happiness."

I followed Happiness to make her mine,
Past towering oak and swinging ivy vine.
She fled; I chased, o'er slanting hill and dale,
O'er fields and meadows, in the purpling vale.
Pursuing rapidly o'er the dashing stream,
I scaled the dizzy cliffs where eagles scream;
I traversed swiftly every land and sea,
But always Happiness eluded me.

That is the way with us. We make wonderful efforts sometimes to obtain happiness, when right at our door we may find the opportunity for service to our fellow men through which we may obtain the wonderful thing for which we claim we are all seeking: happiness in this life and in the life to come.

Exhausted, fainting, I pursued no more,
But sank to rest upon a barren shore.
One came and asked for food, and one for alms,
I placed the bread and gold in bony palms.
One came for sympathy, and one for rest;
I shared with every needy one my best.
When, lo, sweet Happiness with form divine,
Stood by me whispering softly "I am thine."

The little things of life, the things with which we are constantly surrounded, bring to us the desirable thing we are seeking for, and yet we neglect the very things that God has placed in our hands to accomplish and produce.

"ACRES OF DIAMONDS"

I listened to that wonderful lecture called "Acres of diamonds" a number of years ago. It was all along this line, not along the line of the possession of happiness, especially, but of the little things of life that will help us in every way if we only take advantage of the things that are within our reach. That is the theme of the lecture all the way through and I shall never forget the lesson impressed upon my mind at that time, of the wonderful possibilities that lie at the door of every man and woman in this world.

I cannot refrain from calling your attention to one more thought, even if it detains you longer than your usual hour.

In James 5:11 I read, "Behold, we count them happy which endure." What wonderful statements these are when we come to think of them—what a wonderful scope of meaning. "Happy is the man whom God correcteth." "Happy is the man who obtaineth wisdom." "Happy is the man who serveth his fellow men," and "Happy is the man that endureth."

Is that not true of almost everything you can think of in this world? Men start out to attain a certain thing, a certain position in life. That position is attained, and that man is happy to think that he has conquered the obstacles that have lain in his pathway, to think that he has overcome those obstacles and obtained his desire. It matters not what it is, whether to obtain the things of this life or the life to come, just in proportion to the benefits that come from having attained the object, then happiness comes to that individual. Just in proportion to the benefit that comes so happiness comes.

HAPPINESS IN RIGHTEOUS LABOR

We may set our mind upon a home, and when that home has been built and our loved ones installed in it, happiness comes to us, because we have attained, we have endured, we have accomplished that which we started out to accomplish. Happiness or satisfaction comes to us just in proportion as we have labored righteously to attain to that position. So it is with everything in this world. We count those happy who endure, but I presume that it is safe to conclude that in accordance with this record that lies before me, having reference to our spiritual endurance, that this man, the apostle writing this statement had reference to the individual who made a fight in this Christian life, and endured unto the end.

We count them happy which endure. It is pre-eminently true that the person who endures in this gospel life attains to the promises and happiness that can come here in this life, or in the world to come. The doing of good, the accomplishing of that which God desires us to accomplish, is that which brings to us the greatest happiness that can possibly come to us.

LAYING DOWN THE ARMOR

I have had some experience in the work, having been a missionary for twenty-seven years of my life, and I have made some observations during that time. I always say that I never have seen a man lay down his armor, judging from the results of laying down that armor, that I would care to imitate. Never yet. This may be a fable that we are engaged in, I may not know so far as that is concerned. All the hope and aspiration may be blotted out when death shall come to me. That may be true, but judging from the things that I see right here in this life, I would not care to lay down my armor. I would rather endure to the end, even though I never attain to anything more than that which I attain to right now. I would rather endure and continue in the work that God has intrusted to my care, and believe in him and believe in the message that I believe he has delivered to me, than to lay down that armor if the result of laying down that armor will bring to me that which I have observed in others.

There was a man, many of you know him should I mention his name to-day, possibly my reference to him will be sufficient so you can call his name. He had been a missionary for a good many years, a missionary in the service of this church. He concluded to lay down his armor, and, not satisfied with just that he undertook to overthrow that which he had for years preached to the world. He came to my table one day after having written a book against the church, and came into that neighborhood for the purpose of selling this book, as he knew the Latter Day Saints were an investigating sort of people and if he had anything against them they would buy it as quick as they would something for the church, because they wanted to investigate it thoroughly from all standpoints. He came to my home one day just before the dinner hour and I invited him to remain.

He was sitting at the end of the board, and I at his right hand. During the meal we were discussing the question of his leaving the church, and presently he turned to me and said, "You people think that just as soon as a man leaves your church he is going straight to the Devil."

There is some Yankee about me, even though I was born in Texas, and it is proverbial for Yankees to answer a question by asking another. So I replied, "They usually do, don't they?" The man had had a great deal of experience in what they usually did. His face flushed for a moment, and it was a few moments before he replied, "Well, I must confess to you they do."

I said "Yes, they usually do. I presume, however, that you think you are going to be an exception to the rule, that you are going to prosper where other men have failed, you are going to succeed where other men have gone down. You are going to go up where other men have gone down. But," I said, "time alone will tell just what effect it will have upon you as an individual in laying down your armor."

Time proved it. Men took him up and thought that he would be one of the instruments in throwing over this work that God has instituted, and when they saw that he could not accomplish that which they thought he could, they left him to himself, and he died in poverty and distress.

He did not endure. Happiness was not the result, and in conclusion I want to make this observation:

I do not believe it is necessary for me to go further into an explanation of this text that "Happy is the man that endures," but I want to make this observation. They say that comparisons are odious, but I cannot help comparing sometimes the influence of this gospel message to other messages that may come to me, and I have observed this, that men may come from other churches, popular churches of to-day, and engage in the work of this movement, and their progress is upward, constantly upward. If they engage righteously and if they engage earnestly, their progress is upward, but let an individual attain to any eminence at all, any knowledge in the great message God has delivered to us in the latter day, and then lay down his armor, he goes downward always. He lessens in influence upon his fellow men constantly; is hindered in the doing of the thing that he would love to do in this life, and it doesn't make any difference how great an effort he may make to do that which may be demanded of him in the other institution to which he has gone, his influence from that time begins to lessen, his spirituality goes down, and he is dead. In many, many cases instead of being honored because of his uprightness, truthfulness and integrity, he becomes an untruthful, scheming man, trying to find fault where fault cannot be found, or should not be found, where there is no occasion for it.

You may account for it as you please. I must account for it only from the standpoint that this is God's work, and the man who engages in it increases in wisdom, and the man who lays it down must necessarily decrease. I cannot account for it in any other way, and it is one of the greatest evidences that could possibly come to me as an individual, of the value of this work to me, not only in this life, but in the life to come.

* * * * *

WHAT IS THE GREATEST NEED OF OUR YOUNG PEOPLE?

In the consideration of what the church needs most, I have concluded after years of thought and experience that it needs spiritually inclined young people, and to have these the question forces itself upon me, What is the greatest need of our young people to-day? The future work of the church must be done by those who are young in years to-day. The conditions in the world are foreign to spiritual development, for either old or young. The "sowing of wild oats" is thought to be in following in immorality and corruption and does not comprehend the satisfying of the carnal or fleshly nature, in its every feature, contrary to the leadings of the Spirit of God. To follow after the flesh rather than the Spirit is the one thing that the Apostle Paul has urged as dangerous. (See Romans 8.) What the flesh yearns after is the thing to be overcome by following after the things of the Spirit.

Because of nearly losing a desire for the salvation of my soul and my influence for good, through the world represented in the dance, pool, and billiards, with the bowling game and baseball influences I have—since before coming into the church—thought seriously of what this experience might be utilized for in helping others to avoid that which has cost me so dearly. It is with regret that I have to confess that I spent the early years of life in the pursuit of pleasure through worldly pastimes. I knew then that to serve God and follow these influences would not lead to the same end, and although taught by my mother to pray while I was yet a child, yet when in my early teens after I had entered the infatuation of the above-mentioned worldly influences I ceased to pray, knowing I was not doing the thing that would merit for me the approval of God. This continued for a few years, yet all the while I would attend preaching services with my mother, and whenever she went to prayer meetings I would go with her for company.

I saw plainly that the spirit of the one was not the spirit of the other. Before I entered the church I became convinced that such associations and influences were not Godlike, neither were they adding to the influences of true manhood, but to the opposite. Whatever influence I had was leading other young people away from religious influences, and I knew their detriment, and to my shame.

Some months before I had any desire to enter into church relationship I withdrew from these worldly influences, and began an investigation of various faiths, of which I had become previously acquainted by early Sunday school life or through an association with those who were members thereof. I saw that an association with these various faiths had wrought in the young a desire and a condition of life to which I had not attained, and which I knew was a more satisfactory way to live, and their lives I knew were more honorable in the sight of heavenly personages and of honorable men than my worldly life had been and was, and I was not satisfied with what I had, though I was fascinated with the pleasures that I found in these associations.

When I finally became convinced that the church with the restored gospel was the one that would convey to me, if it was to be received in the religious world, an enjoyment far surpassing that which I had experienced in a practical way with worldly association, I entered with this thought in mind, If I do not find this superior pleasure I will return to the place whence I have come; but I believed that I would find in my new associations this added and superior pleasure. I found it, and with regret I look upon misspent years in the chaffy pleasures that the world offers.

Then the world and the church were separated, but now it is not so. Even those in the church who followed those worldly pastimes were not looked upon as worthy to occupy in service that was thought to be holy, and they themselves did not so think. I am speaking of the churches, all of them with which I was acquainted in the Protestant world. It is true that some of the older members of the Latter Day Saint Church were still continuing in some of the amusements that had been introduced at Nauvoo, the first downward step toward losing the spirit of the work of the restoration. Even those things were frowned upon as not worthy to be associated with the work of God, and no one was expected to have any interest in the work of the Sunday school that made these things a part of his life. To-day, to make it harder for the young, the churches of the world, and those who take some of the most prominent positions in church work are advocating the adopting, and many of them have already adopted, sports into the church, so that those who have the pride of life and are pugnacious can learn boxing, and those who have great physical strength can learn wrestling, and those who are desirous of grace so that they may have more pride of life can learn dancing, and those who have a scientific turn of mind may learn billiards, pool and cards, etc., and all these can be learned in the churches; but whence come all these desires? Come they of the Spirit or of the flesh? None can answer but that they come of the flesh. We are informed that "there is now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit."

The ones to whom this was addressed were "in Christ." This includes both old and young. To walk after the flesh is a condition that will not free us from condemnation, and to be under condemnation and in the church is not an enviable position. Our young people do not desire it. Do they properly understand it? They demand and need to be instructed to avoid the one and to continue in the other, and they should know that to walk in the Spirit will give them a satisfaction with life that nothing else can.

To adopt pool playing into religious circles does not make it the better. It was planned as a game of sport. To introduce the card games into the church will not remove from it the spirit that brought them into existence. To adopt the dance into the church or any contest of sport will not make it the better, neither will following them be other than walking after the flesh. The argument made that in doing these things under church control will keep our young people in the church is false. To walk after the flesh under church control, well, I do not see the possibility of it, but I see it possible to have these things under the control of members of the church; but they have fathered the things of the flesh instead of things of the Spirit. The sectarian world has tried these conditions for years, and now we see their failure. Their young members as well as older ones may be more polished in walking after the things of the flesh, but they care less for the things of the Spirit.

What I wanted and needed when I was young was to know how to walk after the Spirit, and all along the pathway of duty I have found that the crying desire of the young of this church—whom I have kept in very close touch with in all my work, both in the Sunday school and the young people's societies—and it is the crying need of the young of to-day, and when that need is satisfied they will be led in pathways of virtuous exercise and enjoyment that will not include walking after the flesh. They will have time and desire for such things, and the God of the body and spirit will so bless that in the exercise of them in accord with the Spirit's leadings there will be found greater satisfaction and real enjoyment.

When anyone has an appetite for the things of the world or flesh, he will not relish the things of the Spirit till there has been ministered some remedy so that such an appetite will be supplanted by an appetite for the things of the Spirit; but this cannot be done by placing the things of the flesh under the control of church members, for the facts are that the church members are under the control of these sports and worldly exercises and enjoyments or they would not think to place others under their influence, and they would know that such things will not increase their appetite for the things of the Spirit or lessen their appetite for the things of the world.

The Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations have tried that, and they have gone so far as to consent that these are a part of church work, even including the bowling alley, pool table and card table, all of which is by them included in the same class; but they not having the Spirit of God, we know that they have made a great mistake in including them with the things that will increase a desire for spiritual things. Are we making the same mistake?

Young people will find the purest and best if under the leadings of the Spirit, and we as a church should give encouragement to that which will be the most helpful to them to develop along spiritual lines. I find great encouragement in the lines written to President F. M. Smith, and published in the HERALD. I have been assured that he would rise to this occasion ever since long before he was set apart as the President of the church. As a true shepherd the Lord will give him in time all the wisdom needed to accomplish for the church its spiritual uplift, and the world and its attractions will have no influence upon neither young nor old, for we will all be consecrated to active service, giving that service to God, because we love him with ALL our might, mind, heart and soul; and what a joy to answer the promptings of such a love. That is what the young of the church need, and what many are now expressing a longing desire for.

Having to give an account to God for the use of our bodies and spirits, which are the Lord's, we find the great satisfaction of a soul filled with love to God is to glorify God in our bodies and spirits. (1 Corinthians 6: 20.)

I want to help give to our young people that which they need and that which will fill their souls with a joy unspeakable, and leave behind me as a monument that upon which the coming generations may look, and breathe in more of the Spirit of God while looking.

J. F. MINTUN.

Of General Interest

A LAY WARNING TO THE MINISTRY

The church is a failure as a "human" institution, but as a "divine" one it is "all-powerful." Let us put a stop, then, to the "secularization" that is "sapping its best lifeblood," urges a layman in The Reformed Church Review (Lancaster, Pennsylvania, April), who at the same time deplors the fact that this cry of warning should come from a layman. What is worse, he knows that "not one clergyman in ten" will agree with his view, yet he believes that he is giving expression to "a very deep-seated fear that is in the breasts of many laymen who love the church and have its best interests at heart." Stated concisely, the burden of the writer's protest is that while the modern church is trying to "Christianize the social and civil life" of the world, the world is "rapidly secularizing" the church. Some persons call it "socializing" the church, others argue that the process merely involves the application of old-time principles to new conditions. The truth of the matter, as this writer sees it, is that under the "euphonious expression of 'social service,' a propaganda is on foot to commit the church to many old and new methods of reform without, and thus divert the church from the exercise of its normal function, which is to regenerate the heart of man from within." For example:

The sacred edifice heretofore dedicated to the worship of Almighty God has now, with its parish house, its club, and other auxiliaries, become the center of secular functions. We now go to church to hear sermons on the minimum wage, adequate housing of the poor, the regulation of moving pictures and the dance halls, how to vote, and the latest vice investigation report. From this center agents and detectives of law and order societies make report of nightly investigations; and it is said even ministers of the gospel keep silent watch during the hours of the night and assist in rounding up inmates from disreputable houses. They appear as prosecutors and witnesses before grand and petit juries in the quarter sessions court. Billiard and pool tables are being installed, dancing classes are organized, and all sorts of amusements offered to entice the youth within its sacred precincts. A child returning home from Sunday school recently was asked by its mother the subject of the lesson. It was how to keep the streets clean. Another Sunday, kindness to dumb animals furnished the subject of the lesson, and this was in a graded Sunday school up to date. A good woman who had suffered greatly with a recent sorrow brought herself to church longingly for some comforting word. She heard a sermon on the charity organization society and the visiting nurse.

Nevertheless the writer disclaims any intention of opposing rational amusements, philanthropic movements, and real social service, or of defending violations of the law. But he does hold that while social activities may be wholesome and good, they are not religion, for:

As we view it, the church by thus allying itself with secular movements is endeavoring to cure the evils of the social life by a species of legalism, striving to purify the sinful nature of man by attacking the outside, forgetting that crimes and violations of law are the external marks only of an inward demoralization and rottenness of the heart. The root of the evil in the world is in the human heart, and to redeem the world the inner spiritual nature must be first purified. The crime committed is the fruit of sin in the heart. You may punish the criminal for violating the law, but that does not cure the sinful heart. The Christian minister has to do with sin, not with crime. When, therefore, he allies himself with the officers of the law in arresting criminals he is departing from his proper function and weakening his power and ability to cure the sin in the heart.

Leave philanthropic and humanitarian movements to statesmen and economists, the writer says, in addressing ministers directly. The incumbent who "knows his congregation in the inner life of its members and keeps constantly in touch with their spiritual needs" has no time for other activities, and when he succeeds in raising the moral and religious life in the hearts of his people he will be "wielding an influence for good in the community that will bring the results he now deems so desirable and necessary."

Meanwhile we are reminded that one of the amazing features in the development of the modern church has been the effort to take from it everything divine. Indeed,

Ministers of the gospel are willing to preach on every subject under the sun except the gospel, and when they begrudgingly hand it down they almost tell us it is not divine, but a man-made thing. They have relegated to the brush heap most of the sacred beliefs, such as the miracles, original sin, the vicarious atonement of Jesus Christ, the efficacy of baptism and the holy communion, and many of them even deny the validity of their own divine office as ministers of God. They prefer to hold their office from the people, not of God.

All comes from man, nothing from God. Perhaps this is the reason so many ministers look down on empty pews and complain bitterly that their members do not come to hear the sermons prepared with so much labor.—Literary Digest.

* * * * *

REFUSES LARGE SUM FOR CHAIR

Joseph Smith's chair—the one in which he sat and wrote many of his lectures and tenets as founder of the "Mormon" Church—was one of the attractions viewed by hundreds at the annual general assembly of followers of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints which closed Monday in Kirtland with sessions at the famous temple.

The chair is of priceless value and large sums of money offered for it have been refused.

"We have been constantly besieged by curio collectors and museum managers from all over the United States, but no sum of money can buy it," said G. T. Griffiths, of Columbus. Griffiths is one of the twelve apostles of the church and has traveled all over the world in its interests, as one of the highest officials.

The chair rests in a little alcove on the second stair landing. For years it was the property of Mrs. Frank Brockway, of Kirtland. By the terms of her will this chair is to forever remain in the temple at Kirtland.

Among the hundreds who visited the temple during this assembly which began August 10, were many not of the faith. They were treated courteously and Griffiths in spare moments was busy conducting many tourists through the building.

We are doing a great missionary work, even among the followers of the Mormon church in Utah, said Griffiths. This church has absolutely no connection with ours, since the followers of Brigham Young chose to leave the mother church. Just a few days ago the daughter of Joseph Smith the present head of the Utah church was a visitor at the Kirtland temple. I told her that the religion of that church was a stench in the nostrils of the people of this country and of course she didn't like it. Occasionally we have Mormons from the Utah church who come here to look at the temple. I always tell them that they get more courteous treatment here than our people do in Utah. We show them every nook and corner of our Kirtland temple, but they allow no one through every part of the Utah buildings.

In Utah our members and missionaries are persecuted, they giving us the same treatment that they received once themselves. Among our converts was one man who had three wives. He divorced them and divided his property equally among them. Once a German woman whose husband had become impressed with the polygamy idea was told by him that he was going to bring another wife home. "Bring her," she said. After the new wife had been installed in the home and had retired with her new husband, the German woman scalded them with hot water.

The Utah church expects to get a big hold in Germany at the close of the present war because of the scarcity of men and the prevalence of women.

Among the important speakers who have attended this assembly were R. Baldwin, of Sharon; Alma Booker, of Sioux City, Iowa; William Anderson, Independence, Missouri; T. U. Thomas, of Youngstown; James E. Bishop, Steubenville; Bishop J. A. Becker, Kirtland; L. G. Burdick, James McConaughy, A. E. Stone, J. Carlisle and A. J. Terry.

The entire work of the construction of the Kirtland temple was done by hand and there are many priceless carvings. Tourists are now closely guarded, as formerly they cut pieces of the wood and some of these carvings for souvenirs. The temple bears a unique distinction. It was built when glass was scarce, and in many of the windows several small fragments were pieced together that none of the glass would be wasted.

Kirtland was a city of tents during the assembly. —Geauga County (Ohio) Record, August 25, 1916.

Woman's Auxiliary

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

Auxiliary Work in the South Sea Islands

Although our work in the South Sea Islands along auxiliary lines, may not be of a very large scope, yet we feel sure that our sisters in the land of Zion will be interested in knowing of our efforts in that direction, among the Lamanites in this mission. Our work has been more or less limited, but we trust that good has been accomplished and some light given to help our dark-skinned sisters to a better and more complete understanding of the responsibility and sacredness of parenthood.

At the outset, the work in this mission along child welfare and social lines presents a tremendous aspect. Without a doubt, there is no place in the missionary field richer in possibilities in auxiliary work than this mission. When one leaves San Francisco and after a twelve-day ocean voyage glides to the port in Papeete, Tahiti, he virtually finds himself in a new and different world. Customs are different, moral standards are different; one meets strange and new points of view regarding social relationships; the newcomer finds that if he is to accomplish much in benefiting the native, he must study human nature as well as the native language. The social question in the islands presents a large and serious problem and we believe it is the question that needs the most agitation at the present time.

One will not live long among the natives before he will acquire a knowledge of their home life, the relationship existing between parents and their offspring, their views concerning the chastity of woman, and with that knowledge, comes an overwhelming desire to assist those mothers to develop their children properly, to better manage their homes and to instill purer and higher ideals of virtue and honor in their young men and women. But one soon meets obstacles and quickly learns that customs of generations cannot be changed in a few months and years.

It would seem upon the face of it, that the social question with the natives, was largely a matter of education; that ignorance of nature's laws was the real cause of the immoral conditions existing. This is true to a great extent; but it is equally true that the native does not receive quickly when light and truth do come to him. He has been bound by tradition and superstition until it is, indeed, difficult for him to break away.

As before stated, social conditions are so different from conditions in other parts of the world, that in teaching, one has to use his own judgment in regard to subject matter, suiting it to the conditions and needs of these people. Printed matter from the States gives us points but cannot be followed closely, because "milk" rather than "meat" is needed and were the same subject to be treated, we would be forced to approach the matter from entirely different angles. No auxiliary societies have been organized here as we have not thought it advisable, simply because the native sister is not ready for it. However, we think that in the near future one will be organized in Papeete because there will always be a white missionary's wife there who could properly look after it. But wherever Sister Christensen and the writer go, we hold classes or meetings for the mothers and sisters; we also conducted such meetings during the mission conference. In these meetings, we try to present such subjects as they need most.

We have discussed the following subjects in many branches: "Responsibility and sacredness of motherhood," "Play and its relation to child life," "Work and its relation to the child," "Children bathing naked in the sea," "Teaching children obedience, duty of parents in educating their children and the proper school to attend," "What mothers should teach their young girls from twelve to eighteen years," "How to keep our young people pure and virtuous."

The subject of "play" was introduced because the natives have a foolish idea that children should not play, in fact, that it is a sin to play. Sister Savage recently informed me that during their stay in the islands, an elder in the island of Hereheretue was silenced by the president of the branch, because he made a toy boat for his small boy and helped him sail it. This, perhaps, may be an extreme case, nevertheless, it is a very prevalent idea among them that it is wrong and sinful to indulge in play of any kind. We have tried to rid them of this idea and trust that some have been converted to the fact that the right kind of play is not only proper and just but highly beneficial in the developing of character.

In Papeete most of the Saints live on church property, inclosed by a stone sea wall. There is a large vacant place in the center which makes an ideal playground. Through the cooperation of the sisters in this branch, we have bought a croquet set from America. This is only one of the many things that we hope will be installed to educate and develop physically the children through play.

We discussed the question of schools, because our people are negligent in sending their children to school regularly. The compulsory school laws in Tahiti are very lax and in most of the Paumotu group, no schools have been established; consequently, the natives are very indifferent concerning the regular attendance at school, leaving it much to the child to do as he feels inclined. Again, we find many Saints placing their children in the Catholic convents and schools to reside the year around, leaving them entirely under the influence and control of the priests and nuns. There is absolutely no excuse for such procedure in Papeete as there are good Government schools here. Because of this condition the subject of schools was introduced.

Under the heading of the "young girls" we tried to enlighten them along the lines of the laws of our bodies. The young girls are so woefully ignorant of nature's laws and the consequence of breaking those laws. There is a tradition existing among the natives to the effect that pure, virtuous girls will not live—that it is sure death to a girl to remain a virgin. When we were first made acquainted with this tradition, it seemed so revolting and disgusting as to be almost unbelievable. But as we studied the question more deeply, we found that there really was a cause for this idea so prevalent among them. Because of ignorance, they have transgressed nature's laws and as a result death has often come; again through ignorance, they have laid the cause of the death to chastity. One would think that when the functions of the body and nature's sacred laws were explained to a people who had received the light of the restored gospel, that such a foolish tradition would soon fade away. But not so. Former missionaries have persistently fought it, it is being "exploded" continually now, but still the majority of our people believe and cling to it, leading and guiding their young girls according to it. Revolting as it may seem, elders in the church have been known to command their daughters to go upon the street that they might not die. Some mothers help their girls to go wrong that they may, as they think, live; other mothers lay no obstacles in the way of their daughters when they see fit to become street women or bring a companion home to live; a few mothers, I am happy to say, counsel and make an effort to save the young from the sin of the race.

In the island of Makatea, in a mothers' meeting, in answer to the question, "Is the tradition concerning the chastity of girls true?" a majority of the women answered that they thought it was; one sister said that girls might possibly live as virgins until eighteen years of age but surely no longer; another sister answered that the girls would die in a physical sense, but "of course, we know that they will be saved"; another said that girls might live but she thought that they would have very weak bodies and very poor health. Is it any wonder that there is scarcely a young girl in this mission who grows to womanhood in purity and virtue? As long as this tradition remains among them, just that long immorality will flourish. Without a doubt, you who read, will think that this condition could easily be corrected through teaching and education. And so it would seem, but the natives cling so tenaciously to this belief that it is difficult, indeed, to get them away from it. Some few receive the light, but many persist in sticking to their old ways. We are trying, as have all other former missionaries, to teach them the inconsistency of such a belief and the sacredness of the better way.

We have edited a department for the sisters in the mission paper, Te Orometua. This has been conducted largely along home and child welfare lines. Sister Christensen is doing good work with the sisters along the lines of sewing. I think she intends organizing sewing classes for them. Many other lines of work are being attempted from time to time in an effort to bring them to a higher state of development. They need training and teaching along temporal lines—they need to know how to live.

Although great discouragements come to us, we feel to labor on and use our energies in promulgating a gospel that will not only purify our spiritual beings but our physical beings as well.

CLARA KELLOGG ELLIS.

The Schoolhouse as a Community Center

The women under the home department can make themselves a factor in the amusement and entertainment of the community.

The day is gone when the schoolhouse was intended simply for children. The school building is fast becoming the most important center in the community. Publicity for the schoolhouse is the new method. What can surpass a woman as a publicity agent? In Kansas, the women's clubs are being used as most effective instruments of publicity for the schools and such associations have given a whole session to the discussion of the theme "what can be done to improve our local schools."

Every reputable form of entertainment should be invited to be held in the school building. The school building should be looked to as a source of all community entertainment. This elevates the character of all performances, shows and other amusements in the community for citizens will not tolerate in a schoolhouse what they might allow without protest in another place of entertainment. This method of amusement induces the young to expend their surplus energy in sane, decent ways, makes local society more democratic, encourages everybody to know everybody else, etc.

The woman's club can secure lectures of a high class often to be given in the schoolhouse. Educational slides may be borrowed from the universities by simply paying express charges; so, if a stereopticon machine is owned by the society, much legitimate amusement may be furnished to the young and older ones of the community at little cost.

There is a form of entertainment particularly vital which is being made a community activity in which all may take part in many small and rural places. The women of a club in Missouri are giving what they call reading plays. They take the classics of literature and vitalize them by reading them in character. The parts need not be memorized, but read from a small book. A real living acquaintance is thus made by the performers and listeners with the best in literature. Nothing is of so much assistance in educating the young people to shun the low forms of amusement than to give them a real live appreciation of the classic literature.

All these things the woman's club can assist in by support, and where they are not already being carried out by some community organization, can start the ball rolling themselves.

GRACE K. BRIGGS,

Superintendent Home Department.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Interest in Sewing and Cooking

A sister has asked me for a way to enthrone our girls in sewing and cooking during the coming school months. How would you like to hold contests for them in bread making, canning, preserving, preparing a simple dinner, or in darning, mending, making button holes, undergarments, etc?

If sewing and cooking are taught in the schools, use the subject matter handled there for your contests, otherwise let the girls learn from mother, and compete for some special time that will not interfere with regular school work.

Then I want you to do something for me. Reward the contestants by giving them ranks, first, second, third, etc. and send me the names of each of the three ranking highest, together with a stamp picture, if the girl has one, so that I may make a booklet of our winners to send to conference next April.

As for the women's classes, I know of no better way to plan for cooking lessons than to arrange for some one to take charge of a small group—four or five—in her own home about one afternoon each week and let them actually do the cooking under her direction.

All lessons would have to be planned ahead and each woman bring her material from home. Fuel expenses could be shared.

The sewing is even more difficult to handle in private homes because of lack of room but can be managed if only two or three are taught in one group.

It should go without saying that only women who cook and sew well and economically should be chosen leaders.

Let me hear from you concerning your local needs. I shall be glad to help.

BERTHA L. MADER,

Superintendent Home Economics.

MANHATTAN, KANSAS, 1509 Poyntz.

Letter Department

"Traveling in Beaten Paths"

Both HERALD and Ensign readers are at times confronted with the above, or the caption of this article, but it is always used as referring to others and not self! Is it not better to be careful in our accusations, and especially so when writing to the public or for the perusal of others? The trouble with such accusation is that it is usually couched in language that on the face of it shows a carping spirit, and the query arises, Is it wise to pander to such faultfinding? For instance, one may assert that he has been asked a number of times in different localities if he is going to take the old, old path, from branch to branch, "as has been done for many years." The query arises in the reader's mind as to the "number" and as to whether this represented the majority conclusion as to whether it were but the carpings of some disgruntled ones. If the former, then the matter should have been taken under the advisement of those having such field or mission, as the case may be, in charge; if the latter, then no attention should have been paid to it other than a quiet investigation and an effort made to adjust by rightful authority, rather than to emblazon it on the pages of public perusal, for it will at once be realized that the faultfinder has been justified in his course and at least a possible injustice done those who had labored as missionaries "for years."

The better way for all of us is to conclude that every man who has preceded us has done the very best he could under the circumstances, rather than to pander to a carping spirit of faultfinding and thus do unto our brethren an unmerited injury. Then there is the fact remaining that at times it becomes actually necessary to feed the flock of God rather than to go out and open new pastures and leave the ones already within the fold to starve. In fact there are so many things to be considered that one should be very careful not to become an accuser of the brethren. There are the individual characteristics in both the membership and the ministry that it would seem impossible to lay down a hard and fast rule, either in the method of proselyting or otherwise, hence one should be slow to condemn his predecessors even by inference.

Again: One may be so certain of his methods that he will break into the public print with: "If our ministers worked along this line more, the success of the church would be greater," All of which virtually says, my method is the one! Experience has taught me that even in the matter of tractating that as great a variety of methods are necessary as the variety of minds one comes into contact with is to be found. If all minds were fashioned in one mold it would likely be that one method of dealing with the minds of men would work, but since they are not it but naturally follows that differing methods are to be pursued.

I did my first street preaching in 1889, but that did not cause me to feel that I was one of the originators of this method of reaching the people for I fully believed that this method was pursued even by the missionaries of the 30's. Brother Charles Avery and I penetrated the dense Australian forests for miles with horse and buggy as early as the 90's and opened up new places. Brother C. A. Butterworth during the first year of our stay in that far-away land penetrated into new places and came back laden with sheaves, but in all these instances and in all the trials incident thereto we thought that we were but doing what others had done before us and what was our duty. But even then the accusation came that we were following "beaten paths." To this we gave not even a second thought, for we realized that we were but doing what we conceived to be for the best, ever holding ourselves subject to the thought that so long as we were human we were likely to err in both judgment and action. My wife and I rode horseback and by cart for hundreds of miles and were subjected to all sorts of inconveniences incident to frontier life and sometimes traveled in "beaten paths" but tried at all times to be subject to the best judgment at hand rather than to be guided by the carpings of a few disgruntled ones and thus give to them an eminence that they in no way deserved. And so brethren is it not better to exercise charity for all and feel that each is conscientiously doing the very best he can, rather than to enter into the public print laden with the statements of the faultfinder, or more aptly, the "accuser of the brethren" and find ourselves a party to the accusations and doing our brethren an injury without cause?

With charity for all and malice toward none,

Very sincerely,

J. W. WIGHT.

Health Simplified

It is admitted and a proven fact that there is no greater asset in this life than health. Wealth without health is a miserable failure. There is really only one class of people living, and that is the healthy; the sick are merely existing. Men in business exert every muscle and nerve to accumulate wealth, but just when they have wealth by the throat, disease has the Nelson hold on them; life thus will prove a failure. I often think of the remark Mr. Armour made to his staff of physicians: "Boys, I will give you all I have if you will get me well." The physicians remarked, "We would gladly do it for nothing if it were possible."

Life is surely a wonderful study. It is something like electricity—we can feel it, but that is about all. It cannot be analyzed. Life can be prolonged and it can also be shortened. When a little bud of life comes fresh from the hands of God it would take little to destroy it. No wonder that one out of five children are destroyed before they reach the first year. Eight out of every ten of these deaths are entirely preventable and due to ignorance and carelessness. If one little pig out of every five should die the Government would spend millions to stop this terrible loss to the pig family. When it comes to the human family, we do not value them at more than about a cent apiece.

If we would only use the "horse sense" in the human family that we use with animals we would be quite a different race of people. It surely makes one feel very sad when we investigate and find that the human animal is the most diseased animal on earth. Over ninety-five million cases of constipation; fifty million people dying indirectly from this easily preventable disease; ten million dying directly from this awful, unnatural condition. About fifty million suffer with stomach trouble. I will not begin to tell of all the other diseases and the number that are suffering.

My desire for years has been to find the cause of disease and then apply the mighty ounce of prevention. What is disease? Very easy and simple to answer. The disarrangement of cell matter. Mother earth is made up of fourteen distinct elements. Through the establishment of the great vegetable kingdom these fourteen elements are absorbed and brought into a state so that animal life can subsist and enjoy health and live the allotted time designed by the Creator. Our bodies are made of these fourteen distinct elements, and when used with wisdom we are healthy; if not we become diseased. Ninety-seven per cent of all diseases can be traced to improper and impure food.

Think of the great waste in this church by not using proper foods. Why rob the vegetable kingdom and feed it to the animal and then eat the animal? I wish you could read the entire report of the United States meat inspector and hear the story of how many animals are diseased. Animals that have tuberculosis of the lungs and those that have cancer have these diseased parts removed and the meat is shipped with the United States seal on it.

What a joyful lot of people the Saints would be if they would only live the Word of Wisdom! God never intended that we should be diseased. It is natural to be healthy, but quite unnatural to be diseased. Are you aware of the fact that this Government and the English Government made an investigation of ten years, trying to find out causes for all these diseases? The reports of both Governments were precisely the same. Now as the consumption of meat decreases in different nations, the following diseases decrease: consumption, cancer, tumors, gout, rheumatism, bright's disease, and drunkenness, until they came to the nations that use no meat, and all these diseases were unknown.

God foresaw the calamity that was coming onto the people and he wanted to warn his chosen children. Our heavenly Father is giving his children some special help, but it seems so sad to think so many do not love him; if they did they would be more faithful to his commandments.

We all want to be healthy. We all want to be good. Now in order to obtain this great blessing let us stop and give our food some thought. Eat only good, healthy food. Don't eat diseased, impure, adulterated, indigestible food. Learn to live on plant life and forget animal life. Ninety-five per cent of the animal life is impure and requires fifteen times more energy to digest. The cost is almost ten times as much. By eating the proper plant life and drinking plenty of pure water between meals, a man weighing two hundred pounds can live very nicely on a cost not to exceed ten cents a day. I wish I had the wisdom to influence the Saints to have one week in every month a "good health" week. What we save in this week give to the Lord.

Dear Saints, there is enough wisdom in this church—if we would only mix in sufficient will power with it—to wipe out the debt of the church in less than one year if we would only sacrifice the unnatural desires of the mouth. Don't worry that your body or spirit will suffer, for you will be blessed both spiritually and physically.

It takes a thousand pounds of protein to produce one hundred pounds of muscle. Sixty pounds of this is water. By this you can see the cost of meat must advance if the people do not discontinue its use. I am glad to say we have whole societies that have discontinued the use of meat. There are hundreds of foods that are far more nourishing and far more easily digested and do not contain any disease or poisons.

God created wheat for man. Bread should be the staff of life and we should pray for our bread daily. Nothing said about beefsteak and gravy. In most homes and hotels we find meat the staff of life. Mighty poor staff when seventy-five per cent of it is diseased. I believe that God's laws are as eternal as God himself, and that no man can make a law and no man can break one with impunity. I believe we can do things contrary to law but that this is sin. Sin is nothing more than a violation of God's laws. It makes no difference whether it be moral, mental, physical or spiritual.

Let us all try to live more closely to God's laws.

Yours for health,

A. B. KLAR.

CANAL DOVER, OHIO.

Opposing Prohibition

"The members of the American Federation of Labor of Massachusetts has gone on record as unanimously opposing prohibition on the ground that it would throw them out of work."—News item, Leslie's Weekly, October 19, 1916.

One of the inevitable results of habitual drinking is that the laboring man gradually becomes less reliable and efficient and at last loses his job, and he drops out of the Union. This throws onto the labor market a class of men who must bid for work at cheaper wages, which fact is a menace to the laboring man who wants to see wages kept up. How, in the face of this, organized labor can entertain the fear that a sober working man will result in worse conditions is hard to understand.

G. R. WELLS.

Extracts from Letters

"I am so very busy at this time that I have no time to write as I would like and will soon. We are having some very splendid experiences, and some very trying ones. Find we are pressed to the limit for the want of time to meet the conditions; possibly it would be better to say, for want of ability to meet the conditions as ability is undoubtedly a timesaver. The Lord has done some wonderful things for us here lately, for which we are very grateful, and will try to give you the benefit some time soon."—Ward L. Christy, Brooklyn, New York.

FAIRFIELD, NEBRASKA, October 5, 1916.

Editors Herald: Having been appointed to labor in the Southern Nebraska District and running through the pages of the HERALD which we look for from week to week as a "comforter" and "spiritual feeder" and seeing no word from this part, I thought I would furnish a few words of encouragement and let those who may not know that there was and is such a place as southern Nebraska, and very much alive at that.

Am glad to say that since entering the field June 1, have found plenty to do and still have many calls ahead. I am only hoping that we may be able to fill them and in an edifying way. We have been blessed in our labors, not so much in baptisms, but with "liberty and wisdom" (which we always pray for) and the interest that is manifest by those whom we come in contact with.

Our first opening was at Pawnee City, with the district tent, but it being in such poor condition we were forced to abandon it at that place and use private dwellings and school-houses since. The people are restless and seeking for something. Many tell us they are not satisfied with what they have, as it does not seem to quench the thirst they feel.

Our next point was Wilbur, where we have a branch of Saints who are happy and contented in the work they are engaged in. We held forth at this place one week with good interest, baptizing one young man, and left food for thought for others.

From here we went to a little schoolhouse near Rulo, where we were truly blessed. We preached here some ten or twelve nights, Brother J. F. Grimes being with the writer, and doing his part of the work. Here we had good music, being provided by Misses Maude and Verge Close. Brother Harland Jones and family reside at this place and are letting their work be made known. Owing to the repairing of the school-house we were forced to discontinue our meeting until later this fall. But we left many friends and invitations to come again, the community being made up of Catholics, Lutherans, Methodists, Christians and Holiness people, all taking us to their homes and caring for us royally. Later we held meetings at Shelton with fair interest, meeting more worthy people and making more friends for the cause.

We see more and more the power of God's hand in this work, seeing the promises fulfilled from day to day. With such evidences as these how can humanity continue to grope in blindness and not realize the "love" that Jesus had for us when he gave his life for us.

From here we went home for a short visit with family and friends, finding all well and in the care of the Master. We were permitted to attend the reunion at Council Bluffs, as our district had joined with them. In one way we were shown how eager the Saints are to learn by the books and publications that were sold, it being a great privilege to the writer to assist Brother Parker who was representing the Herald Publishing House. The writer sold nearly one hundred dollars worth of books and publications.

Here we enjoyed the companionship of the Saints, that makes us realize to a very small extent what it would be for all the Saints to dwell together in Zion, the abode of the Lord.

From Council Bluffs we went to Plattsmouth, where we found a small band of Saints who are striving to do the work of the Master. Here we have a Sunday school, presided over by Brother J. R. Jones. We held meetings at the home of Brother and Sister Welch with fair attendance and interest.

It now being near our district conference time, we went to Lincoln, the home of a branch of Saints presided over by Elder J. A. Dowker, a missionary to the district. Here we assisted Brother Dowker and the committee to arrange for the conference. The Saints here have a fine, new, stone church to worship in, and are happy in the thought that they have a permanent home, having before to rent halls to hold services in. The conference was pronounced by all a success, and one long to be remembered. Brother J. A. Gillen was in attendance, and all who heard him were doubly repaid for the time spent. May the same spirit continue.

The writer is now in Fairfield, having come here from Lincoln, and is holding meetings each evening in an empty store building that the owner, Doctor Spats, granted to us free of charge. It affords the Saints a place to worship, as they have no church yet, but are starting to erect one at the present time. They formerly held services in the lecture room of the library. So we are glad that we can say for and in behalf of the Southern Nebraska District that it is on the upward trend.

We seem to feel more and more the need of sacrifice and to lay aside things of a fictitious character and reach for that which is practical and that we can use for a foundation without fear of destruction. The writer is alone in the district at present, with the exception of Brother Dowker who is stationed at Lincoln. So we find much work and plenty of room, as we have thirty-eight counties to labor in. But we feel that our labors are not in vain, and we have the promise of the Master that if faithful a mighty work will be done. With such promises as these as our incentive to go on and on, we can see no place to stop nor the end till he who gave the great commission has said it is enough.

We are giving here only a life of service for an eternal life of peace and happiness on the other side. Do you think it worth the price?

Yours for service,

CHARLES J. SMITH.

SIKESTON, MISSOURI, October 9, 1916.

Editors Herald: As I am renewing my subscription to the HERALD I thought perhaps a few lines from old southern Missouri might interest some. I read spiritual letters from all parts of the world and they are food for my soul, as I am down here where I can't hear God's word preached. Sometimes I feel as though I would give anything to hear a gospel sermon again. I am the only Latter Day Saint around here, but I try in my weak way to hold to the rod of iron.

I wish some one would come here and hold a meeting. I feel as though the good seed sown might bring forth fruit. I go to the Baptist church and help all I can to show them there is more for them if they only would believe, and I think they listen to me. On Children's Day I gave a reading for them, a poem taken from the Ensign. After I was through the people were smiling and happy, and they applauded me very much for the effort. The superintendent shook hands with me and said he had appreciated it very much.

I certainly enjoy the good articles and letters from the Saints, and can hardly wait for the church papers to arrive. I appreciate the poems as well as the other features of the papers, and thank God that his Saints write in that manner as well as in others.

I am in very poor health, and want to live so that I may recover, that the Lord may use me as an instrument in his hands. I was at the Sanitarium for a while, and thank God for the kindness shown me there.

God has told us that in the last days there should be perilous times, and we certainly see them in this vicinity, with cyclones and storms, even as has been prophesied in these latter days.

May the grace of God be with his church, and especially with the young, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

EULA GRIGSBY.

GRAND JUNCTION, COLORADO, October 11, 1916.

Editors Herald: Feeling it a duty the missionaries owe to the church papers, I take up my pen to let you know we are not dead in the Western Colorado District.

Brother J. F. Petre and I have been associated together most of the time since coming into the field and can say our efforts have been blessed. Seventeen have been able to understand it was the correct thing for them to do to step out and follow in the footsteps of the Savior. Quite a number of others are almost persuaded.

Brother James E. Kelley was with us for a couple of weeks and organized a branch at Bayfield with twenty-one charter members. Elder W. B. Farley was chosen president, and Brother Clay Tharp, priest. We feel encouraged over the Bayfield Saints and hope to see others added to their number.

It is our desire to reach as many of the people as possible and we have been going from house to house leaving literature and talking the gospel wherever possible. It seems there are very few who care anything about the hereafter, and the most of the few are so steeped in the doctrine of the creeds they do not care to listen to anything else, however, we are glad to know there are some exceptions.

While in Durango there were some sisters that went from house to house with literature and helped to warn their neighbors. How we wish there were more who had the courage to do so. We have a message of importance for the people, and if we get them warned we have got to get busy. May the time hasten when we will have more laborers in the vineyard. We are burdened many times when we think of the amount of work and such a small number of workers and limited means we have to do it with. When, oh when, will we get the world warned? May the Saints of God arise as a mighty army to spread the glad news. The world must be warned and each needs to ask himself, "Am I doing all I can for the furtherance of the work?"

May the peace and blessing of God rest upon the Saints. I am
Your brother in Christ,

AMOS T. HIGDON.

Mission Address: DELTA, COLORADO, 326 Main Street.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, October 10, 1916.

Editors Herald: Referring to your generous mention of Kirtland Arts and Crafts Club, please note the needlework exhibit was a private enterprise not connected with the reunion proper, but preceded same; this will be seen from the writer's article in October Autumn Leaves descriptive of "Beautiful Kirtland" and interests attached therewith.

Also it should be understood in reading of the success of the sales mentioned, that a very high quality of material and a high standard of handiwork were demanded by the patrons, and the fact that same was forthcoming constitutes our main satisfaction. The work done was not entirely by our people; it is desired to interest the talent of all desirable parties, and as the revenue derived goes back to the producer, the church as yet benefits only as the recipients honor the financial laws of the church or make offerings. E. A. WEBBE.

DALLAS, TEXAS, October 11, 1916.

Editors Herald: In writing this letter I thought it might be of a twofold purpose: first, to let the readers of the HERALD known there are a few Saints in Dallas and that the Lord is prospering his work here; second, because there may be some Saints in the vicinity of Dallas who may miss our press announcements, but may see a news item in the HERALD from us and be attracted by it.

Brother Aylor spent several days with us last month and preached several good sermons, and on Sunday, September 24, organized the Dallas Branch, with a membership of sixty-three.

Brother G. R. Kuykendall also spent several days with us and gave a two-session lecture on "Ancient America and origin of the American Indian."

Our church is located at the corner of Third Avenue and Dallas Street.

1819 Lenway Street.

W. P. CREVISTON,

Chairman Press Committee.

ESTACADA, OREGON, October 11, 1916.

Editors Herald: If some of the missionaries or Saints in the East could call on my daughter, Mrs. Mary Boyd, 524 North Stricker Street, Baltimore, Maryland, I am sure it would be very much appreciated. She moved there last July, and is not acquainted with any of our people. Her husband belongs to the Methodist Church and they do not take any of our church papers. She belongs to our church.

Yours in faith,

MRS. LUETA MCWILLIS.

CENTRALIA, WASHINGTON, October 13, 1916.

Editors Herald: In renewing my subscription, I will say that I regard the HERALD as a necessity in my religious warfare and work, and pity the Saint who cannot or will not take it. Every department is valuable, and ably edited, and the general workmanship and arrangement is excellent. The magazine numbers are surely fine and attractive, and show great work and endeavor on the part of editors and managers; the Australian number deeply interested me, and made me want to visit and labor among the Australian Saints. I hope the Pacific Slope Mission will be honored with a number some day. I only regret that every family in our branch does not take the faithful HERALD.

May God bless you in your work.

Yours fraternally,

LEONARD S. RHODES.

1005 South Tower Avenue.

SCRANTON, KANSAS, October 13, 1916.

Editors Herald: I am surely pleased to see the progress that the HERALD has made of late, and also all our church publications seem to take on a new zeal, to be more united than they have been for a long time past, which is the secret of righteousness, unity of spirit and unity of purpose in righteousness. This is the key that will open the windows of heaven to the children of our God.

It seems that all the reunions of this season have been bearing good fruit. God could and did reveal himself to us and make our souls glad and rejoice in the plan of salvation which has been revealed unto us. I do hope and pray that we may continue to progress as we have now begun, that we may all come unto Christ and be perfected in him, and deny ourselves of all ungodliness and love God with all our might, mind and strength as he requires, which is only our reasonable duty and service which we owe to him.

Surely we can see Zion is now enlarging her stakes, and there is a general preparation for which we are thankful. The call is to all to be ready, and to be ready means first to prepare and see that the hastening time has come. Now it is time to get ready, that we might have on the wedding garment and be prepared to enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb, that we may all be able to stand the test and be able to abide the day of his coming, which seems to be nearer at hand than many of us would think. I was delighted to see in our General Conference minutes that of all the opposing organizations of the year, there was only one, which was the dominant church with headquarters at Salt Lake City, and their power seems to be diminishing very fast.

But oh, I would be a hundred times more delighted if we could say there were none of our brothers, especially our elders, who were now opposing the other churches. May God hasten the day when that spirit of antagonism shall have a burial and all Latter Day Saints, especially the elders and all those that hold the holy priesthood of our God, shall turn out to the funeral, and say, amen. Then we shall look for more progress than ever before, and more friendship, more love and more respect shall be given us, even by those that know us not. But they shall be more willing to learn of us when we prove our love to all mankind, which is only our duty and our reasonable service. We all have vowed to do it. Shall we not pay our vows to God that we might receive the greater reward?

May we all pay our vows that we have made, and receive the crown that is promised.

JAMES BAILLIE.

HERSMAN, ILLINOIS, October 13, 1916.

Editors Herald: As the readers of the HERALD have not heard from this part of the vineyard for some time, I will drop you a few items of our progress.

I have not been permitted to be in this district all of the time since General Conference as I was called upon to act as moderator in the Baker-Roberts debate at Sedalia, Missouri.

Mr. Roberts met the truth with the usual amount of bombast, ridicule and slander; but it didn't seem to interest the people much as they appeared very restless during Mr. Robert's speech. It was different during Brother Baker's speeches. They seemed intensely interested, and would lean forward over the seats seemingly to catch every word.

Many friends were made for our cause I am sure. I baptized one sister before I left the grounds, and we left a number of others deeply interested. I took subscriptions for some fifteen Ensigns and passed many tracts.

The Saints at Sedalia stood by the work gallantly with their means and prayers, and I am sure the Lord has blessed their sacrifice.

Despite the fact that W. G. Roberts states in the "best paper in the world" (the Apostolic Review) in referring to the "Latter Day Saints" that "sect will do no more good there" (at Sedalia), there are preparations going on for a branch organization to take place in the near future.

Also Elder House of that place writes me of excellent prayer meetings and a good attendance of outsiders at preaching services. So let W. G. Roberts imagine a victory if he wishes, it doesn't change the facts that the debate did much good for our cause.

After returning home from Sedalia to Beardstown, Illinois, I had the pleasure of baptizing a noble man and his wife into the kingdom who were formerly members of the Christian Church and had been searching for truth and at last found it. Also another fine young man, whose wife had been a member of the church for some years.

I am now holding a series of meetings at the little church near Hersman, Illinois, which the faithfulness of the Saints of this place with their friends have built in the past year.

One year ago last June I made my first missionary trip to this part of the field. I found three Saints who had waited faithfully for twenty-five years, more or less, for the Lord to send one of his servants this way.

I commenced preaching in the home of Brother K. H. Moore, a few came to hear, some believed and were baptized, the interest grew, the Saints had the right kind of faith, an active faith. Without any finances, but a strong faith in God, inside of six months by the help of God we had a little church, and furthermore, it was paid for. We all felt that nothing short of the power of God could have brought to pass the seemingly impossible.

We hope in the near future to dedicate the building so thankfully appreciated by all of us, to the honor and glory of God who made it possible for us to build it. Others here are interested and we hope to see them added to the kingdom.

Ever praying for the upbuilding of the kingdom, I remain,

Your brother in Christ,

R. L. FULK.

BEARDSTOWN, ILLINOIS, 1105 Monroe Street.

SAINT JAMES, MANITOBA, October 14, 1916.

Editors Herald: I was baptized into the church, as well as my husband, in 1910, by Brother F. A. Henderson, confirmed by Brother E. E. Long, and we received our patriarchal blessings from Brother J. W. Wight.

I wish to request the prayers of the Saints for myself and husband, that we may understand the work and love it and become able to take our share of it. My husband is now in England and has been for eight months. I would also kindly ask the Saints to write to him and encourage him, especially those who know him, all letters I know will be greatly appreciated, and will cheer him and others as well. His address is Charles Samuel Case, Canadian Army Service Corps Depot, Bramshott Camp, Hants, England.

If there are any missionaries in that part of England, Brother Case would help them to reach the soldiers and second their endeavors to the best of his abilities, and he would be heartily glad to do so.

Owing to an accident, I broke my foot in the early part of the spring, and have been handicapped in attending church, and have gone backwards spiritually. I sincerely wish the Saints' prayers, that I may become a real, true Latter Day Saint and receive the many blessings promised me if I am faithful. I wish to receive more of the Spirit. Though I have been baptized six years and have been helped greatly, I have not received its presence as I desire. Of course I put that down to my own fault as not trying. I really wish to try to live closer to God and study and perfect myself and help others.

So will my sisters and brothers pray for my husband and myself? and rest assured you shall not be forgotten in my prayers also. I wish the church papers and the church itself, unity, life and peace, and all success in the grand work.

Your sister in Christian bonds,

MRS. A. E. CASE.

507 Park View Street.

News from Missions

Lamoni Stake

The work of the Lamoni Stake is moving along well under the new alignment effected in the organization of the stake presidency last June, when J. F. Garver, upon nomination of the proper authorities, was made stake president, with E. J. Giles and P. N. Craig as counselors.

These men differ in temperament as they have differed in experience. Coming to the work with different qualifications, with the cooperation of the people, which they seem to be already enjoying to a reasonable degree, if faithful, so as to receive the blessings of God, they should serve effectually in the responsible position to which they are called.

Brother John Smith, whose resignation from the presidency of the stake because of increasing infirmities of age opened the way for the reorganization referred to, is moving into his new work of patriarch under promise of good service. He enjoys the confidence of the Saints. He gives to the new administration his full support, and exercises a spirit that commends him to the Saints as one who—as he has often himself expressed a desire to do—as one who grows old gracefully, and as one who carries in his heart no spirit of jealousy or enmity towards those to whom he has surrendered his one-time arduous duties.

Between Brother Smith and Brother Garver, who for nine years were associated in the presidency of the stake, there is a bond of Christian fellowship and love and a genuine understanding which is good to see. As Brother Smith expressed it at the time of his release, they have walked together as David and Jonathan, and it is a strength to the Saints that they continue to do so.

Brother R. S. Salyards, the remaining member of the former presidency, is active in the work as called upon, and will continue to labor in the stake as his other duties and as circumstances will allow.

Brethren R. J. Lambert and Oscar Anderson are carrying forward with credit the work of the stake bishopric under the trying conditions incident to the demise of their beloved coworker, Bishop Joseph Roberts, which occurred in July last. The first named is immediately directing the work of the office, with the counsel and advice of Brother Anderson. The Saints are supporting this department with their tithes and offerings, and indications are that the year will close with the temporal needs of the stake well supplied.

The first conference of the stake under the new administration which convened October 14 and 15, was one long to be remembered. The Spirit of God was enjoyed in a marked degree in opening prayer service at 9 a. m. Saturday, when a large number of people congregated in the lower auditorium of the Lamoni church. And in the business sessions the Spirit of the Lord moved in a manner befitting the occasion. The afternoon meeting was especially marked by an excellent spirit. Many remarked that it was "just like a prayer meeting."

The Sunday services were even an advance over those of Saturday, the Saints enjoying in the afternoon prayer service a spiritual uplift rarely equalled at this place. This enjoyable time following close upon the stake reunion held in August, calls to renewed diligence the Saints who have been redoubling their efforts, and indeed their number is many. The late reunion surpassed in spiritual power anything ever experienced in the stake, and with other influences at work, including the conferences, the Saints are persuaded to do good, and to move actively into the work necessary for a fuller establishment of those conditions which should characterize a stake of Zion.

At the conference just closed, Frank B. Almond, of Lamoni, and Flavius J. Sharp, of Oland, were ordained to the office of priest. The ordination of George B. Hall, of Creston, to the office of elder, was authorized. J. A. Gunsolley, R. V. Hopkins, and F. M. McDowell were set apart as members of the standing high council of the stake. All of these men have the confidence of the Saints, and are expected to render good service. There is a vacancy still remaining in the stake high council, but we understand that those responsible therefor are not prepared at this time to nominate one for the place.

Brethren J. A. Gillen, J. F. Garver, E. J. Giles, and R. J. Lambert completed a tour of several branches of the stake, preceding the conference, and Elder Gillen was in attendance at the conference. These men report improved conditions. They also report a good work being done at Creston, Iowa, where we have a noble little band of Saints, and where conditions promise the probable organization of a branch in the near future. At Chariton the Saints have purchased a lot and are beginning a campaign for the erection of a church.

Brother C. Scott recently closed a meeting at Lucas, Iowa. He is at this writing expecting to go to Graceland Branch, north of that place, to begin services. Brethren R. S. Sal-yards and Eli Hayer are conducting services at Greenville, near Lamoni. Brethren E. J. Giles and M. M. Turpen are holding forth at Lone Rock, also near Lamoni.

Brother Peter Muceus and family reached Lamoni, October 13, after a long journey from far-away Scandinavia, where Brother Muceus has for fifteen years been engaged in a difficult mission. They will make their home at Lamoni. It is hoped by the Saints that Brother Muceus may be appointed to labor in Lamoni Stake, for the rest of the conference year, at least.

The committee to direct preparations for the stake reunion of 1917 has organized, and is already making plans for that event. Instead of assigning the work to committees of two or three or more, they have patterned after the commission form of government, and have assigned the various departments to one only. This will hold one responsible in each instance, and it is thought will make for greater efficiency. The reunion is a strong factor in the spiritual upbuilding of the Saints, and it will be the effort to have it continue so.

There seems to be an increasing desire on the part of the people of the stake to come up higher, by more righteous living and an increased activity in all lines of work before them. This good intention is shared in large measure by the priesthood. Continued in, it will make for a forward movement in this stake of God's own planting.

A. WORKER.

News from Branches

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

The Saints' church had a fine representation in the rally demonstration held on October 7 by the Thirteenth District Philadelphia County Sunday School Association. The lookout is certainly favorable for a most successful Sunday school year.

Seventy singers were on the job Saturday evening ready for Brother Hoxie to "put them to" the study of "Elijah." Enthusiasm is more intense than ever along this line.

Our anticipations of a renewed and vigorous interest in every department of the branch have developed into realizations.

Our pastor preached Sunday morning on the laws of tithes and offerings, using for his text verses from the third chapter of Malachi.

The church will be better able to take care of the sick and those out of work when it succeeds in getting its members to appreciate fully the law of tithes and offerings.

A. J. DICKSON.

Boston Branch

We hear rumors once in a while of Saints living in Boston, who do not come to church, and of whom we do not know. So we would request and urge, that if anyone knowing of church members residing anywhere in Greater Boston, will advise us, giving street and town, as well as name, we shall be more than glad to look them up, and will be glad to have them associated with us in the branch work.

Will branch presidents and branch clerks who know of members residing in Greater Boston please advise us, as we should like to look after every member in Boston and vicinity.

For the benefit of anyone visiting Boston, the church can be reached for one carfare (five cents) from any part of Boston or the neighboring cities. Take tunnel or elevated train to Sullivan Square. (The elevated runs past South Station, along Atlantic Avenue. The tunnel train runs through the Washington Street tunnel, and past North Station.) Any conductor in Boston will tell you how to reach Sullivan Square. Then get off on left side of car, facing direction in which train is going, and take any car going out Broadway to Grant Street. This is about twelve blocks out, two short blocks beyond Fenway drive and park. There is a Methodist Church on one corner and the sign for our church on the other corner. One short block down Grant Street is Sewall Street and the church.

If you will drop us a card we shall be glad to help you with more minute directions. Address us: 154 Central Street, Winter Hill, Massachusetts.

S. A. BURGESS.

Scranton Pennsylvania

Sunday, October 9, was observed here as rally day. The services were all fairly well attended. We are glad to have the children in the Sunday school again, because for about seven weeks they were prevented because of an edict issued by the State authorities on account of infantile paralysis. We expect to rebuild a flourishing Sabbath school.

The eleven o'clock service consisted of rally exercises, addresses and inspiring talks. The two-thirty hour was a service of prayer and testimony.

In the evening the choir gave a concert under the direction of Sister J. R. Lentell, the choir leader. Everyone seemed to be well pleased with the success of the choir.

The sermons from our pastor, Elder J. R. Lentell, are listened to attentively. The messages delivered through him contain that which stirs the soul, and inclines the heart to be moved in the right direction.

Two of the local brethren, W. J. Lewis and W. J. Davis, have held forth in street preaching on Saturday evenings of late.

The young sisters of the branch have been organized into three circles of Oriole girls and at present are busy at work. They meet in the church auditorium and the young men meet in the basement each Friday evening. These two departments combine for joint program and entertainment on the last Friday evening of each month.

The young men of the branch have been formed into a young men's club, and through their attendance manifest deep interest.

There is a new opening in the central city. Three Sunday school classes, two juniors and one intermediate, have been formed, and on Wednesday night of each week a Bible class is held, also a preaching meeting on each Monday night. This opening is the result of efforts by our pastor, and Brother Richard J. Hawkins.

The band meet for practice every Monday night, while the Religio continues to meet on each Tuesday evening each fall and winter. The Religio is prosperous and we hope this year will be no exception.

The Green Ridge Branch in the east section of the city is in charge of Elder James Raisbeck.

There is a fine branch of Saints in Archbald, Pennsylvania, which is ten miles away. Though few in number they have erected by their own hands a neat little church building. They expect to hold special opening services on the second Saturday and Sunday of November and would like to have visiting Saints present. We believe that they are worthy of this.

E. WALTER LEWIS.

1414 Sadie Place.

Independence Stake

The new cultural movement on closer acquaintance is growing in interest, the full benefit of the lectures being obtained only by a previous research of the lesson study—the same as in the class work of the home department and Sunday school and Religio Quarterlies.

On October 17 Brethren Frederick M. Smith and W. W. Smith had class work in psychology and economics and two fine recitations were given on the subjects of food and other products, and the development of inventions.

The little folks of the kindergarten had their play exercises in the forenoon and took their lunch at the usual hour. "Thank you" they say when their teacher hands them the "napkin," and they are taught good manners always.

There was a good attendance at all meetings on Sunday, October 15, Brethren Walter Smith and T. C. Kelley occupying at the evening and morning hours, and Brother James Bunt giving an interesting talk to the young in the basement at 11 a. m.

The convening of the stake Religio society took place on the 14th and 15th. Reports were read and the usual interesting routine business was transacted, not a large delegation being present, although a very good meeting on Sunday afternoon was reported.

The Sunday school convention of the stake will take place at the Second Independence Branch on Saturday, October 21.

Quite a wave of oratory has swept over the center place of late, for beside Congressman Borland, Mayor Ott and President Frederick M. Smith and others who were the speakers at the ground breaking for the young men's recreation hall, the city had on the occasion of the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans of Missouri Division 80, the pleasure of hearing Major General T. C. Love and Lawyers Paxton and Dryden, of this city, besides many other noted speakers of the Southern Army. Brethren J. Burnham, J. J. Vickery, and J. Taylor, valiant soldiers of Civil War times, were in the ranks on October 5 and 6, at this great gathering of the veterans.

ABBIE A. HORTON.

Los Angeles, California

The Los Angeles Branch is forging right ahead. One is impressed these days with the number of new faces seen at the services. The Sunday evening meeting which heretofore has been very poorly attended, is now showing up well with the morning service. The general expression is that we must have a new church if this keeps up.

Many new faces are seen, some members of the church from the East, others strangers, who have been drawn through advertisement in the papers. The other evening there were seven who came out as the result of one advertisement.

Brother John W. Rushton has been laboring in other places since reunion. He went to San Diego and organized a promising branch at that place, with George H. Harrington in charge. He spent two weeks at San Bernardino, preaching both Sundays, one service in the First Presbyterian Church at a union meeting. He was well received. During the week he visited among the Saints, reviving and cheering them.

Brother F. G. Pitt acting in his capacity as a patriarch has been holding revival meetings at San Diego, Santa Ana, and Garden Grove. He goes now to Long Beach, San Bernardino, Ontario and Los Angeles.

Good Reports come from San Diego and the impetus given the work through the efforts of Brother Harrington.

Our Los Angeles pastor, Thomas W. Williams, preached one of the most masterly sermons of his life Sunday morning. His subject was "A marvelous work and a wonder." No one hearing this sermon could have a misconception of the grandeur and all sufficiency of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the part which the restored gospel plays in solving the individual and social problems of the day. Every one present was visibly affected by the stirring appeal for full and unreserved consecration to this latter-day work.

ANNA JASPER.

A lady who once needed legal counsel was advised to consult a prominent lawyer. She kept putting it off, and, when she finally went to him and began to state her case, he said: "Madam, you are too late. I cannot be your advocate, for I have been appointed your judge." God forbid that the Judge of all the earth should apply such words to any of us.—Ida Q. Moulton.

Miscellaneous Department

First Presidency

NOTICE OF APPOINTMENT

The First Presidency and missionary in charge concurring, Elder Peter Muceus has been appointed to labor in the Lamoni Stake for the balance of the conference year.

FREDERICK M. SMITH, President.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, October 18, 1916.

Conference Minutes

FAR WEST.—With the Alma Branch, near Lexington Junction, Missouri, October 7 and 8, 1916, J. T. Ford and B. J. Scott presiding, Charles P. Faul and S. J. Hines secretaries. Statistical reports: Cameron 174, First Saint Joseph 584, Second Saint Joseph 200, Third Saint Joseph 146, Edgerton Junction 47, Alma 86, Dekalb 51, Pleasant Grove 75, Far West 53, Delano 66, German Stewartville 98, Stewartville 226, Oak Dale 84, Kingston 97. The following brethren were recommended for ordination: Hyrum McKee and E. A. Gurdwell, teachers; Earl Olson, deacon; E. E. McCormack, elder. These brethren were referred to their branches for ordination. The Far West quorum of elders reported to the conference, also recommended the ordination of B. R. Constance to be counselor to the president. Brother Constance was referred to the president of the quorum for ordination. A vote of thanks was tendered to Brother Charles P. Faul for service performed in the past twenty years as bishop's agent, Bishop R. Bullard now being the bishop of the district. An auditing committee was chosen as a standing committee to audit the bishop's and district treasurer's accounts, as follows: J. L. Bear, for a term of three years; W. W. Scott, two years, Brother Hopkins, one year. Motion prevailed that each branch of the district nominate one delegate to the General Conference for each one hundred members or less, and no delegate be chosen to represent more than one hundred members. The remainder of the delegates be nominated by the district conference, the coming March conference in 1917. A bill for expenses of $11.04 was presented by the district presidency, also one for $1.45 for the secretary; both were ordered paid. Adjourned to meet with First Saint Joseph Branch, March 10, 1917.

EASTERN IOWA.—With Fulton Branch, October 14 and 15. A large attendance and a good spiritual conference throughout, during which there was one baptism and one ordination to the office of priest. Cora B. Hart, secretary.

DES MOINES.—At Runnells, Iowa, October 7 and 8, in charge of District Presidency, O. Salisbury, Charles Nirk, Henry Castings. Reports: Clear Creek 33, Fraser 42, Oskaloosa 51, Concord 56, Nevada 78, Perry 81, Rhodes 95, Boone 109, Runnells 127, Des Moines 487. Bishop's agent's receipts $973.29, expenditures $709.00. Wayne Wolfe and Roy Chevill ordained to office of priest. Meet in Des Moines in February. Bessy Laughlin, secretary.

Convention Minutes

Mobile Sunday school and Religio, also district conference at Escatawpa, Mississippi, November 3, 4, 5, 1916. Report blanks will be furnished the ministry. Let us have all reports in on time. A. E. Warr, District President.

Conference Notices

On account of quarantine, the Sunday school convention of the Eastern Maine District was postponed. As it is near time for the conference, it and the convention will be held jointly, November 10, 11, 12, at Jonesport. An excellent program is prepared and we are expecting some to be present from the Western District. F. J. Ebling, president; J. F. Sheehy, superintendent.

Convention Notices

Western Maine Sunday school, November 4, 10 a. m., at Mountainville. Election of officers and detail work. H. Arthur Koehler, superintendent, Sargentville, Maine.

New York and Philadelphia Sunday school and Religio, at the Philadelphia church, corner Howard and Ontario Streets, November 18 and 19. Business session 3 p. m. Arrangements for institute will be made later. All secretaries send credentials, with number expected to be present, so arrangements can be made accordingly. Concert Sunday evening under leadership of A. N. Hoxie. Let this be our banner convention. William Davies, secretary, 1224 Hampton Street, Scranton, Pennsylvania.

Special Meetings

Steubenville, Ohio, November 4 and 5, 1916. Institute program on Saturday evening in charge of J. A. Jaques and Samuel Martin. Church services in charge of president of branch, J. H. Edwards. All district invited. James E. Bishop, district president.

Quorum Notices

Ministerial conference at Brooklyn, New York, Saints' church, Park Place and Schenectady Avenue, October 28, at 8 p. m., continuing October 29. Program, including all grades of the priesthood, under the auspices of the quorum of elders of Eastern Mission. Every effort made to make these conferences educational and no member of the priesthood can afford to be absent. All Saints invited. Come and bring the Spirit of God with you. W. A. Sinclair, president quorum of elders of Eastern Mission; H. W. Howlett, secretary.

Important Notice

QUARTERLY SUBSCRIPTIONS RAISED

On account of increased cost of print paper, prices of Sun-school Quarterlylies for January-March, 1917, will be as under:

Senior grade, 8 cents a quarter; 25 cents a year.

Intermediate, 5 cents a quarter; 15 cents a year.

Junior, 5 cents a quarter; 15 cents a year.

Primary, 5 cents a quarter; 15 cents a year.

Beginner, 6 cents a quarter; 20 cents a year.

Payable in advance, by order of General Convention.

There is no certainty these prices will apply to later quarters of 1917. Schools would act wisely to subscribe by the year. It would pay to borrow, to do so. No risk if a proper system of class collections is in operation. If heretofore you have ordered only by the quarter, it will cost you no more to buy now at the yearly rate.

G. R. WELLS, Superintendent.

Requests for Prayers

Sister Mary E. Goodenough, of Marcellus, Michigan, desires the prayers of the Saints for her two daughters who are afflicted with tumors. She has faith that the faith and prayers of the Saints will be effective in their behalf, and suggests that at the next sacrament meeting there be a united effort among those who will, in behalf of these suffering ones.

Information Wanted

The following is a list of members of the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Branch, that we are very anxious to locate, and would appreciate very much if anyone can give us any information in regard to their whereabouts. J. A. Jaques, branch president, 1648 Fallowfield Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania: Jacob Aber, Herman Behrman, Barbara Behrman, Thomas Clarkson, Thomas Clayton, Ellen A. Clayton, William B. A. Clayton, Sallie M. Colvin, Louise Cummings, William Cunningham, Mary Eaton, Samuel Evans, Annie J. Farrell, Mary Fawcett, Elizabeth Foster, Clara S. French, Henry C. Gillespie, Anna M. Griffin, jr., Sarah Haskins, Samuel B. Haskins, Thomas Hurst, Edward Jones, Minnie Knepper, Thomas A. Lathrop, George A. Liston, Emma J. Long, Alexander T. Long, Moses D. Lovey, John W. Marshall, Margaret J. Malloy, Valentine Mohny, Aaron Morehead, Margaret E. Morgan, Martha Morgan, Emma S. Orr, Arthur Ramsey, Henrietta Robertson, Mary Robinson, Elizabeth Russel, Emily K. Sheasley, Harry C. Sigel, Sarah A. Smith, Agnes Telfer, Mary Jane Thiret, Ida A. E. Udick, Amos Wanless, Elizabeth Wanless, Lula A. Warnock, Mary J. Whitman, Mary Wollwork, George Wollwork.

Died

FREBURG.—Rollin Freburg, born December 13, 1893, at Agency, Wapello County, Iowa; drowned May 8, 1916. Baptized June 19, 1907, at Ottumwa, Iowa, by S. M. Reiste, confirmed by C. E. Willey and S. M. Reiste. He was the only child of Thomas and Alice Freburg, his sister having preceded him to the great beyond 12 years ago. Funeral sermon by D. T. Williams, interment in Agency Cemetery. A host of friends testified of their regards by their presence and flowers.

GATROST.—Annie M. Carlile, born August 14, 1848, in England; died September 25, 1916. When 2 years of age she came to America with her parents, settling near Council Bluffs, Iowa. Married Michael Gatrost. To them were born 7 children, 3 sons and 4 daughters. Baptized August 13, 1872, and lived a consistent Christian life. She leaves to mourn her departure, husband, 3 sons, 3 daughters, 16 grandchildren, 4 brothers, 2 sisters. Funeral held from Saints' church, Persia, Iowa, September 27, 1916, by Joseph Seddon. Interment in Valley View Cemetery.

TROWL.—At Lamoni, Iowa, October 9, 1916, Elizabeth Trowl, aged 82 years and 16 days. She was born in Meadville, Pennsylvania, in 1834. Was married twice, but both husbands died, also all her children with the exception of one son, Benjamin, of Sioux City, Iowa. He was called and was with her in her last hours. She was baptized some years ago and was firm in her faith in Christ and the gospel, and lived a worthy life, being very patient all through her long illness. Funeral sermon by H. A. Stebbins, assisted by J. R. Lambert.

FOREMAN.—At Lamoni, Iowa, October 9, 1916, Sister Della Foreman, wife of Brother John Foreman, aged 71 years, 9 months and 10 days. She was born in Pennsylvania in 1844, and married Samuel Kirkland in 1866. Of 3 children born, the son, William, and daughter, Edith C. Spillman, of Woodland Park, Colorado, survive their mother. Mr. Kirkland died in 1887. Sister Kirkland was married to Brother John Foreman in 1905, and took faithful care of him during eleven years. He is now past 88 years of age. Funeral sermon by H. A. Stebbins, assisted by A. S. Cochran.

LIVINGSTON.—Verna May Livingston, born September 4, 1899, at Condon, Oregon; died August 25, 1916, at Portland, Oregon. She moved with her parents to Portland, Oregon, in 1907. Baptized October 20, 1907. Her devotion to the church and purity of life won for her a host of friends, both in and out of the church. She leaves father, mother, 5 brothers to mourn their loss. Funeral held at Saints' church, Portland, Oregon. Sermon by Marcus H. Cook.

STITT.—David E. Stitt, born December 9, 1848, in Armstrong County, Pennsylvania; died July 7, 1916, at Monmouth, Oregon. He married Mary Catherine Richardson, September 27, 1871; to them were born 6 children. Came to Oregon in November, 1877, and settled in Bandon. Moved to Monmouth, Oregon, September, 1910, where he remained until his death. Baptized January 20, 1901. Ordained a priest February 17, 1903, and elder November 28, 1903. His faithful life and sturdy Christian character won the confidence and esteem of the Saints and the respect of all who knew him. Funeral at his home in Monmouth, Oregon. Singing by a quartet from the Evangelical Church choir. Sermon by Marcus Cook.

The Blind Soldiers of France

There are actually some 5,000 blind in France as a result of the war, most of them blinded by gases or the sheets of flame vomited by the German "flammenwerfer," of which extensive use was made at Verdun. I have been told that an entire French company, their clothes aflame, ran to attack the incendiaries, and grasping them in a fiery embrace, burned to death, with their foes. It is around the blind soldiers that the prettiest and most tender nurses crowd.

In a little eighteenth century house in Passy, still standing in its shady garden among the new buildings of the modern suburb, Le Bourgeois, the recognized master of animal sculpture, has installed a shop for wounded soldiers.

Here in boxes that fill an entire room are hundreds of toy elephants, simplified and reduced copies of that great sculptured one by Le Bourgeois which stands in the great salon of the "Exposition des Jouets des Mutiles."—Cartoons Magazine.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
How We Get our Quarterlies - - - -	1033
Current Events - - - - -	1035
Notes and Comments - - - - -	1036
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
Obtaining Happiness, by H. O. Smith - -	1037
What is the Greatest Need of Our Young People	1041
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
A Lay Warning to the Ministry - - - -	1043
Refuses Large Sum for Chair - - - -	1044
WOMAN'S AUXILIARY
Clara Kellogg Ellis—Grace K. Briggs—Bertha L. Mader.	1045
LETTER DEPARTMENT
J. W. Wight—A. B. Klar—G. R. Wells—Charles J. Smith—Eula Grigsby—Amos T. Higdon—E. A. Webbe—W. P. Creviston—Mrs. Lueta McWillis—Leonard S. Rhodes—James Baillie—R. L. Fulk—Mrs. A. E. Case—Extracts from Letters.	1047
NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - - -	1051
NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - - -	1052
A. J. Dickson—S. A. Burgess—E. Walter Lewis—Abbie A. Horton—Anna Jasper.
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - - -	1053

Character in Reading

The Youth's Companion does more than entertain: It affords the reader a mental and moral tonic. Its stories are not only well told, contributed by the best writers of stories, but they maintain the standards, reflect the ideals of the best homes. They do not throw a false glamour over the tawdry things of life. Rather do they depict the courageous, the healthful, the simple—the true life of the greater number with their adventures, their conflicts of temperament, their failures and successes. In 1917 The Companion will print 12 serials and story groups besides fully 250 single stories and sketches, all for $2.00. The Forecast for 1917, which we will send on request, tells all about the great features of the coming volume.

By special arrangement new subscribers for The Youth's Companion can have also McCall's Magazine for 1917—both publications for $2.10.

- Our two-at-one-price offer includes:
1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues of 1917.
 2. All the remaining issues of 1916.
 3. The Companion Home Calendar for 1917.
 4. McCall's Magazine—12 fashion numbers of 1917.
 5. One 15-cent McCall Dress Pattern—your choice from your first number of the magazine—if you send a 2-cent stamp with your selection.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION,
St. Paul Street, Boston, Massachusetts.
New Subscribers received at this Office.

Hope is a light diet, but very stimulating.—Balzac.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure
Made from Cream of Tartar
NO ALUM—NO PHOSPHATE

THE GOSPEL STORY AND FOOTSTEPS OF JESUS. By Frances. Charming child stories, of the birth-offering series. Adapted to the baby mind. Tales of truth that will register and remain. No. 366, cloth60c

OUR MISSIONARIES IN BIBLE LANDS. A compilation of interesting views of historic places in Palestine and Egypt, with descriptions, from photographs taken by Elder and Mrs. F. G. Pitt, instructive and interesting. No. E361, handsome heavy paper covers50c
 No. E362, cloth boards75c

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY. The development of the latter-day work is put into story form, and offers the reader an opportunity of getting into intimate, personal touch with events. "Frances," has put life into her book; but the "human element" is saved from dominance by the spirituality of the work. No. 375, cloth$1.00

IN THE SHELTER OF THE LITTLE BROWN COTTAGE. The popular serial that ran in Stepping Stones during 1915, by the editor, Estella Wight. The leading character is not a Latter Day Saint at first, but eventually becomes so, and in the process a strong gospel story is told. Several characters in the book are shown laboring toward the truth, making this a fine, readable missionary medium. Cloth, 373 pages$1.25

A new book that glows with human interest.

JOE PINE

By Elbert A. Smith

The first part is an interesting study of child life on the western prairies, filled with the keenest of humor and naturally seasoned with the pathos that comes in the fight with adversity.

Illustrated

By Paul N. Craig

It includes the sequel to "Joe Pine" entitled, "Called to be an apostle," which portrays the experiences of the young man and his lifelong girl friend both of whom you will feel you have grown up with.

A strong story, well written.

It is now ready to mail. Nicely printed in large type, on good paper, and handsomely bound in cloth; $1.25 postpaid. Order now.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Lamoni, Iowa

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

FOR SALE

Two acres of fine lying land, all set to young fruit just coming into bearing—new 6 room house, back plastered and finely finished. 2 never failing wells, new hen house 10 x 24. Located on South State St. Bargain for cash. E. F. Hall, Lamoni, Iowa. 31-tf

THE TWO-STORY BOOK. Two stories leading the reader to Latter Day Saintism, by Elbert A. Smith and Mary Leiland Carter. There is sufficient action in these gospel tales to interest the reader from a human standpoint, and it is only a step from the humanity of the book to the divinity of it. No. 372, cloth55c

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 63

LAMONI, IOWA, NOVEMBER 1, 1916

NUMBER 44

Editorial

JOSEPH SMITH'S PLACE IN THE CHURCH

"ONLY A MESSAGE BEARER"

It has been alleged in some quarters that we are becoming afraid to affirm that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. Such a charge is far from being true.

It is true, possibly, that there has come something of a revision of opinion regarding the place occupied by him in the work of restoration. Following his martyrdom there was a somewhat natural tendency among his followers to overestimate his importance as an individual and to laud his character and work too highly.

There has come a clearer vision of his work with the passing of years and it is seen in its true perspective. Yet the conviction is none the less abiding that he was indeed a prophet sent of God; though we have never made the error so characteristic of the Utah people who are instant in season and out of season with their testimony that "Joseph Smith was a prophet of God."

Our primary testimony is that Jesus Christ was the Son of God. The prophets claim a secondary consideration, at best.

On the other hand the charge is frequently made that the church rests upon Joseph Smith. With this mistaken idea in mind frantic efforts are and have been made to discredit him, thinking that if successful in such an attack the church would fall.

The church is built upon that foundation mentioned by Paul. Other foundation can no man lay. Joseph Smith rediscovered to our attention the principles of the doctrine of Jesus Christ. Through him God restored the priesthood and used him as one of the instruments employed in the restoration of the historic organic form of the church and the gifts and blessings of the gospel.

The doctrine, the organization, the authority, the gifts are truths easily tested on their own merits. They are not affected by the record of Joseph Smith. Doctrine, authority, organization, gifts, as we hold them, may all be sustained in every vital particular by an appeal to the Bible, so that the church would not fall even if Joseph Smith were entirely discredited. Or had he not existed, God would have found another person to have accomplished all that he accomplished in the work of restoration.

Our faith goes much deeper than superficial reasoners have supposed. They waste their efforts in their attack upon Joseph Smith and his record.

They seem to suppose that by showing some flaws in the private life of Joseph Smith they will thereby bring the whole church and the entire work to ruin. Have the lives of the prophets been flawless? Let them ponder that question. Let them apply to him no acid test that they are not willing to apply to others of the prophets. No church would consent to rest its case on the lives of the prophets.

They charge that in the year 1843 Joseph Smith gave a revelation sanctioning polygamy. Again we go deeper than they suppose, and in reply invariably insist that the primary question is as to the nature of the doctrine of polygamy. As a church we have always rejected it, and moreover by every official act of the church during Joseph Smith's lifetime, touching that matter, it was rejected.

So we are sound and clear on that subject and not open in any way to successful attack as a church.

The connection of Joseph Smith as an individual with that doctrine is of decidedly secondary importance. Even if he were convicted as an individual, the church would not be seriously affected thereby, for it has not placed its faith in individuals, but in God, and in his son, and in the gospel with all its associated truths.

Even if Joseph Smith were clearly and positively convicted of that crime, that would only impeach him as an individual during a certain portion of his life. Peter was at one time a profane fisherman. Even after he was called to the apostolate he cursed and swore and denied Jesus. Yet no one rejects the truths and revelations from God incorporated in his epistle at a later date.

David and Solomon at one time were men of God, one of them after God's own heart, the other a temple builder, but both fell and became polygamists. No one rejects their inspired writings and revelations because at a later date they went astray.

Their works are judged on their merits. No one repudiates the sublime twenty-third psalm because in the later years of his life David fell into most grievous transgression. The work of men rests on its merits. There is a principle of truth in the words of Jesus, "Believe me for the very work's sake."

Could the work of Joseph Smith performed in earlier life in the way of restoring the doctrine and church organization be discredited by a departure from rectitude in his private life in later years? The work of church building and restoration was completed long years before the alleged revelation on polygamy is supposed to have been given.

This is presented by way of argument only and is not an admission, for to the charge made we retort that evidence has never yet been adduced to convict Joseph Smith of complicity in the teaching or practice of polygamy. All his public utterances during his life, touching that subject, condemned polygamy. All the revelations coming through him and touching on that theme condemned polygamy. It will take strong evidence to overthrow those facts. So far only contradictory and easily impeached evidence has been produced. Surely the man, to say the least, is entitled to the benefit of the doubt, and in harmony with the universal rules of justice must be considered innocent until proven guilty. Conviction is very improbable, as in every instance wherein the matter has been taken before judicial tribunals he has been triumphantly exonerated, as in the Kirtland Temple Suit, the Temple Lot case, before Judge Philips, and also before the Senate Committee in the Reed Smoot Case. His accusers have never perfected a case against him that would stand before any civil court.

There has been a great deal of misrepresentation of our position regarding Joseph Smith, based on ignorance and misunderstanding, as in the case of the good lady who said to the writer, "I believe you people are honest, but I cannot see how you can worship Joseph Smith instead of Jesus Christ."

On the other hand there has been much misrepresentation that has been willful and intentional. To illustrate: in the Apostolic Review for September 16, 1916, a representative minister of the "Church of Christ," in a letter describing a recent debate with one of our men, says:

Sister Slaughter, of Jefferson, Missouri, made two nice charts for me, for which I am very thankful. One was the picture of Joseph Smith, the Mormon-God, and the picture of my opponent crying and saying, "I believe it but am afraid to affirm it."

This was not a case of misunderstanding. This man has met our people in debate many times and knows our position. He knows that no utterance of the church and no teaching of any representative men of the church ever at any time gave the slightest ground for an inference that Joseph Smith is regarded by us as divine or an object of worship in any way to justify the term "Mormon-God."

Indignation might prompt us to denounce such methods in scathing terms, but we leave each man to form his own opinion, remembering that even Michael contending against the Devil brought no railing accusation, but said, "The Lord rebuke thee." And this the Lord will do, in this case, for he says: "A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall not escape."

Our epitome of faith, which is as near to being a creed as anything we have ever published, contains no reference to Joseph Smith or to his work, for the simple reason that our faith, in its fundamentals, is not predicated on him as an individual.

The fundamentals of our faith are set forth therein in some such order as this:

First.—"We believe in God the Eternal Father."

Second.—"And in his Son Jesus Christ."

Third.—"And in the Holy Ghost."

Fourth.—"We believe that through the atonement of Jesus Christ, all men may be saved, by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the gospel." (A statement of the ordinances follows.)

Fifth.—"We believe in the same kind of organization that existed in the primitive church, viz: Apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, evangelists, etc."

Sixth.—"We believe that in the Bible is contained the word of God, so far as it is translated correctly. We believe that the canon of Scripture is not full, but that God, by his Spirit, will continue to reveal his word to man until the end of time."

Seventh.—"We believe in the powers and gifts of the everlasting gospel, viz: the gift of faith, discerning of spirits, prophecy, revelation, visions, healing, tongues, and the interpretation of tongues, wisdom, charity, brotherly love, etc."

These are fundamental. No one can seriously injure this church until he destroys the faith of the people in these principles. Those who make their primary attack on Joseph Smith are simply firing at long range at a minor position without first attacking and demolishing our first and second lines of defenses and other important positions.

So far as the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith is concerned, we are prepared to affirm and defend it in its time and place. He was a man bearing a message from God. The message is the important thing.

Nearly every message bearer from God has been attacked and maligned, slandered, persecuted, killed. That was the history of the prophets. Jesus called the attention of the Jews to that fact. That was the history of the apostles.

History repeats itself in these last days. Joseph

Smith was attacked, maligned, slandered, killed. The campaign against him goes on with undiminished fury and malice. That in itself, without other evidence, is almost enough to create an inference that he was indeed a message bearer from God. Let men then give proper attention to the message that he brought.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

THAT WHICH GOD REQUIRES

(The interpretation of a tongue delivered by Elder John W. Wight at the morning prayer meeting, August 21, 1916, Lamoni camp grounds, Latter Day Saint reunion.)

In answer to the earnest heart's desire of many, I speak unto you, my people, and say that in the years long ago I told my people that which I required at their hands. That command I repeat unto you now that I require at your hands all your surplus property as a beginning of your tithing, and annually thereafter one tenth of your increase I further require at your hands. And it is my will that you give heed thereto, that you specifically remember and forget not. That you put from you the pride of heart, the pride of life, the pride of vanity, all unholiness and unholy thoughts, all vain ambition, all worldly desire unto the accumulation of wealth to be used in harmony with the gratification of your own desires; but the rather that you seek to accumulate for the good of my church and people unto the accomplishment of my purposes on the earth in the redemption of Zion.

I say unto you this morning, as I said in the years now long ago, my people might have been redeemed even now, had they have given heed to the commandments that I have given.

And I say also, especially unto the young of my people, that it is my desire that you begin from this very moment, and fail not to cultivate a desire unto true service in my sight; putting from you all desires of a worldly nature and ambition, and seek to exercise in harmony with the law put upon you unto that cultivation that will qualify you to enter in and occupy the places even now awaiting you and for which you shall become fully qualified by the presence and power of my Spirit shall you but pay heed. And to all my people: I will to bless you by and with the abundance of my Spirit, its outpouring unto your edification and good, shall you but pay heed and forget not. So, be faithful, saith the Spirit. Amen.

CURRENT EVENTS

NEW GERMAN LOAN.—The Reichstag recently passed a bill asking for a new war loan of $2,856,000,000.

CLASH IN SANTO DOMINGO.—In an engagement with rebels on the 24th several American soldiers, including some officers, met death.

DIVORCE RESOLUTION DEFEATED.—At the general conference of the Protestant Episcopal Church, held at Saint Louis, a resolution seeking to prevent their ministry from officiating at a remarriage of even innocent parties in divorce cases was defeated. It is now, as it has been, left to the discretion of the rector or bishop in each case.

BRITISH SEEK WAR LOAN HERE.—On the 25th official announcement of the sale of 5½ per cent bonds totaling $300,000,000 was made in behalf of Great Britain. Five per cent French bonds are on the market to an unlimited amount.

CONSCRIPTION LOSING.—Incomplete returns indicate that the Australian vote on conscription is unfavorable to that proposition. An attack was made on Prime Minister Hughes who favors conscription, by an assassin but the attempt failed.

MEXICAN SITUATION.—With Villista forces active near Chihuahua, and various other internal disturbances being reported, the Mexican situation is said to be more serious at this time than for several months, and any suggestion to withdraw the entire military forces from that region meets with hearty disapproval from Government officials.

THOUSANDS SWINDLED.—A chain-letter proposition whereby the writer was to get a "new 1917 model silk petticoat" by writing to five friends and sending in a dime to a certain Minneapolis house, has swindled thousands. Nearly half a million letters containing ten cents each reached the address given and are sent to the dead letter office. Fearing federal investigation, the "company" has fled. No matter how transparent a fraud is, many will lose by it.

WHEAT STILL HIGHER.—At the Chicago market cash wheat has gone as high as two dollars a bushel, and corn to a dollar and one and one-half cents. This is a record price for wheat, having risen higher than the spectacular price in 1898. Flour has gone to twelve dollars a barrel. Corn has not sold for so much since 1867. Prices of commodities in all lines are constantly advancing. Here and there various industrial organizations are making advances in wages of employees to meet the unprecedented high cost of living.

EUROPEAN WAR.—The chief center of interest seems to be the Balkan region, with the spectacular advance of the Bulgarians and Germans from the south through Dobrudja. These troops have advanced along the Danube and taken the bridgehead of Tchernavoda, but the Rumanians have blown up the twelve-mile bridge at this place, which leads toward their capital, Bucharest. Von Mackensen's men have swept on to a point forty miles further north, though the Rumanians and Russians have thus far prevented the crossing of the river and the invasion of the central part of the country. Vulcan Pass in Transylvania, is now controlled by the Austrians, endangering Rumania on the west, though recent reports indicate the Rumanian resistance is stiffened somewhat, preventing further advances in this region. On the south, moving from Saloniki, the Serbian forces have continued their advance on Monastir, which position is endangered even though German reinforcements have been sent to that region. Heavy rains on the western front have handicapped operations to a large extent, though the net result of the week's activities are the capture of the village and fort of Douaumont by the French in the Verdun region. A large number of prisoners have been taken. Vaux is in imminent danger of capture by the French in this advance, while Peronne is being encircled. The British have succeeded in taking important portions of the German trenches at various points. In a seven-day battle for possession of Lemberg, the Russians have been defeated with heavy losses. On the night of the 26th ten German torpedo boat destroyers raided the commerce on the English Channel, but comparatively little damage seems to have been done. The Italians have resumed their advance on Trieste, and have made some small gains. In German East Africa German forces are gradually being overcome and broken into small units, continuing in the retreat over wide stretches of unsettled territory.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

MORMONS AND THE PIONEER TRAIL.—In The Nonpareil, published at Council Bluffs, Iowa, under date of October 24, we notice a long letter from Brother H. N. Hansen, in which he refutes the claims often made that it had been the original intention of the Saints of Nauvoo to remove to Utah, and that Brigham Young and his colleagues were simply carrying into effect that intention. He quotes largely from Brigham Young's own statements and the various other statements against that position found in the History of Utah. It is a well-written article and likely was appreciated by the editors as well as the readers.

LARGEST "DRY" CITY.—On September 16 the province of Ontario, Canada, became prohibition territory. Toronto, with a population of four hundred thousand, thus becomes a dry city. The province of Quebec is the only remaining liquor stronghold in Canada, and there are less than two hundred towns even there where liquor is openly sold.

A HINT FOR AID SOCIETIES.—A local merchant found himself overstocked with some staple lines of merchandise and short on comforters for the coming winter season. He called in the presidents of two aid societies and bargained with them to tie some for him, he furnishing the material. As a result the dealer has a fine supply of hand-made comforters that are bigger and better and cheaper than the usual factory-made article. Every lady that helped make the quilts is interested in the selling and can recommend the work to prospective buyers. It is a good proposition for all concerned. Why not try it in your community? If you want more details, write us and we'll turn the inquiry over to the sisters here.

CRIME INCREASING.—It is the belief of the committee having in charge the general care of discharged prisoners in the United States that the European War is having a marked effect on criminality in this country. F. Emery Lyon, for the committee, asserts that the prisons all over the country are becoming crowded. One State in the Middle West has a thousand more convicted felons than it had two years ago. From the report to the American Prison Association we quote:

A large contributing factor is found in the intermittent employment and limited wages available to the average unskilled workman. Worse still is the chronic condition of unemployment which has prevailed until within a few months. A still more striking cause of the increase in crime, in the view of many, is to be found in the great war. With a dozen nations at each others' throats, destroying life and property at an unprecedented rate, can there be any other result than the lessening of the sense of the sacredness of human life, and indifference as to the importance of material values? If the average citizen becomes more callous over the accounts of human slaughter, what of the slightly less than normal, more easily influenced, and less alive to the higher sensibilities and untrained in ethical standards? The war, therefore, with all its other burdens, is doubtless bringing its harvest of crime in all countries, and this harvest will continue beyond the present generation.

SPIRITUAL MANIFESTATIONS.—For some time past the HERALD has published very few verbatim reports of spiritual manifestations, such as prophecies or the interpretation of tongues. One reason has been that these manifestations are very often of local import, or even of purely personal interest. Again, they have not been submitted to any such test as is applied to revelations coming through the President of the church—yet when such manifestations are published some at once appear to regard them as law, and to be quoted as of equal binding force on the church with revelations accepted by the church and published in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Still it remains a fact that these manifestations are of interest to our readers, if for no other reason than as showing that the Spirit is still at work in the church and spiritual gifts still to be enjoyed. So the editors have decided to give space from time to time to such reports of these manifestations. (Continued on page 1077.)

Original Articles

BORN AGAIN

That birth is the entrance into physical life in this world is admitted by all. Life continues and develops from birth; it increases in its unfolding and developing processes till maturity is reached. From this fact has sprung the adage, "old men for counsel, young men for war." Life then is an evolution, a process of development. This is as true of the vegetable as of the animal, grasses and plants; many survive but a season, but that season is one of growth.

The oak, the monarch of the forest, lives and grows through centuries; lives and increases from its acorn birth to its mature development. The same is true of flesh, of fish, fowl, and animal in their measure of life. Born, then, is to live, and to live is to grow, enlarge, develop. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." The Savior in this discloses another birth, one for man, developed man.

"Born again" is the term, again to enter into life, again to unfold by virtue of life implanted, develop, mature. This the Savior made manifest to the Samaritan woman at the well, in that if she would partake of the water he had to give it would be as "a well of water springing up into everlasting life." She would drink from an everflowing fountain.

The divine impulse should be ever active as reflected by the Master. "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly," richer, fuller in its developing processes than life in its ordinary sense. The people who were all about the Savior in life's ordinary way give us one view. The Savior in his life among them gave us the result of the added, the more abundant life.

The Savior's explanation of the success of his own life and that of his followers, he gives the source of in the words, "I in them and they in me, that they might be perfect in one." The living, growing process—"I in them and they in me." Who can but believe that Christ was in every continuing communion with God? "I in them" reflects the same for his followers as "thou in me," for Christ, so ever-continuing communion is the heritage of Christ's followers.

The beautiful figure in John 15, "I am the vine, ye are the branches," puts ever-continuing communion beyond dispute, the life-giving sap is common to vine and branches alike, as a whole. "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine; no more can ye except ye abide in me." The living, revealing process is continuous.

It is not strange then that in this same chapter Christ uses the endearing term, friends, as showing the true relationship between himself and his, rather than servant. Friends communicate. "I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you."

Being born again entitles those so born to all the privileges of the life entered into. Being born again is conceded to be a continuing privilege among earth's children; all the privileges and realizations continue with it. Communion revealing processes are the main feature, realized in rich measure while the Savior was among men and being the result of being born again are to be realized now as then.

Revealing communicating processes are ever more abundant in man's present sphere and usage. Messenger, mail, telegraph, wireless and wireless telephone are suggested. These include transmitting and receiving apparatus. These processes are the product of man's mind, using to accomplish them the materials provided by the Creator of inventors. The mind endowed by the Creator to originate such processes should be enabled to receive from the Creator transmission in the larger scale. The inventor invests lifeless materials with receiving and transmitting properties. His own mind should be more than equal to results from its efforts. He calls to action activities from lifeless substances. Should his living mind respond to his Creator's call and touch? We think so.

All these various means of communicating place man notably as transmitter and receiver. He should be above all of his own work and under service of the higher power of his Creator and reap the results. The materials and laws of the transmitting power and induction coils are traceable only to the Creator of inventors, who are much superior to their inventions and should be receptive from the higher source, the Creator. God has made of man a first-class individual receiving station. It is held that in the ordinary process and activities of life psychic messages pass between people, as from father or mother to son or daughter, brother to sister, etc., between those suitably attuned by birth and soul characteristics. These messages cover distances long or short, and are oft realized under great stress and activity of mind in times of danger, etc. One is made conscious of the situation and condition of the other. If indeed there is such law (and it seems amply verified) it must be a spiritual law, and will operate anywhere in the spiritual realm.

Being born again would accelerate such process in the ratio of the added, the more abundant life. This was manifest in the life of Christ and those who partook of his "I in them" process. Born again, bearing the relationship of "sons" to him, there should be the same communing running scale in undiminished measure from the simple prompting to the receiving of great messages as those of Isaiah, Jeremiah, or John. If these do not occur, are people really born again? Is such law operative between man and man and not between God and man?

Yes, the divine process "born again" is still in operation with all its grand promises and provisions. God does still reveal to man, who is born again.

R. ETZENHOUSER.

* * * * *

THE PARADOX OF LIVING

The ever-momentous subject, "The cost of living," is again to the front. Editors are devoting whole columns and even pages to the subject. Socialists are preaching their panacea with renewed zeal. Students of economy are submitting facts and figures, legislators are framing laws, and—prices grow apace.

The towering philosophy of economic writers and preachers is enough to make one dizzy trying to follow them to the conclusion of their exegesis. The statistician will chill the marrow in the bone with an array of cold facts and figures, showing the enormous expenditure of individual and national resources to keep ourselves barely above the condition of dire want. Trust magnates have been caricatured as the embodiment of greed, crushing their helpless victims with the weight of their spoils. Lawmakers have been banished to the Patmos of political exile for betraying the confidence of their constituents, and legislating in the interests of monopoly; while bankers, merchants, farmers—all have been accused of manipulating prices to further their own ends, to the undoing of the consumer.

A careful analysis of the conditions portrayed, reveals a grinning paradox, with the interrogatory: "Where is the trouble, and who is to blame?"

ONE VITAL ELEMENT

The subject is so complex it is difficult to find a starting point, and so vast in extent that we can touch it only here and there. However, there is one vital element forming a nucleus around which the whole economic tangle appears to be woven, that is either overlooked or ignored by writers and speakers alike. We might as well try to cure heart disease by surface applications, as to seek a remedy for economic irregularities without going to the seat of trouble. Remove the cause, and the problem will solve itself.

But here is where the difficulty becomes a problem. Are not legislators and economic writers working overtime, poring over pages of statistics and reports, in an effort to diagnose the case? Tariffs have been lowered, freight rates reduced, corporations prosecuted, trusts dissolved, still the cost of living increases!

The disease is constitutional, and deep-seated, manifesting itself on the surface by eruptions in various places, more or less violent, and the "doctors" only aggravate it by local treatment. It never has had proper treatment. The virus must be removed from the blood. Surface applications may heal the local sore for the present; but it will break out elsewhere with increased violence, so long as the poison remains in the system.

ORGANIZATION INSUFFICIENT

We have sought a remedy for all our ills in "organization," and what are the results? Capital is organized, and interorganized. Labor, skilled and unskilled, is organized, and still organizing—for what? To throttle competition, and protect local interests. By multiple organization, we perpetuate—in a more subtle form—the very thing we seek to eliminate. We merely transpose it. In seeking to conserve the interests of local institutions, we have created a gigantic octopus, which has fastened its tentacles in the very vitals of the social body; and the system is so inoculated with the poison, the body is a mass of putrid sores from head to foot.

It is manifestly plain that there must be a reconstruction, by some means. Competition in production and distribution has been stifled, to some extent, and the competition of getting has taken its place. Under the old regime, the middleman had few terrors. He was looked upon as a necessary element in the process of distribution. Now, he can control everything, and name the price to producer and consumer. We have made this condition possible by teaching him the value of organization. Without organization, the control of commodities and inflated prices was impossible, except in case of famine.

IS IT CAPITAL AND LABOR?

If the trouble was between capital and labor alone, the situation would not be so acute. But labor is organized against labor, and consumer against consumer! Capital has united to meet the demands of organized labor. Labor has organized to protect itself against the encroachment of capital, and they are interorganized in a way to lead one to conclude that, if organization had any tendency to better conditions, we ought to be ready for the millennium. But every new society seems to irritate the feverish patient, and lay the foundation for another boil. Every organization effected for the benefit of some class must be met by a countersociety for the protection of some other class, or classes. Why should labor condemn capital, or capital censure labor? They are each dependent on the other, and all necessary to a healthy state of the social body. The consumer is making enormous demands of capital for the various articles of consumption. Capital undertakes to meet the demand, and labor asks a reasonable share of the profits. Is there anything wrong with that phase of the matter? Perhaps the consumer is responsible to some extent for making exorbitant demands.

POSSIBLY THE CONSUMER IS TO BLAME

This last suggestion brings us a little nearer the seat of trouble. We are all afflicted with the craze of more getting. There seems to be no limit to our avaricious appetite for more. Let editors and philosophers preach against the sin of high living, and other problems will adjust themselves by natural process.

But, pshaw! Preachers of economic righteousness are, themselves, doing what everybody else does—getting all they can, and complaining because they cannot get more for less money. The man in the shop complains about the cost of bread, meat, and eggs. The farmer protests against the high prices of machinery, clothing, and shoes. The wage earner organizes to get higher wages, and the boss raises the price to meet the demand. The farmers unite that they may obtain better prices for the products of the soil, and the middleman has organized so as to corner the market. That which benefits one class is an injury to the others.

I said that organization was largely responsible for the present situation; but organization is not the primary cause. Organization is a wholesome necessity, but like many other good things, it is abused and misdirected. There is another cause away down in the very vitals of the body, originating in the heart, that surface applications, organization, and legislation, can never reach.

A VITAL DIFFERENCE

Let us distinguish between the "high cost of living," and the "price of living high."

The price of commodities is governed by the law of supply and demand. We require a certain amount of the necessaries of life; foodstuffs, clothing, shelter, and fuel. Only a relative portion of each one can be consumed. All over the amount necessary to sustain life comfortably is surplus, and will have the effect of lowering the price. Any amount less than sufficient will cause the price to go up correspondingly. Thus it will be seen at a glance that, by the law of supply and demand, prices alternate as naturally as cause produces effect. Of this natural law, no thinking person can, or will, make complaint. But this law cannot be held to account for the present situation, altogether. Of course, it must bear its portion of the burden of responsibility; but there are agencies that have combined to produce the condition complained of, that we will do well to consider.

"FAD MADNESS"

We are victims of fad madness. It is not so much a matter of what we need that makes prices go up, as what we want, and will have—but don't need. We have been practicing economy at the table to satisfy an abnormal appetite for other things. High prices may stand between us and the meat shop, but they are no barrier to the movies, cigar stores, and saloon. They may deprive us of sugar and eggs; but whisky and tobacco we will have; and the latest design in fashion craft, however scant the material used, will hide an empty stomach.

Look at the display in that window over there. Why, I declare, the suit I have on—and it is not paid for yet—is a back number! And that new creation is such a charming affair!

"Yes," says Mr. Merchant, "Jones bought one last night, and Brown took one to-day."

And I bought one, not because I needed it, but because my inflated vanity craved it, and the merchant would sell it to me on time. Unconsciously, I am catering to the ever-increasing vagary of high living, and forcing prices up by making an unnecessary demand, and creating a false market.

Around the corner I meet Brown, and he makes me believe my business will go to the bow-wows unless I have a car. But I have no money. No matter, my note is good, or he will take a mortgage on my home. I bought! My machine may go to the junk pile before I make the last payment; but I will have a good time while it runs—and that's the price we pay.

I look out of my cottage window and see fine farms, big barns, and nice homes. I see my neighbors returning from town laden with luxuries that excite my envy. I wonder how they can afford so many things, and where the money comes from. I go over to Jones' and he proudly shows me his new car. I observe that he has a new piano. He has cement floors in his barn, and everything is shining with paint. But before I leave, he asks me for the loan of a hundred dollars to meet a pressing obligation. Bah! This exhibition of prosperity is a gigantic farce. He is living on borrowed money, and everything is under mortgage. He doesn't own the clothes on his back. His financial standing is but a bubble that is liable to burst with the first dash of an angry wave.

IN THE CITIES

What of the condition in the cities? I visit my friend in a prominent street. I note that he has an elegant home. The furnishings are elaborate. I know that he works in a down-town office for one hundred dollars a month. He came to the city a few years ago with nothing but his hands and brain. This home, with its furnishings, is worth six thousand dollars, and he and his wife have a change of clothing for every occasion. I see his wife go to the phone and give the grocery man an order. Twenty minutes later, the delivery boy brings in a dollar's worth of eatables in a paper bag, and leaves the bill. The good wife exhibits the contents of the bag, and gives vent to her pent-up feelings by castigating the trusts, the grocer, the farmer, and everybody else, when she, herself, is a party to the offense.

On inquiry, I learn that my friend does not own this fashionable home; instead, he is a renter. Even the furniture is rented. Like my friend in the country, he is only a little particle of foam on the troubled waters of social unrest that may be blown away at any time by the winds of adversity. His social position is a sham, and, to keep up appearances, he must maintain a flashy wardrobe and a gaudy parlor over an empty cellar, while he nurses a grouch over high prices. He is in the vortex of the social whirl, and the simple life has long ago lost its charms.

Why should he complain at high prices? He tells me the trusts and high tariffs are responsible; but, so long as he and his friends—and they are legion—maintain the present rate of social madness, tariffs will be a necessary evil, trusts an unavoidable nuisance, and high prices the inevitable result.

A. N. OBSERVER.

* * * * *

MORE ABOUT A CHAIR OF THEOLOGY

Recently there has been considerable agitation along the line of establishing a chair of theology in Graceland, which has set most of us to thinking. When we get to thinking we want to say something, and the saying part is all right so long as what is said is with courtesy and due respect to other people's opinions. What I have to offer on this will be with an endeavor to give due reverence and respect to those who may feel to differ with me on the subject.

As introductory to the subject, I will say we never have had a theological school in the church in the sense that the placing of a chair in Graceland would place us. We have always shied with a sort of holy horror of a theological school. We have always taken pride in the fact that our ministry's talents were not the results of a theological school, contending that a school of that kind could and did turn out anything else usually than what God ordained, or sanctioned.

I believe that the greater portion of heresy that was ever introduced in Christianity was incubated and brooded in theological schools, and this because God, for some reason, cannot work with them. We have Martin Luther, while he did a good work, yet heresy was a part of the work he instituted. Calvin, the Wesleys and Melancthon—all of these and many more helped to bring out and develop the Reformation, yet God said of the work of these men, "Their creeds are an abomination in my sight," and he chose an illiterate boy to restore the gospel. These men were all men of much education and were the products of the best schools of the day. The trouble was that the schools had instilled in their make-up some things that the workings of God's Spirit upon them could not get out, even though it was heresy, and it is evident they were not fit instruments for God to work with.

We have never had any theological chairs in the schools of our church, and yet we assume that the gospel offered to the people through its supervision has been the power of God unto salvation and all who laid hold of the proposition and endured to the end were saved. Then we can correctly assume that the theological chair, at least is not a necessary part to salvation. In the past, without the chair, have any of us hungered and thirsted for righteousness and not been filled? Have we starved for spiritual food and had no way of obtaining it? If so, a chair of theology might help us out. Has our ministry been deficient in the proclamation of the gospel? Have they measured up with the theologically educated and been found wanting? have they been out-classed as ministers of Christ because of any lack of a theological education? have they not met in debate the best fruit that theological schools could turn out, and have they turned away confused, or in shame therefrom? Nay, to the glory of God, the victory has been on our side, and this without the help of any theological chair. If none of us have fallen short of salvation because we lacked knowledge that God could not impart to us, and our ministry have been efficient without a chair of theology, what is the essential need of it?

When God chose to restore the gospel did he honor the place of education by choosing an Alexander Campbell, one of the best educated men of the land, as an instrument to do the work, or did he honor the pales of an uneducated home, and choose an unlettered youth as that instrument? And why? God never chose a man in all the ages because he was educated, but rather because he could use him. A man filled with a lot of preconceived ideas, the result of being endowed with too much worldly wisdom is not a good instrument with which to work godly things. Nearly all the false ideas and philosophies about the generation of mankind is the result of too much worldly wisdom. It might be urged that there would not be anything but godly wisdom taught, but I do not think seats in colleges are so thoroughly endowed with infallibility as to warrant us in assuming that to be true. Darwinism is one of the results of worldly wisdom. The denial of the divine birth of Jesus Christ is another spore of too much education. The trouble with the most of us is when we begin to mix up with worldly education too much, that is, if we absorb it, make it a part of ourselves, we begin to cast aside the medium of revelation of God. We have to cast it aside, for by worldly wisdom we are told that the things of God are foolishness.

Who among us would pose as a pupil of one of these schools and assert to a teacher that the source of our knowledge was a revelation from God? The source of knowledge of a seat in college is no higher than man.

Our ministry has been admonished not to preach without the Spirit. They have been sent to teach by preaching. Can anyone teach legally—I use this word in the sense of godly affairs—can anyone teach legally in any other way than God has ordained? I assume not. Has God ordained a theological chair in college as one way of promulgating the gospel? Learning the things of the world by the wisdom of the world may be all right, probably is, but learning the things of God by the wisdom of the world is another proposition and should be accepted with a good deal of caution.

When God chose a Savior of the world he did not go to the courts of the Sanhedrin to find a Christ, and when he chose his apostles he did not go to the courts of a Jewish bar to get a lawyer, but rather he chose unlettered fishermen. And he admonished that it was foolish to put new wine into old bottles. When you educate a man in a college you fill him with the theories and fads of that particular lot of instructors. When he goes out into the world and God attempts to pour into him the new wine of truth, the chances are that he explodes. That was why he could not use the Sanhedrin to get a Savior, or the bar of a Jewish court to get his apostles. It appeals to me that God uses other ways to educate his ministry and his people, as pertains to theology. May God be with us and lead us to the right.

GEO. W. LINDSEY.

Hold fast to the Bible as the sheet anchor of your liberties; write its precepts in your hearts, and practice them in your lives. To the influence of this book we are indebted for all the progress made in true civilization, and to this we must look as our guide in the future "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."—U. S. Grant.

Of General Interest

AN ANTIGOSSIP CRUSADE

A young girl recently killed herself in an English village. The coroner's jury, however, brought in the verdict: "Killed by idle gossip." The girl had been guilty of nothing actually wrong, but "the gossip disseminated by the women of the village blackened her name until she could bear the suspicious looks and spoken taunts no longer, and so she ended her life." The event caused an antigossip crusade, an account of which appears in Pearson's Weekly (London):

A society has been formed and rules drawn up. The entrance fee has been fixed at a nominal sum, because the society desired to embrace all classes, both rich and poor. Our richer women are just as adept at robbing others of their character as are the women of the working classes who chat with each other from their respective doorsteps.

The organizers are quite hopeful of minimizing the number of gossips, because they are convinced that the worst offenders talk scandal more from a matter of habit than through any really malicious desire to injure another.

Members must take a vow to avoid either starting or spreading any unkind remarks about anyone else, nor will they listen to a person who tries to tell them. To repeat what they have heard, even if known to be true, is equally as bad as to set the ball rolling. For the first ten breaches of this law a fine is imposed, graduating from a shilling up to the maximum fine of ten shillings. After ten slips the women are to be blackballed as incurables. . . .

If we pick up mud and throw it at a fashionably dressed lady and spoil her clothes she can get redress through the law; no well-brought-up woman, however, ever dreams of throwing mud at her friends.

If, on the other hand, we imagine that she is too flighty in her behavior, and, in order to strengthen our belief, we repeat all her trivial indiscreet actions, we are flinging mud at her character, and she can get no redress unless it should happen to interfere with the earning of her livelihood, or can be proved a malicious act.

Idle gossip does more harm than anything else in the world, and if the organizers of this antigossip crusade have only the perseverance and courage to make it universal they will do inestimable good for the general happiness of the community.

Charity, like all else, should begin at home, and those who cannot join the crusade should begin in their own family circle and resolve not even to think ill of their friends, acquaintances, or those of whom they have little knowledge. When ugly tales are told them these should be immediately forgotten.

Before making a statement about anyone do not forget to let it pass the three golden gates: "Is it true?" "Is it needful?" and "Is it kind?"

These form the motto of the antigossip crusade.

—The Literary Digest.

* * * * *

As diamond cuts diamond, and one hone smooths a second, all the parts of intellect are whetstones to each other; and genius, which is but the result of their mutual sharpening, is character too.—Bartol.

THE NEW LATTER DAY SAINTS

MINISTERS AND MILITARY SERVICE

The annual conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was begun on Saturday evening in the church in James Street, Ashton New Road, Manchester. There were special services in the church yesterday, and the conference will be continued this morning. Between eighty and one hundred persons attended the Saturday meeting, which was occupied in the main with the reading of reports from missionaries, priests, patriarchs, or other agents of the British Isles Mission, as the denomination is called in this country. The writers invariably reported to the "saints." But apart from a slight difference in the designation of officials there was nothing in the proceedings to distinguish them from those of better-known religious bodies.

The president was an American, who expressed his view of the war by saying that if he had the power he would "don the khaki" that he might fight on our side. There were two khaki-clad men in the conference; one, a corporal, was once minister of the James Street church. There appears to be nothing in the tenets of the church to forbid the members taking military service, and the only claim made at the conference in this connection was that ministers duly appointed, even if, like Saint Paul, they "labor, working with their own hands," should be exempt from compulsory military service, just as are the accredited ministers of other denominations. To this end several speakers urged that the church ought to be registered at Somerset House as a religious body. For want of this registration there had been, it was said, a good deal of misunderstanding and controversy before the local tribunals. One speaker said there were twenty branch churches in England and Wales duly registered as places of worship. The corporal said the members had been asleep in the past or they would have seen to the proper registration of the church before now. The resolution with respect to registration was under discussion when the conference adjourned until to-day.

The reports from elders and others spoke of progress here and there, but in nearly every case it was pointed out that Sunday schools and congregations had been weakened by the departure of men to the colors. The war was referred to as an indication of the imminence of Christ's second coming. The Reorganized Church, it may be added, has always opposed polygamy, and holds that it was foisted on the original Church of Latter Day Saints after the foundation of the church.—Manchester (England) Guardian, August 7, 1916.

ALCOHOLISM THE GREAT CAUSE

I am forced to the conclusion that the saloon in the average community can create more cases of tuberculosis, or conditions which result in cases of tuberculosis, than a public sanatorium can cure in any given year.

It begins to appear to me as a queer paradox that, on the one hand, society struggles to teach the young men the rules of right living and sanitary lives and, with the other hand, through the saloon solicits the young men to paralyze every vital force with alcoholic poison and to neutralize every rule of right living that is otherwise taught.

My experience and observation teach me that if we could eliminate the widespread use of alcoholic beverages we would do more for the prevention of tuberculosis, or of the conditions favoring tuberculosis, and not only tuberculosis but a great many other diseases, than by any other single step.—Extract from an article by C. G. Strobel, M. D., in The Medical World.

Hymns and Poems

Why I Voted

The saloon that stood by the street's broad way,
Sent not forth music nor laughter gay;
'Twas lit not up with a glare of light,
To make it shine in the dark of night.
Very quiet and unexpressed it stood,
By appeal to the eye of bad or good.
A youth passed quietly down the street,
What was it that stayed his listless feet?
What caused him to pause and loiter there,
Sniffing again at the evening air
A hurried look to right and left,
From eyes of a world of hope bereft;
He slowly turned to the silent door,
That had closed on many a youth before.
And who can say when he'd entered in,
To this haunt of vice, this home of sin,
That many a hope stayed not behind;
That death came not to a bright young mind;
That a soul once pure in the eyes of God,
No more the path of virtue trod?
And I who had loathed the taste of drink,
Was moved, most serious thoughts to think;
The men of the West, with their chivalry,
Had granted the right of vote to me,
And careless I'd stood in victory's hour,
Indifferent to this new-found power;
Content while the smoke of battle blew,
To leave the fight to those who knew.
To those who knew! knew I not well,
What tempted many a one to hell?
That many who paused upon the brink,
Were under drawn, by the smell of drink?
For temperate I, to you confess,
A shameful fact you may not guess.
For I, who found the taste loathsome,
Had always liked the smell of rum.

There stood the saloon beside the way,
 Where a man must pass it every day.
 For the eye and the ear he might find help,
 But alas for him, if he was not snelp!*
 And here was I, with my share of power,
 Should I use it in the decisive hour?
 O, God forbid that those like me,
 Should shirk their responsibility.
 So let us awake, not idly stand,
 Let us strike at the curse of this fair land.
 That allows the gusts of every breeze,
 To float our flag o'er dens like these.
 Let us have cities clean and fair,
 Free from the rumshop's awful snare,
 With fresh, pure air, God's greatest boon,
 Not scented up by the old saloon.

GERTRUDE WALKER.

*The new word coined by Jennie Allen Spinney to signify being devoid of the sense of smell.

Passing Away

They are passing away; they are passing away;
 Our near ones and dear ones are passing away.
 And what is their gain is our great loss,
 But perhaps it may lead us nearer the cross:
 Nearer to Jesus, our friend evermore,
 To walk in the light on that beautiful shore.

Let us think of it ever, and keep it in mind;
 A friend dearer than Jesus we never will find.
 And although we shall miss them, and mourn for them still
 We must trust in his wisdom, submit to his will;
 He knows all our sorrows; and when our life is o'er
 Let us walk with him there on that beautiful shore.

Let us strive in our weakness, but with all our might,
 To walk in his footsteps, and do what is right.
 He surely will guide us, and help us to stand
 If we only shall trust him, and reach for his hand,
 He will lead us on safely, where sorrow is no more
 To meet the loved ones on that beautiful shore.

How blessed to know that from old Galilee
 Came a friend and a Savior for you and for me.
 We are his children, he loves us we know,
 And can change us from crimson to "whiter than snow."
 Then let us rejoice, praise his name evermore,
 This Pearl of Great Price, on that beautiful shore.

They are passing away, they are passing away,
 Our near ones and dear ones are passing away.
 Our spirits are saddened, our hearts full of pain,
 And wishing and longing to see them again.
 Still, we trust we shall meet them, and greet them once more
 When we pass through the gate to that beautiful shore.

Then cheer up, sad heart, it cannot be long
 Till we hear the sweet music and join in the song.
 For we think that by faith we can see from afar
 That the beautiful gate is standing ajar.
 There our blessed Redeemer is beckoning us o'er
 To reign with him there on that beautiful shore.

LAURA E. BELL.

Woman's Auxiliary

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

OFFICERS

President, Mrs. Frederick M. Smith, 630 South Chrysler Avenue, Independence, Missouri. Vice President, Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1515 West Walnut Street, Independence, Missouri. Secretary, Mrs. W. W. Smith, corner Walnut Street and River Boulevard, Independence, Missouri. Treasurer, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, 711 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri. Historian, Mrs. B. C. Smith, 214 South Street, Independence, Missouri.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF DEPARTMENTS

Educational, Helen Silsbee Smith, 2315 Harney Street, Omaha, Nebraska. Home, Mrs. George N. Briggs, Lamoni, Iowa. Child Welfare, Mrs. Walter Sandy, 3431 East Sixtieth Street, Kansas City, Missouri. Relief and Service, Mrs. Edith Cochran, 1107 Powell Street, Saint Joseph, Missouri. Young Woman's, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, 711 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Straws Which Show Which Way the Wind Blows

We shall devote this issue to the publishing of reports from several fields in which the women of the church have been active this year. "Nothing succeeds like success" is a trite saying, but we cannot question its accuracy, and simply reading of the successes of others goes a long way in opening our eyes to our own possibilities and encouraging us to "go and do likewise." Some of these reports have been in our hands some time, and the items as "news" are not new; but their message will be none the less impressed. We are glad to note that many of the locals and district organizations have complied with the suggestions in the new constitution and by-laws, and have appointed press chairmen, and we can look forward to a regularity of reporting, when all is systematized, which will keep us well informed concerning that which others are doing.

The awakening of the Saints to the necessity of educating themselves, and equipping themselves mentally for service spiritually is very gratifying to those who, standing where a view of the whole field may be obtained, can see and understand both the need and the value of such effort. The glory of God is intelligence, the latter-day revelations reassert, and, this being true, the higher the degree of intelligence obtained by God's people the closer comes the time when his "kingdom shall come" and his "glory" shall cover the earth! If perfect intelligence were ours, if it were possessed by the whole human race, could evil and wrong exist? Is not evil the result of ignorance and inefficiency? And is not this the mission of Christ—to eliminate through the slow processes of educational light and advancement, the fact and the power of wrong thinking and wrong adjustment into which the world has fallen? Hasten the day; and let us each recognize the part and place we can occupy in the onward march. Purifying and elevating every unit will purify and elevate the grand total of the forces of Zion, and there should be no such words as "indifference" or "failure" in the vocabulary of the Saints.

AUDENTIA ANDERSON.

News from Locals

Uby, Michigan.—Sister Florence Newson, secretary and press chairman of the Uby, Michigan, local tells of their organization last June, with child welfare, home, and relief and service departments. They helped raise money for their new church, which was begun last spring, and near enough completed for a two-day meeting and church opening on October 7 and 8. A name quilt brought enough money from sale of names and sale of quilt to pay for the church lot—$116.50. An advertising quilt, upon which space for name and business was sold to business men, brought $59.75. One sister got up a Larkin order, and gave the auxiliary the profits—$10. A refreshment stand on a holiday cleared $20 and an apron sale cleared $40. The First Auxiliary of Boyne City sent them a gift of $25 also. Altogether this record speaks much for the enterprise, energy and devotion of the Michigan sisters in that locality.

McKenzie, Alabama.—During reunion at McKenzie the Woman's Auxiliary held four meetings which were greatly enjoyed by those in attendance. Sister Bertha Harper, field worker for Alabama had charge of the sessions.

Monday afternoon, at two-thirty she explained very lucidly the purpose and scope of the auxiliary. At two-thirty Tuesday afternoon, Miss Sarah E. Luther, principal of the Conecuh County High School, Castleberry, Alabama, spoke to the women, using as her subject, "Women's work in the community." At four she spoke to the young people on "character building," and its relation to a life of service. On Wednesday at eleven a. m. Mr. James L. Sibley, rural school agent for Alabama, spoke on the "Needs of education" in general. In the latter part of his address he gave special attention to the local taxation amendment for schools to be voted on at November election. In the afternoon Brother Edward E. Rannie spoke in a very forcible manner on "The church and education." Mr. Sibley spoke to the young people on the necessity for social activities. He stressed the idea that no organization would be successful if it did not have as a fundamental principle service for others.

All of these talks were inspirational, and the Saints were not immune. They caught it.

On Friday afternoon we sought to arouse an interest in organizing a child welfare department and I am sure we did, but the time was so short and the sisters were so busy that we deferred organizing until a later date, and so you may expect to hear more from here by and by.

BERTHA HARPER, for press committee.

Kansas City, Missouri.—Our president, Mrs. Lula Sandy, called a meeting for August 14, and about fifty ladies were present, who wished to take up study along special lines. The following classes were organized: Sex hygiene, first aid to the injured, psychology, child welfare and story telling and home economics, the whole to be known as the Kansas City Stake Woman's Auxiliary Study Class.

Department superintendents were appointed, as follows: Child welfare, Mrs. Margaret Robertson; relief and service, Mrs. Sarah Hawkins; young woman's department, Miss Alice Berg; home department, Mrs. Minnie Paxton; educational department, Mrs. Amy Wells; press chairman, Mrs. T. T. Grabske.

The stake officers were selected as the officers of this class, and have extended an invitation to the women of every branch in Kansas City Stake. Meetings will be held from two to four p. m. on the second and fourth Thursday's of each month.

September 14, members of the auxiliary met for their first regular study classes. Elder J. A. Tanner of Central Church gave us a very hearty welcome. He spoke of the importance of "The home to mankind" and the benefits we can derive from organized study. He used as the basis for his remarks, "The glory of God is intelligence."

Mrs. Sandy assigned the classes to their permanent study rooms, made remarks and announced the teachers for each class.

The story-telling class has Mrs. Walter Smith of Independence, formerly of Philadelphia, for their teacher. They will have eighty minutes for study each session.

Doctor Charles Sandy of Kansas City has a forty-minute period in "sex hygiene," and Sister Hull, a graduate nurse, forty minutes for "First aid to the injured." These two classes have combined and are contemplating some thorough study.

Mrs. Will Scott, recently of Saint Joseph, Missouri, in charge of child welfare, has two classes of forty minutes each.

Miss Willisey, instructor in home economics, at the polytechnic college has been secured to teach our home economics class. She comes highly recommended.

Besides this big class we have fifteen very energetic students in story-telling under Mrs. Simpson, who meet with her at her home every Tuesday afternoon.

There is also a class studying child welfare at Bennington Heights.

Eighty-six ladies were present at this first regular meeting, and twenty-two children were cared for, by our competent sister Mrs. H. B. Curtis.

At three-forty, all assembled in the Sunday school room where Elder Walter W. Smith addressed the assembly on the value to the world and stake, of such a study organization and showed the necessity of education for the mothers, who are molders of the coming generation.

MRS. T. T. GRABSKE, Press Chairman.

Independence.—In our stake organization we are trying to gather the small societies into a unity of purpose and effort. We hope to be able to say in the near future that all the locals are doing teamwork.

In our earnest effort to master the domestic problems and respond to the call of enlightened motherhood, we have felt the waste of isolated effort but with an enthusiasm for the common good and cooperative endeavor we shall find the equipment that will make us important factors in the shaping of Zion's conditions.

The big movement on foot stirring us to greater activity is the commission of education, under the direction of Doctor Frederick M. Smith with Walter W. Smith as chairman.

Classes are held in psychology, sociology, economics, biology, history of education, four classes in English, two collegiate and two preparatory, and, last but not least, a training class for young girls in kindergarten work and story-telling with a school of thirty-eight little folks to demonstrate with, under the management of Mrs. Eunice Winn Smith.

Much of the class work is under the lecture method, notebooks are copious and as a result we may become careless in forming our letters.

A mother in talking to me about her son, who was in college, said she could hardly read his letters, and that may be the reason that so many professional people are such poor penmen.

A fly had fallen into the inkwell of an author who writes a very poor hand. His little boy rescued the fly and dropped it on a piece of paper where it crawled about. After watching it intently, the boy called out: "Oh, mother, come and see the fly that writes like papa."

One circle of Oriole girls, (some of the older ones under Miss Mary Steele) feeling the need of some definite work aside from the Orioles, have joined as a circle the class in psychology, meeting for class work each Tuesday evening.

Under the direction of Professor L. F. Blackburn, county superintendent of schools, an educational inspection tour was conducted last week. Professor C. A. Phillips, dean of education of State Normal School, T. J. Walker of Jefferson City, Missouri, rural school inspector, E. A. Ikenberry, farm advisor, and Professor W. L. C. Palmer, superintendent of Independence schools were among the party, as also were Mrs. A. L. Yingling and Mrs. C. O. Leeka who represented the parent-teacher association.

Through the invitation of Mrs. Yingling several of the women of the Woman's Auxiliary attended.

We found that the rural schools were second to none in the State. In all twenty-two schools were inspected and the following points were noted:

Location of school and outbuildings, well or cistern, yard with reference to grass, weeds or flowers and drainage, apparatus for games, size of school grounds, external appearance of the school plant.

Inside the buildings, heating apparatus, system of ventilation, lighting and color scheme, desk and arrangements, blackboards (space and kind), pictures and other decorations. Compared the arrangements of the seating in the rooms where the heater stands in the corner of the basement, with the arrangement where heater stands in middle of school-room. We noted the compact seating of the rooms where heater was in corner.

The trip was profitable and many points of value were gathered. In some districts where the valuation of property was the highest the poorest school buildings were found.

At one school they were doing some work for the county fair and had quite a complete sewing room, another was demonstrating production on the farm by a real farm plant in one corner. Two lunch rooms equipped for their needs was a feature of another. Libraries were found in several, adjustable seats and desks, maps, globes and pianos. Much of this the result of cooperation with the parent-teacher movement which certainly is one of the redemptive agencies in solving the common need. Creating an environment that will materially help in adjusting the pupils to right living.

ALTHA R. DEAM, Press Chairman.

Don't Let the New Baby Cry

It is hard to realize that the tiny baby lying all day long on its crib and hardly able to lift its head from the pillow is really doing more "work" than the mother who cares for it or the father who toils long hours over his desk. Yet this is the fact. The baby's heart beats nearly twice as fast as an adult's. Its lungs pump to correspond. Both, when the infant lies asleep, are working as rapidly as those of a grown person quite out of breath with running. All the little one's bodily processes go on at the same high speed.

The result is that while an ordinary adult, toiling at some sedentary vocation, does some sixteen or seventeen "calories" of work each day for each pound of his weight, all proper infants do thirty. Some go as high as forty-five. They work, then, two or three times as hard as most of their elders.

One of the latest studies at the nutrition laboratory which the Carnegie Institute maintains in Boston has shown that no small part of the baby's work is done in crying. An unhappy baby wailing and tossing restlessly may add as much as a fifth to the work which a contented child would do.

All this is sheer waste. Whatever energy the child expends in crying is just so much lost for growth. The food that he uses up in discomfort will never be used for anything else.

This matter is especially important during the first few days of life. Rarely during this period, does any baby get enough food to keep him going. He has, therefore, to live in part on his own tissues like a starving man. This is bad enough at best. But how much worse to let the newborn babe exhaust his little body still more by the hard labor of crying. By and by, he may have to be let cry for the good of his soul. But for the beginning, "anything for comfort" lest the slender forces that should be getting the first grip on life be spent in useless pain.—E. T. Brewster, in American Motherhood.

Letter Department

Fair Dealing of a Brethren Pastor

Dear Brother Elbert: One evening some time ago, after prayer service at Long beach, Mrs. Alsip, a visiting friend, informed me that Mr. Louis S. Bauman, pastor of the Brethren Church at Fifth and Cherry Avenue, was to deliver a discourse Sunday morning on "Mormonism," and was to give it straight from the shoulder.

In pondering on the best method to get ourselves properly represented, I remembered the way you handled a similar situation at San Bernardino with a pastor of the Methodist Church, accordingly called Reverend Bauman on the long distance phone and told him I was pastor of the mission of the Reorganized Church there and asked for an interview before his discourse, which he very kindly granted for thirty to forty-five minutes for Saturday morning.

At the appointed time I was on hand at his study in Long Beach and we had a very pleasant interview for an hour and fifty minutes, frankly discussing our church position on various points, after which he freely promised to make a good, clear distinction between us and the church in Salt Lake City.

He then showed me the topics he intended handling Sunday morning, nine in all, covering among other, Adam-god worship, polygamy, wives of the Deity, one-time mortality of God.

I asked what sources of authority he had at hand and learned he had not the original books at his disposal but was using extracts. However, he did have your Open Letter to the clergy and one or two other tracts of ours, which he had already read.

Originals are always much more preferable, so I came home and that evening telephoned him I would bring down some material, Journal of Discourses, volume 2, containing the claims that Jesus was the bridegroom at the wedding in Cana of Galilee, and also had Mary, Martha, and various others for wives; Key to Theology, by Parley P. Pratt, stating that God the Father once died the same as we do; Mormon Doctrines, by Charles W. Penrose, informing us that unmarried persons of either sex are not able to attain to a fullness of salvation or celestial glory; also a Utah edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, containing the section on polygamy. In addition to these I loaned him my Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Mormon. All of these books he used in his discourse, as well as his transcribed extracts.

On Sunday morning we dismissed the preaching service at the mission and all of our people went over to his church. There was a good congregation, about three hundred and fifty to four hundred, and he kept his promise royally. He began by a dissertation on the two churches, one at Salt Lake City of about four hundred thousand, and one smaller in Iowa with about fifty thousand to seventy-five thousand, the former he termed "Brighamites," and the latter "Josephites," but he said the Josephites do not believe in polygamy, Adam-god, nor any of those terrible things taught in Utah and "The Josephites are as high above the Brighamite branch as the stars are higher than the earth," and except for his first item dealing with the belief in the three books, his remarks were directed against and to be understood to be only against the Utah church.

He then quoted from encyclopedia, giving "Mormon," Non-"Mormon," and our church views, giving a very fair brief history of the original organization. He did not indulge in any unpleasant personalities, stating that a work should be judged and stand or fall on its own merits and intrinsic, internal worth. Some minor items did not put Joseph's boy-hood and ancestry in as nice a light as we think he is entitled to, he also persisted in calling us both "branches," though informing his congregation that we did not acknowledge the relationship, and stated the church was founded on the Book of Mormon, but on the whole he gave us a splendid representation and remarkably fair for the limited opportunity of investigating our position, and one or two points on which we had not agreed, such as saving by grace, in Ephesians, second chapter, and the fall of Adam contributing to the welfare of man as set forth in the Book of Mormon he very kindly refrained from mentioning at all because we had not had time to canvass those points, and to present them as he saw them at the time would have done us an injustice.

At numerous times during the discourse he called their attention to the fact that he was talking now about Brighamism and not the Reorganized Church.

At the outset of each new topic dealing with the objectionable tenets of the Utah church he would state the same thing and then again declared that the Josephite or Reorganized Church was as high above those things as the stars were above the earth.

Altogether he treated us splendidly and at the close granted me the privilege of the floor and I thanked him before his congregation and told them he had accorded us such fair and kindly treatment as is seldom experienced by our people, suggested that by his vivid portrayal of conditions in Utah they would readily understand why our church had been so prompt in sending missionaries into Salt Lake City even three years ahead of any other denomination, and have maintained them there to the present time, and that from our peculiar position we were singularly able to meet some evils there portrayed more successfully than any other denomination and while we were not antagonistic but believed in an affirmative gospel, we felt sure the efforts we had made would receive their hearty sanction.

Reverend Bauman is to repeat the discourse at a Pacific Coast gathering of their people this summer, and I loaned him my books to familiarize himself and make any copies he might wish, and also offered to assist him in dissecting the section of the Utah Book of Covenants covering celestial marriage.

The good will of his whole congregation was manifest and I think his conduct worthy of mention. R. T. COOPER.
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

Coming Up Higher

Of late, I notice a great deal in the church papers about "Coming up higher," and am glad to say it has caused me to meditate considerably; it has caused me to look over my past, as well as present life, and see many of my shortcomings, and to-day I desire more than ever before to "come up higher."

"We expect to do so much in the years to come,

But what have we done to-day?

We shall give our gold in a princely sum,

But what did we give to-day?

We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,

We shall plant a hope in the place of fear,

We shall speak the words of love and cheer,

But what did we speak to-day?"

Yes, to-day is the day of opportunities, and we must make use of each opportunity if we expect to "come up higher" as the Lord desires us to. We must begin to examine our life to-day and see where we are falling short of our duty to our Master.

As we begin to examine our life, let us call it an inventory, for inventories are very necessary in any successful business, and we are engaged in a great and successful business for our Master. Thus it is necessary that we inventory our lives to see if we are gaining or losing.

Sometimes I fear we, as Latter Day Saints, do not make this investigation as often as we should, and for this reason are not making the spiritual progress we should.

Each year, the successful business man takes an inventory of his business to see if it has been a gain or a loss to him, and also to determine how many items are "dead stock."

If upon investigation he finds his business has been a loss to him, he at once begins to search for the cause of the loss, and, of course, as soon as found, it is removed and the business run on a paying basis; but on the other hand if he finds his business has been a source of profit to him, he rejoices, and he tries to manage this business so carefully that it may bring him even more profit.

Now if man can be so careful and thoughtful of a business for just a little earthly gain and pleasure, how much more careful should we, as Saints, be of our Master's business, in which our gain is not a little earthly profit, but a great reward that mortal man cannot describe—a crown of eternal life.

Let us begin to-day to take an inventory of our life and see if we are living as Christ would have us live.

Suppose some one should ask us to-day if we are living as a true Latter Day Saint should live, what would be our reply? could we say, Yes?

If we were given just one week in which to make a complete inventory of our present life—of the things we do, that we know are displeasing to our heavenly Father, and also the things we neglect, that we should do—I really imagine some of us would be ashamed of our own report, so if we are ashamed of our life, how then can we expect it to meet the approval of our heavenly Father?

Just to enter the waters of baptism, have hands laid on our heads and be confirmed members of the church does not end our work, in fact our labors are then just begun. Let us bear in mind we are required to work if we expect to accomplish anything, even spiritual strength is only complete when we labor.

One more thought presents itself. Probably you have often noticed the great muscles of the blacksmith, how they are made prominent as he raises his heavy steel hammer to strike the red-hot iron on the anvil. When we see a well-muscled man, we are sure he has great physical strength. And, too, we know it is constant work and exercise that produces such unusual strength and muscles. This is looking at the physical man, but the same rule will apply to the spiritual man, for our spiritual strength is increased as exercised, and we need not expect to grow very strong spiritually, when we leave all the work and duties to our brothers and sisters.

Sometimes as we sit and listen to one of our elders, who has had many years' experience preaching the gospel, deliver a fine discourse, we at once begin to say to ourselves, or probably to some brother or sister, "If I could only exercise the great faith that Brother ——— seems to exercise, or if I could only preach such a discourse as he delivered to-day. I wouldn't mind trying to do something for our cause, but I just know I can't and there's no use in me trying, so I will let those who have such good talents do the work."

Dear Saints, "procrastination is the thief of time," and we may rest assured we cannot accomplish anything in a spiritual sense if we are idle, any more than we can become a professional athlete without exercise.

Those of the ministry who deliver the gospel with so much force and eloquence were once weak as we, but they had the self-will and determination to try. So if we expect to accomplish anything worth possessing we must try, and while we may never be great preachers, still we can be great in our sphere, by constant study and prayer, we can accomplish so much that those around us will see the life we are living is worthy of imitation, and if we take an inventory of our lives as we should and profit thereby, we will soon have gained so much spiritual strength that those around us will feel as if life to them is far more pleasant by us living in their midst.

Now don't forget it takes an effort and lots of work if we make the spiritual progress we should. If your chances are limited and your opportunities few, use to the very best advantage all you have, and progress will soon be noticeable.

We have spoken rather freely of the things we should do and the things we should remember, but this is not all. There are many things we should not do, and many things we should forget, and I believe they are best described by what one writer has to say regarding the things we should forget.

"If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life forget your neighbors' faults. Forget all the slander you ever heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the faultfinding and give a little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories you may have heard by accident, and which, if reported would seem a thousand times worse than they are.

"Blot out as far as possible all the disagreeables of life! They will come, but will only grow larger, when you remember them, and the constant thought of the act of meanness, or worse still, malice will only tend to make you more familiar with them.

"Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday. Start out with a clean sheet to-day and write upon it for sweet memory's sake only those things which are lovely and loveable."

Sometimes it is easy for us to think we are unable to accomplish anything or gain any spiritual strength on account of our surroundings. It may be that we are surrounded by oppression on all sides. It may be our neighbors take a delight in sneering at us on account of the position we occupy in a religious way. Now if this is the case let us remember the words of one writer, Richard Wightman: "Your greatest problem is yourself, you are also your greatest treasure."

Let us take courage,—investigate our own life and see where we fall short of our duty, and when we discover our faults, at once set about to correct all our errors and mistakes.

We must also remember, we cannot do all that is required at our hands without faith, and one of the best ways to gain faith is by going to God often and regular in our places of secret prayer and there ask him to help us in our determination to live a better life and not become weary or discouraged just because he does not lift all our burdens the first few times we pray. I believe it sometimes takes burdens and trials to make us humble and submissive to him as we should be, and I assure you the Lord will gladly acknowledge every earnest, fervent prayer we may offer, and even if we continue to have trials and burdens to bear, our faith and strength will be sufficiently strong and we can more easily bear them.

Let us remember there is no middle ground, for we are either going forward or backward, and as we all believe the "hastening time" is upon us, and the Lord is continually calling us to "come up higher," so if we may expect his richest blessings, we must heed his call. Being isolated, I feel my weakness. It seems more than I otherwise would, and I ask an interest in your prayers, that I may be counted worthy to stand, and may be ready and waiting to heed my Master's call.

Your brother in Christ,

E. C. SELLERS.

YORKVILLE, TENNESSEE, September 5, 1916.

"Beautiful Kirtland"

ELBERT A. SMITH,
Lamoni, Iowa.

Dear Brother Smith: This is to acquaint you with the fact that under separate cover there will reach your office a package of half tone cuts relative to an article for Autumn Leaves under the title of "Beautiful Kirtland," descriptive of the recent reunion held there and boosting for a bigger event next year on its return, as voted for. [See October Autumn Leaves for this article.—EDITORS.] I was fortunate enough to be able to spend a whole week with the Saints for the first time in my association with the work, and went there expressly "to spy out the land" in my official capacity as district vice president, and see what possibilities lie before us there while my job lasts!

I have been blessed in vision relative to Kirtland early in my contact with the work, as perhaps you will recall since my first appearance in print for the church was on your solicitation to use in the Leaves a little poem on the Temple, written for Sister Madge Siegfried. I have seen in vision the Savior appearing quietly to his people, as I have appended, years ago, but have never been so interested (outside a genuine love and reverence for the place) as since my call and ordination to place as an elder—at the time of accepting I wondered why another should be added to the number of elders we have, and could only reconcile it satisfactorily by understanding my work was to be of a special and peculiar nature. This was verified by the words spoken over me by Brother G. T. Griffiths when ordaining me, and is suggested in my blessing received previously through Brother John Lake.

However, this time I went down to Kirtland to look at it and its setting in a purely matter-of-fact way as well as to receive such blessing as was my right, with others, to receive. I found a wonderful catalogue of possibilities open before us, and, in spite of circumstances that have been hindering in their nature, found the fruits of the "new idea" for Kirtland already appearing.

By the way, there are parties trying to acquire every possible acre around the place, and it is a shame our wealthy Saints are not more interested to keep it out of the hands of strangers while comparatively cheap, for Cleveland will soon extend to the very hearthstones of Kirtland—that means something.

Cleveland has a very large Jewish population; great garment industries here. These people are orthodox only nationally, and speaking of the younger generation they are very progressive—seems to me they are getting ripe to understand the reason of the Book of Mormon coming to light and hence its opening statement "To the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ." Kirtland still has a mission to perform!

I am mailing the text of the article, together with proofs of illustrations. Regret I could not type it—had to take advantage of a few days' absence of my family in Detroit to get a dozen delayed things cleaned up in addition to my own business routine—moving into larger offices to boot—bad as a fire to move a business!

When you have used the cuts, return them, as I want to get out a little art souvenir booklet on Kirtland for distribution. Just now we have gotten through distributing a thousand Temple folders (such as already sent you) with a blue route map attached like the inclosed. These were stuck in the driver's seat of the automobiles parked on downtown streets and are causing a flow of visitors to the Temple.

Sorry to have made this note so long, but it will bear waiting for a more convenient time for a reading. Some fine material has been added to our branch of late, one of whom will soon find himself called to action in the priesthood. This makes us happy in the work and hopeful that the time is at hand when every real man will be pressing into the kingdom.

Faithfully,

EARNEST A. WEBBE.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, 520 Caxton Building.

A vision in 1903:

"THE MAN FROM KIRTLAND"

It seemed I was called into the office of the firm I was at that time working for—a paper box firm—for consultation with a customer regarding a design for a seed package.

The customer stood looking out of the window as I was given the preliminary instructions, then our office man said, "By the way, this man is from Kirtland!"

I replied, "Is that so! I didn't know there were any florists in Kirtland. I know most of the folks out there."

At this the man in the window turned and looked me in the face saying, "The seed I am interested in is Abraham's seed, the righteous seed, which I am gathering!"

Then the Spirit came upon me and I discerned beyond the quiet voice the face of Him who must be the Savior, although I may have thought him to be only a gardner at first!

I awoke thrilling from head to foot under the realization that the vision had some portent for me and many others.

EARNEST A. WEBBE.

From Honolulu

[EDITOR'S NOTE.—From a personal letter to the senior editor, written by Elder C. Ed Miller, from Honolulu, we extract the following:]

Am trying to get my bearing here. Have been unusually blessed in my preaching, and have in the last few days had about a dozen sermons suggested to me. Have been blessed with the Spirit in preaching to the people here. There is lots of work to keep me busy, and trying to move along slowly and safely.

That Joe Pine story [in the Autumn Leaves] is the kind of material I believe we need at the present time. Young people will read a well-written story like that. The conception of what the business man is to do and his mission is grand and inspiring, and leaves an indelible impression on the mind that we can all, in whatever station of life, be workers together with God. I am glad you worked in the fine vein of humor it contains.

Did you see the article in the September 8 Digest on Egyptian culture in America? [It was printed entire in the issue of October 11.—EDITORS.] Have you been reading the "Circuit rider's widow" in the Saturday Evening Post? Lots of good sense in it. Trust you are well.

Sincerely,

C. ED MILLER.

P. S. It seems to me when you say anything nice about a fellow it is a fine chance to follow it up with something of a different kind, or vice versa.

I don't like your headings in the HERALD. They are too insipid. For instance, now in No. 29, "The perfect law of liberty." That is an old, worn-out subject. Though you handled it in an attractive way, you started out with a poor heading, in my opinion. In the No. 38 HERALD, "Under the juniper tree," was a dandy heading for a fine editorial. When I saw that caption, I was curious to know what was coming. I think curiosity aroused often leads to investigation. Seems to me that "perfect law" caption could have been improved by being put in form something like this, "One hundred per cent free." In No. 34, "The dead line" would strike me as being a good title for that editorial. No. 37, "Woman's work in the church" explains what you are going to write about, and if that is the chief and sole aim of a caption, then all that I am writing is out of order, but I think a little bit of mystery is a good thing to start out with. No. 37, "Woman's work in the church" has been used by hundreds in essays, etc., so would prefer to see something like this, "Eve in the vineyard."

You know, being one hundred per cent free, I can sit down to my type writer and jauntily roll off these petty little criticisms, and find immense pleasure in doing so. But I am afraid I am all right in this case!

Brother and Sister McConley arrived all right on Monday.

C. E. M.

Extracts from Letters

Under date of October 19, in a personal letter, Elder David J. Williams writes from Burlington, Iowa, as follows: "The district conference at Rock Creek was well attended, especially by the Burlingtonians, twenty-eight I believe from here, but our boys kept the flag waving over Sunday, and wife said they had some good sermons even though we were gone. Brethren Henry Broman and Elmer Bierman were recommended to the conference for ordination to the office of priest and deacon respectively. The recommendations were approved and they were ordained, and in all we believe we had a splendid conference. We were privileged to hear of some good things from Lamoni through Brother Holloway. We hope all are well and will continue to enjoy such blessings."

Sister Mary J. Ferguson writes from Lansing, Michigan: "I attended the two-day meeting at Uby, October 7 and 8. The Spirit was with us in power, the Lord recognizing his people, and speaking to them by the gifts of tongues and interpretation. We were admonished to put away all wrong and accept of the Lord's blessings, and were told to be true to our calling, be pure, be humble, and be faithful. Five were baptized. Uby has a fine new church, and we will not soon forget the spiritual feast partaken of therein."

RICHMOND, VICTORIA, AUSTRALIA,

September 27, 1916.

Editors Herald: Thanks for the explanation on Aaronic Priesthood continuation in issue of August 16.

Our work in this southern land is moving on quite as well as one could reasonably expect under the disturbed condition of society through participation in the European conflict.

The burning issue now is whether we shall or not adopt compulsory service abroad—it is already in force for home service. The labor premier of our commonwealth, W. M. Hughes, has returned from England full of zeal for conscription and has succeeded in getting a bill passed through both houses—representatives and senate—authorizing a referendum of the people on the question. The Labor Party as a whole seem to be against compulsion, and some of the very powerful organizations have repudiated Mr. Hughes as a labor leader. However, he still goes on, depending on the imperialistic forces to carry him through. This great war seems to be proving the weakness of democracies as war machines and the strength of autocracies as means for destroying human life. Seemingly the natural trend of democracy is towards peace and autocracy the opposite.

Does this not presage the final destruction of kingship and vindicate the word of God given to Israel through Samuel the prophet and judge? So far as I can discern there is one king only to whom the world can look for universal peace, and seemingly we shall never enjoy that condition until he comes "whose right it is to reign." Zion is to be the kingdom of the future, but the processes of her advance and evolution from the chaotic world forces are discernible only to the spiritually minded—it is still a vision. "Where there is no vision the people perish." We require a strong visionary mind to-day to buoy up our hope amid the "war of elements" now pervading both our social and national life.

If compulsory service abroad is put upon us it will of course affect us as a church, for we can ill spare any of our young stalwarts, many of whom are fighting nobly for the establishment of the only permanent kingdom promised. We have a fine band of young men in Melbourne, also Sydney, many of whom married early and have families and consequently will not be forced until all the single are exhausted, which we trust will synchronize with the end of the war. Those who have married since the war began will be treated as single as they may have done it to evade service.

There seems to be a tendency now manifesting itself to turn from a contemplation of earthly conflict to a search for spiritual truth, and this I feel will in the near future move with accelerated force and result in many being brought into the kingdom of God. The opportunity for Zionism propagation is near at hand; and I trust that with the call will come the power to accomplish.

No doubt the need will be supplied; are we to be the main force in that work? The judgments of God are cleansing the earth and no doubt will continue to do so until the "consummation decreed." Shall we stand the test and "come again" with the redeemed? I trust so.

With fraternal greetings, I am,

As ever yours,

80 Richmond Terrace.

J. H. N. JONES.

BASINGSTOKE, HANTS, ENGLAND,

October 7, 1916.

Editors Herald: I feel that I ought to bear my testimony, telling of God's goodness to me. So I take this opportunity through the SAINTS' HERALD. I always look forward for this paper because of the splendid food value. The Saints' letters are very encouraging to read, full of love and comfort, telling of the blessings our heavenly Father has bestowed upon his people, also telling of ways they have been brought in contact with the angel's message. The paper is full of grand reading. I enjoy reading its pages very much, and in many a lonely hour I have been comforted and strengthened thereby.

Also the paper is of great educational value. It would be well for all the Saints to take this paper, keeping in touch with God's work in various parts of the universe, also for studying purposes. We get much enlightenment upon many doctrinal points.

As each day passes away I realize the great need for laborers in this latter-day work, but the laborers are few; in this great country the gospel has greater opportunities than ever before. I believe that a great work is before God's servants, the field of work is large, that much could be done is left undone for want of more laborers. The day is fast approaching when this work must be accomplished. Shall we be found unprepared and give it to others, or shall we be faithful to our calling when Christ calls for workers?

Let us as individuals study the work more seriously and come out of the world, fit and prepare ourselves so when the call is sounded we can buckle on the armor of truth and fight against wrong and Satan.

I feel my unworthiness and my weakness because of the little I have done for Christ who has done so much for me, but I know that the Lord will not forsake those who trust in him and worship him with a repentant heart and true spirit. God has watched over me and spared my life in many ways. I cannot praise him enough.

My testimony to you and the world is that I know this work to be true, and God does speak to his people in these latter days. God is unchangeable.

I trust that this letter will be the means of bringing comfort to some lonely and weak Saint.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

77 Southern Road.

HARRY HAILSTONE.

HAMILTON, MISSOURI, October 16, 1916.

Editors Herald: Our conference of the Far West District, October 7 and 8, with the Alma Branch, is a thing of the past. While the attendance was not large as we have had, on account of it being to the extreme south end of the district, we certainly had a good time. The spirit of peace prevailed throughout the entire conference. There was not a jar, even in the business sessions. The preaching was by J. W. Roberts, Bishop Bullard, and B. J. Scott. The prayer meeting Sunday at 12.30 was one that will be remembered by those present. The Spirit of God was there from the beginning. The gifts were manifested by prophecy on two occasions. The Saints all rejoiced, and some outsiders were melted to tears.

After the conference Bishop Bullard accompanied me home to visit the Oak Dale Branch. He preached during the week and many of the Saints of this branch are rejoicing that they have been enlightened in the great gospel work, and many of them paid their tithing in full.

Sunday, October 15, we had a prayer meeting at 12.30. The Spirit was with us in power from the beginning. Two prophecies were given. The Saints were admonished to live up to their resolutions and inasmuch as they do, God's hand would be over them, blessing them in basket and in store, and protecting them from the judgments he is beginning to pour out on the land. Outsiders were melted to tears in this meeting.

I have visited each branch and mission in this district since our conference in March, and I believe the Saints are trying to come up on higher ground. The local men, many of them have been more active this year than ever before, some of them opening new places and preaching for two weeks at a time. I have encouraged this. I have urged those holding the priesthood to move out and magnify their office and calling. Let us be laborers with God in the fullest sense of the word.

We are glad to report those who have moved into our district in the last two years are rejoicing in the work, and inviting their friends this way. We have a few farms for sale at bargains. We would like the Saints to come in and buy. The Kingston Branch, also Far West Branch have some good bargains in farms. We would like our people to buy them.

In gospel bonds,

J. T. FORD.

KIRVIN, TEXAS, October 18, 1916.

Editors Herald: I am sending you a pamphlet entitled "Mormonism exposed." The Baptists have been circulating them around in the community where I live. One of them was sent to a Latter Day Saint lady and she read it and sent it to me. I thought I would send it to you and you could do as you see fit with it. Several elders have passed through here, and it seems that the Baptists fear they may make an impression on the people.

If any of the elders pass through this section, would be glad for them to call on me, as I never get to church or hear any one preach of my faith.

Your brother in the faith,
J. B. GOOLSBY.

[We will be glad to send the copy of the pamphlet mentioned to any of our elders who contemplate a visit into the vicinity of Kirvin. The author of the booklet is W. O. Benson, a missionary Baptist of Wellington, Texas. The arguments are of the usual unsubstantial sort, having been answered and refuted many times.—EDITORS.]

BURLEY, IDAHO, October 19, 1916.

Editors Herald: It seems good to read the letters written by the Saints. We came to Burley in the spring of 1916 from Boise, where we left a branch. Here there are only a few scattered members, but the Lord has blessed us. Twins came to our home this summer, and were blessed by Brother George W. Winegar. On October 17 we lost our oldest daughter, Florence. She was five years old. We ask for the prayers of all the Saints, as we feel that it will strengthen us so we can make a greater effort to properly rear our little ones.

We remain as brother and sister in the faith,
J. A. AND LENA F. GREENE.

WALNUT, KANSAS, October 19, 1916.

Editors Herald: It has been some time since I have written anything to the HERALD.

I went to Ridgley, Missouri, last June, forty miles south-east of Joplin. Brother James Sheppard and his good family live there. I held forth in a large school building with good crowds and a good interest. Brother Sheppard is superintendent of a union Sunday school and he is wielding a good influence among his neighbors. I then went to Helper, Kansas, and preached two weeks on the streets. While here I was called home to preach the funeral sermon of Brother Hills.

From here I went to Parsons, Kansas, where we found Brother Budd with the tent, and Brother Fry was with us here one night. Brother Silvers also came back, as he had been called away on account of sickness. Here we found a noble little band of Saints.

Next we went to Joplin to arrange for the reunion. The reunion in the main was good. From Joplin we went to Rich Hill reunion and helped what we could. We were placed in charge of the street work. The crowds and interest on the streets were all we could ask for. The reunion was a success from start to finish.

We then went to Carthage, Missouri, where we met Brother Silvers. The next day we put up the gospel tent and held forth for three weeks, preaching each Saturday night on the streets. The Brighamites were on one corner and we on the other, but they were unable to hold the crowd. We had all the way from seventy-five to over a hundred. The last Saturday night we were there they did not try it. They have a few members in Carthage, but it is hard for them to get a good hearing. At the close of our meeting we had the pleasure of baptizing seven.

We were with the Webb City Saints the first Sunday of this month, helped them with their rally day. They have painted their church inside and out. I wish more of our branches would take more interest in their places of worship. I don't believe the Lord is well pleased with us if we lavish money on our homes and let the church go looking like a woodshed. In olden times the Lord asked for the best of the flock as his for a burnt offering. How hard it would be for some people of to-day to give the best to the Lord! When we get out of debt, get a nice house and barn, and an auto, and all that we want, then we pay our tithing and help to build a church; but say, when we get all these things will there not be other things we will want? Would it not be better to give the Lord his part first (the best)?

May the Lord help us all and help us to keep the whole law.
Your brother,
LEE QUICK.

PEORIA, ILLINOIS, October 23, 1916.

Editors Herald: Feeling confident that there are many of your readers who will be interested in hearing news from the Kewanee District, we take this opportunity of writing concerning it, both as to its past and also the present.

We have just returned from attending the district conference held at Kewanee, Illinois. This is the fifty-fourth time that the Kewanee Branch has entertained the district in the fifty-three years since the district was organized. There have been one hundred and eighty sessions since the first one was held in Galesburg, Illinois, in 1863, for Kewanee District is almost as old as the Reorganization itself. And even before that meeting in Galesburg, back in 1860 there was a representation from Henderson Grove Branch to the General Conference held at Sandwich, Illinois. Zenos H. Gurley was the man who was representative.

So, you see, it has been a good many years since we first began to hold these district conferences and many a remarkable experience has passed into history; many good and earnest men and women have taken part in the deliberations of its councils and have passed on.

To-day, we have felt specially interested in the history of the Kewanee Branch, which is the second oldest branch now in the district. The first is Buffalo Prairie. Many and sacred are the memories clustering around the branch. Away back in the winter of 1863, when the troublous times of the Civil War were at their worst, James Blakeslee visited Kewanee and preached there. A number of those who had joined the Church in England and Wales had emigrated to America and reached here, and upon hearing the reports from the West had refused to go farther. But some were waiting and were "Brighamites." Brother Blakeslee reported that "there was a great work to be done there." A little later that same winter Joseph Smith stopped there, and in company with John Shippy preached and labored among the people, and reported the work to have met with success.

The following spring, April, 1863, James Gillen and John Shippy returned and organized the Kewanee Branch with ten members. John D. Jones was the first president. Quite a remarkable "sign" was witnessed by many at this time. There appeared in the heavens, a huge egg-shaped ball of mellow light which traveled toward the east and disappeared. The sun was shining at the time. It was seen by many, and was apparently about eight feet long. There were many manifestations of the gifts of the gospel enjoyed at this time.

The third district conference was held at Kewanee in 1864, and from that date till this, October, 1916, this branch has led the district in size and has always seemed to do her part in helping to carry on the district work. It was long the custom to hold the winter conference there and often twice a year the district met at Kewanee in those early years.

Some of the ablest and best known men in the church have labored there, as well as many more just as worthy but not so widely known upon earth, but who, we are persuaded, are no strangers to the angelic hosts that await the coming of the faithful on the other shore. We find among them Joseph Smith, Alexander Smith, Zenos Gurley, W. W. Blair, James Gillen, Mark Forscutt, and a host of men who have been valiant in their testimony. And as we recall these days and turn the pages of records that speak so plainly of sacrifices made, homes left, and privations endured that the gospel might be planted here in this place, our hearts yearn to do our part as well.

We felt, as we have seldom felt before, that we are entering upon a new "era"; and that that which had been spoken of by prophets long since gone, was at hand. That to us, the living, remained the task of completing what they who have gone on did so nobly begin. And like the immortal Lincoln said at Gettysburg, "It remains for us to dedicate ourselves anew to that service."

But enough of the past. We turn to the here and now.

This last session, the one hundredth and eightieth, passed off very pleasantly. No division was manifested and the business was soon dispatched. The preaching and prayer services were good and were attended by the Spirit of God.

Brother W. A. McDowell was present, with his stenographer, Brother Guy Fairbanks from Chicago, and gave many blessings to those who were desirous. Brother McDowell also preached to the Saints along the line of practically applied principles of the latter-day work. With the text, "Let us go forward and not backward" for a keynote, and with the aid of the Holy Spirit to a very marked degree, he was able to bring the vital issues that confront us to the minds and hearts of his hearers with such force that it can hardly fail to bear fruit.

The conference was not so well attended as is usual, caused by the cold rain on Friday, and, too, there was a regret in the minds of many, that some of those long associated with the district, were not with us.

During the Sunday afternoon prayer meeting, the Spirit of prophecy was manifested, and to the one delivering the message an open vision of the events described was given. The message was one of warning, comforting assurances, exhortation, and warning again. A strict keeping of the laws and commandments was enjoined upon the Saints and when the promise that "I will be as a wall of fire round about you" was given, there appeared to the speaker a wall of fire encircling those present. It was like a wainscoting around the room and reached a little higher than the heads of the congregation. Again when the assurances were given to have no fear, though the waves of disaster, storms, etc., might beat upon them upon the right hand and upon the left, "yet will I be in your midst; ye shall not be overcome," there appeared the form of Jesus Christ seen dimly as through a veil, yet discernible in the middle of the room. And, oh, the love depicted upon the countenance and the tenderness felt as "My people" were urged to be faithful; "to regard not lightly My word as written, neither to fail to give heed to the counsel of my Spirit." Then followed the admonition in which the alternative condition was depicted. If the word was disregarded and the counsel treated lightly and disregarded then there was woe, woe, woe! And in the vision the light which had seemed to center around the room receded and was replaced by darkness so thick and dense that it could almost be felt.

The sensation of love was so keen and full that it almost pained, but the feeling of regret at the loss of the presence and protection was one never felt before and one which caused the frame to shudder for hours afterward.

It was a testimony that was given to some present for a witness as well as for warning, comfort, and encouragement to all that so needed. Of that, the writer is well assured.

And so, after enjoying the sweet influences of the Spirit of God, and association of friends, we are home once more. The daily work again going on and one more conference on the records here and over yonder.

MARY E. GILLIN.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, October 24, 1916.

Editors Herald: I am now in the midst of a heated discussion with the non-progressive wing of the Campbellite church. My opponent is Early Arcennaux, the one I met in San Antonio in debate eight years ago. We are holding the debate in their tent with large crowds. Brother A. J. Banta is acting as my assistant and shows by his acts that he is of good material. My church is on trial now; close on that to-night, and then we will have Arcennaux in the lead for five nights. Comments from the outsiders are encouraging for us. The Saints are taking the abuse in a commendable way. The debate closes next Sunday night, the 29th. We are all feeling fine in the conflict.

Sincerely yours,

W. M. AYLOR.

News from Missions

Des Moines District

It has been some time since I have observed anything in the columns of the HERALD from the Des Moines District and more than a year since I have contributed any news, so I write to say I am still in the faith and give my friends and acquaintances, who read the HERALD, some idea as to where I am and what I am doing.

At the last General Conference I was appointed for the fourth time to the Des Moines District. After moving our family to Omaha, Nebraska, about June 1, we again entered into active missionary work, after being temporarily out of the field on account of conditions over which we had no control.

After our district conference in June we went, in company with Brother E. E. Long, to Dunreath, Iowa, where we held a series of meetings, baptizing four and leaving a good feeling among the people of that place, and a desire for us to return. We have learned since that others have embraced the gospel and still more are interested as the result of the efforts of local men in that locality.

About this time Brother Long and I parted company, he going to Tama, and the writer to Sandyville, where we held a short series of meetings and had the privilege of baptizing two more fine people, one of whom has been afflicted for a number of years with the dread disease known as inflammatory rheumatism. We had to carry him into the water, but he suffered no ill effects from the experience and was happy to know he had entered into covenant relationship with God. From the above place we went to Nevada and Colo, Iowa, holding a few meetings in each place just prior to the convening of our reunion at Boone, and I want to say here, that by and through the kindness of our district reunion association my wife, as well as the wives of my colaborers in the district, were permitted to attend the reunion at the expense of the district and to say we appreciated it, would be putting it mildly.

After the reunion, a brother who owns a fine, new car offered to convey us to Sioux City where our two oldest children were staying with their grandmother. From there we drove to Omaha, where we were unfortunate enough to be sick for several days, but after recovering and getting a few days' rest we again left for our field of labor, making our first stop at Perry where we found the Saints wide-awake and anxious for some meetings. So we went to Boone after the district tent, setting it up at once. After holding forth for about four weeks we were compelled to take the tent down owing to cold evenings, but we had a splendid interest while there and baptized four. Brother Hand, who ably presides over the branch there, has baptized two more since. The work at that place is moving nicely as is the case nearly everywhere else in this district.

From Perry we were urged to come to Rhodes, where we are holding forth at the present time with good attendance and interest, so far. Brother Wayne Wolf, a young man just ordained a priest and just entering the mission field, is associated with me and he preached his first sermon this week. He did well, and with experience and study will make an able man in the field. The Des Moines District has a number of young men just like him, and the writer fully believes that for three and a half years he has labored among some of the finest people in the world. The Des Moines District in many respects is one of the most progressive fields we know of. System has been the watchword at all our reunions and conferences and the branches throughout the district have breathed of the same spirit. As a result new buildings of worship have arisen at various places, new members added, old ones revived and the work is surely on the upward trend. I am sure we all rejoice for that, but we are not without our troubles and disappointments. The two things that worry the missionary the most are the absence from his family and securing the financial assistance to properly care for his loved ones. Saints, let us all do our full duty by paying in our tithing and surplus offerings and the financial difficulties of the missionary will in a great measure be overcome. The spirit of sacrifice should be in the heart and mind of every member of the church. Remember that Paul said, in the last days perilous days shall come, men will be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; and the Doctrine and Covenants says the Saints would hardly escape. Let us be careful, because just as sure as we set our desires and affections on the things of this world, we will withhold our means and the work is bound to suffer. Let us all live up to the light God has given us before we ask for more light. "Onward and Upward" should be our motto.

I hope to remain faithful and do my part in the great work of God. As ever, in gospel bonds,

J. L. PARKER.

Home Address: OMAHA, NEBRASKA, 2914 North Twenty-fifth Street.

I thank God that if I am gifted with little of the spirit that is able to raise mortals to the skies, I have yet none, as I trust, of the other spirit that would drag angels down.—Daniel Webster.

News from Branches

Independence Stake

At the midweek prayer meeting, October 18, Brethren E. A. Smith and J. F. Garver presided. Brother Garver recognized the wonderful development attending the recent forward movement, and he felt hopeful of results. Brother May spoke of a letter received from his companion which contained an account of the terrible events which had taken place within fifteen miles of her home in London quite lately. Brother Elbert's remarks concerning the work in Lamoni were very encouraging, especially those concerning the reception of the gifts, and the spirit of unity prevailing at their reunion.

October 20 witnessed the first snow of the season, and the temperature lowered to 28 degrees. Notwithstanding the sudden changes of cold and rainy weather, the classes and "get-together" meetings have continued with interest. The young people turned out well at the early prayer meeting Sunday, October 22, and at the Sunday school, Brother Esgar, by request of the superintendent, gave a sketch of some of his travels, which was interesting. Brother Elbert gave an excellent discourse at the morning church service, based on a text from Doctrine and Covenants 85, his theme being "Authority," and showing that a religion without authority is but an institution of ethics. He also placed stress on education and advocated educational training as well as spiritual direction, which guides into all truth. False science has condemned religion, but true science is helpful to religion.

On Saturday evening the stake Sunday school association held an interesting business meeting, and on the following afternoon a teachers' institute, when a few instructive papers were read, and conferences were held in different rooms.

These meetings were with the Second Branch, and President Frederick M. Smith held forth at the evening hour at the Stone Church before a large congregation. All these gatherings were in the interest of Sunday school work and child training.

May the interest in the advancement, especially of the young, continue, is our prayer. ABBIE A. HORTON.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Brother Hoxie introduced oratorio work to about twenty-three of our Saints who were serving in the capacity of a volunteer choir. His kind of work was far beyond even the comprehension of most of these workers, but they were desirous of becoming more valuable instruments in the hands of their Master, hence were willing to sacrifice the time and energy necessary to produce big things.

Every Saturday evening during the winter of 1913 found them rehearsing the difficult parts of the "Holy City," which was rendered in Brooklyn on February 22, 1914, by the Philadelphia and Brooklyn choirs combined.

The results of the efforts put into this work increased their desires to develop talent. They were benefited spiritually and intellectually.

"Olivet to Calvary" was studied next, and rendered in Philadelphia on February 21, 1915; Saints from Brooklyn and Scranton assisted. This was followed by "The Messiah," by Handel, which was rendered in Philadelphia on March 3, 1916, assisted by the Brooklyn choir.

To master these oratorios required considerable consecration and cooperation. If we would master anything in life we must put our shoulder to the wheel. Those who are unwilling to come without much serving generally remain in the background.

The little choir of twenty-three developed into a chorus of nearly one hundred voices and is now studying the "Elijah," by Mendelssohn, which we expect to eclipse all past events of its character.

Brother Hoxie's efforts during the past three years produced marvelous results, and if as much progress is made during the next three years as has been made since 1913, human words will not adequately describe the majesty of our production. We have every reason to expect even greater successes.

A. J. DICKSON.

Lamoni, Iowa

The spiritual atmosphere in Lamoni is indeed exhilarating. In various ways which might be enumerated, and in some which are only instinctive do we note the indications of an onward movement among the people in Lamoni, as well as elsewhere in the church.

The prayer meetings are exceptionally well attended, as are the other services at the church. The various classes for intellectual development in such subjects as the Book of Mormon, psychology, English, etc., are well attended. One brother who has been closely associated with the church since its reorganization was heard to remark that from the sessions already held he had learned more of the Book of Mormon than in years of study heretofore. He attributed this difference to the fact that systematic study had been indulged in, and the result was a comprehension such as he had not hitherto been able to receive.

The Sunday school and Religio are well attended, with excellent interest. The former has an average attendance of about five hundred, while the latter has from one hundred and fifty to two hundred.

Graceland College as usual exerts an important influence in the community, socially as well as educationally. Working with the Woman's Auxiliary, representatives of the college have succeeded in making the lyceum course which has been an annual feature of our social life, a real community affair. Sufficient tickets are sold to guarantee the expenses of the course, and the balance of the seats are given over without charge to those especially interested in this excellent form of entertainment and education.

Several of our local and general church leaders have recently been in Independence conferring with stake and general officers there. A number of things were developed, some of which we shall hear later, but one of them being the appointment of Bishop A. Carmichael, manager of the Herald Publishing House, as bishop of the Lamoni Stake, he to act in that capacity until General Conference convenes. A special stake conference has been called to ratify this action, as also his selection of counselors, and will be held November 4, at Lamoni, convening at 2 p. m., and continuing over Sunday.

A number of new residences are being erected in our city, which will largely relieve the situation, as residences have heretofore been scarce.

A proposition is being considered which, if carried out, will result in the Lamoni Coliseum being made a municipally owned and controlled structure, it being our largest and most convenient place for general assemblies aside from the church building. Its use and disposition are important to our community welfare. If the present plans are carried out it will necessitate a bond issue which will require the expenditure of about eight thousand dollars, and to do this the vote of the people must be secured.

DELBERT.

(Continued from page 1060.)

festations as may appear to be of more than local or personal interest. Those reading them, while exercising no undue suspicion, will still remember that these communications have not been put forth as law adopted by the quorums and by conference, but are to be received as other spiritual gifts manifested in the prayer meetings, confirmatory of the law and the promises, and calculated to comfort and edify the Saints, and should be considered each on its own merits.

SPARE THE GOAT.—It has been suggested in a Prohibition paper that the goat be made the emblem or symbol of the saloon interests. A writer protests and says the goat has too many good qualities to be thusly used and suggests a reptile or an octopus, otherwise known as the "devil fish."

NEW LAMONI STAKE BISHOPRIC.—At a recent sitting of the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric, Bishop Albert Carmichael was selected to occupy until the next General Conference as bishop of the Lamoni Stake, to succeed Bishop Joseph Roberts, deceased during the conference year. This is in harmony with the rule that bishops are to receive appointment in a joint council of the Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, or in the interim between conferences by joint action of the Presidency and Presiding Bishopric. Since the death of Bishop Roberts the two counselors, Richard J. Lambert and Oscar Anderson, have carried on the work in a manner exceedingly creditable, but Brother Anderson is almost wholly engaged in secular work and Brother Lambert found the work of the office too exacting for one man to carry longer. A special stake conference has been called for Saturday, November 4. Bishop Carmichael proposes to nominate as counselors, R. J. Lambert and A. J. Yarrington.

THE H. S. V. U. S.—These letters stand for the High School Volunteers of the United States. The movement has been launched by Everybody's Magazine and has the indorsement of several Government officials. This is not surprising, as military men should favor that sort of training. While it is conceded to be military, yet, "they believe we are trying to make soldiers of the boys, that they must go into the army after receiving such training. All who desire the movement to succeed should do all in their power to dispel that idea," according to Glenworth Sturgis, of one school that is trying out the plan. Those desiring to be better posted on this important matter should write this organization at New York City, in care of Everybody's Magazine. As a high school patron you may be called on to express an opinion or help decide this question in your community.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes

CLINTON.—At Mapleton, Kansas, October 7, 1916, district presidency presiding. Reports from Eldorado Springs, Walker, Taberville, Veve, Mapleton, Coal Hill, Nevada, Butler, Rich Hill, and Fort Scott branches. The ordination of Harmond R. Beebe as priest left with the district presidency. Adjourned to meet February 17, 18, 1917. Zora Lowe, secretary, Eldorado Springs, Missouri.

Kewanee.—At Kewanee, Illinois, October 21 and 22, W. E. Peak and W. A. McDowell presiding; M. E. Gillin secretary. Branch reports: Kewanee 139; Joy 104; Twin City 88; Dahinda 85; Millersburg 80; Buffalo Prairie 73; Matherville 58; Peoria 57; Canton 56; Rock Island 35. Total number in district 775. District treasurer's report showed total collections for four months ending October 1 to have been $80.45; disbursements $61.80. Bishop's agent, H. C. Ziegenhorn, reported total collection for same time as above $507.89, disbursed, $494.50. No report from the reunion committee appointed at last conference although it is well known that the reunion was held and was successful. Dahinda Branch recommended the ordination to the office of elder of William Lorange, and Millersburg Branch did likewise in the case of William Wakeland. Conference sanctioned both requests and both were ordained. The resolution adopted at Joy conference in 1915 relative to the ordination of the priesthood was rescinded unanimously. Delegates to the next General Conference were chosen as follows: Kitty Pine, Anna Amos, William Willetts, Doctor Joseph Asay, C. E. Willey, W. E. Peak, W. A. McDowell; alternates, E. A. Curtis and Alfred Needham. These named or those present to cast the full delegate vote and in case of division, a majority and minority vote. The next conference is to be held at Dahinda June 2, 3, 1917. Patriarch McDowell gave many patriarchal blessings. Not many visiting Saints but a very quiet, peaceful session had. Mary E. Gillin, district secretary, 115 Clarke Avenue, Peoria, Illinois; W. E. Peak, Independence, Missouri, president.

NAUVOO.—With the Rock Creek Branch, at Adrian, Illinois, October 14 and 15, district presidency in charge. Branches reporting: Keokuk, Montrose, Farmington, Fort Madison, Burlington, Ottumwa, and Rock Creek. Ordinations: H. F. Bromann, priest; E. O. Biermann, deacon. Provisions made for holding a reunion in the Nauvoo District in 1917. Resolved that we favor the purchase, by subscription, of an automobile for missionary purposes in this district. Adjourned to meet at Burlington, Iowa, February 10 and 11, 1917. W. H. Gunn, secretary, Fort Madison, Iowa, 3014 Seneca Street.

BRITISH ISLES MISSION.—In the Saints' church, Bradford, Manchester, August 5, 1916. U. W. Greene chosen to preside, with W. H. Greenwood as associate. W. R. Armstrong and William Worth chosen secretaries. The mission president, U. W. Greene, in presenting his report, said that circumstances had arisen which had prevented him from coming into this field last year. W. H. Greenwood had acted as president in charge. It was three years since he met with us. Brother Greenwood, associate minister, next presented his report; the secretary, W. R. Armstrong; the financial secretary, Bishop R. May, and the auditors report by J. E. Meredith and J. A. Judd. Missionary reports: high priests, Thomas Jones, J. W. Taylor, W. R. Armstrong; elders, Edward Maloney, J. E. Meredith, John Schofield, Abel Hall, James Schofield, W. H. Chandler, Charles Cousin, Ernest Wragg, J. A. Judd. District reports: Birmingham; Western Wales; Eastern Wales; London. Isolated branch: Broad-clist. Report of committee composed of the secretaries to write the Presidency for the return of Bishop R. May to the British Isles Mission read. Reports of seventh quorum of elders and sixth quorum of priests read. Report of the mission Sunday school association read. Resolved that we purchase the blank report forms provided by the church for the various quorums and missionaries who report to the conference. The following communication from the London District was read. "Conference of London District was held in London, July 7, 1916. It was resolved that this conference of the London District hereby authorize and request J. A. Judd to call the attention of the mission conference to the non-registration of the church as a religious body in this country and to the nonregistration of the ministers thereof with a view that immediate steps be taken by the church authorities to rectify the omission." The question was discussed. It is a matter of vital importance to us in this land and has been forced upon us through the great European War which calls for all men between the ages of nineteen and forty-one years to join the army or the navy. Our ranks have thus been depleted because our ministry have not been placed as those of other denominations are amongst the noncombatants. From 1 to 2.15 p. m. there was a procession of Sunday school workers and Saints. The large banner typical of the angel's message and the blessing of the children was carried by our brethren. The children carried beautiful branches of flowers, some of which found their way into the hospitals for wounded soldiers later. The day was an ideal one for a procession and the sight was most impressive. As the procession passed along the streets it was headed by a boy scout band which played hymns. Some of our familiar tunes were sung by the Saints on the march, and the sight was witnessed by many people. At the afternoon meeting the chairman called the attention of the meeting to a declaration made by the Presidency and the High Council respecting the ordination of Elders William Ecclestone and John Schofield to the office of high priest. The brethren named were so ordained. The sacrament was then administered to the congregation. This was a soul-stirring gathering. The following resolution passed: "Resolved, That we appoint a standing committee of one or more to attend to registration matters and recognition of the church according to the law of the British realm." "Resolved, That we consider the needs of the work in providing for a recognized headquarters of the British Isles Mission." After consideration it was resolved that this matter be referred to the Presidency of the mission. The following notice of motion was read: "We hereby give notice that at the next mission conference we shall ask leave to move that all the membership of the British Isles, together with the ministry in good standing, have voice and vote in this conference. The following resolution was passed: "Resolved, That the consideration of the purchase of cycles for missionaries be referred to the presidency of the mission." Brother and Sister G. H. Holmes, of Claycross, offered as a gift for the use of the mission a gospel van fitted with beds for two or four men. This very generous offer was accepted with appreciation. J. E. Meredith offered to supply free of cost to solicitors and branch agents of the mission a very neat case of re-fills which may be used either in collecting tithes and offerings or for payments for church literature on the weekly installment principle. It was resolved that we accept Brother Meredith's kind offer and thank him for the same. Resolved that the secretaries write the Manchester Guardian expressing our appreciation of the article appearing in its columns. The selection of the place for the holding of the next annual conference of the mission was left with the presidency of the mission. W. R. Armstrong, William Worth, secretaries.

FLORIDA.—At Alaflora Church, October 7, 10 a. m., D. M. Rudd, F. M. Slover presiding, E. N. McCall, W. A. West secretaries. Branches reporting: Local 45, Alaflora 193, Cold Water 98, Santa Rosa 87, Fair View 60. Bishop's agent reported: Last report $55, receipts, $122.50, paid out $177.50. Auditing committee reported books and report correct. Report read from the district Sunday school association. D. M. Rudd, James Cooper, and J. D. McArthur were appointed a committee to determine as to the advisability and practicability of purchasing a tent for missionary purposes in district. Next conference will be held at Local, Alabama, time to be set by the minister in charge and district president. E. N. McCall, secretary.

The Bishopric

AGENT'S NOTICE

"Will a man rob God?" (Malachi 3: 8-12.) The Lord says, "Yet ye have robbed me." We read in the scripture that no robber shall enter into the kingdom of God. We will continue to ask ourselves the question, "Wherein have we robbed thee?" The answer is, "in tithes and offerings." Further on it says, "Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation." The tenth verse reads, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Some will say, "Oh, well, wait until the Lord opens up the way before me and blesses me with all I need, and then I will pay tithing." Notice the words "try me." We find there are many of God's children who are always waiting for the Lord to try them and are not willing to try the Lord.

We read in the Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5: "Behold now it is called to-day until the coming of the Son of Man, and verily it is a day of sacrifice and a day for the tithing of my people." Now we can plainly see that we cannot afford to wait until we receive all we need, but there must be a sacrifice made on our part. How gratifying it is to think of the gospel that was brought to us. Who brought it? You would say one of the servants of God. Let us ask ourselves the question, Are we sending it to some one else? And are we helping to feed the poor, and are we clothing the naked? Let us remember the Lord will say, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."

In the Doctrine and Covenants 101: 2, we read, "If any man shall take of the abundance which I have made and impart not his portion according to the law of my gospel unto the poor and the needy, he shall with the wicked lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment."

The hastening time is upon us and it would pay each and everyone of us to live by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God and if there are any who wish to pay tithing in the Southern Indiana District, no matter how small or how large the amount, it will be gladly received.

Your coworker in the gospel,

JAMES B. WELCH, Bishop's Agent.

SOUTHERN HEIGHTS, LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY, 4622 Belleview Avenue.

Conference Notices

Spokane, December 9 and 10, at Spokane, Washington, F. D. Omans, district president; W. W. Fordham, secretary.

To Ministers in Charge

I have recently sent out to each one of the brethren in charge of the fields, a roll of the annual report blanks with the questions for application, the lists for recommendations and the annual blanks for reporting to conference.

Should any not receive them in due course kindly let me know at once and the matter will be duplicated and forwarded.

JOHN W. RUSHTON,
Secretary of Twelve.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, 951 West Thirty-fourth Street.

Normal Department

Mr. Edward F. Yerrington, box 1273, Providence, Rhode Island, has been appointed assistant superintendent of the normal department, and is to have charge of the work of securing enrollments of teacher-training students. The immediate aim is to enroll 1000 students in the new standard course, details of which were recently published in Autumn Leaves. Superintendents of schools and presidents of locals are urged to get in touch at once with Brother Yerrington if their organization does not have a training class for teachers.

Miss Maude L. Parrish, 5249 Devonshire Avenue, Saint Louis, Missouri, has been appointed superintendent of the Normal department for Arkansas, and Missouri outside of the stakes, vice Mr. G. S. Trowbridge, resigned."

L. F. P. CURRY.

Addresses

Home address, J. L. Parker, 2914 North Twenty-fifth Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

Correction

In the HERALD for October 18 there are several errors in article "Zion in Africa." On 1017, 18th line from the bottom, in the first column, correct "high priesthood" to read "high priest." In the line just below, correct "inherited" to read "inheres." In the second column, same page, line 18 from the top, correct "Israel" to read "Ishmael."

Died

MEADOR.—Lawrence Raymond, son of brother and Sister S. F. and Mary Meador; born February 6, 1903, at Independence, Missouri, baptized June 13, 1916; died October 21, 1916, at Cameron, Missouri. Services at the Cameron L. D. S.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Joseph Smith's Place in the Church - - - 1057
That Which God Requires - - - 1059
Current Events - - - 1059
Notes and Comments - - - 1060

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
Born Again, by R. Etzenhouser - - - 1061
The Paradox of Living, by A. N. Observer - - - 1062
More About a Chair of Theology, by Geo. W. Lindsey - - - 1064

OF GENERAL INTEREST:
An Antigossip Crusade - - - 1065
The New Latter Day Saints - - - 1066

HYMNS AND POEMS - - - 1066

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY - - - 1067
Bertha Harper—Mrs. T. T. Grabske—Altha R. Deam.

LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - 1069
R. T. Cooper—E. C. Sellers—Earnest A. Webbe—
C. Ed Miller—J. H. N. Jones—Harry Hailstone—
J. T. Ford—J. B. Goolsby—J. A. and Lena F. Greene—Lee Quick—Mary E. Gillen—W. M. Aylor
—Extracts from Letters.

NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - 1075
J. L. Parker.

NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - 1076
Abbie A. Horton—A. J. Dickson.

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - 1078

church, in charge of Brother I. McCord, sermon by William Lewis, to a large audience of sympathizing friends; he was laid to rest in the Delano Cemetery, four miles north of Cameron. He leaves to mourn father, mother and four brothers and three sisters. Lawrence was a dutiful son, much thought of by his numerous associates in the Sunday and public schools.

Two Christmas Presents for the Price of One

The best family paper and the best fashion magazine—The Youth's Companion and McCall's Magazine, both for $2.10. The Youth's Companion ($2.00 by itself) has for years been one of the best, most entertaining, most useful of Christmas presents, crowded with stories, articles, humor, science, and the progress of the world week by week. McCall's Magazine (50 cents by itself) is the most widely circulated fashion magazine in America.

Our two-at-one-price offer includes:
1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues of 1917.
2. All the remaining issues of 1916.
3. The Companion Home Calendar for 1917.
4. McCall's Magazine—12 fashion numbers of 1917.
5. One 15-cent McCall Dress Pattern—your choice from your first number of the magazine—if you send a 2-cent stamp with your selection.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION,
St. Paul St., Boston, Mass.

New Subscriptions Received at this Office.

Which Do You Prefer?

It is important for reasons of health and practical economy for every housekeeper to ask herself this question:

"Do I prefer a pure baking powder like Royal, made of cream of tartar derived from grapes, or am I willing to use a baking powder made of alum or phosphate, both derived from mineral sources?"

The names of the ingredients printed on the label show whether the kind you are now using or any brand, new or old, that may be offered is a genuine cream of tartar powder, or merely a phosphate or alum compound.

Royal Baking Powder contains no alum nor phosphate.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

BOOK OF MORMON.—We sell this book in various bindings, listed in our price list. The most popular editions are, No. 11, cloth, 90c; No. 12, full leather $1.80
THE HAPPIEST CHRISTMAS AND THE SILVER THIMBLES.—Two excellent child stories by Callie B. Stebbins, who has had an extraordinarily wide experience with children. One of the birth-offering series. No. 364, cloth$.40

HIS FIRST VENTURE AND THE SEQUEL.—A story by Estella Wight, editor of Stepping Stones and the "Religio's Arena." It tells about a country boy who was led astray by the lure of the city, but came back at last to loved ones—and the realization that "homely goodness" is the best thing after all. No. 369, cloth$.60

JOAN OF ARC.—"Frances" here tells the story of Joan of Arc in a most human way. The French heroine is here brought down to the present and is seen as a living being, rather than a remote historical character. The social revolution she helped bring about, the service she rendered her country, make the story of her life interesting to all generations. Joan is an inspiration. No. 370, cloth$.60

THE INSTRUCTOR.—A compilation of scriptural and other citations by the veteran apostle, G. T. Griffiths, gleaned from the Word and his own wide experience as a thinker and preacher; not only handy but necessary. Ammunition every defender of Latter Day Saintism needs. No. 216, cloth, $1; No. 217, leather, $1.25; No. 218, flexible$2.00

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

FOR SALE

Two acres of fine lying land, all set to young fruit just coming into bearing—new 6 room house, back plastered and finely finished. 2 never failing wells, new hen house 10 x 24. Located on South State St. Bargain for cash. E. F. Hall, Lamoni, Iowa. 31-tf

DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.—A book of the revelations given for the guidance of the church. One of the three standard books of the church which no member can afford to disregard. In four bindings: No. 21, cloth, 65c; No. 22, full leather $1; No. 23, imitation morocco, gilt edges, $2.05; No. 24, morocco, gilt edges, flexible$3.25

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 63

LAMONI, IOWA, NOVEMBER 8, 1916

NUMBER 45

Editorial

THE BIGGEST THING IN YOUR LIFE

What is the biggest thing in your life? Stop a moment and think.

With typical old-time Latter Day Saints the biggest thing in their lives without doubt was the church. Everything else was of secondary importance.

When they met together of an evening that was invariably the subject of their conversation. To drive fifteen miles or walk ten miles in order to hear a sermon was nothing uncommon.

They talked it to their children. They expected their children to take up the work and carry it on after them. They were willing and anxious that their sons should become missionaries and that their daughters be missionaries' wives.

That is why so many old-time Latter Day Saint families are now represented in the work by sons or grandsons. In a recent prayer-meeting we noted at least six such old-line families thus represented in the service—families that were pioneers in the work years ago—families in which the church was such an important factor that it left an impression on their children.

What is the biggest thing in your life to-day? Many answers might be returned if this query were pressed far enough and wide enough and answers were frankly given.

Without doubt the biggest thing in some lives is money. The entire attention is riveted on methods of cornering and capturing the elusive dollar. Imagination dwells upon but one thing—prospective or real financial returns.

In other lives the biggest thing is fashion. Changing modes are constantly watched. Fashion plates are studied. An eager scanning of costumes is all that relieves the intolerable boredom of church-going—and nothing can be so utterly unprofitable and uninteresting as a religious service to one whose heart is on some other shrine. Enough is spent on fads and fancies along this line to go a long, long way toward paying the church debt if the church were the biggest thing in every life.

With others pleasure is paramount. Card games, shows of various kinds, dances, social diversions, engross the spare time, attention, physical strength, mental ability, and financial resources. Is it not proper to conclude that in such a case pleasure is the biggest thing in such a life?

We might enlarge upon the list—noting even grosser ideals. But that is sufficient. In the very first section of the Doctrine and Covenants we read: "Every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own god, whose image is the likeness of the world."

Yet God said a long time ago: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me. . . . for I the Lord God am a jealous God."

The present forward movement in the church means that the church must become the biggest thing in the lives of Latter Day Saints. It is again to become the chief subject of conversation in many homes, to the exclusion of much unprofitable gossip about trivial matters.

And the church must become the biggest thing in communities where Latter Day Saints predominate. By the term church here we mean that the upbuilding of the kingdom and the establishment of righteousness must become the paramount ideal in such communities.

No better places are suggested for such work than in Independence and Lamoni. In one of these towns our church people are overwhelmingly in the majority, in the other they have a very large following.

(Certainly in Lamoni if the church and her aims shall not become the biggest thing in the community and the biggest thing in the lives of individual members, then the Saints are left without excuse, and are in the position of having followed in their own way and after gods of their own choosing.

Returning to the individual plea; the church should be the biggest thing in the life of every member. When we consider the aims and ideals of the church we know that thus members will become better citizens of city, state, and nation—better members of the family, better neighbors. All gain when the church is first in the lives of men.

Most positively the object of the present spiritual and educational revival in the church, and especially at Independence and Lamoni, is to put the church first in the lives of members, and in the community so far as is proper and right. Are you in line with that ideal? Is there anything else that looks bigger to you?

Personally we believe this ideal to be in harmony with the Master's admonition: "But seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness." ELBERT A. SMITH.

THE WORD OF ENCOURAGEMENT

(Given through Elbert A. Smith at the morning prayer service of the Lamoni Stake reunion, August 24, 1916.)

This morning before rising from my bed, and while thinking about this prayer service, the spirit that has characterized our prayer meetings came upon me, and I was given that which I believe to be a message for the people. Lest I might forget some portions of it, I wrote it down before arising, and will now read it and leave it with you for what it may be worth to you:

The Lord is well pleased with the order and sobriety that have characterized the gathering of his people at this place. He has noted their willingness to heed the instructions and suggestions of those in charge of the meetings and responsible under him.

He has delighted in your happiness—and think not that he has been displeased with your songs, and your pleasantries, and your games, and your laughter in the hours set apart for recreation and social intercourse, so long as you have respected the prohibition against folly and excess of laughter.

He has looked with love upon the little children at their play, and in their services, even as he did upon the little Hebrew children in the days when Jesus tabernacled in flesh in the Holy Land, as you call it—but behold, this also is holy land, if ye are holy. He is pleased that some have felt to labor with the children and for them during these meetings.

He is pleased also with the young people who have entered into the prayer service and into the service of song. Yes, he recognizes the reverential feelings that have entered into the hearts of many of the young. Through some have kept those feelings concealed as a holy thing of which as yet they do not feel to speak, yet will they bear the fruits of the Spirit in their time.

The elders are approved for the soberness with which they have conscientiously sought to deliver the word of the Lord at the hour of preaching, and when under the impress of the Spirit. And those aged men among the priesthood who have borne the heat and burden of the day are especially blessed and should rejoice even though the sun of their service be declining, for God has given them a light that even the shades of the valley of the shadow of death cannot obscure, and in their hands has set a rod and a staff to comfort them.

There may remain exhortations and rebuke, but for this time the Spirit extends only the word of cheer and approval, to the extent that you have merited approval. Amen.

A FIVE-HUNDRED-DOLLAR LETTER

Missives worth while are not all written by high-salaried men who do nothing else. Specialists in that line of work no doubt write the most valuable commercial letters, but the value of a letter is not always to be measured in dollars and cents.

For instance, who will attempt to place a value on a letter to the patient, waiting mother in a distant home who lives in the past, in the days when romping children flocked around her and developed under her kind maternal care? Are there any who care to evaluate the letters of true lovers? Perhaps none will.

The situation surely determines the intrinsic value of a written message as well as a spoken one. Possibly circumstances do not allow us to enlist in either of the two general classes mentioned above, but in the following instance we wish to call attention to at least another field for our best endeavors with the pen.

The following incident really happened as described here, and coming to the attention of the writer, was considered as an example worthy of emulation because of its unlimited possibilities.

A certain elderly man had lived in a community where there was a large branch of Saints, but for years he had fought the gospel influences. His wife was a loyal Saint but he was far from being one. His companions were the common loafers who smoke and spit and exchange questionable stories upon the streets and gathering places of such men. Having a naturally good heart and a kindly disposition, he clouded and handicapped the operations of even these by the company he kept and the thoughts he indulged in.

A series of special meetings were advertised by a Latter Day Saint preacher who had considerable reputation as an orator, and this man was interested in the effort sufficiently to attend regularly. The gospel plan was presented so effectively that he with some others heeded the call and obeyed the impulse to become a citizen of the kingdom of God.

Perhaps those of us who have grown up in the work or have never been required to change our habits so materially and suddenly will never comprehend the extent of the struggles of our brethren in these circumstances, but with a little prayerful consideration we can quite well imagine.

It takes time as well as patience to work the necessary conversion in a man's character and habits and change him from a nominal enemy of the work to one who is really a part of it. There must be a readjustment all around which comes not in a day or a week or a month. It is a natural process that develops character, yet no less a miracle than if it took only an instant. True evolution is indeed miraculous in the sight of finite eyes.

A young man in the community whose work prevented an intimate acquaintance with the new convert before or after the conversion, saw possibilities in the situation, and fearing the result of a relapse from neglect which often comes to those who thus seek to change their lives, wrote the following letter to the new brother:

Dear Brother: Learning of the step you have taken in joining our church, I wish to express my gratitude in this manner, since I seldom see you. Even though our lives are not thrown much together, let me assure you that there are many of us who are desirous of each doing his little part in helping you to continue in the path that leads to nobility and godliness.

You have made the right start now, and may God help you as we will try to, in doing those things that will fully prepare you for the glorious things he wants to give his children.

Sincerely, your brother,

That was a simple matter, wasn't it? Just a brief letter like any one of us could write. Certainly. But there is another chapter to the story.

The next day after the receipt of the letter, the old brother with joyful countenance made a visit to a near neighbor and proudly showed what he had received.

In commenting on the incident to the young man later on, the neighbor remarked: "You couldn't have done more for that man if you had sent him a check for five hundred dollars. He was as delighted as a little boy to think that one who knew him so slightly would have such a real interest in him."

Making some further inquiry into the situation later, the following incident was elicited, and which may or may not have a bearing on the situation:

At one time the young brother who wrote the letter had visited the home of the old man as a priest, with another young priest. The man was not at home that evening, being out with his friends down town. They had briefly visited with the sister in the line of their work as visiting officers, seeking to give consolation and comfort to her in her half-isolated condition, and before leaving, all knelt in a word of prayer. While in this attitude the man of the house stalked noisily in and stood impatiently waiting for the prayer to close. His greetings were gruff and his manner apparently resentful.

Who knows but what some of the gratitude in that man's heart at the later date was because of the tacit Christian forgiveness in the act of writing that letter? No doubt a self-accusing memory held him guilty for his seeming opposition to that which he now recognized to be godliness and noble efforts.

Now, looking over the opportunities that come to us, is it not possible that we could write several five-hundred-dollar letters, or better still have a few thousand-dollar conversations? If we were to try to value these things in paltry dollars and cents, we might easily be rich in deposit slips of hundred-dollar kindnesses, or at least a number of five-dollar handshakes. We can do all these things and more if we will. A true follower of Christ certainly should be satisfied with nothing less than a sincere effort to do these "little" things as well as the more spectacular features.

We are all thankful that these things are not weighed up to determine their monetary value, but we must realize that they are worth while—some of the treasures we are to lay up in heaven where they shall safely repose until immortal conditions allow us to serve more fully and efficiently.

E. D. MOORE.

CURRENT EVENTS

AMERICANS ON SUNKEN STEAMER.—The British ship Marina, recently sunk by German submarine had as crew a number of Americans whose names appear among the missing. Official action is withheld, pending more definite reports.

PROHIBITION IN VIRGINIA.—October 31 was the last day on which intoxicating liquor could be legally sold in this State. About eight hundred saloons close their doors as the new prohibition law goes into effect. This is the eighteenth State to prohibit the sale of intoxicating beverages.

"DEUTSCHLAND" ARRIVES AGAIN.—Carrying a cargo of dyestuffs and chemicals said to be worth ten million dollars, the Deutschland docked at New London, Connecticut, on the 31st. This is the second trip to foreign shores by this German submarine freighter. Captain Konig expresses the belief that the Bremen, a sister ship, has been lost at sea.

KINGDOM OF POLAND REESTABLISHED.—Germany and Austria-Hungary, by joint action on the 5th proclaimed Warsaw and Lublin the kingdom of Poland, and reestablished autonomy to the people of this nation. Most of Poland was in Russian territory prior to the war, but was taken by the Germans in their early advances.

"PASTOR" RUSSELL DEAD.—Charles T. Russell, the leader of the Millennial Dawn sect, died October 31. Two special phases of religious belief have been strongly emphasized in his sermons which have been printed in hundreds of newspapers: That the millennium is dawning, and that hell is not eternal punishment.

HURRICANE ON IRISH SEA.—During a hurricane of exceptional violence on the Irish Sea during the night of the 3d, the British ships Retriever and Connemara, collided and ninety-two were drowned. Only two are known to have been saved. The accident occurred off Carlingford Lough, an inlet between the Irish counties of Down and Louth.

EUROPEAN WAR.—The French on the Verdun front have captured Fort Vaux. Both French and British on the Somme front continue their operations, with occasional successes of a minor nature. There seem to be see-saw operations in the Rumanian part of the Balkan region, with little news from Dobrudja where they had been losing. The Rumanian resistance on the Austrian frontier seems to have been considerably strengthened, and reports indicate that they have driven back the Teutonic forces somewhat. Bad weather has prevailed on the Macedonian front, although the Allies and Serbians have made some gains over the Bulgarians. The Italians continue intense bombardment on Trieste and surrounding territory, reporting a large number of Austrian prisoners captured. It is reported from the Armenian theater that Turkish offensive has been developed, though the same report indicates that it has been checked. Little change is noted in the Galician region where the Russians have for a long time been trying to reach Lemberg.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

QUAKERS FEAR BAPTISTS.—That sounds like it might be a heading for some religious news, doesn't it? But it isn't. That's simply a newspaper heading for some baseball news, which only indicates one of the tendencies of the times.

DES MOINES HOME-COMING.—The branch in Des Moines, Iowa, is announcing their annual home-coming day for November 12. This event has always been a pleasing success and with the increased numbers their correspondent is reporting elsewhere in these columns will likely be even better this year. We note that Elder J. F. Garver, President of Lamoni Stake, is to be the principal speaker.

BRANCH ORGANIZED AT OTTAWA.—The Ottawa (Canada) Evening Journal of November 2, contains an announcement that Elder David Pycock, president of the Toronto District, has recently organized a branch at that place. The official title is "The Capital Branch of Ottawa," and Philemon Pement was chosen president, with Priest F. A. Pement assistant. A Sunday school has been running there for several months. We are glad to note that the work has been established at this place where the French Catholics predominate and where Brother Pement has labored so zealously.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY.—We notice with pleasure the announcement that the Saints at Guilford, Missouri, are observing the first anniversary of the dedication of their church, which was announced for October 29. Bishop M. H. Siegfried was the speaker, and a big basket dinner with special music, and everyone invited were features of the event. We are firm believers in the efficacy of special occasions of this character, believing that upon such occasions our friends who do not ordinarily meet with us may be induced to do so and become acquainted with our religious beliefs and our ideals in general.

CHURCH OPENING AT LONDON, ONTARIO.—The London Advertiser and also the Free Press give liberal space to announcements concerning the opening of the Saints' new church building at London. The location is Maitland Street, between King and York Streets. Meetings have been held in the building for several weeks, but the formal opening will be held November 19. President F. M. Smith, Bishops B. R. McGuire, R. C. Evans, and other prominent churchmen will be in attendance. London has the second largest branch in Canada and the Saints have built their new church with surprising rapidity. We commend their united zeal and extend congratulations.

FROM LAMONI STAKE.—At a special conference of the Lamoni Stake held November 4 and 5, a reorganization of the Stake Bishopric was effected. The appointment of Bishop A. Carmichael to act as stake bishop until the next General Conference, or until the appointment should be revoked, coming from the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric, was concurred in by the stake. Bishop Carmichael nominated as his counselors, Brethren R. J. Lambert and A. J. Yarrington. At the afternoon prayer service Sunday, Bishop Carmichael was blessed and set apart for his new work and the two counselors were ordained. A splendid spirit was present. Brother Carmichael will still continue in charge of the Herald Publishing House. At the conference a resolution was adopted pledging the Saints to support the "dry" side in the present campaign for the election of governor of Iowa.

Original Articles

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF INSPIRATION

In attempting to respond to the request of the Editor to write something under this heading, I find myself upon very delicate and important ground, for it may be in giving expression to my views on the subject, there may be a clash with deeply grounded opinions and usages which may cause pain to disturb, and my only reason in applying myself to this task is, that light may be given and good accomplished; however I see an opportunity of doing some good if the Master chooses as an instrument to help in this important duty, such as may need light and assistance. I certainly feel very dependent upon him for light, instruction, and guidance; and for this I pray.

It seems to be natural for a Saint to turn to the writings of the Apostle Paul as a text book for information upon all gospel subjects so I turn to his first letter to the Saints at Corinth, chapters twelve and fourteen, for it is there we can obtain information upon this subject.

"Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant." As an instructor authorized of Jesus Christ, he calls the attention of the saints to the fact that there was something to learn about these spiritual gifts, that they were not shrouded in mystery, but the humble yet apt scholar in the church or school of God could learn of their purposes and use; that the refined senses of man could be quickened by divine light of God's Spirit and understand somewhat the purpose of God in his wise distribution of these gifts; so that edification through revelation would be the result of their use in the church.

There would then be placed upon those receiving these spiritual gifts a measure of responsibility; God holding the recipients of them responsible for their proper and sacred use.

In the church of Jesus Christ of latter days God has placed these spiritual gifts for profit withal, and surely they are profitable when wisdom directs their use. They are choice and sacred, for they come from the storehouse of God for the blessing of his children.

Let all who read this article understand that whatever of revelation coming from God to man, man is left with his agency to deliver or not, as he to whom the revelation comes, wills—"The spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets." Any power that robs man of his agency is not of God; any power that brings the mind or will under subjugation is opposed to the laws of God given for the blessing of mankind, and the free and rightful exercise of our agency has been, and ever will be, the prerogative of the human family; any power or influence, in its exercise depriving man of this, I repeat, is not of God.

The spirit of revelation is the source through which man has conveyed to him the mind, will, or purpose of God; especially that pertaining to divine truth. Truth will always be in harmony with itself. There can be no clash with what has been given before, when God speaks his mind by revelation. "I the Lord change not," "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, to-day and forever," "I and my Father are one."

In Doctrine and Covenants 9:3 we have an infallible guide as a notification to such as are used by the Lord to express his mind and will, that they are touched by his Spirit. The Lord surrounded himself as well as his people with safeguards, and is thus protected against spurious imitations. Listen to what he says to Oliver Cowdery in Doctrine and Covenants 9:3, (speaking of the Spirit to translate.)

Behold you have not understood; you have supposed that I would give it unto you, when you took no thought, save it was to ask of me; but behold I say unto you that you must study it out in your mind; then you must ask me if it be right, and if it is right, I will cause that your bosom shall burn within you; therefore you shall feel that it is right.

With the spirit of revelation therefore will come the burning glow of fire within the heart or bosom, and the mind will become active, and the message through a quickened mind and thought, will be clearly given as the soul is directed to God in prayer.

To some the message may come in an audible voice, to another the quickening of the intelligence, and the mind directed to the person or subject revealed; in this state of mind is the very best time to commune with the Lord, and get all the assurance necessary that the Lord is directing the message. Then comes the responsibility of seeking for a clearly defined message before delivering it.

"The glory of God is intelligence," and he will never rebuke his child for the exercise of the intelligence he has given him under such wonderfully important circumstances. "And it shall come to pass that he that asketh in the Spirit, shall receive in that Spirit," is the promise of God, and if there is one time or occasion more important than another, it is when impressed to deliver a message from the Lord; and if the glory of God is to be revealed through an intelligent and inspired message, we should be in close touch with its author, and this through the exercise of faith in prayer to him.

Remember that that which cometh from above, is sacred, and must be spoken with care, and by constraint of the spirit, and in this is no condemnation; and ye receive the Spirit through prayer; therefore without this there remaineth condemnation.—Doctrine and Covenants 63:16.

The temperament of the individual is often strongly in evidence in the exercise of spiritual gifts;

but there is no need of excitement, or to be unnaturally boisterous in delivering a message under the influence of the Spirit; calmness is best. "The spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets."

A careful reading of the prophecies of olden times as well as of latter days will reveal somewhat of the human, intermingled with the divine, startling as that may sound or appear to some who may read this. But this should in no wise detract from that which has divinity in all its wonderful helpfulness revealed, but should help us to "rightly divide the word of truth," and in the sifting process when permitting our intelligences to work, separating the human from the divine, we can thus credit to the Lord that which is his product, and try to apply its value, and not cast away what of wisdom we find in the human.

The writer has no hesitancy in making the above statement, for to his own intelligence he has proved its truth. And why should we wonder at this when we are so well acquainted with human frailties, weaknesses, and ambitions? How liable we all are to mistakes, yet our heavenly Father has to use these imperfect agencies to accomplish his purposes. The references made to the human need not necessarily be untrue or of no value, for we may discern under the light of that gift, discernment, the characteristics of the man, the servant of God, in the message he delivers, and we should not go to the extreme and discard the whole message as not being of God because of our discovery.

I am persuaded the reader of the revelations of God, who is studiously looking for the pearls of truth therein contained for the value to him, is entitled to the witnesses of the Spirit as a testimony to that which is divine. I think God has placed upon him the responsibility of searching and analyzing what purports to be the word of God, and will surely assist him in such important work, and will not chide him for it. I find in this wonderful work, the school of God, as I make advancement therein, much to encourage me in his message to ancient Israel through his servant Isaiah: "Come now and let us reason together, saith the Lord." The last few years of my life have been so ordered that I have found a measure of the value of this invitation, and have proven again and again that poor, weak man whose spirit is contrite, and who has faith in the promises of God, can reason with the infinite one when under the influence of the spirit of truth.

This then adds to our responsibility as children of the covenant. The possibilities open to us are wonderful if we will learn how to apply them to the natural endowments, as well as to the spiritual gifts imparted to us.

A good brother wrote me some time ago relative to a discovery he had made in the writings of Moses, where a certain command was given to Israel which was entirely out of harmony with what God had in many places in the Scriptures given as his law and counsel to his people. I was asked how I could harmonize the statement with other scripture. I replied I could not, neither would I try, nor would I find an excuse for it. It was untrue, and I used the language of one of the writers of the Book of Mormon: "If there are mistakes, they are the mistakes of men." Men of God are fallible, but God has to use them.

The mistakes of a Moses, or a David, or Isaiah, Jeremiah, or a Joseph of latter days, should not disturb our faith in God; his word will stand forever. Men are human, and make mistakes, but should not be condemned for their mistakes, but honored for the good they accomplish, and the truth they deliver from the Most High should be appreciated.

Referring again to Paul's letter to the saints at Corinth, fourteenth chapter, he doubtless had the same trouble in the prayer meetings in his days as we now experience in some of ours. He dwells very lengthily upon the gift of tongues and its exercise. The only intelligence we get from an unknown tongue is in its interpretation, and unless the one giving the tongue has also the interpretation, and no other present having the gift to interpret, the tongue should not be given, for what profit is derived "unless I speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine," says Paul.

This wonderful man was an expert in regulating these important matters in the church, and gives us valuable information. The great need in the exercise of spiritual gifts is to obtain the mind of the Spirit; not only feeling the glow or fire of the Spirit in our heart—for that is given for the operation of all the gifts—but we are to know to what it is directing us when impressed by its power, for testimony, prayer, evidence of the truth of what another has delivered, or give to the body what may be assured by the Spirit to be one of the outward gifts, as we say when referring to prophecy and tongues. An exhortation or song may be just as valuable when directed by the Spirit as one of the other manifestations could be. They are all helpful in their time and place, and all assist in making the service in the house of God a delight to his people and acceptable to him.

The responsibility comes with the call to duty, to find out by communion with the Lord what he wants done, and this information will be forthcoming if faithfully sought after, for God cannot deny himself.

"If anything be revealed to another who sitteth by, let the first hold his peace . . . that all may learn and be comforted."

Here is counsel of great value, not to rise suddenly and without the evidence necessary to render faithful service to God, when feeling the touch of the Spirit, but watch and see where the Spirit may be resting, and thus give another the opportunity to exercise the gift; for many valuable testimonies strengthening to the faith will be given by thus giving way to another. The Lord may give to the one the same message imparted to the other, then will come testimony of the message not otherwise obtained, strengthening to both receiving the manifestation as well as to the body.

Danger lies in hastily rising to deliver a message before obtaining the clearly defined mind of the Spirit, and doubt will be engendered when the mistake is discovered. This has been a fruitful source of severe and sometimes cruel criticism, and the wounded, sensitive Saint has suffered untold humiliation and pain, because of the mistake made in the exercise of the gift. The greater mistake is perhaps in the uncharitable manner of referring to the matter. So Paul's declaration as to his use of these gifts (and he was abundantly blessed of the Master with the gifts of the Spirit and could speak as one who knew), "What is it then? I will pray with the Spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also; I will sing with the Spirit and I will sing with the understanding also." He includes in his letter the statement that all the gifts shall be exercised with the Spirit and with the understanding. Thus rests upon those exercised by the Spirit the responsibility of understanding with clearness what is required in the use of those choice gifts.

The handing over to a novice a prayer meeting where these gifts are usually given, is a serious mistake; but the very best material as found in a wise, spiritual, experienced man should be sought out for this department of our work; one who has the gift of discernment, and the courage and wisdom to use it in rebuke with kindly firmness, when a rebuke is needed, and to correct when correction is needed, sometimes to "head off" when he discovers an unwise move is about to be made, if by rising and giving instruction in such a way as to accomplish the purpose and save the meeting from disaster. A minister with his eyes closed while in charge is in the wrong place; he should be watchful, alert, and on the tower of spiritual attainment to be a success in that important position.

This gospel is a wonderful school; and there are opportunities of becoming experts in the line of work God has called us to if faithful. He expects this of us. I often think the Lord is doing much of the work that we should have become competent to accomplish had we realized the open door of opportunity before us, and the responsibility resting upon us to perform this work.

We have an Enoch to learn from, and what wonderful powers God could intrust to him, handing over to him the "switch" as it were, that he might turn on the power of the very elements when needed to bring about the purposes of the Lord, and their personal consultations resulted in the wonderful attainment of the church and the glory of God.

A Moses, a Joshua, a Daniel, have demonstrated what faith in God, and the exercise of his gifts to them could accomplish, and in this the greatest of all dispensations, there must be men who through their experience with God in his church, qualify themselves for service greater than our brightest visions of Zion have given us. His work must be done, his promises to his people be verified, and his servants qualify themselves for the service that will mature his purposes.

May the revealment of God's purposes to us bring about the consciousness of their responsibility.

RICHARD BULLARD.

* * * * *

THE ASSOCIATES OF THE YOUNG.—NO. 1

[This article is one of a series by various writers on this subject. Other numbers will appear occasionally.—EDITORS]

To my mind at least the young of the church should associate with those of like faith as much as possible, wherever such are to be found. This will induce a tendency to talk along spiritual lines. I believe all true Latter Day Saints have the things of the gospel uppermost in their minds.

The young, being more timid, would not be as likely to speak or think along spiritual lines when associated with those not of like faith, though many questions arise in their minds. When those of like faith are associated together they can talk along gospel lines knowing that all are or should be truly interested, and that they will cause no strife or contention. Thus their thoughts will be clean and pure.

How good it is to be able to be associated together with those of like faith, knowing that we are being understood and that our thoughts are all along the same lines—pure, clean, wholesome and elevating, knowing that each has the welfare of the other at heart, and that each is striving to do the will of the Master.

We also feel more free to speak of those things which are dear to the heart, and such things as would please the Master. I believe those of the world are more given to seeking after the pleasure of the world—things which are exciting, mattering little whether good or bad. Their thoughts are along worldly things, how they may enjoy themselves, even at the expense of their own souls. They give little or no thought to those things that are spiritual, and that should concern us most.

Many of the household of faith have been drawn out of the straight and narrow path by these associates. This is one of the favorite means by which the Adversary works. How often when with worldly minded associates our young have not had the courage to say no. They yield once with many misgivings, thinking, Just this once. Next time it is easier to drift away from the pure principle of the gospel of Jesus Christ and his loving watchcare and become enmeshed in the net that Satan has set for us. Take a peck of perfectly sound apples and put them away and they will keep for a considerable length of time. But let just one of them have a decayed spot on it and see how quickly all will decay.

Two young sisters in a certain Sunday school seemed to take considerable interest in that meeting, but after some time they began to associate with young folks not of the church and soon their interest began to wane. In time they ceased to come altogether. When asked by some why they did not attend any more, they said among other things that it was not exciting enough, they desired to go where something more exciting was going on. One has now married a man outside of the household of faith. They seldom attend Sunday school or church services now, though efforts have been made to bring them back. It makes the heart sad to see how they have drifted away out of the circle of God's love. They have been lured away by their associates who thought only of worldly pleasure.

Can we forbid our young associating with those not of like faith? I think not. But they should be very careful in choosing their companions. Sometimes we will make mistakes, but when we find them out let us rectify them. Let us never forget to pray to our Father in heaven and ask him for strength to meet all these trials and temptations.

If our associates seek to do that which is wrong or that has the appearance of evil, let us first reason with them and try to turn them away from that which is evil. If they hearken unto us we will have gained the victory, if not it is better to withdraw from them even amid jeers and taunts. It is better to meet the disapproval of our companions than to meet the disapproval of God in becoming partakers of their evil deeds. In this our day and time when all the world is in commotion we cannot afford to be careless and indifferent as to whom we associate with. The hastening time is at hand and we must be pure and clean.

Jesus tells us we cannot serve God and Mammon.

Paul says that to whom we yield ourselves servants to obey, his servants we are.

Let us all live just as near to the Master as we can, and shun evil companions. As God in his mercy saw fit in these latter days, to call us out of darkness into his marvelous light that we might become laborers together with him in building up his church and kingdom here on the earth, let us strive to keep our spirits pure, so that we may not bring shame or reproach upon the work. Let us be careful in choosing our companions and associates.

H. M. AEBLI.

* * * * *

ADAM DID NOT FALL FROM CELESTIAL GLORY

WHAT IS CELESTIAL GLORY?

They are they who are the church of the Firstborn; they are they into whose hands the Father has given all things: they are they who are priests and kings, who have received of his fullness, and of his glory, and are priests of the Most High after the order of Melchisedec, . . . wherefore all things are theirs, whether life or death, or things present, or things to come, all are theirs, and they are Christ's, and Christ is God's. . . . These shall dwell in the presence of God and his Christ for ever and ever; . . . These are they whose bodies are celestial. . . . And thus we saw the glory of the celestial, which excels in all things; where God, even the Father, reigns upon his throne for ever and ever. . . . They who dwell in his presence are the church of the Firstborn; and they see as they are seen, and know as they are known, having received of his fullness and of his grace; and he makes them equal in power, and in might, and in dominion.—Doctrine and Covenants 76: 5, 7.

The Comforter is the promise which I give unto you of eternal life, even the glory of the celestial kingdom. . . . Therefore, it (the earth) must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness, that it may be prepared for the celestial glory; for after it hath filled the measure of its creation, it shall be crowned with glory, even with the presence of God the Father; that bodies which are of the celestial kingdom may possess it for ever and ever. . . . The earth abideth the law of a celestial kingdom, for it filleth the measure of its creation, and transgresseth not the law.—Ibid., 85: 2, 4, 6.

I give unto you these sayings that you may understand and know how to worship, and know what you worship, that you may come unto the Father in my name, and in due time receive of his fullness, for if you keep my commandments you shall receive of his fullness and be glorified in me as I am in the Father: therefore, I say unto you, you shall receive grace for grace. . . . He that keepeth his commandments, receiveth truth and light, until he is glorified in truth, and knoweth all things. . . . The elements are eternal, and spirit and element, inseparably connected, receiveth a fullness of joy; and when separated, man cannot receive a fullness of joy.—Ibid., 90: 3, 4, 5.

They who shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, through the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage. Neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.—Luke 20: 35, 36, I. T.

That ye might be filled with all the fullness of God.—Ephesians 3: 19.

The glory of God is intelligence.—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6.

From a close study of the above, the following are clearly found to be characteristics of celestial glory:

Celestial glory is in the presence of God the Eternal Father and his Christ for ever and ever. Its possessors have all the fullness of God, power, dominion and might; together with perfect love, intelligence, light, truth, etc., as their eternal inheritance. They are immortal and cannot die any more, possessing the issues of life and death. Being spirit and element (body) inseparably connected, they receive a fullness of joy. They neither marry nor are given in marriage. It will not be fully bestowed until after the final judgment, when the earth, together with all that are sanctified and prepared during the millennium receive the fullness.

WAS ADAM IN CELESTIAL GLORY

when placed by God in the garden of Eden? If he was, then the following should be answered in the affirmative:

All celestial beings are immortal. Was Adam?

All celestial beings enjoy the continual presence of God and his Christ. Did Adam?

All celestial beings are endowed with all the fullness of God, perfect intelligence, power, dominion, light, truth, etc. Was Adam?

The following should be answered negatively:

Celestial beings cannot die any more. Did Adam?

Celestial beings dwell where God, Christ, angels and general assembly of the church of the firstborn are together. Was Adam alone?

Celestial beings neither marry nor are given in marriage. Were Adam and Eve?

Satan and evil cannot of themselves enter God's presence or celestial glory. Did he enter Eden?

If Adam and his condition meets all these requirements—being perfect in intelligence, enjoying God's continual presence, incapable of separation from God, immortal, neither male nor female—then we must concede that he was a celestial being.

THE REDEMPTION

For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.—1 Corinthians 15: 22.

Now, verily I say unto you, that through the redemption which is made for you, is brought to pass the resurrection from the dead. And the spirit and the body is the soul of man. And the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 4.

I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death.—Hosea 13: 14.

As death is an inherited condition of the human race resultant from Adam's transgression, the redemption, reclamation, restoration of mankind from death and the grave is an unconditional free gift to all. But salvation or redemption from personal transgression is conditional, being the result of obedience to God and his laws. Jesus Christ atoned for original sin and its result, by breaking the bands of death and freeing its captives. His blood was the price of ransoming the obedient and becoming their mediator. By observance of his teachings reconciliation to God is obtained. The reconciliation or redemption does not produce the celestial condition, but only restores to the first Adamic condition.

Every spirit of man was innocent in the beginning, and God having redeemed man from the fall, men became in their infant state, innocent before God.—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6.

Obedience to the gospel of Christ insures a remission of past sins and reconciliation to God: the infant innocent state being regained. The Holy Spirit "Comforter" is then given as promised, to complete the development, until "eternal life, even the glory of the celestial kingdom is obtained.

GOD'S WORK

God's work in celestializing the human race did not begin with fallen man. It is his purposed work from the moment of creation.

The heavens they are many, and they cannot be numbered unto men, but they are numbered unto me, for they are mine; and as one earth shall pass away, and the heavens thereof, even so shall another come; and there is no end to my works, neither to my words behold this is my work and to glory, to the immortality and eternal life of man.—Doctrine and Covenants 22: 8, 9.

He is consistent with himself and does not endow created men with what he is endeavoring to bring about. Celestial Glory is the goal of every divine creation, even the earth itself.

The infant, inexperienced, impressionable state of Adam accords perfectly with God's plan in working out the celestialization of his creations. Man fell from his first innocent estate, and when he obeys the gospel of Christ the past is blotted out and he returns thereto.

In the millennium the earth will be restored to its Edenic condition.

And every corruptible thing, both of man, or of the beasts of the field, or of the fowls of heaven, or of the fish of the sea, that dwell upon all the face of the earth, shall be consumed and also, that of element shall melt with fervent heat; and all things shall become new, that my knowledge and glory may dwell upon all the earth.—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 5. See also Inspired Translation 2 Peter 3: 8-12; Luke 17: 30-40, Genesis 7: 67-73; 9: 21-23; 14: 33-36; Revelation 21 and 22; Doctrine and Covenants 108.

The earth, purified and sanctified from all unrighteousness, will blossom as the rose, and the knowledge of the Lord will cover the earth as the waters cover the deep.

And in that day the enmity of man, and the enmity of beasts; yea, the enmity of all flesh shall cease from before my face. And in that day whatsoever any man shall ask it shall be given unto him. And in that day Satan shall not have power to tempt any man.—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 5.

This is not celestial glory. It is the restitution of all things, the endowment, the sanctification, the preparation for it. Celestial glory is not the earth's portion until after the little season and final judgment.

Adam's original condition was identical with that of the righteous saint born during the millennium. Without the fall Adam would never have been subject to death, but translated when he reached perfection, from mortality to immortality. This is to be the lot of the righteous saint in the millennium also.

And there shall be no sorrow because there is no death. In that day an infant shall not die until he is old, and his life shall be as the age of a tree, and when he dies he shall not sleep (that is to say in the earth), but shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye, and shall be caught up, and his rest shall be glorious.—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 5. (See Doctrine and Covenants 63: 13; Revelation 21: 4.)

Death will cease for God's people. They will be changed and caught up into the heavenly city which will then be on earth. There they will continue to develop until after the final battle and judgment (at which time the heavenly city and the camp of the saints will be besieged and delivered by the power of God, Revelation 20: 7-9), when they, together with the earth will be celestialized.

MAN IN THE CREATION

Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; thou crownedest him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of thy hands.—Hebrews 2: 7.

The body of man was molded of earthly elements, and fashioned to be a fitting tabernacle for the spirit which was placed within it. God had beforehand determined the bounds of man's habitation. He was to be God's vice regent on earth. His duty was to be fruitful, multiply, replenish and subdue the earth. The implication is that powers were vested in him, by means of which he would be able to fulfill the measure of his creation, but they would only be developed according to their exercise by their possessor.

Adam, like Jesus Christ would have developed grace by grace, his life would have been one continuous unfolding of virtues and knowledge until he attained to a fullness of intelligence. Death would have been an unknown factor. He would have enjoyed the visitation of Christ and angels, together with the continual presence of the Holy Spirit, until he attained to a fullness (like Enoch, etc.), when he would have been translated to celestial glory.

Man was created "a living soul" (not a dying one), and his end a fullness of life, i. e., "immortality and eternal life." He became subject to death through the fall. Jesus Christ had to be made subject to physical death because it had no power over him. When he was subjected to it, it could not hold him. The unfolding of inherent life and translation to fuller life was the divine plan, and in the millennium it will be an accomplished fact. The death sentence will be removed from God's people, because the Edenic conditions are restored. Death will be the result of personal transgression and fall. (Isaiah 65: 20.)

Like the Edenic condition they will eat, drink, marry, multiply and subdue the earth, finally being translated. It will be the literal lesson to mankind, revealing the original condition and purposes of God.

THE FALL

The fall of man is generally regarded as a strategical victory, by means of which Lucifer attempted to annul the work of God by obtaining sovereignty over fallen man; but by means of which he was really the instrument of furthering and fulfilling the divine purpose. But Satan did not fulfill any divine purpose. He attempted to destroy the work of God. He did not frustrate it; but the result was that God foreseeing the plans of Satan which would counteract his, prepared a second plan for the celestialization of his creations. So perfect was the divine plan that the fall brought about the conditions necessary for its fulfillment. God's original intentions were not frustrated, but only delayed, and the process of its accomplishment complicated.

Had the man and woman been celestial beings with all the fullness of God, either or both would have perceived the intents of the Evil One and rebuked him. They could not have fallen. It was an innocent, undeveloped, infant mind which knew neither guile nor deceit he appealed to. They knew no evil, neither having encountered it, not possessing the power to perceive it, beyond the divine commands.

God forbade the partaking of that by means of which they would become the possessors and assume the personal responsibility of determining good from evil. The words which impressed the tablets of the infant mind were:

Thou shalt not eat of it; nevertheless, thou mayest choose for thyself, for it is given unto thee; but remember that I forbid it; for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.—Genesis 2: 20-22, I. T.

God gave man his choice; whether he would continue developing in innocence under divine guidance unto perfection, or whether he was willing to accept the personal responsibility which the knowledge of good and evil carries with it, and act for himself.

The first meant continual progress, ending in union with God; celestial glory. The second, separation from God—spiritual death—and personal responsibility of continually choosing the good. Failure meant the separation of body and spirit; physical death.

Eve received from Adam the teachings of God and Satan knew she would be the easiest victim of his diabolical plot. Behold the bombastic way he approached her: "Hath God said, ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden."—Genesis 3: 6, I. T. In wonderment at being thus questioned, she replied: "God hath said, ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die."—Genesis 3: 9, I. T.

Eagerly the woman listened, to learn something of the mystery which God had withheld from them, and which she felt was about to be revealed.

"Ye shall not surely die," (Genesis 3: 10) comes the subtle lie of the deceiver, annulling the divine command. Then God is blamed for attempting to withhold from them a desirable food and quality, which would make them more like himself.

For God doth know, that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.—Genesis 3: 10, I. T.

In her eagerness Eve disregarded God's command, which was erased from her mind by the contrary Satanic impression. She knew his words—which were a bait to the innocent, trusting soul—were true, and perceived that the fruit was desirable.

When the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it became pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make her wise she took of the fruit thereof and did eat.—Genesis 3: 11, I. T.

No doubt she also remembered that God left it in their hands as to whether they would eat or not. And she ate. She was deceived, beguiled, but "Adam was not deceived." (1 Timothy 2: 14.) He remembered the impressions received when God had forbidden them to partake. He might even then have selfishly chosen life without death, but rather chose life with his companion, and accepted the responsibility incurred by the act. In so doing he acted in accordance with the primary divine law inherent in every nature: the desire for union.

As a consequence the Edenic condition was taken from the earth. Angels became the ministers unto the heirs of salvation. Man became subject to evil impressions as well as the good, possessing the faculty of distinguishing both. He became subject to physical death the moment evil predominated the good. He became the battle ground of two forces which continually fought for mastery, aided by external stimuli: The Spirit of God which lighteth every man, and the powers of evil which sought the overthrow of all good. As man nourished and fostered the good, the evil was overcome. Therefore it is written: "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

THE RECONCILIATION

The plan of redemption prepared was perfect. The atonement of Christ brought about the resurrection, which restored body and spirit again.

Obedience to God's commandments restored the fallen spirit to divine favor—its primitive, infant, innocent condition—which made it a candidate for celestial glory.

The names of such were recorded in the book of the celestial kingdom (Doctrine and Covenants 85: 1; Malachi 3: 16-18; Revelation 21: 23), and the Comforter, which is the promise of eternal life or celestial glory (Doctrine and Covenants 85: 2), given them. It is to "guide them into all truth" (John 16: 13), which terminates in the fullness of God.

The gospel plan provides that what was lost by the fall may be regained by a legitimate use of the acquired power, knowledge of good and evil. God gave them their free agency and they chose contrary to his will. His work was not frustrated and the immortality and eternal life of man was still his aim. He provided that through the exercise of the acquired faculty—choosing always the good and obedience to the divine will—man might not only regain his lost estate, but become a candidate for celestial glory: the originally intended goal.

Christ not only taught redemption and reconciliation to God, but a possibility of receiving all his fullness. Reconciliation is the first fruit of obedience to the gospel. Celestial glory is the reward of "them who by patient continuance in well-doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life." (Romans 2: 7.)

By faith God is approached. By repentance divine favor is apprehended. By baptism the past is remitted or blotted out and reconciliation to God effected. By laying on of hands the Holy Spirit, which is the power of God leading and guiding into all truth and knowledge, and working in the man both to will and do, is bestowed.

Thus fallen man has in his favor: the knowledge of good and evil, and "the light which lighteth every man" and prompts him to do good. But the man reconciled to God has the Holy Spirit, which leads and guides him into all truth, intelligence, power, etc.

Obedience to God is the moving cause, reconciliation the effect. Reconciliation, restoration and redemption are but the first steps on the path to celestial glory.

HERMANN PEISKER.

Of General Interest

NEW YORK'S "CATHOLIC WEEK"

Probably the greatest religious convocation ever held in the United States was that of 20,000 Roman Catholics, most of them of the laity, who met in New York during the week of August 20, to discuss "vexed" problems of the day. This is the opinion of a writer in the New York Sun, who tells us that the principal body of the assemblage was the American Federation of Catholic Societies, which, with a membership of more than two million, exerts a wide influence "not only within the borders of its own church, but comes in touch at many points with the non-Catholic world." To define the federation, he quotes from a pastoral letter of Cardinal Farley, of New York, as follows:

The meaning of the federation is evident from its name. It seeks to bind all Catholic organizations, parishes, clergy, and people in easy ties of acquaintance, affection, and cooperation, based upon the single principle, which, humanly speaking, causes the perpetuity of the church and the glory of the nation—in union there is strength. The conventions are held every year in different cities to discuss and to promote the most important interests of the church and the great questions of the day in their relations to the church, public and private morals, patriotism, social reform, domestic and foreign propagation of the faith, the theater, Catholic press, Catholic literature, Catholic education, etc.

Our informant points out that the federation resembles somewhat the Catholic congresses of the days of Bismarck, when the faithful of the Teutonic states felt that they were not getting their full rights, and consequently formed groups of all political parties to obtain recognition. Catholic congresses were held in other European countries with the result that the laity were able to promote the solidarity of those of the same fold, and we read further, in this country, the Deutsche Roman Katholische Central Verein is a heritor of the German movement. But the writer emphasizes the fact that the American Federation of Catholic Societies is to be regarded wholly in the light of an American institution. Its inception dates back to 1899, from which time it had the cordial support of the Reverend Doctor James Augustine McFaul, who, in 1894, became Bishop of Trenton, New Jersey, and who is now commonly referred to as the "Father of the Federation." As an authority on the organization in an article written for the New York Times, he says:

The clergy are consulted regarding the policies of the federation, yet it is in reality not under the direct control of the hierarchy, although bishops are on the advisory board.

The utmost freedom of discussion is encouraged, for the convention of the federation is an index of the mind of the faithful. Its reflex extends to the thought of those of all religious beliefs. The Catholic laity, coming in contact with their fellow citizens in business and in all relations of life, give to these deliberations a breadth of view which greatly enhances their value. The inspiration which these sessions bring is carried by our laity to every part of the Nation and enables them to impress upon all with whom they are in touch that the church has a message for the community at large—to those who are both within and without its fold—that it would aid in every plan to advance pure government and good morals.

The federation naturally cannot enter into any relations with other organizations in which any question of doctrine would be involved. It does stand with them, however, on a broad platform of American citizenship. Although the founders of the Republic avoided with the utmost care any semblance of a union of church and state, this is a country which is governed and inspired by ethical and religious standards.

Of especial interest to non-Catholic readers is the claim of the federation that it can cooperate with non-Catholic bodies. Thus Bishop McFaul tells us it can say on the matter of divorce to the Episcopalians, to secular or civic societies, to legislators, to all citizens: "Come, let us work hand in hand for the maintenance of moral standards, for the education of youth, for the uplifting of humanity," and he adds:

In my mind there is not the slightest doubt that if the Catholics and the non-Catholics, the Jews and the Gentiles, united for the stamping out of evil, success would crown our efforts in many directions.

The American Federation of Catholic Societies, which has the inspiration and guidance of the mother church and at the same time has so wide a reach into the world, is peculiarly adapted for working with citizens of every creed and racial strain in the furtherance of sound morality. There is such wonderful accord in many ways that all who believe in decency and honor should be allies. . . .

The federation is a fit forum for the discussion of all questions of public and private morals, of social reforms, of the relation of the church and the state to the theater and to amusements in general, of education, of literature—in fact, of everything which has to do with the eternal fight against wrong. Our brethren of every household of faith, therefore, may with profit follow the deliberations of the convention, for they will find in them a helpful index of what is stirring the nation, and see many ways in which they could lend a hand. . . .

We are not devoted to any political purpose, for as there are men of all parties in the organization, it is manifestly absurd that such an organization should seek to control through partisan activities. Catholics, as do all other citizens, safeguard their interests and record their convictions at the ballot box. There is nothing which the federation may ask which is not in accordance with the principles on which this Republic was founded. It does not consider Catholics as a law unto themselves, but as free men entitled to rights and privileges. It does not demand, it does not seek to carry its point by assault—it appeals to enlightened public opinion. The federation looks upon publicity as a searchlight. It has no secret policy. It does not sap and mine. It is frankly an organization of societies for the advancement of the civil, religious, and social interests of Catholics. It is an instrument attuned by conservatism for radiating throughout the world the waves of Catholic opinion on important issues of the day.

Its object may be described as twofold. It is of value not only to the authorities of the Catholic Church to have its laity freely discuss matters of vital interest. Through the medium of the press it serves to give non-Catholics a clear idea of what the church means. It shows many points where men of all sorts and conditions may agree on policies for the betterment of the human race. It is a powerful organization which is growing every year in influence, as its purposes are better understood both by those within and those beyond its ranks.

Its function is through publicity and by precept and example to uphold the tenets of the Catholic Church, and if necessary to become their champion. If we can make the meaning of Catholicism clear through the Federation and similar agencies, the church will need no defenders.

—Literary Digest for September 2, 1916.

A QUAKER VIEW OF MEXICO

The peace committee of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends has issued the following statement:

Mexico suffers from the misgovernment of centuries. The land has been, and is, held in vast tracts by private owners, of whom many are foreigners. While there are exceptions, nearly all these landholders have for generations reduced their tenants to peonage, or practical serfdom, and have forced them into ignorance and depraved conditions of life.

The vast natural resources of Mexico, in oil minerals, have been made over by concessions to English, German, French, Dutch, and American owners on such terms that the national wealth flows to other lands, and the native Mexican labor is exploited so that the workers continue in nearly all cases impoverished and unenlightened.

The dictatorial and autocratic power of earlier presidents crushed out the democratic spirit and imposed throughout Mexico the rule of unscrupulous and all-powerful local political agents, who manipulated elections, administered the laws to suit the interests in power, and ruled with ruthless military authority.

Education, marriage, and other social institutions have been church monopolies, and there have resulted ignorance and general neglect of that we consider common duties of decent living. Insurrection, revolution, and local anarchy have prevailed for a period of years.

From the chaos some order is gradually appearing. In the judgment of men competent to form an intelligent and fair opinion, the so-called First Chief and his assistants are endeavoring honestly and with a fair measure of success to restore government and redress the age-old wrongs of the Mexican people.

A large number of the states are at peace. As rapidly and justly as possible land is allotted to small holders on terms that guarantee continued cultivation of the soil and the independence of the workers. The local political autocrats of the earlier regime are being gradually supplanted by duly constituted civil officers, who represent the best elements in their community. The church monopolies are abridged and education and other important matters are placed under civil authority. In a number of states traffic in alcoholic drinks has been abolished with immediate good results.

There has developed an intense rivalry among the different states to see which can organize the greatest number of schools. Already there are said to be twenty times as many schools as in the last epoch of President Diaz, and under the influence of Carranza five hundred teachers have been sent to the United States to study modern pedagogy and school administration.

Several of the states, chiefly in the north, near the United States border, are unsettled and in insurrection. Roving bands of outlaws are abroad and lawless leaders are making trouble.

For a time such men will make raids and commit depredations not only in Mexico, but occasionally over the border in the United States.

The boundary between the United States and Mexico is 1,756 miles long, as far as from New York to Denver. Most of this distance is wild mountain and desert country, without roads and with very little water. For hundreds of miles there is no railroad on the Mexican side, and troops of either country must be transported on the United States railroad. Such a border cannot be patrolled so as to prevent occasional incursions by outlaw bands, and it is more criminal than foolish for the press to urge such chance acts of outlawry as a cause of war.

These in briefest form are some of the facts the people of the United States are entitled to know. If properly presented and supplemented, they will revolutionize public opinion.

Although there is need of cooperation with Mexico for police and patrol duty, our country does not need a large force of young and inexperienced troops on the border.

There is nothing like suffering to enlighten the giddy brain, widen the narrow mind, improve the trivial heart.—Charles Reade.

It is in our own bosom that the power of temptation is found. Temptation is but a spark. If a spark fall upon ice, snow or water, what is the harm? But if it fall upon powder, the powder is yours; the spark only is the Devil's!—Beecher.

Woman's Auxiliary

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

Better Children, and Better Conditions for Children

This seems to be the cry of the day. Every paper we pick up, every magazine we read, is apt to confront us with some phase or another of this world-wide campaign for better children and better conditions for them. The former no doubt, hangs upon the latter. If conditions were perfect, perfect results would obtain—a statement true of every expression of earth life. But the great "if" is there! We see daily evidences of children who are sadly lacking in manners, morals, and ministry—vociferous witnesses themselves, of methods and environments as sadly lacking as they. Parents, busy with the hustle and the bustle of life—with perhaps badly distorted views of what life really is—give infinitely less thought each day to the best development of their children than they do to their schemes and devices for material success. Can the neglected, choked, thwarted, perverted, twig grow into a straight, tall, symmetrical tree? Can the human flower, neglected by the home gardeners, choked by uncontrolled impulses, thwarted by lack of opportunities to expand, perverted by vicious influences from servant or associate, blossom into the perfection intended for it, and later bear the full fruitage God and nature designed for it? And such mothers, with days and weeks filled to the brim with social frivolities, and such fathers, with horizon bounded by the almighty dollar and the frantic scramble after its elusive charms, put up their hands in righteous wail, "Why are we visited with so cruel an affliction as this wayward son, or shamed by this perverted daughter?"

It is intended for each human being to grow and expand Godward; every human experience lends itself to this belief, even though, for the time being, that soul appears to be going downward. In the mighty, rushing river, the waters are being steadily borne seaward, even though we may perceive eddies and currents which, to our view, are apparently going in the opposite direction. Thus it is with the development of the soul; it may appear to retrograde, instead of advance, but the very experience of its retrogression, is perhaps the needed one to cause it to surge even further ahead afterward. Even Christ learned by the things he suffered; and as temptations test the soul, and the fires of adversity purify, it comes out stronger and more beautiful for the experience. Will we not some day learn to be thankful for even our mistakes, recognizing in them opportunities for development otherwise impossible for us? It is true, that every soul must pass through many of life's experiences for itself and even the most trusting and careful parent cannot, at all times, prevent the child under his care from getting these experiences at first hand. This however, does not excuse the parent from warning, and guiding, and counseling from doing all he can to prevent the feet of the innocent and unsuspecting little one from traveling over paths unnecessarily hard and cruel.

Let us be concrete: A parent knows something of the physical dangers which await the child as he leaves the domain of childhood, and enters that of maturity. Impulses, new and strange, take possession of him, which we older ones know must be brought into subjection and under the control of a will which recognizes both their good and their evil possibilities. Is it wise, or kind, or just, to that child, to neglect his education along these lines, blindly trusting that innocence may attend his ignorance of the subject, until his very soul has been scorched and disfigured by the uncontrolled and misunderstood expressions of those impulses? We ask, are we fair to the one who is treading life's pathway after us, when we neglect to explain, and to fly the danger signal? Can we for one moment believe ourselves justified in neglect at any period of a child's development, if, by attention, by careful counsel, and loving warnings, we are able to give that child the benefit of what life has taught to us? We think not; and we would urge every Latter Day Saint parent, to read carefully the instructions God has given us in regard to our duties. Do we teach his will diligently unto our children? Do we talk of it when we sit in our homes, or walk by the way—when we lie down, or rise up? (Deuteronomy 6: 7.) Do we "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord"? (Ephesians 6: 4.) Do we "teach them to walk in the ways of truth and soberness, to love one another and to serve one another"? (Mosiah 2: 3.) Or do we come under the condemnation which rested upon some a generation or two ago: "You have not taught your children . . . according to the commandments and that wicked one hath power over you. . . . If you will be delivered you shall set in order your own house"? (Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6, 7.)

A. A.

A Mother's Reverie

I have found earth's greatest treasure,
Lips of mine have tasted life!
Happiness in untold measure
Now replaces empty strife.

I was young. It was life's dream time.
Just ahead bright visions whirled;
But, alas! I lost life's springtime
Chasing fancies of the world.

Now, thank God! The quest is ended.
Humble though my lot, 'tis good!
All life's longed-for sweets are blended
In the joy of motherhood!

GEORGE A. KELLEY.

The Value of the Story in the Home

(Sister Sandy, so alive to the possibilities of development along the lines of the child welfare department, of which she is superintendent, gives us the third number of her series concerning the child in the home. She tells us of the value of story-telling, as an aid and instrument in the careful training of children. The most vital truths, those which affect both body and spirit, may be explained and made clear to the opening and receptive mind of a child, by means of this legitimate vehicle, the story. This is being recognized and emphasized as never before. Every large city has its story-telling classes; educators, even of older children, use the story to illustrate the lesson desired to be impressed; kindergartners, of course depend very materially upon it in their work; shall we parents be behind in seeing its possibility and usefulness to us in our efforts to guide the young souls, intrusted to our care? In many branches of our church, there are banding together certain earnest ones who are learning how to tell stories. They are using the skill and information so gleaned in their own homes, and in the Sunday school as well, and certain devoted members are entertaining and teaching groups of children during the preaching hour, while the mothers of those children are drinking in their spiritual nourishment from the "preached word." God speed all such efforts, and help us all to see that these are things that we can do, and that we must do, not simply reading, hearing, or feeling the impulse and then quietly sitting back and letting some one else do them, letting some one else "win and wear our crown!")

Of late we have come to take story-telling seriously. Long ago, before there were books, old and young gathered about the fire and stories were told and listened to. Primitive stories of the forest and animal life, myths and fairy tales, legends of great deeds, and of the gods of war, funny stories, and sad stories—all helped in the development of the race, and opened the door unto life and knowledge.

Story-telling has its physical value. A story hour at the close of the day, means rest to the spirit, charm for the mind, and preparation of the body for sleep and the restoration of strength.

The educational value can never be rightly estimated. It is the very language of childhood. A story reveals life to the child. It reveals to him not only the natural world, but the world of thought and fancy. It brings out all his better impulses, his sympathy, imagination, warm-heartedness, and his sociability. It trains his memory, enlarges his vocabulary, and gives him a wider range of intelligence and recollection.

It is of emotional value, also. It stimulates and satisfies the feelings. It is a great aid in character building, teaching the child the value of right and wrong, and helping him to distinguish between good and evil. William Byron Forbush tells us that "the story helps the child to know what is good, to feel what is good, and to will what is good."

In the home, the story has an important place. It brings joy and contentment to the child; it strengthens the companionship he should find there; it develops his imagination, and dark places and difficult situations are robbed of their terrors. The story helps more at home than at school, for in the latter place, the teacher must first awaken interest (create atmosphere) before telling a story, while in the home, the mother may seize the psychological moment when interest is aroused or events permit the presentation, and tell the story with impressive effect.

Hand in hand with story-telling in the home, goes the home reading. It is an easy matter, too, to teach a child to make storybooks of his own, illustrating and arranging them in his own way and to his own tastes. This is a valuable index to the stage of his development of both intellect and heart.

What better way could a child be taught obedience, patience, reverence, kindness, and the many, many lessons waiting him in life's experience, than through the medium of well-chosen stories told in the home? They are fitting at any opportune moment of the day, but the season of all seasons for them, is at the close of the hours of activities, when cares and duties are laid aside, misunderstandings forgotten, the mind in a contemplative and receptive mood. A story then, that fits the needs of the hour, that impresses the lesson needed, that emphasizes the experiences of the day, that presents the goodness of God, or that expresses the peace of the trusting soul, is like unto the benediction after prayer, bringing smiles of love and joy to the childish faces, inspiring in the childish hearts confidence and yearnings towards God, and sending the little ones happily to bed.

LULA M. SANDY,

Superintendent Child Welfare Department.

Danger to Child Life in Fly Poison

The child betterment bureau of Chicago send out a protest against the useless loss of child lives during the fly season, by the careless use of fly poison of various kinds. Very often the symptoms which result are very like cholera infantum, and unless the child has been detected in sucking the poisoned cloth or paper, or in drinking the poisoned water, the real cause of the serious illness or death may not always be ascertained. Through the efforts of the child betterment league, the Michigan Legislature, at its last session, passed a bill regulating the manufacture and sale of fly poison, but a similar bill introduced in the Illinois Legislature, failed to pass, though the papers of Illinois for the past summer report many cases of such poisoning, almost half of which were fatal. The bureau asks that as wide publicity as possible be given to this very real danger to the lives of children, announcing that a campaign against it will be made in every State, desiring everybody to do what he may to help the betterment movement along. Reprints are made of over thirty news items of the past summer, detailing various cases of child poisoning from this cause, ending with a summary of 31 cases reported, with 10 fatalities, and 7 whose recovery was considered doubtful. "Let him who is warned, warn his neighbor!"

A Mother's Face

The golden day sinks in the west,
And quietly I sit and rest.
My thoughts go back into the past,
View days that were too good to last.

Among the faces that come near
Is mother's—ever hold most dear,
Not just because of beauty there,
Nor for the crown of auburn hair.

But for the quiet, pleasant way,
That greeted us from day to day,
For the calm example of her life,
Amidst the scenes of earthly strife.

She made the gospel plan seem clear,
The Savior not afar, but near,
She taught us that his ways were best,
To follow him brought peace and rest.

So to my heart I oftentimes press
The little ones in our home nest,
And looking in their faces fair,
I breathe a silent, earnest prayer;

That through the years where 'ere they roam;
Sweet thoughts will come to them of home;
That memories of their mother's face;
Will help them win the heavenly race.

CARA BAILEY BRAND.

What the superior man seeks is in himself; what the small man seeks is in others.—Confucius.

Nothing on earth can smile but man! Gems may flash reflected light, but what is a diamond flash compared with an eye flash and mirth flash? Flowers cannot smile; this is a charm that even they do not claim. It is the prerogative of man; it is the color which love wears, and cheerfulness and joy—these three. It is a light in the windows of the face, by which the heart signifies a bud that cannot blossom, and dries up on the stalk. Laughter is day, and sobriety is night, a smile is the twilight that hovers gently between both—more bewitching than either.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Letter Department

A Fulfillment of Prophecy

"A POSSIBLE CAUSE OF CANCER"

"I cannot get it out of my head," said Doctor William J. Mayo to a gathering of physicians at Baltimore, "that the cause of much cancer of the stomach is the drinking of hot drinks."

"No one, not even the great Dotor Mayo himself, yet knows precisely what causes cancer. But this much is certain, that irritation of any character is a frequent predisposing cause. A wart, a boil, a burn, so placed that it can become chafed, is often the seed from which cancer springs; sailors, for instance, whose hands and thighs are continually bruised by the rough surface of ropes, are common sufferers.

"The cancer on the surface, however, is not the real problem. In an increasing number of cases medical science is able to catch and treat it in time. It is the internal cancer that destroys. In spite of all the research lavished upon the subject seven men and sixteen women out of every hundred, between forty-five and sixty years of age, still die of cancer.

"While we wait for some more hopeful word from science, it is certainly the part of wisdom, to spare the stomach every bit of irritation that we possibly can."—Woman's Home Companion.

The true prophet though he be unlearned, or even as the world will have it, ignorant, declares truth, and as the above witnesses even scientific truth, far in advance of its discovery by the learned.

We were warned in 1833 concerning hot drinks, but Doctor Mayo, the president of the American Medical Society and possibly the greatest surgeon of all times, has just begun to suspect the truth.

This, however, is as it has always been. Job, in a book older than the books of Homer, declared that the air has weight, (Job 28: 25), yet Galileo, less than three hundred years ago, was able to startle the world by the same announcement. Also in Job 24: 7 we find modern scientific thought plainly stated.

So also witness the assertion "The stars are innumerable to man," and Hipparchus and Ptolemy declaring their number to be 1,026 and 1,029. To-day telescopes reveal 18,000,000 in one system and other systems visible and admitted to exist even farther than these powerful instruments can penetrate, and all men admit that only such a being as God could count them. He also "callesh them all by their names" though they be "as the sands of the sea."

In Psalm 19, we are told the sun's going forth is from the end of the heaven and his circuit to the ends of it, and men, even scientists, thought this to assert that the sun went around the earth, until they verified this with earliest astronomical writing and found it to be the true law of the planets. The sun itself must obey the law which it in turn enforces on our earth and others, and flies from one end of heaven in Argo to the other in Hercules.

Geologists tell us how our earth was formed, stratified by the action of water, and, if we will, we can read in many volumes nearly as much as Peter has said in these few words: "Thou coverest the earth with the deep, as with a garment. The waters stood above the mountains. At thy rebuke they fled. At the voice of thy thunder they hasted away. The mountains ascend, the valleys descend into the place thou prepareth for them."

Joseph Smith told us that the time had come when events were to take place that had been prophesied of as to come when "it is yet a little while and Lebanon shall become a fruitful field," etc. Now comes Albrecht Socin, Ph. D., Professor of Semitic Philology in University of Leipzig and Tubingen, and informs us that the ancient truculence of the people of Lebanon has "given way before strong government action since the middle of the nineteenth century" and "because of the great increase of agricultural pursuits, to which the purely pastoral has become quite secondary, etc."

A. G. LARKY.

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, September 11, 1916.

In Sunshine Prepare for Rain

I have attended quite a number of reunions, and as a rule in wet weather, camping was very unpleasant; the clothing and bedding would be damp, and sometimes wet. The public dining room would have scarcely a dry seat, and underfoot, soft and muddy; the large tent, where services are held, like the dining room, leaks almost like a sieve. Under such conditions holding reunions is, to say the least, very discouraging and many go home with a determination that they will not take chances to live outdoors for ten days in sunshine and rain. "No place like home." However, much of the unpleasant conditions can be avoided.

First, regarding the place where service is to be held. The ground should be such as the water would run from; the tent, if on a sidehill, should have a ditch at the upper side to keep the water from running in on the ground. Second, the covering, or the roof, should be such as will keep out the rain; the committee should not rent a tent that will not keep out the rain; it is not treating the campers, or those who attend service, right to hold service where they are not protected from even an ordinary shower of rain. And what is true of the large tent is also true of the dining tent.

All of the small or living tents should have a fly, which will keep out extreme heat or rain, and all should be ditched, not outside of the tent, but inside, so that the water from the tent runs into the ditch. Now, if all, in sunshine or fair weather, would prepare as above suggested, much of the unpleasant conditions in wet weather would be avoided.

It seems to me that where reunions are permanently located, suitable buildings should be erected, not only to keep out the rain, but the flies and other insects.

I attended the Saint Louis reunion at Creve Couer Lake; it was a beautiful location, fifteen miles from the city; the grounds, lights, water and transportation of tents and supplies were free; the electric railroad company was very kind. The reunion convened August 4 to 14, during that time we had about four hard rains, some of which lasted several hours, and made it very unpleasant for us because we were not prepared. I trust that the experience of the past will teach us to be in a better condition in 1917. Try it again, brethren! Your columns have had a brief account of the reunion, so I shall say only that I enjoyed the services, and there was much of the sweet peace that is characteristic of the presence of the Holy Spirit.

From the Saint Louis reunion I was expected to go to the Clinton District reunion, held at Rich Hill, Missouri, which was in session, but the expense to go and then return to the Southeastern Illinois reunion, that would convene August 18 to 27, was twelve dollars, making it twenty-four dollars for both my stenographer and myself, so I concluded not to go. I had written to Brother Macrae, president of the Clinton District, asking to be released, and not hearing from him, I took it for granted "silence gave consent," besides they had a strong force of missionaries present.

At the Southeastern Illinois reunion, there were present of the missionary force, Brethren Sawley, Fields, Pritchett, Walters, Henson, and Brother F. M. Sheehy came the latter part of the reunion. There was a fair attendance and the spirituality of the meetings was above the average; the preaching was good. Several of the local ministers were present and were quite active. One of the old and worthy pioneers was present, Brother Isaac A. Morris; his father, Nathan A. Morris, was ordained an elder in 1842. Brother I. A. was baptized in 1860, ordained an elder in 1862; he had not heard of the Reorganized Church until 1864, when he was received by vote as a member and an elder. He has been a member of the Brush Creek Branch in the Southeastern Illinois District and has presided, off and on, over the same branch.

This branch was organized in 1843, during the lifetime of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and has never been disorganized. Several hundred have been baptized into the church whose names appear on the records. The fact that the Brush Creek Branch was organized in 1843, before the latter-day apostasy, and remained to cast her lot with the Reorganized Church, is strong evidence that the claim of the followers of Brigham Young (Utah Mormons) is not true; namely, that the membership of the Reorganization came out of their church, or were expelled. Here is one branch, active and alive, that never did indorse or approve of any of the various factions that came—but remained in the middle of the road, strong in the original faith, as taught in the days of the Martyrs, and in harmony with the Scriptures, the three books, Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants.

Father Morris is held in high esteem, not only by the Saints, but by the people of that community. His voice has been heard all over southeastern Illinois, in the proclamation of the gospel. He takes great pleasure in meeting with the Saints at the conferences and reunions, and he, in my judgment, is overtaxed in trying to comply with the numerous requests to administer to the sick. I suggest that the Saints bear in mind that he is getting up in years and cannot stand what he could twenty-five years ago. May he and his faithful wife, who takes pleasure in doing her part, be spared until they will say, "Let us go hence."

I had the pleasure of returning home in time to attend the Stewartville reunion, just the last Sunday. It was a treat to me and my wife, for I had not had the privilege to meet with our home reunion for three years. It was the general expression that it was one of the best of the twenty-four held. I am glad such is the experience of all the reunions heard from this year.

On September 16, I entered the Nodaway District; held eight meetings in the Bedison Branch, attendance fair, interest good. Brother Rasmus Lorensen has been in charge for fifteen years; he is a good, careful man, much thought of by all. Last July he buried his wife, who for thirty-four years had traveled side by side with him; and while he has tried to become reconciled to his loss, he feels keenly the sting that death has brought. In the gospel he has comfort. This branch is also the home of Brother Andrew Jenson and his highly respected family; the HERALD has often published valuable and interesting articles from his pen. Brother Jenson has also musical ability; had he the confidence in himself that some have, who are not his equal, but because of their push and confidence have become leaders, he would also have been of national fame; many who are born and blessed with natural gifts and abilities, hide their talent under a bushel for the want of encouragement and self-confidence, and they go to their graves with their talent uncultivated, in a measure.

I also visited the Sweet Home Branch, held eight meetings from September 23 to 29. Brother J. W. Powell is in charge; I found a band of Saints, eager to have preaching, and much interested. My first evening in their cozy little church, I had a very pleasant experience; there came a peace of mind and the assurance that the Lord had often met, by his Holy Spirit, with his Saints in that house, and would continue to do so. Father John Hawley, Father Powell, and their faithful companions, had often met there to worship and their love and faith in God and his work is indelibly stamped upon the memories of the Saints of Sweet Home Branch. It is encouraging to see the children and grandchildren follow in the footsteps of their parents, who had lived a long and faithful life in the service of the Master.

This brings to my mind an incident in July, 1911, on the train in company with Brethren Frederick M. Smith and W. H. Kelley, on our way to Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. A man by the name of Evans, a minister of the Congregational Church, was conversing with Brother W. H. Kelley about our faith and church. When informed that Brother F. M. Smith was the grandson of Joseph Smith, jr., and that he was one of the Presidency and an active minister of the church, and highly respected, Mr. Evans spoke: "The son and grandson of the noted Joseph Smith, following in his footsteps. Two generations; well, that speaks well for such theology, the church and faith of the Latter Day Saints." We informed him that three generations, the three sons and daughter and the grandchildren and great-grandchildren were strong believers and supporters in the work, brought forth by that man who is so much misrepresented and misunderstood by the religious world.

Mr. Evans seemingly could not see the consistency of the statement of the world, that Smith's theology was low, degrading, false, deceptive and he a false prophet, in the face of the fact that three generations of Joseph Smith's posterity were intelligent, upright, good citizens, all faithful members in the Latter Day Saint Church, organized and brought forth through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith. I am not a man worshiper, but I thank God that the posterity of Joseph Smith are honorable men and women, worthy of the good will and respect of all good people.

The next branch I visited was Guilford. Began meetings October 1, continuing for a week with growing interest. Brother C. C. Nelson has presided for a term of years; he is a man of good works and faith; his home has been headquarters for missionaries for several years. Sister Nelson takes much pleasure in caring for them. The words of Proverbs 31:31 will apply to this faithful couple, "Give her (them) of the fruits of her hands and let her own works praise her." The Saints of Guilford have one of the best arranged chapels for the money that I have seen in the whole church. Brother Nelson donated in cash liberally and was one of the faithful workers on the building from start to finish, gratis. He was relieved of the responsibility of branch president, October 3, and Brother W. B. Torrance, chosen to succeed him. The church is fortunate in having an army of young men to take up the work as the aged lay it down.

Brother Hoxie made no mistake in appointing Brother W. T. Ross as musical director of the Nodaway District; he has a good voice and good ear for music. He is the leader or instructor of the Guilford band and has organized an orchestra in the Guilford Branch. His wife and two daughters are members of this orchestra. There is a good band of Saints at Guilford, membership of one hundred and four.

On October 7, I began a series of meetings at the Ross Grove Branch, near Mound City, Holt County. Brother R. K. Ross is president of this branch; he came after us in his car. We had a pleasant ride of twenty-eight miles, through good farming country. There are some fields of corn in Holt and Nodaway counties that will yield seventy-five bushels of corn an acre. Those in search of good farms can find them in the above counties at seventy five dollars to one hundred and twenty-five dollars per acre, and will have good markets. It is thirty-five to forty-five miles from Saint Joseph, a city of one hundred thousand. Judging by the corn, the rolling land of the above counties is of a better quality than DeKalb, Clinton or Caldwell counties; has better subsoil, while the hard pan is not so near the surface and the upper soil is thicker and fully as rich as the surface soil. Brethren R. K. Ross of Mound City, C. C. Nelson of Guilford, Rasmus Lorenson of Conception Junction, J. W. Powell of Ravenwood, are all practical farmers, have had years of experience, are reliable men and will cheerfully answer letters of inquiry.

We are looking forward with interest to the time when Far West District will become a stake, with her eighteen branches, and will also include Nodaway District, with her four branches. When this is done, with Independence and Kansas City and Holden Stakes on the south, and Lamoni on the north, Far West will be in the center. May that day soon come.

The Ross Grove Branch has a membership of seventy-one—good material. Brother R. K. Ross, president, was born in that neighborhood sixty-four years ago and is quite an extensive farmer, has several sons who are faithful workers in the church; one, Isaac Ross, in the Holden Stake, is counselor to Bishop Hunt.

Conference convened with the Ross Grove Branch, October 14 and 15—a large attendance, a profitable gathering. On Sunday, nine a. m., the Saints assembled in fasting and prayer in the behalf of Sister Mae Rowlett, who for four years has been unable to walk; she was administered to and hope the results will be what was sought for, restoration to normal conditions. May our heavenly Father grant this needed blessing to the good of the dear one and his praise.

We have another young invalid, Sister Jessie Parson, at Sheridan, Missouri. For twelve years she has not been able to walk, except on crutches, and the last six months has not been able to get out of her chair without help. As I see these unfortunate ones I wonder when will the day of the Lord's power come, that we look for, when the lame shall walk, the dumb speak, the blind see, and the deaf hear! True, there have been some healed who have been afflicted as these sisters are, but where there is one healed, there are ten not. Why such a few? I believe I understand why, by the following experience of October 15, 1916. At eight a. m., just before going to the prayer service, I was in Brother R. K. Ross's front room, when in less time than it takes to tell the circumstances, I had an open vision; I saw a column of very bright light, extending from heaven to the earth; it was of a funnel shape, extending out over a large space. There were not many within the circle of the light, but a large number heading that way. Outside of the rays of that light it was rather gloomy; I was given to understand that if we lived within the circle of the light we would have a claim on the Lord for his blessings and he would bless us richly, but as long as we occupied on the outside, we had no just claim upon him. The day of the Lord's power is when we live, walk and abide in his light. I take comfort from the fact that I saw many striving to enter within the circle of the light, and the nearer we approached to the center, the more we enjoyed of the power of God. May we have strength to live so that we may be, not only children of the light, but in the light, so that the promises made in Doctrine and Covenants 87: 4 shall be fulfilled, "For it shall come to pass in that day that every man shall hear the fullness of the gospel in his own tongue and his own language, through those who are ordained unto this power by the administration of the Comforter and shed forth upon them, for the revelation of Jesus Christ." Notice the preaching is to be by the Holy Spirit, not by the wisdom and education of man.

I enjoyed my sojourn with the Saints of Nodaway District and pleased to see so many promising young people, some of whom were recommended for ordination at the conference, as the readers will notice in the minutes of the Nodaway District conference.

To the various branches in Far West District I wish to say that I hope to do some labor if those in charge think it advisable. Please let me hear from you soon, so I can arrange accordingly.

In gospel bonds,

WILLIAM LEWIS.

CAMERON, MISSOURI, October 18, 1916.

Massachusetts District History

[The Massachusetts District recently held a jubilee anniversary conference and a complete report has been sent to the HERALD. It being rather local in its nature, we extract some portions that seem to possess an aspect of general interest.—EDITORS.]

The jubilee anniversary of the Massachusetts District was held September 30 and October 1, 1916, at Somerville Massachusetts, presided over by District President John D. Suttill, and Elders Samuel A. Burgess, Ralph W. Farrell, and Ellsworth B. Hull of the general missionary force.

The business of the conference was exceedingly light, occupying little more than one session, and in the evening Bishop Myron C. Fisher addressed the assembly on sacrifice and consecration.

Sunday sacrament service was a spiritual feast, many beautiful suggestions were presented by the gifts of the Spirit, the whole import of which was that the Saints should occupy on higher planes than those on which they are now living, and that the priesthood should be deeper concerned in the salvation of human souls and the teaching of the flock than they had been, that they should refrain from lightness of speech and actions, and as servants of God they should be Godlike.

A historical sketch was read by District Secretary W. A. Sinclair, as follows:

The events leading up to the organization of the Massachusetts District reach back to the early days of the work in England. We would like to give the history of the several families included in this line of descent, but time and circumstances forbid. The apostasy of the church was kept secret from these early English Saints and they continued laboring with might and spirit to further an apostate cause.

The McKee family were members of the old church in England. Some time between 1844 and 1850 a conference was held at Manchester, England, seven miles from Ashton Underlyne, England, the home of the McKees. This family desired to attend the conference, at the same time everyone was trying to save money to send up to Zion. After working all day Saturday in the mill, Sunday morning they started to walk the seven miles to conference, Mother McKee carrying her two-year-old child (who is now Ann Granger) the whole seven miles and back. After attending the conference they returned Sunday night that they might be on hand to go to work Monday morning. They did this to save the railroad fare that the amount thus saved might be sent to Salt Lake City to assist in the building of the temple. Such were the early Saints. They were ignorant of the true status of the affairs in America but were willing to do their part for the sake of the cause that they had joined in full sincerity of heart and believed was of God. Are we in the true cause willing and anxious to do our part of sacrifices?

Very soon after this elders came preaching polygamy and like abominable doctrines and Mother McKee withdrew her name from the church, but John McKee still continued a member though not with the same ardor as formerly. He was reluctant to give up his former faith and still attended the meetings but for this he was very often rotten-egged, and stoned by the neighbors and called a "Mormon" and "Starvation Jack." He was naturally thin, but they said he was thin because he drank only water—no tea or coffee.

During the panic in England caused by the Civil War here, he came to America and went to work in the coal mines at Pottstown, Pennsylvania, to get enough money to bring the family out from England. Later they came with the idea of going on to Zion, or Utah. They landed at New York in January, 1863, after seven weeks sailing, but went on to Philadelphia. After six months they moved to Fall River because of work being promised them there.

Henry Heywood and David Leather also worked in the coal mines at Pottstown at the same time John McKee did. David Leather also moved to Fall River, leaving Heywood as the only one of the English Saints in Pottstown.

In 1864, four years after the Reorganization of the church, Elder James W. Gillen was sent on a mission to the Eastern States to represent the Reorganization.

En route he stopped off at Pottstown. Inquiring if there were any Latter Day Saints in the city he came in contact with Henry Heywood, who informed him that he knew of a number of old church Saints who had at different times moved to Fall River, Massachusetts, and Brother Gillen decided to immediately go on to Fall River and hunt them up. Since John McKee had been the last one that Mr. Heywood had seen he told him about where he would find him, and so Elder Gillen looked him up first.

He arrived at the McKee home in a severe snowstorm in December, just about one year after they had landed in America. They had but a very small house and little accommodations, a large family, the baby only six weeks old, but when he explained who he was and what he wanted to do, they offered him the best they had, which was only a bed of straw on the floor. The next day the storm had abated and John McKee took him to find the other families.

None of these who had come from England knew the others. They had come over at different times from different places, except the Gilberts and Bradburys. The other families were, Rogersons, Hackings, Cottams, Rigbys.

Elder Gillen finally rounded them all up, as he had their names, made his home with the Gilbert family, and immediately started preaching services, rebaptizing the members of the several families named, continuing his work until December 3, 1865, when he organized the Fall River Branch with 13 members.

The following is copied from the Memoirs of W. W. Blair, pages 126, 127: "On the 13th and 14th (which was October, 1866) we held the first conference of the Massachusetts District, Brother William Cottam being chosen to preside. The attendance of the membership was not large, but the Spirit of the Lord blessed the people mightily. The gifts were bestowed abundantly at the meeting of the forenoon of the 14th. Among those who were so blessed was a little daughter of Brother William Cottam. She arose in the assembly and in a weak, humble way, bore her testimony, saying that God had greatly blessed her with his Spirit in answer to prayer; that her teachers and parents had taught her to pray, and she knew that the gospel she had received was of the Lord. At this she stopped speaking, stood and trembled, her face bathed in tears and shining like light, and then, with clasped hands and face uplifted, she broke forth praying in another tongue. The Holy Spirit rested upon the entire assembly in great power, and all were melted in tears.

"The president of the meeting gave the interpretation which was a prayer to God that he would bless, preserve, and finally save her in his everlasting kingdom. Time can never efface from my memory the experience of my first trip in gospel work to the Eastern States."

The membership at the first conference consisted of 25 males and 38 females, of whom there are seven still living—total 63.

Our present membership of 1057 gives us an average increase of 21 7-50 per year.

W. A. SINCLAIR, Press Committee.

FULTON, IOWA, October 24, 1916.

Editors Herald: Our district conference held Saturday and Sunday, October 14 and 15, is now history. We had our church full to overflowing with interested and attentive listeners. On Friday the Religio and Sunday school had their business meetings, and in the evening there was a program rendered, and everyone who took part did well. Everyone seemed cheerful and happy. Peace and harmony prevailed all the way through.

As a branch here we had been praying to the Father to give us favorable weather, which was granted to us. One, the head of a family, was baptized. One was ordained to a priest. I believe the work is taking on new life by the efforts of Brother Sparling, and the district and local priesthood. We believe the influence of this conference will be an uplift to the Saints throughout the district. Brother Sparling is here holding meetings and regulating things for the betterment of the branch. I believe the Twelve made no mistake in sending Brother Sparling to this field of labor, and may God bless the efforts put forth here. As a branch we have been trying to come up higher for some time. How well we have succeeded remains to be seen later.

One thing we can say is that the officers are in unity, also the members seem to be all in harmony. May this continue.

Your brother,

JOHN HEIDE.

VALENTINE, IOWA, October 23, 1916.

Editors Herald: While reading the many letters in the HERALD, I thought perhaps a few lines from this place might be interesting to some.

I have been a member of the church since 1877, and much of the time have been isolated from church privileges, but I have never lost faith in this latter-day work. I enjoy going to the Saints' meetings and prayer service more than anything in this life. I sometimes wonder why those who have this privilege are so careless about attending the meetings. I couldn't help but notice this at the Logan reunion, which I was privileged to attend. It was such a treat to me, for it had been over two years since I had heard a sermon, and many that I had hoped to see there were not present. It was my old home—where I was born, and where I learned to love the gospel. While reading Brother Derry's letter in the HERALD, tears came to my eyes, and oh, how I wish I may hold out as faithful as he.

In gospel bonds,

JULIA C. SHEPARD.

[The following letter was sent in for publication, but because it also contained items intended for the business office it was filed there before being copied for the editorial department, and consequently it has been delayed.—EDITORS.]

CLEVELAND, OHIO, September 8, 1916.

Editors Herald: Please find my fifty-second subscription for the Saints' Herald; send it along. It is a pleasant guest here. It made me feel good to read in the last number the "Reminiscences of fifty years in the church," by Brother William Lewis. Be of good cheer, Brother William, we are traveling close together.

I wish to let the Saints in Wales know that I am still alive and comfortable, and pressing forward in the good work. I have fond recollections of my associates there, and the feasts we enjoyed together under the influence of the Holy Spirit. I wish them Godspeed. I am here among a faithful band of Saints who have the work of God at heart. The outlook for the church here is bright and the meetings are spiritual.

I press forward to the goal.

9123 Wade Park Avenue.

JOHN R. GIBBS.

WALLA WALLA, WASHINGTON, October 24, 1916.

Editors Herald: If any Saints living in Walla Walla, Washington, see this, please call at 442 North Sixth Street and you will be heartily welcomed. We came here a short time ago and inquired if there was a branch of the Saints here, and were told that they held meetings in Moose Hall on Main Street. We were so pleased we could hardly wait until Sunday. We arrived on time, but lo, our spirits sank. We had been in the hall only a moment when we discovered that the Saints were Mormons.

So we take this way of learning if there are any Saints here. An elder will be welcomed at our home at any time.

Your brother and sister,

CALVIN and KATE NEPHEW.

442 North Sixth Street.

RUTLAND, SASKATCHEWAN.

Editors Herald: I am glad to note the safe arrival of Brother and Sister Peter Muceus and family. They have been faithful to their mission, and I knew that God would bring them back safely to America. I would love to see them. I remember the day they left my home to go to Scandinavia, how cheerful they seemed to be. I hope we may meet again some time.

We are now in Canada trying to let our light shine to all we come in contact with. We left the Boston Branch about five years ago. We are about eighteen miles from a branch now, but we have Sunday school and Religio every week here, so you will see that we are not altogether dead, but are trying to keep alive the best we can.

May the Lord still bless you, is the prayer of

Your sister in the one faith,

MRS. OWEN NEWCOMBE.

RUSHOLME, MANCHESTER, ENGLAND.

Editors Herald: It is with a great degree of pleasure I am permitted to write, this being my first attempt. I was born in the year 1899, so you see I am not eighteen until the 26th day of February, 1917. I am very pleased to say that the Lord has truly blessed me in every way I can think of, and I have never regretted the step I took when I asked for baptism for the remission of my sins some seven years ago.

The brethren and sisters have helped me considerably and have given me many encouraging words.

I have been organist of both Sunday school and branch for about four years, and secretary of the Sunday school for three years, and I am president of the Religio in the East Manchester Branch. I was ordained a priest when not quite seventeen years old. In all these offices I have been amply repaid for any little sacrifice that has been made.

I don't mention these things to boast, but because I want to speak to encourage and to comfort and cheer my other young brethren who are also occupied like myself in the marvelous work. Many a time have I pictured to myself the incidents that surrounded Nephi, what marvelous faith he must have had to endure the trials and persecutions, and the Lord blessed him wonderfully. And he will bless similarly if they will only obey and trust him.

This war is playing havoc in our branches. We feel the loss of the great number of our young brethren who have gone. The missionary staff and bishop's counselors are a committee and have started a legal aid fund whereby we might be recognized as a religious body, and to have our brethren of the ministry exempt from military service. I may say we have been successful in our first case, Elder James Schofield being exempted. I have enjoyed the company of our mission president, Apostle U. W. Greene, more so his addresses. They have done me much good, with brotherly counsel and advice which will never be forgotten by the writer.

At the last mission conference the writer was appointed secretary of the sixth quorum of priests, and will the members of that quorum please write me and give me their names and addresses? Will Bishop R. May, of the British Isles note the writer's address?

I pray that God will bless each and every one of us, and that we may so live that our lives will be pleasing unto our heavenly Father.

Your humble brother,

9 Thornton Road.

GEORGE B. TOWERS.

News from Missions

Lamoni Stake

It has been some time since I have written for our church paper, so thought a word might not be amiss at this time.

It is now some two and one half years since I was appointed to labor in the Lamoni Stake, yet I have been unable to get acquainted with all the territory, or Saints of our field of labor. During the conference year 1914, I labored mostly alone, as usual, at various points.

June 5, 1915, to September 30, I labored in company with Elder J. Frank Mintun, and we were kindly allowed to use the stake gospel tent, and notwithstanding the continued rainy season we lost but three appointments by the rain. Our hearing was encouraging, notwithstanding.

We labored at Tingley, Creston and at Avery. Some gospel seed fell into "good ground," some were baptized by Elder Mintun, while we confirmed some.

I have labored during the present conference year so far at Tingley, and during July at Creston with the gospel tent, as also at Lucas, and at Graceland church, near the town of Lacona, and at other points.

Brother William E. Shakespeare and I held a series of tent meetings in September, 1916, at the village of Kent, Union County, and although the attendance was not large, we felt blessed in the labor. Brother and Sister James Bowman and his sister represent the work at Kent, and we believe good can be done there. Brother Shakespeare is a pleasant companion in labor, and a good tent worker. I have also done some labor in New Buda, Pleasanton, and at Allendale, Missouri.

Last March I preached at Fredric, nine miles east of Albia, in Monroe County, Iowa, where abide Brother E. N. Reeves and wife, whose grandparents lived at Nauvoo, Illinois, at one time. As children they became lost to the work, in the "dark and cloudy day." Others are favorable to the work there. We anticipate further labor there soon.

I have been privileged to attend the three reunions of the stake, and have noted the divine blessings attending those sessions. At the late reunion, in August, wonderful awakening came to the Saints. The young were wonderfully awake. This wonderful blessing continues, seems permanent. It is the earnest desire to be of use in the Lord's service, to be helpful to others. Surely this is of God. A larger acquaintance with the work is their earnest desire. It is remarkable to the more mature. A greater impetus to the work of God is given. Also the reorganization of the presidency of the stake, and the accession of some strong young men to the high council is a move forward.

There is reason to be much encouraged on the part of all the Saints. Yet we must watch and be faithful.

May I now say a few words relating to the work in the "regions round about." Elder George F. Angell of Avery, with the aid of a few other faithful Saints, represent the work there in honor. He has taught in the Sunday school for some time in the Methodist church there. Brother E. N. Reeves, of Fredric, has been an acceptable superintendent of the Baptist Church Sunday school near Avery for quite a while. Brother L. W. Moffet, Chariton, Iowa, has charge of the branch there of over one hundred members, a young man yet, and is doing well.

Our venerable Brother John R. Evans, a former missionary of extensive experience, known to many Saints, is in charge yet at Lucas, with Brethren Wilkinson and Chris Hawkins, as aids, the former a priest, the latter a deacon. The incidents common to branches in coal mining regions have given Lucas Branch seasons of prosperity and seasons when few in number, but there have ever been the faithful few there, and hopes are entertained that Lucas shall yet be revived encouragingly.

Of other branches in the stake I will not speak now, but give way to others. I believe encouragement abides with them. At any rate one of the chief church authorities recently said he would rather live now in the stake than in Enoch's beloved city of old!

Brother George B. Hall represents the work at Creston; is superintendent of the Sunday school, and is holding regular services, and is encouraged by the Saints residing there, about fifteen in number, with prospects for more, I believe.

A few Saints still hold onto "the rod of iron" (God's word) at Graceland, near Lacona, keeping the Sunday school moving, and encouraging the preaching of the word, with Sister Stemm as superintendent.

Other openings invite the preaching of the word throughout the stake.

Why should we not be encouraged?

Hopefully,

Your brother and colaborer,

C. SCOTT.

Those who bring sunshine into the lives of others cannot keep it from themselves.—J. M. Barrie.

News from Branches

Des Moines, Iowa

The Des Moines Branch is making gratifying progress. Elder Daniel T. Williams was elected branch president at the election of officers in June. The other officers elected were: Priests: R. J. Farthing, Joseph Lilly, William Kaestner, Joseph Carpenter, H. T. McCaig, H. T. Watson, William Bowlby and W. D. Hall. Teachers: George E. Davis and William C. Fetter. Deacons: John W. Rudkin and Ralph W. Brannon. Secretary, Orpha Emslie. Brother Mansel T. Williams, deacon, was later added to the branch staff.

The report to the October district conference shows that the branch membership has increased to 487. There appears a noticeable migration of Saints to Des Moines. Among those who have come from Lamoni recently we mention the following: Brother Mansel T. Williams and family, Brother S. E. Ballou and family, Brother and Sister Harry Gelatt, Brother Jay Barr, Brother W. J. Mather, and Sister Elsie Goode. Then there is the colony from Hiteman, the Adamsons, the Williamses, the Phillipses, Brother Barker, and others; besides the Kirkwoods from Perry, and a few from other places—not the least important of whom is Brother F. T. Mussell, of Missouri, and his numerous family.

The deacon, with the aid of a few willing helpers has made considerable improvement in the interior of the church building and basement, by cleaning, painting and varnishing.

The branch recently purchased the lot and building at the north of the church for a parsonage, and Brother Williams and family have taken up their domicile therein.

November 12 will be celebrated as home coming day, and extensive preparations are being made for the supplying of both the temporal and spiritual needs of the Saints on that occasion. Elder John F. Garver, president of Lamoni Stake, will be the principal speaker.

Following home coming day Brother Williams will commence a series of Sunday evening discourses on the fundamental features of the faith and practice of the church that should be of special interest to nonmembers. The attendance at all the services is increasing splendidly and the prospects are bright for an effective work of increasing proportions to be done in the city of Des Moines.

R. J. FARTHING, Branch Correspondent.

Independence Stake

Halloween with all its frolic and some vandalism has passed into history, and the busy Laurel Club, by engaging in social chat and offering to its patrons not only a fine assortment of good things to eat, but also a program of music and interesting story, has raised the sum of forty-five dollars for some worthy cause, and so make good use of this old Druidistic holiday.

Birthdays, funeral days and wedding days are also important events, and it has been the lot of the Saints to participate in some of them, too, in the recent past.

The old folks in Zion have had their share. One couple of seventy-eight and eighty, another seventy-six and seventy-one, and one more ranging in age about seventy, are representatives of the matrimonial plunges lately made at the center place.

But our poor lives, weary with toil and care must also meet with sorrows. Sister Lottie, the beautiful, gentle, loving young mother has, but a short time ago, been called away from us, and only two or three days have passed since we laid to rest the remains of Sister Sophia Bierlein, a pioneer faithful and true, and who has left behind many pleasant memories and a record of good service for the Master here and in Wisconsin and Dakota.

And now, we have some of the best of tidings for the Saints everywhere, for we hear of excellent service done by our brethren and sisters in the other branches of the stake, and here the meetings and classes of late have been very uplifting, and, as usual, generously patronized.

On Sunday, October 29, J. E. Vanderwood in the morning took for his text Matthew 10:16, and W. W. Smith three verses from John 14. And here is an adage of Wilson's that will apply to both speakers, and to many a worthy Latter Day Saint elder throughout the church, "Let men lead you who are looking forward."

May we all heed well the trumpet slogan, "Upward and Onward."

ABBIE A. HORTON.

Miscellaneous Department

The Presidency

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP

To the Saints of the Lamoni Stake: After due consideration of the matter, the Presidency and Bishopric have decided to place upon Bishop Carmichael the responsibility of Lamoni Stake Bishop, and we cheerfully commend him to the Saints of that stake. This appointment will hold till the next General Conference or until otherwise revoked.

Your servants,

FREDERICK M. SMITH, President.
BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE, Presiding Bishop.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, October 24, 1916.

At a special conference, November 4, 1916, the Lamoni Stake formally concurred in this appointment. On nomination by Bishop Carmichael and approval of the same conference, Brethren R. J. Lambert and A. J. Yarrington have been set apart as his counselors. These men are all commended as worthy the trust imposed.

Sincerely,

J. F. GARVER, Stake President.

LAMONI, IOWA, November 6, 1916.

The Bishopric

CORRECTIONS OF THE BISHOP'S REPORT

Please note the following corrections to the Bishop's report for 1915: Toronto District: M. J. Crowley, 50 cents, should be $50.00. Independence Stake: Mrs. E. A. Lively, $72.50, should be Miss E. A. Lively, $55.00; Mrs. L. M. Lively, $22.50. Minnesota District: Otilia Harpster, $4, should be $40. Page 5, column 3: Elder's expense returned, $15 of the total amount was received from R. Newby. Corrections Graceland offerings, page 45:

The following, which were credited to other Iowa Districts should have appeared in the Little Sioux District: Mondamin $11, Little Sioux $2.15, Sioux City $9.20, Pisgah $16.50, Logan Religio $1, Logan $16.65, Logan Sunday School $1, Moorhead $33. Moorhead Aid Society $10, Woodbine $11.50.

BENJ. R. MCGUIRE.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, October 31, 1916.

Conference Minutes

FREMONT.—At Bartlett, Iowa, October 7, 1916, with T. A. Hougas in charge and C. W. Forney, secretary. Statistical reports: Henderson 82, Shenandoah 112, Bartlett 46, Thurman 195, Hamburg 61, Tabor 73, Riverton 52, Glenwood 70, total 691, showing net gain of 12 since last report. Sermons reported, 100; baptisms, 10. A motion that we dispense with winter conferences and have but two conferences a year, one in June and one in October, was lost unanimously. Time and place of next conference left to district presidency. Bishop's agent reported $30.70 on hand. W. E. Haden's request for funds was referred to the presidency with power to act. A collection was taken at close of Sunday forenoon service amounting to $17.27 for W. E. Haden. Motion carried that the presidency appoint a committee of three to audit bishop's agent's books annually, one to be appointed for three years, one for two and one for one year. D. M. Eittleman, W. M. Leeka, and George E. Omans were so appointed. Thus closed the first conference ever held at Bartlett. C. W. Forney, secretary.

WEST VIRGINIA.—With Harmony Branch, on Indian Creek, September 2 and 3, 1916, with Elder Joseph Biggs in charge, and Thomas Newton and B. Beall associates. Reports from the following branches were read: Clarksburg 105, Cabin Run 33, Mount Zion 43, Vanvoorhis 24, Masontown 21. Bishop's agent's report showed $425.10 collected and $264.36 paid out. The committee appointed at last conference to learn the cost and solicit funds for the purchase of a tent were continued and given power to purchase. Resolution passed condemning the use of tobacco. Officers elected: President, Joseph Biggs; first vice president, Thomas Newton; second vice president, V. P. B. Beall; secretary, Frank L. Shinn; treasurer, B. E. Wadsworth; chorister, Mocie D. Shinn; Frank L. Shinn was sustained as bishop's agent. Adjourned to meet with Clarksburg Branch at call of district presidency and missionary in charge. Frank L. Shinn, secretary.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.—With the Coldwater Branch, October 21 and 22, district presidency presiding. The weather was very unfavorable for a large gathering, but a nice company of the Saints from over the district, at the beginning of the services, was on hand and this number continued to increase until on Sunday the church building was packed. Meals served in basement of the church. Election of officers: President, G. A. Smith; counselors, O. H. Storey and Samuel Stroh; secretary-treasurer, W. P. Buckley; bishop's agent, S. Stroh; chorister, Louise Evans; member of library board, Sister Frances Bailey. A ladies auxiliary was organized for the district by Sister Louise Evans with Sister Dean Corless, president; Sister R. C. McElhene, vice president; Sister Alice Storey, secretary; Sister O. H. Storey, treasurer. Branches reporting: Battle Creek, gain 3; Belding; Buchanan; Capital City, gain 10; Clear Lake, loss 3; Coldwater, gain 1; Galien, loss 1; Grand Rapids, gain 7; Hartford; Jackson; Kalamazoo, gain 1; Knox, gain 3; Sparta, gain 1; a net gain of 22, total membership in district of 1,088. Delegates to next General Conference: E. K. Evans, J. D. Stead, G. A. Smith, Louise Evans, O. R. Miller, Alice Storey, John Goodman, S. W. L. Scott, S. Stroh, and F. A. Cox. The need was seen for an extra day at our conferences as the time is too much crowded for the full carrying out of all the services as we have them at present and the matter is to be left to a vote of all the branches in the district and then to be taken up at the next conference. The prayer services were well attended and the Spirit was poured out in the gifts of tongues, interpretation and gift of prophecy. A meeting of the quorum of elders was held and the subjects brought up were thoroughly enjoyed by all. Adjourned to meet with the Clear Lake Branch some time in June at call of the district presidency. W. P. Buckley, secretary, 737 Loomis Street, Jackson, Michigan.

GALLANDS GROVE.—At Deloit, Iowa, October 14 and 15, in charge of District President J. L. Butterworth, assisted by J. B. Barrett and C. A. Winey. Branches reported: Deloit 241, Gallands Grove 250, Dow City 152, Mallard 70, Coalville 74, Lanesboro 43. Bishop's agent reported, on hand June 11, $182.35; receipts $989.29; on hand $212.29. A resolution that this district hold a reunion of its own was passed, and the district officers were chosen to act as a committee to carry the resolution into effect. Adjourned to meet at Dow City, Iowa, in February. Wave Cross, secretary, Dow City, Iowa.

NODAWAY.—In Pleasant Hope Church, Ross Grove Branch, near Maitland, Missouri, October 14, 1916. J. W. Powell, assisted by O. W. Okerlind, chosen to preside; W. B. Torrance secretary. Reports of branches: Guilford 119, gain 15; Ross Grove 76; Bedison 68, gain 1; Sweet Home 42, gain 2. W. B. Torrance, bishop's agent, reported: Balance on hand, February 26, 1916, $237.46; received since, $448.50; expended $705.50; due agent $19.54. District secretary had secured 300 printed copies of by-laws; bill ordered paid. Edward Jensen, of Bedison Branch ordained priest. Moved that W. B. Torrance and W. T. Ross be ordained to the office of elder and A. E. Jobe to the office of priest, and that the president of the district present the matter to the Guilford Branch and obtain their approval and proceed with the ordinations of the brethren named. So ordered. Thirty dollars was reported as received from rent of district tent, which by order of the conference was turned into the hands of the district treasurer to be used to defray expenses of the missionary, and when the tent will not furnish enough to defray said expenses the district treasurer inform the several branch presidents and a collection be taken for this purpose. Elections: J. W. Powell, district president; R. Lorensen, vice president; W. B. Torrance, secretary; Alec Jensen, treasurer; W. T. Ross, chorister, Roscoe Ross, member library board. The following motion was filed for consideration at our next conference: "Moved to amend the by-laws to correspond with the light of the moon in both February and October." Bedison Branch was chosen as the place to hold the next conference, in February. W. B. Torrance, secretary, Bolckow, Missouri.

Convention Minutes

LONDON.—Religio, at Stratford, Ontario, October 6, 10 a. m., in charge of President J. V. Gleason and Vice President James Winegarden, assisted by Apostles J. F. Curtis and R. C. Russell. The most important item of business was a decision to hold next convention separate from district conference. Joint program with Sunday school in the evening was an interesting feature. Officers elected: President, J. V. Gleason; vice president, W. D. Bayne; secretary-treasurer, George Tomlinson; librarian, Rosa Tier; home class department superintendent, Aubrey Blanchard; normal superintendent, J. V. Gleason; gospel literature superintendent, James Winegarden; temperance superintendent, George Tomlinson. Next convention will be held in London, Ontario, February 3 and 4, 1917. George Tomlinson, secretary.

Conference Notices

Northeastern Missouri District, at Bevier, Missouri, November 25, at 10 a. m. Send all reports to William C. Chapman, secretary, Higbee, Missouri, route 3.

Alabama with Flat Rock Branch, December 9, 10 a. m. Sunday school will have entertainment on Friday evening before. Some of the missionaries are expected to be with us. All branches are expected to report. J. H. Harper, district president.

Convention Notices

Alberta Religio, at Calgary, Alberta, December 8, 9 a. m. Mary E. Skinner, secretary.

Northeastern Missouri convention, at Bevier, Missouri, November 25. Thena Rogers, secretary.

Died

HALL.—John Leonie, infant son of Mr. Ben and Mrs. Eliza Hall, born September 3, 1915; died October 6, 1916, at Fort Dodge, Iowa. Funeral sermon by Columbus Scott, assisted by James Wilkinson. Interment at Lucas, Iowa. He is deeply mourned by the young father and mother.

CLINE.—John B. Cline, aged 73 years, died August 17, 1916, at his home in Council Bluffs, Iowa. He was born in Wisconsin, July 8, 1843. He united with the Latter Day Saints at Keystone, Iowa, in 1881, and was ordained an elder at Shenandoah. He was a member of the G. A. R., having served in the 120th Illinois Infantry during the entire war. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Holzberger, and Mrs. Otto Murray and two sons, Charles D. and Vernon. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Mary P. Fessler of Lamoni, Iowa.

"St. Nicholas" Magazine Notes

No country in the world is so well supplied with alert young wireless-telegraph operators as the United States. It is estimated that there are more than 150,000 wireless stations, large and small, scattered throughout the country. For each of these outfits there is at least one intelligent operator, so that America must contain an immense army of wireless experts. The Government at Washington has just come to realize that this great force of loyal and alert young men may be made extremely valuable in organizing a vast signal system, and work is being pushed forward to

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 The Biggest Thing in Your Life - - - 1081
 The Word of Encouragement - - - 1082
 A Five-Hundred-Dollar Letter - - - 1082
 Current Events - - - 1083
 Notes and Comments - - - 1084

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 The Responsibility of Inspiration, by Richard Bullard - - - 1085
 The Associates of the Young.—No. 1, by H. M. Aebli - - - 1087
 Adam Did Not Fall From Celestial Glory, by Hermann Peisker - - - 1088

OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 New York's "Catholic Week" - - - 1092
 A Quaker View of Mexico - - - 1093

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY - - - 1094
 George A. Kelley—Lula M. Sandy—Cara Bailey Brand.

LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - 1096
 A. G. Larky—William Lewis—W. A. Sinclair—John Heide—Julia C. Shepard—John R. Gibbs—Calvin and Kate Nephew—Mrs. Owen Newcombe—George B. Towers.

NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - 1100
 C. Scott.

NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - 1101
 R. J. Farthing—Abbie A. Horton.

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - 1102

organize the amateur wireless operators. This new third arm of the Army is called the Junior American Guard, which already comprises nearly ten thousand members. To the November St. Nicholas, it is announced, Francis Arnold Collins, of "The Wireless Man" and "The Camera Man," will contribute an article on this remarkable development of an amateur wireless service. Mr. Collins believes that at the present rate of progress the United States will soon have one of the most efficient and enthusiastic wireless signal services in the world.

Book Reviews

BLACKFEET TALES OF GLACIER NATIONAL PARK.—By James Willard Schultz, Houghton Muffin Company, New York, price $2 net. The author of this book is one of the few old-time frontiersmen and Indian fighters remaining. He was adopted by the Blackfeet tribe when a young man, married an Indian maiden, and for years lived, hunted, and fought with them on the buffalo-covered plains of the west. Recently he has revisited his former comrades at their encampment in beautiful Glacier Park, and has seized the opportunity to take down some of their most interesting legends, making what is considered by some the best collection of Indian stories ever brought together. With these stories is combined the author's own narrative of his experiences and adventures, made even more graphic by a series of superb photographs.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure
No Alum—No Phosphate

GENERAL CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS.—Containing all the important resolutions passed in the church since 1852. This makes not only educational but highly interesting reading. Many of the elders are in doubt about matters that have been settled and are recorded in this collection of conference enactments. No. 206, paper, 40c; No. 207, cloth$3.60

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.—A plainly told series of sermons by J. S. Roth, followed by a synopsis of his life as a "gospel messenger." This book is very popular; doubtless because of its simple, affirmative manner. It is not a book alone for the "wayfaring man or the fool," but for the earnest seeker after truth. No. 208, cloth$1.00

DOCTRINAL REFERENCES.—Alvin Knisley, being a compilation of references on all subjects connected with the gospel, taken from the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. No. E185, paper, 10c; No. E186, cloth, 15c; No. E187, leather$3.30

DOCTRINES AND DOGMAS OF UTAH MORMONISM EXPOSED.—A strong arraignment of Utah Mormonism by J. D. Stead. Brighamism is judged by its own works, teachings and admissions. All the quotations are legally sworn to, and no loophole has been left for the equivocator. A book that seizes the issue and adheres to it with the strength and tenacity of truth. Thorough and prolix. No. 177, cloth$1.25

BOOK OF MORMON.—We sell this book in various bindings, listed in our price list. The most popular editions are, No. 11, cloth, 90c; No. 12, full leather $1.30

THE HAPPIEST CHRISTMAS AND THE SILVER THIMBLES.—Two excellent child stories by Callie B. Stebbins, who has had an extraordinarily wide experience with children. One of the birth-offering series. No. 364, cloth$3.40

HIS FIRST VENTURE AND THE SEQUEL.—A story by Estella Wight, editor of Stepping Stones and the "Religio's Arena." It tells about a country boy who was led astray by the lure of the city, but came back at last to loved ones—and the realization that "homely goodness" is the best thing after all. No. 369, cloth$3.60

JOAN OF ARC.—"Frances" here tells the story of Joan of Arc in a most human way. The French heroine is here brought down to the present and is seen as a living being, rather than a remote historical character. The social revolution she helped bring about, the service she rendered her country, make the story of her life interesting to all generations. Joan is an inspiration. No. 370, cloth$3.60

THE INSTRUCTOR.—A compilation of scriptural and other citations by the veteran apostle, G. T. Griffiths, gleaned from the Word and his own wide experience as a thinker and preacher; not only handy but necessary. Ammunition every defender of Latter Day Saintism needs. No. 216, cloth, $1; No. 217, leather, $1.25; No. 218, flexible$2.00

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

FOR SALE

Two acres of fine lying land, all set to young fruit just coming into bearing—new 6 room house, back plastered and finely finished. 2 never failing wells, new hen house 10 x 24. Located on South State St. Bargain for cash. E. F. Hall, Lamoni, Iowa. 31-tf

DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.—A book of the revelations given for the guidance of the church. One of the three standard books of the church which no member can afford to disregard. In four bindings: No. 21, cloth, 65c; No. 22, full leather $1; No. 23, imitation morocco, gilt edges, $2.05; No. 24, morocco, gilt edges, flexible$3.25

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 63

LAMONI, IOWA, NOVEMBER 15, 1916

NUMBER 46

Editorial

THROWING CLUBS AT "AUTHORITY"

Occasionally of late our attention has been called to a remark, written or spoken, in the nature of a fling or a sneer at "authority." Once in a great while such a remark comes from a source that is surprising—as for instance, from one in the field, who must on occasion defend the principle of authority; one who if the principle of authority were overthrown would not have a leg left to stand on, theologically.

Such a feeling is occasional, not general, sporadic not epidemic, yet it may be worthy of a moment's notice. We do not wish to be misunderstood in that which we say as defending any despotic abuse or misuse of authority on the part of any individual, no matter what his position. Joseph Smith truly said:

There are many called but few are chosen, and why are they not chosen? Because their hearts are set upon the things of the world and are aspiring to the honors of men; they do not learn the lesson that the rights, of the priesthood, are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven; and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled, only upon the principles of righteousness, that they may be conferred upon us, it is true, but when we undertake to cover our sins, to gratify our pride, vain ambition, or to exercise dominion or compulsion over the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness; behold the heavens withdraw themselves, the Spirit of the Lord is grieved, then amen to the priesthood, or to the authority of that man.—Times and Seasons, vol. 1, pp. 31, 32.

In our church philosophy authority is a very important principle. We contend that it must have come down by succession from the days of the apostles or have been restored in latter days by divine direction. Our historic contention along that line shows the measure of importance that we attach to authority.

The Catholics claim it by succession; the Latter Day Saints by restoration. One who holds authority to be a negligible quantity, or a principle worthy only of derision or defiance, certainly has no legitimate place in either of these church organizations, but should ally himself with such of the denominations as treat the matter lightly—the "Church of Christ," for instance, which repudiates organization and apparently does not even claim authority to expel or excommunicate offenders, but instead "withdraws from them," and has, so far as we know, no court of jurisdiction, and in common with the "Christian Church" rests upon the hypothesis, "If we have authority to preach, we have authority to baptize." A Latter Day Saint who repudiates authority as a principle is fighting the enemy's battles.

It is written:

Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; but whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.—John 15: 16.

And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.—Hebrews 5: 4.

And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.—Matthew 16: 19.

Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you; as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost: whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained.—John 20: 21-23.

"As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you," Jesus said to his disciples. Did Jesus come with authority? Yes, even the casual observers recognized that, and declared that he spoke not as the scribes and Pharisees, but as one having authority.

How did God send Jesus? I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and a commander to the people.—Isaiah 55: 4. And Jesus said: "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you."

Either these statements meant something or they did not. If they meant anything at all they meant that the members of the priesthood were endowed with authority that was to be recognized both on earth and in heaven.

It is the belief of the church that the priesthood, in both divisions, and in all grades, was restored to earth miraculously in the early days of the nineteenth century. Either that belief is well founded, or else it is based on fables and falsehoods. If it is well founded, then authority now exists among the priesthood, and must command respect within the proper limits of its jurisdiction.

In addition to divinely bestowed authority, certain individuals have delegated authority, from the church, by appointment or by election. This fact alone is worthy of consideration. An institution which does not respect its own duly elected or appointed authorities and their official acts cannot long endure, nor can it command the respect of others during its brief career.

Those who tilt at authority enter the tourney on the side of anarchy. There is no place for an anarchist in the church.

Pastors, district presidents, ministers in charge, standing church officers, in addition to their priesthood, act in certain fields as being in charge, as "overseers," by virtue of calling, election, or appointment. Certainly God has commanded that such men should be respected in their official positions. (Or else he has not so commanded. Those who repudiate the revelations of course may reject the authority, but not as representative members of the church.)

The advice and counsel of such men should have sufficient weight to at least command careful consideration. So far as advice is concerned, few men of the church claim infallibility. Even the joint councils of the quorum in submitting advice or suggestion do not regard it as something that must be received willy nilly; but they do hold that it should be worthy of consideration, and not be laid on the table without consideration.

Men in the positions mentioned may be required to go even further and perform certain official acts in the pursuit of their work. Such official acts under proper conditions must be considered binding, subject to the usual appeal. Otherwise there can be no order or discipline. And the house of God is said to be a house of order.

Again, the courts of the church are vested with authority, both by divine appointment and by the rulings of the church herself. Their authority within ecclesiastical lines is recognized even by the civil courts. Yet it sometimes happens that one who has taken his appeal to the courts, finding the decision against him, at once flies into a passion and challenges the intelligence and probity of the court.

This has happened within much less than a thousand years, in an instance in which the case was carried to the presiding bishop's court, and when the decision was adverse, the defendant and counsel branded the bishop's court as corrupt. Appeal was taken to the High Council. Again the decision was adverse, after careful and prayerful consideration. At once the defendant and counsel challenged the decision, and with every insulting adjective that they could well think of assailed the Presidency and the High Council as being both stupid and dishonest.

This does not happen often enough to disturb the unity and serenity of the church as a whole. The case is exceptional, not typical, but may illustrate the extremes to which senseless and unfounded revolt against proper authority may lead one.

If one feels on the start that he has more grains and more integrity than the fifteen men composing the High Council, when it is fully organized, or than the members of the bishop's court, he should not take an appeal at all, but should determine to become "a law unto himself" and abide the consequences, rather than to run the course and then make that choice.

Up to a certain point in every court and in every quorum, in matters both judicial and executive, there is provision for an appeal. But of necessity there is reached a point where appeal can go no further, and the decision must be final. One who is not prepared to abide the final decision should not begin the process of appeal.

No man is bound to remain in the church and acquiesce in her system of authority. But if he should elect to so remain a member he should in all consistency abide the consequences.

If the church is indeed an authoritative body, vested by Almighty God with the priesthood and the right to speak in his name, it certainly is an institution worthy of respect. And those who are members should be the last ones on earth to discredit by precept or practice that principle of authority which has such a conspicuous and important place in our theology.

If the church is not such an authoritative body, she is a sham and a pretense, not worthy of respect, and on a plane with all other organizations that may arrogate to themselves a "form of godliness" but deny "the power thereof."

Every man may take his choice and get in or get out. But no man can consistently choose to stay in and persist in using against the church those arguments that he might be free to use if he were a non-member, and opponent, or an infidel.

In the exercise of authority let the men of the church see to it that they give no occasion for just criticism, or defiance. Authority should be used to save men, not to destroy them. Jesus reminded the apostles when they would have called down fire upon their opponents, that he had come to save men, not to destroy them, and chided them with the statement that they knew not what spirit they were of. Authority should be used to build up the kingdom of heaven, and not to build up self; it should not be exercised to obtain vengeance, or to crush others. Some one has said that it is a splendid thing to have a giant's strength, but a shameful thing to use it like a giant.

Even in the extremity when it becomes necessary to expel men from the church it should be done in a Christlike spirit. Authority is not given to men that they may lord it over their fellows, but that they may be of service to their fellows. It should be exercised humbly, but with dignity and resoluteness, that it may command respect among thoughtful men and women.

We must avoid the extreme to which Brigham Young went. It was his boast that when he crooked his finger the hosts of Israel moved. Dowie also said that he had never put a matter to vote in Zion City. He declared: "This church voting is all nonsense. I should just as soon ask a flock of sheep to vote where the shepherd should lead them."

This is the one extreme to be avoided. But on the other hand we must avoid the other extreme to which some would rush who apparently recognize no authority aside from their own sweet wills, neither as vested in the priesthood nor yet as expressed in enactments by common consent.

We have on the one hand to reckon with the principle of democracy, expressed in the rule of common consent, the voice of the people; and on the other hand the principle of theocracy, as expressed in the authority of the priesthood conferred from God on high and in the revelations from time to time.

We can and must secure a harmonious blending of these two principles in practice so that the voice of the people and the will of God shall be in accord in all our work.

[These lines have been written with the idea in mind that the church is spoken of as the army of the Lord. It is not like any other army, true, yet it is impossible to think of an army in which discipline is not a very important factor—otherwise we have a rabble, not an army.

If the army of the Lord is to become very great and very terrible, it must be a disciplined body. Authority must be recognized and it must be exercised along the lines indicated in the law. Those in charge of divisions must give instruction, and those under their jurisdiction must heed those instructions. And the authority of the church as expressed legislatively must be respected. If this shall not be, inevitable processes of disintegration will set in. Which shall it be? Who is for law and order? Who is for discipline, system, mutual respect, forward movement, victory? ELBERT A. SMITH.

God has so arranged the chronometry of our spirits that there shall be thousands of silent moments between the striking hours.—Martineau.

CHRISTMAS OFFERING

We note an excellent feature in the standard of excellence of the Chatham, Ontario, District Sunday school association. As the eleventh point in their standard they require a "contribution to the Christmas Offering each year." To be a first-grade school in that district it is required that at least some amount be given to that fund. While we would suppose that most Sunday schools would do this anyway, it is a good plan to keep it thus constantly before the membership during the year rather than to wait till the last few Sundays before the offering is taken. Every Sunday school member and those who are not in touch with that organization, should make a consistent effort to maintain our previous record in this line at least. Last year it was $10,904.24; how much will it be this time? More than ever in these times of high prices do the families of the missionaries need the aid this freely-given fund affords them. Let it be included in your Christmas plans.

E. D. M.

CURRENT EVENTS

ELECTION IS OVER.—For several days the results of the presidential election was a matter of doubt. While all the returns are not in at this writing, and some may be contested, it is generally conceded that Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall have been reelected President and Vice President for another four years.

CHRISTMAS SHIP TO SYRIA.—On December 1 the contributions by the people of this country for the relief of starving Armenians and Syrians will be sent on an American collier. More than $250,000 worth of foodstuffs will be carried, together with a large amount of new clothing. To alleviate immediate suffering, $208,000 has been cabled.

PROHIBITION MAKES BIG GAINS.—In the recent election five States, with a population of 5,400,166 swung into the "dry" columns. These were Nebraska, South Dakota, Idaho, Montana, and Michigan. Alaska also voted for total prohibition. In five other States efforts were made by liquor forces to weaken the dry laws already in effect, but in each case this was frustrated by large majorities. Complete returns will likely show that Detroit has gone dry, making it the largest city on the continent enjoying prohibition. It is significant that a number of large cities, such as Kansas City, Omaha, Grand Rapids, Seattle and Tacoma gave majority votes to prohibition. Missouri as a State remains wet by a large majority.

FEDERAL INQUIRY OF HIGH PRICES.—The reasons for the rapid rise in price of foodstuffs of all kinds are sought by a Federal commission working from Chicago. We have given up trying to keep track of the record-breaking prices for various products. Some newspaper headlines say that coal at twenty dollars a ton is possible in New York this winter. A dispatch says that Sea Island cotton recently sold for fifty cents a pound. Wheat hovers around the two-dollar mark.

EUROPEAN WAR.—The allies continue to nibble at the German line in the west, taking a few small villages. The Russo-Rumanian forces have succeeded in driving the Teutons and Bulgarians back a considerable distance in Dobrudja. In the other theaters of war little change is recorded though activities have continued. German submarines continue to sink vessels on several seas. It is reported that an American ship, the Columbian, has been sunk by German submarines and that its crew has landed in Spain. The state department has been informed that Arabia has set up an independent government, following the revolt against Turkey.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

ELECTION NEWS BY WIRELESS.—This year for the first time Lamoni received its election news by wireless, Graceland College acting as a receiving station. A receiving station was installed in the high school also, and the students were kept posted on returns by way of the college.

CHURCHES IN IOWA.—The 1915 census of Iowa shows that Decatur County—wherein Lamoni is located—has next to the highest Protestant church membership in the State. The percentage is 43, while that of the next county is 45. Along the Mississippi and Missouri rivers the percentage is low, running down to 11 per cent, and these are the counties where Prohibition has its hardest battles. In Scott County, on the Mississippi, 11 per cent are Protestant. Only 14 per cent in that county belong to churches of any denomination.

GRACELAND COLLEGE RECOGNITION.—We are pleased to publish the following letter, which speaks for itself:

UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI—COLUMBIA
College of Arts and Science,
Office of Dean.

1 November, 1916.

PRESIDENT GEORGE N. BRIGGS,
Lamoni, Iowa.

My Dear President Briggs:

I am very glad to know that the University of Iowa has recognized Graceland College as a Junior College and I congratulate you upon your recognition. Since Graceland is a Junior College, approved by the University of Iowa, we would, of course, give your graduates the same recognition that is given to them by your own university.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) J. C. JONES.

PROHIBITION FOR GREAT BRITAIN.—Press Dispatches state that a petition is to be presented to the British Government by the "strength of Britain movement" asking that the British Government follow the lead of her allies and absolutely prohibit the sale of alcohol. This bill has already been signed by one thousand of the representatives of the nation, including leading officers of the army and navy. The following charges are preferred against alcohol:

It hinders the army, delays munitions, keeps thousands of men from war work daily, makes good workmen second-rate.

Hampers the navy, delays transports, places them at the mercy of submarines, slows down repairs and congests docks.

Threatens the mercantile marine, absorbing during the war between sixty and seventy million cubic feet of space and retards building of ships.

Destroys food supplies; in twenty months of war it consumes over two and a half million tons of food, with sugar enough to last the nation eighty days and uses up more sugar than the army.

Wastes our financial strength; in the first twenty months of the war our people spent on alcohol three hundred million sterling.

Diverts the nation's strength; it uses 500,000 workers, one million acres of land and one and a half million tons of coal yearly; during the war it has involved the lifting and handling on road and rail of a weight equal to fifty million tons. Shatters our moral strength; its temptations to women involve danger to children and anxiety to thousands of soldiers.

"MODEL SUNDAY" IN BURLINGTON.—The following plan for demonstrating Zionite conditions is unique and interesting. Following the statement by the pastor, is one by the superintendent of the Sunday school, then an interesting program for the morning sessions which takes up the ideal Sunday school from a scholar's standpoint, the Sunday school and the home, and the priesthood and the Sunday school, closing with a sermon which no doubt touched on all these and kindred subjects. This is the pastor's statement:

Dear Saints: Let us observe the following points of law November 12 that we may have a taste of conditions as they will be experienced in Zion. The above date, if observed by each member may result in a model branch.

Does that sound good to you? Then prepare your food on Saturday for Sunday. (Exodus 16: 22, 23.)

"Rise early." (Doctrine and Covenants 119: 9.)

"Refrain from unnecessary work." (Doctrine and Covenants 119: 7.)

"Do none other thing only let thy food be prepared with a singleness of heart, that thy joy may be full." (Doctrine and Covenants 59: 3.)

"Thou shalt go to the house of prayer—for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High." (Doctrine and Covenants 59: 2.)

In doing this it will be a model Sunday in your home as well as at services. Come with a prayer upon your lips that God will bless each heart with a desire that will result in great good to his kingdom here and glory to his name.

D. J. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Original Articles

THE NEEDS OF THE MISSIONARY

BY ONE OF THEM

The missionary himself should know his own needs as well as do any others, and better than does the local or presiding ministry. A number of recent articles and suggestions in the church papers attempt to point out to the missionary arm of the church his needs and qualifications. But these have not come from the missionary himself, or from those who have had much experience outside the branches.

Perhaps it would not be out of place to hear from the missionary himself, or one of "him," who has spent twenty-eight years in the missionary field—half of that time as district president, and eight years under foreign flags, one reared in the church, whose father and grandfather before him were also members. His experience and his opportunities to observe the needs of this class of men, should entitle him to a hearing if not to credence.

HIGHER EDUCATION ESSENTIAL

By way of preface I might say that I shall attempt to prove that higher education is the most needful thing for the missionary, and is absolutely necessary. In fact there can be no real and lasting success without it. But the higher education I shall contend for, has not to do with books of men.

Lest some prejudice me, and conclude in advance that I do not value worldly education of any worth, let me say; The more of it the better, provided it be properly guarded and considered. I am free to admit, however, that I am not credulous enough to believe everything I see printed in schoolbooks. A printed error is as great and perhaps greater than a spoken one. Books are no more to be believed than men; and neither one, simply upon assertion.

Most of the articles pointing out the needs of the missionary, place too high a value on the books and ideas of men, and too little on the help of God. Several of these articles mention spiritual fitness last and least of all qualifications. This article shall attempt to reverse that order, and credit God with having at least a little more wisdom than the philosophers and professors of this or any other age; and having a means of giving that superior wisdom to man—in fact sufficient wisdom while yet this old world was in its infancy, and philosophers yet unborn, to set a standard for man that none since has been able to equal or surpass.

The philosophy of the present age is no safer than that of Egypt, Babylon, Greece, or Rome, for all are but partial truths, coming from men who know only in part. Not only does the minister need divine help, but all students need that Spirit which will guide into all truth, in order to separate truth from error. Hence I have said that a worldly education needs to be properly guarded.

GOD THE TRUE SOURCE

God being the source of all truth and knowledge, how may we connect with that great source? Through the fallible thoughts of a fellow man printed in a book? or, by a spiritual connection with the great forces of heaven? Evidently the latter.

I deeply deplore a recent effort to make worldly education the master, and the Spirit of God the sword to be used by it, if such could be done. The divine plan is just the reverse. The Spirit of God is the master and the word of God is the sword of the Spirit. (Ephesians 6:17.) The word of God is most important. The word of man is of little importance. The word of God being a sword, the word of man is but a stave. How much need of the staves, the Spirit will ever have, all must decide for themselves. One not having the Spirit, but having a plentiful supply of staves well in hand, might use them to make a great demonstration. If they are well-padded staves, the consciences of sinners may never be aroused, and they could have an easy and honorable place in the church. At the judgment, however, such minister should share the punishment of the sinner whose conscience he failed to arouse. I cannot better express my thought, than to quote an editorial in the HERALD for June 7, of the present year.

I am told that at the wireless station at Graceland College they receive commercial messages from various great cities, that is, they hear them. They pick up messages from the Atlantic fleet, and from the Secretary of War, and even, I have been told, the Kaiser's war orders in cipher.

Now to my mind, the singular and dramatic thing about this is that these messages are passing about our heads at the time. They may be vibrating through this room at this moment, but I do not hear them, and you do not hear them. We do not know of them, because we are not in touch with them. But those individuals who have the equipment and are in attune, can hear these messages. . . .

And I believe just as sincerely that the otherwise stagnant atmosphere of this old earth is vibrating with spiritual messages from on high; but we do not hear them unless we are in tune and equipped to receive them. . . . The lesson of the wireless warns us to be careful how we reject those claims to divine direction or inspiration that have been made in all ages of the world. Even so great a scientist as Sir Oliver Lodge says that the methods of science are not the only methods by which men may arrive at truth.

How shall we catch the messages of heaven that vibrate in the "otherwise stagnant atmosphere of this old earth." What wonderful truth may lie just above your head, and what glories and ecstasies higher up. Oh for men to reach up and bring these down to their fellows.

A WORTHY EXAMPLE

A poor, stuttering lad, hated of all the people, who lived long ago, furnishes us one of the best examples of the possibilities of things higher up.

As Enoch spake forth the words of God, the people trembled and could not stand in his presence. . . . And so great was the faith of Enoch, that he led the people of God, and their enemies came to battle against them, and he spake the word of the Lord, and the earth trembled, and the mountains fled, even according to his command. And the rivers of water were turned out of their course, and the roar of the lions was heard out of the wilderness. And all nations feared greatly, so powerful was the word of Enoch, and so great was the power of the language which God had given him. . . . And the giants of the land also stood afar off; and there went forth a curse upon all the people which fought against God.—Genesis 6: 48 and 7: 15, 16, 17, 19, I. T.

Another example is that of Melchisedec, "a man of faith, who wrought righteousness, and when a child he feared God, and stopped the mouths of lions, and quenched the violence of fire." (Genesis 14: 26.) A half dozen such men to-day would accomplish more than all the ministry since the organization of the church. Who can lead us to that standard? Oh, for that great endowment! Oh, for some one to increase our faith even to the size of a mustard seed. Faith, faith, more faith, is needed by the ministry to-day more than anything else.

THE WRITER'S EXPERIENCE

"When the Son of Man cometh, will he find faith upon the earth?" More in regret than boasting, the writer states that he spent three years in college and the latter year studied one lesson in theology each day. But now the whole thing looks so insignificant and crude, compared with the power of faith, that he feels more like repenting of his little learning and unreservedly taking hold upon God.

What minister does not pray for liberty of speech and illumination of intellect? Where does he receive it? Not from books. Only when void of faith, and bereft of the Spirit, does he fall back on what he has read in books. But his efforts then are only entertaining. Such men do not reach the heart. Power with God is the principal need of learned and unlearned. There is really not much difference in God's sight. The man with faith is the favorite with God, whether trained or untrained in the ruts of men.

VALUE OF DIAMOND NOT ALL IN POLISH

A more powerful and divine vocabulary is a very necessary qualification to most of our ministry. Great truths can of course be expressed in ungrammatical language. One should not miss the truth for the sake of the language. It may be "a diamond in the rough." But how much more brilliant when accompanied by the scintillating influences of God, and in proper language. We should not forget that the value is in the diamond and not in the polish.

Let us not forget the greater things, and wander after the lure. Pure gold may glitter, but all gold does not glitter. The value is in the gold and not in the shine. We should admire the shine of course, but the real thing is the intrinsic value. Heretofore many of our unpolished ministry have put to flight and shame the worldly wise, but more complete would have been their victory if they themselves had been divinely polished instruments. But great care must be exercised in polishing God's truths and the men he has called to deliver them, lest the truth be distorted to fit the wisdom of the world, and the polished shaft be too thinly ground to stand the strain.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the vices of the world." Many a noble soul has been differentiated from his fellows by a little book learning. The sorrows of others no longer engage his attention. As a religious duty he may condescend to visit the sick and afflicted of his own class, but often feels he is descending from a higher plane to commiserate those below. From reading a few books too often many feel exalted. Everyone but themselves know this to be true. The writer knows it to be true. He had his home in a college town, and during that time sickness invaded his home and death looked in at the door. And although living on the road to the college, not a student (except special friends) and not a professor offered assistance. Nor is he aware of any past graduate of either sex that called, except by phone. The pure and undefiled religionists were among a humbler class. Care should be taken not to develop this class among us. Not all are of this class, but learning has a greater tendency to exalt than to humble as one has said, "the book worm." Shall we then educate the ministry? Certainly, but let us first instill such a faith in God and his church, in their hearts that a little reading of books, and reciting of lessons, will not differentiate them from others. Better have a diamond in the rough than a useless cut glass article too delicate for service.

The men whom God has really called are all diamonds, some in the rough and others the more highly polished of men. When God polishes his men the work is complete. When man does it, sometimes the diamond is chipped and ruined. God's school is best for the ministry—the school of the prophets. But let us not forget that the diamond is the real thing; the polish matters but little.

I am sorry that so many are lured and dazzled by the polish. From those of their own polish and kind, they choose their associates. With them they do their visiting, and with them they feel at home. To the polished class they go for counsel. The humbler class are a bore to them. I wonder how Zion is to become one, in that way. Which class are the real friends of God? Were they all polished diamonds it would not matter so much, but everyone knows that much of the polish does not hide a diamond beneath. A heart that can be differentiated from his fellows, which disregards the poor and needy, and does not feel at home with the meek, is by no means a diamond. The cripple in mind and heart needs even more of our sympathy and help than those crippled in limb. Neither one should be neglected. The true minister must be "humble and full of love, having faith, hope and charity." (Doctrine and Covenants 11:4.) Whether he be educated in the lore of men or whether he be trained of the Spirit of God, if he lack these things he is a failure. By experience and observation I know that the education of the world has the opposite tendency.

A SUMMARY OF THE NEEDS OF THE MINISTRY

Summing up the needs of the ministry in their order, as I see them, I would say:

1. Find a true man, or rather let God find a true man, for he alone knows the heart, whether educated in the ruts of men or not. One who is full of love for all men, and who really makes no distinction among men, who would as soon associate with the lowly as with any others, and who counts as his friends the poor as well as the rich, who sees the diamond or the lead behind the polish, and who knows and admires a diamond in the rough, as well as others.

2. Let him then get a thorough knowledge and understanding of the books and history of the church, being careful of hobbies and new theories, letting each have its proper bearing on the others.

3. Unbounded faith in God and his word, having an unbreakable grip on the powers above, so as to catch and utilize the messages from heaven, for the good of others.

4. A knowledge of the operation of man's spirit within him. Not psychology which makes the nervous force the real man, but the spirit that utilizes the nervous system. Not the brain, but that which controls it. The thing that is dormant in sleep and absent in death. Not mind, but spirit. We should study that. "Man, know thyself," and knowing thyself learn to know others.

5. A knowledge of the operations of God's Spirit on the spirits of men, and also on his physical being, and all things animate and inanimate.

6. A knowledge of the subtle influences of evil on man, both spiritual and physical. This will include popular opinion, fascination, and infatuation. The diverse spirits operating in the various churches, societies, schools, communities, cities and nations. This is very important so as to resist the almost superhuman drawing and fascination one feels in schools and societies. This subtle influence more than anything else draws so many of our young into the ways of the world and of evil. The writer had some experience with this force while at school. Glad I am of our Graceland, free from these evil influences. More glad would I be, if we had our own textbooks.

7. A knowledge of archæology, and especially that of America; to support the Book of Mormon claims.

8. Ancient history; to support Bible history.

9. Modern and current history to support the books of the church and for general and particular knowledge and information.

10. Logic and law; so as to determine the value of evidence; taking God into the account as to his value of evidence. The logic of Christ may differ from that of men.

11. A knowledge of comparative religions, getting the good out of all, and getting proof of the antiquity, origin and unchangeability of our own. It will not hurt any man's religion to correctly understand that of another unless his own be of that kind that will not bear comparison.

12. A study of sociology, so as properly to adjust ourselves to the social conditions confronting us, and more properly to adjust our own. Perhaps I had better say more properly adjusting ourselves. God's way needs no adjusting, but we need it.

13. A study of languages—especially our own. The reasons are so many and so obvious that I need not mention them here.

14. Science will be of some worth but it will need some sifting first. Men who know only in part cannot give us full scientific truths.

15. Arts will be useful, especially music and drawing.

NEED OF SPIRITUAL FOUNDATION

There is danger in a worldly education without a proper spiritual foundation, a thorough knowledge of the gospel and an implicit faith in God's word. God himself has given us the warning. We should heed it. Hear what he says:

O that cunning plan of the Evil One! O the vainness and frailties and the foolishness of men. When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the councils of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves, wherefore their wisdom is foolishness, and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish. But to be learned is good, if they hearken unto the councils of God.

Again:

Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.—1 Corinthians 3: 18-20.

Another:

Thus saith the Lord: Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord.—Jeremiah 17: 5.

Yet again:

And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom but in the demonstration of the Spirit and of power: that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God. Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect; yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to naught; but we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom which God ordained before the world unto our glory. . . . Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth.—1 Corinthians 2: 4-7, 13.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways, my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.—Isaiah 55: 8, 9.

I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people; yea, a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise and learned shall perish, and the understanding of the prudent shall be hid.—Isaiah 29: 26, I. T.

This text refers especially to the angel's message in which we are engaged. Let us not miss our calling and seek to "turn things upside down" and "say of him that made it, He made me not." But let us "tarry until we are endowed with power from on high" and then say we be "witness even unto the uttermost parts of the earth." (Acts 1: 4-8.)

Again I say, hearken ye elders of my church whom I have appointed: ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach the children of men the things which I have put into your hands by the power of my spirit; and ye are to be taught from on high. Sanctify yourselves and ye shall be endowed with power, that ye may give even as I have spoken.—Doctrine and Covenants 43: 4.

Therefore, in consequence of the transgression of my people, it is expedient in me that mine elders should wait for a little season for the redemption of Zion, that they themselves may be prepared, and that my people might be taught more perfectly, and have experience, and know more perfectly, concerning their duty, and the things which I require at their hands; and this cannot be brought to pass until mine elders are endowed with power from on high: for, behold, I have prepared a great endowment and blessing to be poured out upon them, inasmuch as they are faithful, and continue in humility before me. . . . And it shall be manifest unto my servant, by the voice of the Spirit, those that are chosen, and they shall be sanctified; and inasmuch as they follow the counsel which they receive, they shall have power after many days to accomplish all things pertaining to Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 3, 10.

We plead for that endowment; we plead for the school of the prophets to prepare us for it. The wisdom of this world is a poor substitute, in fact is hardly an excuse.

May we not all labor to bring about the conditions that God desires and not be so eager concerning the ways of men?

Everything in its proper place. God first. His way before all. "Intelligence is" truly "the glory of God," but it is not intelligent to seek some other way to build up Zion and to prepare the ministry. That would be foolishness instead.

"God over all," is my motto.

IOANE.

* * * * *

REWARD ACCORDING TO WORKS

(A sermon by E. F. Robertson. Delivered at Pleasanton, Iowa, July 16, 1916.)

"Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

DETERMINING OUR ETERNAL CONDITION

If I am able to do to-night what it is my most earnest desire to do, I shall impress upon the minds of all my hearers the fact that the things we do from day to day are important factors in determining what our eternal condition will be, but before proceeding with my argument I wish to call your attention to a few texts of scripture, as I wish all my positions to be firmly grounded in the word of truth.

First, I cite you to the words of Solomon, he who desired of the Lord wisdom. He says: "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes, but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment." This is found in the eleventh chapter of Ecclesiastes and ninth verse. In the twelfth chapter and fourteenth verse we read, "For God will bring every work into judgment, with secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil."

DEATHBED REPENTANCE

It is my purpose, to-night, to combat an idea that is often preached, and which, in my opinion, is responsible for many young men, and perhaps older ones, continuing in sin, namely, the doctrine of deathbed repentance, the theory that one who has spent the days of his strength in sowing to the flesh, and in the enjoyment of carnal pleasure, may, at the last, when his spirit is leaving the body, defeat the claims of justice by professing repentance and faith on the Lord Jesus Christ and be wafted away to the abode of the eternally blessed.

I may say that this line of thought has been called up at this time by a funeral sermon I heard, near here, a few days ago. I had been told that the minister on this occasion would have an undesirable task, as the deceased person had been a man who had gloried in his unbelief and boasted of the immoralities of which he had been guilty. However, the minister told us that a very short time before the dissolution the man had said that he was ready to go, and that he was not afraid. This minister said the man's case had been appealed to the highest court of the universe, the court of God's mercy, his sins had been forgiven, and long before the funeral rites were celebrated over his mortal body his soul had been received into the mansions that Jesus had gone to prepare, and that he is now sitting with Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the redeemed of all ages, in the kingdom of God.

I don't believe that, friends, for my text tells me that God is not mocked, that a man must reap what he has sown. If he has sown to the flesh only, he must reap corruption only.

Young man, remember, you may walk in the ways of your heart, and in the sight of your eyes, but God will bring you into judgment. But, you ask me, if I repent of my sins later in life, will not God forgive me, and will not the sins then become as though they had never been? I answer, God may forgive sinners upon the terms of the gospel, but that does not make the sins as though they had not been.

SOME HUMAN EXPERIENCES

I appeal to human experience as evidence. Behold the mother, who night after night has been deprived of sleep, whose mind has been filled with apprehension, and whose soul has been wrung with anguish because you were away on some wild spree. Her hair has whitened, her form become decrepit, her eye dim, and she is much nearer the grave than she would have been. Does the light of life return to her eyes or the roses of health bloom on her cheek because you have become a better man? Perhaps she went down to her grave in sorrow and with a broken heart before your eyes were opened. Does your final repentance make those death struggles any easier?

The young girl that has been wronged, is her virtue restored, does she regain her good name and the purity of innocence and is she relieved of the awful blight put upon her life because the guilty one sees the folly of his way?

If you are the guilty one your own health is broken, your appetite debased, and the passions of your body abnormally developed. Do you recover all you have lost because you have repented?

I have in mind at the present moment, a man whom I have known since my boyhood. He is now living a noble, Christian life, but he bears on his face a disfiguring scar (will carry it to his grave) that he received in a drunken fight. He will be disfigured all his days because repenting of sin and being forgiven does not undo the sin nor make it as though it had not been.

My attention has been called to the prodigal son as an example of the great mercy of God in making our sins as though they had not been. Let us examine the case and see.

TWO SONS

Briefly stated, the story runs thus, A certain man was the father of two sons, the younger one being inclined to enjoy the pleasures of the world. He goes to his father, asks for, and receives his patrimony (his lawful share of the estate), and with it goes away to a far country where he spends it with harlots and lewd companions. Being reduced to necessity he joins himself to a man of that country, as a servant, and attends to the swine. When so hungry that he fain would eat husks with the swine, he comes to himself and says, "I will return to my father's house and say, 'Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no longer worthy to be called thy son, make me as one of thy hired servants.'"

The father, who is a type of our heavenly Father, sees him while he is yet a great way off, rushes out to meet him, falls on his neck and kisses him, calls for the servants, tells them to put the best robe upon him, and a ring on his finger, to bring the fatted calf and slay it and make a great feast. Now, if his sins had become as though they had never been, his patrimony would be restored; he would become an heir of his father upon the same terms as his elder brother who had continued in faithful service through all the years. But you will notice that when the elder brother returned in the midst of the merrymaking and reminded the father that he had divided the estate with this boy, who had spent his money with harlots, the father replied, "Son, thou art always with me, and all that I have is thine." He adds that it was meet that they make merry because the other son, who was dead was alive again, but that did not change the fact that he had wasted his patrimony, and it was gone. He was his father's son, but a penniless son, and while the father could manifest his love by rejoicing over his return, and show his mercy by putting the best robe and gold ring upon him, he could show his justice only by saying to the other son, as he did say, "All that I have is thine."

It is good for us to contemplate the love and mercy of God, but we should also consider his justice and his law. The natural, logical, lawful, and just consequences of his prodigality were still remaining upon the younger son. As I said before, justice rendered him penniless, hence his father could not give him that which according to justice and law belonged to his brother, though he could love him and be merciful to him.

Let us not forget that God will never dishonor his own laws, and one of the fixed, immutable, unchangeable laws emanating from him is stated in our text, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

WE REAP AS WE SOW

All our human experience teaches us that this is true. It would be folly for me to spend my time trying to convince you that we always reap the same kind of seed in a natural way that we sow. If I were to tell you that you could sow oats and reap wheat, you would think me insane. Am I not equally justified in questioning the sanity of the man who tells me I can scatter "wild oats" with a lavish hand, and by a few words of repentance at the harvest time change the nature of my crop, and reap the grain that will make the bread of eternal happiness?

Jesus says, "Men do not gather grapes from thorns, nor figs from thistles," neither does man gather fruit from the tree of life, when he has sown only the seed of death. Paul tells us that the wages of sin is death.

I am quite prepared to believe that God will give to the man who repents on his deathbed, or even afterward in the prison house, all that love and mercy can give consistently with justice and law.

MORE THAN TWO CONDITIONS

A thought which enters in here, and is perhaps the basis for a great deal of misunderstanding along this line, is the idea, held by so many, that there is but one condition in heaven or hell, but one degree of reward for the righteous and one degree of punishment for the wicked.

The fact that God can exercise mercy toward the unfortunate to whom justice bars the doors of the celestial kingdom cannot be allowed by those who believe in this doctrine, and they cannot admit that those who make a belated claim upon the mercy of God before leaving the present world can fail in any degree to receive the highest reward within the gift of God.

This is a doctrine that I want to hit, and hit hard. I wish I could give it a blow that would be fatal to it in the minds of all my hearers. It flatly contradicts the language of my text, it holds out the hope of eternal life and glory following a life of sin, it extends the hope of defeating justice, mocking the unchangeable God, and placing upon the head of the libertine and the blasphemer the crown of the martyr.

I do not believe—I cannot believe it, because it contradicts my very conception of justice and right.

The whole universe denies any such doctrine; my intelligence denies it, and this sacred volume I hold in my hand denies it unmistakably.

DIVERSITY EVERYWHERE

As I look upwards to heaven I see the king of day flooding the world with his own glorious light, the queen of night reflecting her borrowed radiance, or the countless stars, no two of which are exactly alike in glory, and I see diversity. Turning my gaze to the lower atmosphere, I see the little insect, so small as to be scarcely visible to the naked eye, and the great eagle whose outspread wings shut out for a moment my view of the sun, I see diversity. Turning to what we sometimes call the crowning work of God; man, I find him in the darkest depths of benighted Africa, unclothed, uncultured, ignorant and ugly, using a club or undressed stone for a weapon, or I see him in the busy marts of civilization, digging in the sewer, sailing in the airship, teaching in the university. Everywhere I see diversity—difference in glory.

Turning from my contemplation of the work of God to what I have accepted as the word of God, I read, "There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars, and as one star differs from another star in glory, so also is the resurrection of the dead."

That there will be diversity enough in the rewards and punishments meted out to fit the case of every man the following scriptures attest.

And, behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.—Revelation 22: 12.

And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God, and the books were opened, and another book was opened, which was the book of life, and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.—Revelation 21: 12.

For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works.—Matthew 16: 27.

Who will render to every man according to his deeds.

It will be noticed that the New Testament nowhere promises judgment according to what a man believes, nor according to what he professes, but according to his deeds.—Romans 2: 6.

SALVATION BY GRACE

In this connection let us pay a little attention to the doctrine of salvation by grace without works. With this, as with most every other doctrine advanced by the varying orders of Christendom, there is a true and false idea presented. The false idea is that a man's works do not enter into the accounting at the day of judgment at all, that he is saved through the merits of Christ alone, regardless of what he had done or failed to do.

The true doctrine is that man was absolutely unable to conquer the grave or attain to immortality. The resurrection was obtained for him by the grace of God, and eternal life is God's free gift to him through Jesus Christ. Inasmuch as no condition of glory beyond the present life could have been attained by man without this free and unconditional gift as a foundation, Paul truly tells us that it is by grace and not our works. But he also tells us to be careful how we build upon that foundation, for our works will be taken into account in determining to what extent we shall be permitted to enjoy the free gift.

Turn with me to the third chapter of 1 Corinthians, and we will read, "Let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon." He then explains how that while some are building upon it with gold, silver, and precious stones, others are building with hay, wood, and stubble. You may not say because you do not feel that you want to build upon Christ that you will not do so. Christ has done an effective work for you, free of all charge, has laid a foundation upon which you must build, you are left to choose the material with which you build. If all your building is consumed the foundation remains. So he says in the fourteenth and fifteenth verses, "If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss, but he, himself, shall be saved, yet so as by fire."

UNFIT WORKS TO BE BURNED

My friend, if your works are not fit to remain they must be burned, and if they are burned you will suffer loss, though you may yourself be saved to that glory which God's mercy and love can give you through the free gift. If your works are worthy to remain you get as much through the free gift, and through God's mercy and love, and all besides to which your works entitle you.

If you are a sinner now, if your works are corrupt, the best thing you can hope for is to have them burned, and here let me offer a suggestion. Why not proceed to burn the unprofitable work yourself? "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment, some men's sins, they follow after." I believe the man who has contracted a bad habit and overcome it is under condemnation. I once knew a man who had for many years been addicted to the use of tobacco, who on examining himself thought he had found something that ought to be burned. He had burned lots of tobacco, but he wanted now to burn something else, and found this quite a different proposition. He resolved to burn the habit. He asked God to forgive him for acquiring the habit but thought he could not expect forgiveness until he had abandoned it. He learned that after he gave it up and obtained pardon, that he was not just the same as the man who had never used it, for he had a depraved appetite that craved the weed and for months he had to struggle continually against a yearning desire that the man who had always been clean knew nothing of.

LOSS OF TIME IN SIN

Another thought that I want to call your attention to is the time that is lost in sin. Though you may be forgiven you have not the time returned. The opportunities for doing good that have been unimproved have gone never to return, the building you have erected will be burned and there is not time to build another.

A certain man had two sons whom he sent out onto his farm to work, promising to pay to each of them thirty dollars a month. Both labored and one drew each month the sum of forty dollars, running himself in debt to his father to the extent of ten dollars, the other drew each month the sum of twenty dollars, leaving his father owing him ten dollars.

A final settlement is at last to be made, and the first comes to his father and says, Father, I have been very unwise, have lived beyond my means, have wasted your money, and now I am owing you five hundred dollars which I cannot pay. The father is moved by the grief of the son and freely forgives him the entire amount. The second son comes and claims the five hundred dollars that remains unpaid of his wages together with the accumulated interest thereon. He goes away with a little more than he would have received had he gotten all that he had earned as fast as he earned it, and his brother goes his way penniless, yet the father has been very kind and merciful to the one and absolutely just with the other.

My friend, which condition do you prefer? Your works must determine it, for if you live in sin to the day of your death and then cry to God for forgiveness, though you may be saved from death, redeemed from the grave, and endowed with immortality, your works will be burned—you will suffer loss.

"Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Zion means a life, not an argument; a reality, not a theory; a character, not a profession.—J. E. Vanderwood.

Greatness is the aggregation of minuteness; nor can its sublimity be felt truthfully by any mind unaccustomed to the affectionate watching of what is least.—Ruskin.

Of General Interest

A BLUNDER OF THE CHURCH

The pastor of the church one morning, received a call from the chairman of his board of trustees. No one ever told the details of that interview, but the substance of it was that the minister was told that the church would prosper more rapidly under the ministry of a younger man. The pastor was sixty years old—"too old," he was told, to continue and "hold the church together." He had served the church for nearly forty years: had given the best years of his life to its upbuilding and to the ministrations of its people: he had married its young; baptized its children; had soothed the last hours of those who had passed away, had laid them to rest and had said the last words over them. And now he was "too old" to do any of these things, and a younger man must take his place.

Of course there is nothing for such a servant of the community to do but to accept the inevitable, and this the minister did. The announcement was shortly made that "our beloved pastor felt compelled to relinquish his work after nearly forty years of tireless, self-denying and successful ministry in the church which his own efforts had built." Then there was a farewell sermon at which all the women of the church wept and the men looked at the ceiling. A "largely attended" reception was given the minister and his wife, the board of trustees made up a purse (there was seven hundred dollars in it) and presented to "their beloved pastor a suitably engrossed and illuminated address." And with these "suitable offerings of affection," so the local paper said, "the beloved minister" retired, and a younger man took his place.

In short the minister, after a lifetime of service, was thrown on the scrap heap—with seven hundred dollars in his pocket and an illuminated address. Oh, yes, of course he could ask for "clergy relief," and receive the pittance that would be coming to him. But has it ever occurred to many of us that a clergyman has quite as much self-respect as a man in any other profession, and that these "clergy reliefs"—simply another name for doles of charity—do not appeal to a man, that his self-respect will not allow him to ask for them, and that, even if he does ask, they are absolutely inadequate for the most moderate support of even an old man and his wife? And so this servant of man and of God went the way of hundreds of others of his cloth.

A little sequel to this story—it is a true one—is very important and very significant: This man had a youngest son who was at college and was just entering the seminary to take a theological education and become a minister like unto his father. He came home to attend the farewell reception, and at its close he went with his father into his study and, throwing his arms around his father's neck, said: "Dad, this is rotten! I know now what the ministerial scrap heap means. My decision to be a minister is off from this day! I am for a job where I can hood my rights and ask no favors, and where at sixty I'll have a competence."

The father demurred, but the son was obdurate. He went back to college, changed his course, was graduated as the most brilliant scholar that Yale had seen in three decades, and is to-day one of the most respected and successful professional men in the United States.

The church lost a man—something that it needs more than it does anything else. And it will go on losing men until the average layman wakes up and sees the responsibility of the church to take care of its old clergymen as business houses are taking care of their employees.

A little business welfare would help the church!—Editorial in Ladies' Home Journal for November, 1916.

* * * * *

ANCIENT MAYA CIVILIZATION

That a civilization which compared very favorably to that of Europe and Asia flourished in America before the coming of the white man is the opinion of Doctor Sylvanus G. Morley, who has been studying the old Maya civilization of Central America under the auspices of the Carnegie Institute of Washington.

Doctor Morley spent three months in Guatemala this year, and expects to return to Central America as soon as political conditions there enable him to carry on his work again.

He said:

In our studies of the early American civilization we have to decipher the hieroglyphics left on tombs and monuments which we have unearthed. The Mayas had a custom of building historical monuments every five years, on which they wrote the story of the past five years in hieroglyphics. We have found a number of these monuments, and have charted them in their chronological order.

In the course of time we expect to have practically all of the Maya history worked out. A number of monuments have not yet been located, and still others located have not been deciphered. The monuments were once the centers of plazas in Maya towns.

The Maya civilization flourished during the first fifteen hundred years of the Christian era. It was in its last stage at the time that Columbus discovered America, though it is doubtful if white men ever encountered civilized Mayas. The Mayas were followed by the Aztecs of Mexico, who made use of many accomplishments of the Mayas. However, the Aztecs and the Inca Indians never attained the wealth nor civilization of the Mayas.

The present Indians of Guatemala are descendants of the Mayas, though there is no trace of the former civilization. The Central American Indians are an ignorant lot, from our point of view. They are peaceful in their agricultural pursuits, and we do not have trouble with them in our research work.

Doctor Morley expects to return to Central America about the first of the year to begin work unearthing the story of this ancient civilization, the record of which at best is very poor compared to European records, but bespeaks great wealth, political development, and a certain amount of culture on the part of the early American peoples.

Doctor Morley is a Harvard graduate and carried on research work for a number of years under the auspices of the American Archaeological Association. During the last four years he has been representative of the Carnegie Institute in Central America and southern Mexico. While at Stanford he was the guest of Professor H. R. Fairclough of the Latin department.—San Francisco Examiner, September 23, 1916.

The Staff

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

Our Chorister's Message

Hardly a day goes by but what the mails bring messages from near and far of earnest activities of our choirs and jots concerning individual consecration. We rejoice with those who discover the same possibilities and are meriting the many blessings that come with our peculiar service.

My fall message to the musical fraternity has indeed been a subject of much consideration. We are but beginning to build the foundations of the choir movement. It should be one of the great pillars of the church. A reliable and sturdy institution, a dependable unit devoted to the service of mankind.

How well we realize that this means individual consecration—personal application, hard, industrious work, and absolute consecration to our church and our art. Our institution can become stronger only as we ourselves develop and throw the results of the additional power into our work. In other words, let us not be satisfied with the amount of knowledge we have acquired—and the things accomplished in the past—but go forward. To go forward means planning, and much planning at that. I have always made it a practice to build my air castles in the summer or perhaps it is better to say, plan my yearly work when things are not so strenuous, then when fall comes I am prepared to present a very definite program.

Nothing successful is accomplished that is not planned. What a crude collection of buildings we would have if we just built them as we went along. To-day we cannot build dwellings, massive structures, bridges, boats and a thousand other things but what our plans must be drawn and submitted to close scrutiny before a foundation is even started.

If you would be successful plan your work Mr. Chorister, don't say to your choir: "What shall we sing?"—that is for you to decide. Plan that ahead of time. Then again, how often we have seen choir leaders stop their rehearsals and announce, "Something is wrong; we will start over again." That is not the way to correct a mistake. Be absolutely familiar with the four parts; and if a section is in error you will after a little experience detect which one—and a little work-out will correct the trouble. Know your music, for how can you teach it unless you do?

I cannot advocate too strongly the thought of study and research. Unless we specialize, our powers of attracting and holding are few and far between; but if we are masters, if we have something worth while to impart, then we will not lack for efficient workers. But remember that you must always be the master of the situation—and knowledge is the key. Of course this applies to the individual chorus member as well. If you have the opportunity to study and improve your talents, do so, that the service you are rendering will be efficient.

This summer I received a letter from one of my bass singers who wanted to know what oratorio we were taking up this fall, as he wished to anticipate the rehearsals and thereby become a help to me in his section. I sent him a copy of "Elijah" with my personal compliments, at the same time writing him that it was one of the most pleasant incidents that had come to me for many a day.

Rehearsals would never be a bore if the individual choir member would take his work more seriously and devote some time at home in working out carefully some of the perplexing situations. I am urging everybody to buy their own oratorio books, for I have learned by experience how valuable the personal copies become through constant associations. A member of a New York choral society who sang with us at one of our performances brought to my attention his copy that he has used for twenty-six years, and a careful record was kept of every occasion in which it was used. That book is a priceless possession. Incidentally it was a splendid recommendation to me that he was eligible for service. I might add, too, that he seldom referred to his book during our rendition. Are you as willing to be of real service and true worth?

Thus my strong personal appeal again this year is, Become efficient workers by carefully planning your work and studying it until you know it and can impart your knowledge quickly and effectively to those who are willing to listen if you have a message.

ALBERT N. HOXIE.

Our Choir at San Francisco

I was asked to write an article for this institute and thought you might like to hear of some of the problems and obstacles our choir has met and overcome.

All who have had anything to do with a volunteer choir know that difficulties are bound to arise, as they haven't the impetus of a salary and so have to be kept together entirely by their love of music and their desire to help in the work. To do this the choir must necessarily be made instructive, as it is usually easy to keep people interested when they feel that they are learning.

As a people we are inclined to think that we are conferring an honor on the church by belonging to the choir, but my idea is that the choirs of the church could be brought up to such a high standard that people will feel it an honor to belong to them.

One of the first difficulties we encountered this year was lack of suitable music. We had in our library an odd collection of anthem books, only a few of a kind. This came about by each one buying his own books and then moving away or losing them. We took this matter up at business meeting and asked that the branch buy the music and thus remedy the difficulty. We were surprised at the willingness shown in granting our request. They gave us money to subscribe for the Choir Leader, a magazine that comes monthly and is admirably adapted to our needs. We find that new music coming regularly is a great factor in maintaining interest.

We had been in the habit of going down into the audience after the anthem to listen to the sermon, as some said they couldn't enjoy a sermon as well if they couldn't see the preacher's face. After talking this over and putting it to a vote, as we always do matters of interest, we decided to make this little sacrifice and thus do away with a certain amount of confusion.

The next question that came up was about using the baton during church services. We took a vote and the majority ruled that it be used. About that time Brother Pitt's article came out in The Staff, and after reading to them the part about the use of the baton they decided to see if they could get the time established in their minds during rehearsals. They soon proved that they could rely on themselves.

Regularity of rehearsals is one of the most important items in choir work, as we have often heard people say, "I guess I will not go to rehearsal as they may not have one to-night." So we have made a resolution that we would have a rehearsal every Wednesday night after prayer meeting (this being chosen as the most practical time for us) even if there were only two present, which, I am glad to say, has never occurred.

For a time we seemed to have difficulty about the interludes in the hymns. We tried to make a set rule but it seemed that some one would forget and start singing without waiting for the organ, so we adopted the plan of just making a slight pause after each verse and find it much more satisfactory. These things may seem trivial and unimportant but they help a great deal in making a service reverent and dignified.

We have a program of the service in large print in view of the choir so that they may know what is coming next and have their places found and know how many verses of each hymn to sing. We also have lists for organist and pulpit of typewritten cards.

We have all our music numbered and each one is responsible for the music of his number. We also have a librarian appointed to look after the music and have it distributed and collected at each service.

We started a plan a few months ago which has proven very interesting. There are twelve in our choir and the first of each month the chorister appoints two captains and they choose sides and an attendance record is kept of rehearsals and preaching services, and the side with the largest attendance at the end of the month wins. We have a special rehearsal the first Friday of every month to look over our new music and the losing side has to entertain. Besides trying over our new music we take up some instructive work. We generally read short articles pertaining to our work, extracts from The Staff, etc. One evening we played a game like a spelling bee, only instead of common words we used words found in music. Lately we have started lessons in musical terms, their pronunciation and meaning, which have proven helpful to all of us. This winter Miss Waller, our organist, is to give us the benefit of her years of study by preparing lessons for us in sight reading and harmony.

If we were asked to choose one thing which has been of the most help to us in our choir, I am sure we would all unite in saying that it is the words of earnest prayer with which we open each rehearsal, for our heavenly Father's help and guidance.

LILLIAN EWING, Chorister.

The 1917 Anthem Series

The greater portion of the music for use at the next General Conference by the combined choirs has been selected, and the remaining numbers will be in hand and decided upon by the time this notice appears in The Staff.

Owing to the peculiar conditions existing in the trades that would necessarily handle the setting up and binding the series in book form as heretofore, we are not going to follow our usual procedure. Therefore the selections will be obtainable in octave form, only!

We are in a position to suggest to the smaller choirs music suitable for grades 1 and 2. As we are anxious to be in close touch with all choristers who are using the course prescribed by the general choir movement, we suggest and urge that all inquiries relative to this part of the work be sent directly to us as per address below. Do not address such requests for information to the editor of The Staff, please, as she must in turn forward the communication to us, and thereby cause delay to you.

The musical events of the combined forces at the 1917 conference we hope will not fall behind those of last year in interest, though they will be of a different character. The magnificent rendition of the "Messiah" at Independence was our crowning effort, and we review the experience with satisfaction and pride, and a hearty wish that we might some time repeat the performance with equal success. However, the progress made by our orchestral movement, prompts us to plan something for next spring in which they may participate. We are gratified to know that Lamoni and its vicinity have organized, and will sustain, unit orchestras of our national association, which is developing into a department extraordinary of our general choir movement under the able direction of that ardent worker, Brother Arthur Mills, of Independence. One of the musical thrills of the last conference was the rendition of "Gloria," from Farmer's Mass in B-flat, when the big choir of one hundred and seventy-five voices was accompanied by the orchestra of thirty-five pieces, the pipe organ, and two piano's.

So we have deemed it advisable to plan our work for next spring in such a way as to stimulate and give impetus to this orchestral feature. They should be able to do solo work as well as accompanying, and we are arranging a program which will include both features. Let us hope that ere long our national orchestra will be able to handle the oratorio work, the preparation of which will be most inspiring to both musicians and singers. Let us all keep this great goal in view, and qualify and prepare for some wonderful experiences in the future.

Watch for the announcements of the special numbers to be given, and lose no time in supplying yourself, your choirs and your orchestras with copies of the same, that we may look forward with unprecedented eagerness of anticipation to the efforts of 1917. What say? "All in favor"—

ALBERT N. HOXIE.

NEW YORK CITY, 173 Madison Avenue.

News from Our Orchestras

The orchestra spirit is truly of the "drouth resisting" variety, for it has thrived in spite of the intense heat of the summer that has passed. We have received correspondence from various points over the church showing genuine interest and a desire to develop.

Since our last report the writer, as general director, has done some traveling in the interest of the movement. First, Knobnoster, Missouri, was visited and the musicians there, who are rallying around the leadership of Brother Erwin Moorman, were encouraged and advised as to the future and its possibilities. On our return home we stopped and again visited the Holden, Missouri, orchestra, which is certainly very much alive.

On August 12, we went, under the invitation of Brother Frank G. Hedrick, the president of the branch, to Fanning, Kansas, and represented the orchestra work before the conventions and conference of the Northeastern Kansas District. These Saints are receptive and progressive to a large degree and the musicians of this thrifty rural community have within them the "yeast of success"; and they contemplate a scheme of real development.

On August 18 we visited the reunion at Rich Hill, Missouri, and were given ample opportunity to place the work and ideals of the orchestral movement before the Saints.

And now comes August 25, which finds us on the reunion grounds at Stewartsville, Missouri, where the Saints of the Far West District were assembled. On the morning of the 26th, under the big canvas tent, we presented, with the best of liberty, the work of the orchestral movement to a large audience. Also, from the material already on the grounds we organized quite a good, little orchestra, which gave good service in the accompanying of the congregation during the balance of our stay at this reunion. The reunion is the place where the value of the orchestra is best seen, perhaps.

There are the makings, of several good local orchestras in the branches of this fine district. Stewartsville in particular has the material already at hand for the formation of a first-class organization and we are glad to learn "just as we go to press" that they are making the start.

Once more as to Holden, Missouri. We visited them just a month later than the time of our first mention in this report, and were surprised at the real progress made. Also report from the recent stake conference there tells of the excellent and greatly enjoyed service rendered by them at some of the sessions.

Other items, as yet minor in their character, give promise of progress and development in many places.

ARTHUR H. MILLS.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, 1514 West Short Street.

Just a Phone Message

Hello, Mrs. Editor! May I talk with the Church of Jesus Christ? Hello, Saints! Do you hear the music? Well it has been said that music sounds good on water, but this is not on water—it is at Coldwater! In spite of the "cold weather" our late conference at "Coldwater" was one of the best.

New feautres call for more work, and more work brings greater happiness. Listen, ye Hoosiers and Michiganders: Add another day to our confidence. What is the excitement about? Don't call it excitement, but "enthusiasm." Thank you, that's better. You know that activity inspires activity. Our district chorister, Sister Louise Evans, is active. She travels throughout the district. In an epistle written by her to the branch choristers she refers to the general movement inaugurated in 1912 at our world's conference and says, "This movement was motivated by a desire to coordinate the work of various local choirs to make possible better choral and congregational singing at conference and conventions, district and general."

Sunday, the closing day of conference, was crowded with services, but the musical institute modestly began its program in the late afternoon, after a preaching service. It was a new feature for our district, but was hailed with enthusiasm. Quartets, choruses, and many splendid, short, spicy papers and speeches caused the audience to forget their weariness.

Sister Audentia Anderson and Brother E. C. Bell and T. J. Elliott of Saint Louis sent papers that were appreciated by all. And the work of the "home talent," if you please, was enjoyed.

Every countenance from the audience offered encouragement. Many lips gave praise. (In fact that was the harmonious spirit of the whole convention and conference.)

Would like to tell you all about the spiritual feast enjoyed from the opening of the convention to the closing moment of conference, but I must "ring off!"

A rivederci,

O. R. MILLER.

(A rivederci [Greek]: Adieu, until we meet again.)

GALIEN, MICHIGAN, November 3.

The Children's Home

EDITED BY HEMAN C. SMITH AND CALLIE B. STEBBINS,
LAMONI, IOWA

Change of Superintendent

Another change has taken place in the home. Father and Mother Briggs, who took charge of the home November 4, 1915, resigned at the expiration of their one-year term, and on November 4, 1916, Father and Mother Goode, formerly in the Liberty Home, for the aged, were installed in their places, agreeing to stay until the regular trustees' meeting in April, 1917, at least. Father and Mother Briggs (E. D. and Alice) leave us with the best wishes of the board and of all the inmates and employees of the home and Father and Mother Goode (Joseph and Carrie) assume the duties of their positions with the entire confidence of all concerned.

Mother Briggs's health steadily declined under the burden of her duties and they will spend a year in visiting and recreation before settling down to business again. They then expect to return to their strawberry farm at Nebraska City, Nebraska. We hope that their interest in the success of our Children's Home will continue and we will receive their active support.

Father and Mother Goode were for many years well and favorably known in southwestern Iowa and in their few years residence in Lamoni have established a reputation that justifies the confidence reposed in them.

The home is financially in need of funds for current expenses, being behind in the payment of salaries of employees who need the means. This we feel sure will be met as soon as the Saints and friends realize the true situation. We are also in need of articles of furniture. The most urgent are a cooking range, as the one we have now fails to properly discharge its legitimate functions. This causes us much inconvenience and loss.

A musical instrument—piano or organ—is also much in demand, and would not only add to the proper education, but also to the pleasure of the children for whose pleasure and education we are responsible. Cannot some of our good friends arise to the emergency and supply the needed articles, while others respond to the current expense? The holidays are at hand, and while we remember those near to us, shall we not remember those needy ones who have no loving hands to minister to their wants in the day of cheer which should come to us all in this happy season?

The high cost of living is affecting us very materially, increasing our expenses very considerably, and we have no other resources only to appeal to the generous and kind who have never yet failed us.

Woman's Auxiliary

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

New Spirit and the Clubs

When women's clubs first began to ask the why of our modern civic ugliness and dirt, they appointed a committee upon beautifying the city and another upon civic betterment, and these duly waited upon the mayor and city council and leading business men. They were received politely, with more or less concealed amusement, and graciously granted permission to plant flowers around the bandstand and shrubs along the walks of the city square, or try to get a little grass to grow, in spite of soot and dogs and litter and cigar stubs, upon some of the open spaces down town, or along the parkings of the sidewalk coming up from the depot. They were even favorably listened to when they urged larger grounds and a finer building for the new high school, because it would be a good advertisement for the town and attract desirable new citizens to settle there.

But their timid requests for more ambitious and radical improvements, such as well-paved side streets and clean alleys and playgrounds and housing reform and factory sanitation were met by stern refusals, not unmixed with indignation. All those things cost money, and money meant taxes and burdens and restrictions upon big business. And if big business was too heavily loaded or restricted it couldn't run at a profit, and if shops couldn't run at a profit they'd have to shut down and everybody would be thrown out of employment, the stores would lose trade and the town would begin to run to seed. A town that was growing always had to be dirty, and it was necessary for progress that two thirds of the community should work hard and live in poor houses on dirty streets in order that the other third could live in nice houses on clean streets. It was all a matter of business and women didn't understand business anyway, and they ought to know when they were well off and be satisfied to let well enough alone and leave all that sort of questions to men.

But this answer didn't satisfy the women a little bit, nor did its logic convince them, although they were compelled to accept it for the time being. They talked the matter over among themselves again and calmly decided that if this was business then business had to be made over again and made different. Men might be able to stand it and even pretend that they liked it, as they did so many other things which were bad for them, but women simply couldn't and wouldn't stand it nor would they tolerate it for children, so something had to be done. Mr. George Bernard Shaw was perfectly right when he said that he was in favor of women coming into public life because they had "no business habits of mind" and were not accustomed to balancing human life and suffering against dollars and cents.

Already they have almost succeeded in achieving the impossible. They were promptly joined by a small but active group of men in the community, who were concerned with public health and housing reform and civic improvement and factory hygiene. These doctors and city beautifiers and park cranks had been struggling along for some decades against heavy odds and were not slow to discover what a tremendous force on the right side could be exercised by the organized sentiment and influence of the women of the community. The women's clubs were as eager for the opening as the health departments and civic welfare leagues were for their cooperation, and between them they have well-nigh revolutionized conditions already. It is not too much to say that a full half of the wonderful progress in improving public health and civilizing living and housing conditions and hours tolerable and human has been due to the energies and public spirit of the women's clubs of America. They still study literature and art and architecture and music as enthusiastically and far more thoroughly and effectively than before, but their great field of enthusiasm and interest lies in doing everything to make the city, the state and the world a healthier, happier place for children to live in and for the next generation of citizens to grow up in.

They have taken the world for their parish, and the class which has already been most benefited by their activities is those grown-up children which we call men.—Woods Hutchinson, in the Omaha Bee.

Home Will Always Be the Greatest Center for the Women of America

"Don't think the world's gone awry because a loaf of bread in the oven was burned. Set about quickly to make another loaf. Don't lose sight of the big work to be done by involving yourself in petty trifles. Develop the impersonal point of view and the ability to adjust yourself to conditions," advised Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles of Los Angeles, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who was lately the guest of Omaha club women. Speaking for the 2,500,000 club women she represents, the diminutive executive voiced the sentiment that home will always be the greatest center for women, no matter how much the trend of modern times seems to have taken her activities out of the home.

"Citizenship is an added responsibility women have to meet. It will be the policy of the federation for this term to unify and coordinate the forces of our big organization for the citizenship of the future."

Conservation of energy and resources is strongly advocated by the chief club women of the land.

Elimination of waste would go a great way in obviating the high cost of living, according to Mrs. Cowles.

"There is a great waste in every household every day in the item of bread alone," said Mrs. Cowles. "If bread will be ten cents a loaf in Omaha, it will be up to the housewife, to eliminate that waste. The influence of one's dress on other women should always be considered," she said. Setting an example of dressing in too showy a manner or above one's means should be avoided."

The Americanization of the immigrant and establishment of rural schools and teacherages are two of the big lines of work for the federation.

Mrs. Cowles was en route to the State federation meeting at Hastings, Nebraska, from a council meeting in Chicago, where the date of the next biennial was set. It will be held in Hot Springs, Arkansas, on the National Government Reserve, in May, 1918, while the council meeting to arrange for the big convention will be held in New Orleans, April 10-12, 1917. The reaction, the desire to meet in a smaller place after having met in New York City, was evident in the overwhelming vote to meet in Hot Springs, although Kansas City and Norfolk, Virginia, bid for the convention.—Omaha Bee.

Our Women at Work

LAMONI

Graceland College Patronesses.—The attendance at Graceland College is larger this year than ever before. This is inspiring to those who are working for its success, and the Graceland Patroness Society is working with the enthusiasm which has marked its service in the past to meet the demands of the present season. At one afternoon session they made eighteen sheets and twenty-eight pillowcases, the material being paid for from their treasury. Twelve table cloths are also among their donations.

The Bloomington local recently sent ten sheets, and Evergreen four. The auxiliary at Saint Louis donated a bolt of sheeting which will be made up by the Patronesses. The sisters in attendance at the Logan reunion furnished and made twenty-eight sheets and thirty-eight pillow cases. The Patronesses, having an oversight of the needs of the dormitories are especially interested in these contributions and thankful for them.

Patroness Hall, which includes the girls' dormitory and the dining hall, has been the largest recipient from the efforts of the society, but they have not been confined to it. The boys' dormitory, Marietta Hall, also the farm dormitory, which this year houses sixteen boys, have received each a portion of attention and supplies for some of their needs.

The society holds a monthly business meeting and usually a monthly social is provided by its entertainment committee. Light refreshments are served at these socials and ten cents is paid by each one present, whether member or invited guest. The last social was held in the evening and an interesting Halloween program was rendered.

On election day the Patronesses will serve dinner and supper to the public and will hold a sale of aprons and fancy-work.

One feature of the work of this society is the giving of scholarships to some of the worthy young people who desire to take a college course, whom the matter of expense might debar from so doing. The practice of giving one scholarship each year was begun early in the life of the society and in recent years two have been given annually. This year and last, the educational department also gave a scholarship.

THE DORCAS SOCIETY

A new element in the aid and service department of the Lamoni auxiliary is the Dorcas Society, which has joined our ranks since the stake reunion. This is a band of sisters who sew for the Children's Home. One afternoon each alternate week is given to this work. Several dressmakers are included in their number and they have given most acceptable service, especially in the making over of partly worn garments donated to the home from various sources.

THE EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT

The work in the classes of this department was discontinued during the reunion season and was not resumed until October. After a long waiting the classes in psychology and the history of education welcomed back their instructor, Professor F. M. McDowell who by serious illness had been kept from meeting with them, as also from filling his chair in Graceland College during the first weeks of school.

The psychology class is now held in the evening and is open to men as well as women. This arrangement has also been made in regard to the class in English, taught by Miss Olive Thomas. This class is now studying Browning and correct speaking. Miss Thomas is the instructor in English and German in Graceland College.

A class in the study of mothers' and teachers' problems was organized on the second Friday in October. A committee was elected who are to arrange in regard to subjects to be presented and persons to conduct the lesson.

After the business incident to organization Mrs. Lydia A. Wight gave a most interesting preview of possible ground to be covered, showing the wide scope of needed study and the impressive array of writers and their works from which to draw in the course of our investigations.

A house-to-house canvass of the town will be made with the purpose of interesting the mothers in attending these meetings. One strong inducement will be the provision to care for the children during the time of meeting. An extract from the committee report on this matter contains the following interesting items. The rooms referred to are in the high school building where all the meetings of the educational department are held.

"We have secured the assistance of Miss Jarvis (the kindergarten teacher), and the use of the kindergarten and Room 2, adjoining it, in which to care for the children. Miss Schenck (primary teacher) will assist as she may be able. We have also found a number of the college girls who are willing and anxious to give their service in this work, so we expect to be able to care for children of any age the mothers may wish to bring. The children of three years and over will be cared for in the kindergarten room and the babies in Room 2, which will be under the personal supervision of one member of the committee during each meeting. We may have the help of some of the Oriole girls in caring for babies who can be wheeled about outside in their carriages when the weather is pleasant."

These plans sound very attractive and we have no doubt they will bring happiness to the children and comfort to the mothers who avail themselves of the opportunity thus provided to seek helpful information free from anxiety in regard to the present welfare of their children.

CALLIE B. STEBBINS,
Press Chairman Lamoni Local.

Letter Department

Aylor-Arceneaux Debate

Houston is still on the map and would like to let the HERALD readers know that we are still trying to do something to further the cause in which we are all earnestly engaged.

The local officers a few weeks ago came in contact with that faction of the Church of Christ known as "Nonprogressive." Their elders seemed somewhat anxious to lock horns with us scripturally, therefore negotiations were begun and by agreement were left open until Apostle W. M. Aylor made his visit to us. An opportunity was recognized by Brother Aylor to present the gospel before a large number of people and consequently a discussion was arranged for, lasting ten nights, with articles drawn up as follows:

"The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, of which I am a representative, is in harmony with the New Testament scriptures in origin, organization, doctrine, faith and practice." Affirmed by Elder Aylor the first five nights. The last five nights Evangelist Arceneaux affirmed the same propositions in regard to his church.

It is useless for me to say that we came out victorious, because every Latter Day Saint knows that this gospel, as represented by us, is founded upon solid rock, and when compared with any other is bound to show up in the proper light as it always has since it was first given to mankind. Brother Aylor in the first five nights brought out the gospel in a plain and forceful manner substantiating his argument by proof after proof. The affirmative was never assailed by the opposition, but in the customary manner, which has become so familiar to us all by its repetition, the old, vile stories were rehashed and hurled at us continually, piling insult upon insult.

And right here I want to say that the Saints of Houston carried themselves all through the discussion in a way to be proud of and in a way that becomes Saints of God. Elder Aylor refuted these wild, absurd stories from time to time, but in general he followed out his plan of preaching the gospel of Christ in word and in power and in much assurance.

During the last five nights, Evangelist Arceneaux brought forward considerable scripture to uphold his church, but the most of his time was spent in the same trash pile he delved in the first five nights. His affirmative was refuted in two ways: First, by tearing to pieces argument founded on proof texts as given, and second, by gathering together numerous scripture in direct opposition to thoughts presented. After showing their origin and foundation and then tearing them to pieces, Brother Aylor still found time to preach the gospel of Christ and show conclusively that their bed was too short for a man to stretch himself in, and their covering too narrow for a man to wrap himself in.

The seed has been sown, God will take care of the increase. We believe good has been accomplished, some that we see now and some that perhaps we shall never see, but others will.

May God's work progress and may we all do our part in a way that shall be pleasing to him.

Yours in service,

A. J. BANTA.

President Houston Branch.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, 949 Yale Street, November 3, 1916.

Extracts from Letters

A. G. Miller writes from Dacusville, South Carolina: "I have organized a Sunday school here where several of the Utah Mormons have been baptized. I am told they are about two thousand strong in this State. Though there are many of them poor, they are clean and intelligent people. They have a whole Indian tribe in their church here, with Indian ministers."

H. W. Savage writes to Brother C. I. Carpenter, from Papeete, Tahiti, September 25, and among other things, says: "We leave here to-morrow for New Zealand. We have been busy here. There is always much work to be done in this mission. We are well and hope to stand the trip fairly well from here on. I had an awfully hard trip up through the low islands—very seasick and no relief."

William M. Aylor writes from Dallas, Texas: "Our debate at Houston was good for us. Made lots of friends and some are to be baptized. The opposition lost from every standpoint. I left the Saints rejoicing."

[Noting the practical suggestions in the following letter, and feeling that possibly there were many in the church who did not know the extent of the work being done along that line, we referred the matter to the authorities in charge of the Homes in Lamoni. Brother Lambert's brief statement follows the letter from Brother Richardson. Naturally the work of the Sanitarium is along different lines and not so favorably located for this kind of work, though they do have a nice garden.—EDITORS.]

FARMINGTON, MISSOURI, October 29, 1916.

Editors Herald: As I read so many profitable articles in the HERALD it impresses a desire upon me to contribute something. There are many Saints blessed with gifts and talents; if they were brought out and made manifest we would be greatly astonished; if we cultivate them, added light comes to us.

I dreamed one time of traveling a road, it was plain, but I came to a river, then to a hill. I thought at first I was obliged to stop, but as I advanced the way opened up for me to go on. So it is all through life, we must do the little things, whatsoever our hands find to do, and do it to the glory of God, and ask his blessing on any new undertaking.

I have been thinking it would be a good experiment if the church had a vegetable garden and a poultry yard composed of a few acres near some stake, to furnish the charitable institutions with fresh vegetables and eggs, poultry, fruits, etc. And at the same time it would be a good experiment for the church and those that do the work. This is a suggestion for consideration. It seems to me it would be the cheapest and most substantial, economical way of supplying these things for the Sanitarium, Children's Home, old people's homes, etc., and if there were any surplus it could be marketed and the profits go to charitable purposes.

I am gardening on a small scale, and it gives me an idea of what might be done. The expense of farming on a large scale is much greater. The garden could be enlarged from time to time to supply the needs of these institutions, at, I think, a nominal cost, and would lessen the expense of these places. Of course much is contributed to these institutions, but this garden would add profits for surplus and it would be fresh and not adulterated. The Word of Wisdom would be exemplified.

I think the time is ripe for laboring with all our might for the advancement of the kingdom of God. The letter on "Health simplified," by A. B. Klar, is certainly worth our consideration.

May the Lord add blessings to his church as a whole and individually, is my prayer.

R. F. D. 4.

A. C. RICHARDSON.

Dear Editor: In response to your request for a statement of what is being done at the homes in the way of gardening, the raising of poultry, egg farming, live stock raising, etc., I submit the following. This being supplied on a moment's notice, it is not likely that it will do justice to the work which is carried on at the three farms owned and operated for the Children's Home Association and for the two old people's homes of the church, at Lamoni, Iowa.

The Children's Home has a large garden and fruit patch, from which the tables are supplied with fresh vegetables, and much fruit is preserved by old methods for use on the tables during the winter. Five cows are kept on the place, three of which are Holsteins and two Jerseys. A flock of chickens in maintained, and they have done much in the way of supplying eggs for the table for several years; also they are used at table for meat. An immense and excellent strawberry garden is now in bearing, and the children quit eating fresh strawberries picked from this garden about October 1.

The old people's homes have rather a large farm, and an orchard and garden at each. The orchard at Liberty Home, which was planted by the late president of the church, Joseph Smith, has been a splendid thing for the old people, and has shown the judgment of the man to have extended further than to merely ecclesiastical matters. The writer went to Liberty Home just a few days since and ate two apples of Grimes Golden variety, which to his mind were the best apples he had eaten in years. Lamoni and vicinity is not a potato country, yet many of the potatoes used to feed the seventy-five inmates and helpers at the homes this winter have been raised on the farm. The gardens at each place have been splendid assets for several years, and if those interested in the homes would contribute enough money so that we could purchase and operate a small canning outfit, thereby preserving the vegetables raised on the farm for winter use at table, many more dollars of expenditure could be avoided. The flock of chickens at the homes have done their part in caring for the old people of the church, and we will just quote figures from the October report of the superintendent of the home as an illustration of what is marketed over and above what is used on the place: "October 3, 13, and 31, poultry products, $52.46."

In connection with the old people's homes there is also a fine herd of pure-bred and high-grade Holstein cattle, which are supplying all the milk and much of the butter consumed at the homes. They will supply all and a surplus for sale when the plans are carried out which are begun. The development of a good dairy herd is a matter which takes time and money, but it will be done if the Saints support the homes with their donations, and the plans of the present ones in charge are completed. If you will stop to consider that it would take nearly seventy-five dollars per month to supply the people of the homes with butter, if it had to be purchased, exclusive of milk, you can then see what we are saving by our partially organized dairying at these places.

At the old people's homes we also have pure-bred hogs, and at present could spare three or four good young male large type Poland China hogs, of splendid blood lines, to Latter Day Saints who are in the business of raising good hogs. These hogs and the cattle largely furnish the meat consumed at the homes.

We will do more in years to come than we are now doing, and hope to make the farms contribute a very large percentage toward the keeping of the old people.

R. J. LAMBERT, Secretary-Treasurer.

LAMONI, IOWA, 802 West Main Street.

MACON, MISSOURI, October 31, 1916.

Editors Herald: Brother Ely and myself closed a series of meetings at the Watker Schoolhouse one mile north of Eccles, Missouri, last Sunday, the 29th. We began there the 7th and had a very interesting time, the house being filled nearly every night except two or three stormy times. We stopped with Brother and Sister Kincaid. We closed with many hearty invitations to "come and preach for us again."

We are commencing at Oak Ridge, nine and one half miles southeast of Macon, to-night. Are occupying in a Lutheran church and staying with Brother Irvin Gray.

A. M. CHASE.

HONOLULU, TERRITORY OF HAWAII, October 23, 1916.

Editors Herald: In the Australian HERALD, you had a cut of a bear which you credited to me but which Paul Hanson took. I sent you several bear pictures but not that one. Kindly make the correction.

I think the Saints in Australia will be very much pleased with the HERALD, and have no doubt it will also interest the HERALD readers.

I should think a combined Society and Hawaiian Island HERALD sometime would be interesting.

Brother McConley baptized Mrs. Clegg recently. She is Brother Waller's daughter, and there was great rejoicing here over the event.

The McConleys have gone to their mission, on the island of Hawaii.

Sincerely,

C. EDWARD MILLER.

MISSION HOUSE, MIKI LANE, KALAKAUA AVENUE.

HILO, HAWAII, October 23, 1916.

Editors Herald: I write to let the Saints know that we arrived here safely and tell them something of our trip.

My wife and I left San Francisco on Tuesday, September 26, on the Sonoma, en route to Honolulu. The first two days at sea it was very rough and of course I was seasick as usual, and even my companion spoiled her reputation by being sick also. We got acquainted with three Mormon missionaries en route to Australia and gave them some pointers which we hope may be the means of some day opening their eyes. As there was to be no religious services on board on Sunday except Catholic mass, we secured permission to hold services in the first cabin saloon. Notices of the meeting were posted in all quarters of the ship and there was a representative attendance from steerage, and second-class, as well as first-class passengers. The steward informed us that it was the best attendance he ever saw at a religious service on that boat.

We arrived in Honolulu on October 2 and were met at the wharf by Brother and Sister C. Ed Miller and a number of the Saints, and as we were permitted to greet the Saints we had known here before with "Aloha nui," we felt the spirit of welcome and that instead of having gone on a foreign mission we had simply returned to our island home. We were taken out to the Mission House on Miki Lane where we were the guests of Brother and Sister Miller.

At the Wednesday evening meeting I was permitted to assist in ordaining three men to the priesthood: Brother Charles Lee, whom I baptized while here before, to the office of elder; J. W. K. Wright, a young man whom Brother Barrett and I first reached with the gospel in the country districts on the island of Hawaii, to the office of priest; and Brother Clancy, a recent convert, to the office of teacher.

As soon as news of our arrival had spread to the school where Sister McConley formerly taught, the former pupils began calling on her and almost every day the mission house was visited by some of them. So one evening she gave them a party at the mission house. The children have grown a great deal and some of them are just turning into young men and women. They are mostly Chinese and Japanese and not members of the church. Also some of the former scholars of the Chinese Sunday school, which has been disorganized, called on us. When we saw how devoted these young people were to us we were sorry we could not be in Honolulu and get them interested in the gospel. We did get one young man, Chinese, to come to the church to Sunday school, and he promised to continue.

Brother C. Ed Miller, our new missionary in Honolulu, is doing good work and seems to be well liked. But several men could find plenty to do there. Brother Miller is also a first-class painter and I helped him paint the tower and front of the church, so that the building looks almost like new.

On Sunday, October 15, I was permitted to baptize Mrs. Ruth Waller Clegg, which caused us all to rejoice. She is a daughter of Brother G. J. Waller, who has had charge of this mission for so many years. We feel that her acceptance of the gospel is largely the result of the faithful life of her father. "Cast your bread upon the waters and after many days it shall return again" is indeed true. The trouble is that sometimes we are not patient enough to abide the Lord's time.

Tuesday evening, the 17th, the Woman's Auxiliary gave a farewell party at the mission house, as we were to leave for this island the next day. About seventy-five were present, and as we looked at them we could see that our young people are developing and being so prepared that not many years hence, we will have an efficient corps of workers developed from our own ranks who will help to spread the work to all these islands. At present we have people living on the five principal islands. We enjoyed meeting the Saints again in a social way and were sorry we could not bring them with us to this island.

Wednesday, October 18, we left Honolulu on the Mauna Kea at ten a. m. and arrived at Hilo about seven next morning. At present we are staying at the home of Mr. O. T. Shipman, while looking for a suitable house. There is no branch here but there are now six Saints in Hilo, including ourselves. The little Sunday school started in 1912 by Elder Barrett and myself has continued at irregular intervals up to the present time, having been recently reorganized by Brother Puuhau, one of our live young men who has moved here with his family from Honolulu.

We held Sunday school in a friend's house yesterday with twenty-two present and preached at Mr. Shipman's home to about the same number in the evening. Many of those who were interested before are still attracted to our work and we expect to report a number of baptisms in the near future. Already some have suggested the advisability of trying to build a church. This of course is premature at this time but we think our hopes along that line will some day be realized, too.

We are feeling good in the work and very hopeful for the future. But we realize our own weakness and the need of divine strength and wisdom, and ask that the Saints will remember the work here in their prayers, that our work may be a success.

With kind regards and best wishes to the Saints everywhere, and especially those in Colorado and California,

In gospel bonds,

M. A. MCCONLEY.

NEOLA, IOWA, October 29, 1916.

Editors Herald: I feel to contribute a few lines to your valuable pages. The HERALD imparts much comfort and inspiration to all of its earnest readers. It means much to the isolated Saints. You are a welcome and worthy visitor in their homes. In homes where they do not take the HERALD I have tried to make them feel how much they need to take it, and how impossible to do without it. I try to tell them how necessary it is for the Saints to take it in order to make the necessary growth and development that they should. The missionaries surely miss the HERALD when they go into a home and do not find it.

A dear Sister Stevenson who lives in Red Oak, Iowa, isolated from the branch, said to me, "My HERALD is surely a kind visitor in my home. I never open it until I have all my work out of my way on Sunday morning and then I feast on it all day. The Spirit of God is with me to bless and direct."

I just closed a good meeting at New Market, Iowa, at which place Brother Novinger lives. I found them to be dear, earnest children of God. I sure found the HERALD in their home, too. They said they could not get along without it, said, "We couldn't live our religion quite so well without the HERALD."

As Paul, not ashamed of the gospel, they wished to warn their neighbors and have them know the angel's message. So we preached in the Baptist church there three weeks; had a joyous time. Sister Novinger an earnest worker, arranged for the music. She worked up a good choir among the Christians and the Baptists. So we had much good music and songs.

Brother Novinger went out among the bankers, lawyers and doctors, as well as other business men, and urged them to come out and hear what we had to offer. We all found joy in our word, for our dear Father was with us to bless. We had a glorious time and at the close the trustees of the church came to me and said, "We one and all appreciated your efforts, and would like for you to stay with us longer." I baptized one dear father and many others were near. I felt that it was only the beginning of a great work in that place. This was the first work done there.

So we are hopeful, laboring on, doing the best we can. More calls for preaching than we can possibly fill.

Your brother in Christ,

W. E. HADEN.

PORT ARTHUR, ONTARIO, October 30, 1916.

Editors Herald: I arrived here from Niagara Falls, Ontario, on the 19th, and with the assistance of Brother A. Miller secured a hall and held our first meeting Sunday the 22d, at 2.30 and 7.15 p. m. On the following Wednesday evening we held forth again. The first two services we had an attendance of four. I then announced a lecture on "The present war" for Sunday the 29th, at 2.30, and on "Which is the true church of Christ" for 7.30 p. m., and we had sixteen out at each service—a very small percentage for a city of eleven thousand. But we feel somewhat encouraged since our last night meeting.

This is the first time our work has been proclaimed here by our elders, and I would like to more fully get our work before the people by a house-to-house canvass, and would like the church to send me a number of good tracts for free distribution.

We are having very cold and disagreeable weather here at present.

I would like to say to the Saints at Niagara Falls, New York, that I called upon Sister Chowan, at Port Williams, and found her very poorly. I administered to her twice, and her sister phoned me last Saturday that there was a wonderful change for the better. This sister needs the prayers of God's people, as she is very desirous to go home. She has been confined to the hospital all summer.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain,

Yours fraternally,

General Delivery.

S. W. TOMLINSON.

WELLAND, ONTARIO, November 1, 1916.

Editors Herald: Your columns are read by us with keen interest and many times have we thought to contribute to them, that perchance we might encourage an isolated or an indifferent or discouraged Saint.

We have recently moved to this place from Ohio and have found a faithful little band numbering about thirty, zealous indeed in their efforts to float the gospel standard in this growing town. The branch, though in its infancy (organized, we believe, about two years ago) promises fair to become a great credit to the work. Its officers are as follows: president, Elder F. C. Baldwin; priest, Samuel Taylor; teacher, Noble Wilkinson; deacon, Percy Baldwin.

Their Sunday services are held in a down-town hall while the midweek prayer service and Religio convene at the home of Elder Baldwin.

Elder J. L. Mortimer, an old-timer in the work, has just come among us. The Grand Theater has been engaged for next Sunday evening, and Brother Mortimer has been announced in the local papers and on handbills to lecture that evening on "The Latter Day Saints—who are they?"

We are not going to just say we have a desire to do what we can for this great work, but we are going to put forth the effort now. Will you who know the value of prayer, pray for us that our light may truly shine in Welland?

Your sister in the gospel,

113 Maple Avenue.

MRS. LORA STRACHAN.

FORT TOWSON, OKLAHOMA, November 1, 1916.

Editors Herald: Since our late reunion I have labored quite satisfactorily to myself at least, at different points in Oklahoma and Texas. Near a place called Simms, however, I was treated to eggs which did not give entire satisfaction on my part, as they were neither fried nor cooked, and not as fresh as they might have been, and served in a kind of a hand-out fashion, and that, too, right at meeting time, after which we returned to Brother J. E. Durham's, at 9.30 p. m. and put out quite a washing, by the help of Sister Durham. The next day the house was closed against us, but we preached in front of the building to a fine congregation, after which we moved our meeting to Brother A. M. Durham's house. It was at this point that a mob tore up two of my charts last year, and would have handled me roughly, too, had it not been for my friends. The same was true this year. May God have mercy upon them and forgive.

I came to this old battle field to act as moderator for Elder J. M. Simmons in his debate with Elder W. M. Allen, of the nonprogressive wing of the Christian Church, which began October 20, 7.30 p. m., and to the credit of Elder Allen we must say that he was quite fair when compared with many of his faith in public debate, but it was undoubtedly his first discussion with our people. He took a long journey to the Holy Land—where unfortunately, he got lost, and wandered around and around pentecost till all the grass was trampled down and killed. Disappointed and exhausted, he sits down now and then to look over his manuscript, hoping to find proper direction, but in vain—lost sure enough. Careworn and perplexed, he made a halt and offered Elder Simmons or any other elder or apostle of our faith one hundred dollars if they would heal his sore toe, and thereupon join our church, no matter how rotten, bad or corrupt it might be. Of course he received a suitable reply.

Poor fellow we felt sorry for him, but he should not have wandered so far away from home, but should have remained somewhere near Brush Run, Cross Creek, Buffalo Creek, Red Stone, or Mahoning, where he belonged and was better acquainted. Time and time again Elder Simmons tried to give him proper home directions, but to no avail; he could not be awakened from his Pentecostal nightmare. At last Brother Simmons took pity on him and brought him back to Alexander Campbell's old Homestead, Washington, Pennsylvania.

Fort Towson (Fennell Schoolhouse) is where Elder J. M. Smith held a debate just one year ago with Elder W. H. Jackson of the same faith, and ere this they have no doubt found out that small boats should stay near shore, while larger ones venture more. Elders J. M. Smith and J. M.

Simmons are strong defenders of the Faith, and from marked indications—so far as I can see and learn, both debates were grand victories for us, and will in time bring good results.

Thanks be to God for divine revelation and the restoration of the gospel that has withstood the battering rams of Satan and an army of preachers of nearly every shade.

Yours in gospel bonds,

J. C. CHRESTENSEN.

News from Branches

Burlington, Iowa

Burlington was well represented at the district conference and conventions held at the Rock Creek Branch, October 13, 14 and 15, there being twelve in attendance at the convention sessions Friday, a few more Saturday, and twenty-five or twenty-six Sunday. Of especial interest to Burlington people was the ordination of Brother Henry Broman as priest, and Brother Elmer Bierman as deacon at the Sunday afternoon prayer and social service. This service was especially good, the gift of prophecy being manifested, giving admonition and promise of future blessing. All the meetings were good and well attended, the interest in auxiliary sessions Friday being especially encouraging.

Brother L. G. Holloway remained after the conference to hold a series of meetings which were somewhat interfered with by a change of weather. He stopped in Burlington on his way through Wednesday, October 25, and was present with us at the Wednesday evening prayer service. He is working energetically toward the purchase of a district automobile, and the plan as he presents it, merits favor.

Elder Nephi Snively was in Burlington, Sunday, October 29, and occupied the morning hour.

Tuesday evening, October 31, Sister Lizzie Stumpf gave a Halloween social for the benefit of the building fund, which is reported as a success socially and financially.

We were made glad Wednesday evening, November 1, by the baptism of five of our little folks, as follows: Ethel Kunz, Hazel Kunz, Velma MacIntire, and Ruth and Elbert Willey.

Auxiliary work is moving nicely. The branch in cooperation with the Sunday school is planning a "Model Sunday" for November 12, with special numbers which we trust will help all to appreciate more fully the opportunities afforded us. Another feature of our work which seems worthy of note is the distribution of literature by some of our Junior boys, under Brother Williams's direction. They are working with the Religio good literature committee, and the call for literature has thus far met with prompt response. Brother Williams reports that after their "campaign" last Saturday, they went to the park for an outing, and so finished the day with a thoroughly good time.

CORRESPONDENT.

Toledo, Ohio

We have built a new church here, mostly by the Saints at night and Saturday afternoons. Some of the brethren worked on it all of the time. A little of the work was hired. It is nearly completed now. The brethren started painting on November 4. We have a large debt on our hands which I believe will be the hardest part of our work. Through the help of the mighty Father, we hope to be able to meet it. We have only a small branch here and it is a heavy burden upon each one of us. We wish to thank all who have helped us so far in our work here, especially our brothers and sisters in Detroit for their help.

Brother G. T. Griffiths has been with us for a week, and has counseled us against the trials to come. Forewarned means to be forearmed. I hope we may be able to meet them and overcome and be made stronger by passing through them.

Sister William Anderson, from Independence, Missouri, is making a visit for the winter, and I believe will be a help to us while here. She is a true follower of the Master. Brother Overly has just moved into the vicinity. He is a young brother in the kingdom. MRS. D. C. MORGAN.

721 Palmwood.

Independence Stake

The work is progressing among the younger element especially, and we are glad to note the activity of our Sunday school and Religio forces in the outlying branches as well as in the center place. Enoch Hill Branch is presided over by an earnest worker, Brother W. D. Bullard, who is as zealous in church service as in business life, and they have in that lovely locality some fine helpers in the Sunday school and Religio. Their membership respectively is 107 and about 40, and they are all wide-awake. The Gem of the Hill, a monthly issued by the latter society, is edited by Sister Pearl Thomas, and has always some fine contributions worthy to find ready readers. The home department has very good support; so also does this particular work thrive in Walnut Park, which has in addition a normal department which meets on Sunday afternoons. President F. M. Smith preached at Walnut Park last Sunday night.

The North Liberty Mission Sunday school numbers from 30 to 40, and Brethren E. T. Atwell and H. Ek are good workers there. Here we have six classes engaged at home in the study of the Book of Mormon, and 64 out of an enrollment of 70 were present at the last meeting in the several classes. The teachers are Sisters Warnky, Hunt, Luff, Tucker, Dickinson, and Self.

The church class engaged in the study of the Compendium meets on Sunday afternoons, and has a very good attendance. Brother W. W. Smith is instructor. So also the junior chorus is meeting with success. This organization is a part of the general church chorus movement, and is doing excellent work under the management of Brother Hoxie and Sister F. Mc-Nichols, who are also instructors. The atmosphere of the church is surcharged with the activities of consecrated men and women. Elder S. S. Smith was announced as the speaker for last Sunday evening.

In the whirl of political contest the elections have been going on, the great prohibition movement and the suffrage gatherings being not far behind in general interest. Independence is doing its share to make Missouri dry, and the Saints as a people are from week to week, leaders and laymen, engaged in the noblest services designed by our Maker, the uplift of humanity and the redemption of Zion.

Let the work go on and prosper, is our prayer.

ABBIE A. HORTON.

Miscellaneous Department

The Bishopric

AGENT'S NOTICE

To the Saints of the Spokane District: We wish to thank the Saints for their liberal support in the past; however, as the work grows there is greater demand for money to carry it on, and each one is requested to lend a helping hand. Some are to be commended for their self-sacrificing spirit—doing even more than the law requires.

Do our lives correspond with our testimony when we say we love this latter-day work? Suppose we consult our expense account. We find several luxuries, but not many dollars for the spread of the gospel. Does not our diary show we loved our appetites more than we loved the gospel of Christ?

Will we make an equal effort for that which is essential? Some will say, "I have been helping the brethren when I have found them in need." This is good; you will not lose your reward for charity, but remember God's plan is for his Saints to pay their tithing.

Let us have faith in God and his promises.

W. W. FORDHAM, Bishop's Agent.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON, South 238 Haven Street.

Notice of Appointment

To All Whom It may Concern: W. H. Garrett of Independence, Missouri, is hereby appointed to labor the rest of this conference year in the Southern California District.

We recommend our brother to the esteem and support of the saints and friends in that district.

Respectfully,

FREDERICK M. SMITH,
For the Presidency.

JOHN W. RUSHTON,
Minister in Charge.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, 951 West Thirty-fourth Street.

Conference Minutes

KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.—At Oakland Branch near Farmington, Kentucky, District President J. R. McClain presiding. Branch reports: Foundry Hill, Mays Bridge, Farmington, High Hill, Liberty Hill, Eagle Creek. Adjourned to meet next at Foundry Hill Branch, latter part of February, 1917. Meetings continued at Oakland Branch for one week with increased interest. Charles A. Nolan, secretary.

SOUTHERN INDIANA.—With Louisville, Kentucky, Branch, October 21 and 22, 1916, J. E. Warne, S. S. Smith, and J. W. Metcalf presiding. Statistical reports: Louisville 162, Derby 126, Wirt 43, Indianapolis 86. Priesthood reporting 18. Bishop's agent reported: Receipts $385.51, disbursements $317.34. Aquilla McPeck ordained to office of priest. Recommendation of John Krishbaum to office of Deacon indorsed. P. A. Flinn released as president of Byrneville Branch, and Herman D. Byrne released as presiding priest. E. A. Jaegers placed in charge of Byrneville; C. N. Maymon, teacher; Lee Byrne, deacon; Sister C. N. Maymon, clerk. We had one of the best conferences as to attendance and spirituality. Adjourned to meet at Indianapolis, May 19 and 20, 1917. Pearl F. Newton, secretary, 1506 West Twenty-first Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Convention Minutes

CLINTON.—Sunday school, October 6, 1916, 10 a. m. at Mapleton, Kansas. In the standard of excellence for schools, to qualify for third grade, points eight and ten were canceled as main points, making it read, "Third grade is given where school qualifies on five points." Three schools were disorganized, namely, Lowry City, Vine Hill, and Childers, leaving 13 active schools in the district with a total enrollment of 640. Zora Lowe, secretary, Eldorado Springs, Missouri.

CLINTON.—Religio, October 6, 1916, at Mapleton, Kansas. Regular business of the convention was transacted. Instructive and interesting talks were given by different Religio representatives, terminating into a sort of round table discussion. General instructions and good advice was given by our district president, Mrs. Mabel Braden. At 7.45 a Religio

Many of us treat our minds about as the old-time housewife used to treat her parlor. We keep the blinds drawn and the doors locked most of the time, priding ourselves upon the antiquated and useless furniture. Happy are they who open the doors of the mind, giving free admittance to what is sweet and pure.—Ambition.

session was held; after class work a well rendered program. Adjourned to meet at Nevada, Missouri, in February 1917. Adrain Lowe, secretary, Eldorado Springs, Missouri, Route 1. LONDON.—Sunday school, at Stratford, Ontario, October 6, 1916. Election of officers: Hebert Talbot, district superintendent; J. Winegarden, assistant superintendent; Mamie Duesling, secretary; Rosa Tier, treasurer; Lucy Yerks, home department superintendent; Aubrey Blanchard, library board member; John Gleason, normal department superintendent. Joint program of Sunday school and Religio in the evening. The Sunday school and Religio of this district have thought it wise to separate themselves from the district conference, with an object in view of having more time for election and for institute work, having realized the success of such movements in other districts. Our next convention will be held February 3 and 4, 1917, at London, Ontario. Mamie Duesling, secretary, 327 Rectory Street, London, Ontario.

Conference Notices

Southeastern Illinois at Bellair, Illinois, December 2 and 3, 1916. The following resolution will be voted upon: "Resolved, That inasmuch as much dissatisfaction prevails concerning the enforcement of rules and regulations adopted by the Southeastern Illinois District conference at Springerton, February 7, 1914, that it be the sense of this conference that said rules be placed before this conference at Bellair for consideration, that said rules be amended as thought best by said conference or that they be disannuled entirely." Send reports to W. E. Presnell, secretary, Xenia, Illinois. Holden Stake at Knobnoster, Missouri, 10.30 a. m., December 9, 1916. Forward all reports to the secretary, Mrs. Anna Fender, Holden, Missouri. D. J. Krahl, president. Alberta, with the Calgary Branch, December 8, 9 and 10, at Calgary, Alberta. Trains from north, south and east will be met by committee. Branch clerks see that all statistical reports are in the hands of secretary not later than December 1. William Osler, president; Clyde Walrath, secretary.

Quorum Notices

HIGH PRIESTS

In the near future we expect to mail the quorum program for 1917, and that all the membership may be supplied, we hereby make an urgent and special request that each one who has changed his address since last April will promptly inform the undersigned of his present address; this information is needed for the mailing out of the program, the preparing of the 1916 "H. P. Annual," and sending to each member a report blank. Brethren, please give this your immediate attention.

Your fellow servant,
ROBT M. ELVIN, Secretary.

LAMONI, IOWA, 206 South State Street, November 9, 1916.

Fourth "ministerial conference" of the quorum of elders of the Eastern Mission meets at Saints' church, Orange Street, Attleboro, Massachusetts, November 25, 7.30 p. m.; on the 26th at 9 a. m., and 7 p. m. An interesting and instructive program has been prepared, entitled "Elders' courts." Cordial invitation is extended to all the ministry and membership to attend. Horatio W. Howlett, secretary, Pottersville, Massachusetts.

Died

HANSON.—Edna May Hanson, died at Bayard, Nebraska, November 1, 1916, aged 17 years, 9 months. Besides a sweet little baby 8 months old, she leaves a husband, father, mother and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her untimely demise. Funeral sermon by C. W. Prettyman.

"Another hand is beckoning us,
Another call is given:
And glows once more with angel steps
The path that leads to heaven."

DREW.—Jacob A. Drew, born in Hamilton, Indiana, March 22, 1841; died at his home in Lancaster, Wisconsin, October 10, 1916. His wife was Miss Chloe Chandler, of Lancaster Wisconsin. She preceded him to the other side one year ago. Baptized October 4, 1908, by G. J. Brookover, and was a faithful, devoted Saint to the hour of his death. During the Civil War he served his country as a member of Company F. 7th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. He is survived by 7

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance. When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration. All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same. All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office. Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice. For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

- Throwing Clubs at "Authority" - - - - 1105
- Christmas Offerings - - - - 1107
- Current Events - - - - 1107
- Notes and Comments - - - - 1108

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

- The Needs of the Missionary - - - - 1109
- Reward according to Works, by E. F. Robertson 1112

OF GENERAL INTEREST:

- A Blunder of the Church - - - - 1116
- Ancient Maya Civilization - - - - 1116

THE STAFF - - - - 1117

- Albert N. Hoxie—Lillian Ewing—Arthur H. Mills—O. R. Miller.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME - - - - 1119

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY DEPARTMENT - - - - 1120

- Callie B. Stebbins.

LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - - 1121

- A. J. Banta—A. C. Richardson—R. J. Lambert —A. M. Chase—C. Edward Miller—M. A. McConley—W. E. Haden—S. W. Tomlinson—Lora Strachan.

NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - - 1125

- Mrs. D. C. Morgan—Abbie A. Horton.

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - - 1126

children, several grandchildren, 2 brothers, 4 sisters. Funeral was held in the Methodist church in Lancaster, Wisconsin, in charge of B. C. Flint, who also preached the sermon.

General Church Directory

First Presidency: Frederick M. Smith, president, Box 255, Independence, Missouri. Elbert A. Smith, counselor, 125 North Mulberry Street, Lamoni, Iowa.
Presiding Bishopric: Benjamin R. McGuire, Independence, Missouri.
Quorum of Twelve: All official quorum matters to John W. Rushton, secretary, 951 West Thirty-fourth Street, Los Angeles, California.
Quorums of Seventy: Official joint quorum matter to J. F. Mintun, 1205 Filmore Street, Des Moines, Iowa.
Church Historian: Heman C. Smith, historian, Room 10, 202 North Walnut Street, Lamoni, Iowa.
Church Recorder: Statistical reports of branches, certificates of baptisms and blessings, all membership data, to C. I. Carpenter, recorder, 202 South Walnut Street, Lamoni, Iowa.
Church Secretary: General Conference credentials, clergy permits, general licenses, correspondence, etc., to R. S. Salyards, secretary, 718 West Main Street, Lamoni, Iowa.
Old Folks' Homes: (Lamoni) Send remittances, applications for entrance, etc., to R. J. Lambert, secretary-treasurer, 802 West Main Street, Lamoni, Iowa.
Children's Home: Send remittances, applications, etc., to R. J. Lambert, secretary-treasurer, 802 West Main Street, Lamoni, Iowa.
Graceland College: Send remittances, applications for entrance, etc., to J. A. Gunsolley, manager and treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa.
Publishing Houses: Herald Publishing House, 202 North Walnut Street, Lamoni, Iowa; Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. Order all church books of nearest house. Australian Mission: Standard Publishing House, 65 Nelson Street, Rozelle, New South Wales, Australia. Address all matter for publication in "Saints' Herald" to Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.

Practical Economy

Baking powders made from alum or phosphate may be bought for a trifle less than Royal Baking Powder, which is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes.

Alum powders are not only cheap, but they differ greatly in leavening power.

If a cheap baking powder is used for a fine cake and the cake turns out a failure there is a waste of costly materials worth more than a whole can of the cheap baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder produces the finest food, and its use therefore, results in an actual saving.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

BOOK OF MORMON.—We sell this book in various bindings, listed in our price list. The most popular editions are, No. 11, cloth, 90c; No. 12, full leather $1.30

THE HAPPIEST CHRISTMAS AND THE SILVER THIMBLES.—Two excellent child stories by Callie B. Stebbins, who has had an extraordinarily wide experience with children. One of the birth-offering series. No. 364, cloth$.40

HIS FIRST VENTURE AND THE SEQUEL.—A story by Estella Wight, editor of Stepping Stones and the "Religio's Arena." It tells about a country boy who was led astray by the lure of the city, but came back at last to loved ones—and the realization that "homely goodness" is the best thing after all. No. 369, cloth$.60

JOAN OF ARC.—"Frances" here tells the story of Joan of Arc in a most human way. The French heroine is here brought down to the present and is seen as a living being, rather than a remote historical character. The social revolution she helped bring about, the service she rendered her country, make the story of her life interesting to all generations. Joan is an inspiration. No. 370, cloth$.60

THE INSTRUCTOR.—A compilation of scriptural and other citations by the veteran apostle, G. T. Griffiths, gleaned from the Word and his own wide experience as a thinker and preacher; not only handy but necessary. Ammunition every defender of Latter Day Saintism needs. No. 216, cloth, $1; No. 217, leather, $1.25; No. 218, flexible$2.00

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

FOR SALE

Two acres of fine lying land, all set to young fruit just coming into bearing—new 6 room house, back plastered and finely finished. 2 never failing wells, new hen house 10 x 24. Located on South State St. Bargain for cash. E. F. Hall, Lamoni, Iowa. 31-tf

DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.—A book of the revelations given for the guidance of the church. One of the three standard books of the church which no member can afford to disregard. In four bindings: No. 21, cloth, 65c; No. 22, full leather $1; No. 23, imitation morocco, gilt edges, $2.05; No. 24, morocco, gilt edges, flexible$3.25

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

NOVEMBER 22, 1916

Vol. 63 □ No. 47

The Saints' Herald

Photo by Burt Hopkins, Princeville, Illinois.

Who can say that he who dwells
'Neath this humble cottage roof,
May not later guide the loom
That weaves this Nation's warp and woof?

E. D. Moore.

□ MAGAZINE NUMBER □

'Mid Autumn Leaves in Old Kirtland

BY EARNEST A. WEBBE

Delving in the woods of God's fair countryside,
Wandering up a virgin glade, frost-spangles gleaming,
Sun rays breaking in o'er beech and chestnut trees—
Till halted by a lone young spruce that barred
The further way and challenged one his steps.

How brave and green it stood while dry leaves fell about,
How full of strength and promised usefulness,
I reached forth breathing in its scent of fir
And sudden, filled with a far richer thought,
Drew to my lips a tiny limb instead!

And thought how God himself one time appeared
To him of old in such a brave 'bush, burning
With some such fire as bathed tall oaks and maples
That walled the glade, cathedral-like, in silence,
On this a fair, autumnal morning.

And then there broke into the sacred stillness
Two fluttering birds, unused, they seemed, to sight of man,
And twittered round about my head so close
I could have touched them had I cared—
Or had I dared!

For as I turned, the thought, welled strong within me
A greater presence graced that glade and watched, that morn;
And so I softly trod away as one may steal
From out some favored, hallowed sanctuary—
When his deserved penitence is made.

KIRTLAND, OHIO, October 28, 1916.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT

WINGS OF SONG FOR WORDS OF TRUTH

BY ELBERT A. SMITH

"Yes; I sometimes sing a little to kill time," confided the soloist. "You have a good weapon," answered the cynic.

Time has suffered a thousand awful deaths at the hands of amateur and professional musicians, and yet he lives and moves serenely on. Presently in every case he retaliates and kills the musician.

"Hark, from the tombs a doleful sound!" It is our fathers intoning "Old hundred." The aisles of the dim woods rang with the anthem of the free—the sentiment is fine, but the chances are the anthem of the free was pitched too high or too low.

Away back yonder Father Time heard the aborigines pounding on kettle drums in the evening. He hastened on. He looked in on the Pilgrims when they sang their first hymn, but would not tarry.

In our day his startled ear hears a strange, soaring voice that seems to be singing something, but he cannot understand the words. He thinks it may be "In the early dawn"; but possibly it is, "I am nearly gone." There is a tremolo in the voice that seems to have been put there—as it expresses no real feeling—and it rises higher and higher and ends in a shriek. Silence follows, then applause. That is a certain type of soloist hitting the high notes.

He hears the sound of many voices in a bewildering medley of utterances. There is an abrupt pause. Then a soprano voice runs lightly up the ladder, "I shall not be dismayed." Instantly a heavy male voice runs down cellar and bellows, "I shall not be dismayed." Then all suddenly break forth—"I shall—I shall not—I shall not be—I shall not be dismayed." That is an anthem. Anthems are like people. Some are much better than others.

From an open window he hears the tinkle tonkle of a piano. Presently four clear, young voices break out in unison, "She's ma honey, ma little yaller coon." That is a ragtime coon song.

Around the corner he meets the organ grinder. In the park the German band is playing. Tom is whisting. Dick is tuning his mandolin. Harry is learning the cornet. At the corner saloon a phonograph is playing. Right here Father Time pauses. The idea that we can take a singer's voice and wind it up on a spool and then unwind it at any time, even after the singer is dead, rather startles the old gentleman. It isn't fair. The singer kills time; but when Time kills the singer he has accomplished nothing—the song goes on.

It is the easiest thing in the world to criticize something that one knows nothing about excepting by observation, something that one is safe in criticizing because he knows that he will never have to do it himself. People who never write books criticize authors. People who never preach criticize preachers. Color-blind people who cannot paint are enthusiastic art critics. People who never have profaned a sanctum-sanctorum, criticize editors. On the same principle we criticize musicians—and enjoy it.

"SWEET SINGERS OF ISRAEL."

All we have mentioned in the foregoing, and more, is freely forgiven in view of the solace and service that musicians have rendered humanity. Art, oratory, music—wonderful trio! Music rouses when words are futile; it comforts when words are meaningless. It eases the swing of the cradle, and softens the note of clods falling on the coffin's box.

The sermon is ended and the sinner unconverted; the noble strains, "Nearer, my God, to thee," break down his defense and he yields.

Lincoln calls for volunteers. The eloquent orators have pleaded for the Union and for the freedom of the slaves. Men hesitate. The fife and drum corps strikes up a national air. It is shrill, insistent, spine-thrilling. Men and boys are swept into the ranks, and on through marches, camps, swamps,

Until recently the violin was considered a hopeless son of perdition. Because one man had played a tune on vibrant strings stretched over a curious wooden box and others had danced to the music, it followed that another man should not play a sacred tune on other vibrant strings stretched over another wooden box. You follow the reasoning? We do not. But it had great weight at one time.

As a church we have been rather liberal; yet this

MUSICIANS AT ATTENTION.

Taken at the dedication of the church at Philadelphia, about two years ago. President Frederick M. Smith in attendance; Chorister Albert N. Hoxie in charge of music.

prisons, battles, wounds, fevers, hospitals, to victory. And music sets the black man free.

David exorcised the evil spirit that had taken possession of King Saul. Music was the charm that he used. The Devil seems to have taken a lesson from the incident and evidently resolved to enlist music on his side of the great conflict. At least we find that he has used it to good (or bad) effect in his cause in years gone by; and to-day music is used to entice men, women, and children into dance halls, questionable shows, saloons, and wine rooms. No whisky seller, gambler, sport, or dissolute woman but needs and uses music in his or her business.

There was at one time a disposition on the part of believers to surrender music to the Devil. Even yet there are denominations that do not permit the use of the organ in divine worship. At least one church was split asunder on that question.

question of the organ and stringed instrument caused our people some perplexity at one time. They were inclined to surrender music to those who least know how to get the good there is in it and best know how to get the worst out of it.

As an example of the ideas at one time, it is said that Lyman Wight, one of the honest, fearless whole-souled veterans in the early history of the latter-day work, would not permit the people who were under his spiritual care to sing the "different parts." They might sing soprano, but nothing more.

Tradition says that the young men and women of his congregation used to get off by themselves and make the "sounding aisles of the dim woods" ring with soprano, alto, tenor, and bass, with variation for good measure. They reasoned that what Brother Wight didn't know would not hurt him; and probably it did not hurt them either.

Since that day the Lord has spoken on the subject and he seems to rather side in with the young people. He has said:

The service of song in the house of the Lord with humility and unity of spirit in them that sing and them that hear is blessed, and acceptable with God; but song with grievous sadness in them that sing and bitterness of spirit in them that hear is not pleasing to God.

Therefore, in all the congregations of the people of God, let all strife and contention concerning song service cease; and that the worship in the house of the Lord may be complete and wholly acceptable, let them who shall be moved thereto by a desire and the gift to sing take upon them the burden and care of the service, and use therein instruments of music of the reed and of the string, or instruments of brass in congregations that are large, and as wisdom and choice may direct.

Let the young men and maidens cultivate the gifts of music and of song; let not the middle-aged and old forget the gladness of their youth and let them aid and assist so far as their cares will permit; and remember that Saints should be cheerful in their warfare that they may be joyous in their triumph.

Nevertheless, let the organ and the stringed instrument, and the instrument of brass be silent when the Saints assemble for prayer and testimony, that the feelings of the tender and the sad may not be intruded upon.—Doctrine and Covenants 119: 6.

We are admonished that we shall sing with the Spirit and with the understanding. One meaning of this is that we shall understand and feel that which we sing. An empty song comes from an empty heart. Possibly some who sing understand what they sing, but surely no one else does. Enunciation should be given more attention. To paraphrase Hamlet: "If you mouth it, as many of your singers do, I had as lief the town crier sang my song."

Again, simplicity should not be forgotten. The elect may be educated to perceive all the many beauties and fine niceties of classical music; but the common people (and there are oceans of common people) love the simpler themes that spring from the heart and go to the heart. This is as true of instrumental music as it is of vocal music. Alice Hegan Rice, in her story of "Mr. Opp," tells of the performance of a young girl who was induced to play for the passengers on board a steamer:

A demure young girl, with gentle, brown eyes, was making a furious and apparently unwarranted attack upon the piano. Her one desire evidently was to get inside of the instrument. With insinuating persistence she essayed an entrance through the treble, and being unable to effect it, fell upon the bass, and exhausted a couple of rounds of ammunition there.

The assault on both flanks being unsuccessful, she resorted to strategy, crossing her hands and assailing each wing of the enemy from an unexpected quarter.

When this move failed, she evidently became incensed, and throwing aside diplomacy, rallied all her forces, charging her artillery up to the highest note, then thundering down to the lowest, beating down the keys as fast as they dared to rise.

In the midst of the carnage, when the clamor was at its height and victory seemed imminent, she suddenly paused, with one hand in air and her head gently inclined, and, tapping out two silvery bugle notes of truce, raised the siege.

The appalling silence that ensued might have hung above a battlefield of slain and wounded.

The player was astonished at the impression that she failed to make. At her graduating exercises that piece had won great applause. But now all were silent. With difficulty she was induced to play again, and, much humbled, chose a simple song and melody known and loved for generations. The applause came tumultuously and was sincere. She had touched the heart cord.

This is not a plea for the cheap and vulgar, however, the air is full of inane and sentimental love songs not one in ten of which will live or deserves to live a year.

There are certain songs expressive of the tender passion, and certain other songs expressive of the divine passion that have endured and will endure as long as men love and worship. To have the purity, depth of feeling, and ability to render those songs properly is an object worthy of ambition. It is an ambition that may well be consecrated to holy purposes.

Many of our young people are so consecrating it. That spirit finds expression in our general choir movement, supported by the general orchestra movement. With these movements we are in most enthusiastic accord.

A great work lies before our singers everywhere. Not only may they comfort, solace, enthuse, arouse our own people to fresh religious zeal and more noble efforts and sacrifices; they may be of incalculable assistance to the missionary in his effort to reach and hold nonmembers.

Everywhere bands of consecrated musicians should be reporting to the church authorities for service in connection with missionary efforts in the "regions round about" the home branch—in halls, on the street, in private homes. The call has gone forth. Who will respond?

We close with words from the inspired hymn:

One day when fell the Spirit's whisper,
And touched with zeal the waiting throng,
Inspiring hope, it courage gave them,
To cultivate the gift of song;
With skillful hands and sweeter voices,
The Master called for service glad;
He knew one heart that so rejoices,
Wrought good surpassing many sad.

Sweet fell the call for Zion's children,
What comfort in this last command,
Who bear the burden of this service,
Who sing should seek to understand;
Young men with voices strong yet tender,
And maids in clear, sweet tones of youth,

Make this great gift a joy and blessing,
Give wings of song to words of truth.

To some grown old with cares hard laden,
The message gleamed with sweeter truth;
They caught the wave of sweet rejoicing,
And sang with gladness of youth;
Now harp and voice and sweet-toned organ,
The best loved songs in worship raise,
That ours be counted joyful triumph,
The Spirit's gift—blest gift of praise.

* * * * *

THE USE OF PICTURES

BY EDWARD D. MOORE

A number of our ministry, and others especially confronted with the problem of reaching the public with our message, are convinced that it pays to use illustrations in advertising work, but do not know just how to proceed to do it effectively.

This article is intended to offer a few suggestions to such, by pointing out some concrete things that should be known by everyone who expects to use printer's ink. From our own experience and that of others, we have reason to believe that no trade or art is less understood than that of the printer, yet perhaps the product of no other is so constantly before all of us.

THE USE OF CUTS

When a plate of a picture is made for printing, it is then known as a "cut." The pictures in this number are all printed from cuts, though there are important differences in them, some of which we will point out.

Look carefully at the pictures of the little girl with the rose. They are copper half tones from photographs. Sometimes half tones are made from zinc, but they are not so durable and consequently are not so much in favor for permanent work.

You will perceive that the one on the left looks coarse and rough, while the one on the right is smooth and delicate. If you were to choose, you would naturally take the latter. Then why should the first one find any favor at all since it is no cheaper? you might ask. As a famous advertiser says so often we all remember it: "There's a reason."

If this same cut were run on the same grade of paper as is used by the average newspaper, you would find a black, smudgy-looking picture on the right and a plain though coarse one on the left. The screen effect seen on each, gradually diminishing until hardly seen on the last one is the cause of this. The points where these little furrows cross are what make the impression and when they are tiny and

This cut loaned us by courtesy of the Terre Haute Engraving Co., Terre Haute, Indiana.

SERIES OF HALF TONES, SHOWING THE DIFFERENT SCREENS

In ordering cuts made from pictures, one should decide beforehand how he will use them most. Cuts are made up in different "screens," based on the number of meshes to the inch in the screen which may be seen on all half tones. The screens of these are, reading from left to right: 60, 75, 110, 133, 150. If the cut is for newspaper work almost exclusively, order the 60 or 75, preferably the latter. If it must do general service on all kinds of paper, the 110 could be used with fair success on the cheaper papers and would look quite well on the harder finishes. If for "cut-out" work or printing direct onto bristol board, as suggested in the article, use either the 150 or the 133, respectively.

close together the ink from them runs together on coarse, rough paper. On a hard-finish paper these fine-screen cuts can be so carefully printed that they are almost as plain as the original photograph.

Possibly you have wondered why the HERALD does not use more pictures in its regular issues. Compare the paper in this issue with that of the regular numbers and you will have one big reason.

Most of the half tones and electros (an electro is much the same as a half tone) of the hundreds here at the office are made for the better grades of paper and consequently are not suitable for use in the regular issues of the HERALD, even though the paper used is a better grade than is used by newspapers.

Note how some of the high-priced magazines such as the World's Work print all their illustrations in one section and the reading matter in another. An examination of the paper will tell you why. A gloss on the printed page is undesirable, so it is avoided in this manner.

"TAKE MY YOKE UPON YOU AND LEARN OF ME."

"MY YOKE IS EASY AND MY BURDEN IS LIGHT."

MATT. 11:29

A zinc etching from a pen-and-ink drawing. This cut would print on any paper suitable for type.

If pen-and-ink drawings only are used—that is, just plain black and white like the picture of the yoke accompanying this article—any paper that may be used for type is suitable. These are usually zinc etchings and cost much less than the copper half tones. They have no screen effect.

By comparing the yoke picture with the others you will see why one is called a "half tone" and the other is not. The various tones from pure white to deep black are seen in the one and not in the other, hence the name.

Knowing some of these details we may with less hesitancy approach a printer in regard to our desires and intelligently arrange for the execution of a job.

SOME WAYS OF USING CUTS

While there are innumerable variations in the professional use of cuts, there are several ways in which our branches and publicity committees can effectively make use of them.

Every branch with a church building which they are proud of could have a nice large cut made for use on advertising posters. These posters might be used to announce regular services or for special occasions.

On a good weight of bristol board have the printer run off a number of impressions from your cut. We suggest the half sheets, about 11 by 29 inches in size, the cut in the upper left-hand corner, about an inch from each edge. If there is some one in the community who can do presentable lettering (and if there isn't one can soon learn) let him run a border around the card up to the picture on each side and fill in the middle with some nicely-worded announcements. Then you will have something that will be read and remembered with pleasure.

If that is found too expensive—though if it gets results it is not all expense—try the following plan, which has proven to be a good one.

Some of our missionaries have cuts made on a large size. From these they have a number run off on some good paper suitable for such work—scraps would do as well as anything else. When they want to use them, they simply take a pair of scissors and cut out an outline view or leave it square and paste it on the card. With a pen or brush they letter in their announcements in attractive color combinations, then they have something that a business man is glad to have in his window.

The cut of Elder E. E. Long, appearing in this number of the HERALD was made for such purposes and he reports that it is quite effective. We know of others who are doing likewise with good results. The smaller cuts can be used but are not so effective for the larger posters.

It is well to have a smaller cut made with large screen, the right width for newspaper columns, like the one of Brother Baldwin, appearing herewith, or the one of Brother O. R. Miller, in this number. By writing a straightforward, affirmative article about our work and handing it with a good cut, to an editor, seldom will he resist the temptation to use them if he has the room.

ACTION IN PICTURES

At a meeting held during the late General Conference season at Independence, where advertising was being discussed, Brother C. Ed Miller, who is an experienced printer and artist, as well as aggressive missionary, told us he knew of at least one big newspaper that would hardly print a picture unless there was action in it. The "peaceful repose" effect was not wanted. He pointed out a handbill on the wall where a display had been made, and said the picture of O. R. Miller, like the one in this number, was a good example.

That idea is worth while. The cut of Brother Baldwin was evidently made and used by one of those Ohio newspapers. Many of the news agencies follow this idea and try to secure action. So far as possible, their pictures show motion, even if the subject is only walking down the street. However, just any "action" pose might not be appropriate for this work. One should exercise care in this so his characteristics will not be misrepresented. There should be sufficient dignity and expressiveness so that when one is heard in public the audience will not feel that they have been deceived.

USING STOCK PICTURES

We mean by "stock" pictures, those already in print, such as may be obtained of the Perry Pictures Company and a number of other firms. These companies print most excellent pictures on many religious subjects, reproduced from famous masterpieces. They come in many sizes and styles, black and sepia. By making cut-outs such as we mentioned above, very effective illustrating may be done.

If anyone has any scruples about using his own picture on posters, he might use some of these. For instance, the one of the "Good Shepherd" is very appropriate, and there are a number of others.

A distinctively illustrated and nicely arranged poster with a simple message will be read and considered where a mere handbill would be disregarded or not seen at all.

THE COST

The initial cost is fairly high, so one should be careful to get the right thing. Not all photographs, for instance, make good half tones. The outlines should be distinct and the light clear. In the larger cities are men who specialize on work of this kind, while any photographer who will give a little special attention to the end sought should be able to passably succeed.

Both copper and zinc are used in making half tones, though it usually pays to invest the difference in price and get the former since they wear longer and give better service if used much.

Prices have ascended with the general upward market, but present quotations are about 15 cents a square inch for the copper half tones, 11 cents for the zinc, 8 cents for the zinc etchings. The prices vary according to size and whether you get squares, ovals, vignettes, or outlines. There is usually a minimum charge of $1.25 for half tones and 75 cents on zinc etchings.

ART WORK FOR THE CHURCH

Sometimes we are asked why there aren't more illustrations in the church publications—pen-and-ink etchings that would print well.

While the extra expense is one item, the biggest reason why this is not done is that so far there has not been sufficient demand for this work to justify the employment of a skilled workman, while to have this done at long range for miscellaneous jobs is unsatisfactory for all concerned. Some definite work, such as the covers for Autumn Leaves now being furnished by the Arts and Crafts Club of Kirtland, may be done very nicely as they are doing it.

However, we are hopeful. Several earnest and capable workers have signified their willingness to serve the church in this manner and have already submitted some work. We earnestly hope that the time may come when the church work may have sufficiently developed to require all the time of some one or more of these people. Then they can work out the little problems with the big ones and the church will benefit in many ways.

We have occasional dreams—just daydreams—in which we see the time when all the Sunday school Quarterlies as well as the Religio Quarterlies, will be profusely illustrated. When the courses are made more permanent and the lessons are sufficiently revised to justify a continuation, these things can be done according to our own ideals and in accordance with the spirit of the latter-day work. For instance, we won't have angels with wings as we so often see in stock pictures.

Then there are the tracts and circulars and the HERALD and Ensign. The Stepping Stones and Hope are already quite well illustrated, but with our own artists directly in touch with the needs there would be a great improvement.

(Continued on page 1159.)

REV. RICH BALDWIN
ADDRESSING CROWD
A good example of a newspaper cut.

ORIGINAL ARTICLES AND POEMS

"AUTUMN MUSE"

BY EDITH G. FRAZER

The summer's gone. That gentle, rustling breeze,
Half chill, half warm, to the imaginative mind,
Her spirit is. That sunshine on the trees,
Halo of the departed, blessing those she's left behind.

The autumn's here. Once more the corn patch looks Like a miniature encampment. Its khaki tone relieved
By splashy yellow, pumpkins. In its nooks
A homey bit o' fairyland the bold field mouse has weaved.

Along the country roadside, and in the woods, some one's at work.

King of the seasons, artist of word-wide fame, pass on!
Through field and forest solitude, where giant shadows lurk, E'en everywhere, unspoiled by shallow man. Thy changeless pow'r hath gone.

The barns are brimming full. God's bounty doth provide;
For when the sky is wild, and the trees are weird and bare,
The earth, a growthless, barren waste, huge snowdrifts far and wide,
For food and clothes, let's raise to Him a glad Thankgiving prayer.

* * * * *

CHRISTMAS IN HAWAII

BY EDWARD INGHAM

'Tis Christmas in the fair clime of Hawaii:
The season's smile of greeting fills the land;
The sun beams brightly from a friendly sky,
And balmy, sparkling waters lave the strand.

The hills are freshly garbed in verdant hues:
Their crests relieved by banks of sunlit cloud;
The vales repose in purple haze, where dews
Of night still linger 'neath some leafy shroud.

The purling waters of yon mountain stream
Like silver strands descend, and on the breeze
Waft to our tranquil senses, like a dream,
The murmur of their mystic melodies.

The rainbow's glowing iridescent rays
Illuminate the landscape—veil'd in shower;
The shapely palms their waving plumes high raise
O'er shady nook and cool, secluded bower.

In maze of leafy branches, overhead,
Blithe chattering birds hold noisy carnival;
Sly sunbeams glance where hamadryads tread,
In wooded solitudes grown prodigal.

Sweet flowers some deserted garden grace,
Where Flora's gayest garlands creep and cling;
Her rarest perfumes haunt the charming place,
And burdened bees hum gayly on the wing.

In shallows of yon placid lily pond,
The slothful goldfish gently glide and gleam;
Bold robber sparrows, in the grove beyond,
Their crops well stored with food, contented seem.

While nature kind, with jeweled censer, swings
Her sweetest incense here at Christmastide:
We think of how her cruel winter flings
Its fury round some northern fireside.

* * * * *

FROM THE ASHES---A THANKSGIVING

BY VIDA E. SMITH

I have just been reading the governor's Thanksgiving proclamation. Looking up from my paper my eye falls upon a sun low down in the western sky after a glorious Indian summer day. How many hearts to-day, beneath that very sun have turned like mine to the year gone by and mentally taken stock of blessings. Turned from a house, empty, still, but, thank God, filled and teeming full of sweet, glad memories. The years that go by cannot take them from us, although we see them through a rain of tears.

Two years ago our circle was unbroken, one year ago the first autumn leaves drifted over our baby girl's grave, and all the rest were far away. Even the little babe, that she had lovingly, laughingly promised should be at the family feast, it was not ours to cuddle and take cheer from in the home, but we had the memory of her songs and laughter, and tender love messages from the living.

Sometimes I dream of the losses of that year and wonder why it had to be. There seems such irony in fate, and when I had to give up her baby it seemed to me God had forsaken me. For the other grandmother had already the little baby girl, not yet two years old, that her dying daughter had laid in her arms, and she had her son, and we had nothing of the blue-eyed darling of our flock.

And then—it came—the twenty-one beautiful years that she had lived—they were ours. But oh, her baby, to feel that it was reasonable and right to let it go with the father, to cheer and comfort his young heart, while our own was broken anew every day for the care of it, was another lesson. And it seems nothing gives surcease from it. There is nothing that is ours to give that we would not give to have her little boy, for which she gave her life, in the midst of our home. But it is denied us, and so we turn back to the golden years that his mother was our baby, and hug them to our hearts—in thanksgiving. November has been a month of festivals in our home, for our two youngest girls were November

VIDA E. SMITH.

"I would rise from individual crosses and heartaches and denials to the big, broad, God-appointed plan."

girls, and their birthdays are parts of Thanksgiving Day memories.

Over the world to-day hangs a cloud of care. Nations weep as one family over the world-spread sorrows, and one nation cannot feast in Christian love and forget the grief and hunger that rule in others. So we turn from individual sorrows to the greater one of nations, and turn again from contemplation of meager fare to that of nations absolutely hungry. So I would rise from these individual crosses and heartaches and denials to the big, broad, God-appointed plan in which we are a simple part and thank God that memory can feast on many a sweet and gladsome season and hear again sweet voices that cannot grow old, in a land of peace.

November, 1915.

WHEN DID JESUS ORGANIZE HIS CHURCH?

BY ELDER ELMER E. LONG

There has been considerable speculation as to whether the primitive church was organized before or after the death of its founder. A prevailing opinion is that the church was organized on the day of pentecost, but, like many other popular notions, it lacks historical proof. There is no evidence to prove that an organization of any kind was effected at pentecost. On the contrary, there is an abundance of circumstantial evidence to show a pre-pentecostal organization.

In Mark 1: 14, 15, we find the following:

Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel.

Here the Lord declares that the "time" is "fulfilled," and the kingdom, the church, is at hand. John the Baptist was "sent of God" (John 1: 6) to go before the Lord and "Make ready a people prepared for the Lord." (Luke 1: 17.) Again: "In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matthew 3: 1, 2.) Along with others, Jesus was baptized. Immediately after his baptism he went into the wilderness, where he remained forty days. Returning from his seclusion, it is said of him: "From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matthew 4: 17.)

John was busily engaged in his preparatory work of calling out a people when Jesus came on the scene, so that when the Lord began his work he had a people already "prepared" for organization. That was the beginning of the gospel preaching (Mark 1: 1) and Jesus took up the same proclamation, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," and after some further preparation he began to organize the material prepared into a "body," or church, by choosing twelve men whom he named "apostles." (Matthew 10: 1-4; Luke 6: 13.) These twelve men he "ordained," as the following scriptures clearly show:

And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him. And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach.—Mark 3: 13, 14.

Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain.—John 15: 16.

Referring to this work of organization, Paul says that God set the members in the "body" as it pleased him (1 Corinthians 12: 18) and tempered it together that there might be no schism in the body. Listen:

Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.—1 Corinthians 12: 17, 28.

The choosing and ordination of the twelve are supposed to have occurred some time in April, A. D. 28, and in October following he "chose other seventy also." (Luke 10: 1-16. See Bible Helps.) He could work only as material came to hand.

It was shortly after ordaining the twelve that he said: "I will build my church." (Matthew 16: 18.) He repeatedly affirmed that his Father sent him, and in John 9: 4 he says:

I must work the works of him that sent me, while I am with you; the time come when I shall have finished my work, then I go unto the father.

When he was about ready to go to his Father he said to him in prayer: "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." (John 17: 4.) Building his church was a part of that work, and since he finished his work and returned to his Father according to the divine arrangement, there is but one logical conclusion: he organized his church before the day of pentecost.

When establishing "the church in the wilderness," Moses was instructed to "make all things according to the pattern shown to thee in the mount." (Exodus 25: 40; Hebrews 5: 8.) The wilderness institution was a "shadow" of good things to come. (Hebrews 10: 1.) A shadow is an outline of the real object. In this instance the shadow was an organized institution. It consisted of three men at the head, Moses, Aaron, and Hur, and twelve "princes," one from each tribe, and a body of seventy elders, all closely associated, besides lesser officers with specific duties to perform. When Jesus began to build his church it partook of the form outlined by the shadow, the leading officials being apostles and seventy elders chosen and ordained before his death, with their duties and prerogatives specified.

There can be no official action without organization, and the fact that the apostles acted officially, authoritatively, is proof positive that an organization of some kind existed before the death of Jesus. The only official action pertaining to organization immediately after the death of the Savior was the selection of Matthias to fill a vacancy in a body that already existed, and that action was had before pentecost. The apostolic quorum was a necessary part of the church (1 Corinthians 12: 28), not only a part of it but officers in it. (Romans 11: 13.) Concerning the death of Judas and the selection of Matthias to take his place, it is written: "Let another take his office." (Psalm 109: 8.) Holding a like position in the church, the Apostle Paul could properly say, "I magnify mine office." Judas lost his "office" by transgression before the death of Jesus. His office was an official position in the church, conferred on him at the time of his ordination, and contributed to the organic structure of the kingdom of God "at hand." This is clearly evident from the following scriptures:

Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners,

ELDER ELMER E. LONG.

but fellow citizens with the saints of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord; in whom ye are also builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit.—Ephesians 2: 19-22.

The "foundation" must be laid and the chief corner stone placed in position before the building can be erected. Jesus, the wise master builder, laid the foundation of the organic structure when he selected and ordained the twelve, and when the chief corner stone was fully "tried" he became the head stone of the corner. Isaiah declared the word of the Lord concerning the matter when he said: "Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone." (Isaiah 28: 16.) That stone was "tried" immediately after his baptism; he was tried many times during his ministerial labors; he was tried in Gethsemane, and before Pilate. Tried (tempted) in all points like we are, yet without sin, hence the appellation, "precious stone." So it is written: "The stone which the builders refused has become the head stone of the corner." (Psalm 118: 22; 1 Peter 2: 4-7.) The chief corner stone is so situated that it comes in direct contact with the foundation and building, lending strength and beauty to the structure as a whole, and be in all and through all.

The following scriptures clearly indicate a pre-pentecostal organization:

And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.—Matthew 11: 12.

Then said Jesus unto them, The law and the prophets testify of me; yea, and all the prophets who have written, even unto John, have foretold these days. Since that time, the kingdom of God is preached, and every man who seeketh truth presseth into it.—Luke 16: 17, 18.

John and Jesus did considerable baptizing during the lifetime of Jesus. Jesus told his disciples, "I have chosen you out of the world." (John 15: 19.) Paul says they were "baptized into Christ." (Galatians 3: 27.) In other words, they were "translated into the kingdom of God's dear son." (Colossians 1: 13.) Baptism, then, is the means of entrance into the "body" of Christ, which is his church, (Ephesians 1: 22, 23.) It is the door into the sheepfold. (John 10: 1, 2.) Jesus entered this "door" when he was baptized by John, the "porter." The "sheepfold" was erected, the "body of Christ" was created, the kingdom, or "church of God" was organized before and not at or after pentecost.

The record of what occurred on the day of pentecost begins with the first verse of the second chapter of Acts. Reading the whole chapter carefully we fail to find a single sentence that would indicate the work of organization. It is purely a presumption. Early in the day while assembled together, the Holy Ghost descended upon them according to promise, they having been commanded to tarry until the endowment came. (Luke 24:48.) This endowment was the infusion of life into the "body of Christ." As God created the body of man and afterward breathed into it the breath of life, so Christ created, organized, his mystical body, the church, and afterward breathed into it the Holy Spirit. The popular notion prevailing among a large number of Protestant Christians that the church was organized or "set up" on the day of pentecost is only one of the many errors that grew out of the Reformation for which there is no warrant in sacred or profane history.

* * * * *

A BETTER USE OF ART IN THE CHURCH--- NO. 1

BY ELMER A. KALER

[The following is one of a series of brief articles on this subject, written by some of our members who are especially interested in this phase of our work. Other articles will appear from time to time. —EDITORS.]

The use of art in the upbuilding of our church work plays a very important part. Art has had a very important part in the world's history from the beginning of civilization until the present time. Art and its work not only cover a long period of time but cover a broad field of use in this day and age. Its work is from the beautiful paintings to the beautifying of our great cities by the cultivating of the art of Mother Nature in the landscape, in the architecture and building and work of all kinds.

Its field is broad in the use of art in our church work, and everyone of us should be interested in its part in the betterment of the work in which we are all interested. We all know the Lord expects us to use the best of everything in this great work. Art in the building of our church edifices and the decorating of them should be well considered by us. We cannot spend millions of dollars in erecting large churches that will attract attention by their size and cost, but our smallest mission church can claim attention by the beautiful simplicity of its architecture and decorating. A great deal of study on the building of churches should be made by those whose work runs along that line, and plans submitted to the heads of the church that could be used in the erection of our churches all over the land. [The First Presidency will put any local congregation in touch with competent architects.—EDITOR.]

The use of art in the landscape on our church property can be put to a great use. The little mission with vines intertwining on it, and the flowers and grass grown around it artistically will have more attraction for the seeker of the truth than the largest, costliest edifice in the world.

Our homes should be places of beauty and a place for the cultivation of art. We cannot all be artists along a certain line but sometimes in our work it can be used to a great advantage. The art of a beautiful character is of great importance to us all individually. It would not be worth much to us to be great painters, singers or artists along some great line if the art of our daily walk in life was neglected. Our gospel is an art of itself and all worldly art we can use to improve and better it should be done.

There are many things that could be done along this line besides the beauty in our church building. The Lord has told us not to forget the gladness of our youth and join in the song of praise to him and cultivate the art of music in the young. We all can do our part in the use of music in our church work.

Photography, photo-engraving and printing are used in our church publications. I see a great deal of this work and it counts a good deal along the other things also. Our church publications are sent out all over the world and we are largely judged by people of the world through them. Our illustrations and literary work in them should be the best.

Some of us who have talent along literary lines should be ready to contribute to these publications. Our photographers and artists in other special lines can use the best of their abilities in this way. The illustrating of these church papers and books comes under the line of printing, drawing, painting and photo-engraving. I have taken up the latter work and hope to qualify among the best in my line of work for betterment of our church work.

I heard a gentleman who was looking at one of our church magazines say, "Those people know their business all right, for that is good printing," and he is a man of years of experience in that line. We always want to have the best along every department of art because we have the best in religion and must attain the best in other ways as well.

Beautiful illustrating in pamphlets and tracts telling of this great gospel could be put before the critical eye of the public.

The art of education is also a great factor in our work. It enables us to understand more fully, and education is one of the leading points of to-day. We should have great men along this line also. Our college should be supported and a special course be established along the line of other colleges for the better preparation of our young men for work among the world in missionary work.

I heard a professor remark that he would rather hear President F. M. Smith talk than many noted speakers he had heard before, and considered him one of the best educated men he knew, one who made excellent use of the English language in his speaking. These things help to maintain our standing among the people of the world. There has been a movement in Independence and other places of holding classes in general psychology, economics, etc., to teach our people these special subjects, and they are well worth following.

The author of this article at his work of electro-engraving.

We all have a talent along some line or other and should be willing to use and develop it in the betterment of this great latter-day work. Art is a very broad subject and a great many things can be classed under its head in a general sense. I hope with all of you to do my part.

* * * * *

THE "HERALD" OF NEXT WEEK.—By reason of issuing so many illustrated articles in this number, we will have an especially large number of interesting letters next week. We are sure you will enjoy them.

* * * * *

In the country there was a house which was supposed to have a haunted room. One day the father determined to put a stop to the superstition, so he said he would sleep in that room. He did so, and next morning he came down smiling. "There!" he said, "I told you. There is nothing to be afraid of there." Is not this exactly what Christ did for us?—Sunday School Chronicle.

CONCERNING OUR REUNIONS

A Brief History of the Origin of the Yearly Reunions Held By the Members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ

BY ELDER CHARLES DERRY

It is well known by the older members of the church that as a church we used to hold two yearly meetings, known as General Conferences. One convened on April 6, the other on October 6. These meetings lasted usually about ten days. That in April was held in the East. That in October here in the West. These meetings were a source of strength to the membership as well as of aid to the ministry. But after a while it was thought wise to hold but one General Conference a year, and that to be in the spring beginning April 6, in the East.

AT THE LOGAN REUNION.

My field of labor was here in the West. The Saints greatly missed the fall conference, for by taking that away they were deprived of one great means of grace and also of the privilege of mingling with each other in the bonds of true fellowship, which is essential to the growth of each other in love. As a shepherd among them, I saw this; and the idea of holding reunion assemblies by the several districts in the West, to fill the void caused by taking away the fall conference impressed my mind. I mentioned my views to some of my ministerial brethren, they agreed with me.

The result was, I was requested to present the matter to the next General Conference. I did so on April 12, 1883, at Kirtland, Ohio. Some opposed the measure, thinking it would be a financial burden on the church. I urged that the reunions would bear their own expenses. The request was granted, and such assemblies were named, "The Latter Day Saints Reunion!"

The Little Sioux District and Gallands Grove District met at Lelands Grove, on September 15, 1883, and continued until the 23d. We were favored with the presence of President Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, E. C. Briggs, R. Etzenhouser, and most of the local ministry, but far better than all, the Almighty condescended to meet with us by the power of his Spirit; and although the weather was unfavorable, yet the Saints rejoiced in the liberty of the children of God, and the vote was unanimous to hold another reunion next year, in Garners Grove. A committee was appointed to make preparations for the same. I cannot remember who were the committee that prepared for this first reunion but the following were prominent workers for it: J. A. McIntosh, M. Putney, J. C. Crabb, William Rumell, and the members of the priesthood in general. All the Saints in the West here encouraged the workers. The reunion was now fairly launched and the smile of God was upon it!

The attention of the world was aroused, and as we met in different places year after year, thousands flocked to see the strange phenomenon, of a people meeting to worship God in the open air, a people who claimed to believe that God had sent a messenger to the earth, to proclaim anew the everlasting gospel of Christ, as he taught it in the cities of Judea, with all its precepts, promises and blessings, even to the blessing of eternal life. Many came to scoff who returned to pray. Leading men and women of the world expressed their surprise. They had expected to see an ignorant and disorderly crowd, but instead they declared they had never seen such an orderly assembly, either religious or political, and while they were not able to discern the grand secret of such peace and order, they declared that every Latter Day Saint governed himself or herself. But we who had obeyed the truth knew it was the divine influence of the Holy Spirit that governed.

CAMP SCENE AT KIRTLAND REUNION, 1916, FROM SOUTHWEST CORNER, SHOWING BACK OF THE TEMPLE.

Thus the good work went on year after year, and many hundreds were led to see the light and obey it.

The introduction of reunions opened the door for the various auxiliaries to the church for the benefit of the young as well as the aged, and thus the reunion has been made an instrument for good—and instead of it loading the church with a bill of expense it has been a great source of financial help.

Other districts saw the power for good in these general assemblies and adopted them until now, I question if there is an organized district in the church that does not hold its annual reunion, and all are made partakers of the blessings resulting therefrom. I thank God I was led to suggest the establishing of them.

May the good work go on and increase in power and blessedness until the light of heaven shines upon every land and nation, and the redeemed join in one grand reunion of everlasting peace and love.

Beloved Saints, my work is fast drawing to a close. I can no longer labor as in the past, but my desires for the spread of God's kingdom increase with my years. I do not believe that I have labored in vain, in spending my life in his glorious cause. I ask an interest in your prayers, that I may still cling to the rod of iron that leads unerringly to the tree of life.

* * * * *

THE INFLUENCE OF THE HOME IN CHARACTER BUILDING

BY MRS. A. E. WARR

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.—Proverbs 4: 23.

Inasmuch as the home is the heart of the church it should be kept with all diligence, for in it are the forces which shape the characters of the young of the church either for weal or woe. What a great responsibility is placed upon us then, as fathers and mothers in Israel, for unless our children are blessed with the influences that make for strong characters how can we consistently expect the church to be what the Lord desires?

CHARACTER

The primary meaning of the word character is to engrave, impress, or form. In the home the character is formed, for only in childhood can we shape the character of our children. In after years it may be strengthened, but never can the early impression be changed, or as the following little poem aptly illustrates, it is better to form than try to reform.

I took a piece of living clay, and gently formed it day by day,

And molded with my power and art, a young child's soft and yielding heart.

I came again when days were gone. It was a man I looked upon.

He still that early impress bore, and I could change it nevermore.

THE HOME

Our homes should be "more than four square walls." They should be indeed the bulwark of our

TORONTO REUNION GROUNDS, LOW BANK, ONTARIO.

Christian civilization, the index of our Christian development. Our homes must be made attractive if we would keep our children interested there. First of all they must be kept clean and in order. There should be pictures upon the walls, not just any pictures, but selected pictures that will suggest high ideals and cause the child to love the beautiful. Much is imbibed through the eye during the early years of childhood. Good books should be provided, also the church papers and publications of an educational nature. Young people naturally enjoy reading and if their tastes are formed for good literature it is seldom that they will care for literature of a baser nature.

ASSOCIATIONS

We should know with whom our children associate. Most of us are familiar with the story of the good apple and the bad, how the bad apple soon spoiled the good one when placed together. So it will be with our children. If we would have them pure they must be allowed to associate with only pure-minded children.

RELIGIOUS TRAINING

The religious training of our children must not be neglected. They should be taught to have faith in God and his church. Never should the family altar be neglected. When a little family come together for prayer and supplication to God, he has promised to be in their midst, and when all take part as they should be taught to do, strong bonds of love and sympathy are formed that the power of the Evil One cannot overthrow. If possible our children should be taught to attend our church services, and where this is not practicable; the home-class work makes provisions.

LIGHT OF THE HOME

Jesus, said, "Ye are the light of the world." The light of the home should shed its rays afar, and must do so if the statement of the Master is to be realized. Then let us as parents be diligent in the affairs of our household that our children's characters may be made strong that they may indeed be rays of light coming from the beautiful light of the home where Zionic righteousness has obtained, and that they may therefore be prepared to go forth to teach others and aid them in the great battle of life.

THE SECURITY OF SILENCE

BY MRS. W. E. HARDER

"Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace, to silence envious tongues."

Wisdom has her permanent dwelling place with the individual who knows when to be silent. There are times when the simple closing of the lips is worth more than the choicest speech. It is not because we were silent that we are sorry, but because we were not. Silence is indeed golden.

There are times when the minds about us are warring with one another. There is a misunderstanding in the neighborhood, trouble in the church, discord in the family, perhaps. Unless one is sure of bringing forth the word in season, there is nothing like the calm security of silence. It is a refuge in the time of trouble. Just being quiet.

This is not the timid silence of cowardice, nor the stubborn silence of anger. It is the golden silence of right thinking, the calm center of the storm.

We all think vastly well of our spoken word. We set a high value upon what we have said. A thought embodied in a sound we regard as a thing of imporance. Just a simple unspoken thought we may be willing to give up, since nobody will know that we found ourselves mistaken. But our word! that is another matter. If we do not stand up for it we are indeed poor creatures. We must live up to our spoken word.

We may be sorry. Forgiveness, repentance, a full knowledge of the truth may enlighten us; but we said it, and we cannot take it back. We gave our version of the story, we spoke our mind in the quar-

CAMPING ON HISTORIC GROUND—KIRTLAND, OHIO.

Showing exterior and interior of the temple, and the camp grounds.

rel. We remember how clear we made it all when we chanced, as alas, we often did, upon a willing listener. We recollect how we reasoned it out that others might see our wisdom and our friends' folly. We became interested, intensely interested, and made a point of going carefully into it all.

And now that it is all past, now, when the storm has cleared and we see objects that were distorted, in the direct, simple light of truth; now that the beam of unrighteous judgment has fallen from our eyes so that we see naturally, we want to forgive and forget, but we have provided against the comfort of forgetting. We must live up to our indignation.

If only we had taken refuge in the security of silence! The tongue of the talebearer does, indeed, separate "chiefest friends." And the talebearer suffers along with the rest.

If the matter is one that begins between two, wise are these two if it be settled there; the injustice, whatever it may be, be allowed to proceed no further than the close confines of its beginnings. If the one goes his way and the other his way, telling as they go all that is in their hearts, how wide, how perilously wide, have they made the breach between them.

Silence! Wise is the individual who takes it for his shield. It is better than the sharp tongue, that is indeed a sword. Instead of word thrust for word thrust, the wise person slips quietly behind the shield of silence and secret prayer and the battle is soon a thing of the past.

Hard? But why? Would not there have been a brave act in drawing a ready sword? Is it nobler to say a hard word back than it is simply to be still?

There is a time to speak and duty calls for words that are not always pleasant to hear. But the careful thinking person knows that this time has not come if anger is alive in the heart of the hearer.

Argument is of no avail unless it is out of honest truth seeking. A silver-tongued orator could never convince an angry man of the simplest truth. The best thing to do is to leave the man alone.

Whatever may be the nature of the trouble, silence in regard to it is safest and best. How can the story go if no one tells it? And if it is not a good story, though indeed it may be a true one, it is better that it should not go abroad.

Is the world better for all the pouring out upon it the vile details of crime? Is our daughter safer, our son nobler, because the annual list of neighborhood sins and national crime have been carefully garnered in our inglenook?

Let the quarrel die when it is our turn to speak, and the gossip of the neighborhood will skip our door.

There is a dignity in simple silence that is wonderfully impressive. It means strength and self-control. It is finer and safer than the keenest sarcasm. It is by the lips that the enemy finds way to the heart's citadel.

Secure is the one who by a humble walk and faithful, devoted life knows when to set upon his lips the golden seal of silence.

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARDS THE MINISTRY AND MEMBERS OF OTHER CHURCHES

BY ELDER T. W. WILLIAMS

Love them. Pray for them. Be frank with them. Command their respect. Set a pace for them. Disarm their opposition. Greet them as friends. Credit them with honesty.

Ours is a work of education. Example is more effective than precept. Affirm your position rather than assail theirs. If we have the truth we can demonstrate it. Do not credit them with ulterior motives. Do not invite their ill will by mental suggestion.

Kindness is far more effective than abuse. Do not call our work a warfare, unless you qualify it. Ours is a message of love; the warfare should be more within than without.

On entering a town, extend a cordial invitation to the minister as well as his flock to attend your service. "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Concede that it is possible for them to honestly believe what to you is absurd. Do not charge the minister with preaching for hire; for, with few exceptions, most ministers are poorly paid.

Place yourself where they are; look at things as they look at them; proceed to reason yourself from their position to your own.

We are sent out to save souls, not to damn them. It is not enough to tell the story, we must manifest the Spirit of Christ in the telling, being filled with a yearning solicitude for their souls' welfare.

We are sent out to win souls to Christ, rather than to make church members. Church membership is only incidental, a means to an end; the saving of souls a finale, a successful culmination.

Do not carry a chip on your shoulder, strutting around and defying some one to knock it off. Preach Christ. Hold him up before the people. All other personalities, however good, are simply echoes; nothing more, and scarcely that.

Affirm your position, rather than negate theirs. Ridicule is not argument. It indicates an ignorant and intolerant character. Assumption is not argument; assertion is not proof. A debate is generally the longest way around to a given and desired point.

This article by request contains eight hundred words—three hundred and fifty are herewith presented; the reader, by courtesy, will be allowed to supply the balance.

* * * * *

One of the most prevalent maladies, and that productive of misery, is meat poisoning—from over-indulgence in good, wholesome meats.—The Medical World.

SERMON HINTS

BY ELDER JAMES E. YATES

The sermon must not be the end, but the means to an end.

The object of teaching is to cause to know, but preaching must also persuade men to do.

The effective sermon must be in true sympathy with its hearers—there must be an unmistakable touch of fellow feeling.

ELDER JAMES E. YATES.

Intellectuality can never supplant warm-heartedness.

An intellectual iceberg may awe and repel, but a warm kitten is more lovable.

The preaching of a hopeful and a cheerful gospel is blessed, but the optimist who is so light-headed as to be giddy provokes disgust.

Solemn realities of life and eternity are to be treated with the candor and sobriety which their importance demands.

The first thing for a preacher to know is that his commission to preach is not borrowed, copied, or stolen from some document of antiquity, and that his call comes from a higher source than his congregation.

The next consideration is: what to preach, the third is: how to arrange and fit the subject matter together; and then comes the question as to best methods of delivery, illustration, etc.

The chief ingredients in the make-up of an effectual sermon are: the Spirit of God, a zeal for service, an appropriate subject for the occasion, and common sense enough to mix, not too sparingly, all the way through. If one has a little of the latter left to apply at the end of the sermon in case of criticisms, or even compliments, it will be just as well, and will be found to add to the flavor of the sermon to a greater or less degree—generally greater.

You are God's instrument. He works best with sharp tools. You may sharpen your own edge and enjoy the process, but if you leave it to God he will grind you in his own due time, and his grinding draws fire while it cuts.

* * * * *

METHODS--FAILURES AND TRIUMPHS IN MISSIONARY WORK

BY ELDER O. R. MILLER

Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad so far and so widely as you may. All are called according to the gift of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.—Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8.

The minister who conducts the meetings is usually blamed or praised, according to seeming failure or triumph. But God says we should labor together for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all. Every member of the body is needed, and all alike should feel the weight of responsibility.

About eight years ago I delivered my maiden sermon and have been hammering away at missionary work continually since. Naturally I must speak from a limited experience. I have attempted missionary campaigns in churches, under tents, on lawns, in school buildings, halls and cottages, and once in a small tabernacle. This work has been carried on in city, town, and rural districts. Sometimes it was my lot to do the presiding, praying, and preaching, and act as chorister or lead the congregational singing. And when the congregation would refuse to sing, it resulted in a solo. But most congregations will sing and enjoy it if we use the songs they are acquainted with. Some of the hymns may not harmonize with our teachings but the object is to make everyone feel that he is a part of the meeting.

Where we are organized, the results are more apparent when a praying speaker, a praying choir, and a praying congregation work in harmony. Cooperation is the life of everything. I am informed that there are some animals of the "donkey tribe" in South America that roam about in small herds.

When attacked they form a circle with heads together and kick the enemy. Wise animals! Wiser than some people who seemingly form a circle with heels together and kick each other!

TABERNACLE WORK AT HIBBARD, INDIANA

More than a year ago we began preaching in this little "burg." Brother S. S. Reed and his mother were the only members here. They accepted the gospel years ago. (One Brother Taylor lived at Burr Oak, a little more than a mile away. He had been baptized in Chicago some months before I came to Hibbard.)

No sooner had we begun our work, when the enemy by its "howl" evidenced to us that we were on territory worthy of attention. We were driven from "pillar to post," but went preaching the word and baptizing. The three in the ranks were soon reinforced by twenty-one others. A storm of opposition soon proved the worth of those who had evidently "counted the cost."

Now a house in which to worship became the problem. A tent might do for the summer, but to rent one was expensive and a risk. The lumber for a tabernacle would cost no more than a tent, we figured, and would give better satisfaction. This has since proven true. The building is quite substantial, and may be used for summer service right along. (If a live branch cared to carry on a campaign throughout a city, I believe they could tear such a building down and move it from place to place with little added expense.) It will comfortably seat two hundred and fifty.

The floor is made of "pulverized wood" (sawdust). However, "trail hitting" is not in our vocabulary. We have something better. From our decorations two stars swing along the aisle leading to the platform where a cross swings, which leads the way to the crown on the wall directly under the large motto "WELCOME." Just over the exit is the motto: "Come Again." There are other conspicuous mottoes, such as "The Gospel of Christ as Christ Taught it"; "Our Creed All Truth"; "Our motto: No Creed But the Christ." Brother E. D. Moore of Lamoni, Iowa, kindly donated his work on these.

The decorations, mottoes, and Old Glory woven and draped together before a congregation helped us wonderfully in impressing the mind with the beauty of the "Restored Gospel," and our—"Loyalty to Civic Government." But while we attempt to picture the beautiful we must remember that a coward can sing the "Star Spangled Banner!" Attitude does not necessarily express sincerity. Every Prince Albert does not robe a prince, and to be a Christian means more than singing, "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" Form and ceremony make a door to activity, and song should stimulate service.

WORK! WORK! WORK!

The above picture was born of work! work! work! Now a tithe of sacrifice and service may encourage, stimulate and awaken others.

After the lumber was on the ground, members and nonmembers rallied to the front and erected the tabernacle in about three days. Maybe I had better say, three days and nights. Some worked from early morn until nine o'clock in the evening. Others were employed elsewhere all day, but worked on the tabernacle from early evening until nine o'clock p. m. One morning some were on the job at three o'clock. And during the series of meetings some investigators worked all day on the farm, and in order to attend the meetings they came some evenings before eating supper. The "please have me excused" class take notice.

Brother Reed is only in moderate circumstances, but he is furnishing a little hall near the tabernacle to worship in during the late fall and winter. He also advanced the money to purchase the material for the tabernacle. Here are some examples, if followed by all in the church, that would take the missionary families out of the "bread line," send other men to the front, and hasten the gospel to every "kindred, tongue and people!" "What kind of a church would this church be if all the members were just like me?" should be seriously considered by each one.

ELDER O. R. MILLER.

The first series of meetings held in the tabernacle lasted about one month, beginning June 18. On some Sundays we received assistance from Chicago, Knox, and Ora. Special music, basket dinners, and all-day meetings produced a season of happiness, and brought out splendid crowds.

In the last few months six more have been baptized, and others are interested. While Brother Reed has sacrificed for the work amid a storm of opposition, I am sure results have come to his home that money could not purchase. A noble wife, two daughters, a son, a sister, a niece, and a cousin stand as monuments of his untiring efforts and unmovable faith. What is the worth of a soul? It can't be measured by things earthly. Brother Reed and his mother have a little grocery store at Hibbard. He also travels for a grocery firm. Some have attempted a boycott on both his local and traveling business, but where some quit others were supplied.

Brother Taylor is blacksmithing at Burr Oak and the same gag rule in the form of a boycott was tried on him, but his invaluable wife and daughter came into the church and he says he has more money to show for his last year's work than ever before at this location. I'll tell you, God does not leave faithful defenders of his faith comfortless. I occasionally hear the faint cry that God is not with us to-day as of old. A thousand evidences of his majesty deny it. It is true that some conditions are not as they should be, and we are far from perfection, but they that have "ears to hear" and "eyes to see" let them witness, and note the contrast between the great army which is marching onward and upward and the few sons of "gloom!"

Talk faith. The world is better off without Your uttered ignorance and morbid doubt.
If you have faith in God, or man, or self,
Say so; if not, push back upon the shelf
Of silence all your thoughts till faith shall come;
No one will grieve because your lips are dumb.

METHODS MUST DIFFER

One missionary uses certain methods and drives a city, town or rural campaign vigorously—as he thinks best. Results follow. He is anxious to tell others. Orally or by pushing the pen he enthusiastically does so. Some can see nothing in it but "froth," "foam," and "show." Some are attracted, and attempt the same methods, to the letter—and fail. Others study those methods, select the parts that please, and by changing their costumes to suit surroundings, they work.

Minds differ as faces, and communities differ accordingly. Methods of reaching and ways of presenting truth must be governed by customs and conditions.

In the city posts are covered, the windows are filled with cards and bills advertising political "bunk" and religious fancies. Something different from everything else in sight must be produced—if we wish to attract. Cheap appearing, and a stingy amount of advertising should never be tolerated—unless you wish to win only a few cheap souls! "The gospel free!" has been cried by men of old until "25-cent-a-year" members are in evidence and the preacher "goes begging!"

In Jackson and Lansing, Michigan, and other cities, I have picked up from the walk "cast-away" advertising matter in the form of a ticket: "Admit ONE to Hear Lecture, etc." Well, there are not a few who are attracted by the $9.98 sign! Something for nothing—free!

However the most expensive advertising I have engineered in city work, resulted in the most poorly attended meetings. The time was not opportune. "The preacher must tack up most of the bills," yes, with his picture on them. "But he must do this in order to show his willingness to work"—you know. Generally, country people are not so critical, and sometimes commend his willingness along such lines. City folk are accustomed to seeing the advance agents taking care of such work. And when they discover the preacher doing it all, even to the janitor work, they mark the price down to thirty cents and stay away.

The only "freeze out" I ever had was after advertising in a town weekly only. Yes it was "weakly." So were we that time. When the people failed to come I first thought of shaking off the dust from my feet, but after reconsidering the whole matter I concluded that the calamity might possibly fall on me instead of the "city." Less expense and less work was the principal consideration in procuring the "haunted" hall, and warning the populace through an unnoticed "sheet" (weekly paper). All things considered, it was a pretty good little paper, but some were so busy they never read it. Others failed to notice it for several days, and some glanced at the front page and cast it aside.

Plaster the town with bills and see that one is delivered INTO every home, then follow up with continuous newspaper notices. Some talented member should write about audiences, sermons, and songs. Don't be afraid the preacher will get the bighead if you happen to say something nice about him. Boost. Boost. Boost. Persistent and untiring efforts both attract and hold.

Failure comes to the man alone who is beaten within. The tomb could not imprison the Master of men. "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again." The seeming failure that cast a gloom over the disciples and caused the early news of his resurrection to "seem as idle tales" soon retreated before the demonstrated reality of his glorious triumph—"over death, hell and the grave."

May we hastily, but properly prepare a people for his triumphant reign.

[The cut showing the tabernacle at Hibbard was delayed in the mail and consequently left out of this article, though reference is made to it.—EDITORS.]

PASTORAL WORK

BY ELDER ARTHUR ALLEN

A minister of a large congregation was visited by a brother minister who was lamenting because he did not have a large congregation. He said: "My son, you will find in the day of judgment that you had quite enough people for whom to be held accountable."

PRAYERFUL PREPARATION

A pastor as shepherd of his flock has great responsibility and should sense the trust committed unto him. As far as possible, he should become personally acquainted with all the members of his branch; studying their individual needs and leading them into pasture that will develop within them the greatest amount of spiritual life. The opportunity afforded to break the bread of life to his members from the pulpit should be highly esteemed by the pastor, and he ought to diligently and prayerfully prepare for this work. By being observant and seeking direction, he will be led to select such subjects that will best supply the needs of his audience. Though he may not at all times be able to please his hearers, he should strive to give them such thoughts that will help them to shape their lives in harmony with the celestial law.

HELPING TO SHAPE LIVES

Louis XIV said to Massillon, the great French preacher: "I have heard many great orators, and have been highly pleased with them; but whenever I hear you, I go away displeased with myself." This is the highest encomium that could be bestowed on a preacher. It is well to commence on Monday the preparation of our sermons for Sunday, giving such time to this study through the week as you can, or in the press of other duties, the week may pass by with no preparation on your part, and unless the Lord especially assist you, your congregation will be the loser. However, by diligently making preparation, we shall be better fitted to deliver the word of life, also to meet emergencies.

It is a good plan to have our sermons suited to the occasion, such as New Year's Day, Easter, Decoration Day, Fourth of July, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas with other events. Have a rally day in the fall when all have returned from their vacation, and try to get every member to come. Make the Day especially interesting and enthuse all with the spirit of work and devotion. It is a good plan to give a short sermon once a month to the children; they will appreciate it and look forward with joy to the occasion. Jesus said "Feed my sheep." He also said "feed my lambs." The parents will also enjoy these meetings.

It is well to give an occasional talk on the financial law. Members need it and when they understand it, they will enjoy giving and will receive greater blessings by so doing. We will have more tithe paying, and you will have no difficulty in keeping up the expenses of your branch.

CAREFUL OF APPEARANCE AND DEPORTMENT

In all of our preaching we should keep self out of sight, as Colton says "In pulpit eloquence the grand difficulty is, to give the subject all the dignity it deserves without attaching any importance to ourselves." A pastor should be very careful of his appearance. People like to see their pastor look neat. I have heard Saints say, "I wish our president would be more careful about his dress; his clothes are dirty and look as though they never had been pressed; he does not clean his shoes or brush his hair, and really I am ashamed of him." The Lord admonishes his servants to be careful along this line. (See Doctrine and Covenants 119:3.) He should be a leader of the people, an example to the flock. He should be kind and courteous, easy to be approached and yet not too familiar. His deportment should be above reproach that the statement of Thomas Fuller may not apply to him. "It was said of one who preached very well, and lived very ill, that when he was out of the pulpit, it was a pity he should ever go in; and when in the pulpit, it was a pity he should ever come out."

ELDER ARTHUR ALLEN.

ALWAYS ON DUTY

A pastor should be willing to respond to the call of the sick and needy any time, night or day. As one has said, the Good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. This is the best service he can render, not that he will be called upon to die for the sheep, but he spends his life in serving them. He may be prompted by the Spirit to visit some home; he should go at once, as he may be greatly needed. Many have been guided to homes in distress in answer to prayer of those in distress. Ministers of some churches would call this telepathy for they believe in being directed by some mysterious power. He should always be on time, start the meetings at the hour appointed and close them at the regular time for closing. It is better to cut an hour-and-ten-minute sermon in two. Usually thirty-five to forty-five minutes is long enough in a place where preaching is conducted twice every Sunday.

He should be a counselor to the officers of the branch, helping them to outline their work and encouraging them to faithfully discharge their duties or a full measure of success will not be obtained. He should try to get everyone to work and if he would be successful in this he must be a worker himself. As far as possible he should work in the Sunday school and Religio, where the opportunity is afforded him to get better acquainted with the younger members of his congregation and better understand their needs.

The members should be visited at their homes, finding out how many of the family belong to the church and as far as possible the spiritual development and needs. If there are some of the family not belonging to the church, he can generally find out the reason they have for staying out; and in some cases may be able to help them to remove the objection and win them to the church. He should be interested in the wife or husband, father or mother, praying for loved ones to see the light or children praying for their parents and remember these before the throne of grace in his private devotions. In making his visits in the evening, he will usually have an opportunity of meeting all members of the family, and will observe their needs, and may counsel or advise them as necessity or opportunity may afford.

A SAFE ADVISER

He should admonish them not to waste, but diligently use the time allotted to them in gaining knowledge; that is, where he finds Saints wasting their time. We have found in many homes that they take no studies and have no books or papers but idle away a great portion of their time. He should encourage these to take the church papers, and to purchase the standard books of the church and read them, for we cannot have good, live members if people have a chance to read good books and papers and do not. We have been in homes where there were many books, trashy novels with nothing in them to elevate, and not a church book or church paper in the house. He may get these to read the church papers and books, also good books from the library, for some splendid books and good fiction can be obtained from the library that will help us to see the beauty of right living. Bacon says: "Some books are to be tasted; others swallowed and some few to be chewed and digested." The lives of some people are largely shaped by what they read. (Yes, nations have been swayed by what they read. Mrs. Harriett Beecher Stowe's book, Uncle Tom's Cabin, was a great factor in putting down slavery in this country.) The pastor can aid them in selecting their reading matter, and if he has a wide knowledge of books he is better prepared for this duty.

Often he will be told of the trials of some of the Saints and he should be sympathetic and ready to listen and give them wholesome advice that will enable them to better their condition or bear the trials cheerfully and patiently, trusting in God to lift the cloud in his own due time. Some may confess their wrongdoings to him, but he should hear no more of the painful secret than is necessary to aid him to give the proper advice and should see that this confidence is not betrayed, that is, that nothing should leak out. All should be made to feel that he is a friend, a spiritual father or shepherd and that they can confide in him.

KEEP IN TOUCH WITH MEMBERS

The pastor should be so well acquainted with the members of his congregation that when they are absent from several meetings, he might telephone them if he cannot visit them and find out what is keeping them away from meeting, encouraging them to come out. Most people like to know they are missed and while this particular work, viz, seeing that the church (members) meet often together, belongs to the teacher, the pastor by being watchful and using the means at his hand, can save the teacher a great deal of work.

When he learns of Saints being in town who are not members of the branch, not coming to church he should search for them and try to have them attend meetings. If they are going to remain there, encourage them to get letters of removal as per General Conference resolution.

If any member is going to move away from the branch, he should get the address and give him a letter of introduction to the officers of the branch where he is moving. If he expects to remain there send his letter of removal to the president or secretary. If he is moving to a place where he cannot attend a branch, the pastor should get his address and write him occasionally and urge him to correspond, and by keeping in touch with him keep him in the faith. Many have moved away from a branch and have drifted away from the church, where they might have been saved to the church if they had been sought after and encouraged. A pastor can do a great deal toward keeping scattered members in the church with his pen; the Spirit of our heavenly Father will help him to use his pen as well as his tongue.

It is a poor idea to gather sheep into the fold; and then turn them out into the wilderness to perish. The people should be ever in the pastor's heart, their trials, successes and joys. He should encourage every department of church work, and encourage the Woman's Auxiliary, especially in its work of teaching the young. He should arrange for a society for the young men and thus help them in their battles against the evils of life. This might be called The Young Men's Mutual Improvement Society.

The pastor should have a book with the names and addresses of all the members of the branch, also members in the vicinity who may not be members of the branch. As it is hard to remember all the details of the conditions as we meet them, it might be well to have another loose-leaf book (as a brother showed me some years ago) where he can note whether they have church papers and books, what class of reading they have, their strong points as well as their weak ones, so that at a glance he may refresh his memory as to condition of that member or home. This he should keep for his eye alone and avail himself or every opportunity to help the membership.

REACHING NONMEMBERS

We should always welcome strangers or those not of our faith to our meetings and have the announcements of our services in the papers for the benefit of those who may want to find our place of meeting. It is well to have a press or advertising committee, the pastor to be president of said committee. Have a blackboard on the church building or lot and advertise your subjects. Get an article in the leading paper, when you can. We have in the past given out a great many tracts and announcements of special services from house to house and found but very few who desired to talk to us. We are now planning to have some of our young sisters (going in twos) go from house to house, leaving the "Angel message tracts," that is one tract at each visit and try to talk to the people. If they are interested, leave another tract in about a week. By this means we hope to get the people interested, and should they express a desire to talk to the pastor, arrangements could be made. We hope to reach some people through this means. By these and other ways we can let the people know we are anxious to help them to see the light.

The above is the result of our experience of the last twenty-five years.

* * * * *

THE HASTENING TIME

BY BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL

Unmistakable evidences herald the very important fact that a period long foretold by inspired men, known as the "hastening time" has at last come.

Surely a time fraught with such interest as to demand the attention of holy men both in former days as well as in latter times is of sufficient importance for us to consider.

Isaiah mentions it as follows:

Thy people also, shall all be righteous; they shall inherit the land forever, the branch of thy planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified. A little one shall become a thousand and a small one a strong nation; I the Lord will hasten it in my time.—Isaiah 60: 20-22.

BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL.

A time to be known as the Lord's time (my time).

The Lord considered this remarkable event of such worth to mankind that he did not want them to be deceived as to the time of its existence, so he warned Joseph the Seer. "Behold, I will hasten my work in its time." (Doctrine and Covenants 85: 20.)

Joseph Smith, just deceased, was also cautioned with reference to this period, (Doctrine and Covenants 118: 1); "I will hasten my work in its time." This was given in 1882. Evidently the hastening time had not yet arrived at that date. Again, in section 119: 4 we find that the "work of restoration" is to have a "hastening time," yet in the future.

Now comes the solemn warning from our president (section 132: 3.):

I admonish the church and particularly those of the priesthood, that the hastening time being upon us there is great necessity of confidence in the men of the church chosen for

Holiday Greeting

TO THE SAINTS EVERYWHERE:

For several years we have desired to utilize all the by-products of our book bindery. To do this we have begun the manufacture of leather goods. This descriptive catalogue will give you an idea of what we have done so far. Some of the offered articles were not made by us as we could not get to them by the holiday season. We have come to a time when we need the of every member of the church. We had these objects in view when we undertook this work: First, to establish a business which would eventually, we hope, give employment to worthy boys and girls who wish to attend Graceland. Second, to start a business which would turn its profits into the church treasury and thus help support our missionaries and poor. Third, to utilize our waste scraps in leather material in our bindery.

COOPERATION

We guarantee every article—if not as represented, send it back to us at our expense. Cash must accompany every order. If not satisfied, send back to us and we will refund the purchase price and all mail charges. If you want a holiday present and cannot afford to send the cash, read the instructions below. While each one is for sale at the price given, postpaid, we hope to give away many of them.

PREMIUM LIST

For every new subscriber to the Saints' Herald we will allow 15c.
 For each new subscriber to the Autumn Leaves, 10c.
 For each new subscriber to the Journal of History, 10c.
 For each new subscriber to the Ensign, 10c.
 For each new subscriber to the Stepping Stones, 5c at 50c each.
 For each new subscriber to the Hope, 3c at 30c each.

This will give the reader a chance to get subscriptions for any of our papers. When you get enough earned to amount to any article in this catalogue or any book published by us in our book catalogue, send the amount and names of subscribers with their address and the premium you wish will be sent to you. All leather articles will be insured. These orders must be sent to the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, not to the Ensign Publishing House. This offer does not apply to the 50-cent subscriptions to the Ensign.

Help us to increase our subscription list and at the same time earn some valuable premiums.

positions of great responsibility, and all should consecrate of their talents, abilities, and substance for the prosecution of the great work intrusted to us. Everywhere the demand for greater activity exists, and for the accomplishment of our work the great essential is fraternal cooperation in service to man and devoted consecration to God and his work.

We may fully expect to find both in the church and the world new conditions to develop with great rapidity. As a result of this rapid growth these new conditions will cause perplexity until properly adjusted.

If the hastening time in the world's history is analogous to the hastening time in the fruition of the grain it does not necessarily mean an abnormal growth in the number of stalks but rather in the rapidity of the growth of those already planted.

The rapid growth should be the result of the plant taking root and thus have the necessary vitality to furnish a quick growth.

As the sun pours out its life-giving force to the growing grain, causing it to hasten in its fruitage,

SOME CHURCH BOOKS YOU SHOULD HAVE

Helpful to Bible Students

HOLMAN BIBLES, THE KING JAMES TRANSLATION.—We are agents for this celebrated line of Bibles, and can furnish any quantity of them at special prices. On application, we will furnish a complete catalogue descriptive of these Bibles. This list includes Pocket Bibles, Reference Bibles, Teachers' Bibles, Testaments, all with the famous self-pronouncing text, also Family Bibles, and Pulpit Bibles, Bible Dictionaries, etc.

YOUNG'S ANALYTICAL CONCORDANCE.—The famous, exhaustive Bible reference book, by Robert Young, LL. D., "containing every word in alphabetical order, arranged under the Hebrew or Greek original, with the literal meaning of each, and its pronunciation; exhibiting about 311,000 references, marking 30,000 various readings in the New Testament. With the latest information on Biblical geography and antiquities." Containing also "A sketch of recent explorations in Bible lands," by Reverend Thomas Nicol, B. D. This concordance is calculated for the use of the "simplest reader of the English Bible." No. 321, cloth, net $6.00

THE FALL OF BABYLON.—The Australian, W. J. Haworth, has written into this doctrinal book many original ideas and elaborated upon carefully garnered evidences of the truth of Christ's gospel. The charts in the book are nuclei of well-worked-out arguments. Altogether it is an elaborate defense of the truth as a very earnest disciple understands it. The proceeds of the sale of this book go to help the financial interests of the Standard Publishing House in Australia. No. 197, cloth $1.25

OUR MISSIONARIES IN BIBLE LANDS. A compilation of interesting views of historic places in Palestine and Egypt, with descriptions, from photographs taken by Elder and Mrs. F. G. Pitt, instructive and interesting. No. E361, handsome heavy paper covers 50c
 No. E362, cloth boards 75c

THREE BIBLES COMPARED.—A painstaking work by a painstaking man—Rudolph Etzenhouser. A necessity to ministers who must demonstrate the superiority of the Inspired Version of the Bible over other versions. A long list of scriptural texts are arranged side by side, greatly facilitating reference. Also historical and scientific matter bearing upon the subject. No. E302, paper, 25c; No. E303, cloth $3.35

Book of Mormon

BOOK OF MORMON.—We sell this book in various bindings, listed in our price list. The most popular editions are, No. 11, cloth, 90c; No. 12, full leather $1.30

THE HAPPIEST CHRISTMAS AND THE SILVER THIMBLES.—Two excellent child stories by Callie B. Stebbins, who has had an extraordinarily wide experience with children. One of the birth-offering series. No. 364, cloth$.40

BOOK OF MORMON TALKS. H. O. Smith, "Orion," understands the minds of boys and girls. In this interesting book he has told the whole Book of Mormon story, briefly and simply, around the family circle; making the father of two inquisitive, thoughtful boys and girls the chief conversationalist. There is a delightful simplicity about these talks, and a homeliness that will perpetuate their popularity among Latter Day Saints. No. 365, cloth60c

BOOK OF MORMON MAPS.—Six maps covering the whole geographic field of the Book of Mormon history. So arranged that they can be pasted, in any arrangement desired, upon a stationary surface for constant reference. Essential to Religio Quarterly study. As this item was left out of the recent price list, write it in now. No. R15, per set....$.25

ARCHÆOLOGICAL COMMITTEE REPORT.—By the joint efforts of leading minds in the church this work was compiled. It gets down to rock bottom in archæological investigation bearing upon the claims made by the Book of Mormon. Data that will fortify Book of Mormon students against arguments of "science." Interesting reading in itself. No. 142, cloth$.75

DIVINITY OF THE BOOK OF MORMON PROVEN BY ARCHÆOLOGY.—Student, here is a mass of startling data for your consideration. Nothing "sentimental" about this work. It adheres to reality, and yet it is full of the romance which clusters about the ruins of a departed civilization. Louise Palfrey Sheldon accomplished a notable work in writing this book. It is a bulwark against the guesswork of uninformed antagonists to Latter Day Saintism. No. 176, cloth$.60

No. 011

011—Music Satchel. Seal Grain cow hide, Black or Tan, 2 inch gusseted bottom and sides, full leather lined, reinforced Handle. Size 15x12 $3.00

No. 015

015—Combination Folding Music Bag. Black Seal Grain Leather, gusseted bottom and half way up side, leather lined. Music can be carried folded once or full size. Folded as bag, 6 1/2 x15, as satchel 13x15.....$3.00

No. 017

017—One Fold Music Bag. Black Crape Grain Leather, Sateen lined, reinforced handles, snap fasteners. Size folded 15x6 1/2$1.30 Morocco Leather, leather lined, otherwise same as above$2.25

No. 021

021—Music Roll. Black Crape Grain Leather. Size 15x14, cloth lined with strap and binders, reinforced handle and strap with buckle. $1.70 Brown or Gray Ooze Leather, otherwise same as above $1.70

so may we expect God to pour out his Spirit in the hastening time to aid us to "ripen in character."

As each individual stock of grain hastens in its growth, so should each individual in the church make a greater growth on account of the outpouring of God's Spirit upon him.

As each stalk of grain receives and assimilates the sun's rays by properly complying with the laws of its environment, so shall each of us receive and assimilate the Spirit of God commensurate with our compliance with the laws of our environment.

THE LAW OF COOPERATION

The brotherhood of man is one of the basic principles of philosophy of Jesus Christ. Instantly this suggests the necessity of cooperation.

To what extent? To the extent that we can put into practical application the command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Anything short of this will not answer. Loving our neighbor as ourself means that "whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them."

No. 470

No. 02

No. 09

No. 1753

02—Writing Folio. Black Seal Grain Leather. Size closed $9\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$, contains Stamp book, Address book, Envelope pocket, pen loop, protected by a lappet with blotter.....\$2.15

470—Size $8\frac{1}{4}$ in. x $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. Black seal grain Leather. Contains 3 regular and two smaller pockets, fully leather lined. All stitched..\$1.05

09—Bill Book. Black Morocco, leather lined, 5 pockets, 2 with snap fasteners, size $8\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ \$1.90
Bill Book. Black Seal Grain Leather, Keratol lining, otherwise same as above....$1.48

1753—Folded size 8 in x 4 in. Black seal grain Bill Book. Contains 2 regular full length pockets and pocket for bills covered with flap and tuck$0.95

For General Study

THE TRUTH DEFENDED.—In this answer to Davis H. Bays' "Doctrines and Dogmas of Mormonism," Heman C. Smith provides the reader with something more than intellectual entertainment—he not only excites but inspires the faculties. "The Truth" is so "defended" that the impartial critic is roused to unavoidable participation in the discussion greatly to his enlightenment. No. 304, paper, 50c; No. 305, cloth$.75

TRUE SUCCESSION IN CHURCH PRESIDENCY.—The church historian, Heman C. Smith, took full advantage of the splendid opportunity his special calling afforded him for obtaining material with which to answer Brigham H. Roberts, the Utah champion of Brighamism; and this answer is not only convincing, but complete. It deposes Young forever from the high position he assumed. No. 306, paper, 50c; No. 307, cloth$.75

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH THE SEER.—A businesslike little work, scientifically written, showing forth the truth of the Book of Mormon and establishing the divinity of Joseph Smith's mission. Contains pointed and significant statements of Doctor Lederer, converted Jew, and others bearing upon the question. No. 311, paper$.15

WHAT IS MAN?—J. R. Lambert at his best. This is saying a good deal. Brother Lambert knows where to go for evidence and how to clinch it when he gets it. This book forever disproves the dogmas of soul sleeping and kindred illusions. A powerful work. No. 316 cloth...$.75

BRADEN - KELLEY DEBATE.—Probably the most exhaustive and most exciting debate ever held in the Reorganization. Both sides of the controversy are given in full, the manuscripts being signed by both participants. The Christian Church claims its representative, the late Clark Braden, defeated Bishop E. L. Kelley in this discussion—but we are doing the selling. The attacks upon us in this volume are so numerous and characteristic every preacher and would-be preacher of ours should acquaint himself with them. The book is a mental and spiritual stimulant. No. 152, cloth$2.00

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.—Columbus Scott, in this work, adduces much Scripture to prove that the first day of the week is the Sabbath Christ observed, and that its observance is in harmony with the gospel as taught in every dispensation. Contains much valuable information on this mooted question. No. 161, paper, 25c; No. 162, cloth$.40

The "hastening time" will be noticeably marked by this virtue of really loving our neighbors—for the Lord was going to hasten his work in its time and the very essence of his work is love—love for God and love for our fellow man. How is that love to be shown?

A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another.—John 13: 34, 35.

We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren."—1 John 3: 14.

But whoso hath this world's goods and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?—1 John 3: 17.

Let us not love in word, neither in tongue but in deed and in truth and hereby we know that we are of the truth and shall assure our hearts before him."—1 John 3: 18, 19.

We are to love "in deed" and "in truth." That is, our acts are to be governed by the law of God—the word of God—truth. Cooperation—loving our

OBJECTIONS TO DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.—J. R. Lambert has a way of economizing words. In this work he answers objections to the Doctrine and Covenants with characteristic brevity and lucidity. His mind grips the question like a vice, and his arguments are so intensely logical the reader seldom finds himself in doubt. A missionary's ally. No. 251, paper, 30c; No. 252, cloth$.50

DOCTRINAL REFERENCES.—Alvin Knisley, being a compilation of references on all subjects connected with the gospel, taken from the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. No. E185, paper, 10c; No. E186, cloth, 15c; No. E187, leather$.30

THE OPINIONS OF SIXTY-FIVE LEADING MINISTERS ON ISAIAH 29 AND EZEKIEL 37.—These views of sixty-five leading ministers upon scriptural passages believed by Latter Day Saints to bear directly upon the latter-day work, are valuable as showing, by contrast, the plausibility and plainness of Joseph Smith's claims with reference to the same prophecies. No. 256$.15

SMITH-PELOUBET'S BIBLE DICTIONARY.—By William Smith, LL. D., Revised by F. N. and M. A. Peloubet. An invaluable book for students of the Bible. More than 800 pages of concise information, covering all phases of scriptural study; excellent colored maps, and 440 appropriate illustrations. The volume is described as "teacher's edition"; and, since all active Christians are Bible teachers, is therefore a universal necessity. No. 291, cloth, net$ 1.60

JOSEPH SMITH AND HIS PROGENITORS.—The Martyr's mother, Lucy Smith, wrote this biography. For this reason alone, if for no other, the book must always be intensely interesting. But there are many other elements entering into its value: its condemnation of polygamy; its true perspective on early history; its sweet maternal intimacy. The church gives it out to the world "for what it is worth," and obviously it is worth a great deal. No. 287, cloth$ 1.00

- 01—Writing Folio. Black Seal Grain Leather, size folded 8¼ in. x 6 in., contains Stationery pocket, Address book, Stamp book and pen loop$ 1.80
- 4133—Black. Size 8½ in. x 6½ in. Ladies' Hand Bag made of black Morocco leather with nickel plated frame and clasp. Striped poplin lined in fancy colors, and contains an extra coin purse and mirror$ 1.00
- 4134—Black. Ladies' Hand Bag. Size 9 in. x 6¼ in. Made of black Morocco leather, Moreen lined in purple and contains a coin purse with nickel frame, also mirror. Nickel plated frame with ball clasps$ 1.00 neighbor as ourself—passing from death to life, is all brought to pass by doing in harmony with truth.

HOW IT IS TO BE DONE

All will agree that the instructions given include two basic thoughts—1st, purchase of land; 2d, starting manufactories.

We wish to notice the second part, namely manufactories—not that the first is not of equal if not more importance, but because we have something to suggest to the Saints—something to offer which we think will help us materially along the line of co-operation, having to do with manufacturing, etc.

HOW TO SAVE PROFIT TO THE CHURCH

Every Saint has to buy certain necessary articles. Every time he does he pays some one a profit. Why not cooperate so this profit comes back to your church, to be used for the advancement of God's work?

The Grange movement was built upon this idea and became a power for good. Its slogan was: "Get together, buy together and sell together." Not until it undertook to dabble in politics was it a failure. Why cannot the Saints "get together, buy together and sell together"?

Why could not the Saints enter into an agreement to buy through some central purchasing agency, located say at Lamoni or Independence or some other available and desirable place? This purchasing agency to be under the control of some brother who is willing to work for his needs and just wants.

To begin with, we could have some one run it free of all expense, at least until it could pay for the necessary help. If we could take a list of pros-

No. 4104

No. 3786

No. 4151

No. 4106

- 4104—Black. Size 5½ in. x 2¾ in. Ladies Purse with strap on back. Morocco leather. Contains 3 regular pockets and coin compartment, surmounted by nickel plated frame with button clasp$0.70
- 4151—Black. Size 8½ in. x 5¾ in. Ladies' Hand Bag made of Morocco leather, plaited, with leather covered frame and ball clasp. Poplin lined with extra coin purse and mirror$1.40
- 3786—Black. Size 11 in. x 8¾ in. Ladies' Hand Bag. Seal grain leather with fancy oxidized frame in French gray with ball clasp, fully leather lined and contains an extra purse, leather lined, with a mirror$1.75
- 4106—Black. Size 8½ in. x 3¾ in. Ladies' Purse with strap handle on back. Made of Long grain Morocco leather with patent nickel clasp and fancy front. Silk lined and contains two regular pockets and one coin compartment, leather lined, surmounted by brass frame with patent clasp$1.75

JOSEPH SMITH DEFENDED.—In studying the life of a man like Joseph Smith it is well to see him from the viewpoint of different writers. J. W. Peterson, in this book, throws the light of original thought upon the Martyr, and adds one more valuable testimony to the divinity of a much-discussed mission. No. 286, cloth$0.75

JOSEPH SMITH. WHO WAS HE?—A book especially calculated for the investigator who prefers every-day language, and who wants to take a first step in learning about the work Joseph Smith was sent to help establish. Written by Willard J. Smith and calculated for the every-day man. No. 288, cloth$0.75

PARSONS' TEXTBOOK.—An exhaustive compendium of texts and quotations, covering the entire field of gospel doctrine, collated by Alonzo H. Parsons. A ready (and adequate) reference for preachers, and also those who would accurately represent the angel's message in conversion—a maker of efficient. No. 263, cloth$1.00

SUNDAY, THE TRUE SABBATH.—By Gamble. Arguments from various sources establishing the fact that the first day of the week is the Lord's day, and confuting the noisy claims of religious "specialists." A strong weapon against many modern faddists. Proof of mathematical accuracy that the seventh-day commandment meant every seventh day, but not every Saturday. No. 296, cloth, net$0.75

THE BOOKS AND UTAH MORMONISM IN CONTRAST.—Rudolph Etzenhouser, the author of this book is noted for his fearless utterances. Here he takes the Utah church to task, measuring it by the law of the original Latter Day church, and the result is most convincing to lovers of truth and purity. No. E301, paper$ 1.10

THE FAILURES OF CAMPBELLISM.—E. E. Long is one of the most aggressive ministers in the church. He has a "punch" proportionate to his physique, and does not hesitate to "apply" it. In this book he attacks Alexander Campbell's theology and the workings out of the same, with characteristic zest, but fairly withal. Full of tense argument and virile reasoning. No. 196, paper$0.25 pective purchasers, running up into the thousands and go to the manufacturer of a certain article and tell him that the persons whose names appeared would buy of him through the purchasing agency, with the understanding, of course, that the manufacturer would ship his articles direct to customers and guarantee satisfaction. No doubt we could find plenty of manufacturing concerns who would be willing to enter into such a compact.

All orders for the article put out by the firm, would come through the central purchasing agency, accompanied by the cash. The purchasing agency would then forward the order to the manufacturing company and have it fill the order. The profits of each sale thus made would go into the church treasury to be used to send out more missionaries—caring for the poor, etc.

If we find certain articles which we need are manufactured by both an outsider and a member of the church, give the church member preference, especially if said church member is complying with the law of consecration and tithing. The profit he makes will eventually find its way to the common treasury.

STARTING THE WORK OF MANUFACTURING

The manager of the Herald Publishing House has for several years had in mind the starting of the manufacturing of leather novelties, which are a necessity, as hand bags, purses, pocketbooks, bill

LECTURES ON FAITH.—Lectures on the latter-day work, originally delivered in Kirtland, Ohio. One of the little doctrinal gems that will attract the eye of the investigator the moment he glances inside the cover. No. 226, limp cloth, 25c; No. 227, paper$15

MANUAL OF THE PRIESTHOOD.—A book of instruction to the priesthood, based on the law and upon church usage, prepared by Charles Derry, one of the veteran ministers of the Reorganization. The first fruits of an extraordinarily fecund mind, noted for its wisdom and judgment. No. 232, cloth$35

THE MANUSCRIPT FOUND.—Here is the notorious Solomon Spalding manuscript which the opponents of the latter-day work used to argue was the foundation upon which Smith and Rigdon built the Book of Mormon. The story of how it came into the hands of the Reorganized Church is told in the preface. The original manuscript is now in Oberlin College, Ohio. No. 231, paper$30

THE INSTRUCTOR.—A compilation of scriptural and other citations by the veteran apostle, G. T. Griffiths, gleaned from the Word and his own wide experience as a thinker and preacher; not only handy but necessary. Ammunition every defender of Latter Day Saintism needs. No. 216, cloth, $1; No. 217, leather, $1.25; No. 218, flexible$2.00

GENERAL CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS.—Containing all the important resolutions passed in the church since 1852. This makes not only educational but highly interesting reading. Many of the elders are in doubt about matters that have been settled and are recorded in this collection of conference enactments. No. 206, paper, 40c; No. 207, cloth ...$60

MEMOIRS OF W. W. BLAIR.—Every Latter Day Saint has heard about W. W. Blair. The "Old Guard" speaks reverently of him. He was universally loved. The key to the life of such a man is a possession worth having. These memoirs by his son, F. B. Blair, are such a key. No. 236, cloth$75

THE MORMON GIRL.—Paula Brown Dykes, a member of the Reorganized Church, who has lived in Utah for years, writes a telling indictment of Brighamist spiritual and carnal methods in this novel. No one can resist the realism of the story. It is so entirely different from the usual anti-"Mormon" work; so sincere and straightforward in its style, and natural in its plot. Founded on facts. No. 371, cloth$1.00

- 1925—Patent Tray Purse. Size 3¼ in. x 3 in. Black smooth leather, with snap fastener. Contains full size tray purse for silver coin and extra pocket with button fastener for paper money$0.55
- 1913—Size 4 in. x 3 in. Made of genuine Deerskin in colors gray and brown. Description same as 1935$0.55
- 1918—Patent Tray Purse. Size 3¼ in. x 3 in. Black seal grain leather with nickel plated frame and patent clasp. Contains full size tray purse for silver coin and extra pocket covered with flap and button fastener for paper money$0.55
- 1935—Coin Purse. Size 3¼ in. x 3 in. Made of black genuine Morocco with nickel plated frame, all leather with 2 pockets, 3 ball clasp$0.25
- 1868—Size 4½ in. x 3½ in. Made of English Calf, colors black and brown. Rest of description same as 1935$0.35
- 1934—Size same as 1935. Made of buckskin, assorted gray and brown. Rest of description same as 1935$0.25
- 05—Bill Fold. Good grade of leather, with snap fastener. Folds bill twice, very compact. Size 4 in. x 1¼ in.$0.20
- 07—Coin Purse. Made of a good grade of leather, 2 pockets with snap fasteners, size 3 in. x 3 in.$0.30
Made of Morocco, otherwise same as above$0.40 books, etc. Our reason for so doing is that we are now handling this material for bookbinding, etc. The scraps can be used in this way.

The problems of giving labor to our people is another reason for entering into this class of work.

WHAT WE EXPECT

We think that the Saints all over the world will be interested in this move and should make it a point to patronize this industry. The profits will go into the coffers of the church.

The articles made are staple goods—things that the Saints need. We believe that we can sell these articles as cheaply as any mail order house. The success of such a move will depend largely on the attitude of the Saints toward it. If they can be made to see that this business is being run primarily for their good and that all the profits will go to the church treasury, which will be the case, and help furnish labor for worthy boys and girls, who come here to attend college, as well as others, it would seem that there could be no hesitancy in their being

No. 1511

No. 1550

No. 1535

No. 1536

No. 1517

No. 06

- 1511—Men's 3 fold Bill and Pocket Book. Folded size 4 1/4 in. x 3 in. Smooth black calf fancy leather, and contains full length pocket for U. S. currency and two smaller pockets suitable for cards and space covered with isinglass, to carry business cards, photographs, identifications or lodge cards, also pocket for silver coin.....$0.35
- 1550—Black. Men's 3 fold coin and bill book. Size folded 4 1/4 in. x 3 in. Pearl grain seal. Fully leather lined. Contains full length pocket for U. S. currency, perpetual calendar, memorandum book, and space covered with isinglass to carry business cards, photographs, identifications, and lodge cards$0.55
- 1535—Men's 3 fold combination card and bill book. Size 4 1/4 in. x 3 in. Brown Morocco leather. Contains full length pocket for U. S. currency, 2 smaller pockets for cards and waxed paper receptacles for postage stamps and space covered with isinglass for business cards, photographs, identifications or lodge cards$0.90
- 1536—Men's Combination Bill Book and Card Case. Genuine calf, black and brown assorted. Contains full length pocket for U. S. currency, 2 card size pockets and space covered with isinglass for business cards, photographs, identifications or lodge cards.$1.40
- 1517—Men's combination Bill and Card case. Folded size 4 1/4 in. x 2 1/2 in. Black genuine Morocco. Fully leather lined. Contains full length receptacle for U. S. currency, 3 regular card size pockets and pocket for silver coin with button fastener, also space covered with isinglass for business cards, photographs, identifications, or lodge cards.$1.25
- 06—Collar Bag. Diameter 6 1/2 in. Metal eyelets, Sateen lined, Silk draw cord; can be had in either Straight grain Tan Leather, Autumn Leaf or Brown or Gray Ooze Leather.$1.00

Helpful Books

IN THE SHELTER OF THE LITTLE BROWN COTTAGE. The popular serial that ran in Stepping Stones during 1915, by the editor, Estella Wight. The leading character is not a Latter Day Saint at first, but eventually becomes so, and in the process a strong gospel story is told. Several characters in the book are shown laboring toward the truth, making this a fine, readable missionary medium. Cloth, 373 pages$1.25

PETER BOSTEN. By John Preston, author of "The Pleasures of the World," etc. The story chiefly concerns the life of an agnostic whose mental and spiritual experiences hold the reader, who is a thinker. A prominent Canadian editor compares this book to Churchill's "The Inside of the Cup." Many Latter Day Saint characters in it. The ending is original, the whole book forceful and entertaining. Cloth, 352 pages, illustrated cover, No. 374$1.00

A new book that glows with human interest.

JOE PINE

By Elbert A. Smith

The first part is an interesting study of child life on the western prairies, filled with the keenest of humor and naturally seasoned with the pathos that comes in the fight with adversity.

Illustrated

By Paul N. Craig

It includes the sequel to "Joe Pine" entitled, "Called to be an apostle," which portrays the experiences of the young man and his lifelong girl friend both of whom you will feel you have grown up with.

A strong story, well written.

It is now ready to mail. Nicely printed in large type, on good paper, and handsomely bound in cloth; $1.25 postpaid. Order now.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Lamoni, Iowa

loyal to the business and, when in need of any articles made, to send their order by mail.

Of course, in this as in all business affairs, satisfaction would be guaranteed all purchasers or money refunded.

EXPANSION

The business could be expanded as fast as advisable.

In the beginning we expect to be modest in our efforts. We see no reason why we could not find a market for our manufactured goods in the world also. This will come in its proper time and place.

We have now come to the point where it is vitally necessary to have among the Saints or failure. How about it, dear Saints?

COOPERATION

THE USE OF PICTURES

(Continued from page 1136.)

We need all these things and will some day have them, but let us assure you that the ability to draw good wash drawings, crayon work, as well as pen-and-ink borders, headpieces and other ornamental work commands good salaries—better than the church can afford to pay. It is not only the ability to do the mechanical part of it, that is required, but there must be good judgment and experience in applying these things. Those who have in the past and will in the future engage in this work deserve the same generous appreciation as those who give up profitable employment to enter the active ministry.

A SUGGESTION FOR BRANCHES AND DISTRICTS

Every branch and district has its own local problems in working out the various suggestions presented here. Certain general information and rules will apply in most cases, but the application must be decided locally.

For the local membership some one with a desire to serve might be selected to study these things and apply such methods as are found to be most practicable. It should always be done in conjunction with the pastor or president.

The work could extend from the designing of a simple card to replying to a newspaper attack on our work. The field is unlimited and the work educational and essential. "When you have been warned, warn your neighbor," applies to this part of the work as well as to the preacher's duty.

This person could make up a number of the illustrated posters such as we have described and have them ready for special occasions. Good places could be secured for displaying them and the public would be reached.

From various places we hear of this being done to some extent, and the reports are very gratifying. Lamoni Branch has a class of about fifteen young men who are taking this up. They are beginning with simple pen lettering and will go through a complete course in advertising. When they are through they will have a training that will fit them for commercial as well as other work in this line. They are enthusiastic over the possibilities ahead of them. What they are doing to fit themselves for service in the church and community others can do. We hope to hear that it is being done.

Miscellaneous Department

Convention Notices

Western Nebraska and Black Hills Sunday school will meet at Gering Nebraska, December 2 and 3. Lillie M. Richards, district superintendent.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

'Mid Autumn Leaves in Old Kirtland, by Earnest A. Webbe	- - - - -	1130
EDITORIAL:
Wings of Song for Words of Truth	- - - - -	1131
The Use of Pictures	- - - - -	1134
ORIGINAL ARTICLES AND POEMS:
"Autumn Muse," by Edith G. Frazer	- - - - -	1137
Christmas in Hawaii, by Edward Ingham	- - - - -	1137
From the Ashes—A Thanksgiving, by Vida E. Smith	- - - - -	1137
When Did Jesus Organize His Church, by Elmer E. Long	- - - - -	1138
A Better Use of Art in the Church.—No. 1, by Elmer A. Kaler	- - - - -	1140
Concerning Our Reunions, by Charles Derry	- - - - -	1142
The Influence of the Home in Character Building, by Mrs. A. E. Warr	- - - - -	1143
The Security of Silence, by Mrs. W. E. Harder	- - - - -	1144
Our Attitude Towards the Ministry and Members of Other Churches, T. W. Williams	- - - - -	1145
Sermon Hints, by James E. Yates	- - - - -	1146
Methods—Failures and Triumphs in Missionary Work, by O. R. Miller	- - - - -	1146
Pastoral Work, by Arthur Allen	- - - - -	1149
The Hastening Time, by A. Carmichael	- - - - -	1151
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT	- - - - -	1159

Joint institute, Ohio Sunday school and Religio, December 2 and 3, at Columbus, Ohio, Second Branch at Sixth and Innis Avenues. Time will be devoted to auxiliary matters and topics treated by competent speakers. General executive officers plan to attend. District officers and teachers, with others interested urged to attend. H. Greenwood, president Religio; F. R. Neiman, superintendent Sunday school.

Home-Coming Day

Fifth annual home-coming of the Akron Branch, at Akron, Ohio, November 25 and 26. First meeting 7. p. m. All Saints invited, especially the isolated ones. Ernest Bush, 59 Falor Avenue.

Why Not

Send to the Herald Office for a special list of Christmas books. Ask for our temporary price list of church books, special Bible catalogue of Oxford and Holman Bibles, and a suggestive list of books put out by the church Library Commission. In addition to these we will send you a number of other choice offerings of gift books, books of travel, nature books, choice books for boys and girls, and a good list on sociology. From these you will be able to make such selections as will fit your Christmas and other needs.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure
Made from Cream of Tartar
NO ALUM—NO PHOSPHATE

Why Not

write us about increasing your business?

We furnish the ideas—if you like—and the printing to carry them to your patrons.

Our facilities include a corps of experienced men and the equipment to give you what you want.

OUR work is not limited to church publications, but we do

Job Work of All Kinds

from a simple letter head to high-priced university annuals.

While we give all due attention to quality, our prices are no higher than what is usually asked for poor to ordinary work.

The reasonable profit we make helps build up your own church institutions.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE
Lamoni, Iowa

LET US ORDER YOUR BOOKS

CHRISTMAS IS COMING

Why not include a few good books in your list of presents? If you desire it, our Book Service Department will help you—free.

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

JOAN OF ARC.—“Frances” here tells the story of Joan of Arc in a most human way. The French heroine is here brought down to the present and is seen as a living being, rather than a remote historical character. The social revolution she helped bring about, the service she rendered her country, make the story of her life interesting to all generations. Joan is an inspiration. No. 370, cloth$.60

HIS FIRST VENTURE AND THE SEQUEL.—A story by Estella Wight, editor of Stepping Stones and the “Religio’s Arena.” It tells about a country boy who was led astray by the lure of the city, but came back at last to loved ones—and the realization that “homely goodness” is the best thing after all. No. 369, cloth$.60

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the “Buffalo Bill” country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 63

LAMONI, IOWA, NOVEMBER 29, 1916

NUMBER 48

Editorial

"MEN WHO HAVE THE SPIRIT"

We have noted that in certain quarters the voice of warning has been lifted up. This voice of warning seems to be prompted by a belief that stress is being laid upon educational matters to the exclusion of spiritual matters and Spirit direction.

The implication is pretty plainly conveyed that some man, or set of men, of sufficient influence and importance to justify a public warning, is engaged in the work of strenuously admonishing the Saints to secure high secular education and polished minds, while all the time giving faith and spiritual direction in this education and in their lives in general a minor and secondary place, or no place at all.

Men who raise this warning cry may be performing a useful function in one particular. They emphasize the importance of divine direction and approval in the work of securing knowledge and wisdom; and if they could do this, and rest content without indirectly discounting the work of others, their efforts might indeed be praiseworthy.

In another way their cry of warning may have a pernicious effect, even though not so intended. Some years ago a certain number of men on one or two occasions arrogated to themselves the title of "men who think." At the time those who did not agree with these men on certain points at issue, resented the assumption of that title as carrying with it the implication that they and their brethren did not dare to think. So now, if there shall arise a group or a few taking to themselves the title, "Men who have the Spirit," the inference is that their brethren who do not exactly agree with them on points at issue do not have the Spirit.

Is this warning cry general and vague, one that may or not be given serious consideration? Or is it specific? Is it drawn out by a real danger, a menace actually existing and clearly recognized as existing in very definite "high places"?

Can we name this man or set of men engaged in urging a pernicious form of education upon the people to the exclusion of spiritual matters? Is it the Presidency? Or some member of the Presidency? Is it the HERALD Editors? Is it the Twelve or the Seventy? Is it the three leading quorums in council? Is it the men who are promoting study courses in the Independence Stake? Is it the men engaged in a similar work at Lamoni, Boston, Omaha, and other places? Or is it the men in Grace-land College?

Who are these men who are to be separated from us and marked as "men who do not have the Spirit," as distinguished from ourselves, "men who have the Spirit"?

If their influence is sufficiently great to menace the church, these men should be known to the church, that they may be called to account if they will not repent.

Our belief, however, is that individuals watching the activities of certain of the brethren who are especially interested in educational matters have assumed that these men attach little or no importance to divine direction in such work. And it is our further conviction that in most instances such assumption is purely gratuitous and without foundation in fact.

It may be interesting to me to conclude that I am guided by the Spirit in my work and that my brother is not so guided; but that conclusion may not be at all convincing to others.

There is considerable activity at present in educational work in both Independence and Lamoni. Regular classes in many lines of study are at work in both places. Nearly every evening not otherwise occupied is taken up in such work. Our observation convinces us that the men engaged in this work, and those, particularly, who are directing it, are men who seek for the divine blessing and direction in their work. Moreover, we believe them to be, as a rule, men and women who are morally worthy of such direction, and that they actually do receive it in their work.

Contemporaneously with the forward movement along this line of study in Lamoni there has come the most remarkable outpouring of spiritual blessings in our prayer meetings, particularly at the late reunion, that has been experienced in many years. And it is our judgment from reports from many quarters that this is somewhat typical of the situation quite generally. Has God been hoodwinked into a spiritual cooperation with a campaign of Godless and Spiritless education?

Men and women who are studiously engaged in systematic courses of study, coupled with their regular devotional exercises, have little time and less inclination to spend their evenings at card parties, dances, questionable shows, or unprofitable forms of social diversions, things which in the past may have menaced our spirituality. To give the people something to do is better than to tell them of something that they ought not to do. Affirmation is better than negation. The thunders now expended against proposed courses of good, hard, profitable study might better have been expended against soft, easy, and insidious worldly allurements that threatened us.

The comment already passed upon the men at work in the stakes will apply to the men and women at work in Graceland College. A friend expressed the conviction that matters of a sacred or doctrinal nature could not be taught in Graceland College by "uninspired instructors." We have now five high priests on the faculty at Graceland, one of them being the president of the college.

Did the laying on of the hands of the presbytery convey no gift to these men? Such for example, as it brought to the traveling seventy? Must they be excluded from the sacred circle of "men who have the Spirit"?

These men are endeavoring to live on a financial basis comparable to that "enjoyed" by the missionary, to make similar sacrifice, so far as may be required, to render up to God similar prayers for divine direction, to consecrate their lives in a similar way for the upbuilding of the church.

They are willing to conform to the advice of the leading quorums of the church, so far as is reasonable. And it is our contention that they are fitted to take up and expound to their pupils any topic that might be discussed by an elder in the field, conducting his meeting "as led by the Spirit," and with the same divine blessing. They may, if desired, safely instruct in the fundamental doctrines of the gospel, concerning the organic form of the church, its origin and history, its methods of work and procedure, and in comparative religions.

In a general way, the Saints are given great latitude in their study, both as to books and subjects: "Seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom." As for subjects:

Also, I give unto you a commandment that ye shall continue in prayer and fasting from this time forth. And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand; of things both in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; things which have been; things which are; things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home; things which are abroad; the wars and the perplexities of the nations; and the judgments which are on the land; and a knowledge also of countries, and of kingdoms, that ye may be prepared in all things when I shall send you again, to magnify the calling whereunto I have called you, and the mission with which I have commissioned you.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 21.

There is an expressed fear of textbooks written by uninspired men. But not all the subjects here named may be studied from the Bible, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants, or from books issuing from the church press. If the Holy Spirit is to guide us into all truth, as the Master stated, it should be competent to lead us to form correct conclusions following a study of facts set forth by uninspired men as a result of observation and experimentation, even though some errors may be intermingled with the truths set forth; to hold otherwise would be to discredit the guide or the pupils, or both.

Again, a fear is expressed of the subjects studied; as for instance, psychology, which science is now being studied by classes in Independence and Lamoni, as well as by students in the college. In some instances, at least, such fear is due to a misconception of the science of psychology.

Psychology is defined as the science of the mind. Its study is an effort to arrive at a knowledge of the mind, its operations, and the laws to which it conforms. Is that a legitimate study for Latter Day Saints, endeavoring to comply with the command, "Know thyself"? The study may be undertaken with the aid of secular textbooks, but we may be assured that so long as Latter Day Saints study such a matter all conclusions will be scrutinized in the light of statements contained in the inspired books bearing on the particular conclusions set forth. To argue that the mind is but the instrument of the spirit of man, does not alter the situation. Such a wonderful instrument is an interesting object of study, just as the body, which is the instrument of the mind, is a proper subject of study, not now challenged, though formerly tabooed.

The science of psychology is divided into branches, as for instance, adult psychology, child psychology, normal psychology, abnormal psychology, and so on. And as stated by Professor McDowell, of Graceland, in a recent lecture, the study of child psychology has induced wonderful and valuable changes in methods of education during recent years; while the study of abnormal psychology has induced most radical changes in the treatment of criminals and the insane. As he argued, in the particulars last named, if in no other matter, psychology has paid for itself and justified itself.

Are the Saints to be excluded from the study of such a fruitful field by a half-confessed fear that faith will be undermined? In a similar way in the past mistaken religionists have tried to destroy the hammer of the geologist and the telescope of the astronomer.

It is not faith, but fear that prompts such an attitude. It is prompted by the fear, subconscious, perhaps, that investigation may disclose some weapon that will destroy our religion. But in fact at the conclusion of every investigation that has been pushed to a conclusion religion has emerged triumphant, sustained by the facts of science; and as Paul says, we have not been baptized with the spirit of fear.

False science may have condemned religion at times. True science may have condemned false religion. But true science and true religion are ever in accord. Those who push their investigation far enough discover this concord.

If you think strongly enough you will be forced by science to the belief in God, which is the foundation of all religion. You will find science not antagonistic but helpful to religion. —Lord Kelvin.

Returning now to our original thought. It may be that some, while urging the necessity of study and education, have neglected to state in the same breath the importance of spiritual direction.

But it is a fixed idea in our church polity that in education, as in all other matters, the first object should be to build up the kingdom of God and to establish his righteousness.

Furthermore, it is a fixed idea in our philosophy, as in our doctrine, that except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

It is to be assumed that every man who occupies a trusted place in the church priesthood as a preceptor speaks with these fixed ideas in mind as being understood by his hearers. He is entitled to the benefit of that assumption.

And unless he positively states or clearly indicates that he gives spiritual direction a very minor and secondary place in his life and in his philosophy, it is not proper or just to infer that such is his attitude. In the absence of proof or confession, let us assume that our brethren are "men who have the Spirit."

So far as we know, there is a general disposition to trust divine guidance. That was the strength and secret of the success of our late President Joseph Smith, who on his deathbed, in the hearing of the writer, addressed President Frederick M. Smith, among other things saying:

I had it all to learn. Fortunately, I was in favor of the Divine one and received instructions, and you will be, my boy, you will be. That Spirit that filleth the breast and giveth warmth and color and brightness and intelligence will open before you subjects that are necessary for you to decide upon, and leave no dubiety nor things open to controversy.

In the future, if some of our brethren, while urging the need of study, in harmony with the injunction in modern revelation, shall fail in the same breath or in the breath immediately following, to state that the direction and blessing of God are essential in all such work, let us not at once conclude that they attach no importance to such blessing and direction. They are entitled to the benefit of the assumption that they, with us all, accept the well-established belief of the church that only men who have the Spirit can enter into the kingdom, or having entered, assist in building it up.

Probably if the facts were known these men feel the need of spiritual direction and receive it to a much greater extent than some suspect. At the risk of being personal, we will cite a case in point from the experience of Professor Floyd M. McDowell, instructor in Graceland College, fellow in the Graceland Extension Institute, lecturer on psychology at the late General Conference, and lecturer on psychology in the present educational movement in Lamoni.

Some three years ago when Professor McDowell was advised by President Frederick M. Smith to take advanced work in Clark University he went to his father and mother for advice. They in turn, as he had already done, took the matter to the Lord. His mother at that time received spiritual instruction to the effect that he should go to the university and that the work taken would be of assistance to him in later years in his church work, together with the statement that in due time he should be called to occupy in the high council of the Lamoni Stake. The latter information she withheld at the time, but wrote it down, put it in an envelope, and sealed it up.

At the late conference of the Lamoni Stake, Brother McDowell was ordained to the office mentioned, having been nominated by the First Presidency and the stake presidency, supported by the action of the conference. Some two or three weeks later he received the sealed letter from his mother containing the information written down three years ago. This testimony, coming from such a source and in such a way, could not fail to impress him profoundly.

Again, at the further risk of appearing personal, we may say that one of the most spiritual, searching, and powerful prophecies that we have ever heard from the lips of man fell from the lips of our Brother Samuel A. Burgess during a Sunday afternoon prayer service in Lamoni not long ago. He has but recently finished a year in Clark University, resigning his position as President of Graceland College in order to take that work.

If these men have "gone to seed" on education, as the expression is, then God scatter the seed far and wide! We need more such young men—an army of them—men who have sought learning and wisdom both by study and by prayer.

These, with many other things that might be mentioned, indicate that our brethren who are so zealously working in educational matters, both by day and by night, without reservation and almost without rest, are recipients of divine favor equally with others of their collaborators, according to the needs of each, and that they are "men who have the Spirit."

ELBERT A. SMITH.

CURRENT EVENTS

AUSTRIAN EMPEROR DEAD.—On the 21st, Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria, died, following a brief illness.

FIRST WOMAN MEMBER OF CONGRESS.—Miss Jeanette Rankin, of Missoula, Montana, was recently elected as member of the House of Representatives. She has the honor of being the first woman to have a seat in that body.

ATTACKS ON EIGHT-HOUR LAW.—A large number of suits are being filed in various parts of the United States attacking the constitutionality of the Adamson law. The department of justice is taking charge of the cases. The commission to make investigation into the effects of the Adamson law opened headquarters in New York on the 23d.

EUROPEAN WAR.—The center of interest continues to be in Rumania, where the advance of the German army from the west imperils Bucharest, the capital. It is reported that the Germans are clear of the mountains in the west and advancing on the plains of the interior. The Serbians are again in control of Monastir on their own soil, having taken it from the Bulgarians in recent fighting. Here and there, minor attacks are the order on the western front though some important local trenches and redoubts have been taken and held by the allies. Bad weather has prevailed. The Greek situation continues an unsolved conundrum. It seems pressure is brought to bear from various sources to involve that country in the war, resulting in disorder and confusion, but no definite declaration.

MEXICAN SETTLEMENT NEAR.—The American-Mexican commissioners have agreed on a protocol which provides for a withdrawal of American troops in Chihuahua within forty days after both Governments approve, provided conditions are not such that the border is endangered. It is also agreed that Mexican troops shall patrol the Mexican side, and American troops the American side of the border. Commanding officers of both armies may cooperate against bandits. Villa bandits have been attacking the city of Chihuahua in a battle of several days' duration, but reports indicate that only parts of the city have been taken. It is difficult to learn the real facts regarding this situation.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

DEDICATION AT OKLAHOMA CITY.—Brother Joseph Arber writes of the dedication of the new church building at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, on the 12th. President Frederick M. Smith preached the dedicatory sermon, the dedicatory prayer was by W. M. Aylor. The large part of the credit is due the sisters of the branch for securing this building, in working through their aid societies.

GRACELAND'S WORK SATISFACTORY.—Our readers will appreciate the following letter:

DES MOINES, IOWA, November 14, 1916.

President G. N. Briggs,
Graceland College, Lamoni, Ia.

Dear President Briggs: The annual report of the Graceland College Academy to the State Board of Education is at hand.

This report indicates very satisfactory conditions for secondary school work, and I wish to congratulate you upon that fact.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) JOHN E. FOSTER.

Inspector of Secondary Schools.

INFORMATION WANTED.—The Editors of the HERALD are making a collection of the various stories relative to the alleged attempt of Joseph Smith to walk on the water. Any of the elders, or others who have accounts of this remarkable incident will please correspond with the HERALD Editors. We already have that interesting experiment located in four different places, and wish to make the collection as complete as possible. The HERALD Editors will appreciate assistance from anyone having testimony concerning this affair.

A VINEYARD STORY.—In the December number of Autumn Leaves, Sister Estella Wight continues her new serial "A Vineyard Story." This is the sequel to the book, In the Shelter of the Little Brown Cottage. In this number she has a stirring picture of an athletic contest at Clifton College. The story is illustrated, the pictures taken from life. The December number also includes an interesting account of a trip to the Sea of Galilee by Mrs. Rolla Floyd; a splendid study of John Greenleaf Whittier, by A. E. McKim; an account of the unique way in which Central Church at Kansas City celebrated a "white Christmas"; a missionary anecdote by Elder Leon Burdick, entitled "Twenty-four hours in jail." The cover design is drawn by Earnest A. Webbe, of Cleveland, Ohio, and represents a night scene, with the Kirtland Temple in the foreground.

Original Articles

OUR PARTNERSHIP WITH GOD

Partnership with God is surely a wonderful privilege, but that is what is offered in the part of the work offered to those who choose to become his children by being adopted into his kingdom.

Angels could have been sent to earth to preach the gospel to mankind, but in his goodness to us as his little children, who needed to be taught to do by doing, he committed that work to those who would choose to make themselves worthy of being called to use a portion of his holy priesthood.

We may prepare the ground in the proper season of the year and plant the seed—a very necessary part of the work to be done—but only a small part in comparison to what our heavenly Father does through what we call the natural laws, towards the producing of the crop of grain.

And then the most wonderful part of all is that in all our partnerships with God, we are really the ones for whom the work was done; the benefit is ours, though in reality we did only a small part of the work.

The laws governing the natural things should teach us to have faith in God as unchangeable, and requiring the same processes in regard to the things we sometimes call spiritual.

In all we might say, we have the choosing, whether we will do our part or not; which means the choosing if we will receive the great benefit that is offered us in a partnership with God.

The prophet, Malachi, was inspired to utter a strange question at one time: "Will a man rob God?" Why, how can a man rob God, to whom belong all things! Even we ourselves are his creatures, as well as the beast of the field, and the cattle upon the thousand hills.

Voicing the answer from God himself the prophet said, In tithes and in offerings have ye robbed me, and even this whole nation is devoured with a curse! and then he goes on to promise the removal of the curses if they will only have faith enough to do as he has asked them to do.

What do you think of a partnership where the one who does much the smallest part of the work keeps all that is gained by the united efforts for himself? Would you continue to do your part if you were the partner thus unjustly treated? And yet that is the way we sometimes treat our partnership with God. We fail to thank him for all he did in the matter, and worse than that, fail to give him the small portion he has asked us to give of the results of our physical labors in connection with him.

The principle of tithing can impoverish no one, for it only asks one tenth part of what we really save over and above what we need to eat and wear out. But many will say, Oh, I do not save anything. It takes all I make and sometimes even then I cannot keep even. In this we are unjustly squandering the portion in tithing that should have been our partner's if we had lived as we should, sacrificing the satisfying of some of our desires, or we have failed to believe God when he made the wonderful offer, saying, Try me "If I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing."

Are we willing to try him? Do we believe this promise is true? This is the question we should ask ourselves continually. If we all had sufficient faith in these promises I do not believe the Church would be in the financial condition it is now. If we all paid our Partner his portion more fully, our increase would be even greater than it is. If those who now have no increase would remember that the Partner has asked us to divide at least something with him, leaving it very much to us and our generosity how much it will be and what we will go without ourselves so as to divide this much with him, then they would soon have even an increase to divide, that is, giving him the one tenth.

Without him we can do nothing. We are dependent upon him for the very breath we breathe. These bodies of ours are his and only lent to us for a reason. We do a little toward the feeding of them, but he through what we call nature again gives us the strength to labor and obtain that which we gain. Will we then fail to show our appreciation of all he does for us by failing to give the little he has asked in tithes and offerings?

THE MOST WONDERFUL PART

It is a paramount fact that when we really do remember his position, that instead of our suffering the loss of what we have given to him, it will bring us more real joy than any of that part we have kept, as we call it, for ourselves.

How did we give God his portion? By paying our tithing, surplus, and consecrations into the general treasury of the church that he has owned as his. Also by giving our offerings into the general treasury, or assisting in any department of the church work, general or local, that we may desire. And then if we are a part of his body, or Church, it will benefit us again, so we are really helping ourselves. The greater blessing reverts to us, a blessing that we have no right to unless we have thus earned it.

The Lord has not promised to rebuke the devourer for our sakes unless we will pay our tithes and offerings. He has not promised to open the windows of heaven to us unless we fulfill our part of the contract. Many will testify that when they have been willing to try these promises of God he has saved them expense in doctor bills, loss of time and very many other ways until the portion they have kept for themselves has really gone further for them than when they kept the Lord's portion, too.

The needs of the church now are greater than ever before, because of the increased membership and the work it is endeavoring to do. With the high prices of all that must be purchased, and the great shortage in crops in many parts of the country, it will require a willingness on the part of each member to sacrifice at least, to properly carry on the work that is offered us to do in the great partnership that is ours, with each other and God, too in the great church work, as we call it.

So the condition is really a greater opportunity for us, by which we are sure to receive greater blessings individually, and as a whole church if we accept the blessing. I wish each Saint could appreciate this fact sufficiently to render unto the Lord as the faithful partner who has done his part so fully, his portion in both tithes and offerings, and the year shall prove one of prosperity to us individually and to the great partnership as a whole.

JEROME E. WILDERMUTH.

Of General Interest

THE BEST ADVERTISEMENT

Instead of using our own language to impress our readers with the value of the SAINTS' HERALD, we print the following personal letter to one of the editors that recently came into our hands. It presents a few arguments so well that we consider it better than anything we could write. As a matter of fact, we consider what our readers think and say as the very best of publicity.

None of those connected with the work of issuing the HERALD have any thought of personal honor, yet every one of them keenly realizes the much good the publication—and the others of the church—could do if they were more widely subscribed to.

We commend the following to our readers for a careful reading:

Dear Brother: I was surprised and delighted to get a letter from you. I am pleased to think that my letter was appreciated. Will be pleased and happy if it can accomplish any good. I have often thought that it should be almost an article of faith with the missionary and others who undertake to preach and baptize people into the church that they instruct and encourage the new members to subscribe for the HERALD. I am convinced that God would use it as an instrument in his hands to feed and keep them alive, and when the missionary went back to that place he or his brethren in the harness would find bright, lively Saints to greet them, instead of some who have starved to death for the want of food that was impossible to be supplied by himself because he could not remain long enough in one place to ground into the newborn Saint all that was necessary for him to know; and the man or woman who, out of a good, honest heart, obeys the gospel could not take it in in a few weeks. I have thought how lovely it would be for the missionary to know that when he was elsewhere trying to win souls for Christ that those dear loving hearts he had left behind had such a white-winged messenger to come to their home every week and point them upward and tell them the story of hope and love.

Brother, as I write I could weep for the young (young in the church) Saints that are not shepherded. Some one will be to blame; shall it be the shepherds of latter-day Israel?

Many times I have read your editorials and marveled at the depth of inspiration in them. I have been led to pray that God would take me near himself that I also might be able to give out such living thoughts, they have been such a help and incentive to move onward and upward. Also I have got much good out of all the others who have from time to time written on different subjects.

I go back ten years ago when I was just baptized into the church, and what a halo of glory shone then about the HERALD! It was like a new revelation from a kind heavenly Father every week; it was a table loaded with a feast of good things—and all for me. I am sure it would prove the same to any dear child of God who would subscribe for it, and I believe it would not take much of an effort on the part of the missionary to get subscriptions.

Also how good it would be for branch presidents to keep the flock that God has made them overseers of, reading that which would strengthen the members. I hear many complaints from branches that the members have grown cold and careless, they do not come out to meetings; they have become like their surroundings. Whose fault is it? The presiding elder may have all he can do to attend to his farm or business, the members are not visited once in six months, perhaps. What is there to hold them? Occasionally a missionary will get around to that part of the vineyard. Our bodies are not sustained by a feast every six months or so; neither is the spiritual man. In the business world men have found that it pays to keep their goods before the people in season and out of season. Should we not be "Instant in season and out of season"? I write this way because I realize that God has called and inspired some to write to his people, and we have a splendid avenue in the HERALD. I have felt for some time that God has smiled upon and blessed it as a messenger of peace to his people. I pray for the success of the HERALD.

While this magazine number, of which there are several each year—has a special appeal and is of general interest, every number is replete with well-balanced mental and spiritual food that will build up and strengthen the individual members of the church.

Notice in this issue our offer "To our missionaries," which we repeat for those who heretofore have not noticed it.

THE PUBLISHERS.

* * * * *

Elders Wight, Haworth, Butterworth and others of the missionaries always drew the fire of the opposition by a shower of questions, in their open-air preaching. It was different with me. The thing that annoyed me most was the interruptions of drunken men. My clarinet always attracted a drunk man if he could walk.—G. R. Wells.

Woman's Auxiliary

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

Report of Field Worker

The 1916 season for reunion work is now closed. The summer's association with the Saints of God, valiant in testimony, strong in their desires to be helpful, has furnished new links to be added to memory's chain of pleasant experiences. The hearty handclasp of old acquaintances, the making of new friends—is there anything else in the world to be compared with the joy of it? A reunion of Saints here on earth is but a foretaste of the grand reunion to come. The great host of people gathered together in the large tabernacle, eagerly drinking in the teaching of those whom God has appointed, makes one look forward with joy to the millennium when the Great Teacher shall dwell with us, and we shall be not only learning from him, but workers together with him.

This summer's experiences have been unusually pleasant because of the interest shown in woman's work. An outline of that work as presented at the different reunions, will, I am sure, be of interest to the readers of our column.

Saint Louis, Missouri, reunion.—The elements were against us, the lightning flashed, the thunder rolled, and the rain came down in torrents, but nothing could dampen the ardor of those appointed to take charge of our work.

Sister Anna Dejong Smith with her corps of helpers did her work so well that her class was the largest of any in our auxiliary meetings. The sisters came with their notebooks, showing that they expected to make a practical application of that which they learned. The subjects handled were: Home building, furnishings, decorations, etc.; cooking, courtesy and comradeship in the home. One of the sessions was devoted to helpful suggestion for the aid societies along the lines of raising money. Sister Smith was assisted in her work by Sisters Etta Weidman, Mary Barrett, May Loevy and Florence Burgess.

One of the pleasing features of the reunion was the gathering together of the children out under the trees for the story-telling hour, Sister Etta Weidman being in charge of this feature of the work.

Council Bluffs reunion.—The work of the Oriole girls was quite in evidence, many being present, dressed in their uniforms ready for service or fun. Sister Hanson, their monitor, was one of the busiest women on the ground. They had an Oriole tent decorated with Oriole colors which was used for a rest tent, class purposes, as well as demonstrations of Oriole work. We were favored by having the superintendent of our cultural department of education and the editor of our column in the HERALD, with us. Each of these sisters gave an interesting talk to the women along lines of auxiliary work, Sister Leeka emphasizing the educational studies and Sister Anderson making a strong plea for closer cooperation of our women, preparing ourselves for more efficient service to the church along lines of the activities outlined in the Year Book. As a result of these talks within a few minutes after the dismissal of our meeting, the brother in charge of Herald Office tent informed us that every Year Book he had brought with him was sold, orders taken for more of them, and several subscriptions taken for HERALD.

A class for young, unmarried women and matrons was conducted, Sister Hanson in charge, assisted by Sisters Blanche Andrews, Audentia Anderson, and Hall. The subjects handled were such as pertain to the home, instilling into the minds of those present higher ideals and a greater appreciation of the "the higher calling to which we are called"—that of home makers. An interesting talk was given by Sister Audentia Anderson on "The value of music in home and church services." This was followed with discussion.

Boone, Iowa, reunion.—This reunion was one of the best if not the best organized reunions it has ever been my privilege to attend. It was our privilege to have with us Sister Sarah M. Rodger, superintendent of nurses in the Independence Sanitarium who conducted a class for mothers in which she taught emergency treatments of children's diseases. Removing foreign substances from eye and ear. Gave a demonstration of caring for fractures until the arrival of the physician, showing how to use splints and bandages, etc. She also demonstrated the making of a bed for the sick, and the changing of it with the patient in the bed.

Miss Charlotte Dryden, teacher of home economics in the Ames University was a visitor at the reunion and rendered good work, assisting Sister Bessy Laughlin with a large class of young women who were given a short course in home economics. Miss Dryden was baptized the last day of the reunion and is now rejoicing with us in this grand latter-day work.

Sister Nora Parks taught a class of young girls; subjects: Care of clothes and bedroom; the effect of selfishness and jealousy; sewing; deportment in the home and church; showing respect to parents; attending Religio and Sunday school.

Brother D. J. Williams assisted by Brethren Jeurgens, Crocker and Parker taught the young boys of the adolescent age; subjects: The need of education; Getting an education; taking advantage of opportunities; reading good books.

Brother Jeurgens gave us a splendid talk on, What is music? He explained the music of the head; music of the heart; and music of the heels. He told us of the good effects wrought by the two first-named, that inspired worship and love of home and country, while the last-named leads to the evils of saloon, dance hall, etc.

Our genial brother Ora Salisbury had made ample provisions for the youth in attendance in the way of sermonets, story-telling, prayer meetings, hikes, games, etc. We feel like doing honor to Brother Salisbury and his able assistant, Brother Roy Cheville, a young man whose work with the children is worthy of special mention.

Logan, Iowa, reunion.—Here we were especially favored by having with us for three days our general president, Sister Frederick M. Smith; each of these days was crowded with good works, not only in class and lecture, but along conversational lines with the women of the church.

Our president addressed the women of mature age along lines of the relief and service phase of Womans' Auxiliary work, broadening our vision and conception of the work possible for us to accomplish which will be of real help to the church outside of the raising of money. She spoke words of appreciation of the good work of the sisters in their aid societies who had contributed so much money for branch expenses, the paying for church buildings, supporting church institutions such as Children's Home, college and Sanitarium as well as assisting the poor.

The next day she addressed the young women and girls, telling them what the Woman's Auxiliary had to offer to the young woman. Enthusing them with a desire for study, that they might prepare for social service work, etc.

The next day was one long to be remembered. The tent was crowded, and sitting on the platform, side by side, was the president of the church Brother Frederick M. Smith, and the president of the Womans' Auxiliary, his wife Sister Frederick M. Smith. One the leader of the work of the priesthood in the church, the other the leader of woman's work in the church. President Smith gave a strong, right-out-from-the-shoulder talk to those holding the priesthood. This was followed by a lecture from Sister Smith, outlining the work and policies of the Woman's Auxiliary; both were inspiring. At the close of the service, groups of women could be seen and heard discussing that which they had heard. Brother Amos Berve, ever alert to the good of all, suggested that we invite the women to come forward and be introduced to Sister Smith. This was done, which resulted in an informal reception, hundreds of women coming forward and shaking hands, each receiving a few words of greeting from our president.

We feel that we were fortunate in having with us Sister Hunt, a registered nurse who conducted a class for the women, presenting the following subjects, demonstrating many of them: Caring for the sick; the sick room with its furnishings; the making of bed and changing of linen; how to prevent bedsores, and how to treat them; giving physical exercises to bedridden patients; proper care of infants; beauty talks; care of the skin, and hair, etc.; the value of deep breathing; the correct way to stand, sit and walk; evils of tight clothing, high heels, etc.

Sister Vida E. Smith was in charge of the class for young women, presenting various phases of home making, good taste in dressing, courtesy, etc., she was ably assisted by Sister Esther Kennedy, et al.

Brother Albert Carmichael took the parents of the adolescent boys and girls out under the trees and discussed the problems of this age and how to meet them.

Sister J. F. McDowell was in charge of the children's tent, providing for story-telling, sermonets, games, etc., calling several of the sisters to her assistance.

Brother Amos Berve, with all he had to do, was not too busy to take care of the recreational features of the reunion, and the young people count him one of them, for was he not the life of the games, hikes, weiner roasts, etc., that were provided for them?

Last but not least was the work of the Logan aid society with members of visiting aids who suggested that a collection be taken up for bed linen for Graceland College and the Sanitarium. As Brother J. W. Wight always tells us, there is nothing like the psychological moment to do such things, and he saw to it that the minds of the people were aroused to the needs of these two institutions along these lines and then took up a collection resulting in $56.67. One of the sisters was appointed to purchase the goods at wholesale,—and two sewing machines were hauled out to the grounds. Sister Berve offered her tent as a workroom, and then the sisters got busy. You should have heard the buzz of happy voices of the sisters as they worked, the whirring of the machines as the relay of sisters made the wheels fly, the tearing of the linen, the turning of hems and then the net results of which we were all so proud: Twenty-eight sheets and thirty-eight pillowcases for Graceland, twenty-three sheets and forty-six pillowcases with some towels for the Sanitarium and a lot of smiling, contented women that were made more happy because they had made themselves useful to others.

Lectures and talks for the Children's Home, Sanitarium, and Graceland College were given by Sisters Rodger and Etzenhouser, Brethren F. M. Smith, E. E. Long, Heman C. Smith, Thomas Barton, J. W. Wight.

Talks on social purity were given to the general assembly by Brethren E. E. Long and Doctor Kennedy; two talks on this subject to women only were given by Sister Etzenhouser. A talk on the adolescent boy was given at each reunion by the same sister.

Other phases of auxiliary work of special interest to the other auxiliaries of the church have been reported to those interested with the names of those who rendered service, therefore that part of our auxiliary sessions does not appear in this report.

We wish to thank the many, good, faithful, willing sisters that contributed so largely to the success of the reunion work. May God's blessings rest on each of you and reward you bountifully for the services rendered.

MRS. M. A. ETZENHOUSER,
General Field Worker.

Who Will Be the Next to Fall in Line?

When the Gallands Grove District sent in request for field worker to attend their convention at Deloit, Iowa, they urged that some one be sent that could represent the work of the Woman's Auxiliary as well as Sunday school and Religion. To quote the words of our informant, "they wanted to be 'put on the map' in Woman's Auxiliary work."

Our genial brother, Gomer R. Wells, general superintendent of the Sunday School Association arose nobly to the occasion, and besides representing the Sunday school and Religion, conducted a two-hour session for us, outlining our work from a to z, urged the "aids" throughout the district to "come in and be one with us," encouraged the women to study, sold a Year Book to delegates from every branch represented at the convention and took several orders for the Oriole book.

During the month of November Brother Wells will be working throughout the Far West, Missouri, District and he assures us that he will do what he can for our work wherever he goes. We quote from his letter to us: "It is my duty as well as my pleasure to build up the Woman's Auxiliary at every opportunity." This is just as it should be. Field workers should be qualified to present the work of the three auxiliaries. Our women should see that the work of the Woman's Auxiliary is presented at every convention, institute and reunion in their district. The Gallands Grove District and Brother Wells have set the pace. Let other districts wake up, fall in line, and get busy.

MRS. M. A. ETZENHOUSER.

Holden Stake

Three locals have been organized in this stake lately, one at Holden, one at Knobnoster, and a circle of Oriole girls at Lexington.

Our stake superintendent of the home department is looking ahead for the benefit of our homes next year. The idea is to make the home a producer as well as a consumer. She is asking all members who can spare cuttings of berry vines, strawberry plants, young trees, bulbs, etc. that do well set out in the fall, to share with those who do not have these; also to make a study of our church buildings and grounds and see what can be done in the fall to beautify them next year.

The relief and service department of Warrensburg local are contemplating taking up a study along the lines of social work, dividing the time between sewing and study.

We have recently visited points in the stake where the three largest branches are located and are pleased with the interest that is awakening among the sisters. Our stake convention held in September had an arousing effect upon some and we hope to reach others at our next convention, December 10.

GRACE L. KRAHL.

From the Home Economics Superintendent

Dear Sister: In our big college library here, I found a splendid little book recently that I wish each of you could read. It is called Planning and Furnishing the Home, by Mary J. Quinn, published by Harper Brothers of New York, for $1.07 postpaid, and may be ordered of the Herald Office. It is very readable and has ideas that the most common of us can use.

There are a number of good books dealing with home economics questions that we thought would make the auxiliary Year Book list too cumbersome, but you will find them on file in the book service department of the Herald Office. We are nearly ready to send in an additional number for this department now.

Just remember, too, that the Department of Agriculture, Washington, District of Columbia, has bulletins on nearly every division of home economics work. Most of them are free for the asking. But be sure to state the particular subjects desired, when writing.

For the progress of the work,

MRS. BERTHA L. MADER.

MANHATTAN, KANSAS, 1509 Poyntz.

Notice

Some time since we gave notice through the Woman's Auxiliary Department of HERALD, to the local auxiliary societies, asking them to appoint a historian in their locals, if they had not already done so, and to send the name and address of such appointee to the general historian, Mrs. B. C. Smith 24 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri.

So far we have received but one answer to the request; so we wish to call your attention to the matter again, and ask that you will please take notice of the request and act upon it as soon as possible.

MRS. B. C. SMITH,

General Historian of Woman's Auxiliary.

Letter Department

Comment on Church Affairs

The falling leaves and the cool, pleasant days proclaim the reign of Indian summer. We look over the narrow path through which we have traveled since entering this mission during the fore part of May, and find that this has been one of the busiest periods of my missionary life. Not that my desire for activity has been any greater than usual, but conditions have been such as to enable me to keep busy.

I have spent considerable time in the Kewanee District in company with Brother C. E. Willey and find him an energetic worker and a wise counselor. He is well liked by the Saints.

By the direction of the missionary in charge, Brother J. F. Curtis, I ordained Brother E. A. Curtis to the office of elder in August. He is full of zeal and an ardent worker. His wife, Hazel, is wise, capable and is taking hold of the work with the true spirit of a missionary's wife, and is destined to prove a help to the church, and a blessing to her husband. Success is attending their efforts.

They located in the district in June and their work demonstrates the wisdom of keeping the young missionaries with their families as much as possible. The missionary's family that is wise and willing to work, will prove a great help not only to the missionary, but to the district where they live.

The church owns a house near Kewanee, Illinois, and an effort is being made to have it moved onto a vacant lot near the church, and have it remodeled for a parsonage. We expect to have it accomplished next spring.

There have been several baptized during the summer and the branches are doing as well, if not a little better than usual. Some of the branches are making decided advancement.

Our district conference was held at Kewanee, Illinois, October 21 and 22. There was a smaller representation than usual, as it had been very stormy during the week. But Saturday morning the sky cleared and the sun sent his warming rays which brought cheer and good will to the Saints. The business was transacted in peace and unity. The preaching was of a high order and the prayer service one of the best I ever attended. The testimonies were full of cheerful thoughts, expressing hope in God and faith in the final triumph of the church.

The Lord gave us a beautiful message by Sister M. E. Gillin, that was cheering and instructive. It caused us to realize "that it is good to be a saint in latter days."

We take much interest in the church papers and derive much benefit from the various articles. We could mention them all, but "Traveling in beaten paths," by Brother J. W. Wight, is worthy of mention as a word in due season.

Brother C. Ed Miller's exegesis on "Your headings in the HERALD," is food for thought. It is true our claims can be too modest and our "headings" can be too common, but care should also be taken not to overdo the matter in presenting our wares. This may be illustrated by referring to a merchant, who put out a flaming advertisement of "Glorio silk." When the customers came to see the wonderful article they were somewhat disgusted to learn that it was only common eight-cent calico. So, Mr. Editor, I hope you will think twice before you make any radical change in the matter of your "headings."

I am truly pleased to see the articles on the "Theological chair" coming through the HERALD. It shows that some are thinking on the subject. When men think, they are sure to arrive at correct conclusions eventually. When Graceland College was first established some of the former elders favored the installation of a theological course. They realized the need of a better education than they had received, and desired to see others obtain what they had been deprived of. I think that if we took the benefits of religion from Graceland there would be no need for the college, as there are better educational institutions all over the land that Graceland can ever hope to be.

But this idea was not considered worthy of even notice, but the guess was made and published in the HERALD that some day it would be established in Graceland.

It is not unusual to hear our members complaining about some of our elders making grammatical mistakes and mispronouncing words, and some even object to sustaining certain ones in the missionary force till they become more competent speakers.

A complaint of this kind was once made and the person was told, If I should advocate sending the brother to a school where he could be taught the rudiments of grammar and the principles of the gospel more fully, you would be the first to object, and say we were going into sectarianism. This was admitted. Then why object to the preaching of the brother? He will learn in time—something like the old oculist who said he had ruined a peck of eyes before he learned how to heal them.

But let us see if the Lord has said anything on this subject. "Behold, I say unto you concerning the school in Zion, I, the Lord, am well pleased that there should be a school in Zion; and also with my servant Parley P. Pratt, for he abideth in me; and inasmuch as he continueth to abide in me he shall continue to preside over the school, in the land of Zion, until I shall give unto him other commandments; and I will bless him with a multiplicity of blessings, in expounding all scriptures and mysteries to the edification of the school and of the church in Zion." (Doctrine and Covenants 94: 2.)

It is quite evident that it is just as necessary for our children and for all who attend Graceland to-day, to have some one set apart and blessed "in expounding all scriptures and mysteries to the edification of the school," as it was in the school in Independence in 1833. Parley P. Pratt was a high priest and we have men and women who are just as competent to-day as he was then. [We now have five high priests on Graceland College faculty—all good men.—EDITOR.]

When we listen to some of the criticisms made by our experienced elders of some of the less experienced ones, and even the criticisms which are made and presented on the heresies presented by some of the experienced elders at times, we are forced to conclude that it might do us all good to attend a school awhile where a teacher would teach theology by "expounding all scriptures and mysteries."

This kind of a "chair of theology" is not dangerous or the Lord would never have made provisions for it. May the Lord help us to advance till we can have all that the revelations provide for.

The formation of classes with the lecture courses in Independence, with the unexpected interest manifested by the students, indicate the strong desire of the membership to learn. This desire is not confined to Independence, and I am of the opinion that when a course of gospel instruction is established in Graceland, it will be more liberally patronized than any other course.

PEORIA, ILLINOIS.

W. E. PEAK.

Spearfish, South Dakota, Reunion

The reunion at Spearfish, South Dakota, has passed into history. There was nothing especially remarkable about it, unless that it was remarkably small. That was to be expected, as in these parts our membership is small. The weather was much against us. The few who attended from other places as well as the Saints of Spearfish enjoyed it immensely. Brother Gillen was with us throughout, and did the preaching, assisted by Brother J. M. Stubbart and the writer. Other activities of our work were indulged in, according to demand and supply.

Brother Gillen charmed his hearers, Saints and others, from the start, and was charmed by the music which he said could be duplicated in but few places in his large mission.

The attendance grew toward the close. The impression made was excellent. Spearfish being an educational center, members of the faculty and students were in attendance, some aiding in music. Brother Gillen's discourse relating to the scientific as well as Biblical, entertained such the more. Brother Gillen was charmed with the country and people, and saw for our work a center at Spearfish and coming workers for our ranks. The little band of Saints were much encouraged and enlightened. They look forward to next year's reunion in fond anticipation.

Perhaps none enjoyed it more than Grandpa F. M. Newton, of eighty-one summers, who from the start to the last labored on the neat chapel and did perhaps more at it than any one other person. Many compliments on the attractiveness of the chapel were passed.

It can be said that the work is planted—a center for the region established. Reunion work is begun whose radiation can mean much. Success, then, is achieved and to be enlarged upon, to which this whole region should contribute.

The burden of building the church was borne so far by the few at Spearfish. Many round about should help to share this, for it will be a center and helpful to all surrounding points. Contributions may be sent to G. W. Newton, Box 224, Spearfish, South Dakota. The outlook for additions to our ranks is good at Spearfish and contiguous points.

On new ground and busy in the conflict, at the call of Brother and Sister J. C. Reinmur, formerly of Missouri Valley, Iowa, now of White Owl, South Dakota.

In bonds,

SPEARFISH, SOUTH DAKOTA.

R. ETZENHOUSER.

Florida Reunion

The Florida District reunion was held at the usual place, Dixonville, Alabama, eight miles from Brewton, Alabama, October 6 to 14, 1916. Of the missionary force there were present F. M. Slover, Edward Rannie and A. E. Warr. Brother D. M. Rudd, who is serving as district president, assisted in the preaching and was quite an addition to the force. Brother W. L. Booker of Bay Minette, Alabama, and Brother J. R. Harper of McKenzie, Alabama, also occupied the stand.

The attendance was smaller than last year on account of sickness in the community. The meetings were good, however, and those who were privileged to attend seemed to enjoy the services. There was a good attendance of outsiders on Sundays, and in this direction we feel that good was accomplished. On the first Sunday at the Religio session at four p. m. some of the prominent educators of the country attended. The lesson on the Book of Mormon was quite attractive and interesting to them. They expressed themselves as having received a "revelation," and seemed to appreciate the viewpoint of Latter Day Saints on the history of ancient America.

The matter of holding reunion next year was referred to the district conference.

A. E. WARR, Reunion Secretary.

Can Graceland Help These People?

[We reprint herewith an extract from a private letter written by a missionary laboring in one of the missions of the church where poverty and hardship and ignorance prevail in many localities. He finds the Saints there making an heroic effort to struggle out of their difficulties. He feels that Graceland College may help them by sending trained workers to labor among them; or rather by taking and training young men and women reared among those environments and sending them back home to work among the people as teachers and preachers of common sense right living. For very obvious reasons we do not feel at liberty to give the name of the writer or the location of the field. But his letter cannot fail to start a fruitful train of thought.—HERALD EDITOR.]

The twin enemies of progress, religiously and otherwise, in this section are poverty and ignorance. They both live together, and hold the people in their iron grasp. The people do not will it, it is the result of conditions they cannot altogether control. There are many good people making a heroic struggle to help improve conditions, and our people have been highly commended by prominent educators for their loyal support.

I am well convinced that unless God will perform a miracle on our people, and I don't expect that, the only hope of improvement among our people here is through education. It may be slow, but it cannot come in any other way. Preaching first principles will never educate them or eliminate poverty, and the latter will only be done by an increase of intelligence. How can we educate our young people is a very important and ever pressing problem.

The common schools here are inefficient because of poor teachers and a short term of school. Our churches could be used as schools if we had preachers who possessed the ability to teach and continued school during the public school vacation in connection with their church duties. The Adventist Church reports thirty thousand in their primary schools and about seven thousand in their colleges and academies.

Graceland College will never fulfill its mission until every worthy, needy boy and girl that wants to go there can go. We take church money to pay the college debt, and pay the salaries of the teachers, or sink it in doubtful enterprises, but not a dollar for the poor boy or girl who is a victim of conditions; perhaps a missionary's child, the very material we hope to build the church on is denied the privilege of an education.

I have met quite a number of young people that would like to go to Graceland but they cannot because of the cost. All that I have talked with who have attended have told me they were glad and thankful they had the privilege of going to Graceland.

Our missionaries and Sunday school and Religio workers for this country ought to be persons who have spent their life in this country, and have had the chances of a liberal education, and it will increase their efficiency if they have gone to school at Graceland and come in contact with the vitalizing forces of the church, such as are found at Lamoni and Independence.

I have told the Saints wherever I have been in private and public, wherever it was necessary for the young people to leave home to begin to make their way in the world, to go to Independence, Kansas City, or points in the regions round about where there are good branches, depending on what they intended to work at, in the city or on the farm. I believe I am justified by the law of Christ, the instruction of Bishop Kelley and the results of my own observation. I have advised them to honor the law and observe the same common sense they would in any business matter.

From what I learn through the church papers and by private letters, there is a persistent, determined, systematic effort being made in Independence and Kansas City to improve conditions among our people, and the better they get the bigger will be the stream of emigration; the Saints are sick and weary of living isolated and in branches that largely exist on paper. You might as well try to stop the incoming tide with a pitchfork; and what they need is kind, sympathetic friends that will help them to get work, that is the true spirit of the gospel, yes, the spirit of brotherhood, of fraternity.

Christmas Gifts

The amount of money spent by the American people for Christmas presents has grown to be very large. The custom is so general that but few of the 100,000,000 people in the United States do not receive a present of some kind on that day.

I do not write to discourage the giving of gifts, I would not be a party to anything that would rob childhood of its joy, but rather to suggest that we be more wise in our giving. We all should set an example of moderation, and this is especially true of those who are well-to-do and can give generously and not deprive themselves of the common needs of life. It is for the best good of all that we conform more to the idea of useful things and less ornamental.

In a recent revelation to the church (Doctrine and Covenants 130: 8) we were admonished to "exercise the principle of sacrifice and repression of unnecessary wants," and this for the purpose of helping in the financial work of the church.

While we are in a happy mood planning to make our children and friends happy, it is good for us to enlarge our vision and see some other places that we can bring happiness and good cheer. The Children's Home is a good place to think about. Why not form the habit of counting those children as a part of our family and send a good book or some money to help feed and clothe them—that would be pure religion (James 1: 27), and keep it up the remainder of our lives.

The various Saints' Homes are good places to express the Christmas spirit by an annual gift in money or its equivalent. It will benefit the church and far more help the giver because it will help to eliminate selfishness from his or her life, and let the Christ spirit take its place.

The Sanitarium offers us an opportunity to show our love for the needy and suffering ones. There are many who need the benefits that an institution of that kind can offer, who are not able to pay for them, and gifts of money or property or merchandise will be a great help to those engaged in that work, and also relieve the general bishopric of a heavy burden.

The Sunday School Christmas Offering is a gift that should not be overlooked. All the adults should set the example by giving an offering, and then they can consistently encourage the children to do the same. In the year 1910 the Adventist Sunday schools gave their church $134,000 for missionary purposes, and as a rule their people come from the ranks of common people and have no more money than our people have.

It would be a fine thing for the church, and of great good to the various institutions and for the purification of our own lives from selfishness, if we would select some one of these institutions and send them a gift each year. When we are buying nice and valuable books for our children and friends, let us think of the library at the Children's Home, at the Sanitarium, and in our branch and Sunday school and Religio, and send a book to one of those institutions. They will be read and greatly appreciated.

Why not make this Christmas a red-letter day in our life, and resolve that we will repress unnecessary wants and cultivate the spirit of moderation and commence to give to our public institutions; in giving in that way many more will be benefited by our giving.

PAUL PARKER.

Milestones by the Way

Dear Herald: Five years ago to-day I left my home near Brown City, Michigan, and in company with H. E. C. Muir, started on my first missionary trip. We had been appointed to the Western Michigan District by F. A. Smith, who was then in charge of this mission. At that time the writer was passing through one of the most severe trials we have ever experienced, but through divine grace daily imparted, we were able to endure till relief finally came on the 31st of the following March.

Brother Muir stayed in the field only ten days and when he returned home he was severely criticized by the home folks for returning, as he had told them ere he left home that God had showed him he should go, and now he had returned and said that God had revealed to him that he should return.

They could not understand it and I confess that at that time it looked dark to me, but now all is plain; God willed that the writer should enter the field, but owing to the condition I was then in, I would never have gone alone, so Brother Muir was sent to get me started, and then he was directed to return to the home branch, as he was needed there. I can see now where God was ruling in it all to bring about his plans and I am grateful to him and to Brother Muir. In those five years I have been greatly blessed in my labors, and trust that much good has been accomplished by our efforts.

This is my fourth year in Canada and the third in the Chatham District and just here I want to say a few words in favor of the Canadian Saints: I had heard it said that Canada was a very hard place to labor, and it is true that in some places it is hard to get the people of the world interested in our message but wherever we have gone among the Saints, we have found a warm welcome and have been treated as only true Saints can treat the missionary. We have found them to be a very generous class and they have freely imparted of their means to help us on our way and we have never yet lacked for anything we really needed. Only this fall the Saints in Chatham took up a collection and bought us a thirty-dollar suit and in many other ways they have helped us. I desired to buy a typewriter this fall and went to Detroit and purchased a Hammond that cost sixty dollars. Got it on the installment plan with over a year to pay for it, but the news spread that we had purchased it and the Saints of the Chatham District got busy and in less than two months time, we walked into the office in Detroit and finished paying for the machine. Just here I want to express my deep appreciation of this manifestation of their kindness and to thank them one and all for their timely aid.

We have found the same sweet spirit of peace among the Saints here that we have found elsewhere and while some are not doing their duty, the majority are striving to "come up higher."

We have some very earnest workers in the district and they are doing all in their power to keep the banner of our King floating on high. Among others I wish to especially mention Elder Stewart Lamont, president of the Chatham Branch and vice president of the district. Brother Lamont has for many years been honored and respected in Chatham by all the citizens and has held an office in municipal affairs and only this fall the Government appointed him inland revenue collector and one of the business men of Chatham (not a Saint) told me that there was not one objection offered by the people of Chatham when Brother Lamont received his appointment. This surely speaks well of him and he told me that he owed his success in life to the gospel. In spite of the fact that he is very popular with the people, he is ever at his post of duty in the church and proves by his conduct that the church is first in his life. He is loved by nearly all the Saints and those who may not love him, simply do not know his real worth. He has been more than a friend to me and I am glad that I can pin this bouquet on his bosom.

Another worker is Elder J. H. Tyrrell, who has done much to help the Saints in a musical way, he being chorister of the district. He has also spent much time and money in sending out books and tracts throughout the district into places where the gospel has not been preached. In January, 1914, he had bills printed, offering one thousand dollars reward to anyone who could prove in the courts of Canada that we are in any way connected with the Utah Mormon church and it has done more to clear that matter up in the minds of the people than anything else we have ever used. We have taken it into places where nearly every one believed we were right from Utah and when we have shown them that bill they have said, "He would not dare make that offer if you were in any way a part of the Utah church." It is a place where "money talks."

Now we want to mention the Bothwell Saints who, under the leadership of our genial brother, Elder John C. Dent have erected one of the most beautiful churches our people have in Canada, and I think I am safe in saying, anywhere. They laid the corner stone some time in July, I believe it was, and they will have it ready for occupancy and will hold their opening Sunday, November 26. It is a fitting monument of sacrifice and hard work. We have received a kind invitation to attend the opening and begin a series of services right afterwards and we will try to comply.

We have been very busy this past summer, having held several open-air campaigns. The first was in the park in Walkerville, the second in the park at Chatham, the third on the streets in Wallaceburg and the last one on the streets of Thamesville. In all these places we had a splendid interest and believe much good has been done. Have baptized twelve so far this year and hope to do more in that line ere long. Brother William Perriott of Thamesville has a fine auto and we used it as a rostrum and found it "just the thing," hence we can also voice the plaintiff wail of E. E. Long: "If we only had a car." I do believe if a missionary had one he could accomplish much more good than he can now, for he could go into new places and open up the work and "hike back" to the home of the Saints twenty miles away to satisfy the yearnings of the "outer man."

Just now I am holding a series of services in the home of Brother Theodore Wismer, near Amherstburg. I began here Sunday night and have had a good crowd both times and have enjoyed good liberty. Expect to continue here till time to go to Bothwell. One man and his wife by the name of Jones drive three or four miles each night to our meetings. His father, Brother Edward Jones of Otter Lake, Michigan, was the first person I ever baptized. It is to be hoped that the son will follow his father. He has four brothers in the church also. The Saints in Canada do not hold many two-day meetings, but nearly all the branches hold "anniversary services" and good times are had. We have attended two this fall; one at Stevenson and one at Kimball. The Spirit of the Master was with us at both places and all felt repaid for coming.

We also had an invitation to attend the one in Chatham, but as it was held on the same date as the Eastern Michigan district conference, we felt we could not go as we have never missed a conference in said district since we obeyed the gospel in June, 1911.

While on my way to conference I stopped off in Detroit and went to hear "Billy" Sunday. I must say I cannot understand how the American people can tolerate the things he says or how they can imagine that he is a follower of the meek and lowly One. His stock in trade is mostly slang and he says things from the pulpit that I would not want to say to a crowd of men. I heard him twice and not one word of gospel truth did I hear; that is, what people must do to merit the favor of God and be saved in his kingdom. I understand that he took fifty thousand dollars out of Detroit and also an eight thousand dollar auto, as a "thank offering." He doesn't seem to believe in the idea of "freely ye have received, freely give." If the money was taken out of his work we feel that he would return to the ball ground.

Had a nice time at the conference. The district is to be divided, which is a good thing as it is too large for one set of officers to care for as it should be. We heard Elder J. R. Grice preach a splendid sermon on social purity which was much enjoyed. He gave us many facts that we hope will be heeded by the Saints. Such sermons are badly needed by our people.

Just a word now about my colleague, Elder Joseph H. Yager, who is laboring in this district; Joseph is surely coming to the front rapidly. He has done a good work in the district, having opened up the work in new places and made many friends to the cause. Everybody likes him splendidly and he is doing well in telling the gospel story.

In gospel bonds,

RICHARD D. WEAVER.

Field Address: CHATHAM, ONTARIO, Lock Box 196.

From Here and There

Brother F. M. Slover writes that the work has been opened up very nicely at Seneca, South Carolina. He has baptized three Brighamite elders and two of their members, while others are much interested. A. G. Miller has been left in charge for the remainder of the conference year. He reports the death of F. P. Scarecliffe, at one time a missionary and who was much beloved in the South. Brother Slover expects to spend the greater part of the winter in eastern and southern Florida where they are calling for help in new places.

Brother Eli Hayer reports having concluded a successful series of meetings near McFall, Missouri, at the extreme southwestern edge of Lamoni Stake. The interest was excellent and attendance taxed to the limit the capacity of the schoolhouse. The Saints there talk of purchasing a church building. It is expected that regular appointments will be made for preachers from Lamoni.

We learn that Boston is not a whit behind the stakes in the effort to advance, intellectually and spiritually. They have an English class, well attended, and a small German class, both under the direction of Sister S. A. Burgess; a woman's study club, meeting every other week, with three papers, one on art, one on operatic composers, and one on the woman's movement in America. The men's class, including the two classes in the Sunday school, also meet every other week with lectures on first aid by Doctor W. A. Sinclair, financial law by Bishop Myron Fisher, and selected topics by Elder S. A. Burgess. With Sunday school, Religion and preaching, night classes open and attended by our members at the high school, they are certainly making use of their opportunities. Other classes will be formed when the demand warrants.

Extracts from Letters

Elder Peter Anderson writes from Pocatello, Idaho, November 18: "Just arrived this morning for a short trip in this State, then go on to Washington. Expect to reach the coast by the new year."

Charles F. Cummings and David Joy report that the recent eastern Maine conventions and conference were a grand success. From their letter we quote: "The Sunday evening service being the last session it will surely be long remembered. Aside from a generous musical program, there was an elaborate sermon by Elder John F. Sheehy, district superintendent. Surrounding schools were nearly all represented, and a spiritual feast enjoyed by all."

Sister Maude Gunsolley writes that the first quarterly conference of the Kansas City Stake was held at the Central Church, November 11 and 12. The Woman's Auxiliary was represented by some of its general and local leaders. Progress is reported in all lines. She says: "It is the ambition of the stake presidency to have one big meeting of the stake quarterly to promote more of a unity of feeling throughout the stake."

CLAYTON, MANCHESTER, ENGLAND, October 28, 1916.

Editors Herald: It is with pleasure I forward to your valuable paper my testimony of this great latter-day work I have been a member of this church for upwards of ninety years, and the Lord has many times marvelously displayed his salvation to me. I can say that not half can ever be told of his matchless goodness to me and mine. When I was confirmed a member of this church I was told, by the brother who laid on hands, that the time would come when, because of standing for right, men would seek my life as they sought the Lord's. The brother did not state how this would be accomplished, and many times the statement has come forcibly to my mind.

On the 26th of last August I received my summons to join his majesty's army. I accordingly visited the recruiting authorities, presented my elder's license, and claimed exemption from service according to Act of Parliament, which states that "clergymen in holy orders; or, ministers of any religious denomination" were excepted from service. I was sent with my papers and elder's license to an officer in the intelligence department of the war office in Manchester. The officer asked me many questions as to my duties in the church, and in civil life. He asked me whether I could marry, bury, baptize, administer the Lord's supper, to which I answered, "Yes." He also asked me whether I put a gown or surplice on when performing those duties, to which I replied, "No!" I stated that we did not believe the gown made the man a better minister, to which he seemed to agree. He then retained my calling-up papers and said if I were asked either by policeman or recruiting officer why I had not joined the army I must present my license, and if that were not sufficient I must refer them to him.

After this date much correspondence took place between the writer and the recruiting authorities, and eventually my case was sent in the war office, with a copy of my elder's license. I was informed later that the whole case had been referred to the Archbishop of Canterbury for decision. He, of course, ruled against us as a church, and on September 11, 1916, I received another paper calling me up for service in his majesty's army, with note attached which stated that they did not believe I was a regular minister of a religious denomination, and if I still objected to service in the army I must raise the question in a civil court.

I did not appear for training on the date named, and on September 29 I was served with a summons by a detective officer. I was allowed seven days to prepare my defense. The authorities of the church in the mission and district took up the case. They engaged a solicitor and barrister-at-law for the defense of our church and its ministers.

On the morning of October 6, prior to the case being tried by the stipendary magistrate, the statement given at my confirmation previously mentioned came with force to my mind. Before I left my home I knelt with my wife and family and petitioned the Lord that he would cause his church to appear before the minds of the people of this city as it had never appeared before. I remembered too, that the Lord's word stated that "to him who ordereth his conversation aright I will show my salvation." The case finally came before the magistrates who found after nearly a ninety-minute trial that we were a religious denomination, and the writer was a regular minister of this denomination. He thus proved the salvation of the Lord and the summons issued against me was therefore dismissed.

I could cite many more evidences of the goodness of the Lord, and I desire to show my appreciation of his Fatherly care by living a righteous life. I ask for an interest in the prayers of the Saints. May we all be such, is the sincere prayer of,
Your brother in Christ,

JAMES SCHOFIELD.

164 Stanton Street, Seymour Road, South.

[We note a report in the Millennial Star, of October 5, that an elder of the Utah Mormon church had been in a similar "test case" and the result was:

"The Bench said they did not recognize the Defendant as a minister of a recognized religion, and handed him over to the military. On a question of appeal being raised, however, he was allowed his liberty, on a promise to surrender when necessary."—EDITORS.]

RADVILLE, SASKATCHEWAN, November 12, 1916.

Editors Herald: I want to say a few words of appreciation for the blessings I have received from the Master since my last writing.

Last December I took courage and traveled from here to Independence, Missouri, with our little girl, Doris, who was then nearly four years old, and had never taken a step alone. She received a blessing while there under the care of the Sanitarium, and I was able to return home with her the first of March and on the ninth of March she was walking all around the house.

This was certainly a blessing to us, and from the actions of the little girl one could not help but see she was pleased and happy. She is still improving and there is not a day passes by but what I feel to thank and praise my heavenly Father for this blessing.

We are not making any progress here, there being no branch but we are looking any day for Brother Peterson to step in and make an effort to hold services here. We are hoping some good will be accomplished.

It has been a rainy fall this year. We have never known it to be so rainy. Threshing has been delayed and we understand there is much grain in the surrounding district to be threshed. We have some flax that is not threshed yet. Crops were poor. So much rust caused the grain to be light in weight. Some people raised only a tenth of what they have raised other years.

We are anxious to move where there is a branch of Saints. It is a discouragement to us who had for fourteen years lived where we could attend services nearly every evening and all day Sunday, to be where we cannot attend even one service of our faith in a week, and only once in a while shake hands with a Saint. However, we are strong in the faith, and we cannot doubt God's goodness. We have proved him in days that are past, and realized the meaning of the words in the song, "One hour with Jesus," number 337 in the Hymnal.

Ever praying for the welfare of God's cause, I am,

IDA MAY BERGERSON.

LIMA, OHIO, November 2, 1916.

Editors Herald: I came to this place some three weeks ago, the Saints here having rented a hall, desiring to put forth a special effort to reach the people of this city of about thirty-five thousand.

We have advertised in the papers as well as by house-to-house canvass, putting out a thousand handbills and about six hundred tracts. The results are not all that might be desired yet we are beginning to see results of our effort. Fair crowds are greeting us nightly, and some seem to be taking hold of the work. It is going to mean effort and sacrifice for the few here to keep the ball rolling, but when we find Saints interested enough in the work to put forth the effort in faith, a way will be provided if all prove faithful.

We have been able to raise the fighting qualities of the W. C. T. U. just a little. In a meeting they held last week they took exceptions to the Mormons holding meetings in Lima, and registered their protest through the papers in a report of the proceedings of their meeting. I will inclose a clipping, also my reply. The paper did not print all I sent in, cutting it down over half, but we thought it was fair enough, so said nothing.

Brother Griffiths spent two nights with us in his tour of the district, and gave two good talks.

We expect to hold the fort for a while longer with meetings every night, after which Brother Griffiths has promised to arrange to have a man here for Sundays to carry on the work. He wanted to use me elsewhere, and we must be subject to the powers that be.

Brother Everett D. Finken is associated with me at present. He is a young man just starting out. He will leave me soon, having been ordered to southern Ohio for the remainder of the conference year.

"I have not been able to do as much this year as in years past owing to sickness. I am hoping that I may now be able to continue in the fight without further interruption.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM ANDERSON.

DUBOIS, IDAHO, November 3, 1916.

Editors Herald: It having been some time since I wrote to your precious columns, I thought I would again send you a few words to bear my testimony to the truthfulness of this glorious work of God.

Being one of the isolated ones, I truly can feel the loneliness of heart of those who are in like situation when I read your letters; especially do they touch the tender sympathetic cords of my heart when reading of cases where one is not only isolated from others of like faith, but where one is the only member in the family that has obeyed the gospel of Christ, like myself. How often our prayers have ascended to God that he might touch their blind and prejudiced hearts, and cause them to see the truth; yet we must not forget that he has given man his free agency, and will not force any into his kingdom; therefore like our humble Nazarene, we should, from our hearts say, "Thy will, not mine, be done."

If we have warned our dearest relatives and friends of the awful punishments that await those who will not obey the law of Christ, we have rid our garments from their blood, and we assuredly will get our just reward for our work, as well as for all our Godly sorrows.

I know this is the pure gospel of Jesus Christ; no other so-called gospel has, or ever can have that tender, celestial love accompanying it that will compare with it. It is one of love toward all men. Its blessings to the faithful ones are numerous and differing.

I have been blessed many times with dreams many of which have been literally fulfilled. I am sorry I have not always held myself unspotted from evil. I have used tobacco occasionally since coming into the church; but long ago I bowed in prayer to my heavenly Father and promised him never to defile my lips with tobacco again in any form. I have made my promise good from that very moment, and I will make it good hereafter; for I know God will stand by me to help me in every good work.

Dear Saints, who use tobacco—are you more lovers of the filthy weed than you are lovers of God? You certainly are if you persist in the habit. Do you not know God has given you sufficient power to quit it in a moment if you will, even though how long you may have used it. It is not enough to simply try to quit the habit; but if you really love your God who has commanded his people to be clean in body and in spirit, you will bow before him and ask his help, and promise him never again to touch it. What you promise your God you will make good if you love him. Test your spirituality.

I would like to exchange letters with some isolated Saints if there are any who feel it would be an encouragement to them.

Ever praying for Zion's cause,
Your brother in Christ,
C. O. A. PETERSON.

Care Denning & Clark Company.

KIRKSVILLE, MISSOURI, November 3, 1916.

Editors Herald: I would like my correspondents and friends to know that I am back at the home address again, 705 West Pierce Street.

It was surely a great privilege to be associated with gospel tent meetings again. We had almost a four month's campaign through this district the past summer. It is great to see the tent fill up each evening with people who come all distances from five to fifteen miles to hear this gospel story. Surely the good Spirit was with these messages and not only witnessed by our people, but again and again in shaking hands with nonmembers we have been greeted with "Oh, that was a good sermon, every word of it true." We did enjoy our little part in the work. The song service seems to be a factor of interest in the meetings. We were also permitted to help in the advertising of various kinds, short calls from house to house, calling attention to the meetings, and handing literature if desired is quite effective. The little talks before and after meetings work in well. The social part should not be neglected.

The tent meeting is surely one of the best means of getting the people together and we find by devoting one evening as a social, get-acquainted meeting with a program where everybody is invited to take part, is quite an asset in our work if rightly conducted, often giving us an acquaintance and a chance to work with some who would not otherwise be present. This is a good opportunity for our women to get in their auxiliary work.

We found a little band of good earnest Saints at New Cambria, but no Woman's Auxiliary of any sort. After talking the matter over at their homes, at the close of one of our tent meetings we organized a woman's society for service, the object to work for and collect funds toward a new church. The last we have heard they are working at it finely. The faithful little band at Macon are still at the post of duty having additions to their home class and meetings since the tent meetings there.

We are keeping our eyes open for any opportunity that we may secure for meetings in this place. The tent meetings this summer seem to have left quite an interest and we meet people quite often who say, "When are you going to have some more meetings?"

A. M. and Brother John Ely are at present holding quite a successful series of meetings at Keytesville. Sister Rees-man, Sister Turner and myself are the only sisters in town, but we hope to have a place ready by the time the elders can come this way.

In this district, as in many others, the great need of our missionaries is a way to get around. The small car is the best thing we have tried in our work in the west, it enables one to double the results, especially when one is able to keep up repairs himself. So often of late we have been in places and conditions when we have felt like crying out—

Oh! If we only had a Ford
How we'd thank and praise the Lord.
We could tell this blessed tale
Over mountains, hill and dale,
And with God we'd sure prevail.
Our voices they'd grow strong
As the truth we tell in song,
We raise one harmonious chord
In thanksgiving to the Lord
If we only had a Ford.

Could we only have a Ford
Talk about a "two-edged sword,"
We could sow and plant the seed,
Angel Message tracts they'd read
Till they'd want no other feed.
They'd come back from night to night
Hungry for another bite;
They couldn't fail to see the light
Of this gospel God restored,
If we only had a Ford.

We should have a little Ford
If efficiency's the word,
Business men go twice as far,
Their cash increasing with a car.
Say, we'd be richer than a Czar,
Ticket punchers, railroad fare,
Why, we'd travel everywhere,
With such folks we'd ne'er be bored
If we had a little Ford.

MRS. A. M. CHASE.

GALIEN, MICHIGAN, November 6, 1916.

Editors Herald: The appointing powers decreed that I should labor in the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District. However, it is not probable that my efforts will be extended very far into Michigan. Knox, Hibbard, and Ora are all in Indiana, and Galien is just over the line in Michigan. These places have needed and should receive the efforts of my time. No doubt new openings could be effected, but what is the object when the Saints of these places need feeding and there are investigators at each point? New openings are essential, but they can hardly be considered openings unless they are kept open. Years ago sermons have been preached in the regions of Hibbard, but it was not a "city without walls" to us until about eighteen months ago. If I should report new openings every time I deliver a sermon or two on new territory it might appear O. K. to some, but surely would be as the report of Mark Twain's death—"greatly exaggerated." The number of new openings and baptisms at reporting time have never bothered me so long as the missionary in charge knows of my labors. While I have baptized not a few, I do not consider a missionary's effort a failure even if he baptizes none!

The Saints at Hibbard and Ora have their membership at Knox. During the last eighteen months I have baptized, I believe, twenty-seven at Hibbard. We have the material, I think, for an organization. The Sunday school, Religio and midweek prayer service have been in evidence for a year or more.

Our little tabernacle makes pleasant the summer worship, and standing right by its side is a little hall which nicely accommodates us now and we think it will during the winter months. (Hope to tell you more about our tabernacle work later.)

Ora has managed to erect a beautiful little church. A few Saints worship there, but they have no Religio, and are as yet using the International Sunday school quarterlies. There are reasons for it.

Knox is an old organization. We have there a little frame church and a very few members. Brother and Sister J. B. Prettyman and wife, who are gracefully ripening into a glorious heritage, live there, and he is the only one who holds priesthood authority, being an elder. They have borne the "burden and heat of the day," and stand as monuments of faithfulness to an unpopular cause. But after all, what is the worth of the world's honors? As for me, I am a Latter Day Saint because worldly honors vanish before heavenly endowments, and eternal life is far better than gold. While encouraging compliments from men should be appreciated, they do not compare when earthly service is done with the "Well done, thou good and faithful, enter into the joys of thy Lord." If we will own him before men, he will own us before the Father and the angels of heaven. What a joy when the Master of men introduces us to a heavenly host! Earthly friends change like the varying winds, but our God and his Only Begotten are "without variableness, neither shadow of turning." In them I trust.

According to appointment I came to Galien, on Sunday, October 29, but returned to Hibbard on Monday to baptize a lady from Rock Falls, Illinois, who was at the time visiting Brother Reed's family and other relatives. Because of traditional teachings from the book of "fables," she, like many honest hearts, wondered: "Can any good thing come out of 'Mormonism'?" (Latter Day Saintism.) I advanced no fire-side speeches, nor tried to cram religion down her throat. She is fifty-two years young and was ready to learn, but I discerned immediately that she could be reached easier from the pulpit. She came to Hibbard sound in the Methodist faith, but returns with a new view of "eternity," God and the Bible. She is starting right, by procuring literature and desiring to become informed in order to defend the cause, and "give a reason for the new hope inspired." Another of Hibbard's investigators was baptized also at this time. Because of his work he could not go for baptism during the day. The night was dark, but lanterns afforded light, and a dozen met on the bank of a little river and "Rock of ages" rang out on the night air. The uplifting influence that attended shall never be forgotten. Both candidates passed through the chilly waters gracefully, and in all it was one of the nicest baptism I have ever attended.

I had promised to return to Galien and begin a series of meetings Wednesday evening, November 1. Soon the news came to my ears that some "featherweight" of Culver, Indiana (two miles from Hibbard), was going to "unmask, expose, tear down, uproot, explode and demolish" what he was pleased to call Mormonism. Well, in fact I can hardly talk of leaving Hibbard until some "upstart" imagines he will put an end to our work in that part. Some of our members became somewhat alarmed about the Culver "featherweight," but as far as I could learn it was a local affair and some of Culver's citizens informed me that possibly there would be a dozen out to hear him. I came to my work and as yet have not heard of results there. Sometimes we do ourselves more harm in noticing every little objection raised. Months ago we got into the Plymouth Daily and Weekly with a three-column article on Mormonism. Those who care to learn have had a chance. But there are minds here as elsewhere that know(?) we are all bad, and nothing apparently in this life will change them. To my mind there are some "things" in this world beneath our notice. We sometimes spend time and money to meet "grave diggers" and "stinking carcass venders" that would not defend anything of their own but for the "cold cash!" In fact we are furnishing them a living by giving them a job!

I am now at Galien. We have a splendid little chapel here. The nicest in town. Our congregation is small, and there is much prejudice. This was the home of Brother George A. Blakeslee. He was once bishop of the church and loved by all who knew him. He has passed on to his reward. Some of the best preachers of the church have sounded the gospel trumpet here—such men as W. W. Blair, W. H. and E. L. Kelley, G. H. Hilliard, I. M. Smith, J. W. Wight and J. J. Cornish. Those I have heard spoken of, and possibly others that have not come to mind.

During the week our attendance is fair. Sunday evenings it is splendid. Sister Louise Evans, a field worker for the Religio and district chorister, is here helping with the music and in other ways. She is alive in her line of work and her efforts are commendable.

Ever praying for the success of all, and victory for truth,
O. R. MILLER.

HIBBARD, INDIANA, field address.

LEXINGTON, MISSOURI, November 8, 1916.

Editors Herald: I thought some might be glad to hear from this part. We have a branch of eighty-four members. We have no church building but have a lot paid for, and are looking for a building to be erected in the near future.

A stake conference was held on the 16th and 17th of September. Early on the 16th eight of the Saints were prepared to attend. After some exciting experiences on the way, all went well, and soon we were speeding down Main Street in Holden to the nice church where the conference was held, arriving in plenty of time for morning prayer service. After service we had a good, hearty handshake with the Holden Saints and others.

We were made to rejoice to hear the testimony of the Saints, and feel the Spirit of the Master through the conference.

We do not want to forget to mention that we had the privilege to visit our aged Sister Devore, who with her husband was one of the first to take the gospel message to the South Sea Islands. She has a room which is decorated with shells and many relics she brought back with her. It was a grand privilege to hear her tell of the experiences with those strange people. To hear such experiences makes one like the writer feel that we have not done anything compared with such work as Sister Devore's. She seems to rejoice to tell of her experiences.

While we had some difficulty going and coming from conference we know if we did not have some bitter we would not know how to enjoy the sweet. We had a fine time and are ready to go again when the time comes.

Ever praying for the progress of God's work, I remain,
Your brother in Christ,

R. T. HOWARD.

VINALHAVEN, MAINE, November 12, 1916.

Editors Herald: While reading the letters in the HERALD this afternoon I felt like adding just a few words both as a personal testimony and as news of God's work here in this place.

The HERALD always comes full of just the good things which we need. If there is a perplexing question or something which we are not quite sure of, the HERALD is sure to bring just the answer we need, also it invariably brings some food for thought, and then there are the personal letters. They are the tie that binds our hearts more firmly together in brotherly love, for it is almost like meeting them in a great prayer meeting and hearing their testimonies and experiences.

Although my husband and myself have been in this great work but a short time, we can say that God has greatly blessed us both, and it is our earnest desire to hold to "the rod of iron," and to do everything in our power to help this great cause.

We have a branch membership of twenty-nine. Organized last May with twenty-two charter members, and since then seven have been added by baptism.

Brother Herbert Raymond is presiding elder, and Brother Archibald Bigg is priest. They are both earnest workers for God's great work. Brother Raymond has been holding Sunday afternoon services at the west end of the island with very good attendance, and there seems to be quite a number who are very much interested. Brother Bigg has been holding midweek services on the east side, and with our regular Sunday evening services at the town hall in the village, and the prayer meeting held in District Number 8, the gospel is being preached to the "uttermost parts" of this island.

Brother I. M. Smith and wife made us a nice visit last winter, which we enjoyed very much, and our hearts were both comforted and made to rejoice at some of his very spiritual sermons.

Our district president, Brother George H. Knowlton, labored here this summer, baptizing seven precious souls, and delivering a great amount of tracts from which we look for great returns, for with his personality and congenial way in his "house-to-house" canvass he did much to overcome prejudice and to get people interested in the great gospel message.

Brother H. Arthur Koehler was here in April and organized a Sunday school with twenty-two charter members.

Thus the work goes on and our earnest prayer is that nothing may happen to hinder the work, but that we may be banded together in that unity and love which is so needed to carry on God's work.

Your sister in the gospel,
MRS. JAMES E. BARTON.

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK, November 12, 1916.

Editors Herald: From several sources there have come requests for a letter of experiences in missionary work, but owing to the lack of time, and the fear that we would not be able to instruct as well as entertain, hesitancy has got the better of real desire, and only as this beautiful Lord's Day dawns upon us and we see many duties before, do we feel coming into mind and heart loving remembrances of old-time associations and reminiscences of sweet experiences in efforts to build up the work we all love so well.

I have now reached the zenith of ten years of experience as an active missionary. In these ten years of voyage on the great ship of Zion, we have seen and experienced many things. Some have tried us to the limit, some have weighed so heavily as to seem to eat into the very years of life's existence and take a toll from the lease of life, undoubtedly for some wise purpose; possibly to help us to see and realize our dependency upon the God we serve. Sickness has loomed mountain high and called for a continued cultivation of faith and trust. The weaknesses of the flesh, the ever-asserting self, has demanded more attention and conflict than rests in any unsupported bosom; and then the capsheaf of the mountain of trials is found in the disloyal, the untrue, the treacherous brother who does not hesitate to make of every apparent weakness, a mountain of evil and willful wrong.

Lest I frighten some of our young men and there grow among them the fear of the ministry, let me bring you another side, another picture. I have drawn quite deeply from the fountain of worldly pleasures; I have tasted the sweets of real love; I have felt the strength and pride of fatherhood; I have felt the strength of true friendships, but there is something else above all these, that coming down and entering in, raises these up to a height sublime and makes them of the earth divine—and that's the power of the gospel.

Aside from the few trials incident to every phase of human life, the most gratifying, exalting, and sublime experiences of life are had in active service for the Lord in missionary work, and I am sure that the more heartily we enter into the work, and the more real life and energy we put into it, the greater are the pleasures and the richer the blessings; a careless, indifferent, half-hearted service will never get anywhere, accomplish any great results, nor bring very great blessings.

I began my missionary work in the Des Moines District, where I had a continued association for six years, and naturally it seems like the home of my childhood. The Saints there are very dear, and as the Negro's heart turns back to Dixie, so many times I find myself in spirit among the old and tried Saints of the early experiences. If the reaper does not overtake before the opportunity is ripe, sometime I expect to ask for at least three months in which to make a tour of the birthplace of religious activities.

Missionary work is subject to many surprises, and the season of appointments brings many unexpected changes. I am sure that with the exceptions of the last appointment, there was no knowledge as to the locality nor the people to which we were supposed to go, however in the going we have found, first, that God is no respecter of persons, and that all places are alike, and all people have about the same failings, dispersed with the same noble traits of character that make the association of Saints so dear. We learn to love and then are compelled to leave, and learn to love others, until the family of God, and the children of the kingdom, is ever increasing and its bonds of fellowship and kindred ties are ever broadening and deepening. We are called out in wonder and amazement as to what the great culmination will be. In the last appointment there were some peculiar powers manifest; premonitions were not lacking, indicative of new experiences, even the roaring of the sea, was heard in dream by those interested, and many evidences of some special call. It proved to be a call to the greatest city of the world.

I hope those who are living in other great cities and undoubtedly have an exalted idea of their greatness will not take offense at this assertion. Brooklyn is the greatest of the five boroughs of Greater New York City. The population is over 2,000,000. It has a water front of 256 miles, area of 77.6 square miles, 49,680 acres of ground, with an assessed value of $1,675,827,897 and 870 miles of paved streets. Right here in the midst of this great throng of unsurpassed activities is located a little church with a capacity of possibly 250 and a membership of 230 souls as a nucleus for the spread of the angel's message and the gathering in of the masses of the metropolis to the fold of the great king.

What a stupendous undertaking, and with what hopes of success can we battle on, unless we shall be able to enlist the support and power of the great God for the mighty masses.

Of one thing we are sure, and that is there is no lack of evidences of the Lord's support and divine direction so far in the efforts here, and one is significant and worthy of mention. It was given in open vision to Sister Christy, and under peculiar circumstances, while visiting New York's greatest pleasure resort, Coney Island. It was as follows:

"Soon after locating here and before I had even been in New York proper, in company with Sister Beardsley, Sister Hartshorn and little daughter, I spent a portion of the afternoon in 'Steeple Chase Funny Place,' Coney Island. Everything was new to me. Having been a shut-in for months, I was anxious to see all I could. From one amusement to another we went, and many times tears dropped from my eyes as I laughed until my sides ached. As we left the building, Sister Beardsley suggested that I sit in the front seat of the car for a better view of the sights. As we drove along amidst the noise of merry-go-rounds, horns, and men announcing various kinds of amusements, I breathed a prayer of thankfulness that though I could laugh at and enjoy such things for a moment, it could not satisfy; I had found something greater that filled my whole life, and left little time for outside amusements. Instantly I was lost to my surroundings and the city of New York was spread before me. It seemed to be built upon a hill and sloping gradually in every direction. A moment I looked upon its outline as from a distance, when one of the principal streets came directly before me. Vehicles of various kinds were passing up and down, and people hastening to and fro in every direction. As I looked upon the crowded street and noted its activity, I saw Brother Christy with banner held high, directly in the center of it, starting forth with the purpose of planting it on the highest point on the hill.

"Because of crowds, it was possible to move along but slowly, but as he did so I saw some of the Saints press in very closely around him, that others, heedless of his presence and purpose, might not shove him this way or that way, or in any other way make it impossible for him to move along, with his hands held high, as seemed necessary to protect and carry the flag."

From the beginning of the work we have enjoyed special spiritual blessing and some special privileges. For instance, there is a law that prevents preaching and lecturing within two hundred feet of any of the parks of the city. Our first permit read for the southeast corner of Park Place and Kingston Avenue. This is a corner opposite one of the beautiful little parks in the residence portion of Brooklyn; we mistook the southeast corner of the street to be the southeast corner of the block (that is the preacher did,) and this put us on the very corner of the park. We drove our auto to the very curb and when the crowd increased and the preacher became surcharged with enthusiasm and the Spirit of God came powerfully, we grabbed the near-by ash can and placed it against the park fence. So standing as we were upon and with arms outstretched over forbidden ground, we occupied the entire summer with what we believe to be splendid effect, absolutely ignorant of the transgression of any law. Possibly we would not have known of our special privilege even now were it not for the fact that I went to the police deputy for another forbidden privilege (and was granted it), and when I asked him why he gave me these special privileges, and why I was not stopped by the police at the park, he said, "We have had close tab upon your summer's work. We found no violation of law, and there was no need of extra police; even the regular ones had no need to be there on your account, while in most of the districts where public speaking is had we are compelled to have from one to ten extra officers stationed."

Right here let me say that if the authorities would give me four devoted young men or ladies who were well posted in the work and willing workers, that are willing to work, and willing to be directed as to how to work, I will agree to introduce a new epoch in successful city proselyting.

Some one may ask if it is just four, and no more? Well, yes, four for one preacher, and that will possibly keep him working day and night if he keeps all the lines tight and attends to all the developments of his touters. So for New York City we should have at least five of these groups of workers, one for each of the five great boroughs with their population of somewhere around seven millions of people. Men and women that are tied down to the strenuous grind of business life with the care and support of a family on their hands cannot do the work, and the preacher in this metropolis is such a small item and so handicapped that I unhesitatingly state now that it is a waste of good money, and poor material to send a person like myself to New York without better facilities for doing effectively the kind of work that must be done in this city. May the voice of inspiration speak to the men at the head of our work as loudly as it has spoken to my anxious soul as I have seen the great needs of the work here. There is little chance of attracting these surging masses to a building unless you can offer exceptional attractions—things that are beyond our finances, for there are ten thousand times ten thousand wonderful, brilliant, and instructive attractions; they glare on every hand and shine out in every high place of the city. We must go to the people, and in these times of unexampled activity no missionary should be expected to face the needs of this work, and if he has any ambition made subject to nervous prostration, without proper equipment, or for want of proper equipment would be better; and one thing that may sound expensive and extravagant, but which would pay for itself every year in results (that is, to the careful, conservative hand) is an automobile, or possibly a "tin Lizzie."

If the great needs and demands of the work continue to press upon me with increasing importance as they have each month that I have been here it is just likely that at the next conference, out of the fear of collapse, I shall refuse to return to the task without equipment. There are undoubtedly men that can stand it to see work and duty pile mountain high around them and be cool, but with the writer this is impossible.

God is blessing the Saints as they are rallying to the standard; some are called to preparation for gospel work, and if earnest, will be powers for good. If careless, will drift to mere nothings. Two specially, to me, miraculous cases of healings have been had. One brother was suffering with ulcers of stomach, and if I am informed aright the doctor said the hemorrhages were the worst he had seen for some time. The patient grew weaker until the weight of his own hand, as he expressed it, was a burden if he undertook to hold it up for any time. Eventually, on a Saturday night some three weeks ago the doctor ordered the telephone from the apartment, and no one to see him for about six weeks. I know that his sudden turn for the worse was possibly the result of an auto accident of the evening before in which the pastor figured, and naturally I was overly anxious. Wife and I went to see him but were told that he was not to be seen, so we were visiting for a few moments with his mother when he sent word, as I knew he would do, for us to come in to his room. He wished to be administered to. We responded, and with his faithful, hard-working, earnest wife we entered into prayer. Before the prayers were finished, I knew the Lord had heard and that we would receive a blessing, so when the administration was had he was instantly healed of the malady. He was weak, but when I called at the home the next morning I found him up contending with his wife for the privilege to go to church that day. As usual, the woman won out and he did not go that day, but the following Wednesday he went to his work; drove to New York in the rain and has not lost a day since. Some glory due to God, think you?

The night after administration I awoke from sleep and a voice said to me, "I have given the brother a stomach as new as a baby's." It looks as though that were true. He eats and works and, I am sure, from the depth of his heart praises God for his blessings.

The other was with one of our noble young girls of the branch, one that if we are to judge from a short acquaintance, of her outgoings and her incomings is a real queen among girls, who was taken with what the doctor called a pus-appendix, or an abscess in the intestines. She was to be rushed away to the hospital for an operation, but as a result of administrations and the faithful prayers of dear ones, the Lord healed her before the doctors could get to their work, and as she walks in to the services of the house of God, with a smile on her face, we feel to love and appreciate her more than ever, even as a gift from God through the power of the gospel.

I am loath to leave you at this juncture, but for fear that we are refused space for so lengthy and possibly tiresome a letter, we bid you all adieu, assuring that possibly after the lapse of another two or three years we will write again.

Lovingly, WARD L. CHRISTY.

SAULT SAINTE MARIE, ONTARIO,
November 16, 1916.

Editors Herald: I would sooner live on one meal a day than to do without the HERALD. I love to read its pages. It helps me along very much. When the day's labor is over it is very pleasant to pick up the HERALD and read the glad tidings from the different places, especially those in Zion. I think Zion is one place every Saint is looking for, oh, that we might gather and live like God's children should live, everyone loving and serving the other. I have noticed in the HERALD warnings to the Saints not to gather in haste. It is my wish to go, and go in the right way. I do not understand just when we should gather, but I hope that all things will be ready in the near future. We are tired of the worldly things around.

My prayer is that Zion may be redeemed and we all gathered. I am willing to pay one dollar a month to redeem Zion, that we may be free from the trouble that is coming on the world, and we may all gather home.

Your brother in the faith,
22 Grace Street. MACK BROWN.

[Extracts from a personal letter to Elder Heman C. Smith.]

VANCLEAVE, MISSISSIPPI, November 17, 1916.
Elder Heman C. Smith,
Lamoni, Iowa,

Dear Brother: I write to inform you of the death of Brother Franklin P. Scarcliff, which occurred on October 26.

We cannot estimate the work he has done in the Mobile District, but we can mention some of the positions, in which he has occupied. He was elected president when the district was organized in 1884, and served until 1891. At two other times he was chosen president, his last term expiring in 1904. In 1891 he was elected secretary, serving in that capacity until 1894. He was the first bishop's agent for the district. He was superintendent of the district Sunday school association for a number of years, also secretary of the latter organization for some time. At the time of his death he was president of the Mobile Branch, which was organized in February of the current year.

Not knowing the date of his appointment as historian, and knowing that you have all necessary items relating to his work in that office omitted to mention it.

Truly yours,
EDNA JEAN COCHRAN,
Historian Mobile District.

ARCHBALD, PENNSYLVANIA, November 17, 1916.

Editors Herald: Having never written to your paper and being much interested for the good it is doing, both in bringing disciples to God and comforting and encouraging those who have taken the name of Jesus and been adopted into his kingdom, I desire to add the testimony to that of many others.

Would say that I have not always been thus, having in past walked in by and forbidden paths, not having been brought into this church or under its good influences, but always placing a great value upon character and genuine Christianity, despising hypocrisy, admiring the person who dared to do that which was right and having the privilege of hearing this beautiful gospel, as preached in these latter days, in all its purity, do now testify that I know it is the work of Jesus Christ and is the power of God unto salvation.

I first became identified or acquainted with this work in Green Ridge, by attending a home class department from Scranton Sunday school, in the home of Samuel Shafter. It is needless to say that the message received from time to time was like music to my ears, for I could not understand why we should not have the same gospel to-day as in the past. I didn't believe God is any respecter of persons. Brother A. E. Stone was then laboring in this place. William Hawkins, Richie Hawkins and Lot Bishop, local men, worked in this department, and many were brought into the fold.

On March 27, 1910, wife and myself were baptized, deciding to start the new life together. The work continued to grow in Green Ridge, we attending the Scranton Branch whenever opportunity afforded. During this time Samuel Shafter moved to Peckville, near Archbald. On February 22, 1914, the writer was ordained to the priesthood.

Soon after the Scranton Sunday school organized a home department class at Peckville, appointing the writer teacher, holding at homes of Samuel Shafter, Boyd Armstrong and Albert Knapps. Frank Dippel, of Archbald became identified with it, being baptized in Scranton Branch, July 19, 1914. In turn, meetings were held at his home in Archbald. From time to time the following preached, Fred Treat, Richie Hawkins, T. U. Thomas, and John Jenkins. During this time many were added to the fold.

On recommendation of T. U. Thomas, it was organized into a branch October 27, 1915, by Gomer T. Griffiths, with membership of ten. The writer was ordained priest, Frank Dippel teacher, Boyd Armstrong deacon. The writer was chosen president.

The few Saints got busy and by their own labor erected a church, being completed October 23, 1916. On November 4, 1916, the corner stone was laid by T. U. Thomas. On November 5, the general opening took place, Elder A. B. Phillips of Somerville, Massachusetts, presiding, continuing after with a series of meetings, many nonmembers attending and interest increasing. The membership is now twenty-five.

The Saints labored and made much sacrifice to erect the building, and now they have things nice and are able to enjoy the fruits of their labor, by seeing the large numbers coming to hear the pure and undefiled gospel of Jesus Christ. The Spirit spoke through a sister in Saints' service, acknowledging the sacrifice.

Much credit is due the ladies' aid society for the part they did to provide finances for building fund. The prospects are looking well, if the Saints continue united and work together in the future, as in the past.

God has wonderfully blessed them and his Spirit has prevailed during the short time of the branch organization.

My prayer is that those who have taken the name of Jesus and the honest in heart may find the truth.

FRED TREAT.

OKLAHOMA, CITY, OKLAHOMA,

November 18, 1916.

Editors Herald: Perhaps your readers will be interested in hearing of the advancement of church work at this place. While the advancement seems small, yet as we look backward four years and see a few Saints meeting in private homes, organizing a little Sunday school, and now as we meet in our neat little church, all furnished nicely, with carpet, piano, bookcase, and other necessities, with water, gas, and sewer connections, and a goodly number of Saints present, we feel there has been some progress indeed.

Last Sunday morning we were made to rejoice in listening to President Frederick M. Smith preach the dedicatory sermon. The weather was very disagreeable, yet a fair representation of Oklahoma Saints were present, some coming from Tulsa, Ripley, Piedmont, Calumet, Cheyenne, Washington, Kingfisher, and Holdenville. Our ladies' auxiliary served dinner at the church to all present. Brother William Aylor gave us an interesting sermon in the afternoon, and Brother Smith again at night.

We feel we were greatly benefited in having Brother Smith with us. His instructions, admonitions and timely advice were excellent. We feel with such a man as our leader we cannot go backward, but onward and upward till the "march shall end." We trust that our little band here in this city may not hinder the progress in any way, but that we may help to forward the cause of Christ in the land not only spiritually but financially as well. Now that we have our church completed and dedicated, we do not intend to sit with folded hands, but we want to work with more vigor and determination if possible, until the general church shall be free from debt, as well as Graceland, the Sanitarium, and Children's Home.

Last fall our auxiliary served meals again at the State fair (of course the brethren helped), as has been our custom for three years. We were blessed abundantly in our work, our profits reaching nearly the eight-hundred-dollar mark. Out of this amount we sent one hundred and fifty dollars as an offering to the bishop. Next year we hope to send twice or thrice that amount.

Just now we are preparing for a Christmas bazaar. The proceeds are to be used for the furtherance of the work in general. A few years ago when we were raising means to build our church in Seiling, Oklahoma, we appealed to the Saints for contributions, and oh! how the packages came in. Some came from Washington, California, Colorado and on to Michigan and Ohio. We were wonderfully remembered, and although times were hard, money scarce at that time, and the weather frightfully cold, we cleared the neat little sum of one hundred and thirteen dollars. (I refer to this as we failed to report at the time.) Now if there are any sisters of the district who read this that feel to contribute with a bit of needlework or any article for our bazaar here, it will surely be appreciated. The same amount of goods we had at Seiling would bring many times that amount here, as we find such ready sale for everything.

Our auxiliary is small in numbers, only ten members, but each an active worker. (Of course we have visitors occasionally who help.) This is twice the number we had when we organized three years next February, and during that time we have raised nearly two thousand dollars. We do not wish to boast of our efforts, only to let others know we are not idle. To God be all the praise.

Brother Arber is conducting nightly meetings this week. Brother W. P. Robinson was with us a few nights, but was called to other parts.

It is difficult to get outsiders interested in a city like this, but we trust the seed being sown will bring forth good.

Ever praying for the advancement of this latter-day work,
I am, Your sister,
Route 9, Box 44. MRS. R. M. MALONEY.

ANDOVER, MISSOURI, November 19, 1916.

Editors Herald: I have been very much pleased with my new home. My efforts which I put forth are well worth the time. I feel as though I am weak and would like the prayers of the Saints. I feel that the time is near at hand when we should be in unison with each other, and have the love of God with each and every one of us.

If there is any brother or sister who would like to answer my letter I would be pleased to hear from them. I attended the reunion and enjoyed myself with the rest of my brothers and sisters. I am now nineteen years old. I was baptized when I was thirteen or fourteen years old.

Your brother,

JOSEPH THORP.

News from Branches

Independence Stake

The study class and lecture course are almost of world-wide importance and are fast developing both in secular and church circles into an institution uplifting and progressive.

The Jew, the Indian, and even the tribes in foreign lands are to some degree enjoying this kind, of some sort, culture. A new movement close by is the foundation of a bureau of education, to give courses to the Jews of Kansas City, in Biblical and Jewish history and psychology of adolescence, looking to more effective work among the young.

Of our own class work, which is going on, besides that which has been noted before, are the research class for young men and women, the class in political science with Brother Leeka as instructor, and also a very helpful class in millinery and dressmaking with Sisters Sturges and Esgar as leaders.

There is also a very good opportunity given in a night school at the high school building for anyone desirous of taking up advanced English, etc.

It is indeed gratifying to learn concerning a fine class (in English also) of about eighteen, formed at Walnut Park church, under the energetic tutorship of Brother Arthur Mills.

At Enoch Hill Branch the Religians, including, with a number of seniors, over twenty busily engaged juniors, are wide-awake in a literary and social way, and are up to date also in doing good relief work. At the east Independence mission the young folks are preparing a cantata for Christmas, and the Saints there listened to two fine sermons last Sunday by Brethren Teeters and Shearer. They have many active workers in the Second Independence Branch, some of whom are helping in kindergarten work.

At our Stone Church there is an ever recurring round of strenuous and educational work going on. Sunday, November 19, with its balmy autumnal air, its glorious sunshine and peaceful associations, was a perfect day.

The children came out early for prayer and praise, there being 889 present at Sunday school, and at the services of the day we heard two inspiring discourses by Brethren W. H. Garrett and Walter W. Smith. Brother T. J. Sheldon led in prayer, and the choir sang the soul-stirring anthem which touched every heart, "The Lord is mindful of his own; he remembereth his children." Brother Garrett, in his farewell discourse (as he is soon to leave for Long Beach California) gave a father's kindly counsel, and to him and his beloved companion the Saints, because of their loving ministry among them, all felt to say, "God be with you till we meet again."

ABBIE HORTON.

(Held over from last week.)

Shrouded in the impenetrable veil of tradition the early inhabitants of America remain to the minds of our sectarian friends; but the veil is drawn aside to us, and revelation and the Book of Mormon have disclosed a people who, in faith and true living, are as familiar to the Saints as our own brothers and sisters of to-day.

On Tuesday, November 14, a tourist by the name of W. M. Wolfe, in speaking here of the native Indians of South America, the land of the Southern Cross, with its ten republics and three colonies, gave a graphic description of their beautiful country, their primitive methods of farming, their religious rites, which were mixed with paganism, and their singular ways and means of living.

Our members of the Religio are much interested in the study of the Book of Mormon Quarterly, and there are many who are engaged in the normal work.

"Glad we hail it,
Fullness of the gospel still."

All the educational classes attend to their work regularly and the attendance is good.

The morning sermon of November 12 by our pastor was "Israel at the Red Sea," and the text from Numbers 13: 1, also 14: 9. It was a graphic and interesting discourse, showing that modern Israel is a duplicate in experience to that of Israel of olden time.

Brother Smith spoke very pointedly of present conditions, and asked the question, "If we cannot raise the standard higher than our neighbors, why are we here?"

He described the struggles of the camp of Zion, their failures and their victories. He told about the mistakes of latter-day Israel and the episode of the dark and cloudy day.

"Go forward!" he urged, "the time is now! We must do, and not ask God to do. How long shall the Saints pray for God to redeem Zion?" He recounted many of the evils existing among the Lord's people and by his strong appeals urged all to a more consecrated life.

The word spoken at the morning service was verified in the afternoon through the gift of prophecy given by Sister M. Peterson, so that the Saints rejoiced and an excellent season of prayer, praise and testimony followed. Brethren E.

DePuÿ gave a good exhortation, also Brother Ellis Short, who on account of illness had not been able to attend the meetings for a long time, spoke with his wonted liberty, and many gave glaring testimonies of the truth. Two of the brethren were ordained, Brother Nathaniel Tower, as a priest under the hands of Walter W. Smith, and Louis Resch as a deacon by Bishop Siegfried.

Brother W. A. Smith spoke before a large and interested audience in the evening. The Compendium class met in goodly numbers in the afternoon and showed excellent interest in the work taken up. With regret the Saints here will bid good-by to our beloved Brother and Sister W. H. Garrett, who will take their leave from us for a season for Long Beach, California, on the 20th.

In gospel bonds,

ABBIE A. HORTON.

Lamoni, Iowa

The work moves right along, gathering momentum as it proceeds. Increased consecration and devotion among all ages is to be noted, which state of mind naturally brightens the outlook and helps the possessors thereof to overlook petty failings and faults in others.

Work—intelligent activity in general and special lines—is the order of the day. While the isolated Saint has trouble deciding what he should do to best serve the church in his loneliness, those who reside in the larger centers find it about as difficult to choose from so many legitimate activities, each valuable in its way. And the work is only begun. Each path seems to divide and lead into numerous others, thus covering the entire ground.

The young people's prayer meetings are now held at the high school building, in the large auditorium. The recent meeting was attended by about a hundred and fifty, and the interest was excellent. The testimonies are spiritual and of a high intellectual order.

The free city delivery of mail has been in operation since the 1st and some of us are getting accustomed to the convenience.

The appointments for Sunday the 19th were: Lamoni, R. S. Salyards in the morning, and J. S. Roth in the evening; S. K. Sorenson at Saints' Home, John Smith at Liberty Home; Scott Schoolhouse, Frank Almond. Greenville, evening, R. S. Salyards. Smith Schoolhouse, Bishop Carmichael. Evergreen, Heman C. Smith in the morning, E. E. Marshall in the evening. Oland, Elbert A. Smith in the morning, E. D. Moore in the evening. Thompson Schoolhouse, W. T. Shakespeare.

On Sunday afternoon, the 19th, there were about seventy-five present at the regular bi-weekly choir practices. Many of these were there by special invitation, not ordinarily singing with the choir. An effort is being made by Brother Paul N. Craig to arrange for a community rendering of "The Messiah" at some later date.

DELBERT.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

All the Sunday school officers elected at the annual business meeting held on Monday, November 6, are now in harness and we hope to see a demonstration of great strength. The new superintendent and his assistant, who were elected by ballot, are exerting every effort to increase the attendance of the Sunday school which has dropped off during the summer months—due to the epidemic (infantile paralysis).

Nearly everyone present at the Sunday morning sacrament service felt the presence of God's Spirit. It is evident that the Saints heeded the counsel of Brother Angus, who on the Thursday evening preceding this service, advised them to prepare for the great feast. The forepart of the meeting dragged a little, but the greater part of the time was well spent. Some excellent sentiments were expressed by the Saints.

The junior Religio is enjoying an increase in attendance. Sixty-five or seventy youngsters sit in silence every Sunday afternoon listening to a fascinating story or lift their little voices in songs of praise. It is interesting to note how the little girls try to carry the soprano and alto parts, and the little boys the tenor and bass parts of the different hymns which they choose.

Successful Halloween parties were given by the scouts and the younger set. Some of the costumes looked anything but human.

AL J. DICKSON.

Seattle, Washington

The Seattle Branch has paid off the indebtedness on their church building and made vast improvements by putting in opera chairs, repapering the walls, a new floor, oiled and varnished, upholstered choir chairs, painted and varnished, with new lights. It has been a work of sacrifice, but it has been met nobly by the Saints. All we hope will be in readiness for dedication as a thanksgiving offering on December 3. The dedicatory service will occur at eleven o'clock, followed in the afternoon by a sacramental service, and all to be followed by a revival service each night during the week.

There is always room for additional contributions, as such work is expensive.

J. M. TERRY.

Toronto, Ontario

The Toronto Saints look forward to the opening of Bishop Evans' theater services as a small boy does to "sugar making" in the spring. Everybody is on the qui vive. Old and young line up, all eagerly waiting to get off to a great start. This season is no exception to the rule.

Just by way of a "work out," in preparing to pull off big stunts the Saints took advantage of October 20 being Bishop Evans' fifty-fifth birthday and tendered him and Sister Evans a monster banquet. Every inch of space in the basement of the church was set with tables, and though the weather was wretched, all turned out to celebrate, and a royal time was had. The electric illuminations and floral decorations were grand. There was an abundance of good things to eat. The branch, Sunday school, Religio, and ladies' auxiliary each read an address, showing the bishop what a fine man he had grown to be in fifty-five years. The evidence seemed so overwhelming that Brother Evans made no attempt to deny the accusation. The Saints appreciated the labor of Brother Evans in Toronto, and last spring presented him with a new seven-passenger Studebaker car to assist him in answering the many demands made upon him.

The banquet being over, the Saints waited for Sunday, November 5, when Bishop Evans inaugurated his thirteenth season of theater services in Shea's magnificent opera house, Corner Richmond and Victoria Streets. It has a seating capacity of over two thousand, and although recruiting meetings were being held in other theaters, an immense crowd greeted the bishop as the curtain raised on the night of the thirteenth opening. A beautiful bouquet of roses was presented to Brother Evans as he stepped to the front of the stage to commence his address. His sermon held the vast audience spellbound, and high compliments were paid him by both Saint and outsider. The choir looked splendid and performed its part in good style, while a solo, "The Lord is my shepherd," by Sister Blanch Allen Needham, captivated the house. It surely was a grand opening, and all are pleased with the start, and are out to make this the biggest season ever.

Sister Floralice Miller is in Saint Michael's Hospital and has undergone a most critical operation. She is recovering remarkably and the Saints are greatly interested in her welfare, as she has been a faithful district officer for years.

Brother and Sister L. R. Seaton and family have returned from London to Toronto after an absence of several years.

Your brother,

A. F. McCLEAN.

Miscellaneous Department

The Bishopric

NOTICE TO ALL GENERAL CHURCH OFFICERS AND GENERAL CONFERENCE APPOINTEES

We have to-day mailed ministerial report blanks to all conference appointees and general church officers. If these should fail to reach you within ten days, kindly advise us and others will be sent you at once.

By conference resolution every missionary is requested to render a financial report of receipts and disbursements to the Presiding Bishop. We do not wish to report any as failing to do this.

Very sincerely yours,

BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE, Presiding Bishop.

AGENT'S NOTICE

The year of 1916 is fast coming to a close. Shall we not hear from every member of the Central Oklahoma District with sums, large or small, as the Lord may have prospered us, for which receipts will be sent? The Lord has said: Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." What shall our attitude be? Love, loyalty, fidelity? We are hopeful, and still pressing on to the mark of our high calling in Christ Jesus.

Sincerely yours,

JOSEPH ARBER.

OKLAHOMA, CITY, OKLAHOMA, November 16, 1916.

AGENT'S NOTICE

To the Saints of Northern California; Greeting: The year is drawing to a close and it is very desirable that those who expect to pay their tithes or offerings do so as soon as convenient, and not later than the last week of December, as books are closed to make report to the Presiding Bishop December 31. It is inconvenient to crowd in money sent late this year, as we have to make report alphabetical. We congratulate all who have aided with their tithes to do your duty to the worthy poor and supply the missionaries' families. People who do not pay tithes fall short of fulfilling the law of righteousness. When we get over on the other side let us be glad we did rather than sorry we did not.

CHARLES A. PARKIN, Bishop.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, 579 Fifth Avenue.

Convention Notices

Alberta Sunday school, will meet December 8, 2 p. m., at Calgary, Alberta. Election of officers. Standard of excellence one of the main features. Secretary and officers please report to undersigned or direct to convention. Minnie Burton, Ribstone, Alberta, secretary; Fred Gregory, superintendent.

Nodaway Sunday school, with Guilford school, January 6 and 7, 2 p. m. Schools select delegates. Salena Torrance, secretary, Bolckow, Missouri.

Southwestern Oregon Sunday school and Religio, Myrtle Point, February 2, 1917, 2 p. m. N. Pearl Goodman, secretary.

Alabama Sunday school, at Flat Rock, December 8, 6 p. m. Each school requested to send delegates. Conference 9th and 10th. W. H. Drake, superintendent.

Spokane Sunday school and Religio, December 8, at Spokane, Washington. Let us make this meeting a success.

Secretaries are requested to have all reports turned in by the 5th. Election of officers. William W. Wood, 127 South Regal Street, Spokane, Washington.

To Sunday School Officers

Reader, this is important business pertaining to your supply of lessons for next year. Be sure and call attention of your superintendent and secretary to it. Ask them to read it.

Notice has already been given in all church papers of the advance in price of Quarterlies, on account of the sharp rise in cost of print paper. Beginning with January-March Quarterlies of 1917, prices will be as follows:

- Senior grade, 8 cents a quarter, 25 cents a year.
- Intermediate, 5 cents a quarter, 15 cents a year.
- Junior, 5 cents a quarter, 15 cents a year.
- Primary, 5 cents a quarter, 15 cents a year.
- Beginner, 6 cents a quarter, 20 cents a year.

Payable in advance, by order of General Convention. If heretofore you have ordered only by the quarter, it will cost you no more to buy now by the year. If you have a proper system of class collections, there is no risk in borrowing the amount necessary to subscribe by the year, and you will save by it. We may be compelled to raise the price any time.

Please do not leave your order to the last week of the year. It is unfair to the printers, to your pupils, and to the Quarterly. Get your order in early; commence on it right away. There is only one word on the face of the clock of time; NOW.

If there has been a change of secretary, or of the name of one to whom Quarterlies come, give last name and address as well as present one. Read instructions on first inside page of Quarterly cover.

With January, we commence the second year of our course of study. By mistake, this has not been changed on the outside cover of one or two of the grades, but it is stated correctly on the title page. The printers do their very best to give us a perfect product, but errors will creep in, either from editors or proof readers. We are glad to be reminded of them.

We also invite suggestions and criticisms on any of the Quarterlies. But first we urge all to acquaint themselves with the principle underlying a graded course, making your criticisms in the light of that.

GOMER R. WELLS, General Superintendent.

Information Wanted

Whereabouts of Elizabeth Dawson, James Cox, sr., James Cox, jr., Jane Cox, William H. Coleberry. Last heard from were in California. Notify W. L. Christy, 1312 Park Place, Brooklyn, New York.

Died

HACKETT.—Elder Samuel Franklin Hackett, born July 24, 1840, in Boone County, Illinois; died at his home at North Freedom, Sauk County, Wisconsin, October 15, 1916. In 1861 he enlisted as a private in company F, Third Regiment of Wisconsin. Baptized in 1865, at North Freedom, Wisconsin, by Caleb Hall, confirmed by Caleb Hall and Jonathan Delap. He leaves to mourn, a loving wife, 7 sons, 4 daughters, all of whom were present at the funeral. One son preceded him. His faithful life and sturdy Christian character won the esteem of the Saints and the respect of all who knew him. Funeral service in the Methodist church, before a large gathering of relatives and friends. Also the Grand Army Post were present. Sermon by W. A. McDowell.

BORDMAN.—Mahlon N. Bordman, born in France in 1833; died October 23, 1916. He was a member of the church, and died firm in the faith. Leaves saintly wife and a daughter. Funeral at C. D. Carson's undertaking rooms by J. C. Foss and Alma Kent. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

STERLING.—Joseph Sterling was born July 28, 1843, near Chillicothe, Livingston County, Missouri; died September 28, 1916, at his home near Eldorado Springs, Missouri. In 1868 he married Miss Sarah Hoskin. To them were born 7 sons, 4 daughters. He is survived by his wife and all their children, his being the first death in the family. Baptized May 22, 1887, by E. Curtis, ordained an elder January 17, 1892. Brother Sterling was the first one in Vernon County, Missouri, to accept the gospel. He lived a devoted life to the faith, being a living testimony to all who knew him. Funeral

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filing of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
"Men Who Have the Spirit" - - - -	1161
Current Events - - - - -	1164
Notes and Comments - - - - -	1164
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
Our Partnership With God, by Jerome E. Wildermuth - - - - -	1165
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
The Best Advertisement - - - - -	1166
WOMAN'S AUXILIARY
Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser—Grace L. Krahl—Bertha L. Mader—Mrs. B. C. Smith.	1167
LETTER DEPARTMENT
W. E. Peak—R. Etzenhouser—A. E. Warr—Paul Parker—Richard D. Weaver—James Schofield—Ida May Bergerson—William Anderson—C. O. A. Peterson—Mrs. A. M. Chase—O. R. Miller—R. T. Howard—Mrs. James E. Barton—Ward L. Christy—Mack Brown—Edna Jean Cochran—Fred Treat—Mrs. R. M. Maloney—Joseph Thorp—Extracts from Letters.	1169
NEWS FROM BRANCHES
Abbie A. Horton.	1180
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT
	1182

September 20, at the home, sermon by W. S. Macrae, assisted by W. H. Lowe, after which remains were taken to Nevada, Missouri. Interment in Newton Cemetery.

YOUNG.—Roscoe Atwood Young, born August 7, 1891, at Kansas City Missouri; died November 5, 1916 at the Wesley Hospital, Kansas City, Missouri, as the result of an accident. While hoisting hay a singletree slipped, striking him in the abdomen, inflicting internal injuries which caused his death. Baptized August 10, 1901, by Bishop Hilliard, at Independence, Missouri. Ordained a deacon at Saint Louis, Illinois, by Ward L. Christy, June 17, 1914. Removed to Liberty, Missouri, September 30, 1916. A noble young man, an example to the young men of his acquaintance outside as well as inside the church. He leaves to mourn, father, mother, 2 sisters, and a host of friends. Funeral sermon at the Stone Church, Independence, by Walter W. Smith, assisted by W. H. Garrett.

GRANT.—George Frederic Grant, born March 9, 1828, at Osnabrook, Starmont County, Ontario; died at the home of his son, William Grant, Coloma, Berrien County, Michigan, October 24, 1916. He settled in Covert Township, Van Buren County, Michigan, November 1861. Baptized and confirmed about eighteen years ago by R. E. Grant. He lived an exemplary life and was prepared to go. Funeral sermon by Francis Earl, at Hartford, Michigan.

PANTING.—Kenneth Walter Panting, aged 6 weeks, son of Walter and Elsie Panting, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Funeral from home, sermon by pastor of second Philadelphia Branch, November 21, 1916.

Study Food Values

Food provided for the family table deserves the careful thought of every housewife. Do you use thought when buying baking powder?

The quality of cake, biscuits and all quickly raised flour foods depends largely upon the kind of baking powder used.

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar derived from grapes. It is absolutely pure and has proved its excellence for making food of finest quality and wholesomeness for generations.

Royal Baking Powder contains no alum nor phosphate.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.
Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

BOOK OF MORMON LECTURES.—Are you a student? Here is something for your faculties to wrestle with. The author, H. A. Stebbins, has, with comprehensive outlook, embodied in these lectures a wealth of archaeological facts corroborative of the Book of Mormon narrative, dug from works unknown to the public prior to its publication, and from others published since that time. The statements in these lectures are made in such unaffected plainness and simplicity of language as to carry conviction to any normally unprejudiced mind. No. 51, cloth$.75

HIS FIRST VENTURE AND THE SEQUEL.—A story by Estella Wight, editor of Stepping Stones and the "Religio's Arena." It tells about a country boy who was led astray by the lure of the city, but came back at last to loved ones—and the realization that "homely goodness" is the best thing after all. No. 369, cloth$.60

CHRISTMAS IS COMING

Why not include a few good books in your list of presents? If you desire it, our Book Service Department will help you—free.

JOSEPH SMITH AND HIS PROGENITORS.—The Martyr's mother, Lucy Smith, wrote this biography. For this reason alone, if for no other, the book must always be intensely interesting. But there are many other elements entering into its value: its condemnation of polygamy; its true perspective on early history; its sweet maternal intimacy. The church gives it out to the world "for what it is worth," and obviously it is worth a great deal. No. 287, cloth$1.00

IN THE SHELTER OF THE LITTLE BROWN COTTAGE. The popular serial that ran in Stepping Stones during 1915, by the editor, Estella Wight. The leading character is not a Latter Day Saint at first, but eventually becomes so, and in the process a strong gospel story is told. Several characters in the book are shown laboring toward the truth, making this a fine, readable missionary medium. Cloth, 378 pages$1.25

THE FALL OF BABYLON.—The Australian, W. J. Haworth, has written into this doctrinal book many original ideas and elaborated upon carefully garnered evidences of the truth of Christ's gospel. The charts in the book are nuclei of well-worked-out arguments. Altogether it is an elaborate defense of the truth as a very earnest disciple understands it. The proceeds of the sale of this book go to help the financial interests of the Standard Publishing House in Australia. No. 197, cloth$1.25

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 63

LAMONI, IOWA, DECEMBER 6, 1916

NUMBER 49

Editorial

McCLURE'S GREAT CALL TO DRUNKARDS AND SALOON KEEPERS

Our readers will remember that at the close of the Holloway-Campbell debate at Andover, Missouri, some time ago, J. D. McClure appeared on the scene and delivered himself of three lectures on "Mormonism."

At the close of the lectures he hastened away at the earliest opportunity, not waiting for a reply, and ignoring a challenge to debate equal propositions.

Now comes an echo of the affray in the form of a four-page pamphlet issued from the safe and sacred seclusion of his retreat in Albany, Missouri.

A fair idea of this pamphlet may be obtained from the following quotation:

Now as Joseph holds the keys of the kingdom of heaven in this world, and the world to come, making himself a rival to the pope of Rome over on the Tiber, each holding all power on the earth and in heaven and hell. Let all Gentiles step aside and watch them make the fight. Now, as each of those superhuman powers are to have complete control, and each are opposed to prohibition, as Joseph says, same book of Doctrine and Covenants, page 112, revelation given September, 1830, in paragraph one:

"Wherefore, a commandment I give unto you that you shall not purchase wine, neither strong drink of your enemies; wherefore you shall partake of none, except it is made new among you."

Now you Gentiles have it straight. You have been laying all this making of wine and strong drink on the Devil, when the Lord's Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, is its author. So you brewers, saloon keepers, thugs and drunkards, join the Saints and all you have to do is go ahead with your business, and snap your finger at those silly Prohibitionist Gentiles and tell them you have the Lord's High Priest, Prophet, Seer and Revelator, Joseph Smith, and all the Latter Day Saints, and Almighty God on your side, with the Pope of Rome, many bishops, cardinals and priests, a host of his children, with many of the lowest vagabonds of the Gentiles.

The paragraph from which he quotes reads as follows, in full:

Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your Lord, your God, and your Redeemer, whose word is quick and powerful. For, behold, I say unto you, that it mattereth not what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, when ye partake of the sacrament if it so be that ye do it with an eye single to my glory; remembering unto the Father my body which was laid down for you, and my blood which was shed for the remission of your sins; wherefore a commandment I give unto you, that you shall not purchase wine, neither strong drink of our enemies; wherefore ye shall partake of none, except it is made new among you; yea, in this my Father's kingdom which shall be built up on the earth.—Doctrine and Covenants 26: 1.

It will be seen by this that in order to make his point, McClure took a part of a compound sentence and omitted the balance. The part omitted shows that the wine manufactured is to be used solely for the sacrament service. Wine for the sacrament service is not to be purchased from the enemy (all liquor dealers, like McClure, are our enemies), but is to be made new among us for that purpose.

That a man calling himself a Christian minister, and one so far advanced in years that he might, if he chose, claim the reverence due to gray hair and beard, should find it convenient and desirable to stoop to such methods in combating an opponent is almost beyond comprehension.

That he finds it necessary to do so is but an evidence of the extreme poverty of his cause. Had he any real charge to bring against us he surely would not stoop to garble a text in order to make a point when exposure is certain.

This man professes to be a student of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and a well-posted opponent of the work for forty years past. So it cannot be that he is ignorant of the further statement contained in the book from which he professes to quote:

Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto, you, In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation that inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you behold, it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together, to offer up your sacraments before him. And, behold, this should be wine; yea, pure wine of the grape of the vine, of your own make. And again, strong drink is not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies. And again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises, and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill.—Doctrine and Covenants 86: 1,

Avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form, that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example.—D. and C. 119: 3.

In addition to this constitutional law, our General Conference resolutions require that our sacramental wine shall be unfermented. The reader may see for himself the wonderful inducements that are held out to saloon keepers and brewers to join the Latter Day Saints—so that they may manufacture a little new and unfermented wine for the monthly sacrament meeting. Thugs and drunkards, too, are to be enticed by a monthly sip of unfermented grape juice.

McClure has raised the question of temperance and morals. Will he take as stringent a stand as is maintained by the Saints, as set forth in the paragraph last quoted from the Doctrine and Covenants? Dare he affirm that he is personally opposed in practice to the use of both strong drink and tobacco? If so these pages are open to him for such an affirmation. They are also open to him to make any reasonably brief and consistent explanation of his conduct in mutilating a sentence from one of our standard books in order to make it appear that we are prepared to harbor thugs and drunkards, saloon keepers and brewers.

We are in a strait betwixt two. To accuse McClure of ignorance of our record as a church, on the question of prohibition, would be unkind. He must know of that record. But then to say that he does know of it makes the matter still worse; so that charity, even with her well-known ability to cover a multitude of sins finds herself o'ertaxed in this instance. Large portions of an elderly "Christian" minister are left protruding.

As long ago as 1837, at a time when many of McClure's "Christian" predecessors in the cloth tippled comfortably and regularly and dreamed not of prohibition, the High Council of the Latter Day Saint Church in Kirtland, Ohio, Joseph Smith presiding, adopted the following resolution:

That we discountenance the use of ardent spirits, in any way, to sell, or to be brought into this place for sale or use.—Church History, volume 2, page 110.

A similar resolution was adopted at Far West in 1838. A conference of the church at Far West unanimously voted to refuse support and patronage to stores selling spirituous liquors or tobacco.

Josiah Quincy visited Nauvoo during the life of Joseph Smith and commented on the fact that no liquors were allowed in the home of Joseph Smith or for sale in Nauvoo.

The Reorganization has maintained a similar stand. It is a well-known fact that at Independence and Lamoni our influence has always been against the manufacture, sale, or use of liquor for a beverage.

In the State-wide campaign for prohibition in Missouri, McClure's own State, in 1910, Independence went dry. The Kansas City Times for November 17, of that year said:

Independence went dry by a majority of 207. The vote is explained by the stand taken by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, whose members, including five hundred voters, declared for the abolition of the saloon.

What was McClure doing that year? The Kansas City Star at about that time said that liquor dealers would starve to death if they depended on Latter Day Saints. McClure's attempt to invite and entice saloon keepers, brewers, drunkards, and thugs into the church is of a piece with the historic attempt to catch birds by sprinkling salt on their tails.

But in closing, we say, Let them come. We will welcome all saloon keepers, brewers, thugs, and drunkards (probably McClure will quote this in his next tract and omit the following), but they must repent of their sins, and abandon their evil practices and vocations. "While the light holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return." Let all "Disciples" shout amen.

We would even welcome McClure into the church. But he would have to assure us of an intention to mend his ways. He would not be allowed to publicly distort and mutilate a perfectly plain and moral declaration in order to villify an innocent people. That may be according to the "Disciple" code of morals but it is not Christian. ELBERT A. SMITH.

AN EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY

Every member who has occasion to defend our work from the attacks made on it by those who are not well-informed, should secure a copy of The Journal of American History, volume X, number 3—the latest number of this most excellent quarterly journal.

By arrangement with the publishers, a number of copies have been secured and may be obtained of this office at the regular price of one dollar each.

Desiring an authentic article on the history of the church, the editor of The Journal asked Elder Heman C. Smith, our church historian, to write such an article and furnish illustrations.

From a letter to Brother Smith by the editor, we extract the following:

I believe many of our readers will be intensely interested in what you have written, and I think your clear, careful statements will do away with the idea many persons have had as to the identity of your organization and the organization bearing the same name in Utah.

A matter which impressed me especially and for which I wish to express my sincere appreciation is the very careful method of your treatment. You approach the subject as an historian, clearly stating the beliefs of the church whose historian you are, but without making your article a polemical tract, which of course, would be out of place in a secular magazine like The Journal of American History.

While the article itself is a literary production of exceptional value, having place in the greatest historical journal published as it does, places the history of our church before such a class as has never before been reached.

There are ten full-page illustrations in a beautiful sepia, while the entire magazine is all that a combination of the best in literature and the printer's art can produce.

The magazine is the official publication of the National Historical Society, of which Elder Heman C. Smith is a vice president.

In commenting on the article, The Ontario County Times (New York), published in the community where the Smiths lived, not far from Manchester, says:

No. 3 of the current volume of the handsome quarterly, The Journal of American History, just at hand, contains, in addition to other interesting articles and plates, an illustrated "History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," written by Heman C. Smith, the authorized historian of the "reorganized" branch of that organization. . . .

The article in The Journal of American History is illustrated by portraits of Joseph Smith, the founder of the so-called church; Joseph Smith, 2d, who became president of the Reorganized Church in 1860; Frederick M. Smith, the present president of that organization; Sidney Rigdon, Oliver Cowdery and others whose names are familiar to those who have read the strange story. There are also engravings of the Hill Cumorah, and of the woods near Palmyra where the followers of Joseph Smith believe he saw his first vision, as well as of the Nauvoo temple, the Kirtland temple and the Smith ancestral home in Massachusetts, built in 1690.

Mr. Smith, the writer of the article in the magazine, represents the Reorganized Church, which refused to follow Brigham Young in his promulgation of the doctrine of polygamy or in his emigration to Salt Lake City, and which maintains with headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa, what it asserts is the original and pure faith inculcated by the founder, Joseph Smith. . . .

The Journal of American History is one of the most sumptuous and interesting publications that comes to the editor's table.

The opportunity to secure one of these copies is an unusual one. E. D. M.

CURRENT EVENTS

VILLA TAKES CHIHUAHUA.—Following a battle of four or five days, Villista troops took possession of the city of Chihuahua, and after holding it for several days and looting the stores of several trainloads of supplies, were driven out by Carranza troops.

BRITISH CABINET CHANGE LIKELY.—The British press has recently given much prominence to proposed radical changes in the cabinet. While nothing is definitely known, it seems certain that a shake-up is imminent.*

PROTEST AGAINST HIGH PRICES.—Housewives through their organizations in the larger cities are contemplating a boycott on some foodstuffs, such as eggs and butter even including potatoes, in an effort to reduce prices. Poultry was reduced seven cents a pound in New York City by this method.

TO NORTH POLE BY AIR ROUTE.—Captain Roald Amundson, who reached the South Pole a few years ago is planning a trip to the North Pole. He expects to use hydro-aeroplanes. The chief object of the trip is to study the air currents around the Pole. It is expected the start will be made from a ship north of Siberia in 1918.

CATTLE DISEASE APPEARS.—Cases of sick cattle, with symptoms similar to the hoof and mouth disease, which caused so much trouble in the country last year, have been located in various shipping centers. Some Eastern cities placed an embargo on central western cattle until the situation was cleared. Later reports are that the disease is stomachitis and not serious.

PETITION FOR RETURN OF BATTERY C.—The company that left Independence, Missouri, for the Mexican border early in the mobilization of the National Guard, is still there. Among the number is the group of Latter Day Saint lads who were organized into a branch before their departure. While other troops are being returned to their homes, there is no immediate prospect of their release. Petitions are being sent from Independence, with many signatures, requesting the release of these men, since they were among the first to go. They are reported to be in good health and spirits.

EUROPEAN WAR.—The Teutonic forces have continued their encircling movement into Rumania, and have captured several important cities in the western part of that country. They have approached within sixteen miles of Bucharest, and the Government has moved its offices to Jassey, in northern Rumania, near the Russian frontier. Russian reinforcements have arrived, and seem to have temporarily checked the onward movement of the Teutonic allies. The situation in Greece has been critical during the week. The entente allies have made demands upon the Government for a cession of certain war materials. This has finally been granted, and the allies have agreed to remove representatives who have been in control of the Greek postal and telegraph service. A Zeppelin raid in northeastern England and midland counties on the night of the 27th resulted in the loss of two of these aircraft. Bad weather has prevailed in the western theater of war, and little important activity is reported. The Italians and Austrians continue artillery activities in the Trentino and Carso regions. The French transport, the Karnak, with a cargo of troops, was sunk by a German submarine on the 27th.

FIVE MILLION FOR PENSIONS.—The Protestant Episcopal Church will try to raise a fund of five million dollars by March 1 to pension retired ministers. Two thirds of this sum has been raised. The proposed pension is six hundred dollars a year to each clergyman. It is urged that the system is a costly one because men of this class are exceptionally long-lived, due to clean lives and good habits.

A GUIDE TO SLANG.—A certain large university has issued a booklet of "useful information for foreign students." Many of the peculiar combinations of letters called slang are defined. It seems too bad to clutter up our vocabularies with so many of these substitutes for words that our friends cannot understand us. Yet we are going to allow the innocent to cast the first stone. After all, does even "genteel" slang help as much as it handicaps?

THE NO-CONSCRIPTION FELLOWSHIP.—This English society claims a membership of between fifteen and twenty thousand. Something over two thousand have been arrested and handed over to the military authorities. They claim to be an organization who "have conscientious convictions against military service, and have united for mutual comfort and support." Yet the figures show that over five million have joined the colors.

WOMEN GET MEN'S WAGES.—Henry Ford has established a new wage scale at his automobile establishment in Detroit, whereby all women employees are to receive the same pay as the men who do like work. This not only affects the Detroit plant but all branch factories in other cities as well. It will be recalled that over a year ago a minimum wage scale of five dollars a day was put into effect by this company.

TO CHANGE PRAYERS.—The Episcopalians may cease praying that the President of the United States may enjoy a boon "in health and prosperity long to live," and that he may "attain everlasting joy and felicity." The general convention of that body recently voted to eliminate these words and by using in their place "all others in authority," include the governors of States as well. This change must be approved by the house of bishops and the next general convention before it becomes effective.

"HERALD" FREE.—Possibly some of our missionaries missed the business manager's announcement in a recent issue wherein he offers to send the HERALD free for a month to new members who are not already subscribers. He only asks that you send in the names and addresses and approximate ages of all baptisms, indicating which desire the HERALD. To these the paper will be sent one month free to introduce it to our new members. This is surely too good an offer to be missed. It is cooperation that will bring our members to a higher scale of intelligence and devotion.

IS THIS CHURCH UNION?—Ever since we recently read about an agreement entered into by the ministerial alliance of a neighboring town we have wondered whether it was an indication of church unity or disunity. There will not be the usual all-winter series of revival services taken up one by one by the various churches, each competing for the best date. This year they all begin at the same time and close on the same date. There will be no competitive advertising. Every time newspaper publicity is made use of, every church must have representation and the advertisement must have the indorsement of the alliance. Outside help may be brought in if desired. Possibly this is a trust.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD.—With the remarkable record of having established over a hundred and twenty thousand Sunday schools throughout the country, with a half million teachers and five million scholars, the American Sunday-School Union is now preparing to celebrate its one hundredth anniversary. The society has issued an interesting pamphlet concerning its history and work and also a leaflet entitled, "Sunday-School Pioneering in Rural America." The latter relates some of the amazing experiences of the society's missionaries in the wild and undeveloped sections of the country. Both of these pamphlets will be gladly mailed upon request to all who are interested in knowing more about this unique organization which stands alone and unequalled in community development work in rural America. The headquarters of the society are at 1816 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

MAKING GOOD IMPRESSION.—We are in receipt of a clipping from the New York World for October 15 which gives an excellent three-column write-up of our church work in Brooklyn, where Brother Ward L. Christy is serving as pastor. Local Saints say it is the most reasonable and fair write-up they have ever had. His facts are all well arranged. It is remarkably free from error and the reporter did well. We quote one of the paragraphs:

Such is the confusion in Gentile minds in regard to the Reorganized Latter Day Saints that recently when a Brooklyn member named Benjamin R. McGuire was appointed a bishop the reporters hunted up a Roman Catholic lawyer of the same name and shocked him with the news of his supposed elevation. It was a week before the papers got the matter straightened.

He speaks of Apostle U. W. Greene as "frank, pleasant, suave, likeable," and describes Brother Christy as "a gentle and quiet man, but a very good speaker." Brother Christy modestly suggests that the reporter hasn't been with him a great deal.

Original Articles

"GOD HATH SHINED"

(Sermon preached by Elder Hubert Case, Tuesday evening, August 22, 1916, at the Lamoni Stake reunion. Reported by Winsome Smith.)

I will read a lesson to-night from the 50th Psalm, beginning with the first verse:

The mighty God, even the Lord, hath spoken, and called the earth from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof. Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined. Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence: a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.

I have read the first five verses. My text to-night is found in this thought: "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined."

RELIGION HAS NOT BEEN TESTED?

Only about a month ago I read a book that struck me very forcibly. In that book I found a question asked. I wish to give the question and the answer. This question was asked of a very notable man, "What do you think of the Christian religion?" His answer was, "I do not know, I have never seen it put to a test."

"I have never seen the Christian religion put to a test!" Think of that answer.

Now with the teeming millions that we see in the world to-day professing to follow in the footsteps of that matchless man, to follow Jesus the Christ who gave us a system of divine law, it seems a queer thing that a man would answer that question as he did. Is it possible that these millions of people before us in the world to-day claiming to follow Jesus and to look at him as the wonderful light that he was, that he came among men, and we can find nowhere an expression of that beautiful life lived over again in the people we see around us in the world?

Is that true? If it is, it is the strongest rebuke to this people, and to every people to-day that profess to believe that Jesus was the Christ, the son of the living God, that can be held before them. I wish to investigate this question just a little bit.

AT LEAST ONE TEST

Now this text says, "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined." "God hath shined." If I were to view history just for a few moments this evening, I would call attention to the days of Enoch. You have your Bibles in your homes, and you have read that brief story that speaks volumes to us concerning a good man that lived in this world, and that he became so perfect that he did not taste death, but he was translated and taken alive from this world. Now I presume that we might refer to that this evening as one instance where God's light shone out in its brilliancy, its effulgence and power until it actually regenerated men, and brought them to a standard of pure living so that they could mingle with the angels of God, and they could come down and walk and talk with men here upon this earth, so God's light had an opportunity to shine in its glory among them because their lives would respond to the demands of the law that makes men Godlike.

It is a sad picture to talk about the failures that have been made, and we are not going to speak of them very much. It is the gloomy side of this question to point to the many shipwrecks along the pathway, and we shall touch only briefly upon that question as we proceed this evening.

We find many experiences written by men who spoke as they were moved by the Spirit of inspiration, according to this record that I hold before me here, and I find those men touched upon conditions that they actually saw and came in contact with as they moved among the people teaching them and pointing them to that God who promises to shine through the lives of his people in this world, by a light, an actual light that would be a beacon star to all who desired eternal light.

"THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD"

Turning to the fifth chapter of Matthew I find a statement made in the fourteenth verse which reads as follows:

Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

These three verses speak volumes to us as a people this evening. Why? Because I am talking to a people who make the profession of being the people of God. There never was a sermon preached, I presume, by the lips of any man who ever stood upon this earth, that surpassed that lesson that I have read here, that is called the Sermon on the Mount, and I find this statement in that sermon. He said to his disciples, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid."

"THE CANDLE OF THE LORD"

How did they become the light of the world? What makes them reflect light? Let us see. I will read a statement upon this point from the twentieth chapter of Proverbs. Note it: "The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord." Now that is peculiar language, isn't it? But I find a statement made here concerning man, that he is entitled to the influence of the Spirit of God to give light. And when I read that statement over here from the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew, beginning with the first verse concerning the kingdom of God being typified by ten virgins, that they had lamps, and that these lamps were lighted, instantly, my mind reverted—and so does yours—to the time that I went down through the waters of baptism and there gave God an opportunity to light that candle, which he says is the spirit of man. God lights that candle for us. Why? Because you were buried in baptism. You buried your body, and your spirit was illuminated by the touch of inspiration that lighted that candle, and instantly you began to walk in a new life, or in the light of God, and gave him an opportunity to shine through your life. Didn't you? Certainly you did.

Now take a community of people such as we have here in Lamoni. As we are represented here there are different localities throughout the world where the gospel has been presented to men, and we have baptized them and brought them in from the world, and these people have stepped out from the world, they have been translated into the kingdom of God's dear son, so the Apostle Paul tells us, and have given him an opportunity to come into their lives, to light their lamps, and to enable them to shine.

There is one more text I will associate with this one, from the eighteenth Psalm, twenty-eighth verse. You remember I read from the Proverbs a moment ago that the spirit of man is the candle of the Lord. "For thou wilt light my candle; the Lord my God will enlighten my darkness." "Thou wilt light my candle," the Lord God will dispel that darkness don't you see, by that light.

ATTAINING OUR STANDARD

There is something I wish to say this evening regarding our Master. I noted that beautiful statement made by one of the speakers here concerning that wonderful man and the attitude he occupied before the world, that men are not attaining to his standard, and that we are holding up a higher standard than we are living. I want to say, I believe we are, but I believe that every man ought to attain just as near to that standard as is possible for mankind to reach in this life. I believe that if Zion is ever established upon the face of this earth, that men must reach that standard of perfection so that God can shine through the lives of his disciples, and that men, such men as I referred to a few moments ago, will not take honestly such a stand before the world and say, "I have never seen the gospel of Jesus Christ put to a test."

Now we do recognize that that great man Christ has reflected more light than all the others that have lived. We recognize that. He stands as the luminary in history. No man or set of men has ever exerted such a powerful influence upon humanity as that man did. No man or set of men has ever left an imprint upon history as did Jesus the Christ. But he came and gave us the law, and the opportunity to set before us an open door, and a practical set of principles to lead us into such close relationship, into such close touch with him, that we could commune with the powers of heaven to such an extent that our lamps would continuously reflect light.

Now that is what the gospel means, and that is what the life of Jesus Christ means to me, and ought to mean to every one of us if we believe this message that we have in hand this evening. I am unwilling to believe that it is impossible to practice what we preach. I am unwilling to believe that the gap is so wide, so broad between the ideal and our lives that it is impossible for us to close it. I do not believe that. I believe that Jesus Christ placed within the reach of mankind the power and influence of his Spirit to help us make every inch of vantage ground, from our baptism until we shall lay down this mortal body to rest in the grave, and until we can follow so closely in the footsteps of Jesus the Christ that our lives will reflect so much gospel light that it will be just what Jesus said it would be, a city set on a hill whose light cannot be hid.

But are we doing that to-night? Are we doing that?

THE SACRIFICE ON THE ALTAR

I am glad I am living now. I am glad I am living under conditions that are about us in the world. Many of our brethren who have closed their eyes in the sleep of death have longed to see the day in which we are now living. Many of them have longed for the time when Zion conditions could even be begun as we see them now being tested by the people professing to be the Saints of God. I am glad to see the effort made, and I believe, friends, that we must begin, and we must work in harmony with that law. But no man will ever be able to reach that standard until he can conscientiously lay his life upon the altar of sacrifice before God. That must be done.

Is that too much for God to ask of us? Certainly it is not. Look what he offers us in return for the little amount of service we can render in this life. Look at the help he offers us to accomplish this work. We have been telling the world ever since the angel came and the gospel was restored in the latter days—we have had men, pioneers carrying this gospel to the world—and telling them that the gospel, the complete gospel, has been restored to this world, and inviting them to come in and take part with us in this great work of preparation for the coming of the Lord. For, as our text says, "God shall come, and shall not keep silence: a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him." But, he says, "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined."

We tell the world of the good things of the kingdom of God, and ask them to come in and begin this work of regeneration, to put their lives in harmony with the ideal conditions that should obtain among men in this work where we can reach a common brotherhood, then can peace and harmony and joy prevail throughout the entire church, and there will be a people made ready for the coming of that wonderful Savior.

IT SHALL BE LIGHT

Friends, are we justified in telling the world such things as that? Why, you say, Surely we are. Let us read just a brief text over here concerning this point; from the writings of Zechariah I read a text that touches this question of light. This text has been used to do service for this occasion, and I do not know whether I shall take a firm stand that it is justly used, but it looks pretty reasonable to me:

But it shall be one day which shall be known to the Lord not day, nor night; but it shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light.—Zechariah 14: 7.

"At evening time it shall be light."

In commenting upon that point in one of his sermons, Alexander Campbell made use of this language: "It shall come to pass that at evening time there shall be light. The primitive gospel in its effulgence and power is yet to shine out in its original splendor and regenerate the world." He looked upon that as an opportunity for the light of the gospel to shine out at the evening time of the world's history, and he believed that in his day we were approaching the time when that light was to be manifest again in the world as it was when Jesus Christ walked on the shores of Galilee and passed through Judea and Samaria, and those regions of country where he did his wonderful works, and where the light of inspiration surpassed everything and anything that the world had known before, or at least it so stands out in history. He looked at it in that light. Well, I am not averse to that interpretation of this text. I believe it is a reasonable one.

If you turn to page 23 of the small edition of the Book of Mormon you will find the statement made by one of the disciples in that record, that there was to be a man among the Gentiles who would cross the ocean, the many waters, to this land, the land of America, and after him would come many Gentiles, and the Prophet Nephi speaking here says that after they came to this American soil, he beheld them and they were white and exceedingly fair, and he beheld that the Spirit of God was upon them.

Columbus came here in 1492, and we find that the Reformation begins right back along there, and from that time we see the reformers coming out one after another, and we believe, and have thought for years that the spirit of inspiration was working somewhat in the world along that line, and they were breaking away from the dark night that had held the people in bondage for so long, and with this spirit of reformation there must come a time when the gospel in its fullness must be restored to this earth, as this Prophet Nephi says will be done.

We are here to-night in defense of the restoration of the gospel. This side of the picture, we see that man crossing the many waters, and coming here and discovering the land of America, and we see the spirit of inspiration working upon other Gentiles to cross the ocean and land here upon American soil. We see the spirit of inspiration making ready this people to such an extent that there has been planted this wonderful government that we are citizens of here to-night. Friends, with all these scenes and these pictures passing before our eyes, we look at them with some degree of inspiration at least, we rejoice to-night to think that we can look at the culmination of it all, at the culmination of that event as is pictured out in prophecy by the coming of the messenger from heaven to bring the gospel and restoring it to this earth, to give men an opportunity to tread in the old paths and walk in the fullness of that light where God hath shined out in his glory among his Zion here upon earth.

"THE SPIRIT BEARETH WITNESS"

Do we appreciate these prophecies? Do we appreciate what God is actually doing? I will tell you how we can show our appreciation of them. He said, "If you love me keep my commandments." Again he says, in the same chapter of John:

He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me shall be loved by my Father and he will love him and manifest himself unto him.

Why, you sit in the testimony meeting here morning after morning, or in any little branch far away from this place, and listen to the prayers and testimonies of the people that have been gathered out from the world, having received the angel's message and having built upon that sure foundation that we heard of the other night, the principles of the gospel of Christ, and you will hear the testimonies ring through the meetings time and again, "I know that this work is of God because his Spirit hath borne witness with our spirit that the work is true." Where did they get such an idea as that? Well, here is one statement, which I will read. In the eighth chapter of Romans is a statement that supports us in bearing such testimony as that, because the Bible says we are entitled to that testimony. I read now from the 15th, 16th and 17th verses:

For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God. And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ.

HOW HE LIGHTS THE CANDLE

Now that is when he lights that candle; there is when that lamp is lighted; there is when he begins work with that individual, at least to the extent that he comes and makes his abode with him, because he enters his body, giving God an opportunity to come and live in that body and shine. If he will continue, God will continue to shine clear along the pathway of that man's life until he has finished his work here in this world; but if he is not willing to work and to give Christ an opportunity to find expression in his life he is left to himself in this world, if he is not willing to give Christ an opportunity to shine there. He will be one of the foolish virgins that lets his lamp go out, and when the bridegroom comes a cry will be made, "Behold the bridegroom cometh, go yet out to meet him," and five of those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps, but the foolish virgins, their lamps have gone out. The wise have trimmed their lamps and have started out to meet the bridegroom with faces beaming. As I see them in that picture, I see them going to meet him. The foolish virgins run after them and say, "Give us of your oil, for our lamps have gone out," and they said, "Not so, lest there be not enough for us and you. But go ye to them that sell and buy," and they went to buy, and while they were gone the bridegroom came, and the wise entered in with him, but the foolish virgins were shut out, and when they came and knocked at the door they were too late. They were not admitted there.

Friends, that ought to be an everlasting lesson to every man and every woman who ever accepted this gospel message, to try at least to keep alive spiritually, and he will manifest through their lives that spirit, so that wherever you are you will not hide your lamp under a bushel, but you will keep it up where people can see it.

PRACTICE WHAT WE PREACH

That is our next move. That is the next move of this church. Why, what do you mean? I mean this. The next move of this church is to practice what we preach. Practice what we have been preaching for years and years. And I am glad to see a strong army of young men to-day in nearly every branch, arising to take hold of the banner of King Emmanuel and holding it up until men can see in the lives of this people the Christ character and his beautiful life, that he may shine that others may see that this people are actually living the gospel, and we can bring before the world a demonstration of every step that Christ took through his life.

Now note this point: He is called the bright and morning star. If that bright star ever shines in the lives of his children in this world, it will be in the good deeds of his people that if we ever expect to shine we must get in line with the promises of God to us, we must keep our lamps trimmed and burning, and through our lives enable the world to see Jesus Christ. We must do that if we ever expect this gospel to accomplish what it is designed to accomplish in my life and your life.

That man has stood before the world through these centuries. He loved the world, but was rejected by men, but that life never has ceased to be an incentive to men to seek. There have been men who have sought that light, and would desire that he would light their lamp, through all these centuries down to this, and to-day we can still see that there are honest people in the world. Here and there are honest people through those struggling nations in Europe. To-night there are good men and good women who are forced into this war against their will. Many of them are living the best they know. Thousands and thousands of them are seeking to build upon that sure foundation. Some of them have actually built upon that foundation, and are doing the best they can, and I will guarantee, my friends, that some of these people will let their light shine there, even that some others will see the light.

I was just thrilled with the spirit of that movement that was put on foot a few days ago by Frederick M. Smith when he went down to Nevada, Missouri, and organized that branch of those boys who had enlisted in the United States Army and had given their services to their country. He there saw to the needs of those boys, and in their walk and lives they had already heeded the gospel call, which gave them an opportunity to practice this law, and to let the light of this gospel shine down on the border of Mexico and wherever a son or daughter of Adam may be, and whenever we feel that Jesus Christ speaks to us we ought to let that light shine.

TIME TO GIVE GOD AN OPPORTUNITY

I make an appeal to the people of this town and wherever there is a stake established, that now is the time to give God an opportunity to shine and let that bright and morning star shine through our lives until we can see men and women everywhere turning to that light, and see by this "There is salvation among men. There are found examples of the Christ life with people to-day who profess to be disciples of his, and who claim to have the Christian religion."

One more thought I wish to present, and that is this: I referred just as strongly as I could a little while ago to the fact that the spirit of man is the candle of the Lord, and that it gives God an opportunity to shine through that candle. You people have heard the spirit of inspiration here the last few mornings in these prayer meetings—at least many of you have, and I am going to make an appeal to you here. Every time one ray of inspiration of that searchlight has been thrown on our lives, we have seen our imperfections, haven't we? Every time that searchlight has been turned on the lives of men in this world they have seen how far they come short of the standard.

Ask yourself the question now.

In the text I read in the beginning he tells us God shall come and he will not keep silence: a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. Many could not abide the day of his coming. Can we abide the day of his coming? That is the question that rings in my ears. Can I abide the day of his coming? Have I kept my lamp burning? rings in my ears wherever I sit under the influence of the Spirit through the mouths of his servants, and I many times have been made to feel so weak it seemed to me that it is impossible for me to arise to that standard Jesus had set before us, because every ray of inspiration shows me how far I am living beneath that standard upon some particular point.

Now if that great searchlight of God should be turned on all at once this evening, I presume we could not endure its brilliancy, because all our imperfections would loom before us instantly, but he gives only a little here and a little there. But we ought to come into such a condition as a people that we could come so close to God that we could put into practical operation the teachings of Jesus Christ until he could shine through Zion.

Will we give him an opportunity?

* * * * *

SIMPLE LETTERING FOR THE MISSIONARY

[The following brief article offers some suggestions eminently worth while. Attractive, hand-made posters are a most effective means of securing publicity for our meetings. It is not required that one be "naturally talented" to learn pen or brush lettering—intelligent application to the principles and a moderate amount of practice will do wonders. Elder Lemuel Dyke, who contributes the following article, taught a class of about twenty-five the first principles of pen lettering during our late General Conference. The time was short and meetings few because of the rush of other matters, but even with that start many have developed into proficient letterers and at least one is now teaching a class in that art. While a number of our missionaries already do this work, some of them might develop still more skill by accepting Brother Dyke's generous offer. Others who have desired to learn it but have not had opportunity, will find it a most satisfactory accomplishment which may be used often and with good effect.—EDITORS.]

Having been requested to write an article on lettering for the columns of the HERALD, I do so with a desire to open up a wider and broader opportunity for the church in spreading the "angel's message." Having had some experience as instructor in this line of work, I have often seen a need for just such work among our missionaries.

Most of our missionaries are trying consistently to keep expenses at a minimum, therefore feel that they may not be justified in urging handbills or the use of advertising space in a newspaper at a price of from two to four dollars, so often an effort is made to get along with the few oral announcements that can be made here and there—often very unsatisfactory.

I believe a system of simple pen lettering will answer a long-felt want among our elders who are on the firing line, and who are wide-awake in meeting the difficulties in getting audiences. They must meet all kinds of competition, such as picture shows, rival meetings, etc., and to have any audience at all must adopt some method for letting the people know what they may expect to hear about. We are not really warning our neighbor unless he is reached by our announcements at least. These other institutions chalk the sidewalk, use handbills and posters, advertise in the local paper and by other means keep their activities before the people. Reason teaches us that if publicity is good for them it must have a value to us.

At the late General Conference we had lectures on different methods of advertising, and we at that time noted the interest manifested among our elders, all seemingly looking for a way to solve these problems.

THE MATERIALS

There is little expense in pen lettering. A shading pen suitable for the work spoken of will cost about twelve to fifteen cents.

Two colors of ink for twenty-five cents, and a little bristol board which can be bought at any print shop for from two to five cents a sheet, eleven by fourteen inches. These are all the necessary articles for a neat window card or sign poster. Bristol board usually comes in twenty-two by twenty-eight-inch size and therefore can be cut by the printer to your liking. It will cost approximately ten cents a sheet, uncut.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

Use a card that is sufficiently large so as to leave plenty of what is termed by printers as "white space" in your work. Do not have your letters cramped up and too close together. A good effect is to be had by putting a border around the work. Do not make many flourishes, as it has a tendency to make the bill or card hard to read. The Lord told Habakkuk (2: 2) to "write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it." This is a thought worthy of our consideration.

Be sure your work is neat and attractive, as it will leave a good impression on those that read it. Also use the least amount of words you can, that is, make place and date as brief as possible, then if plenty of space is left, a scriptural passage such as the following: "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" Come and see. (John 1: 46.)

"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him." (Proverbs 18: 13.)

"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." (1 Thessalonians 5: 21), and many others that are equally as good.

Those wishing instructions and copy for alphabet may correspond with me. I will give lessons by mail as long as stamps and necessary expenses for correspondence and supplies are paid. This applies to the conference appointees, as I have a good deal of other correspondence to keep up and would not be able to keep up with it to all. This kind of work has been tried out and has proven to be good, as a number of elders have taken the course and have become efficient in it.

I have only hinted at the good that may accrue from such work.

LEMUEL D. DYKE.

EAGLE CITY, OKLAHOMA.

Of General Interest

AN IMPORTANT EVENT IN AMERICAN METHODISM

A "red-letter" day in American Methodist Episcopal circles is being celebrated in Cincinnati by the dedication by church officials and employees of a new six-story, ferro-concrete modern home for the Methodist Book Concern. The exercises were participated in by representatives of all departments of the concern and general church life, the oldest active employee, William Vosmer, the house carpenter, with 55 years of service, and Bishop Earl S. Cranton, until May last the senior active bishop of the church, publishing agent here from 1884 to 1896, exemplifying the range of participants. The formal presentation of the building was made by Mr. Edward E. Shipley, a prominent insurance man, a member of the book committee of twenty-five ministers and laymen, a board of active directors, who direct this great church interest without compensation. A feature of the program was the singing of a chorus of seventy employees from all departments of the plant, trained and led by an employee, Mr. Oscar Schansen. During the exercises two American flags were presented by the employees to Doctor John H. Race, publishing agent resident at Cincinnati, one to fly over the building, the other to stand beside the pulpit in the chapel. Luncheon and inspection of the new building followed the formal program. Inter-department celebrations were held by the employees, and the formal opening of the chapel for "Preachers' Meetings" was observed throughout Monday. The Methodist Book Concern carries over $1,000,000 insurance of the lives of its employees made out to beneficiaries named by the insured.

The Methodist Book Concern was founded August 17, 1789, at 43 Fourth Street, Philadelphia, on a capital of $600, by John Dickens, when Methodism had but 58,000 members. For his services Mr. Dickens was allowed annually $200 for dwelling house and book room, $80 for a boy, $53.33 for firewood, $333 to clothe and feed himself, his wife and children—the munificent sum of $666.33 in all. In 1804 the business was moved to New York, where it began business in one room on Gold Street. The first official Methodist Church paper, The Christian Advocate, now in its ninety-first year, was started in 1826. The Methodist book room in Cincinnati was started by the Reverend Martin Reuter in a room 15 by 20 feet, at Elm and Fifth Streets. Not even a boy was provided as helper here.

It is on such a foundation that the great business of serving the constituency of Methodism with weekly Advocates, Sunday school publications and Christian literature was established. At the present time the Methodist Book Concern has, in addition to its main houses at New York and Cincinnati, depositories at Chicago, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Kansas City (Missouri), Detroit, and Boston, the real estate value of which is nearly $2,000,000. And its profits, distributed to the aged and retired ministers of the church, for the past four years, were over $1,000,000.

Don't turn the wheel of time backward just to be a boy again. Whirl it on a little faster and get into a knee-pant-run-away-from-home disposition at the other end of the chain. Or just forget about time and keep doing something. Eternal youth may be a prize for which one must die in childhood's happy hour, but close attention to the proverbial knitting and a pleasure in work will keep one young a long, long while. The poet Lowell never grew old. He lived to a ripe old age, but was as young in spirit at his death as a boy. Once in company with some friends, passing a large building set back among the trees, he read the sign: "Home for incurable children." Smiling, he said to his companions, "They'll send me there some day."—Common-Sense.

Woman's Auxiliary

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

"As Ye Do It Unto the Least of These"

We are glad to present to our readers this week, the introductory article of a series which Doctor G. Leonard Harrington is preparing for our columns, on the very vital and just now widely discussed subject of social service. Time was when the good Christian thought his duty along this line ended with the dropping of a few pennies in the hat of the blind man on the corner, or the handing out of a cold bite to the hungry tramp at his door, or the subscribing of a few dollars to the charity organization of his town, and having his name published far and wide for that same worthy deed. But the help which good men and women of to-day seek to render to those whom fortune or environment has placed upon the list of dependents is of a far wider scope, and tends rather to a study of, and an effort to change the conditions which bring about such dependency.

It is of far greater value to an individual to be "put upon his feet" so to speak, where he can be independent of others, than it is to simply relieve his surface needs of the moment. It is far better to be able to point out better ways of living to those poorly equipped for the battle with life and its problems, than it is to donate large sums for caring for them after unsanitary and unwise living has brought them to that condition where they cannot further care for themselves.

In Omaha, as is the case in many cities, there is a circle of women connected with the woman's club, who are attempting to solve in practical ways some of these problems, and one of the workers prominent in that circle made an appeal before the women two weeks ago, in regard to what she termed "personal supervision" of these homes where so much is needed. In part, her appeal was that what the extreme poor of the city needed most of all, was the knowledge of how to cope with their problems, how to live in a sanitary manner, how to prepare their food and clothing in such a way as to best serve the interests of both health and economy, and above all, to receive from some source (which must of necessity be outside themselves) the inspiration and the awakening which must precede any real effort towards accomplishing these things. This inspiration and encouragement, these devoted women are learning, can best come from women from the more fortunate avenues of life, whose education and environment have served to equip them well for this work, and whose consecration to the uplift of humanity is great enough to keep pace with that education.

This woman called for the name of any woman who would be willing to take just one family under her care for this winter, the trying season for the poor, and make personal visits to that family every week, helping the mother to understand the proper care of her home and family; to teach her the value of cleanliness and sanitation, and to make her feel that some one is interested in both her best good and that of the children and husband over whose happiness she is presiding. Incidentally, such an undertaking cannot fail to enlarge most wonderfully the scope of one's own personal sympathy and comprehension of humanity and its needs. She said that a number of devoted women were doing just this sort of work, and were finding in it an outlet for the very best that was in their natures—a development that was very much worthwhile for themselves besides rendering a service which was invaluable to the community and to the race.

Doctor Harrington's articles will be worth a careful reading, and we would most strongly urge the local auxiliaries throughout the country to take them up in their meetings, to study, analyze, discuss, and see if the ideas he presents can be applied at once to some very particular and insistent need in their own communities. The advanced thought and effort along the lines of relief and social service work are expressive of the ideas God has given the church in these latter days. Truth never changes, and the principles of loving service laid down by the pitying Savior of men, who came not to the well but to the sick, are those of which the world to-day is gradually becoming cognizant. Strange that it has taken thus long to understand, in even so small a measure, the wonderful and fundamental truths demonstrated by the Man of Galilee.

AUDENTIA ANDERSON.

Social Service

INTRODUCTORY

The social service movement aims to throw a new light upon medical practice. It seeks to understand, to treat, and to diagnose the social complications of disease by establishing a closer relationship between the patient and those skilled in the profession of social work. It strives to bring to the care of the patient such personal and individual attention to the patient's social condition that his relief or recovery may be hastened and safeguarded.

The essential thing for any new movement is that its leaders, while firm in conviction that a fundamental truth is being carried forward, should be open-minded and plastic enough to fit it gradually into its place of greatest usefulness, and that it be put on a substantial financial basis.

The skilled social worker recognizes social symptoms of human distress and also sees their underlying causes, that she may the more wisely help. As a cause, and also as a result, of social distress, disease is a large factor in the plight of those who became dependent upon society. Inquiry into the physical condition of members of the families that ask for aid, without for the moment taking any other complication into account, clearly indicates that either as the chief cause or as a complication due to the effect of other causes, physical disability is a very serious disabling condition at the time of application, in "three fourths of all families that came under the care of the charity organization society." (Doctor Devine)

The lessening of disease is of importance, not only for health and comfort, but for economic welfare and social progress. This fact makes social service a practically significant feature of constructive social work.

As hospital problems are social as well as medical, two expert professions are needed. Yet, only in the last few years have the medical and the social worker been able to aid each other. Only within that period have they been able habitually to meet as experts, each teaching and each learning from the other; both united to serve the patients and community. So, we find gradually developing, this sympathetic interweaving of effort by two professional groups, that for a time struggled separately with the problem of the sick and dependent in the community.

Our field is only beginning to be surveyed. All the experience gathered so far should be considered. Out of it we may at least develop some ideals.

"A patient for whom a back brace was ordered by an orthopedic surgeon was found subsequently by a social worker to be starving herself to pay for the brace."

In the articles that follow, an attempt will be made to offer an interpretation of what the movement means.

DOCTOR G. LEONARD HARRINGTON.

Food for Winter

(The following very practical and timely article was written by Mrs. Mildred Rogers, and read before the Deselm, Illinois, local of Woman's Auxiliary. It will be good material for other locals to use.—A. A.)

The five elements necessary to sustain life are air, water, food, sleep or rest, and exercise.

The subject we wish to take up to-day, is "food." In writing this paper, we will only give a few points on this subject, in order to get a nucleus for discussion. What we aim at is to help each other if we can; to understand more thoroughly food properties, and their value in supplying the system's or body's demands for them. Also the necessity of variety, an economy in purchasing, cooking and the time spent in cooking or preparing food.

Cooking has by many seemed drudgery and especially to the farm woman, who has so much of it to do; however, if we study food properties, food values, and the demands of the human system, for the different nutritive elements, also the different ways of cooking foods, it will no longer seem a drudgery, but a profession and we will learn to love our profession, as the health and prosperity of our loved ones depend on how well we master it. The average daily diet for an adult should consist of the following:

Water, 81.5 per cent; albuminoids or flesh formers, 3.9 per cent; starch, sugar, etc., or carbohydrates, 10.6 per cent; fats, 3.0 per cent; common salt, .7 per cent; phosphates, potash, salts or mineral matter, .3 per cent; total 100 per cent.

Professor Hutchinson says: "Wheat is the principal and most valuable kind of grain for the service of man" (Agreeing with the Word of Wisdom). Bread, the principal diet made from wheat, contains nearly every principle necessary for sustaining life except fat; hence it is called the "staff of life," and the butter added supplies the fat. A witty clergyman has said "Bread is the staff of life, but bread and butter is a gold-headed cane."

The potato, the principal vegetable food we use, while not so rich in nutritious substances, still is a good food, keeping well from season to season, and it can be cooked in so many ways. It is over two-thirds water and the rest starch, with a little albumen. Meats are all richly stored with albuminoid substances and contain more or less fat. Meats are very high-priced and farmers will be economizing to raise their own meats. If one cannot do this, buy the cheaper cuts, which can be so cooked as to be delicious. Vinegar added to tough meats while cooking will help to make them tender, and does not injure the flavor, but rather improves it. Nutritious soups can be made from meats, which are very good; and are heating to the body in cold weather. When we cannot have meat, eggs, cheese, nuts, etc., are good substitutes. The body only requires 3.9 per cent albuminoids. Beans also contain this property and some of the grains, so the meat question can be solved without so much expense.

Milk is an ideal food and will sustain life longer than any one other article of food. It is a good substitute for meat stocks, for soups. Onion, celery, potato, oyster and tomato soups can be made with milk. There are delicious.

It has been said that "a well selected vegetable diet is capable of producing in the greatest number of individuals the highest physical development of which they are capable." These contain phosphates and iron. A moderate use of animal flesh in the winter months is not considered injurious to most people, by hygienists. However, people suffering with rheumatism, kidney or bladder troubles are forbidden by physicians to eat it.

The grains or cereals contain starch, sugar and phosphates—all necessary to life. The fruits used in winter, as oranges, apples, prunes and the many dried and canned fruits supply acids, mineral matter, salts, sugar and a large amount of water.

The body requires daily each food principle; and it is well for us to learn the food properties of each kind of food. Each meal should consist of one food containing albuminoid, one starch and sugar, one fat and one mineral and salts. One kind of food may contain several of these properties.

Water is the only natural beverage. Nearly all food is more or less water. It is neither economy of food or time to have too many different kinds of food for any one meal.

For breakfast a good cereal, cooked or warm is preferable for winter, an egg, fruit or orange juice; wheat bread, corn bread, muffins, gems, pancakes or rolls are all good, but only one kind of the last named foods at a time.

For dinner, soup if desired, not more than two vegetables, meat or its equivalent, occasionally a relish or salad and a dessert. I would not recommend pastry, as health authorities have classed it as injurious. One who has milk, eggs, tapioca, rice, fruits, etc. can combine these and have many healthful and delicious dessert dishes; but only one at a meal.

Then for supper or lunch there is usually something left from dinner in the vegetable or meat line that can be cooked over in different ways to make it as good if not better than the previous dish. A piece of cake, gingerbread is excellent, homemade cookies and (doughnuts occasionally) only one of these foods at a meal, with one kind of fruit and bread and butter is enough. You will save time and worry if you plan several meals ahead. The country woman usually has a small store of food on hand, so she knows what she has to select from.

What housewives and home makers need is more time for recreation and self-improvement, that they may give the best to their families, church and community. So by studying household economics, and practice we may be qualified to do this.

Children's Diseases

(Written for the Saint Louis auxiliary, by Sister S. R. Burgess.)

"If people would only use a little common sense in the care of sickness the doctors wouldn't have so much to do!" said a busy physician, and continued, "but, do you know? common sense if the most uncommon kind of sence!" meaning that the rational thing to do is often the very last thing to be tried.

I hardly know where to begin on children's ailments; I had hoped to talk to the mothers—get them to talk to me and ask questions, which I would try to answer as practically as I could, but to write a paper is more perplexing, for how can I know just what phase of the question is troubling you?

Fevers are the most common of children's complaints, and are often but indicators of disturbed conditions which may become serious. At the first sign of fever, it is always best to give the child a mild cathartic; then take a half teacup of hot water and stir into it a tablespoon of alcohol, or two tablespoons of Pond's Extract. Wet a wash cloth with this solution, and wipe off the entire body of the child, following with a gentle rubbing of the spine, from the neck down, with olive oil. Keep the child as quiet as possible, and cool, if you can.

If a child is inclined to have "summer complaint," mix a teaspoon of raw flour in a cup of warm milk, and let the child drink this two or three times a day.

Some one asked a doctor here, "What is this infantile paralysis? and the reply was, "The doctors do not seem to have decided just what it is, but I believe, aside from impure food and unsanitary conditions, they will finally come to the conclusion that improper dress and two-wheeled gocarts are largely responsible!"

People put babies in short clothes before they are three months old, remove every bit of flannel and binding from the abdomen, set them up in a gocart, and bump them over the rough streets, until the nerve center, the spine, is all jarred up! They even set the little things up in high chairs for hours at a time, when it would be much better for them to be upon a comfort on the floor, where their legs and arms can have full play, and where they may rest tired muscles at will.

One mother asked the doctor, "How is it that my boy does not try to stand or walk yet? He is perfectly well, and seems strong! (The ten-month-old baby was sitting in a high chair.)

"Is he a pretty good baby?" asked the doctor.

"Oh, yes, he will sit for hours, and play until he falls asleep in his chair!" replied the mother.

"I thought so," said the doctor, "This has probably been going on for months; the child's spine is not strong enough to support the body for such long periods of time; his limbs are on the verge of paralysis, notice how weak, flabby and useless they are! Let him lie down more; let him kick and scream if he must, it will not hurt him, and he needs exercise. He will try to turn over, to get up, to move himself; all such efforts will result in strengthening his limbs."

Simple food, the kind that is easily digested; absolute cleanliness of body and surroundings; regular habits, and lots of the out-of-doors, are the "common sense" rules for health in babies and young children. Parents should avoid scolding; quarreling and "whining" are conditions which affect small children more than the older ones realize. An atmosphere of cheerfulness, kind words, and a peaceful countenance help children to a marked degree, as well as those of older years. When children feel that they are loved, they soon want to do things to please those who love them. Teach them to help; let them feel it a favor to be permitted the service, and gradually and eventually the family will be healthier as well as happier.

Letter Department

A Man Among Us Taking Notes

[At times one may glean much from a letter never intended for publication, in which the writer speaks without constraint or conventionality and with candor. A man from abroad recently visited Lamoni and Independence and after his return home wrote to a friend of his impressions. We are permitted to make a few extracts from this letter for the benefit of our readers—leaving the writer in the shadow of the unknown, as is his right under the circumstances.—EDITORS.]

Some things struck us very forcibly on our short visit. For one thing, it is the day of youth, as some of the older men evidently feel that they have been set aside. It is enough for many a man occupying a similar high position at the age of 25, 28, or 30, to be astounded that a young boy of 40 should now assume charge. The great fact is (Job 32:8), "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." But, on the other hand, we were surprised to note at times a patronizing way, at times an effort to set aside almost entirely, as ignorant, the older man, as being "slow in mind and body." It should not be necessary to emphasize to anyone the advisability and even the necessity of proper training being taken by our young people, for the sake of church services.

Still we should remember that a man must be a very poor specimen who has been engaged actively in the work of the church for twenty or thirty years, or forty years, and has not learned many things both of interest and of value. Just now there is a danger in part of repeating mistakes of our grandfathers, through the lack of knowledge of church history, and through the lack of active experience with the great common people. We state it in this general way so as not to be overcritical, for some of the young men are devoted, humble and consecrated, and are trying very earnestly to put forward and uphold the hands of their predecessors in the work.

Education is not a matter of schooling alone, and certainly for our work the spiritual aspects are of prime importance. It is not a question whether young men or old men are better; the best is when both are used, and both are assisting in the work, without jealousy, and each trying to uphold the good of his brother. The older men have experience, and know many things, even if perhaps some of them are not so. Yet we find the older men in some instances, preaching publicly against the effort made by the young, and their effort towards education.

A splendid work is being done by way of preparation and study, and we believe that most of these teachers realize the importance of the spiritual as well as the intellectual. It is a pity that some of the older men doubt this. It is more of a pity that they should feel at times that they are not wanted, for this work needs the knowledge and experience of every man, if it is to succeed. There is a spirit of inspiration in this work. It cannot succeed by the work of man alone, and this, I think, we all will admit.

Not to be too personal about other people, one person criticized President Elbert A. Smith because he had written the book, Joe Pine—"not sufficiently dignified work for a member of the First Presidency." With this conclusion we cannot agree. We note at times, a tendency to criticize some of the most prominent men because they have not the "common touch" of sympathy with the average man or woman. Yet people will criticize such a work as this, a work which should be had by every young person and read by every older person in the church, and read understandingly.

It is a book we should have in our library, since it deals with a problem of the most immediate importance to the church, and that in a way which should appeal not only to the young people, but should appeal to everyone.

The question is the pressing need of a like consecration on the part of men of business, and their families, or the man who labors with his hands and his family, as it is expected of the missionary and his family. We are workers together for the common cause, and one may be an "Apostle of material things," as in Joe Pine, as well as one may be an apostle of spiritual things.

From a Private Letter

This people think of nothing but war at present and they are certainly nobly supporting the cause with means and men.

Will write more about church matters when I get among the people of Dunedin. There are only six members in the North Island. I intend to make a complete list of them, i. e., their names; age, birthplace, etc., when, where and by whom baptized, and send same to the church recorder, as I think he has no record of them. Cannot say anything definite at present about the Maoris or the possibility of starting a mission among them. We are looking up the scattered sheep first. The Maori question will come up later. I met one of them the other day, a Maori elder of the Utah church, and found that he was well filled with the Brighamite idea of plurality of gods and "as man is God once was." He was a fair type of the squirming Mormon when put to the test. I saw one of their assembly houses, called a "Maori Pa." It is a wonderfully decorated front with all manner of carvings in wood with a large ugly face at the top with mouth opened and a smaller face looking out from the open mouth. I have not learned what all this means, but my curiosity will not let me rest till I know all about it. I will try to get a picture of that front so you may be able to see what I am trying to describe.

Yours in gospel bonds,

H. W. SAVAGE.

DANNEVIRK, NEW ZEALAND, October 18, 1916.

Our Opportunity

The greatest blessing that ever came to humanity is the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is the regulator and the remedy which will fit and prepare us for the duties of life both here below and in the beyond. We should be awake and make the right use of our opportunity. One has said: "The blindest people are those who never find out that they cannot be happy in their own way."

To live and hear the gospel in its fullness is a great opportunity. It is the only means if taken into our lives which will bring satisfaction to our souls. What does all the glory of this world amount to if this life ends all? Many look at wealth as the chief end of life. Wealth may sometimes be an unmixed blessing, it may make life easier, but in the same degree that it does that it destroys the natural stimulus to exertion which alone makes the man.

A poor man is just as happy as a rich man. It is only to the man who is poor that wealth glows like a steady star in the night. One has said: "Contentment in wealth is a will-o'-the-wisp that no man ever yet caught up with." A millionaire said once, "If there is anything found to prevent death, set the price." Life is the golden string, but it cannot be bought with money. Life and immortality are brought to light through the gospel. (2 Timothy 1: 10.) We are not compelled to obey it. We can have a philosophy of our own according to our privilege as free moral agents.

Charles Kingsley says: "There are two freedoms: the false, where one is free to do what he likes; and the true, where he is free to do what he ought. God has endowed man with power of reasoning."

We read: "Men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause and bring to pass much righteousness; for the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves." (Doctrine and Covenants 58: 6.)

We reap as we sow. If we expect to reap eternal life with God we must lay aside all selfishness, jealousy, not forgetting the golden rule. Do unto others as we would that others should do unto us. Only as we do grow, only as we lift others do we lift ourselves. Only as we bring joy into life do we really live.

Character has a commercial as well as ethical value. We admit that God sometimes honors truth uttered by unworthy persons, but after all there is nothing that gives weight to good words like a goodly life.

To be colaborers with Christ we must have a life worthy of confidence. The man without friends can accomplish very little in this world. But the man with friends, strong friends, true friends, loyal friends, who have confidence in his integrity and ability to do things, has great power. When he leads they will follow him, and all working together unitedly, bring victory. Emerson said: "The only way to have a friend is to be one."

We have good opportunity to learn. The epistle from Gomer T. Griffiths is excellent. It should not only be read but put into practice by all Latter Day Saints.

We need wisdom. We need education. But all education is not confined to the study of books. That line of study is all right in its place. But the choice of school courses comes down to a question of individual fitness. The wisdom of the colleges does not amount to much unless it fits its exponents for the most practical kind of service. He needs to meet the mechanic and the business man and the farmer on an everyday level. He will find that the major part of the world's wisdom is not contained in books. Every laborer and every farm hand can tell him something that he needs to know.

We need each other. All are needed in the service of God, according to their abilities. Take two individuals and give them the same opportunity, the one might use it to a good advantage and the other to a disadvantage. What seems most needed is good sense.

We might in the past have lost many golden opportunities—both temporally and spiritually. If so, we should learn by these experiences to watch closer our opportunities now. The present is all the span of time we possess.

We should meet together with the Saints when it is possible. I know it is a great help for spiritual life. I have felt gloomy and unconcerned at times, and felt like staying at home, but I have gone anyway, and many times the opening hymn has turned darkness into light. I have been made to realize the truthfulness of the hymn,

"The God of peace shall meet thee there,
He makes that house his home."

Bedison Branch is the only branch of the district that has its weekly prayer meeting. It has been the means of spiritual strength to us. Not long ago I heard a sister speaking by the Spirit in a prayer meeting to a young man, a visitor who had a bodily weakness which was beyond human help to cure. If he would obey the Lord's commandments he would be permitted to live and raise his children and enjoy health and strength. His wife who belongs to the church, said: "This same promise has been spoken to him once before."

There is a blessing to be obtained not only for a time, but for eternity.

The door of opportunity is as wide open as ever.

A. JENSEN.

The Ascending Scale of Criticism

[EDITOR'S NOTE.—Following are three extracts from as many private letters criticizing the editorial entitled, "Throwing clubs at authority."]

Dear Brother Elbert: Referring to the article on authority, there is a strain running between the lines that is going to be seriously resented. . . . It were better that the article had not been published, so I think. . . . It will not inspire respect, obedience or love. It will create resentment, instill fear, and suppress the spirit of independence that wells up in the heart of every man who feels himself equal with his brother in the sight of God.

Brother E. A. Smith: Read with interest your editorial, "Throwing clubs at authority." You strike a middle and conservative line that is safe and right.

Editors Saints' Herald: Your editorial, "Throwing clubs at authority," was surely the best that I have ever read on such a subject. After reading it, I said to my wife, "That one article is worth a year's subscription to the HERALD."

An Experience in a Secret Order

A number of years ago while I was living in Netawaka, Kansas, a small town about forty miles west of Atchison, I was approached one day by one of our leading merchants, and in due form requested to unite with the Masonic lodge.

I was informed that it had been decided by the lodge to admit me free of charge, and that he had been selected to talk with me about it. I told him I would consider the subject and give my answer later. This I did and in due time I became a Master Mason.

I was not disappointed by the rules of initiation or the ceremonies observed. I understood it to be a worldly organization, brought into existence by uninspired men for the purpose of helping those connected with it, much the same as many sectarian churches and political parties.

I had been a student of the Book of Mormon for a number of years, and desired to know if there was any reason for believing that the organization known as the Gadianton robbers and the Masonic lodge had any relation or resemblance. The only honorable way this knowledge could be obtained was to unite with the lodge and learn the facts.

I believed then, as I do now, that righteousness depends on one's actions or conduct, instead of his location or associations. But while passing through the ceremonies of one degree I received a spiritual experience that I shall never forget. Certain things were shown to me that were afterwards verified. This manifestation enabled me to understand some things of Masonry that otherwise might not have been known.

I mastered the requirements of the lodge and studied the situation as carefully as I could under the circumstances. I met with the members and assisted in transacting such business as came before us in our meetings.

The lodge was composed of men from the different churches of the town, with a few that belonged to no church, and from the different political parties of the country. Taking them as a whole the lodge was composed of the best citizens of the community. Our business was conducted with the strict desire to do justice. I saw no disposition "to murder and get gain."

Sixteen years ago last winter I attended my last meeting. In the spring I moved my family from Netawaka, Kansas, to Galien, Michigan. I paid up my dues, discharged every obligation I owed to the lodge and peacefully and quietly withdrew. I obtained my demit and have never been in a lodge since. I do not belong to the lodge now and have no intention of ever uniting with them again.

I have never violated my oath of secrecy and never expect to. Not that I am afraid that the Masons will injure or harm me; but I cannot afford to stultify my manhood by betraying the trust of my neighbors who had confidence enough in my integrity to reveal to me the secrets.

I knew before I entered the lodge that there were certain secrets that I was supposed to keep. I promised on the honor of my manhood to keep those secrets. And while I have no connections or associations with the lodge, there is no desire or intention to betray the trust imposed in me, by making a pretended exposure of Masonry.

I feel to-day as I felt when I left the lodge, that in the church is work enough for all my energies, and as long as I am thus engaged, there is no time nor strength to be spent in politics or lodges.

Each man has the supreme task of working out his own destiny. His advancement and success will be according to his observance of the principles of righteousness. He can observe these principles far better in the church, and my desire is to see men and women come into the organized church or kingdom of God, and spend their time and strength in establishing its principles among the people.

W. E. PEAK.

New Church Opening

[We extract the following paragraphs from a letter intended for an earlier issue but were crowded out at the last moment. In the branch news will be found the later items.—EDITORS.]

The new church just completed by the London, Ontario, Branch is so far complete that the furniture will be installed before another week can pass, and the date set for the opening ceremonies is Sunday, November 19. The opening has been postponed to this date from Sunday, November 5, at this instance of the President of the church, Brother F. M. Smith, who has given his word to be here for the occasion, with Bishop McGuire, if possible.

The building is a handsome, red pressed brick structure upon a cement block foundation. The windows and doors, etc., are trimmed with cut stone. It contains all of the material which was worth saving, and which could be used of the historic old building erected in this city over forty years ago, and will comfortably seat four hundred people in the main auditorium, gallery included.

Since the razing of the old church building and an old dwelling house to the south of it, the London Saints have been a very busy people, both brethren and sisters were to be seen clearing away the debris, piling away the brick, lumber, and lath, so that the excavation could be started. Night after night the citizens of London saw what they had never seen before, from the Sunday school scholars to members eighty-three years of age, young girls and married women, laughing, singing, working together in the interest of this great and beloved latter-day work. In this way the cost of the new church has been kept considerably less than half the cost of a new church built by the Methodists in another section of the city under the supervision of the same architect, the seating capacity of both buildings being exactly the same.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the sisters who have thus worked to make possible such a splendid result. They not only cleaned bricks and piled them away, but they helped to nail the laths on the walls after the new building was sufficiently advanced to carry on that work, and now they are working with their needles, and in other ways to provide the finances to free the building from the last encumbrance that it may be dedicated to God and the work of saving souls.

P. H. PHILIPPIN.

An Explanation

In my article in HERALD of September 27, I gave reasons for the existence of the gospel wagon. It had its origin because of the demand which had been expressed in Australia to get out of the "beaten path." We were not casting reflections on the missionary work of other elders over there. There was nothing in the article that I can see which would justify a conclusion that we were.

The demand was made in so many places and by such good loyal, tithing Saints, that Apostle Gomer T. Griffiths, in charge of the mission, made a statement in the Australian church paper, the Gospel Standard, that an effort would be made to get out into new places, by the gospel wagon route! It was not a few disgruntled ones who asked these questions, but Saints who had the interest of the work at heart.

[While I was at the Bulahdelah, New South Wales, reunion, noted in my diary for April 10-12, 1914, a young farmer said he was ready to furnish means for any effort to get out in new places, but was opposed to branch to branch work done too much and proselyting in new localities done too little. I met with this sentiment every place I went in Australia. One of the greatest hustlers in branch work we have over there, who is now in the field, told me the Saints in one part of Australia I had not been, thought the seventies should get out in new places and not hang around the branches so much. One brother in Victoria was so anxious to have the work introduced in new fields that he furnished the money for the gospel wagon and gave some of his time to it, assisting in running it. I could give detailed statements from Saints in every branch I have been in, but I think it unnecessary, as the minister then in charge acknowledged the prevailing sentiment over there, and in the Standard declared his intention of trying to meet it.

The Lord has given late counsel on this matter, in Doctrine and Covenants 122: 7, "The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the twelve and the seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, so far as possible; thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them."

The Lord seems to want the missionary arm of the church to get out of the "beaten path." Possibly sensing the Lord's desire was the reason Apostle R. C. Russell in one of his pastorals published in HERALD, advised the ministry under him to stay away from the "old, old path" of branch to branch.

In my article I stated I consulted with some conference appointees there and they all expressed a desire to get out, and I then explained to your readers what the difficulties were. In talking over the matter with John Jones, then a high priest, now an evangelical minister, Brother Jones suggested the wagon idea, and Apostle Griffiths further developed it, and got it started in New South Wales, while several of us got it going in Victoria. So I was neither casting reflections on the work of the ministry of the past or the present, but simply, with others, acted upon the sentiment of many good Saints over there, who had a perfect right to express themselves, and for doing so they should not be classed as those having a carping spirit.

The missionaries over there have many difficulties to meet, one of which is expressed in the answer the young lady made to her young man, when he asked her what she thought of his mustache, she replied: "The survey is large but the settlers are few and straggling." I think the wagon plan is admirably adapted to the work over there and to the mild climate prevailing, so I trust there will be young men consecrate their time and talents to that work, so the Lord's advice can be heeded as he gave it in section 122.

I do not think it would be at all wise for the branches to be left entirely to themselves, but the Lord evidently thought the missionary arm of the church was not getting out enough and was not giving the local authorities of the church the proper opportunity of developing, so he commanded accordingly.

With nonfading white, thirty-six-inches-wide charity for all, and unholy and unlovely malice toward no human being,

Sincerely,

C. EDWARD MILLER.

HONOLULU, TERRITORY OF HAWAII.

From Here and There

In a letter from Brother Ward L. Christy, he incidentally mentions that the sisters of Brooklyn have just held a very entertaining and profitable bazaar on the 24th. While he is not in a position to state the facts as to the returns, he thinks the profits will be near eighty dollars. He says: "We look with favor upon the wondrous power evidencing itself in this organization all over the church. May heaven's richest blessings direct them safely in the course of all good."

Elder Roy M. Young, of Battle Creek, Michigan, writes that the work is getting on nicely in that city. There are about fifty Saints located there, and a number of others are earnestly investigating the work. They have a convenient hall on Main Street, well equipped for Sunday School as well as preaching services, with low rental. They are especially encouraged with their Sunday school work, and the excellent interest taken in it by both old and young. He mentions visits from Elders Stead, Stroh, Goodman, and others who occasionally stop there and give good counsel. Brother Young is realizing the need of teaching the gospel through the eye as well as the ear, and the need to have some good charts for this purpose. Will some of our brethren who have had success in this line write Brother Young at 285 Champion Street, Battle Creek, Michigan, so he may be in touch with those who have tried this method? Will some of our brethren who are specialists in making these charts also write him as to what may be procured?

Brother Cecil O. Blasdel, of the Fourth Regiment Marine Band, with the United States Troops in San Domingo, writes that he has been engaged in some of the battles and skirmishes with the natives on that island. He has now been there over five months. They are having but little trouble with the natives now, yet do not expect to get back to the States much before March or April of next year. He would like very much to hear from any of the Saints, as he is lonely in that foreign country. Address him as a member of the Fourth Regiment Marine Band, care of Postmaster, New York City, and it will be forwarded.

WATERFORD, CONNECTICUT.

Editors Herald: We are now living on the edge of the city of New London, Connecticut. The German submarine Deutschland left here to-day at 2 p. m. The Morse Steamship Company have just completed arrangements to establish one of the largest shipyards in the world just across the river from here. They intend to build steel ships of the largest type. Business is very good here.

My daughter lives here in New London, and if an elder who is a machinist, carpenter, or pattern maker would locate here we could hold meetings. We are comfortably settled on one of the principal streets and could make an elder comfortable and assist them, as we are through work at 4.30 p. m.

With love to all the Saints, I am,

Your brother in the gospel,

Station 5, R. R. 2.

F. G. WHIPPLE.

MUNSON, FLORIDA, November 19, 1916.

Editors Herald: The Florida District conference convened at Dixonville on October 7, and was merged into the Florida District reunion, which lasted until the night of the 15th. The attendance was not so large as might have been, had it not been for a few cases of sickness prevailing in the neighborhood. However, it was fairly good, and the services were spiritual and the preaching good. One sermon on the temporal law, preached by Edward Rannie, was the best on the subject the writer was ever permitted to hear. I wish every Saint who is not converted to the temporal law could have heard that sermon, or could have opportunity to read it.

This southern country has been visited by more storms this year than ever before and the severity of two of them has exceeded anything else we have ever had. On July 5 a tropical storm came out of the Gulf of Mexico that lasted about thirty-six hours, causing immense loss on land and sea. The damage to the city of Mobile, Alabama, on Mobile Bay, was estimated at three millions of dollars, and all sea-coast towns about in proportion. On land millions of dollars worth of crops and pine timber were destroyed. The excessive wind and rain caught most all of the corn crops in silk and tassel, causing almost an entire failure in the crops. The cotton crop was almost totally destroyed, and this country is in the midst of a severe famine for the first time in the history of the United States.

A very few farmers planted their corn early in March and raised some corn, but it was a very few indeed, and all farm products are high-priced.

While this storm was raging, a cyclone formed at one point, which cut a path through a dense forest of pine timber for fourteen miles, without any let up, fifteen chains, or three sixteenths of a mile wide on an average, destroying timber to the amount of forty-two thousand dollars at common stumpage prices. In the path of the main storm millions of dollars worth of timber was destroyed.

On October 18, another tropical storm came out of the Gulf, which lasted only a few hours, but it destroyed more timber than the storm in July. It was wider in area, and while it was blowing at the rate of one hundred and fourteen miles an hour at Pensacola, Florida, it was blowing down houses and killing people at Andalusia, Alabama, thus describing a width of nearly one hundred miles.

We have with us every feature of Christ's prophecy in Matthew 24. Wars in Europe, rumors of war in Mexico, famines by storms, wars, and floods and pestilence. Pestilence in the boll weevil, hog cholera, hordes of insects pests caused in part by the killing of birds, earthquakes in divers places. Rich men on the one hand, and labor strikes on the other, which James says are to characterize the last days. Men's hearts failing them for fear of the things coming upon the earth.

All these we have with us, and still men are robbing God and can't see it. Malachi told the Jews they were cursed with a sore cursing because they had robbed God. "Even this whole nation," and the world to-day, are doing just what the Jews did. We can excuse the unbelieving world for robbing God upon the grounds of ignorance, but how about the Latter Day Saints who have been told since the year of 1831 "Behold, now it is called to-day, (until the coming of the Son of Man) and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned."

Can we be excused for withholding our part and feasting upon the things of this world, coveting wealth, wearing fine clothing, etc? I think not. I said withholding "our" part. It is the Lord's part we are withholding, hence we are robbers. Christ said, "My yoke is easy and my burden is light." Yes, if we are converted to this fact. It is easy to give our surplus, when the gospel finds us, and then the Lord's tenth until we again have a surplus, then this surplus, and again the Lord's tenth, all this time having the blessings of the Lord as he has promised. "Come up higher" is the command to the church, and should be the slogan and watchword of every Saint, and I wish to venture this idea, That the morale of the church is fairly good if they would come up to the law of tithing. Malachi told the Jews they were cursed for "robbing God," not for immorality.

Hoping and praying for the welfare of Zion, I am,
Yours in bonds,

S. D. ALLEN.

OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO, November 19, 1916.

Editors Herald: I appreciate the many good things in your paper, and the good I get from reading the editorials and letters. I love to read of God speaking to his people. I thought that message that came to Saints at Lamoni reunion through Brother Smith was grand. Oh that we might live that God would be able to speak to us at all times, and that in love and not in rebuke. May the Lord help us to be good.

We are trying to keep the banner afloat in this town. There have been several gifts given to us as a people. Two have been called to the priesthood, James Morrison to office of elder, F. Chambers teacher, and the writer a priest.

We need your prayers to help us along.

I love to see the young come up higher, for we need them. There is so much wickedness in the world we need good men to break it down and keep the work going along.

My prayer is that there may be none lost and that we as a people may come up higher.

Your brother,

W. G. ELLIOTT.

CHICO, CALIFORNIA, November 19, 1916.

Editors Herald: While answering my daughter's letter, who is at Graceland College at present, I thought I would write a few lines to the HERALD. My daughter had asked me about the election of California, and I am sorry to say we have lost in the wet and dry campaign, the wets gaining by a large majority. The happy thought comes to me that we have done our part to try to destroy the terrible liquor curse, and now we fathers and mothers are able to ask our heavenly Father to protect our loved ones for us. When we have done our part as much as it is in our power to do so, then we can only come to him.

We have three boys growing into manhood who may soon be tempted to partake of those evils, not only mine but many others whose parents have tried to save them. Now we have the comfort to know we have divine help to protect them.

Hoping the church as a whole will move forward, and wishing the HERALD much success, I am,

In gospel bonds,

MRS. E. B. HINTON.

DALBY SPRINGS, TEXAS, November 20, 1916.

Editors Herald: I have filled all the calls for pointers. So far I have made fifty-eight pointers and two batons, worth about one hundred and fifty dollars to make. I have got enough to about pay the postage, but didn't ask that. I enjoyed my labor in making them, and am very glad they are all pleased with them. I hope they will be of service in pointing out the good way to the people, but I think the most of them are after the things of the world. They are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God.

I am sending a poem, entitled "The church and the world," and I think it makes a good illustration concerning the ways of the church and the world. [We might print it if it were not so long.—EDITOR.]

To those who have pointers: If you will put a little Three-In-One oil on them once or twice a year it will be of benefit to them.

Route 1.

Your brother in the one faith,

J. N. Cox.

WHEELING, WEST VIRGINIA, November 22, 1916.

Editors Herald: Several years have elapsed since I contributed to your valuable columns. However, we are still rejoicing in the greatest work of the age. Elder Alma Booker is engaged in a debate with Ira Moore of the non-Progressive wing of Campbellism, in their church at Moundsville, West Virginia. It is located about twelve miles south of our city, deriving its name from an ancient mound which still stands prominent.

The conflict has been on for a week. They began on the last proposition last night, "Was Joseph, Smith a prophet of God, and the Book of Mormon of divine origin?" For an hour our brother defended the proposition from the Bible. His opponent could not overthrow the argument, but ridiculed the Book of Mormon. I do not desire to comment on the discussion, as I presume the moderator will acquaint you with the facts. A crowd of fifteen went down last night from here. At the beginning of the session sang, "Tis a glorious thing to be in the light of God." And at the conclusion sang, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet, to guide us in these latter days." It was the crowning sheaf to our brother's noble effort in defending our honorable prophet.

As we boarded the car homeward bound, the spirit of song seemed to rest upon us. "Israel awake," "Lead, kindly light," "Rock of ages," and other hymns were sung. At last we were entering our city. Sisters Annie and Eva Smith were the first to leave the joyous party. The words "God be with you till we meet again," rang through the car. Shortly afterwards we all reached our destination. The conductor bade us good-night, saying, "I tried to do my part. I took up the collection." We informed him that he possessed one religious trait at least.

Thus ended a happy evening of assisting in upholding the fair name of our beloved prophet.

Your brother in the glorious work,

LOUIS A. SERIG.

BONESTEEL, SOUTH DAKOTA, November 23, 1916.

Editors Herald: I am very much in need of the address of K. Walker, jr. Anyone knowing his address will confer a great favor by forwarding same to me at once at Comstock, Nebraska.

C. W. PRETTYMAN.

HARDY, NEBRASKA, November 26, 1916.

Editors Herald: I have a son in South Dakota, fifteen miles below Edgemont, on the Cheyenne River. One of his family, Mary Beebe, wants to be baptized. Elder Gamet knows them, and he is preferred if in that region, but if not, any laboring in or near. The address is Abel Beebe, Box A 87, Edgemont, South Dakota. They will meet an elder at Edgemont.

Wife and I are still in the faith, but are lonely.

Best wishes for the work.

G. W. BEEBE.

News from Branches

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Nearly every person present at the annual Sunday School convention took a keen interest in all the business transacted and enjoyed the program which was carefully arranged for the occasion. The welfare of the Sunday school was the topic of general conversation. Most of the branches in the district were represented.

Sunday morning the attendance of the Sunday school of the First Branch was greater than the average, and the teachers as well as the scholars were in higher spirits than usual.

The evening service was one of those long-to-be-remembered kind. The church was filled to its capacity, making it necessary for the members of the chorus to enter by a rear door.

The singers and instrumentalists were in fine shape for a concert. The regular Brother Hoxie was not on the job, but it takes more than a broken foot bone to keep him away altogether. He conducted the performance in a sitting position.

The program consisted of violin solos, an address by Brother Koehler, orchestral numbers, vocal solos, and selections by chorus—including one from Handel's "Messiah."

AL J. DICKSON.

Detroit First Branch

Detroit is still on the map with three flourishing branches and a Sunday school established where a branch used to be, on the west side, also preaching Sunday evenings and prayer meeting on Wednesday night which we hope will be the means of getting a mission started in the near future and finally a branch. Elder James D. Gault is holding meetings in the north end of town at the home of our presiding teacher, Brother Frank Shippy, who has been laboring faithfully presenting the gospel to his neighbors and the fruit is beginning to appear, some having asked for baptism which we understand will be attended to next Sunday at the main church; thus the good work moves on.

The Saints of Detroit were honored by the presence of President F. M. Smith and Bishop B. R. McGuire last Wednesday evening. The church was filled to its capacity, many coming from a distance to see President Smith and the bishop and hear the words of instruction which they felt sure they would impart. In this they were not disappointed. As the branch president, J. A. Grant, in company with the President of the church and Presiding Bishop marched to the platform, the congregation arose in a body and sang, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet." The Spirit of God was present, witnessing to many that God does indeed reward our efforts to worship him and gives the witness of the Spirit to us that he whom he has called is indeed a man of God.

Elder Grant introduced the speakers and by agreement Bishop McGuire made the opening remarks, which were pointed and full of meaning to those who have embraced the truth, helping us to see our duty more clearly, and to those who are without the fold we are confident a lasting impression was left to the effect that he is a man of God wholly consecrated to his work. We think he is the right man in the right place, and to know him is to love him.

President Smith followed with a sermon that will not soon be forgotten by those who were present. Surely if the church will follow such principles as were laid down at this service we will progress more rapidly and the Zionie condition for which we are all praying will soon be consummated. We were advised that it must come soon, that this is the sifting time, also the hastening time, and the question should arise in the mind of each individual, Will I be there? Have I done what I could? Have I cleansed fully my ways? If you can answer in the affirmative all will be well.

I trust that every Saint who heard the stirring sermon will apply to themselves, also pass along to others, the good things dispensed, that thereby all may be able to profit and thus grow in grace and the further knowledge of the truth as revealed to us in these last days. We were sorry that the brethren could not stay for a week at least, but time with them is pressing, so they left us the next morning for Chicago.

There were a number of outsiders present as well as Saints, and the writer heard some express themselves as very much pleased with the sermon. Detroit extends them a hearty invitation to come again. While we did not make any special demonstration here over the coming of these great and good men, we do hope that our actions left the impression with them that we are trying to render, true heart-service and by this means prove to them that we love them instead of trying to do so by ostentation.

Detroit First Branch has inaugurated a children's storytelling hour under the direction of the Sunday school officers, and a meeting is held during the morning preaching hour for the children which is proving a success. We hope later to be able to place some one in direct charge of this department as superintendent. Some who were timid at first are beginning to love the work. The command to "feed my lambs" should not be forgotten by his people. We are trying to reach the mark of our high calling.

More anon,
J. R. GRICE.

London, Ontario

This week has witnessed the greatest event that has ever yet happened in the history of the latter-day work in these parts, and that is the official opening of the Saints' new church building on Maitland Street, which took place on Sunday last, November 19.

President F. M. Smith, Bishop B. R. McGuire, and Bishop R. C. Evans all took part in the services incident to the occasion. Bishop Evans, being the local representative of the bishopric, performed the opening ceremony, preaching at 10-30 a. m. to 12 o'clock. President F. M. Smith preached at 2.30 p. m. and at 7.30 p. m. Bishop McGuire at 4. p. m. A general reception meeting and welcoming of guests combined with a kind of round table talk was held on Saturday evening beginning at 8 o'clock. As the prophet and the presiding bishop entered, the congregation sang that inspiring sacred song, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet," after which both of these—our chief officials—took part in the exercises of the hour.

It is safe to say that President Smith especially delighted his audience with his splendid thoughts, couched in eloquent, learned and yet simple and easy-to-be-understood English. We can say that in all his addresses to us he dug up and delivered to us thoughts and instructions upon practical Christianity, and upon the discovery, development and use of each individual talent bestowed by God upon his people, that no other individual had ever uncovered in our hearing anywhere.

Brother Smith, also Brother McGuire, delighted us by their geniality, free and easy and unassuming qualities as brethren in the great gospel kingdom. Oh, what a difference there is comparatively, in our chief officials and those of the older sectarian churches! We felt to welcome our prophet and chief bishop with all our heart, and to thank God for the pleasure and privilege of association with such men as these chosen of him to lead and to feed his people in our day.

The church was taxed far beyond its legal seating capacity, chairs being placed in the aisles, and in every available nook and corner in the auditorium, while the vestibules were occupied by a large number who stood throughout the services, to say nothing of the outsiders, who expressed their delight with President Smith as a pulpiter. We had visitors from many of our Canadian branches, and from Detroit, Buffalo and Port Huron on the American side.

We trust that the good work in its present development will be able to reach out as never before for a great ingathering of the honest in heart who are still detained in the kingdom of Babylon; and that the fact of the personal acquaintance with our brethren at the head of the church, formed under such inspiring and favorable circumstances, will be an undying stimulation to the church in these parts to attain to that service and consecration that the law requires—yea—demands at our hands.

"Let us pray for one another
For the day is fading fast."

The day having faded, the night is at hand, when, as the Master said, "No man can work."
P. H. PHILIPPIN.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes

EASTERN MAINE.—At Jonesport, in combined session of conference and convention. Statistical reports: Olive Branch, Corea, South Addison, Kennebec. Officers elected: President, F. J. Ebeling; vice president, W. E. Rogers; secretary, N. M. Wilson; treasurer, Charles F. Cummings. Sunday school officers elected: Superintendent, J. F. Sheehy; assistant superintendent, W. C. Smith; secretary, Bessie Haskell; treasurer, Bessie Manchester; home department superintendent, Lizzie Smith; cradle roll superintendent, Edith Dobbins. Delegates to General Conference and General Convention: U. W. Greene, F. J. Ebeling, J. F. Sheehy, W. C. Smith, David Joy, authorized to cast majority and minority vote. Next conference to convene at Kennebec in June. Next convention at Jonesport in August. N. M. Wilson, secretary.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.—At Saints' church near Tigris, October 7 and 8, 1916, district officers in charge, D. E. Tucker assisting. F. M. Sheehy gave valuable advice and assistance. Ministerial reports received from a majority of the missionaries and several of the local workers. Statistical reports: Springfield 254, gain of 13; Naylor 26; Cooter 40; Beaver 110, loss 1; Logan Creek 70; Mill Spring 53; Thayer 32, loss 1; Grove Spring 53, loss 2; Ava 122, loss 1. Baptisms reported, 16; deaths, 6. According to these reports we have 16 elders, 21 priests, 9 teachers and 5 deacons in the district. The district president complained of the inactivity of some of the local ministry and asked the conference to take some action, whereby the drones could be weeded out or persuaded to work more. Brother Sheehy advised that this matter be left over to the next conference when some plan could be adopted to bring it before the joint councils of the church. Sick calls took away several from the conference before its close, and it had its effect on all present, by diverting their minds from the meetings. Meet again at Springfield, in February, 1917. Benjamin Pearson, secretary.

CENTRAL MICHIGAN.—At Whittemore, October 28 and 29, 1916. Priesthood meeting the 28th. Business meeting 10 a. m., J. F. Curtis presiding, assisted by G. W. Burt and M. Umphry. District president reported all branches visited but 3. Officers in district: High priests 1, seventies 3, elders 26, priests 41, teachers 32, deacons 24. Number of sermons 1,418. Bishop's agent reported: On hand January 1, $137.97; total receipts $2,100.29; balance $365.36. Auditing committee reported books audited and found correct. Branches reported: McIvor, Sage, Alma, Markey, Whittemore, South

Brant, Twining, Saginaw, Hamilton Center, Bay City, Houghton Lake, Iosco, Glover, Coleman, Beaverton, West Branch, Rose City, Farwell. Delegates to General Conference: G. W. Burt and wife, Emmett Clinger and wife, Veril Yerrington and wife, Bert Cheney and wife, M. A. Sommerfield and wife, Dorr Calkins, George Rhine and wife, O. J. Hawn and wife, E. S. White and wife, Webster Syckle. Delegates to cast full vote and in case of division majority and minority vote. Motion prevailed that branches defray expenses of G. W. Burt to General Conference. Next Conference be held at Beaverton. A resolution that members of district look with favor upon the idea of purchasing an auto for use of district president was adopted. O. J. Hawn appointed chairman of committee to see about raising money and purchasing car, with authority to choose assistants. G. W. Burt and S. T. Pendleton were so chosen. Motion prevailed that the car be a Ford. Officers elected: President, G. W. Burt; assistants, Joseph Sheffer and Matthew Umphry; secretary, Elsie Janson; treasurer, G. W. Burt; bishop's agent, G. W. Burt; library board member, Francis Knapp; chorister, Willis Schrock. Willard Shotwell, Bert Cheney, and Walter Beebe recommended for ordination to office of elder; Adolph Cataline to office of priest. Conference voted to approve recommendations and provide for ordinations. G. E. Burt presented bill of $2.50 for tent expenses, which was allowed and ordered paid. A vote of thanks extended Saints and friends who cared for visiting Saints. Elsie Janson, secretary.

WESTERN MONTANA.—Met with the Deer Lodge Saints at Deer Lodge, November 4 and 5, A. J. Moore and Peter Anderson presiding. Branches reporting: Bozeman, Deer Lodge and Warm Springs. Bishop's agent's report audited and found correct. Ordinations to office of priest were Roscoe Davey, Joseph Beck, and Warren H. Eliason. A good spiritual feast was enjoyed by all, and the gift of prophecy was given. Next conference will be held at Bozeman, June 2 and 3, 1917. W. J. Brewer, secretary pro tem.

Convention Minutes

MOBILE.—Sunday school, at Escatawpa, Mississippi, November 3. Prayer service at 9 a. m., followed by institute work. Business meeting at 2. Seven schools in district reported. Convention changed to mass meeting. District has again reached first grade. Executive officers allowed $8 for expenses. Schools assessed a dollar each to be paid when called for. Adjourned to meet Friday immediately preceding next district conference. Edna Jean Cochran, secretary.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Sunday school-Religio, Fall River, November 11 and 12. Sunday school enrollment is 757. Officers elected for six months—Sunday school: Superintendent, Lucie H. Sears; associate superintendent, Edward F. Yarrington; secretary, Rebecca K. Carter; treasurer, Clifford E. Smith; chorister, Elenora Whiting; member of library board, Alice H. Fielding; superintendent home department, Sylvia B. Megathlin; normal department, Edward F. Yarrington; historian, C. C. Sears; editor of the Gleaner, Alice Firby. Religio: President, H. A. Chelline; vice president, Fred A. Robley; secretary home department, Gertrude Wood; temperance department, A. S. Nickerson; normal department, E. F. Yerrington; gospel literature, R. W. Farrell; member of library board, E. B. Hull; historian, C. C. Sears; member Onset camp program committee, S. A. Burgess. A large number of members from various branches in district in attendance. The Lord spoke words of encouragement to the young. Meet at Attleboro, May 12, 13, 1917. E. B. Hull, press committee.

Book Reviews

INTERNATIONAL CARTOONS OF THE WAR.—Selected by H. Pearl Adam. E. P. Dutton & Company, New York City. Price $1.50. A flood of books has been brought forth from many presses in which various authors have attempted to set forth pictures of the great world war in general and in detail, and analyze the causes and the results. But this is an effort to collect representative cartoons from many lands, from the study of which some knowledge may be gained as to the mental and spiritual attitudes of the people in these various lands. In this book we have collated some of the best war cartoons from North America, South America, England, Australia, New Zealand, Italy, France, Germany, Holland, Poland, and other countries. This is a book that is of interest now, and will be of much more interest forty or fifty years from now. The following extract is taken from the introduction:

"Cartoons are meant for the man in the street; they are meant to tell a story, to convey some feeling or idea rather than to be an artistic rendering of an object or collection of objects. Therefore artistic canons apply to them in this limited sense—that while the great cartoonist may and must be as big an artist as he can, he must first of all remember that he has to explain himself and his subjects, or he ceases to be a cartoonist at all. A Futurist Forain, a Cubist Raemakers, are inconceivable because they would be quite useless as cartoonists, whatever they were as artists.

"The artistic value of the cartoons issued in all countries—and in some cases it is very great—is a matter for future discussion. It is of no present importance. What is of some actual value is a comparison between the cartoons of the various countries, for they show with unflinching accuracy the trend of public opinion. From the human point of view this comparison is invaluable to the student of humanity in the present upheaval. From the cheap post card to the twopenny broadsheet, from the most commonplace poster to the finest lithograph, each has its place. To collect these things is not only very interesting, but most enlightening; the national spirit and the national moods of each country are unmistakably portrayed, and the crudest production takes rank with the best as a human document."

WITH SAM HOUSTON IN TEXAS.—By Edwin L. Sabin. Illustrated by Charles H. Stephens in color and black and white. Portrait of Sam Houston and maps. Net $1.25. Full of patriotism, adventure and fight is this new story in the Trail Blazers Series. There is no more romantic epoch in the history of North America than that of the founding of the Republic of Texas, and Mr. Sabin in his illuminating way makes the time live again in the adventures of Ernest, the boy friend of Sam Houston. The lad is going up the Missouri River in a paddle-wheel steamer; the steamer overturns and he is given up for lost upon not appearing from the wreck. He is, however, not lost but reaches the opposite bank from his friends. He meets his hero, the immortal Sam Houston, scout, soldier, and statesman. Sam takes to the lad, and in the following years they share a thrilling series of adventures, culminating in the battle of San Jacinta, in which Sam Houston defeats the Mexican army and captures their general, Santa Anna. This is a high-class book for boys and men, and will be recommended in the best libraries.

GAMES AND PARTIES FOR CHILDREN.—By Grace Lee Davison, Little, Brown & Company, New York City, $1, net. Miss Davison is a contributing editor to the Delineator, and it is her special province to furnish readers of that periodical with new ideas concerning games and parties for children. She is an expert on the entertainment of little people, and knows not only the standard games which children seem to play practically almost by instinct but a vast number of more unfamiliar ones. Also she herself has devised many which have become popular favorites. The present book is a collection of the best of these games, and includes pastimes for indoors and outdoors, games for the small toddler, for the big brother and sister, and even for father and mother. There are brisk games for the active little folks, quiet games and funny ones, games requiring quick wits for the school children, and those which enlist the services of the entire family circle. Parties for holidays, special occasions, and for just ordinary evenings at home are suggested and described. Miss Davison also gives valuable hints on color schemes, decorations, and "party behavior," so that anyone who has children to entertain will find in the book the solution of many an old problem, as well as clever new ideas to put in play.

HOW BOYS AND GIRLS EARN MONEY.—By C. C. Bowsfield. A new book that every boy and girl will enjoy in How Boys and Girls Can Earn Money, by C. C. Bowsfield (Forbes & Company, Chicago). This attractive book tells them how to do hundreds of useful, practical things in their spare time after school and during vacation. This is a splendid volume to give any child, not only because it encourages thrift and stimulates ambition, but because it also teaches children how to spend the time happily and profitably. "There are bad ways and good ways of earning money," the author says, "and it is a wise thing to help boys and girls to start right and make the best of their opportunities, instead of allowing them to drift or blunder into any kind of work. Some kinds of labor are better than others for both body and mind."

Some jobs may be taken up and laid down without much waste of time. Others need a longer test. The experience gained by young people who follow the plans laid down in this work will prove a stepping-stone to success, for it will most certainly indicate fitness for some particular and permanent vocation." The whole matter of showing boys and girls how to earn money is discussed by Mr. Bowsfield in the preface. The question is one, he declares, that should not be ignored by parents and teachers. The proper thing is to deal with it candidly and intelligently. The volume contains many suggestions designed to aid young people of school age who are compelled to contribute toward the family support.

ZIONISM AND THE JEWISH FUTURE.—By various writers, edited by H. Sacher. Published by the Macmillan Company, New York City. This is a book that cannot fail to interest students of Jewish history, particularly those who are interested in the return of the Jews to their native land. Chapters are devoted to the following subjects: "A century of Jewish history," by H. Sacher; "The Hebrew revival," by Leon Simon; "The history of Zionism," by Professor R. Gottheil; "The Jews and the economic development of Palestine" (with map), by S. Tolkowsky, of Jaffa; "Cultural work in Palestine," by Dr. S. Brodetsky; "The future of Palestine," by Norman Bentwich. There are numerous other interesting chapters including one on Jewish colonies in Palestine. A book for the student of the present condition of the Jew and his prospective future.

THE JOY OF LOVE AND FRIENDSHIP.—By Arthur L. Salmon. Forbes & Company, Chicago. Price 95 cents. A serious work of essays on the eternal subjects of joy, love, and friendship by the well-known author of "The Man and the Woman." The following choice selection is made from the chapter on "Working through and for others":

"Not often in early life, perhaps, but sometimes in middle age it is borne in upon us that we are not fated to do the great accomplishment ourselves. We have had the dreams, we have nursed the ideal, but there has been a defect that prevented satisfactory results.

"A suspicion of failure steals over us. It seems that our dreams must die with us and that we have done nothing to hand on our ideals. At one time there seemed no limit to the things that we might do, but there has proved to be a limit. The force within us was not the practical or constructive; it may in its way have been even finer, more delicate and sensitive—perhaps its very sensitiveness has militated against its actual success.

"Yet the greatest of all gifts may remain to us, and that is the willingness to help others in doing what we have failed to do. We may have learned that so long as the work is done it does not matter whether we do it or some one else, but it does, indeed, matter that we should give all possible aid."

PINOCCHIO.—By C. Collodi. Eight Illustrations in colors by Maria L. Kirk. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. Net $1.25. This is the latest and one of the best volumes in the famous Stories All Children Love Series. Pinocchio was a piece of wood until the great event! Geppetto, the beggar, carves the wood into a doll, and the doll dances away a living puppet, by name, Pinocchio. A more delightful children's story than this Italian classic it will be impossible to find. Through the pages we follow his joyful, sorrowful and amazing adventures. His poor feet are burnt to stumps when he goes to sleep close to a fire; his nose is long and gets him into all kinds of trouble; he is mischievous and runs away when he should have gone to school; but through it all there are those lessons of goodness, love, and self-sacrifice which have made it the classic nursery story.

WHAT JESUS CHRIST THOUGHT OF HIMSELF.—By Anson Phelps Stokes. Houghton, Mifflin and Company, New York City. Price $1. The author states in his preface to this book that it grew out of his graduation thesis at the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1900. The author is at present secretary of Yale University. His book is described as an attempt to fathom the conscience of the founder of Christianity, so as to determine his own view about his person and mission. The subject is approached in a reverent and devout state of mind. It deals with facts as stated in the New Testament. The author holds that before answering the question, "What think ye of Christ," it is necessary to find out what Christ thought of himself. A very interesting book for students of religion in general, and particularly those who are interested in the life and personality of the Man of Galilee.

MARXIAN SOCIALISM AND RELIGION.—By John Spargo. Published by B. W. Huesch, New York City. Price $1. This is a new book by the well-known socialist, John Spargo, and deals with a question of interest to church people who may be making a study of Socialism. In his preface the author makes the following statement:

"After a careful analysis of religion, ending with a definition of religion which is entirely candid and free from the charge of evasiveness, I have carefully outlined the Marxian synthesis, with special emphasis upon the one doctrine in it which has been held by most Anti-Socialist writers, and some Socialist writers, to be incompatible with religious belief. I have tried to show that there is nothing in the Marxian theories, or in any of their necessary implications, which the essential principles of religion either explicitly or implicitly oppose or deny."

THE LORD'S DAY FROM NEITHER CATHOLICS NOR PAGANS.—By Reverend D. W. Canright. Fleming H. Revell Company, New York City. Price $1. The author of this book is Pastor Emeritus of the Berean Baptist Church, Grand Rapids, Michigan, author of "Seventh-Day Adventism Renounced," "Adventism Refuted in Ten Tracts," etc. Reverend Canright was formerly a minister of the Adventist Church. His book is written to refute the Adventist theory that the Lord's day observance originated with the Pagans and was taken up by the Catholics. He holds that the observance of Sunday was of apostolic origin. In his preface he says:

"One of the chief things which Seventh-Day Adventists urge the most strongly is that the observance of Sunday originated with the pagan Romans, thence was brought into the Roman Church and then the Pope, or the Papacy, imposed this upon the entire Christian world. Hence Sunday is only a pagan, papal day. They assert this so strongly and so repeatedly, that uninformed people are frightened into giving up the Lord's Day and accepting instead the Jewish Sabbath. It is a subject on which people are generally not posted. Even those who are intelligent and well read on general topics know little, or nothing, on this particular subject, while the common people know absolutely nothing about it.

"To learn the real facts in the case requires much careful research in the history of both Church and State through several centuries of the early Church. Few people have the time, or the means at hand, or the interest to do all this. Even educated ministers in general have never given the subject much thought, because they have had no occasion to do so. Hence, when suddenly required to meet Adventists on this question, they are unprepared, nor do they have the necessary authorities at hand to quickly look it up. So the strong assertions of the Adventists often go unanswered. In an ordinary audience of several hundred there would not be one person who would know how the pagan Romans regarded Sunday, or whether the Papacy ever had anything to do with it or not. Hence they are easily misled.

"I do not mean to accuse the Adventists of purposely deceiving. I myself taught that way for many years while with them. I accepted what our own 'History of the Sabbath' said, and quoted it as conclusive. It was long before I saw how one-sided it was.

"In this present book both ministers and common people will have the facts in concise and handy form for ready reference with the testimony of the most reliable and unbiased authorities given in their own words."

THE REAL MORMONISM.—By Robert C. Webb. Sturgis and Walton Company, New York City. Price $2.00. This is a representation of the much discussed subject of Mormonism from the standpoint of a Utah Mormon, and is introduced on the title page by a quotation from Joseph F. Smith. A book of 463 pages, containing chapters devoted to "The Riddle of Joseph Smith," "The coming forth of the Book of Mormon," "Mormonism the Exponent of Equality and Fraternity," "Mormonism as the instrument of temporal salvation," "The theology of Mormonism," "The doctrines of atonement," "Plural marriage and the position of woman among the Mormons," "Women under plural marriage," "Anti-Mormon Accusations," "Did Solomon Spalding write the Book of Mormon," etc. The work is prosy and voluminous, as the author seems to have no faculty of condensing his thought, yet it contains numerous chapters that will be of interest to those who care to go at the subject from the viewpoint of Utah Mormonism.

THE CHURCH ENCHAINED.—By Reverend William A. R. Goodwin, D. D., with an introduction by Rt. Reverend David H. Greer, Bishop of the Diocese of New York. E. P. Dutton & Company, New York City, price $1.25. The burden of this book is to prove that the Christian Church as a whole has failed in the present age of the world, and there is an effort to point a way out of this dilemma. It is one of the many books on this subject, brought forth since the outbreak of the great world war. The chains which bind the church to-day are designated as "narrow ecclesiasticism," "the church's trust in material power," "the iron chains of bigotry and the golden chains of luxury and self-indulgence and love of pleasure." Also the "chains of indifference and procrastination."

THE GIFT OF IMMORTALITY.—By Charles Lewis Slattery, D. D., Rector of Grace Church in New York. Houghton, Mifflin Company. Price $1. This volume represents the fourth of the series of Raymond F. West Memorial Lectures at the Leland Stanford Junior University. These lectures were delivered on September 30, and October 1 and 3, 1915. An interesting study of the question of immortality. This book is divided into three parts, first, the responsibility of the individual to immortality; second, the responsibility of the world to immortality; third, the responsibility of God for immortality.

ADVENTURES OF OLD MAN COYOTE.—By Thornton W. Burgess. Illustrated by Harrison Cady. Little, Brown & Company, Boston, Massachusetts, 50 cents. One of the series known as Bed Time Stories for Children, so well and so favorably known that they need no comment.

The Bishopric

AGENT'S NOTICE

To the Saints of Kentucky and Tennessee, Greeting: Owing to the scarcity of missionary help this year we have been kept busy on the "firing line," not having the opportunity of visiting the Saints, so we take this opportunity of addressing you.

The year is drawing to a close and it will hardly be possible for me to visit the branches or see all the Saints, so do not wait for me to come, but those who contemplate paying tithes and offerings please send them at your earliest convenience, so that it may be entered in this year's report. Some have done well, others have been negligent.

Saints, let us all be awake to our duties and aid in this great work in building up the kingdom of God. Let each do his part in aiding the worthy poor and assisting the missionaries' families. If it is but little that each can do, if done willingly and cheerfully it will meet the divine approval, then we are worthy of his protection. Otherwise we have no promise.

J. R. McCLAIN.

FULTON, KENTUCKY, 125 Church Street.

Conference Notices

Winnipeg, at Winnipeg, in Kensington Street church, December 30 and 31. Also Sunday school convention 28th, and Religio convention 29th. Mrs. W. J. Pugsley, secretary; Nelson Wilson, president.

Southwestern Oregon, meets with Myrtle Point Branch, February 3 and 4, 1917. Rule 4, district by-laws, "All district officers, branch presidents, and all elders and priests laboring in the district are to forward to the secretary a written report two weeks prior to the convening of conference." We expect J. W. Rushton to be in attendance. R. Maude McCracken, secretary, Myrtle Point, Oregon, Box 42.

Quorum Notices

HIGH PRIESTS

The program for the sessions of 1917 have been mailed to each member of the quorum, should any fail to receive their copy, please let the undersigned know, and another copy will be immediately sent.

ROBERT M. ELVIN, Secretary.

LAMONI, IOWA, 206 South State Street.

New Religio Treasurer Appointed

It is with regret that the general executive committee of the Zion's Religio-Literary Society have to announce the resignation of Bishop J. A. Becker as general treasurer, caused by the press of other church work. However, as Bishop Becker does not feel that he can longer serve us in the office to which he was elected, we have chosen Brother R. A. Lloyd of 5032 Devonshire Avenue, Saint Louis, Missouri, to fill out the unexpired term and bespeak for him your earnest support. We also desire to take this public method of expressing our appreciation of Brother Becker's faithful service in the past.

G. S. TROWBRIDGE, President,
For the Executive Committee.

Architects

[We are informed that the notice below, which appeared in an August number, did not bring as many responses as desired. We commend it to our readers as a worthy movement indeed.—EDITORS.]

In order to fully prepare ourselves for rendering services to the communities in which we live and to the general church, it has been advised that the architects unite, forming an association.

With this in view, we would like to communicate with all practicing architects, architectural designers, engineers, draughtsmen, and students, and all professionals in the allied arts, to arrange for a meeting in the future when definite action will be taken. Each one should earnestly desire to help in this movement and join the body organized to prepare for doing the architect's part in the world's greatest work.

Address Henry C. Smith, 41 Wisconsin Avenue, Somerville, Massachusetts, and you will be notified of further action.

Married

ARMSTRONG-GREEN.—At Chatham, Ontario, November 22, 1916, Isaac Edward Armstrong, of Berlin, Ontario, was married to Miss Mary Martha Green, at Fifth Concession, Chatham Township, Ontario, Elder J. H. Tyrrell officiating.

Died

GIFFORD.—Maria Lively Gifford, born at Riceville, Ontario, April 14, 1850; died October 31, 1916, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. A. Bailey, Vancouver, British Columbia. She retained her faculty of speech until the last, and bore a faithful testimony for the latter-day work, exhorting all present to faithfulness. She leaves husband, 3 daughters, 2 sons, 1 brother, William Lively of Chatham, Ontario, 1 sister, Sister Roderick May, formerly of Independence, Missouri, also a number of nephews and nieces. Sermon by William Johnson.

WILLIAMS.—Jay Howard Williams, son of Sister Etta Williams, was born June 24, 1902; died November 24, 1916, from a gun shot wound accidentally inflicted by a companion while hunting. Mother, 3 brothers, 2 sisters are left to mourn his sad demise. Funeral services conducted by William Dolan in Saints Church, at Sperry, Oklahoma, interment at Owasso Cemetery.

CONDERMAN.—Aurelia C. Conderman, born in Garrettsville, Portage County, Ohio, December 9, 1838; died at her home, Amboy, Illinois, November 21, 1916. Married Charles W. Conderman, December 31, 1857. To them were born 3 children, 2 daughters, 1 son. Sister Conderman was baptized by H. H. Robinson, at Amboy, Illinois, June, 1890, and lived true to the work she loved so well. She was loved and respected by all who knew her. She leaves to mourn their loss, husband, 1 sister, 3 children, 3 grandchildren, and 1 great grandchild. Sermon by W. A. McDowell, assisted by Elder Appleman of the Congregational Church.

LAWN.—Frederick H. Lawn was born in San Juan, California, November 29, 1866, baptized January 22, 1875, by D. S. Mills, married Miss Mary Errington, September 9, 1896; died in San Jose, California, November 15, 1916. He is survived by his wife, father, four brothers, and five sisters. The funeral services were held in the Saints' church, at San Jose. The sermon was by C. W. Hawkins, prayer by Eugene Holt. Interment at Hollister, California. Brother Lawn was stricken with paralysis about four years ago, and although all was done for him that loving hands could do, he was a great sufferer till death came to his relief.

COOLEY.—Nancy S. Cooley, at Farmington, Iowa, November 5, 1916, aged 80 years; death was the result of burns received when her home burned the night of October 23, 1916. She bore her pains uncomplainingly. She was baptized June 21, 1896, by Elder F. M. Weld, who with Robert Warnock on the same date confirmed her. She was a sister of George W. McCrary, congressman several times from First District of Iowa and later Secretary of War in President Hayes's cabinet. Funeral held in Saints' church, Farmington, November 7, by James McKiernan, assisted by L. G. Holloway.

SALISBURY.—Mary Louisa Salisbury, at Burnside, Illinois, November 8, 1916, aged 48 years. She married James F. Salisbury, August 24, 1884, and he died July 5, 1915. One son, Arthur G. and wife, and one daughter Ila, 8 years old, survive. Baptized in 1894 and lived an earnest, faithful, Christian life. Her father-in-law, Elder S. J. Salisbury, and all his family greatly lament her death. Elder James McKiernan, assisted by George P. Lambert conducted the funeral in the Methodist church in Burnside, Illinois, November 11, 1916.

PARKER.—Sarah Ann Selley was born April 6, 1840, York-shire, England. Married March 9, 1862, to Hiram Parker. Baptized by David Williams, August 1, 1874. Nine children were born to them, 2 sons and 7 daughters. One son, Thomas, and 1 daughter, Estella, died in infancy. Jennie Bradford died April 30, 1886, Elizabeth George died March 15, 1903. There survive, husband, 1 son Hiram, 3 daughters Anna Ethridge, Emma Williams, and Addie Summer, 25 grandchildren, and 8 great-grandchildren. Funeral at Netawaka, Kansas, sermon by George Jenkins, and prayer by C. W. Ethridge. Interment in Netawaka Cemetery.

MCKENZIE.—Sister Clara H. Nichols McKenzie, wife of Elder John McKenzie, born 1850, Province of Quebec; died November 19, 1916. Baptized in 1872 by J. Snively. Married January 12, 1875. Sister McKenzie leaves to mourn their loss, husband, 2 sons, John and Malcomb; 2 daughters, Rachel and Pearl, 1 sister, Sister Bordman of Independence, Missouri. Her sufferings at times were great, but were borne with hopeful patience. Being isolated from branch privileges, she had the respect of a host of friends and neighbors. Funeral at home and cemetery in charge of William Flegg.

The Spirit of Christmas Cards

Whatever the form of Christmas good wishes, they will be welcome. A large collection is flattering and the most critical and cynical of us are sentimental at heart. A humble post card from our office boy gets a rise from us.

A very much bedaubed and blotted message from Boy Blue or Curlylocks will cause even the most matter-of-fact business man to see through a haze, while the original poem penned by the nine-year-old Ella Wheeler Wilcox down the street (she plays the violin and her name is Aseneth), fills our heart to overflowing. It is the personal touch that counts. It is the homemade Christmas card that goes right to the spot. How could anyone be indifferent to such tributes—such labors of love? The cheap card sent by our old negro Mammy, still faithful after many years; the Christmas greetings from Ellen, now married, and a mother of three kids—of such is the real spirit of the season.—Helena Smith-Dayton in Cartoons Magazine.

To Our Missionaries

We want to work in conjunction with you and for your interests.

The publishing concerns of the church wish to emphasize the fact that they are intensely interested in the work of proselyting. That is one of the main reasons for their existence.

The primary work of our church is to "teach all nations." We would be pleased as your business representative of the publishing interests of the church, to receive any suggestions that you think would make toward effectiveness in aiding to reach the people.

In this day of "strenuous efficiency" success can only come through the closest of cooperation.

We must learn to both preserve and conserve our energy. It can be done only by putting ourselves on a business basis commensurate with the time.

Send us the names and ages of all persons baptized by you, giving proper address. Mark those whom you would like to have receive the HERALD and Ensign and we will send both of these papers free for a month.

We are allowed to do this by the postal authorities, provided we mark the copies sent, "Sample Copy," otherwise we are not allowed to send any of our papers free.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
McClure's Great Call to Drunkards and Saloon Keepers	1185
An Excellent Opportunity	1186
Current Events	1187
Notes and Comments	1188
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
"God hath Shined," by Hubert Case	1189
Simple Lettering for the Missionary, by Lemuel D. Dyke	1194
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
An Important Event in American Methodism	1194
WOMAN'S AUXILIARY
Dr. G. L. Harrington—Mildred Rogers—Sr. S. R. Burgess.	1197
LETTER DEPARTMENT
H. W. Savage—A. Jensen—W. E. Peak—C. Edward Miller—F. G. Whipple—S. D. Allen—W. G. Elliott—Mrs. E. B. Hinton—J. N. Cox—Louis A. Serig—C. W. Prettyman—G. W. Beebe.	1202
NEWS FROM BRANCHES
Al J. Dickson—J. R. Grice—P. H. Philippin.	1203
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT

Every paper not sent as a sample copy must be to a bona fide subscriber.

That this proposition may work as effectively as possible, be sure to give the names and addresses correctly. See that both are spelled properly.

Yours for progress,
A. CARMICHAEL, Manager.

General Church Directory

First Presidency: Frederick M. Smith, president, Box 255, Independence, Missouri. Elbert A. Smith, counselor, 125 North Mulberry Street, Lamoni, Iowa.

Presiding Bishopric: Benjamin R. McGuire, Independence, Missouri. Quorum of Twelve: All official quorum matters to John W. Rushton, secretary, 951 West Thirty-fourth Street, Los Angeles, California.

Quorums of Seventy: Official joint quorum matter to J. F. Mintun, 1205 Filmore Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

Church Historian: Heman C. Smith, historian, Room 10, 202 North Walnut Street, Lamoni, Iowa.

Church Recorder: Statistical reports of branches, certificates of baptisms and blessings, all membership data, to C. I. Carpenter, recorder, 202 South Walnut Street, Lamoni, Iowa.

Church Secretary: General Conference credentials, clergy permits, general licenses, correspondence, etc., to R. S. Salyards, secretary, 718 West Main Street, Lamoni, Iowa.

Old Folks' Homes: (Lamoni) Send remittances, applications for entrance, etc., to R. J. Lambert, secretary-treasurer, 302 West Main Street, Lamoni, Iowa.

Children's Home: Send remittances, applications, etc., to R. J. Lambert, secretary-treasurer, 302 West Main Street, Lamoni, Iowa.

Graceland College: Send remittances, applications for entrance, etc., to J. A. Gunsolley, manager and treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa.

Publishing Houses: Herald Publishing House, 202 North Walnut Street, Lamoni, Iowa; Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. Order all church books of nearest house. Australian Mission: Standard Publishing House, 65 Nelson Street, Rozelle, New South Wales, Australia. Address all matter for publication in "Saints' Herald" to Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

No Alum—No Phosphate

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY. The development of the latter-day work is put into story form, and offers the reader an opportunity of getting into intimate, personal touch with events. "Frances," has put life into her book; but the "human element" is saved from dominance by the spirituality of the work. No. 375, cloth$1.00

THE TWO-STORY BOOK. Two stories leading the reader to Latter Day Saintism, by Elbert A. Smith and Mary Le-land Carter. There is sufficient action in these gospel tales to interest the reader from a human standpoint, and it is only a step from the humanity of the book to the divinity of it. No. 372, cloth55c

The Woman's Auxiliary Year Book

FOR 1916-1918

This book contains necessary information for those engaged in the Woman's Auxiliary work of the church. Every sister should get one. Price 20c. 35-tf Herald Publishing House, Lamoni,

Iowa, or Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

Order from your nearest house to save postage.

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

BOOK OF MORMON LECTURES.—Are you a student? Here is something for your faculties to wrestle with. The author, H. A. Stebbins, has, with comprehensive outlook, embodied in these lectures a wealth of archæological facts corroborative of the Book of Mormon narrative, dug from works unknown to the public prior to its publication, and from others published since that time. The statements in these lectures are made in such unaffected plainness and simplicity of language as to carry conviction to any normally unprejudiced mind. No. 51, cloth$.75

HIS FIRST VENTURE AND THE SEQUEL.—

A story by Estella Wight, editor of Stepping Stones and the "Religio's Arena." It tells about a country boy who was led astray by the lure of the city, but came back at last to loved ones—and the realization that "homely goodness" is the best thing after all. No. 369, cloth$.60

CHRISTMAS IS COMING

Why not include a few good books in your list of presents? If you desire it, our Book Service Department will help you—free.

FOR SALE 62 1-2 acres in Decatur County, close to Leon. Cheap for cash.

A. F. HENDERSON

Garretson, South Dakota

For Sale or Trade

Our convenient residence on a corner near the Saints' Church in Lamoni, Iowa. West front. In the basement are 4 rooms. First floor: 4 rooms on the south, 3 rooms on the north.

Adjoining the kitchen is a wash house. Second floor: 3 sleeping rooms and a modern large bathroom, and a store room. Heated by hot water furnace, eleven radiators. Electric lights.

Town water and sewer, also a well and cistern with pumps.

There is room on the land for one or two more houses. Has fruits, apples, peaches, strawberries, raspberries, grapes. Black walnut shade trees. Hardy flowering shrubs, evergreens, climbing vines, etc.

Also a 4-room house west part of town.

JOHN SMITH

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 63

LAMONI, IOWA, DECEMBER 13, 1916

NUMBER 50

Editorial

A CUP OF WATER FROM FLOOD TIDE

A certain celebrated actor was entertaining a friend at Santa Monica. The friend was a faddist and his latest fad was to drink a glass of sea water from the incoming tide once each day. This was supposed to cure his indigestion.

The two were walking along the beach one morning, and the friend had just finished his glass of water. With the predisposition of faddists to go to the extreme he looked longingly at the empty glass and said, "I wonder if I might take another."

The actor looked at the inrolling waste of waters and replied: "Well, I don't think that it would be missed."

There is no questioning the all-sufficiency of the inrushing tide. It has all old ocean's bulk and power behind it. The only question was as to the capacity and needs of the man.

There is never any question as to the power and sufficiency of God's blessing in every realm. In all things it is adequate to the willingness of the individual to receive his capacity to take and use.

The law in spiritual things as well as in temporal is that every man shall receive according to his needs and wants, inasmuch as his wants are just.

That must be what Paul had in mind when he said that every man should receive the manifestation of the Spirit, but each in his own way and measure:

Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh in all. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues: but all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will. For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.—1 Corinthians 12: 4-13.

God had this in mind when he said: "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them." The gifts of God are adequate to the needs of every man, yes, even to his wants, when they are not unjust. Each man may receive in abundance, nor does he thereby perceptibly diminish the flood tide or impoverish any other human being. There is no room for jealousy among those who walk by the side of the incoming tide.

And there is a beauty and glory in the typically Latter Day Saint thought that the tide is still setting in every day. Just as it did in the days of Paul, or in the days of which it is written:

Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual rock that followed them: and that rock was Christ.—1 Corinthians 10: 1-4.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

AN EDUCATIONAL ATMOSPHERE

A Government educational commission recently conducted a survey of the higher institutions of learning in Iowa. Press comment on the result of this survey is varied and interesting. Among other things this commission advises the smaller colleges without sufficient endowment to insure running expenses, to do the very thing Graceland College has already successfully done—specialize on a two-year course and become junior colleges. This move on the part of Graceland is meeting with the approval of all who become acquainted with the results.

But there is another phase which is also worthy of serious thought—the atmosphere a college establishes in a community. The presence of a college and its activities creates an interest in education that extends far beyond the confines of its contiguous territory.

The incentive to secure a better education—and as a result become more useful to the community—that comes from such a school is very noticeable.

In the slums of the great cities, people either adapt themselves to their conditions and draw their ideals from what they see about them, or else they become dissatisfied and seek to change their environment. It is only a natural consequence that a gang of street urchins should strive to emulate the champion local pugilist or the soft-fingered gambler they see so often. A community loses woefully from such influences and conditions.

The youth who resides within the influence of a worthy institution of learning is brought into contact with its faculty and students. The combined intellectual and spiritual influence these people exert extends into the daily lives and ideals of the young, and a community is better in every way because of it.

Imbibing the spirit of progress thus engendered, those who are thus influenced are not content until they have gone further in educational work. A thirst for knowledge is created that must be satisfied, and is.

No one can say where the church as a people might not be to-day, had its early and God-given ideals been carried out. Had the textbooks been written, the university been established, and the other educational work begun been carried on to enable the people to appreciate and understand equality and its results, the church might have been ready for a redeemed Zion long ago. Since we have been the losers from this neglect in the past, we should use to the best advantage what we have now.

Since Graceland is now a junior college, giving only the first two years of college work, there still remain a required two years of school attendance elsewhere to receive a university education.

Some figures in the survey indicate to a degree how well colleges and universities are being attended. For instance, Decatur County (in which is Lamoni and Graceland College) sends to college 145 students during the year. Ringgold County, on the west, sent 66; Clark County on the north, only 57; while the county on the east, Wayne, did better with 124. This is a natural result. As preachers of the gospel, we hope to instill within the minds of our hearers a desire for better living, better ideals, better service to our fellow men. We realize that the change must come from within to be effective and permanent. We seek to establish a religious atmosphere. As teachers in schools we have similar ideals.

We are proud of our church college. May Graceland's influence extend far and wide. Many may succeed without her aid, but very many more will rise to greater heights of extended usefulness with it. While academic and special training is not sufficient of itself, it certainly has a very important place among us, as numerous instances testify.

To satisfy the craving for a comprehension of general developments all about us, we must have trained as well as consecrated teachers. The membership as well as the ministry must be acquainted with the new and important movements. We must all learn to work with more efficiency. The educational atmosphere engendered by our church college is a valuable one. We are glad the commission's figures brought it to our attention in this manner.

E. D. MOORE.

A WORD TO OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Since we are all working together—contributors and editors—to make the HERALD a valuable medium for every member, we should have a common understanding on which to work.

The editors do now and have always appreciated the suggestions received from various sources, using them whenever possible, so it might be helpful to our writers for us to make a few brief suggestions for their benefit. However, they are few, for we have little to complain of and the following is really offered more for future contributors than to present writers who have learned these minor details.

Each writer who contributes to our publications should exercise great care in quoting from other works. Where possible, quote from the original, following very carefully the wording, punctuation, and style. Printers' usage allows certain minor changes in spelling, and style, but ordinarily each house has a different set of rules on this subject. We urge especial caution in taking statements of any kind from their natural setting when to do so might pervert their meaning or misrepresent the author.

All articles in the church publications should be free from errors in quotations and interpretation, so they may be used anywhere and on any occasion without embarrassment. Verify quotations when possible.

Be careful to write and spell as correctly as possible, especially proper names. We can correct ordinary spelling, but the names of people and places may be unfamiliar to us and compel us to follow your spelling. None of us likes to have his name spelled wrong. Avoid abbreviations as much as possible. Say what needs saying as briefly as possible.

While we appreciate typewritten articles and letters, we give as careful attention to those written by hand. We wish our readers to know, however, that many of the errors noted in these columns are the result of a misreading of some one's handwriting. Write as plainly as possible and on only one side of the sheet. If you use a typewriter never use less than double space—if you write by hand, don't crowd it. We must know the name of the contributor even though it is not to appear with the article. At present we have some anonymous contributions that we might correspond about with the authors if we knew who had sent them in.

The following from a recent issue of the Deseret News points out still another phase worth noting, as we have the same trouble:

Again it becomes necessary to remind correspondents of the need of brevity in letters which they send to The News for publication; and the reminder will serve to explain their disappointment to some who have failed to see their communications in print. The editor's desk at this moment has no less than seven letters of at least a column in length, generally well written and on topics of timely importance; but it must be obvious to any thoughtful person that it would be unreasonable and impossible to devote the equivalent of a whole page to to-day's issue to matters of this kind.

It is almost never necessary to consume a column of space in writing upon any subject by way of contributing to public information on a matter under discussion. The long letter also scares the reader. Variety of mental food, as with that of a physical nature, is preferable to a single, heavy, ponderous portion of the same thing. In a word, the short letter is not only more likely to be printed than the long one, but also to be read, and this is the important consideration. Writers should remember also that if they depend upon the editor to cut their effusions to the limits of his space, they are likely to be dissatisfied with his performance of the operation. Theirs is the privilege to write and rewrite and condense until there is no chance for further improvement, his is merely to exercise or eliminate. The best messages to the people are the briefest, just as the most precious articles are wrapped in the smallest packages.

We welcome your contributions—the more the better—and we will give them all careful attention; however, an effort to follow the instructions above will be appreciated and you will be better satisfied with the result.

HERALD EDITORS.

CURRENT EVENTS

ENORMOUS EXPLOSION IN RUSSIA.—It is reported that a thousand people were blown to atoms in the explosion of an ammunition factory at Lasatannya, Russia, on the 9th.

PROTEST DEPORTATION OF BELGIANS.—The state department has sent a note of protest to the German Government regarding the deportation of Belgians from their homes to various parts of the German Empire. It is urged that this is a violation of international law and humane principles.

CONGRESS CONVENES.—On December 4 Congress reassembled in its sixty-fourth session. The three measures to be considered first are: The District of Columbia prohibition bill; immigration bill, and the corrupt practices measure. Eleven bills aimed at the high cost of living have been introduced. The secretary of the treasury estimates that it will require the sum of $1,654,819,654 for expenses the next fiscal year.

NEW BRITISH WAR CABINET.—David Lloyd-George has succeeded Herbert H. Asquith as premier of Great Britain, following the latter's resignation. What is officially known as the war cabinet is now made up of Lloyd-George, Lord Milner, Earl Curzon, Andrew Bonar Law, and Arthur Henderson. Others who have been considered as in this cabinet are called heads of departments.

EUROPEAN WAR.—The Teutons have taken Bucharest, the Rumanian capital, before the war known as "The City of Joy." In addition, a large number of Rumanian troops and supplies have been captured. The Teutons engaged in the Rumanian offensive are being withdrawn and sent south to attack the entente allies in Macedonia. The losses of shipping by German submarines are becoming a very serious matter to the British and suggests a grave crisis, according to prominent British officials. Other minor activities are reported from the other fronts.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

"OUR CHRISTMAS OFFERING."—Under this heading in the Original Articles department Brother McGuire, Presiding Bishop, is making an appeal in this issue to general church membership as well as to the Sunday schools. Branch presidents would do well to present the suggestions in the article to their congregations, that no one overlook this opportunity for doing good.

BETTER CONDITIONS FOR THE INDIANS.—Especially good results in the work among the Indians during the past year are reported by Cato Sells to the Secretary of the Interior. Among the results are enumerated a decreased death rate, especially among infants, additional school facilities, including vocational training. A system of "competency commissions" have been visiting the homes of the Indians in a careful survey of living conditions. Three such commissions are now at work. To those considered competent for citizenship, land patents are issued, and they are released from the paternal care of the Indian Department.

ELDER ASA COCHRAN STRICKEN.—As we go to press we learn that immediately following the death of his aged mother, who was over ninety-five years of age, Elder Asa Cochran, residing at Lamoni, and well known as one of the staunch defenders of the faith for many years, was stricken with apoplexy and died the same evening—the 11th. Particulars will be given later.

FAVOR SIMPLE LIFE.—At a recent congress of the surgeons of North America, it was the consensus of opinion that high living is responsible for more operations than is the life led by poor persons. It was asserted that the rich are more subject than others to cancer of the stomach. Some specialists are of the opinion that the poor would be the healthiest class were it not for tuberculosis. Since pure air is so free it seems to be largely a matter of making proper use of it to be free from even that.

MUNICIPAL BARGAIN SALES.—Faced with ascending prices on nearly all necessities as well as luxuries, many municipalities are seeking remedies to help the consumer. The mayor of Evansville, Indiana, is planning a series of special bargain days at the municipal market. The first day there were potatoes to be had at $1.40 a bushel, delivered, 60 cents less than the retail price. Other supplies will be produced and sold at reasonable prices. For instance 300 rabbits were sold in one day at 15 cents each. Eggs, butter and even coal are to be handled in this manner.

GERMAN FOOD SITUATION.—Reports of all kinds are printed, concerning the result of the blockade on Germany's food supplies. The following from an associated press correspondent appears to be authentic and at least is interesting:

What, then, it may be asked, are the Germans eating? The answer is, bread, potatoes and other vegetables, one half pound of meat weekly when it can be obtained, and fish, canned, fresh and smoked. The disappearance of the legumes—lentils, peas and beans—has been especially felt by the poorer people. A few beans and peas are occasionally to be had, but only a negligible quantity. Lentils, of which the Germans were very fond, disappeared in the first weeks of the war.

FASTING BENEFICIAL.—In his new book, The Control of Hunger in Health and Disease, Professor Charlson of the department of physiology not only indorses fasting as a physiological aid, but goes still farther and asserts that the mental clarity and general rejuvenation following a total abstinence from food are equal to a vacation trip for a month in the mountains. The religious fast is not merely a fad to be observed by fanatics, but by all who desire clearer minds and deeper devotional thoughts. God's provisions for the spiritual needs of the human family are based on principles that are bound to be indorsed by thoughtful nonbelievers as well as religionists.

"THE ALMIGHTY CHURCH."—The "Chief Constructor" of the new organization called "The Almighty Church" says that all he needs is "700,000 faithful and true men," and "700,000 wise women," with a million dollars cash for expense fund, and he will establish the mountains of the Lord's house in the tops of the mountains, etc., in one day. And incidentally, send a dollar for a set of five letters that he has written to convince all nations that he can do it. These words, found in the Book of Mormon, are significant: "They began to build up churches unto themselves, to get gain." From the advertising used concerning this so-called church, we are afraid one essential word has been omitted in the title. Insert the word dollar before the word church, and you'll have our suggestion.

FOUR PREACHERS AND AN AUTO.—Here is an anecdote that seems too good to be lost. Four of our Lamoni brethren were making an auto trip from Independence to Lamoni recently. Below Cameron, while running at a high rate of speed they lost a front wheel. The car, a heavy one, plowed down the road one hundred and fifty feet and came to a stop with no one injured. The garage man to whom they went for assistance and repairs made some inquiries, something like this: "How fast were you running?" "Oh, about forty miles an hour." "And you didn't go in the ditch?" "No." "And you didn't turn over?" "No." "Well, gentlemen, some one in the party must be in favor with the Creator." "Well," replied one of the party, "you might not think it, but all four of us are preachers." "Great heavens, that explains it then."

SISTER HORTON'S EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY.—In behalf of our many readers throughout the church we extend congratulations to Sister Abbie A. Horton, of Independence, Missouri, as she celebrates her eightieth birthday. She has been connected with the church forty years, and during that time has been very actively engaged in many important lines of work. For twenty years she has been a correspondent for the HERALD, for the same length of time she was a member of the church choir at the Stone Church at Independence. For fifteen years she acted as secretary of the Daughters of Zion and the Woman's Auxiliary when the name was changed. As historian of the Independence Stake Sunday school association she worked eleven years, and as assistant church recorder at Independence ten years. She still has a clear mind and comparatively strong body, attending the meetings of the Saints and alert to their meaning. While you are yet among us, Sister Horton, we all join in an expression of our appreciation of your valiant services. May your remaining days be happy ones.

Avoid fads, and the too much and too little; the pushing to injurious extremes on either side. After a lifetime of meat eating at every meal, I find an almost complete vegetarianism agrees with me best and conduces to mental and physical vigor; but I am watchful.—William F. Waugh, M. D., in The Medical World.

Original Articles

OUR CHRISTMAS OFFERING

Soon the Christian world will be commemorating the event that revealed God's love for man, the gift of his only begotten Son, "that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have eternal life." We are reminded of the time when, recognizing this token of his infinite love, we were begotten as children of the Most High. We recall the gentle Spirit implanted, the tender sympathies awakened, and the mind of Christ is aroused in us and finds joyous expression in the presenting of gifts to our loved ones, much more so in gifts to those whose need we sense. How often are bare rooms warmed, shivering bodies clothed, parched lips moistened, and the hearts of hungry children, careworn mothers and almost discouraged fathers cheered by those scarcely better situated dividing with them in their want. How, of what quality, in what measure dwelleth the Spirit of Christ with us?

Let us pause while we think of our calling, consider our opportunities and meditate upon our reward.

We are all made happy to know that those engaged in raising the Sunday school Christmas Offering are striving to make it exceed the amount received any previous year. The good they are doing we cannot estimate, but we do know that it puts into the hands of those called to search out the poor and needy the means to supply their wants at a time of year when suffering caused by lack is made more acute. The joyous spirit and happy smile of the children who contribute their pennies is reflected in the faces of those, both old and young, who receive of their gifts.

With the coming of the new year come new aspirations, new ambitions and resolutions. Shall the impulse for the better find its source only in the example of the children? Shall our possibilities be limited to and our advance be measured only by the amount they give? May we not have a Christmas Offering from every member of the church? During the past year we have been privileged to visit Kirtland where the latter-day message was cradled; have spoken in the Temple there where the voice of the Holy One was heard. We have mingled with the children and old folks at the homes in Kirtland, Lamoni, and Independence, invoked the blessing of God upon the distressed at the Sanitarium and talked over their problems with those equipping themselves for better service at Graceland. We have also many times been informed of the limitations placed upon our missionary force because of lack of sufficient funds to give them the means to spread the gospel as far and widely as they otherwise might. For several years I was engaged in local work and know the constant demands made upon the purse of the Saints; I also know the increased blessing received by those who, perceiving the need, willingly make sacrifice for the work's sake. I recall the prayer of our Savior supplicating our heavenly Father to give him the joy had with him before the world was, and I have thought the children contributing so freely and gladly to the Christmas Offering, from which they expect no immediate return, experience a joy akin to this. "Unless we become as little children we can in no wise enter into the kingdom of God."

Let us pay our tithes. If there are any who desire to make a consecration or a special offering for any of the particular needs above enumerated, the Bishopric will be pleased to receive it and apply it as you may designate. A generous response from all will go far toward furnishing an amount sufficient to meet our obligations, to make suitable repairs upon the Temple, necessary improvements at the homes and supply our missionaries' requirements,—urgent needs that positively should no longer be neglected.

Our short experience in the Presiding Bishopric has been freighted with trials and blessings that have intensified our love for the gospel, and with you we feel to offer at this festive season a more fully consecrated service for the salvation of mankind. We feel that the magnanimous effort the Saints have already made this conference year is but an index of the more earnest and devoted service of the future which will commend them to the grace of an ever loving Father who increases opportunities and adds blessings commensurate with our ability to appreciate and enjoy.

What shall our Christmas Offering be?

BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE.

Presiding Bishop.

* * * * *

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Some one has said, in advising young authors: "Never write anything if you can possibly resist the inclination," the theory no doubt being that when one has reached that point, the production might be readable. Assuming this to be good advice, I believe the time has come with me when the inclination may no longer be quieted, and having suffered in silence while wiser and more mature authors have discussed the subject of religious education, I hope this attempt may prove fruitful in the way of casting the light of truth upon this question which seems to have been so much misunderstood.

Let it be understood that the following is submitted in all kindness of feeling toward those who differ in opinion, the sole object being to present the truth in regard to some of the conditions under which the church is attempting to carry on her work, that the truth may make us free not only from misunderstanding but from one of the greatest evils we face as a church today—the evil of unpreparedness as Saints, as local workers, and as ministers for Christ.

It seems a very strange thing indeed that men and women are willing to give their lives completely, entirely, and freely into the gospel service, willing and glad to make any sacrifice for the good of the cause, and yet are not willing to allow our young men and young women to be taught that gospel within the walls of Graceland College, and are not willing they should be aided there to a more comprehensive understanding of the gospel, its true meaning and practical value, and be given instruction which will fit them to take up the gospel work early in life and become instruments in God's hands for the attracting of souls toward this plan of life that leads to a land of eternal happiness.

FIT TO RECEIVE INSPIRATION FROM GOD

It is true, as some have said, that God cannot or will not use a man who has filled himself with worldly wisdom to the exclusion of God's unchanging truths; It is true that a chair of religious education is not an essential part of salvation. It is true that the things of God cannot be fathomed by the wisdom of the world. It is true perhaps that none who have accepted the gospel and are walking within its light will fail to attain salvation by reason of not having this chair of religious education in Graceland. No thinking person could doubt these facts. We might, however, ask the question, What bearing do they have upon the teaching of the gospel, and why should they restrain us from teaching in Graceland, or anywhere else, better ways and methods of interesting humanity in its saving truths? I believe the kind of instruction anticipated in the resolution recently offered in the conference will, above all else, emphasize in the minds of the young the necessity of keeping mentally, physically, and spiritually fit to receive inspiration of God. It will eliminate "worldly wisdom" in the sense the term is used by opponents of this praiseworthy project. It will give us young men who have learned how to approach God and mankind in an intelligent way, and endowed with power from on high, to the end that the essential principles of salvation may reach thousands of wanderers who may otherwise be lost. The things of God will be taught by men called of God and inspired of God and hence by the wisdom of God, not the wisdom of man.

SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS ANSWERED

There seems to have been a great misunderstanding on this subject, but surely there are none who think the men whom God uses to direct the affairs of his church are going to sanction the teaching of heresy or the teaching of creeds of the reformation either in Graceland or outside Graceland. Then why all the profitless argument about the theologians of the world being unaccepted of God?

Have any of us hungered and thirsted after righteousness and not been filled? For those of us within the church who have presented ourselves to God in a proper spirit, I answer, No! For untold thousands within whom we have utterly failed to create that hungering, for want of more workers and better prepared workers, I answer, Yes!

Has our ministry been deficient in the proclamation of the gospel? Yes; the church, including the ministry, must have been deficient, otherwise God would not have said, "Zion might have been redeemed even now had ye kept my commandments." Have they been outclassed as ministers of Christ because of any lack of theological education? If the religious education proposed for Graceland is meant here, I answer yes. We have comparatively few men who are able to sway an audience of outsiders against the ordinary popular minister, though our position is founded in the rock of truth and our men are inspired of God to the full extent of their preparation to understand and receive his inspiration.

SUCCESS IN STUDY AND PRAYER

God is abundantly able to place the words of truth in any man's mouth, using him something after the fashion of a ventriloquist and his puppets, but that is not his plan in proclaiming the gospel any more than it is his plan to take away the agency of man and force him to obey the gospel after he has heard it. The minister is left to work out his destiny just the same as any member of the kingdom, and he will be successful to just the extent that he is studious and prayerful, or prayerful and studious (both are essential), and to the extent that he attains a plane of practical and spiritual knowledge, and understanding of the gospel and how to reach men with it, from which he can effectively present its truths to his fellow men in the world and in the church, and in a way that will allow them a real chance to judge it on its merits.

Consider carefully the next time you attend a preaching service, trying to place yourself in the position of a nonmember hearing for the first time what we have to offer as a plan of life and salvation. I make the assertion without fear that a test may bring contradiction, that at least five of every ten, though they repeat the test several times, would count it an unjust judgment if God should condemn them for rejecting the gospel after hearing. Why? Because it might be claimed the speaker had not presented the thing you now recognized as the gospel. I do not believe that God will condemn anyone who is open to the truth but fails to embrace it by reason of its not being presented clearly. It will simply be necessary in some age of the world to preach the word to that man again, and we may then realize, perhaps too late, that part of the work we have attempted here must be done all over again because we have failed to attain the religious education necessary to successful sowing in the vineyard of God.

THE NEED IS A GREAT ONE

God forbid that I should try to detract one whit from the excellent work done by God's servants! A great work has been done! A great work is being done! But Saints, let us not lose sight of the great work that must yet be done! Let us not flatter ourselves into the erroneous conclusion that we have reached the height of usefulness that God requires at our hands ere the redemption of Zion can be accomplished. Let us not try to hide the fact that, outside of a few larger branches and the stakes of Zion, there is a deplorable shortage in the ranks of qualified workers. Even they acknowledge a great need unfilled. Hundreds of the smaller branches are struggling along, faces turned toward the common goal, but with hands tied and feet shackled in the irons of unpreparedness and inefficiency. Many of them have not men who can fill the offices of the branch successfully. They have few speakers who are able to keep the members of their own church awake during a forty-minute discourse, much less create an interest among the neighbors of their community. They have few men who can so guide their Religio and Sunday school societies that those societies may abundantly fill the need for which they were designed and organized. They have few men or women who are qualified to direct the work of various uplift movements which have become a part of the work of our locals, and which under proper guidance will become a wonderful factor in the perfecting of the Saints.

These are good men and good women, honest in heart, having good intentions and good desires. They are good material, but undeveloped. How may they hope to develop others?

These are the ones who should hail with joy the project under consideration, of furnishing a course of instruction in Graceland with the object of training workers for usefulness in the various auxiliaries of the church. These are the ones who would gladly send one or more of their members to Graceland, there to attain the advantages of a college education and a religious education, that those members might return not only fired with the desire to make their local institutions great powers for good in the church and in the world, but also with an intelligent working idea of how to go at the job. And this not by reason of any knowledge of heresy, atheism, or Darwinism they would have gained at Graceland, but because they would have been trained in a knowledge of the true religion and how to use that knowledge in the service of others. They would have learned how a man must apply himself before he may hope to be recognized by God, before he may hope to reach a state of purity that will merit inspiration from God, and before he may hope to develop in intelligence to a point which will enable him to work under God's inspiration to the best good of the church and his fellow men.

These are some of the things Graceland will teach them, and I am satisfied there is no cause to think she will ever teach anything that would fail to uplift and encourage and develop the best that lies within those who shall seek knowledge at her fountains.

BETTER KNOWLEDGE OF GOSPEL WILL BRING GREATER POWER

Theology as understood and taught in some institutions of the land will perhaps not better our condition, neither will it relieve us of inefficiency as ministers, as local workers, or as Saints. But a better knowledge of the divine science known as the gospel of Jesus Christ, that God through his servants has revealed to mankind, will make of us a greater power in God's hands toward the completing of his work here and the redemption of Zion. Our boys and our young men must take up the work of the fathers. Our girls and our young women must assume the tasks of the mothers. We are divinely told that the young are called. They are already called. Many of them will be chosen. Will they be prepared?

Graceland stands with an outstretched hand offering aid in religious education, offering aid to the young man or young woman who wants to develop and use every talent and opportunity in effective and acceptable service to God and to mankind. Shall we accept her kind proffer, or shall we say, "Because the science of earth has failed, we will have none of the science of God, except it come from the pulpit through men unspoiled by education"?

GEORGE A. KELLEY.

* * * * *

Tobacco users show weakening of the moral fiber, enfeeblement of will, diminished sense of personal responsibility and social obligation, lowered efficiency. He may hotly deny his individual inclusion in the foregoing, but in any smoker all these symptoms are readily demonstrable at some period.—New York Medical Journal.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON ANSWERED BY ITS OWN EVIDENCE.—NO. 1

BY T. J. SMITH

The chief object the writer has in view in placing these comments before the readers of the HERALD, is to bring prominently to the front and steadfastly maintain the divine inspiration of the Book of Mormon. This will be done by rendering plain, simple and reasonable explanations of those difficult and seemingly impossible, or at least improbable, statements frequently found in the book; which statements have puzzled the heads of many firm believers in the book, and been a heavy cudgel in the hands of its enemies.

The quotations used will be from the late authorized edition of the Book of Mormon.

THE CASE OF KING OMER

And the Lord warned Omer in a dream that he should depart out of the land; wherefore Omer departed out of the land with his family, and traveled many days and came over and passed by the hill of Shim, and came over by the place where the Nephites were destroyed, and from thence eastward, and came to a place which was called Ablom, by the seashore. . . . And it came to pass that Nimrah gathered together a small number of men, and fled out of the land, and came over and dwelt with Omer.—Ether 4: 3, 4, 10.

Now, King Omer occupied away down in Central America. The place where the Nephites were destroyed is supposed to be at the Hill Cumorah in the western part of New York State; and Ablom on the seashore near where Boston now stands. So according to this statement, he must have traveled all the way from Central America to the western part of New York State, thence eastward to the seashore; a distance of over four thousand miles. (He was to make this flight to escape the jurisdiction of his son Jared, who had dethroned him.) The disbeliever reads this statement, views the circumstances surrounding the case, shakes his head in doubt and exclaims, "Impossible, or if not impossible, wholly improbable," then aims a direct blow at the divine inspiration of the book.

Many attempts have been made by believers in its divine inspiration to reconcile the difficulty. Some of them (with bumps of credulity highly developed), have taken the ground that such a journey was possible and that King Omer did actually make it. Others, for the same purpose, have thought to shift the Hill Cumorah about three thousand miles farther south, to southern Mexico or northern Central America; while a third party attempts to surmount the troubles by duplicating the Hill Cumorah; having one in New York State and another down in southern Mexico; and it was at the latter place where the Nephites were destroyed.

We will endeavor to show by these comments that King Omer never made any such wild and miraculous journey; that there was no occasion, whatever, for him to have done so; and further that there is no occasion for shifting the Hill Cumorah farther south or doubling it to meet the trouble; and by doing this we will close the mouth of the skeptic and leave the divine inspiration of the book wholly unimpaired.

The great trouble with those who have attempted to remove the difficulty has been in locating the time and place of the destruction of the Nephites, referred to here by Moroni. They have universally placed it at their final destruction at the Hill Cumorah. They should remember, however, that there were several local destructions of the Nephites. There was one at the city Boaz and another at the city Jordan. (Book of Mormon 2: 22, 23, 28-34.) So the important point to settle is, which one of these different destructions did Moroni intend, the final one at Cumorah, or one of these local ones? Have we no way to determine? Certainly. It can be done comparing or paralleling a few items of history in regard to the movements of the Nephite army under Mormon's generalship, in a certain locality, with those of King Omer in the same place. In both their movements the Hill Shim is mentioned, so we will draw the comparison between the events that transpired in that vicinity, as touching both parties.

We will first note those of the Nephites under the leadership of Mormon the great general and prophet, as related by himself in his account of "things he had both seen and heard." To be more explicit and that the reader may have a better understanding of the situation, we will go a little ways back and give a few items of history regarding this noted man.

According to the account given, he was born A. D. 310. Being an apt child, and somewhat of a sober mind, and of large stature, he was placed in command of the army when only sixteen years of age; (Book of Mormon 1: 16, 22) and for thirty-six years, or from A. D. 362, he led it through many fierce and bloody struggles, sometimes to victory, oftentimes to defeat. About the expiration of that time, on account of the extreme wickedness of the Nephites, their boastful spirit and their determination to carry the war into the Lamanite country contrary to his commands, he took an oath that he would be their leader no longer (Book of Mormon 1: 76; 2: 26), and for thirteen years, or until the year 375, he adhered to this oath. About the expiration of this time, seeing that the Lamanites were going to overthrow the land, he went to the Hill Shim and took up all the sacred records that had been deposited there by Ammoron fifty-five years before, repents of the oath he had taken not to lead the army any longer, and went and offered himself as its commander again. His offer was gladly accepted. (Book of Mormon 2: 25, 26.) At the head of the army he led it a little ways northward to the city of Jordan where he made a bold and determined stand against the enemy (verse 28) and for five successive years he maintained this position against them. But at the expiration of this time, or in the year A. D. 380, the Lamanites came upon his army in such overwhelming numbers that they did literally tramp the Nephites under foot, and all were destroyed except those who could outrun the Lamanites. (Anyone knowing the running qualities of the Lamanites can readily judge that but very few escaped.) (Verses 32, 33.) Mormon, describing this great destruction of his army, says,

And now behold, I Mormon, do not desire to harrow up the souls of men in casting before them such an awful scene of blood and carnage as was laid before mine eyes.—Verse 34.

After this great and destructive battle, Mormon gathers up the remnant of his army and people, passes on northward and makes arrangements with the Lamanite king for the final struggle at Cumorah. (Book of Mormon 3: 1-6.)

Now regarding King Omer. As before stated, he occupied somewhere down in Central America, was dethroned by his son Jared, warned in a dream by the Lord to flee out of the land, which he did, and after many days came over and passed by the Hill Shim (the reader will note here that this was the same hill where Mormon afterward took up the records deposited there by Ammoran), thence over to the place where the Nephites were destroyed (and the language would indicate that this was but a very short distance), and from there eastward to the seashore at Ablom.

Now the points in this historical comparison we wish the reader to note particularly, are these: Mormon goes to the Hill Shim, takes up the sacred records, and then takes command of the army again, leads it a short ways northward to the city of Jordan, where it was almost completely annihilated by the Lamanites. King Omer in his flight from his son Jared's jurisdiction, passes by the same Hill Shim, over to the place where the Nephites were destroyed, then eastward to the seashore.

We think comment on the above is wholly useless, as the dullest mind will readily see that the point where King Omer turned eastward to the seashore, would be about the place where the Nephites were destroyed in the great battle of A. D. 380.

We will now endeavor to show that there was no occasion, whatever, for King Omer to make any such wild and improbable journey as some have ascribed to him.

By consulting the genealogical line of the Jaredite nation, we discover this fact, that King Omer's was the fourth generation after the Jared brothers

—the founders of that nation—or to state it in different terms, there were only three generations between the Jared brothers and King Omer; they were those of Orihah, Kib and Shule, so he was the great grandson of Jared. (Ether 1: 6.)

According to the history given, an average Jaredite generation would be about fifty-three years. Ether gives the number of generations of the nation at thirty. It existed here in America for sixteen hundred years, from B. C. 2200 to B. C. 600, so an average generation would be as stated above.

Now considering the short time they had occupied here in America up to King Omer's time, and the small number in the colony when they landed, it is not reasonable to suppose that their migrations or settlement of the land had extended beyond the limits of Central America, that is if they settled it anyway solidly, and that is the way they did. Then there was a war broke out in the third generation in the time of Kib and lasted up to King Omer's time. (Ether 3: 41-66.) And further, while King Omer was in exile a war arose between one Akish and his sons, in which the whole nation was destroyed, except thirty souls and those who were with King Omer. (Ether 4: 13, 14.)

We mention these items of history to show that the spread of the colony could not reasonably have extended beyond the limits of Central America. And if this be true, all that vast country lying northward from Central America to the great lakes, and eastward to the seashore, a distance of about four thousand miles, could not have been anything else than a vast, uninhabited wilderness, untrod by the foot of man, consisting of mountains, lakes, impenetrable forests, swamps and impassible rivers.

Now, in view of these conditions surrounding the case, we will ask the question, why should King Omer attempt to make such a wild and unheard-of journey to escape the jurisdiction of his son, when he, no doubt, could have done so by traveling only a few hundred miles? There was not the least occasion for him to have done so.

By taking this view of the difficulty, we smooth out this rough place, shorten up King Omer's journey to a reasonable and believable length, close the mouth of the skeptic and leave the divine inspiration of the Book of Mormon still intact.

We will say in conclusion that almost in a similar manner, by diving down into the matter and rooting out the facts in the case, we can shorten up the long and miraculous journey ascribed to the forty-three men sent out by King Limhi to find the land of Zarahemla (Mosiah 9: 166-170). This will be the subject of our next article.

(To be continued.)

Of General Interest

THE EPISCOPAL GENERAL CONVENTION

On October 11 the forty-fourth triennial General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church opened its sessions at Saint Louis. The convention sits as two houses—the House of Bishops and the House of Deputies. Each has a veto upon the other.

The primary object of the convention is to make laws for the Protestant Episcopal Church. Such legislation takes the form of canons, operative at once, and amendments of the constitution, which require confirmation by later conventions.

To the convention come all the bishops of the church to sit in the upper house and some six hundred clerical and lay deputies to sit in the lower house. Each of the sixty-eight dioceses elects four clerical and four lay deputies; the twenty-three missionary districts, one lay and one clerical deputy; and the ten foreign jurisdictions have each a deputy.

The Reverend Doctor Alexander Mann was re-elected as president of the House of Deputies. Three years ago Doctor Mann won this place by only a very narrow majority over the Reverend Doctor William T. Manning, of Trinity Church, New York City. Doctor Manning is, however, not in the present convention at all. This may seem strange, for throughout generations it has been the custom for the diocese of New York to send the rector of Trinity Parish, New York City, as one of its clerical deputies. Just before last November's meeting of the New York Diocesan Convention, however, the controversy arose in the official board of missions as to whether it should or should not send delegates to the Panama Congress. In this board, of which he was a member, the rector of Trinity had led the opposition. He was against the Panama Conference. But the board overruled him and others. The fight was fresh in mind when the New York Diocesan Convention met, and in the voting for deputies to Saint Louis the Reverend Doctor Manning was defeated. Very many opposed to him ecclesiastically regret that this year's convention must be deprived of the genuine stimulus of his presence. But the spirit of Doctor Mann's address emphatically indicated that it was time to forget differences and join in a common work. After referring to the "gray shadow" of the world war "chiefly between Christian nations," he said:

Mistakes in policy can be borne and remedied, but it is my feeling that the one mistake which could not be rectified, the one corporate sin not to be forgiven, would be for a council of the Christian Church to meet at this time in any other temper than the temper of Christian brotherhood and Christian peace.

Doctor Mann's election to the presidency of the House of Deputies was coincident with the election of Bishop Gailor, of Tennessee, to the chairmanship of the House of Bishops—the first time that a southern bishop has been chosen for this office.

SOCIAL QUESTIONS AND THE CHURCH

Questions concerning modern social conditions were prominent in the early discussions of the convention. One of these was the problem of poverty.

The Reverend Howard Melish, of Brooklyn, for instance, declared, as reported:

One third, and possibly one half, of the families of wage earners earn, in the course of the year, less than enough to support them in anything like comfort. Only one fourth of the fathers are able to support their families on the bare sustenance level without income from outside sources. Consequently their families are compelled to take in boarders or crowd in tenements. Multitudes came to this country as to the land flowing with milk and honey. But the milk is skimmed and others have run off with the honey.

Others besides Mr. Melish blamed the clergy for seeming indifference to such conditions.

The other great social question before the convention was the recurrent one of divorce. Shall the Protestant Episcopal Church sanction the remarriage of the divorced? It has been its custom to permit the clergy to solemnize the remarriage of the so-called innocent party to a divorce provided that satisfactory legal evidence is presented. But a committee now reports a radical change and proposes a canon which declares that "no marriage shall be solemnized . . . between parties if either of whom has husband or wife still living, who has been divorced for any cause arising after marriage." Those who support this canon contend that in the first three centuries of the Christian Church no provision whatever was made for divorce, that the custom of the Roman Catholic Church does not sanction divorce, and that, especially in recent years, instances of collusion in the obtaining of divorces have been so numerous that the innocent should suffer in isolated cases rather than that a gigantic evil should spread over the nation. On the other hand, the opponents quote Christ's words in the fifth chapter of Saint Matthew in which he sanctioned divorce for violation of the sanctity of the marriage tie; they declare that the proposed new attitude towards divorce will not mitigate the evil, but will simply lessen the church's authority and usefulness. Though no decision has yet been made, a test vote showed that the members of the House of Deputies were divided almost exactly half and half with regard to this matter.—The Outlook for October 25, 1916.

[Upon final vote the proposed action to change the church custom was defeated. It cannot now be changed until the next General Convention, three years hence.—EDITORS HERALD.]

GAMBLING ON A COLOSSAL SCALE

Yesterday morning The Register republished from the New York Times the story of preelection betting in New York and other cities.

The New York Herald comes to the support of the astonishing figures given by the Times with this astonishing statement:

In what was pronounced emphatically the wildest and heaviest betting campaign ever waged in this city on the outcome of a presidential election, more than $6,000,000, it was calculated, was staked on the respective chances of Mr. Hughes and President Wilson.

But the World goes even higher than the Herald, putting the total for the country at $10,000,000. The World says:

The most stupendous betting campaign conducted in any election, according to old-time sportsmen, continued yesterday at the Waldorf even after, in some cases, the polls had closed. Peacock alley and the grill room were so jammed with betters and would-be betters that moving about was as difficult as in the subway in rush hours.

When we stop to consider that a campaign fund of one or two millions is enormous even for these times, it is easy to see that a national election as a betting proposition may come to have a significance for the people it has not had as a political proposition.

For if millions, running up to the tens, are to be wagered on the result, what is to keep men who are heavily interested, from putting enough money into the doubtful States to change the result?

It may be claimed that the men who make these election wagers are generally the sort who can afford to lose, and who do lose "like gentlemen." It is a sporting proposition with them just as a hat bet on election is a sporting proposition with the average citizen.

Still nobody can think of $10,000,000 wagered on the turn of a single State, as in this instance, and not have in mind a set of professionals who would not hesitate to manipulate the return for the purpose of winning.

Certainly a new interest is bound to attach to our national contests, and a new problem is bound to be presented to our national leaders, if what has happened this year is to be taken as a hint of what is to come from now on.

We have had a remarkable manifestation of one of the first effects of the sudden accession of great riches.—Des Moines Register, November 10, 1916.

Have you settled upon a plan of action for the present year that will bring you out at its close a stronger business man or woman? Or have you been so busy with trivialities, that the important things were cast aside?—Common-Sense.

The Staff

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

Music and its Influence

(Written by Mrs. W. N. Robinson, and read before the Central Religio Society, Kansas City, by Mrs. O. L. James, on a "musical night" program.)

The proper study of mankind is man, said Pope and in this study it is always our endeavor to discover the good and harmful influences under which man exists and develops.

Music, as an influence, is preeminently above all arts, in exhorting upon people a longing for higher ideals. It arouses and creates activity for a richer inner life, and each individual consciously or unconsciously, acknowledges its higher source, its divine origin, and even in this great materialistic age in which we live, we would not deny its inspiration or fail to appreciate its gifts as coming from a source greater than ourselves.

Everywhere mentality is limited, as in some of the undeveloped and savage nations, music has found its way in their lives as the only means of appeal to the divine power they feel all around them but of which they have no real knowledge—but between them and their Creator it is the connecting link, and the only means by which they can give expression to that one spark of divinity to be found in every human soul, civilized or savage.

Although this is a great period of invention and progress, yet music has kept pace with it all and its influence is even more necessary than in previous ages. It is not only now our inspiration as always, but in this busy time it is our recreation. Recreation and relaxation must be enjoyed by everyone—but not idleness—and music supplies this daily need. Its melodies are soothing—it is an influence opposed to the sordid and everyday affairs of life, lifting us out of the material and clears our befogged brains and gives full vent to our imaginations, allowing us to wander in beautiful, unexplored regions of fancy, beautifying and softening the hard places of life.

Our educators are beginning to realize the effect of music upon the development of children in the public schools. They claim it develops finer natures, makes them more sympathetic, draws out truer emotions, which when properly guided raises our standard of ideals and puts us on that plane of "Come up higher" so much desired by all.

Music has a great moral influence which cannot be overlooked. Its gifts and influences enoble—they do not debase. Music, as an art, is sometimes debased, but true music, as an influence, will appeal to the most hardened creature when sermons, lectures and even prayers will not have the least effect. Often an old familiar tune will awaken memories of childhood and cause view after view of purer, happier days to flit across the mental vision and at once arouse a disgust for the later life and bypaths into which they have fallen; and that unconscious meditation immediately starts the individual on the climb upward and leads to an abandonment of evil ways.

There are desires to forsake the evils that have overtaken them and to regain honor and integrity among their fellow men.

Music is a vehicle of self-expression; it is so often the means of beautifying and softening stern or unexpressive natures and it is the only means of causing the true chord of sympathy to ever reach the impenetrable chambers of such natures.

Music is everywhere—even in nature the poets sing of music and its power. An unknown English poet says: "The origin of all music is the very pleasant sounds which the trees of the forest do make when they grow." Poe once said: "It's the murmur that springs from the growing grass," and Byron so beautifully expresses the influence of music on nature when he says:

"There's music in the sighing of a reed
There's music in the gushing of a rill
There's music in all things, if men had ears."

And we know the source and influence of music is divine.

Music in the South Sea Islands

A few words from the South Sea Islands concerning the department of music, may not be amiss, and may be of interest to many of the Staff readers.

I believe music to be one of the keys that unlock success in these islands, because these are a musical people. I do not say an accomplished people in music, but a talented. They have had but one musical opportunity, and that is singing. I hope to say something in this letter that will suggest a thought in the mind of some one that will be profitable in some way. I read with interest the articles in the Staff columns from time to time, and I can see the progress of the musical department of the church work since the inception of the national movement a few years ago, as reflected there. It seems to me that the church is taking a forward step in many ways. For many years the church was content to sing a few hymns, supplemented by an anthem now and then; but now we have begun to realize the importance of music in missionary and pastoral work, and that department is being developed to proportions that its importance demands.

Many of the larger branches are developing the talents of their members by the study of anthems, cantatas, oratorios, etc., which they formerly overlooked, and by which they are learning to better sing the old hymns, for there is practice in such work that is not found in practicing hymns alone. I believe that every missionary should purchase a few books from which he not only can learn to sing better, but also teach a class. They will be surprised to know how they can gain favor in a community, whether in town or the country schoolhouse by teaching singing a couple of nights a week, before or after services. You can't convert a man until you have opened his heart. That is why we sing two songs before, and only one after the sermon. That is exceptionally true among this peculiar people. Brother Pitt's passport to their hearts, when he was here, was his voice of song. They never tire of telling how he used to sing, even at sea on the small boats, when all the others were lying down on deck, sick, he would be sitting up singing.

I think a singing manual edited by our musical leaders, would be a fine thing for the missionary force, and I hope that when Graceland is more able to serve the missionaries of the church, and the young men that may become missionaries, that music will be one of the branches taught.

Many of you have heard of the fame of Tahitian singers; some perhaps have heard Tahitian choruses; at least some have, for not long ago a friend wrote me that had, and he was pleased with the singing. Quite frequently choruses of natives from New Zealand, pass Tahiti on their way to the United States. From Hawaii to New Zealand, native music is practically the same. It is something different; and many might not be able to hear anything musical in it. I do not know where their music originated, or just where to classify it among the various styles of music peculiar to the various nations; yet there is something about it for which I would be loath to see it lost to the world. Some might think it an invention of their own. No; it is not. If it is original with them then it is a discovery rather than an invention, for in the true native song one hears an expression of almost every musical term and rule; the keys, chords, time, parts, etc.

I was startled at our Christmas entertainment at the island of Arutua, which was a gathering of part of two districts, to hear them change keys in the middle of an anthem: I say anthem because their native songs take the place of our anthems. They never feel that they are appropriate for prayer meeting, although the words voice gospel themes. Upon the day mentioned the program embraced sixty-eight anthems and fourteen readings, so you see we had a busy day. Some of the Saints that tire before the end of some of our musicales, should attend one here where they begin at nine a. m. and close at nine p. m., with a couple of intermissions. In another piece they read a passage of scripture in tune; that is each person read his part in his pitch, making a kind of chant. Their anthems are usually descriptive, being taken from Bible passages. Poetry is not known here. I wish that David had written the tunes as well as the words to his Psalms. Before I came here I often wondered how the Psalms could have been sung; but that has been demonstrated here, as these people very quickly put prose to tune. They make songs for all occasions. They do not write them, but just learn them orally. If they were written I wonder how many of our choirs could sight read them. They run up to the attic and down in the cellar at a sixty-fourth-note rate. I may take down one of their songs some time and send it to you that you may try it out; or better yet, I may some time get a recording instrument for a phonograph and make a few records. I am sure that you who have Victrolas would be glad to have among your collection, a few songs of your brethren in a foreign land.

They conduct their musicales in a very orderly way. In the Christmas entertainment referred to, they arranged and executed the program according to their own idea. At the rendition they were seated, each branch choir in a separate place at the sides of the house, which was a large one made of the braided branches of the coconut tree, and capable of seating five hundred people. An area was thus left in the middle of the house, where the general chorister took his place, and from whence he made announcements from the program. Each choir, and there were five, had its director and an assistant. Upon being announced for a number they would orderly arise at the beckon of the baton of the director, and sing. They told me they had practiced diligently for a year on those songs. The results showed it to be true, for I noted perfect unison, especially upon held notes. They did not vary from almost flat to almost sharp as I have often heard our choirs do. Upon this point they excel us surely.

I am going to say the Lamanites are a musical people. You may be surprised. The few tribes in the United States have lost the ability through inactivity. Many times have I sat in "la alameda" in Mexico City and listened to strains of beautiful band music, played by the "police band" of that city, and considered one of the best bands of the world; and I marveled at the swarthy Lamanite before me playing the same classical compositions that Sousa's, Pryor's, and other leading bands play. I was convinced that nothing but a gift of music could have made that possible.

While I was in Oklahoma, occasionally doing missionary work among the Indians, I attended a musicale in a large "tepee" or tent. I entered the "tepee" at nine p. m., and saw the instrumentalists all seated around the instrument, which was a bass drum; and the instrumentalists were the male members of the congregation. The drum was laid flat on the side while they beat a 4-4 tempo as the singers sang in 3-4 tempo. And it was such singing that Thurlow Liuriance writes about in the Etude as having musical merit. Of course he does not approve of all the song, but certain legitimate passages as he heard. And that is the way I feel about these singers here; there is much in their singing that is not pleasing and we are trying to subdue those portions and develop the good. They also have some songs which compare with popular music of the "Ten cent store" variety, and when this variety find their way into the church service I try to get rid of them in the most tactful way I can. Some one in the past taught them a hymn to the tune of "Sweet bunch of daisies." Imagine my surprise when I heard one in prayer meeting start that tune. But when I saw that the words were the words of a sacred hymn, I could not say that the tune was secular or incompatible with the Spirit of God, for if I had heard "Nearer my God to Thee" sung to that tune all my life, I would most likely consider it a sacred tune.

We have bought an organ for our church in Papeete, and the wife of the professor of the Protestant school from whom we purchased it, replied to my inquiry relative to the musical possibilities of the native student, that they were equal to the average person, and that they had many pupils playing the piano. In this school they also have a brass band. Sister Ellis has a class in instrumental, and I understand they are doing finely. I hesitated at first to try to teach them an anthem, but in the light of the fact that they were taking up harder work, I translated an anthem, "Come unto me" by Gabriel, and they are taking hold of it well, and are much pleased with it, too. We have about twenty branches on the little islands scattered over an area of ocean as large as Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, and among these branches I believe we can use the open door of music toward the advancement of the Saints, and the conversion of the friends. With this end in view I have purchased a cornet which I learned ordinarily to play some years ago, and with which I can correct some of the hymns that they were properly taught by former missionaries and their wives, but you see they have drifted off the tune somewhat, not having had an instrument.

There is some difficulty in the range of voices. The ladies always sing in the lower register of the voice, making it hard to reach the high notes, but I think by cultivating the high tones they will overcome the difficulty. They also insist on singing in ff. or fff. but we are trying to soften the tones some. One thing we need is written music. If anyone has an idea that will help us out, send it along.

Ever laboring for the advancement of God's children, I remain

Your brother in Christ,
A. H. CHRISTENSEN.

TAHITI, PAPEETE, SOCIETY ISLANDS.

A Live Wire District Chorister

We are in receipt of a copy of a report blank sent out by one of our most enterprising and hardest working district choristers, which gives so much evidence of heart interest in the work and keen perception of the needs and possibilities of the same, that we take the liberty of passing it along through the medium of The Staff, that others, who perhaps, may be complaining that there is insufficient response or interest taken in their efforts, may benefit by the hint and suggestion contained in this blank. We refer to the work of Sister Louise Evans of Grand Rapids, Michigan, who has for years been well known in the ranks of the Sunday school and Religio workers. This blank which she has sent out to the choristers in her district, proves that she is taking hold of the musical department in no uncertain or half-hearted way, and she richly deserves the very encouraging words which were spoken to her recently by the Spirit, which were in the nature of recognition of her trials and difficulties, but full of appreciation and assurance that her efforts were not in vain. Would that we had many, many more with the degree of patience and consecration which characterizes our sister!

AUDENTIA ANDERSON.

Report Blanks for Chorister

DISTRICT CHORISTER'S OFFICE

Kindly fill in blanks below and return soon as possible to Louise Evans, 519 Ottawa Avenue, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

For the quarter, ending September 1, 1916

Name & Address of Branch President
 Name & Address of Branch Chorister
 Name & Address of Assistant Chorister
 Name & Address of Organist
 Name & Address of one appointed to teach the children.....
 If no one has been appointed, will you see that there is?.....
 Is your choir organized?
 How many members in choir?
 Are they interested?
 What evening do you hold practice?
 Do you spend one hour a week practicing?
 If not, why?
 Have you been on the watch for singers who are not members of the choir?
 Do you try to teach those who have good voices but do not understand music?
 If not, why?
 Are you willing to use the music now being used by General Choir?
 If not, why?

NameChorister.

Woman's Auxiliary

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

Awake!

Some time ago we asked our sister, Marietta Walker, or perhaps as well known to the readers of the HERALD by her nom de plume "Frances," to write a message for the women of the church. She was just recovering from her illness of the early spring, and replied that if her strength permitted, she would do so later on. She has not forgotten the promise, and the editor was greatly pleased to receive this week, the following timely and inspirational message from her able pen and teeming heart. From those dear ones whose feet are all but washed by the waters which separated us from the invisible world, and whose eyes, lighted both by the years of past experiences and the glory of those just ahead, we may justly expect words of wisdom such as are not possible from our own still hesitating lips. They speak with assurance, born of the fires of the past, when God has been tried and not found wanting; when their spirits, though bruised in the fight with wrong, have found a sure balm, and whose hearts have come forth from the burning, purified as gold from the furnace.

Shall we not trust the counsel of such an one? Shall we not feel to take the kindly warning home to our own hearts, and endeavor to see wherein we each may profit thereby? Will we continue to be slothful servants? Is it enough to get on our knees and say, "Oh, Lord, we thank thee," and still refuse to demonstrate the degree of that thankfulness? Are we unwilling to prove the equations of life which we affirm? Are we to be content with saying and no doing? Is it enough to simply "be good," and at the same time "be good for nothing!" Let us rouse to action, and, out of the abundance with which God has blessed us, remove from the name of his church on earth, the stigma which attaches because of our debts to men! Let us wake up, and sacrifice, and do something worth while, and roll up such a Christmas Offering for God, through the channels of his ordaining, as has never before been made in the history of his church in any age or clime?

A. A.

Are We Pharisaical?

"Unwrap thy life of many wants, and fine!
He who with Christ would dine
Shall find no table sumptuously spread,
But fishes and barley bread!
Where readest thou the Master bade us pray
'Give us our sumptuous fare, from day to day?'"

Yes, dear sisters, we have used the above stanza in our writings many years ago, but the conviction comes with strong force to our heart that to-day the reminder, so beautifully and forcibly expressed in these lines, is as much needed, as it was then—if not more so!

Is not this in itself a sad commentary, when we stop long enough to let our thoughts travel beyond the bounds of the mighty Atlantic, and take a survey of the awful suffering, the agony and unparalleled misery and want which are to-day completely enveloping many of the nations lying there, and being keenly felt by all? Nor does it stop there, for here—right here in our own favored land—while the few are growing fatter and richer from feeding like vultures upon the misery of others, how is it with the very poor? Do they carelessly sit down to sumptuous fare, or is it not with them a struggle from day to day, that the constantly soaring prices for the common necessities of life may be met?

This, you say, is a result of the awful war now being waged,—it is because we are striving to meet the demands of the thousands of war's suffering and starving victims. This may be true, but it is not the whole truth. Were it only this, no Christian ought to, and no true follower of Christ ever would, complain, even if, to do this, required him to reduce his own fare to one plain meal a day. Could we but meet the unadulterated truth face to face, how we would shrink from the horrible revelations—from the cold-blooded "inhumanity of man to man" which make such conditions as now exist, possible! Every lover of mankind would ask: "Why not part with that which you have which is above your own needs, at an honest price—a price which covers all it costs you to produce, and no more—instead of coveting and taking every penny the dire necessity of suffering men and women and children compels them to give? Why not? And yet the question goes deeper—How is this money used? Is it taken from those who have much and used for the benefit of those who have little? We are sure you have no need to answer this question! The lives of sinful and extravagant luxury which are being led by those who fatten and grow rich upon the sorrows and needs of others, are answers in themselves, which cannot be denied, neither can they be palliated. Every day the bodies of the rich are clothed in fine raiment; their tables groan beneath the imported luxuries of every land, and they ride in luxurious chariots from one palatial home to another, and from city to city in search of gain and pleasure. Ah, they are faithful servants, indeed, of the master they have "listed to obey!" None know better than they the utter folly, the entire impossibility, of trying to "serve two masters!"

But it is not with these or of these that we wish to speak or to think at this time. Jesus said of them: "The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." Do you think any but the Master wise enough to have spoken this truth? Are any wise enough to know so well the dual nature of man, and to realize how strongly to one part of that nature the adversary of all righteousness appeals, even when the whole heart is set upon serving God? Paul understood this when he said: "My members are warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members."

Thanksgiving has come and gone. It is a day of which we have no need to tell you, for even the lassie and laddie around your own fireside can tell you many a beautiful, many a wonderful tale about it. It is a day born of bitter trial and sufferings, even such as are now being borne by many of the nations of the earth. We turn, not to scan the history of its origin, but rather to see, if we may, in what spirit it was kept to-day; to ask if we dined with Christ on fish and barley bread, or if saintly (?) hands were lifted above tables groaning with luxuries—lifted towards heaven to ask the blessing of God and to render thanks to him for our abundance, with never a thought of those other suffering millions, save one of gratitude that our lot was better than theirs!

Long, long ago two men went into the temple of God to pray, and the prayer of one was: "I thank thee, that I am not as other men—or even as this poor publican!" The other (this poor publican), "standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven"! Lest it be said that the application of this picture to the present be imaginary or overdrawn, at least, we will give you a few items as copied from one of the most popular and widely circulated farm journals of our land. We quote:

"WE ARE THANKFUL

"In the first place, we are thankful that we continue to be at peace with the world, that fields which were planted to corn and grain in the spring were permitted to bring their crops through to maturity and the harvest and were not terribly harrowed by shot and shell, moistened by the red blood of our sons—yours and mine.

"In the second place, we are thankful that, having brought our crops through to maturity, we are privileged to receive good prices for them.

"Next, we are thankful that prosperity is wide-spread throughout the land, not being confined alone to those of us who are the producing class in the Nation's granary, but that it is being enjoyed likewise by those who find their life's work in factory and mill, in the large centers of population as well as in the wide reaches of the country.

"We are thankful that the comforts and pleasures of life are keeping pace with our increased efforts and our larger earnings, so that never before was country life so richly and wholly satisfying, nor were men and women of the farms so proud of their calling, or so willing to remain there, turning unhearing ears and unseeing eyes to the allurements of the town and city.

"We are thankful that those whom the good Lord intrusted to our care are still with us, occupying their wonted places in the family circle; that there are no empty chairs pushed back against the wall; that, as the shades of night begin to gather and we approach our home, there comes to our ears the welcome sound of loved and loving voices, that shining faces are at the window to greet us, that life is full of pleasure and that we and those of our household are strong to enjoy them.

"For all this, and much more, we of this family circle are thankful—oh, so very, very thankful this Thanksgiving Day!"

Some of the above editorial we have omitted, for want of space, and the italics are ours; but surely there is enough in what we have quoted to show that it is no imaginary picture we have presented, neither one that is overdrawn, but one which surely the least thoughtful of our readers will have small difficulty in realizing bears a strong resemblance to that temple scene of the long, long ago!

Now we turn to another picture, so touchingly beautiful and yet, withal, so sweetly sad; that we doubt if many who saw it could keep back the flowing tears of sympathy. It is a message which has in it a note of triumph, an undertone of a gladness too deep to find expression in words; a joy passing all other joys—the undisturbed peace of a soul which has fully learned to trust the Lord, and has found the blessedness and joy that come to those who, from the very ashes of affliction, sorrow and present loss, can lift to heaven hearts filled with thanksgiving and praise—hearts, which, through grief, have learned how much better is the will of God, than their own! If perchance any of you have not read in our late illustrated number of the SAINTS' HERALD the beautiful contribution of Sister Vida Smith, "From the Ashes—a Thanksgiving," please turn to page 1,137, and as you read, may God help you to understand the lesson it teaches; for when we fully realize that lesson (and never until then), will we know in full, the meaning of Christ's words: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life, for my sake, and the gospel's sake, the same shall save it!"

And now, "What matters it to us how our neighbor may have fared on Thanksgiving Day? Why should it interest us, in the least, whether he dined sumptuously or whether his fare was simply the wholesome loaf of barley bread and fresh-caught fish?" If we are truly interested in the church, can we fail to be interested in that which so closely related to her ministry and welfare. Our church is deeply in debt, as also is her handmaiden, our institution of learning, Graceland College. These debts the Lord has commanded us to pay! God never gave a command to man, either as an individual or as a collective body, which that individual or that body was not capable of carrying into execution; but, this command as yet, the church has not obeyed, though time and again, the Spirit has plead with the people to heed the instruction already given, and liquidate these debts. In one instance, at least, of which we know, the Lord has refused to add to the condemnation of his people by adding other expressions of his will when those already given have been so utterly neglected—so utterly disregarded! We have heard the adage, "Debt is the Devil's saddle and when he gets it on to you, he will ride in it!" How long are we to submit to his riding?

Thanksgiving is past, but Christmas will soon be here, and to you, my sisters, yes, to every one of you who have entered into covenant with God to love, obey and serve him, do we appeal (and it may be for the last time) that you move nobly out, "unwrap your life of many wants and fine," and come bravely up to the help of the Lord by helping to release his church from the burden she has long been carrying! Let, for once, the festal board be lacking one or more accustomed luxuries, and add what that luxury would have cost you, to the offering you bring to Christ on the day we celebrate as his birthday! Make one or more less expensive presents and add this also, to the other sum. Do you know that for one, we are fully persuaded that if we, as a people, a whole and united people, would do this, thousands of dollars would go into the hands of the Presiding Bishop with which a goodly payment upon our indebtedness could be made?

And we would not, by any means, forget the poor at that—God's poor, whose lives need no unwrapping of "many wants and fine," who have no downy beds of ease, no soft luxuries to forego. As a rule they are both willing and obedient, to the extent of their powers.

It was but this morning while yet the night lingered, before the dawn came with roseate hues to herald the return of another Sabbath Day, that as we lay contemplating many things, there came into our mind the beautiful thought embodied in the Thanksgiving article of Sister Vida's to which we have before referred, and the still, small voice of the Spirit whispered to us: "It is not often from the house of luxury or wealth—not even from homes where modest plenty is known and want never enters—that come gems of thought like these to cheer and bless humanity." Then came the memory of the countless trials which had come to that home even during the "twenty-one beautiful years" that she had lived, trials not only of loneliness and poverty, but of other things hard to bear when added thereto, and we said with the poet truly:

The heart must bleed before it feels
The pool be troubled before it heals!

No, we are not forgetting the poor, and well we know that their mites, brought unto God through sacrifice and toil, in the eyes of the dear Redeemer are precious above rubies. And these will come! The poor will not forget! And our faith is that you, also, to whom we make this appeal you, who can spare without sacrifice, will join with those who cannot. For it is written, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy powers." Can anyone doubt that we are living in those days—that God's "hastening time" has come? M. WALKER.

Bishop McGuire Addresses Independence Auxiliary Workers

We had been gladdened to hear of the "reasoning together" of the women of the Independence Stake and the man who has been called of God to preside over the temporal affairs of his church. This was in the nature of getting together on the question which has confronted many of the noble bands of sisters throughout the church, viz: "How may the women be of the greatest assistance financially to the work of God on earth, both locally and generally?" A transcript of Bishop McGuire's talk has been promised us, and we know the keen interest with which the sisters everywhere will await its presentation. It is in the hearts of all to be of the most use, to help in the best way and to render the most "reasonable service." We all want this, and if mistakes have been made, they have been of the head and not the heart.

Account reached us, too, of an address to our Independence sisters by Miss Anne Gilday, of Kansas City, on "Woman's Work." This no doubt was one of much encouraging thought to the women, and would serve to impress them with the idea that just as all humanity is linked by the bonds of brotherhood in God, so the women, whether of the church or not, should be united in a sisterhood which has for its object the uplift of the race, and the bettering of conditions which affect us all. We cannot live to ourselves alone—otherwise the mission and purpose of the Christ will be frustrated; but we can reach out and work and occupy and lift, wherever the call may be heard. Blessing will surely follow, as it follows the sunshine and the rain.

A. A.

Letter Department

Booker-Moore Debate

A few miles south of Wheeling, West Virginia, on the east bank of the Ohio, just before the river takes a mighty sweep to the west, is located the town of Moundsville, so named because of the prehistoric mound located there. Those aboriginals chose an ideal spot for a river town. There are several acres of bottom land which are bounded on the north, east and west with hills. The river on its western front makes a natural artery for the influx and outgoing of persons and commodities. No doubt there have been many struggles for right against wrong within the environs of the great mound.

For several months the Church of Christ (better known as Campbellites) has been negotiating for a debate. Preliminaries were finally completed. On the 14th the discussion opened between Elder Alma Booker and Ira C. Moore, evangelist of the Church of Christ. The usual church propositions were discussed. Also a third one on the divinity of the Book of Mormon and the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith.

Brother Booker labored under the usual disadvantage of having only three nights to negate the position of his opponent, and his opponent having six evenings to negate Brother Booker's position. The debate closed on November 24. At the close Brother Booker thanked Ira C. Moore for the gentlemanly manner in which he had treated him. Ira C. Moore is an old experienced debater. This was Brother Booker's first debate, and he defended the cause in an able manner. The writer acted as moderator for Brother Booker.

The few Saints that live in Moundsville were strengthened in the faith, and many of their friends expressed themselves satisfied that our position was more in accord with the Scriptures than that of Ira C. Moore's. We cannot tell what results will be in total. We are satisfied to leave the matter with the Lord who said, "My word shall not return unto me void."

JAMES E. BISHOP.

November 28, 1916.

A Hawaiian Voice With Caucasian Encores

There is a little Hawaiian home in Honolulu which the Saints in general should know something about, so I shall take the liberty of intruding upon its privacy for the good it may do, and shall ask the HERALD readers, in a moment, to go inside with me.

The brother who lives there, gave me a sketch of his life before he had obeyed the gospel, and it was of such a character it would have taken more than an ounce of optimism to ever believe he was a candidate for citizenship in the kingdom of God; but Elder Waller evidently had the faith, and eventually our brother obeyed the gospel, and what a tremendous change it has made in his life! There are several kinds of miracles performed in the church. Our brother is of rather prepossessing appearance, with courtly manners, and now is a thorough Latter Day Saint.

He has succeeded in purchasing a little home of four small rooms, and as his time and means permit, is improving it. There are flowers and shrubbery in the yard, and an effort has been made to make it home. He spoke lovingly of that modest little cottage, with its bare floors and its four little rooms; but it was such that gave John Howard Payne the theme that inspired him to write a song which has been sung around the earth, in all lands for all people. Our brother is a hero—he is a home maker.

In this cottage, one of our Sunday schools is held. As every nook and corner of the home is needed by the inmates, every room is a bedroom. On last Sunday there were twenty-four scholars present of various ages composed of Hawaiians, Japanese, Chinese, and one Portuguese. But where do they put them? Why, the bed in the largest room is taken down every Sunday, benches brought in, and the bedroom becomes the Lord's Sunday school room! Say, you readers, how many of you would go to this much bother every Sunday?

Our brother has paid his tithing, and yet the first Sunday of each month over one fourth of his wages goes to the bishop's agent! He wants to paint the house and fix it up inside, as soon as he can afford it, but he thinks the Lord's work should be attended to first!

He has been weaned away from a godless life, and is living a godly one. He has abandoned his superstition in the guardianship of fish, etc., to faith in the living God. He has been made into a home maker and a home lover, all by the power of the gospel restored.

I present this humble Hawaiian brother as an example of faithfulness, which many thousands of the Saints can emulate. I am trying to make out a case and present him at witness number one—a Hawaiian voice.

We are all ready to admit the Lord uses various channels to reveal his mind, and the Book of Mormon says he even uses little children. I have lately been strongly impressed that the Lord is trying to reach the Saints by a variety of voices, to persuade them to give heed to past revelations commanding the Saints to be economical in their homes, and to exercise greater care in their daily financial affairs.

The Lord in 1887 (Doctrine and Covenants 119:9), even then cautioned his Saints to be "frugal," but since then how much more extravagant have we become as a Nation, and no doubt, as a people! Nearly "everybody" is living beyond his means so he will be "respectable." If we don't do as our prosperous neighbors, do, why "what will people think!" Well, the Lord has told us what he thinks.

As I am several thousands of miles from the mainland, and expect to be here for a number of years, I will say courageously and emphatically that I think it would be a good thing if some of the sisters would import a few Australian sisters to teach them how to run a house economically! And also get the advice of a few of the elders' wives to find out how it is done. As the women decided the election, I leave out the men.

Evidently the Saints did not heed the Lord's instructions, so he again commands, and says (Doctrine and Covenants 130:7, 1913): "The Spirit saith further unto the church. . . both in private and in public expenditure carry into active exercise the principle of sacrifice and repression of unnecessary wants; and thus permit the accumulation of tithes and offerings in such amounts as may be needful to properly discharge the existing indebtedness of the church as a body. And the Spirit counseleth the church in this regard."

It seems to me the Lord is using "voices" in the church papers to urge the Saints to greater diligence in this matter. In HERALD of September 6, the editor quotes one of the English war posters thus: "You are helping the Germans when you use a motor car for pleasure, when you employ more servants than you need, when you waste coal, electric light, or gas, when you eat and drink more than is necessary for your health and efficiency. . . save money and lend it to the nation and so help your country." Brethren, in your priesthood meetings, review that editorial. Woman's Auxiliary, take it up in your meetings.

Another voice seems to have been moved upon to express itself. When Sister S. R. Burgess speaks before the conventions, the people "stop, look and listen"; in writing in HERALD of October 18, her voice is as a prophetess of Jehovah, rallying the people to the standard of the Lord. She asks: "Is it much easier for you to pay one dollar, or more, for the roast beef for the Sunday dinner than to give the same to 'branch expenses' and do with a simpler meal? . . . Sisters do you realize that if we could only be 'different'—in our homes, in our dress . . . avoiding the follies and extravagances we see all about us, and being consecrated, living the whole of the law, others seeing our good works would be led to glorify our father in heaven."

A brother in Ohio takes it up from another angle. In HERALD of October 25, "health simplified" is entertainingly written upon by Brother Klar. Very often invalids tell us how to be well, but Brother Klar is a big, husky, magnificent specimen of manhood. He advocates a larger use of whole wheat bread, and pure wheat for porridge. He says all there is to puffed breakfast foods, is "puff." I quote him: "Think of the great waste in this church by not using proper foods. . . what a joyful lot of people the Saints would be if they would only live the Word of Wisdom. . . there is enough wisdom in this church—if we would only mix in sufficient will power with it—to wipe out the debt of the church in less than one year if we would only sacrifice the unnatural desires of the mouth."

And now in the November 1 HERALD, the interpretation of a tongue given to Elder J. W. Wight, the Saints are urged: "Put from you the pride of heart, the pride of life, the pride vanity, all unholiness and unholy thoughts, all vain ambition, all worldly desire unto the accumulation of wealth to be used in harmony with the gratification of your own desires; but the rather that you seek to accumulate for the good of my church and people unto the accomplishment of my purposes on the earth in the redemption of Zion." Have these pleading human and divine voices no significance?

In a recent editorial in the Saturday Evening Post, entitled, "The time to save money" the editor says: "This spending business is as much a matter of habit as tipping. It is within the knowledge of everybody who has the ordinary circle of personal acquaintances that, after a certain time, the man who lives up to the limit of his income—which, about nine times out of ten, means a little beyond—accepts that as a normal condition and just automatically spends whatever he gets."

The bank deposits in our country are largely made by foreigners. They have been taught to save and "have the habit."

If the income of every church family was cut down one tenth, they would perhaps cut down their expenses just that much because they would possibly have to do so. Why not run our homes as if we were threatened with not only still higher cost of living but a lower income? Eventually hard times may strike the United States; prepare for it now.

Doctor Harvey Wiley, formerly of the Government service and who was the means of helping to get through the pure food laws, says: "People do not know what to eat. Farmers take more care of their cows than they do of their children. Wheat in its natural state, is the best balanced food for the muscles and the mind." He says for breakfast it should be ground in a coffee mill, and a family of four for four days could have breakfast for about two cents a meal! But the Lord has advised us long ago about wheat.

This matter of dress, fine homes, expensive meals, etc., must be settled by each individually, no one can prescribe one standard for all, but it seems to me I can clearly discern an echo of the Lord's mind in these various articles in the church papers, and I hope these matters will be intelligently and persistently discussed in our various societies.

I think John Wesley years ago gave a good rule to work by. He announced that he was going to preach in a certain country schoolhouse on the subject of "Money." In the large audience present, was a farmer who was noted as a miser. (I don't know if he was anything like a miser we had in Marietta, Ohio, where I was born, who had two hundred silver dollars and every Sunday would get them out and shine them up.

Wesley's first sermon was, "Make all the money you can." The old farmer rubbed his hands and repeatedly and vociferously encored with "Amen." The second sermon was, "Save all you can." The old miser had a smile on his face which was as expansive as that of a noted politician of whom it was said "he could whisper in his own ears." The third and last sermon was, "Give all you can." When the subject was announced, the old fellow's smile vanished. When Wesley had preached for about ten minutes, our friend could stand it no longer, and getting up he made for the door, shouting out, "The fool has spoiled the whole thing."

But I think Wesley gave some good advice, and I think that humble Hawaiian brother is working along that line, and he is a good example, for those who have had larger opportunities and more favorable environments, to follow. Let's encore with deeds!

Sincerely,

C. EDWARD MILLER.

Murphey-Palmer Debate

ANOTHER GRAND VICTORY FOR THE TRUTH

Southwestern Texas is not spiritually dead yet, as has just been demonstrated by a discussion held between Elder Murphey of the Millennial Dawn Faith and D. S. Palmer of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. General church propositions were discussed. The discussion was held at a place up among the hills, called Tuff, where Mr. Murphey had challenged our people for debate and seemed very anxious to get hold of one of our elders, but I'm inclined to believe that he was just as anxious to quit as he was to begin, as he seemed to have more time on his hands than he could dispose of. He would run out of something to talk about and offer the balance of his time to Brother Palmer, and of course Brother Palmer was glad to get all the time he could, for he had something good to tell and never ran out of something to say.

Brother Palmer is a product of Texas and it made our hearts rejoice to hear him so ably defend the cause that we all love so well. The Lord was with him in power and his tongue ran as the pen of a ready writer delving into the Scriptures and bringing to light the hidden treasures there. Brother Palmer used a large chart setting forth organization, doctrine, faith and practice of the church of Jesus Christ and showed the continuity of the church of Christ, giving scriptural references where God does not change, but is the same yesterday, to-day and forever; and showed where there was but one faith, one Lord and one baptism. His opponent admitted that there were apostles, prophets, evangelists and so on, away back in olden times, but said we didn't need them now. He demanded a sign of Brother Palmer. Said if Brother Palmer would show him some sign of healing he would be baptized. Brother Palmer asked him if he knew who was the first one who asked the Savior for a sign and referred him to where Satan asked Jesus if he be the Christ to command that the stones be made bread. Brother Palmer told him that signs had never been given to make believers, but were to follow the believers. He also stated that the only time the gifts ceased to be were during the Dark Ages. He referred him to what John Wesley said, "That during the apostasy the gifts ceased to be, but not because they were not needed."

Mr. Murphey admitted that there had been an apostasy and said, "We are still in darkness." Said he believed that about the angel flying in the midst of heaven, but it is still in the future. He said the angel would come after the 144,000 were gathered together. He said, "I understand that you people claim that Joseph Smith was that angel." He said the Book of Mormon was a myth and a forgery.

Brother Palmer next called his attention to the building of the Tower of Babel, where God scattered those people over all parts of the earth, using this scripture in support of the divinity of the Book of Mormon and showing that it also helps to prove the divinity of the Bible. He also read from Mr. Baldwin and others treating on archaeology, to prove that there were a people who inhabited the land of America before it was discovered by Columbus. He also brought out many points of scripture in support of the divinity of the Book of Mormon, and showed that Joseph Smith was born at the right time. He told Mr. Murphey he was very badly mistaken about the Latter Day Saints claiming that Joseph Smith was the angel referred to, but that we believed that the angel appeared to Joseph Smith.

Space will not permit me to enter into any more of the details. Suffice it is to say that it was a decided victory. The crowds were large and attentive and many looked in wonder as the precious truths rolled from the mouth of the man of God.

Mr. Murphey made a statement at the beginning of the discussion that he was a preacher when Brother Palmer was in dresses, as much as to say that he had been at the business so much longer than Brother Palmer had that he could easily handle him. He said Brother Palmer was no debater, but before he was through he changed his mind and said he was a good debater and must have debated before. The fact of the matter was that the Lord was on Brother Palmer's side. We used the good old "gospel songs" which fit in nicely with the different subjects. We left the Saints at that place rejoicing and we believe it drew many outsiders nearer the kingdom.

Elder John Harp acted as Brother Palmer's moderator. Owing to the condition of Brother Harp's throat he has not been able for some time to do missionary work.

Ever praying for the final triumph of the work,
Your sister in the one faith,

RUTH HARP.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, 3427 South Flores Street.

"Let the Good Work Go On"

I am pleased to note the advanced step being taken in the stakes in the direction of education and mental development, as widened by the existence of classes in psychology, child training, etc. We saw some of the effects of this kind of work recently in the Holden Stake. Anything that will qualify the Saints for better and more efficient service for the Master and for each other should certainly be commended and encouraged.

The Woman's Auxiliary is doing a great work, and we pray God's blessing to attend their efforts.

As a missionary in the field we see the need of their work being extended to every branch in the church. One thing greatly needed is instruction in domestic science and social economy. I see so many young wives in the church (and sometimes older ones, too) who seem to love the church and desire to assist in the work, and yet are hindered by a lack of that training that every daughter should receive in the home. Often we are pained to see a constant waste in the household management that consumes all the income from the wages of the husband and father.

These persons need teaching, and if they have the Spirit of God—the Spirit of this latter-day work, they are willing to be taught. The missionary may, and often does make suggestions as to the necessity of economy and avoiding waste, but he is neither qualified nor prepared to demonstrate his advice or teaching.

A class in domestic science in each branch under a competent instructor would accomplish much good, not only to the home-keepers, but to our young girls—future wives and mothers—and thus many hundreds of dollars be saved annually in the homes of members of this church. And when once the lesson of economy is learned, and the habit of saving formed, our people will at once discover the possibility of assisting the church to a greater extent.

I truly believe that this would solve the problem that has perplexed the mind of many an elder. This work belongs to the Woman's Auxiliary, and I believe they will soon have it in hand.

The Lord has always warned his people against waste—both in ancient and modern revelation—but in these strenuous times with the price of living so high, every home, every Saint, should use the utmost vigilance and care to see that nothing is wasted. It is just as necessary that we "gather up the fragments, that nothing be lost," as it was for the disciples of Jesus when he fed the multitude by his miraculous power. What a wonderful lesson in economy! The abundant gracious display of God's power in supplying bread and fish, did not justify in the eyes of Jesus, even the waste of the crumbs. So Saints should be taught that no matter how large our income, or plentiful our supply, it is sinful to waste.

Let the good work of teaching and education go on; there is room enough and work enough for all. But above all, let us be so humble and so reliant upon God, that he can direct and guide us continually.

H. E. MOLER.

THE PLAINS, OHIO, December 5, 1916.

In Favor of the New Cooperative Plan

Having just read with unusual interest, the article by Bishop A. Carmichael, entitled "The hastening time," which appeared in the Magazine Number of the HERALD under date of November 22, 1916, I am impelled to commend heartily this most worthy move on the part of the church, and would strongly urge the Saints all over the world to enter into a deep and consecrated study of the problem of cooperation as set forth by Brother Carmichael.

To have a factory at Lamoni, Iowa, or any other suitable place for the manufacture of leather novelties such as are illustrated in the Magazine Number of the HERALD, should meet with the universal indorsement of the Saints, as each article is useful and serviceable, and should be purchased freely by the Saints who need them for personal use, or for Christmas and birthday gifts.

The brotherhood of man cannot be better demonstrated than by the cooperative movement, and as there are so many avenues in which cooperation can be practically applied, that when once the Saints grasp the full meaning, or basic principles, it would be a strange thing indeed if they did not see the great financial gain it would be to the church.

The employment that such an institution would furnish our sisters and brothers should appeal strongly to the business sense and spiritual desires of our entire membership to the extent of all joining in the idea of "getting together, buying together, and selling together."

The idea of having a purchasing agency under the control of some brother for the purpose of combining the orders for goods needed by the Saints, and placing the same with an outside manufacturer, is, in my opinion, a good one, and if properly encouraged would no doubt be the means of bringing many dollars into the coffers of the church that are now helping swell the dividends of the mail order houses.

If the scheme was put in operation and received only the patronage that is now given the ordinary mail order house by our own people, the profits thus derived would give our church such added expansion through the increased number of missionaries that the good could scarcely be estimated.

Doctrine and Covenants 132:3 tells the church that the "hastening time" is upon us, and of the necessity for confidence in the men of the church, also the one great essential: "fraternal cooperation," all of which goes to show conclusively that God had in mind business enterprises which were no doubt to be worked out largely by the priesthood, thus creating greater activity among the Saints, that they might be drawn closer together and truly become members one of another.

Who of the church membership could but have confidence in the men in the church who have been called by the Spirit to positions of great responsibility, Therefore, why not devise definite plans putting them in such concrete form that they will appeal to the Saints in general, that fraternal cooperation and loyalty may be the slogan of the entire church membership, thus fulfilling the law to the glory of God?

Another matter has often occurred to me, which is this: I believe that our church should compile and publish a small, inexpensive book catalogue giving an extended list of good books such as are recommended by our priesthood but published by outside publishing houses.

If this were done and the Saints urged through your columns to order their books from such a catalogue I feel confident that much revenue might be had from the sale of books other than those put out by our own church, as many such purchases are made about the holiday season.

I would be glad indeed to hear from others who are mightier than I, with their pen, that we as a church may take upon ourselves the fraternal cooperative spirit to the extent that it will be put into active operation for the betterment of all.

Now dear Saints, let us look over carefully the list of articles as illustrated in the HERALD and select at least one article and more if we can use them advantageously, and send our order in early, and thus encourage those who have labored so faithfully for lo these many years. Let us demonstrate by our actions that we not only believe but will put into practice the thing we advocate, "fraternal cooperation."

DAVID S. BOYD.

OURAY, COLORADO, November 27, 1916.

Extracts from Letters

Mrs. Jessie Hoover, Xenia, Illinois, writes as follows: "I write to the HERALD on this Thanksgiving Day while alone, and wondering if I am allowing the Lord to work out his will through me. I am alone very much since I am afflicted, and unable to attend meetings and visit with my neighbors. I confess that I have been rebellious at times and not willing to patiently wait the Lord's own will in my recovery. I was always of an active disposition, and it has been very trying for me to be patient under these conditions, but I ever pray that I may be submissive to what is for my own best good.

I trust the Lord may work out his rich purposes in us all. I will strive by his help to bear whatever I have to pass through. As your sister in the faith, I earnestly ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints."

From Here and There

The Saints at Corea, Maine, are to have a formal church opening of their new building some time about January 1. Elders H. A. Koehler and F. J. Ebeling will be present. They are planning the advertising at the present time. Brother John F. Sheehy writes that they are having real winter weather. In his appeal for assistance, or some one to make hand painted posters announcing their opening in other towns, he merely exemplifies the idea that has been advocated in the recent numbers of the HERALD that many more of our people should be able to do this themselves. Being on the ground and knowing the situation, they can do it very much better than to depend on the aid of others who are miles away and not able to sense all of the important details. However, we believe the time is coming when this ideal will be realized much more fully than at present.

Elder Lester Wildermuth writes that he has been holding meetings for three weeks, at Readstown, Wisconsin. He orders a supply of church literature, and says they have a splendid interest with attendance increasing. The last few nights they have been unable to seat the audiences, even though they have an excellent hall, well seated. He finds a special interest in the Book of Mormon, following a lecture on that subject.

From the Jackson County Examiner we learn that Brother Wallace M. Robinson, well known as a general Sunday school officer in years past, has bought another hotel in Kansas City, the Baltimore. The basis of consideration was a half million dollars. Brother Robinson already owns the Park View Hotel, Tenth Street and the Paseo, and the Hotel Tulsa, at Tulsa, Oklahoma.

From Little Woody, Saskatchewan, Sister Cora C. Loucks writes that they are isolated, not having heard a sermon since Brother J. L. Mortimore preached there last year. They are trying to keep up courage, and find the weekly visits of the HERALD and Ensign the only preachers they are able to get. She asks an interest in the prayers of the Saints. Her health is poor and they are thirty-five miles from any elder.

Sister J. M. Baker writes concerning a trip with her husband through the Northeastern Nebraska District. At Macy the Indians were having a big fair which lasted two weeks. Those that belong to our church have decided to build a church building, and have appointed the necessary committees. A blizzard struck them on the 16th and 17th of October, by reason of which they had to leave their auto and travel with a team and wagon for a time. Brother Baker has had a touch of the la grippe, but is improved.

Under date of November 18, Brother Clyde F. Ellis writes from Papeete, Tahiti, in a personal letter from which we extract the following: "I have just returned from a trip through seven of the Tuamotuan Islands where I spent a little over two and one half months among the branches. I believe that this trip through the islands was the most successful one that I have ever made. Having spent two years here in the islands, and understanding the mind and way of the native as well as the language, I was more able to reach the native on his own plane. The work in the islands near Tahiti is much better than in the islands farther away, the poor condition there being due to lack of help. We are happy in the conflict, and trust that all is well in the land of Zion."

A sister writes from Keithsburg, Illinois, that after having been baptized young and married early, then moving out from the influence of the church she has drifted away from the church and joined another because her husband had become a convert and wanted her to go with him. Of late they have both felt there was something better for them, and are now seeking to learn more of the teachings of the latter-day work. Brother W. E. Peak who is in that district, has been notified, and will no doubt confer with this sister. We are sure that those in such circumstances have the sympathy and prayers of the Saints, which she desires for return of health and that the way may be provided whereby full knowledge of the faith may come to them. She feels that had she been given a better knowledge of the gospel when a child she would never have drifted away as she has.

MUSSELBURGH, DUNEDIN, NEW ZEALAND,

October 30, 1916.

Editors Herald: According to promise to Saints and friends, we undertake to tell you something of our travels since last writing. After spending twelve weeks in the Society Island Mission during which time we lent a hand in the printing office and did a little carpenter work for the mission and paid a visit to one of the coral islands named Rairoa, at which time we straightened up their branch books in the two branches and preached about fifteen sermons, got an elder's court appointed to deal with about twenty-two persons who could not see so high as the moral standard set up by the Almighty, and after adjusting several difficulties aside from the aforesaid twenty-two cases, I returned to Tahiti and sailed with wife and child for Wellington, New Zealand September 26. Touched at Rarotanga Island on the 28th and departed on the 29th of September and arrived in Wellington, New Zealand October 6. We missed Wednesday, October 4, when we crossed the 180th meridian and will not find it till we go back. If I were sabbatarian I would not know whether this was New Zealand or the Sabbath.

Many years ago a missionary went to Pender Island and converted most of the natives there to his faith and established the Sunday worship as he thought and they kept the same until a couple of years ago when the Government having noticed the mistake, corrected the mistake of years past by establishing the Sunday you keep in America. They had been keeping the same Sunday as New Zealand which is the same day of the month as in America but the fact remains that the sun rises on Saturday morning in Rarotanga and that being for example the 20th of the month, the same sunrise will be counted as the 21st of the month, thus being Sunday of the week. In order for a very scrupulous sabbatarian to go from America to New Zealand or to go from here to America without breaking the Sabbath he would need to travel across the Indian and Atlantic Oceans so as to escape passing the 180th meridian. Methinks the Sunday is not the "mark of the beast" but that 180th meridian may be.

Our first impressions of New Zealand lead us to think of California. The climate is not very cold. The people have fire places in their houses instead of stoves for heating. The cook ranges are set back under the chimney in a large place like a fireplace but high enough to leave about two feet above the stove. Some have an iron grating above the stove to set things on, much as we use a warming oven on our ranges. They all have a neat little wash house at the back where there is a large copper boiler set into a brick arch where they boil their clothing. Houses are built very much on the order of the California house. The difference in locality making the difference in climate, etc. We have mountains which are always covered, and other parts lower down where the snow lays all winter. Dunedin never has snow lying on the ground longer than one day at a time. But the New Zealand climate is a little colder than California at its best. There are no oranges here that I know of. Dunedin is very much like Santa Rosa, California but subject to sudden changes.

We pay war prices for everything here at present. Four cents a pound is the lowest retail price for potatoes. The new ones sell for twelve cents at first and now they go at eight and ten cents a pound. Apples, twelve cents a pound. Oranges, very poor, fifty cents a dozen. Bananas, very poor, twenty-five cents to any price per dozen. Shoe leather is very high. About fifty per cent higher than in America. These are war prices. Before the war they were lower.

Owing to ill health of my boy, we were detained in the city of Wellington some three weeks and during that time we met most of the members of the church living in the north islands. We have eight of them there, four in Wellington, three in Dannevirke, one hundred and thirty miles to the northeast and one at Palmerston, a sister Waldie who will be in the city of Dunedin before this letter reaches America.

The New Zealand members are worthy of praise for holding out as they have done against all opposition and have added to their number some. I will write more the personnel of the membership later on. The Dunedin Branch, presided over by Brother Robert Hall and nobly supported by his collaborators, Brother Alfred Lebherz and Brother Bradley, though not large, has evidently come to stay. They have nine resident members and have been meeting together every Wednesday evening and taking sacrament on Sunday afternoon every two weeks. Brethren Hall and Lebherz have been preaching at the fountain in the city every Sunday evening. The fountain is recognized as a gathering place and all kinds of orators air their ideas there. The authorities have put a good light there of late to accommodate the Salvation Army. They used to use it and turn it off at once but they are leaving it for all speakers now, for which we are thankful. A little of equality does not hurt us at all. We are small but we like to be seen and heard.

We begin with sixteen members on the record and counting our two little selves we are eighteen in all this dominion of over one million population. We are not building air castles but will do what we can.

Your brother in gospel bonds,
46 Eskoal Street.

H. W. SAVAGE.

If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer thee;
Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I fain would do;
Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me be the things I meant;
Let me find, in thy employ,
Peace that dearer is than joy;
Out of self to love be led,
And to heaven acclimated,
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my natural habitude.

—Whittier.

News from Branches

Lamoni, Iowa

Activity is the word that seems to be used most now among our members. That it may be made effective the attendance and interest at the numerous meetings held is good.

Those in charge of the various departments of church endeavor are not only at work but have a happy faculty of getting others to go and do likewise.

Plans are completed to take a religious census of the town on Sunday afternoon, December 10. Sixty members of the various grades of the priesthood will be engaged in this and it is believed the canvass can be made in less than two hours. The corporation limits of Lamoni are quite extensive for the population. There are residences for two miles east and west and almost that far north and south.

The utmost democracy prevails in this undertaking, as is characteristic of our ministry. In some cases high priests are under the direction of priests, and bishops and deacons assume equal responsibilities and labor. When occasion demands, each is respected in his office and calling, yet nowhere is there any hint of priestcraft or domineering because of office.

The Thanksgiving sermon was by E. F. Partridge, who for some time until this year was local pastor of the local Methodist Episcopal congregation. He is now engaged in secular occupation and is carefully investigating our work, expressing considerable pleasure in meeting with the Saints and occasionally taking part in the services.

This week the stake bishopric and stake president are in Independence conferring about important matters of which we may hear later. We have heard slight dissatisfaction is expressed in some quarters because the results of these meetings are not published. We do not wonder at this, but are assured by those who participate that since many of the decisions are regarding plans which are yet to be tried and proven, it is not always best to set out the details until they are in better shape. It is one thing to try out a new venture and another to make it work successfully, we are told. We surmise that the General Conference may be asked to indorse some of these things next spring.

A remarkable spiritual manifestation was given the Saints at the recent sacrament service—remarkable in its direct application to the general needs of the community. Our pastor, J. F. Garver, was the Spirit's mouthpiece. If the HERALD editors consider it of sufficient general interest, it may be printed in these columns as several stenographers made transcripts of it. The dominant note was the responsibility resting on all in the work of the hastening time before us.

Our hearts were thrilled at the sound of the fire alarm on Thanksgiving Day, especially when the word was passed along—"The Saints' Church." Sparks from a defective chimney started a fire in the roof, but it was put out before much damage was done.

The specially good prayer meetings at the college are worthy of mention. Anyone attending these meetings and noting the spirit prevailing which touches every responsive heart can but appreciate the difference between this privilege and those offered in the ordinary school. Yet it is a something hard to describe in a mere catalogue, as the official might be expected to do. Those who have tried it, know that mere words fail us in expressing the ecstasy of joy in communication with God. The highest ideals of intellectual spirituality find expression in the college meetings on Wednesday evenings and must have a permanent effect for good.

Fine weather and excellent roads allow the country appointments to be filled with regularity and ease. In contrast with other days we have known of a preacher teaching his Sunday school class at Lamoni till 10.30, the usual time for finishing that work, then stepping into an auto driven by a member of another class, driven to an eleven o'clock preaching appointment six or eight miles away over country roads. This is a typical example and given only passing consideration, but think what a short time it has been possible!

If the editors have lost their blue pencils this long contribution may get by and encourage us to come again. They hint occasionally that they don't believe many personalities are desirable in these branch news items on account of the limited space in the HERALD—only those of general interest—so since we agree with that idea we try to observe it.

DELBERT.

Independence Stake

On the early morning of November 30, which was Thanksgiving Day, the Willing Helpers were actively engaged in distributing among the poor good things to eat, and the morning church service, conducted by President Frederick M. Smith, also the annual concert in the evening, comprising the combined efforts of the church choir and the Latter Day Saint orchestra, were events long to be remembered.

In the rendering of nearly every number an encore was called for. Especially was the large audience interested in the music of Brother Turner and his sons, Sister I. A. Smith's reading, the offertory of the band, the duet "O Lord, remember me," by Sisters J. Isaacs and Miss P. James, and the large audience was not weary at the closing grand finale "The hallelujah chorus," but sat still, and listened attentively to its close.

In accord with the proclamation of President Wilson, the Saints met at 10.30 a. m. for praise and thanksgiving, and they truly rejoiced in the glad message brought by President F. M. on this beautiful day, and as the organ pealed forth its richest melodies in the good old hymn "Puritan" so did the people praise the Lord with glad voices as in the olden time.

"Amidst the storm they sang,

Beneath the stars, and the sea,

And the sounding aisles of the dim wood rang

With the anthem of the free."

After recounting our many blessings, Brother Smith closed a fine discourse by saying that in surveying the scene before us, as a people we have reasons for raising our voices in thanksgiving, because God's hand, in our behalf, has been truly manifest.

Amid all the turmoil and distress there is still an optimistic looking forward for the future's welfare by the Saints, and from time to time they are receiving lessons instructive and uplifting. Our pastor here continues faithfully in his work among young and old, and we have lately heard an excellent lecture by Miss Anne Gilday, of Kansas City, and on Sunday the 3d a fine sermon by Elder Joseph Luff. For these benefits we are thankful.

ABBIE A. HORTON.

When the shepherd in Scotland was asked if his sheep would follow the voice of a stranger, he replied: "Yes, when they are sick; but never when they are well. A sick sheep will follow anybody." Just so long as a Christian keeps himself in a healthy condition by feeding on God's word and by exercising in his fields of activity, there will be little danger of his going off after the "faddists" and false teachers of his age. It is when his ears become diseased—when he has contracted ear itch—that he becomes restless and dissatisfied with his Master.—The Lookout.

Hymns and Poems

Exhortation

Zion, praise we all thy glory,
 May thy numbers so increase
 That thy children with glad spirit
 Raise thy banners in the breeze.

Call the erring who have wandered
 In the dark and cloudy day,
 To return with songs of gladness
 To the straight and narrow way.

Let Jehovah be our leader!
 In his courts forever dwell.
 By his spirit shall we conquer
 Over all the strength of hell.

Come, Lord Jesus, to thy kingdom,
 Reign supreme from sea to sea,
 Until every trembling sinner
 To thy name shall bow the knee.

JOHN R. GIBBS.

The Gospel

There are trials and tribulations
 In this life of smiles and tears—
 There are sad lives and there're glad ones,
 And there're lives filled up with fears.

But to those who have the gospel,
 There is naught of care or woe—
 For they gain life's vital essence,
 If their faith they will but show.

It's the healer of the wounded,
 It is life to those who fall—
 It's the beacon light to guide you,
 When you hear your Master's call.

It's a blessing to the stranded,
 That man's gold can never buy—
 It's a gift to all who want it,
 Who in faith shall for it try.

It is drink unto the thirsty,
 And unto the hungry, bread—
 It's a glory to the living,
 And salvation for the dead.

It is found in hills and valleys,
 On the earth and in the sky—
 It will come where'er you need it,
 If you for it will but cry.

You can't beg it from the richest,
 And it's priceless to the poor—
 It's a treasure to the needy;
 To those lost at sea a shore.

It's a light that shines out brighter,
 Than the sun in skies of blue—
 It's the gift God sent the Savior,
 Down to earth to bring to you.

It's the only key to Zion,
 And the pathway to our Lord—
 It's the armor that will save you,
 From the burning fire and sword.

It's the true and faithful gospel,
 Of the Saints of latter days—
 And will help all those who ask it,
 In true faith to mend their ways.

DET J. C. SMITH.

My Prayer

O gracious Lord! hear thou my prayer
 And bless my work to-day;
 Give me a heart to do thy will,
 And seek the narrow way.

From all that's small and mean, dear Lord,
 I sigh to now be free,
 I long to do thy will each day,
 Reveal thy truth in me.

May I in meekness rise, dear Lord,
 Subduing self and sin—
 May I be one to honor thee,
 Among the sons of men?

Thou knowest well my life, dear Lord,
 Keep thou my tongue I pray;
 May no harsh note, or unkind word
 Escape my lips to-day.

Teach me to love my fellow men,
 As thou dost love the race—
 That I may see the good in all
 And win them through thy grace.

Thou knowest Lord how small I am;
 My thoughts thou, too, canst see;
 Naught but thy richest truth alone
 Can ever set one free.

Then as my soul enlarges, Lord,
 Increase thy love in me;
 That by thy truth I may to-day
 Lead wayward minds to thee.

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

In the Twilight of the Years

In the twilight of the years
 When all the gold has left the sky;
 When all the evening brilliancy
 Has faded into mellow light
 That softly veils the coming night
 And hushes needless fears;
 When the fires of life are burning low
 I rake the ashes to and fro,—
 Dead ashes of the past; a glow,
 Perchance, of some ambition yet
 Not wholly dead,—some sweet regret,—
 I'll find and hold, loath to forget
 In the twilight of the years.

In the twilight of the years
 I scan the somber ashen store

Of burned-out hopes, and rake them o'er;
 The ashes black that fell a pall
 When sweetness turned to bitter gall
 And brought me poignant tears;
 And white,—from hopes of noble birth,—
 Though heaven-born they fell to earth;
 How take the measure of their worth?
 The vari-colored heap I toss
 And deem it wealth though seeming dross.
 Ay! failure is not always loss
 In the twilight of the years.
 —Harriet Smith Morgan.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes

KANSAS CITY STAKE.—First quarterly conference at Central Church, Kansas City, Missouri, November 11 and 12, 1916. Business session 2.30 p. m., the 11th, F. M. Sheehy, J. A. Tanner and S. S. Sandy presiding, W. S. Brown, secretary. Bishop James F. Keir reported receipts $811.80; expenditures $699.00. Reports from stake presidency; stake secretary, stake recorder, membership 1,823; First Kansas City quorum of elders, membership 14; seventh quorum of priests, membership 20; stake Sunday school association, enrollment 1,182; Religio, membership 645; library board; Woman's Auxiliary, 18 organizations. First Kansas City, Second Kansas City, Fourth Kansas City, Bennington, Mount Washington, Englewood, Malvern Hill, Argentine, Armstrong, Grandview, Chelsea Park, and Quindaro branches all sent delegations. The stake high council recommended the ordination of John J. Schimmel to office of high priest and member stake high council; the raising of funds and purchasing of tent for stake work in missionary department; also that calls to office and ordinations be referred to the stake high council for their approval before such ordinations are permitted to take place, which were adopted. Recommendations from Fourth Kansas City Branch that Elmer St. John be ordained to office of elder, Mount Washington Branch that J. W. Stobaugh be ordained to office of elder, and first quorum of elders that W. S. Brown, T. C. Lentell and J. I. Kaplinger be ordained to office of president and counselors of that quorum, were all referred to the stake high council with power to act. Lester Brackenbury, president of the Englewood Branch, presented recommendation of Charles Friend to office of elder as unfinished business of the Old Independence stake of two years standing which was referred back to the Englewood Branch for action (re-recommendation). Sister Belle James appointed by general church chorister as chorister of the Kansas City Stake was elected by the conference to office indicated. Time and place of next conference left in hands of stake presidency. A resolution that future conference be mass conferences instead of by representation by delegates was deferred until next conference. A resolution that we look with disfavor upon any member that sells liquor or tobacco and that all of priesthood who sell or use such shall be asked to surrender their licenses was laid on the table. W. S. Brown, secretary, 1447 South Thirty-fifth Street, Kansas City, Kansas.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.—At Boyne City, November 4 and 5. J. F. Curtis presided, assisted by A. R. Ellis, A. E. Starks and D. Schreur. C. N. Burtch, secretary, H. A. Doty, chorister. District officers reports presented and approved. Branches reporting: Hillman No. 1, Gaylord, Boyne City, Wilson, Clear Springs, Onaway, Alpena, East Jordan, Lachine, Gulliver, and Vanderbilt. Bishop's agent's report showed on hand, October 31, $122.64. The matter of organizing a branch near Gaylord referred to minister in charge and district presidency. Nine elders reported. R. D. Klecker recommended to conference for ordination to office of elder, and referred to his branch for action. Officers elected: President, A. E. Starks; vice president, D. Schreur; secretary, C. N. Burtch; treasurer and bishop's agent, A. E. Starks; member of library board, W. Parkes. Motion prevailed to dispense with spring conferences. Speakers were J. F. Curtis, G. W. Burt, Ernest Burt and A. R. Ellis. Vote of thanks rendered to Boyne City Saints, and conference adjourned.

C. N. Burtch, secretary of northern quorum of elders, Boyne City, Michigan.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.—Sunday school, convened at Lincoln, Nebraska, September 15, 1916, Sister Jessie Wyckoff, superintendent, in charge. Reports from Nebraska City, Plattsmouth, Lincoln, Fairfield, Wilber, and Eustis. Instructive papers read and talked about. Adjourned to meet at Wilbur in January, prior to convening of district conference. Henrietta Keller, secretary, Eustis, Nebraska.

WESTERN MONTANA.—Sunday school, convened at Deer Lodge, November 3, 1916, Peter Anderson in charge. Reports of district secretary and home class superintendent read. Request of Great Falls Sunday school to become a member of association was granted. Delegates to General Convention: Alfred Peterson, W. P. Bootman, Mullenberg, Sister William J. Murray, Sisters Mullenberg, Viola Eliason; alternates, Peter Anderson, G. W. Thorburn, Thomas Reese, A. J. Moore, Sister Thorburn and Sister Bootman. Convention adjourned to meet one day previous and at same place as next district conference. Mrs. Louise Rees, secretary pro tem.

WESTERN MAINE.—With Mountainville Branch, November 4 and 5, I. M. Smith in charge, C. H. Knowlton assisting. Reports from branches: Stonington 220, Little Deer Isle 116, Mountainville 54, Vinal Haven 29, Sargentville 29. Two branches did not report: Dixfield, and West Surry. A gain in all of the branches but one. Total membership of the district 602. Bishop's agent's report showed $231.67 at last report; collected $753.05, expenditures $442.00. Delegates to General Conference: U. W. Greene, H. A. Koehler, F. J. Ebeling, G. N. Knowlton, J. F. Sheehy, and A. B. Phillips. George H. Knowlton, secretary.

MOBILE.—At Escatawpa, Mississippi, November 4, 1916, 10 a. m., district presidency and Edward Rannie presiding. All district officers reported. Bishop's agent's report audited and found correct. Branches reported: Bay Minette 351; Bluff Creek, 175, gain 2; Theodore 96, gain 7; Three Rivers 203, gain 13; Mobile 72, gain 2. Ministerial reports from 3 traveling missionaries and from 17 of the local ministry. Theodore Branch recommended ordination of Gregory Smith to office of priest, which was provided for. A resolution was adopted, providing for freewill offerings from the branches to pay expenses of district president to General Conference each year. A committee was appointed to investigate the advisability of purchasing a typewriter for the secretary, and later authorized to purchase a second-hand typewriter for $35, as soon as means could be raised. The secretary was authorized to choose an assistant secretary. The meetings throughout the conference were of a high order. Brethren Warr and Rannie were the speakers. Adjourned to meet at Bay Minette at call of district president. Edna Jean Cochran, secretary, Vancleave, Mississippi.

Conference Notices

North Dakota District, at Fargo, December 30 and 31, 1916. J. W. Darling, secretary, Thorne, North Dakota.

Convention Notices

North Dakota Sunday school, at Fargo at 2.30 p. m., December 30, 1916. Gladys Darling, secretary, Thorne, North Dakota.

Requests for Prayers

Dear Saints: I desire your prayers in behalf of my husband, Brother John J. Adair, of Farmington, Kentucky, who is afflicted with tuberculosis of the lungs. He is greatly needed by the Kentucky and Tennessee District, Farmington Branch, the neighborhood in which he lives, and last but not least, in his home.

A year ago last July when I requested your prayers in my behalf for tuberculosis of the bone, I thought afflictions were sore trials, but I'll willingly bear my afflictions if only the Lord will heal my husband. That seems more than I can bear. So please remember him before our Father in heaven.

Your sister in Christ,
 FARMINGTON, KENTUCKY. MRS. N. ELLA ADAIR.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

A Real Help

A new booklet has just been printed by this office entitled: Notes for Sunday school and Religio workers. It is written by A. Carmichael, who has had years of experience in the schoolroom as a teacher as well as in the Sunday school and Religio. As stated on the title-page, it is "A concise presentation of the simple rules by which a superintendent, president or teacher, may judge his work and become more efficient." No. S63. Price 5 cents, 10 for 35 cents.

Died

GASTON.—Wilson S. Gaston, son of Abraham and Sophia Gaston, born November 8, 1855, in Carryall Township, Paulding County, Ohio, in which place or near where he had lived and spent the whole of his life. On November 17, 1884, he was married to Rhuami Rhodes, and to this union were born 2 sons, David B. and Abraham H. On June 8, 1893, he married Sarah Franks. Brother Gaston first united with United Brethren Church at Edwards Chapel, being a member of that organization some few years, after which he united with the Reorganized Church, and remained firm in the faith until the end came on October 21, 1916. Funeral in Methodist church in Antwerp, Ohio, attended by a large audience, showing respect for him. A good, faithful man gone to await his reward. Funeral in charge of G. A. Smith.

MILLER.—At Mount Sterling, Illinois, November 27, 1916, Sister Luvenia Miller, wife of Brother Luther E. Miller, aged 59 years. Born in Davis City, Iowa, and twice married. She leaves husband, 1 daughter to mourn. She obeyed the gospel when 8 years old and rejoiced in it to the end of her life. Her last days were attended with great suffering. Brother Miller feels his loss keenly, as he has no children for comfort or company after her going. The funeral service was held by D. W. Owen at Mount Sterling.

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

BOOK OF MORMON LECTURES.—Are you a student? Here is something for your faculties to wrestle with. The author, H. A. Stebbins, has, with comprehensive outlook, embodied in these lectures a wealth of archæological facts corroborative of the Book of Mormon narrative, dug from works unknown to the public prior to its publication, and from others published since that time. The statements in these lectures are made in such unaffected plainness and simplicity of language as to carry conviction to any normally unprejudiced mind. No. 51, cloth$.75

HIS FIRST VENTURE AND THE SEQUEL.—A story by Estella Wight, editor of Stepping Stones and the "Religio's Arena." It tells about a country boy who was led astray by the lure of the city, but came back at last to loved ones—and the realization that "homely goodness" is the best thing after all. No. 369, cloth$.60

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL: A Cup of Water from Flood Tide - 1209 An Educational Atmosphere - 1209 A Word to Our Contributors - 1210 Current Events - 1211 Notes and Comments - 1211 ORIGINAL ARTICLES: Our Christmas Offering, by B. R. McGuire - 1213 Religious Education, by G. A. Kelley - 1213 Objections to the Book of Mormon Answered by Its Own Evidence.—No. 1, by T. J. Smith - 1216 OF GENERAL INTEREST: The Episcopal General Convention - 1218 Gambling on a Colossal Scale - 1219 THE STAFF - 1219 Mrs. W. N. Robinson—A. H. Christensen. WOMAN'S AUXILIARY - 1221 M. Walker. LETTER DEPARTMENT - 1224 James E. Bishop—C. Ed Miller—Ruth Harp—H. E. Moler—David S. Boyd—H. W. Savage—Extracts from Letters. NEWS FROM BRANCHES - 1229 Abbie A. Horton. HYMNS AND POEMS - 1230 John R. Gibbs—Det J. C. Smith. MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - 1231

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 63

LAMONI, IOWA, DECEMBER 20, 1916

NUMBER 51

Editorial

SOME CHOICE READING FOR 1917

If our readers could have a peep into our bulging files and see the dozens of excellent articles ready to be printed and sent out to gladden their hearts it would be a pleasant experience. But since few have this opportunity, we are going to tell you, briefly, of some of the good things you may expect during the coming year—and bear in mind that this is just a "peep." We are promised many more and every day we get letters from all over the church which keep you in touch with local developments.

A NEW DRESS

Beginning with the first number in January, we expect to make some changes in the appearance of these pages that will improve their appearance considerably. Nothing radical—just a new arrangement of some details.

EDITORIAL

Subjects of general interest and special timeliness will be treated upon as has been the custom heretofore. It is hoped that this department may gather up and reflect such ideals and policies as will be helpful to all.

The chronicling of current events as a separate subject will be discontinued, and when thought of sufficient importance these will be mentioned under our "Notes and Comments."

VALUABLE SERMONS

Perhaps the best method of reaching the people with the gospel is through sermons. But for those who do not have this privilege, the printed sermon is an excellent substitute.

We have on hand a number of reported sermons, on the subjects given, which we are sure will be much appreciated by our readers. One will be printed occasionally, along with articles on other and varied subjects.

Among those now ready are the following:

"What constitutes Christ's church?" by Elder Hubert Case.

"The promised Comforter," by Presiding Evangelist Frederick A. Smith.

"Baptism of the Spirit," by Elder Robert M. Elvin.

"The gifts of the Holy Spirit," by Elder Hyrum O. Smith.

"The resurrection of the dead," by Frederick A. Smith.

"The eternal judgment," by Elder Heman C. Smith.

IMPORTANT SERIALS

During the winter we expect to publish several serial articles of timely interest to everyone. Among those now ready are:

"The faith and origin of the churches," by Elder J. F. Mintun.

"The burning of Babylon," by Elder Elmer E. Long.

"In the beginning God," in four numbers by Elder Henry A. Stebbins.

"Machu Picchu and the Megalithic people," by William Woodhead. A brief archæological series, interesting to members and nonmembers.

We have the promise of an important serial on "Missionary work in South America." This will be written by one of our young elders especially for the HERALD and will without doubt be a valuable series.

ARTICLES ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

The following is only a partial list. Others are on hand for examination and still others promised in addition to those we expect from our writers all over the church. Yet it will give you an idea of what you may expect during the year. Where the subjects indicate the nature of the article, we will not attempt to describe it, as we consider each of special value on that phase.

The following may not appear in the order listed, since the length, nature of the subject, etc., help decide that, but each will appear in due time:

"A simple Spanish parable and its moral"; "A parallelism," both articles on preaching, by Elder James E. Yates.

"How a secretary should regard his work," by Elder F. E. Bone.

"The Jews," by Elder Edward Rannie.

"Laughter," by Elder H. J. Davison.

"Marriage and the relationship of the sexes," by Elder J. F. Mintun.

"An educated ministry," by Elder William Lewis.

"The school of the prophets and college education," by Elder Edward Rannie.

"The cooperative plank of the gospel platform," by Elder D. R. Baldwin.

"A better use of art in the church," a series of which one is occasionally used. To those now ready, the following names are attached: Willis W. Kearney, George A. Bartholomew, Earnest A. Webbe.

"Mental powers and their limitations"; "Cognition of the divine," two articles by Elder Edward Ingham.

"Prayer meetings," by Elder M. F. Gowell.

"Honor through Christ," by Ward L. Christy.

"Keeping ten men at work," by Elder David J. Williams.

"The associates of the young." This series will be continued in occasional numbers. We have contributions from Elder Amos Yates, Miss Grace Baughman, and others are expected.

"Endowment of the church"; "More about predestination and foreordination," both by Elder A. M. Chase.

"Love," by Elder R. T. Cooper.

"More about Adam in celestial glory," by Mrs. Maggie Macgregor.

"The attitude of the Saint under worldly environment," will be touched on in a few brief articles. We mention as on hand those from Elders O. J. Tary and T. J. Elliott.

"The privilege of helping" (in a financial way), by Elder Jerome E. Wildermuth.

SPECIAL ARTICLES IN RESERVE

We have some well-written articles on special subjects that will be used when conditions justify their use. Those who have sent in articles not mentioned above may suppose theirs is among this collection or possibly have not been examined as yet.

HYMNS AND POEMS

Under this heading original and selected poetry will appear occasionally, as usual. Poems must be of general interest and not too long to insure their use.

THE STAFF

This musical department appears monthly, ably edited by Audentia Anderson and supported by our best musical talent. It is a popular department.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Each week these columns bring a special message to the sisters of the church. This department is the official mouthpiece of the organization and under the supervision of its editor, Sister Audentia Anderson, will continue to exert a powerful influence in the homes of the church.

LETTER DEPARTMENT

Letters constantly come in from all parts of the world where our message has been proclaimed. These bring our readers into touch with each other and there is no more appreciated department than this. We believe it will continue to grow in interest as the local developments of the church are chronicled by our readers.

NEWS FROM MISSIONS

In this department news from our missionaries and those in touch with that work is published, to the edification of all. Contributions to this department are broad in their scope and portray general and local conditions.

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT

Official notices of all kinds appear in this department. Reviews of books of special interest, and of magazines worth while will be continued.

MAGAZINE NUMBERS

As has been our custom, several illustrated magazine numbers will be issued during the year. Some specially interesting features are now being developed for these.

SPECIAL SUPPLEMENTS

The detailed financial reports of the Presiding Bishop are published exclusively in these columns each year.

The official minutes of each General Conference are printed as a supplement and should be in the hands of every family of the church.

Having read this, will you kindly tell your neighbor about it, if he happens to be without the HERALD? We believe it will be a help to any Saint to read the HERALD the coming year.

CURRENT EVENTS

CRIME WAVE SWEEPING OVER NATION.—In all parts of the country crime of various kinds seems to be on the increase. Robberies are reported from every quarter and seem to be a most popular method for raising money during these times of stringency.

EUROPEAN WAR.—The most spectacular event of the week has been the German proposal to the entente allies for an armistice and consequent peace. So far there has been no official response to this proposal. Immediately following the issuance of the note, the Germans made an unusually severe drive on the English lines in France and occupied a second trench. General Joffre has been replaced as commander of the French army in the west by the appointment of General Nivelee. The former has been appointed as commander-in-chief of all the armies and technical counsel of the government in regard to the direction of the war. Immediately following his installation as head of the army, General Nivelle instituted an attack upon the Germans in the Verdune region and captured 7,500 prisoners, gained control of twelve square miles of territory and occupied second-line trenches. German war losses to the end of November as compiled from their own reports, are listed at 3,921,869 men. The Germans have continued their advance northward in Rumania, capturing a considerable number of troops. It seems to be their intention to proceed as far as the Russian boundary at least. In Greece the royalist troops have attacked the French army, and there has been a considerable amount of internal trouble.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

WOMAN'S BUILDING.—Our readers will be much interested in the announcement in the Miscellaneous Department concerning a proposed new building in Independence for the women's activities.

BATTERY C RETURNS.—As we write this, the Independence lads who have been at the Mexican front for some months are on their way home where they will be mustered out of the service. It is expected they will be at home by Christmas.

HELPFUL TO PREACHERS.—Some of our pastors will find helpful suggestions at least in the descriptive literature sent out by the Church Publishing Company, Keller Building, Louisville, Kentucky. They sell a sermon cabinet and index system that has much merit and adaptability.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION IMMINENT.—Everything indicates that King Alcohol is about to be dethroned. Anti-Saloon League officials are confident that dry forces have enough additional strength in Congress to insure the passage of sufficient "dry" bills to establish national prohibition. It will not come without a hard fight, but it seems to be on the way.

"LOOK-AROUND-YOU-DAY."—The National Child Labor Committee are announcing Sunday, January 28, as a day on which to take special notice of children's labor conditions. It is urged that conditions may prevail next door or around the corner, that may be improved by intelligent observation. Lack of proper schooling, evil influences, bad sanitation, and a number of things may be remedied if we do our part, as individuals.

JOBS FOR THE OLDER MEN.—An organized effort is being made in Chicago to find employment for men who are out of work because of passing the customary age limit of forty-five. At one meeting over a thousand such men assembled, and of these a number were given employment at that time. Only a perniciously selfish commercialism would have ever established such a custom. There is work for all if it only be properly distributed.

THE SUBMARINE WAR.—The following items gathered from English newspapers by the editor of the Chicago Herald are important:

Seven months ago submarines were sinking one British or neutral ship a day. Five months ago the average was between two and three a day. Two months ago it jumped to five a day. One month ago to seven a day. Two weeks ago the average was a fraction over ten a day, and the daily toll has increased rather than diminished since then. In other words, over seventy vessels, many of them loaded with food, are being sent to the bottom each week, and in each seven days England is launching only two ships!

A STRANGE SITUATION.—"Bumper crops, with all the extra labor they involve, bring the farmers shorter returns than the lean ones," asserts William J. Showalter, a Washington economist. He points out from published statistics that the farmers of the world received over a billion dollars less for their bumper grain crop of 1912 than they got for their lean one of 1911. May the day of social equality hasten when the Lord's method will prevail. We have the divine plan in latter-day revelation, when enough of us are truly ready it will be put into operation.

BISHOP'S DEPARTMENT SUGGESTED.—A brother whose name we need not mention here, but who is a very successful bishop's agent, believes the HERALD should have a Bishop's Department. He very pertinently asks: "Why should not our people be educated as to their duties and privileges financially?" This is worth serious consideration, which it will be given, but in the meanwhile let us hear from others regarding this suggestion. In the meantime we are glad to receive and give place to articles and letters on this subject, and in this issue publish a sermon by one of the Presiding Bishops.

HE APPRECIATES THE "HERALD."—"I have been reading the HERALD of November 29, and I want to send you my hearty congratulations. It is a whole trainload of choice reading matter, from start to finish, you can appreciate a bouquet better now than when dead. Forty-one years this month is the date of my first HERALD, and it has been a regular visitor during all that time."—EDWARD RANNIE. Thanks, Brother Rannie, we agree with your bouquet philosophy and trust our contributors whose writings made up that number accept this one as theirs as well as ours.

WELL ORGANIZED FOR RECRUITING.—The war department reports that the system for securing enlistments in the National Guard is at its maximum of efficiency, there being at least one recruiting officer in each county in the United States. In spite of this, Secretary of War Baker says they are not getting as many as the laws requires. He attributes this to labor conditions, the lure of good wages being greater than that of army life. The navy is having the same trouble. Of the 26,000 enlistments authorized by Congress, only, 2,564 have been obtained. Training for war seems unpopular as an occupation in this country.

"STEPPING STONES" GROWING IN POPULARITY.—When the Zion's Hope was changed in form and the Stepping Stones stepped into the field it met with a most favorable reception. Each year its subscription has grown, until now it has almost as many readers as the Hope had. The Hope is also well liked for the tiny children and has a good patronage. We note in a recent number of Stepping Stones some of the excellent features promised for next year and have kept in touch with it during the past year. We are sure its thousands of readers all over the church appreciate the success that has come to its editor, Sister Estella Wight, in giving us such an excellent publication. May its influence continue to grow.

"CURRENT OPINION" FOR NEXT YEAR.—Since most of us must be limited in our reading and cannot subscribe for nor read all the magazines toward which we are inclined, there must of necessity be careful selection made that time and money be conserved. Having had acquaintance with a comparatively large number of reviews we believe that among the many magazines to be had for the home Current Opinion cannot be excelled in its line. It is a monthly review of the most important world news and its departments include Persons in the Foreground, Music and Drama, Science and Discovery, Religion and Social Ethics, Literature and Art, The Industrial World. It is not merely extracts from other magazines, but has a distinctive editorial method of procedure that will appeal to any reader who is at all interested in the subjects under consideration. It is well illustrated, has a pleasing mechanical make up, and at the regular price of $3 a year, or less in magazine clubs, should find a place among the reading of our people. The copies are so valuable that they should be filed and bound, thus making a valuable historical reference book for use in the future. Subscriptions received at this office.

HE LIKES LAMONI.—Writing in the Perry (Iowa) Daily Chief, for December 6, C. Durant Jones records some interesting impressions he received on a recent brief visit to Lamoni. Mr. Jones is a Christian minister, a prohibition candidate for governor of Iowa some years ago, owner and president of the Jones College, promoter of the Jones Chautauqua, and a number of et ceteras, so when he speaks, Perry sits up and listens. We quote entire what he says of Lamoni, since some of our newer and younger members may be interested in the facts as well as his impressions:

We spent some time Sunday forenoon at Lamoni, the home of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I have lived neighbor to the Saints, all my life, and I was much interested in Lamoni and what it contained.

Lamoni is the home of Graceland College, a nonsectarian school built in 1895. The college stands on a quarter section about a mile southeast of town, on a beautiful eminence overlooking the town. While the school is owned and supported by the church, yet it teaches no distinctively church doctrines except by request of the student, and then he is given no credits for such studies. It gives an academic course with two years of regular college work, and has also a commercial department. The purpose of the school is not to create Latter Day Saints, but to furnish an opportunity for the young to secure an education of the right sort, and without encountering the dangers to be found in larger cities. There are three main buildings at the school. The college building proper, a girl's dormitory and one for the boys. Students are not required to live at the dormitories but may live either there or in town. On the north end of the campus stands a fine sundial, the gift of Frederick M. Smith, of the class of '98. I compared it with my watch and the sundial was keeping correct time.

About one hundred and seventy-five students are enrolled, and the faculty numbers ten. The college supports a fine dairy herd, under the supervision of a former member of the extension department of the State College at Ames, and much of the quarter section is farmed regularly.

President Briggs of the college lives in town. The major portion of the population of Lamoni belongs to the Saints' church, and of course that church is strong, owning a commodious house of worship. There are about five hundred in the Sunday school. A member of the Sunday school gave me much information. He said that the church had no high salaried pastors, but that there were some located pastors, and many missionaries. These workers were in the work because of their love of it, and they expected only such financial support as would be required by their living expenses. A pastor, or missionary, for example, would ordinarily receive eighteen dollars per month, if he had a wife, with five dollars additional for each child. However, if the actual needs of the family were greater, the supporter was not limited to this figure.

The SAINTS' HERALD is the official organ of the church, and is issued from a mammoth publishing plant in the town. The building was first erected in 1881 but was rebuilt in 1907.

The Saints are responsible for the excellent community life to be found in Lamoni. As an example of that cordiality and neighborliness which have always characterized the Saints wherever I have known them, every person we met greeted us with a cheerful "Good morning" and if they considered us strangers, they did not show it by their treatment of us. We were in the town but a few hours but that made no difference. I am not attempting to praise them unduly, nor have I made any mention of their peculiar church features for the purpose of arousing any discussion. I have given the facts as they were given to me.

Original Articles

THE PURPOSE OF OUR RELIGIOUS SERVICE

(Sermon by Bishop J. F. Keir, at the reunion held at Logan, Iowa, Sunday morning, September 17, 1916. Reported by Winsome L. Smith.)

In the second chapter of Jacob in the record known as the Book of Mormon we find this language:

Think of your brethren, like unto yourselves, and be familiar with all, and free with your substance, that they may be rich like unto you. But before ye seek for riches, seek ye for the kingdom of God. And after he have obtained a hope in Christ, ye shall obtain riches, if ye seek them; and ye will seek them, for the intent to do good; to clothe the naked, and to feed the hungry, and to liberate the captive, and administer relief to the sick, and the afflicted.—Verses 22 to 24.

In Proverbs 3:9, we find—

Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase: so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine.

Last evening we heard a very beautiful and graphic sermon touching the building up of the kingdom of God, and we learned something concerning its organization and the doctrines that were contained in that kingdom. And this morning in the testimony meeting we heard a brother ask the question, "What is the purpose of all this effort that we are putting forth, this religious service that we are rendering unto God? What does it all mean?" And I think that is a good question for us to think about

PERFECTION THE END

To my mind the end of all this service is perfection; that is what we are laboring for; that is why God has given us the great gospel plan, that we might learn to know him, and to be like him. One of old has said, "I know not what I shall be, but I know that when he shall appear that I shall be like him." And so as I understand this great gospel plan, that is the purpose that is before the children of God in all of their endeavors to serve him, to learn to know him and to be like him, and I feel very grateful this morning that God has not left us in uncertainty or without a plan whereby that perfection may be reached. But he has given us the gospel of his Son, that we might learn to become like him, and in one place Paul, in speaking of the principles of the gospel, made the statement that therein was power. He said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation." And so we can say, as we remarked, of this great gospel plan, that there is a power associated with it that enables man to transform himself from an individual with carnal desires, to a being who has in his heart the love of God, who understands the purposes of God, and can use his religion not only for God, but for his fellow men.

I know that we sometimes become enthusiastic and express our thoughts quite freely as to our regard for God, and how often in the testimony meetings do we hear this expression, "I love this great latter-day work. I love my heavenly Father." But there is one thought to keep before us, that is, if we love God there must be a practical demonstration of that love now, in our everyday life. There must be something that is more potent than words to demonstrate that we do love him, and that love should be demonstrated not alone in expressions of love for him, but in our actions toward our fellow men. The Lord has said, "If ye do not love your fellow men whom you have seen, how can you love me whom you have not seen?"

I do not care how much a man may say he loves God, and yet does not do his part, and withholds the temporal blessings of life from those around him, that man does not love God. And that is one of the things that the Lord has pointed out to us in this great gospel law, this thought of giving and supplying the needs of our fellow men. I think there is some excellent material for thought in that which we have just read to you. I am going to read it again, and have you think about it, and try to adjust your lives to that kind of ideal and theory, because I know that it will bring you benefit.

"Think of your brethren, like unto yourselves." A high ideal isn't it? "Think of your brethren, like unto yourselves." I know what we think of ourselves. We like to surround ourselves with the comforts of life, we like to enjoy the benefits that come from our labors, and surround ourselves with those material comforts that bring us a degree of satisfaction. But what of our neighbor? What about the man who has not been so fortunate in this life as we have been? Do we think of him? Do we think of his needs? Does it ever trouble us when we know his family is crying for the necessities of life?

Why, just yesterday on these grounds, a brother who had labored in Scandinavia, told me that while there he visited homes, and frequently when the man was out of work for three days the children were crying for bread. Think of it, my brethren and sisters! In three days of cessation of labor the children were crying for bread! "I have been in homes," said he, "that when we went to retire at night the children were crying for something to eat, and I went out and bought with what little I had, and gave to supply their want."

POWER IN THE GOSPEL LAW

So as we look around us in this life we can see upon every hand that there is not an equal distribution of this great material blessing. But God has set before us a law whereby there may be brought about a greater equality, and higher and better condition of things than there now exists, and so as we have said, in this great gospel law God has said that there is power. In every principle of this gospel law there is power, and Jesus said, to as many as would, to them gave he power to become the children of God, able to transmit that power, and he does it through the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

We come in contact in this great latter-day work and feel repentant. We know we have lived in sin; we know we have been transgressors of the divine law; we know we have not done right; but we feel that we are enslaved with the chains which the Adversary hath made, and we cannot liberate ourselves from those things. But oh, that gospel message sounds sweet to us, and we hear that expression, "Though thy sins be as scarlet, they shall be made white as wool," and we long for that condition, and we desire it, but we feel enslaved with our past transgressions. We are bound down, and so we look for a haven of relief, and then comes that sweet gospel message that says, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, for the remission of your sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

There is power in the ordinances of God's house. There is power as we go into the waters of regeneration and have our sins washed away. Jesus said that there is power in these gospel ordinances. And so as we have desire to come up to the ideal that is represented in Jesus Christ, we are laying the foundation by which we may grow into the measure of the fullness of the stature of Christ.

SPIRIT OF COMMERCIALISM TO BE AVOIDED

We have been educated wrong. For hundreds of years we have been breathing in the spirit of commercialism. Everywhere man is striving against his fellow men for supremacy, taking advantage by methods both honest and dishonest, that he may surround himself with the temporal comforts of life, and in this kind of an atmosphere we have developed the spirit of selfishness. We have not thought concerning our neighbor as we should have thought. We become selfish, and when God spoke to this church in one of the revelations, he said, "Now let my servants that write upon the question of the gathering, remember to educate my people away from the principle of selfishness." There is one thing sure, that if we ever get into the kingdom of heaven we must get rid of the principle of selfishness. If we ever get into celestial glory we must rid ourselves of selfishness, and our Lord has placed before us a beautiful program along material lines so that through this process there may be eliminated every particle of selfishness. And we know that this principle which we term the temporal law is as much an ordinance of the gospel as the ordinance of baptism. As it is true of the ordinance of the laying on of hands whereby the sick are healed, so it is true of the ordinance of tithing and the consecrating of our surplus, and the giving of freewill offerings, that there is a power therein that helps us to overcome this principle of selfishness that is in our hearts.

"HONOR THE LORD"

"Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of thy flock."

I remember hearing of a man—at one time a good Latter Day Saint—who, when he sat down to his table and before each meal would thank the Lord for supplying him with the necessities of life then he would ask God's blessing upon that food. But there came a time when the clouds crossed his pathway, and he saw things differently, at least he thought he did, and he says, "Now, when I come to the table and sit down to eat, I do not have to thank the Lord for what is on that table. No, sir; I worked for that. My wife cooked this food. It is the result of my own work."

Is that so? Let us think about that just a little.

"Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of thy increase."

Let us see just how much we do towards the success that comes to us in material things. What do we do that brings to us this harvest, this reward? I know what the farmers do. They prepare the soil, they place the corn in the ground, they cultivate it after it comes up. But what a small portion of the program that is. It doesn't amount to much does it?

Suppose God were to withhold the power that generates life? What would become of all your efforts? What would become of it? You know. You know there would be no harvest. We must be laborers together with God for the accomplishment of all things. You take God out of all our efforts in life and what do we amount to? He gave you the health that you possess; he gave it to you, God, the great God of heaven! "Honor the Lord with your substance." Is not there a reason why we should honor him with our substance? I would not give much for a man who did not take God into partnership, especially when he is making professions along these lines. Of course there are men who are not making professions along these lines, not thinking much about God, but watch out for the men who say they love God and yet are not willing to do something for their fellow men. The highest possible expression of love is in what we are willing to do for the ones that we do love.

Section 42 of the Book of Covenants says: "If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments." (Paragraph 8.) Do you get that? Sometimes people lose sight of it. "If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments."

"REMEMBER THE POOR"

You remember about the young man that came to Jesus and said, "Master, what must I do to inherit eternal life?"

"Why," the Savior said, "keep the commandments."

The young man became encouraged then and said, "Yes, I have done that." And as he went on down the scale of what he must do, the young man would say, "Yes, I have done that." But when Jesus said, "Sell that which thou hast and give to the poor," the young man went away sorrowing. He had kept many of the commandments of God, was a noble character, was a virtuous man, he was a man that had many traits of character that were to be admired, but he had one failing, he loved the material things of this life more than he loved God, was not willing to keep the commandments along that line. And so the Lord says, "If thou lovest me thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor." I wonder if that ever disturbs us.

When I speak of the poor I do not mean the man that is poor because he won't work. We have that class you know. We find people that have nothing because they won't work. That class of individuals ought to go hungry. "The sluggard shall not eat the bread of the laborer." But there are worthy poor among us always. Jesus says, "The poor ye have with ye always." And there are people in this world around whom unfavorable circumstances have drawn so as to make them unable to help themselves.

"Behold, thou wilt remember the poor." I think they had a better system away back in olden times than the world has been practicing. They had a system back there in Israel's time so that if a man were down and out they would give him a helping hand, they would set him up in business, they would loan him money, and according to the law they dared not charge usury. No, sir; usury was classed among some of the baser evils of life. When we get down to the fourteenth century our Christian consciences pricked us, and we thought, "Well, when a man is paying for a farm he ought to pay us something, but we don't want to call it usury, because the old Mosaic law put an evil stench upon that word usury. He is a poor man, and we will give him a helping hand, but we want something in return for that," and about that time they instituted what is known as interest. And many a farmer, as you know, to-day is struggling under the burden of paying for his farm, when he has probably paid for it two or three times already. A poor man, and we are making his burden heavier. But that is incidental.

Away back there they had this system of helping one another. Every seventh year if a man had not returns enough from his crop to pay his debt, the debt was lifted, and he was made free from that debt.

I am going to read from Deuteronomy, how the Lord wanted them to consider the poor in that time.

If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in thy land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother: but thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth. Beware that there be not a thought in thy wicked heart saying, The seventh year, the year of release, is at hand; and thine eye be evil against thy poor brother, and thou givest him nought; and he cry unto the Lord against thee, and it be sin unto thee. Thou shalt surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that for this thing the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto. For the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.—15: 7-11.

That is the way they helped one another back there. The man who had opened his hand imparted of his resources to the man who had nothing, that he might enjoy the comforts and blessings of this life. So the Lord told us to remember the poor. He told us how to remember.

WRONG DISTRIBUTION

I am talking now especially to our church members. I know that sometimes we see all around us ways to distribute here and there, but there is this one thing to keep in remembrance, that God is a God of law and order. Everywhere you see anything that God has to do with, it is governed by law and order. And so in this principle of consecration and of giving of material things. God has provided system and order for that principle.

I remember of reading in the Ensign a while ago of a man up here in Saskatchewan who had just come into the church, a good honest-hearted man who wanted to keep the commandments of God. And presently he saw a call in the Ensign. Some brother over here was holding meetings, and he wrote, "I need some help. I wish somebody would send me some money." So this brother said to his wife, "I guess we can spare a dollar, can't we?" She said, "Yes, I think so." So they went down in their pockets and sent a dollar to them.

Not long after that he saw another call, and they counseled together and they finally decided that they should help again, and were just about to do it, when the Lord came to the aid of the man. We are foolish along some lines you know, enough so that we believe God is interested in his children and will point out to them their mistakes, and show them the path of duty in which they should walk. And so this man had a dream. Somebody says, "You are not foolish enough to believe in dreams are you?" Why, certainly; why not? The Lord showed Daniel what would happen to the nations in the dream. He told Joseph that he should take Christ down into Egypt. He promised that in the latter days he would pour out his Spirit upon all flesh, and that the sons and daughters would enjoy the spiritual blessings.

This man had a dream, and the Lord gave him direction concerning what he should do. He said he saw himself with a new suit on. He had just put on the gospel covenant. It fitted nicely and it felt well, and he had made up his mind to lead a different life. He saw himself in this nice new suit, but he looked down at his feet and saw himself all bespattered with mud, and the dream ended, and he, waking up, recognized at once that he had done something that had displeased God. And he got out of bed on his bended knees, and said, "Father, what have I done that is displeasing to you? What have I done? If I have transgressed, wilt thou show me what it is and I will repent?"

We believe God answers prayers. Yes, sir; I would not give much for a religion with followers who do not think that way. And the Lord showed him just what was the matter. And he had another dream. In this second dream, he says, "Brother Dobson, our bishop's agent, was standing in the room talking to me, and he had two books, the Bible and the Book of Covenants in his hand, and he read to me out of each such passages of scripture as 'Bring all your tithes and offerings into the storehouse,' and he awoke. "Why," he says, "I see it. I see it. I have been distributing that which belonged to God, I had no right to do it unless I do it in his way."

There is a right and wrong way to do everything. You sisters know that. You cannot stir up a cake and leave out the baking powder, and still have a good cake. There is a right way to be baptized. Yes, sir; there is a wrong way to be baptized. There is a right way to receive divine healing, and the Lord says, "If there is any sick among you, let them call for the elders of the church, and the prayer of faith shall restore them, and the Lord shall raise them up." There is a right and a wrong way.

So it was with this brother. There is a right way to distribute the material things of life, and there is a wrong way. The Lord has pointed out the right way in this book. When he sent the elders out he says, "Preach the word as it is found in the Bible and Book of Mormon," and as we make a study of these principles of giving in the Old Testament times we find that the Lord required just one tenth of their increase. That is not much is it? No, not very much, but there is something in human nature that sometimes asserts itself and says, "I won't give it. I want that. It belongs to the Lord, but I want it."

INASMUCH—

"Beware of covetousness," says the apostle of old. "Beware of covetousness." "Beware of coveting that which does not belong to you, but which belongs to God." So we find that the Lord required that they should give a tenth, and in section 42 we are told who it is before whom we shall lay our temporal affairs. "Thou shalt remember the poor."

So I remember that little passage spoken in the Scriptures that when the Lord comes he would say, "When I was hungry ye fed me, and when I was naked ye clothed me." And you, my brothers and sisters, will say, "Why, Lord, when did I do that? Why, I never knew that I clothed you or that I fed you." And Jesus shall say, "Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of these the least of my brethren, you have done it unto me," and when we send our tithes and our offerings to the bishop and he distributes them to the poor, we are doing it unto the Lord Jesus Christ. Then, we are keeping his commandments, we are walking in harmony with his counsel.

"And inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose." (Doctrine and Covenants 42: 4.)

DISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH A WORLD PROBLEM

There is a bright day ahead of us, in my opinion. I do not see anything to be discouraged about. And as this financial system, as this great system of equality looms up before me, I feel to thank God, because in my opinion he has given to us the very thing that the world is looking for and cannot find.

They are trying to devise schemes for bringing about a more equal distribution of wealth. They are taxing the rich man when he dies with what is called the inheritance tax; and then we have the income tax, and we are trying to take away from the man who has to give it to the man who has not. But that does not satisfy God. He says, "I require the heart and a willing mind," and if you cannot give to God with all your soul, do not give. We do not want a dollar of the man who is not willing to give because he does not recognize the virtue and the blessing and the benefits that come from giving. We want him to see that he is the beneficiary when he gives to a man that needs.

THE OTHER NINE TENTHS

We are required to give one tenth of our increase. That is our first step. But what then? We keep on piling up ninety per cent. The Lord only requires the tenth, so he has permitted us to keep the ninety per cent. That keeps on piling up until there comes a time when we have really more than we have need for. And the Lord has set in his church what is known as the law of surplus and of consecration of our surplus, and I think it is in section 70 that something is given to us concerning this. This starts out with several men who had been intrusted with the work of publishing the revelations given to the church. They started a printing house, and the Lord gave them instruction. They were to be provided for, their just wants and needs supplied, and whatever they made over and above their necessities was to be turned into the Lord's storehouse.

Brother Carmichael is manager of the Herald Publishing House. His just wants and needs are being provided for, he is laboring with all the might and main that he has to make that institution a success, to be a benefit in distributing literature to the Saints, and if there is a surplus over and above their just needs and wants, it goes into the coffers of the church to bless humanity. When this is true with all of us then we will be thinking about our neighbor as we think about ourselves.

Now shall we have two standards? We do not think so along moral lines do we? No, we think that our boys should be just as virtuous as our girls, don't we? We think that our boys should not chew tobacco or smoke or drink any more than our girls. We believe in a single standard so far as morals is concerned, because it is in harmony with the great ideal that God has set before us. Shall we believe in a double standard when it comes to material things? Shall we say to Brother Carmichael, and Brother Blair, and to all these men, to Brother Wight and Brother Fred A. Smith that are laboring in the ministry, "Now you go out and you devote all of your talent and time and energy for the upbuilding of the kingdom of God. Go out and do that. Your just wants and needs shall be provided for. You are blessing humanity."

What are we doing?

Wherefore a commandment I give unto them, that they shall not give these things unto the church, neither unto the world; nevertheless, inasmuch as they receive more than is needful for their necessities, and their wants, it shall be given into my storehouse, and the benefits shall be consecrated unto the inhabitants of Zion, and unto their generations inasmuch as they become heirs according to the laws of the kingdom. (Doctrine and Covenants 70:2.)

That is what was given to those men who were intrusted with these public interests. Whatever they received more than their needs and wants were to be turned in for the benefit of Zion.

Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God; yea, neither the bishop, neither the agent, who keepeth the Lord's storehouse; neither he who is appointed in a stewardship over temporal things; he who is appointed to administer spiritual things, the same is worthy of his hire, even as those who are appointed to a stewardship, to administer in temporal things; yea, even more abundantly, which abundance is multiplied unto them through the manifestations of the Spirit; nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld.

In your temporal things you must be equal. Somebody says, "What are you going to do? Take everything the rich man has and make him a pauper?" No. God's law never works a hardship upon any man. The purpose of God's law is to bless, to bring added blessing, and he says that when we do it not grudgingly, that an abundance of the manifestation of the Spirit shall not be withheld, but as we move out in harmony with these higher ideals God has promised to pour out his Spirit upon us, and there will come added testimonies to us, proving the divinity of this work, and the great financial scheme instituted therein.

It is not the purpose to take away from a man that which he needs in order to make his stewardship the most profitable. The thing that God asks of him is that he consecrate of his surplus that which he has over and above his needs.

A man may be in business and may require fifty thousand dollars to operate that business. It would not be right to make him try to operate it on twenty-five thousand. God doesn't want him to do that. God wants him to have all he needs in order to make that stewardship a success, and if he has proved himself a wise steward, and he comes to the bishop and he says, "Brother McGuire, I have been operating this stewardship. I have an opportunity to invest in some cattle. I need five thousand dollars to do that. I can almost double that in a certain length of time." The bishop investigates it, looks into the ability of this man to handle that amount of money, and sees what has been done. And when the man comes again to the bishop he says, "Here is the money, the surplus from my stewardship. Take it, improve upon it, and bless humanity with it." That is all.

Let me assure you that the Lord doesn't want our money only as it is used to bless humanity.

When our hearts are touched by the Spirit of God, then shall we be able to see the needs of our fellow man and be willing to impart of our substance, according to his law for their support.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON ANSWERED BY ITS OWN EVIDENCE.—NO. 2

BY T. J. SMITH

The divine inspiration of the Book of Mormon is a subject of vital importance to every true and honest believer in it; and when it is doubted and attacked, be it from whatever source it may, it becomes a matter of necessity that a deep and thorough investigation be given it; and the writer has demonstrated by years of close study and research that there is, or can be, no more effectual answer to all objection than the book itself contains, when fully searched out and properly understood. To his mind nearly all the writers heretofore, who have endeavored to answer such objections, have left the matter in an unsettled and doubtful state; hence he claims the propriety of these articles he is placing before the readers of the HERALD, which articles he trusts will be sufficient to settle the matter permanently in the minds of all honest and unprejudiced people.

THE FORTY-THREE MEN

As we discussed in a former article the case of King Omer, we will now turn to that of the forty-three men sent out by King Limhi.

Now King Limhi had sent, previous to the coming of Ammon, a small number of men to search for the land of Zarahemla; but they could not find it, and they were lost in the wilderness. Nevertheless they did find a land which had been peopled; yea, a land which was covered with dry bones; yea, a land which had been peopled, and which had been destroyed; and they having supposed it to be the land of Zarahemla, returned to the land of Nephi, having arrived in the borders of the land not many days before the coming of Ammon. And they brought a record with them, even a record of the people whose bones they had found; and they were engraven on plates of ore.—Mosiah 9:166-170. (See also 5:60-67.)

King Limhi occupied away down in the land of Nephi, which was situated in the northwestern part of South America, supposed to be about seven hundred miles south of the Isthmus of Panama. The place where Ether finished and hid up the plates, above referred to, is supposed to be in the western part of New York State. So to have gotten the plates these forty-three men must have traveled over four thousand miles, through a country uninhabited for four hundred and eighty years, consisting of mountains, lakes, swamps, impenetrable forests and impassable rivers.

The same objections by unbelievers in the book and the same theories by its friend to meet them, are advanced here as in the case of King Omer.

We hope to make it clear that those men never made any such long, difficult and unheard-of journey as is here supposed; that they never came any farther north than Central America. And further, that both Ether and Coriantumr went south after the great slaughter at the Hill Ramah; the former into the land of Zarahemla and the latter into Central America.

Now a word about the land of Zarahemla. It was situated in the northern part of South America, and eastward from the Isthmus of Panama, and bordered on the Caribbean Sea. It could not have been more than four hundred miles from the land of Nephi; but a vast wilderness lay between them. Alma, with a company of men, women and children, flocks and herds, traveled the distance in twenty-one days. (Mosiah 11:3, 69, 76.)

The forty-three men missed their way, probably, by going too far west, and became lost in the wilderness, but entering the Isthmus, traveled on northward until they discovered the land known to the Nephites as Desolation; and supposing it to be the land of Zarahemla, they returned to the land of Nephi again.

We wish the reader to note this point; had these men traveled all the way to New York State, could they have been so simple as to suppose the vast country, stretching northward for nearly four thousand miles, was the land for which they were searching, when it was only about four hundred miles from their own land? Yet the record states that they did so suppose.

Another point to be noticed here is, the land they discovered was covered with dry bones of men and beasts and ruined buildings. Are we to understand from this account that it was one vast bone field from Central America all the way up to New York?

Again, these dry bones had lain bleaching in the arid mountains of Central America for four hundred and eighty years. (And it was no doubt the aridity of the atmosphere that preserved them.) Had they been under ordinary conditions of weather, such as rains, dews, frosts and snows, they would have long before crumbled to dust; hence this land of bones could not have extended farther north than Central America, or at the farthest, southern Mexico. What then could have induced these men to travel three thousand miles through such a country?

Ether must have "hidden up" his plates in an exposed condition, or the forty-three men would never have found them. Had they been thus hidden in New York State, they would have long before been destroyed by the natural action of the elements. They were, no doubt, concealed in some ruined building in Central America.

We will now show that Ether never finished his record until he had gone from the Hill Ramah down into Central America. The record reads thus:

And the Lord spake unto Ether, and said unto him, Go forth. And he went forth, and beheld that the words of the Lord had all been fulfilled; and he finished his record; (and the hundredth part I have not written;) and he hid them in a manner that the people of Limhi did find them.—Ether 6: 107, 108.

That means that Ether beheld that the whole of the Jaredite nation had been destroyed according to the words of the Lord that it would be if they did not repent.

Now that Ether could do this, one of two conditions confronted him. If he was in Central America at the time, to behold that all the Jaredite people had been destroyed, he would be compelled to go northward through that vast country, stretching from where he was, to the great lakes, a country that had been inhabited by millions, and see that all had been destroyed. Or being in this northern country he would have to go clear down to the Isthmus to see it all. This he, no doubt, did after which he finished his record.

But, says the objector, does not the record state in Ether 6: 15, that he finished it in the cavity of a rock? It states that he finished the remainder of it there. This statement was made long before the war ended, and cannot refer to the final end of the record, but to the finishing of some other part of it, for it clearly states that he finished it after he beheld the destruction of the Jaredites.

We wish to note now a situation that confronted these warring Jaredites which, we believe, will locate definitely the scene of their final destruction.

It is claimed by nearly all writers upon this subject, that all the fighting of both the Jaredites and Nephites took place in and around their seat of government in Central America. In thus writing, they seem to be oblivious of the fact that it would involve a situation the next thing to an impossibility. They fail to note that part of North America known now as the United States, was densely populated by the Jaredites, as evidenced by the stupendous works left behind them, consisting of thousands of huge mounds, immense inclosures and numerous strong and formidable fortifications.

Are we to suppose for one moment that this tremendous host, scattered as they were, from Maine to California, and from Oregon to Florida, flocked to a single man together, marched three thousand miles south, and were crammed into Central America and slaughtered? And still worse, these warring people were about equally divided. Ether beheld those who were for Coriantumr, gathered to his army, and those who were for Shiz, gathered to his army. (Ether 6: 85.) So we have here, the unheard of phenomenon of two hostile armies gathering together, side by side, leaving their own formidable fortifications and means of defense, marching three thousand miles south to fight out their difficulties.

Why could they not do this in their own country and save such a long journey?

It cannot be denied that the greater part of their fighting took place in Central America and surrounding country, but from the time Shiz (Coriantumr's last antagonist) arose against him, the war moved northward, and remained there until the final struggle at the Hill Ramah.

Now in corroboration of the above we will note another situation. Soon after Shiz had "come against" Coriantumr, and before the people began to separate themselves to the armies of their choice, there had been slain of the latter's army two million men, besides their women and children. (Ether 6: 73.) We think it fair to suppose that these (women and children) each equaled the number of men, there would therefore have been slain of Coriantumr's army alone, six million souls, and, no doubt, as many more had been slain on the other side. This would aggregate twelve million souls, and add to it the unknown thousands who had been slain in war previous to Coriantumr's time, and this fact stands apparent to all normal minds, that the inhabitants of that part of the country would be fully exhausted, and the only possible method to continue war would be to move northward and gather the vast hosts into the final struggle.

We will notice now the fact of Ether's going south into Zarahemla. About four hundred years after the landing of the Nephites in America their king Mosiah I, with his people left the land of Nephi, and, by direction of the Lord, went up to the land of Zarahemla and became united with that people, and was chosen king over the two nations. Then the record states:

And it came to pass in the days of Mosiah, there was a large stone brought unto him, with engravings upon it; and he did interpret the engravings, by the gift and power of God, and they gave an account of one Coriantumr, and the slain of his people. And Coriantumr was discovered by the people of Zarahemla; and he dwelt with them for the space of nine moons.—Omni 1: 35-38.

It cannot be doubted that those engravings were placed upon that stone by either Coriantumr or Ether, for they were the only two members of the Jaredite people who escaped the great slaughter at the Hill Ramah. We have no proof whatever that the former understood engraving, had engraving tools, or understood the history of his people, besides, the account does not read as if he wrote it; but upon the other hand Ether was an expert engraver; he had tools for engraving, he understood fully the history of Coriantumr, and his people, and the account given is an exact reproduction, as far as it goes, of that on his twenty-four plates.

It has been suggested that Coriantumr might have related his story to the Zarahemlaites and some one of that people placed it upon the stone. Such an idea is very unreasonable, for had that been the case it would have been in the language of that people, and would not require "the gift and power of God" to interpret it. It is wholly unreasonable to suppose that stone had been carried there all the way from New York, southern Mexico or Central America; so the proof is clear that Ether was there in the land of Zarahemla. And the fact that he was there, we believe, is a key to the great mystery as to how and where the Nephites came in possession of the Urim and Thummim, and the vision of the brother of Jared upon Mount Shelem.

It is stated in Mosiah 12:19 in speaking of the Urim and Thummim that they had been prepared from the beginning, and handed down from generation to generation (of course through the prophets), for the purpose of interpreting languages; and Ether being in the prophetic line they would by right come into his hands. They were given to the brother of Jared upon the Mount Shelem and were sealed up with the written account of his vision given there, with the repeated command, that they were not to be given to the children of men until after Christ's crucifixion. (Ether 1:86, 94.) And Moroni states in the 95th verse, "And for this cause [that they should not be translated and given to the children of men before the crucifixion] did King Benjamin keep them."

Ether being in possession of them, and he being the one who placed the engravings upon the stone, and that act being the last known one of his life on earth, what idea could be more reasonable or consistent than that he deposited them with the stone and they came into King Mosiah's hands with it? And when the record states that he interpreted the engravings upon the stone by "the gift and power of God," he did so by the Urim and Thummim.

And another reasonable conclusion is, that after he had translated the writing upon the stone, there would be a natural curiosity and clamoring among the people to know what was in the other part that was sealed up, and to prevent this "King Benjamin did keep them."

There are other side evidences that Mosiah I had the Urim and Thummim. Ammon states in Mosiah 5:72 that the power to use them was a gift from God. Mosiah translated the writings upon the stone by the "gift and power of God." Amaleki who wrote of King Mosiah exhorts all men to believe in the "gift of interpreting languages" (Omni 1:44), which would be useless advice if there were no means of interpreting them in existence when he wrote.

We have one more objection to the Book of Mormon we must answer, and then we will desist, for this article has gone far beyond our intentions at its beginning. It is not an objection brought by its enemies, but its friends. It is that Moroni, although he was writing by the direct command of God, and, no doubt, by inspiration, made a grave mistake when he states in Ether 1:95 that it was King Benjamin who kept the Urim and Thummim instead of Mosiah II. We are firmly convinced that the committee who authorized the insertion of the name "Mosiah" after that of Benjamin in the above verse, made a great blunder in so doing. It throws a shade of doubt over the minds of believers in the inspiration of the book, puts a heavy cudgel in the hands of its enemies, and is in direct opposition to the oft-repeated declaration in the book that "this record is true." There is not one single proof in the book that Mosiah II kept them (Urim and Thummim and Jaredite vision) to prevent the latter from being translated and given to the children of men. It is true that he had them, for he translated the twenty-four plates of Ether by the Urim and Thummim; but no proof whatever that he "kept them" to prevent the translation of the sealed past; and that is the very reason given why King Benjamin kept them. Mosiah I having them, they would, by right, come to Benjamin, as he was the son of Mosiah.

Now by taking the views herein expressed, we shorten up the long and improbable journey supposed to have been made by these forty-three men, to a reasonable and believable length, answer all objections and leave the divine inspiration of the book wholly unimpaired.

Our next subject will be the case of King Coriantumr.

(To be continued.)

POVERTY

Poverty is uncomfortable, as I can testify; but nine times out of ten the best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself.

In all my acquaintance I never knew a man to be drowned who was worth saving. It is the pride of every American that many cherished names, at whose mention our heart beats with quicker bound, were worn by the sons of poverty who conquered obscurity and became fixed stars in our firmament. There is no horizontal stratification in this country like rock in the earth, that holds one class down below forevermore, and lets another come to the surface to stay there forever. Our stratification is like the ocean, where every drop is free to move and where from the sternest depths of the mighty deep any drop may come up to glitter on the highest wave that rolls.—Garfield.

Of General Interest

TRAINING THE INDIANS

For the second time the children of the original Americans are this year starting a course of study which will give the Indians the best vocational training offered by any school system in the United States, under the direction of the United States Indian Office, Department of the Interior. As these schools, located in various sections of the country, must train Indian youths of both sexes to assume the duties and responsibilities of self-support and citizenship, this course strongly emphasizes vocational training. The whole system, recently devised, has been tried out and found not wanting.

The course is divided into three divisions. The first is the beginning stage, the second the finding stage, and the third the finishing stage. The training, during the first and second periods, is domestic, and industrial activities center around the conditions essential to the improvement and proper maintenance of the home and farm. The course outlined in the prevocational division is unique in that in addition to the regular academic subjects boys are required to take practical courses in farming, gardening, dairying, farm carpentry, farm blacksmithing, farm engineering, farm masonry, farm painting and shoe and harness repairing, and girls are required to take courses in home cooking, sewing, laundering, nursing, poultry raising and kitchen gardening.

This course helps the Indian youths to find those activities for which they are best adapted and to which they should apply themselves definitely during the vocational period, the character and amount of academic work being determined by its relative value and importance as a means of solving the problems of the farmer, mechanic and housewife. It also prepares them for industrial efficiency.

Nonessentials are eliminated. One half of each day is given to industrial training and the other half to academic studies. Every effort is directed toward training the Indian boys and girls for efficient and useful lives under the conditions which they must meet after leaving school. Other subjects to which this course directs special attention are health, motherhood and child welfare, civics, community meetings and extension work.

For a great many years the officials of the Indian Office have felt the need of a standard and uniform course of study for the Indian schools of the country. They saw that such a course would have to be definite yet sufficiently flexible to make it adaptable to local conditions in an area as extended as the United States. After their long course of search, the experts of the Indian Office, who have been in the closest touch with this work, say they came to the conclusion that the economic needs of all people—and of the Indians especially—demand that the schools provide for instruction along eminently practical lines. To this end the industrial schools were established, in which the culture value of education is not neglected, but rather subordinated to the practical needs of the child's environment.—Washington correspondence in the Deseret Evening News, October 28, 1916.

* * * * *

IF YOU WOULD LIVE LONG

Doctor Frank Crane has taken a report on 107 cases of longevity printed in the British Health Review and made the following deductions:

There were few bachelors or old maids in the lot. Most all of the persons examined had spent much of their time out of doors. The house, the close room, is the chief of life-shorteners.

Very few indulged, or had habitually indulged, in stimulants, such as alcohol, tobacco, tea, and coffee. There is no doubt as to the value of stimulants: the trouble is they are costly; the price we pay is—life.

They used very little medicine.

Most were of cheerful habit, worried little, and laughed a deal.

Most of them, including the wealthy, had worked all their lives, and most of them had continued their activities even in advanced years. A favorite form of suicide among folks past fifty is to stop work.

Scarcely any of them were fat. Few fleshy people grow very old.

They were nearly all great sleepers. They went to bed early and rose early. Those whose activities are by artificial light have little insurance of old age.

All were careful and moderate eaters. To eat what you like and all you like may be a merry life, but it will be a short one. The curse of modern life is overfeeding.

Very few ate much meat. Most ate it sparingly. Many not at all. Meat really belongs to the stimulant group, along with alcohol and coffee; all the food value there is in it can be obtained from other sources without the poison.

Almost all were large drinkers of water, but not mineral water.

Most of them were great readers, especially in later life.

The many thousands of people who have read How to Live, that excellent new book by Professor Irving Fisher and Doctor Eugene L. Fisk (Funk and Wagnalls Company, New York), which has so soon achieved so large a measure of popularity, will agree that the above conditions of long life tally well with the advice contained therein.

Hymns and Poems

A Christmas Picture

A picture we think we see to-day,
As we look out upon the snow;
It first was shown so far away—
In the city of David so long ago.

The star in the east, shining bright,
Shepherds on the hillside at early morn;
The host of angels with heaven's light,
Singing the song of a Savior born.

Peace and love, to the children of men,
Good will to all, the angels sang,
What joy it brought to the shepherds then
As the beautiful bells of heaven rang.

The cave wherein the holy child lay,
The pure, gentle mother by his side;
The wise men came their homage to pay,
Telling of the star which was their guide.

We think, as we see the picture to-day,
Of his love for us, the sufferings he bore;
Savior in heaven! we humbly pray,
We will love and serve thee ever more.

For we have obeyed thy gospel here,
And will faithfully try to others show,
What we were taught by Joseph the Seer,
And the picture we saw in the snow.

CATHERINE THOMAS BOOKER.

Woman's Auxiliary

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

Thanksgiving the Year Around

Following the perusal of Sister Walker's thoughtful and forceful article in last issue, we ran across the following little editorial in one of the commercial publications of our city, Omaha. The fine spirit it breathes is so different from the one which attracted Sister Walker's attention and aroused her indignation, that we feel it will be of great benefit and uplift to our readers. While it cannot be denied that the spirit of greed and selfishness is rampant in the world and that many men float their own rafts, even if to do so requires them to push their brothers into the sea, yet we must concede that the wonderful message of Christ was not given in vain, and that its presence and constantly spreading influence in the world for those two thousand years, cannot but have strengthened to a great degree the forces of good, and the humanitarian impulses of the men who have come under that influence. Would not belief otherwise rather belittle the mighty power of that teaching and that influence? Good does not always herald its own presence—does not always advertise its work; it goes about, quietly, helpfully, performing many missions of love and pity which never get in print. Men are often extremely sensitive about their very best and fine impulses; often they hesitate to even speak the wonderful thoughts of their spirits to each other, but we must believe that the influences for good are ever watchful and alert, ever active and effective in the world; for is not Christ to triumph? And will it not be brought about through the quiet uprooting of evil, its outcasting and elimination? We think so; and while we must not sleep in fancied security when the enemy of our souls is awake and busy, we must not, on the other hand, shut our eyes to the coming of the King, to his appearing in the hearts and lives of men all about us!

The causes for gratitude to God, as expressed in the following by this man of affairs in the midst of teeming city life, are things for which we may all lift our hearts in thanksgiving the whole year around,—things which we will be the better for contemplating and holding in our thoughts every day.

AUDENTIA ANDERSON.

"For this I Am Grateful"

In "taking stock" on this Thanksgiving Day of 1916 I find that I have had some disappointments and some sorrows. I have made many mistakes and have felt many regrets. But above it all there rises to my view so much of good and profit, so much of the real and the true, that I can join in the celebration of this day with genuine gratitude.

I am grateful for the fact that with the rising and the setting of the sun "Good's filling the world and some of it's coming my way."

I am grateful for my ever-growing faith in men; for the literature that enlarges the vision; for the Bible with its priceless treasures; for Shakespeare, for Milton, for Scott; for "Bobby" Burns with all his human weakness and all his mighty strength; for all the classics of the ages and for the inspiring words of present-day writers, some living in obscurity, but many making the world better through the products of their pens.

For all the inventions that have lightened the tasks of men, for the "dreams come true" of Edison, of Burbank, of Marconi and all the rest. For every "cup of cold water" held before the trembling lips of man; for every hospital for the suffering, every refuge for the weak, every shelter for the fatherless; for every law enacted in harmony with "the still sad music of humanity"—the mother's pension, the child labor law and every statute of its kind—for these I am grateful.

For the love of those who are joined with me by ties of blood and for the love of those who are related only in the ties of friendship. For the ever growing willingness to understand the folly of hate. For every tear that falls in response to another's woe; for every cordial clasp of hand and genuine beat of heart, for every regret for foolish deed and pride for every manly act, for these I am grateful.

For the lovelight in the mother's eyes, for the laughter of the little child, for all that goes to make life nearer what it ought to be—for these I am grateful.

For bounteous crops and blessed shine of sun and fall of rain, for fertile soil, for ingenuity of men and tender ministrations of women—for these I am grateful.

For the precious principle of peace that lights the souls of men within the very shadow of a war with grief unheard of heretofore in all the history of the world—the principle which with all our doubts and fears must triumph if man's faith in God be true—for this I am grateful.

For the United States of America, with its constitution and its laws written in "liberty's unclouded blaze," with its countless privileges of citizenship, with its devotion to the cause of peace and the rights of men, with its mercy and its justice—I am grateful for the United States of America!

For "the old flag" and for the fact that it is flying in the hearts of a hundred million freemen; for the truth that it is not a mere piece of bunting, nor the official emblem of a nation, but rather that it is the symbol of principles "eternal as the stars and resistless as the tides"; for the "old flag" of our fathers, for its brilliant stars and its gleaming stripes, for the things it has stood for in the noble past and the things it stands for in the nobler present—I give to the good God the grateful thanks of an American citizen.—The Omaha Nebraskan.

Building the Home Library

(The following is the fourth article in the splendid series by Sister Sandy upon the interests of the children in the home. Mothers may with profit both read and discuss this little paper, and see wherein they may apply its suggestions.—A. A.)

PARTICULARLY FOR CHILDREN

It is possible that there are many differences of opinion as to how to build a home library. Most of us, I think, acquire our library as we can, not as we would like to do. If we had the means to buy the books we like most, I do not think we would have much difficulty in selecting the ones we should have, but usually we acquire our library, one book at a time, and when we put them all together in the new bookcase we have as varied an assortment of subjects and authors as we have of bindings. We have selected our books, or they have been selected for us and given us as gifts, without any motive in view, without any particular plan by which to work and the assortment that we have collected, that now stares us in the face, proves clearly the need of study on our part, and a definite plan by which we may work in the future.

Every child should have his own library (which means not only his own books, but a place in which to keep them), for it is far better that each child should have his own good books, which he can read over and over again, thoroughly mastering their contents, than that he should read entirely from a public library. For when a book is read it should be well thought over before another one is begun, for reading without thought generates no ideas, and might prove harmful instead of helpful to the child.

It is well, too, for the children to have the run of a library for adults, (always provided that dangerous books are excluded). The time of the year should be considered, when we are selecting books for the children to read. When they are in school, busy with study all day, they should not be expected to read so-called instructive books in the evening. They have earned the right to relaxation and should be allowed to read travels, history, and some good fiction. If their tastes are healthy, they are best left to themselves, if unhealthy, they must be directed. It is easy for adults to neglect the children they have under them, and it is easy to direct them overmuch, but it is difficult to watch them, and yet let the children go their own way, but the watching is better if it has with it the needful directing.

No child's library should be complete without a collection of Fairy Tales, Arabian Nights, Robinson Crusoe, and Pilgrims Progress. The following list is taken from How to Form a Library, by Wheatley, and though a little old, might be used as a guide in selecting your gift books for the children.

Snow Bound, illustrated, Whittier; Life of Longfellow, Kennedy; A Summer in the Azores, Baker; Among the Isles of Shoals, Celia Thaxter; The Boys of '76, Coffin; The Boys of '61, Coffin; Story of Our Country, Higginson; Sir Walter Raleigh, Towle; Child's History of England, Dickens; Tales from Shakespeare, Lamb; Tales from Homer, Church; The Wonder Book, Hawthorne; Poetry for Children, Eliot; The Seven Little Sisters, Andrews; Hans Brinker, or the Silver Skates, Dodge; Room for one More, Mary T. Higginson.

To these I would add just two of my own favorites: Child's Garden of Verse, Stevenson; Poems for Children, James Whitcomb Riley.

Many books published by the church for our young people might be added here, and we must not forget that a copy of the Bible presented by mother or Father finds a very acceptable place in the library of all children.

LULA M. SANDY.

Our President Sends Greetings

(Sister Frederick M. Smith sent the following message to the women and girls of our Sunday school in accordance with our request. It was greatly enjoyed by all of us who heard it and as we feel there is in it so much of good we submit it for publication.)

Though local in a way we are sure the general sisterhood will be benefited by learning our sister's attitude as she expresses it in this message.—ANNA DE JONG SMITH.)

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, October 30, 1916.

To the Women and Girls of the Saint Louis Sunday School; Greeting: In response to the request of Sister Anna de Jong Smith I send a message to the sisters of Saint Louis. As I respond my heart is prayerfully raised to our heavenly Father that some word of sympathy, encouragement or loving counsel may find lodgment, the fruits of which may unfold beneficent results whether they be evident or unseen.

To the mothers and teachers who are engaged in caring for the bodies and souls of the youth of the church, let me suggest that natural ability alone is not sufficient but that we live in a day when we are permitted to supplement our own capabilities with those of noted educators who have spent many, many years in procuring helps for the solution of the weighty problems which we are attempting to solve day by day. Are we availing ourselves of the opportunities open to us from these sources?

To the sisters both young and old engaged in the so-called practical work of the Sunday school or branch; our circles which participate in aid society or relief and service work of various kinds, let me congratulate you on your many kindly ministrations and assure you that your sacrifices are appreciated. May we also hope that you may be disposed to investigate the modern methods of relief and service, learning to broaden the scope of your service until you shall be able to work most intelligently and in harmony with the priesthood of your branch when necessity arises for such cooperation.

To the sisters among you, whether mothers or not, those whose home duties permit them to participate in public affairs of a social or civic nature, let me suggest that you assume a thoughtful, intelligent, conservative, and yet wholesomely progressive attitude toward the woman movement without the church as well as within the church.

To the young women and girls—our valuable army who are in preparation for the stupendous task of faithfully prosecuting the upbuilding of Zion, "the pure in heart," accept greetings of especial tenderness and good will. Your struggles are not unknown nor unappreciated. I was a girl. I have two girls. We can sympathize with you in your hours of sadness and discouragements and we can rejoice with you in your successes and in the "joyousness of youth" which should be yours. We would merely suggest: In times of storm and stress, hold fast to your ideals.

My greeting, then, to the women and girls of Saint Louis is to congratulate you on the wholesome progress of the past, a development which has not escaped our observation, and to express the hope and confidence that the future shall find your services even more efficient and yourselves more fully consecrated to our Master's cause.

Sincerely, and in gospel bonds,
MRS. FREDERICK M. SMITH.

Sanitation and Hygiene

A number of inquiries have come in concerning the value of sanitation and hygiene as subjects for class study, especially in rural communities. For answer let me quote from Rural Hygiene by Isaac William Brewer, M. D.:

Chapter—Work and Recreation.

"The local physician should always be on the school board. . . . The large cities have absorbed the best of our religious thinkers. . . . This is far from what it should be. Let the country churches be filled with strong men of action who will be a force in the community.

"To overcome the isolation each neighborhood should have its club for men and women. . . . The singing classes and socials are to be encouraged and there should be lecture and lantern shows."

Chapter—Dwellings.

"An abundance of fresh air is absolutely necessary for the health of the body.

"Children should come to school with their hands and faces washed and otherwise neat and tidy.

Chapter—Disposal of Excreta.

The dry earth system is most sanitary and economical for rural communities."

Chapter—milk.

"Tuberculosis is spread to a great many herds by cattle that are imported and it should be a rule not to make additions to the herd until new-comers have been proven to be free from disease."

Chapter—Hogs.

"Trichinosis is transmitted to the hog through the faeces of animal or man that are infected, as well as through flesh, and especially through the refuse and rats from slaughterer houses. . . . Man contracts the disease by eating undercooked meat, raw pork, or ham."

From the above quotations you will gain some idea of the immense amount of ground that may be covered in studying such a subject and if the suggestions and thoughts offered are put into force, it means your community will be a progressive, wide-awake one, each member ready to stand by the others in whatever will help the individual or the group as a whole.

And right here allow me to suggest to the brothers and sisters undertaking to follow out a course of study as suggested in the foregoing, that you have an excellent opportunity to ask in your neighbors who are not of "like faith." Sometimes friendships so formed and interests worked out in common lead to opportunities later on to present the gospel, dear to each of us.

Yours in the progress of the work,
MRS. BERTHA L. MADER.

Now let us thank th' eternal power, convinced
That heaven but tries our virtue by affliction;
That oft the cloud which wraps the present hour
Serves but to brighten our future days.

—John Brown.

News from Branches

Lamoni, Iowa

It was an inspiring sight to see sixty ordained men simultaneously leave the church at four p. m. last Sunday, bent on securing a religious census of the town. Within thirty minutes the telephone rang at the church, and a voice announced "District number 13 completed." About thirty families visited by four men in as many minutes, and the work well done.

In another minute another district reported by phone, each followed later by a personal visit to the church with the cards. In an hour and a half the cards were checked in from the most remote districts.

Some of the figures compiled, which are subject to correction on a more leisurely examination, reveal the following:

Four hundred and twenty families were visited, with a total of 1,623 persons. The College, Children's Home, and old folks' homes were not included in this survey.

Of the 420 families, 335 are Latter Day Saint. (Where there is a division of religious belief, the predominating membership is given as representing the family.) In these families are 965 members, and 310 preferring our religion over others.

There are 15 Methodist Episcopal families: 48 members, 17 preferring. Baptist: 7 families, 19 members, 9 preferring. Christian (or Disciple): 6 families, 22 members, 11 preferring. United Brethren: 2 families, 2 members, 2 preferring. Presbyterian: 1 family, 5 members, 1 preferring. Catholic: 1 family, 4 members, 1 preferring. Apostolic: 2 families, 5 members, none preferring. Advent Christian: 1 family, 6 members, none preferring.

The following churches have one member each: Congregational, Holiness, Strangite. There are three Lutherans, and one who prefers the Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

We are confident that much good will come of this census. J. F. Garver, the branch president, with his coworkers have some excellent plans which will no doubt be developed therefrom that will result in such cooperation as we have never known heretofore.

The Religio elected Paul N. Craig for its president the coming year, and his associates, Frank McDonald and Alonzo Jones.

The Sunday school reelected George W. Blair as its superintendent. He has served in this capacity for eight years. Few changes were made in the personnel of the officers.

DELBERT.

Independence Stake

On December 10 Brother McKiernan announced the hymn and Brother Walter W. Smith preached a sermon based on the text "He that cometh to God must believe that he is." (Hebrews 11:6.) He said this church is doing as great a work as the angel who announced the coming of Christ, or any other great important work; we are too close to really discern the restoration of the gospel.

The first message of Joseph Smith,—"I saw two personages before me, and one said to the other 'This is my beloved son, hear ye him,'" was a message different from all the doctrines promulgated in the world. This church needs the soul of love, and the world is longing to help the man who will put soul into his work. Our beloved pastor spoke of the Sanitarium, and said "There's soul there." He also spoke in a commendatory manner of the choir music: "There is soul there also; consecrated human hearts who have the consciousness of being directed by divine power."

"Whole-hearted service is what is needed. Let us look to God, who can see, and feel, and hear: Let us adjust ourselves to him."

At the afternoon meeting three adults were confirmed by Brethren Gowell and I. N. White and a baby, a sweet bud of promise, was blessed. Also, with our pastor in charge, assisted by Elders A. H. Parsons and Guinand, Brother Esgar was ordained a deacon. Following this session was one set aside for Bible research, attended by the church in general, and excellent interest was manifest.

On the following morning the obsequies of our faithful and devoted sister, the wife of Elder Abner Lloyd were held, and Brother Foss who preached a sermon full of sympathy, assisted by Doctor Joseph Luff and W. W. Smith were in charge.

Another forward step in systematic work is initiated by the appointing of committees to act in the capacity of visitors who can be relied upon, to minister to the afflicted and infirm, who are shut-ins at the Sanitarium and the Old Folks' Home.

The Saints rejoice to hear of the improvement going on in the case of our dear Sister Peterson whose voice has often been heard in prayer and testimony, and who has been a tower of strength to those who have been, under her loving care, ministered to with a mother's tender sympathy.

The educational work is progressing wherever it has been taken up, and we hear excellent reports of the good services accruing to the same. Efforts of the Laurel Club, the Mutual Helpers, the Auxiliary in all its departments and especially the Aid Societies both here and in the Second Independence Branch. In the latter society are about twenty members, whose president is Mrs. H. W. Goold, and they are strenuously engaged in working for their pipe organ fund.

Our faithful brother Arthur Mills is pushing the good work at Walnut Park. His class in advanced English is forging ahead, and their Bible normal will be ready for an examination in a few days. Tag day will soon be here with its bevy of cheerful helpers under the chaperonage of Sister E. L. Kelley,—all enlisted in the work of Christmastide.

The center place on yesterday witnessed a rousing gathering of the Jackson County W. C. T. U., with its score of departments, its enthusiastic president, Mrs. Taylor, and Judge Kemper to orate and enthuse in behalf of national prohibition.

ABBIE A. HORTON.

Letter Department

From Here and There

Elder L. G. Holloway, home at Lamoni for a few days during the holidays, reports having a busy season this fall in the Nauvoo District. He says he has had good hearings almost without exception.

In a letter from Bothwell, Ontario, Brother John C. Dent writes that the Saints at that place have recently completed their new church, and on November 26 held their opening services with Bishop R. C. Evans as speaker. The building is of red brick veneer, with cement block foundation, and valued at seven thousand dollars. There was a great deal of free work done by Saints, all laboring diligently towards its completion. They rejoice that they are privileged to meet in a new, clean building, and hope that no act of theirs will ever be the means of hindering the work, but rather in their lives the gospel may be exemplified. Brother Dent says they still have the plans and specifications, and if any branch anywhere is thinking of building and would like to look them over, they will gladly be sent.

From Grannis, Arkansas, Sister Winnifred Clinton sends a few items concerning the Riley-Bogard debate held at Winthrop, beginning November 27. She was in attendance during the sessions, and reports that everything went smoothly, leaving everyone in high spirits. Brother E. A. Erwin is reporting the detailed items of this debate.

Elder B. J. Scott, of Saint Joseph, Missouri, incloses a dollar for a copy of the Journal of American History, recently mentioned in these columns. He concludes with this statement: "I do not know how one of our ministers can afford to be without such valuable information when it can be had at the price. Gladly would I, had I no other way, do without two meals a day until I saved the price of the magazine."

A brother located in the West says this: "I have often tried to add my little for the good of your readers, but many pages of manuscript have been put away as I reread it, for I never feel as if I had been able to hit the mark of my aim as I would like to. But when I finish the one I am writing I will send it." It is our opinion that the brother will get some valuable experience in this process, but we hope he won't be hypercritical in his attitude toward his own work. We all appreciate the product of such efforts; yet we are confident the readers of the big HERALD family won't be as severe as he is.

The quorum of elders of the Eastern Mission held a very successful ministerial conference on the 4th, at Attleboro, Massachusetts. The subject for consideration was "elders' courts," the various phases of the question being ably presented in ten papers. A large number were in attendance, and very much good was done. The Lord manifested that it was his will that his people should move forward, come up higher, and give to the carrying on of the Lord's work, being informed that he would move among his people, the church debt would be paid, and the temple would be built, that the endowment might be given.

With his letter from Port Arthur, Ontario, Elder S. W. Tomlinson sends us a circular he had printed to meet opposition. Except for some unfortunate typographical errors and being poorly printed it should do good. We mention these, as they have an effect of cheapening our work. When possible—which is not always so—those having printing done should ask the proofs and then mark these errors. There is no extra charge unless changes from the original are made, and the result will be much more satisfactory all around.

Through the kindness of Sister Edna J. Cochran, of Van-Cleave, Mississippi, we have received a copy of The Daily Herald from Gulfport. It is a profusely illustrated number, published in the interests of the Mississippi Centennial Exposition which will open December 10, 1917, at Gulfport, Mississippi. It is an interesting number. We have some most progressive members in that section.

Brother Thomas Hougas, a member of the old Mission Branch in La Salle, County, Illinois, was recently very kindly remembered by about one hundred and sixty-five Saints and friends in honor of his eightieth birthday. He has been a valiant preacher of the latter-day gospel over fifty years and is much beloved by all. He and his wife were presented with a beautiful leather rocker. It was in this neighborhood that the first church building of the Reorganization was built, this being replaced with a new one in 1900. We thank the guest for the items and wish Brother Hougas many more pleasant days.

Brother E. E. Long tells us of a recent visit to a Roman Catholic church. He commends the devotion which is so strongly manifest in the lives of these people, and suggests that no matter how much we disagree with their philosophy we must concede that they set us an excellent example in devotion. His is a common experience.

Are there any of our members in Memphis, Tennessee? is the question Mrs. Mary Hooper, of 569 Poplar Avenue asks. She is there for the winter and wants to get in touch with our people.

We learn by letter from Elder J. M. Terry, of Seattle, Washington, that they dedicated their church on December 3. An interesting program was carried out, with the sermon by their pastor Brother Terry, from Genesis 28:17, showing the peculiar features of the house of God as inspiration, angels of power to restore man to the presence of God, illustrated by the "ladder," showing in the effort our attitude as a church toward God, Christ, the Bible, Book of Mormon, marriage relations, etc. The dedicatory prayer was offered by Elder William Johnson. The house was well filled, and reverence pervaded the assembly. Services are being held each night during the following week, with Elder William Johnson assisting. Brother Terry reports that the work is moving slowly, while the Saints are growing in grace and some nonmembers are investigating the claims of the church.

One of our Iowa music teachers writes: "I couldn't get along without my HERALD any more than I could my piano, violin, or ukelele—and take these away and I would die." That makes it indispensable, doesn't it?

Brother George F. Snellen, of Central Lake, Michigan, requests that the Saints unitedly pray for him the coming sacrament Sunday. He has an affliction similar to paralysis.

In the Regions Round About

In our removal Zionward we certainly have found a spot beautiful to us and to many others. The land lies in broad, gentle slopes or waves, which are more pleasing to the eye than the prairie lands. It seems we have just found home, and have been wanderers heretofore. As we stand upon the crest of a slope and view the landscape for miles around, the Spirit fills our very being, and we do not wonder at God's choosing. We hope many will take the step we have taken, and Saints, remember vividly, to prepare spiritually as well as temporally, for the spiritually dead are sifted out, while the diligent ones love this land and are putting good material into our branches.

We do not mean one must be free from all sin or weaknesses, but that one should have a desire to be pure and strive to live up to the gospel standard.

Environments are good. The branch is made up of worthy young folks, as well as the aged ones. We are especially proud of our young people. They have no bad habits, are clean, and pure and diligent in serving God. Their voices are heard in the prayer service as well as in song service. Our choir is made up of these young people and a movement is on foot for an orchestra. Some instruments have been purchased already, and others contemplate the same.

Oakdale is alive. We have a spiritual president (Brother Coleman Snider), well fitted for the place, a man of integrity, purity and virtue, both in word and deed, also well versed in music and in educational lines, a deep thinker, and the man for the place. He and his wife, as well as others, have worked diligently to build up the little branch here. The fruits of their labors are being seen.

The promise was given them that these walls would not contain the many that would gather in. It is verily being fulfilled. The church building just nicely holds the Saints now, more and more are gathering in continually, so ere long the walls will have to be broadened, as foretold.

The president of the district, Brother J. T. Ford, also abides in our branch, a man who is progressive in this work, a pusher and not a leaner. His letters have been seen in the papers from time to time. He has helped many a family to be pleasantly situated in this locality. Several families move in nearly every year. We are desirous of Saints who are alive in the work and who are willing to strive to overcome. A careless Saint would become dissatisfied and soon be sifted out, for the very reason that he would not feel at home, not being in harmony with his surroundings. We have a branch of about eighty-five, nearly all close enough to attend regularly.

Almost every sacrament the Lord remembers us and speaks to us. He is also not neglectful of us in our weekly meetings. We have been abundantly blessed of late. We have been advised, encouraged and admonished and have been promised that our granaries would be filled if we would just use our means properly, and that the devastating scourges, etc., would pass us by if we were but faithful. May the Lord help each one of us to be diligent and faithful, that he will not be ashamed to own us at his coming.

We are situated seventy-five miles northeast of Independence, and thirty-five miles southeast of Stewartville, and four miles from the railroad town of Hamilton. We are in the Far West District. Land ranges from fifty to one hundred acres within a few miles of the church, and in tracts from forty acres on up.

Saints, perilous times are coming! are already here! The hastening time is on! The sifting time is on! Let's awake from our slothfulness and prepare our hearts and finances for a movement Zionward. Don't waste our time on the frivolities of the world and unnecessarily fixing up our homes, but treasure up all our means and all our spirituality for a movement toward safety in Zion. As soon as the opportunity avails itself, take the step. Don't procrastinate, but remember the instructions to seek advice from the bishop and your God and prepare spiritually as well as temporally. We sought the approval of both the bishop and our God before making the step, and we were not turned away empty.

Therefore we are here striving to furnish good material for the branch, as well as absorbing the much good we desire from. We have never repented of the move and wish our many friends in Kewanee District, Illinois, much peace, happiness and above all, spiritual success.

Hoping that the church as a whole will go onward and upward and that we may all be numbered among the wise virgins, we remain,

Yours in the faith,

BROTHER AND SISTER JAMES DAWSON.

HAMILTON, MISSOURI, R. F. D. 5, Box 30D.

Riley-Bogard Debate

This debate is a matter of history in the minds of all those that heard it, and evidently will be on the minds of honest-hearted men and women as long as they live. I have moderated for several debates and heard many debates on different subjects, but I never listened to a debate that had as many peculiarities as this one. In the first place, I never heard a man take the position that Elder Bogard took. He stated that a man could not do anything to save himself, and that God called nobody now, and that wicked mothers bore wicked children.

The church propositions were on trial. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was on trial first. Elder Bogard did not abuse the doctrine of the church and the Saints anything like what I have heard debaters do, but he was very abusive to Brother Riley, often referring to his deficiency in education.

Brother Riley very beautifully presented the doctrine of the Latter Day Saint Church in origin, organization, faith, doctrine and practice from a Bible standpoint. I think most of the people who attended the debate could see that the church Brother Riley was a representative of was the church of the Bible.

When the Baptist Church came on trial, of all the victories I ever experienced I think Brother Riley had it in showing by the Bible and historians of the Baptist Church that it was not the church of the New Testament Scriptures. He proved by D. Benedict, Baptist historian, Newman, Baptist historian, Orchard's History of the Baptist Church from A. D. 33 to 1800, The History of American Baptist Mission, by Grammell, the History of the Valley of the Piedmonts, the History of the Baptist Church, by Thomas Armitage, and several of Ben M. Bogard's own books, also the Short History of the Baptist Church, by Henry C. Vedder, that the first Baptist Church originated in America by Roger Williams and Clark.

Elder Bogard admitted Clark organized the first Baptist church in America. Brother Riley proved by their own historians that Roger Williams was not a Baptist when he came to America, and had no connection with any Baptist faction on the Eastern Continent. Thus the Baptist Church was started in America, without any authority save that of man. Elder Bogard tried to prove a succession from the days of John the Baptist, until the present time, but the Bible and his own historians were against him.

Brother Riley proved by the Baptist Confession of Faith, published by the American Publishing Society, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, that said Confession taught on pages 20 and 21 that election taught foreordination and predestination, and fixed the number to be saved and to be lost, and not one could be added to the number nor one taken from it. The same Confession of Faith presents a God without body, parts or passion. Brother Riley stated to Elder Bogard he could not expect to hear from a God like that, and Elder Bogard had already stated all he knew he read out of books.

Elder Bogard in his first speech used about seven minutes on his affirmative and then went after the Book of Mormon, and he anticipated Brother Riley would follow him, but to his great surprise he paid no attention to him. I think this frustrated Elder Bogard and he seemed to be confused all the way through the rest of the debate.

To say a victory was won for the truth would be putting it mildly. The Saints were built up in the faith, and outsiders learned many things they did not know, and I think much good was done, and many prejudices broken down. We had preaching the evening of the day the debate closed. In the morning the church was crowded, and some were on the outside. Elder Ben M. Bogard is an able man, and a scholar, and acted very fair in many instances. One was that he did not place us with the Utah Mormons. The Baptist people were very kind during the debate. The Saints at Winthrop did their part well. Sister Minnie Clinton, of Grannis, left her school for a week and came to the debate and acted as organist for us. She is a noble little girl and will get her reward for helping the gospel. The debate was well attended. The crowd several times was estimated at a thousand people.

E. A. ERWIN.

WINTHROP, ARKANSAS, December 3, 1911.

Concerning Christ

It is now nearly two thousand years since the angel of the Lord visited the shepherds on the plains of Bethlehem, and announced the arrival of the long-expected Messiah. "And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people, For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." (Luke 2: 10.)

More than seven hundred years had passed away since those wonderful prophetic words had fallen from the lips of the Lord's inspired servant, as he clearly portrayed this coming event: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." (Isaiah 9: 6.)

As the coming of this wonderful child of promise, with such exalted titles, and the light bearer to "every man that cometh unto the world," was so near at hand, the angel of the Lord appeared again, to his handmaiden, and said unto her, "Fear not Mary; for thou hast found favor with God. And behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shall call his name Jesus. He shall be great; and shall be called the son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." (Luke 1: 30.)

This son of the Highest, who is to reign over the house of Jacob forever, and whose kingdom is to have no end, is a special and most precious gift from the hand of our Father: for, "Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and a commander to the people." (Isaiah 55: 4.)

To lead, command, guide and direct, required the instrument of power and authority, so he was "called of God an high priest after the order of Melchisedec," and heralded this great message to his ministry that "all power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." (Matthew 28: 18.)

This does not mean that God the Father had vacated his throne, and placed his only begotten Son, who is second in authority in the heavenly trinity, at the head; but merely exalted him at his own right hand. "For above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come; and hath put all things under his feet, and given him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all.

As the head of the church, he is the leading, guiding, and directing power over the whole family, both which is in heaven and on earth. John says, "This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood, and it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth. For there are those that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one." (1 John 5: 6.)

In the great preparation for the reunion of "all the family in heaven and earth," which will meet at the coming of Christ, John says, "And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new."

"I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end."—Romans 21: 3.

In Doctrine and Covenants 18: 2 is a description of excruciating agony endured by the Master for us, if we would only repent and be reconciled to God, "For, behold, I God, have suffered these things for all, that they might not suffer, if they would repent; but if they would not repent, they must suffer even as I; which suffering caused myself, even God the greatest of all, to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit, and would that I might not drink the bitter cup, and shrink; nevertheless, glory be to the Father, and I partook and finished my preparation unto the children of men."

Both these texts refer to the Son of God, and the "greatest of all," only means the greatest among his brethren who were called upon to endure pain and suffering as he had done.

Paul in writing to Timothy speaks of this as being a great mystery, as to how one of the Godhead left the realms of glory, had his judgment taken away, by being veiled in the flesh; became like unto his brethren in all things, suffered and died, was buried, and rose again, and ascended to the right hand of his Father to be crowned with the glory he had with his Father before the world was.

He says, "And without all controversy, great is the mystery of godliness; God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up unto glory." (1 Timothy 3: 16.)

Isaiah made no mistake when he said of Christ, "He shall be called the Mighty God, the everlasting Father, and the Prince of Peace." His title of everlasting Father needs but little comment, for all so-called Christians believe, "Ye must be born again." And as no birth can ever take place without both father and mother, as is witnessed in nature everywhere, we soon discover that Christ is bridegroom, husband and father of this union with the bride, the Lamb's wife, of which he is the head; and all true believers are the begotten sons and daughters of this union.

Paul says, "But the Jerusalem which is above is free, the which is the mother of us all," and in this light is Christ called Father. This makes plain Luke 10: 23 (Inspired Translation) "All things are delivered to me of my Father; and no man knoweth that the Son is the Father, and the Father is the Son, but him to whom the Son will reveal it." That is, no man can understand in what way Christ is both Father and Son except it is made known unto him. "Except a man is born again he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Well, when he is born again he can see it; so in like manner can we comprehend why Christ is called both Father and Son.

C. A. BUTTERWORTH.

Extracts from Letters

Brother A. M. Hawkins writes from Robertsdale, Alabama: "My desire is to live as God desires. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that I may hold out faithful to the end. I have been a member of the church for about thirty years and have never regretted the step taken. God expects his children to keep the whole law, and to go on to perfection. This I hope to do, becoming more Christlike each day."

WEBB, SASKATCHEWAN, November 28, 1916.

Editors Herald: I thought probably some of the Saints would be pleased to hear from me, especially those who attended the Chatham reunion. Probably some will remember me, as my brother and I were baptized there. Dear friends, I must say I have never been sorry of my move, because I am fully satisfied that this is the true work of God and the only true work, and am very thankful to God that he ever made it possible for me to see the light, as it came in a very mysterious way.

I feel lonesome at times for the church, being isolated from it. The nearest branch is about one hundred and fifty miles away, but there is one consolation if the church is far away from us, for we know we have God close by to cheer us. I have been very much taken up with the HERALD, especially the sermons. They sound more like the wisdom of God than the sermons I have been used to hearing, in fact they sound so good that I have no liking to go to hear the old kind now.

If any of the Saints happen to pass this way please stop and see me. May God help us all to do our duty, is my prayer.

Your brother in the faith,

JOHN H. MILLER.

SHELLBROOK, SASKATCHEWAN, November 24, 1916.

Editors Herald: I am writing to tell you how much I enjoy reading the various articles and letters in the HERALD, which is a weekly visitor at our house, as are also the Autumn Leaves, Stepping Stones, Zion's Hope and the Ensign, but first and best of all is the HERALD. At one time I did not care so much for the church papers. I would open them, glance through the pages, if there was something that looked real interesting I would read it, but excepting the letters in the HERALD, and stories in the Autumn Leaves and Stepping Stones I did not care much for them. Of late years, however, they seem different to me, and the more I read them the better they seem to get. I read with much interest such articles as Sister Burgess wrote "Let us be different," also Sister Burton's letters and articles are read and appreciated.

Sister Burgess' vivid description of the nonmember's statement brought similar expressions to my mind, that I have heard, and often wonder why we are not all different. The elder, the member, every one of us should examine ourselves often, to see if we are different from the world. Some of us are afraid of criticism, but I was just reading that he who sought to avoid the darts of criticism would never get very far, or do much good in this life. Always be sure we are in the right, then go ahead, regardless of what others say or think, and we will be all right. I was reading not long since that anyone in this country could shout, "Death to the Kaiser" but it took a hero to do it in the streets of Berlin.

So it is in our religious warfare. Anyone can be a Saint if all goes well and no one ridicules him, but it takes a hero to be one when all are against us. I once read a book entitled In His Steps, or What Would Jesus Do? and I often think if we would follow more in his steps or see if we are doing as Jesus would do we would cease to do many things we are now doing. So many of us do not read the church papers as we should, or study our Sunday school lessons, and it is always the plea we have not the time. I know that is the way with me, I can hardly find the time, but I have made up my mind from now on that I will take the time.

If I had the time to find a place
And sit me down full face to face
With my better self that stands no show
In my daily life that rushes so,

It might be then I would see my soul
Was stumbling still toward the shining goal,
I might be nerved by the thought sublime,
If I had the time! If I had the time!

If I had the time to let my heart
Speak out and take in my life apart,
To look about and stretch a hand
To a comrade quartered on No-Luck Land.
Ah! God if I might but just sit still
And hear the note of the whippoorwill
I think that my wish with good would rhyme
If I had the time! If I had the time!

If I had the time to learn from you
How much of comfort my word would do.
And I told you then of my sudden will
To kiss your feet when I did you ill.
If the tears aback of the bravado
Could force their way and let you know
Saints! The souls of us all would climb
If we had the time! If we had the time.

Your sister in the one faith,
EFFIE J. DENTON.

WOODBINE, IOWA, November 29, 1916.

Editors Herald: Elder James A. Gillen completed, on last Sunday night, a two weeks' series of meetings, during which the word of God was plainly presented to both Saint and sinner. The establishing of the kingdom of God on earth was the warp and woof of his theme, which was woven together in a masterly manner, as he made plain the message of life and salvation; the order and organization of the church and kingdom of God on earth preparatory to the coming of the celestial kingdom.

The meetings were well attended and I believe appreciated by all who "Had ears to hear"; and I trust good was done in the Woodbine Branch. If, as a branch, we have the wisdom and zeal to keep the "little stone rolling"; a prophecy which I think was delivered by Elder J. C. Crabb, many years ago, may yet be fulfilled, which was to the effect "that the Woodbine Branch would yet become 'a branch of renown.'" But that, like every other promise God makes to man, will largely depend upon the efforts we individually put forth. If we improve our opportunities God will work with us and for us, and the good desired will be accomplished, but if we wait for the Lord to do all the work, he will treat us as idlers in his church, and we shall wither and be only fit to be burned.

It is true our branch numbers over two hundred and seventy members and I am persuaded a goodly number of these are good, live members, I would be glad to say it of all. Many are scattered and their whereabouts not known. Much preaching has been done here by very able, earnest men. The town has been warned, but the mass of the public have not heeded. It is not popular enough for them; and the "straight gate" does not swing sufficiently wide, and the preparation for entrance is not convenient. It is quite a task to unload the camel to pass through "the needle's eye" so they choose to enter the "broad way" at the "wide gate" unmindful of the word, "There is a way which seemeth right to a man, but the end thereof is death."

Yet, I believe there are souls here on the outside, who desire to become God's children, but the veil is over their eyes and it becomes our business, dear Saints, to help remove the veil by lives of love; righteousness and truth; we are called to be the light of the world, but our lights will not be seen, if kept under a bushel, and we shall be held responsible for not letting them shine in our homes, our workshops, our business houses, and in all the walks of life. It is not enough to let them glimmer a little inside the walls of a church, they must shine before all the world, or our claim to superior knowledge of God and his truth will be in vain; and what is still worse for us, our minds will become darkened; and we shall be left to grope as the blind for the wall, and it will be worse for us than if we had never known the truth. Then let us heed the counsel so plainly and forcibly but in kindness delivered, and the Holy Spirit will be with us in all our efforts and they will be crowned with success to the glory of God the Father and to our everlasting joy.

CHARLES DERRY.

PLANO, ILLINOIS, December 1, 1916.

Dear Brother Smith: Your recent article on education entitled "Men who have the Spirit" is fair and to the point. Shortly before the HERALD containing this article graced my desk, I received a letter from one of our workers down in Texas. She is a mother and writes me concerning her boy, who has had a number of trying experiences shaping him to the fulfillment of his proper mission in this life.

The mother relates an experience in which this lad when quite young was given up for dead—actually being prepared for burial—when a slight twitch betrayed the fact that there was still life in his body. The boy was at once administered to and came back to life instantly.

Since then the young man has reached the seventh grade in the common school, but is very reluctant in continuing his education, preferring to enter in upon other more lucrative activities. He wants to make money.

Just before the time of opening of school last year the young man received a wonderful vision. He saw himself going upstairs to common school with God by his side, and with God's help mastered every study. He graduated, and again with God by his side entered the high school, and step by step passed through all the requirements. Finally entered college with God again by his side, and easily mastered every study, and finally attained his object. He was then advised of the course of service which lay before him in this work.

A few nights after this he received another manifestation which practically confirmed the first one he received.

This and other experiences have confirmed me in the fact that trained workers are in demand. A trained devil is certainly a menace to society, but trained "Men who have the Spirit" are stars in the celestial system fulfilling the wish of God as angels filling the earth with his glory.

"Know thyself" is a phrase pregnant with meaning. The truth contained in many philosophies and "isms" with reference to the powers of body and mind, though befogged with error, is a challenge to our timidity and demands that we embark upon the Santa Maria of discoveries, with God by our side. The conditions of the age demand that we meet the enemy with keener tools. The cunning, deep-laid plans of the Devil must be exposed to the light. It requires skill. Those on the firing line realize this.

"Let there be light."

FRANK F. WIPPER.

Glad Tidings Free

The publishers of Glad Tidings of Grand Rapids, Michigan, offer their paper free as a Christmas gift to every missionary under appointment who will send his name and address. The names must reach the office on or before January 15, 1917. The address is 517-19 Ottawa Avenue, N. W.

Miscellaneous Department

The Bishopric

APPOINTMENT OF AGENT

The Saints of the Owen Sound District will please take notice that Brother James A. Morrison, recommended for appointment as bishop's agent of the Owen Sound District, will act as agent in that district. We feel that he needs no special recommendation to the Saints of that district, being their unanimous choice.

As the territory of the Owen Sound District is included within Ontario and Quebec, over which Bishop Evans has heretofore been appointed bishop, it is agreed between the Presidency and Presiding Bishopric that until further notice the appointed agent for the Owen Sound District should report to Bishop Evans, as do the agents of the Chatham and London districts.

BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE,
Presiding Bishop.

AGENT'S NOTICE

To the Saints of the Gallands Grove District: The good book says, for everything there is a time, so I just wish to advise you that you have time to get in some tithing on this year's report.

Saints who contemplate paying tithing for this year's report will please do so as soon as possible so that my report can be completed and sent in just as soon after December 31 as possible.

Saints living in branches please note that the branch solicitor should have all amounts in his hands by the 27th so he can have time to report to me.

Amounts sent direct should be mailed at least on December 28.

WEBSTER CITY, IOWA, Box 43.

C. E. ANDERSON.

Woman's Building for Independence

The women of Independence have awakened to the fact that the inadequate quarters for women's work at the Stone Church makes it necessary to provide definite plans for a new building at once.

Every day the inconveniences are impressed upon the women, when the kindergarten training classes and kindergarten children are obliged to occupy the same room at the same time with the aid society women, who have from the beginning stood most loyally by the church, financially and otherwise; and when the Mutual Helpers, a large body of women cooperating with the bishopric in alleviating the suffering of the unfortunate, are crowded into the same small building with the young men who are studying various scientific subjects. While these and many other legitimate activities are handicapped by inadequate quarters, there are still fewer possibilities for real, constructive work scarcely yet entered upon, such as the training of the young and older women as intelligent home makers and for the duties of parenthood—duties which arise from the peculiar needs of our people owing to the present economic, social, and other outside conditions as well as the imminent Zion conditions. Again, the physician in charge, head nurse, and others connected with the church Sanitarium, are waiting to instruct our women in methods of sanitation, hygiene, and kindred subjects as soon as the necessary equipment can be secured.

Numbers of young church women come to Independence and secure employment here or in Kansas City. Having little or no real home advantages, their opportunities are limited in this large branch for social intercourse with the young, or association with the older, consecrated women whose advice, counsel, and sympathy would be far-reaching—much more far-reaching even than we can say. We have intelligent, mature women whose hearts are yearning to assist and protect these and other girls, if opportunity for contact can be afforded.

Women who come at stake and General Conference times, and women guests passing through this city continually would welcome rest rooms, a couch, rocking chairs, and conversation with some of the sisters who would gladly give of their busy moments to visit, distribute literature, and explain the enlarged vision of women's work within the church. A woman's exchange, that of handwork, etc., a women's employment bureau, and other activities will be maintained within this building. And with the strenuous efforts which are now being made to enlarge the scope of the spiritual and practical work of the church, the great necessity for this building is apparent.

There is a cooperation and understanding between the general and stake officers of the church and the woman's building committee.

It is the intention of Mrs. Frederick M. Smith, wife of the President of the church, who is the presiding officer of the general Woman's Auxiliary, and chairman of the building committee, that this building shall be devoted to the exclusive purpose of furthering Zion conditions. And since much of the modern welfare work of thousands of zealous club women is recognized by thoughtful students of society as merely remedial, and palliative measures, every effort will be made by the agitator of this movement to have constructive and fundamental phases emphasized. It is proposed that the purpose of this building shall greatly exceed the usual scope of the woman's club building, or even that of the social center, because of the unique attitude of the Latter Day Saint people with their doctrines of consecration.

It is well understood that there is no class distinction among the followers of this faith. Those who have advantages and opportunities along various lines, will mingle with and freely impart to those who have been deprived. The social and intellectual contact will result in spiritual uplift and mutual profit to all.

The building committee has already secured a coveted corner lot across from the Temple Lot, upon which now stands a small building which will be used for temporary headquarters, and several hundred dollars have already been subscribed for the new building. The great possibilities of the women's work have already made their appeal, and church carpenters, masons, and others have offered their services. A competent Boston architect, who stands ready to serve the church, will so plan the building that, although simple and unpretentious in design, it will in no way mar the symmetry of any group of buildings which is expected will eventually be erected around and near the Temple Lot.

It should be gratifying to the church to realize that the hastening time is here, and that the women welcome the opportunity for further consecration and sacrifice in order that the redemption of Zion may not be unnecessarily delayed.

Although this building assumes a local character, yet any influence which affects the center spot, naturally permeates to the remotest group of our people throughout the world, and therefore, this movement is of wide, general importance.

Contributions from those among the church at large who may feel so led, will be accepted and valued.

Conference Notices

Northeastern Illinois, at Chicago, Central Branch, January 27, 28, 10 a. m. Branch officers please have statistical reports approved and in on time. All members of the priesthood in the several branches report your labors for the past six months, using late report blank by First Presidency. All members of priesthood not branch officers please report your labors for same time and with same blank. Reports mailed to either of the undersigned, in plenty of time for conference. J. O. Dutton, president, 6630 South Lincoln Street, Chicago, Illinois, F. E. Bone, secretary, 4339 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Illinois.

Portland, in Portland, Oregon, February 10 and 11, 1917, at Saints' church on East Seventy-sixth Street North, one block from car line. Take Montavilla car. All Saints are requested to attend. Election of officers. M. H. Cook, president; R. E. Chapman, secretary.

Central Nebraska will convene February 3 and 4, 1917. All are invited. Hope to have full report from branches and officers. W. M. Self, president, Comstock, Nebraska.

Two-Day Meetings

At Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, January 6 and 7. Institute work and entertainment Saturday evening at 7.45 p. m. Special services and music on Sunday. Everybody invited. District officers.

Notice of Appointment

To the Saints of the Northern Michigan District: Notice is hereby given that Wesley Alldread has been appointed to labor, self-sustaining in this district for the balance of the present conference year, beginning January 1.

J. F. Curtis concurs in the above appointment.

ARTHUR R. ELLIS,
Assistant Minister in Charge.

Died

CROW.—Elder David Crow was born in Cowan Bray, Scotland, 1849; died at his home at Ray Town Road, near Independence, Missouri, December 4, 1916. He came to America in 1870 and settled in Ohio. Married Miss Janet Frew. To this union 11 children were born. He followed the trade of a miner and held office of superintendent. Was elected to some minor county office, then elected and served two terms in the State legislature of Colorado. He was a just man, highly respected in the community where he lived. Funeral at Stone Church, Independence, sermon by F. M. Sheehy, assisted by W. D. Bullard.

LALONDE.—Mildred Viola Lalonde, eldest daughter of Brother and Sister John E. Lalonde, was born April 9, 1903, in Colorado Springs, Colorado. Died of congestion of the brain, November 28, 1916, at Colorado Springs. Our brother and sister have laid away four of their children and have one daughter left to comfort them. Funeral at the home and sermon by Ammon White. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

MORGAN.—Matthew John Morgan was born in Covington, Kentucky, February 9, 1887. He was the third son of James and Zelia Morgan.

Married Sister Belle Black, formerly of Gallands Grove, Iowa, to which union there was born a daughter. He died suddenly from uremic poisoning while at work in Denver, Colorado, December 1, 1916. Wife, daughter, two brothers and one sister survive him.

Funeral held at Horan's undertaking parlor, sermon by Ammon White; interment in Fairmount Cemetery, Denver.

LLOYD.—Ann Lloyd, born in Landisylis, Wales, May 11, 1847; died December 8, 1916, at Independence, Missouri. Married to Elder Abner Lloyd, January 12, 1909. Baptized March 12, 1899, by G. W. Needham. She leaves husband, a brother in Wales, a sister, Mary Hughes, of Chicago, 2 sons by her first husband, Rees and Thomas Jones. She died firm in the faith. Sermon by J. C. Foss, assisted by Walter Smith and Joseph Luff. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

KELLEY.—Delaney V. Kelley, born at Castile, New York, January 27, 1838; died November 12, 1916. Married Lilly E. Fuller, October 25, 1871. Baptized January 1, 1885. His wife died June 17, 1910. Two children survive him, William F. Kelley, of Montevideo, Minnesota, and Mae L. Scott, of Coldwater, Michigan, with whom he resided. Also 11 grandchildren and one sister. Having a bright gospel hope he was anxious to depart. Funeral sermon by Samuel Stroh. Interment in Lake View Cemetery, Quincy, Michigan.

BELLROSE.—Ruthina E. Gurwell was born March 19, 1863, in Williams County, Ohio. Her family later removed to Fanning, Doniphan County, Kansas, where they were prominent in church work for many years. She was married to David H. Bellrose October 24, 1889. Died July 13, 1916, at Denver, Colorado. Her husband, two sons and one daughter are left to mourn her loss. Funeral service in charge of E. F. Shupe, sermon by E. J. Williams, interment at Crown Hill Cemetery.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.

This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Some Choice Reading for 1917	1233
Current Events	1234
Notes and Comments	1235
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
The Purpose of Our Religious Service, by J. F. Keir	1237
Objections to the Book of Mormon Answered by its Own Evidences, by T. J. Smith	1242
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
Training the Indians	1245
If You Would Live Long	1245
HYMNS AND POEMS
Catherine Thomas Booker.	1246
WOMAN'S AUXILIARY
Lula M. Sandy—Mrs. F. M. Smith—Mrs. Bertha L. Mader.	1246
NEWS FROM BRANCHES
Abbie A. Horton.	1248
LETTER DEPARTMENT
From Here and There—James Dawson—E. A. Erwin—C. A. Butterworth—Extracts from Letters—John H. Miller—Effie J. Denton—Charles Derry—Frank F. Wipper.	1249
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT	1254

Home Rule Situation in Ireland

Twenty-eight of the thirty-two counties in Ireland have clamored for home rule, have often fought and bled for it. Four counties do not want it. Not merely do they not want it for themselves, but, being a grossly bigoted and arrogant minority, they are determined to thwart the heart wish of the majority of their fellow countrymen. Home rule, they declare, would be disastrous not only to Ulster, but to the whole of Ireland; and so they bind themselves in a solemn covenant to use all necessary means to defeat the conspiracy to set up a "destructive" and "perilous" home rule parliament in Ireland. Here is the proximate cause of the rebellion in Ireland; its remote causes drag a lengthening chain through centuries. To the January Century, it is announced, J. F. Byrne will contribute, in "The Irish Grievance," a statement of the case for the anti-English party. Mr. Byrne's article is said to include a lively personal narrative of the insurrection itself.

THE PLEASURES OF THE WORLD. A three-act drama by John Preston, showing the effect of unwise discipline in a home. There are 12 characters, 6 male and 6 female. The play takes 2 hours to enact. A strong vein of comedy runs through the piece. Everywhere this play has been produced it has proved a success. Easy to present on any platform, as there is only one simple stage setting. Interesting as reading matter. 68 pages, paper binding, No. 38125c

JOSEPH SMITH AND HIS PROGENITORS.—The Martyr's mother, Lucy Smith, wrote this biography. For this reason alone, if for no other, the book must always be intensely interesting. But there are many other elements entering into its value: its condemnation of polygamy; its true perspective on early history; its sweet maternal intimacy. The church gives it out to the world "for what it is worth," and obviously it is worth a great deal. No. 287, cloth$1.00

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

Subscription Department

THE time for renewing your subscriptions for your favorite magazine or newspaper is now. Don't forget that your own business house---[The Herald Publishing House] has a regular SUBSCRIPTION DEPARTMENT and can handle this business for you, thus saving on each subscription for your publishing house. Why not cooperate?

Our BOOK SERVICE DEPARTMENT also was started to serve you.

We can get any book for you.

Herald Publishing House
LAMONI, IOWA

Homes Farms Business

Saints desiring to locate in the Lamoni Stake or those within the Stake wishing to change their location will do well to consult the Stake Bishopric as provided in D. C. 128:4. We have for sale and exchange properties of various kinds and are prepared to serve you.

Lamoni Stake Bishopric.

For Sale or Trade

Our convenient residence on a corner near the Saints' Church in Lamoni, Iowa. West front. In the basement are 4 rooms. First floor: 4 rooms on the south, 3 rooms on the north.

Adjoining the kitchen is a wash house. Second floor: 3 sleeping rooms and a modern large bathroom, and a store room. Heated by hot water furnace, eleven radiators. Electric lights.

Town water and sewer, also a well and cistern with pumps.

There is room on the land for one or two more houses. Has fruits, apples, peaches, strawberries, raspberries, grapes. Black walnut shade trees. Hardy flowering shrubs, evergreens, climbing vines, etc.

Also a 4-room house west part of town.

JOHN SMITH

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 63

LAMONI, IOWA, DECEMBER 27, 1916

NUMBER 52

New Year Greetings From Our President

At the season when custom has joined the retrospective and prospective surveys to form a criterion determining the degree of cheerfulness with which we shall face the New Year and its work, it is not improbable that there is an inclination to appreciate the favorable and depreciate the untoward. This is human. With due regard for this tendency, yet in our review of the work of the closing year we feel there is much to encourage the Saints to greater activity and to give thanks to God for his guiding kindness. Some of the changes authorized by the last General Conference have been effected and the results are proving the wisdom of the actions. The four stakes have been set in order and the four corps of officers are hard at work following up the advantages thus given. New impetus is apparent, greater spirituality is manifest, while the spirit of consecration grows apace. The missionary work also seems to be gathering greater headway, and where the missionaries are following the line of their work with vigor and fidelity the results as reported to us are showing satisfactory gains.

The task of readjusting the work of the general Bishopric under the recently appointed members thereof is proceeding quietly but steadily, while the increased receipts of tithing and consecration of property indicate a growing confidence among the Saints, which is indeed encouraging.

Let the Saints be admonished that as new activities are engaged in to meet new problems or new aspects of old ones, the readjustment necessary to meet new conditions may cause some disturbance, and some individuals failing to make the adjustment may think there has been a departure from principle while there has merely been individual failure to harmonize with the realignment of forces necessary to accomplish the work which adherence to the same fundamental principles demands. We therefore admonish the Saints that there must be development of greater confidence in and support of those whom the Saints have called upon to carry official burdens. Beware how you give ear to those who are disposed to undermine the influence of the officers who are your servants.

In our retrospective survey we are impressed with the devoted service of the men of the past, many of whom, yet with us though incapacitated for further work, still encourage us by their devotion and cheering words. We are also cheered by the sight of the army of devoted workers now active, while we plead for still others, the younger ones, to come to our help and enlist in the service of the army of the Lord.

On the whole, therefore, we feel we can with many reasons for thankfulness extend New Year's greetings to the Saints throughout the world. With God's spirit directing the work of the church we cannot but succeed, and we have every reason to believe that his guidance of our activities is manifest. May God's grace and peace attend you unto your blessing and prosperity. Let true devotion and consecration to God's service characterize your every act and thought, that spirituality may be enhanced, righteous refinement be had, and God's will be done to his glory and praise.

Your servant,

FREDERICK M. SMITH,

President of the Church.

Editorial

THAT "CHAIR OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION"

The editors are in receipt of an interesting private letter containing a good-natured criticism of a certain feature of their policy. The writer thinks that we have erred in admitting articles to our columns touching upon a prospective chair of theology.

We have no fear that discussion of this subject will do harm. We believe that many subjects that are worth discussing may be discussed through the HERALD, providing the discussion is carried on properly; though it is true, of course, that some topics are of such a nature that they may better be canvassed in General Conference or in the quorums.

One point in the criticism is well taken. The proposition submitted to the late conference did not contemplate the establishment of a "chair of theology" to educate ministers. It had in mind the establishment of a "chair of religious education" for the training of church workers, particularly in the auxiliaries.

The Senior Editor may be at fault for a clouding of the issue, because of having discussed the charge that such a chair would grow into a regular chair of theology, and taking the grounds that a course in theology adapted to our own needs and along our own lines, teaching our own doctrines, church organization, and so on, with a study of religious beliefs of other denominations, might not be a bad thing.

It seems that some have assumed that it is proposed to take a regular orthodox, uninspired, dry-as-dust theological course right out of some sectarian "theological cemetery" and insert it bodily in the Graceland curriculum and proceed with all expedition to turn out machine-made preachers. This is a man of straw easily set up and easily demolished, but quite foreign to anything contemplated by any sane Latter Day Saint whose acquaintance we have been privileged to enjoy. An extract from the letter follows:

I am sure that the editors and managers of the HERALD have only the best interests of the church and her institutions at heart, but I believe they have erred in judgment in permitting such articles as have appeared in the HERALD to be printed, because they misrepresent not only the authorities of Graceland College but the joint high council of the church which recommended at the last General Conference not the establishment of a chair of theology as was indicated in the recent articles, but the purpose was to establish a chair of religious education for the purpose of training workers for the auxiliaries of the church, and for the HERALD to publish articles which are to be read by thousands of church members who were not in attendance at the conference and who perhaps did not follow the discussion carefully enough to know what really was contemplated is certainly misrepresenting the highest authori- ties in this church, since in fact they did not propose the establishment of a chair of theology along the lines indicated by the writers of the articles in the HERALD.

I am very much in accord with the sentiment expressed by the new bishop of the new Lamoni Stake in his sermon last night, that if he had his way about it no one would go out representing this church if he continually "knocked" its institutions. No one can write in the HERALD misrepresenting the purposes of the chief officers of the church and be depended upon, in my judgment, to represent the best interests of the church along all lines. I do not believe that the religion of Jesus Christ is going to prosper in our church as it should until we get a corps of missionaries, one hundred per cent of whom will support every single institution of the church.

The conference decided against the establishment of the proposed chair of religious education, and believing in the rule of the majority, we do not propose to challenge the decision, or to advocate the establishment of such a chair until in the opinion of the majority the obstacles that seem to have prevented the action contemplated have been removed.

But we do not believe that we have erred in admitting to our pages a rather general discussion of education, an educated ministry, and kindred topics, such as have been considered. We believe that there does not exist the difference of opinion that would seem to exist.

We predict that presently those who appear to be stressing the necessity of divine direction in the ministry, and those who are accused of emphasizing the need of education, will find that they are not so far apart after all, and both will meet on common ground and unite in demanding a highly educated and divinely inspired ministry—the kind that God wants, and that he found to a remarkable degree in the Apostle Paul, one of the most successful missionaries of all time.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

A CHEAP COURSE.—A member of the nonprogressive "Christians" writes to the Apostolic Review that he especially delights in exposing "Mormonism." Some one sent him three dollars to help prepare himself for "warring on Mormonism," and he continues: "Wish others would help me so I could soon write on Mormonism for the A. R." He doesn't want to attend the despised "Bible college" but simply to buy a few books on the subject to "fully equip myself for a lifetime of war on this doctrine of the Devil." Here is the price of a complete course: "I often think of the $35 of my money kept by the Nashville Bible School. This would prepare two young men for debating on Mormonism for life." Considering the sixty to eighty-five dollars their debaters are paid for one discussion, and that $17.50 is all that is required for a lifetime of "war," it ought to be a good investment. Success to you, brother.

RESPONSIVENESS A VALUABLE TRAIT

Thank God for the appreciative brother or sister who senses the situation and like a child of God indeed, finds time to grasp the hand of the yearning youth whose heart is sore and possibly rebellious. How we appreciate those who by nature or training brighten our lives with their responsiveness! They bring out the best we have and how joyfully we give it.

Clouds may hover and darkness may depress their lives as deeply as ours, but brightly they rise above them and with glad handshake and cheerful smile they make us forget our troubles.

They are all too few, when they should be numerous. Of course we all know many good people, many happy people, but those who are alertly responsive and who go out of their way to express their appreciation and radiate their cheer—we wish there were more.

How many a young preacher has stood behind the pulpit and sought earnestly to be an instrument in God's hand in delivering the message of life, and found himself really addressing his remarks to some one responsive person in the audience? A speaker's remarks naturally gravitate to those who listen well. If the whole audience be composed of good listeners, what depths may be touched and what heights may be reached—truly it is a delight. Yet how many times does the young—or old, or middle-aged—minister leave the place with principally a vivid remembrance of one or two responsive souls that nodded assent to points well made and looked grave when passages were wrongly applied.

Not long since, a Methodist preacher of some experience told us there were much worse things than empty seats to talk to; they were comparatively harmless and served to break up the echo. But woe to the man who had to address a lot of empty faces!

If you haven't thought much about this phase of the situation, experiment a little. If you teach a class in Sunday school or Religio, just notice how your questions, your appeals, your explanations, gravitate to the ones who are alert and wide-awake. The others may need help the most, but it is only with an effort that you remember that. We all appreciate the good listeners.

If you neither preach nor teach, make a few observations from your own position and note the consideration given those who sincerely respond, whether it be to the appeal of a humble Saint for an interest in your prayers, or the impassioned appeal of some of our best orators.

To some, genuine interest and effusive expression of it in manner as well as voice are as natural and pleasant as the gentle zephyrs that murmur through the rustling leaves. To others it comes only by persistent and patient cultivation—but it is eminently worth while.

Many a homesick and discouraged missionary has thanked God from the depths of his heart for the simple kindness of some brother who went out of his way to commend the good qualities of his sermon. It was a little thing to the giver, but oh, so much to the recipient!

Many a sensitive and reticent boy has resolved to never again participate in a public meeting, only to have that resolution obliterated in the memory of some God-inspired expression of appreciation concerning his most humble effort.

Ah, dear readers, the joy that comes of such simple efforts can never be measured by human measures. The weight of a gentle hand on the burdened shoulder, the sound of a sympathetic voice to the struggling soul, the memory of simple words of cheer or comradeship or commendation—who will place a value on these?

A certain old brother we know makes it a point to see a certain young man with considerable regularity. "I heard from you this time. That was all right. Just you keep it up now. You know I missed you last week," he is likely to say. Whether he knows it or not, that old veteran who has weathered the winters and summers of many, many years is an inspiration to that young brother.

It is true that there is danger of turning the head and creating too much self-confidence, but one who cannot stand a little heartfelt appreciation is not worthy and will soon demonstrate it. One should use tact and wisdom and realize that along with his appreciation may be given gentle suggestions for improvement that will have much weight. Aid from this source is much more helpful than from one who never thinks to commend the good.

A brother was once telling of the conditions he found in a certain branch. "The pastor wasn't much of a preacher. He was not eloquent in the usual sense, and they all knew it, including himself. But he loved his flock. He would seek out a young man here and one there, put a sympathetic hand on the broad shoulder, gently but convincingly express an invitation, and before long every one of them was into the harness and happily at work. To-day that community has some most intelligent and able young workers, busy every day."

Not long since we heard much the same commendation of a certain sister. She can do effective work where the brother could not.

These may be exceptional cases. We hope they are not. There is room for all of us to serve. The long-faced, cold-blooded, matter-of-fact member has his place and will maintain it. The work he does is perhaps as important as that of his more vivacious, affectionate brother, but we feel that he secretly envies the sunniness and adaptability of his more popular coworker.

Joining hands with the thousands whose burdens have been lightened thereby, we express our united appreciation of those who have touched our hearts by their true-hearted responsiveness.

E. D. MOORE.

CURRENT EVENTS

DENMARK WILL SELL ISLANDS.—By authority of popular vote and both houses of parliament, the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States will be ratified.

JEWS HONOR MORGENTHAU.—Recognized as the man who had done the most for the Jews in the past year, a society of that race recently presented Henry Morgenthau, formerly ambassador to Turkey, with a gold medal.

SALARIES INCREASED.—The House recently passed a bill, which gives increased salary amounting to $39,000,000 to 16,000 Government employees. A number of large business firms are reported as taking similar action.

SENDS PEACE NOTES.—On the 20th President Wilson sent a plea for peace and a request for specific proposals and requirements to the various belligerent nations in Europe. They were urged in the name of humanity to take steps to end the awful carnage which has prevailed so long.

TEAR UP CANADIAN RAILWAYS.—Unable to secure new rails because of the great demand for steel for guns and shells, the allies in France asked Canada for rails and equipment. As a result, a thousand miles of railroad sidings are being torn up and shipped to the war front for moving troops and supplies.

112,444,620 PEOPLE IN UNITED STATES.—The census bureau says our population now is as stated above. More and more the cities gain at the expense of the rural communities. The population of the leading cities is given as follows: New York, 5,602,841; Chicago, 2,497,722; Philadelphia, 1,709,518; Saint Louis, 757,309.

TO RELIEVE COAL SHORTAGE.—Every effort is being made to move the coal that is being held in Chicago and elsewhere for lack of transportation facilities. The sudden and severe cold weather has increased consumption and decreased deliveries, but it is believed that this concerted action on the part of the railroads will relieve the situation. The Ford automobile plant at Detroit will close for a week to allow cars to be used for other purposes and consequently improve the situation.

EUROPEAN WAR.—Nothing spectacular is reported from the various theaters of war during the week, evidently the closing in of real winter hampering operations. The Rumanians seem to have turned on the Germans in Dobrudja, and have held them in check. It is claimed that the Germans have secured the important oil fields in Rumania practically unharmed, and thereby are enabled to not only secure sufficient supply, but store up for future use. Artillery engagements are reported from the western front and more increased activity in the Carpathians. Submarine activities continue, and many ships are being sunk by German submersibles.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

"THE BURNING OF BABYLON."—In the series of articles under this title, Elder E. E. Long presents some of the most vital admissions of leading churchmen that the churches have failed in their efforts to Christianize the world. Don't overlook the first number, appearing in this issue.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR BOY?—Ask yourself this question and unless you can answer fully and satisfactorily in the affirmative, why not begin now? The boy who hates his "old man" may be a victim of circumstances. The boy who loves and respects his father has become acquainted with him. A boy is a sacred responsibility and at the same time a great educator. Be sure you know your boy and that he knows you.

OPENING MOUNDS IN IOWA.—Seventeen miles south of Iowa City there is a group of seventy-five mounds in one place and several others not far away. Doctor Lorin Stuckey, of the University of Iowa, has been taking some important finds from them, such as human remains, charcoal, and crude instruments. Every mound opened discloses piles of human bones, and some of these bear evidence of having been hacked by an instrument of some kind, likely before burial.

CHRISTMAS IN LAMONI.—The Christmas Offering totaled $546.63, the children voting their treat money to this fund. Elder H. O. Smith addressed the Saints at the morning hour with a seasonable sermon. In the evening Sister Anna Salyards gave an illustrated lecture on the life of Christ. Following this there was a sacred concert by the choir and orchestra. The weather was pleasant and attendance large. Showers, thunder and lightning were features Christmas night.

CATHOLIC AMENITIES.—There is an Irish priest in the province of Quebec who deserves to be popular, in the opinion of the New York Evening Post

Magazine. He is hail fellow well met with every one in the village, asks for contributions, and gets liberal ones, from Protestants and Catholics alike. One day a delegation of Baptists called on him—men who had frequently contributed to Father W.'s church—told him they were going to erect a new Baptist church, as the old one was too small, and asked him to subscribe to the fund.

"Well, boys," he said, after a slight hesitation, "you know my religion forbids my doing that, but I will give you fifty dollars to help tear the old church down."—Current Opinion.

OUR MORTALITY LIST.—Under this caption the National Bulletin tells us that the use of liquor is increasing, while the death rate in the United States is decreasing. Therefore, the more we drink the less we die. Whether alcoholism does or does not affect the general death rate as they say it does not, we may not be able to determine from the statistics, but a blind man can see that it brings at least partial death to one's physical, moral, and spiritual ability and influence. Alcohol surely does prevent decomposition, for who of us have not seen toads, snakes and centipedes, possibly a few appendix vermiforms "preserved" by its use? To thus have our physical life prolonged and yet be dead to our neighbor's rights and needs still remains an unattractive proposition.

THE ANNUAL INDEX.—We hope every reader of the HERALD, whether he has his volumes bound or not, will carefully preserve this number containing the index for the whole year. Much time and effort is required to prepare this for your convenience, and it will save you many hours of time in looking up anything that has appeared in the past year. Note that it is made up in cross-index style, so if you remember the name of the writer and not the name of the article, you can find it in a moment's time. On the other hand, you may remember something about the subject and not the name of the writer, then you can find it listed in one or more ways. We hope you will find time to reread much that has appeared the last year, for it is surely worth it.

CHANGE IN "ENSIGN."—We are informed that Zion's Ensign will change its form, beginning with the next number. It is to be about the same size and form as the Herald, and contain sixteen pages. This will be much more convenient for binding and filing. We are pleased to note that the Ensign is much appreciated by members and nonmembers. By following their policy of making it the missionary newspaper of the church, we are confident that its popularity will increase. Success to the Ensign; long may it wave and far may its influence extend.

THE COST OF WAR.—In a recent statement of Britain's war expenses, Reginald McKenna, former chancellor of the exchequer, stated that the daily expense for sixty-three days past had been $28,500,000. That the expenditure at present is about $27,000,000 daily. Bonar Law had already announced that the total expenses of the nation to date were about $19,260,000,000. These figures are beyond comprehension and represent the expenses of only one nation involved in the world war. Again the question is raised, what could the world not have done with such vast sums in the relief of poverty, caring for widows and orphans, providing old-age pensions, educating children, building schools and hospitals, and bestowing homes as inheritances on worthy laborers. That would have been in harmony with the way that Jesus indicated that surplus should be expended. But the world has chosen to spend its surplus in such a way as to make more orphans and widows, more poverty and sickness, more homeless poor. Is it not clear that the times of the Gentiles are drawing to a close?

A PSYCHOLOGICAL APPEAL.—Most of us are blessed with a few acquaintances whose sphere of activity is different from ours. Commercially, educationally and socially, they are away above us. Largely because of these differences we are unable to reach these friends by ordinary methods, so if we are to impart to them a knowledge of our religious position, we must appeal to them from their own standpoint. While we may consider them no better than our other and more common friends, there still remains the responsibility of reaching them. Their mental attitude is different, as a rule, for with their position comes more or less self-satisfaction, and consequent aloofness. Some few weeks ago we mentioned that copies of a late number of The Journal of American History were on sale at this office, at the regular price of one dollar each. In this beautiful and internationally read quarterly is a concise presentation of the history of our church by Church Historian Heman C. Smith, illustrated with ten full-page illustrations. By loaning one of these copies to our friends described above, we may be sure of a hearing when an ordinary tract or paper would be disdained. This brief history of our church in such dignified setting shines forth as harmoniously as it does when told at the humblest fireside, and makes a psychologically effective appeal to our harder-to-reach friends. We are glad Bishop McGuire arranged for these extra copies and from the way they are being ordered, they will soon be sold out.

The higher life is not found on the pedestal of pride.—Selected.

Original Articles

THE BURNING OF BABYLON.—NO. 1

BY E. E. LONG

The world is on fire! Babylon is burning! Fire broke out on the border between Austria and Servia July 28, 1914, and, with lightning-like rapidity, spread to Germany, Belgium, France, Russia, Italy, and other countries until to-day all Europe is in flames. Millions of men, women, and children have perished, and billions on billions of dollars in property has been destroyed. For twenty-six months the terrible conflagration has raged unchecked, leaving death and desolation in its wake. Instead of seeking to stay the progress of the spreading inferno, the nations, including our own, appear to vie with one another in adding fuel to the flames, and the dreadful holocaust continues with unabated fury, extending farther and farther until the shores of our own fair land have been singed by flying particles of burning debris. All attempts on the part of horrified spectators to extinguish the flames are met with "hands off" by the bloodthirsty war fiend as he gloats over the slaughter of his helpless victims. The following press dispatches indicate the temper of the belligerents at this time:

Rome, October 6.—The allies have informed the Dutch Government that any move toward peace on the part of Holland would be construed as a pro-German act, it was learned to-day. This is the first hint that Holland has been feeling out the peace sentiment among the European belligerents. Exactly when this information was sent to The Hague is not known here. The fact that such action was taken was disclosed in a discussion of the Lloyd-George interview warning neutrals not to interfere at this time. Well-informed circles here say that the allies are reconciled to the probability that the war will last at least three years more.—Woodstock (Ontario) Sentinel-Review, October 12.

London, October 11.—The House of Commons to-day began the consideration of serious problems resulting from the war with the introduction by Premier Asquith of a new vote of credit for one and a half billion dollars. . . . The vote of credit is the thirteenth since the outbreak of the war, bringing up the total to sixteen billion, six hundred thousand dollars. As to-day's credit vote is expected to last until the end of the present year, another request will be necessary before March.—Ibid.

London, October 11.—Premier Asquith received a tremendous ovation in the House of Commons this afternoon when he declared, in the midst of a speech in which he moved new war credit: "This war cannot end in a patched-up, precarious dishonoring compromise masquerading under the name of peace. This isn't the moment for faint hearts and wavering counsels," added the prime minister when the galleries were again silent. "The allies are not vindictive, but they will require from their enemies adequate reparation for the past and security for the future." Great Britain's average daily expenditure is now twenty-five million dollars, Premier Asquith informed the Commons in moving the new credits. Reviewing the military operations, the prime minister declared that in recent operations on the Somme front the British have advanced their lines seven miles on a nine-mile front and have held all the conquered ground.—Ibid.

Essen, Germany, October 16.—Twenty thousand workers will be added to the present force of 70,000 at the Krupp works in order for Germany to regain supremacy in guns and ammunition. This is merely one step in Germany's renewed efforts to end the war under General von Hindenburg, the new chief of staff. From leading Germans it is also learned it is planned to renew the submarine war to stop contraband going into England from neutral countries and to halt munition ships from Canada and the United States as well as sink Canadian troop transports. A great offensive against Russia and Rumania is also being planned. A visit to the great gun plants in the Rhine and Ruhr valleys disclosed the gigantic plans Germany is making. The smoke of these factories makes enemy aeroplane raids almost impossible. Twenty thousand women are working in overalls in the Krupp works alone.—Waterloo Evening Courier, October 16.

At twenty-five million dollars a day, England alone has spent over two billion dollars in the great drive in the Somme region, losing in killed and maimed 1,620,000 men, to gain sixty-three square miles of territory. What the German and French losses have been we do not know.

Becoming alarmed at the ever-increasing magnitude of the war cloud, Uncle Sam whets his sword by appropriating $662,476,512 for "preparedness," and the various defense leagues are wildly clamoring for more. It will take all of that and more, we are told, to keep us out of the fiery furnace. Surely, "perilous times" are upon us!

In a little book, The Cause of the War, Reverend Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of Broadway Tabernacle, New York, says:

What is the cause of the war? It is the most important question to which any man or woman can just now turn his mind. No word has been of late so frequently on our lips as the word, Why. Men have asked one another in sad bewilderment, How does it happen that mankind has gotten into this deplorable predicament? How can you account for it that the nations of Europe have plunged into this abyss of blood and fire? How do you explain it that Christendom should bring upon the world this indescribable, unthinkable tragedy, this desolating and heartbreaking horror? . . . Hundreds of thousands of our fellow beings are in the fire of a great tribulation, and we ought to come close enough to the flames for them to scorch our hearts.—Page 5.

Multitudes have been running to and fro in a wild frenzy asking the same questions over and over again. With every crash of falling walls their "bewilderment" increases and their fears are intensified. Already one thousand books have been written on the war giving various contradictory opinions as to the cause of the calamity, and the probable results when the war is over. Many prominent people have lost faith in humanity and religion is at a discount. A prominent English writer says:

The calamity which has befallen Europe threatens to become one of the darkest nights of human history, not only because of the physical suffering involved, but because of the spiritual eclipse which has overtaken so many of our noblest hopes and beliefs. With that inextinguishable hope which is the sign of the divine in us, at first men dreamed that all kinds of things might be wrought through the war; the ending of war, the destruction of militarism, the renovation of society, the return of faith. But as time wears on, as the story unfolds day by day, hope recedes and the conviction is forced upon us that from the war itself we can expect nothing good. The heritage of hate and suspicion will outlast more than our generation, the general appeal to force will for years to come make any other appeal impossible.—Christ and Peace, page 61.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY PARADOX

Such is the gloomy aspect as set forth by nearly all who write, regardless of nationality. Reverend C. E. Jefferson has so graphically and elaborately described the situation in a tract, The Delusion of Militarism, that I feel constrained to quote him at length. He says:

The future historian of the first decade of the twentieth century will be puzzled. He will find that the world at the opening of the century was in an extraordinarily belligerent mood, and that mood was well-nigh universal, dominating the New World as well as the Old, the Orient no less than the Occident. He will find that preparations for war, especially among nations which confessed allegiance to the Prince of Peace, were carried forward with tremendous energy and enthusiasm, and that the air was filled with prophetic voices, picturing national calamities and predicting bloody and world-embracing conflicts.

Alongside of this fact he will find another fact no less conspicuous and universal, that everybody of importance in the early years of the twentieth century was an ardent champion of peace. He will find incontestable evidence that the King of England was one of the truest friends of peace who ever sat on the English throne, that the German Emperor proclaimed repeatedly the cause of peace was ever dear to his heart, that the President of the United States was so effective as a peacemaker that he won a prize for ending a mighty war; that the Czar of Russia was so zealous in his devotion to peace that he called the nations to meet in solemn council to consider measures for ushering in an era of universal amity and good will, and that the President of France, the King of Italy, and the Mikado of Japan were not a whit behind their royal brethren in offering sacrifices on the altar of the goddess of peace. A crowd of royal peacemakers in a world surcharged with thoughts and threats of war, a band of lovers strolling down an avenue which they themselves had lined with lyddite shells and twelve-inch guns, this will cause our historian to rub his eyes.

In his investigations he will find that the world's royal counselors and leading statesmen were also, without exception, whole-heartedly devoted to the cause of conciliation. He will read with admiration the speeches of Prince Bulow, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Mr. H. H. Asquith, Mr. John Hay, Mr. Elihu Root, and will be compelled to confess that the three leading nations of our western world never in the entire course of their history had statesmen more pacific than these in temper, or more eloquent in their advocacy of the cause of international good will. A galaxy of peace-loving statesmen under a sky black with the thunderclouds of war, this is certain to bewilder our historian.

His perplexity will become no less when he considers the incontrovertible proofs that never since time began were the masses of men so peaceably inclined as in just this turbulent and war-rumor-tormented twentieth century. He will find that science and commerce and religion had cooperated in bringing the nations together, that the wage earners in all the European countries had begun to speak of one another as brothers, and that the growing spirit of fraternity and co-operation had expressed itself in such organizations as the Interparliamentary Union, with a membership of twenty-five hundred legislators and statesmen, and various other societies and leagues of scholars and merchants and lawyers and jurists. He will find delegations paying friendly visits to neighboring countries, and will read, dumbfounded, what the English and German papers were saying about invasions, and the need of increased armaments, at the very time that twenty thousand Germans in Berlin were applauding to the echo the friendly greetings of a company of English visitors. And he will be still more nonplused when he reads that, while ten thousand boys and girls in Tokio were singing loving greetings to our naval officers, there were men in the United States rushing from city to city urging the people to prepare for an American-Japanese war. It will seem inexplicable to our historian that when peace and arbitration and conciliation societies were multiplying in every land, and when men seemed to hate war, with an abhorrence never known in any preceding era, there should be a deluge of war-talk flowing like an infernal tide across the world.

His bewilderment, however, will reach its climax when he discovers that it was after the establishment of an international court that all the nations voted to increase their armaments. Everybody conceded that it was better to settle international disputes by reason rather than by force, but as soon as the legal machinery was created, by means of which the swords could be dispensed with, there was a fresh fury to perfect at once all the instruments of destruction. After each new peace conference there was a fresh cry for more guns. Our historian will read with gladness the records of The Hague Conference, and the laying of the foundation of a periodic congress of nations, and of a permanent high court. He will note the neutralization of Switzerland, Belgium and Norway; the compact entered into by the countries bordering on the Baltic; the signing of more than sixty arbitration treaties; twelve of these by the Senate of the United States; the creation of an International Bureau of American Republics, embracing twenty-one nations; the establishment of a Central American High Court; the elaboration and perfection of legal instruments looking toward the parliament of man, the federation of the world.

He will note also that while these splendid achievements of the peace spirit were finding a habitation and a name, the nations were thrilled as never before by dismal forebodings, and the world was darkened by whispers of death and destruction. While the Palace of Peace at the Hague was building, nations hailed the advent of the airship as a glorious invention, because of the service it could render to the cause of war. This unprecedented growth of peace sentiment, accompanied by a constant increase of jealousy and suspicion, of fear and panic, among the nations of the earth, will set our historian to work to ascertain the meaning of this strange phenomenon, the most singular perhaps to be met with in the entire history of the world.

What a strange paradox the foregoing declaration reveals. For three quarters of a century and more the Latter Day Saints have been pointing to the handwriting on the wall. Belshazzar has been rebuked a thousand times for his wicked revelry, but he only filled his glass and drank some more. The Pharisees have repeatedly been called to account for perverting the way of the Lord, but their only reply has been, "Beware of false prophets." The nations have been warned to repent and believe the gospel, but they answered: "We don't need God. We've got guns." Thus have they rejected the angel's message with scorn and brought the wrath of God down upon themselves, and plunged headlong into the vortex of perdition. Under the popular banner, "The World for Christ," they marched to the four corners of the earth and raised an "army" of "four hundred million" Christian soldiers. With the aid of a multiplicity of human inventions the nations were being "civilized" and "Christianized" as never before when, lo, the war clouds that had been skirting the horizon overspread the sky and the "civilization" and "Christianity," not of Christ but of Cæsar, was quickly shot to pieces. Wounded and bleeding, many, still clinging to the fragments of demolished hopes, and in an agony of despair, realize to a small degree the seriousness of the situation. But dazed and dumbfounded by the force of the terrible explosion, their "bewilderment" is sad and pathetic. A few, however, have recovered sufficiently to see through the veneer and detect the sham, as the following seems to indicate:

A FALSE PROPHECY REVEALED

We have tried to erect a civilization which is really grounded on a pagan philosophy of life, and the fact that we call it Christian has blinded many of us to the fact that its fundamental presuppositions are utterly unChristian. This fact has suddenly been revealed to us. Dare we face the consequence? Have we courage and wisdom enough to set about the reconstruction of our international life upon a genuinely Christian basis?—Christ and Peace, p. 56.

Again:

The war has come out of a false policy, and the false policy come out of a false philosophy. We are to seek, then, the cause of the present horror in the realm of ideas. It is sometimes asserted that it does not make any difference what you believe. The fact is that everything depends on what you believe. When men believe the truth, it is well with the world. When they believe error, darkness falls on the lands. —The cause of the War, p. 44.

Peter Ainslie says this:

Where Christ triumphed his church failed. Taking up the policy of materialism, her great numbers and her splendid prestige have been her pride and her shame. Fragments of these may be found in our humblest churches, both as separate communions and local congregations. Our ignorance of the fundamentals in the religion of Christ has kept the church unspiritual, weak and impotent. To live by the policy of heaven, which is practicing the ethics of Christ, and to grow into a united force, is a task that presses upon the church as never before. To even hint at these high ideals in this day seems like an idle dream, but these are the promises of God and this will be done. It must be sadly acknowledged that the road to this triumph can not be found through present-day organized Christianity.—Christ or Napoleon—Which, p. 61.

Right here it will be appropriate to let Jehovah speak. Referring to this very time when the Lord would begin his preparatory work, Jeremiah says:

The Gentiles shall come to thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit.—Jeremiah 16: 14, 19.

Present-day organized Christianity, including the church Mr. Ainslie represents, is not of God. While the promise of God is sure as to the final triumph of the work of Christ, it cannot be accomplished through the medium of the modern institution. Such are the logical deductions to be drawn from the foregoing. How, then, are the purposes of God to be wrought? A prominent English writer offers the following:

[If we remove our concern for the moment from the gospels, where controversy still centers, to the pre-Christian apocalyptic, we shall find ourselves moving among less ambiguous ideas. If we take the Apocalyptic, as represented by the book of Enoch, we shall find that the hope of the kingdom embraces three lines of expectation. It is expected that the coming of the kingdom will be heralded by great upheavals in the natural order, by great national or political disturbances, and shall come finally in a supernatural revelation: a manifestation of God in an actual theophany, or in the coming of the Son of Man.—Christ and Peace, p. 64. (Italics mine.—E. E. L.)

(To be continued.)

* * * * *

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON ANSWERED BY ITS OWN EVIDENCE.—NO. 3

BY T. J. SMITH

THE CASE OF KING CORIANTUMR

And it came to pass that Coriantumr fell to the earth, and became as if he had no life.—Ether 6: 106.

And Coriantumr was discovered by the people of Zarahemla; and he dwelt with them for the space of nine moons.—Omni 1: 37.

The first quotation above, refers to Coriantumr just after he had "smote" off the head of Shiz, his last enemy, at the great and final battle at the Hill Ramah, which hill, we claim, was in the western part of New York State. The other one to him being discovered away down in Central America or the land of Zarahemla, by that people.

At this great battle, Coriantumr had been sorely wounded, and had fainted from the loss of blood the day before he slew Shiz, and was in a very weak and exhausted condition.

Our burden now is not to prove that he could not or did not make the long journey, as in the other cases heretofore discussed, but that he did actually maké it, notwithstanding his weak and exhausted condition and the long distance. The story we once heard of an Irishman cleverly fits in here. He had just heard the song, "It's a long way to Tipperary." He remarked, "I care not a fig for the distance if a mon only has the time to make it."

The disbeliever in the Book of Mormon and those who contend that the Hill Ramah was far to the south, claim that he never could make any such journey, that he could have traveled but a short distance, and at the end of nine months died of his wounds. We will clearly show that he never died of his wounds and that he had ample time to make it, and at about the end of twelve years, eight moons and twenty-nine days, he was still "on the job."

Before we proceed to do this, we wish to notice a few items of history regarding this noted man, that we may have a fuller and better understanding of the situation.

And the first item that attracts our attention is a prophecy of Ether 6:60, that he (Coriantumr) should never fall by the sword. This fully settles the idea that he died of his wounds.

In the same chapter, sixty-nine and seventieth verses, we are informed that he received many deep wounds and fainted from the loss of blood, and was carried away as if dead. In verse eighty-one he had another fainting "spell" from loss of blood. Now, notwithstanding all this fainting and bloodshed, in the ninety-ninth verse he is declared to be a large and mighty man, as to the strength of men, just the day before he slew Shiz.

If all this be true, would there be anything strange or unreasonable in concluding that he would quickly recover from his last exhausted condition, as he had done in those previously, and be amply able to make the journey?

But to return to the time he had to make it in. It is, we believe, the universal decision of those who are qualified to so decide, that the final battle at the Hill Ramah was fought about the year 600 B. C., the same year the Nephites sailed for America. The people supposed to have been led out by Mulek, the youngest son of Zedekiah, king of Judah, and who were called the people of Zarahemla, and were the ones to "discover" Coriantumr, never left Jerusalem for twelve years after the great battle, or in the year 588 B. C. Omni (1:26) states that they came out from there at the time Zedekiah was carried captive to Babylon, and Bible chronology puts that event at the above date.

So this would give ample time for Coriantumr to recover from his wounds and make the journey.

By placing a certain interpretation upon the history given in regard to his being found by the people of Zarahemla, he must have lived more than twenty years after being wounded. The people of Zarahemla were so called after a man by that name, and who was a descendant of Mulek, before mentioned. (Mosiah 11:78.)

Bible history informs us that Zedekiah was thirty-two years old when taken to Babylon. (2 Kings 24:18.) He must have had at least three sons, for it is stated in the twenty-fifth chapter and seventh verse that the sons of Zedekiah were slain before his eyes. Now if he was only thirty-two years of age and had three sons, the youngest could not have been over eleven years of age, and even at that age his father would have to be married at eighteen years of age. And yet this man Zarahemla, after whom the people were called, was a descendant of this eleven-year-old-boy. Admitting that he was a son of Mulek, it would take at least eight or nine years for him to have posterity, besides there is no telling how long it was before the people were called after him. Now summing the matter up, we plainly see that Coriantumr must have been still living beyond twenty years after being wounded.

We do not vouch for this interpretation being placed upon the history of this event, although it fits in cleverly with the account given. The people of Zarahemla were often called by that name from the time they landed in Central America, (as in Alma 13:74) and Coriantumr might have been discovered by them in that country; but we have no means of knowing.

The idea of a tender boy of the age Mulek must have been, leading an expedition out from Jerusalem, has been another cudgel used by the skeptic against the divine inspiration of the Book of Mormon. The reader will notice that the book nowhere claims that Mulek led the colony. So its complete silence on that point abundantly answers the objection. It does say, however, that "they were brought by the hand of the Lord across the great waters into the land where Mosiah discovered them." (Omni 1:27.) The facts in the case are simply these: Zedekiah had at least three sons, two of the older ones had been slain, and to protect the youngest one the Lord no doubt to preserve the royal seed, had him taken out of the land, under the guidance and protection of older heads.

We wish now to refer to a little bit of inconsistency (or it may have been from an oversight of the facts in the case,) in those who have so strenuously insisted that Coriantumr, in his weak condition, could not have made any such journey as that from New York to Central America. We will show that Moroni made the same journey under greater obstacles, if their location of Ramah Hill be correct.

Mormon, his father, was seventy-four years old when slain at Cumorah. We will suppose that he was thirty years old when Moroni was born, (and that is a very reasonable age to place it) he, Moroni, would be eighty years old when he hid up the plates of the Book of Mormon. At the time his father was slain he would have been forty-four years old, then his living thirty-six years after that event would make him that age.

Now if Cumorah Hill was in Central America, as contended, when Moroni finished his writing, and was ready to hide them up, we would have to accept this wild and improbable story, a man, bowed down with eighty years of hard service, a great part of it in the rigors of warfare, shouldering up a package of golden plates, weighing from seventy-five to one hundred pounds, buckling on a breastplate of several more pounds, placing the Urim and Thummim in his pocket, then striking out through country swarming with murderous Lamanites, consisting of rough mountains, great swamps, impenetrable forests, and impassable rivers, and accomplishing the same journey of three thousand miles which they contend Coriantumr could not possibly make.

There is one fact connected with Moroni's hiding up his records that we would have the reader note particularly, as it bears heavily upon determining the location of this noted hill. There is not the least proof, given in the book, that he changed his location, to any great extent, from the scene of the battle, let alone making the long journey to New York. He mentions dodging around from place to place to avoid the Lamanites, (Moroni 1: 3) but is completely silent upon what would have been his supreme "dodge."

Then if he never left the scene of the battle, and the records were hidden up in New York State, that ought to settle it.

But we must notice another idea that has been advanced to discourage the above conclusion.

They have studiously figured out the number of plates, large and small, connected with the Nephite people; amounting in the aggregate to over one thousand pounds in weight, and then they ask the question, where is the reason or consistency in transporting this bulk of plates all the way to New York State, when they could have been hidden with so much less trouble and just as safely in Central America? We will ask two more questions and the answer to them will be the answer to this:

If the Hill Cumorah was located in Central America, or southern Mexico, why did Moroni have to bring his plates all the way up to New York when he could have hidden them down there just as safely, and why did Mormon take up all the plates already hidden down there in the Hill Shim and take them northward with him and deposit them in Cumorah, when he could just as safely let them remain hidden?

Answer: The coming forth of the plates hidden up by Moroni was to be a forerunner of the introduction of the gospel and the setting up of the kingdom of God in the latter days: and that could not be done at the appointed time until God especially prepared a government under which his kingdom could be successfully established; hence he inspired the men who framed the Constitution of the United States Government and assisted in its establishment. Under no other government then existing could his designs be accomplished. So it was very necessary that the records be placed within the limits of the intended government. The hiding up of the records in that particular locality in the United States Government might have come from the vicissitudes of war, convenience or other causes unknown.

Thus are all objections answered and the divine inspiration of the Book of Mormon left completely intact.

Our next article will be to answer the supposed and improbable idea of Mormon shifting his army from Central America all the way to western New York, and to show where his bold and well-planned strategy failed. This we believe will be the most interesting and conclusive of all preceding articles, as it will definitely locate the Hill Cumorah. With that presentation the series will close.

(To be continued.)

* * * * *

HOW A SECRETARY SHOULD REGARD HIS WORK

[Among us are hundreds who in one department or another do secretarial work. The following article brings an important message to such, and we hope it may be the means of bringing about further efficiency in this special and important work.—EDITORS.]

The secretary should regard his work the same as any other officer or worker, no matter what the work may be.

The secretary is just as important in his part of the work as the president, or any other worker in the church or its auxiliaries. How would we get along without any record to give us a precedent? Take for instance the judiciary, practically all of their decisions are based upon some act or decision given previously; now how would they be able to decide unless there had been a record kept?

In the beginning, men called upon God and God blessed them and a record was kept. (Genesis 6: 5, I. T.) Why did God instruct men to keep a record? Why did he have all the prophets keep an account of their dealings with the people and of the word as it came from God? Why did the ancients keep records on plates of brass and gold and graven in the rocks? You may satisfy yourself as to the reason, but we wish to impress the importance of the office of one who is called upon to act as a secretary.

You who are secretaries do not think that the position you hold is just a fad, or a thing of naught; remember that you are history builders, and they who keep the record have a great responsibility in that they are to keep a true record.

A secretary should have his books and records in such a shape that he can give any item of record in a moment's notice. I wonder how many of the branch or other secretaries could do this? Not if you have the old-fashioned, cumbersome book that I have stored away out of sight, where after having written about a hundred pages of names and then had some removed, some died and some excommunicated, then the district secretary writes and asks for the record of some one of these. I used to start at the beginning of the book and go over all the motley array until I found the one wanted. Perhaps it would take an hour, or if you missed it you would have to go over the whole thing again. How do you do it?

The law of heaven is order, and order spells system. Now, system may be good or bad. You may have a system, but is it a profitable one? A few years ago the horse car was the system; it was the best we had, but now what? Why the electric car is soon to be outdistanced by the airship.

Are we as secretaries in the various departments of the greatest business house of the universe keeping abreast of the times? The typewriter, the loose-leaf system of books and the great variety of duplicating machines are being used in all the big business houses, why not we, who have the recording of the greatest work in the world, adopt some of these labor-saving devices?

I find the loose-leaf record the greatest time-saver I have. I write a leaf for each member and arrange them alphabetically and there they are, just as easy to find as a word in the dictionary, in less than half a minute.

The typewriter makes a neat, legible record, but if care is taken and a fountain pen is used, which is very cheap now, a good, clear record can be made. In every effort time is of great importance, and time-saving is a slogan of to-day.

There is great necessity for a correlation of our work. The Master has said if we are not one we are not his. The thought is this, that the tree cannot live without the branch, neither can the branch abide without the tree. This easily can be applied to the branch, district and the general recorder. Some might say the branch can live without the district, perhaps it can, but what a life! The work we represent is not a selfish work. True, it has a personal feature, but the personality is this, that we are called upon to be responsible for our own acts. Then we should be concerned enough to reach out and grasp every opportunity for advancement.

If a member of the priesthood fails to send a report to those under whom he labors, he is considered inactive; so also the branch that fails to report. How can those in charge know the condition of the branch or of the members of that branch? The great whole is made up of units. If one of these units fails to respond to the promptings of the body, that unit is dead, insofar as there is no life manifest. The secretary that fails to act in his official capacity, is hindering the great mass, the church militant. For this reason a secretary should regard his work with that respect and consideration, that he would not fail to labor with all diligence, ever respecting the confidence reposed in him, that he is a worker together with God in his great work.

Reports have come to our notice that were well written, but, in the recording of dates, figures were used. This we find to be a cause of great annoyance. We read 6 5 16. Some might say, Oh, that's easy, that means June 5, 1916. Does it, or does it mean May 6, 1916? The English use it that way. Now remember, a secretary is to write according to instruction received. The instruction comes to us from Brother C. I. Carpenter, the church recorder, whose right it is to suggest in this matter, that when writing a date we do it thus 6 May 1916 or 5 June 1916, day, month, and then the year. You can readily see that there is no possible chance of making a mistake when a date is so written.

The command has come to us to be not weary in well-doing, and that we be not slothful in our service, so it behooves us to cultivate the talents that have been given us that we may be counted as wise servants and thereby be trusted with greater talents or responsibilities.

Efficiency is the watchword of the hour. We are a race of specialists, and they who are able to perform a certain work in a capable manner are the ones who are in demand. Do all that you do in the best possible manner. Try to improve each day, each page of history, for the call is to be striving to excel, press onward and upward to that high standard enunciated by the matchless One.

Standardization is a great factor in economy of time. It would be well for each branch and district to have a uniform class of supplies, that all may work to one end, and that with the selfsame prospect in mind the whole may grow and develop into a fabric without spot or wrinkle.

Take an interest in your work, learn to like it, and sooner or later you will find joy in that which you do. Above all remember a secretary has a great responsibility, an important place in the work and only those who labor faithfully to the end can claim a reward.

F. E. BONE.

Of General Interest

ARE YOU KEEPING YOUR EYES ON THE JEWS?

Do you like Jews?

Perhaps not; most people don't. A good many centuries ago God said the Jews were going to be disliked by the whole world. He said he would "make them like vile figs, that cannot be eaten, they are so bad." He said they would be "tossed to and fro among all the kingdoms of the earth, to be an execration, and an astonishment, and an hissing, and a reproach, among all."

But you and I had better not have any part in fulfilling that prophecy against the Jews.

The Jews are a sensational people. They always have been; they always will be.

What promises to be, in all soberness, the most sensational series of articles on the Jews ever written and brought together for popular publication, has been under preparation for some time past by The Sunday School Times, in consultation with that widely known, widely loved Christian Hebrew of our day, David Baron of London.

This startling series on the Jews will run for probably a year to come, perhaps longer, in The Sunday School Times.

We hope it will include masterly discussions of such topics as the following:

THE JEWS ARE GOING TO SURPRISE THE WORLD

And you can know all about it in advance, if you will make sure of reading the following articles:

"Why the world hates the Jews."

"Should the United States try to secure international protection for the Jews?"

"Why is the Jew the keystone of the world?"

"Ought the Jews to have Palestine?"

"What are Christian missions to Jews really accomplishing?"

"What is hoped for from the proposed Jewish Congress?"

"Are the Jews finally to convert the world?"

"What does Zionism mean?"

"Are the 'Lost Ten Tribes' really lost?"

"How is Christianity best presented to the Jew?"

"What kind of Messiah do the Jews still expect?"

"What does the Jew think of Christianity to-day?"

"Has this war any relation to the Jews' prophesied future?"

The strongest writers in the world, both in North America and across the ocean, and both Jewish and Christian, are going to let in the light on these subjects.

For God himself has let in the light, in his own Word, though most people don't know this; and the coming series will open up God's Word as well as present startlingly significant present-day facts.

If you are not already in a club of subscribers to The Sunday School Times, won't you get four other people to join with you as you send your subscription for the coming year, and thus save both for yourself and for them one third of the subscription price, getting the paper for $1, instead of $1.50, for a whole twelve months?

Send us their names and addresses, and we will gladly mail them a free specimen copy of The Sunday School Times containing a full announcement of the Jewish series. To insure this, just write "Jewish Series" on the list of names you send us.

[We extract the above from an announcement in The Sunday School Times for December 10. Many of our readers will be especially interested in this series. Subscriptions may be sent to this office.—EDITORS.]

* * * * *

TOO MUCH SUNDAY PAPER

The plump singer in one of W. S. Gilbert's operas who comes out and carols mournfully, "There is far too much of me," might well impersonate the hundred-odd-page edition of the popular daily newspaper, which is now being denounced upon both moral and economic grounds. The Catholic Citizen (Milwaukee) actually sees a real advantage in the present paper shortage in that it may bring about a curtailment of the Sunday papers, which, it says, "have pushed aside with alarming success nearly all serious reading for the Sunday." The Federal Trade Commission suggests in a letter to newspaper publishers that they can save print paper, by cutting down the size of Sunday editions. Publishers consulted by the commission are said to "feel that the elimination of certain features would meet with public approval and would not decrease the revenues of the publishers." According to this statement:

The paper saved by cutting down the size of one large Sunday edition several pages would be sufficient to keep a number of smaller papers supplied for a considerable time. Unless present supplies of paper can be increased, which does not now seem probable, such unselfish action on the part of large city papers appears to be the only means that will save many of the smaller publishers from going out of business.

Not only would the small publisher thus profit, but the newspaper reader would really be better off, in the Catholic Pittsburgh Observer's opinion. It quotes from The Catholic Citizen a jingle which sets down "with but slight exaggeration" what the Sunday newspaper reader gets for his five cents:

Sixty-nine pages of rubbish,
Twenty-two pages of rot,
Forty-six pages of scandal vile
Served to us piping hot.

Seventeen hundred pictures—
 Death, disease, and despair—
 Lies and fakes and fakes and lies
 Stuck in most everywhere.

Thirty-four comic pages
 Printed in reds, greens, and blues;
 Thousands of items we don't care to read,
 But only two columns of news.

The Observer proceeds to a more serious discussion of the demerits of the Sunday edition, in words apparently either quoted or paraphrased from an article which appeared in the columns of its Milwaukee contemporary:

The enormous amount of "fake" which is exploited by the Sunday editions is palpable to every intelligent reader; yet nearly the whole community falls for it. The articles, for instance, which purport to give "inside" information concerning secrets of the present administration, the inner life of royal families, the smothered scandals of imperial courts, etc., are generally sheer creations. It is worthy of note that the author's name is often withheld "for diplomatic" or "personal reasons." The real reason for the suppression is that the writer lives right here in town, and is in the weekly pay of The Moon and has a permanent desk in the Moon office, or grinds out his clumsy invention in a furnished room in the neighborhood, for the princely sum of eight bucks a week, as long as he keeps grinding satisfactorily. The "expert" articles on the present stage of the war, and its development in immediate prospect, unless signed by a correspondent of known reputation, are utterly worthless vaporings. With these, too, it often happens that the name of the writer is withheld for "special" reasons, the principal of which is that nobody ever heard of him, and as a consequence nobody would attach the slightest importance to anything he writes if his name was subjoined to his article.

The fiction of the Sunday papers is quite often what the man in the street would denominate as "punk." Many who contribute to this section have never learned the story-teller's art, and quite as frequently the offering is objectionable on the score of Christian ethics.

How the geniuses that produce the "funny sheet" have got by with it for so long is quite a mystery. So successfully have they put it over on the public that their place in newspaperdom seems now quite assured.

—The Literary Digest for November 4, 1916.

* * * * *

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE HEALERS MAY PRACTICE HEALING

Some people have apparently supposed that the Court of Appeals of the State of New York has decided that the legislature has no power to make it a crime to treat disease by prayer. This is not so. This opinion, it is true, is expressed by the chief justice in a memorandum; but there is nothing in the opinion of the court to indicate that the court agrees with him in that statement. The decision of the court upon the question whether in the State of New York the Christian Scientist practitioner has a legal right to treat disease by prayer is based wholly upon its construction of the statutes of the State on this subject.

New York law prohibits the practice of medicine except by persons duly licensed, and in its definition of the practice of medicine includes offering or undertaking by any means to "diagnose, treat, operate, or prescribe for any human disease, pain, injury, deformity, or physical condition." But it also provides that "this article shall not be construed to affect . . . the practice of the religious tenets of any church." A Mr. Cold is a Christian Scientist practitioner; he was never licensed, but had an office where he treated patients, for which he charged two dollars for the first treatment and one dollar for subsequent treatments. His treatment consisted simply in religious conversation and silent prayer. He explained to the visitor on whose complaint he was indicted that Christian Science did not believe in medical treatment, that he had no more power to cure her than anyone else, that God was the only healer, and that if she would study Christian Science and comply with its directions and "purify her life and her thoughts and cleanse from her consciousness fear and inharmony and false thoughts," she could cure herself just as well as the Christian Science practitioner could cure her. The question before the court was whether this was practicing medicine as defined by the statute, and, if so, whether the act was not exempt from prohibition of the statute because it was "the practice of the religious tenets of any church." The court held that (1) Mr. Cole did treat his patient in the sense defined by the statute; but also that (2) this treatment was a part of "the religious tenets of a church," and therefore the defendant was not guilty of violating the statute. Judge Seabury, before whom the case was originally tried, charged the jury that it was no defense that the practitioner "did these acts in the practice of the religious tenets of the Christian Science Church." The Court of Appeals held that this was an error; that the judge "should have left to the jury the question whether the defendant was in good faith practicing the tenets of such a church within the meaning of the statutory exception."—The Outlook, November 1, 1916.

Astronomers have built telescopes which show myriads of stars unseen before; but when a man looks through a tear in his own eye, that is a lens which reaches to the unknown, and reveals orbs which no telescope, however skillfully constructed, could do; nay, which brings to view even the throne of God, and pierces that nebulous distance where are the eternal verities in which true life consists.—Beecher.

Woman's Auxiliary

EDITED BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON, 2009 LOCUST ST., OMAHA, NEBR.

The Educational Department

It was the intention of the Year Book committee, when preparing the different departments of activity in which the women of the church might engage, to make the educational department so broad and comprehensive that every woman of the church might find some line of work which she might take up with benefit and profit to herself. It was intended to make the list of activities so plain, simple, and easily accessible, that every woman of the church, no matter how limited her practical or formal schooling may have been, would find something, some study or activity which would particularly appeal to her, and which would be adapted to her needs and circumstances. The Year Book was prepared for every woman of the church, in every local, in whatever location and surroundings. It was compiled with the fundamental idea of progress, in all lines of activity.

And so, when reading over the several different divisions of the educational department, you will find they include practically any subject that the average woman would desire.

The purpose of the educational department is to help the women of the church to live more efficient lives. In accomplishing this, the wife, the mother, the woman in business, will learn to conduct a better home, better train her children, and to take her place in the business world as a competent, well-trained individual, with a broad life vision before her. And the result of this will be, that our sisters throughout the church will be happy, contented, and enthusiastic Latter Day Saints, because of the feeling of satisfaction which comes as a reward for something well done.

Systematic study enables us to enjoy to the fullest extent the wonders and beauties of God's creations, because it draws to our attention his marvelous works—the physical, as regards Nature in her many moods and phases, as well as the intricate and perfect workings of our own bodies; mental, which deals with the activities of our minds, those wonderful instruments, the touchstones of God in us; spiritual, which teaches us of the laws God has so wisely and lovingly made to govern us, so that we may live in accordance with his laws, and obtain the resulting blessings.

The phases of the study of the educational department are (1) the theoretical, under which we learn of the truths and ideas gained by educated men and women who have spent years in study and research, in order that the world might be benefited by their efforts. (2) The practical demonstration of these principles—in our homes, as regards the more economical purchase and preparation of foods, the wiser expenditure of the household funds; in the more intelligent control, guiding, and training of our boys and girls; in the communities, helping, as a result of study along these lines, to clean up the back yards, to help the delinquent boy and girl, and to mitigate suffering. We all know how ineffectual and selfish it would be to read and study continually, and make no effort to put into practical demonstration the truths gleaned from the study. The foundation stone upon which the auxiliary was founded, is "Service," with a capital "S"; and so, in all our study, let us keep constantly before us the thought, "How is my study going to help me to become a better home keeper, a better citizen, a better Latter Day Saint?" And further, "In the light of my broadened understanding, how can I bring my less fortunate sisters to the same light, so that they may enjoy the same satisfaction that I feel in my advancement?" We all realize the importance of, first study, then practice. Mrs. Sandy, in her child welfare department, bases her work on the same principle, and follows the plan in her outline of activity in that department.

As an example of how the study might be linked up with the practical demonstration, let us consider a class organized under the head of "Mothers' and teachers' problems," of which Mrs. Lydia Thomas Wight is superintendent. Study from textbooks which treat of the subjects of training of children, of helping them to develop naturally and normally, first at home, then in the public school, should be taken up systematically and thoroughly. But, in order to carry out the basic idea of the auxiliary, "Service," both to loved ones, and to the community and Nation, active cooperation with the teachers of the public schools should be entered into by the mothers; the schools should be visited, in order to show clearly the fact that the parents and members of the community are in perfect accord with the teachers of the children. Or the instructors might be invited to meet with the mothers' study classes, and asked to give suggestions in the form of lectures or talks to the mothers as to the better training of children, in order that the home training might not defeat the school training, and vice versa. There should be perfect harmony existing between the members of a community and those chosen to teach their boys and girls in the public schools; intelligent parents will want to know personally the men and women into whose charge they give their children for the greater part of each day.

You will pardon me if I seem to be speaking directly of the child welfare work. This is one of many cases in which the departments lap and overlap, the activities of one merging and blending into another. And the educational department is closely allied to all, indeed, is the foundation of all, for what line of work can be taken up by anyone, which has not been studied in one way or another?

Or again, in the home economics department, of which Mrs. Bertha Mader is superintendent, the important subjects of house management, dressmaking, etc., are not only to be studied from a textbook, but classes are to be formed, and personal as well as group training given by some sister or instructor who is thoroughly capable.

The importance of the play instinct, or need for recreation, is becoming more and more fully recognized as one of the most vital instincts. Not only does the growing child need to play in order to relax his mind and body; the adult organism requires his re-creation as well, in order that the precious mechanism of mind and body may not wear out or rust out. And so, in the home department, we find an opportunity for the tired mother to lay aside her work in the home for an hour or so each week, and spend that time in visiting local industries, the dairy, the packing house, the canning factory, so that we may even eat more intelligently, knowing the ingredients that go to make up the foods on our tables. These visits, too, might prove of far-reaching benefit to the world at large, for when groups of intelligent women begin to pry into the secrets of the commercial world, many interesting and often pernicious practices are brought to light.

The time is coming when we will see drastic measures taken to regulate the Nation's food supply and distribution. So long as we, as consumers, sit back and sigh when the price of eggs goes up, or meat is put beyond the reach of the average family, just so long will we, and the whole Nation suffer from the greed and selfishness of a few. I am sure that we are all proud of the few brave women, members of the Housewives' League, who have taken the matter into their own hands, and are attempting to force down the price of staple foods. Women seem to be able to hear more distinctly the cries of starving, suffering babies; their sympathies seem to be more susceptible, more easily aroused by signs of needless suffering. At least, this is woman's sphere, her legitimate field, and so such irregularities are brought more forcibly to her attention. Let us, as women of the church, train ourselves, our brains, our hands, our bodies, so that when the need arises, we may be intelligent, capable workers in whatever field of activity where help may be needed!

We of the educational department, want to help you to become happier, more efficient in every way. We want to enthuse you with the idea of "Service," which, in this day and age of advancement, demands intelligent, trained and competent helpers in all lines of work. We desire to impress you with the fact that there is no better time to begin than the present; if there are at this time no study classes in your midst let us urge you at once, to take steps toward organizing one or more. Find the needs of your particular local—the subjects which will particularly appeal to your local, and take up the study immediately. We are so glad, at any time, to give advice, or assistance in selecting a subject for study, or in organizing classes, if you are in doubt as to the method of procedure. Indeed, we are very happy to receive such requests, for it is an indication of the fact that our sisters are "looking upward," and are making an effort to be more worthy Saints and children of God.

HELEN SILSBEE SMITH,

Superintendent Educational Department.

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, 1111 East Eleventh Street.

News from Knobnoster, Missouri

The Woman's Auxiliary convention of the Holden Stake held their meeting December 9, 1916, at Knobnoster, Missouri. Our stake president of the auxiliary, Sister D. J. Krahl, was in charge of the meeting.

At the opening Stake President D. J. Krahl requested all the women to occupy the front seats, which we did; little dreaming that he was only making it easy for the men to pass out without giving their wives a chance to stop them; he then took a vote as to what the men wished to do; retire to the basement for a meeting of their own, or remain and hear what the auxiliary women had for their meeting.

It is with pride that I say not a man left the room and very few voted to go; this surely shows they are interested in and are recognizing the work of the auxiliary, and I think they felt repaid by a better understanding of the work we are trying to do, also by the good program we rendered.

I cannot take space to tell about the good addresses and papers, each one having so many good things along his line of work.

Address by Sister J. W. A. Bailey: "Should the religious education of our children be turned over entirely to the church?"

A splendid article was read by Sister Redfield, and a talk by our president.

We were pleased to have with us Sister J. A. Gardner whose address on "The Oriole girl's movement," gave us a better understanding of what they would accomplish in time.

At the close of the convention, automobiles took the Oriole girls for a hike, after which they were entertained at the home of Sister Sayles, their local leader.

Mrs. M. J. WESTON, Press Chairman.

Drink Glass of Milk A Meal

"A glass of milk with every meal," is the Iowa State College dairymen's prescription to help oust old man Hi-Cost-o'-Livin'. In fact, a greater use of all dairy products, including butter and cheese, would greatly cut the daily menu cost, they maintain. Their use also cuts fuel and preparation cost, for they are ready to eat as bought. Milk is not only nourishing, but cheap, as the following comparison shows:

A quart of milk, costing 9 cents, is equivalent in food value to:

Eight eggs, at 48 cents a dozen, or 32 cents' worth.

Three pounds codfish at 10 cents a pound, or 30 cents' worth.

Three-fifths pound ham at 35 cents a pound, or 21 cents' worth.

Two pounds chicken at 25 cents a pound, or 50 cents' worth.

Three quarters pound beefsteak at 24 cents a pound, or 18 cents' worth.

Four fifths pound pork chops at 25 cents a pound, or 20 cents' worth.

Butter, usually considered a relish and not thought of as having much food value, is a nutritious food and even at its present high price, can be liberally used as economical food.

A pound of butter costing 45 cents is equal in food value to:

Twenty pounds of apples at 5 cents a pound, or $1 worth.

Fourteen pounds of potatoes at $2 a bushel, or 48 cents' worth.

Cheese is nutritious, economical and, contrary to general opinion, easily digested.

One pound of cheddar cheese, valued at 30 cents, is equal in food value to:

One and four tenths pounds ham at 35 cents a pound, or 49 cents' worth.

One and seven tenths pounds beefsteak at 24 cents a pound, or 41 cents' worth.

One and eight tenths pounds pork chops at 25 cents a pound, or 46 cents' worth.

One pound of cottage cheese, served with cream, is equivalent to half a pound of cheddar cheese. Such cheese can be made by using skim milk that might otherwise be wasted. The dairy department at Ames will supply soft cheese recipes.—Ames College Bulletin.

News from Branches

Detroit, First Branch

The Sunday morning prayer meeting was quite well attended. A goodly number of the young people take advantage of the opportunity to get together and enjoy a spiritual feast (for this is a young people's prayer meeting), but there are a good many faces who should be present but are not, and we wonder why? Is it not worth the effort? Can we not make a little sacrifice? It has been our experience that for every sacrifice we make in this life we receive manifold blessings and have been promised life eternal in the world to come. We are not perfect here as yet, but we wish to say that we are steadily climbing and hope some day to reach the height. A statement made by one of our active and efficient young men while bearing his testimony a short time ago keeps continually ringing in my ears, and I hope others remember it as well, viz, that "this gospel is perpetually calling forth the best that is in us." If we are working at our job it surely will call forth the best, and the church to-day needs our best service.

The Sunday school was also well attended and the morning story-telling hour was occupied by the committee in charge of Christmas exercises. The little tots are always happy when preparing for the Yuletide.

K. H. Green was the speaker at eleven o'clock imparting words of comfort and admonition to the Saints. Brother Green left Monday for the northern part of the district to engage in missionary work. We shall miss him in Detroit. We have found him willing at all times to do whatever he was called upon to do and we trust he may be successful in all his missionary labors.

Elder W. L. Bennett was the evening speaker. Brother Bennett has taken a position in Pontiac and will move his family there in the near future. We hate to see them go, but what will be our loss will be gain to others. The branch at Pontiac will undoubtedly welcome them there.

The writer is at present holding forth at the second Detroit Branch with good crowds and interest and we hope to see some who will be willing to render obedience to the gospel.

We have been preaching nearly every night except Saturday for over six weeks and believe we are feeling better than when we began. Surely God's hand is in the work and we hope to be able to do our part. Sister Plato, district chorister, is with us and renders valuable service in the musical line. She has spent the greater part of the year laboring in this capacity, and it surely is a help to the missionary.

The writer went to McGregor and began a series of meetings on October 29, holding forth for five weeks. Elder O. J. Hawn of Bay City was with us for ten days and rendered valuable assistance, baptizing nine. The branch president, Elder Charles Green baptized four and the writer twenty-three, making thirty-six in all. It was a time of awakening for the neighborhood and will surely be called "Little Utah" now a name that it has borne for some time. We had opposition, of course, and a certain Christian (?) man in the community when he heard of anyone being interested would visit him and try to tell him where we were wrong, with the result that we baptized all whom he visited, and a good many more besides. The greater portion of the converts were young people and we feel they will be a wonderful help to the branch; however we baptized one old lady seventy years old. Several whose companions were non-members were made glad by the gospel reaching the hearts of their loved ones and bringing them into the fold. We are sure that the success we achieved was not because of the efforts of the missionaries alone, but through the united efforts of all. Saints from neighboring branches attended and all-day meetings were held on Sunday and everyone seemed like a Pentecost, the Spirit was poured out upon us in such power. The writer lectured to men only one Sunday morning, an early meeting, and it seemed that the same Spirit that had characterized the preceding meetings was present, and we pleaded for a clean people, clean from all worldly things and habits that were surely undermining their spirituality. The result of this and other meetings was that seven or eight gave up the tobacco habit and we earnestly hope and pray that they will never touch the filthy weed again. The admonition to "be clean in your bodies and in your clothing" (Doctrine and Covenants 119:3) should be observed by all and especially the ministry. "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." (Doctrine and Covenants 38:9.) May God hasten the time when all will see the necessity of conforming to the laws of God that Zion may be redeemed. The statement made by Jesus, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," we believe to be in effect yet. This is a good club for our people to use against the sectarian world who preach only a part of the gospel, but what of those who live only a part of it—will it not apply to them as well? May we put on the whole armor of Christ and thus heed the admonition to "come up higher."

December 13, 1916.

J. R. GRICE.

Letter Department

An Appreciation

[A brother writes from "Somewhere in Washington," as follows]:

Dear Brother Editor: I want to congratulate you on your editorial "Throwing clubs at authority." Certainly if the church is to advance as one and a united institution its men in authority must be recognized and heeded until they transcend their rights and prerogatives. Perhaps I see this from a different standpoint than many do. The leading officials of the church should recognize the authority of elders under them as well as over them. . . .

While the editorial, "Men who have the Spirit," seemed a little caustic, yet it was worth a great deal to me, and increased my respect and admiration for the inspiration of the latter-day marvel. The spiritual status of the educated men of the church is a subject I had long wanted to learn more of, and this editorial satisfied that long-felt want.

One Version of an Old Story

Seeing your request in the HERALD for stories about Joseph Smith walking on the water, I thought I would write one that was told me about thirty-five years ago.

I was making my home with my sister, Jennie Stephenson, of Red Oak, Iowa, and was working for Judge Dennis, of that city. His wife was a member of the Baptist Church, and her mother, a member of the Christian Adventists was living with her daughter, and as soon as the mother found out that I belonged to the Latter Day Saint Church she thought she must tell me a Mormon story.

She said, "When I was a girl I lived with a lady by the name of Dwinby." Now this was a true story, for this lady was an eye witness to the same. She said, "Joe Smith made public announcement that if the people would gather at the river at a certain date about dusk he would walk on the water for them. So about ten o'clock in the morning of the day he was to perform the miracle, he went down to the river and fastened benches just far enough under the water so that the people could not see them, and then went away. Two boys had followed him and had hid in the bushes, and were watching him, and after he had gone they went and got an ax and chopped the legs off on one side of the benches. So when the crowd assembled he stepped onto the bench, and it went down with him, and he almost drowned."

I listened attentively till she finished, then I said, "Where did all this happen?"

And she said, "Why around that lake at Nauvoo."

And I said, "What lake?"

"Why, Salt Lake."

That was too much for me. I had to laugh. I said, "Great goodness, Nauvoo and Salt Lake are not within a thousand miles of each other. Salt Lake is away out in Utah, and Nauvoo is just across the river from the eastern part of this State in Illinois."

"Oh, well," she said, "there is another Nauvoo."

I said, "Well, there isn't." And added, "There is just as much truth in this story as there is in all the rest of the lies that have been told about Joseph Smith. There is not a word of truth in any of them." Yours in truth,

MRS. JULIA NEEDHAM.

LAMONI, IOWA, December 9, 1916.

From Here and There

Mrs. E. O. Doty, a sister residing at Swedeborg, Missouri, bears a personal testimony that she was healed through prayer, and soon thereafter was baptized into the church. She appreciates the help of God and the blessings received, and gives him all the praise.

"Everybody is assisting Santa, or trying to, wherever I have been lately," writes Elder A. M. Chase from his home at Kirksville, Missouri. He says he held a week's series of meetings from December 3 to 10, but the attendance was small. He gives his note a warlike conclusion by saying "we expect to launch a fresh campaign about January 6."

From Warrensburg, Missouri, Brother Fred A. Cool sends an interesting and detailed report of the recent conference and conventions held at Knobnoster on the 8th, 9th and 10th of December. Since we do not have room for the entire letter we excerpt some ideas from it. He tells us the results they obtained in the various departments of the work are very gratifying, even though they feel they are only getting started, it being a constructive period for the stake. Teacher training or normal work is being urged, that more efficient and capable teachers may be added to those already so classified. He characterizes Brother D. J. Krahl, president of the stake, as a pronounced "utility" man, whose interest and sympathy in the affairs of the young people, as well as all other departments of the work, is highly appreciated. Excellent reports are given concerning the work of the Woman's Auxiliary in the stake, and no doubt more details concerning this will be reported in the auxiliary department of the HERALD. President F. M. Smith was in attendance and preached two sermons which were greatly appreciated. Music is mentioned as a special feature of all the services, this phase of the work having taken a new impetus since the organization of the stake, with an orchestra at Holden and Knobnoster. Lexington Branch is negotiating for a location on which to build a new church. A mission house is under construction at a mining camp near Lexington. It is expected that a branch will soon be organized at Sedalia, with about thirty charter members. This place is an industrial town of considerable importance.

Objecting to a Criticism

[A brother in the East sends in a protest, and we print the following extracts.—EDITORS.]

Elbert A. Smith: I just read in the HERALD that you are being criticised for writing the book, Joe Pine, it not being compatible with the dignity of a member of the First Presidency to write such a book, etc.

Good lands of Goshen! What next won't I read. Some people have a queer idea of dignity; with them it is to emulate the owl, sit on a perch, look wise and say nothing.

Well, I just want to say if you have the material for any more books of the same quality as Joe Pine get it out and use it. We need more such books.

I have let many people, including eight or ten nonmembers, read my copy of the book. All spoke well of it, and I find it creates interest in the other church books. The way in which you worked in quotations from the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Book of Mormon, aroused the curiosity of some and as a result both my Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants are lent out.

The Lord's Prayer

The question is still asked occasionally why the Book of Mormon has the Lord's Prayer the same as it is in the King James Version of the Scriptures instead of as it is in the Inspired Version. In fact this difference has troubled the minds of many, even as it used to do my own. But for several years the reason has seemed plain to me. For there are other errors or differences, and I believe they came because of a lack of care on the part of whoever was acting as scribe at the time.

For instance, Nephi quotes chapters two to fourteen of Isaiah, also the forty-eighth to fifty-first chapters of Isaiah, and by him they are corrected in the rendering and made plain, as anyone can see by comparing them with the Bible, especially 1 Nephi, chapter 6, and 2 Nephi, chapter 5, where the improvements are very evident. In 2 Nephi chapters 8 to 10 the quotations are not changed materially from the King James.

And the Inspired Version of the Holy Scripture has three chapters as they are in the Book of Mormon, all except Isaiah 48, which is not corrected but reads the same as in the King James, and has many errors. My belief is that the error came from inattention by whoever acted as scribe at the time, and if the changes were written then they were misplaced in some manner and lost sight of. Therefore the King James rendering is given in our version of chapter forty-eight.

So also Isaiah's word of the Lord in 65:1 is corrected in the Inspired Version to read, "I am found of them that seek after me, I give unto all them that ask of me; I am not found of them that sought me not, or inquireth not after me." But in Romans 10:20, Paul's quotations of the above are like the King James in reading. "But Esaias is very bold and saith, 'I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me.'"

No doubt these errors came by reason of lack of care on the part of some one having to do with the speaking or the writing of the words. In like manner I believe that whoever was scribe at the time simply wrote the Lord's Prayer as he remembered it, without waiting for the correct rendering, supposing it to be all right as it was.

H. A. STEBBINS.

Are We Heeding the Call?

As I read and study the church books from time to time I wonder what progress we are making toward the standard that the Master desires his people to reach. The words of inspiration have come to us many times: "Come up higher." I wonder if we interview ourselves on this serious matter and give it prayerful consideration. The Master is continually calling, calling, and calling, "Come up higher, my people!" Dear Saints, is it possible that we are treating lightly the invitation of our dear Lord, who is pleading and weeping for the salvation of his children? The Lord never says anything simply for the sound of the words; there is always a real meaning and a real need for all that is said by him.

How much depends upon our complying with the request! It means service, it means work, it means sacrifice, and it means to many the leaving of their loved ones. Is the sacrifice too great. No! No! nothing is too great to leave for the service of the Master and his precious work.

When we look back to the times when the Savior was among the children of men, and see how he suffered for us, we cannot help but say, that there is nothing in all the world that is too great to leave for the interest of his glorious gospel and the benefit of humanity.

We are not yet in a position to receive all that our Lord and Master desires to bestow, because we have not reached the height that is required of us, but if we strive day in and day out, and work for the interest of our neighbors and keep in mind and obey the laws that he has given we can receive them, and have additional help to take us further on to perfection.

It is utterly impossible to ascend higher in the scale of righteousness and not manifest material and visible change in ourselves individually. One cannot come up higher and still be the same in all ways as before the call was given and heeded. Something must be left out, and laid aside. Let us examine ourselves and see if there is anything that should be eradicated, something to do, or be undone, then having the spirit of the Lord we can move successfully. Yes, we make mistakes on our way, but should they hold us down? No, there is a channel from which we can draw. Let us go on to perfection. This gospel is true, it demands all the attention of mankind.

I hope to be true to this glorious work and trust that I shall have the interest of all the Saints.

Yours in gospel bonds,

JOHN JENKINS.

GRACELAND COLLEGE, LAMONI, IOWA.

GREAT MALVERN, WORCESTER, ENGLAND,

November 28, 1916.

Editors Herald: I am very pleased to have had the association of Brother U. W. Greene in my field of labor for several weeks and the Saints of Malvern, Gloucester, Nantyglo, Aberaman, Gilfach Goch, Skewen, Pontrhydyfen, Llanelly, and Pontyeates greatly enjoyed his visit. The genial companionship of the brother was greatly enjoyed by the writer, together with the advice and the inspiring sermons he preached.

We had extra troubles in our travels through Wales as it is one of the restricted military areas but a splendid spirit was shown by all the police authorities with just one exception.

At Nantyglo we had a fine reception owing to the fact that Brother Greene was advertised beforehand by The Bellman as "The Great American Preacher." Needless to say he filled all expectations on his subject, "The signs of the times."

At the colliery where I used to work, the brethren obtained permission to take Brother Greene to see the mines which were about three hundred yards deep. You should see how quickly our Brother took to coal cutting, shot firing, and engine driving. The trip was enjoyed by all. Brother Allen was chief guide.

At Gilfach Goch, which was our next objective, four young folks were baptized during our stay, the results of local efforts and the Sunday school work, the young brother being ordained to the office of deacon, and we trust that he may be faithful; we need his help. The brethren are doing well in holding the Fort there.

Fairly good times were had at Pontrhydyfen too, and we hope for better results later. But it did rain, rain, and pour down, for about four or five weeks almost every day.

The work at Aberaman, Llanelly, and Neath is rather quiet. There are just a few faithful ones doing all they can.

At Carway, Carmarthanshire, we had the loan of the Baptist church, and Brother Greene gave a rousing lecture on the "Signs of the times," portraying the hand of God in the events toward the return of Israel to Jacob's land, which was again well received. But it still rained, and kept doing so until the morning I bade adieu to our brother. The railway traffic was threatened by the rising of the river and it made me wonder who was with me. At times I thought of Jonah but the last morning in spite of all my surmizings I thought of poor old Noah as the train came through the water at Glyn Abbey Halt, and as it was leaving I thought of the Ark.

Jonah was thrown into the sea for disobedience; Noah's Ark was the result of obedience, consequently I shall be forgiven, as I have a funny mind—something akin to a brother at Manchester.

One was baptized at Carway, by Elder David Thomas who is over seventy years of age, Brother Walter Rogers being his first candidate. It was rather cold after the floods subsided and our dear old brother was afraid the water might affect him, but we prayed for him and indeed the atmospheric condition became quite mild, and we rejoice that all went well.

Others have given their names for baptism and ere long we expect the hearts of the Saints there to be made glad, by the obedience of some of their loved ones to the ordinances of the gospel. The Saints at Carway were not unmindful of the elders' needs and the same testimony can be borne everywhere we went, according to the ability to assist. May the Lord's blessings of discipleship rest upon them all.

At Gilfach, Nantyglo, and Gloucester, others are nearing the door of entrance.

My brother, George Jones, of Nantyglo, was ordained to the office of teacher on November 22 and I rejoice just to state that when my brother, Alfred Jones, received his patriarchal blessing by Patriarch J. Greenwood, deceased, when laying his hands upon him said, "Thou art of them to whom belong the priesthood" it struck me as wonderful gift of inspiration, because I knew it was not known to the brother beforehand what he said.

My grandfather was an elder, and my father and two of us boys are also elders; two are teachers, and on the 27th inst. our son, Malvern, fifteen years of age, was ordained to the office of deacon here. It makes us wish (only) in Christ, that they may live, work and die. The Spirit gave us a wonderful evidence of his call as Brother E. J. Trapp of Gloucester ordained him.

We can see the hand of God in these perilous times and we all feel grateful. Brother T. Nichols, jr. of Exeter was killed about two months ago in France, while he was engaged in ambulance work, in the trenches. Death was instantaneous. He leaves a wife and child, whom we pray God will bless in their bereavement.

We need to live near to the Lord, may his Spirit comfort the hearts of all who are distressed in the great world war.

Your brother in Christ,

8 Lower Chase Road.

THOMAS JONES.

EGYPT, MAINE, December 2, 1916.

Editors Herald: While reading the HERALD to-day it was impressed upon my mind to write for its pages. I am the only member of the church in this place, so do not have any church privileges. I intended to go to Jonesport Sunday school convention, but they had to postpone it, so did not go. I would like very much to hear an elder preach a sermon, as it has been ten or twelve years since I have met with the Saints. I have not forgotten the angel's message and pray God I never shall. If any of the elders come this way, wish they would make me a visit.

G. A. LINSOTT.

HOPEWELL, VIRGINIA, December 3, 1916.

Editors Herald: I was just reading the article from Sister Christy of Brooklyn, New York, and it made tears of joy come to my eyes, as I know the things she says are true since I have not only been healed many times myself, but have seen others healed when given up by physicians to die. I have heard prophecies given and fulfilled in the very hour.

Oh, how we ought to love such a gospel as this, where the same blessings follow the believer as in the time of Christ, even the blind to see and the deaf to hear. If I had not received the evidence I have I know I could not have stood the great trials I have had.

May we as Saints try to live worthy of such a loving God's blessing, is the prayer of your brother of trials.

WILLIAM C. CUMMINGS.

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, December 4, 1916.

Editors Herald: Knowing that only by exchanging thoughts, through some means, can some of us get acquainted or edified, we take this means of letting our light shine.

Detroit Branch Number Three was organized in October with twenty-five members. Brethren J. F. Curtis and William Grice were the officers in charge of the organization. We have no church building as yet, but are holding meetings in a hall at 1685 Russell Street. Since organizing, by papering the walls and painting the woodwork, the deacon, assisted by some of the young men has transformed the once dingy looking place into an edifice where we are pleased to invite our acquaintances and not fear the result. We are blessed with a full line of branch officers and we have had an evidence that God approves the work we are doing.

In a recent prayer meeting a visiting brother spoke to us by the Spirit, commending our pastor, Brother Frederick Simkiss, for the work he had already accomplished, and then speaking to the branch collectively pointed out that if we would be faithful and united that many who were now ridiculing the Saints would yet be numbered with us.

The majority of our members are under thirty years of age, and while this does not presage our success as a branch, yet it is a fact noticed and commented upon by those of the world who come to our meetings, and seemingly to our advantage.

We hope in the near future to have as our speaker at a two weeks' series of meetings, Brother John R. Grice, who has been heartily welcomed to our city, and is, I might add, a warm advocate of the HERALD. With the other two branches in the city reporting gains in membership and good spirituality, we trust we are not overly optimistic in looking for the continued extension of God's kingdom in this vicinity. The Saints of Detroit and Pontiac had the pleasure of meeting the Prophet and the Bishop a short time ago. We were made to rejoice when we heard them speak. Bishop Mc-

Guire's talk was principally on tithing, and President Smith gave us thoughts on several of the Lord's miracles, pointing out his motive for cursing the fig tree, and showing that it was other than his wrath when he purged the temple, driving out the money changers. Brother Smith also outlined the various functions of the priesthood.

If any of the Saints who expect to visit Detroit happen to see this letter, remember that we urge you to make a call on Branch Number Three, as we are always encouraged by the presence and the testimonies of our colaborers in this glorious work of redemption.

We also desire to express our thanks for the gift of the HERALD. It is so much greater and far-reaching in its influence for good than anyone of us can expect to be, that surely the least we can do is to strive to get it before the view of our associates.

In gospel bonds,

1460 Saint Aubin Avenue.

HOWARD CARPENTER.

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, December 5, 1916.

Editors Herald: As I have leisure at this time, I thought I might improve some of my time in writing to others. It seems selfish to read, week after week, and year after year and do nothing myself to help others. We are told that as much as we put into the work just so much we will take out. I for one have not put my best into the work, far from it; so I can't blame anyone but myself for slow improvement. We are told we must be either cold or hot. Lukewarm ones seem to be altogether disgusting to our heavenly Father. So of late I could not but repeat over and over again what condition it is I am placed in.

We are not to judge each other, as I understand it. As we judge, so shall we be judged. [We suggest our brother and the readers of this letter read also Matthew 7: 1-3, I. T. —EDITORS.] In our lesson in Religio last week our teacher told us we would be judged out of the books. She referred to the day book. This one I have before me every day. It stares me in the face repeatedly. I do not have it in my power to erase the same so I have to keep looking at it. If the artist were to paint it I fear it would be a cheap picture. If it would sell at all, it would sell at a very low price. I would to God I might blot out a large part of the picture, but he who sits on high must do it for me in his own time. He that is full of love for his children may in time forgive and burn much that has been done and said by perhaps the weakest of all his children.

It is remarked often that such a one seems bold and careless by his or her faults. Can we judge? Decidedly no. Man looketh on the outward appearance, but God looketh at the heart. We do not know, neither can we tell how much another has suffered or is suffering for their own weakness. I often ask myself, What holds me in the gospel? Why, of course the truthfulness of it, or in other words, "the gospel." Why, says one, if you think as much of your religion as you say, why don't you do differently?

Can we judge? Judge not, that ye be not judged. How can we tell how much worse he or she might have been had they not obeyed it. I have had many testimonies of the work, some of which ought to hold me under the most severe trial.

I was in an asylum three years and not a minute of that time did I doubt the work. I realized in many ways it was a blessing. I lost a dear sister some time ago. It was a severe trial, but it did not take away my knowledge of the gospel. She wrote in a little album of mine shortly before she died, these words in rhyme below. Though I have lost the book, the words remain clear in my mind.

"To God your every want
In earnest prayer display.
Pray fervently and never faint,
Pray humbly, meekly pray."

It seems that though she is dead these words still remain. At the time she wrote them how little we realized she would be so short a time with us.

"He knows, God knows, the reason why
These things are ordered from on high,
And though mine eyes with tears be dim,
The Lord knows why, I'll trust in him."
H. G. SUTHERLAND.

NEW CAMBRIA, MISSOURI, December 5, 1916.

Editors Herald: The year of 1916 is nearing its close. Thoughts of what the year has brought to the church have crowded upon my mind, and consistent with this thought is, What assistance have I rendered for the building up of the kingdom of God? which burdens my mind.

I am sure that I have had the church and its spiritual development first in my thoughts. The conference year thus far has been a disappointment. I have used every effort known to me after years of experience to arouse an interest in the spread of the gospel, but failure stands out the most prominent of all other conditions. By conversation and personal influence and by correspondence I have labored, and aside from the one point where I now labor, I have not a single prospect in view, and nearly all my time has been spent since entering this mission where I have urged myself upon the place and people. Audiences except in a very few instances, have numbered from seven to twenty, and but little interest then. I have visited all the scattered Saints in this district who have had interest sufficient to reply to my communications, and I have been cared for so far as they were temporally able, and some have endured hardships to give me conveniences.

For several years this part of the State of Missouri has had partial failure of crops, and it has fallen heavily upon the scattered members of the church, and this year has been almost a complete failure in some parts. Besides this, those who are engaged in mining have had a very unsatisfactory year. These conditions and the high price of living has brought discouragement, and an inability to render the desired assistance to open up the work in new places, which is associated with legitimate expenditures. These conditions are prohibitory in some places, even where there is a desire to help.

In years past the question has been to decide what labor to do first, there being so much to do, but the question now is, Where can I get any missionary work to do? I never labored among a more hospitable class of Saints, or those who have treated me when at their homes with greater consideration, and this is acceptable, but to one whose every power and moment of time has been called into service for years, this does not satisfy. To be continually active in building up the kingdom of God and establishing his righteousness is the one thing that satisfies one who is consecrated to missionary service.

This has been one of the most trying years of my thirty-one years of missionary and thirty-eight years of ministerial experience in some ways. If I were doing that which was accomplishing something in seed sowing I should be comforted, but when such opportunities are denied me, I am not satisfied, and sometimes because of such conditions against which others have labored they have been misjudged, I am comforted in this, that I am glad it is an experience I am enduring, rather than others of my brethren.

When I consider that I cannot consistently expect to spend more than a few years more in active missionary work, I feel more anxious to accomplish more for the work during these few years, especially when my absence from my companion brings to her greater sacrifices than any other year of our life.

The indifference of a few and the burdensome efforts of the many to maintain their spiritual standing has been heart-rending to me at times, and for these I pray. The Saints of this mission and my brethren who have labored and now labor here, can more fully appreciate the situation.

There are places that could be occupied if sufficient means and proper contingencies can be supplied, but this must be supplied out of the general fund of the church, since the last report of the bishop's agent shows but about one fifth enough in tithes and offerings were supplied by the district to care for two families, neither of which are very burdensome.

Brethren A. M. Chase and John Ely are doing all they can to secure opportunities for service, but the outlook with them now that tent work is over is about on a par with what I have written of the future. These are noble brethren, and such is the almost universal report I hear of all who have preceded me.

Until another good crop is raised, and prices for the necessities of life are lessened, there is not a bright prospect for missionary labor in northeastern Missouri. This is no fable nor pessimistic imagination, but a sad reality.

To my brethren and sisters thus situated, be patient and pray the God of nations, the Lord of harvests, and the Father in heaven to show forth his interest in the spread of truth to abundantly bless the land, and adjust social conditions so that you may aid according to what is in your heart to do, and under present circumstances do not lose an opportunity in this the hastening time to warn your neighbor of the soon coming of the Lord of glory, by telling them of the preparation necessary to be made, either in word or in deed, by preaching or by literature.

I am associated here in my labor by a small assembly of Saints, mostly young in the work, but who have a good report among their neighbors, and coreligionists, who show by their presence at the services a willingness to listen, and show their respect. Will continue here till I am compelled to return to my home, where I will remain during the holidays and until it is possible to find an opportunity to labor to the benefit of the church and the glory of God.

Trustingly and hopefully,

J. F. MINTUN.

GALENA, KANSAS, December 2, 1916.

Editors Herald: It has been some time since I have written for your columns. I have been away from home since last January. Unfortunately, I have to go away from home to find work at my trade. My health has been poor the last year, so I have not had the opportunity to write as I would have done at home.

My faith in the old Jerusalem gospel restored has not weakened, but grows stronger day by day, and I am sure if I sow properly I will reap a good harvest at the reaping time. We are told in holy writ that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, but to him that endureth unto the end; and surely that is justice meted out to the faithful.

The Apostle Paul, after a long, eventful life, wrote Timothy on this wise: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand: I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day. And not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." This grand old hero of ancient times was not selfish, but recognized the fact that all those that loved the appearing of the Lord would get a reward as well as he, for he recognized the fact that if one loved the appearing of the Master of men that his life had been in touch with the Lord, and he knew that the Lord was coming back to earth to take charge of all earthly governments and institute a universal reign of peace. Then Satan will be bound, and greed and graft will no more be a ruling factor among men, but the time will be that every man will sit under his own vine and fig tree and reap the benefits of his own toil. He will not build and another inhabit. He will not sow and another reap, nor plant vineyards and another eat the fruit thereof.

Now that is the condition the Lord wants his people to get in now, but it is a lamentable fact that we are far from it, and for this reason we are losing the blessings the Lord wants us to have. He said, I will pour you out a blessing, that the earth will not contain. Prove me and see. But we do not have the moral courage to put the matter up to him and get the proof. I often think what a power for good we could be if we only kept the whole law.

In John 17 we read in that most wonderful prayer made by Jesus that has not been answered in full yet, where he said, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." He tells us in another place, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me, and if we will do his will we may know of the doctrine," so we find that we can only have positive knowledge of the doctrine by doing God's will, and in doing his will we can know him, and in no other way may we know for ourselves. So this positively hinges life eternal on doing the will of the Master. This being so, what manner of people should we be? He tells us that if we do his will and love him, he and the Father will come unto us and take up their abode with us. He also tells us that if he went away he would send another Comforter, even the spirit of truth, that the world could not receive, although "Billy" Sunday claimed three thousand, three hundred and eight were converted in one day recently at his eight weeks' meeting in Boston.

Now the Savior said the world could not receive this spirit of truth, and "Billy's" converts not being inducted into the kingdom through the door—which is water baptism—are still in the world, and minus the spirit of truth, and still unconverted, and Pentecost is still in the lead. If Sunday did get nearly fifty thousand for eight weeks, and the eleven at Pentecost got nothing but the outpouring of the promise of the Father, even the spirit of truth, what a contrast! Which is the greater reward? To know thee, the only true God, is a heritage that few have ever been blessed with, that is, in comparison to the many that have lived on the earth, yet it is for all that will have it, and still we who are so situated that we may know, sleep on our rights and when the midnight cry goes forth, "Behold the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him," will be forced to say, "Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out." It takes a life of sacrifice to keep oil in our lamps, which oil is the spirit of truth, or the third person in the Godhead. The time will come to those that know God, when they can or will be a part of the Godhead, for "he that overcometh shall inherit all things, and he shall be my son, and I will be his God."

Then if we become the sons of God we are indeed a part of the Godhead. All power in heaven and in earth was given to Jesus the Christ when he rose from the dead, and he is to retain that power until he puts all kingdoms and rulers under his feet. Then he will turn the kingdom over to the father, and then his work of redemption is completed, and those who know him by reason of doing his will, will become joint heirs with him, and as he still retains his place in the Godhead the joint heirs will be a part of the same—not as wise as God, but in a position to receive of him day by day, and to go out and minister unto those of a lesser glory.

What a grand position to hold. Will we do his will so we can have the right to the tree of life, and be able to enter through the gates into the city and take up the work and be equal with Jesus the Christ?

My testimony is that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the church and kingdom of God restored to earth again by the hand of an angel, and is the only place where we can become the adopted sons of God and by the help of the divine Master work out our salvation and become sons indeed. This is life eternal, to know God and his son Jesus Christ. Will we know him by doing his will, or will we lose our place in the Godhead and take the second glory?

J. W. QUINLY.

Home address, SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI, 306½ East Commercial.

SOUTH SIDE STATION, OMAHA, NEBRASKA,

December 6, 1916.

Editors Herald: Being organized into a branch on September 5, 1916, by Brother J. A. Gillen, it is time you were getting some news from here. We will be known as South Side Branch. It was one of the happiest times of my life for one reason—my companion was ordained a priest. We have Elder James Huff as president of the branch, George W. Steele, priest; and W. A. Pruden, deacon; with Sister Ellen Marsh, secretary, Sister Marie Leach, organist, and the undersigned as correspondent. We have fourteen charter members. School enrollment is forty-nine, and still adding more, so many live so far away it is impossible for them to get there.

Brother and Sister M. L. Leach have donated a lot for building a church on, and some time in the near future we will build. At present, we are located in Moose Hall, Twenty-Fifth and M Streets. We hold prayer meetings in the homes and truly enjoy them.

Any missionaries who come to Omaha should visit South Omaha also.

MRS. GEORGE M. STEELE.

PORT ARTHUR, ONTARIO, December 7, 1916.

Editors Herald: I leave for home to-morrow, after nearly two months' absence. Since coming here I have preached twenty-five times, and held six prayer services, administered to the sick five times, distributed many tracts, and have done fireside preaching, organized a Sunday school with five officers—Brother Abraham Miller, superintendent; Sister R. Bonesteel, secretary; her daughter Carrie, assistant; Elgum Miller, treasurer; and Sister A. Miller chorister. I also blessed two children and ordained Brother A. Miller to office of priest. I have laid the foundation for future work in this city.

The Church of England minister took occasion to slander our work, and as he refused to meet the issue I got out the inclosed circular, which we feel will be the means of good. I feel that if the work is looked after here many will accept the gospel. The summer months are the proper time for gospel work here. A tent would work fine here.

On the 29th ult. I took sick with la grippe, not being properly clad for this north country, and had to conclude my services. I am convalescing, but not able to work.

The Saints here have endeared themselves to me, and I feel truly grateful for their loving-kindness extended since coming in their midst, and pray that as they have ministered to my wants, so our heavenly Father will to theirs.

You will likely hear from this part in the near future, so I will conclude.

With best wishes to ye editors, and God's children in general,

THE LONE NEPHITE.

S. W. T.

NIAGARA FALLS, ONTARIO, 81. Saint Lawrence Avenue.

FLINT, MICHIGAN, December 7, 1916.

Editors Herald: I suppose you are always pleased to hear good things, and good things we have surely been having in Flint. Elder S. W. L. Scott has been with us since November 26, and we have had some special services, ending to-night. There has been excellent interest in the good things Brother Scott has to give, both on the part of the Saint and of outsiders.

Elder Scott took up subjects that would appeal to all, and handled every subject in a way that captivated his hearers and demanded admiration, and I believe most of the Saints as well as outsiders have cause to say that indeed they learned many things, and have gained a greater and broader insight into the wonders and mysteries of this gospel of Christ.

We have been conducting meetings in the east side of the city for some time, and I have had good interest and good turnouts, but records must have been broken when Brother Scott preached there, for two nights, and we are sorry not to have heard him at the church on those two nights, but suppose it is right not to want all the good things and deny others who cannot get to the church the privilege of some of them.

To-night Brother Scott closed the meetings, and after the service he gave a talk to the choir and orchestra on music, which was good, and we hope will accomplish the good intended. All are sorry that he could not continue longer, and when he promised to come back and give us some more after the holidays some time, all rejoiced and all look forward to his return. I cannot close without mentioning two of his subjects, as otherwise I would not do justice. On Thanksgiving night his subject was "A model republic," in which he outlined some of the reasons why citizens of this great Republic of ours, which was organized by men, inspired and raised up by God to do so, have to be thankful above other nations, and it was—well I can't describe it at all, but the people are still talking about it, as indeed they are about his discourse of Sunday evening on "The great eastern conflict, as seen through the tubes of prophecy," in which he outlined the war with prophecy relating to it in a way that even a child could not but understand. And on that night it was demonstrated that beyond a doubt we are in need of a larger building to accommodate the crowds. The church was full to overflowing, and I believe many were turned away. But we hope when Brother Scott returns to have our church enlarged so as to take care of all who wish to hear.

The meetings closed with everyone strengthened, rejoicing and thanking God for his goodness to them, and praying for the advance of the work, not only here, but in all places.

In bonds,

233 Newall Street.

L. GLENN SAGER.

MANSFIELD, MISSOURI, December 3, 1916.

Editors Herald: One would think that in the Ozark Mountains people would accept the gospel more readily than in some other parts of the sphere, because they are poor in this world's goods, but they are just as far from it as elsewhere. It requires a greater effort and more labor to travel and preach in this country than in some other parts where the country is more level; but the people must be warned. I would rather labor in some other parts of the world if possible, but we cannot always have our desires in this world, and in the next one either; so if we bear our burdens cheerfully in this life they will be lighter in the next.

I held a meeting in Brother W. Hudson's home with good attendance and interest. Brother Hudson, though somewhat aged, is on his stock ranch of two hundred and forty acres looking after his own work and business, and doing reasonably well. Sister Hudson is also doing her part willingly and cheerfully as ever. They are alone now, their daughter having married of late and living one mile from them. They have set a good example before the people and are wielding quite an influence for good among their neighbors.

When these hills and mountains are brought low, and the rocks removed, this will be a beautiful country to look upon; it is now, if one goes up on top of a mountain for a view. Wood and water, in abundance in most places, especially wood. It is a fine country for sheep and goats, and cattle seem to do well also; and where these thrive people ought to. Taking it all in all, I suppose the world is quite well balanced, and if the people are we will pull through O. K.

So let us labor on in love for what we know to be right and true, and all will be well.

Your colaborer,

D. E. TUCKER.

ELLSMITH, ALBERTA, December 8, 1916.

ELBERT A. SMITH,

Dear Brother: I want you to know that I deeply appreciate your late editorial "Men who have the Spirit," especially that part referring to the science of psychology.

I have long known that it should enter largely into the treatment of the insane. I am more than pleased that the Saints are becoming interested in the study of that science.

I hope to see important extracts or epitomes of some of those leading lessons in the HERALD from time to time. Shall I look in vain?

Yours,

D. R. BALDWIN.

LAMONT, IOWA, December 8, 1916.

Editors Herald: I read many good letters in the HERALD and I think I ought to contribute a few lines.

I have been a sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism for about six years. Will the Saints pray for me, so that if it be the Lord's will I may be healed? Father has lately become very lame and mother is blind, and sick part of the time, so it seems as though we have our share of trials. We belong to the Oelwein Branch. Father goes twice a month to Oelwein to church, and I go when I am able to.

Your brother in Christ,

HENRY WESTON.

PARIS, TENNESSEE, December 10, 1916.

Editors Herald: As I sit and read the dear columns it is a feast to my soul and helps me to live better. I just read Brother Allen's letter from Munson, Florida. My mother was an Allen and was raised at Springville, Tennessee. I would like to correspond with him. I have one uncle in Florida, by the name of Jesse Allen.

I agree with Brother Allen about paying tithing. I think every Saint should pay his tithing, for that is the word of the Lord, and we are told to live by every word, and the Word of Wisdom is the word of the Lord. If things come upon us we can only say, Have I lived as the Lord wants me to? If not, say, "Lord I will by your help," and I assure you he will help you, for I have put him to the test.

Saints, there is one thing that has been borne in on my mind, and it is not an impossibility either. That is, that every Saint should sent the bishop ten cents by the first of January to pay on the church debt, and I feel that the Lord will bless us. I believe, Saints should be thinking about preparing to go to Zion, for I think perilous times are coming upon us. It is time for us to stand in holy places that we may be able to stand when the Lord comes to make up his jewels.

Death has come in our branch and claimed Noble, the thirteen year old son of Brother and Sister Albert Johnson on December 7.

Saints, neglect not to ask the Lord to help the young. As Sister Hinton said in her letter, do all we can, then we can feel like asking the Lord to protect our loved ones.

So hoping that all honest in heart may soon be gathered out and all the Saints be able to stand when he makes his appearance.

One that loves this gospel,
Your sister,

LULA BOOTHE.

BUFFALO, NEW YORK, December 12, 1916.

Editors Herald: During the last few months the Saints of Buffalo have been working hard to get funds to start our new church building. We have purchased and paid for a lot in the Kensington District of this city. In a short time now we will have erected a thirty-two hundred dollar building. During the past ten years our meetings have been held in unsatisfactory places, having had to make the best of what we could hire. The Saints of the Buffalo Branch wish to thank all who have so generously responded to their call for help. All appreciate the kindness shown us.

During the last week our Ladies Aid has done nobly in helping the cause along, holding a sale of work which realized over two hundred dollars. We all feel proud of them, and fully appreciate the time and energy they have sacrificed to accomplish this. The burden of this work for years has been upon Sisters Koehler, Sister P. L. Weegar, and Sister Brothers. This Ladies' Aid in Buffalo has raised six hundred and thirty-five dollars, also helped in other ways.

Our branch now has a membership of about sixty. We feel that the Lord is blessing his work in this part of his vineyard. We feel to thank God for his many manifestations of love that he has poured out upon us of late, and earnestly pray that his blessings and directions may be given to us in the future.

I remain your brother in the gospel,

FREDERICK HARPER.

In planning your winter reading be sure to include some of the doctrinal books of the church. With the three standard books as a basis and some of the many other good ones on special subjects to be had of this office, you may become very proficient in defending and extending this work. Send for latest price list.

INDEX TO SAINTS' HERALD, VOLUME 63

EDITORIAL

Aged and the young, The, 513.
At the root of the matter, 193.
Biggest thing in your life, The, 1081.
Big men and big women, Wanted, 217.
Boys of the church, For the, 803.
Bread alone, Not by, 87.
Cable, Who slipped the, 98.
"California dry," 986.
Campbell-Holloway debate at Andover, 956.
Case against Utah, The, 121.
"Chair of religious education," That, 1258.
Childhood, The second, 801.
Christ gave for us, What, 25.
"Christian" self-complacency, 858.
Christmas Offering, 1107.
Church, The organization of the, 417.
City set on a hill, A, 145, 169.
Comfort ye one another, 729.
Conference appointments, 369.
Conference, General, 360.
Convention, Joint, 345.
Convention, Religio, 345.
Convention, Sunday school, 356.
Cup of cold water from flood tide, A, 1209.
Current events, 3, 27, 51, 75, 99, 123, 147, 171, 194, 219, 245, 275, 300, 395, 419, 443, 467, 491, 515, 540, 564, 588, 611, 635, 658, 682, 707, 731, 754, 779, 803, 834, 858, 883, 907, 963, 986, 1035, 1059, 1083, 1107, 1164, 1187, 1211, 1234, 1260.
Defending Smiths, 418.
Don't kill the preacher, 986.
Editorial selection, 148, 196.
Education for everyone, An, 98.
Educational atmosphere, An, 1209.
Elbow room, 243.
Everyone, An education for, 98.
Excellent opportunity, An, 1186.
Famine as well as war, 985.
Five-hundred-dollar letter, A, 1082.
Forward, Shall we go, 1.
God expects it of you, 634.
Golden jubilee of Nebraska City Branch, 359.
Hill, A city set on an, 145.
His hobby, 245.
Holden Stake organization, 682.
Humanity, One God and a common, 609.
I have meat that ye know not of, 537, 561.
Important Bishopric notice, 395.
Iowa Mormons," "The, 882.
Israel, go forward, Say to the children of, 441, 465.
James Moler passes, 323.
Joseph Smith's place in the church, 1057.
Kansas City Stake, The, 658.

Lamoni reunion remarkable, 834.
Lectures, The J. D. McClure, 961.
Life plea, President Smith's, 73.
Matter, At the root of the, 193.
McClure Lectures, The J. D., 961.
McClure's great call to drunkards and saloon keepers, 1185.
"Men who have the Spirit," 1161.
Methodist quadrennial conference, The, 563.
Misrule, The lord of, 2.
Nebraska City Branch, Golden jubilee of, 539.
Not by bread alone, 97.
Notes and comments, 4, 28, 52, 76, 100, 148, 172, 196, 246, 275, 324, 420, 444, 468, 492, 516, 564, 588, 612, 636, 659, 683, 708, 732, 755, 780, 804, 859, 884, 908, 964, 987, 1012, 1036, 1060, 1084, 1108, 1164, 1211, 1235, 1260.
Notes on the late conference, 393.
One God and a common humanity, 609.
On the lawyer and the preacher, 247.
Organic form of the church, The, 417.
Path, The philosophy of the straight and narrow, 321.
Perfect law of liberty, The, 633, 657, 681.
Personal element, The 962.
Philosophy of the straight and narrow path, The, 321.
Power of the gospel, The, 585.
"Presbyterian" speaks, The, 489.
President Smith's life plea, 73.
Prodigal son, The parable of, 49.
Prohibition works, 419.
Retirement, On our, 514.
Right of free choice, The, 801.
Say to the children of Israel, go forward, 411, 465.
Seek to end polygamy, 985.
Shall we go forward, 1.
Smith's life plea, President, 73.
Some choice reading for 1917, 1233.
Stakes and cords of Zion, 833.
Straight and narrow path, The philosophy of the, 321.
Strike, The, A. Carmichael, 834.
That which God requires, 1059.
The lord of misrule, 2.
The parable of the prodigal son, 49.
Those who remain, 682.
Throwing clubs at "authority," 1105.
Two philosophies in contrast, 273, 279.
Under the juniper tree, 905.
Use of pictures, The 1134.
Utah, The case against, 121.
Wanted: big men and big women, 217.

Warning, A, 754.
 Warning cry for our troops on the border, A, 753.
 War posters, 857.
 Wedded terms-truth and freedom, 1009.
 "What beholdest thou," 777.
 What Christ gave for us, 25.
 Whither thou goest I will go, 705.
 Who slipped the cable, 98.
 Wings of song for words of truth, 1131.
 Woman's work in the church, 881.
 Word of encouragement, The, 1082.
 Word to our contributors, A, 1210.

HYMNS AND POEMS

"Autumn muse," 1137.
 Bell, Laura E., Passing away, 1067.
 Beyond the gray, 4.
 Booker, Catherine Thomas, A Christmas picture, 1246.
 Caffall, Eliza, A prayer, 756.
 Call, The, 836.
 Christmas in Hawaii, 1137.
 Christmas picture, A, 1246.
 Cobb, Mrs. A. E., The reunion spirit, 755.
 Deliver thy Saints, 188.
 East and west, 188.
 Exhortation, 1230.
 Faith, hope and charity, 423.
 Faith of our fathers, 860.
 First bluebird, The, 188.
 Frazer, Edith G., "Autumn muse," 1137.
 Haste to prayer, 248.
 Gibbs, John R., Exhortation, 1230.
 Golden service, 835.
 Golden gates, 248.
 Gospel, The, 1230.
 If we only had a car, 973.
 Indirection, 188.
 Ingham, Edward, Christmas in Hawaii, 1137.
 Kearney, Ermina Perkins, Gospel gates, 248.
 Leaves, 276.
 Leckney, Florence Smith, Deliver thy Saints, 188.
 Long, E. E., If we only had a car, 973.
 Love unending, 276.
 Meeting of the waters, 324.
 'Mid autumn leaves in old Kirtland, 1130.
 Moore, Edward D., Our work is done, 836.
 Moore, Thomas, Meeting of the waters, 324.
 Morgan, Evan B., Signs of autumn, 973.
 My Prayer, 1230.
 Needham, May, Night on Zion's hill, 836.
 Night on Zion's hill, 836.
 Olsen, Dollie Rodger, Solace, 248.
 On his blindness, 860.
 Only hired, 908.
 Our work is done, 836.
 Passing away, 1067.
 Prayer, A, 756.
 Religious education, "That chair of, 1258.
 Responsiveness a valuable trait, 1259.

Reunion spirit, The, 755.
 Rhinow, Arthur B., Love un-failing, 276.
 Salyards, Anna, Haste to prayer, 248.
 Schenck, Marcella, Faith of our fathers, 860.
 Sheldon, Laurana, The lane, 436.
 Signs of autumn, 973.
 Smith, Det J. C., The Gospel, 1230.
 Smith, E. A., On Zion's hill, 835.
 Smith, Vida E., Golden service, 835.
 Solace, 248.
 Sunset after rain, 188.
 Teach me to teach thy way, 248.
 Teasdale, Sarah, Leaves, 276.
 The lane, 436.
 The little arm chair, 436.
 The new motherhood, 276.
 The Savior's love, 324.
 Trait, Responsiveness a valuable, 1259.
 Vanderwood, J. E., My Prayer, 1230; What do you live for, 436.
 Voice, The, 4.
 Walker, Gertrude, The Savior's love, 324; Why I voted, 1066.
 Webbe, Earnest A., 'Mid autumn leaves in old Kirtland, 1130; Teach me to teach thy way, 248.
 What do you live for, 436.
 Why I voted, 1066.
 Wight, Estella, The Call, 836.
 Zion's hill, On, 835.

ORIGINAL ARTICLES

Abrahamic faith, 426.
 Adam did not fall from celestial glory, 1088.
 Adam's fall, 664.
 Aebli, H. M., The associates of the young, 1087.
 Allen, Arthur, Pastoral work, 1149.
 Americanism of prohibition, The, 594.
 Anderson, William, Church department, 107.
 Apostles, Succession of the, 131.
 Appeal to purity, 8.
 Associates of the young, The, 1087.
 Attitude towards the ministry and members of other churches, Our, 1145.
 Australian Mission, The, 931.
 Australia, Open-air preaching in, 252.
 Authority of the priests, 176.
 Aztec traditions and customs, 448.
 Babylon, The burning of, 1262.
 Bailey, Earl D., Is baptism for the remission of sins, 331.
 Baldwin, D. R., The salvation of Zion, 325.
 Bancroft reviewed, 129.
 Bankester, G. W., Appeal to purity, 8.
 Baptism, 545.
 Baptism for the dead, 153.
 Barmore, A. C., Our country, its past, present and future, 591; Tract distribution and visitation in Australia, 954.
 Beil, C. A., Laborers together with God, 451.
 Bishop, James E., Records of the district president, 992.
 Bond, M. H., Foundation of faith, 470, 497, 517; Fore-ordination, 1013.
 Bone, F. E., How a secretary should regard his work, 1266.
 Book of Mormon, Objections to the, Answered by its own evidence, 1216; 1242.
 Book of Mormon on polygamy, 709, 736.
 Boyd, David S., The immutable law of God, 472.
 Born again, 1061.
 Breasting opposition, 304.
 Briggs, Geo. N., College tuition, 685; The universal gospel, 637.
 Building character, 449.
 Building the kingdom, 421.
 Bullard, Richard, The responsibility of inspiration, 1085.
 Burgess, S. A., Carlyle's beatitude, 263.
 Burning of Babylon, The, 1262.
 Butterworth, C. A., "Come up higher," 965, 989; Reminiscences, 940.
 Call of God, The, 759.
 Call, The Master's, 82.
 Carlyle's beatitude, 263.
 Carmichael, A., The hastening time, 1151.
 Carmichael, Ray, Library work, 32.
 Case, Hubert, Faith, 83; "God hath shined," 1189.
 Character, Building, 449.
 Chase, A. M., Abrahamic faith, 426; The Americanism of prohibition, 594; Authority of the Priests, 176.
 Christian soldier, The, 81.
 Christmas offering, Our, 1213.
 Church department, 107.
 Church, The future, 810.
 College tuition, 685.
 "Come up higher," 965, 989.
 Concerning Graceland, 757.
 Concerning our reunion, 1142.
 Concerning Zion, 150, 173, 199, 221, 282, 301, 328.
 Consecration—property sense, 522.
 Cooperation, 384.
 Cooper, D. P., Building character, 449.
 Cooper, R. T., Succession of the apostles, 131.
 Creeds of 1830, The, 733.
 Criticism, Reverse lever of, 200.
 Curry, L. F. P., The creeds of 1830, 733.
 Day with the Indians, A, 260.
 Dead, Baptism for the, 153.
 Defeat, Satan's final, 302.
 Department, Church, 107.
 Derry, Charles, Concerning our reunions, 1142.
 Did Adam fall from celestial glory, 569.

Dudley, Orren, Phrenograph of Frederick M. Smith, 254.
 Duty of parents, The, 34.
 Dyke, Lemuel D., Simple lettering for the missionary, 1193.
 Education and inspiration, 781.
 Elvin, R. M., Tobacco, 665.
 Epistle, An, 909.
 Erickson, Gustave, Adam's fall, 664; Types worthy of study, 784, 809, 842, 865.
 Etzenhouser, R., Born again, 1061.
 Faith, 83.
 Faith, Foundation of, 470, 497, 517.
 Farrell, Ralph W., Baptism, 545; The Theater, 261.
 Fifty years in the church, 805, 837.
 Finances, A few words about our, 685.
 Finish of it, The, 226.
 Foundation of faith, 470, 497, 517.
 Frederick M. Smith, Phrenograph of, 254.
 From the ashes—a thanksgiving, 1137.
 Gaither, Charles, Mothers and their responsibilities, 402.
 Gathering, The, 495.
 General information, 944.
 Glimpse of Australia, A, 945.
 "God hath shined," 1189.
 God, The personality of, 329.
 Gospel principles, Other, 614.
 Gospel wagon, With an Australian, 251.
 Gowell, M. F., Music and song, 178.
 Graceland as a junior college, 266.
 Greater, Which is the, 202.
 Greetings from our president, New Year, 1257.
 Hammond, E. G., The finish of it, 226.
 Hanson, Paul M., A glimpse of Australia, 945; Zion, 445.
 Harder, Mrs. W. E., The security of silence, 1144.
 Harrington, Laura, Education and inspiration, 781.
 Hastening time, The, 1151.
 Hawley, Mary Beebe, Some reasons for a decline in religious interest, 969.
 Haworth, W. J., The Australian Mission, 931; Open-air preaching in Australia, 252; Our missionaries, past and present, 934; Our publishing interests, 953.
 Hillis, Newell Dwight, The sure help of God, 866.
 Home, 474.
 How a secretary should regard his work, 1266.
 Gians on organization and How do we interpret, 887.
 Hunt, Charles J., Submarines and mines, 642; Theologians on organization and duties, 541, 565.
 Immutable law of God, The, 472.
 Impression of Australia, My, 950.
 Indians, A day with the, 260.
 Influence of the home in character building, The, 1143.

- Ingham, Edward, Supremacy of gospel of Jesus, 257.
- Industrial relations, 264.
- Isaiah twenty-nine, 29, 56, 77, 103.
- Is baptism for the remission of sins, 331.
- Jenson, A., The duty of parents, 34; Home, 474; Success, 154.
- Jesus, Supremacy of gospel of, 257.
- Jones, J. H. M., The Christian soldier, 81.
- Judge not unrighteously, 179.
- Junior college, Graceland as a, 266.
- Kaler, Elmer A., A better use of art in the church, 1140.
- Keir, James F., A few words about our finances, 685; The Purpose of our religious service, 1237.
- Kelley, George A., Religious education, 1213.
- Kelley, T. C., Book of Mormon on polygamy, 709, 736. Kingdom come, Thy, 10.
- Kirkendall, A. B., A well-spent life, 493.
- Koehler, J. A., Industrial relations, 264; Preaching services, 520.
- Laborers together with God, 451.
- Lambert, J. R., How do we interpret, 887; The land of promise, 619.
- Land of promise, The, 619.
- Law of God, The immutable, 472.
- Lewis, William, The gathering, 495.
- Library work, 32.
- Lindsey, G. W., More about a chair of theology, 1064; Sanctifications, 401.
- Long, E. E., Isaiah twenty-nine, 29, 56, 77, 103; The personality of God, 329; When did Jesus organize his church, 1138; The burning of Babylon, 1262.
- Macgregor, Mrs. Daniel, Did Adam fall from celestial glory, 569.
- Master's call, The, 82.
- McDowell, Floyd M., Graceland as a junior college, 266.
- McGuire, Benjamin R., Concerning Graceland, 757; From the Presiding Bishopric, 565; Our Christmas offering, 1213.
- McKim, Arthur E., Aztec traditions and customs, 448.
- McKim, B. L., Baptism for the dead, 153.
- Methods—failures and triumphs in missionary work, 1146.
- Miller, C. Edward, sowing the seed from a wagon, 947; With an Australian gospel wagon, 251.
- Miller, O. R., Breasting opposition, 304; Methods—failures and triumphs in missionary work, 1146; Reverse lever of criticism, 200.
- Mintun, J. F., What is the greatest need of our young people, 1041.
- Missionaries, past and present, Our, 934.
- More about a chair of theology, 1064.
- Mothers and their responsibilities, 402.
- Music and song, 178.
- Needs of the missionary, The, 1109.
- New Year greetings from our president, 1257.
- New Year's reverie, A, 101, 127.
- Objections to the Book of Mormon answered by its own evidence, 1216, 1242, 1264.
- Obtaining happiness, 1037.
- Obtaining salvation, 277.
- Old-time religion, 11.
- Oliver, C. S., Thy kingdom come, 10.
- Open-air preaching in Australia, 252.
- Organization and duties, Theologians on, 541, 565.
- Our country, its past, present and future, 591.
- Paradox of living, The, 1062.
- Parents, The duty of, 34.
- Partnership with God, Our, 1165.
- Pastoral work, 1149.
- Peak, W. E., Reflections, 5, 125, 151, 174, 197, 223.
- Peisker, Hermann, Adam did not fall from celestial glory, 1088.
- Personality of God, The, 329.
- Peterson, J. E., That theological chair, 890; Zion in Africa, 1016.
- Phillips, A. B., Why we believe in a restored gospel, 861.
- Phrenograph of Frederick M. Smith, 254.
- Pointer, Carrie E., Study of archæology, 249.
- Preachers and preaching, 968.
- Preaching, 641.
- Preaching services, 520.
- Predestination—foreordination, 1013.
- President, New Year greetings from our, 1257.
- Presiding Bishopric, From the, 565.
- Priests, Authority of the, 176.
- Prohibition, The Americanism of, 594.
- Publishing interests, Our, 953.
- Purpose of our religious service, The, 1237.
- "Quarterlies," How we get our, 1033.
- "Quarterly," Use and misuse of, 397.
- Rannie, Edward, The future church, 810.
- Reasons for a decline in religious interest, Some, 969.
- Records of the district president, 992.
- Reflections, 5, 125, 151, 174, 197, 223.
- Religion, Old-time, 11.
- Religious education, 1213.
- Religious service, The purpose of our, 1237.
- Reminiscences, 940.
- Responsibilities, Mothers and their, 402.
- Responsibility of inspiration, The, 1085.
- Reverie, A New Year's, 101, 127.
- Reverse lever of criticism, 200.
- Reward according to works, 1112.
- Robertson, E. F., My impressions of Australia, 950; Reward according to works, 1112.
- Rodger, Glad, and C. W. Wandell, 941.
- Rushton, J. W., A New Year's reverie, 101, 127.
- Salvation of Zion, The, 325.
- Salyards, Richard S., Stakes and stake presidency, 711.
- Sanctifications, 401.
- Satan's final defeat, 302.
- Secretary should regard his work, How a, 1266.
- Security of silence, The, 1144.
- Sermon hints, 1146.
- Shumate, F. B., Which is the greater, 202.
- Simple lettering for the missionary, 1193.
- Sins, Is baptism for the remission of, 331.
- Smith, Frederick M., Concerning Graceland, 757; New Year greetings, 1257.
- Smith, H. O., Building the kingdom, 421; Obtaining happiness, 1037; Obtaining salvation, 277; Other gospel principles, 614.
- Smith, T. J., Objections to the Book of Mormon answered by its own evidence, 1216; 1242; 1264.
- Smith, Vida E., From the ashes—a thanksgiving, 1137.
- Soldier, The Christian, 81.
- Sorden, Daniel B., A day with the Indians, 260.
- Sowing the seed from a wagon, 947.
- Spirit's voice, The, 33.
- Spurlock, C. J., Judge not unrighteously, 179.
- Stakes and stake presidency, 711.
- Study archæology, 249.
- Submarines and mines, 642.
- Success, 154.
- Succession of the apostles, 131.
- Sunday school work, 660.
- Supremacy of gospel of Jesus, 257.
- Sure help of God, The, 866.
- That "chair of religious education," 1258.
- Theater, The, 261.
- Theologians on organization and duties, 541, 565.
- Theological chair, That, 890.
- Thy kingdom come, 10.
- Tobacco, 665.
- Tract distribution and visitation in Australia, 954.
- Types worthy of study, 784, 809, 842, 865.
- Universal gospel, The, 637.
- Use and misuse of "Quarterly," 397.
- Use of art in the church, A, better, 1140.
- Vanderwood, J. E., Concerning Zion, 150, 173, 199, 221, 282, 301, 328.
- Voice, The Spirit's, 33.
- Warr, Mrs. A. E., The influence of the home in character building, 1143.
- Wells, Gomer R., Glad Rodger and C. W. Wandell, 941.
- Well-spent life, A, 493.
- What is charity, 547.
- What is the greatest need of our young people, 1041.
- When did Jesus organize his church, 1138.
- Which is the greater, 202.
- Why we believe in a restored gospel, 861.
- Wildermuth, Jerome E., Our partnership with God, 1165.
- Williams, T. W., Our attitude towards the ministry and members of other churches, 1145.
- Winning, Robert, Consecration—property sense, 522; Cooperation, 384.
- With an Australian gospel wagon, 251.
- Wood, Samuel, Bancroft reviewed, 129.
- Woodstock, C. B., Use and misuse of "Quarterlies," 397.
- Words, 758.
- Work, How a secretary should regard his, 1266. lieve in yourself, 678.
- Wright, Florence, The Master's call, 82.
- Yates, James E., Preachers and preaching, 968; Preaching, 641; Old-time religion, 11; Satan's final defeat, 302; Sermon hints, 1146; The Spirit's voice, 33; Words, 758.
- You must believe in yourself, 687.
- Zahnd, John, You must believe in yourself, 687.
- Zion, 445.
- Zion, Concerning, 150, 173, 199, 221, 282, 301, 328.
- Zion in Africa, 1016.
- Zion, The salvation of, 325.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

- Advertisement, The best, 1166.
- Aged, Maintaining the, 85.
- Alcohol, Deaths from, 37.
- Alcoholism the great cause, 1066.
- American thrift, 595.
- Ancient Maya civilization, 1116.
- Are you keeping your eyes on the Jews, 1268.
- Antigossip crusade, An, 1065.
- Bible study in the schools, 475.
- Blunder of the church, 1116.
- Boy Scout controversy, 12.
- British families, Prayer in, 181.
- Building a ship in a day, 622.
- Call for curbstone preachers, A, 867.
- Campaign against hay fever, 687.
- Case against the "Peyote," The, 620.
- Catholic ban on dancing, 738.
- Catholic rule in South America, 595.

- "Christian" Bible, For a, 843.
 Christian education, The state cannot give, 688.
 Christian science healers may practice healing, 1269.
 Christmas, A dry, 133.
 Churches for national prohibition, 645.
 Church paper ethics, 1017.
 Churches which are growing fastest, 307.
 Colleges become juniors, Small, 913.
 Conserving the Lamanite, 156.
 Controversy, Boy Scout, 12.
 Convict labor problem by eliminating the convicts, Settling the, 573.
 Cow as an ally of the dries, A, 814.
 Creating the appetite, 1018.
 Crime problem, The, 785.
 Deaths from alcohol, 37.
 Degeneracy, Transmitted, 108.
 Despotism, What about, 108.
 Don'ts for young elders, 644.
 Dry Christmas, A, 133.
 Egyptian culture in early America, 993.
 Episcopal general convention, The, 1218.
 Farmers to borrow money, Helping, 868.
 Fate of Palestine after the war, The, 573.
 Fatherland of the Jews, The, 892.
 Fort builders of old Peru, 814.
 From a modern advertising man, Pointers for preaching, 811.
 Gambling on a colossal scale, 1219.
 Glance ahead, A, 524.
 Going home, 308.
 Haeckel, Rabbis answer to, 132.
 Healing, Christian Science healers may practice, 1269.
 Holy Land, Will the war end in the, 84.
 Honor building and buildings, 37.
 House within." "The, 912.
 If you would live long, 1245.
 Immigration after the war, 284.
 Important event in American Methodism, An, 1194.
 Indians ride in automobiles, Where, 713.
 Indian, The, 868.
 Inferior and superior races, 284.
 Israel, The restoration of, 452.
 Jew in war, The, 35.
 Jews, Are you keeping your eyes on the, 1268.
 Jews in eastern war zone, 524.
 Josiah Strong, 474.
 Kurds, The, 500.
 Lamanite, Conserving the, 156.
 Latter Day Saints, The new, 1066.
 Lay Warning to the ministry, A, 1043.
 Limited to one, 404.
 Liquor, Russia abolishing, 403.
 Liquor vote on suffrage, 893.
 Low mortality from wounds, 477.
 Machu Picchu, Peru, lost city of the Incas, 644.
 Maintaining the aged, 85.
 Menace of wealth, The, 549.
 Mental and spiritual healing, 667.
 Methodist conference, 499.
 Minor events, 645.
 Money, Time and, 203.
 Nauvoo landmarks, 739.
 New York's "Catholic week," 1092.
 Orient, The, 548.
 Our army of bartenders, 645.
 Palestine after the war, The fate of, 573.
 Palestine, The world's meeting place, 109.
 Peace to bring big liquor fight, 689.
 Pointers for preaching from a modern advertising man, 811.
 Polygamy and modern styles, 523.
 Prayer in British families, 181.
 Prosperity, Railway, 12.
 Quaker view of Mexico, A, 1093.
 Rabbis' answer to Haeckel, The, 132.
 Races, Inferior and superior, 284.
 Railway prosperity, 12.
 Refugees, War's, 179.
 Refuses large sum for chair, 1044.
 Religion, Turning to, 60.
 Religion, War and, 181.
 Religious exhibits, traveling, 132.
 Restoration of Israel, The, 452.
 Richest people in the world, 813.
 Ritual of citizenship for the Indian, A, 786.
 Russia abolishing liquor, 403.
 Russian freedom for Jews, 913.
 Sarcophagus for President Smith, 477.
 Sea cure for theologians, 11.
 Settling the convict labor problem by eliminating the convicts, 573.
 "Slackers" in life and religion, 643.
 State cannot give a Christian education, The, 688.
 Sunday paper, Too much, 1268.
 Sunday tabernacle, The, 477.
 Sun temple unearthed, 228.
 Superficial age, The, 893.
 Surgery to music, 595.
 Switzerland, Who is the president of, 500.
 Theologians, Sea cure for, 11.
 Time and money, 203.
 Too much Sunday paper, 1268.
 Training the Indians, 1245.
 Transmitted degeneracy, 108.
 Traveling religious exhibits, 132.
 Turning to Christianity, The world's new, 666.
 Turning to religion, 60.
 Unity, For church, 429.
 Usefulness of prayer, The, 549.
 Verdun, War's terror at, 372.
 War and religion, 181.
 War end in the Holy Land, Will the, 84.
 War, Immigration after the, 284.
 War's carnage, The, 452.
 War's refugees, 179.
 War's terror at Verdun, 372.
 War, The Jew in, 35.
 What about despotism, 108.
 What would we do, 430.
 Which churches are growing fastest, 307.
 Who is the president of Switzerland, 500.
 Will the war end in the Holy Land, 84.
 World's greatest spinners, The, 761.
 World's meeting place, Palestine the, 109.
 World's new turning to Christianity, The, 666.
 X-Ray at sanitarium, 476.

MOTHER'S HOME COLUMN

Home and child welfare department, 63, 134, 230, 335, 454.

THE STAFF

- Announcements, 288.
 Announcing Brother Bell, 157.
 Annual greeting, 286.
 Anthem series, The 1917, 1118.
 Bell, Edward C., One phase of district choir work, 159.
 Burgess, H. C. The choir, 405.
 Choir at San Francisco, Our, 1117.
 Choir, The, 405, 479.
 Chord struck in Saint Louis, A, 895.
 Chorister's message, Our, 1117.
 Christensen, A. H., Music in the South Sea Islands, 220.
 Coming events, 286.
 Concerts, Some successful, 670.
 Ewing, Lillian, Our choir at San Francisco, 1117.
 For a better service, 159.
 From the conference, 405.
 Greetings from the general chorister, 671.
 Gresty as a composer, 157.
 Hoxie, Albert N., Announcements, 288; Annual greeting, 286; Greetings from the general chorister, 671; Our chorister's message, 1117; The 1917 anthem series, 1118.
 Hymns that we love, 671, 894.
 Inspirational conference, An, 478.
 Introducing Brother Gresty, 157.
 Is outlook for combined orchestra promising, 479.
 Just a phone message, 1119.
 Kearney, Ermina Perkins, Only waiting, 763.
 Live wire district chorister, A, 1221.
 Masters of music, 62, 574, 894.
 McKim, A. E., Masters of music, 62, 574, 894.
 Messiah," "The, 286.
 Messiah," in Philadelphia, "The, 288.
 Miller, O. R., Just a phone message, 1119.
 Mills, Arthur H., Is outlook for combined orchestra promising, 479; News about our orchestras, 671, 895, 1118.
 Miscellaneous notes, 670.
 Musical consecration, 575.
 Musical news from various points, 996.
 Music and its influence, 1219.
 Music in the South Sea Islands, 1220.
 New Year, The, 61.
 News about our orchestras, 671, 895, 1118.
 Notes of the staff, 405.
 One phase of district choir work, 159.
 Only waiting, 763.
 Period of preparation, A, 157.
 Personality in music, 61.
 Pitt, F. G., The choir, 479.
 Programs for music institute sessions, 287.
 Report blanks for choristers, 1221.
 Robert Schumann's love affairs, 762.
 Robinson, Louise, Musical consecration, 575.
 Robinson, Mrs. W. N., Music and its influence, 1219.
 Ruegnitz, Ida Stemmer, Robert Schumann's love affairs, 762.
 Sheldon, Louise Palfrey, Personality in music, 61.
 Short, V. V., Hymns that we love, 671, 894.
 Smith, Anna de Jong, A chord struck in Saint Louis, 895.
 Smith, Eunice Winn, "The Messiah" in Philadelphia, 288.
 Smith, Ralph G., "The choir" from the organ bench, 406.
 Stray notes, 63.
 Tale, A true, 763.
 "The choir"—from the organ bench, 406.
 Uplift in music, The, 995.
 Vacation's over, 761.
 Walker, Gertrude, What a loved hymn means to me, 995.
 What a loved hymn means to me, 995.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DEPARTMENT

- Birth and birthday offerings, 85.
 Burnt his typewriter, 88.
 Can you talk to children, 205.
 Concerning social purity, 483.
 Easter lessons for juniors, 88.
 General convention, 85.
 Helps, 205.
 Our new official organ, 480.
 Pictures for beginners, 208.
 Proposed amendments, 86.
 "Push me," 205.
 Secretaries of districts, 208.
 Seed, Cultivation and soil, 206.
 Senior "Quarterly" to missionaries, 481.

Still boosting, 481.
They like the lessons, 481.
To district superintendents, 483.
What the convention did, 481.
With cradle roll work, 86.

CHILDREN'S HOME DEPARTMENT

Arrivals at the home, 598.
Best friend, 898.
Board of trustees, The, 790.
Braby, Marie, Love the children, 764.
Change of superintendent, 1119.
Children's home, The, 285, 456.
Children's home doings, 88.
Children's home news, 763.
Christmas remembrance, 37.
Departures, 598.
Encouragement, 1018.
Financial, 136.
Heroes, Our, 1018.
James Whitcomb Riley on children, 846.
Little children as teachers, 527.
Little feet, 599.
Love the children, 764.
Message from the past, A, 648.
Our treasury department, Percy, Florence, Little feet, 599.
Points of difference, 232, 338.
Present conditions, 898.
Quarantine lifted, The, 598.
Remarkable confirmation, 136.
Return of an absent board member, 598.
Roberts, Death of Brother, 716.
Roberts, Joseph, 789.
Serious condition of Bishop Roberts, 599.
Thanking our friends, 181.
The Children's Home, 285.
Walker, Mrs. M., A message from the past, 648.
We should be polite, 716.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

"Activity" department, An, 845.
Are we Pharisaical, 1222.
Art and the "movies," 845.
"As ye do it unto the least of these" 1195.
Auxiliary echoes, 648, 690, 714, 816, 997.
Auxiliary president honored, A former, 691.
Auxiliary work in the South Sea Islands, 1045.
Better children and better conditions for children, 1094.
Birds I have known, 869.
Bishop McGuire addresses Independence auxiliary workers, 1223.
Braidwood, Della, Praise, 971.
Brand Cara Bailey, A mother's face, 1095.
Briggs, Grace K., An "activity department," 845; From the home department superintendent, 622; The schoolhouse as a community center, 1046.
Brunkhorst, Esther, What is my work to-day, 691.

Building the home library, 1247.
Burgess, Mrs. S. R., Let us be "different," 1019; Reports to the late General Conference, 551; Valedictory, 502.
Burton, Emma B., Laying aside every weight, 845; Laying aside the weights, 916.
Child in the home, The, 814.
Children's diseases, 1196.
Church and the state together for the home, 740.
Cobb, Alice E., The mission of the Oriole, 972.
Cochran, Edith M., Relief and service—significant words, 914; Report to late convention, 669.
"Come," let us reason together, 844.
Cooperation, 551.
Cut the grocer's bill, 1020.
Danger to child life in fly poison, 1095.
Deam, Altha R., News from locals, 1067.
Don't let the new baby cry, 1069.
Drink glass of milk a meal, 1271.
Educational department—child study, 576.
Educational department, The, 1270.
Ellis, Clara Kellogg, Auxiliary work in the South Sea Islands, 1045.
Etzenhouser, Mrs. M. A., A message from our vice president, 596; Report of field workers, 1167; Who will be the next to fall in line, 1168.
Fairweather, Life and voice culture, 999.
"Feed my lambs," 896.
Fieldwork, Our, 997.
Food for winter, 1196.
Forest Orioles, 972.
"For this I am grateful, 1246.
From the home department superintendent, 622.
From the superintendent of the child welfare department, 646.
Gardner, Mrs. J. A., The Oriole work is desirable for every girl because, 972; The young woman's department, 787; Reports to the late convention, 622; Reports to the late convention, 715; Statistical report of general treasurer, 598.
Harrington, Doctor G. Leonard, Social service, 1195.
Historian's Message, 668.
Holden Stake, 1168.
Home economics superintendent, From the, 1169.
Home will always be the greatest center for the women of America, 1120.
Interest in sewing and cooking, 1046.
Introducing our new department, 501.
Kearney, Ermina Perkins, Step by step, 897.
Kelley, George A., A mother's reverie, 1094.

Krahl, Grace L., Holden Stake, 1168; Reports to the late general convention, 647.
"Laying aside every weight," 845.
Laying aside the weights, 916.
Letter, Sister George's, 669.
Let us be "different," 1019.
Let us look to our foundation, 1019.
Life and voice culture, 999.
Local, A wide-awake, 668.
Mader, Bertha L., Cut the grocer's bill, 1202; From the home economics superintendent, 1169; Interest in sewing and cooking, 1046; School dresses, 816; Sanitation and Hygiene, 1248.
Maitland, Carrie E., Secretary's report, 597.
Making history, 668.
Making home attractive, 815.
"Master, what good thing shall I do," 914.
Message from our vice president, A, 596.
Mission of the Oriole, The, 972.
Mother's face, A, 1095.
Mother's reverie, A, 1094.
News from locals, 1067.
News from Knobnoster, Missouri, 1271.
New spirit and the clubs, 1120.
Notes, 550.
Notes from the general convention, 525.
Opportunities at hand, The, 739.
Oriole banquet, An, 816.
Oriole girls, Our, 971.
Oriole girls' supplies and equipment, The, 973.
Oriole work is desirable for every girl because, The, 972.
Our president sends greetings, 1247.
Outlook, The, 550.
Praise, 971.
Preparing the school lunch, 1020.
Reading and real wisdom, 741.
Relief and service department, Our, 915.
Relief and service—significant words, 914.
Reorganization of Independence Stake auxiliary, 690.
Report of field worker, 1167.
Report to late convention, 669.
Reports to the late convention, 622, 715.
Reports to the late general convention, 551, 647.
Rogers, Mrs. Mildred, Food for winter, 1196.
Salutatory, 502.
Sandy, Lula M., From the superintendent of the child welfare department, 646; Making home attractive, 815; Preparing the school lunch, 1020; The value of the story in the home, 1094; Building the home library, 1247.

Sanitation and Hygiene, 1248.
School dresses, 816.
Schoolhouse as a community center, The, 1046.
Secretary's report, 597.
Sermons for children, 896.
Smith, Anna de Jong, Sermons for children, 896.
Smith, Emma E., Reports to the late general conference, 551.
Smith, Helen Silsbee, Birds I have known, 869; Cooperation, 551; The educational department, 1270.
Smith, Mrs. B. C., Historian's message, 668.
Smith, Mrs. F. M., Our relief and service department, 915; Reorganization of Independence Stake auxiliary, 690; Salutatory, 502; Sister George's letter, 669; The year book, 622; 1247.
Social service, 1195.
Statistical report of the general treasurer, 598.
Stebbins, Callie B., Educational department—child study, 576; Our women at work, 1121.
Step by step, 897.
Straws which show which way the wind blows, 1067.
Thanksgiving the year around, 1246.
To our readers, 576.
Valedictory, 502.
Value of the story in the home, The, 1094.
Volz, Mary, Auxiliary echoes, 648.
Walker, Marietta, Are we Pharisaical, 1222.
Weston, Mrs. M. J., News from Knobnoster, Missouri, 1271.
What is my work to-day, 691.
What some women are doing for girls, 789.
"Where the brook and river meet," 787.
Who will be the next to fall in line, 1168.
Women at work, Our, 1121.
Year book, At last our, 713.
Year book, The, 622.
Young woman's department, The, 787.
Zion, Where is, 689.

LETTER DEPARTMENT

About der var, 849.
Adair, Ellen, The Independence sanitarium, 695.
Adams, Jennie, 460, 602.
Adamson, E. F., 314, 578.
Adamson, Sister Peter, 160; Ancient ruins in New Mexico, 898.
Advantages of education, 312.
After sixty-nine years of service, 974.
Alabama reunion, 919.
Allen, S. D., 875, 1201; True to his promise, 768.
Ancient ruins in New Mexico, 898.
Anderson, Emma L., Meeting the opposition, 817.
Anderson, Peter, 407.
Anderson, Quincy, 602.
Anderson, William, 697, 1174; Kirtland reunion, 918.
Appreciation, An 1272.

- Are we heeding the call, John Jenkins, 1273.
- Arrowsmith, W. B., 553.
- Ascending scale of criticism, 1198.
- Aylor—Arceneaux debate, 1121.
- Aylor, W. M., 408, 1075.
- Bailey, Mrs. E. H., 555.
- Baillie, James, 388, 1050.
- Baldwin, D. R., Cooperation, 695; 1278.
- Bankster, Robert E., 602.
- Banta, A. J., Aylor—Arceneaux debate, 1121.
- Barton, Mrs. James E., 1177.
- Beautiful Kirtland, 1071.
- Beebe, G. W., 1202.
- Bell, Hattie K., 484.
- Bennett, A. H., 313.
- Bennett, Marie, 793.
- Bergerson, Ida May, 1174.
- Bishop, James E., Booker-Moore debate, 1224.
- Blackmore, George L., 601.
- Boegler, Mrs. Jacob, 851.
- Bond, M. H., 579.
- Booker, Elizabeth, 553.
- Booker-Moore debate, 1224.
- Boomer, A. M., 210.
- Boothe, Lula, 1278.
- Bootman, W. P., 744.
- Boyd, David S., In favor of the new cooperative plan, 1226.
- Boyd, Mrs. J. N., 432.
- Bradey, Wesley, 719.
- Brale, Nathan V., 912.
- Brewer, W. J., 113.
- Bronson-Departee debate, 650.
- Bronson, J. A., 627.
- Brose, Frederick W., 65, 90.
- Brown, Mac, 1179.
- Brown, Mertie Jones, 851, 978.
- Brown, Robert F., 530.
- Bryant-Knisley debate, 408.
- Buell, Ophelia, 553.
- Bullard, J. H., 91.
- Bunten, B. H., 113.
- Burch, Sadie, 183.
- Burgess, Alice M., 210.
- Burgess, Alice M., 210. from "the Hub," 1000.
- Burgett, Mrs. S. M., 183.
- Burton, Emma B., 114; In appreciation of God's direction, 458.
- Burton, P. R., 434.
- Butterworth, C. A., Concerning Christ, 1251.
- Butterworth, C. A., and P. M. Hanson, 408.
- Butterworth, Charles E., 923.
- Buttery, Homer, 771.
- Cady, Mira, Kewanee reunion, 899.
- Can Graceland help these people, 1170.
- Carpenter, Mrs. George E., 460.
- Carpenter, Howard, 1275.
- Carr, Henry, More wonderful history, 817.
- Carter, Mary A., 579.
- Case, Hubert, 851.
- Case, Mrs. A. E., 1051.
- Catton, Charles, E., 920.
- Chase, Mrs. A. M., 1175.
- Chase, A. M., 772, 1123.
- Christensen, J. C., 652, 1125; Eastern Oklahoma reunion, 873; A word for our publications, 430.
- Christensen, A. H., The gathering from the isles, 790.
- Christie, J. I., 697.
- Christie, Ward L., 1177; Special call for literature, 743.
- Christmas gifts, 1171.
- Chrono, Eugene, Do we need a chair of religious education, 849.
- Clark, Earnest, 555.
- Clawson, Zulia, 795.
- Cochran, Edna Jean, 1179.
- Coffman, W. L., 505.
- Coming up higher, 1070.
- Comment on church affairs, 1169.
- Concerning Christ, 1251.
- Concerning Clark Braden, 182.
- Concerning Nebraska City jubilee, 599.
- Concerning the Sabbath, 289.
- Concerning the seventh day, 870.
- Conference prayer meetings, 339.
- Cooperation, 695.
- Cooper, D. D., 601.
- Cooper, R. T., Fair dealing of a Brethren pastor, 1069.
- Corless, Wm. N., 91.
- Cox J. N., 977, 1201; Helpful to chart users, 674.
- Crabb, Mrs. Jennie, 184; 555.
- Creviston W. P., 1050.
- Criticism, Objecting to a, 1273.
- Criticisms examined, 649, 673.
- Crowley, Merton L., 505.
- Cummings, William C., 822, 922, 1275.
- Curbstone preacher, The, 999.
- Currie, Mr. and Mrs. A. A., 113.
- Curtis, J. F., 408.
- Dahl, Effie, 234.
- Davis, E. R., 484.
- Davis, L. B., 978.
- Davison, H. J., 13, 675.
- Dawson, James, In the regions round about, 1250.
- Debate at Jordan, 917.
- Deceptive appearances, 768.
- Deck, Nellie, 771.
- Demise of James Moler, 388.
- Dennis, Mabel M., 290.
- Denton, Effie J., 554; 1252.
- Derry, Charles, 770; After sixty-nine years of service, 974; 1253.
- Detrick, J. L., 602.
- Devore, Mrs. L. R., 626.
- Dickey, E., 89.
- Dickey, Lora, Kewanee reunion, 899.
- Dickson, Mrs. J. R., 553.
- Dillon, Ed, 504.
- Dimick, Marie, 876.
- Donaldson, L. C., 772.
- Do we need a chair of religious education, 849.
- Dunlavy, Mrs. M., 978.
- Eastern Oklahoma reunion, 873.
- Eastern reunion, 872.
- Ecclestone, William, 770.
- Elliott, W. G., 184, 1201.
- Ellis, C. F., 408.
- Elvin, Robert M., Concerning Nebraska City jubilee, 599.
- Erwin, E. A., Riley-Bogard debate, 1251.
- Etzenhouser, R., 721; Reunions, 233; Spearfish, South Dakota, reunion, 1170; Unsolicited testimony, 431.
- Experience in a secret order, An, 1199.
- Explanation, An, 1199.
- Extract from letter to F. M. Smith, 977.
- Fair dealing of a Brethren pastor, 1069.
- Farrell, Ralph W., Eastern reunion, 872; An impressive invitation, 503.
- Farthing, R. J., Joint reunion at Boone, Iowa, 873.
- Fewkes, J. Walter, Prehistoric temple found, 234.
- Few words aside, A, 137.
- Fike, L. W., Northern Wisconsin reunion, 976.
- Florida reunion, 1170.
- Floyd, Mrs. Rolla, 722, 852.
- Ford, J. T., 1073.
- Foster, William, 313.
- Freeman, F. M., 435.
- Freeman, Mrs. C. B., 720.
- From a private letter, 1197.
- From a tobacco user, 599.
- From here and there, 1200, 1227, 1249, 1273.
- From Honolulu, 1072.
- Frontier experiences, Some, 974.
- Fulfillment of prophecy, A, 1096.
- Fulk, R. L., 1051.
- Fuqua-Higdon debate, 209.
- Fuqua, Mrs. W. S., 530.
- Gaskill, Samuel, 651.
- Gathering from the isles, The, 790.
- Gibbs, John R., 1100.
- Gillen, J. A., 406.
- Gillen, Mary E., 1074.
- Gilliland, William, 531.
- Gittins, W. E., 553.
- Good results in advertising a reunion, 624.
- Goolsby, J. B., 1074.
- Gore, Charles L., 920.
- Greater Graceland association, 694.
- Greene, J. A., and Lena F., 1074.
- Greene, U. W., 407.
- Green, Martha A., 603.
- Grice, J. R., 770.
- Griffiths, G. T., 407, 675; Ohio reunion, 871.
- Grigsby, Eula, 1049.
- Griswold, Mrs. Clarence, 505.
- Guthrie, W. A., 112.
- Haden, W. E., 822, 1124.
- Hailstone, Harry, 1073.
- Hall, Abel, 1001.
- Handley, Ada, 719.
- Hansen, H. N., 875.
- Hanson, and C. A. Butterworth, P. M., 408.
- Harp, Ruth, Murphey-Palmer debate, 1225.
- Harper, Frederick, 1279.
- Harrington, G. E., 820.
- Harthey, Mrs. Joseph, 291.
- Hawaiian voice with Caucasian encores, A, 1224.
- Hayward, Estella, 460.
- Health simplified, 1047.
- Heide, John, 291, 1099.
- Helpful to chart users, 674.
- Henderson, A. F., 697.
- Hidy, W. C., 920.
- Higdon, Amos T., 1049; Fuqua-Higdon debate, 209.
- Hinton, Mrs. E. B., 1201.
- Holden Stake, 717.
- Howard, R. T., 1176.
- Huff, Mrs. H. A., 505.
- Hunt, Charles J., 431; What we owe and why we owe it, 13.
- Impressive invitation, An, 503.
- In appreciation of God's direction, 458.
- Independence Sanitarium, The, 695.
- Independence Stake, 672.
- In favor of the new cooperative plan, 1226.
- In sunshine prepare for rain, 1096.
- In the regions round about, 1250.
- Jenkins, John, Are we heeding the call, 1273.
- Jenkins, Rees and Hannah, 553.
- Jensen, A., Our opportunity, 1198.
- Joint reunion at Boone, Iowa, 873.
- Jones, J. H. N., 793, 1072.
- Jones, Thomas, 1274.
- Kansas City Stake, 692.
- Kearney, Willis W., 578.
- Kelley, J. E., 407.
- Kelley, T. C., Debate at Jordan, 917.
- Kentucky and Tennessee reunion, 871.
- Kewanee reunion, 899.
- Killpack, Mrs. J. J., 313.
- Kimball, W. G., 530.
- Kinstler, A. M., 852.
- Kirtland reunion, 918.
- Klar, A. B., Health simplified, 1047.
- Knight, W. D., Southwestern Kansas reunion, 873.
- Knipschild, Mabel, The curbstone preacher, 999.
- Knisley, Alvin, 113.
- Lambert, R. J., 1122.
- Lamson, Mrs. Mary, 718.
- Landes, W. J., 792.
- Larky, A. G., A fulfillment of prophecy, 1096.
- Lawn, T. J., 772.
- Layland, A. J., 652.
- Lazarus, R. H. D., The rich man and Lazarus, 111.
- Lea, J. W., Concerning the Sabbath, 289.
- Lebherz, Alfred, 900.
- Lents, L. O., 601.
- Letter from "the Hub," A, 1000.
- Letter to President F. M. Smith, A, 767.
- Let the good work go on, 1226.
- Lewis, F., 922.
- Lewis, William, 14; In sunshine prepare for rain, 1096.
- Lindsey, George W., Concerning the seventh day, 870.
- Linscott, G. A., 1275.
- Lock, Frederick W., 459; Nuts for Adventists, 110.
- Lone Nephite, The, 1277.
- Long, E. E., 600.
- Lord bless the conference, 339.
- Lord's prayer, The, 1273.
- Loucks, J. A., 314.
- Macgregor, Daniel, 603.
- Macrae, W. S., 745.

- Maloney, Mrs. R. M., 1180.
 Maloney, R. M., Lord bless the conference, 339
 Man among us taking notes, A, 1197.
 Martin, H. A., 745.
 Massachusetts district history, 1098.
 Matthews, Mae, Bryant-Knisley debate, 408.
 Maxwell, Mrs. E. G., 769, Musings, 160; What is our influence, 39.
 May, Mrs. R., 698.
 Maynard, B. L., 792.
 McClain, J. R., 977
 McConley, M. A., 795, 1123.
 McDonald, J. S., 698.
 McDonald, Mrs. Florence, 745.
 McKim, Arthur E., Twilight church service, 848; When our boys are called to arms, 693.
 McMullen, Emily, 697.
 McNeil, Clara, 89.
 McPherson, H. L., 770.
 McWillis, Mrs. Luella, 1050.
 Meeting the opposition, 817.
 Men who smoke and chew, 528.
 Milestones by the way, 1171.
 Miller, A. G., 921.
 Miller, C. Edward, 722, 874, 1123; A Hawaiian voice with Caucasian cores, 1224; An explanation, 1199; From Honolulu, 1072.
 Miller, Elmira, 602.
 Miller, John H., 1252.
 Miller, Mrs. J. H., 113.
 Miller, O. R., 876, 1175; Stead-Fagan debate, 13.
 Mintun, J. F., 721, 1276.
 Mitchell, C. M., 160.
 Moler, H. E., 210; Demise of James Moler, 388; Let the good work go on, 1226.
 Moler, W. A., 434.
 Moore, E. D., Good results in advertising a reunion, 624.
 More concerning Clark Braden, 457.
 More wonderful history, 817.
 Morgan, Evan B., Conference prayer meetings, 339.
 Moses, Guy E., 743.
 Murphy-Palmer debate, 1225.
 Murray, William J., 874.
 Museum, P., 873.
 Musings, 160.
 Needham, Julia, One version of an old story, 1272.
 Nephew, Calvin and Kate, 1100.
 Newby, R., Bronson-Departee debate, 650.
 New church opening, 1199.
 Newcombe, Mrs. Owen, 1100.
 Newton, G. W., 721.
 Nolan, Charles A., Kentucky and Tennessee reunion, 871.
 Northern California reunion, 919.
 Northern Wisconsin reunion, 976.
 Nosivad, Semloh J., About der var, 849.
 Nuts for Adventists, 110.
 Objecting to a criticism, 1273.
 Ohio reunion, 871.
 One version of an old story, 1272.
 Opposing prohibition, 1048.
 Our opportunity, 1198.
 Parker, Annie J., 769.
 Parker, Louise, 720.
 Parker, Paul, Christmas gifts, 1171.
 Parks, Willard, 434.
 Peak, W. E., Comment on church affairs, 1169; An experience in a secret order, 1199.
 Pement, Philemon, 506.
 Peterson, C. O. A., 1174.
 Peterson, Frank, 160.
 Peterson, Gus, 89.
 Peterson, J. W., Some frontier experiences, 974.
 Perry, Mrs. C., 434.
 Philippin, P. H., New church opening, 1199.
 Phillips, James A., 459.
 Pitt, Rosa Parks, 507, 819.
 Pilling, John, 433.
 Plum, Laura, 313.
 Pohly, Lizzie Hartnell, 554.
 Pray always, 503.
 Prehistoric temple fund, 234.
 Prettyman, C. W., 1202.
 Proffit, Mrs. Hattie McVey, 40.
 Pruden, L. M., 978.
 Pugsly, Sister, 460.
 Quick, Lee, 1074.
 Quinly, J. W., 90, 1276.
 Rannie, Edward, Advantages of education, 312.
 Reed, W. C., 849.
 Reunions, 233.
 Rhodes, Leonard S., 1050; Good results in advertising a reunion, 624.
 Richardson, A. C., 1122.
 Rich man and Lazarus, The, 111.
 Riley-Bogard debate, 1251.
 Robbins, Rosa Bearse, Watchman, what of the night, 38.
 Robinson, Anthony, 652.
 Robinson, Helen, 388.
 Robinson, H. H., 770.
 Rockhold, Minnie, 314.
 Roos, Julia, 289.
 Roth, J. S., 853.
 Rowe, F. A., 851.
 Rushton, J. W., 407.
 Russell, R. C., 407; To change conference date, 136.
 Sager, L. Glenn, 1278.
 Salyards, R. S., Holden Stake, 717; Independence Stake, 672; Kansas City Stake, 692; Unveiling of mausoleum of President Joseph Smith, 741.
 Sandy, Lula M., Yesterday and to-morrow in the Kansas City Stake, 742.
 Savage, H. W., From a private letter, 1197; On the way to New Zealand, 847; 1228.
 Saxton, Mrs. Hannah, 505.
 Scheffer, William, 431.
 Schofield, James, 1173.
 Schoneiman, Mrs. Stella, 853.
 Schreuer, John, 675.
 Schulze, R. C., 65.
 Scogin, Ruby Gertrude, 920.
 Scott, Columbus, 744.
 Sellers, E. C., Coming up higher, 1070.
 Serig, Louis A., 1202.
 Sheehy, F. M., 407.
 Shepard, Julia C., 1099.
 Short, Ellis, jr., 697; True patriotism, 817.
 Shupe, W. S., 112.
 Sinclair, W. A., Massachusetts District history, 1098.
 Slover, F. M., Extract from letter to F. M. Smith, 977.
 Smith, Charles J., 900, 1048.
 Smith, E. A., 698, 849.
 Smith, James Marion, 484, 580.
 Smith, Mary, 89.
 Some frontier experiences, 974.
 Sotton, William, 459.
 Southwestern Kansas reunion, 873.
 Sparling, William, 743.
 Spearfish, South Dakota, reunion, 1170.
 Special call for literature, 743.
 Spicer, B. F., 530.
 Spurlock, Charles J., 922.
 Stead-Fagan debate, 13.
 Stebbins H. A., The Lord's prayer, 1273.
 Steele, Mrs. George M., 1277.
 Stewartville reunion, 900.
 Story, One version of an old, 1272.
 Strachan, Mrs. Laura, 1124.
 Strickland, Martha J., 39.
 Stubbart, J. M., 697, 744.
 Sutherland, H. G., 1275.
 Sweetman, Frank P., 921.
 Switzer, Ella, 875.
 Tait, Marjorie, 822.
 Tatman, Clare Lily, 819.
 Taylor, Hester A., 794.
 Terry, J. M., Criticisms examined, 649, 673.
 Testimony, A, 899.
 Tilton, Letha M., 977.
 Thompson, Mrs. Helen, 580.
 Thompson, Mrs. Mae, 432.
 Thompson, Orval L., 506.
 Thorburn, G. W., 601.
 Thorp, Joseph, 1180.
 To change conference date, 136.
 Tomlinson, G. C., 505.
 Tomlinson, S. W., 1124.
 Toovey, Florence, 627.
 Towers, George B., 1100.
 "Traveling in beaten paths," 1047.
 Treat, Fred, 1197.
 Treat, Fred, 1197.
 Trippe, Mrs. Solomon, 697.
 True patriotism, 817.
 True to his promises, 768.
 Tucker, D. E., 628, 1278.
 Twilight church service, 848
 Unsolicited testimony, 431.
 Unveiling of mausoleum of President Joseph Smith, 741.
 Vanderwood, J. E., 40, 746, 794, 920; Men who smoke and chew, 528.
 Wall, Louise A., 529.
 Warr, A. E., 675, 743; Alabama reunion, 919; Florida reunion, 1170.
 Watchman, what of the night, 38.
 Watson, Della, 459, 900.
 Way to New Zealand, On the, 847.
 Weaver, Richard D., Milestones by the way, 1171.
 Webb, E. A., 1050; Beautiful Kirtland, 1071.
 Weiner, John F., 743.
 Wells, G. R., Opposing prohibition, 1048.
 Weston, Henry, 1278.
 What is our influence, 39.
 What we owe, and why we owe it, 13.
 Wheeler, Carl F., 792.
 When our boys were called to arms, 693.
 Whipple, Fred G., 1200.
 Whipple, Thomas G., 435, 627, 771.
 White, I. N., Concerning Clark Braden, 182; More concerning Clark Braden, 457.
 Who, what, or where am I, 527.
 Wight, J. W., "Traveling in beaten paths," 1047; Who, what, or where am I, 527.
 Wiley, Mrs. Alice, 722.
 Wipper, Frank F., 1253.
 Woodstock, Charles B., 852.
 Wood, W. W., 39.
 Word for our publications, A, 430.
 Words of cheer, 974.
 Wright, Miss Florence, Deceptive appearances, 768; Pray always, 503.
 Yager, Joseph H., 874.
 Yates, James E., A few words aside, 137.
 Yesterday and to-morrow in the Kansas City Stake, 742.
 Young, Mrs. L. C., 579.
 Zahnd, John, Zion as I see it, 552.
 Zion as I see it, 552.

NEWS FROM MISSIONS

- Among Oklahoma Indians, 409.
 Among the Lamanites, 652.
 Arber, Joseph, Oklahoma, 700, 773.
 Arkansas, 853.
 Arkansas-Texas, 604.
 At the exposition, 66.
 Aylor, W. M., Oklahoma, 700, 773.
 Baker, A. M., Central Illinois, 42.
 Baker, J. M., Northeastern Nebraska District, 923.
 Barmore, Alma C., The Pacific Coast, 292.
 Bronson, J. A., Spokane District, 315.
 Butterworth, Charles E., Gallands Grove, 186.
 Case, Hubert, Among Oklahoma Indians, 409; Oklahoma, 19.
 Central Illinois, 42.
 Central Michigan, 163.
 Central Nebraska District, 796.
 Davis, E. R., Eastern Iowa, 724; Saskatchewan, 17.
 Denver, Colorado, 164.
 Des Moines District, 1075.
 Dutton, J. O., Northeastern Illinois, 700, 1003.
 Eastern Colorado, 291, 1002.
 Eastern Iowa, 67, 724.
 Eastern Montana, 823.
 Ellis, Clara Kellogg, A trip to Makatea, 410.
 Ellis, Clyde F., South Sea Islands, 162, 556.
 Erwin, E. A., Arkansas, 853; Arkansas-Texas, 604.
 Etzenhouser, R., Western Nebraska and Black Hills, 41.

- Gallands Grove, 186.
 Griffiths, Gomer T., Kirtland District, 746.
 Halb, Jacob, Ohio, 604.
 Holloway, L. G., Eastern Iowa, 67.
 Homeward bound, 139, 185.
 Idaho, 91.
 Jenkins, Rees, Palestine, 435.
 Kentucky and Tennessee, 18, 409.
 Kirtland District, 746, 773.
 Lamoni Stake, 16, 316, 1052, 1100.
 Layland, A. J., New Mexico, 724.
 Liston, Matthew W., Northwestern Ohio, 19.
 London, England, 161.
 London, Ontario, District, 15.
 May, J. Charles, Eastern Colorado, 291.
 May, Mrs. Roderick, London, England, 161.
 McClain, J. R., Kentucky and Tennessee, 18, 409.
 McConley, M. A., Northern California, 17.
 McConnaughy, James C., Kirtland District, 773; Ohio, 235.
 Miller, A. G., Southeastern Mission, 41.
 Miller, C. Edward, Homeward bound, 139, 185.
 Mintun, J. F., Lamoni Stake, 16, 316; Northeastern Missouri, 978.
 Moler, H. E., Southern Ohio, 115, 699.
 Moser, Fred, jr., West Virginia, 924.
 Nevada, 15.
 New Mexico, 724.
 New York District, 187.
 North Dakota, 185.
 Northeastern Illinois, 700, 1003.
 Northeastern Missouri, 978.
 Northeastern Nebraska District, 923.
 Northern California, 17.
 Northwestern Ohio, 19.
 Ohio, 235, 604.
 Oklahoma, 19, 700, 773.
 Pacific Coast, The, 292.
 Page, James C., Eastern Montana, 823.
 Palestine, 435.
 Parker, J. L., Des Moines District, 1075.
 Pendleton, Samuel T., Central Michigan, 163.
 Pierce, J. N., Among the Lamanites, 652.
 Pitt, Rosa Parks, At the exposition, 66.
 Prettyman, C. W., Western Nebraska and Black Hills, 410.
 Quick, Lee, Spring River, 114, 652.
 Reiste, S. M., Nevada, 15.
 Saskatchewan, 17.
 Scandinavia, 235.
 Scott, C., Lamoni, Iowa, 1100.
 Self, W. M., Central Nebraska District, 796.
 Slover, F. M., Southeastern Mission, 211, 292.
 Southeastern Mission, 41, 211, 292, 580.
 Southern California, 291.
 Southern Ohio, 115, 699.
 South Sea Islands, 162, 556.
 Sparling, William, North Dakota, 185.
 Spokane District, 315.
 Spring River, 114, 652.
 Stone, A. E.; New York District, 187.
 Sutton, J. R., Eastern Colorado, 1002.
 Sweden, 42.
 Swenson, C. A., Scandinavia, 235; Sweden, 42.
 Trip to Makatea, A, 410.
 Warr, A. E., Southeastern Mission, 580.
 Weaver, R. D., London, Ontario, District, 15.
 Western Nebraska and Black Hills, 41, 410.
 West Virginia, 924.
 White, Ammon, Denver, Colorado, 164.
 Williams, T. W., Southern California, 291.
 Winegar, H. E., Idaho, 91.
- NEWS FROM BRANCHES
 Andes, Florence, Andes, Montana, 747.
 Andes, Montana, 747.
 Bennett, Marie, Minneapolis, Minnesota, 508, 531.
 Boomer, A. M., Tustin, Michigan, 604.
 Boston Branch, 1052.
 Bothwell, Ontario, 44.
 Browning, Fred, Spokane, Washington, 20.
 Burgess, S. A., Boston Branch, 1052.
 Burlington, Iowa, 44, 187, 531, 748, 924, 1125.
 Central Chicago, 68, 138, 236.
 Cleveland, Mrs. Margaret, Kansas City, Missouri, Second Church, 604.
 Cleveland, Ohio, 508.
 Cooper, R. T., San Bernardino, California, 556.
 Cummings, Charles F., Jonesport, Maine, 508; Olive, Maine, 138.
 Darst, Etta J., New Philadelphia, Ohio, 92.
 Dent, John C., Bothwell, Ontario, 44.
 Derry, Charles, Woodbine, Iowa, 212.
 Des Moines, Iowa, 1101.
 Detroit, Evergreen Branch, 796, 877; First branch, 1271.
 Detroit, Michigan, 43, 1202.
 Dickson, Al J., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 979, 1005, 1052, 1076, 1181, 1202.
 Farrell, Ralph W., Providence, Rhode Island, 628.
 Farthing, R. J., Des Moines, Iowa, 1101.
 Flint, Michigan, 92.
 Grice, J. R., Detroit, Evergreen Branch, 796, 877; Detroit First Branch, 1202, 1272.
 Hodges, George G., Oelwein, Iowa, 435.
 Horton, Abbie A., Independence, Missouri, 20, 68, 115, 138, 212, 236, 653, 676, 701, 725, 747, 774, 797, 823, 854, 877, 901, 925, 979, 1053, 1076, 1101, 1126, 1180, 1229, 1248.
 Horton, L. M., Central Chicago, 68, 138, 236.
 Independence, Missouri, 20, 68, 115, 138, 212, 236, 653, 676, 701, 725, 747, 774, 797, 823, 854, 877, 901, 925, 979, 1053, 1076, 1101, 1126, 1180, 1229, 1248.
 Indianapolis, Indiana, 236.
 Jasper, Anna, Los Angeles, California, 1053.
 Jonesport, Maine, 508.
 Kansas City, Missouri, Second Church, 604.
 Koehler, Edith R., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 676.
 Lamoni, Iowa, 901, 925, 1004, 1077, 1181, 1229, 1248.
 LaJunta Colorado, 164.
 Lewis, E. Walter, Scranton, Pennsylvania, 1053.
 Los Angeles, California, 44, 1053.
 London, England, 340.
 London, Ontario, 1203.
 May, Mrs. Roderick, London, England, 340.
 McLean, A. F., Toronto, Ontario, 20, 1182.
 McGeorge, Mrs. Alice M., Teriton, Oklahoma, 187.
 Minneapolis, Minnesota, 508, 531.
 Morgan, Mrs. David C., Toledo, Ohio, 340, 1125.
 New Philadelphia, Ohio, 92.
 Oelwein, Iowa, 435.
 Olive, Maine, 138.
 Patterson, E. M., Saint Louis, Missouri, 341.
 Perry, Iowa, 43, 412.
 Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 676, 979, 1005, 1052, 1076, 1181, 1202.
 Phillipin, P. H., London, Ontario, 1203.
 Providence, Rhode Island, 628.
 Sage, William F., Detroit, Michigan, 43.
 Saint Louis, Missouri, 341.
 San Bernardino, California, 556.
 Scranton, Pennsylvania, 1053.
 Seattle, Washington, 1182.
 Smith, Helen Nancy, West Pullman, Illinois, 508.
 Spokane, Washington, 20.
 Stewart, Ida H., Wichita, Kansas, 92, 212, 236, 532.
 Switzer, Ella M., Los Angeles, California, 44.
 Taylor, Estella F., Perry, Iowa, 412.
 Teriton, Oklahoma, 187.
 Terry, J. M., Seattle, Washington, 1182.
 Toledo, Ohio, 340, 1125.
 Toronto, Ontario, 20, 1182.
 Tripp, Solomon, LaJunta, Colorado, 164.
 Tustin, Michigan, 604.
 Warne, J. E., Indianapolis, Indiana, 236.
 West Pullman, Illinois, 508.
 Wichita, Kansas, 92, 212, 236, 532.
 Woodbine, Iowa, 212.
- MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT
CONFERENCE MINUTES
 Alabama, 438, 605.
 Birmingham, England, 21.
 British Isles Mission, 1078.
 Central Illinois, 413.
 Central Michigan, 1203.
 Central Nebraska, 21, 237.
 Central Oklahoma, 901.
 Clinton, 317, 677, 1078.
 Des Moines, Iowa, 189, 605, 1054.
 Eastern Iowa, 677, 1054.
 Eastern Maine, 1203.
 Eastern Michigan, 748.
 Eastern Oklahoma, 391, 878.
 Eastern Wales, 702.
 Far West, 317, 1054.
 Florida, 237, 629, 1078.
 Fremont, 214, 702, 1102.
 Gallands Grove, 629, 1102.
 Holden Stake, 980.
 Independence Stake, 293.
 Kentucky and Tennessee, 294, 629, 1126.
 Kansas City Stake, 1231.
 Kewanee, 605, 1078.
 Lamoni Stake, 237.
 Massachusetts, 214.
 Minnesota, 45, 854.
 Mobile, 629, 1231.
 Nauvoo, 629, 1078.
 New York, 677, 702.
 Nodaway, 294, 1102.
 North Dakota, 165, 980.
 Northeastern Illinois, 117, 653.
 Northeastern Missouri, 45, 677.
 Northeastern Nebraska, 653, 980.
 Northern California, 317, 980.
 Northern Michigan, 1231.
 Northern Nebraska, 213.
 Northern Wisconsin, 214.
 Northwestern Kansas, 293.
 Northwestern Ohio, 391.
 Nova Scotia, 726.
 Pittsburgh, 189.
 Portland, 854.
 Pottawattamie, 165, 557.
 Saskatchewan, 748.
 Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, 165.
 Seattle and British Columbia, 189, 980.
 Southeastern Illinois, 317.
 Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana, 702, 1102.
 Southern Nebraska, 1231.
 Southern California, 293.
 Southern Indiana, 557, 1126.
 Southern Missouri, 269, 677, 1203.
 Southern Nebraska, 165.
 Southern Wisconsin, 165, 677.
 Spokane, 797.
 Spring River, 413.
 Toronto, 237.
 Utah, 341, 901.
 Western Maine, 557, 1231.
 Western Montana, 726, 1204, 1231.
 Western Wales, 798.
 West Virginia, 1102.
 Winnipeg, 293.
- CONVENTION MINUTES
 Alberta, 702, 726.
 Chatham, 189, 214.
 Clinton, 294, 677, 1126.
 Far West, 141, 798.
 Florida, 141.
 Gallands Grove, 214, 630.
 Idaho, 981.
 Independence Stake, 214, 294.
 Kirtland, 214.
 Lamoni Stake, 237.
 London, 1103.

Massachusetts, 1204.
 Minnesota, 214.
 Mobile, 630, 1054, 1204.
 Nodaway, 317, 798.
 Northeastern Illinois, 141, 677.
 Northeastern Kansas, 294, 317, 878.
 Saskatchewan, 189.
 Utah, 341.
 Western Maine, 485.
 Western Montana, 677.
 Western Nebraska and Black Hills, 21.
 Wisconsin, 317.
 Youngstown-Sharon, 165.

PASTORAL

Anderson, Peter, 532.
 Anderson, William, 677.
 Arber, Joseph, 532.
 Aylor, W. M., 461.
 Barmore, A. C., 654.

Bootman, W. P., 532.
 Chase, A. M., 509.
 Chrestensen, J. C., 485.
 Curtis, J. F., 437.
 Davis, J. Arthur, 533.
 Ellis, Alvin R., 582.
 Ellis, W. D., 533.
 Ely, John, 509.
 Gamet, Levi, 485.
 Gillen, James A., 509.
 Greene, U. W., 557, 676.
 Griffiths, Gomer T., 413.
 Hunt, Charles J., 725.
 Kelley, James E., 509.
 Layland, A. J., 654.
 Lewis, William, 437.
 McConaughy, James, 461.
 Metcalf, J. W., 437.
 Mintun, J. F., 462.
 Prettyman, C. W., 533.
 Riley, J. T., 532.
 Rushton, John W., 485.
 Russell, R. C., 437, 485.

Sheehy, F. M., 461.
 Short, Ellis, 461.
 Simmons, S. W., 462.
 Slover, F. L., 413.
 Slye, R. F., 654.
 Smith, Charles J., 485.
 Sparling, Henry, 413.

GENERAL MISCELLANY

Appeal to our missionaries, An, 1006.
 Bishopric, The, 117, 141, 165, 213, 269, 486, 509, 533, 581, 654, 725, 748, 774, 830, 878, 925, 1005, 1078, 1102, 1126, 1182, 1206, 1254.
 Branch disorganized, 189.
 Bust fund, The, 238.
 Christmas offering closes, 94.
 Church secretary, 93, 269.
 First Presidency, 269, 557, 581, 1102.

Laurel Club notice, 749, 799.
 New Religio treasurer appointed, 1206.
 Notice of appointment, 214, 463, 878, 981, 1126, 1255.
 Notice of release, 93, 959.
 Notice of silence, 94.
 Notice of transfer, 142, 438, 534, 902, 927.
 Quorum notices, 117, 142, 166, 189, 215, 269, 317, 487, 534, 606, 703, 726, 798, 926, 1054, 1127, 1206.
 Request, A, 703.
 Requests for prayers, 21, 94, 118, 166, 189, 269, 294, 318, 341, 391, 414, 438, 463, 510, 534, 558, 583, 606, 680, 799, 830, 854, 981, 1007, 1054, 1231.
 Woman's building for Independence, 1254.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Notices

Pottawattamie, with Council Bluffs Branch, January 14, 1917. Regular session of Sunday school at 9.30; preaching at 10.45. Send all reports and items of business for conference to undersigned, as our secretary has gone to California. J. A. Hansen, district president.
 Southern Ohio with First Columbus Branch in their new chapel at Tompkins Street and Medary Avenue, February 3 and 4, 1917. First business meeting at 10 a. m. H. E. Moler, president, Wellston, Ohio.

Quorum Notices

Priests of Northern California District Quorum will hold their next meeting at San Jose, in conjunction with district conference. Send reports to secretary two weeks before conference. Dues for 1917 are reduced to 25 cents. Harley V. Bates, president, E. S. Parks secretary-treasurer.

To All Interested in Gospel Literature Work

At the last general convention of the Religio a committee of three was appointed, to confer with similar committees to be appointed by the Sunday school and General Conference, for the purpose of bringing about a unification of the forces of the Religio, Sunday school and church, along gospel literature lines. The above referred to committees are as follows: For the Religio, Harvey Sandy, Vernon W. Lee and Horace G. Roberts; Sunday school, Myron A. McConley, Leonard G. Holloway and Lee Quick; church, Ralph W. Farrell, C. Ed Miller and E. D. Moore. At a joint session of said committees, Harvey Sandy was chosen chairman, and a subcommittee of three was selected to formulate plans or a system that might be submitted to the people for consideration, so that some definite action might be taken at the next meeting in April, 1917. The subcommittee is as follows: Ralph W. Farrell, Lee Quick and Harvey Sandy, and we submit the following plan for your consideration: That the church, Sunday school and Religio, each select one member of a board of three, to be known as the general gospel literature board, which is to appoint one of their number to be the general gospel literature superintendent. This board is to have general charge of the gospel literature work. This same general plan is to be carried out down through the districts, or stakes, and branches, locals, etc. Minor details are to be worked out in connection therewith, and the whole plan published in time for submission for approval at the next meeting of the several organizations interested.

You are most urgently requested to give this your careful attention and consideration, and any criticisms or suggestions having a bearing on this subject will be thankfully received. For the convenience of the subcommittee, mail all communications of this nature to Harvey Sandy, 527 Denver Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, at the earliest possible date.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Elbert A. Smith, Editor; Edward D. Moore, Assistant Editor. Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. This paper will be promptly discontinued at date of expiration.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for "Zion's Ensign," also orders for all "Ensign" publications.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

That "Chair of Religious Education" - - -	1258
Notes and Comments - - -	1258
Current Events - - -	1260

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

New Year Greetings, by Frederick M. Smith -	1257
The Burning of Babylon, by E. E. Long -	1262
Objections to the Book of Mormon Answered by its Own Evidence, by T. J. Smith -	1264
How a Secretary Should Regard His Work, by F. E. Bone - - -	1266

OF GENERAL INTEREST:

Are You Keeping Your Eyes on the Jews? -	1268
Too Much Sunday Paper - - -	1268
Christian Science Healers May Practice Healing	1269

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Helen Silsbee Smith—Mrs. M. J. Weston.	1270
--	------

NEWS FROM BRANCHES

J. R. Grice.	1271
--------------	------

LETTER DEPARTMENT

Mrs. Julia Needham—From Here and There—H. A. Stebbins—Thomas Jones—G. A. Linscott—William C. Cummings—Howard Carpenter—H. G. Sutherland—J. F. Mintun—J. W. Quinly—Mrs. George M. Steele—L. Glenn Sager—D. E. Tucker—D. R. Baldwin—Henry Weston—Lula Boothe—Fredrick Harper—John Jenkins.	1272
--	------

INDEX TO HERALD, VOLUME 63 - - -	1279
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - -	1287

Why Not

write us about increasing your business?

We furnish the ideas—if you like—and the printing to carry them to your patrons.

Our facilities include a corps of experienced men and the equipment to give you what you want.

OUR work is not limited to church publications, but we do

Job Work of All Kinds

from a simple letter head to high-priced university annuals.

While we give all due attention to quality, our prices are no higher than what is usually asked for poor to ordinary work.

The reasonable profit we make helps build up your own church institutions.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Lamoni, Iowa

A new book that glows with human interest.

JOE PINE

By Elbert A. Smith

The first part is an interesting study of child life on the western prairies, filled with the keenest of humor and naturally seasoned with the pathos that comes in the fight with adversity.

Illustrated

By Paul N. Craig

It includes the sequel to "Joe Pine" entitled, "Called to be an apostle," which portrays the experiences of the young man and his lifelong girl friend both of whom you will feel you have grown up with.

A strong story, well written.

It is now ready to mail. Nicely printed in large type, on good paper, and handsomely bound in cloth; $1.25 postpaid. Order now.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

Lamoni, Iowa

The Woman's Auxiliary Year Book

FOR 1916-1918

This book contains necessary information for those engaged in the Woman's Auxiliary work of the church. Every sister should get one. Price 20c. 35-^{tf} Herald Publishing House, Lamoni,

Iowa, or Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

Order from your nearest house to save postage.

HOMES FARMS BUSINESS

Saints desiring to locate in the Lamoni Stake or those within the Stake wishing to change their location will do well to consult the Stake Bishopric as provided in D. C. 128:4. We have for sale and exchange properties of various kinds and are prepared to serve you.

LAMONI STAKE BISHOPRIC

JOSEPH SMITH AND HIS PROGENITORS.—The Martyr's mother, Lucy Smith, wrote this biography. For this reason alone, if for no other, the book must always be intensely interesting. But there are many other elements entering into its value: its condemnation of polygamy; its true perspective on early history; its sweet maternal intimacy. The church gives it out to the world "for what it is worth," and obviously it is worth a great deal. No. 287, cloth$1.00

Tonsils and Adenoids completely removed.

Dr. Joseph Mather, Specialist

in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, and throat.

Elders and family on ministerial allowance, work done free of charge.

Cataracts removed.

Work done in Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri.

On One Burlington Ticket

You can see the most of the best of the National Park wonders in America and take a 4-in-1 vacation.

You can visit Yellowstone, via the new Cody Road—through the heart of the "Buffalo Bill" country—the only auto route into the Park; Glacier Park—there is nothing else in the world like it; Rocky Mountain-Estes Park, a mountain playground for little folks and big—and Colorado.

I wish you would drop in the next time you are passing by and let me tell you more about this wonderful trip. I am here to serve you. Let me help you plan your trip.

L. F. Siltz, Ticket Agent