Brother Floyd McDowell's lectures on social problems each day at a quarter of eleven were valuable lessons along the line, as he so very ably presented the subjects of "human living together," and left with us many such thoughts as these: Men belong together and must work out their problems together; the strong must stand up for the weak; Christ talked ten times as much about personal character and human living together as he did about first principles of the gospel; men must be reborn; the difficulty is in the hearts of men; misuse of power, etc. Those who failed to take home with them something worth while must needs be either disinterested or stupid.

The Department of Women was under the supervision of our field worker, Mrs. Effie Hield, district superintendent. Early morning prayer services for women, which proved to be very spiritual and uplifting, were followed by class work in the afternoon, where one could learn many lessons for improvement in the home as well as caring for and dealing with children of all ages. Mothers were advised and encouraged along lines that should prove to be of great value if put into practice, and it is hoped that much good will be accomplished in the future.

The junior church held each morning at a quarter of eleven was very interesting and instructive, with sermonets, readings, music, and story-telling.

In the afternoon classes were had in handwork for girls; also scout work for the boys under the leadership of Brother K. C. Harder.

Sister Arthur Rich offered her services to care for the babies while the mothers attended class work, which was very much appreciated.

Recreation was in charge of Brethren Floyd M. McDowell and K. C. Harder, who saw that the young people had a good time playing games, etc. On the Fourth of July a program was given by some of the children, supervised by Sister Floyd McDowell and Sister Beatrice Richardson. The afternoon was devoted to boat riding, volley ball, and other games.

Some of the special visitors outside of the district were: Sister Floyd McDowell, Sister Myra Nelson, and Brother K. C. Harder, of Lamoni, Iowa; Sister Clyde Kamerick and daughter, of Independence, Missouri; Sister Atkins, of Aurora, Illinois; Brother and Sister Nalmer Johnson and two daughters, of Warrensburg, Missouri; and Mrs. Gertrude Scribbins, of New Lisbon, Wisconsin.

Brother Manly Shedd, our district chorister, had charge of the singing, and Sister Gertrude Ganoë was pianist. Several special songs and solos were rendered and much appreciated.

A short session of district conference was held on Saturday. Sacramental service of Sunday morning, July 6, was a spiritual feast.

Brother Ed Utnehmer, of Antigo, Wisconsin, was called and ordained to the office of priest. In the afternoon five girls were baptized and confirmed. Thus closed one of the very best reunions ever held in Northern Wisconsin, and it is hoped that many more Saints will add to the good attendance another year, and bring with them the same good spirit.

Western Oklahoma Reunion

EAGLE CITY, OKLAHOMA, June 30.—The Eagle City Branch being the one nearest to the place of reunion, it held a meeting Sunday, June 29, and elected some committees to prepare for the reunion which will be held the first ten days of August. These committees will prepare for the reunion and will act until the reunion commences, when the reunion committees will be elected by those present.

The district officers have been doing what they could to create an interest in the meetings this year. The first Sunday in June the district officers, president, Bishop's agent, and secretary, accompanied by some of the Eagle City Saints, visited the Seiling Branch, arriving in time for Sunday school at ten o'clock, and having services at eleven, after which we went to Brother Ballinger's home, where we had a basket dinner. At two o'clock we went to the river where two were baptized, then returned to the church for confirmation exercises, followed by sacramental services. Preaching was had at half past seven, closing a very pleasant day's services.

Elder Tordoff will arrive in this district soon and will commence his work in this field by holding tent meetings at Davidson. The district tent has been shipped there, and they intend to open their meeting July 6.

Elder Lemuel Dyke, the Bishop's agent, will go to Calumet the first Sunday in July to hold an all-day meeting there.

North Dakota Gathers Saints From Far and Near

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA, July 7.—The reunion of the North Dakota District for the year 1924, held at Sykeston, North Dakota, June 20 to 29, is a matter of history. Although at the start things looked somewhat discouraging, with only a few present and rain every day, yet before the close it proved to be a very profitable one. Everyone seemed to enjoy it very much, and all went home feeling very glad they had been there and enthusiastic for another reunion next year.

Elders H. O. Smith and W. E. Shakespeare did most of the preaching, Elder J. F. Garver coming in at the last in time to give us a few sermons. John was not feeling the best, but he made it lively while he was here. Come again, Brother John. We were also very glad to have Brother J. C. Page and wife and the car full of young people from Montana stop with us a few days on their way home from the Young People's Convention. Brother Page spoke for us also. We were all sorry they could not stay longer with us.

The bat and ball awarded by the Young People's Convention to the Department of Recreation and Expression of the North Dakota District was very much appreciated. Brother Garver made the presentation speech, and Sister Bertha Graham, head of the department of the district, replied in behalf of the district. She expressed appreciation of the good work done by the boys and of our pride in them. The bat and ball will be kept for reunion work. Thanks to the Young People's Convention. Come and play ball with us at our reunion next year.

There were Saints in attendance from Montana, South Dakota, Iowa, Missouri, and Oklahoma, as well as from Williston, Dunn Center, Burlington, Anamoose, Dunseith, Leeds, LaMoure, Clifford, and other places in the district. We feel that all together it was a very good reunion. All seemed to enjoy the good spirit that was present. All seemed to have a greater determination to see the great work go on. Under the good spirit that was manifested there, the work will go on. May God bless all of his Saints, and may each one feel and sense the responsibility that rests upon him to that extent that he shall be humble and prayerful and full of love, that God may be able to use him and accomplish a part of his great work through him.

DAVID NEEDHAM, Correspondent.

Looking Forward to the Kirtland Reunion

WILLOUGHBY, OHIO, July 9.—Many are looking forward with fond anticipation to the Kirtland reunion, which will commence on August 9 and continue until the 24th. The beautiful country, with the ever attractive temple, is a stimulus to restfulness and peace, such as is needed by those who have worked in mill, factory, office, and in the rush and hustle of life.

The committee are planning a "bigger and better reunion." President Frederick M. Smith, J. A. Gillen, Gomer T. Griffiths, F. G. Pitt, Cyril E. Wight, and the General Conference appointee to the districts in the reunion association will be present as speakers.

The recreation will be in charge of J. A. Jaques, and he is planning to meet the needs of all under that important feature. Sister Addie Halb will have charge of the children. We are, therefore, expecting to care for all ages and see that all have the advantage of the reunion. Several evenings will be given over to interesting programs which will be planned to be entertaining and instructive.

Meals will be provided in the cafeteria and in the hotel, also light lunches at the refreshment tent. None need allow the cost of meals to prevent their coming, for one will be able to adjust his eating according to what he feels he can afford. There will also be served a conscience dinner.

Accommodation is provided in tents and in the hotel, and some of the Saints have already invited guests to their homes; if there should be a rush we feel sure that others will open their homes as they have done hitherto. We are favored by nature with a full moon for the period of the reunion, which is always appreciated on such occasions in rural districts.

Improvements are going steadily forward. Several donated time and money and have placed cement walks on the north and east of the temple, and also a beautiful approach. It looks fine and is a credit to the local men that gave unstintingly of their labors to have the walk made. To start this walk, Brother John R. Gibbs left a sum of money. This, with other donations of money and labor, has made the walk a reality.

The committee are pushing forward such improvements as are possible. We hope to secure a water supply of our own for this reunion. A portable stage is now ready for use in the auditorium.

The writer has been privileged to travel through several of the districts to represent the needs of the Kirtland Auditorium. The response has been good, and if the momentum is kept and increased it will not be long until the debt is paid and we can go forward with such other improvements as are needed and thus make the Mount Sinai of latter days "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Living Praise

By Joseph Luff

Praise ye the Lord! my eager soul—
Enlist the powers at thy control;
Thy theme be Christ—thy aim to tell
The story of Immanuel.

Praise ye the Lord! not in the halls
Where mirth diverts—where laughter brawls.
The sounds that catch celestial wing
Have origin in nobler string.

Praise ye the Lord! no carnal thrill
Can e'er the skies with rapture fill;
The lute with tones for heaven meet
Awaits thee at thy Master's feet.

Praise ye the Lord! His name extol
Where widows weep and orphans call.
Deeds there strike note that upward fly
And with archangel anthems vie.

Praise ye the Lord! no sound more sweet—
No note with glory more replete
Than rises from the altar where Thy hand dispels a soul's despair.

Praise ye the Lord! thy trumpet be Chambers of human misery;
Thy harp the lyre whose strings now moan
Dirges of dearth and death alone.

Praise ye the Lord! these strings have tone—
Vibrating heavens their compass own.
Key these, then strike, till once again
That strain's revived: "Good will to men."

A choir from heaven—Jehovah's choice—
Once sang that strain with angel voice.
They gazed—they heard—then flew to applaud
The mission of the Son of God.

"Glory to God!" their chorus rang;
"Glory to God!" those angels sang.
God stoops to flesh! that flesh may rise
And know the bliss of paradise!

Praise ye the Lord! angels now wait
Discipleship to celebrate:
To them give thou occasion new
To chant the Christ—this time in you.

Arise! Ascend! and from this crest
Again let God be "manifest
In flesh," and all thy service chord
With Jesus, and thus praise the Lord!

Officers elected: Riley Beal, chorister; Grace Walker, organist; Fred Beal, usher; N. M. Wilson, secretary and news correspondent. Ministerial, statistical, and financial reports were read. Remarks concerning the reunion work in Maine were made by Floyd Black, Newman Wilson, C. H. Rich, and H. A. Chelline. Communication from the Presidency concerning the Young People's Convention at Onset, Massachusetts, was read. Ordination of James Clark, of Corea, to the office of deacon was provided for. Preaching was had by H. A. Chelline on "Faith and loyalty," and "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness"; C. H. Rich on "Enlarging the soul" and "The reason for our existence as a church." A vote of thanks was extended to the Saints at Beals for their hospitality during the conference. Next conference to be held at Jonesport October 4 and 5. Eliza M. Walker, secretary.

NEW YORK.—At Niagara Falls, June 7 and 8, in charge of the district presidency and J. A. Gillen. Priesthood meeting was held Saturday at 10 a. m. at which addresses were given by J. A. Gillen, A. E. Stone, P. L. Weegar, and James Pycock. Business session at 2 p. m. at which the usual officers', financial, and statistical reports were read, also reports from the Sunday school, Religio, and Department of Women. It was decided to hold three conferences in a year, one a business session, the other two to be educational. Time and place to be chosen by the district presidency. A budget of $300 was approved. In the future the conference delegates and visitors will pay for meals. Election of officers resulted as follows: P. L. Weegar, president; William Place and C. A. Spilsbury, counselors; Anna Lloyd, secretary and musical director; F. C. Mesle, Bishop's agent and treasurer; Frederick Harper, historian; Morris Whitehead, Sunday school superintendent; Howard Miller, Religio superintendent; Mrs. Bradt, superintendent of Department of Women. The Saturday evening program consisted of music, readings, and addresses by F. C. Mesle, William J. Landes, and James Pycock. Prayer meeting Sunday morning, J. A. Gillen spoke at 11 a. m. In the afternoon the heads of the departments spoke, featuring the particular work of each. James Pycock was the evening speaker.

SPOKANE.—At Sawyer, Idaho, June 28. Conference convened during reunion at 10.40 a. m. with the district presidency in charge. Statistical reports were received from Sagle, Idaho; Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; and Spokane, Washington; there was also a district report. ### The Religious Instinct

In spite of agnosticism, careful research has shown that worship is world-wide. Even the most primitive people recognize a higher power to which they pay adoration. We may classify religion as primitive, barbarous, semibarbarous, pagan, or heathen, but, after all, the fundamental idea of worship and of a supreme being seems to be quite universally held, also the idea of immortality or a continued existence after death, and that righteousness is approved by the higher powers and will be blessed. A careful student of comparative religion is rather surprised than otherwise with the depth and breadth of this feeling.

Again, there is such a case as that of Una Mary in the book by Una Hunt. She was a child brought up in scientific circles, taught evolution from her childhood, yet she developed and passed through several different stages of worship. She erected a shrine of her own out in the yard, worshiped the stars, later made a little image and a shrine in a tree; later she was attracted by the symbolism of Catholicism, and still later by a less ritualistic form of worship. Nor is this instance by any means isolated. The experiment has been tried definitely upon other children to keep from them all knowledge of God, only to find in the end that some of the richness of life of childhood has been lost, but that the fundamental concept or instinct still remains, so that a woman so brought up urges strongly religious education for children.

There are a few who profess agnosticism or even atheism, claiming to reach that result through reason. But in the hour of a great loss they are ready to cry for and wish they had a greater assurance of a life to come. The instinct, the desire, is still present, while the greatest thinkers, the great leaders of scientific research, are practically all religious men and report that their very study brings them back all the stronger to religion.

It is doubtless true that as exercise develops the physical muscles, as exercise develops the mental ability, so exercise develops spirituality. Those who seek earnestly to know the truth of God are those who receive that knowledge. Those who are trained and have right habits established will find right action easier.

But it does not follow that all religion is merely the establishment of right habits and the mechanical development of right attitudes and the inculcation of right knowledges, for "there is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." There is something beyond the measuring rod of science, whether we call it instinct or prefer some other name.

Church Building Dedicated in Norway

We have in hand from the pen of Brother V. D. Ruch a newsy account of the holding of a two-day meeting by the Scandinavian Saints and their ministers, June 8 and 9, at Bon, Norway.

During this meeting the first church building to be built by the Reorganization on the European Continent was dedicated, and the entire meeting was characterized by a splendid desire for progress and unity.

With reference to the building Brother Ruch says: "At Bon is located the only church building that is owned by our people in Scandinavia. It was built in 1915, and after nearly nine years of effort and sacrifice on the part of the Saints and friends it has finally been paid for and was ready for dedication. It is a neat little structure located in the central part of the community."

The Cleansing Effect of Church Attendance

The deepest benefit of a good sermon is when, in the words of the Master, we not only hear but also understand, and so the good seed takes root, and we bring forth fruit manyfold.

Often we have heard it said that unless one can tell what the sermon was about, the principle topic at least, he has received no benefit. Yet comparatively few would remember the music of the service, but many undoubtedly have received a benefit therefrom.

Of course he who not only hears but understands, weighs and considers, digests, and makes it a part of himself for future service to others receives the greater benefit. Yet there is, after all, a possible cleansing and inspiring, a betterment through attending the service, even though one has not understood clearly the significance of the sermon, or prayer, or music. This is well illustrated by the following story:

The Way It Affected Him

The late Father McGoldrick, of Dorchester, Massachusetts, was one of the greatest pulpit orators in the archdiocese and always took delight in seeing what effect his sermon had upon the lowly members of the congregation. One Sunday, while leaving Saint Peter's Church, where he had been stationed many years, he met a parishioner who, touching his hat to the reverend gentleman, said:

"That was a beautiful sermon you preached to-day. It did me a power of good."

"I'm glad of that," responded the clergyman. "Can you tell me what particularly struck you? What was the main point?"

"Well—er—I don't rightly remember—don't just exactly know. I ah—what's the use?—sure. I don't remember an individual word of it. Sorra a bit of me knows what it was at all, at all."

"And yet," said the preacher with a smile, "you say it did you a power of good."

"So it did, Father; I'll stick to that."

"Now, tell me how."

"Well, Father, now look here. There's my Sunday shirt that my wife is after washing, and clean and white it is by reason of all the water and soap that's gone through it. But not a drop of water or soap or blue has stayed in it, d'ye see? And it's the same way with me and the sermon. It's all run through me and dried out, but all the same, like my Sunday shirt, I'm better and cleaner for it."

An Astounding Confession

In the annals of crime there come many surprises, and to the reading public the confessions of Nathan F. Leopold and Richard Loeb to the slaying of thirteen-year-old Robert Franks in May of this year, and the entry of a plea of guilty in the court of Judge John R. Caverly, chief justice of the criminal court of Cook County, is another surprise.

It has been generally predicted that because these young criminals are the minor sons of very wealthy men they would undoubtedly go free after a perverted or farcical trial. Such seems now to be outside the likelihood of occurrence, for their plea of guilty has been affirmed after care has been taken by the court to impress upon them the possibilities of extreme penalty, such as permanent confinement in a hospital for the insane; life imprisonment; death.

The public, and some of the prominent members of the families of these young criminals, are relieved to know that there is no likelihood of a long trial, with all the possibilities of a miscarriage of justice, but they are also shocked at the attitude of cheap

Know All Men by These Presents, Etc.

I had thought that all the necessary announcement of my acceptance of the appointment made by the Board of Publication was made when I settled down to the work; but as some think differently I hereby formally publish my acceptance.

No hesitation is felt by me in doing so, for I know that the board was well within its rights in appointing editors.

In April, 1893, the board dropped one of the First Presidency from the editorial staff of the HERALD and placed me in his stead. Except for an interval from 1895 to 1897 when Heman C. Smith filled the place, I continued till 1901. Some little feeling of unpleasantness was temporarily evinced by the one deposed; but neither he, nor the chief editor (the President of the church) nor any one else, ever questioned the right of the board to make the change. I was heartily welcomed to the position by the chief editor, as his HERALD announcement and personal letters to me will attest, and I have still in my possession letters written by him to prove that our relationship during those years was of the most pleasant character. Not a single incident occurred to mar the harmony of our cooperation, and never was one word of any of my articles ever deleted or changed, notwithstanding the church, during a great portion of the time, was in the throes of its severest contentions.

In giving myself to this work, which fell to me unexpectedly and as a surprise, let me say: I have no personal "ax to grind," no animosity to turn loose, and nobody to "shoot at." The Ensign is our missionary paper, and God forbid that I should degrade curiosity which they have displayed after their first day in court. They seem to take satisfaction in the fact that their case has drawn large crowds to the courthouse, and has received prominent mention in the daily press. "I'll bet we're all over the front page," the talkative Loeb said soon after return to confinement.

It is interesting to contemplate that here is one case where society's demand to be protected by the removal of enemies to individual safety is likely to be heeded. May the day soon dawn when this shall be the universal rule, and when the welfare of the public may be the endeavor of lawyers, courts, and juries, to the death of graft.

its pages or prostitute its service by seeking to insert a line that has any other object than the extension of Christ's government on earth.

To me it will be the pulpit from which I will try to preach the gospel to the world, as I have learned it and as I have been trying to preach it for forty-eight years. I will try to do this in such simple terms as may be easily understood by anybody. It will be my study and effort to keep Jesus constantly before the eyes of the readers, as "the way, the truth and the life"—the "light of the world." There may be much to criticize in my rhetoric, but that will not harm the reader, or disturb me should my attention be called to it. The Restoration Story has been my chief delight for nearly fifty years, and I am now getting old. The weight of responsibility as a minister of Christ never felt heavier than now, and I am extremely anxious to finish my days here with a service of which I shall not be ashamed when it passes under final inspection.

With good will to the world and every soul within it, I am yours to do what I can to promote the interests of the church of Christ, which to me is dearer than my life.

Other Apostles Express Views

The action of the First Presidency, some of the members of the Quorum of Twelve, and a part of the bishops, in meeting together, between general conferences, and seeking to change an important governmental practice of the church, viz, introducing into the church and promulgating the doctrine of "supreme directional control" on the part of the Presidency over the finances of the church, and demanding of the Presiding Bishop that he comply therewith, is to us a strange procedure.

As we were prevented from being present to express our views in the council, and as two other members of the Quorum of Twelve were in foreign fields, and two members who were present in the council did not indorse the action taken, thus having no majority of the Twelve on record in favor of the astounding move, we wish to make a few observations on what has occurred.

Before doing so, we commend the new editorial policy of the SAINTS' HERALD; viz:

First: Insure an open church press.

Second: Accord space in HERALD columns freely to all general officials on equal and impartial terms.

Third: Allow free and frank discussion of any church problem, only attempting to confine arguments to the affirmative and not permitting destructive or altogether negative criticism.

Fourth: Give the news of the church as fully as possible and without bias.

Fifth: Balance the editorial content of the HERALD so that the educational, doctrinal, departmental, and spiritual factors may each be given emphasis. The HERALD should be broad enough to appeal to the membership as a whole, and an earnest effort be made to edit it so that it may minister to the varying groups within the church.

To facilitate the carrying out of the above program and policies to reduce expenses and to rally the support of all the Saints to the church publications, resolved that the HERALD, Ensign, and Autumn Leaves be placed under the direction of a managing editor, and that contributing staffs of six representative churchmen be chosen for the HERALD and for the Ensign, and a staff of three for the Autumn Leaves.

These rules crystallize human rights, liberty, and progress, and we believe they will appeal to the membership of the church.

We are heartily in accord with the principles set forth in the "Open Letter," to which are attached signatures of many general officers of the church whose devotion and integrity are unquestioned. The sentiments and principles therein set forth should be well considered by all.

We call attention to the eighth paragraph of section 129 in the Doctrine and Covenants, given in 1909, in answer to church supplication for direction respecting temporalities:

The spirit saith further: The attention of the church is called to the consideration of the revelation, given in answer to earnest supplication, with regard to temporal things. The word has been already given in agreement with revelations long since delivered to the church, that the temporalities of the church were to be under the charge and care of the bishopric, men holding the office of bishop under a presiding head acting for the church in the gathering, caring for, and disbursing the contributions gathered from the saints of moneys and properties under the term of tithing, surplus, freewill offerings, and consecrations. The word which has been given at a late period should not have been so soon forgotten and disregarded by the church or any of its members. "I am God; I change not;" has been known to the church and the eldership since the coming of the angel with the message of restoration. Under it the church has sought the Lord and received from time to time that which was deemed sufficient for the time to govern the church and its ministers, both of the spiritual and the temporal divisions of the work. The church has been directed to accede to the rendition of the bishopric with respect to the temporal law; and until such heed is paid to the word which has been given, and which is in accordance with other revelations given to the church, which had been before given, the church cannot receive and enjoy the blessings which have been looked for when Zion should be fully redeemed. Therefore, hearken once again unto the voice of inspiration, in warning and instruction, and conform to that which is given and receive what is awaiting the upright and the pure in heart.

It is essential that "all general church programs and policies must be submitted to the General Conference for consideration and decision before being initiated."

Is Dancing Consistent With the Christian Profession?

BY S. W. L. SCOTT

"We will not approach this subject in the spirit of denunciation, but to show that we need not apologize for it."

I am not unaware that there are persons in the church, and of course many more out of it, who think such themes should not be discussed—ought to be let alone—that it is beneath the dignity of the pulpit and religious press and has no relation to Christian morals or Christian experience. There is another class, quite as numerous and generally much more thoughtful and serious, that holds the opposite opinion, and regards the modern dance as entirely inconsistent with the Christian profession. This latter class begin to fear that the barriers between the church and the world are in danger of being prostrated in the dust, and that one source of this danger is to be found in those amusements admitting of a doubt and difficult to furnish evidence of the wrong of indulgence. We will not approach this subject in the spirit of denunciation, but to show that we need not apologize for it.

The world has encroached upon the grounds of the nominal church till many minds, especially those of worldly cast, have settled down to the conclusion that the modern dance is an innocent diversion. It is the advance thought, said to be "old foggy," that affirms "dancing as ordinarily practiced under the most favorable conditions is unfriendly to piety and spirituality." This is difficult to prove, especially to young people who have become devotees of the "ball-room floor," supported by prejudiced parents who have thoughtlessly yielded to the pressure of fashion and the wishes of children. And having invested some capital in the establishment of dancing schools, they are little inclined to confess themselves in the wrong and to undo that which they have so inconsiderately done.

Suppose we consider this question from the statements of those defending this modern phase of amusement. Questions of duty, of right and wrong, do not seem to be determined by authority now, in these days, yet authority is of weight in all the departments of human life. Perhaps the seeds of disrespect to authority were shown in the past, and the harvest is just now on.

If a disease shows itself, about which there is a doubt, if the difficulty were settled at all, it would be by consulting the authorities, and if these were found to agree, however defective the argument, there would be an immediate submission to the authorities.

The case is similar with the law. The entire work of courts of justice, after hearing the evidence and establishing the case before them, is to consult decisions of courts in past times. These decisions are contained in numerous volumes; to know them constitutes a large part of the learning of the law. Any litigant whose case is entrenched behind the concurrence of these decisions, is secure of a verdict, and his opponent is as sure of defeat.

It is very true that in regard to questions of moral duty, Christian people must make their ultimate appeal, not to the decisions of councils, not to the opinions of individual men, however distinguished for judgment or scholastic attainment, but to God, the standard of all truth. But we must not forget that his revelation does not denounce, by name, every form of sin, nor specify every mode and manifestation of goodness. It prescribes obedience to law, condemns sin in general terms, and grants communities the privilege of applying general principles to cases as they arise. The churches, like the courts, in doubtful cases, must collect the authorities; the living members diligently inquire how the Saints in past time have decided these doubtful questions, what has been the general current of opinion, and if it be not contrary to God's word, that opinion is entitled, it seems to us, to quite as much weight as the lawyer's or the physician's authority.

What, then, has been the opinion of the churches (considered wrong and right) in past times, and what is their opinion now in respect to dancing?

A single answer may be found from the earliest times to which history gives us access; they placed dancing under unqualified interdict. Some of the dances in vogue in those days were grossly offensive to modesty; and the churches, in condemning the dance, made no exception in favor of possible purer forms. She did not say, "Purify your dances," but demanded that dancing should be wholly abandoned. She placed the promiscuous dance among the things that violated the seventh commandment, associating it with offenses.

A Bishop McIlvaine, of Ohio, in 1864 said:

Let me now turn to two subjects in which there is no discrimination—the theater and the dance. The only line I would draw in regard to these is that of entire exclusion. And yet I am well aware how easy it is for the imagination to array both of these in such an abstract and elementary simplicity, so divested of all that gives them universal character and relish, that no harm could be detected in either. The same, precisely, can be said and done regarding the horse race and the card table. The exercise of graceful movement in the dance and the exercise of speed in the horse race may easily be conceived of in such a light as to make them very innocent. But if they were attempted to be got up under such an abstract form and made common amusement in such elementary simplicity, how would they succeed? Their deadness as to all that makes their usual interest would be their sufficient condemnation. The question is not what we can imagine they may be; but what they always have been and will be, and must be, in such a world as this, to render them pleasurable to those who patronize them. Strip them bare, till they stand in the simple innocence to which their defender's argument would reduce them, and the world would not have them.—Pastoral Letter.

Think of the apostles in "old Judea" dancing! Think of a social dance at the house of Lazarus of Bethany, and of our Savior presiding, and Mary and Martha and Peter and John taking part in the oriental dance. Couldn't "Phebe and Priscilla" gracefully jazz with that Barbarian from Crete, while the Corinthian orchestra syncopated, and Paul and Silas "called off"? "Not enlightened, not so advanced," did you say? Why, there was "the light of the world" in their midst.

"Well," said one church member, "what you say is true, a thousand times true, but it applies to persons high in office in the church—to the ministers, deacons, class leaders, and the most devoted Christians." Nay, this distinction between the strictness of official life and the license of ordinary membership is false and popish. The Romish Church calls priests, monks, and nuns—in short, all ecclesiastic orders and persons—religious, and none others; the rest are secular. These orders, priests, nuns, etc., alone are religious; and for religious persons, thus defined, she says, "It is wrong to dance." But the laity are not restricted; they can dance at will. So it is evident this distinction finds place, however inconsistent, among Protestants. With many of them the religious person is the minister, and a double standard is instituted and becomes the propaganda to mold the oncoming generation.

Poetry of Motion

From another quarter the friends and defenders of the dance tell me that they define it as "the poetry of motion." In seeking for specimens of the "poetry of motion," the heated ballroom would be the last place to find the muse. Poetry is too grand a thing to be achieved in artificial arm or leg crossing. It cannot be taught by a professor of shuffling and hopping. True poetry is the work of genius and utters something of the divinity which is in the soul. If we would see the poetry of motion, let us go forth under the gorgeous sky at night and behold moon and stars weaving up their heavenly poems and stirring the world with their divine verse. Let us listen when the day grows black as the night, and the storm rushes out over land and sea, tearing up the foundations of the deep, rolling them up into foaming mountains, and carrying the vast rocks from the hilltops like young worlds down into the trembling valleys.

If we would see the poetry of motion in milder mood and gentler form, let us watch the flocks of birds as they mysteriously keep the line of march over their aerial pathway above the clouds, and seem to flap their wings against the solid azure. What glorious rhymes and silent chimes as they draw apart and orderly return to the line!

Let us look at the bending oak and elm as they sway in the breeze; every curve, every sweep is a poem. Let us regard the gentle, fragrant, and many-colored flowers. What inimitable, graceful beauty they disclose as they modestly bow to the music of the zephyr or the trumpet notes of a summer storm.

If I would look for the poetry of motion in the physical movements of the human body, I should be disposed to watch the progress of a great army marching with glittering weapons and gorgeous banners toward the scene of battle. Their maneuvers on the field, the evolutions of the drill, the thunder of ordnance, the singing shell and hail of machine guns, the rain of fire and curtains of smoke, the mass formation as column after column is taken up, as in the hands of giant commanders, and hurled like manifold living bayonet- and sword-armed clubs against each other, this, and such as this, might be the poetry of motion, but the modern dance is as much the poetry of motion as the dancing master is a poet, and no more. Some dancing master anxious to enlarge his list of scholars must have invented that libel upon poetry.

Another defense of the art of dancing by professors of the Christian religion is that "it constitutes a discipline of refinement." We are candid when we say we are unable to understand how dancing has the slightest relation to refinement in any valuable sense of the word, alongside the schools of physical culture. True refinement has its citadel in the mind and heart; it consists of cultured intellect, exalted views and ideals, with purified affections, and wherever found it will, as a rule, have its appropriate expression in politeness and good manners. But are manners required to be danced before using? Are the motions of the dance the same as ordinary life? Must I know how to hop about in the dance in order to be graceful in walking or in occupying a chair, or even to exchange the customary salutations, and converse with my fellows? To walk, to sit, to stand, and to talk, constitute, well-nigh, the staple of our intercourse with society. Is dancing the original, out of which these are to be translated? Must we depend on the dancing school to put manners into us, as so much raw material? The pin manufacturer puts in brass at one side of his machine and receives pins at the other—the finished product. Then does the dancing teacher, if the view be correct, put us through a few dancing lessons and with a few whirls of the human machinery we come out polished and refined!

If young people grow up in respectable families and are daily in contact with polite, intelligent, and virtuous persons, their manners as a rule will be natural, and anything added to nature in such cases will be likely rather to deform than to adorn. And here only is it quite safe to adopt the maxim, "Most adorned when unadorned."

Another defense of the modern dance, coming from the social element is, "Social gatherings cannot function rationally, nor agreeably, without it." This argument must proceed on the supposition that the educated and refined of both sexes cannot find topics sufficiently interesting to engage them in improvement, and the only way to supply this lack is to bring the feet into play and the body into contortions. We do not agree with the defense that "silly and harmful gossip," alleged to take the place of the dance, is at all diminished by the introduction of the terpsichorean. It is no small part of the noble alchemy of life to convert the little matters of daily occurrence into pleasant conversation and application. On this basis society will properly progress. The social elements of our nature advance to higher and better forms by true intellectual and moral excellencies—those which contribute something.

We freely admit that "dancing is not sinful in itself." But what is "dancing in itself"? It is the simple motion of the body, without any relation to the company present, or to the passions with which it stands connected. If the modern dance in itself ever takes place, it must, therefore, not be promiscuous, for in that it ceases to be mere "dancing in itself." The performer must be alone. He must be the sole witness to his own capering. But is such ever done? There is no such thing in actual existence as "dancing in itself," and we will not "beat the air" by inveighing against it.

Dancing is an inferior art, the object of which is to show off personal graces, to exhibit beautiful (?) attitudes, movements (?), steps (?), and postures (?) to fellow dancers and spectators. It is done only in company and for it, and for the dancer's pleasure. Pardon, please, but in the most harmless sense the meaning is as if the performer said, "Here I stand on the floor; look at me; look at my person; at these delicate feet pattering on the floor with the musical delicacy of falling rain, or smiting it with the dexterity of well-handled drumsticks; look at these lithe and graceful (perhaps uncovered) arms, moving in well-described curves; look at my face glowing, radiant with the flush of music and excited with the "poetry of motion" and, perhaps, "strong lemonade!" We do not object to personal charms and beauty; we honor them, but as the expression of richer, nobler beauty of inward adorning of immortal spirit. But what of an amusement the object of which is ostentation, display, and vanity! Parlor dancing and "ball dancing" differ in the company, yet it appears they are the first and last letters of the same alphabet. One is the junior member of the firm, closely related to the senior, and one who is enamored of the junior and delights to deal in his wares will likely be called on by the stern old officers to make final settlement.

The great Methodist Church, at conference in Springfield, Massachusetts, lifted the "ban on dancing" and other amusements, which was imposed during the 70's, to "keep the young people in the church." That church left it to the "conscience" to select amusement which was right in journeying from Mount Sinai to the place where the Sermon on the Mount was preached. The overture says, "We are troubled with an immense amount of social wickedness in this country. Dancing is indecent; it has ceased to be æsthetic and has become acrobatic and athletic. The theaters are full of vile things that make a sex appeal." In appealing to "conscience to cover the ground" with "special advice," there are wide doors left open, similar to choosing the mode or form of baptism as conscience directs. Conscience is as fluctuating as the markets. Conscience is not an original teacher. It must itself be taught—must be "purged from dead works," and that by the message of Christ. (Paul to the Hebrews.) We do not affirm that it is the office, or power, of conscience to teach us truth. When truth is discovered by the intellect, conscience requires us to receive it. Conscience cannot unfold to us the relations between us and other beings. These relations are made known by reason and revelation, as also the duties growing out of them perceived; then conscience requires us to fulfill the obligations imposed by our relations. A revelation was necessary to teach us truth and duty, that conscience might have means for enforcing the moral obligations of our nature. Without conscience man would be totally incapable of profiting by any divine revelation, devoid of any affinity with virtuous beings, and without the remedial influences of Christianity. Conscience, in the actual unregenerative condition in which man is by nature found, would be totally insufficient to virtue, happiness, and heavenly conditions. In the fallen condition of man, conscience is dethroned. Her prerogatives are outraged by the lawless appetites of our natures. The inferior principles of our constitution are in uproar and wild mutiny. We are like Chalmers' watch—in the fall the regulator is broken or unhinged and the wheels run at random. The regulator has lost its power, though not its right, to control. It was designed to control the movements of the watch, but under present circumstances cannot without being restored. So the influences of divine grace, the gospel of Christ, is necessary to restore conscience to its rightful position and keep it there, in order to select those heights of amusements immune from jarring or tumbling to pieces the entire machinery.

Now comes one of the most powerful, because popular, of the modern nominals, through its representative, and defends dancing by the restored regulator, saying, "God's people engaged in the art in olden times, and no disapproval seems to appear." Permit me to say that the three principal fashionable amusements, prior to the introduction of the "movie," namely the theater, games of chance, and the dance, are only perversions of what were formerly religious rites. The theater, even among the Greeks, was a sacred institution. In the hands of Christian nations (so called) it became an engine of corruption and dissipation. Games of chance are only a corruption and perversion of what was considered a sacred institution. "The lot" is frequently referred to in the Holy Scriptures and was one of the elements in the calling of an apostle as successor to the fallen Judas—"the lot fell upon Matthias." But oh! the perversion of that sacred method on Calvary! No sooner had the "roughs" raised Jesus on the cross and with hammers driven the nails through his feet and palms, than they sat down close by and "threw dice" for his garments. No creatures on earth but gamblers could sit down coolly under a bleeding, crucified man to wrangle for his clothes and, with hands still stained with his blood, "throw dice" for his coat and tunic. The "robe" with fringe that had been touched with trembling hands and fondled by little children who loved to see him smile; the robe that had been moistened by the dews of night when he prayed upon the mountains; the robe that had often been moistened with the "tears of the poor" who found sympathy and comfort in him alone of all the earth. Just think of this scene when you hear men defending "games of chance" from the sacred revelations!

If dancing is the "poetry of motion," as it is performed in these latter days, the "jazz and foxtrot" are its crude and vulgar songs. At such a place, drink, more or less exhilarating, flows freely, and there are generally private apartments for "card parties." The "drink," the prevailing moral tone, the absence from home, the lack of moral restraint, can only find an expression sufficiently ardent and passionate in demonstrations of pleasurable intoxications. The head gets as gay as the heels; and under the light of human glances, bewilderingly radiated by hundreds of electric bulbs; the orchestra, consisting of a flock of flutes, cellos, violins, plus a harp and silver horn, rendering sentimental "stuff" with syncopation by a cowbell and hammer, the complaint made by a saxophone, the chirp of the banjo, and a fiddle straining to be heard above the din of a bass drum—is it any wonder that the spirit of "cheek-to-cheek" tripping in the "round dance" is imbibed? Among the Jews of olden days, dancing of a certain character was practiced as a form of worship, not for amusement. It was only employed by them in the celebration of some great, divinely wrought deliverance or event, as, when they came through the Red Sea and Miriam took a cymbal and led the daughters of Israel in song and dance, she performed an act of high worship—an elevated "Te Deum"; or as when David danced before the ark after its return from Philistine captivity. In these religious dances, men seldom participated, and there was no mixture of the sexes. Such was disallowed because of degenerative tendency. They saw the wisdom of the prohibition when the courts of kings were invaded by dissipation and polygamy. In the New Testament we find the terpsichorean of a single girl crowned with the murder of "God's prophet"—his head as a trophy of heathenish contortion.

The outstanding objection to the modern performance urged by the Hobart College Herald, Geneva, New York, is, that "it is immodest and lacking in grace. It is not based on the natural and harmless instinct for rhythm, but on a craving of abnormal excitement." This College Herald says further:

And what is it leading to? The dance in its process of its degradation has passed from slight impropriety to indecency and now threatens to become brazenly shameless. From graceful coordination of movement it has become a syncopated embrace. Even the most callous devotee of modern dancing cannot think with unconcern of the danger involved in any further excess, for American morals have undoubtedly degenerated with the dance.

The most serious indictment of the dance is, perhaps, given by Miss Lillian E. Dimmit, dean of women, Morningside College, Sioux City, Iowa. The New York Tribune publishes her as assigning to the world's great war, the "tearing up of our ethical standards." She says:

Extreme social life has found its way into the schools and colleges. High school girls are social butterflies and get their ideas from sensational movies. There is hardly enough honor in some of our institutions to float their honor systems, but we are madly endeavoring to save the youth. The number of cases is appalling.

The Michigan Agriculture College says:

Overlooking the physiological features of woman's dress, there is a strong moral aspect to this laxity of dress. When every dancing step discloses the entire contour of the dancer, it is small wonder that moralists are alarmed. It is, indeed, an alarming situation when our twentieth century debutante comes out arrayed like a South Sea Islander—a "savage."

The foregoing is sufficient, out of a dozen college voices, to show the trend of opinion regarding the overland and oversea "wreckage of standards," as writers headline. It is evident that modern supineness exists on this phase of social life. The majority of the rising generation know more about "Mary and Doug" and "Fatty Arbuckle" than they do about the characters of the Bible. It is written of the apostles, "They turned the world upside down." Preachers who deal in camphorated phrases and stereotyped sermons, and substitute the manners of denatured grand opera for worshiping God in "the beauty of holiness," do turn things of a righteous order "upside down," but it "shall be esteemed as the potter's clay." We have made real progress in the fields of morals and manners since the days of Sodom and Pompeii, but a reversion to the conditions which laid those cities low has been forecast and is due "in the days of the coming of the Son of Man." Nevertheless, if Christianity, pure and unadulterated, could destroy the Roman arena and break down the gods erected to Bacchus, it can regenerate modern society if given the chance.

We are so busy with our radio, our telephone, our electrical devices, our interurbans, our automobiles, our skyscrapers, and myriad facilities for securing the money badge of distinction, that we have lost sight of the spiritual outlines of the universe. So that "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," and "intoxicated on iniquity," seems to be the guide-board of nations, as prophesied by Saint Paul and the ancient American prophet. 'Tis the grossly material that "chokes out the seed" of immortality—"the cares of the world, and deceitfulness of riches"—of the wrong kind. Progress in material things is all right and in keeping with the God-ordained plan, but spiritual progress does not keep pace. What will equate these inequalities? We believe the practical application of the message of Jesus to the world's needs will bring to pass the golden ideal. But "the weapons of our warfare are not worldly," says Paul, but mighty through God, to the pulling down of strongholds—battling down spiritual wickedness in high places." Spiritual wickedness yet predominates—the dark centrifugal prevails over the bright centripetal.

A Christian character is made by doing little kindnesses and following God in little things. —Fred H. Richardson.

Common Consent Is Fundamental

BY R. L. FULK

In the seventh chapter of Matthew the Master says: "Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock."

Further, says the Master, when the storms of opposition and destruction came upon this wise man's house it stood firm and steadfast.

Why? Let us answer. Because the application of the Master's teachings is the very essence of a religious life; the very foundation stone, if you please, that gives to the religious life an unshakable stability. The application of his teachings brings a revelation of God's acceptance and the assurance of one's safety. Therefore, when the reverses of life come, we are able to meet them with an anchor of hope, deep in the experiences of the past and the promises of the future. Our faith stands and looks up to him with an unwavering assurance.

Not so with the foolish man who builds on a sandy foundation—him who ignores the words of the Master and their application. When reverses come he is left to himself without a knowledge of God's acceptance, without a hope of the fulfillment of his promises as recorded in the Scriptures. And so the whole superstructure of his religious life goes down in a heap of wreckage, and leaves him stranded on the barren wastes of hopelessness. He may have deceived himself and thought he was building aright, and in his headstrong determination substituted his own or some one else's saying for those of the Master. The very essence of a religious life was left out; the foundation rock was missing; the results were inevitable.

So, in democracy the very essence of government is common consent. The substantial foundation stone upon which unity and peace is, and must be, established and maintained, is common consent. It is the revelation of confidence and good fellowship between the official body and the masses that brings faith, hope, and cooperation. These in turn point to success and happiness.

As well may a man try to build a religious life upon other foundations than Christ as to try to build a democracy on any other foundation than common consent. He may deceive himself with the belief that he is building substantially, but he will learn that his building rests lightly upon the shifting sands of uncertainty, honeycombed by dissatisfaction, discouragements, divisions, and strife.

Well did the Master know the needs of his church when he gave the instruction, "And all things shall be done by common consent in the church, by much prayer and faith; for all things ye shall receive by faith."—Doctrine and Covenants 25.

Can we hope to be building upon the saying of the Master if we ignore this instruction? Can we build a democracy upon the true principle of democracy and ignore this? Can we hope to have unity, peace, happiness, and success in a theocratic-democracy and ignore the sayings of Christ and the fundamental principle of democracy—common consent?

What Shall the Answer Be?

BY PRESIDENT F. M. McDOWELL

For nearly fifteen years the writer has had opportunity to form a personal acquaintance with scores of young people who have come and gone at Graceland. During a large share of that time he has acted in the position of instructor and dean, having occasion almost daily to discuss privately and intimately with young people the problems of life. Whatever the problem presented, there was one bit of advice that was almost invariably given. Stated briefly, it would be something like this: "Make every effort to discover your talent; go to the top in your chosen field and then say, 'Here am I, Lord; use me.'" This advice was given with a feeling of assurance that when these young people were ready to offer their services to the church, having become expert in their chosen field, the church would not only willingly receive them but would be in a position to put them to work in a position commensurate with their talent and training.

Fifteen years is not a very long time if measured in terms of generations or centuries, and yet it is long enough for one to begin to see results. Throughout the church to-day there are young men and women who have heeded the advice given. They have gone to the top in their field; they have earned and have received recognition; and they have returned to the church with a sincere spirit of consecration saying, "Here am I; use me." What shall the answer of the church be?

In many ways typical of the rising army of young people in the church who have heeded the advice above suggested is a young woman whose path from childhood up has been filled with discouragement of almost every kind. This young woman received very little encouragement at home; was compelled to earn her own way in school and in addition suffered under the hand of affliction in a most grievous manner. Amidst all this she was enabled to catch the spirit and genius of the latter-day work as it is caught by hundreds within Graceland walls. Having struggled upward, overcoming in turn what seemed at times unsurmountable obstacles, she has succeeded, and best of all is ready to say, "Here am I, Lord; use me." So wonderful is her letter which conveys this spirit that we are quoting from it at length:

To a certain extent I feel that the race is over and that I have won. Won, to the extent that I held the highest scholarship record in _____ and was otherwise approved by the _____ Department and got the scholarship in _____. Also assistantship at the _____ office.

However, it is not to boast of my personal accomplishments that I am writing. You know that a little over three years ago now I offered myself, my services, to the church, in a definite field. My offer was not accepted. Whatever reasons were offered mattered little. (It may be that I was not considered sufficiently well trained.) I determined then that that offer would not be renewed until I had proven myself capable. I left Graceland with the determination to stand or fall on my own account, to lean on no one, to tell no one my past experiences. To meet the world on an equal basis with everyone else. For three years I have done that. I have surpassed what I hoped for myself, particularly the last year here. I came here with no idea of getting any recognition, merely to be one in hundreds in a successful struggle for a B. A. I never expected to go farther. I didn't even think I wanted to, but next year if all goes well I will take my M. A. I will also have had experience that means more to me than the degree. As far as the human element is concerned, I have tested myself alone, or as nearly so as a social being can. But I have felt keenly, almost overwhelmingly at times, the nearness, the actual presence, of the Divine. I have tested, or tried to test, every religious doctrine and every social and moral code. One thing always remained the center of my philosophy, the essence of my human relationships; that one thing was and is "The fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." I have gone the limit to accept the essential brotherhood of all classes, not only economic, but social and moral, and of all races.

All this is preliminary. What I want to say is that I feel I have proven myself, at least to my own satisfaction. Again I offer myself without reservation. I don't know that the church has any place open for me, and if you haven't there are a thousand things I can do that will increase my efficiency. But I want you to still feel that I am whole-heartedly and unreservedly with the church, and that any time you may need me I am ready. This is no emotional response to a group stimulus. It is a cool, reasoned out, solitary decision, backed by an unwavering faith in the ultimate triumph of right and by an intense desire to be of assistance in the bringing about of that triumph.

AGAIN WE ASK, WHAT SHALL THE ANSWER OF THE CHURCH BE? Hundreds of young people are now ready to consecrate their lives in the interest of the kingdom of God on earth. SHALL WE USE THEM, OR SHALL WE LOSE THEM? WHAT SHALL THE ANSWER BE?

Our sternest task is that of subduing our ever-insistent selfishness and desire to stand well with the world, even the little world of our familiar daily concerns.—Doctor R. J. Campbell.

The Way Out

BY A. M. CHASE

"I am the way."—Jesus.

I have only one apology to make for essaying to offer a solution to the difficulty the church is in. One cannot be called a pessimist who recognizes the seriousness of the situation; for, unless the solution is found soon, and in the right way, there will not only be many sore hearts in the church, but some will suffer shipwreck of their faith, if indeed this has not already happened.

With the writers in the late HERALD who have taken up the call to have part in this question, "I do not feel to question the sincerity or motive of anyone, no matter how much we may differ in opinion," and it is with conviction that this differing "in opinion," rather than differing in motive, or spirit, is the thing that has brought us to this grave crisis, I write.

Lyman Abbott writes in his Reminiscences, and out of the fullness of his experience, especially in his service in the days of, and efforts at the "Reconstruction," that "Much more important for cooperation is unity of spirit than unity of opinion." And with a recollection of the difficulties he encountered in trying to maintain harmony among those who were so vitally interested in the problems of that hour, says, almost lamentingly, "It often happens . . . that the questions of least significance become questions of greatest importance. The sense of relative values is, I sometimes think, the sense least developed, especially in reformers." I am convinced that this is largely the root of our trouble to-day.

In the very beginning of this work, Christ warned the church that, no matter what other qualifications one may possess, or vision he may catch of this work, "No one can assist in this work, except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity, being temperate in all things whatsoever may be intrusted to his care," and to this list of needful qualifications must be added this given in a former revelation, "with an eye single to the glory of God." (The emphasis is mine.)

This warning just quoted was not given as a new thing, but simply another calling attention to a truth which Jesus was careful to witness of to his disciples when facing the trying times that were coming with his crucifixion and their efforts to "carry on" in the work intrusted to their care. Hear the Man of Galilee to his loved disciples, even when he was conscious that one had even then gone out to negotiate for his betrayal: "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." And when he had admonished them to such a faith in him and his ability to bring the work they were engaged in to final triumph, even though he must go away, that they should not be unduly troubled, he had told them that, "Whither I go ye know, and the way ye know," and to Thomas's remonstrance that they knew neither the place nor way, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

In the parable of the true vine, he again emphasizes this needed condition of mind and heart when he admonishes them that they should love, even to the laying down of their lives if need be, declaring that this must be the height of our willingness for consecration, to be willing to lay down our lives for our friends. He says, "These things I command you, that ye love one another."

Do you suppose he was not conscious of the fact that there would be problems of life and living that would surely bring differing opinions among these disciples? Yet must there be that love that would "suffer long," and still be kind; still bearing "all things, hoping all things, enduring all things."

It may seem to some that I am presumptuous in writing this, but out of the fullness of my heart I must say it. If those who stand as leaders of this body cannot fellowship one another, simply because they may not agree in opinion as to how this great redemption may best be manifested to the world, how can they hope to lead the body on to that state which Paul describes as "a perfect man [who has been brought, by the work of these divinely appointed ministers], unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ?" And Paul in effect declares that this increase of the body can only be attained through "the edifying of itself in love."

What if our building program for "Beautiful Zion," may not go on as rapidly (in its manifestation of brick and stone) as we had hoped? Does the Master want an edifice that does not represent the eager, willing desire of his people? Remember that the greatest monuments of architecture the world possesses to-day are monuments of oppression of the people and apostasy from the Faith of Christ. Was not Saint Peter's Cathedral at Rome largely built, or completed, by the sale of indulgences? If it is a matter of fine architectural specimens, I fear that Rome may still lead the world, as far as Christianity may be concerned.

It is not a matter of this kind of physical manifestation which is so vital to the cause of Christ to-day, but, rather, the building of the body of Christ in love. It is almost a trite saying, yet we cannot escape its truth, that love is the great dynamic of this work. If the body can be brought to that condition so wonderfully described by Paul, there will be no lack of needed buildings, either as temples, auditoriums, colleges, or other needed equipment. These things are only incidentals which will accompany the redemption of Zion.

Brethren, the way out of our difficulty, the only way which will not be fraught with heartache and wreckage for the Saints, is for these leaders, who have given so much to the cause, to still make a further sacrifice of their opinions as to policy, putting aside whatever considerations of quorum or individual prerogatives may seem to be involved, and come together; and, if some program which has seemed to be such an important thing in the way of administration, or organization, cannot be agreed upon, postpone, or lay it aside, being assured that with the resumption of good will and love among the quorums, that this condition with its accompanying confidence will obtain in the body, and once again take up the work of mutual sacrifice and love. There is no other way.

We preach to the world the gospel of reconciliation, and the time has come when the proverb, "Physician, heal thyself," is applicable to the leaders of this church, and Paul's admonition must come with equal force to the First Presidency, the Twelve, the Seventies, the Bishopric, and, in fact, to every man who has taken his stand on either side of this conflict, in whatever quorum he may be found, as well as to the body at large, "Be ye reconciled to God."

Surely, in the great work of preparation for the coming of the Master, there is room for all who are willing to work "with an eye single to the glory of God," forgetting any glimpse that they may have been given of the glory of this world, in the love which must so fill their hearts that they, having partaken of that tree of life which Lehi and Nephi saw in vision, "The love of God, which sheddeth itself abroad in the hearts of the children of men; . . . the most desirable above all things" (1 Nephi 3: 64), are filled.

May the Master help us all to be so willing for his will to obtain, that we may come to this condition of mind and heart, that he may still use us and lead us unto the redemption of Zion, is my prayer.

TABOR, IOWA, July 13.

It is the easiest thing in the world to obey God when he commands us to do what we like, and to trust him when the path is all sunshine. The real victory of faith is to trust God in the dark and through the dark. Let us be assured of this, that if the lesson and the rod are of his appointing, and his all-wise love has engineered the tunnels of trial on the heavenward road, he will never desert us during the discipline. The vital thing for us is not to deny and desert him.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

Facts About the Bible—No. 1

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

How many Christians are there to-day who know how our Bible came to exist? The story of the origin and history of the biblical books is a long one, but it is absorbingly interesting and of great educative worth to one who desires to understand the Book of Books. Not many years ago, when a backwoods farmer was asked where the Bible came from, he replied, "Why, I suppose it came right down out of heaven. Where did it come from?" This was perhaps the first time he had ever given the question thoughtful consideration. While not many persons would now give that answer to the question, a great many would be unable to do much better. Not only the contents and the history of the sacred writings are to them a profound mystery, but they believe it to be a mystery beyond the power of man to unfold.

It is true that the passing ages have obscured some things of historic interest concerning the writings that now comprise our sacred volume. But the main essentials may be fairly well understood, and the conditions that gave rise to the compilation in its present form have been recorded with sufficient accuracy to make the matter quite plain to us, aside from a few minor details.

Authority of Bible Writers

In the days of Adam the plan of God for human salvation was made known by divine inspiration. This holy inspiration was conveyed from God to man through priesthood, which the Inspired Version tells us was in the beginning and "shall be in the end of the world also" (Genesis 6.7). By this priesthood, sacrifices were offered, and "it was given unto as many as called upon God, to write by the Spirit of inspiration" (verse 5). This inspiration was recorded in a book, to be handed down to succeeding generations.

From various sources we thus learn that priesthood was ordained of God as the means by which he revealed his commandments to mankind. Men thus commissioned were sent from God with the messages he would reveal to them. In sending commandments to men, God did not interfere with human agency, and he who would might reject the word of the Lord. At different times a great many of the people did reject the prophets and the divine word which they were authorized to present. The refusal to believe in the prophets was one of the sins of backsliding Israel and resulted in many calamities. On the other hand, the promise was made, "Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper."—2 Chronicles 20: 20.

In the course of centuries, many writings of inspired messages delivered through God's appointed prophets were accumulated, and some of these were read in the assemblies of the people when gathered for worshipful devotions. Jesus frequently quoted the writings of the prophets, and showed clearly that with him the authority of their words was unquestioned. Other of the Christian ministry, as well as many of the Jewish faith, often referred to the Scriptures in terms of deep reverence. The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews (1.1) explicitly says, "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son."

These ancient writings were inscribed upon papyrus, parchment, and other materials. When they became much worn with age and use, they were carefully copied by scribes trained to that work and learned in the nature of the texts that had been preserved, and the old copies were usually destroyed. Sometimes a scribe left out a word or phrase by mistake, and as the writing left scarcely any space between the lines, it was necessary to insert the omitted portion on the margin of the text. At other times a scribe would make notes on the margin, presumably in explanation of something, or because of a difference existing in another copy. Because of this it became impossible in some instances for another scribe who copied the work many years afterward to distinguish between these marginal notes added to the original text and matter written there because it had been omitted in the body of the text. Sometimes careless scribes failed to make accurate copies, hence there arose various manuscripts containing differences in the text or omissions. Some additions may have been made in attempts to rephrase or correct supposed inaccuracies.

CODEX EPHRAEMI

Manuscripts and Versions

There are many kinds of manuscripts of the Bible or portions of it, written in various languages. The most important are in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, Syriac, Armenian, or Coptic. The original writings, however, are believed to have been in Hebrew, Greek, and to some extent Aramaic. As writing materials were at times scarce, the writing was erased from some of the old scripture manuscripts and the surface covered with other writings, the erased text being sometimes discernible under the new writing.

Such manuscripts are called palimpsests, of which a notable specimen is Codex Ephraemi.

No original manuscript is known to exist of any part of either the Old or New Testament. The oldest copies now remaining of any major part of the Bible in the language in which it was first written are believed to be as late as the fourth century of our era. There are thousands of manuscripts of the Bible or portions of it. The Greek parchment manuscripts of the New Testament number about a thousand eight hundred, though only forty contain all the canonical books, and portions of books are omitted. Even the Great Uncials, the three most complete Greek manuscripts, are not entirely complete, the Sinaitic manuscript being most nearly so, but lacking the closing verses of Mark, which some therefore are inclined to reject.

The possibility of error in translating one language into another, and the fact that not all translators use the same words to translate a given term, shows that it may make a great difference whether a translation is from a manuscript written in the original language, or is from a translated text. There are therefore two classes of versions, the Immediate or Direct Versions, and the Mediate or Indirect Versions.

As even the Direct Versions are from manuscript copies of the originals, the possibility of error in these copies still exists. Where errors exist in the copies, only divine inspiration could restore the biblical text as it was originally given.

The fact that such books as the Pentateuch and older prophets have been preserved during thousands of years is itself a most wonderful miracle. Some of these ancient books are considered superior to others in authority and inspiration, as held by the Jews. But no such division is recognized among Christians, though some Christians accept the so-called deuterocanonical books, while others reject them. In the new work entitled Helps to Bible Study, just off the HERALD press, these and many other features of Bible information are quite fully explained. Many volumes have been used in bringing together the materials of this important subject, as well as many other subjects with which the work deals.

And then when I reflect that some of these poor people would have been nobler ladies and gentlemen than all but two or three, I know if they had only had the opportunity, there is a reaction toward the poor, something like a feeling of favor because they have not had fair play.—George MacDonald.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Changes in Ohio

WILLOUGHBY, OHIO, July 7.—Since last writing to your columns there have been changes, some seemingly for the better and some that do not appeal to some as being for the very best. However, we desire to remain on the optimistic side and are determined to press on towards the goal and assist others to do the same.

It surely makes one feel to rejoice when expressions of determination to press forward are heard from those who have in the past been very neglectful of their duty. How inspiring to see hungry souls yearning for truth, and what a joy to one's heart when called to preach the words of life in a community where a child of God has been living who has practiced the golden rule, who has made a name and character for himself and a name for the church that no one need to blush because such a one ever lived and died in that community! Such was the case with our highly esteemed and venerated Brother J. P. Titus, of Mentor, Ohio. It does not very frequently occur that there is sadness and also pleasure enjoyed at one and the same time. Sadness, because the wife of Brother Titus's youth was in such a poor condition of health that while her husband lay dead she was not conscious of it, and when the funeral cortege left the home she was still unconscious of it. Owing to the serious condition of the widow, the funeral services were conducted in the beautiful cemetery at Mentor, Ohio.

The casket was beautifully arranged under a large white birch tree, banked with beautiful flowers. Chairs were placed in a semicircle with a background of autos filled with attentive listeners, only three of whom were members of the Reorganized Church. The speaker discoursed upon the question of Job 14: 14, 15, Inspired Translation. The people, a large number, sat as it were in the holy place, under the blue canopy of heaven and were baptized in tears. What a blessed thing when God can look down upon the past life of one of his children and bear witness of his great pleasure by a manifestation of his Spirit's presence.

How my soul magnified God while expressing to that waiting audience that the man could not die who had wrought so well. Only the body lay before us; the real man was not there but had passed on, and in the days yet unborn his ears would hear the call of the angel of God, and he would again inhabit a form to all appearances like the one he had left. I would to God that, with all the changes that have occurred and must occur, there may come to the Israel of God a great change of heart fraught with a determination to endeavor to live a life that will honor God and not reflect discredit upon him or his work.

Our conference at Niagara Falls, New York, was a very pleasant and profitable one to all who attended, and we feel that from that conference the spirit which prevailed there will be furthered throughout the district and will be felt at gatherings far removed from that point.

Greenwood was visited by the writer, and we hope good was accomplished. Some earnest souls live there without any shepherd to feed them, so we pray that in the absence of the earthly shepherd God, the great shepherd, will fill their hearts and satisfy their hungry souls.

The elders' conference at Fayette City was also an enjoyable and profitable time. The brethren in charge did all they could to make it a success. The writer was very much encouraged and had arranged to tarry with them a few days, but sometimes a man plans to do one thing and God seemingly causes him to do something entirely different; so in this case, I was called away.

May our blessed heavenly Father look upon his children with a pitying eye and grant unto us an increased measure of his Spirit to lead and instruct us and direct our course, that Zion's children may arise and shine.

A. E. STONE.

New Canton Entertains Visitors

NEW CANTON, ILLINOIS, July 9.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. The contest ends the last of this month.

We were pleasantly surprised a few Sundays ago by a visit from some of the Quincy Saints. Brother and Sister C. C. Morton and family, Brother and Sister T. Morgan and son, Brother and Sister George Fuselman and daughter; Sister Herick, and Sister Miller came, bringing their lunch, and spent the day. Brother C. C. Morton spoke for us in the morning and Brother T. Morgan in the afternoon.

June 22 was Children's Day. The services were held in a park, and dinner was served there. Brother Albert A. Johnson occupied the morning hour and at half past one there was a meeting of the officers and teachers. At two o'clock a program was given by the children. Brother Henry R. Mills, of Independence, Missouri, gave an interesting talk. Brother and Sister H. R. Mills and daughter, Mrs. Underwood from Pittsfield, and Saints from Hannibal and Bowling Green, Missouri, spent the day with us. Brother Johnson stayed and preached Sunday and Monday evenings, but left Tuesday for Saint Louis, Missouri. He is superintendent of the Sunday School Department in this district.

Brother Tilphard Phillips was with us last Sunday and administered the sacrament.

We are looking for a visit from Elder E. L. Ulrich the last of the month, and hope he can arrange for a series of meetings, for we feel that much good can be done in this part of the Lord's vineyard. We are ever praying that the work of the Lord may prosper.

Rhodes Branch Activities

RHODES, IOWA, July 8.—The branch was pleased to have Elder Ward L. Christy with them June 15. Brother Christy accompanied Brother and Sister Pitcher home from the Young People's Convention. He could remain only for the one day, however, as he had to push on to his field in Beloit, Wisconsin, but he gave us two good sermons, preaching both morning and evening. Brother Christy is always warmly welcomed by the Saints at Rhodes, not alone for his labors, but for the ties of friendship formed in days ago. It was in the Des Moines District that he began his ministerial career, making some of his maiden efforts in the home of the writer, and we wondered then if Brother Christy would ever make a preacher. Those who have heard him in recent years can answer as to whether he has or not.

Bishop E. O. Clark and Elder N. V. Anderson are expected to be with us July 20 in the interest of the reunion, which will be held at Runnells, Iowa, August 8 to 18.

After the reunion Elder Lentell is expected to hold a series of meetings at Rhodes. As there has been no protracted effort here for nearly three years, when Elder J. A. Dowker was with us, we are looking forward to this meeting with anticipations of pleasure and hope that much good may be accomplished.

We have some splendid local men who take turns in occupying the pulpit every Sunday, both morning and evening, but it is hard to get nonmembers to come out to hear local men. The same disposition is apparent in men to-day as in the days of our Savior when they said, "Is not this the carpenter's son?"

Our Sunday school, under the leadership of Brother E. G. Beye, is doing good work, and Brother V. G. Lents, superintendent of the Religio, who was instrumental in getting a community band organized last year, has succeeded in getting a small orchestra of six instruments started, which adds greatly to the Sunday school and Religio song service. The Religio has taken up the study of the Book of Mormon with the new quarterlies. There are three classes studying the book. The hour of meeting is Sunday at seven o'clock, and all, old and young, come at that hour and remain for preaching.

Sister Aleta Laughlin, who finished her four-year college course in home economics at Ames this year, has accepted a position as teacher in the consolidated schools at Magnolia, Iowa. Her mother, Sister Bessy Laughlin, and her brother Harold, will move to Magnolia to be with Aleta. Harold, who is in his senior year, will finish his high school course at Magnolia. This family will be greatly missed from the little branch at Rhodes. Sister Bessy has been an earnest, faithful worker in the church ever since she came here, ten years ago, but our loss will be the gain of the Magnolia Branch, and so we must not complain. We look forward to the great reunion gathering, when these partings will be no more.

Norwegian Saints Hold Two-Day Meeting

For the first time in the history of the activities of the church in Norway, the Saints of this country were invited to assemble at Bøn on June 8 and 9 to be in attendance at a two-day meeting at that time. While the attendance on the part of visiting Saints was not as large as we expected, still the meetings were a success in every way. I am sure this will not be the last of such gatherings here, as all present enjoyed themselves so much that it is certain they will insist on having such occasions again.

We had extended invitations to our two missionaries in Denmark, as well as the one in Sweden, to be present with us. We were very much disappointed in receiving word a few days before the meetings that neither of the brethren in Denmark could be with us. However, we were very much pleased that our congenial brother, C. O. Johnson, of Sweden, was at liberty to meet with us.

Brother Johnson put in his appearance on Saturday, June 7, and was put to work at once. He was called upon that evening to preach, which was the opening service of our meetings. He was greeted by a good attendance and gave some good counsel and advice, urging the people to come up higher.

Sunday morning V. D. Ruch occupied the pulpit, using as a subject: "He played the part of Jesus." He referred to the man who played the part of Jesus in the Passion Play at Oberammergau and then asked the question of the audience: "Are you playing the part of Jesus in your daily life?" Several of the beautiful characteristics in the life of Jesus were pointed out and the people urged to imitate them in their lives.

A prayer and sacramental service was held in the afternoon, at which there was a marked outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The Saints were melted to tears under a quiet, peaceful influence, and each testified of God's goodness to him and expressed his desire of continuing faithful in the work. At this service a young married man was confirmed a member of the church, and a babe was blessed. The young man had been baptized by Brother Hunker a few days before and was confirmed at this meeting by Brethren Muceus, Johnson, and Ruch. He is a fine young man and gives promise of being a great help to the work. He was told in the confirmation that God, in his own due time, would use him in the furtherance of his work. The babe blessed was little Lillie Juanita, the daughter of Brother and Sister Hunker of the missionary force. She was blessed by Brethren Johnson and Ruch.

Sunday evening Brother Hunker preached a good sermon from the subject: "Let us have a reason for the hope we have within us." He enjoyed good liberty, and the sermon was well received.

At Bøn is located the only church building that is owned by our people in Scandinavia. It was built in 1915, and after nearly nine years of effort and sacrifice on the part of the Saints and friends it had finally been paid for and was ready for dedication. It is a neat little structure, located in the central part of this community. It had recently been painted white, which gave it an inviting appearance to the Saints as they gathered there for each service. The interior of the church was beautifully decorated with crepe paper and flags of the three countries (United States, Sweden, and Norway) represented in the gathering.

The dedicatory service, held at half past ten, Monday, proved to be a very impressive service. "Redeemer of Israel" was sung as the opening song (the songs of Zion sound good in Norwegian as well as English), after which Brother Hunker offered the dedicatory prayer. After the singing of "Nearer, my God, to thee" by the congregation, Olaf Andersen, a native brother, gave a historical statement of the rise of the branch and the building of the church. This was followed with the dedicatory sermon by Brother Peter Muceus. Brother Muceus was the first representative of our faith to preach the gospel in this community. I thought it was very fitting that he should be present on this occasion twenty years later and have the honor of preaching the dedicatory sermon in this community where he was instrumental in beginning the work. He has worked hard in this community and has given the best that was in him that the people could receive a better understanding of the gospel. He has preached more sermons in this town than any other town in the world. It is with a keen sense of satisfaction that he can look back over those years and see that his efforts have not all been in vain.

After the sermon Sister Ruch sang a solo, and then came the ceremony of the presenting of the keys. As Bishop's agent of Norway, I acted as the Presiding Bishop's representative and accepted the keys and returned them to the branch president with words of appreciation in behalf of the general church for the sacrifice these people had made in rearing this house of God. Thus was dedicated to the Lord the first church on Continental Europe.

The afternoon was devoted to a social time. We gathered at the church, sang songs, listened to talks by various members, and partook of refreshments provided by the local Saints. We felt that we knew each other better after being associated in that informal gathering.

Brother Muceus preached again that night to a full house. Both of his sermons were full of good thoughts and were well received by the people.

Sister Ruch sang several solos during these meetings, which added much to the attractiveness of the same. On Monday night we were favored by several selections by a men's chorus that Brother Hunker was instrumental in organizing and of which he is a member. It is a credit to our church at Bøn.

Thus ended the first gathering of the Saints of Norway. All visiting Saints, as well as the local ones, went to their homes feeling that the two days had been well spent.

However, the four missionaries did not leave at once, but remained on the job and held meeting each night during the week. The attendance and interest continued good throughout. During the day we of the missionary force met at the church in priesthood capacity and discussed various phases of our work and the best methods to use in getting our teachings before the people of these countries. Much benefit was derived from these discussions.

Brother Johnson is visiting other places in Norway, including Porsgrund and Kragerø, before returning to Sweden, where he has been laboring alone for the past four years.

PORSGRUND, NORWAY, June 21.

V. D. RUCH.

Good Condition at Dennisport

DENNISPORT, MASSACHUSETTS, July 2.—This little branch was organized in 1866, and visited from time to time by some of the church's stalwart men of the past in the days when gospel preaching was more popular, at least in this vicinity, and this branch is still trying to carry on. We lack some essentials necessary to conduct our work along what are considered up-to-date lines, and possibly we would not be in a hurry to use some of the new methods.

The attendance and interest of the Saints and their willingness to help in the work are quite satisfactory. We have recently been benefited by a visit of ten days from Brother O. L. Thompson. He presents plainly and vigorously the restored message, and his visits among the membership were much appreciated. Several entire strangers of the summer population heard him once more.

We are sorry to lose one of our young and efficient workers, as was the case when Sister Margaret Tubman was united in marriage to Brother Milton Millman, of the Plymouth Branch. They will reside in Plymouth.

One of the troubles in the work here is that the young on attaining majority go to the cities. Dennisport has acted as a recruiting station for some of the city branches of the district.

Des Moines News

DES MOINES, IOWA, July 6.—The Saints in Des Moines were very pleasantly surprised when they arrived at the church this morning to find Brother Elbert A. Smith there. A spiritual feast was had. There were several prophecies and six calls to the ministry.

The Religio program was exceptionally good, and the sermon in the evening by Brother Elbert was greatly enjoyed by a large crowd.

Brother and Sister Richard Wilke and baby are in Des Moines visiting relatives and friends. They expect to stay until after reunion.

Brother and Sister John Rudkin, and Brother and Sister Albert Richards and two little sons have all been down to Bevier, Missouri, for a few days' visit with Brother Rudkin's mother and other friends and relatives.

Brother and Sister Dale Finch have been visiting Brother Finch's mother at Fayette, Iowa.

We are all looking forward to next Sunday when we expect to have Brother Ed Beye and Brother Clyde McDonald with us. Brother Beye is to preach in the morning and Brother McDonald at night.

Missionary Finds Island Work Absorbing

PAPEETE, TAHITI, June 30.—We are quite encouraged with the prospects for the work here. At this time of year the climate is really delightful, not nearly so hot as we found it in January and February, the early part of our six months' residence in these islands.

We find the work here far from monotonous. An indication of the variety that the work affords will be shown by a brief outline of our activities during the past month. In our correspondence from the office we sent out letters in three languages. We consulted our attorney several times concerning some real estate in litigation. The mayor of the city and two councilors were interviewed about a certain project we had in mind. Bishop's agent's work was kept up. We presided over the branch here at headquarters, made necessary by a local difficulty. Acted as peacemaker in the case of several troubles between individuals. Visited several sick persons under rather peculiar circumstances. Attended two wedding feasts that were subsequent to one wedding. Were present at a "wake" held over the body of a fourteen-year-old girl, and took charge of the funeral service the next day. Translated two hymns into Tahitian. Wrote a Sunday school lesson, after outlining a course of study. And finally, I am now writing a number of letters to America to go on the steamship Tahiti, which is now in harbor.

A few words concerning the "wake" may be of interest. This was conducted according to the usual custom among our Society Islanders. The father of the dead girl had arrived with his family from the island of Hao, about four hundred miles away, two weeks before. The Saints and friends gathered at the house about eight o'clock and for an hour and a half carried on a meeting something like a prayer and testimony meeting. They sang and prayed and made short speeches relative to the occasion, and at the close the father as chief mourner spoke briefly to the gathering and was replied to on behalf of the gathering by another of the more prominent elders, Taia by name, baptized forty years ago by Apostle T. W. Smith, and now over eighty years of age. The father of the girl is Rogotama, president of the branch at Hao and governor of that island. He has recently bought a farm near Papeete and intends to remain here so that his children can have the advantages of education. Taia, the other elder mentioned, regards himself as being of the same nationality as wife and I, all Britishers together, he having been born in the Cook Islands, a British possession about six hundred miles away.

We expect soon to meet Paia a Metuaaro and Taruiarii a Teriinohorai (better known as Horahitu), having received a letter from Paia yesterday to the effect that they were calling at several branches on their way to Papeete. They are two of our three native missionaries now in the field. The other, Tearaiti a Mataihau, writes from the island of Rairoa that he has baptized three there and ordained a deacon.

A large proportion of the attendance at our Taronia Branch here at mission headquarters is of a transient nature, many of our native members coming to Papeete for business and social reasons and staying for periods of varying length. Also due to the cosmopolitan character of the population, we frequently have rather interesting visitors. One recent visitor had every appearance of being a thoroughbred Chinese but spoke excellent English and claimed to be an American. He was a sailor on a Chinese ship plying between Hong Kong, a British possession in China, and South America—and I almost forgot to state that he was a Methodist.

Another recent visitor to our Religio was a young English-speaking man from a ship in harbor. Having recently come from the arid regions of America, the abundant beverages of this little oasis had proved too tempting to him. Notwithstanding the language of the proceedings, he spoke right up in meeting and wanted to know what church this was. Since he inquired in English it naturally devolved upon me to answer him. I told him the name. He wanted to know if it had any branches in America. He said he belonged to a church in America but had forgotten which one it was and thought perhaps this might be it.

"But," he said, "don't they ever have any services in English?"

I told him they did not.

"Well, then," said he, "how can anybody worship here?"

I told him he must do it silently. This was too much for him and he quickly departed to join his companion who had been left at the door. Young men in his condition are seen staggering by every day, and more especially on Sunday. This is a good place to gather arguments for prohibition.

Good Conference; Apostle Gleazer Tours District

PEORIA, ILLINOIS, July 14.—The Kewanee district conference held at Kewanee, Illinois, June 27 to 29, was quite a success and was well cared for by the Saints of the Kewanee Branch.

There was not the interest shown in the institute work on Friday afternoon that there should have been. Brother H. R. Cady, the superintendent of the Sunday School Department, is trying to arouse the old-time interest in the departments. He spent considerable time preparing for this institute work and was disappointed in the lack of interest shown; but as special provision has been made for this institute work at our next conference in October, it is to be hoped that a deeper interest will be taken in this important part of our work.

Another undesirable feature of the conference was a failure on the part of some to arrive in time for the business sessions on Saturday. This was owing to storms and floods on Friday night which caused many washouts, delayed the trains, and hindered the automobile traffic. Our district secretary was unable to get the minute book to us on account of the storm, and Apostle E. J. Gleazer, who was to have been here at six minutes past ten on Saturday morning to preside over the conference, did not arrive until about seven in the evening. However, he gave us a very inspiring sermon on Sunday morning and another one Sunday night.

Missionary E. A. Curtis preached on Saturday night, and E. R. Davis, district president, on Sunday afternoon. There was a good program provided on Friday evening; also on Sunday evening before the preaching service.

A rather unusual feature of the conference was a church wedding at six o'clock on Friday evening, in which Brother E. A. Curtis was the officiating minister and Sister Katherine Foster and the young man of her choice were the contracting parties. We cannot recall the young man's name just now.

Following the conference I had the pleasure of accompanying Brother Gleazer in a tour of the district, meeting with the Savanna Branch on Monday night, Rock Island on Tuesday night, Moline on Wednesday night, Galesburg on Thursday night, Dahinda on Friday night, Matherville on Saturday night, Joy Branch in an all-day union meeting with Millersburg and Buffalo Prairie Branches on Sunday, July 6. Sunday night we met again with the Rock Island Branch and Monday night with Peoria, from which point Brother Gleazer left the district for Independence and the writer returned to Kewanee.

A very good Spirit was present at the sacramental meeting in the all-day meeting at Joy, at nine o'clock Sunday morning. The gift of prophecy came twice through Brother Gleazer during the meeting. Besides the three branches mentioned above in this union meeting, the Rock Island, Matherville, Kewanee, and Galesburg Branches were well represented, and all seemed to enjoy the day.

The Saints throughout the district enjoyed Brother Gleazer's visit very much and appreciated his exceptionally good sermons. I can say for one that I appreciated very much this privilege of getting acquainted with him, and of being so closely associated with him for the ten days that he was in the district. I feel that his visit did us all a great deal of good and that the work in the district has been greatly benefited.

We are now working and planning and looking forward to the reunion which is to be held at Galva August 15 to 24.

Brother E. A. Curtis is at Galesburg, engaged in special meetings, where I expect to join him next week.

E. R. DAVIS.

District Superintendent Visits Beardstown

BEARDSTOWN, ILLINOIS, July 9.—The Central Illinois district Sunday school superintendent, Brother Albert E. Johnson, of Taylorville, Illinois, visited the Beardstown Branch Sunday, June 15, in the interest of the Sunday school work. He remained a few days and held meetings the first of the following week. His sermons were appreciated by all.

Sunday morning Brother Johnson gave a splendid talk to the Sunday school and emphasized the necessity of each one preparing for the work they are to do. Brother Johnson is visiting the various Sunday schools in the district.

Elder Phillion Appointed Chief of Police

CORNWALL, ONTARIO, July 12.—Elder J. E. Phillion has been appointed chief of police of our city. His having been chosen from a long list of applicants would tend to show that our people, by their honest endeavors to incorporate the principles of the gospel into their lives, have attracted the attention of at least one responsible body of citizens, viz, the council board.

The Saints of this place are well pleased with Brother Phillion's appointment, and ask the prayers of all that this our brother, as well as all of us, may continue to glorify God and his law.

Brother Phillion has been a resident of Cornwall for the past six years as a telegraph operator at the Ottawa & New York Station. Previous to this time he was on the force of the Ottawa police and also the Dominion police.

The Cornwall Standard says of him: "His service on the Ottawa & New York was also recognized in an excellent testimonial from Mr. F. J. Larocque, train master of that road. Chief Phillion has a wife and five children. He is educated in English and French and can translate from one language to the other, which should prove an asset in this community."

Holden Stake News

Holden

A good spirit was present in our sacramental service on the first Sabbath of the month. Brethren H. E. Moler, F. A. McWethy, H. B. Thompson, and D. J. Krahl were in charge of the service. Herbert Melvin, infant son of Brother and Sister Ralph Sabin, was blessed at this service, Brothers Moler and Krahl officiating. In the evening Brother Fred Cleveland, of Kansas City, delivered an illustrated sermon on church history, which was well received.

At our business meeting Wednesday, July 3, Sister Anna M. Fender offered her resignation as secretary of the local church. Sister Fender has rendered this service for a number of years in a very efficient and satisfactory manner. Sister Lucille Kittinger was chosen to fill the vacancy.

The resignation of Brother Charles Ferguson as secretary of the Sunday school was accepted, and Brother Walter Ament was chosen with Herbert Six as assistant. With the departure of the Ferguson family Holden loses a family of real helpers—Brother F. M. Ferguson was one of our priests and a teacher in Religio; Charles has acted as secretary of the Sunday school for the past two years; and Herbert is an active member of the orchestra. Sedalia is to be congratulated on the addition of this splendid family of workers.

The Priscilla Club of the Department of Women gave a social on the church lawn Thursday evening. The orchestra furnished enjoyable music during the festivities. The Department of Women is a tangible asset to the work in Holden. They came to the aid of the church last Thursday with a total gift of seventy dollars from all departments to apply on local church needs.

Sister Lorena Ruth Young, daughter of Brother and Sister D. P. Young, and Mr. Paul Richard Phipps were married at the Linwood Boulevard Presbyterian Church at Kansas City by Doctor Harry Rogers, June 14. The bride is one of our estimable and talented young ladies, coming from a family of old-time Latter Day Saints. She has occupied very acceptably as a teacher in the schools of Holden and vicinity. Mr. Phipps lives south of Holden and is known as a fine, upstanding man, with those sterling qualities that make for the best citizenship.

Our stake missionary, Brother Alvin Knisley, who has been endeavoring to occupy according to his calling to open up new fields, has been laboring in Kansas at the Lone Elm Schoolhouse. He baptized three more on July 7.

Grandview

June 15 Brother and Sister C. V. Hopkins and Brother and Sister W. T. Chipley motored to Holden where Brother Hopkins was ordained to the high council of the stake. Brethren C. V. Hopkins and Charles Martin attended the Holden Stake conference on Saturday, June 21, at Knobnoster. They returned June 22 to officiate at a baptism service, little Lottie Cooper being the candidate.

Sunday evening, June 22, the annual Children's Day exercises were held. "The language of the flowers" was the program selected. The church building was well filled, and many favorable comments were heard from nonmembers.

July 6 was our regular sacramental service, a quiet, peaceful Spirit prevailing during the meeting.

Mary Louise, little daughter of Brother and Sister Frank Weeks, was severely scalded on June 23. The doctor was much concerned about her condition, but she received so much relief through administration that in two weeks she was able to be present at Sunday school, and the doctor acknowledged that the Lord did more for her than he did.

We are also pleased to report Sister Albert Cline as being able to attend church services again, after a long absence due to blood poisoning in her hand.

Atherton

Last Sunday Brother D. R. Carmichael used the morning hour at the preaching services and gave an outline of the Young People's Convention held at Lamoni. He told of the numerous classes during the convention and the help derived therefrom. Also the spiritual uplift to all those who attended.

In the evening we had the happy privilege of having with us Brother Frank Veenstra, who recently returned from his mission to Holland. He related many of his experiences in the gospel, which always kindle the fire of a Latter Day Saint. His daughter, Sister Bertha Bird, sang very beautifully "The bird with a broken pinion."

Sister J. C. Schwab was selected to have charge of the Department of Women to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Sister Boswell, who has moved away.

All departments are active, and the Saints are being blessed with the Spirit. The officers report forty-eight visits for the six months ending July 1. This is a splendid record and has much to do in producing the excellent spirit which abounds.

Marshall

Elder D. J. Krahl, of the Holden Stake presidency, was with the Marshall Saints July 13, giving good counsel both morning and evening. Jesus said twice to Peter, "Feed my sheep," and then, "Feed my lambs." Brother Krahl asked the question, "If we gain one and lose three, what have we gained?" It is good to convert, but at the same time heed Jesus' counsel to Peter.

Elder C. L. House and wife came over from his appointment at Fairplay Schoolhouse to attend the evening service, presiding over the same, and at Brother Krahl's invitation giving a few timely remarks.

Elder Levi Phelps filled an appointment at Blue Lick Church Sunday at three o'clock; several carloads of Saints accompanied him. He gave a good foundational sermon, and many expressed their interest. He left an appointment for every two weeks. There were eighty-eight in attendance.

Brentwood Branch at Its Work

BRENTWOOD, MISSOURI, July 7.—Brentwood is working harder each week to make it a better one than the preceding one. Nice outlook.

Our Fourth of July picnic was all of a success that one could expect, and more, too. The day was one of those beautiful Fourth of July days that happen once in a life time, clear and cool. The picnic, being held in Brother Scott's grove, was convenient for those who had to walk and provided ample parking space for those with cars. About one hundred and fifty persons were on the grounds from early morning until dusk, enjoying the spirit of good fellowship that makes for patriotism.

One of the features of the day was the musical end of the program, furnished by Brothers J. W. Paxton and Charles Choat; Brother Paxton with his "fiddle" and Brother Choat with the guitar. They held the listeners spellbound as they cantered through the old love ballads and melodies that make one soar above the noisy turmoil of earth, only to bring out their round knowledge of their instruments by playing a number of the songs from the Zion's Praises and Saints' Hymnal.

There were baseball games for the ladies and men; races for all ages; a refreshment stand with good homemade dinners, cakes, pies, and other good things was under the management of the Department of Women; while the Sunday School Department had the ice cream, soda, and notions counter.

We are informed that the picnic cleared near to fifty dollars, to say nothing of the memories of that day when the "elopers' race" brought shouts as the elopers got their grips mixed and lost considerable time changing.

Brother J. M. Scott has purchased the grove in which the picnic was held and has subdivided the same into fifty-foot lots for sale at ten dollars a foot, and quite a number are interested therein. From the looks of things we will have a little Latter Day Saint community started.

The Sabbath Day, July 6, dawned bright and warm, and as we gathered at the communion service we could feel the presence of the blessed Spirit. The meeting was presided over by the active Melchisedec priesthood of the branch, and Missionary J. W. Paxton. After repeating a quotation of President Frederick M. Smith from the recent HERALD, admonishing the church to be a prayerful church, looking to God for guidance, the meeting was well spent, with an abundance of the good Spirit present.

In the evening Brother Paxton gave another of his wonderful lectures from his "Lord's vineyard" chart, to a crowded house. Those who had been in attendance at the meetings of the day, on parting declared that it had been as nearly a perfect day as they had been privileged to live for some time.

The tent meetings will continue at the church grounds during this week, when it is planned to move to another part of the Brentwood Branch territory for another protracted meeting. You will hear more from this, we hope.

Among our recent visitors was one of the district presidency, Brother Clarence Dickens, who occupied the pulpit during the morning hour of June 29. District President H. A. Higgins came out for the afternoon session and gave us one of his usual inspirational talks and a summary from the Young People's Convention, which he had recently left.

Brentwood is working hard. Look for more items soon.

Gains and Loss at Eldorado Springs

ELDORADO SPRINGS, MISSOURI, July 14.—Sister Lois Adams and her sister, Iris, of Caplinger Mills, met with the Coal Hill Branch Sunday night, July 6. They were on their way to Diagonal, Iowa, to visit one of their brothers.

Brother John Andes, son Hollis, and daughters, Gladys and Leola, returned from Independence, Missouri, July 13. While there Brother Andes had a rose cancer removed from his lower lip. His lip is healed over nicely and shows the effects of the removal of the cancer but very little.

Sister Eleanor Noyce, mother of Sister Carrie Blystone, departed this life Thursday, July 10, at the home of her daughter, Ethel Ford, of Parsons, Kansas, after a severe illness of one week. She was a sweet, noble Saint, beloved by all who came in personal contact with her. Many hearts in this branch were saddened at her passing.

Brother Sam Andes, wife, and three children of Andes, Montana, came in yesterday. Their old friends were very pleasantly surprised when they met with us last night. This was their home branch for a number of years. Brother Andes gave us a short talk which was much appreciated. They seemed very happy to get back home.

Sister Grace Clutter and children, of Independence, are here visiting relatives and friends.

We received word from our district missionary that a number were to be baptized at Johnson City yesterday, where he has been holding tent meetings for some time. We always rejoice when others accept the gospel.

Brother Jesse Blystone and children started to drive to Nevada yesterday, but had to turn back when they came to Cedar Creek, on account of high water caused by a cloudburst Friday. We had another heavy rain and electrical storm last night.

We had a large attendance at church last night. All the Saints here are looking forward to the reunion and hoping they will be permitted to attend.

Kansas City Stake News

Central Church

The pastor, Joseph A. Tanner, hied himself to Northeastern Missouri for a much-needed rest, visiting friends in, and in the vicinity of, Cameron and Bevier. It proved to be a very restive (?) trip, as he was absent over two Sundays, preached four times, and attended several other meetings. Well, he could hardly expect to be idle in that neighborhood, as he is so well and favorably known there, it being the place where he grew from boyhood to manhood. He is again at his desk and pulpit and ready for another vigorous year's work.

Bennington Church

The members here are overjoyed in getting into the new church which is nearly ready for services. It is a much-needed improvement and will also present a much better appearance than the former structure which now forms the rear part of the new building.

Malvern Church

This congregation is also smiling about new improvements. They have turned their building to face Hudson Street, the main thoroughfare, and built a basement full size which doubles their room and also gives a more pleasing aspect to the property. They were of necessity compelled to omit services on Sunday, July 10, as repairs were not completed. They visited other churches for the day.

Fourth Church

On June 24 a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the church when May Grace, daughter of Brother and Sister G. W. Marmoy, was united in marriage to Brother Edward Larson, of Omaha, Nebraska, Elder J. M. Baker officiating.

The series of meetings, conducted by W. I. Fligg, missionary, closed on June 29. Two were baptized, and we feel that seed also has been sown that will come forth for future harvest.

Sacramental service Sunday, the 6th, was well attended, the Lord richly blessing the Saints with his Spirit in prophecy and admonition. In the evening an inspiring and uplifting sermon was presented by Bishop F. B. Blair, counseling to more exemplary lives. W. S. Brown was the speaker Sunday, July 10, at a quarter of eight on the subject "Worship."

Chelsea Church

Brother W. I. Fligg was speaker both morning and evening of July 10 and in his characteristic way was able to give cheer to the people there.

Argentine Church

Elder E. T. Atwell, of Zion, was the speaker in the evening to a small but appreciative audience.

Conference Canceled

Expression from the fourteen churches in the stake favoring canceling the August conference on account of no business is announced by the stake presidency. There will be no August conference.

Lamoni Stake Items

LAMONI, IOWA, July 19.—Sunday services here have suffered the usual slump in attendance during the summer season. The lure of the great out of doors is strong at this time of year.

Evan Fry is doing a splendid work at keeping the few remaining members of the choir together. The close of college reduced the numbers very materially, and a number of the leading voices are away at summer school, so the ranks are greatly thinned. However, the remaining few are loyal and are giving us some very creditable music.

The speakers at the services last Sunday were G. R. Wells at eleven o'clock and H. H. Gold at eight o'clock.

On the Sunday previous, the evening sermon was by W. E. Prall, the morning being devoted to the regular monthly sacramental meeting.

The stake reunion which convenes in two weeks is looked forward to as the next event of importance, and the air is full of plans for it. The drawing of camp sites was held at the stake bishop's office Friday afternoon. The regular reunion bee is called for Monday, when the grounds will be cleared and cleaned and everything put in order. These bees are usually well attended, and quick work is made of it. Dinner is prepared and served on the grounds by the Department of Women.

An all-day meeting was held at the Bloomington Branch last Sunday and despite rainy weather was well attended. The speakers were L. G. Holloway in the morning, J. A. Gunsolley who gave a chart talk to the juniors in the afternoon, and W. E. Prall at night. The basket dinner, which was to have been served in the grove, was taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Rhodes, friendly neighbors, who kindly offered the use of their house.

President F. M. McDowell and wife and Miss Myra Nelson and K. C. Harder returned this week from their auto trip to the Chetek reunion, via Devil's Lake, Wisconsin, where they spent a week camping.

Sister Guy Chatburn, of Magnolia, Iowa, who recently lost her husband in an automobile accident, was in Lamoni this week and purchased a fine residence property. She will move here about September 1.

Word comes from Elder Peter Muceus, who has been representing the church in Norway for the past three years, that he will sail for home on the Leviathan August 5. His homecoming will indeed be welcome. When a missionary is away from his family three years at a time, one is reminded of the sacrifice of the early missionaries, and we are glad that the railroad and other modern modes of travel make it easier for the elders to reach their families and that few missions require such long separations.

Steady Progress at Lucasville

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, July 15.—Since the missionary series of meetings held here in April by Brother J. D. Shower, our branch, through the able management of our newly installed officers, has made some improvements. Brother Luther Crabtree, who was ordained to the office of teacher, has been very busily engaged in the work assigned him, as well as Brother James Altman, who is the deacon.

Brother Mays, of Dayton, Ohio, is to begin a series of meetings at the branch in the near future, and much good is anticipated.

The Sunday school is progressing very nicely under the able management of M. L. Crabtree, superintendent.

From Beirut to Rome

ROME, ITALY, June 26.—Brother Hanson's letter from Beirut, Syria, described our trip through Palestine and Syria.

After a little over two months in the land of the Bible, he, Brother Passman and wife, and I left Beirut, Syria, on the Steamship Carnaro, of the Italian line, May 31, going along the eastern and northern coasts of the Mediterranean Sea and stopping at Tripoli, Alexandretta, Mersino, Adalia, Rhodes, Smyrna, Chanak, and Constantinople. The stop at Mersino was long enough to permit a side trip by auto to the city of Tarsus, the birthplace of the Apostle Paul. Here we found a thriving city of about forty thousand people, whose appearance is very ancient. The streets are very narrow, but crowded with shops and stores on either side. Brethren Hanson and Passman got busy taking pictures of the streets and peoples, while crowds gathered round them to see what was going on. Everything seemed to be working nicely, when presently an officer appeared and notified us that we were wanted at police headquarters; so we went over to get acquainted with the chief. Tarsus is a Turkish territory.

While looking around for some one who could speak English and Turkish, we were fortunate in meeting an American, Doctor W. L. Nute, who is working in connection with Saint Paul's College, of Tarsus, which is a Congregational mission school. He accompanied us to police headquarters and acted as our interpreter. His kindness will never be forgotten.

We found the Turkish chief to be somewhat crusty. He informed us that we should have come first to his office on reaching the city, and that it was contrary to their law for us to take pictures. We had secured a permit to land at Mersino and had also secured a permit from the chief of police there, so thought we were on the safe side. We produced our papers and waited while Doctor Nute pleaded our cause before the chief who seemed to have an abundant supply of bad temper. Finally, after conferring with another officer, the chief permitted us to go but asked us not to take any more pictures. It was a good thing for us that we did not get a jail sentence, for we only had time to visit Saint Paul's College where we were kindly entertained for a little while by Doctor Nilson and his staff of workers, then made a hurried return to the boat, which we reached before it left port.

The Turkish Government, which is now a republic, has given orders to close all Christian schools in order to stop the teaching of Christianity. Some people prefer darkness to light. Christian workers are none too safe there, and some are expecting deportations.

Our next point of special interest was Smyrna, mentioned in Revelation 1:11 as the place where one of the seven churches of Asia was located. Much of this splendid and beautiful city was destroyed in the recent past when the Turks recaptured it from the Greeks. The Turks claim that when the Greeks saw they were to be captured they set fire to the city. On the other hand, the Greeks claim that the Turks were responsible for its destruction. Much of the business and residential parts of the city were destroyed. Smyrna has a fine harbor and no doubt will gradually be rebuilt.

Our trip along the eastern and northern coasts of the deep blue Mediterranean was much enjoyed, as the sea was very smooth. The shore line is almost one continuous line of mountains. Our interest increased as we approached the famous Dardanelles of the recent war, where so many soldiers of the Allies lost their lives in the attempt to reach Constantinople.

A British colonel, who had taken part in the whole proceedings, was on board our ship and gave us a thorough explanation of the conditions then existing. The Dardanelles in most places is much wider than the Mississippi River and is well fortified on both sides. We saw the remains of three war vessels as we passed on our way.

Early in the morning of June 9 we reached the famous and beautiful city of Constantinople, situated on both sides of the Bosphorus. The spacious palace, surrounded by many beautiful trees, where once lived the Caliph of the Mohammedan religion with his harem, was in full view. Recently the new republic of Turkey compelled him to leave the country. Much of the house furnishings have been removed and sold. While in the city we saw the grounds around the palace but were not permitted to enter. Since the Caliph has been driven out, he has been given a pension of three hundred British pounds per month. He is now in Switzerland.

The European section of Constantinople is an up-to-date part of the city. Mohammedan mosques are to be seen on every hand, some much larger than others. Here is located the much-noted Saint Sophia Mosque, which formerly was a Christian Church built by Constantine the Great.

We took an excursion trip up the Bosphorus as far as the Black Sea. Many elegant and spacious buildings are to be seen on either side. It is no wonder that Constantinople has been coveted by so many different countries. It is under the control of the Turks, but the Dardanelles has been internationalized.

June 14 we left Constantinople on the Steamship Praga for Brindisi, Italy, by way of Athens, where our ship stopped only six hours, so we had to hurry to see all we could. On landing we learned that a holiday was being celebrated and that some of the principal places of interest were closed. We soon wended our way to Mars Hill where the Apostle Paul (in Acts, chapter 17) preached his wonderful sermon on "The unknown God." We also stood on Mars Hill and saw the great Grecian Temples near by, including the Parthenon, built by Pericles 437 B. C. Brethren Hanson and Passman secured pictures of Mars Hill with some apostles and Saints of latter days standing on the top.

The famous Parthenon was closed, so we could view it only from the outside.

The Panathenaic Stadion is one of the greatest things to be seen in Athens. Its name is derived from the length, being an ancient race course six hundred feet long. It was erected by the orator Lysurgus about the year 350 B. C., for the celebration of the Panathenaic games. The stadion is 670 feet long, 109 feet wide, having sixty rows of seats and accommodation for sixty thousand spectators. It was excavated in the year 1870 and in 1894 was fully restored. Its seats are all of white marble, and it is not only very beautiful to behold, but it is a most wonderful place for gatherings. It must be seen to be appreciated.

We saw the prison of Socrates, also the Temple of Thesus, the most ancient and the best preserved edifice of ancient Athens, erected about 469 B. C., with thirteen columns at each side and six at each end, the corner columns being counted twice. They are 59 feet in height, including the capital; and the entire temple, which is 100 feet long and 45 feet wide, consists of white Pentelic marble.

We arrived at Brindisi, Italy, June 19 and took train for Naples where we saw, near by, the ancient ruins of Pompeii, located at the foot of the volcano Vesuvius. Once it was buried under fourteen feet of lava, but it has been excavated. The city is estimated to have had a population of about forty thousand inhabitants at the time of its destruction. In the excavation many petrified bodies were discovered and are on exhibition in different museums. The ruins show that Pompeii was a wonderful city, with paved streets which still remain and many modern conveniences; with sidewalks, water fountains, temples, and splendid residences.

We next turn our faces towards the great volcano, and by street car, carriage, horseback, and finally by foot our party climbed to the top of the noted Vesuvius and looked over into the crater. Large quantities of smoke and lava were pouring out at the top. The wind was just right for us, blowing the smoke away.

It is only about five hours by train from Naples to Rome where we are at present. Southern Italy is a lovely country and is well cultivated. The people are very industrious and are of a good class. Rome is a splendid city, with a population of about 840,000 inhabitants. Its history dates back of the Christian era. Here the Pope, the head of the great Catholic Church, resides in the midst of worldly wealth, and many churches which for size and ornamentation beggar description. Is this the church represented by the woman of Revelation, chapter 17?

J. F. CURTIS.

Independence

Brother James Madison Kelley died at the Independence Sanitarium July 17. Brother James was a brother to Bishop E. L. Kelley, well known to the Saints. He spent the most of his life in western Iowa, having lived in Glenwood and later in Macedonia, where he had banking interests. He had also lived in Omaha, Nebraska, where his son, James M., jr., still resides. His son, Forest L., lives in Wichita Kansas. Brother Kelley graduated from the Iowa State University in 1876. The funeral was at the Ott Undertaking Parlors, sermon by Elder Joseph Luff, who delivered an excellent discourse. Brother Kelley's two sons and their wives were here with him during his last illness and accompanied the remains to Glenwood to be placed beside those of his wife, who died in March, 1923.

President F. M. Smith left Sunday morning to attend the Northern California reunion. President Elbert A. Smith preached in Joplin, Missouri, Sunday morning and at Webb City in the evening. President Floyd M. McDowell is in Lamoni preparing to go to the Onset reunion.

Brother John F. Garver is in Independence with his daughter, Bertha, who is to undergo a tonsil operation. He preached on the Campus Sunday evening, using as a text, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father."

The primary department of the Stone Church Sunday School held a conference at eleven o'clock Sunday morning with twenty-one out of the twenty-five of its teachers in attendance. The meeting was in charge of assistant superintendent, Fay Trask Cato. The time was devoted to a conference on lesson material for the next month, general instructions, and things of interest to the department.

At the Sunday school business meeting of the Stone Church Monday evening, July 14, Charles Chapman and wife were chosen as superintendent and assistant superintendent of the intermediate department to succeed Brother and Sister B. C. Harder who have resigned, due to the fact that Brother Harder is to take up work in the Holden Stake as counselor to the bishop.

Sister Tessie Smith was chosen at this meeting as superintendent of the beginner department to succeed Sister Eunice Winn Smith who has recently moved to California. Sister Tessie has been assistant for a number of years in this department, specializing with the three-year-old children, and is author of the lessons used with them.

Morning preaching services in Independence were occupied as follows: Second Branch: John F. Garver; Englewood, Lyman W. Fike; Liberty Street, Joseph Luff; Enoch Hill, F. J.

Lewis; Walnut Park, Glaude Smith; East Independence, William Bath, both morning and evening; and Stone Church, F. A. Cool.

The evening sermon at Walnut Park was by J. A. Dowker on "The attitude we should have toward present church problems." A ladies' quartet from South Side furnished the music.

Because of so many Saints settling in Group 29, it seems that it will be necessary to divide it. Two meetings are already being held in this group under the name of South 29 and North 29.

Another baptism is reported on South Side Wednesday evening. This is a Sister Brown, mother of the Miss Belle Brown who was baptized just recently. Brother C. V. Greene performed the ordinance.

Brother Richard Salyards was the speaker at Enoch Hill at seven o'clock, giving an interesting talk on the peculiar problems confronting the church, which was well received.

Brother and Sister William Madison of Washington, District of Columbia, were in Independence last week.

Brother R. V. Hopkins, pastor in Zion, received from the Lamoni Stake presidency a cordial invitation which he is asked to pass on to the various congregations for all who can to attend the Lamoni reunion, which convenes from July 30 to August 10. Quoting from the invitation, "There are plenty of excellent camp sites on our beautiful forty-acre reunion grounds, and we are sure those desiring a pleasant and profitable vacation would enjoy being with us. Meals are furnished on a cost basis, cafeteria style. Those desiring tents should order them at once. (Tent prices have been published previously in the HERALD.) We usually have between two and three hundred visitors coming from all parts of the country. We shall be glad to welcome any of your congregation who can spend a part or all of the reunion season with us.—C. E. Wight."

The attendance at Sunday school at Spring Branch is on the increase, which is indicated by the crowded condition for class room.

The Sunday school and Religians have planned an outing at the Campus on Saturday evening of August 2.

On last Sunday morning Elder J. M. Terry was the speaker and held the attention of a good-sized audience. We are always glad to welcome Brother Terry in our midst.

On July 13 Spring Branch had the opportunity of hearing Elder J. Charles May again. He recently returned from the Isle of Pines Mission. An interesting sermon was listened to by many. On Friday evening, July 25, Brother May is expected to make a talk to the Spring Branch Religio. A good program is anticipated.

The Sunday evening meetings of Spring Branch have been dispensed with in favor of the union meetings on the Campus.

Successful Picnic of Sunday School at Columbus

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9.—The Second Columbus Sunday School had their annual picnic on July 4. It was held about ten miles out of the city, along the banks of one of our big creeks, and the swimming and fishing were good. It was an ideal day, and the people had all they could eat. In the afternoon, horseshoe pitching, swimming, and ball games were enjoyed. Races and contests of every description were held, prizes being given to the winners. Everyone was treated to peanuts and lemonade, and all had a good time.

Those who did not have cars went to and from the picnic grounds in a large truck and enjoyed singing many of the old songs. This is an affair that is always looked forward to and regretted when past.

REUNION NEWS

Spokane District's Eighth Reunion

SAGLE, IDAHO.—Our eighth annual reunion of Spokane District, held at Sawyer, Idaho, from June 20 to 29 inclusive, was, we believe, the most successful one ever held in our district. The committee began planning for it last year as soon as they were elected, and have spent considerable time during the year looking after the arrangements necessary to make this reunion of just as much benefit as possible to every person attending.

We had expected to have present with us one member of the Twelve and a field worker, but received word after arriving on the grounds that this would not be possible. We had appointed for our special speakers Brother George Thorborn, of Montana, and Brother A. C. Martin, of Oregon. Brother Thorborn is a very spiritual man, and we feel that we all profited much by his good advice and instruction, and especially his work in the prayer services. The work done by Brother Martin among the young people as well as the older ones cannot be overestimated. He is a very able speaker and presented some ideas in regard to bettering ourselves in the little details of our daily lives that were of great benefit.

We also had with us as speakers Brother Eli Bronson, who is our district missionary, Brother Carl Crum, of Spokane, and Brother Oscar Case, our district president, so we did not lack for splendid sermons well delivered and seasoned with the Holy Spirit, which is bread to the hungry soul.

Our prayer services were wonderful, spiritual feasts, and our Father saw fit to recognize our efforts towards unity and brotherly love to speak to us a number of times in commendation, encouragement, and instruction, as well as in admonition. The prayer services of the young people were held each morning at six o'clock, and they grew daily, not only in number but in spirituality, until the last Sunday morning, when the Spirit of the Lord was poured out upon the young people to a great extent, and a prophecy was delivered to them causing great rejoicing. We believe the young have returned to their homes with a firm determination to move onward and with their hearts full of love and hope.

Our reunion was planned as an educational, recreational, and vocational period, and as a spiritual uplift. It really was composed of all these factors, but I believe the spiritual element was predominant.

Two afternoons were devoted to work of the Department of Women, and some splendid demonstrations were presented.

One program was rendered, composed of several musical numbers and the presentation of the play "Job," written by Brother Powers, of Seattle.

We had visitors from several districts, some coming from as far away as Oakland, California, Port Angeles, and Centralia, Washington, and several from Montana. We had one rather well-known visitor, Sister Jessie Ward, author of the Call at Evening, who, together with her mother, father, sister, and niece motored over from Centralia, Washington, in the Seattle District.

We did not have as large attendance this year the entire time as we did last year, but on both Sundays as nearly as we could count there were between four hundred fifty and five hundred for dinner at the dining tent.

New Plan for Meals and Help Successful

The dining service, in fact the whole reunion, was run on a Zionie plan of paying what you can and using what you need. Everybody ate at one big dining tent. There was one hired cook who planned the meals and managed the kitchen, and the rest of the help was volunteer. The first Saturday a meeting was called, and the women were organized to help certain hours in the kitchen and dining tent, and it worked very satisfactorily. There was a schedule made out each day for cooks, waitresses, and dishwashers, and by all helping it was not burdensome to any. The men were also very willing to help out and several times took possession of the dishwashing table and showed the women how.

There was no charge made for meals, and yet I believe I am safe in saying that there was not a meal served during the time that could have been bought at a restaurant for less than thirty-five cents, and the dinner for each day would have run to about seventy-five cents or over. The meals were remarkably fine; there were no remarks except to praise so far as we were able to learn, and I tried to talk to as many people as possible and get an expression from them. It is a wonderful plan and was certainly successful. Those who could afford to help financially gave whatever they cared to, and those who could not give received just as much as those who gave most. This year our expenses were something over $1,600, including the purchase of a large meeting tent which cost over $500, and some other equipment, and when Brother Charles Crabb, secretary and treasurer, made his report on Saturday afternoon, the reunion had gone "over the top." There were some pledges back on the tent amounting to about $140, but outside of that all expenses were fully met.

This is the second year we have tried this plan, and it is by far the most satisfactory we have tried in our district. In two years we have purchased this large tent, ranges, kitchen equipment, dishes, tables, and dining room equipment, also seats and platform for large meeting tent, and songbooks.

Last year our meals averaged a cost of seven cents. Brother Crabb thought they would be about the same this year. This low cost of serving good meals is made possible by the cooperation of everybody in the district. Those who have fruit and vegetables can them for reunion. The committee purchased fruit and vegetables where and when they could be bought to the best advantage, and they were canned and shipped to reunion. Two or three locals of the Department of Women canned everything they could procure and sent it along, and altogether this year we had about one thousand six hundred quarts of vegetables, pickles, and fruit, all home canned and of the finest quality.

I could keep telling you things for pages, but I am afraid I have already exceeded my space. However, we would just like to say that this is a plan worth trying, and you would have to experience it to know what a feeling of love and unity may be present when we live on a plan of equality.

Our new committee for next year is already getting things in shape to start the work and making plans for some improvements and betterments for our ninth annual reunion.

We trust that the HERALD will help us boost for equality at all our church reunions.

Sincerely your sister,

CLARA McDOLE.

Tyron Preparing for Reunion

TRYON, NEBRASKA, July 16.—Elder C. W. Prettyman is visiting the Saints here at the Pleasantview Branch at present.

The home department is not as diligent about reporting as in the past, but we hope they will fall in line.

The Saints are busy getting ready for the reunion at North Platte, July 25 to August 3. There are no meetings; even Sunday school was not taken up. The Saints are glad there will be a reunion.

MISCELLANEOUS

Six More Nurses Wanted

The Independence Sanitarium School for Nurses is now forming the class to enter September 1. The Sanitarium is an accredited school and has a four months' affiliated course in children's diseases at Mercy Hospital, Kansas City, Missouri. For further information address Gertrude E. Copeland, R. N., superintendent, Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri. Gertrude Copeland.

Change of Appointment

Notice is hereby given of the transfer of Elder James E. Bishop from the Youngstown-Sharon District to the Southern Ohio District, with a view to his acting as president of the Southern Ohio District. The appointment is made subject to the ratification of the next district conference.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

The Book of Mormon the Stick of Ephraim

An inadvertent error occurs in the Senior Quarterly for April 20, 1924, page 19. It reads, "The Book of Mormon is the stick of Judah." It should read, "The Book of Mormon is the stick of Ephraim." The correct statement is on page 17 of the lesson. The error is one of those sometimes made inadvertently in writing. Our attention has been called to this error twice, and we hereby make the correction.

EDITOR OF SENIOR QUARTERLY.

One- and Two-Day Meetings

Kewanee, at Buffalo Prairie Church, August 3. Sacramental service at 9.30; preaching at 11; basket lunch at noon; priesthood meeting at 1.30; round table talks at 2.30; preaching at 7.30. E. R. Davis, president.

Eastern Michigan. East Freemont Branch, July 27; Juniata, August 3; reunion at Port Huron, August 8 to 17; Caseville, August 30 and 31; Marlette Branch, at Clifford, September 7. Please bring well-filled baskets. William M. Grice, president, Crosswell, Michigan.

Name of Correspondent Wanted

We have a notice of a one-day meeting sent in from Galesburg, Illinois, signed "Correspondent." It has been our policy that all notices appearing in Miscellany column must bear the name of the one responsible for it. This has proved a wise plan in the past, so we are taking this means of inquiring for the name of the correspondent, and asking all others to be sure that all notices bear the signature of the responsible party.

Conference Notices

Utah, at Salt Lake City, August 8 to 10. Conference convenes at 2 p. m., Saturday. There will be specially arranged services Friday evening. Apostle D. T. Williams and Bishop James F. Keir will be with us. Branch clerks are asked to send their reports to the secretary, Anna Coleman, 390 East Second, South Provo, Utah. Guy P. Levitt, president.

Reunion Notices

Eastern Iowa reunion, which was to have been held at Muscatine, has been canceled because of financial conditions. L. L. Allen.

Kewanee, at Galva, Illinois, August 15 to 24. We wish to make this reunion at Spring Lake Park a success from a social, intellectual, and spiritual standpoint, and will try to divide the time so that all these needs may be supplied. There will be plenty of preaching and prayer meetings to supply the spiritual; departmental and forum meetings to supply the educational needs; and recreational, playtime, and program work to supply the social and physical needs. We want all who can to come and meet with us. Do not come solely for the purpose of having a vacation, but come that you might derive social, intellectual, and spiritual benefits along with your vacation. Those attending the reunion will be expected to bring straw ticks and bedding. Meals will be served on the grounds at a reasonable figure, and tents and cots can be had at cost. Those wanting tents and cots will please notify the Bishop's agent, Edw. Jones, 926 North Vine Street, Kewanee, Illinois, at once, so that he can send in his order without delay. E. R. Davis, president.

Massachusetts, at Onset, July 26 to August 10. The reunion camp grounds are located about five minutes' walk from the post office in a natural grove of trees and near the salt water, making an ideal retreat for rest from the din of the city. These grounds were purchased about thirteen years ago. Seventy cottages have been erected, and also a large tabernacle which seats more than seven hundred people. Meals can be bought at a nominal price at the commissary building on the ground, and there is also a refreshment stand. For information regarding meals, tents, or rooms, address E. L. Traver, 154 Cedar Street, Somerville, Massachusetts. Among the speakers will be President F. M. McDowell, H. A. Koehler, who will direct the music; and a young man from New York will take charge of the Boy Scout movement. A special feature will be the young people's convention the first week and a junior church demonstration. All reunion visitors are welcome. O. L. Thompson.

Southern Illinois, at Brush Creek, August 8 to 18. We have made selection of the following speakers and departmental workers: Elder H. A. Higgins and Jessie Paxton, of Saint Louis, Missouri; Elder Henry Sparling, missionary; Elder Hilliard Hensons, district president; Elder Charles Wesner, Bishop's agent; with other good local help. The departmental work will be cared for by Sister H. Sparling, district worker, and Sister H. A. Higgins, of Saint Louis. So with this array of speakers we should expect something real instructive. Tents: 7 by 9, $4.25; 10 by 12, $5.25; 12 by 14, $6.25. This is much cheaper than we obtained them last year, but we must have the orders right away and cash must accompany the order as we, the committee, have to pay in advance. The taxi fare from Xenia will be reasonable in price by taking the reunion taxi. So please notify the undersigned. L. D. Burroughs, secretary, Route 6, Xenia, Illinois.

Church Farm on Omaha Indian Reservation

Several missionaries of the church have worked among the Indians on the Omaha Indian Reservation in Nebraska, and it is reported there are now more than four hundred members located there.

Recently the authorities of the church purchased a splendid forty acres of land located between Macy and Decatur, Nebraska, in the heart of this Indian membership, appointed Elder Benjamin F. Creel and Sister Creel, formerly of Hardin, Missouri, to work with and among the Indians, to develop this farm as a model demonstration project, for the purpose of giving to the Indians agricultural training in its various branches, including fruit, potato, and grain and hay farming; and in connection therewith caring pastorally for the membership and preaching the gospel to all who will hear.

The farm was at purchase unimproved land, and the task which was given to the Creels was recognized as difficult. It will be of interest to know how they are progressing, and the HERALD intends to watch the developments and report regularly.

Brother Creel stepped into the editor's office Monday and told us that property to the amount of about $1,800 in value had been donated by Saints and friends to be used in the project, among the items being donations of nursery stock and seeds from Yeager Brothers, Fremont, Nebraska; Plumfield Nurseries, Arlington, Nebraska; Sioux City Seed Company, Shenandoah, Iowa; cash in liberal amounts from James E. Moss and Simon Bordy, of Macy, Nebraska; C. Lose, Walthill, Nebraska; and many Saints of Omaha and South Omaha Branches, Council Bluffs, Crescent, and Glenwood, Iowa, and of the Little Sioux District; and the very recent donation of a modern hot air furnace by the Independence Stove and Furnace Company, of Independence, Missouri, valued at one hundred and fifty dollars.

Brother Creel displays some interesting kodak pictures of parts of the farm, including a corner of the five and one half acres of growing potatoes; cherry and apple orchards; women using the Burpee Sealer under the instruction of Sister Creel and later operating alone; various landscapes, etc.

There are planted and growing at the present time one hundred and twenty cherry trees, two hundred apple trees, forty plum trees, two hundred grapes, eleven acres of sweet clover and alfalfa; besides cane, millet, and Sudan grass.

In the very near future there will be erected a church building and a parsonage, and probably some other buildings, and accounts of progress will be noted by the Saints with the keenest of interest.

Church to Have Powerful New Broadcasting Station

Church officials unanimously agree that, as pioneers in broadcasting, we should have a station of a character commensurate with the importance of its possibilities. The joint council carefully considered the value of radio to the church and concluded that we should operate a station sufficiently powerful to be heard throughout the country under ordinarily favorable conditions. At various subsequent meetings of the First Presidency, Presiding Bishopric, and others directly connected with the radio work, it was decided to go ahead with the construction of a 1,000-watt station.

At the meeting of the appropriations committee in June, the radio budget was considered. A sufficient amount for the maintenance of the radio work was arranged for in the budget for the coming fiscal year, but it was felt that the church membership should have the opportunity to subscribe funds for the erection of the new station.

The radio committee which has charge of the raising of the funds of the new broadcasting station has designated September 7 to 14 inclusive as "Radio Week." During this week everyone will be invited to contribute.

At present the only 1,000-watt stations are located at Springfield, Massachusetts, New York City and Schenectady, New York; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Cleveland, Ohio; Chicago, Illinois; Hastings, Nebraska; and Oakland, California. The proposed new station will rank among the foremost and will have double the power output of such stations as W D A F and W H B at Kansas City, and W O A W at Omaha.

It is planned to locate the new station at the southwest corner of the Campus, where the topographical situation is almost ideal. Two large towers will be erected to support the antenna, under which will be situated the radio building. This building will house the transmitting equipment and radio studio. Special wires from this building to the Stone Church and other places will permit the broadcasting of church services and special events.

In connection with the new broadcasting program, the power of the Graceland College station, K F F V, will be increased from 100 watts to 250 watts. New microphone and amplifier equipment will be installed at K F F V before the reopening of the station when school begins in September. These improvements will increase the quality of K F F V'S broadcasting.

Many of the Saints have been listening in, hearing well, and appreciating what they have heard; others have heard only under most favorable conditions; while still others have not been able to enjoy the programs arranged for their benefit. The new equipment will make it possible for many to hear who have never heard before, and will make the experience of listening to Independence broadcasting more enjoyable to all. Watch for the special campaign for raising of funds and express your gratitude and desires in terms of dollars and cents.

"The ear shall hear"—by radio.

Concerning an Open Letter

Immediately after there appeared in the HERALD of June 4, 1924, an article under the above title, "An open letter," I prepared a brief statement for the HERALD setting forth the conditions of my signing, and especially the fact that the letter was not signed with any intention of publication in the HERALD. The primary purpose of that statement was not, however, personal, but in an effort to secure a more fair consideration and attitude of mind in behalf of all. The personal issue and what effect it may have personally must be subordinated entirely to the good of the church.

For various good reasons that statement did not appear, but in fairness to all concerned and in the hopes of quieting at least some adverse rumors, it seems best still to submit the original statement with some modifications in the wording to meet the present conditions.

I protested rather strongly against the drafting of such a letter in the first place, believing that the formulation of documents for General Conference should best be delayed until shortly before the meeting of the conference, in the light of our best understanding at that time; that there would be danger of premature publication and therefore of undue agitation. Further, that some might construe it as an organized effort quite contrary to the facts as we then knew them or now know them; and also the possibility of a personal misapplication. That is, that some would attempt to give it a personal construction.

A draft, however, was made and nearly completely signed. I stated at the time of signing as I had before that no personal application against anyone could be inferred from my signing. The purpose of the draft was preliminary and signed for the purpose of presenting to President Smith merely as a statement that we believe that the questions generally involved should be presented to the quorums and the conference in an effort to reach a final conclusion; that we believed it best that the subject matter be frankly considered.

It did not then involve a sanction of these particular propositions exactly as worded to be adopted by the conference, for in fact I pointed out some rather definite objections at the time and understood that several corrections would be made before a copy was presented to President Smith. I do not make this statement or any part of it with the idea of reflecting on any of our brethren in the slightest degree, but rather to emphasize the fact that the statement was not an organized movement or agreement which the signers were bound to support exactly as formulated, but rather an informal statement of general subjects for consideration.

We still believe that these five propositions do state in a general way the position heretofore taken by the church and are worthy of our sincere consideration. But they should be held subject to modification and clarification before, at the time, and during the General Conference, so that we may bring to bear so far as possible the united wisdom of the church and as much inspiration as possible to the stating of the issues to the church and to their decision in righteousness.

Further, such signing was certainly not with any idea of publication in the SAINTS' HERALD or any other church periodical. I would not have signed with such an avowed purpose. It is only fair also to add that I have been since informed that such publication was only decided upon after this general subject had been presented publicly at the general priesthood meeting in Zion on the afternoon of June 1.

In signing we stated very positively that it should not be construed in any way as reflecting on any brother or brethren or any officer of the church, for such was not even remotely the intention, but it was presented in behalf of all those who signed, merely as a matter for presentation to the President of the church of certain questions that should be at the proper time and place given open and fair consideration, and with the assurance plainly given that the discussion should be on a high, intellectual plane, with no personal issues involved, but rather an impartial consideration of principles.

It is not claimed that these propositions cover the whole field. For example, the fourth proposition with regard to the budget to make it effective should require in fairness that the Bishop present the budget either very early in the conference, or, better, before the conference, so that there would be ample time for consideration by the quorums interested and by the conference itself. For it is evident that the full validity of conference sanction is not gained when a budget is presented at the very last session of conference. Such a presentation would not prevent the Order of Bishops from also considering or reconsidering and offering further amendments.

As to the third paragraph, the first sentence is taken largely from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. It is subject under the fifth paragraph or proposition to the constitutional law governing the priesthood of the church as set forth in the books of the church. As to the second sentence, the statement is made that as trustee in trust the Bishop is "directly" responsible to General Conference. It does not say "solely" responsible. Prior to signing, the undersigned raised the question of the rights of the High Council, Quorum of Twelve, and First Presidency, and was assured that none of these rights were denied or intended to be denied. They simply were not mentioned as not being controverted. The subject clearly presented in this third proposition is whether the Bishop is directly responsible to the conference, or has he an inherent function, or is he only mediately responsible. This paragraph would infer that he is directly responsible.

But neither this paragraph nor any other paragraph denies the general right of supervision of the First Presidency, nor the rights and responsibilities of the Quorum of Twelve, nor the rights and duties of the High Council in the financial affairs of the church.

There does appear to be a difference of opinion, however, as to how the general officers of the church are interrelated and how they should function. This appeared to be a question which it should be possible to consider frankly and impartially as a matter of principle, and it should be for the benefit of the church that there be such fair discussion. In fact, now the matter has been presented in the HERALD, the vital question is, Cannot the great underlying principles of the law be justly considered to the benefit and education of the church as a whole, so as to result not only in a formal decision, but in a conviction in the church of the rightness of that decision?

From the point of view of the law of the church as set forth in the three books, in accordance with the practice of the church and the interpretation that has been given from time to time by the church and its leading officers, in the light of intelligence and principle seeking a nearer approach to the truth, our discussion should be such that we shall draw nearer to our heavenly Father and thus have a better understanding of the law and church function. Prima facie, the custom of the church should stand approved, but subject to proof of a better way, and particularly a better method in detail.

The question now should be, Cannot this subject be considered in this fair and impartial spirit, without prejudice on the part of any through action already taken? It would be unfortunate to the church for its officers to precommit themselves in large camps or groups rather than for each of us to hold his mind open and seek without fear or favor to determine that which is for the best interests of the church. For the good of the body of Christ should transcend all hopes of victory as well as all fear or hopes of personal favor or disfavor. It may be well to remember that what is not clearly affirmed is not thereby denied. In the interests of brevity in any article, some things are usually taken for granted.

The writer has for some time wished that instead of the confused manner in which issues are often presented in General Conference, it were possible to present a number of clear-cut, simple statements for discussion, so that when the vote is taken all could at least agree on what it was that had been decided.

It may not be beyond hope that after fair consideration a number of such issues might be stated and agreed to as issues to be considered in this matter by those representing the different divergent views. To prevent confusion it perhaps would be best for the present to have the disputed issues accompanied by a statement of propositions mutually accepted and hence not necessary for argumentation. It is a waste of time to talk hours or even days discussing that which is not seriously denied by others, or a proposition so ambiguously stated that one can accept only fifty-one to sixty per cent of it as it stands, and must vote on the lesser of two evils.

But even if such a statement were prepared and presented to the conference, it ought not to prevent the greatest possible freedom of thought to the end

OFFICIAL

Statement by Former Presiding Bishop

Since my name was published in the HERALD of July 9 as one of the signers of the article on "Church government" and some have misunderstood my purpose, I have felt that a further explanation on my position, past and present, should be made.

I have no intention of going back on my record after all these years of service to the church. The things which were true then are true yet, and the same blessings should follow obedience to the same laws now as then.

It has been urged that my indorsement has been understood to mean that I hold that the Presiding Bishop is under the control of the President in the discharge of his duties as Bishop in relation to church finances. I do not believe that the law makes the Bishop subordinate to the President in the direction of church finances, but they should confer and work together so that the policies of neither one will interfere with the work and practice of the other, so far as possible. It was not so interpreted, nor was any effort made to put into effect such a system of interdependence of departments during the twenty-five years I acted as head of the temporal division of the church.

My position in this matter was set forth in a speech made at the General Conference of 1893 against the binding effect of the precedents of the old organization on our church government which are not contained in the three standard books of the church. I later prepared an article on the subject, which was published in the SAINTS' HERALD of March 7, 1894, and quoted this speech, a part of which follows:

The Reorganization from the beginning has said that it would stand by the law; the law was higher than Jesus Christ when he was here in this world; he had to abide the law. So when you cite me a precedent from Joseph the Seer, or any other individual in the church or out of it, the first inquiry I make is, Is it in harmony with the law of God? and if I cannot see the harmony, it is my duty as an honest man to say that I will disregard it; and you will always find me right on that platform, my friends.

In section 42, Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord tells us what we shall be governed by. It is not the precedents of anybody or the sayings or doings of anybody:

"Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things, shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues."

We are to take the things that are written in the law, not what somebody human said or did; and the escutcheon of the liberties of the Latter Day Saints in their faith to-day is couched in the revelation here that some have spurned in days past, wherein God said to the church:

"Thou shalt give heed unto all his words and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me."

That is a bulwark of our liberties instead of binding us to folly. God has never said we shall receive the prophet's words whether they are from Him or not; but, "As he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me"; and you must first convince me that they were received by commandment from our heavenly Father before you can cite any precedent to me and say that I shall be bound thereby.

In connection with this, I wish to show you a statement with reference to the direction of the Bishop, one of the first that was made, which you will find in section 41, paragraph 3, Book of Doctrine and Covenants:

"And again, I have called my servant Edward Partridge, and give a commandment, that he should be appointed by the voice of the church, and ordained a bishop unto the church, to leave his merchandise and to spend all his time in the labors of the church; to see to all things as it shall be appointed unto him in my laws, in the day that I shall give them."

The Bishop was not to be directed by the President or any other individual in the church at will, but by the law of God; and he is held responsible to God for his actions under that law; and it would be my duty to disregard any counsel in the church that I thought was contrary to the law of God. I will take my chances in the hereafter in standing by his law. When I say this, I am not arguing that we should disregard or treat lightly the counsels and opinions and advice of the Presidency, the Twelve, or any other body. We should respect them; but when they are given, we must look closely and see if they are in accordance with the law. You are better able to determine what the law is when you have others' views and opinions than you possibly can be without these. So I do not stand here ready to disregard the teaching and sentiments of my brethren; but if in my opinion they are contrary to the law of God, the law of God does not say that I shall hold to their opinions.

In signing the article on "Church government" recently published, it was my only thought to ask the membership to study the question carefully in anticipation of a final decision by next General Conference. I have confidence that the intelligent consideration of the issues before us will eventuate in committing this Church of Jesus Christ even more definitely than ever before on the side of the law.

Former Presiding Bishop of the Church.

May I suggest that nine tenths of the pessimism among earnest Christians to-day arises because men are unable to discriminate words and phrases from facts. They assume that a particular religious cultus is Christian because in it Christ's name is freely used; they confuse loyalty to a particular institution with loyalty to his spirit. They misread history and fancy that when apparent religious uniformity was maintained by force Christ's teaching was everywhere welcomed. I doubt if there were ever so many men and women with free minds who seriously accept Christ's teaching as we can find to-day.—Canon E. W. Barnes, in Christian Century, April 26, 1923.

Leadership

BY RALPH W. FARRELL

It is important that we understand the meaning of the term we are to discuss. It will be agreed, all things being considered, that no better work can be consulted on definitions than the dictionary. When we use the term leadership, we mean office of a leader. And a "leader" is one that "leads or conducts; guides." The word lead means, "to guide or conduct; to show the way, especially by going with or in advance of; hence, to direct; to counsel."

In the light of the foregoing, we ask, with the intention of answering the query, Is there provision in the church for such leadership? Is there provision for guides, directors, persons to show the way? It is very evident to the writer of this article that there is such provision, not only touching general leadership but also special leadership. And it is the sincerity of this belief that prompts him to prepare this thesis for the consideration of HERALD readers.

At the outset we are met with a peculiar objection which has sprung up in recent days, and which, so far as we know, has never been hinted at prior to the year of our Lord 1924. Yet if the objection is valid it should have place in our examination. Let us read the setting.

Matthew 23: 8-11:

Be ye not called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ. But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant.

It is interesting to note that we have no original manuscript of the New Testament. The earliest do not, presumably, come nearer to the days of Christ than the fourth century. It is because of this fact, in the main, that the translators of the Bible disagree in textual matter. For this reason, it may be, there has been some technical confusion over the meaning of a word in the scriptural matter quoted above. I refer to the word masters, in verse ten. Some translators use the word leaders, making the text read: "Neither be ye called leaders; for one is your leader, even Christ."

Were there not bound to arise confusion over this matter, if not fully understood, we would spend no time on it; for it must be plainly evident to some of our readers that our Lord was not striking at the organization of his church when he gave this advice.

Over these words, kathegetai, kathegetes (and the more common Greek word, hegemon), which mean leaders, leader, and over what other words may exist in the different manuscripts, touching this point, the translators disagree. Some use the word teacher, others prefer master, and a few select leader. But what does it matter, when the whole intent of Christ was to impress the lesson on the hearts of his followers that he was the Way, the Truth, and the Light, and that no man goest to the Father except by him? Let us read the parallel text: "Call no man your father upon the earth." Would this debar us from calling our earthly parent father? The voice of the Lord spoke thus of the term: "I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac," etc. Paul speaks of "our father, Isaac"; James refers to Abraham as "our father." Joseph Smith referred to David Whitmer as Father Whitmer. And we hear of patriarchs referred to as "fathers in Israel."

Likewise the word rabbi. The Revised Version quotes it thus: "But be ye not called Rabbi, for one is your teacher, and all ye are brethren." To place a biased emphasis on this text would forbid man from being a teacher, and so cloud the great commission of the Teacher, who said: "Go and teach all nations." "I send you forth to teach and not to be taught." Paul writes that he had been "ordained . . . a teacher of the Gentiles." The Book of Covenants refers to the office of teacher (104: 5.)

Christ instructs against using these terms as titles, as terms of exaltation, as symbols indicating that one brother is better than another brother. Hardly could he mean that in the church there should be no directors, guides, leaders, teachers. A revelation states that the Twelve and the High Priests are under the "direction" of the Presidency; hence, the presidents are directors. According to our definition, the word lead means to direct; a director, then, is a leader.

We cannot ask for further space in which to develop this phase of our discussion. Let us devote a few lines to Matthew 23: 11: "But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant." Much ado has been made over this word servant. But the persons who make the ado seem to overlook the statement that the servant is also "greatest." They love to gloat over the fact that their leader is a servant, but they hate to acknowledge that he is also the greatest. (The reader must know that we are not quibbling over the subject of who is holiest in the church—even Christ did not come to judge that matter. We are discussing the question of authority.) We are all servants. We are all commanded to "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." True, the president of the church is a servant of the body, but he must serve it lawfully; and as he is called to serve in the office of president, which is an office of directing, he must direct in order to be a servant. Likewise every other officer serves by magnifying his calling. In other words, we are laborers together with Christ; and as God has called us we are to serve in that calling, we are to function together. It should be admitted that the "head cannot say to the feet, I have no need of you"; and it was so profoundly evident that the feet could not say to the head, "I have no need of you," that Paul refrained from mentioning the matter at all.

The writer may be wrong in that he sees no difference between a leader and a director, and that he does see a difference between a president and a chairman. Any member of the church, if he be versed in parliamentary law, could act as chairman of a General Conference; but to be qualified for the office of president, he must be called of God, chosen by the people, and ordained by one having authority. Then he is entitled to receive such light from God as may be his need to enable him to direct and counsel, or, as the Lord phrases it, "give meat in due season."

And the writer sees a vast difference when a poor, weak, earthly prophet, trying, doubtless, to do his best, as did Moses and others, is compared to Christ. Such comparison is belittling the Son of God and is unchristian and uncalled for. No sane man poses as Christ. A tragic mistake has been made by any person who has looked upon man as a spiritual example of Christ, in the way that some have argued. The Lord was evidently trying to discourage this very thing when he said, "There is none good save God." (And Christ was God manifested in flesh.) He did not mean that there was no good in men. We need no argument to convince us that there is but one perfect example of the virtues of God. This divine Son has left us an example that we should follow in his steps. If the fruits by which we are to judge a prophet are the fruits of goodness (the cardinal virtues), then by such method of judgment we must class every good man a prophet; and, on the other hand, brand Moses and David and Paul and others as false prophets because they manifested weaknesses.

I am sure the reader will understand that I am making no plea for lawlessness; defending no man in wrongdoing, whether that man be Moses, Paul, or Joseph Smith. I am endeavoring to show that while Christ is our only perfect example, the fact does not stand against the other fact that he organized an authoritative church and placed in it officers to whom he gave the keys of his kingdom. With these keys they went forth to represent him in an official way—it being understood, as a matter of fact, that they were to be good men. It is the bounden duty of every member of the church to be good, for without holiness no man shall see God.

If we were to lose sight of the latter-day revelations and take the New Testament only for our guide, we would still readily see Christ had an authoritative church in which were officers, called and ordained by those in authority, and empowered to perform certain tasks imposed by virtue of their various callings. These officers, set in the church by the Lord, were for the perfecting of the saints, the work of ministering, the building up of the body (church) of Christ. The deacon did not do the work of the apostle. From the reading of Luke 10 and Matthew 28 we infer that the seventies were closely associated with the twelve in carrying the gospel to every creature. The elders (Acts 14:23; 20:17, 28) were overseers of the flock, feeding the church of God. It was a part of their office work to rule. A few references will prove this point: "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls."—Hebrews 13:17. "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor."—1 Timothy 5:17.

These elders were brothers, but they were ruling brothers. They were not to rule coercively, arbitrarily, but they were, nevertheless, to rule. To deny rulership (which is guidanceship, leadership in the church) is to deny the church; or, in other words, where there is not such rulership the church is not functioning as it should. These elders ruled by virtue of the priesthood which they held and by the sanction of the people. This sanction of a people can be given through its delegates, or the sanction can be withheld, even against the direction of God; for franchise is agency, which man can exercise for either good or evil.

The import of the words obey and submit hardly indicates that the flock is to rule the elder, or that his duty of leadership is confined to the inspirational task of acting as chairman of a business meeting, does it?

It seems inconsistent that the churches of the Reformation should deny priesthood in words and recognize it in acts. Not one of the churches but has officers who exercise rights which do not belong to the non-official. And the ceremony of ordination is observed in conferring this authority. What means this cry against authority? against the prerogatives of the priesthood? It is decidedly consistent to claim that this power must come from heaven, for man of himself cannot bestow it. "In the name of Christ" is no empty term. Let the world say what it will, members of the church of Jesus Christ are committed to the belief that Christ to-day has designated men to officiate in the ordinances of the gospel and direct the work according to the law given.

Priesthood is an office or an order to which men may belong. Webster says it is an office; the Bible says it is an order. (Hebrews 5:6.) Men do not elect themselves to this order; they are called by some one who holds membership in the priesthood. Membership is handed down by ordination. "Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but . . . was called of God a high priest after the order of Melchisedec." (Hebrews 5:5, 10.) This order "continueth in the church of God in all generations, and is without beginning of days and end of years." (Doctrine and Covenants 83:2.) "The power and authority of the higher, or Melchisedec, priesthood, is to hold the keys of all the spiritual blessings in the church." (104:9.) Without this order the church of Christ cannot exist in a complete sense. (83:3.) For this reason whenever there has been a gospel dispensation on earth the Melchisedec priesthood has been in it, and at its head has been a president, or a president and two counselors termed the "first presidency." (87:3; 104:4; 107:39.)

The names of some of these presidents and leaders have been preserved. "Abraham received the priesthood from Melchisedec, who received it through the lineage of his fathers, even till Noah; and from Noah till Enoch through the lineage of their fathers; and from Enoch to Abel." (83:2.) Moses was ordained by Jethro. "And this Moses whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush." (Acts 7:35.) And this was done because he was chosen to do that work, as was Joseph Smith his, of whom it was said:

No one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church excepting my servant, Joseph Smith, jr.; for he receiveth them even as Moses . . . there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken, if he abide in me.—Doctrine and Covenants 27:2; 43:1.

This first prophet of the last dispensation was taken, and another was chosen in his stead. This successor, Young Joseph, also was taken, and another was appointed in his stead, in the following message:

It is now declared that in case of the removal of my servant now presiding over the church by death or transgression, my servant Frederick M. Smith, if he remain faithful and steadfast, should be chosen, in accordance with the revelations which have been hitherto given to the church concerning the priesthood.—Doctrine and Covenants 127:8.

This message was accepted by the voice of the people, as a revelation from God, and in due season the person named therein was chosen by the people and ordained by the president of the Quorum of Twelve.

The world to-day is a great Egypt. The blackness of sin, like a vast cowl, covers its brain. Modern Pharaohs are walking roughshod over the face of the poor. A Babylonian revelry is heard in every hamlet and city. The times cry out to us. The wisest men of the present age hear that cry and are afraid. Says Ramsay MacDonald:

There is no settlement in Europe. There is no peace in Europe. Governments can do nothing. They are afraid to do anything, and they stand by and allow things to go from bad to worse. 1923 is worse than 1914.

Lloyd George knows it. He says:

A new chapter opens in the history of Europe and of the world, with a climax of horror such as mankind has never yet witnessed.

Sir Philip Gibbs, England's greatest journalist, is no stranger to the fact. Writes Mr. Gibbs:

No man unless he is drunk with optimism can deny that the world is very sick, and it may be a sickness unto death.

"I think it is certain," writes Viscount Grey, "that if there be another such war again, civilization will never recover from it."

What have the prophets foretold about this day? Isaiah:

The earth is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinances, broken the everlasting covenant; therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate; therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left. . . . Fear, and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitants of the earth.—Isaiah 24:5, 6, 17.

Christ:

But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. . . . Likewise as it was in the days of Lot . . . even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed.—Matthew 24:37; Luke 17:18, 30.

And Joseph Smith, the Seer of Palmyra:

Prepare ye, prepare ye, for that which is to come. . . . Peace shall be taken from the earth. . . . Behold, the world is ripening in iniquity. . . . Great destructions await the wicked. . . . Righteousness and truth will I cause to sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out my own elect from the four quarters of the earth unto a place which I shall prepare; a holy city, that my people may gird up their loins, and be looking forth for the time of my coming; for there shall be my tabernacle, and it shall be called Zion, a New Jerusalem.—Doctrine and Covenants 1:3, 6; 16:2; 33:2; 36:12.

Each dispensation had its leader. And each leader was given a distinct message to bear to the people. The doctrine of the gathering, however, was common to all. Enoch gathered his people to a holy city. Noah called them to gather to the ark of safety. Moses sought to gather them to the land of Canaan. Christ would have gathered them, even as a hen gathers her chickens, but they would not. The world to-day is an Egypt. Where is the Moses? Some say, We have the Christ. I answer, So did the children of Israel: Christ was that spiritual rock which followed them; but in rejecting the leadership of Moses they rejected the Christ which sent him.

If there ever were a time in the history of the world when it needed a prophet, that time is to-day: a time when there is need for some one to take hold whose hands will not slip on the rein! nor tremble in the emergency! It is the dispensation of the fullness of times, when there is to be gathered together in one all things in Christ (Ephesians 1:10); when the "remainder" are to be gathered to the body, in due time (Luke 17:35-37); when God is to have a wise servant who will give the people meat in due season (Matthew 24:45).

Great and true and spiritual men have prayed for this day. They died in the faith that some day the miracle would be performed. And men of to-day are calling for this inspired leader. Writes Burris Jenkins, pastor of the Christian Church in Kansas City:

Give us a Luther back again, a Wesley, somebody bigger than either, to tell us what is the matter with us. . . . All the time the earth is trembling with the coming of the great leader. . . . Will he never come? I listen for the sound of his wheels upon the gravel, in the night, in the pain. Ay, he will come!—The Protestant, pp. 20, 27, 34.

Ah, Burris Jenkins, that leader has come; will you receive him? Listen to the words of a dying man:

God bless you, my boy, I am so glad you reached me before I pass over. Oh, may the Lord strengthen you for the duties, the arduous labor, and make it light for your shoulders, as it has been for mine. . . . You are the man for the occasion. The Lord has ordained it so. Oh, some one to take hold whose hands will not slip on the rein! nor tremble in the emergency! . . . Fred, a great opportunity lies before you. . . . Fortunately I was in favor of the Divine One and received instruction, and you will be, my boy, you will be. That small Spirit that filleth the breast and giveth warmth and color and brightness and intelligence will open before you subjects that are necessary for you to decide upon, and leave no dubiety nor things open to controversy.—Quoted from the statement of the late President Joseph Smith to his son Frederick M. Smith, Sunday, November 29, 1914.

In the foregoing article I have not endeavored to indulge in personal things. My reference to the President of the church has been in the same sense that I referred to Moses and Noah and others. I do not refer to the father's last words with desire on my part to exalt any man, but rather to show that according to the impression of President Joseph Smith, his son, Frederick, was the man for the occasion and in his work would receive light from God. That's all. Any attempt to belittle this would belittle the man who gave it.

I have attempted to affirm (and whether I have succeeded the reader must judge) that

1. The church is an organization in which Christ is represented officially and in degree spiritually.

2. In the church is provision for directors or leaders, the chief official director or leader being the President of the church.

3. To be a wise and faithful servant, an officer must function in the office to which he has been called; thus in directing or leading he is serving the people.

4. In the church is an order called the priesthood, without which no man has the official right to represent Christ. This high priesthood has a president on earth who is also the president of the church, when so chosen.

5. Each gospel dispensation has had the priesthood with its president or leader or ruler, such as Enoch, Noah, Moses, Joseph Smith, etc.

6. According to the prophets, the world to-day is a great Egypt, from which the people must be led out; and in this dispensation of the fullness of times, the Lord has designed to build up a holy city to which the people are to be gathered.

7. In harmony with his work in the past, he has to-day called three to be prophets and leaders of the people.

8. These persons being, first, Joseph Smith, jr., to be succeeded by his son, familiarly known as Young Joseph who, in 1906, called, through the revelation of the Spirit, his son, Frederick M. Smith, to build on the foundation which had been laid, and promised divine direction to enable him to perform successfully the arduous duties which would rest upon his shoulders.

What Is True Preaching?

BY J. A. MORRISON

The annual closing of our theological colleges, which includes Graceland with its course in religious education, the separating of the members of the graduating class and their going forth to declare the gospel of Jesus Christ, with its emphasis on the ministerial gifts of the exalted Christ, combine to call renewed attention to the vital meaning and far-reaching importance of Christian preaching. Today our answer to the question at the head of this article may be couched in somewhat negative terms, leaving it for a later opportunity to consider the more positive aspects of the subject.

What, then, are we to understand as the supreme purpose of the Christian minister? By many his chief work seems to be regarded as that of promotion and organization, and it is unfortunately true that the multiplicity of obligations which now rest on ministers is tending rapidly to rob the office of a great deal of its spiritual force. Not long ago an attractive young minister was asked about his preaching. "I am a promoter, not a preacher," was his reply. But this inevitably means the loss of the personal in the mechanical; and unless organization is rigidly kept subordinate to spiritual issues the life and power of ministers and people are sure to suffer.

There are some who enter the ministry with the thought of doing educational work, and one of the newest titles given to young ministers is "Director of Religious Education." The result is that pedagogy and psychology are greatly emphasized, and everything is being done towards the development of the teaching work of the church, especially in relation to young people. Now, of the importance of this feature of ministerial work there is no question, and yet it is widely admitted by those who have real authority to speak, that a man can enter on his work as a pedagogue and a psychologist and yet fail at the most vital point of that Christian ministry with which the Apostle Paul associates the Ascended Christ.

Economics and politics occupy a large place in the conception of many who are beginning the ministry, but it is possible that a man may not only overdo this feature, but in the attempt may produce actual harm. It is simple truth to say that there are many older men in our congregations who know far more of these subjects than a young minister can possibly know, and it is not surprising if such men feel, and even show, impatience at having to listen to the lucubrations of youthful inexperience. The recent "Copec" Conference in England is an illustration of the need of the greatest care of ministers taking up problems of sociology, hygiene, politics, and other aspects of corporate life.

One of the greatest dangers of a new ministry is the natural desire to emphasize scholarship, and in particular the philosophic aspects of Christian truth. But an average congregation contains very few scholars and philosophers, and while, of course, a minister should be competent on occasion to deal with the most abstruse problems, he will be well advised to remember that congregations in general, and even scholars as well, when present, value preaching and teaching which deals with the heart as well as the intellect.

One thing in particular a young man should avoid like poison: the unloading on his congregation of some of the lectures he has received during his seminary course. Doctor T. R. Glover, president of the Baptist Union of Great Britain, was in America some months ago and gave an address to preachers. He described how he had gone across Calcutta to attend church service, where he found a congregation of foreigners, surrounded by the depressing environment of heathenism. Yet the preacher's subject was the Johannine authorship of the third epistle bearing the apostle's name. With this Doctor Glover put the story of a preacher at the war front, who gave weary men, fresh from the trenches, a discussion on the Procession of the Holy Spirit from the Father and the Son. Even though these were extreme instances they carry their own definite message.

A recent letter in a newspaper tells of the writer discussing the subject of modern views with a theological instructor, and when the latter was asked to go a little easier in the smashing of idols he demurred, saying that it was as essential for a theological class to study in a severely scientific spirit as it was for the class in anatomy in the medical school. The writer thereupon remarked that he had heard the substance of these words given by an outstanding physician in a lecture to his students:

Young men, if you would be successful physicians you must enter the sick room with a different spirit than you entered the dissecting room. Hold the thought that there lies before you not a mere cadaver awaiting your scientific demonstration, but a quivering, living human being, composed not only of flesh and blood and sinews and organs, but of nerves that tingle with the feelings and emotions and sentiments of a living spirit. Perhaps your most valuable assistance in the sick room will be through appeal to the Unseen Spirit that you never encountered in your cold, scientific dissection.

Jesus Christ in his ascension gave the ministerial gifts to his church, of apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers, and one of his greatest followers pressed upon a company of Christian leaders the twofold duty of preaching the evangel of redemption and of feeding the flock of God. If only young ministers could be got to see that their congregations consist of burdened souls that long for forgiveness, weary hearts that crave for rest, perplexed minds that long for guidance, despairing souls that need encouragement, weak wills that need the replenishment of divine grace, and if, out of their own hearts and experiences, they would proclaim these blessed realities, they would find their ministry one of joy, blessing, satisfaction, and ever-increasing encouragement wherever they may go.

It has been openly stated that in our own church college there are some teachers who disclaim the more miraculous things of the gospel, and teach accordingly, declaring these things to be more or less of a myth. Also those in the higher offices of the church who have refused to meet in argument their fellow brethren on the divinity of the first seven chapters of Genesis, Inspired Translation. If these statements be true, then the voice of the people through General Conference should demand to know their position on these matters, as their belief and teachings are not in accord with the faith once delivered to the saints.

Facts About the Bible.—No. 2

BY A. B. PHILLIPS

The authenticity of the Bible is more strongly confirmed than would seem possible, when we remember that it has come to us through many ages under the most difficult circumstances of any work of similar antiquity and import. Evidence supporting the sacred record is derived from both external and internal sources. Its origin has been rigidly scrutinized and traced to remote ages, at which time the books then known were held in deepest reverence. It faithfully reflects the lives and characteristics of the people of which it speaks. Many truths of unusual interest found in botany, zoology, geography, archæology, and other fields of study confirm the genuineness of the work, until the Bible becomes a new book to the student.

Nearly all of the Old Testament books are mentioned in the New Testament, and such ancient writers as Sirach (about 180 B. C.) and the Maccabean author refer to most of them and show they were held in great veneration. They were not always in precisely the same form, nor did they occupy the same relative places in the collection as they do now. In the original Hebrew, First and Second Samuel formed one book. So did First and Second Chronicles, also Ezra and Nehemiah. Psalms was originally called the Book of Praises by the Jews, the title reminding one of our songbook, Zion's Praises. The psalms were by no means all composed by the Sweet Singer of Israel, as is generally supposed, but were written in various ages.

The five books called The Pentateuch were from very early times known to the Hebrews as The Law. Some critics add Joshua, the whole being termed The Hexateuch. This idea assumes that Genesis, Exodus, Numbers, and Joshua were made up from several older documents, one of which is called the priestly narrative.

Critics in and out of the church have made various attacks upon the authenticity of New Testament books. Some of them were much in dispute in the first few centuries. In that early period the books of Hebrews, James, Second Peter, Second and Third John, Jude, and Revelation were all doubted. In modern time John, Acts, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, and various other books have been attacked by critics. As portions of certain books are not found in some of the old manuscripts, certain critics claim that these parts are spurious. The closing verses of Mark, and portions of the seventh and eighth chapters of John, are among the disputed portions of scripture. Eusebius is a witness of importance, who shows that most of the New Testament books were held in great esteem long before his time. (265-340 A. D.)

A most interesting point, that has been discussed for centuries, is the authorship of Hebrews. The name of Paul does not appear in the work, nor is there any language that proves his authorship. Origen (third century) and many later writers refer to this uncertainty. Luther and others thought Apollos wrote the work. Others have ascribed it to Barnabas, Luke, or other early Christians. In the new book, Helps to Bible Study, this point and many others mentioned are quite fully considered.

Not only were some of the canonical books in doubt anciently, but many other works arose assuming biblical authorship, and some of the books now placed with the Apocrypha were for a time believed to be of equal authenticity. The Old Testament Apocrypha still form part of the scriptures in Roman Catholic Bibles. The early church was for some time divided in opinion concerning certain of the New Testament Apocrypha, books being accepted in some churches that were rejected in others. In A. D. 382 the Synod of Damascus finally indorsed the books now forming the New Testament canon. Later church councils took similar action, and in 1442 the Council of Florence affirmed the scriptures to be inspired. In 1546 the Council of Trent named each book to be received, and ordered all controversy to be determined by the Vulgate text. Thus the canon of scripture was officially closed.

Men say that Christianity, by becoming entangled with these foreign elements, has permeated them with its spirit, acting upon them like leaven and so transfiguring them with its own value. That view I cannot share: at least not without great reservations. Were it not truer to say that these foreign elements, these outside things, these worldly philosophies and institutions, have rather permeated Christianity with their spirit than suffered Christianity to permeate them with its own? No one in his senses will deny that Christianity has done something to make these worldly things better. They would all be much worse than they are if Christianity had never touched them. But, on the other hand, Christianity would be much better than it is if they had never touched it. They have distorted it; have maimed it; have devitalized it at essential points. —Religious Perplexities, pp. 72, 73.

Musical Programs and Special Activities

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, July 14.—Sister B. C. Burton presented a number of her piano pupils, assisted by some of the talented members of the church, in two recitals at the Central Church, on the Friday evenings of June 20 and 27. These recitals are always very interesting and are a credit to Sister Burton's work in the musical line.

On Tuesday, June 24, a musical program was given at the Belmont Mission, which, if judged by comments of the large and appreciative audience, was a success.

A patriotic program was presented at the Central Church, Thursday evening, July 3. A feature of this program was "The spirit '76," represented by three small boys dressed appropriately. They were followed by a veteran of the Civil War, after which "Tenting to-night" was sung by a male quartet. A veteran of the Spanish-American War then came on the platform, and a vocal solo, "Just as the sun went down," was sung in memory of this period. Then came a veteran of the World War, after which the quartet sang again, the song being, "When the bells of freedom ring." It was very impressive to see this group, dressed in their respective uniforms, representatives of four great events in the history of our country. The entire program was along patriotic lines and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The Department of Women meeting was held at the Riverside Mission with about forty present, on June 15. The ladies of Riverside furnished the program and served the refreshments. This is the first year that the Department of Women meetings have been held at the different missions, and they have been greatly enjoyed. It helps the women of the missions and the Central Church to get better acquainted and to understand each other better.

Brother and Sister Creel, from Walthill Indian reservation, spent Sunday, June 29, in Council Bluffs, and Brother Creel preached at Riverside Mission in the morning and at Central Church at night. His talks were very enlightening and gave us a better idea of the work and sacrifice necessary for the betterment of the conditions of Indian life. Sister Creel, too, gave us a very interesting talk at the Religio hour about the Indian women. We certainly enjoy having the missionaries tell us of their work in the missions; it gives us a greater desire to do our part to help the work along.

Tuesday night at the Central Church a farewell party was given in honor of Brother J. Charles Jensen who leaves soon for California for his health. He has been a member of the Council Bluffs Branch for the past sixty years. A short program was given, during which time a traveling bag was presented to Brother Jensen by the Saints of Council Bluffs. The presentation speech was made by Elder G. J. Harding, mayor. An original poem, written for the occasion by Elder J. F. Mintun, was also read. After the program refreshments were served. We shall miss Brother Jensen, as he is loved by old and young and has served the branch here faithfully in many ways.

On Sunday afternoon, July 13, four young men were ordained at a meeting held for this special purpose at the Central Church. A baptismal service was held just before this meeting, when one good woman was led into the waters of baptism by Elder Charles Putnam. The confirmation took place at the beginning of the ordination meeting. The following young men were ordained: W. E. Brown, priest; Dewey Hatch, Duke Booten, and Grover DeBar, deacons.

Five Additions to Vinal Haven Branch

VINAL HAVEN, MAINE, July 10.—The Vinal Haven Saints are rejoicing over the baptisms since last report in the HERALD, five persons being added to the church since then. Elder Harvey V. Minton baptized four and Elder Archie Bigger baptized one.

The Saints were really interested in Consecration Days, June 9 and 23, and seemed to heed the call, for the Spirit was present and was marvelous in discussing the business of the Lord.

Sunday, July 6, was a spiritual feast to Vinal Haven Saints, as the good Spirit was present, and all Saints were active in their duty. It seems many people are interested, and the outlook is very bright for a big ingathering of souls.

The suppers being held each fortnight are proving very successful in the church here. The sisters are united for service and are interested in the great cause of Christ.

Elder Archie Bigger has been preaching the last few Sunday nights.

Missionary Sunday Meetings at Topeka

TOPEKA, KANSAS, July 7.—A good spirit prevailed in the sacramental service of July 1. Instead of the usual introductory remarks, Elder A. P. Crooker read a portion of the sixth chapter of John, showing that partaking of the emblems was for all who had taken upon themselves the name of Christ, and not for the disciples only as some had verily believed. After calling special attention to the significance of this statement of the Master, the spirit of it seemed to fill the room, and instead of one waiting for the other, they were waiting for opportunity to bear testimony to the spirit present and the renewal of their covenant at the water's edge.

This is a note gathered from the prayer meeting, "Keep your spirit in tune by attending this most important service, and then you will be enabled to properly adjust the temporal affairs of life."

Sister Lue E. Jordan was united in marriage on June 15 to Mr. Howard L. Clark. Elder I. G. Whipple officiated. The Saints surprised them in the afternoon by calling in a group to extend best wishes.

A pretty home wedding occurred at the home of Elder and Sister A. P. Crooker on June 22, when their daughter, Estella, was united in marriage to Mr. Samuel L. Morris, of Lawrence, Kansas. Elder W. L. Chapman officiated in launching this happy couple on life's matrimonial sea, in the presence of a host of Saints and friends. C. J. Wolf, of Kansas City, and Mrs. Emma Happe rendered special numbers.

May these untried ships that have sailed so proudly from their port with their "freight of spirit's twain" successfully encounter all the dangers of the voyage and land safely in the harbor of wedded bliss.

Beginning June 29, a series of Sunday evening meetings based on the principles of the gospel, is being held on the church lawn. The preaching is by A. P. Crooker, I. G. Whipple, and W. L. Chapman, members of the priesthood. Some tracting is being done, using "The busy man's series," and the people are invited to attend these services.

Elder A. P. Crooker was called to Coffeyville, Kansas, to preach the funeral sermon of a brother-in-law of Sister Helen Hays of this city. Although he was a nonmember, a large and interested audience is reported.

Sister H. J. O'Brien, better known as Mary, with her helpful ways and sunny disposition, has gone to Chicago to make her home with her family for the coming year. Truly we miss her.

The Sunday school held its annual picnic on July 4 at Gage Park. With well-filled baskets and plenty of ice cream, both old and young turned the key on their troubles and cares and engaged in celebrating the Nation's birth. Some outside publicity was had from those among the large crowds that throng this park, when some lively ball games were entered into between the priesthood and laity. Ask the priesthood about the score.

Seventeen Baptized at Graft

WILEY, COLORADO, July 9.—There is not very much doing here now as farmers are at the busiest season, and there are not many of us anyway.

Brother Sutton was here for a while but was called home. He hopes to be able to come back later, probably to stay some time. Meanwhile the faithful few are trying to keep the work going until we can get some assistance.

Brother J. D. Curtis's last series of meetings was held at Graft, where seventeen were baptized, with the prospect of as many more in the near future. The last word from him said he was ready to start on another round of the new places opened up.

An elder, whose name we have not learned, has taken up his abode at Uteville in order to assist in the splendid opening that has been built up there.

Brother and Sister I. N. Delong lost their infant son recently and have the sincere sympathy of their many friends in their loss.

Sister Lona Ralston and family were Wiley visitors recently. They are en route to California where Brother C. A. Ralston went some months ago. All their old friends were glad to see them again and wish we had their able help in the branch work as of old. We surely have missed them.

Sister Vida M. Fletcher attended the Young People's Convention and is now home again.

Eastern Iowa Doings

BURLINGTON, IOWA, July 17.—The Nauvoo district conference was held in Burlington June 28 and 29. The attendance was good considering the road conditions. Heavy rains caused the creeks and small river to overflow, flooding all the lowlands around Burlington, which made auto traveling impossible south of the city and hindered some from attending.

Children's Day exercises were rendered July 1 at half past seven in the evening. The program was beautifully carried out by the children in their fearless ways before a large audience.

There were four candidates for baptism, namely Alberta Statlander, Lucile Statlander, Lois Omonskey, and Charleen Weishaupt. Sickness prevented Lillian Williams from being one of the number for baptism.

The Burlington Sunday school held its annual picnic on July 1 at the reservoir picnic grounds near West Burlington. Games were arranged for all ages, and a great deal of interest was taken in them. Prizes were awarded the winners. The refreshments were very good and plentiful. All reported a good time.

Elder C. M. Clifford is conducting open-air services at the park in New London, Iowa. Seven cars filled with Burlington Saints went there the first night to encourage Elder Clifford in his efforts. The attendance was very good, and the officer in charge of the park keeps splendid order. The park is one block square, and all the homes around this park had a fair audience on each of the porches, besides people standing on the corners. Brother Clifford's voice carries so well that the people were forced to stop and listen, which caused a desire in their hearts to hear more, and the result was that his congregation was larger the second night than the first.

The services began July 14 and will continue as long as the interest is good.

Sister Louisa Bauer passed away at her home on June 12, at the age of seventy-four years, after a short illness of five days. She was a good and faithful Saint, always willing to assist in the advancement of the work, whether it be in a financial way or by service rendered. She was a kind mother, and her counsel will be greatly missed by her loved ones. She leaves three sons and three daughters. Bishop George P. Lambert of Adrian, Illinois, conducted the funeral services.

A number of Burlington Saints enjoyed visits from the following: Brother U. W. Greene, of Independence, Missouri; Mr. and Mrs. August Lee and children, of Nauvoo, Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Welday and daughter Annalee, of Cedar Rapids; Miss Esther Ortleb, of Iowa City; Mr. and Mrs. Holmes and children, of Joy, Illinois; Truman Ziegenhorn, Joy, Illinois; Mrs. E. Fox, Providence, Rhode Island; and Dorothy Hendricks, of Stewartville, Missouri, who is visiting at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Wilke.

Young and Old at Work in Mapleton

MAPLETON, KANSAS, July 8.—Children's Day was observed in a very pleasing manner June 29. Invitations were sent to our scattered Saints, also the Fort Scott Branch, to come and enjoy the day. Our worthy pastor, Brother Lee Quick, spoke to the children at the morning hour, impressing many truths upon the minds of both young and old in a way that they will not soon forget.

Announcement was made at the close of the morning service that some had requested baptism. Arrangements had been made to have a picnic dinner down near the river in Brother L. C. Hughes's pasture. All were soon on their way to the river with well-filled baskets to sustain the physical man, and on arriving found Brother Hughes had everything in readiness and had provided ample table room for the dinner. But with a desire to partake of spiritual food, all went to the river, where Brother Quick led four worthy young people into the water to be buried beneath the liquid wave, that they might become the children of God.

After the tables were laden with the good things the sisters had provided, Brother John Graham, sr., was requested to ask God's blessing on the food. Although Brother Graham has passed his ninetieth milestone, his voice rang out clear, invoking God's blessing on all assembled, that his Spirit might attend each one in life.

In the evening a program was rendered by the children; also Sister Mabel States Martin, a graduate nurse of the Independence Sanitarium, favored us with a reading, and Miss Grace Buckmaster, a solo. Both are members of the Fort Scott Branch. The church was filled to overflowing, and many were not able to get in. The church was beautifully decorated in the national colors.

Sacramental service was held Sunday, July 6. The four young people that were baptized the previous Sunday were confirmed. Following the confirmation each of the congregation was asked to quote a verse on prayer. Both old and young responded. The youngest to quote a verse was Verna Dennis, eight years old, and the oldest was Brother John Graham, ninety years old. They were requested to stand on the rostrum. A very spiritual time was enjoyed by all.

Many will be saddened to learn of the death of the father of Sister Lee Quick. The family has the sympathy of the many who know them.

Three Baptized; Oriole Circle Organized

WINFIELD, KANSAS, July 9.—The branch here is still enjoying the good Spirit of the Lord and therefore is growing in numbers also. On Sunday, June 22, four young people were baptized, two girls, thirteen and ten years of age, and a young man sixteen years of age, Brother J. N. Madden officiating. The confirmation was at the evening prayer service, and the Spirit was felt in great power. The young man was spoken to and told that he had a great work to perform.

Brother Wooten, of Wichita, Kansas, was with us Sunday, June 15, and was the speaker at the morning service. His talk was very plain and interesting.

An Oriole Circle has been organized with Sister Mae Dick as monitor. The girls are enthused with the work.

The Saints were saddened by the death of Sister Eda E. Jameson Nicholson who passed away at her home June 2. Her death was caused by cancer. All was done that loving hands could do, but to no avail—the Lord knows why. She was ready to go and dreaded only to leave loved ones. She leaves a husband and seven children. Brother Charles E. Harpe, of Lamoni, Iowa, conducted the services at the church.

Brother Dexter, of Lamoni, Iowa, has been with us for the past two weeks. We certainly enjoy his talks.

The Saints here and some invited from Wichita, Kansas, celebrated the Fourth in Island Park. A dinner was served, and volley ball and swimming were enjoyed in the afternoon.

The Southwestern District reunion will soon be in session, July 18 to 27, at Island Park. Plan to spend your vacation here at the reunion.

Brockton Branch Is Prospering

BROCKTON, MASSACHUSETTS, July 7.—Elder Orval Thompson held a series of meetings here for a period of two weeks. The large attendance bore evidence to the interest which he aroused, and to the wonderful methods used to bring out each particular point. Brockton enjoyed every minute of his stay.

Elder Thompson officiated at two baptisms. The candidates were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ketchell.

The Good Cheer Club presented the church with a piano which is the accomplishment of one of the many aims they have in view. Many members of the Good Cheer Club spent a week at Dennisport at the home of Sister Mary Chase.

We wish to make a correction. In our letter previous to this we said that Elder F. S. Dobbins was able to get only indistinctly the talk by Elder Orval Thompson and the program broadcast by Boston Branch. However, it has been confirmed that the whole speech was heard very distinctly and the Saints in Brockton sang with the Boston Saints "The old, old path" as it came in over the radio. The separation of Station W G I from the station at Springfield is an expert accomplishment and requires a very good set.

Department of Women and Oriole Circle Organized

SKIATOOK, OKLAHOMA, July 16.—The Department of Women has been reorganized with a full set of officers. The prospects are for a real live local. We expect to come up to the standard of excellence.

An Oriole circle has been organized. The girls are busy and happy in the work. We expect to have a new church building in the near future.

MRS. BESSIE POOL.

News From Fall River and Onset

FALL RIVER, MASSACHUSETTS, July 7.—Elder Franklin S. Dobbins, of Brockton, delivered two splendid sermons here June 15. A large number came in the evening to hear him speak on "Radio."

Children's Sunday was observed June 29. At nine o'clock in the morning Barbara Heap, Robert Coombs, and Edwin Stinton were baptized by Elder James W. Heap in the beautiful Uatuppa Lake. The morning was somewhat stormy and the water was rough, but a little company of Saints gathered and sang the songs of Zion on the shores of the lake. The three were confirmed during the morning service. Other little ones will be baptized at Onset. There was a sermonet by the pastor, and recitations were given by Robert Coombs and Donald Gilbert. In the evening there were other recitations by the children and a sermonet by the pastor.

June 24, at eleven o'clock in the morning, Sister Elida Stinton passed away. It was thought that she was recovering, but God, who doeth all things well, saw fit in his infinite wisdom to call her home. The funeral was June 27 with prayer at the home and services at the church by Elder James W. Heap. The church was filled with relatives and friends. Brother Joseph Cliff sang, "I may not know the reason why," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Sister Stinton had a daughter in the church, and a little son was baptized Children's Day. She leaves two other sons. Her two sisters were in the church and will be a comfort to the children. Mr. Stinton is not a member, but came on Children's Day to see the confirmation of his son.

Sacramental service July 6 was in charge of the pastor and Brother Moses Sheehy. Only a few came out, but those few were blessed in coming. In the evening Elder O. L. Thompson came up from Onset with a group of the Saints and was the speaker of the hour. All were glad to see and hear him. He is happy to have the association of his family at Onset this summer.

The Sunday school picnic was held at Onset July 4. Only a few left the church on the picnic truck, as a large number had gone down the night before to remain over Sunday.

The Department of Women will have a car ride to Newport Beach July 12, to which all are invited. A shore dinner will be enjoyed.

Brother John Jackson, of Providence, was present at the service July 6 and sang a beautiful baritone solo, "Jesus cares." He is a brother of the Fall River organist, Sister Elizabeth Jackson.

Brother Moses Sheehy has been afflicted with trouble in his eyes and an abscess in his ear. Through administration he was helped. He is better now but is still having medical attention. Affliction does not keep Brother Moses away. He is always faithful in attendance and valiant in testimony. He will be one of the Saints who will wear out and not rust out.

June 22 Elder John Rogerson was the morning speaker, and Brother Alma Coombs spoke in the evening.

The attendance will be very small all summer because of the people being at Onset. July 6 only one teacher was present in the whole school.

Baptism in the Susquehanna

BLOOMSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA, June 30.—On Sunday, June 29, Elder H. C. Cunningham baptized one of our Sunday school pupils, Raymond Rishell, in the waters of the Susquehanna River. Though young, the lad was a brave candidate. It seemed good to be present. The song, "Nearer, my God, to thee," was sung. Several strangers were present.

San Jose, California

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA, July 9.—On June 15 we were very agreeably surprised when we received a long-distance call from Oakland, notifying us that our district president, John D. White, would be on hand to preach the morning sermon for us. Luckily for us, he did not have any blowouts and so "blew in" here on time and gave us one of his forceful sermons. His subject for discourse was "Obedience to law," and was delivered with no uncertain sound.

Brother and Sister Walker, of the Santa Rosa Branch, were visitors at this service, as was also a Sister Condit, whose exact address we did not get.

Elder George H. Wixom was the speaker at the morning hour June 22, after which he performed the ceremony which united in holy bonds of wedlock Brother Theren Walker, of Oakland, California, and one of our estimable young sisters, Evelyn Fonda, of this branch. Our loss is Oakland's gain. May God's choicest blessings be with these young people to enjoy through life.

We had another enjoyable prayer meeting the evening of June 25, with Elder Charles Cady and Robert Cowden, priest, in charge.

C. W. Hawkins, pastor, was the speaker at the morning hour June 29. His effort was along financial lines, urging the Saints to respond to the plea of the Bishop to pay their tithing and "make a consecration of their earthly time and store" to replenish the depleted church treasury. Immediately before the pastor began to speak, he requested the congregation to sing "Admonition," the song given by the Spirit to Elder Joseph Luff. The Spirit by which this admonition was given was within our midst and witnessed to the speaker that at the time this song was given it was opportune and that it is opportune now.

The consecrations or free will offering to date from this branch total about fifty dollars. One widowed sister, who works for one dollar a day, gave the two days' wages that the Bishop asked for. She is converted—that is the way we account for it.

On July 2, in the evening, the San Jose Branch held its quarterly business meeting, and besides the regular routine of business, delegates were elected to the district conference.

Elder G. H. Wixom was again with us on July 6 and had charge of the sacramental service, at which there were over fifty present, forty-six of whom partook of the emblems. The good Spirit prevailed, and we had an enjoyable meeting.

At the close of this service, Brother Wixom officiated at the wedding of Brother Oscar Bradley, of Oakland, and Sister Ruth Harris, of San Jose.

Social Workers Are Active

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, July 8.—Summer weather and vacation days are here. Several of our workers are away for the summer, but they with many others are planning to attend the district reunion at Irvington, July 17 to 27.

One interesting item omitted in our last letter was the social evening at the church, late in May, when our Department of Women, with Sister Florence Epling as leader, gave a play, "The modern sewing society," directed by Sisters Bertha Austin and Hazel Blohm. Little doll aprons with large pockets and a suggestive verse accompanying served as invitations, and $55 were added to our building fund. Sister Ella Knox furnished mimeographed programs, and Sister C. H. S. Bidwell secured from the City Park Department the loan of a number of potted plants which added effectively to the stage setting.

The program included two juvenile orchestra numbers, given by the pupils of Mrs. Christine Johnson, outside talent, and readings by one young sister, Pauline Napier. The orchestra, composed of about fifteen young children, made music with triangles, bird whistles, tambourines, and drums, with piano accompaniment. This musical adventure is new here, and their numbers are welcomed in many programs. Our chorister, Sister Birdie Clark, secured them for us.

J. D. White, the district president, was our speaker on June 22, and was called again to officiate in the sad rites of the funeral of Brother William Naaman Dawson on June 26. Brother Dawson held the office of priest and was a faithful Saint. His demise followed a brief illness of about two weeks. He was the father of Elder W. H. Dawson, district vice president.

Elder G. J. Waller, of San Francisco, was another welcome visitor and speaker recently.

During the summer absence of our local publicity agent, Sister Ella Knox is handling the weekly newspaper write-ups, keeping the notices in the free column of the two papers running the same.

Young Men Are Preaching

TULARE, CALIFORNIA, July 9.—The Saints here are looking forward to the coming reunion at Irvington. The Saints are active, with a good attendance at all services.

We were favored June 22 with a sermon from each of our young men of the priesthood. They were greatly blessed in their effort.

Brother J. D. White, district president, slipped in on us Sunday, June 29, and gave us a wonderful sermon at the eleven o'clock service. Brother White was accompanied by Brother A. S. Votaw, of Dinuba.

The sacramental service was well attended July 6. A peaceful Spirit was present.

Sioux City News

SIoux CITY, IOWA, July 10.—Brother George M. Vandel will preach July 13 on the subject, "Remember Lot's wife." The evening sermon on "The need of religious education," will be delivered by Brother J. E. Keck. The program for Religion will be furnished by the Hall family.

An evening picnic will be held at Saunder's Beach, Crystal Lake, on Thursday, July 17. The men and boys will be expected to pay twenty-five cents for their lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. Reese Jones and Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Burchett and children, have recently moved here from Macon, Missouri. Brother Burchett is a deacon and a staunch supporter of the latter-day work.

Little Elizabeth Agnes Pilcher received her blessing last Sunday under the hands of Elders G. M. Vandel, N. O. Calhoun, and C. Streeter. She is a little Indian child, the daughter of Sister Minnie Pilcher.

New Piano for the Persia Church

PERSIA, IOWA, July 10.—The Persia Branch is still alive and is having services on Sunday when the preacher gets there.

We had a fair attendance on June 22, also on June 29, at the preaching services. The following Sunday, July 6, we had sacramental services. After passing the bread and wine, a short time was spent in fellowship meeting, in which several took part.

The Department of Women has felt for some time that the branch needed a better instrument for the song service, so they made arrangement for the purchase of a piano, which has been completed and the piano installed in the church last Monday. It takes the place that the old organ has occupied since 1886. The transaction reminds me of what I heard an elder say many years ago: "Good music is half the battle in a preaching service."

The branch president, Frederick Hansen, went to Lamoni last June while the young people of the church were in convention; one object of the going was to see what one had to put into it to get anything out of it. The services were good and instructive.

A Completed Church in Ten Weeks

The building of the church at Jenks, Oklahoma, is a test of concentration of effort. Ten weeks of intensive work covers the entire period. Starting with one member, we now have twenty families and a new church building with a seating capacity of one hundred and fifty. I preached eight weeks, baptized thirty-four, raised the money to pay all the bills, and worked on the building with Brother Christensen, who stayed two weeks to help build. More than sixty per cent of the labor was donated. During the time of that effort I went to Sperry, twenty miles away, and preached two weeks and baptized twenty.

Our work in Oklahoma is onward. Never in my life have I seen such opportunities for the man who will work. The Lord will give the increase, and the man of God will find joy in service. I am also convinced that the grouch and the idler, in or out of Zion, will be unhappy and make others feel the same way. Why not thrust in our sickles and reap? The harvest is ripe; the field is great. Your coworker,

HUBERT CASE.

Blessings Follow Paying of the Tithe

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, July 14.—I have been reading in the HERALD for July 2, page 637, the letter to Bishop McGuire from a tithing solicitor, and I feel I would like to add my experience on the subject. Tithing was not taught when I joined the Reorganization in 1867, and the first missionary I heard on the subject said if any had valuable pictures, jewelry, or anything that was not a necessity, the tenth of the value of such things belonged to God; also it was only that which was over and above what we needed in money that had to be tithed.

I wondered many times why God should give a commandment with a promise of blessings which could never be enjoyed by the poor of his people, and I felt to give up hope of ever being able to live by the law of tithing, but by and by our much esteemed Brother James Caffall came to England and preached a sermon on tithing. He put it this way: We brought nothing into the world, and whatever we had gained since then was our increase, and the tenth of the value of it belonged to God. If we were too poor to pay it, we could acknowledge our debt by sending to the bishop what small sum we could, promising to pay as the Lord blessed us.

Myself and a sister beside me shed tears of joy as we listened to that sermon, and to my knowledge there are at least three or four heads of families who are still tithe-payers that heard that sermon. Some did not receive the teaching, and I, like the poor widow mentioned in the above named letter, was derided by some for the attempt to pay tithing, saying that I had no tithing to pay. But like her again, I felt the Lord understood my heart. The Bishop's agent put "free will offering" on my receipts, but I did not mind, and I feel sure there are hundreds of poor Saints who would be only too glad to make some sacrifice and do as the poor widow is doing, for it is indeed the Spirit of law keeping that gives joy to the heart, not the letter alone. It is for that reason that I am sending my experience, hoping and praying that it may be brought to the notice of some poor in this world's goods, but whose souls are hungering and thirsting after righteousness and would be glad of the privilege of joining the list of sacrificing ones of the church.

It is a day of sacrifice, and it is sacrifice that brings forth the blessings of heaven; therefore let us do all we can to forward this great work. I hold with the remarks of the tithing solicitor that the manner of paying tithes is largely a matter between us and the Lord. So let us all do our best and live up to the requirements of the laws of the church that we may have the approval of our loving Savior who has done so much for us.

ESTHER FURNESS.

Bishop's Appeal Cheerfully Heeded

SHELLBROOK, SASKATCHEWAN, July 14.—We are pleased to report a busy, pleasant, and profitable time at the Shellbrook Branch for the past month.

Perhaps not least in importance has been the enthusiastic answer to the Bishop's drive for funds, an answer in which the ladies' auxiliary, as usual, took the most prominent part, staging an unusually successful bazaar and ice cream social, preceded by an interesting program, a feature of which was an amusing and instructive play by members of the auxiliary. So successful was their effort that plans are already being laid for a like effort to be held sometime next fall or early winter.

The preaching services, of which two are held each Sunday, are well attended and seemingly greatly enjoyed. The speakers so far have been local men, our presiding officer, Brother Bowerman, our priest, Brother Andrew Filby, and Brother Fred W. Smith alternating from the pulpit. They have been blessed, not alone by the Spirit's recognition of their office, but by an eager and attentive audience. To speak to the church family at Shellbrook is indeed a pleasure.

We would miss the most pleasant part of our duty as correspondent if mention were not made of the growing desire of our members to come up higher, to cooperate, to cast out petty bickerings and strife, and to become indeed one big, helping, loving family, each one "loving and serving the other."

Our Book of Mormon class, directed by Fred W. Smith, is fast taking on the form of a lecture class, in which even non-members are eager to participate, two being present at our last session, one of whom has a subject assigned for an early date. We are hopeful of good being accomplished through its functioning.

Recognition of the intense desire of our people to worship God acceptably was given through the Spirit at one monthly sacramental meeting in which several of the gifts were displayed to a marked degree, the sick being healed, God's people being encouraged and admonished, and consolation given.

In closing we, the people of Shellbrook, wish to greet the family of Brother and Sister McClennan who have left us to mingle with the Saints of Winnipeg. We miss them, but wish them success in their new home which we feel sure they merit.

Southern Wisconsin District

JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, July 15.—The Southern Wisconsin district conference was held at Lancaster, Wisconsin, July 21 and 22. The conference was well attended, especially by the branches in the western part of the district, to whom the June conference more especially belongs; the December conference is usually held in the eastern part of the district.

Patriarch W. A. McDowell's presence was, as usual, a cause of much rejoicing among the Saints of Southern Wisconsin. There were present also W. L. Christy, district missionary; J. O. Dutton, district president; George Noble, his counselor; and other local men.

On Saturday the work of the conference opened with the usual routine of work, such as reading of branch and priesthood reports, resolutions, etc. The district president, J. O. Dutton, made a statement concerning the condition of the district, stating that while there were no glowing prospects, still the condition could be considered favorable.

Two resolutions relating to the coming reunion were passed: one to authorize the reunion committee to buy one hundred copies of the paper-covered song booklets used at the late Young People's Convention, as the songbooks previously loaned by the several branches have been considerably damaged; the other resolution was on limiting the free meals and accommodations, which in the future will be extended only to the representatives sent to the reunion by the general reunion committee of the church and to the district president and district missionary, not including their families.

A departmental meeting was held Saturday forenoon. Sister Christy spoke for the Department of Women; N. E. Field for the Department of Recreation and Expression and library work; and J. O. Dutton for the Sunday school. A resolution was passed favoring the junior church for children under ten or twelve years being conducted at the reunion somewhat after the lines of last year. Brother Christy preached at eight o'clock that evening.

Sunday was as usual a full day, beginning with the prayer service at nine o'clock; preaching services by both Elders W. A. McDowell and W. L. Christy; a splendid program also was given by the children of the Buckwheat Ridge Branch and the Flora Fountain Branch. Thanks were extended to these two branches for their hospitality in caring for the conference.

JULIA N. DUTTON, Secretary.

Enjoyable Sunday at Des Moines

DES MOINES, IOWA, July 16.—The Spirit of the Lord was openly manifested at the meeting Sunday morning, July 6. Brother Elbert A. Smith, of the Presidency, delivered the opening exhortation in which he gave a wonderful lecture to the priesthood. The spirit of prophecy was evidenced in two instances. Brother Smith admonished the people to stay closer to the Lord, and Brother David Dowker called several people to different offices. Brethren Joseph Johnson, Stephen Robinson, Joseph Brown, and C. T. Kirkwood were called as priests, Brother Lehi Wilkinson as teacher, and Brother David Emslie as a deacon. The branch concurred in the selections, and arrangements were made for the ordination to take place the morning of August 3.

Brother Elbert Smith delivered an inspiring and encouraging sermon in the evening.

Brother Edward G. Beye, of Rhodes, spoke at the Sunday morning service of July 13, and Brother C. E. MacDonald, pastor of the Runnells Branch, delivered the evening sermon. Both spoke in the interest of the coming reunion at Runnells, which it is anticipated will be the largest that has ever been conducted in the Des Moines District.

Most of the Des Moines ministry were preaching throughout the district Sunday. Brother David Dowker and Brother Henry Castings went to Pershing; Brother Will Robinson and Brother Levi Anderson to Dunrie; Brother Fred Wilkinson and Doctor Hill preached at Runnells; Brother and Sister John Lentell and Brother E. O. Clark at Sandyville; Brethren Norman Anderson, Earl Hall, and Stephen Robinson at Perry. All reported very profitable meetings.

Brother David Dowker, pastor, and his family have gone to Michigan to visit Sister Dowker's relatives. Brother Dowker will return soon, the family remaining for a longer visit.

Affliction and Death at San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, July 16.—The Saints were made sad by the death of Sister Margarite Galbraith, one of our faithful members, who passed away in a local hospital July 6 after an operation. Her father, Brother Fred Smith, of Cleveland, Ohio, arrived, and the funeral was held on Wednesday. The many beautiful floral offerings told of the love and esteem in which she was held. Her bright smile will long be remembered by those who knew and loved her. She leaves a husband and two little boys, besides her father, four sisters, and a brother.

The hand of affliction has rested heavily upon the San Antonio Saints of late. A number of them have been in the hospital, and some are still sick. We ask those who read this to breathe a prayer for the Saints here that if it would please our heavenly Father the hand of affliction might be removed or that we might have grace to bear these afflictions.

We believe there is a bright side to every picture and that every cloud has its silver lining, so will try to turn the bright side of the picture out.

On the Sunday that our sister passed to the other side, a new soul was inducted into the kingdom of God.

Brother D. S. Palmer recently held a meeting at Moore, Texas, which resulted in the baptism of three. Brother Palmer favored the San Antonio Saints with a sermon on the evening of July 6, which was greatly appreciated.

Troy Keeps Children's Day

TROY, KANSAS, July 16.—The work in this part is moving along. Children's Day was observed, and a fitting program was rendered by the school. A beautiful drill was given by ten girls, which showed careful practice. The day was a beautiful one. One little girl was baptized at four o'clock by Brother Samuel Twombly.

Brother J. D. Stead was in the branch last week, remaining over two Sundays, and preached several times. He met in the midweek prayer service with Fanning Branch.

On the last Sunday the Fanning Saints met with the Troy Group in Sunday school and church, then enjoyed a sumptuous basket dinner on the church lawn. There was preaching at three o'clock by Brother Stead, which was greatly enjoyed by all.

Elder Twombly and wife spent Sunday, July 13, with the Netawaka Branch in the interest of the work. The district reunion has been held at Netawaka the last two years and will be held there this year. All are looking forward to it as a refreshing time. All feel glad to attend that can, as it is profitable in a spiritual way and furnishes a vacation to many who otherwise would have none.

Independence

Friday morning, July 25, at ten o'clock, Ronald Smith, son of President and Mrs. Elbert A. Smith, and Miss Vera Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Adams, were married at the Stone Church, the groom's father officiating, with only a few relatives and friends present. The young couple drove to Nauvoo for their wedding trip. Brother Smith will teach in Kansas University next year while he continues post graduate work there. They will make their home in Independence.

President Elbert A. Smith spoke Sunday night on the Campus on the subject, "Laborers together with God."

President F. M. Smith is in the West, where he expects to attend the reunions at Irvington, California, and Hermosa Beach. Bishop I. A. Smith is also in the West attending reunions.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards was in Winfield, Kansas, over Sunday attending the reunion. Bishop Keir also attended the Winfield reunion over Sunday.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer attended the district conference in Saint Louis this week.

Mrs. B. R. McGuire and family are visiting in the East for a few weeks.

Sister Alta Mae Schafer, daughter of Brother and Sister F. R. Schafer, of South Side, and granddaughter of Patriarch C. E. Butterworth, left Sunday evening for Iowa City, Iowa, to take a position as nurse in the pediatric department of the University Hospital there. Sister Schafer graduated from the Independence Sanitarium last May.

Brother Heman H. Davis, of the Second Church congregation, is on the debating team which won the national championship debate week before last in Baltimore, Maryland, at the annual convention of the American Institute of Banking. Brother Davis is employed at the Federal Reserve Bank, Kansas City, Missouri. The South Side people feel quite proud of him. He is the son of Brother J. Arthur Davis, of the mission field, and was a student at Graceland. Last year he was ordained a priest.

Glen L. Davies, of Miami, Oklahoma, and Miss Clara Moore, of Independence, were married July 24 at the home of L. E. Hills, who was the officiating minister. Sister Moore is a member of the Second Church congregation.

Brother A. H. Parsons concluded a series of Sunday morning lectures at East Independence Sunday. Brother Bath is continuing his series of Sunday night sermons, speaking on "The restoration" July 27. The Saints of this congregation were glad to have with them also for the Sunday night service, the orchestra from Walnut Park, which rendered some very pleasing numbers under the direction of Brother Nace.

Next Friday night Brother L. E. Hills will begin a series of four lectures on the Book of Mormon at the East Independence Religio. His first lecture will be from the Bible, showing how the people happened to come to this country from the Tower of Babel.

Brother R. S. Salyards spoke at Spring Branch on the morning of July 27 to an interested audience. A very interesting program was given at the Religio Friday evening, consisting of a short play and musical numbers by Brothers J. Charles May and George Anway. Brother May also gave a short talk about some of his missionary experiences.

Brother George Jenkins was the speaker at Walnut Park at eleven o'clock.

The young men's class and the young women's class of Second Church Sunday school made a pilgrimage to Topeka, Kansas, Sunday, July 27, and spent the day with Topeka Saints, who gave them a royal welcome and entertainment.

J. D. Stead preached in the morning, after which a picnic dinner was enjoyed. A mixed program was given in the afternoon, in which the Independence young people took part. The pilgrims motored home in the afternoon and evening over the new Victory Highway that is just being completed. Such trips as these are most profitable, both to the visitors and to those visited.

Last Monday night a special meeting was called at Enoch Hill to launch a campaign to pay off the existing local church debt, and with a view to later establish a reserve fund for further expansion. At this meeting several substantial pledges were made. The congregation also passed a resolution in which they pledged themselves to support a sacrifice of one meal each week, or the equivalent thereof.

The speaker at eleven on July 27 was Paster W. J. Brewer, while G. R. Kuykendall occupied at seven in the evening.

One baptism took place Sunday, that of Minerva Addi Morris, sixty-nine years of age, Brother Brewer officiating.

Holden Stake News

Holden

July 26.—Apostle F. H. Edwards was the speaker at the church at eleven o'clock on Sunday, the 13th. He also spoke at the Home in the afternoon. His discourses were very helpful. In the evening Brother Fred Cleveland, of Kansas City, gave an illustrated address on the life of Christ. Brother Cleveland also spoke on Tuesday evening following. Elders H. E. Moler and I. M. Ross gave the sermons at the church last Sunday, the 20th, morning and evening respectively.

The Holden Home gave their annual picnic on the 18th. On account of the weather they held their dinner in the Home auditorium.

Sisters Bessie Young, Lourissa Dillon, and Floy Lycan, three of our church family, have returned after spending a few weeks at the Independence Sanitarium. They are all improving nicely and speak in the highest terms of the splendid attention received from the nurses and doctors. The wonderful work of the Sanitarium and the ministrations of its consecrated women and men is impossible to evaluate. May the call of Sister Copeland for young women to enter the nurses' training school be met with a hearty response by our girls who will take God with them in their training and service.

In last week's edition, reference to the moving of the Ferguson family to Sedalia omitted the name of Sister Ferguson, who was teacher in both Sunday school and Religio.

We were happy to have with us at our last sacramental meeting Elder G. W. Rodger, who is a member of the stake high council. His testimony was much enjoyed, as it was filled with advice and encouragement. Also with us the same day was Evangelist Richard Bullard, who preached the evening sermon.

Last Sunday the latter part of the Sunday school hour was used by the cradle roll superintendent, Sister Anna Bogue. She had a very fitting short program rendered by the children, after which Sister J. C. Schwab gave a talk upon the topic of the cradle roll. Brother Glaud A. Smith, from Walnut Park, Independence, preached both the morning and evening sermons.

A junior choir has been organized, with Isla Thompson as chorister. We are anticipating good work from this bunch of young folks.

Our Sunday school superintendent, Brother D. R. Hughes, occupied the pulpit Sunday morning, his subject being the "Relation of the Sunday school to the church." Brother Schwab spoke in the evening, subject, "Foundation of our religion."

We feel the spirit of love and peace among us, and each one is feeling the necessity of living in closer communion with God. Brother Schwab, our pastor, is mindful of the sheep, that they do not wander from the fold. When we all feed and browse within the fold, we have green pasture and clear, cool water; when united with the spirit of love, we can say, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. . . . I shall fear no evil."

We have just finished half of our year's work. The priesthood have done work that is very commendable. There are thirty-one families, and forty-eight visits have been made.

Sedalia

Elder W. S. Macrae has been our speaker the last two Sundays, and his sermons have been greatly enjoyed by the members. Brother Macrae is taking his annual vacation at the state fair ground, where with the assistance of some of the local men, he is making some much needed improvements on the dining hall. Our pastor, G. W. Rodger, visited the Lexington Saints Sunday, the 13th, and Independence the 20th. Sister J. B. Rodger, of Independence, mother of G. W. and Sister Oswald Rahm, has been in Sedalia the past two weeks, visiting.

O. M. Carpenter has returned from Wisconsin and reports his brother Floyd much improved after a serious operation, having been greatly blessed through administration.

Marshall

Elder Harold Thayer and family have returned from their visit to Sister Thayer's parents, Brother and Sister August Dellar, of Rich Hill, Missouri. A family reunion was held the Fourth of July at the parental home by the children of of Brother and Sister Dellar.

Will A. Ridge, deacon, preached Sunday morning, July 20; Pastor Phelps at night.

Knobnoster

Our meetings are fairly well attended and are quite spiritual; especially is this true of the Wednesday evening prayer meetings. Brother I. M. Ross, of the stake bishopric, was present July 13 and occupied the eleven o'clock hour. Brother J. F. Petrie preached the evening sermon; he left Tuesday for his mission field in Colorado.

Sister Ethel Moorman and children, of Independence, are visiting with Brother and Sister Ellsworth Moorman. Sister Ernest Moorman, who has been seriously afflicted the past month, is at Independence receiving treatment.

Far West Stake

The five Saint Joseph churches are still clinging to the "rod of iron" in all activities of the gospel and young people's recreation.

Sunday, July 6, the regular quarterly union sacramental service was held at the First Saint Joseph Church, with a good attendance. The meeting was a spiritual one.

July 4 the five schools met together in a union picnic at Bartlett Park; over three hundred participated in the good time on that occasion. A good program was rendered and all enjoyed themselves very much. A baseball game took place in the morning up until half past eleven, after which a patriotic program was rendered as follows:

Song, "America"; prayer by Brother Milo Burnett; patriotic reading, Walter Spooner; address, Brother O. Salisbury; Song, "Star-Spangled Banner."

After the program tables were spread for lunch. The bal-

REUNION NEWS

Northern Wisconsin

TOMAHAWK, WISCONSIN, July 15.—The few Saints here are still striving to come to a higher plane, and the home of Sister Taylor is again open for Sunday school, since her health is much improved.

Many who attended the Northern Wisconsin reunion returned home much refreshed and encouraged, the reunion being the best ever held at Chetek. Much was contributed by Brother Lenox, the district president, and his associates.

Brother Manly Shedd went from Porcupine several days prior to reunion to help get the ground in order. Sister Lucy Mair, of the decorating committee, also went early.

The reunion was blessed with good speakers. The force were J. F. Garver, F. M. McDowell, W. A. McDowell, and L. O. Wildermuth, besides our local men. The "Social problem and humans living together" was the theme of the reunion, and it surely came to us in the proper way. All felt the great need of applying these things to our lives and the need of them at this age.

Along with this work, Brother Floyd McDowell and Brother ance of the day was spent in games and contests which were enjoyed very much by all.

The overseers, composed of the stake high council, are visiting the different branches in the stake with good results.

Sister Liggett, of the Department of Women, is also visiting the various branches in the stake, encouraging the women in their work and organizing that department where there is no organization. On Sunday, June 23, she completed an organization at Fortescue, Missouri. They enjoyed her visit very much. She also visited Ravenwood and Kingston. Sunday, July 20, she will visit Ross Grove Branch.

Brother O. Salisbury has visited nearly all the branches in the stake. With the assistance of the overseers, the branches have all been visited one, two, or three times since March 1. The Saints enjoyed the visits of the brethren very much.

Brother Coventry Archibald visits Edgerton and Trimble Branches each month. Brother J. L. Bear visits Ross Grove and Fortescue, while Brother Milo Burnett takes care of the visiting among the Saint Joseph churches. Brother Alec Jensen visits the branches in the extreme northern part of the stake. F. L. Hendricks, Coleman Snyder, C. E. Wood, B. R. Constance, and Thomas J. Fiddick have charge of the visiting through the central, eastern, and southern parts of the stake. The priesthood of the Saint Joseph branches have decided to set apart Thursday evening of each week for visiting, which we feel is a good move—having a definite time set for our visiting.

The wedding of Miss Olive Gurwell and Lieutenant Gerald Reid was performed at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Whitlow, July 5. The ceremony was performed by Brother J. L. Bear. The couple will take a trip through the Black Hills of South Dakota, and after September 15 they will make their home in San Antonio, Texas.

The wedding ceremony of Miss Edna Casselman and Mr. R. G. Cox took place the evening of July 19 at the home of Brother J. L. Bear, Brother Bear officiating. We wish them a long and happy life.

We are all looking forward to a grand and successful reunion which will convene at Stewartsville August 21 to 31.

Harder kept the young people busy with recreation.

The Saints were admonished, also encouraged through the manifestations of God's Spirit to W. A. McDowell, Apostle J. F. Garver, and A. L. Whitaker. It will be long remembered how Brother Garver pleaded so tenderly with the people to come closer to the Savior.

Sister McDowell put on a play by the junior young people, showing the difference between a well-directed home and a misdirected one, which was very good. Sister Hield also contributed much for the benefit of reunion in behalf of the Department of Women and the junior church school.

About twenty attended from Tomahawk, and many feel the need of a regeneration. We are made to feel our weaknesses when we meet together and confess our faults one to another, and may we live to meet at that great reunion when Christ shall come to meet his children.

Preparations for Runnells Reunion

RUNNELLS, IOWA, July 14.—The members of Runnells Branch are unusually active this summer in all departments of the work.

Mabel Tingle and Lola White attended two days of the Young People's Convention at Lamoni and report a splendid convention.

Brother Thamer Warren, who has been at Galesburg, Illinois, for three months, is at home again and assisting in branch work. He and his wife expect to attend Graceland this fall.

Sunday, July 7, was a very busy day for our branch president. He administered the sacrament to the Saints at Dunreath, preached a funeral sermon at Vandalia in the afternoon, and preached at Runnells at night. In all the services of the day he was greatly blessed by the presence of the Holy Spirit. The funeral was that of Myrtle Noon, an eighteen-year-old girl, who was not a member but might have been if she had lived. Hers was a beautiful character.

The district president, Henry Castings, has included Runnells in his calling list this summer and has been a very welcome visitor, preaching some splendid sermons. He has visited all branches in the district and reports them in good spiritual condition generally.

Sunday, July 13, was selected by the district presidency to send out teams in all branches of the district to boost for attendance at the reunion which will convene here August 8 to 17. Elders Wilkinson and Hull were sent to Runnells. They preached two very fine sermons which were much enjoyed by the Saints, although some were attracted by a member of Billy Sunday's party who spoke at another church in the evening. On this date E. G. Beye and C. E. McDonald were sent to Des Moines.

Sister Lola White has been selected for leader of the Temple Builders, and they have been meeting regularly this summer.

Brother Will Park met with an accident last week in which his left shoulder was dislocated. He and his family were present at the services Sunday, however, although his shoulder is very sore.

The tornado which swept over much of the Mississippi Valley struck Runnells at half past one on the morning of June 27, doing considerable damage to orchards and timber. Several large trees were uprooted in the park that is used for reunion, but it is expected that all will be cleared up before August 8.

For information to those who will attend the reunion at Runnells, the town is on the Wabash Railroad, seventeen miles southeast of Des Moines. Trains running from Des Moines arrive here at 8.25 a. m. and 8.42 p. m.; and from Albia at 6.45 a. m. and 1.47 p. m. Trains leave the Union Station at Des Moines, and a bus line operates on a regular schedule, making headquarters at the Wellington Hotel in Des Moines. Special arrangements will be made for those who want to go to Des Moines after night services if there are enough passengers to pay to make the trip. The Runnells High Line is graveled to Des Moines.

The Saints here are looking forward with joyful anticipation to the reunion, hoping that there will be a large number in attendance and praying that a spiritual feast will be enjoyed.

Central Nebraska

INMAN, NEBRASKA, July 14.—The Central Nebraska reunion closed yesterday what was conceded as the best gathering in the history of the district. Saints had been coming in during the week, and Sunday promised to be a day of special blessing. The weather and roads had been excellent, the services were well attended, there was not the slightest suggestion of discord, and the people rejoiced. In spite of an intermittent rain all day Sunday, the attendance taxed the capacity of the church building, and every service witnessed a marked degree of the Spirit of the Master.

The closing hour came all too soon, and with tear-dimmed eyes and choking voices we sang, "God be with you till we meet again." Brother McGuire offered the closing prayer, which breathed the spirit of sympathy, love, and consecration. Long the Saints lingered in their farewells, for the days had been sweet in their associations, their interests had been united in a common hope, and their hearts had been warmed by the same Spirit of God. There was joy in the realization of the common blessing, and sadness in the fact that for a time the pleasant relationship must be broken. But the memory of the reunion will be cherished, and the spiritual experiences will serve to increase our faith and clarify our vision. We shall go home from the reunion with a clearer understanding of our duty in the gospel and with a firm determination to enter with vigor into the service to which the Saints are called.

We may pass the following observations on the details of the reunion:

The morning study hour each week day in charge of Brother Woodstock proved interesting, profitable, and popular. A series of lectures on "Character building," including a basis of psychology and an application of the fundamental principles of ethics to our lives, revealed the philosophy of the gospel plan. One session each was devoted to a consideration of the following subjects: "The world in which we live; human nature; right and wrong in conduct; habit and desire; conscience and duty; self-control; and the power of an ideal. Although designed primarily as a course for the young, and given at eight o'clock, the church was usually well filled at each lecture. The gospel plan for our salvation was found to be in harmony with the most profound philosophy of man's wisdom concerning himself, his relation to others and to God. This gives us confidence to seek the development of noble, true characters through understanding and living the gospel law, the great individual objective of the gospel. Before the close of the business session on Friday, a resolution was adopted asking for further study-hour courses to be presented at the 1925 reunion.

The prayer services were marked by a splendid degree of earnestness, and the devotion of the Saints was met with a manifestation of the gifts in admonition, commendation, and prophecy on many occasions. The young people met separately for a part of each session and then joined the adult group. Among the young there was a most hopeful evidence of growing faith and a willingness to enter into active service. The sweet presence of the Holy Spirit melted our hearts, softened our natures, inspired our desires, and led us very near to the Master. Early Sunday morning they met for special prayer in one of the big hay barns of the village. Although it was raining out of doors, it was a hallowed occasion, never to be forgotten. We are sure those experiences will bear a rich fruitage in the Central Nebraska District.

The work of the various departments was given due emphasis in round table discussions each afternoon. The general field of the Department of Women was ably presented by Sister Burton on Wednesday. She was followed in excellent discussions by two members from Inman, Sister Butler, on child welfare; and Sister Peterson, on economy in the home. These were timely, practical, and well received. We trust they may appear later in publication.

An interesting afternoon was spent in considering the place of the young people in the program of the church. Sister Burton ably presented the ideals of the Orioles and Temple Builders, and Brother Burton feelingly pleaded for a recognition of the boys as the potential men of the church. Brother Burton is a general scout executive and has a fund of valuable information and experience. The work of Brother and Sister Burton was much appreciated at the reunion.

Problems of the other departments were presented and discussed with a great degree of freedom, and we trust good may result. Brother and Sister Talcot, of Chadron, were present two days. Brother Talcot spoke one afternoon on the work of the Department of Music and assisted much in conducting the singing during his stay. Sister Talcot has had good experience as a local Department of Women worker in Iowa, and we look forward to an extended usefulness among the women of Central Nebraska.

Volley ball was introduced as the chief source of recreation. Old and young entered actively into the game with great zest and enjoyment, or watched with interest from the side lines. The rules were strictly followed, and the players developed an amount of skill and physical training as well as pleasure in the relaxation. The volley ball court was a happy gathering place for all, under the shadow of the great cottonwoods, whenever services were not in progress. In the evening after services the young gathered again, under a gas light, for a happy half hour of supervised play before saying "Good night."

Under the direction of Brother Fred Gatenby, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, a number of the young people had come prepared to assist in a literary and musical program. Instead of an entire session, the program was divided, and the numbers used as special features before the evening preaching hour.

District conference business occupied two sessions. A budget plan of financing the work of the district, providing funds to meet the missionary needs, the needs of the several departments, and an emergency fund for the reunion of 1925, was adopted. This is a progressive step which should increase the efficiency of work in the district.

On Sunday eleven souls were born into the kingdom, being baptized in the Elkhorn River by Elder Levi Gamet. Five of the candidates were grandchildren of Brother Gamet. Brother Arthur Derry, of Elgin, Nebraska, a nephew of Charles Derry, now deceased, was also among the number. Confirmation was had at the afternoon sacrament service.

During the reunion the eight remaining children of Brother Levi Gamet were all back for a family reunion—the first in twenty years. All are members of the church, married and have families. There are fifty grandchildren and many great-grandchildren. Brother Gamet, for many years the president of the Central Nebraska District, impresses one as a splendid type of a man of God, in whom the gospel has found beautiful expression as he has ripened in years. He is loved and respected by all who know him.

We rejoiced in our association with the good people at the Inman reunion. In some respects they have been isolated in the sand hills and valleys of the great plains, but their hearts respond to the thrill of the gospel call, and we are confident the Master is preparing among them many who shall perform well their part in the onward progress of the latter-day work and the redemption of Zion.

C. B. WOODSTOCK, Reunion Secretary.

Fairview Branch Visits Eastern Montana Reunion

FAIRVIEW, MONTANA, July 14.—The Fairview Branch has been visiting again. This time it was to the Eastern Montana reunion at Girard. Though not large in attendance, many spoke of it as the best reunion they had ever attended.

This was due to the effort put forth by a few earnest workers, among whom were Elder Carl Crum and Apostle Roy S. Budd. Brother Crum came early and worked hard, holding meetings in a house until the tent, delayed in transit, arrived in time for the last three days.

Many nonmembers listened attentively to the gospel message so ably presented by Brother Crum. We look upon him as one of our most promising young missionaries. He seemed to make friends for the gospel of all who came.

Brother Budd demonstrated his apostleship in his kind, lovable way of getting the idea across, and all hope he can return. The Spirit was present, and we have decided to hold another reunion next year. We already have nearly enough money to pay expenses.

Eastern Montana Reunion and Conference

Our reunion was held at Girard, Montana, from July 8 to 13. Due to the lateness of the hour when our district decided to hold a reunion, it was difficult to advertise as widely as we would like, and we were very fortunate to secure Apostle R. S. Budd to assist Carl Crum, our Montana missionary, in breaking the bread of life.

Brother Crum was on the ground from the beginning, carrying on the work royally with the support and assistance of Brother A. Ritter, of Fairview, Montana, until the 12th, when Brother Budd, accompanied by J. C. Page, of Glasgow, arrived in time for our morning service and remained until Sunday evening.

Those fortunate enough to attend went to their homes rejoicing over the spiritual feast and decided success of our reunion, with a full determination to hold a reunion in Eastern Montana District in 1925.

A motion was carried for the district presidency to be our reunion committee, with Brother Ritter as financial agent and booster.

Sister W. R. Holman, of Fairview, is chairman of the Department of Women committee. Many are planning to can fruit and vegetables from our gardens for the use and benefit of our 1925 reunion. By the cooperation of the entire district a reunion will be an easy matter, a decided success, and many more will enjoy the rich blessings received by the few at Girard.

Begin to plan now to attend Eastern Montana reunion in 1925.

CLARA M. WHEELER.

CONCERNING AN OPEN LETTER

of securing by the conference as clear a statement as is practicable. Certainly none of us should feel ourselves so bound as not to be able to approach the conference with sufficiently open minds to be at liberty at least to consider every resolution as actually presented and discussed.

The church is passing through a critical time which has long been foretold. It becomes us to engage in earnest, humble prayer for wisdom and an understanding heart; to consider the question without personal ill will toward any, but an earnest desire to achieve the truth, and with sufficient open-mindedness not to form a final conclusion until we have heard all the reasons which may be brought forth. Certainly it would be unwise to reach a final judgment on the statement of any one or two alone.

It would seem a misfortune to the church for those who signed the Open Letter to stand pat and consider themselves bound to uphold as a camp at war that which may be presented by any one of them, or even that which may have been signed by all of them, rather than to consider always; first, the interests of the church and how best can the subject matter be presented for the information and salvation of the church.

It certainly would not be less disastrous for those who signed the statement on government appearing in the HERALD for July 9 to consider themselves bound in a way to prevent them individually giving their very best service freely to the church and to the conference.

Can we not agree with the first proposition on page 651, extending it, however, to include all of the officers of the church: "The various officers of the church should not be discredited in seeking to exercise functions in harmony with the law as laid down in the standard books of the church, but should be supported by the faith and confidence of the Saints." Can we not also strongly agree with the second proposition as stated, regardless of by whom such statements are made:

That since it seems the matters in controversy are to be brought before General Conference, it will be well for the Saints and delegates to study further the law and weigh matters presented for their consideration, reserving final judgment until the conference meets to hear the cause. And most assuredly none will finally reach conclusions from the basis of unanswered reasoning or statements, publicly or privately made.

And then proceed to accept fully the third statement:

We fully believe that God is the founder and the builder of the church. Jesus said, "I will build my church." All should be faithful and steadfast, looking for the final victory.

We fully believe the church is destined to go forward. It remains for the Saints to be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity.

If there must be two "camps," it will be treason to admit any fairness on the "other side" or give any statement of fact which may appear favorable to what may be called the "other side," but is it not treason to the church to refuse to state frankly the truth as we see it and to give our best endeavor to the only side we have any business to be on, the Lord's side? Considering our discussion in the light of Doctrine and Covenants 129: 9;

The Spirit saith further unto the church: The Lord is well pleased with the advancement which has been made in approaching unity during the conference year; and though there may have been differences of opinion, these differences have been held in unity of purpose and desire for the good of my people, and will result in helping to bring to pass a unity of understanding. So be ye encouraged and press on to the consummation designed of God for his people—unity, honor, sanctification, and glory. Amen. [Italics above are mine for emphasis only.—S. A. B.]

S. A. BURGESS.

An Acceptance as Editor

The peculiar conditions and statements made by others appear to justify a brief statement in acceptance as contributing editor. Various circumstances have prevented an earlier publication.

For nearly sixty years the HERALD has been under the editorial control of a member of the First Presidency. At the same time the Board of Publication has had placed upon it by the Articles of Incorporation of the church and action of General Conference the direct responsibility of administering the literary interests of the church, and this board has continually elected the editors of the various publications. Anyone in accepting as an editor necessarily recognizes this legal right and responsibility.

On the other hand, an effort has evidently been made to secure representation of many diverse interests among the contributing editors. Therefore, a discussion of the ideal administration is not now necessary.

Our personal opinion is that the Board of Publication acts as does other boards, under the general supervision of the First Presidency as the leading spiritual authority of the church. Nor do we know that this is denied, though interpretations may differ as to the nature and extent of their supervision.

Our personal attitude is simply to render service for the church wherever time and talent permit, and it is due to the church that we render the best service of which we are capable.

S. A. BURGESS.

Appointment of Bishop's Agent

To the Saints of the Northeastern Illinois District: Having received the resignation of Brother R. N. Burwell as Bishop's agent of your district, and the recommendation of your district conference that Brother Joseph Louis Gauthier be appointed to this office, we are accepting the resignation and making the appointment recommended. This will take effect August 1, so after that date you may send your tithes and offerings to Brother Gauthier, whose address is 3523 North Marshfield Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

We express appreciation of the labors of Brother Burwell during the years that he has represented this department in your midst. We feel sure that you will continue to manifest your love for the gospel by the payment of your tithes and offerings through Brother Gauthier. May the blessings of the Lord crown the efforts of all to assist in the upbuilding of his kingdom.

Your colaborer,

BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE.

One- and Two-Day Meetings

At Galesburg, Illinois, August 27. The Galesburg Saints invite all in the district to come and have a basket dinner with them in their new church basement. Brothers Davis and Curtis will be with us for the day. Any Saints passing through Galesburg can find our people by stopping at the Denton drug store, or come to the church, corner of Main and Henderson Streets.

Addresses

E. J. Lenox, 33 South Fourth Street, Evansville, Wisconsin.

Reunion Notices

The reunion of the Northeastern Illinois District for 1924 has been called off, largely due to economic conditions. Also the harvest season is about two weeks late. J. L. Cooper, district president.

Far West, at Stewartsville, Missouri, August 21 to 31. U. W. Greene and E. J. Gleazer are expected to be the general representatives of the church. Tents: 12 by 14, 6-foot wall, $8; 12 by 14, 3-foot wall, $4.25; 10 by 12, 3-foot wall, $3.25. Single cot, 75 cents. Chairs, 20 cents. Send orders to John Hovenga, Stewartsville, Missouri. O. Salisbury, president. M. Liggett, secretary.

Southern Wisconsin, at Monona Park, Madison, Wisconsin, August 22 to 31. The speakers from outside the district will be Apostle F. H. Edwards and Patriarch W. A. McDowell, and of the district, W. L. Christy and J. O. Dutton. The dining hall committee are if possible going to furnish meals as follows: breakfast, 15 cents; dinner, 25 cents; supper, 15 cents. Tents: 10 by 12, 3-foot wall, $3.50; 12 by 12, 3½-foot wall, $4.50; 12 by 14, 3½-foot wall, $5.50. Marsh hay will be at hand for ticks. May one and all make all possible sacrifice to be in attendance. Bring with you the Spirit of the Master that we may be truly blessed. J. O. Dutton.

Idaho, at Hagerman, August 15 to 25. Preparations are being made for a splendid reunion this year, and we are very desirous of having a large attendance. Plan to spend your vacations and outings at Hagerman during the reunion, and you will be sure of your time being well spent. Those wishing tents may write to Brother S. D. Condit, of Hagerman. The speakers will be Roy S. Budd, James F. Keir, and R. L. Fulk. All branch reports should be sent early to R. C. Chambers, Rupert, Idaho, district president. Doris Jennings, secretary.

Pottawattamie, at Glenwood, Iowa, August 22 to 31. Tents: 7 by 9, 3-foot wall, $4.50; 9 by 9, 3-foot wall, $5.50; 10 by 12, 3-foot wall, $6.50; 12 by 14, 3-foot wall, $8.75; 10 by 14, 6-foot wall, $13; 12 by 14, 6-foot wall, $15; 9 by 14, 7-foot wall, open corners, $14; 12 by 19, 7-foot wall, open corners, $16.50. All sizes subject to stock on hand. Will fill with nearest size if exact size is not obtainable. Let cash accompany the order. In case you order and fail to come, we will try to re-rent the tent and save part or all of your deposit. Wire cots, army style, $2; single mattresses, $1.25; double mattresses $2.50; blankets, $1.75; camp chairs, 35 cents. We have several cottages which will be used for sleeping quarters only. They contain from sixty to eighty single cots each, arranged two or three side by side and three end to end, and one above the other, upper and lower berth. This forms sections containing 12, 18, or 24 cots, which may be divided into compartments. Individuals must bring sheets or other material for curtains for their own apartment. The committee will provide dressing rooms for each cottage on the sleeping car plan. Single cots in these cottages will cost $2 each for the whole period. We have several ticks for straw which you can have filled at cost of straw. First come, first served while they last. No other bedding furnished. Bring what you need. There is no charge for the use of the cottages except what may be incurred for fitting the rooms up for comfort. This may run from ten to twenty-five cents a person but will be at actual cost. One of these cottages will be used for girls only and will be in charge of a middle-aged matron who will live in the cottage and govern the company. Proper and necessary rules will be adopted for the cottage, and all persons will be expected to conform thereto. Another cottage will be used for boys only and will be under the care of a responsible director. Rules for governing the company will be made, and all must conform to them. Other cottages will be used as demand may require. Families may secure sections and set them off privately with curtains provided by themselves. These compartments will make ideal sleeping quarters, but cannot be used for cooking quarters. This would not be permitted by the park commission. Orders for tents and equipment must be in my hands by August 19. Later orders will incur extra cost of delivery, if they can be obtained. Setting up tents will be 35 cents extra. Let us know your wants, and we will do our best to provide for them. Send all tent orders to T. A. Hougas, Macedonia, Iowa. Telephone Macedonia 18-87.

Conference Notices

Southwestern Texas, at San Antonio, August 30 and 31.

Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana, August 23. Conference will be held on the reunion grounds at Lemon Park, near Vicksburg, Michigan, the first Saturday of the reunion. Election of district officers, election of delegates to General Conference, and business meeting will be the nature of the conference. First meeting will be at 10 a. m. Departmental conventions Friday, August 29. E. K. Evans, president, 240 Travis Street, Northeast, Grand Rapids, Michigan. W. F. Ryder, secretary, 648 South Prospect Street, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Eastern Colorado, at Colorado Springs, August 29. Conference will convene during the reunion, which will begin August 22, lasting ten days. Splendid programs are being planned by the departmental workers, including a children's story hour. Bishop McGuire, Apostle Garver, and Patriarch R. Bullard are among the list of speakers promised us. Branch and ministerial reports should be mailed to W. E. Wolfe, secretary, Wray, Colorado, not later than August 15.

B. E. Brown, president, 323 North Institute Avenue, Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Radio Flashes

The "Radio Flashes" column is resumed with this number of the HERALD, and will appear hereafter. It will contain, besides the acknowledgments of programs of the church broadcasting stations, items of radio interest which will have special value to our readers, information concerning the progress and accomplishments of our stations, and technical advice for receiving set owners. Contributions for this column are solicited.

Chicago, Illinois.—Heard your program (last two numbers) July 10, and must say you surely are good with volume and modulation. Hadn't heard you for some time, and that fading I noticed then has entirely disappeared. You must have about 500 watts now. How about it?—Harold Lachmann.
 2115 Cuyler Avenue.

Huntington, West Virginia.—Your vocal and instrumental program, especially violin solos by Miss Vina Mae Jenner and talk by Mr. Mills, received very plain, July 22, and very much appreciated. You are to be congratulated on your selection of talent.—Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Hunt.
 2140-11 Avenue.

The Field Is Ripe Unto the Harvest

The church needs educated men and women in EVERY FIELD of endeavor: industry, science, arts, education, and the ministry.

To redeem Zion the young people of the church must prepare along the lines in which they are interested.

Only two per cent of the young people of the world finish high school.

The young of the church must excel this percentage, for we have greater problems to solve than ever before.

Service Through Consecration and Education

The young people must consecrate their lives, but how much greater a consecration it is when the lives consecrated are prepared for LEADERSHIP AND SERVICE THROUGH EDUCATION.

YOUR church has provided a College for YOU, which is fully accredited and officially standardized.

The courses are arranged so that you may prepare to help solve the social, economic, educational, and religious problems of the church.

For a full description of courses in Liberal Arts, Teacher Training, Religious Education, Pre-Law, Pre-Medical, Pre-Dental, Engineering, Home Economics, Agriculture, Academic, Commerce, Secretarial, Music, Public Speaking, and Physical Training, address

A Reevaluation of the Gospel Principles

Each generation falls heir to certain truths as well as errors. Each generation reevaluates these truths after its own fashion. In other words, each generation is "heir of all the ages" and proceeds after its own way to take stock of its inheritance.

This does not mean that truth changes or evolves. Truth is eternal. Truth is unchangeable. But the perception of truth may dawn during a long period of time. Truth may, and should, give up its content more and more clearly as the years pass and fresh minds assail the problem.

On Horeb God said, "I AM." This divine declaration of existence, of conscious personal existence, has been reevaluated again and again. It has slowly given up its content of truth from age to age and man is yet far from grasping the full significance of the declaration. The Israelites read it to mean, "I am a God of power and terror." Years later John saw and declared, "God is love." To a later generation came a further revelation that "the glory of God is intelligence." Piece by piece humanity attempts to comprehend and evaluate the segments of infinity.

The process of reevaluation of truth, then, does not mean undervaluation. It does not mean depreciation. It should mean, rather, newer and ever greater appreciation:

As we surpass our father's skill,
Our sons will shame our own;
A thousand things are hidden still
And not a hundred known.

—Tennyson.

This is as it should be, granted continued revelation and a genuine effort to progress along the road which Paul said leads to perfection.

In the sixth chapter of the Hebrew letter is found an attempt to designate the fundamental principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ. This classical statement of faith was early seized upon by our people as a very satisfactory setting forth of certain fundamentals of their belief. Not all divine truths and doctrines are therein named, but when these principles are analyzed the others will be found therein implicitly if not explicitly. As early as 1842, Joseph Smith embodied the six principles therein set forth in a statement of faith, and they have appeared in every epitome of faith published by the church from then until now. We have, then, the practically unanimous attestation of all our people during a long period of time that these are indeed important, fundamental ideals, constituting the skeleton or groundwork of our faith.

The admonition given by Joseph to the elders in an oft-quoted anecdote was, "Preach the principles of the gospel." They replied, "After we have preached the principles, then what shall we preach?" To which he answered again somewhat cryptically, "Preach the principles." This does not mean a parrot-like and monotonous repetition of sermons running through the six principles and then starting over again. It contemplates a preaching in simple yet impressive form of the entire content of the principles together with associated truth.

Has the time come when we should in any degree forsake or abandon this preaching? No. But it may indeed be timely and is proper that we constantly reevaluate the principles in the light of to-day. In so doing we should get more rather than less out of them. We have not yet even approached exhaustion of them. But we should rather find new light and truth in them perpetually, which restated in terms that men of to-day may understand will help them to solve the problems of to-day, thereby making true converts.

The slogan of the elders has always been, "It is written." Or, "To the law and to the testimony." Those are still good slogans. The validity of the revealed word should be revered. But to-day when we say "It is written," we encounter a generation that looks us in the eye and answers, "Why is it written?" A dogmatic assertion of law no longer meets instant acceptance.

This question may be treated with respect. God himself is reputed to have said, "Come and let us reason together." By no means can we give a full answer to the question because that would imply a full knowledge of infinity. But to the extent to which we do understand the will and way of God we may answer.

More and more we are convinced that it is written in the law because it was first written in human needs. At every point the principles of the gospel meet the needs of the human soul. They met this need before the Bible was written. They were first written in the needs of the human soul. The more one may study and understand the needs of body and spirit, the more clearly he may reevaluate the gospel principles as set forth in the written word. In the direct and clear application of them to human needs he will find a very convincing confirmation of the written text of the law. This is a fine work that challenges the thought of our ministry.

Again, the principles may well be reevaluated in the light of our proposed redemption of Zion, the establishment of the divine social order, the brotherhood of man in temporal as well as spiritual things. Shall we discontinue our preaching of the principles and devote our time to expounding the law of equality, of stewardships, etc.? Not in pioneer missionary work. Instead, these principles yield their richest fruitage of meaning as contemplated in the light of a preparation for the Zion law and Zion conditions.

Jesus said: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." He made it more explicit, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." The new birth, around which the first gospel principles cluster, is preliminary to any and all vision of or entrance into the kingdom.

Had we Zion fully organized, industrially and socially, with no poor and none in want or without useful and congenial employment, it would indeed be a blessed thing. But should we then at once go into all the world saying, "Come with us; see our demonstration; we will guarantee you employment and a living wage under Utopian conditions"; millions would respond. What would be the result? Atheists clambering on board would swamp the Ship of Zion.

No; so long as the world stands, and until the last gospel sermon is preached to complete the witness to all the world before the end comes, it will be necessary first to enkindle faith and to induce repentance. Men must be made God conscious. They must have faith in God. They must be made conscious of sin. They must repent. They must get clean. This is the work of the gospel. Until it is wrought out in men, though they came to us in hordes they could neither see nor enter into the kingdom. Zion, like the world, would become a madhouse of conflicting passions and desires and brutal or crafty methods to exploit for personal gain.

Instead of appearing less important, the principles of the gospel appear more important as we from time to time reevaluate them.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Leadership and Orthodoxy

Does the doctrine of the church recognize human leadership, subject to the divine guidance, in the church of Christ? One writer has asserted (and others have echoed) that Christ alone is his leader. But Christ is the leader of those only who follow him and obey his law. A part of that law is given in Doctrine and Covenants 105:12, where the apostles of the church are expressly informed:

For unto you (the Twelve), and those (the First Presidency) who are appointed with you to be your counselors and your leaders, is the power of this priesthood given for the last days and for the last time, in the which is the dispensation of the fullness of times.

As Christ has expressly declared that he has appointed the First Presidency to be the leaders of the Apostles, can one who repudiates that leadership claim convincingly that Christ is his leader? To reject these instructions of Christ is not the act of a follower, however alluring such claims may sound to the superficial ear.

It is a fact which no one may effectually dispute that the great accomplishments of the human race were made successful by proper leadership. In every age the work of God has been directed by leaders divinely selected, and loyalty to God has meant loyalty to the leadership which he appointed. It is true that these leaders were subject to divine law, as well as were the people, and in case of unfaithfulness the provisions of the law were to be used in dealing with such. But if instead of making his complaint lawfully one should proceed to make public representations which have a tendency to undermine confidence in the leader and frustrate his leadership, such an act is itself disloyal to him who gave the law.

To maintain leadership requires not only advanced ideals and purposes, but power to guide constructively the forces in the church. This principle as applied to the work of the ministry is clearly set forth in General Conference Resolution Number 84, which states: "That all the traveling ministry be under the direction and control of the First Presidency and the Quorum of the Twelve."

He who will not be subject to this direction and control breaks the rules of the church and becomes disloyal. If those who are trusted with directional control prove to be incompetent, or abuse the power conferred upon them, they should not be sustained in office, but so long as any official is lawfully sustained it is unfair to him and disloyal to the church to seek his overthrow, foment discord, or disregard him in the exercise of his office.

That this leadership and directional control is a principle well recognized by the church in the past is further shown in General Conference Resolution Number 386, of which paragraphs 7 and 12 state:

7. That the Presidency is the leading quorum in the church. That the duty of presiding over the church devolves on that quorum. That it is the prerogative of the President to preside over the whole church, to bear the responsibility of the care and oversight of the work of the church, in all its different departments, and through the constituted officers of the church in their various callings, according to the laws, rules, and regulations in force and recognized by the church.

12. That the Presidency are the counselors of the Twelve and exercise the right of presidency by direction and council to that quorum.

In complete agreement with the foregoing statements, one of these laws recognized by the church (Doctrine and Covenants 87:5) expressly informs the Presidency:

And this shall be your business and mission in all your lives to preside in council and set in order all the affairs of this church and kingdom.

Another of these laws is quite as explicit and states that the president is to have a position like unto that of Moses:

And again, the duty of the president of the office of the high priesthood is to preside over the whole church, and to be like unto Moses. Behold, here is wisdom, yea, to be a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet; having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church.

All these laws, rules, and regulations hereinbefore recited show explicitly that directional control rests in the Presidency, stating that they are the head, and have the oversight, care, leadership, council, direction, and control of the work of the whole church and its officers, in all its different departments. Those quoted by no means exhaust the list.

If it is suggested that the people can be trusted, such an assurance is of course very comforting. But there are some things that a people who can be trusted will not do. They will not attempt to arrogate to themselves powers that God has assigned elsewhere. To do so would be to manifest disrespect, disregard, or distrust toward God. In the time of Moses some who were "famous in the congregation, men of renown," made such an attempt:

And they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron, and said unto them, Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the Lord is among them; wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the Lord?—Numbers 16:3.

This was perhaps the first notable attempt in religious history to change the church government into a democracy in which the people would set aside government by priesthood, recognizing no superior officers. The punishment that followed this presumption was a memorable event in Hebrew history, and to the discerning mind reveals clearly the answer of God to such a proposal.

It is quite true that a people cannot be led even by God unless they will support the leadership he offers them. But we should distinguish between the power and the right to do a thing. Perhaps the people might become so inflamed by appeals made that they would disregard the divine law, but it is certain that they would not have a right to do so. The oft-used comparison of the church to the civil government may be faulty. God gives the laws to the church and asks the people and officers to support them. If the church should depart from the divine laws it would to that extent become an apostate church. The right of the people to provide rules and regulations for the church must always be subject to these divinely given laws of God, which must not be changed or encroached upon by any member, official, or assemblage of the church of Christ.

We believe the people can usually be trusted to keep the law of God, though the Scriptures show that at times they have not done so. But appeals in the form of praise will not unduly influence people who can be trusted. Our loyalty to God essentially includes loyalty to his laws and to every official and member of the church in the legitimate exercise of his calling and duties. If this course is maintained, we shall have the divine assistance to solve every problem with which the church must deal.

Why You May Be Unable to Hear K F I X

Our Independence station has a power output of 250 watts, having a normal winter night range of 500 miles, and day range of 200 miles. The dependable range in summer is considerably less.

The wave length of 240 meters assigned our station by the Government is almost the lowest in use, and most receiving sets do not tune efficiently to wave lengths less than 250 meters. This explains why many listeners-in, although within the normal range of K F I X, have been unable to hear our programs.

Many receiving sets may be made to tune down to the low wave lengths quite efficiently by connecting a fixed mica condenser of .00025 mfd. capacity in series with the aerial and receiving set. In buying such a condenser from a dealer or ordering by mail, it is well to specify "Type 601 Dubilier Mica-don, capacity .00025." Such a condenser usually retails at thirty-five cents. A good variable condenser having a maximum capacity of .00025 mfd. or .0005 mfd. (the so-called 11-plate or 23-plate sizes) is even better than the small fixed condenser, because it gives a wide range of capacities.

Questions will be gladly answered by those in charge when addressed to the Radio Department, Box 255, Independence, Missouri. When writing please inclose postage for answer.

Twenty-Nine Churches Operate Broadcasting Stations in United States

Although our church has the distinction of pioneering church broadcasting, it is not now in the lead. There are seven broadcasting stations more powerful than ours that are owned and operated by church organizations. Two are three times as powerful; these are 750-watt stations at Los Angeles and Seattle, owned by the Bible Institute of Los Angeles and the First Presbyterian Church, respectively.

Our Presbyterian friends have five stations, three of which are less powerful than ours. The Baptists lead in numbers, but none of their nine stations have a power output of more than 100 watts. The Catholics have four small stations, the largest being only half as powerful as K F F V at Graceland College. Three Christian Church stations are rated at 50, 100, and 150 watts. The Methodists have one 100-watt station. One of the finest broadcasting stations in the country, although not the most powerful, is that operated at Zion City, Illinois.

Besides the twenty-nine church-owned stations, there are many others that broadcast church services. In fact, almost all broadcasters are on the air with some kind of religious services on Sundays. One Kansas City station has microphone wires connected to some half dozen churches which have made arrangements for the broadcasting of part of their services.

The proposed new 1000-watt station to be located at Independence will be the most powerful church-owned transmitter in the country, although it is of course possible that other organizations are planning installations of the same size.

Every Latter Day Saint will want to see their own broadcasting station take the lead among churches, and maintain this position. This will require financial assistance, and opportunity will be given everyone to contribute to this important enterprise.

ACTION

Pleasure is a companion of action.

Actions may be right or wrong.

Even a vicious person finds momentary pleasure in his cruel acts.

Lasting pleasure can only follow righteous acts.

All acts which support a righteous cause bring to the individual a wholesome reaction.

The measure of pleasure which you get out of the Lord's work will be in proportion to what you do for it.

No action—no pleasure.

For Justice, and in the Interest of Peace

In the following article the writer has two objects in view: The first is to disclose some of the history of the present controversy, and the second is to induce the Saints to study the theory of our church government and to know the law.

If in accomplishing the first I can properly state the case, I am confident I will dispel some, if not all, of the suspicion under which the Presiding Bishopric apparently has been placed by those who would deny them the sphere of discretion which the office has been accorded under the law and practice since the inception of the Reorganization. If my second objective is attained, I then have reason to hope that an intelligent and proper decision will be reached whenever General Conference acts in the matter.

In any event, I wish to express my confidence in the body of the church. I believe they will eventually arrive at a correct conclusion. General Conference may write some improper things into our legislation, but until repealed or modified its acts are law.

It is now a time when plain speech will be of greatest profit. Strong feelings and deep convictions generally prompt plainness of expression, and, though in this article I have used strong terms, I have tried to be considerate of the feelings of others, without harshness or unkindness.

The Presiding Bishopric has not been quick to fight back. Is that a vice or a virtue? When has a desire for peace become proof of weakness, or non-resistance evidence of wrongful attitudes or positions? We have tried to be kind and have suffered some things to pass, even in the councils of this church, which, if occurring elsewhere, would have brought a speedy retraction or our own withdrawal. But we do not ask for sympathy. We are men who can accept reversals, we believe, as men of God. If we are wrong, may God speed the day of our enlightenment. If we are right, may God grant us strength and wisdom to defend the truth until the whole church shall see the righteousness of our cause.

We recognize the weight of sentiment in the minds of the people of the church that follows the office of President, but it is not treason to question his policies, or heresy to stand on the plain language of the law. This church was born out of dissent and opposition, and so has every reformation and restoration. If our position cannot survive the rule, "To the law and the testimony . . .," we expect it to fail and desire nothing else.

With a prayer that we will not be misunderstood, I present to the Saints the following statement:

The members of the Presiding Bishopric are not responsible for the present controversy. They did not start it and have not encouraged it. It has been thrust upon them by the Presidency.

Never in the history of the church has the Presidency ever claimed directional control over the affairs of the Bishopric until the present President came into office. Careful search of records of the church, conference resolutions, proposed and adopted, and editorials and articles in church papers, fails to disclose a single claim of that kind until of recent years. We are therefore led to inquire, Have the duties and prerogatives of the Presidency been enlarged and, if so, when? There is not a word in the law of our standard books relative to the matter which was not there for some years before the death of the late President Joseph Smith.

If that is true, is it not a little strange that the late President who enjoyed the spirit of his office and calling to a remarkable degree and upon whom the Lord "poured out his Spirit without measure," [this quoted phrase is one used in prophecy by a member of the First Presidency following by a short interval of time the death of President Joseph Smith] never made claim to such authority. Is it possible that the church for many years has been in disorder? If it has, the Lord apparently was not apprised of the fact, or he purposely refrained from speaking in regard to it, for many revelations came to the body without mention of such irregularity.

If it were possible for me to believe that the Lord interprets his law in different ways at different times—if I could believe that the inspiration of the office of one prophet would direct one interpretation and the inspiration of the office of his successor would direct a different and contrary interpretation—if, I say, I could ever come to any such opinion, I might account for the difference of opinions between the present President and his predecessor.

It is quite germane to the question that, in the opinion of the writer, discrimination should be made between the acts of the prophet and revelator to the church and the acts of the president of the church in "ministerial" or administrative affairs. I run counter to the views of the president and his supporters in this matter, and possibly, and I am quite sure it does, this difference grows out of another difference, very fundamental indeed to the questions involved in the present investigation. And that is as follows: The President of the church apparently has enlarged the prime objects of the church to include much more than his predecessor did. He seems to believe that many activities within the church are spiritual in their nature, to be accomplished by the church itself, which his father did not so classify. He also believes the church should be engaged directly in these activities.

It therefore is a possible explanation for the position of the Presidency that all and everything the church does, or should be doing, being spiritual, and the Presidency being the chief quorum in spiritual matters, such activities come within their jurisdiction. We hold that the individual should take into his everyday affairs the principles of the religion of Jesus Christ, yet, strange to say, some have been guilty of arguing that, because some of us do not believe the church should be in business, we are against practicing the principles of our Christian belief in daily affairs—sophistry which thinking men should carefully avoid.

We believe that the Lord has provided for the machinery of the temporal affairs of the church—its business—in such a way as to relieve those upon whom the spiritual burdens have devolved; but apparently this view has been lost to many, and instead of finding comfort in the provision of the Lord, there is much discontent because the spiritual officers cannot control in temporal affairs. In providing thus for the temporal division, we do not believe that it was intended to add spiritual concern to the Bishopric; but because there is an apparent failure to understand the theory of this division, coupled with an unwarranted enlargement of the work of the church in the minds of many, we have the present discussion and controversy.

We believe that the activities essentially spiritual in their nature and which are the prime objects of the church and necessary to man's redemption, are as follows: The maintenance of an efficient corps of gospel ministers; the holding of local and general conferences of membership and priesthood; the organization of branches; the ordination of men to the offices provided for in the Doctrine and Covenants; the appointment and sustaining of general officers and maintenance of a central headquarters; the raising of funds by the means set out in the law to carry on the affairs of such government. We feel that in a general way, all matters outside of the things outlined in the foregoing are but measures which tend to the well-being and happiness of the members of the church, as individuals and as a body. Among them we might include: Those movements necessary to the gathering together physically of the people; the building of auditoriums or temples necessary when the people are gathered; the establishment of schools; the encouragement of industries and businesses essential to people in a gathered condition; the purchase of and settlement by the members on land, etc.; and we are quite convinced that many of these things can properly be carried on and maintained by organizations—not of the officials—but among the members by whatsoever form may best meet the requirements of the work to be done.

Are we wrong in distinguishing between the fundamental or prime or essential work of the church and those things which are collateral to it? Upon the correct answer to this question rests much of our present difficulty, in my opinion.

If the church were merely comparable to a business institution, as some seem to think, there might be more merit in the argument for this almost sovereign right of "supreme directional control"; but the church is not a business organization. The business or temporal division is provided for because of necessity.

With the real purpose of the church in mind—that of the preaching of the gospel in an endeavor to save the souls of men, and that there are some activities fundamentally spiritual and some collateral or incidental, it is not so difficult to comprehend the position taken by some of us.

We ask you to consider the following question: Is the prophet, seer, and revelator selected for his business ability? or on account of his prophetic calling? We are supported in the statement that Joseph Smith the seer and his son, the late President of the church, were chosen because of their spiritual and prophetic endowments. It seems to me that some are making a very great mistake in their idea of what the church is. Men in council have referred to the President of the church as "our general manager"—which suggests strongly the idea of business and commercialization.

Going back through the history of the Reorganization, we find much controversy at times between the Quorum of Twelve and the Bishopric in regard to their respective prerogatives and authority, apparently very sharp and earnest discussions, but, if the record may be depended upon, without rancor and imputation of wrong motives. It appears that the Quorum of Twelve have always been somewhat jealous of their rights and, in their honest zeal for the welfare of the church, have stoutly resisted any limitations of their authority. They have been God-fearing men who desired to abide within the law, and this quorum during many of the years of the past counted among its members the very greatest and ablest men in the Reorganization. The Presiding Bishopric has not been quite so assertive as the Twelve, but among the somewhat limited numbers who have occupied, especially as Presiding Bishop, we count a number of likewise able defenders of the faith. The clash between these quorums was therefore earnest and conducted by men who knew the law, and were holding diverse views only on those things that had not been fully set out or where there were apparent ambiguities, and General Conference had not then spoken in regard thereto.

We consider it as more than passing strange that during the years of the Reorganization there has never been any controversy between the Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric until just recently, and during all the years when there was conflict between the Twelve and the Bishopric as to their respective jurisdictions there was never at any time interjected into the discussion any alleged "supreme directional control" of the Presidency over the Presiding Bishop. Did the late Joseph Smith abrogate any of the just rights of the First Presidency, or did he conduct the affairs of his office according to the law? By every instinct, as his son, from everything I know about his regard for legality and orderly procedure, from a deep-seated and abiding faith in his calling as prophet to the church, I cannot believe that he knowingly allowed any invasion of the rights of the Presidency, and he was too able and had too keen an intellect not to recognize any such invasion if it existed. No, we confidently believe that he knew the theory of the government of this church. God blessed him in that knowledge, and he was content to abide within the law.

In the Doctrine and Covenants we find Joseph the Seer was told that in temporal things or labors he should not have strength. When this statement has been made in argument, we have been told that it had reference to his private affairs; but we cannot so hold on account of the connection in which the statement was made. It is preceded by the injunction to devote all his service to Zion. "In this thou shalt have strength. . . . And in temporal things thou shalt not have strength, for this is not thy calling. Attend to thy calling." Men are not "called" to private affairs.

In this connection also I invite your attention to section 126, paragraph 5:

I saw the Bishopric as at present constituted, with the attendant bishops upon either side. I asked what was the meaning of this. I was told that the Bishop should not be burdened with the spiritual care of the church, except as such might be brought before him in pursuance of the law which provided for the Bishop's court.

Here we have it: The President not called to temporal work; the Presiding Bishop not to be burdened with spiritual care.

And it is a criticism which has been strongly urged in the past against the church in Utah that there was a departure from the law in that spiritual power was given to Bishops and temporal power granted to the Presidency.

There are only a few references to church law, some in the Doctrine and Covenants and one in the Articles of Incorporation, which give any color of claim to temporal control in the Presidency, that is, that have been urged by proponents of that claim; but we believe an inspection of these references will show that the things are not said that are read into them.

Section 104: 42 is cited which says:

And again, the duty of the president of the office of the high priesthood is to preside over the whole church, and be like unto Moses. Behold, here is wisdom, yea, to be a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet; having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church.

We have always acknowledged the President as head of the church and believe that he is entitled to the prophetic gifts here named as was Moses. We protest against the interpretation which would carry the latter-day Restoration back 3,500 years to Egypt, and subject us to the rod and the law which were "done away in Christ." Paul says it "made nothing perfect," and was to serve only as a "school-master." To carry this interpretation to a logical conclusion would make the membership to-day comparable to a fugitive army who had recently been Egyptian slaves. On the other hand we will hail the day when the President will be content to preside over the church and exercise these gifts to the good of the church and God's glory. If more than this were intended from the real import of the text, it would surely have been claimed and practiced in almost a century since the giving of this revelation, but such is not the case.

The second is found in paragraph 2 of section 122, Doctrine and Covenants, where the statement is made that the burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church. Let us notice the connection again:

1. My servants have been harsh one with another; and some have not been sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations which my church has already received. Until my people shall hear and heed those who are set in the church to teach the revelations there will be misunderstanding and confusion among the members.

2. The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time.

There can be no question that the statement, "The burden of the care," in the second paragraph relates directly and specifically to the things referred to in the first paragraph and what immediately follows in the second paragraph—their duty to teach the revelations, which is a spiritual activity. Certainly the contention of the Presidency is not supported in this reference. Besides, General Conference itself has spoken in regard to the authority of the Bishopric, and it cannot remain for any interpretation of revelation, official or private, to place limitations upon what General Conference has said in plain language, which is as follows:

The Bishopric being created by and responsible to the church for the proper administration of their duty, should not, in justice, be made finally responsible to the Twelve, in any other sense than all other church officers are responsible to the same quorum; that is, by proper charge and adjudication before the general church officers, or by decision of General Conference.

Discretionary power to receive and disburse church funds, and dispose of church property for the uses of the church, according to the laws of the church, and subject to inquiry by the Twelve and the church, must rest in the Bishopric, only, as, by law, the Bishopric only are legal custodians of such properties; . . .—General Conference Resolution No. 238.

The third reference is to section 123, which is the report of the joint council of 1894, paragraph 23; where it is urged, "supreme directional control" is placed with the Presidency. Let us take it again as a whole quotation:

The following opinion of the first presidency, as communicated to the quorum of the twelve, in 1890, was adopted as the opinion of this joint council:

"As a traveling, presiding council, your quorum has the active supervision and presidency, under the first presidency, over the entire field of ministerial labor, and control over districts, branches, and the ministry as a whole and as church organizations, and not as local presiding officers in these several organizations; holding special local presidency where no organization has been perfected; in a similar way as the first presidency presides over the whole church, differing in this, that the first presidency is necessarily local, while your province is not localized; nor do we mean by this that the word abroad is to be construed to mean foreign lands, but in the field of itinerant gospel labor everywhere, as contradistinguished from branch, district, or other local organizations."

Here there is no mention made of anything but ministerial and gospel work—"the field of itinerant gospel labor everywhere," and not one word of reference to temporalities or departments or the Bishopric. For one I cannot admit any such construction as interpreting this to mean "supreme directional control" over things not referred to in any way. "The entire field of ministerial labor" . . . "in a similar way as the First Presidency presides over the whole church," cannot be stretched to mean anything more than presidency over branches and church organizations—"ministerial [spiritual] labor." Viewed from the Presidency's standpoint, we shall here inquire, Is it not also remarkable that the joint council of 1894, in the very next paragraph of their report, number 24, should write again into the law an affirmation of the basis of adjustment of 1878 which instead of giving any officer or quorum directional control over the Bishopric, says quite another and contrary thing?

The only other citation to which our attention has been called in an attempt to support the "supreme directional control" of the Presidency is found in the Articles of Incorporation of the church. Article 1, 7th verse says: "Bishops, consisting of a Presiding Bishop, and associate or local bishops—said bishops having temporal jurisdiction subject to the general direction of the church, and higher church authorities." We court this "general" direction, and believe that it is fair to assume that its intent and purview were well understood by those who signed it, including both Presidency and Bishopric. Bear in mind, too, that this was in the year 1891, while in 1894 the revelation required the joint council to meet (see 122:13), and when they did so they re-affirmed (see 123:24) the "basis of adjustment" of 1878 between the Twelve and Bishopric which gives "discretionary power to receive and disburse church funds" and to otherwise control the property of the church "to the Bishopric only." (See General Conference Resolution 238.) In the light of these facts, the use of such phrases as have found their way into the official columns of the HERALD recently referring to the Presiding Bishop as "the head of the financial department of economics of the church" or as the "treasurer of the church" is an unwarranted play on words.

The Bishopric is a creation of divine enactment, as found in the Doctrine and Covenants, functioning under direct command of God and conference resolution. It is the business body of the church. Is it not proper that it should be controlled by the church and amenable to the General Conference only? It has charge of the moneys and properties contributed not by the officials but by the members of the church. One of the first references to the work of the Bishopric made it plain that the church should have a large control over the work of the Bishopric:

These things shall be had on record, to be handed over unto the Bishop in Zion; and the duty of the Bishop shall be made known by the commandments which have been given, and the voice of the conference.

If sufficient herein has not already been given to suggest the propriety of the spiritual officers of the church refraining from temporal activities, it may be well to remind my readers of what happened in New Testament times. In Acts 6:1 it is said:

And in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration. Then the Twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables. Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

Here was an organization created by a conference and appointed unto a work which was in aid of but was not gospel or ministerial work pure and simple.

We do not contend that the Bishopric has the right to ignore the leading officers of the church.

We do not believe that we have done so. We are not conscious of having ignored the Presidency or the Twelve in any matters which were of such a spiritual nature as to warrant us in taking them there for advice and counsel. We believe that in many other matters the church has suffered because we were not able to secure counsel when we needed it. We have no hesitation in saying that the church to-day is suffering for want of counsel among the leading quorums of the church, a thing which has been denied to us when we have asked for it.

It might be profitable, in the light of statements already made, to look somewhat into the genesis of the controversy. For some two or three years it has appeared to the Presiding Bishopric that the President has found fault, unjustly we believe, with various actions and things done by the Bishopric, claiming that we were not "subordinating" ourselves to the Presidency; and in some things complaining of our conduct of affairs, and that the President had not been apprised of the matters, even where the incidents or business had been closed and closed with success to the church, notably in one instance where we had successfully defended the church in litigation in which persons sought to recover a large sum of money. It had never occurred to us that when we had been sued in the civil courts it was necessary for us to secure the consent of the Presidency or anybody else to make our defense. We have tried honestly to exercise a sound and wise discretion in these matters, but have found a spirit of faultfinding on the part of the President in regard to many things similar to the thing just related.

We have tried to honor the law. To do so we have been glad to recognize the Presidency and other leading quorums as the proper counselors in spiritual and temporal matters (see Doctrine and Covenants 128: 9). And we fully believe that for many years the church would have profited greatly if the Seventies had been granted the right to participate more in the councils of the church.

Sometime in spring of 1923, we were notified that the Presidency desired to have a conference with the Presiding Bishopric in regard to the question of the "subordination" of the Bishopric to the Presidency, and date was set for the conference. The members of the Presiding Bishopric in an honest endeavor to have this conference availing and of profit to all concerned, after discussion and consideration between themselves, addressed the Presidency as follows:

April 25, 1923.

FIRST PRESIDENCY
Office

Dear Brethren: By letter and in conference with members of the Presiding Bishopric, you have made known to us that the First Presidency, or at least the President, desires to modify the present practice of the church in the conduct of temporal affairs. By letter, dated February 22, 1923, we sought to learn more specifically what was contemplated by the President, but have received no answer thereto. A conference of the two quorums is suggested, according to your letter of the 11th instant, for the purpose of canvassing the questions involved or that may be raised incident thereto.

After due consideration, we feel that we are not only justified in presenting a few thoughts in regard to the proper method of consideration, but, under the facts and circumstances, it appears to be our duty to do so.

In the first place we have a desire to reach a decision in the matter, or matters, presented that will reflect intelligence and be in strict harmony with the law of the church. We do not believe that it will be profitable for us to go into this conference without first having a statement of the proposed matter; this is only in fairness to ourselves. If the proposal means a departure from the established procedure of the church, as we understand it does, we believe that such statement should show some basis in the law of the church.

The present practice and procedure of the conduct of the affairs of this department has continued from time immemorial, or at least during the existence of the church. We indulge in the presumption of regularity and that such practice is supported by the law. It necessarily follows that the burden of showing that such procedure is not according to the law is upon him who so avers, and we must respectfully request that the Presidency assume this burden.

No hearing or conference in regard to important matters is availing where the precise issue or issues are not determined or defined in advance. Time is lost in arriving at the gist of controversy, and even then it may be so indefinite and vague as to forestall intelligent action. Experience has taught men that unless the issues are made up in advance, trials and hearings and arguments are fruitless. The want of such determination generally does, and likely will, result in a waste of time and effort.

We do not suppose the Presidency wishes to give the proposed matters any time in conference with us unless, and until, it can be reasonably expected that final determination thereof may be reached.

We therefore respectfully suggest to the Presidency the advisability and the propriety of their placing in our hands a statement of their proposal, or proposals, and support the same by such statement of the law as they may desire. In no other manner may we know precisely what questions are involved, and we then can either go into the desired conference or can make and file with the Presidency such answer as we may believe proper.

Unless some such procedure be followed by us, it may logically result in inconvenience and delay after our conference is begun, as any of the interested parties may find it necessary to ask for time to consider after the real issues are determined.

From what has already been written and said by the President of the church, with only a general idea of what the proposed changes may be, we nevertheless feel that a proper and righteous disposition thereof should be made as a result of this proposed conference and all questions involved be forever settled if possible. To this end, we are firmly convinced that the issue, or issues, should be determined in advance of the conference; otherwise we shall be prepared to ask and to take the time necessary to a full consideration whenever the questions are determined or made known to us.

Our desire is to serve the church to the best of our ability as God gives us light and understanding. We neither court nor shun responsibility, and as we have tried cheerfully to perform our official obligations we have as cheerfully assumed the responsibilities attaching to our conduct, and in this spirit we present the foregoing for your consideration.

Ever praying for the church and its welfare, we remain,
Sincerely yours,

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC.

This letter to this day remains unanswered, but we have heard that the President has characterized it as a "refusal" to meet with the Presidency—a charge which is ungracious, to say the least.

Continuing the narrative, in order to bring this down to the council of last April, there were occasional differences of opinion between the members of the Presiding Bishopric and the President in regard to questions of jurisdictions, in which we tried always to remember that we are brethren of the same faith and to be kind and considerate of each other, as any other motivation would prove fatal to our cause, and we feel our position is justified in the law.

On January 5 we wrote to the Presidency about our financial situation and trend and stressed the necessity of securing some relief financially.

On February 4 we again wrote the Presidency about our financial affairs and asked for consideration by Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric.

In March of this year we were informed that the Presidency had called a meeting of the High Council to consider the matters presented in our letter of February 4. To this we did not and do not now make any objection. After the High Council had been in session two or three days, we were notified that the High Council had recommended to the Presidency that the matters be referred to a joint council consisting of the Presidency, the Twelve in America, and the Order of Bishops. To such a recommendation we did not and do not now make any objection, although we had asked for the joint council of the Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric.

It is forever too late for anyone now to say that the joint council of Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric is not of recognized jurisdiction, for the Lord himself directed its setting in the revelation of 1894. "It is the will of the Lord that this should be done. It should have been done before, but the adversary hath hindered, desiring to prevent the success of my work in the earth." Section 123 is the result. The church has accepted of its labors and has never to this day questioned its validity.

However, we have made and do now make this criticism upon this council: That in the consideration of the temporal affairs of the church the quorum upon which the chief responsibility in temporal matters has always rested, was ignored and not made an integral part thereof. The argument that the members of the Presiding Bishopric were sitting members of the council is beside the point, for the reason that they were there only as members of the Order of Bishops stripped of quorum rights and capacity, and instead of being, on a quorum vote, a one third of the council, they were one sixth of one third or one eighteenth on a quorum vote, if called for, although this was not done. But while no quorum vote was asked for, it lawfully could have been demanded, we believe; however, it seems not to have been the practice in the late councils of the church. The law however amply provided for the registration of quorum votes in councils of the church.

Upon the convening of this council we had every reason to believe that it was organized for the purpose and only for the purpose of considering the financial condition of the church. The President of the church and his counselors presided and furnished the only secretary of the meetings. No minutes were submitted to the council, though we understand that there is a purported record.

The chairman stated among other things that the council was purely advisory to the Presidency and had been called to consider the condition of the church upon the letter of the Presiding Bishopric, but in his first speech made impassioned charges of a general character against the Presiding Bishopric, alleging that they were responsible for all the ills of the church and with having set up a resistance to the Presidency and frustrating their efforts. I will here state that he did not in a single instance make any specific statement as to particulars—a vague and indefinite attack in such general terms as to make difficult any reply or defense. It came as a complete surprise to the members of the Presiding Bishopric, as the questions raised were not such as belonged in any way to that council. It was, according to the President's own statement, an advisory council. It is not provided for in the law in any way. It was the first time such a council ever convened in the history of the church, and probably will never be assembled again.

We want the church to know our position: the attack made upon us by the President of the church before the council of last April was unwarranted in law and unjust in method. It seems to have been premeditated, though no indication of it had been given beforehand. We were there only as members of the Order of Bishops, and it seems to us that common fairmindedness would have demanded that if charges were considered they should have been made before a tribunal of competent jurisdiction. The Bishopric was put on trial before a part of the Quorum of Twelve and fifteen Bishops, with the Presidency as presiding judges, without notice, without written charges, in which for over a week, first one thing after another was without warning thrown into the conflict, and day after day the work of the Bishopric was assailed, with the chairman of the council acting as prosecuting attorney as well as judge. These facts should be known.

While taken much by surprise, the members of the Presiding Bishopric, sitting as bishops only, took counsel among themselves as best they could, and while resenting very much the unfair methods, decided that in the interest of the work as a whole we would do the best we could to bring about what good might be accomplished by the council. No rights of the Bishopric and no rights of the church as expressed in the law were waived, and we expressly reserved the right to dissent from any action of the council which we considered illegal. A statement to that effect was made by the Presiding Bishop. He stood willing to assist the council in every possible way and so expressed himself. The general charge against the Presiding Bishopric, that they were responsible for the present condition of the church, was emphatically denied. This council could have no right to pass on the things stated or to try the Bishopric. We did not at the time know that it was planned—as is now apparent was intended from the beginning—to legislate or attempt to legislate upon the question of the jurisdiction of the Presidency and the Bishopric. In a word it was in effect an attempt to substitute itself for General Conference.

It was early apparent that those holding an opinion contrary to the Presidency were in a decided minority, so that it was easy to forecast the trend of its progress. What was the proper thing for the Presiding Bishopric to do? Should we participate, sit in the deliberations, or withdraw? To withdraw would certainly jeopardize the good the council might do. To remain was, we concluded, the better course, and if the council should exceed its jurisdiction as an advisory council, we would, under God and his law, not be bound.

Without further discussion of the document now commonly called the "supreme directional control" resolution, it is fair to all who did dissent and all who now refuse to be bound thereby, to say that after it had been considered by paragraphs and adopted by sections, before it was put upon its final vote as a whole, the following question was asked the chairman:

"Before the vote is taken, I would like to have the chairman state the nature of this document. If passed, is it advisory only or otherwise?"

To which the chairman then said, "Well, you may call it whatever you choose—advisory, legislative, or administrative."

At this juncture the writer then asked the chairman to state if there was any likelihood or probability of the document being interpreted in opposition to or change of present General Conference action, to which he replied, "Yes."

Thereupon the Presiding Bishopric entered their protest, stating that the council was not a legislative body, that it was, as stated by the chairman at the beginning, an advisory council only; that now it appeared the rules of the game had been changed, the nature of the proceedings had been altered arbitrarily, and the chairman and the council could take notice from the Presiding Bishop and his counselors that they objected to the attempted legislation and would not be bound legally by anything done by the council which changed the law or which would require or would attempt to require the Bishopric to do anything contrary to what was already in the books, the Doctrine and Covenants and General Conference Resolutions.

It was at this juncture that the chairman demanded of Bishop McGuire that he state to the council at some time before adjournment whether or not he was going to "abide by the decisions of this council." To this demand Bishop McGuire made reply, and the things growing out of the demand of the chairman are now placed before the Saints in the HERALD. These facts should be known. (See Editor's note.)

Early in the council, when the President made his charges against the Presiding Bishop, he used language similar to the following: "If I am right I want this council to say so; if I am wrong and this council says so, I have the decency and the manhood to get out, to resign," and the other things from which, in connection with the words quoted, we could conclude nothing else but that if Bishop McGuire was wrong and the council said so, if he, Bishop McGuire, was decent and had manhood, he would get out, resign! These facts should be known.

At the time of the passage of the supreme directional control document, I denounced, as best I could, the proposal that anybody should be driven or coerced into resigning his office. I called attention to the fact that Bishop McGuire had been called by revelation to occupy in the office, and he had been sustained by the General Conference, and it was unfair and unrighteous to propose that he abdicate as the behest of such a council or because he might be considered in rebellion to anything done or to be done by the council. Certainly upon my statement before that council calling attention to the attempt to drive the Bishop from office, if there was no such attempt or desire upon the part of the Presidency or of the President, then was the supreme moment for denial. But no denial has been made, then or since that day, and I do not believe they can ever be heard now to deny it. On the contrary it was then, when their right to compel or coerce the Bishop was challenged by the writer, the chairman demanded that the Bishop state to the council before its close whether he was going to "abide by the decision of the council."

My brethren, in a work of Christian brotherhood, where all are equal in worth of office, and where every man is presumed to be making a sacrifice equal to that of every other man, can it be right that men shall be driven by coercion into resigning their God-given office at the behest or demand of an advisory council, such as we have described? I say, Nay, a thousand times Nay!

Another thing—but for which the writer was inclined toward silence in this discussion—was a statement made on July 6 at the Campus by the President of the church:

"I cannot yield to the voice of the opposition, so I am in the fight, and it will undoubtedly be a finish fight. Either the opposition which has asserted itself is going to become supreme and the rest of us eliminated, or vice versa. . . ."

Now, in the first place I deny as false any charge direct or by implication that I have the intention, desire, or wish to eliminate anybody from this work. Such intention, desire, or wish, in my opinion, is improper. Why, this work is large enough to hold all who have a desire to do good, and the Lord has said that even if we cannot agree on the things of the law, yet we can be united in purpose, and personally I believe that all my brethren who have taken part in the council and in the present controversy are as sincere in their desire to promote the welfare of the church as I am.

I should be allowed to take a part in the discussion without the imputation by any of wrong motives on my part. It certainly is not an agreeable thing to oppose in any way your brother in the flesh as also your brethren in Christ. But I am called upon to make decision under the law to the best of my ability and the light God gives to me, and personal considerations do not enter into my position in this matter. I am of little worth in comparison with the good of the whole, and what I may be able to do will amount to very little, comparatively speaking, in the great work of redemption. But the work must be carried forward according to law. The author of our faith has said, "I am God; I change not." I am concerned only in having the church affairs conducted according to the will of God as expressed in his law. If they are, we cannot fail; if they are not, failure—dismal failure—awaits us.

I. A. SMITH.

Freedom of the Press and Free Discussion

BY R. S. SALYARDS

The action of the Board of Publication in opening the columns of the HERALD to free discussion of church problems is commendable and should be appreciated. The HERALD belongs to the people; it was equipped and is maintained by them, and they should have free access to it, within proper rules of conduct. In the appointment of editors also the board has been fair, appointing men of opposite views, thus giving opportunity to present all sides of questions in issue. Who does not want to hear "both sides"? How shall the people be informed and reach correct conclusions without information concerning matters at issue, unless given free access to all principles and facts?

One of Lincoln's maxims is, "Trust the people." He also said, "God must have loved the common people, he made so many of them!" "Let facts be submitted to a candid world," is the language of the Declaration of Independence. In this statement our Fathers, in their sublime effort to "proclaim liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof" (Leviticus 25: 10)—in this they addressed themselves in justification of their action, to the considerate judgment of all mankind. The discussion became world-wide, and the spirit of liberty and democracy, which under God moved upon the Fathers, has become disseminated among all peoples.

While it has become necessary to speak out, and to speak out clearly and strongly, let the discussion be conducted upon a high plane of impartial examination, without personalities, without injustice, in the Spirit of Christ, which ought to pervade all considerations by the people of God. Harshness, the spirit of intolerance, the effort to decide questions on the basis of mere official status or authority, have no place and must have no place among a free and liberty-loving people. The truth is the only authority; and comprehension of the truth is the only scientific and proper basis for conclusion and action. He who is right is large-minded, liberal, and tolerant, and has no fear of the closest examination of his position. If shown to be in error, he is anxious to be set right; for Every one who doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he who loveth truth, cometh to the light, that his deeds may be manifest. And he who obeyeth the truth, the works which he doeth they are of God.—John 3: 20-22.

The traditions of the Fathers, in church and state, have been always for free discussion: "A free pulpit and an open Bible"; "Freedom of speech and of the press"; are maxims interwoven into our religious and civil bill of rights. They are understood and affirmed in all free lands, in America, in Great Britain, wherever liberty-loving men and women have risen against oppression. "The surest safeguard of truth is a free and fair discussion," is emblazoned on the walls of the senate chamber of the State of Missouri.

"Truth has nothing to fear from error so long as it is left free to combat it," is the substance of one of the maxims of Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence and one of our greatest political thinkers. With an open press we are now at liberty to get at the reason of things, to inform our people, and to give them opportunity to pass upon all matters, for "it is written,"

Behold, I, the Lord, have made my church in these last days, like unto a judge sitting on a hill, or in a high place, to judge the nations; for it shall come to pass, that the inhabitants of Zion shall judge all things pertaining to Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 64: 7.

To be qualified to do this, they must have information and the divine right of free examination.

The church has a great task. It must know its purpose and understand the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom and, therewith, the functions and limitations of every department; also the part to be played by the membership. The laity form the great body of the church and constitute its background and support. They have right to full information concerning the working methods of the entire body. They are to see that the truth is carried into all the world. The world to-day is an examining, critical world, much of it well informed; a world which does not swallow without question any form of religious or other belief. The old, medieval claim of official authority and acquiescence without question is dead; it has given way to the right of private judgment. It required war and bloodshed and the Reformation to defeat and pull down arbitrary power in church and state, and to gain and to maintain civil and religious liberty; but such is in vogue to-day, and men are free to think and to act for themselves. "Equal rights to all, and special privileges to none," is another accepted American maxim.

Our people need fuller information, larger comprehension, greater development, if they are to measure up to the task set before them. The time must come when the laity—the mass of the membership—shall be well read in the books of the church and able to comprehend the spirit and the word and the purpose of our work. An enlightened public opinion is necessary in both church and state. We are not yet where we must be in equipment, to convert and to lead the world. The present crisis, with the opportunity to inform themselves, will cause the people to obtain more information and to think more earnestly upon the movements of the church. There are just as good and capable men and women in the laity as are any in the ministry; there are men and women who are an honor to the church and of vast benefit to it because of their breadth of mind and largeness of heart. We need more of them; we must have a developed people if we are to attract other capable people and thus our army become "very great." Zion is to become "the perfection of beauty" if she is to shine out in intelligence and virtue.

Let free discussion, then, be continued, until our people shall be qualified to discern between right and wrong, between truth and error, between common sense and superstition. Jesus said:

Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8: 32.

He therefore based his appeal to the people upon the truth—"the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." Jesus is "official" because he is "the Spirit of truth." "This is the light of Christ."—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 2. He was called and appointed and ordained unto his exalted station for the reasons stated in this:

But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever; a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.—Hebrews 1: 8, 9.

Jesus never made claim to arbitrary authority; he said:

And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me?—John 8: 46.

The merit of his message, its self-evident truth, was what he asked men to accept. When two of his inexperienced disciples said, because the people did not receive them,

Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven and consume them, . . . he turned and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of Man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them.—Luke 9: 54-56.

He sought not by anything savoring of supreme directional control maintained by effective discipline, to compel men to act, but was content to appeal to the people by making manifest the humility and condescension of God. He loved the common people; "he went about doing good" among them, and they "heard him gladly." He was deeply touched and "moved with compassion" by their poverty and afflictions. He suffered and shared with them, at times not knowing "where to lay his head."

Once when his disciples, Peter and John and others, had disputed among themselves which was the greatest, he called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily, I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever, therefore, shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.—Matthew 18: 2, 3.

He also said,

The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them and they who exercise authority upon them are called benefactors. But it ought not to be so with you; but he who is the greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he who is chief, as he who doth serve. For whether is he greater, who sitteth at meat, or he who serveth? I am not as he who sitteth at meat, but I am among you as he who serveth.—Luke 22: 25-27.

Remember, the disciple is not above his master; nor the servant above his lord. It is enough that the disciple be as his master, and the servant as his lord.—Matthew 10: 21.

He set the example of sacrifice and privation. He traveled and preached the simple gospel among the poor and the lowly. He was approachable, tender and sympathetic, loving and kind. The people were drawn to him; he was ready to listen to their appeals. In this is his great appeal to the human family; he is a genuine brother and friend to man. He appealed to that which is basic and best in humanity—the heart and the intelligence. Because of this he continues to draw men unto him, not to compel them; and thus he is loved by millions, while Cæsar and Alexander and all the captains of force are passé and forgotten.

Let us “always remember him” in this, “and keep the commandments which he has given” us, “that we may always have his Spirit to be with us”; for only in such spirit can we come into unity and influence our fellows for good. Jesus is our “Captain,” and “Leader,” and “Commander.” He is “the way, the truth, and the life,” and no man cometh unto the Father but by him. He has said, “Look unto me in every thought.” That which is in harmony with his Spirit as interpreted in his life is true; that which is not is false and misleading, no matter how ardently believed. Christ has said this unto his church:

But verily I say unto you that, in time, ye shall have no king nor ruler, for I will be your king and watch over you. Wherefore, hear my voice and follow me, and you shall be a free people, and ye shall have no laws but my laws, when I come, for I am your lawgiver, and what can stay my hand? But verily I say unto you, Teach one another according to the office wherewith I have appointed you, and let every man esteem his brother as himself, and practice virtue and holiness before me. And again I say unto you, Let every man esteem his brother as himself: for what man among you having twelve sons, and is no respecter to them, and they serve him obediently, and he saith unto the one, Be thou clothed in robes and sit thou here; and to the other, Be thou clothed in rags and sit thou there, and looketh upon his sons and saith, I am just. Behold, this I have given unto you a parable, and it is even as I am: I say unto you, Be one; and if ye are not one, ye are not mine.—Doctrine and Covenants 38: 5, 6.

When people hear the gospel, they are obliged to discriminate between the preaching of the word and their former traditions. They are required, if they would obey the truth, to sever themselves from family traditional belief and often from former ties. But in doing this, exercising free choice based upon examination, they are brought into fellowship with the Spirit of truth and rejoice in “the glorious liberty of the children of God.” All future progress in knowledge, in growth, and in happiness must be based upon this process of intelligent analysis and acceptance of truth. There is no other guaranty and there can be no further progress without resort to this method of clear discrimination before action is decided upon. It is the only means by which as a church our action can be clear, permanent, and effective.

The Reorganized Church has come into being largely as a protest against error and has made call for adherence to divine law as against human “living oracles.” It has constantly been in the field of religious and moral discussion. The American people have moved upward by discussion of political, social, and general questions. Debates in Congress, upon the public platform, in political campaigns, and through the press, have enabled them to reach conclusions and to act on the questions of state’s rights, constitutional law, the tariff, the income tax, election of United States senators directly, immigration, finance, transportation, and other questions. Our church people can and must do likewise with their problems. There should be no fear of the outcome to result from full discussion, for “truth is mighty and will prevail.” To be afraid of the results of open investigation is to manifest weakness. Such policy is equivalent to the habit of the ostrich who, when pursued, hides his head in the sand and ignores his danger. We have confidence in the intelligence and integrity of our people, in their power to think and to decide, aided by the promise of the Spirit which leads and guides into all truth. They will be stronger in their faith as they see made manifest the power of the truth to defeat error and to vindicate itself.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, July 4, 1924.

“A little idea may be expanded—the biggest ideas usually are pruned down or else fall short of the mark. In the little things of life we find the key to big things—a chance acquaintance, a chance action.”
—F. L. Brittain.

Facts About the Bible.—No. 3

BY A. B. PHILLIPS

There are not as many manuscript sources of the Old Testament as there are of the New Testament. In the former there is therefore less variation in the text. After the fifth century B. C. the Jews used the square form of Hebrew instead of the archaic Hebrew that had hitherto been employed. An archaic form was retained, however, by the Samaritans that was substantially the same as the Hebrew in the time of Manasseh, which it was claimed had been used by the ten tribes of Israel in the time of Solomon. But their manuscripts are not as ancient as are the Hebrew manuscripts.

From the available sources of the Old Testament, copies were made by scribes, who produced a standard text in accordance with strict rules. From this text, known as the Sopherim, was produced the Masoretic text, so called because the professional scribes who wrote it were known as Masorites, or recorders of tradition. This text arose about the sixth century A. D. But with the use of Aramaic by the Jews after the Exile, it became necessary to translate the Hebrew text into Aramaic. This was done orally at first, but by the first century many portions of scripture in this language had been put in writing. They were known as the Targums and formed an independent text from that of the Masora.

The oldest of all the Old Testament manuscripts now existing are neither Hebrew nor Aramaic, however, but are Greek, Latin, and Syriac translations. The most important of these is known as the Septuagint, or LXX, because it presumably was the work of seventy Jews. It was a Greek Pentateuch of the third century B. C., though other books were subsequently added, and is supposed to represent the first translation of the Old Testament ever made.

It is held that the earliest New Testament translation was in the Syriac tongue, and probably made at Antioch, where disciples were first called Christians. Before the close of the second century, the Syriac gospel was mentioned by Hegesippus, but did not at first contain all the books as now received. Latin and Egyptian versions also existed before the third century. A great many versions subsequently arose, most of which were derived from Greek copies or Latin versions, and by the fifteenth century Bibles existed in most of the principal languages. Of course these were all in manuscript form, most of the earlier texts being in large round letters called uncials, which later gave place largely to the cursive, small letters called minuscules.

Value of Printed Versions

The first Bible to be printed was the Latin Vulgate, and came from the press of Gutenberg in 1456

after four years of labor on it. In the same century, printed versions of the Bible or portions of it were issued in German, Dutch, Czech, Danish, French, Italian, Scandinavian, Spanish, and Welsh. By the invention of printing, it became possible to avoid the various errors that formerly crept into copies of the versions used, and many copies could be made exactly alike. But as manuscripts differed, it became necessary to compare them with each other in order to determine which was to be preferred. Translators also did not all choose the same words to render given texts, hence some preferred one version and some another.

William Tyndale translated the New Testament into English and attempted to publish it at Cologne in 1525, but being prohibited by the Cologne Senate he fled to Worms, where he printed 3,000 copies in 1526. Furious efforts to destroy it resulted in leaving only a fragment of Matthew to be handed down to our time. To supply the great demand, he issued three more editions within a few years. In this century such important versions as the Coverdale Version, Matthew's Bible, the Great Bible, the Geneva Bible, and the Bishop's Bible were published. These were followed in the early part of the next century by the Douay Version and the Authorized Version, representing respectively Roman Catholic and Protestant translations, with many textual differences.

Both the Douay and the Authorized Versions have been changed several times since they were first issued. In many respects both were superior to the versions that preceded them, but with the passing centuries language changed considerably, and increased knowledge of biblical matters revealed certain defects that required correction. In 1870 the Convocation of Canterbury authorized its revision by a committee of English scholars, assisted by a committee of American scholars. The New Testament was completed in 1881 and the Old Testament in 1884. This was followed in 1901 by an edited edition prepared by the American revisers. A comparative study of these four versions is very interesting and helpful.

In 1853 Rabbi Isaac Leeser issued a version for the Jews from the Masoretic text, which undoubtedly conveyed more accurately at least some of the Hebrew meanings. Some of its renderings support the Inspired Version of Joseph Smith, which was begun in 1830 and occupied three years, but was not issued until 1867. The Inspired Version was particularly intended to correct errors in the text and to restore certain portions not found in present manuscripts. It therefore contains matter not found in any other version. In the new Helps to Bible Study considerably more than one hundred manuscripts and versions are described, many of which are illustrated.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Drives Eighty-One Miles to Attend Meeting

PINE RIVER, MINNESOTA, June 9.—As I read the testimonies in the church papers it gives me courage and new hope. I am trying to fight for this gospel harder than I one day fought against it, and there is no task too great for me to undertake for the cause.

We are eighty-one miles from Bemidji Branch. We drove down there last week for a two-day meeting. Brother George W. Day baptized five into the true church. Brethren Whiting, Shakespeare, and L. A. Gould delivered some wonderful messages. Those meetings are always worth more than all the efforts we put forth. We often drive fifty to sixty miles to meet with the scattered Saints and have good meetings. If we do not enjoy the gospel it is our own fault, for if we are faithful the Lord is always ready to meet with us. My prayer is that all who read this may be willing to do the Lord's work first at all times, and he will then give us time that is needed for other things.

I have run a section for the Northern Pacific Railway twenty-three years, but that does not keep me from praising God for giving me this gospel. We have some great experiences in this country, for we are persecuted on all sides, but God gives us strength to bear it all, for he has wonderfully blessed us.

Let us all be more determined to live nearer to God, and our lives will be worth living. May the Lord bless Brother F. M. in his office.

SAM CASE.

Peoria Working to Better Conditions

PEORIA, ILLINOIS, July 18.—The branch here is passing through quite a struggle to maintain its organization and to continue to have a meeting place. A good many have moved away, and those that are here are somewhat scattered over the city. All are of the poor of earth, so it is a big problem to carry on. However, since there is a "will" perhaps the "way" will be found. Brother E. R. Davis, the district president, is here this week seeking to find the way.

Last week we were pleased to have Apostle E. J. Gleazer visit us, even if it was but for one service.

The terrible tornado that lately did so much damage here did not seriously damage any of the Saints.

Convert Congregation Who Bring a Church

LANCASTER, OHIO, July 22.—Perhaps the Saints would be interested in the work that is being done in Central Ohio. I came to this State in the fall of 1918, made an effort at several places to open up church work, but without success. I had almost given up hope and came to the conclusion that the people in this country did not care anything for the gospel. But finding a vacant church building near Lancaster, I decided to try again. I inquired and found the parties who had control of the church and obtained permission to use the building. I decided that it might be well to start a Sunday school there also and in that way get the people interested in the gospel. Accordingly I went to work to see what could be done. I ordered the Sunday School Quarterlies and paid for them myself. We started our meetings last fall. I have preached every Sunday, and we have had Sunday school every Sunday since.

I have succeeded in converting the people, church building, and all. The last Sunday in June I baptized five; on July 13, four; July 20, eight; and four more have asked for baptism, which will be taken care of next Sunday. Several others are making arrangements to be baptized. Nearly all who have been baptized are heads of families and own their homes, some of which are farms. You see we have not been idle during the winter and spring months.

We have a nice church building, an organ, and two girls who can play well. I also baptized a man who is fine with the violin. He plays with the choir. We have two others, one a young lady, who can play the violin, and they will soon help us out with the music. We also have material for officers and hope to have a branch organized soon.

I am a railroad man, laboring as a local elder, preaching every Sunday at this place.

We are looking for our district president, Floyd Rockwell, to visit us and arrange to organize a branch at this place.

My heart has been made glad, and I am made to rejoice because I have been an instrument in bringing so many to the truth. We are planning great things and hope by the help of the Lord to carry them out.

All missionaries are invited to make us a visit at any time.

S. E. DICKSON.

Baptisms; All-Day Meeting

CHEBOYGAN, MICHIGAN, July 21.—The work is progressing in this place. W. H. Sheffer baptized several in the recent past.

Our all-day meeting began at eight o'clock on July 13 with a young people's prayer meeting. Sunday school at half past nine was in charge of Irving Sheffer, local superintendent, and Hector McKinnon, of East Jordan, assistant superintendent of the Northern Michigan District.

The prayer service at eleven o'clock was in charge of Allen Schreur, of Gaylord, and James Davis, of South Boardman. The two o'clock sermon was by E. N. Burt, of Onaway, assisted by W. H. Sheffer, our local elder; while the sermon at half past three was by W. H. Sheffer, with Elmer Parks assisting. James Davis preached at half past seven.

All the meetings were well attended and enjoyed. Brother and Sister Davis remained with us for a few days' preaching, giving blessings, visiting, and encouraging the Saints. They left on July 18 to attend a two-day meeting at the Wells Branch.

The Department of Women gave a successful ice cream social July 19 on the lawn of the parsonage. They will give another soon.

Japanese Enters Church

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO, July 14.—We had a fine time here yesterday. The services were all well attended, and a fine spirit prevailed throughout the day. Sister Blanche Edwards, who has been here since last Tuesday, gave a good lecture at the eleven o'clock hour on the subject, "Discovering God." She left this morning for Salt Lake City. Her visit was enjoyed and appreciated.

I occupied the pulpit at the evening hour. We had baptismal service at three o'clock, when a Japanese brother and another man were baptized. The Japanese brother is talking about attending Graceland and has expressed himself as being desirous of carrying the gospel to his own race. He is a fine, clean-cut young man. There are several others who are about ready to join the church. I may go to Pueblo for next Sunday. I am enjoying my work immensely.

BRUCE E. BROWN.

Enfield and London News

ENFIELD, MIDDLESEX, July 7.—It is perhaps many years since any news of the Enfield Branch has been published in the HERALD, but we will see that this is not the last time news will be sent for insertion.

The branch has had an uphill fight during the past year, but it is now progressing slowly but surely—if not in numbers, in spirit. God has indeed bestowed upon us many blessings, and we rejoice in his glorious light.

Three weeks ago the waters in the font were disturbed when three young people, two daughters and one son of Elder J. W. Worth, the London branch president, were baptized. By special request the baptismal service was held in Enfield, and the confirmation service in Saint Leonard's Hall, the meeting house of the London Branch. These two meetings were spiritual feasts, and we felt to thank God for his blessings.

Last week a reunion of the Enfield and London Branches was held here, to the great benefit of all present. A welcome visitor was Elder E. Maloney, of Manchester, who delivered a fine address in the morning to an interested audience.

In the afternoon a splendid prayer service was held during which the sacrament was partaken of and a great degree of the Spirit of God was present, it being made manifest through our Sister Kemp. The message was to the effect that much destruction would come to pass round about us very soon, but that if the Saints were faithful they should escape it. We were encouraged by this message and went from the meeting rejoicing.

In the evening the service was well attended and enjoyed by all present. A half hour musical program was given by our small orchestra, consisting of three violinists and the organist, assisted by the conductor, W. T. Goulee. The speaker for the evening was our branch president, Elder J. A. Judd, and an interesting discourse was enjoyed by all the Saints. Altogether it was a fine time spent in the service of the Lord, and we were richly blessed.

We are contemplating holding these meetings every three months, and they should be a great strength to the people, seeing that the London Branch is at present without a meeting place, circumstances having arisen that have forced the sale of Saint Leonard's Hall. The Saints of that branch need the readers' prayers, especially the young, who we fear may get discouraged because of the irregularity of meeting. However, they are still holding on with great faith and courage, which are the hallmarks of all true Saints.

Now, dear readers, we need your prayers so that the work of God in this portion of the vineyard may progress. The branch, although small, is endeavoring to uphold the work and remain faithful to the end.

DOVER ALMA JUDD, Branch Secretary.

Baptisms in Prospect

MULBERRY, KANSAS, July 21.—The weather here is very warm, but most of the Saints are busy preparing to attend the reunion to be held at Pittsburg, Kansas.

Elder Amos T. Higdon is holding open-air services in the city park at Liberal, Missouri, where there is a small number of Saints belonging to the branch of this place. He is having good crowds each night, many of the people of other churches being interested. We hope much good will be done at this place.

A number of the Saints from here drive over every night. Two have given their names for baptism at this date.

MRS. CHARLES A. DOOLEY.

Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, August 5.—The regular sacramental services were held in all the churches of Zion Sunday morning, August 3. In the evening Elder William I. Fligg was the speaker on the Campus.

At Enoch Hill Elder C. B. Hartshorn was the speaker in the evening. The campaign to pay off the local church debt is progressing with good results. All are enthused with the desire to see it liquidated as quickly as possible, and hopes are held by many that this will be accomplished by January 1, 1925. The sacrifice on the part of the Saints in this locality in helping with this task will certainly react favorably, and their spiritual experiences must surely be enhanced.

Brother Bath continued his gospel sermons Sunday evening at East Independence, having for his subject this week, "Resurrection." These Saints are now building the basement for their new church, and prayer meeting was held on the grounds last Wednesday night. All are anxious to see the new building completed, as they are very much crowded in their old church. L. E. Hills gave his first lecture on the Book of Mormon Friday night. The second of the series will be given next Friday night if the weather permits. The lectures are being held in the open air.

Choir practice and the work of the Department of Women has been discontinued at Englewood during the summer months. Regular sacramental service was held Sunday morning. The Saints of this group attend meetings at the Campus in the evening.

Groups ten, eleven, and twelve are promoting a series of gospel lawn meetings at the home of Bishop Keir, with Elder J. W. Metcalf as the speaker. Many gather there every evening to enjoy the good music and the good sermons, and incidentally the cool breezes. It is an ideal spot for services.

President Elbert A. Smith was in Tulsa, Oklahoma, over Sunday. President F. M. Smith is en route home from the Hermosa Beach reunion in California. He expects to leave soon, however, to attend reunions in the East.

Of the Quorum of Twelve, Apostles Garver and Gleazer are at Lamoni, Apostle Gillen is in Chatham, Ontario, and Brother Edwards is attending the Eldorado Springs, Missouri, district reunion.

Kenneth Fligg is driving through to Longview, Washington, as a guest of his employer, Mr. Andrews, of the law firm of Baker, Bot, Parker, and Garwood, Kansas City. They went by way of Denver, Salt Lake City, Yellowstone Park, and Portland, Oregon. They expect to be gone about a month.

Mrs. Mary Siegfried, mother of Bishop Mark H. Siegfried, died July 29. She had been ill about two weeks. The funeral services were held at half past two Thursday, July 31, at the Stone Church, in charge of President Elbert A. Smith. Her five sons and one son-in-law were the pallbearers. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Want Series of Meetings

TERLTON, OKLAHOMA.—Our branch is small so our work is but small. However we are doing our best to keep our little Sunday school going.

We were very much pleased to have Brother and Sister Case with us last Sunday. Brother Case preached two very inspiring sermons, which were enjoyed by all. I believe some others could be brought into the fold if we could have a series of meetings, which we are hoping and praying for soon.

Denver News

DENVER, COLORADO, July 28.—It is hot and dry here, with no rain since May 30. Quite a number of the Saints are taking vacations, but their places in the Sunday services are being filled by visiting Saints so that attendance is about normal. Sister Hamlin and her son Raymond are motoring in California, as she was very much in need of a change. Sister Beardsmore and her son Albert have just returned from a trip to California.

Among the visitors we have noticed the following: Elder Keith Rogers and wife, who were here on July 20; Sister Ina Schall, an old-time resident of the Rocky Mountain Branch who now resides at Monte Vista; and Sister Josie Pople, of Trinidad, who is in the city taking health treatments.

Sister Brannon, superintendent of the Sunday school, is putting on some new features which are very instructive and interesting.

We have had some good speakers recently. Sister Vida E. Smith lectured on July 13. June 29 Elder Evan A. Davis was the speaker at the morning service. His sermon was short but to the point, and we had no trouble in locating his position in regard to his faith in the church and its final triumph. The same evening Brother Frank B. Almond spoke on "Voices of yesterday." Pastor E. J. Williams was the speaker Sunday evening, July 20, taking his text from Luke 17: 10: "So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all these things which are commanded you, say, we are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was no more than our duty to do." Elder J. B. Wildermuth spoke July 27 in the morning and Elder Almond in the evening.

Midweek prayer services are being held at private homes, and some of them are excellent.

On June 24 Pastor E. J. Williams delivered, by special request, a lecture before the Iliff School of Theology on the subject, "The Latter Day Saints Church: its organization, doctrine, and future aim." He received the best of treatment and at the close answered a number of questions.

Marshall

Elder R. F. Moorman, one of the stake high council and assistant music director, was with Marshall Sunday, July 27, taking charge of the music at the Sunday school hour, then delivering a very edifying sermon at eleven o'clock. In the afternoon Brother and Sister Moorman accompanied Elder Phelps and a party of the Saints to Blue Lick, where Brother Phelps has a standing appointment. On account of the threatening weather they drove on to Sedalia.

Atherton

Sunday morning we began our services with a beautiful spirit manifest, and this spirit continued throughout the day. Near the close of Sunday school our stake president, Brother D. J. Krahl, came to our little assembly, and we were pleased to have him with us. He preached both morning and evening, giving us food divine, which is timely in these perilous times.

Sister Agnes Adams, from Walnut Park, sang a very beautiful solo at the morning hour; her father, Elder Walter Adams, offered the invocation.

Grandview

Grandview Branch has been fortunate of late in having a number of visitors with us. July 13 Bishop A. B. Phillips occupied during the morning preaching services. The Saints enjoyed this splendid service and were pleased to have the opportunity of meeting our new bishop.

July 20 Brother D. R. Carmichael, of Atherton, stake superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, occupied during the eleven o'clock hour along the line of the relation of this department to the church and its aims.

July 27 Brother Job Negeim, of Jerusalem, was a visitor. He contributed two solos in a very pleasing manner: "The rosary," in the German language and again in English; and "Our yesterdays."

Sedalia

Elder C. L. House spoke at eleven o'clock, giving a splendid exhortation to the Saints in regard to our personal responsibility toward Zion conditions.

Elder R. E. Bozarth spoke at eight, his subject being, "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" Wednesday night, July 23, we enjoyed one of the best prayer meetings we have had in Sedalia for some time. A man and his wife who live across the street from the church related to one of our sisters an experience they had on Monday night, July 21, which was as follows: About nine in the evening they heard the sweetest music they had ever heard, coming from the piano. Afterwards they saw a well-dressed person come from toward the building and stand on a mound in the yard and look up to heaven, then return to the building. This was done three times, and then he disappeared. It was an interesting experience to them, and made a profound impression on the Saints as it was related at the prayer service.

Brother and Sister R. F. Moorman spent Sunday in Marshall and report two splendid meetings.

Brother Elmer Corkran and Sister J. C. Thistlewaite are both on the sick list.

The Department of Women held a very profitable meeting July 23, at which time the following department leaders were appointed: Sister Merle Zuber, young women; Sister S. Galloway, cradle roll; and Sister McNealy, friendly visitor. They are taking up their new duties with zeal.

Nauvoo Items

NAUVOO, ILLINOIS, July 25.—On July 4 Brother James Gifford, old-time pioneer, passed away at his home in Mormon Springs, at the age of ninety-five years. He came to Nauvoo the year before the temple was burned and greatly enjoyed reminiscences of the early days, his mind being clear and memory perfect until the end. He often spoke of the time he rowed young Joseph and his mother across the river when on their way to that memorable conference at which time Joseph was ordained to take his father's place as President of the church. Although not a member at that time, Brother Gifford had every confidence in the man and his mission, and as soon as Joseph had taken his rightful place he was baptized and lived faithful to the end. The funeral service was held in the Saints' church, in charge of Bishop Lambert. Had the weather been favorable, it would undoubtedly have been the largest funeral service held since the death of Joseph the Martyr. Hundreds passed before the bier to look for the last time upon the face of one who had lived nearly a century, loved and respected by all who knew him.

The Nauvoo Township Sunday School Association, consisting of the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Latter Day Saint Sunday schools, held their regular convention in the Saints' church. Two speakers from each of the Sunday schools were given place on the program. Brother Amos Berve spoke on "The purpose of the Sunday school," and Sister A. L. Sanford on "The value of stories in teaching," in representing the Latter Day Saint Sunday school. Mr. John B. Johnson of Carthage, county president, made a splendid talk along Sunday school lines. He also complimented the Nauvoo Township on the number of young people present at the convention, saying that this was not usually the case. The young people of the Nauvoo Branch drew around them the high school students and united in giving several splendid songs.

A car is a necessity in Nauvoo, where there is no railroad, street car, or even a boat this year, so nearly every family in the branch has one, and they have been put to good use the past month. The Rock Creek Branch held a bazaar and home talent play, and the Nauvoo Branch drove out in a body to attend. One Sunday the Saints throughout the district drove to Fort Madison to meet with the Saints there. A basket dinner was served in the basement of the new church and a greater fellowship promoted between the various branches. The following Sunday as many as could met with the Keokuk Saints, and a basket dinner was spread in the park. At one time there was a large branch in Keokuk, but the Saints have scattered until few remain. A splendid work is being done along Sunday school lines by the faithful women of the branch, and preaching services are held whenever a preacher comes that way.

Patriarch U. W. Greene and wife have just returned home after spending a month in Nauvoo. Brother Greene's sermons, lecture on the Holy Land, and the wonderful experiences he has related in the Wednesday night prayer meetings have been very strengthening to the Saints.

Elder Henson, president of the Mount Vernon, Illinois, District, with his sons and daughters and their families, making a party of eighteen visited the historic places in Nauvoo, meeting with the Saints at the Wednesday night prayer meeting and camping over night in the Nauvoo House.

The spiritual prayer meetings still continue, a one hundred per cent prayer meeting being frequent. On one of these occasions little five-year-old Joseph Henderson, actuated by the Spirit, arose and said, "I love Him." These meetings are doing much for the young people, and altogether we feel very much encouraged over the outlook in Nauvoo.

Kansas City Stake Items

The young girls' department of the stake, composed of the Orioles and Temple Builders, in charge of Sister R. E. Newkirk, has organized a club to study various subjects during the summer. The study includes basket making and polychrome, also recreational leadership. This club held a picnic June 29 in Swope Park, with seventy-five girls in attendance. Several games and contests were held, one of which was a ball game between the girls of Missouri and Kansas, the victory going to the Kansas girls. This department is steadily forging to the front, and a healthy local chapter exists in nearly all the branches of the stake, due to the capable effort of Sister Newkirk and her helpers.

The monthly quorum, priesthood, and Department of Women meetings were held the afternoon of July 20. The priesthood discussed the feasibility of an industrial exchange where access could be had to a corrected list of the business men of the stake. The Department of Women, in charge of Sister Fern Lloyd, held an experience meeting, which was enjoyed by all present. The quorums are studying a series of lessons on "Presidency."

What was perhaps the most novel method of bringing nonmembers to a series of meetings was practiced at Mount Washington Church during the recent effort of Brother Fligg. The congregation, under the leadership of their pastor R. L. Bishop, assigned two groups of competitive workers whose duty it was to bring in and report as many friends as could be induced to come. The result was that as many as fifty nonmembers heard the gospel on a single night. Seven were baptized. Brother Fligg may hold a series of lawn meetings on Blue Ridge Boulevard in the near future.

Exercises for the laying of the corner stone in the new Bennington Heights Church were held by the stake officials on July 13. A lawn social was held July 29, the proceeds to be applied on their new building, which is nearing completion.

A beautiful church wedding occurred at Quindaro church July 22 when Sister Blanche Tucker was united in marriage to Brother Clair Greene, Brother John Tucker officiating. The popularity of this young couple was evidenced by the great number of friends who attended. Their honeymoon will be spent in Colorado, after which they will live in Kansas City, Kansas.

Missionary W. I. Fligg spoke both morning and evening July 20 at Argentine. An ice cream social was held on the lawn the evening of July 24, which netted a nice amount to be applied on the stake building fund.

This year has been a prosperous one for Armourdale Branch. Pastor John Gross has baptized twelve, and Brother E. W. Lloyd, of Fourth Kansas City group, two since the first of the year. Brother Fligg held a week's meetings which elicited much interest, and we hope to have him back again for a longer stay. The Department of Women has been recently organized, and all are busy planning good things for us. We hope to have a new church building to meet in some time, and all are working to that end. Sister Etta Harris, a fine worker, was elected head of the Department of Women.

The young men's class of the Sunday school is planning an ice cream social in Shawnee Park for Friday, August 8, to raise money for the good of the work.

All in all, we feel that God is blessing our efforts here as never before, and we want everyone to know that we are making an effort to warn our neighbors as we have been warned.

Santa Ana Branch Is Going to Reunion

On June 15, 16, and 17 Apostle D. T. Williams preached four of his excellent sermons to the Santa Ana Saints. One of his themes was the conversion of one hundred thousand Latter Day Saints. He is a humble, likeable man, easy to approach.

Elder Amos W. Rhodes and wife, of Seattle, Washington, who are making a flying vacation trip through California, were guests at the parsonage Saturday night, July 12. We regret very much that they could not stop over long enough to become acquainted with our excellent congregation of Saints.

District President N. T. Chapman gave us a fine sermon Sunday morning, July 13. He radiates enthusiasm, and it seems to be contagious, but we are glad he is not under quarantine.

The local church has been closed, but lamentations are not in order. Apostasy or indifference is not the cause. Nearly everyone is going to Hermosa to attend reunion. Even the pastor is going, because the Lord opened the way in answer to prayer when he otherwise had little expectation of going. With such as President F. M. Smith, Walter W. Smith, Albert Carmichael, and Sister Edwards to hear from, we should return better equipped both intellectually and spiritually for greater and more useful lives. May God bless the reunions and reunion workers all over the world.

LEONARD S. RHODES.

REUNION NEWS

Central Texas' Fourteenth Reunion

The fourteenth annual reunion of the Central Texas District convened this year July 11 to 20 at Hearne, Texas.

The district presidency, R. M. Maloney and J. M. Clevenger, were associated with T. W. Williams as reunion presidency. Sheldon Armstrong was selected as secretary-treasurer, Zilla Standefer, chorister, and Nellie Tischer, organist.

The following general church representatives were in attendance: S. A. Burgess, C. J. Hunt, J. A. Thomas, Ammon White, and T. W. Williams. Brethren S. S. Smith, missionary of the district; R. M. Maloney, district president; R. E. Miller and J. M. Nunley were also listed as speakers. The ministry represented: Apostles, 1; high priests, 2; patriarchs, 1; bishops, 1; elders, 5; priests, 3; teachers, 2; deacons 4. There were 21 preaching services held, 4 lectures, 8 prayer meetings, 1 sacramental service, 2 young people's prayer meetings, and 4 priesthood meetings.

The attendance was not up to the average. It was approximately as follows: Daily, 30 to 40; evenings and Sunday, 75 to 100. There were six to nine tents on the ground and about fifteen to eighteen people tented.

The meetings throughout were harmonious. A very fine spirit was manifested. J. A. Thomas specialized on departmental work, Ammon White exhorted the Saints, Bishop Hunt gave his attention to finances, and T. W. Williams preached several sermons in defense of the latter-day work.

The next reunion will be held at Hearne the Friday before the full moon in July, 1925. The district presidency was sustained. A motion prevailed requesting the appointing powers to appoint R. M. Maloney to do work in the district.

The combined departments gave a high grade entertainment Friday evening, July 18. T. W. WILLIAMS.

Minnesota District

The Minnesota district reunion, held at Minneapolis, came to a close on Sunday night, July 13, after ten days full of spiritual uplift and opportunities for religious and intellectual development. The meetings were all well attended, and the spirit as developed in the reunion was one of faith and hope in the onward progress of the work and the final triumph of His kingdom here on earth. Many Saints journeyed a long distance to attend the services, and all proclaimed it a successful gathering. They voted to hold next year's reunion in Minneapolis also.

The reunion was blessed with a large representation of general church workers, including Patriarchs H. O. Smith and W. A. McDowell, Apostle John F. Garver, President and Mrs. Floyd M. McDowell, Brother Keith Harder, Sister Myra Nelson, Elders George Day, William Sparling, and William Shakespeare, and Sister Effie Hield as field worker for the Department of Women.

The meetings were held in the newly enlarged church. Praise was given to the Minneapolis Branch for the effort and cooperation shown in getting the building ready for these meetings, the work being accomplished almost entirely by the Saints voluntarily and in less than nine weeks from the time it began.

Meals were served in the church basement, the food being offered at cost and the work of cooking and serving in the cafeteria being done voluntarily by the Minneapolis Department of Women. The visitors pronounced its service as nearly perfect and the meals of the highest order. Many wondered how the food could be offered so reasonably and still leave enough to cover expenses. However, the cafeteria undertaking came out with a little surplus after all costs were paid.

The schedule of services during the reunion was as follows: 9 a. m., morning prayer service; 10.45 a. m. preaching service and junior church; 4 p. m., Department of Women meeting; 7 p. m., problems meeting and lecture, by Floyd M. McDowell; 8 p. m., evening service.

The prayer meetings were a source of blessing to all who attended. The testimonies given indicated the desire of both young and old to serve wherever they could be used. The point emphasized was that before each individual there lies an opportunity to do something for the Master; and while for each meeting there was a separate theme suggested by those in charge, the theme of the whole series of prayer services might be summed up in the statement: "What can I do to help redeem Zion?" Some valuable instruction was given under the influence of a special endowment of God's Holy Spirit to the end that the Saints might be established in the faith and in the assurance that God's hand was still with his people, and that his work would not be frustrated but would go on to the complete fulfillment of his promises and purposes in establishing his church in these latter days.

On Sunday a young people's prayer meeting was held at eight o'clock in the morning and was well attended. Brother McDowell, in an inspiring and instructive talk, suggested the theme of the meeting, "Preparation and consecration," and this was well supported and carried through the service by the prayers and testimonies of the young people. Many expressed their willingness and determination to prepare for a service acceptable to God, and thus be ready to take their part in doing the tasks and meeting the problems that lie before the church.

The sacramental and testimony service which followed this at nine o'clock was declared to be the best of all. The service of the sacrament enabled those who had come from a distance or were isolated to partake of the emblems in such a memorable gathering of the Saints. The time passed all too rapidly, the testimonies being brief and to the point and given promptly and readily, but as the rule was to start and begin all meetings on time, the spiritual repast of this meeting had to come to a close. The next service at eleven o'clock was a continuation of the excellent spirit of the prayer services, and in a wonderfully inspiring talk by Brother Garver on "What hast thou in thine hand?" the Saints and followers of Christ were urged to cast out those things that interfered with their answering the call of God and performing his service acceptably, and to use the things that were an asset and to make them a mighty rod for the deliverance of latter-day Israel from her bondage.

The junior church, held every morning at the time of the senior preaching service, but in another room, proved to be one of the big features of the reunion. The children responded wonderfully, and every morning for a week they came out to sing and to hear the story-telling and sermonets, the readings, recitations, and music by the children. On the last morning there was an attendance of fifty-two. The children voted unanimously in favor of recommending a junior church in every branch, and Elder Kress, pastor of Minneapolis, announced that the junior church would be held every Sunday morning hereafter. Sister Effie Hield was in charge of the junior church, and in this she was ably assisted by Sisters McDowell and Myra Nelson and by various members of the priesthood from time to time.

On Friday morning, the junior church was held on the platform of the main auditorium, while the older members of the congregation simply looked on. A short dramatization was put on, and a little talk given by Brother McDowell, illustrating what could be done with such a service. The spectators were loud and generous in their praise of this new way of meeting the needs and holding the interest of the youth.

Conference convened July 12. Frazee Branch was disorganized. George W. Day was chosen district president, and he chose Elders Leon A. Gould and E. H. Bennett as his assistants. Lester Whiting was sustained as Bishop's agent.

On Saturday afternoon, Brother Floyd McDowell gave a talk to the Oriole Girls which he called, "a talk from big brother."

The Department of Women meetings at four o'clock in the afternoon consisted of talks and instruction to the mothers and sisters on some of their problems. Sister Hield was chief speaker at these meetings, but on Friday Sister McDowell assisted by an interesting lecture on "Teaching children obedience." The women also held two early morning prayer services, and assisted by caring for the children during the other morning services, enabling many mothers to attend these meetings who would have been hindered had not such assistance been provided. The Department of Women expressed their appreciation to Sister Hield for her help in directing these activities.

The series of evening lectures by Brother McDowell on some of the social aspects of Christianity were well received by all, and were a source of inspiration to those who heard them. On Saturday he was kept busy answering questions relating to various departmental problems and courses at Graceland College.

The recreational features of the reunion were: two picnics, one on the Fourth of July and the other on the tenth, which proved a restful change from the intense spiritual and intellectual activity of the meetings and also a better opportunity for social intercourse. The young people had their games, volley ball, kitten ball, races, etc., and in these the older men and women took their part. A volley-ball court near the church provided recreation when no other meetings were scheduled. The weather throughout the reunion was ideal.

Five were baptized during the reunion, four of them being young boys, while the fifth was a woman. One of the boys was a great-grandson of Joseph Smith, the Martyr, known to his friends as "Little Arthur." His confirmation was very beautiful and will long be remembered by those who witnessed it as well as by this promising little lad.

At the business meeting held on Saturday afternoon, a resolution was adopted supporting and declaring allegiance to the leading quorums of the church and in the conclusions of the Joint Council which met in April and which were published in the HERALD recently. The district officers elected for the coming year were: Sister Sadie Johnson as Sunday school superintendent, Leslie DeLapp as Religio superintendent, and Sister DeWayne Fisher as head of the Department of Women. Elder George Day as president and Elder Bennett as secretary were sustained in their offices. Six General Conference delegates were: Brother and Sister Charles Johnson, Sister C. A. Kress, Brother Schnuckle, Wesley Elvin, and Leslie DeLapp.

Central Oklahoma Reunion

The Central Oklahoma reunion this year was held in a grove near Washinga, a small village one mile north of Kaw City. The grove was donated by Mr. Emmett Thompson, a Kaw Indian and a friend of the church. The reunion proper commenced Sunday, July 20, and closed Sunday, July 27.

There were present of the general ministry T. W. Williams, Hubert Case, A. H. Christensen, S. W. Simmons, Richard Bullard, C. J. Hunt, J. A. Thomas, and Jonathan Koshiway. T. W. Williams was associated with District Presidents Earl Bailey and Ed Dillon as reunion presidency.

The order of services each day was about as follows: prayer meeting at nine; preaching at eleven in the morning and quarter after eight in the evening; round table or departmental work at half past two.

Owing to the fact that this is a new place with few Saints in the immediate vicinity, and quite removed from the body of the membership of the district, the attendance was not large—about a dozen tents and some thirty people camping. The average daily attendance was about thirty-five, evenings and Sunday about sixty. The evening services were augmented by friends from the adjoining village and countryside.

C. J. Hunt represented the Bishopric and delivered several talks, besides conducting some round table meetings dealing with the temporal affairs of the church.

J. A. Thomas represented the departments, doing good work. He found ready response among district workers. Brothers Williams and Case held several conferences with the Indian members, comprising several families, representing the Otoes and the Iowas. The Otoes were Hoke Smith Dent, known among his people as Chief Blue Hair, Jonathan Koshiway, Charles E. Moore, William Green, and Felix Robideau. The Iowas were John Hudson, Robert Small, Jake Doe, and Robert Robideau.

A special feature of the reunion was the formal ordination of Hoke Smith Dent to the office of elder by T. W. Williams, and the calling and ordaining of Robert Robideau to the office of teacher, and John Hudson and Jake Doe to the office of deacon. Brother Dent is ninety-two years old and is the head chief of his tribe.

Brothers Christensen and Dillon bore the brunt of the responsibility in arranging and providing for the reunion.

A splendid spirit prevailed throughout. The testimonies of the Indian brothers and sisters were very uplifting and impressive. They have a keen insight and are enthusiastic.

On Saturday evening a program was given comprising contributions from the various departments, supplemented by illustrated talks by Brother T. W. Williams on the Holy Land and Hubert Case and Jonathan Koshiway on phases of Indian life.

The committee on arrangements called on neighborhood friends to contribute foodstuffs, publishing the fact that no charge would be made to anyone for meals. The result was that more was contributed than could possibly be used. Among the contributions was a yearling calf, several hogs, chickens, corn, tomatoes, cabbage, eggs, potatoes, apples, etc.

Sister Ed Dillon had charge of the eating department and was ably assisted by Sister Grossman and others.

All ate at one common table, and meals were served free to all. It was a unique experience and proved a success.

The officers of the departments operating on the ground were: Sister Ed Dillon, women's organizer; Alice McGeorge, superintendent of Sunday school; J. A. Thomas, Religio superintendent. The music was in charge of Sister Godfrey Kueffer and W. P. Rumsey.

One afternoon was devoted to missionary work under the supervision of T. W. Williams and Hubert Case. Different phases of missionary work as it related to the Indians, the organization of branches, the building of church houses, and other problems were discussed.

On the whole the reunion was a success: though the attendance was small, good was accomplished; and the Saints, (Continued on next page.)

Elders' Meeting

The Northern Michigan quorum of elders will meet in Midland at the reunion grounds August 18. Morning services will be open meetings, while in the afternoon business and problem meeting will be held.

Notice of Silence

To Whom It May Concern: This is to certify that Brother Charles Romig, priest of the Barberton, Ohio, Branch, has been silenced for cause.

JAMES MCCONNAUGHY, Branch President.

Little Sioux

To Members of the Little Sioux District Priesthood: As the time for the annual reunion draws near, we wish to urge all the priesthood to arrange to attend if possible, and encourage the members to attend. The reunion should be a source of spiritual uplift and confirmation if we seek to make it so. But we must be present to receive the full benefit, and we must come in the spirit of sacrifice and devotion. Printed folders are being placed in each home in the district explaining the advantages of group study, lectures, sermons, prayer services, and priesthood meetings.

We urge that we should not take sides in regard to present differences of opinion in the leading quorums of the church and the controversy running through the HERALD, for to do so would only agitate the minds of the Saints and spread distrust and weaken the faith of the Saints. The church is true, and the church will stand to accomplish its mission. The hand of the Lord is over his people. Let us be true to our covenant and preach an affirmative message and thus build up the kingdom of God and establish faith and confidence. Let us contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints.

JOSEPH W. LANE,
W. R. ADAMS,
C. B. WOODSTOCK,
District Presidency.

Reunion Notices

Arkansas District, four miles north of Jonesboro, August 15 to 24. Sleeping quarters will be provided. Lunch will be served on grounds at a nominal cost. All Saints are requested to fast the second Sunday in August and come praying and ready to work to make the reunion a success. All trains will be met at Jonesboro. Lida Ziegenhorn, district secretary.

Kewanee, at Spring Lake Park, Galva, Illinois, August 15 to 24. Good shade, good playgrounds, good water, good commissary. Come and bring the good Spirit with you. Send orders for tents and cots to Edward Jones, 926 North Vine Street, Kewanee, Illinois. Spring Lake Park is about a mile and a half northwest of Galva. E. R. Davis, district president.

A good attendance is expected at the Eastern Oklahoma reunion to be held at Winthrop, Arkansas, August 14 to 25.

many of whom were young in the church, returned to their homes gladdened and stimulated to better service.

There were too many missionaries and general church representatives present considering the size of the reunion. Two, or at most three, missionaries are enough for the ordinary reunion. This does not work a hardship, and the bishop is not called upon to meet deficits.

Several priesthood meetings were held. The young people held one sunrise prayer meeting with twenty-eight in attendance, some of whom were outsiders. At this meeting three outsiders expressed a desire to unite with the church. On the last Sunday there were six baptisms, and three others gave their names for baptism, which will be attended to in the branch.

Several good speakers have been secured, and it is hoped that all Saints in the district will make every effort to attend to help make the reunion a success. Winthrop Saints are doing everything they can to care for the visitors. The young people of the district are especially invited. H. E. Winegar, Dalby Springs, Texas.

Tanner and A. R. Moore, associates; W. C. Chapman, secretary-treasurer; and B. S. Tanner, auditor. Time and place of next conference left to the district presidency. W. C. Chapman, secretary.

LITTLE SIOUX.—At Moorhead, Iowa, June 21 and 22. J. W. Lane and C. B. Woodstock in charge. Bishop's agent had received in tithes and offerings, $3,017.93 since February. Statistical reports showed a total membership of 1,876, being a net gain of 12 since the last report. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. W. Lane, president, who chose W. R. Adams and C. B. Woodstock as his associates; Ada S. Putnam, secretary; George M. Vandel, treasurer; Gerald Gunsolley, Sunday school superintendent; Mrs. W. R. Adams, Sunday school secretary; Jay E. Keck, Religio superintendent; Esther Kennedy, superintendent of Department of Women; Gladys Silsbee, superintendent of Department of Music; Laura Bateman, superintendent of Health Department. The conference concurred in recommendation for ordinations as follows: S. C. Smith, elder; Irvin Clark, priest; J. E. Smith, teacher. F. T. Mussell and Charles F. Putnam, neighboring missionaries, were the speakers on Sunday, and Joseph Seddon, of Woodbine, preached on Saturday evening. The October conference will convene at Woodbine. Ada S. Putnam, secretary.

KEWANEE.—At Kewanee, Illinois, June 27 to 29. The district presidency, E. R. Davis, Edward Jones, and B. E. Sartwell, presided. E. J. Gleazer and E. A. Curtis assisted in all services after their arrival, having been detained a day by the storm. Eleven branches reported 779 members. A branch was organized at Galesburg December 16, 1923. Report of Bishop's agent showed total receipts for the past eight months of $1.

Disbursements: General fund, $67.05; presidency fund, $5; missionary fund, nothing; balance, June 1, 1924, $155.98. It was adopted that the district expenses for one year be apportioned by a budget committee to consist of the presidency, treasurer, missionary, and heads of the three departments. J. E. Asay, Edward Jones, and A. R. McCormac were appointed as a committee to confer with the Presiding Bishop for his advice concerning the purchase of one or two district parsonages and means of raising the money. The last Friday, Saturday, and Sunday in June, and the first Friday, Saturday, and Sunday in October were fixed as dates for the conferences, each conference to announce the place of the next one. The rules of representation were amended to apply to the nonresident group, allowing them one vote for every six members or fraction thereof. W. E. Keek, of Princeton, was placed in charge to provide for a district orchestra. Winifred Douglas was chosen as assistant secretary, to act as district recorder, having charge of the nonresident group, and to be in possession of the district mimeograph to assist the district president in getting out circular letters, etc. With regard to taking up collections at church services, the matter of caring for local expenses was left for each branch to do as it sees fit. Prompt reporting of priesthood in the district was indorsed by the body. Galva was chosen as the place for holding the reunion from August 15 to 24. District officers chosen: E. R. Davis, president; Edward Jones and B. E. Sartwell, counselors; Mary E. Gillin, secretary; Edward Jones, treasurer; H. J. Cady, Sunday school superintendent; L. Steigle, superintendent of Religio; Eva Bean, superintendent of Department of Women; Elbert Holmes, secretary; Leah Denton, chorister; Mary E. Gillin, historian; and Edward Jones, Bishop's agent. Friday afternoon was devoted to departmental work; Saturday to the usual church business, with Sunday occupied in prayer and preaching services. The Saints were glad to meet Brother E. J. Gleazer, E. A. Curtis, missionary, and seven of the district officers were present. The next conference will be at Moline, October 3-5. A. R. McCormac, secretary pro tem. Mary E. Gillin, secretary.

KEWANEE.—June 27, 28, and 29, in charge of district presidency assisted by Apostle E. J. Gleazer and E. A. Curtis. Sunday school institute was held Friday afternoon and a general program in the evening. Saturday a resolution was passed looking toward the purchase of one or more district parsonages and a reunion ground. Nonresident members are to have same privileges as resident members at conference. Recommendations favoring a district orchestra were passed. Conference voted to hold next reunion at Galva, Illinois, August 15 to 24. Former officers sustained. Conference was not so well attended because of severe storms which crippled train service besides rendering travel by auto difficult. Sermons by Apostle Gleazer were forceful and inspiring, accomplishing good among the Saints and leaving a desire for his return. Next conference will be held in October at Moline, Illinois. Robert W. Gunlock, for press committee.

Anent the Herald Controversy

Early in June there appeared in the SAINTS' HERALD a communication known as "An open letter," over the signatures of eighteen leading ministers of the church, setting forth five principles which they think to be fundamental, and asserting belief that the coming General Conference should settle the controversy in the church in a definite and constructive manner. The avowed purpose of this open letter was that "a frank consideration of them [these five fundamental principles, at least] may be had throughout the church."

On July 9 there was contained in the HERALD, found on pages 651 and 652 of its columns, what was evidently intended as an answer to the open letter of June 4, under the heading, "Concerning church government." This communication was signed by twenty-five leading ministers of the church and was for the purpose, doubtless, of putting the signers on record as supporting certain principles of church government and of stimulating the discussion of these principles.

One month has elapsed since the appearance of this latter document; two months since the publication of the open letter. There are still eight months before the convening of General Conference, during which time there will be conferences in many of the stakes and districts of the church, at which delegations will be appointed to the General Conference. These delegations and the ex officio members of the conference will decide, if the expressed wish of both sides of the controversy prevail, on the course the church will adopt upon the principles stated in the open letter and in the later article concerning church government.

We have noted already that action has been had in some districts on these principles which are raised for discussion with a view to such continued reflection and consideration as would insure a final settlement at the next General Conference. This is evidently out of harmony with the purposes of both sides of the controversy, and is most surely a mistake.

Evidently these principles have not been studied and contemplated sufficiently in the recent past, else the membership of the Church of Jesus Christ would not be divided in belief regarding them.

Again, if it has taken several years to bring these principles before the church for consideration, it is foolishness to think that they may now be decided in a week or two from the time the last statement appeared in print.

In fact, the editor of the HERALD believes that it would be well, as was evidently intended by the eighteen signers of "An open letter" and the twenty-five signers of "Concerning church government," that representatives of the various districts, stakes, and branches of the church come to the conference uninstructed; for the open letter, signed by eighteen trusted representatives, says the coming General Conference should settle the controversy in the church in a definite and constructive manner. The rejoinder, signed by twenty-five equally trusted representatives, says "that since it seems the matters in controversy are to be brought before General Conference, it will be well for the Saints and delegates to study further the law and weigh matters presented for their consideration, reserving final judgment until the conference meets to hear the cause. And most assuredly none will finally reach conclusions from the basis of unanswered reasoning or statements, publicly or privately made."

These two schools in the church, by the publication of these documents over their signatures, agree as to the date of the hearing of their cause. Remember, they agree to this. Personally, the writer of this article should have been glad to have heard a call for an October conference specially convened for the hearing of this cause, but the contestants' wishes are to be respected, and they evidently thought that they needed more time to present their arguments and evidence, and only a small portion of it has appeared up to this writing. Much more important matter is in the hands of the editor for publication which bears upon specific points in the controversy, and which has not been presented to the church publicly; some of it is entirely new to the editor and is of such a nature as to demand concentrated thought and considerable research. It takes time to get this matter in shape for publication, some of it involving considerable correspondence. The managing editor is endeavoring to give a wholesome direction to the controversy, and to have eliminated from the various productions offered for publication, such statements, insinuations, charges, or matter of any kind as would make it difficult for all now in the official family of the church continuing therein after the next General Conference has spoken upon the issues. He does not wish, however, to arbitrarily refuse to print any such matter offered for publication, believing that if men will remove it from their productions after attention has been called to it, an increase of good feeling will ensue. For this and similar reasons we are not making haste to get everything offered in the line of the controversy into publication in the HERALD columns. Necessarily the present editor is just now a referee; he cannot shift this responsibility, and he knows that much of the aftermath may be affected for good by wisdom exercised by him in discharging it. This forces a conservatism beyond what is natural to him.

Finally, therefore, we are counseling that the publicly expressed wishes of the two sides of this controversy be heeded and followed in spirit and in letter. Do not "reach conclusions upon the basis of unanswered reasoning or statements, publicly or privately made," and "reserve final judgment until the conference meets to hear the cause."

To Double Power of Graceland Station

The church radio program includes a new broadcasting station for Graceland College which will reach many times more people than the present station. It is planned to install at Graceland the 250-watt equipment now being used at Independence, just as soon as the new 1000-watt church station is in operation.

Arrangements are being made to equip the present Graceland station with improved microphone and amplifier equipment, and to erect a special pair of wires between the Brick Church and the college. This will greatly increase the efficiency of K F F V and will permit broadcasting of sermons and musical programs from the church.

"Every ear shall hear"—by radio. To make this slogan effective every church member should contribute liberally towards the more powerful church broadcasting stations. Church Radio Week—September 7 to 14—is the time set for everyone to have opportunity to give financial assistance that will make possible the coast to coast 1000-watt station at Independence and a more powerful station for Graceland College.

Church Opening at Sperry, Oklahoma

It is always a pleasure to meet with an aggressive, forward-moving body of Saints. It was my pleasure to meet with such a group Sunday, August 3, at Sperry, Oklahoma. At that date they celebrated the opening of their new church building. This is a fine and commodious brick structure with an upper auditorium capable of seating about two hundred and fifty people, and with a lower auditorium the full size of the building. It is well seated, with pews made especially for the building. A great deal of work was donated by church members and nonmembers alike, so that the cost of the building was kept at a minimum; at an estimate, about five thousand dollars. The way in which our neighbors not members of the church contributed in labor and funds is gratifying, and they with us seem to have a real pride in the new structure.

Elder Ward Rumsey is pastor and has labored untiringly to make the building a reality. He set an example by personally carrying brick some twenty-five days, besides his work along other lines. He says that in that time he learned to pick up a brick and place it without shifting his grasp. He lost much cuticle and had sore hands from shifting his grip on brick and rubbing the rough surfaces before he learned the lesson. It is a good lesson to take a firm grip on any undertaking and not shift the grasp till it is done.

Elder Rumsey has a congregation of one hundred and forty-four members. Yet at the Sunday school services of the morning mentioned there were four hundred and fifty in attendance—their average attendance is one hundred and seventy. So it will be seen that the school extends its good influences as a factor in religious training far beyond the church membership.

The excellent standing of our people in the community is a matter of just pride. They are well liked and respected and at any time can command a good hearing. The building was crowded all day the opening day, and overflow services were held in the lower auditorium. At the evening service preceding the preaching service Reverend Tibbs, pastor of the Christian Church; Reverend Shafer, pastor of the Methodist Church; Mr. D. T. Smith, superintendent of the Sperry schools; Mr. Harshbarger, city attorney; Mr. J. D. Winter, cashier of the Sperry Bank; and Mr. Myers, county scout executive, took part. Their presence attested their willingness to cooperate, and their friendly words were greatly appreciated. For months while the building was in process of erection we have had the use of the city high school auditorium without charge.

Sperry is a progressive little city on a good, paved state highway ten miles from Tulsa. It is one of

Statement of Acceptance

It appears to be the fashion for some editors appointed by the Board of Publication to make known their troubles to the church. So I am in style.

The following letter has come to hand:

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, June 16, 1924.

ELDER P. M. HANSON,

Box 417, Jerusalem, Palestine.

Dear Brother: You doubtless have been notified by the Board of Publication of your selection to act in an editorial capacity. You may not be fully aware of the genesis of this move. The Board of Publication has in the opinion of the Presidency usurped powers which do not belong to it and has made changes in an order which has existed since 1865 at least to date. It has been generally recognized that the editorial control of the HERALD and church literature should be directly under the Presidency. The move of the Board of Publication has overturned this. We desire therefore for you to know that the action of the Board of Publication does not have the approval of the Presidency and was done over our protest. We feel you should know our attitude before you finally determine to accept the proposition offered to you by the Board of Publication. We feel that you should know the disadvantage you will be under by undertaking the work with the disapproval of the Presidency.

Very sincerely yours,

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

The question momentarily occupying my mind is whether to disregard the action of the Board of Publication in appointing me as a contributing editor to the ENSIGN, as enjoined by the Presidency.

If I should yield and all others should do likewise, the ministrations of the Board of Publication, a body created by the General Conference with well-defined functions, would be utterly nullified. If all who have received similar letters from the Presidency should ignore the Board, there would be no editors, the papers of the church would fail, and several places near Tulsa where our work is well established. By cooperation and by concentrated effort these groups are destined to make themselves felt in the community as a factor working for righteousness and for the spread of the gospel. Elders James Thomas, Earl D. Bailey, the Peter Adamsons, father and son, and others helped to make the day successful. Our young brother, Carlisle Kueffer, came from Oklahoma City to assist with the music, while Professor H. C. Wriston conducted the orchestral numbers, the branch having an orchestra of seventeen pieces. The day was one to be remembered because of the fine spirit enjoyed at the sacramental service and the various preaching and musical services of the day.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

though given no proper chance, it would seem that they could not be successfully operated except under the "control" of the Presidency.

The Presidency in announcing the whole matter should go to the General Conference for decision, disclose that in their view it is a mooted question; if the control of the church papers were clearly vested in their hands, such a course as indicated would not be necessary. Why, before such a decision, attempt to destroy the work of the Board of Publication by preventing the church papers from having any editorial support?

The General Conference has spoken. It created the Board of Publication; and this board, I sincerely believe, should function apart from any dominating control of any quorum, or person, the same as the courts of the church.

The late prophet, Joseph, said that the "control and management of the HERALD affairs are vested in the Board of Publication, and that the board must be left at liberty to provide for the editorial staff upon their judgment."—SAINTS' HERALD, May 9, 1891.

It would be difficult to frame a more unambiguous or clear statement than the foregoing relating to the Board of Publication selecting editors.

I am confronted with this question: Shall I ignore the Board of Publication as requested by the Presidency, or allow the General Conference and the matured judgment of the Prophet Joseph to influence me in respecting the Board of Publication?

Nowhere in the law, or in the General Conference Resolutions, is it provided that the Presidency or President should "control" the church papers.

Precedent has not been treated in late years as a very sacred thing, but now to it appeal is made. If it be said that the late president of the church served as editor of the HERALD for many years, it must be remembered that he so served under appointment from the Board of Publication, not through any claim of inherent right of presidential office. That is clear from his own statement.

Further, though the early church had many publications, such as Evening and Morning Star, Messenger and Advocate, Elders' Journal, and Times and Seasons, various elders served as editors.

If precedent is to be invoked, how about the Twelve who served for so long in charge of missions? Now the term missionary in charge, often spoken of in the revelations, is seldom heard and is practically obsolete.

Precedent, when established in righteousness, is a precious thing.

In dealing with long-established custom and practice, there should be no forgetfulness in taking into account the long period of years in which the Board of Publication appointed and released editors, without their right so to do being challenged by anyone.

I do not look upon men appointed by the Board of Publication as contributing editors to the church publications, as interfering in the slightest with the Presidency freely using the columns of the HERALD in voicing their views, expounding the law, cheering the Saints, and making measures successful which General Conference has indorsed and ordered. Personally, I welcome all this from the Presidency.

I think it proper to contribute to the church papers; and if the General Conference decides that I should not serve as a contributing editor to the Ensign, I will most graciously respect its judgment.

PAUL M. HANSON.

SCHIEDAM, HOLLAND, July 23.

A Cooperation Fable

Said a wise old bee at the close of day,
 "This colony business doesn't pay.
 I put my honey in that old hive
 That others may eat and live and thrive;
 And I do more work in a day, by gee,
 Than some of the others do in three.
 I toil and worry and save and hoard,
 And all I get is my room and board.
 It's me for a hive I can run myself,
 And me for the sweets of my hard-earned pelf."

So the old bee flew to a meadow lone,
 And started a business all his own.
 He gave no thought to the buzzing clan,
 But all intent on his selfish plan,
 He lived the life of a hermit free—
 "Ah, this is great," said the wise old bee.

But the summer waned and the days grew drear,
 And the lone bee wailed as he dropped a tear;
 For the varmints gobbled his little store,
 And his wax played out and his heart was sore,
 So he winged his way to the old home band,
 And took his meals at the Helping Hand.

Alone, our work is of little worth;
 Together we are the lords of earth;
 So it's all for each and it's each for all—
 United stand, divided fall.

—From Clearing House Service, issued by Wisconsin Association of Commercial Secretaries.

The Saints of Colorado Springs gave a farewell party in honor of Brother and Sister Roy Chandler July 22 at the home of W. E. Rogers. Brother and Sister Chandler expect to make their future home in Holden, Missouri. Colorado Springs is sorry to lose these ardent workers. Especially will they miss Sister Chandler, who has served the branch in a musical line for several years. The Saints pray for God's protecting care to be with them in their new home.

A Much Needed Book

A work of remarkable interest, containing the important facts found in many volumes, is Helps to Bible Study.

No minister, Sunday-school teacher, Bible student, or Christian family can afford to be without the information this book contains.

With painstaking care and at great cost this work has been compiled from the most authentic and recent sources, bringing for the first time such a wide range of religious knowledge within the compass of a single volume, comprising more than 700 pages of clear, readable print, in a substantial and attractive cloth binding. For this valuable book the price has been placed as low as possible, only $4.50.

Notice carefully the title-page herewith reproduced for a digressive statement of the contents. Its full worth can be realized only by those who read it.

Helps to Bible Study

Comprising fifty-five main subjects, one hundred topical divisions, and one thousand topical subheadings, including a history of the Bible, its lands, topography, botany, zoology, meteorology, geology, mineralogy, archæology.

Also Bible peoples, their governments, civil and social life, religions, languages, literature, architecture, customs, ethnology, and chronology; to which is added a synopsis of the Bible, a discussion of the Apocrypha, Bible criticism, discrepant and obscure texts, an index of texts on 6,176 subjects, and a series of maps; 240 illustrations illuminate the topics.

Compiled with a bibliography of the authorities consulted, by Arthur B. Phillips, Richard S. Sal-yards, John W. Peterson, and Hyrum O. Smith, collaborating for the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, 1924.

Let Us Carry On

BY BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE, PRESIDING BISHOP

The Lord has said that he will have a tried people. Many have looked forward to a more complete fulfillment of this prophetic statement, wondering what trials were ahead of this people, yet with faith that all things will work out for good to those who love and serve the Lord.

A Time of Trial

As a church we are now passing through one of the times of trial. It is not the first perplexing problem of this kind that has confronted the church in its progress, neither need we expect it will be the last. Difficult questions have been solved, and later it has been evident to all that good has come from the experiences.

Will not history repeat itself? Is there any reason why the present questions cannot be solved as have those of the past? Has not the church gained wisdom and strength from the experiences it has passed through? Then why not from this one?

United in Differences

Differences of opinion exist temporarily, but we can remain forever one in purpose and in gospel bonds. The mission of the gospel is to save. It will save inasmuch as it is applied. If we manifest the fruits of the Spirit in the discussion and settlement of the issues now before us, we will be saved much humiliation and distress of spirit. Elimination of those who differ with us has no part in the gospel program. Such an attitude is a mark of weakness. Its basis is the fear lest our position will not stand against honest opposition. It behooves each one to analyze his position to make sure he is on the immovable rock of the law, and then, in the spirit of brotherly love, reach out a helping hand and do everything possible to assist others to implant their feet firmly thereon.

Surely if we undertake the solution of our present and future problems in the same spirit and manner as have distinguished the labors of those who have so nobly carried the work on before us, we may have faith that in due time the light and power of the divine forces which have guided the destiny of the church thus far, will come to our aid and enable us to see eye to eye and to press forward unitedly and happily towards the goal of our high calling.

Proceed Lawfully

Our safety, as individuals and as a church, lies in keeping our spirits sweet, proving all things, and holding fast to that which is good.

To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.

The church is a unit in believing that truth is eternal; that the Reorganization came forth under divine guidance; and that if we change the law of God we dishonor the Lawgiver and to that extent deny ourselves the blessings of his direction.

Why can we not be a unit in respecting the governmental procedure inaugurated in the beginning under this divine direction and adhered to from then till now with no intimation from the Lord that we were proceeding wrongly?

If we now indorse a new interpretation which will change the established order of church government as interpreted by those who have preceded us, will it not be tantamount to saying their interpretation was wrong and without divine sanction?

If this can now be done, what assurance have we that the new interpretation now so strongly urged upon us will not be likewise rejected by those who shall follow us in the work of the church and our innovation brought into discredit? Are we more in touch with the divine will than were our predecessors?

As truth is eternal, so true interpretations are eternal. The church must proceed carefully and lawfully. I believe it has done so in the past in establishing the important principles of its government, and I have faith that it will continue to do so. We will prove all proposed laws and interpretations and hold fast to those which are good, but will reject or change those which are not good.

It Is Written

Time cannot be moved backward, nor the revelations and the history of the church be changed. Following the dark and cloudy day in the history of latter-day Israel, the Reorganization came forth in the light of God's inspiration, and, among other things, restored the God-given rights of the people in church government, which, in addition to accepting or rejecting what comes through the priesthood, includes the right to initiate matters of government. The government of the church of God has not been, and cannot be, "through priesthood" only, but by God and the people, the priesthood being a part of the people selected by God and approved by the people to perform certain divinely-ordained functions.

Likewise, the coordinate functioning of "the spiritual and the temporal divisions of the work" is so indelibly written into the authoritative books of the church as to defy erasure or change, either by altering the law or the interpretation. "Supreme directional control" by any quorum cannot be written in heavy enough type to attract attention away from the tried and true functioning of the church.

Show Faith by Works

The Saints have a deep and abiding faith in the permanency and triumph of the Restoration. Those who have a personal testimony that God is in this latter-day work will not be unduly upset when differences of opinion arise in the efforts of his fallible children to carry out the divine purposes.

We have not followed cunningly devised fables. The gospel restored in 1830 and carried forward by the Reorganization is most precious to all who have come to an appreciation and understanding of it. The church is going forward. Naught can hinder. It is a divine decree. The present differences of opinion as to the government of the church will be settled. They will be settled right, because God is in the work and no question is finally settled until it is settled right.

Go Forward

We have every good reason to remain steadfast and to press forward. We can hasten the endowment of unity of understanding by an open and thorough discussion of our honest differences. We must prove all things by the word of God and the experiences of the church. The truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, will make us free. This should be brought out without separating us from the law or from each other in the work to which we have been called.

May we be able to be humble and full of love, exercising faith, hope, and charity, until in the wisdom of God the unseen forces which emanate from his throne shall come in greater measure to supplement the efforts of his believing children to carry on his work as pointed out in his revealed word.

The agnostic attitude of college students has been aptly referred to as a sort of spiritual measles. Now Albert Clarke Wyckowf, a close student of religious psychology in the Biblical Review, of New York, refers to unbelief as mental colic and urges that a distinction should be made between chronic unbelief which is constitutional, and acute unbelief which is institutional. Acute unbelief is a disease of later adolescence. The young are its special victims. Very rarely does it become specific unless the adolescent period is abnormally lengthened. The overfeeding of the mind of youth with indigestible subjects he ascribes as the cause, together with unripe and immature religious theories. For this special malady we have urged before the advantage of home care and therefore the necessity of a home college such as we have at Graceland.

Let the Church Decide

BY JOHN W. RUSHTON

The following, extracted from an editorial in the Collier's National Weekly for July 5 seems to suggest both causes of difficulty and controversy within the church, and, possibly, adumbrates a solution:

In 1896, 80 per cent of the voters cast ballots.
 In 1900, 73 per cent.
 In 1908, 66 per cent.
 In 1912, 62 per cent.
 In 1920, less than 50 per cent.

That is the descending curve of American democracy. Can we turn it upward again? Shall our country more and more be ruled by minorities and blocs and self-appointed czars?

Or can we win back to the days when three fourths or more of the people made up their minds and registered their choice of men and policies?

To do that we need wider and freer discussion, more truth and less bunk, in print, over the radio, and in public meetings, a sharper appeal to the intelligence of the voter—and honest, competent candidates. Collier's is trying to do its share in that direction.

We also need a rebirth of faith in our Government and its methods, in Congress, in the President, and in the department and bureau heads whom he appoints. Such faith must be built on works. If the men we send to Washington sincerely want the judgment of the voters, they must so act. The American people are getting dangerously near to a "What's the use?" attitude. They see little difference between the parties and little advantage of one man over another. They are tired of politics for politics' sake—and the campaign is just opening.

For several years the church has been profoundly shaken because of controversy which has created divisions and fissures between quorums and persons, and tending to acrimony and personal reflections which can only injure and demoralize. Whatever may be thought of the varying sides of the controversy, it is clear that calling names and impugning motives and seeking to discredit or punish individuals on either side will not only cloud the issues, but create unnecessary antagonisms, to the injury of all and especially the cause. In itself, conflict is not to be declined nor controversy nor controversialists regarded with suspicion, for it is through conflict that truth is discovered and tested. It does not follow that because in our country the Democrats disagree with the Republican government that they are invited or forced to leave the country and seek shelter in some other land. In competition and struggle for existence, that which is "fitted to survive" proves its supremacy. In the academic realm nothing is immune from challenge and criticism; even so respectable and well-established a theory as Newton's may be challenged by some Einstein, and yet the questioners and critics are not sent to Coventry for their temerity. Indeed, always has it been, and still is it true, that the past is but the key with which we unlock the doors to the future. Experience is not an anæsthetic but a stimulus.

Only through crisis and conflict can we save ourselves from the ennui of instinct and habit, and so ward off the lure of mental and moral parasitism. The thing to be discovered is this: What is the nature and ground of conflict, and upon what terms shall we have peace?

In the church, it may be that the so-called "oppositionists" have been guilty of a "tactical blunder" in crystallizing their understanding of the nature and cause of the controversy which has disturbed the church for these past years, but one thing must not be overlooked, and that is, a gain of major strategic importance has been registered in the presentation of two categorical statements which reflect the two theories of church government. It takes time and experience for such a thing to be accomplished; and, while it may seem to be disappointing that such a thing should occur, especially after hopes had been entertained of the approximation of peace, let us not be discouraged. Inasmuch as the two statements reflect principles which unless explained and modified are essentially and vitally diverse, there is revealed another gain of tremendous importance; that is, that at the back of personalities and names and forms of phrasing, there is the supreme matter of principle. This is worthy of note and should at least point the way to ennobling controversy and lifting it above the low level of feuds and selfish peevishness.

The subject of government and its essential principles is not new, either in the church or in politics. It is as old as society, and the controversies about this subject and its correlatives have made the most interesting and illuminating pages of history. In both Old and New Testaments there is ample evidence to show that this subject was not unknown. The very antiquity and vitality of this controversy suggests at least the need of patience and the cultivation of the philosophic temper, as well as the un-wisdom of expecting too early and easy a solution.

Because truth is dynamic and religion life, it is reasonable to believe that organization and forms of expression will not be complete and final, at least as long as the human is associated with the divine. Further, because truth is and must be one, there is always the problem of unification. Whether in religion, science, art, or government, life is being expressed as an unity. In all of life's expressions, therefore, truth is being disclosed and revealed. To discover the relationships and the harmonious workings of the truth in all departments is the quest and glory of philosophy. It is clear that there cannot be real and permanent antagonism between the truth of religion and the truth of science, the truth of prophecy and the truth of history, and the truth in divine and ecclesiastical government and the forms of government human and political. It is probable that just so long as God must work through imperfect human agencies that even his perfection may therefore not be without imperfections in expression. That just as the stream of life has moved through succeeding stages from its crude and simple forms to the exquisite complexity of modern experiences, and in faith we can see that the end is not yet, we work and watch reverently for the manifestations of the higher and the nobler which the succeeding years unfold. Under the wizardry of Linnæus or Burbank, Darwin or Loeb, Galton or Pearson, Socrates, Confucius, Buddha, Moses, Isaiah, and the living Christ, life moves on, revealing more and more the divine splendor which it enshrines. Our great task and most glorious privilege is to discover the whole of truth and by the application of the truth secure the freedom of the divine spirit in all essential reality.

In the past years, shortsighted men have tried to remove the causes of conflict and suppress controversy by the process of elimination. Many sorrowful instances make our history of progress gloomy because of the martyrs and victims made by those who sought peace (?) through such disciplinary measures. Never at any time in a single instance was such a course successful. The effort to stay the evolutionary course of truth by attacking individuals and the probabilities of success has classic illustration in the case of King Canute who, to silence the foolish claims of his courtiers, attempted to sweep back the incoming tide of the German ocean by using a broom.

There are those in the church to-day who say, and perhaps sincerely believe, that if they force the present controversy within the narrow confines of personal antagonisms, impinging the attention of the church public upon some particular persons, so most effectively will the controversy be settled. It is said that the antipathies between certain men are the cause of the conflict; again, that the question as to who is the president of the church must be decided; again, the trouble is that some men will not fellowship with some other man or men; again, that certain unfaithful brethren are responsible for the trouble.

Whatever political value these endeavors may possess, it is only fair to say they are not supported by the evidences in the perspective of the whole controversy, and must prove to be mischievous in the extreme.

There may be antipathy; but first, antipathy is resultant. What has caused the antipathy, if such exists? There may be disinclination to fellowship, but again, this is resultant. What is the cause? If there is unfaithfulness among the brethren, what is the nature of it? Moral turpitude? Disobedience to duties? Lack of loyalty to the cause? Obviously, no. The church has laws and officers for dealing with such cases. What is unjustly called unfaithfulness when pushed to its final analysis in the minds of those who make this accusation would perhaps consist of holding different views on matters in controversy to the ones who make the charge. When it is said that the trouble arises because of the question as to who shall preside over the church, all that need be said of this laconic summation is that the statement may represent their understanding, but not necessarily the facts so far as the ones who are thus classified are concerned.

Surely the question as to how a man shall preside and what shall be the principles of government may be discussed without there being any question as to the person or the rights of that person to the position. Surely this is a difference which does not need a pedagogue to appreciate.

May we not urge that personalities be left out of the consideration? On both sides we will find likable and lovable people; and friendship is too rare a thing to recklessly fling aside, and particularly so through misunderstanding. Regardless of persons, sooner or later principles must be considered. In view of the past and of the fact that the controversy is still vital, might it not be advisable to ask, If the cause or causes remain uncomposed, then where and when will the process of elimination cease?

Many of us have had to engage in discussion with those who have opposed our church, and perhaps no people in modern times can appreciate quite as acutely as we can, the unfairness of our "friend, the enemy," who, declining to discuss the principles involved, will insist upon trying to discredit men and malign character. Let us be consistent and refuse to approve a course in ourselves which we resent in another. No man needs to employ such a method if conscious of the inherent strength of his position.

Yes, there is a better way, a nobler method, which if at all possible will bring desired results. That is the process of education. In the controversy it may be that either side is mistaken, perhaps both; possibly there may be right in the position of either side, most probably there is right as well as error on both sides. In any case the only way to reach the truth will be through candid and free discussion. To attempt to forestall the General Conference by appealing to emotions and cultivating a crusade on behalf of or against persons will defeat the purpose of the conference and prevent the decision being reached which can only be secured through reason and conscience, when both sides of the question are presented.

Without being presumptuous, may we consider the meaning of an educative process, for though the field is vast and many excellent men are engaged therein, all of us may garner some of the results of their special field of service.

We would say that education seems to be expressed as a sympathetic relationship which must be established between teacher and pupil, in which whatever ability, maturity, and experience the teacher may possess he "shares" with the pupil who, because of inexperience and immaturity needs what the teacher is qualified to give. In other words, education is the process through which the truth and experience the teacher may have becomes democratized or socialized through the establishing of "universal discourse," or the finding of a common ground of understanding. In Doctor John Dewey's ideal of the educative process, education means any and every means through which knowledge and ability are unified with life in all departments and shared in by all.

Let us keep in mind that it is not enough for the teacher to know or to have the ability to communicate, but he must be able to identify himself with the pupil and then identify the pupil with himself. He must be able furthermore to train the pupil to use what he knows, for no one can really "possess" what he cannot or will not use. Singularly, we find another editorial in the Collier's Weekly of the same date as the foregoing, from which we read as follows:

What to Do With the Truth

If we can only make men intelligent enough and teach them to think, says the educator, the greater part of the world's problem will be solved.

Three curiously dovetailing quotations may help to show the insufficiency of this point of view:

"Perhaps there is something to be done with the truth besides discovering it."—Professor John Erskine.

"Mere intelligence is not enough. Enlightenment must be accompanied by that moral power which is the product of home and religion."—President Calvin Coolidge.

"It is passion, it is enthusiasm and indignation that mold the world to their will!"—H. G. Wells.

Until we undertake to direct these mighty forces, education will continue to affect only half the child or the man.

Education involves the "trial and error" method. As another great man, Coolidge, has said, "The people must be allowed to make their mistakes."

The late Woodrow Wilson, in discussing the principles of democracy, insisted that the safety of the state depended upon the development of social knowledge through full and free discussion of all questions concerning social life.

The late Viscount James Bryce, who has long been esteemed as one of the most sympathetic students and exponents of American democracy, said:

Each member of a free community must be capable of citizenship. Capacity involves three qualities, intelligence, self-control, and conscience. The citizen must be able to understand the interests of the community; he must be able to subordinate his own will to the general will; he must feel his responsibility to the community.

Can citizenship in the kingdom of heaven be satisfied with anything other or less than this?

Doctor John Dewey's definition of democracy is of point:

1. It must guarantee to each person the opportunity to develop the talents which he may possess to the full.
2. In the exercise of power there must be the sense of responsibility to the group.

Education must make leaders sensitive to public conscience and reason; for, especially in Christianity, in these is found the source of authority. The mass must be educated to follow leadership, through the attraction of moral and spiritual idealism, as the Master so graciously states it, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

The foundation of all sociology, said Lester F. Ward, is psychology. The security of societal solidarity is in like-mindedness. Like-mindedness can be secured only through mutual interests being developed in discussion, criticism, analysis, by which is secured the cultivation of a social conscience and sense of honor.

We know the mind only through its functions. Those functions are recognized as

- 1st. The affective; including the emotions and feelings.
- 2d. The cognitive; including reason, intelligence, and judgment.
- 3d. The conative; including the striving and willing.

A social-mindedness or like-mindedness involves sympathy, or feeling together, the development of a communal understanding, and unity of effort in the achieving of a common objective. To lose patience in seeking to build up such a community will be disastrous. Leadership must not be characterized only by large vision and valor, but there must be perspective and the "infinite capacity for taking pains," which Carlyle said was the essence of genius.

It ought not to be necessary to say that sometimes men may be disagreeable to leaders and yet serve a useful end. Minorities have been as valuable in the racial progress as the majority; indeed, it is not unusual that these persons and the minorities whose mission it might be thought was to merely make people uncomfortable, have jolted the majorities out of the narrow confines of instinct and habit, forcing a crisis which could be met only by the use of reason.

Even the prophets of the Old Testament were not popular, but as Doctor Willetts, of Chicago University, has said, they were the great disturbers of the peace. Yet who among us would sacrifice the marvelous literature of the Old Testament to win a "peace," either ecclesiastical or political, which the soothsayers of the time offered?

The American Revolution was anything but a picnic. To Washington with his intrepid Colonials, it might have been easy to have accepted the kind of peace which King George offered, but who among us would want to barter away the undying splendor of the Constitution of the United States for a bauble of that sort?

Students of history and sociology need not to be reminded of the fact that progress is the result of conflict and crisis. We need not to be alarmed unduly; the truth of Christianity has withstood more and heavier shocks than it is being subjected to in the present crisis of our own church. More and more the leaders of the race are paying tribute to the fact that at heart and center the race is sound. One of the last sayings of the late Joseph Smith which it was my privilege to listen to was in the quiet of the death chamber, and this venerable man who had led the church out of the wilderness and put it upon the highway of victory, who knew his people as a father knows his sons, said while he still lingered on the threshold of the Valley of Shadows: "If this people want to have their head, let them go,—they are all right, and they will come back again."

For real success it is not only required that people shall trust their leaders, but the leaders must learn to trust their people. Loyalty is a matter of reciprocity; we must give and take. Perhaps Jesus understood this more than any of our race when he said: "Give, and it shall be given unto you, good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall they give into your bosom."

Give what? Whatever I give—that, that! shall be given back to me with interest.

It is a searching question, but worth while, those who complain of a lack of loyalty or confidence or anything else, let us put the question to ourselves: What have I given? What has been the nature of my investment?

Let us take heart of grace in the consciousness that now the issues are clearly defined; the administration stating that the church is governed by a graduated priesthood which, in the nature of things, runs to the inevitable dictatorship by the chief or high member of the hierarchy; and, all that the people have the right to have in the government of the church under such a principle is to "consent" to what is offered by the power of the priesthood. The other involves the rights of the people to share in the responsibilities of government, recognizing that inspiration through proper channels always has the right of way provided that the voice of the Good Shepherd is recognized in the alleged inspirational message by the majority and the enactments of the General Conference as the highest expression of both the inspiration and intelligence which the whole of the church has available are supreme, to which all are subject.

Perhaps through the process of discussion some ground of agreement can be reached. In any case, the first gain in the conflict through the medium of the press is registered for democracy in that it is now agreed that the people must decide.

COLDWATER, FLORIDA, July 8.

Our Befitting Attitude

BY JOSEPH LUFF

"Let us kneel before the Lord, our Maker."—Psalms 95: 6.

The member of the church who can view its present condition without alarm must be lacking in either information or interest, or both, unless he has been the favored recipient of some divine communication sufficient to neutralize his human fear. For forty-eight years the writer has been an active member and minister in its interest and for twenty-two years was one of its leading quorum members. During that time he has seen its honest representatives in heated controversy over vital issues that seemed to threaten its progress, and he has shared with some of the noblest men ever enrolled among us the agonies of those hours when responsibility, misunderstanding, zeal for the cause, and lack of divine light combined to create an apprehension and suspense that spelled Gethsemane to them—when they literally groaned out their supplication in their quorum entreaties, and when tears saturated every utterance that fell from their quivering lips. Great, strong men in the helplessness of their estate prostrate before God, pleading for Zion, than whom no child ever presented a truer picture of humility!

Those were days and scenes that tried men's souls, when prophet and apostle and general and local men of might and soul sincerity, were at sword's points in understanding and felt obligated to each courageously maintain what accorded with his conviction of right till God should settle the question at issue by his own revelation.

Some of those issues remained for coming years to clear up, and the writer hereof was called to the bedside of the dying President ten years ago, who said to him in the presence of several, as he grasped his hand and referred to happenings of several years before, "Joseph, we have not always agreed, have we? We have had some pretty strong controversies."

"That is true," I replied.

Then mentioning the names of Brethren J. R. Lambert, Heman C. Smith, James Caffall, and others, he added: "But I never loved you men any less because of your attitude toward my position at that time. I knew they were all men I could trust anywhere, and the church and gospel was safe in their hands."

I said to him, "Brother Joseph, I have loved you as I have loved but few men, and you were always great in my eyes, but there was one thing greater—bigger than you, and that was the church; and when that bigger thing got between us I couldn't see you at all, and you could not see me."

He squeezed my hand and replied, "That's it! that's it exactly! I couldn't have told it so expressively as that; but, Joseph, I want to say to you now that you men saw the situation at that time better than I did!" He also added: "People have told me at times, Joseph, that you would apostatize because you opposed me so strongly; but I told them you never would; and I am still satisfied that you will never trail the flag."

This, with some other things not suitable to state here, he said in the presence of a number, and his words revealed the secret of our outcome: we never loved each other less because of the vehemence of our expression of opinions, and neither office nor rank cut any figure in the weight or bearing of our judgment upon the case in hand; but the blessed old hero did not want to go hence without letting us know that he had since become convinced that we were right and he was wrong in our earlier contention. God bless his memory. It taught me, as many of his sayings in private and in public did, a lesson never to drive my conviction stakes so deep that it would be impossible later to withdraw them, if God or developments should reveal them to have been wrong. It also taught me that office does not give immunity to mistake, no matter how good the man who holds it may be.

Until Jesus comes I never expect to see a better man than I believe our late President Joseph Smith to have been, but we differed in judgment on several things and did not hesitate to proclaim those differences openly and honestly, and our pleasant fellowship was never disturbed because of it.

We always, however, had one final recourse, and when we availed ourselves of it, when we betook ourselves to our knees and sought light direct from God we laid our differences at his feet and each was willing that whatever mental idol he had should be swept out to give heaven the right of way, and, personally, even when uncertain as to whether the forthcoming revelation was God's voice or not, the church's adoption of it silenced my opposition to its becoming law.

To-day we face a crisis unequaled by any situation of the past—one that legislation alone can never dispose of. Whatever conference votes may determine as to present issues, and regardless of which side to any question may secure majorities, the minority, unconverted to a belief in its correctness, will remain a disturbing factor, and peace is an impossibility, unless God's hand is seen leading to the solutions. The issues before us have had no parallel in the Reorganization.

It would be well to remember therefore that this church is God's—not ours. That only his will should have the right of way in government. That our place in such an exigency as confronts us, is on our knees, with fasting as a concomitant, and that, too, without our idols of personal opinion enthroned as we pray. Otherwise prayer is mockery and we are idolaters. This is our only righteous outlet, and unless we humbly avail ourselves of it we will not only forfeit the peaceful deliverance that divine revelation alone can produce, but we will force upon him whose body we continue to desecrate the necessity of entering our ranks with a calamity that desolates as it purges, and will write sorrow for our recreation and lamentation for our song.

JOSEPH LUFF.

"Every Ear Shall Hear"—By Radio

BY EDWARD D. MOORE

The radio is an awesome discovery. It is so strikingly simple yet so distractingly complex that our wonderment never ceases.

Its mysterious waves penetrate stone walls, may be heard through hundreds of feet of soil, and from under river beds. There seems to be no place where radio waves do not penetrate. And they hold their identity. The messages carried through these barriers are practically as clear as though unopposed.

Yet amid all this simple effectiveness there are certain areas both on land and sea known as "dead spots." Into these areas with no visible boundary lines radio waves will not penetrate. While the number of these "dead spots" so far located is comparatively small, they remain one of the unexplained mysteries of the radio wave and its action.

Rapid development has taken place in the radio field. Receiving sets have been improved until the receiving range has been considerably increased and great selectivity attained. That is, the newer improvements allow the operator of the set to tune in the messages wanted and tune out all others. The selling price of such instruments has rapidly been reduced until they are now as cheap as good phonographs.

Little less wonderful is the striking simplicity of the ordinary crystal set, with an ordinary receiving radius of fifty miles, which is often unaccountably extended to a thousand miles.

Solitary dwellers are no longer solitary. People may live miles out from other human habitation yet have constant connection with others through the radio.

They who live lonesome lives amid the rush and clatter of the great cities have similar privileges of impersonal communication with others. In this way the best thought of the day is available to the owner of a radio receiving set, simple or otherwise.

Sets so simple and diminutive that they may be concealed in the palm of the hand or in one's hat crown are common. Materials that cost only a few cents may quickly be converted into sets that detect and interpret these marvelous waves.

A man in a penitentiary was recently found to have hollowed out the pages of a Bible and to have concealed a receiving set therein.

It was presumed that he and others were using their radios to secure code messages from outside, pertaining to methods for procurement of liquor. Which may have been true in some cases, but probably not regarding all those unfortunates thus incarcerated.

At least it seems to be a new thing to use a Bible for a radio case. To use its pages thus is at least unique even if not commendable. The owner could no longer read that mutilated Bible, but he was no worse off than many others whose Bibles are physically intact but whose ecclesiastical teachers have mutilated for them the spiritual messages thereof.

People seem to read their Bibles less and less these days and to have decreasing interest in the message of those who would interpret its meanings.

The dry husks so often served as food have cloyed the spiritual appetite, and people try to believe they are not interested in religion.

It begins to look as though thousands of these discouraged people must be reached via the radio. A very large percentage of them can be reached in that way, while comparatively few will ever otherwise hear a sermon with the true gospel ring.

Since some two years ago, when our church began to broadcast religious services, hundreds and hundreds of people have testified as to their joy over hearing such messages. Cards and letters and personal statements have been showered upon those who have been in charge until the total effect has been one of great gratification. Possibly few baptisms have been made directly through this method of reaching the people, but the actual percentage of conversions has probably been comfortingly large.

Every missionary knows that he converts thousands though he may baptize only hundreds. It is a common experience to have people express a conviction that the gospel message preached is reasonable and worthy of acceptance, but because of opposition or unpopularity—one or more of a dozen real or imagined reasons—the convert postpones baptism indefinitely.

The number whose prejudices are melted and whose hearts are touched by means of the radio must be legion. The percentage of those who at the close of a sermon seek out the preacher to express appreciation is very small. Yet there are very many who may be equally appreciative who say nothing at all.

Probably the same is true of radio, even to a greater extent. The mind grows dizzy computing the number who quietly in their homes listen intently to the air-borne messages and are moved thereby to better lives.

And the type of listeners should be considered. A prominent Jewish rabbi of Kansas City told of listening regularly and interestedly to our elders in their delivery of radio sermons. How often do our elders find a prominent Jewish rabbi in their usual congregations? Or others of similar type?

While the poor are to have the gospel preached to them and the meek shall principally make up the number of converts, the seed sown in the hearts of thousands of others not so classified by us will eventually bear fruit.

Our field is limited only by the power of our sending station. A powerful sending station that could be heard from coast to coast would perhaps be the one most wonderful missionary factor the church could have. It would not in any way take the place of the personal work of the missionary. The preaching of sermons is an important part—but only a part—of missionary work. But it is easily conceivable that the missionary of the future will find friends already made and earnest defenders ready to assist as he goes from community to community—all through the medium of the radio.

There is no question as to the feasibility of the radio as a great educational factor. There is no disputing the vast amount of good it is doing and can do when it carries the right sort of messages. Good people tire of the chaff dealt out daily and sooner or later listen to and enjoy the sort of mental repast we serve them via radio.

Few churches have the advantages we have as to uniqueness of message and publicity already afforded. True, a great deal of the publicity has been unfavorable, but large corporations would give millions of dollars for what they could derive from a similar amount of advertising. The very announcement of our name commands interest. And people in the privacy of their homes will listen when they might never go out to hear one of our preachers in a public place.

Viewed from every angle, including physical location, we have much for which to rejoice. Located almost in the geographical center of the United States, with antenna on the highest spot in the whole region of the country, it affords us a climax to a whole series of causes for congratulation.

As the days go by and we realize more and more the remarkable privileges that are ours in the radio, the standing we have in the radio world, and the incalculable good which is coming and can come through this great discovery, we shall unitedly rejoice and if need be sacrifice that it shall continue until every ear shall hear and every soul be at least touched through this marvelous instrument in the hands of God.

Radio and Graceland College

BY G. N. BRIGGS, PRESIDENT GRACELAND COLLEGE

It was not many years ago that an educational institution was meeting all that was expected if she gave adequate courses to students who came to her campus. In order to receive the benefits of her instruction it was necessary to journey to the seat of the institution. Even yet under equal circumstances and conditions this is the best method of receiving a college education—the personal contact with instructors and students of like interests is of inestimable value.

Some years ago it was decided that the influence of the college and university might well enough be extended for the benefit of those unable to attend in person. This was done through extension courses carried on by correspondence. This has aided many otherwise unable to secure the benefit of college courses. A second method of extension work has been by members of the faculty journeying to the classes at various points distant from the campus. The plan has been quite successful in the larger centers where the numbers were sufficient to justify the expense of time and effort on the part of the instructor.

A still more modern method of reaching thousands of persons unable to secure the benefits and pleasures of a college education is through the use of the radio.

Graceland, during her more than a quarter of a century, has and is still using all these methods of extending her educational program. Perhaps the one which has reached the most people in the shortest length of time with the minimum effort and cost has been the radio broadcasting program carried on during the past two years.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Summer Brings Activity at Stockton

STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA, July 12.—Stockton is rejoicing that reunion at Irvington is so near, beginning July 17 and lasting till the 27th. Quite a few are planning to spend the whole time there, while others are going for week ends. It is needless to say all would like to be able to go for the whole time.

Brother J. D. White, our district president, was with us and preached the evening of June 15.

During the summer months the Department of Recreation and Expression holds its meetings at half past seven Sunday evening, and at half past eight the time is turned over to the branch for a short sermon. This has proved satisfactory so far.

The prayer meetings at the church were discontinued during the month of June and were held at the homes of the Saints. A good spirit was enjoyed, and the meetings were well attended. However, there were some who could not go to the houses but could get to church, also some did not approve of the church being closed on Wednesday nights, so at the business meeting Wednesday, July 2, it was decided to meet in the church again.

A beautiful and impressive wedding was solemnized June 22 by Brother W. H. Dawson, of Sacramento, who united in marriage Dorothy May Bloom and Mr. Howard Clites, both of Stockton. The groom is a nonmember, but the bride has belonged since childhood.

There is a little band of Oriole Girls here, led by Sister Evelyn Delami, and they make their activities known every once in a while by giving an entertainment. During the first part of June they had an entertainment in the basement of the church. It was prettily decorated, and there were ice cream, candy, pies, and cakes for sale, besides a good entertainment—all the work of the girls. One of the numbers was a rendition of "Beauty and the beast," which was very good. We feel that the monitor is doing a commendable work. They have worked hard and have purchased their uniforms this year. Some of the Orioles are nonmembers.

The Temple Builders meet every two weeks at six o'clock Thursdays, where a dinner is served by two of the girls, helped by the leader, Sister Kaiser. A bazaar is planned for October, and work for it has been started.

Brother G. H. Wixom was here and spoke morning and evening July 13, which was greatly enjoyed by all, and some strangers attended. Brother and Sister Curry of Lincoln, and Sister Curry's sister, Sister George, were also present.

The Department of Women will have a bazaar at reunion. Several of the branches do this, and it is profitable in money as well as helping each branch to see what other branches are doing in the way of needlework.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a wiener roast the evening of July 8 at the tennis court, which has not yet been completed.

Brother and Sister Howe and family, of Modesto, together with Brother Roy Weldon and another couple, attended meeting here Sunday evening, July 6. In the Recreation and Expression meeting Brother Howe and Brother Roy both gave very interesting talks.

July 6, being Fathers' Day, was celebrated with a program during Sunday school, and Brother Wixom's sermon in the morning was on that subject, bringing in the "Fatherhood of God."

Although our equipment is not a very powerful one, nor very well supplied for broadcasting, we have had most effective results. Our equipment is presumed to be powerful enough to broadcast over a radius of five hundred miles, yet we have had many reports of our programs having been heard at distances considerably greater than a thousand miles.

We broadcast three times a week; a religious program on Sunday, a musical program by our Studio Department on Tuesday, and an educational program by members of the faculty or invited guests on Thursday. These programs have had a most favorable reception from all parts of the country. Grace-land is one of the smaller colleges of the Middle West to adopt this modern method of extending her educational program and her influence, thus accomplishing a much larger piece of service than would otherwise be possible.

As a result of this service the head of our Department of Physics has been invited to the University of Iowa to carry on some research study which will be of great value to the university, to Grace-land, and to the radio world at large. At a recent meeting of the Iowa College Presidents Association at Des Moines, our broadcasting possibilities and program were under discussion, and the presidents of the Iowa colleges all expressed the very greatest interest in what we are doing and congratulated the college on taking advantage so early of this modern method of education.

We are considerably handicapped, however, by our limitations. Our equipment is not strong enough to render the most effective service, nor do we have the equipment required to enable us to make the best possible use of our talent.

The Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society, which provides the music for the church services in Lamoni, is the largest church choir in the State of Iowa. If we had the equipment to broadcast our church services, including the music by our church and college choir of more than a hundred trained voices, it would be the means of bringing our church and its program to the attention of thousands who otherwise will never be reached.

The broadcasting possibilities are almost limitless—we are just entering upon an age of great use for the radio, and it is hoped that the church will not neglect this very great opportunity for good.

Ideals and theories may come from meditation and thought, but achievement of ideals and demonstration of theories require work. Have we the courage of our conviction sufficient to work for our Zionie ideals, to demonstrate our social philosophy?

Special Services and Speakers

PLYMOUTH, MASSACHUSETTS, July 15.—The branch has been very active in constructive work, but the telling about it has been neglected.

Special services were conducted during the week of May 18 to 25 by Elder O. L. Thompson which were well attended by the Saints and an encouraging number of visitors. On Sunday, May 25, Elder Suttill, of Providence, spoke in a very inspiring manner. Benjamin W. Leland, our pastor, spoke at three services especially on "The work of the Spirit," and visiting elders have helped in edifying and strengthening the Saints here.

The sacramental service this month was attended by a nice spirit, and many spoke of their desire to consecrate themselves to the service of the Master.

On Thursday evening, July 10, instead of the regular prayer meeting, Elder Richard Baldwin spoke on "For what is your life?" and all present voiced their appreciation, even the young people. It seemed a fitting climax of the efforts of the past two months, and many from here will attend the Onset reunion prepared to enjoy the spiritual feast as a large family.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is also busy in various ways. The seniors have been studying the Book of Mormon quarterlies, having failed to order the others in time. They will take up both during the coming quarter. Many of the young people have attended the classes.

The Keystone Club, as a club, has ceased to exist, but the young people are all under supervision, and an effort is made to provide for any who have leisure time as their need seems to demand.

On June 15 an interesting Children's Day program was presented. A songalogue, "Out in the fields with God," and a pageant, "This youth," occupied the entire morning service.

July 4 the annual picnic was held at the home of A. N. Nickerson, with games in the morning, basket lunch at noon, swimming at a pond. All who desired went in autos, steamed clams for supper, and had a game of ball in the evening. All the young people of the branch and many visitors were present, and the spirit showed was encouraging to those who have the work in charge.

Tuesday, July 15, a social was held. The principal feature was a reception to Brother and Sister Milton R. Millman, who were married in Dennis Port, the home of the bride, June 19. Brother Millman is deacon in the branch. They were presented with a set of silver from the Plymouth Saints. Those having birthdays in July were also in the receiving line. An entertainment followed, consisting of a mock marriage, advice on "How to cook a husband," by Miss Jessie Sutherland, and music by Sister Florence Leland and Mr. Lino Cristofori.

Facts in the Early History of Alexander Saints

ALEXANDER, KANSAS, July 16.—The latter-day work was first preached in Alexander twenty-five years ago; first by Elder W. H. Mannering in the Alexander schoolhouse. He preached four sermons; then the school board closed the doors against him, so W. A. Coddington, who resided two miles north of Alexander, opened his house to Brother Mannering, not because he believed the faith, but because he had fought in the Civil War for freedom, and now he had a chance to practice what he fought for.

Thus was the gospel planted in our hearts by Brother Mannering. Then followed W. S. Pender, J. C. Vaughn, John Teeters, Samuel Twombly, W. E. Peak, J. Arthur Davis, Brethren Moler, Knisley, Gurwell, Parsons, Hilliard and others. By good preaching and humble living the work spread until some seventy-five were baptized into the church.

The home of W. A. Coddington was the only home the Latter Day Saint missionaries had here for years and years. They shared what he had to eat and were welcome. Now, how strange it seems after twenty-five years to look back! Three United Brethren, two Baptists, one Free Methodist, three Christians, besides a half dozen from the German Methodist Church, have all been baptized into the Latter Day Saints Church, and the end is not yet, for when Brother P. R. Burton broke forth in tones of thunder the gospel resounded in splendor, brighter than ever.

As Brother Burton told them, they were now "exposed," and some time it will "take." Brother Burton's missionary sermons were fine. His message on the Mother Church and her daughters could not be surpassed. It surely brought the angel's message out plain.

Now the Burtons are on their reunion tour, so we are settled back to the usual crowd at church, excepting a few who are more encouraged and are making a sacrifice to attend. Harvest has hindered some from attending, but we hope when the busy rush is over to have better crowds again.

Our Department of Women is headed by Sister Vera Stephens who is very eager to do her duty to help her department to better lives. Sister Crystal Teeters, leader of the young people, and Sister John Teeters, monitor of the Orioles, want to give their bit to help the young hearts and lives to broaden and grasp those things which God desires they should.

Traveling ministers are invited to stop over at Alexander and give us a lift spiritually. We can meet you at McCracken on the Missouri Pacific, and the Santa Fe goes through Alexander. Our desire is to so live that we can help redeem Zion.

Hold Successful Conference

ALLIANCE, ALBERTA, July 19.—The Alberta conference, held at Ribstone, July 10 to 13, has just closed. The attendance was good all four days, and the weather was fine. District President William Osler and Missionaries C. J. Smith, E. E. Long, and J. J. Cornish were with us.

Religio business was transacted on Thursday, with a lecture on Religio work and a young people's institute. Brother Smith preached in the evening. Friday morning the Sunday school business was attended to, and in the afternoon a business meeting of the Department of Women was held, while Brother Smith lectured to the men. In the evening Brother Smith preached. A business meeting of the district conference was held Saturday morning with preaching in the afternoon and evening by Brother Long.

A song service was held each evening, in charge of the district chorister, Sister Osler, assisted by Brother Smith. Every afternoon a recreation period was held, and both visiting and home folks of the conference enjoyed themselves with an hour of games and healthy laughs.

Sunday opened with sacramental service at ten, with opening prayer by Brother Cornish. God was present to bless his children. At half past one Brother Long had charge of a priesthood meeting, and then Brother Cornish preached at half past two. After that sermonets were given by Brothers Smith, Long, and Cornish. Brother Smith gave an interesting talk on Nauvoo, while Brothers Long and Cornish told of some of their experiences in missionary work. Brother Long delivered the closing sermon of the conference at eight o'clock.

Conference closed Monday morning after prayer service, to meet next year at the call of the district president.

Just before the benediction one who had been investigating the work arose and asked for baptism. While preparations were being made Brother Cornish again spoke at the creek. Confirmation was at the church.

Much of the credit for the success of the conference is due Brother William Osler, district president, and the Department of Women. The Saints are more encouraged than ever to press forward, having had a wonderful degree of the Spirit with them through the conference.

WILLIAM MCLEOD, District Secretary.

Girls Win Subscription Contest

SAINT MARYS, OHIO, July 21.—A number of the Saints met at the hall the evening of July 19 to enjoy an ice cream social given by the Department of Women, and to hear the report of the contest staged between the two factions of the young people of the Sunday school for subscriptions to the Ensign and SAINTS' HERALD.

The girls' committee, composed of Gladys Christopher, Opal Baher, Cecil Hardin, and Iona Gross, came out with ten subscriptions, two more than the boys, whose committee was Boyd Holdren, Harry Christopher, Willie Christopher, and Charley Burd.

We feel that they worked earnestly in the four weeks of time given them, and had the Lord's help. The boys served the winning side at the social with all the cream they could eat, free of charge. The sum of $7.86 was cleared at the social, to be used for church expenses. We thank all for their earnest endeavor.

MINNIE HAGER.

Cherokee Saints Attend Sac City Tent Meetings

CHEROKEE, IOWA, July 30.—Several carloads of Saints from this place have been driving forty-five miles to Sac City every Sunday to assist in tent meetings which are being conducted there by Brother W. A. Smith. Those attending last Sunday report a fine time and a large crowd in attendance. Excellent sermons were given by Elder W. A. Smith, and Elder Moroni Traxler of Lamoni.

Elder A. R. Crippen and family and Sister W. W. Reeder and children have returned from a well-earned vacation, which they spent in Minnesota visiting relatives. Brother Crippen gave a heart-to-heart talk to the young people Sunday evening concerning good behavior in the house of God. He secured the promise of their help and cooperation along these lines, and we hope to see less confusion during intermissions and after services. We are known as Saints and should conduct ourselves as such. Confusion and noise in church give people the impression that we are not what we claim to be.

Vacation time and so many attending the Sac City tent meetings has cut down the attendance at Sunday school lately, but we are not discouraged and feel we are doing some good for the Master's cause. There is some improvement in attendance at the midweek prayer services, and the Spirit is nearly always manifest.

Since our last news letter, death has claimed one of our beloved sisters, Emma Landingham, who passed away at her home June 25 after a long illness. Short services were held at the home of Elder A. R. Crippen, and the remains were taken to Woodbine, Iowa, for burial. Funeral services were held there in charge of Woodbine branch officers.

Grandpa Nathan Hayes, who is known as the father of the Cherokee Branch, has been in very poor health this summer.

Speakers here the past month have been Brothers E. L. Edwards, A. R. Crippen, J. T. Spence, William Shore, W. W. Reeder, W. W. Leonard, and Albert Haynes.

Smallpox Quarantine Lifted

COLEMAN, MICHIGAN, July 21.—Since our last letter several things have happened which might interest some of the Saints who have moved away from here. During the first part of June a smallpox epidemic swept the country, causing a quarantine on all public gatherings. This of course has its effect upon the branch, but we are now having regular meetings again.

At the quarterly business meeting William S. Methner was elected assistant pastor, as Elder Martindale is away part of the time. His business is so that he is not always able to attend services.

Perhaps a number of Saints who at one time lived at Coleman will be caused to mourn to learn of the death of Charles Tesman, who passed away at his home July 9. The funeral was held at the church Sunday, Elder Umphrey officiating. Brother Tesman was one of the pioneers of the work at Coleman and labored with Elders Cornish, J. J. Bailey, Peters, and other of the old veterans who helped establish the gospel in this part of the country.

Two-Day Meetings at Fordney

BRANT, MICHIGAN, July 29.—The two-day meeting that was held at Fordney opened July 19 at half past ten, with prayer service in charge of Matthew Umphrey. An abundance of the Spirit was enjoyed, and the Saints were admonished to be more humble and prayerful. Preceding the dismissal of the service, Brother Umphrey chose the following to have charge during the meetings: Presiding officer, district president; chorister, Sister Borden, with power to appoint organist; janitor and usher, Brother Wesener; in charge of administration, Albert Seymour, with power to choose associates; press reporter, Sister Wesener.

After the morning service, dinner was served at the home of Brother and Sister Smith, from which all returned to church where Brother Umphrey preached at half past one. He enjoyed good liberty and urged the Saints to come up higher. Brother A. H. Cheney preached at three o'clock. During this service Brother and Sister G. W. Burt made their appearance. All enjoyed their association during the two days.

Services were again held in the evening at eight o'clock, with preaching by Brother Burt.

The prayer meeting at nine o'clock Sunday was in charge of Brother John Wade, assisted by Elders Umphrey and Burt. Following a few timely remarks by Brother Wade, the meeting was open for prayer and testimony, in which a marked degree of the Spirit was felt.

After a good sermon at eleven o'clock by Brother Burt, dinner was served, which was followed by a sermon by Brother Umphrey at two. A baptismal service was held after the afternoon preaching service, at which time two were baptized by Brother Umphrey.

After the baptismal service some of the Saints left for their distant homes, feeling it had been good to meet together.

Brother Seymour preached at four o'clock, and Elder John Wade preached in the evening.

All felt they were doubly repaid for the sacrifice made to attend the meetings.

Raising Money to Buy Church Lot; Baptisms

NEW WESTMINSTER, BRITISH COLUMBIA, July 21.—The few members here are indeed live wires. The Department of Women is still in the forefront, using every ounce of energy to raise money to add to the amount already raised for the purchase of a church lot, that our dreams may be realized and a church of our own be erected. Just a few weeks ago twelve dollars was raised at a sale of home cooking, and while it may appear to be a mite to the larger branches, it is a widow's mite for our own small community.

Sunday, June 29, dawned with glorious sunshine, elevating us with its brightness, while the greater light illumined our souls and caused us to rejoice. This was Children's Day, for both old and young, for all are children in the fold and kingdom of Christ. Special hymns were sung at both morning and evening services. In the afternoon the baptism of Sister Pearl Ashley and Brother Knowle Knowles took place in the Fraser River, and although many were present besides members, great solemnity and reverence prevailed, permitting God's blessing to be present. As the candidates emerged from the water, "Tis a glorious thing to be in the light" was sung, and I believe all enjoyed the good Spirit.

From the waterside, candidates and members adjourned to the home of Sister May Butterfield, where the former received their confirmation, after which several noble testimonies were heard.

In the evening a special program was arranged in place of the usual preaching service. Every class in the Sunday school was represented by songs or readings, and a visitor from another branch favored us with a violin solo.

Monday at three o'clock a marriage contract was solemnized between Sister Rosina Ashley and Brother Knowle Knowles, both of this branch. Brother W. C. Reed officiated. In the evening the members of the branch gave them a surprise shower, and many useful presents were received.

Tuesday, July 1, was the day set aside for the annual joint picnic of Vancouver and New Westminster Branches. An enjoyable time was experienced at Second Beach, Stanley Park, Vancouver.

Good feelings are present at all the meetings, which are fairly well attended, and the Father of the flock is still tending his sheep.

Brother and Sister Jones, of Seattle, are with us this week end, and many have felt benefited by their presence.

Progress in Minnesota

BEMIDJI, MINNESOTA, July 27.—The work in this State is growing. There is a great demand for preaching, and many outsiders are making inquiries about the church. The district groups are at work.

Brother McBride, of Emo, Ontario, a priest, looks after the work in and around International Falls. This brother is a good worker and believes in doing things right.

Another group at Aitkin, presided over by Jay Myers, of Glen, and Brother Sam Cave, a priest of Pine River, meets once a month, and we look for good results. Scattered Saints who have not attended church for years are making long drives to attend meetings.

A third group is at Frazee, and Brother Frank Tucker, of Deer Creek, a young priest, has been appointed to work there. We are looking for some big things to develop as Brother Frank enters upon his new field of labor. We are confident the Lord will lead his people to victory.

GEORGE W. DAY.

He Believes the Church Is Sufficient

COLUMBIA, KANSAS, July 24.—As we go about our daily labors, meeting and associating with those of the world who make no profession of religion, as well as with those who do, we are enabled to see the condition of the people from a viewpoint of the truth. People in the churches belong to all kinds of lodges and secret societies. Even some of our church people go hand in hand with the world forgetting the admonition of our heavenly Father who said we should cease to try to carry him in one hand and the world in the other. We should know that as followers of him we cannot continue to disregard his advice.

Dear Saints, why not pay our money into the church instead of into worldly, man-made organizations? We will be better off financially and spiritually, and the church needs the money. Why go to the world for help when God has promised us everything that is for our good, if we will only do the things he has told us to do? The Lord will withhold no good thing from those who walk uprightly before him. How can he prove himself to us if we do not give him a chance?

C. C. RANDALL.

Department of Recreation and Expression Active

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, July 26.—Elder G. W. Robley left Winnipeg on June 30 for a visit to his home in Providence, Rhode Island.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is taking up the study of the Book of Mormon. It has been arranged to have the lessons on the ball field for the months of July and August. After the lesson a baseball game is held instead of a concert as formerly. A picnic is to be held August 4 when a truck will be hired to drive the picnickers to Lockport, a pretty spot about fifteen miles from here.

The Sunday school held a picnic on Dominion Day, July 1, at Assiniboine Park. About one hundred and twenty people were present. Races were run in the afternoon, the prizes being presented just before lunch. An interesting game of baseball was played in the evening.

New Church House at Bellaire

BELLAIRE, OHIO, July 29.—Bellaire Branch has about sixty-five members, but we are sorry to say that all are not as interested as they should be. We have no Religio, but the Sunday school is in fairly good condition. However, we have some loyal people that are interested in the Lord's work, and the gospel is preached to us in power by his Spirit.

Brother Sebastiano Vadola, a man who loves this gospel above everything else on earth, is the president of the branch. We have recently had an addition to the branch in the form of Brother Joseph Edwards and family, who moved here from Morgantown, West Virginia. Brother Edwards makes a valuable assistant in the work here.

The Saints here are rejoicing that they now have a place in which to hold meetings. Brother Vadola donated a lot and the brothers put up the building. We feel the Lord is pleased with our efforts, for he is pouring out his Spirit in blessing upon us. He has also given us warning to stand in holy places against the danger of his judgments that are being poured out upon the world. We pray that the Saints will arouse themselves to a sense of the duty that devolves upon them.

MRS. JULIA THOMPSON.

From Northern Wisconsin

The work in this district is moving forward, not with great rapidity as we would desire, but with surety which is very encouraging.

Previous to our last reunion we began work early in the spring to prepare for the occasion, not in loud tones, however, but in a quiet way to instill peace and love as far as possible. Our great object was to make this reunion a real social gathering, one like we often have in the front yard when all our best friends are gathered together for a real picnic dinner and visit, when all are running over with enthusiasm to wait on the other with good things.

We endeavored to teach all to catch the giving spirit, and to carry this out we asked all to give a minimum price for tents, which was a step in advance of last year when we gave them free tents.

We asked all able men and women, as well as boys and girls, to the kitchen in an organized effort to wash and wipe dishes, which was a decided success and proved to be a real recreation of mind amid the laughter and excitement created by early callers at the kitchen, appearing in long gowns and bare feet, with an occasional theft at the neighbors' clothes-line.

There were twenty people who were given free board, these being cooks, waiters, members of the committee who were active missionaries and general church appointees to the reunion, missionaries' wives, and retired men of the field who had rendered valiant service.

A circular was sent throughout the whole district to all branches and nonresidents, announcing the reunion, and though some branches were hardly represented, yet we had an exceptionally large attendance of nonresidents who very seldom hear a sermon, and in all we had an excellent attendance.

A missionary fund was started in which as many as wished to do so could call at the office and place in the hands of the reunion committee any amount they desired to give, the lowest amount being five cents and the largest ten dollars. These two extremes were both from friends of the truth, but at the time not members of the church. In all, the missionary fund amounted to over $72.

After paying over $150 for cooks and missionary help, we closed our reunion with the neat little sum of $103, though we had nothing on hand to start the reunion.

We have learned this—that we must bend our energy to make all people happy and keep them happy, then all will go well; for where there is a smile you will find a place to give away some of the good things you have.

We do not want to forget to mention the good work of the cooks, who rendered excellent service in the kitchen; the waiters, who were always ready to act and who were willing to do anything they were called upon to do. The members of the committee who were there seemed eager at all times to look after the comfort and happiness of the people. Our program committee of the reunion this year surely was a great blessing to all, coming with words of cheer and inspiration, and contributing its share to the success of the reunion.

The writer was very busy at this reunion but hopes to get a good long breath at the Madison reunion.

E. J. LENOX.

The Saints of Onaway, Michigan, held a one-day meeting July 27. It was a beautiful day, and Saints were present from all parts of the district. A fine, spiritual time was enjoyed by all.

In Memory of Elder L. R. and Sister Ella R. Devore

Side by side in Fairview Cemetery, just north of Holden, Missouri, are the graves of Elder L. R. Devore and his wife, Ella R. Devore, known and loved by many Saints in America and the islands of the sea. Their lives, the greater or the better part of them, were given to the ministry of the message of peace. Hundreds of souls have been enlightened in reference to the hope of eternal life through their efforts. His plain and simple way of presenting the truth, and her forceful and convincing powers of conversation are remembered by many yet living. She was a great helper to him, and seemed never to weary in talking the gospel story.

He was a very careful and modest man, of a sympathetic disposition, very precise and careful in his conversation, saying nothing intentionally that would shock or wound the feelings of others. He was a model of industry. Whatever he did, he did with all his might. He was not above doing hard manual labor in the fields, and often shamed those who should have had greater ability than he, by reason of their continued experience.

Brother Devore was the most attentive listener that I ever knew. No matter how young or inexperienced the speaker, he was sure to have an earnest listener in Brother Devore; which is always very encouraging to the young minister or the beginner.

Many to whom these consecrated Saints administered the word of life have passed over the great divide, in the hope and assurance of a part in the first resurrection. Many yet still remain who will ever thank God for the good work of this saintly minister and his capable companion. The crowning effort of their lives was the (almost) six years' mission to the Society Islands, which by reason of the great exposures suffered and endured, resulted in the breaking of the health of both. After their return to America she could not travel much with him on account of her impaired health, and yet he preceded her in death by several years. She continued to live in her former home a few years, but finally accepted the shelter and comforts of the Saints' Home at Holden, where she remained until death claimed her. They left no posterity after flesh, and yet there survive them many children in the gospel.

As there are no relatives of theirs near here, the writer has felt interested in the upkeep of their graves. Of late I have thought that it would be a beautiful and fitting memory to them, and the mission where they suffered and sacrificed so much, if their graves could be decorated with shells from the South Sea Islands. On their return from that mission they brought many shells, which they distributed freely among former acquaintances. So I have wondered if there are not many who would be willing to donate a portion of these shells to be placed on their graves. All they gave me, of sufficient size, I have placed on their graves. But mine alone did not make much of a showing. Brother G. F. Baker has made donations for this purpose; but are there not others who will join us in this little effort to honor the memory of these self-sacrificing Saints?

Any having these shells and willing to part with them, if you will mail them to me, I will see that they are placed on the graves. They left enough shells to cover their graves, but not thinking of themselves, they willed these to some institutions of the church. Who has a sea shell, or shells, for Brother and Sister Devore's graves? H. E. MOLER.

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, 400 East Fourth Street.

Independence

Bishop Benjamin R. McGuire preached at the Stone Church Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, after which he left for Tom's River, New Jersey, where his family is visiting. On account of rain in the evening, no service could be held on the Campus, so evening services were held at the Stone Church, where Apostle T. W. Williams was speaker.

Mrs. James F. Keir and daughters, Dorothy and Maxine, are in Chicago visiting friends and relatives. They expect to return about September 1.

President and Mrs. Elbert A. Smith drove to Nauvoo to attend the reunion there. They left August 7.

President F. M. Smith is at present in Toronto, Ontario, but he expects to attend the reunion at Boyne City, Michigan, the coming week.

The funeral of Mr. Ray Doty, son-in-law of Brother and Sister Andy Goode, who died very suddenly August 7 at his home in Fairland Heights, was held at the home of his parents, 1116 West Elm, Saturday, August 9. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Two items are especially worthy of notice with regard to the picture shown on the Campus Saturday night. The picture, "Boy of mine," by Booth Tarkington, was very fine; and the conduct of the vast audience was unusually good. At no time was there any undue disturbance or hilarity on the part of the onlookers.

Second Church

Brother Joseph M. Lane, of the Second Independence congregation, died August 7 after an illness of five months. He was born in Nauvoo, but has lived in Independence the last two years. Funeral services were held at Second Independence Church at eleven o'clock Saturday morning, with burial in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Brother Gleeson R. Carroll, son of Brother and Sister Yokely Carroll, of group seventeen, and Viola Wiltfong, daughter of Sister J. D. Wiltfong, of group thirty-one, were married at the home of Richard J. Lambert Sunday, August 10, at eleven o'clock. Brother Carroll's father, mother, and sister, and Sister Wiltfong's mother were present.

Apostle T. W. Williams spoke at Second Independence Sunday morning. The house was filled to capacity with an attentive audience. J. W. Metcalf addressed the priesthood of the five groups in the congregation at the church at five o'clock.

Liberty Street

Brother J. L. Parker, son-in-law of Pastor J. M. Baker, was the speaker at Liberty Street Sunday morning. Brother Parker has moved his family to Independence, where they will conduct the High School Lunch Cabin.

The piano committee made its final report Sunday. The first pledge was given on the fine new grand piano on April 20, and in a little over three months the entire $700 is paid, with a balance on hand of $60.54, which is to be applied on their local church debt. Classes and organizations of the congregation are pledging themselves to work just as hard to pay the budget as they did in paying for their new piano.

When the Silver Wing Chapter of the Temple Builders met for their usual business meeting on August 4, at the home of Mrs. C. I. Wiggins, they found the house gayly decorated for a birthday party in honor of Miss Loretti Wiggins. All report a general good time. Doubtless we will hear more of this chapter in the future, as they are working hard for their fall bazaar.

Enoch Hill

The speaker at Enoch Hill Sunday morning was C. E. Constance, while W. H. Kelley spoke in the evening at seven.

The Sunday school enjoyed a record attendance on this day, with two hundred and nine present.

Recent baptisms are Mrs. Elizabeth Stage, who was baptized by J. V. Roberts, and Dorothy Grene Martin, W. D. Bullard officiating.

East Independence

Harry Friend spoke at East Independence Sunday morning. On account of rain in the evening Brother Bath could not be present, so Brother Bert Thatcher occupied.

On August 21 the Willing Workers will hold an ice cream social two blocks west of the present East Independence church. The Oriole girls will give a play, "Love of service." Music and readings will fill out the program. Everyone is invited to attend and help these people.

Brother Bath, who has been helping faithfully on the new church, has been ill, so was not able to work all week.

Englewood

There was a good attendance at the prayer service Wednesday night at Englewood, at the home of Jalmer Nelson. Two meetings will be held next week, with a possible view to dividing the group.

Brother John Ely preached Sunday morning, but no services were held in the evening.

Sister Carrie Palmer, sixty-nine years of age, died suddenly at her home Wednesday morning, August 6. Funeral services were held at Carson's Undertaking Parlors, with sermon by J. V. Roberts.

Mrs. Forshee and Brother Calvin Wagar, sister and brother of Mrs. Palmer, wish to thank the many friends who so kindly assisted in caring for her in her illness. They also appreciate the beautiful floral offerings.

Clitherall, Minnesota

BATTLE LAKE, MINNESOTA, July 30.—Union Branch is keeping up its services in spite of small attendance. During August there will be a larger attendance due to the visit of Brother and Sister W. W. Gould and Sister O. E. Tucker and family, of Independence, former members of this branch.

F. P. Tucker, priest, made an opening at Frazee July 27 and will occupy there part of the time if the interest warrants.

Lester Whiting, branch president, is still preaching at Poplar Grove every alternate Sunday with a steadily increasing interest.

Saint Louis News

SAINT LOUIS, MISSOURI, July 29.—The Saint Louis District conference convened with the Saint Louis Branch Saturday and Sunday, July 26 and 27. We had Apostle E. J. Gleazer with us, who delivered three excellent sermons. It was the opinion of those present that this was one of the best conferences ever held in the district. The branches were well represented, many bringing their baskets and staying the entire day. Provisions were made in the business meeting Saturday evening for a new district tent.

To say that the Saint Louis Saints were delighted at the return of the G. S. Trowbridge family is mildly expressing it. Immediately upon their return Brother Trowbridge was elected as one of the assistant pastors and Sister Trowbridge was made primary superintendent. There is always work for willing workers.

We have been pleased to have with us Sister E. Burgess, of Lamoni, Iowa, formerly correspondent for this branch. She has been a wonderful addition to some of the gatherings of the women of the branch.

Joseph A. Swift and wife are visiting old friends and relatives in the city. Brother Swift gave a very nice talk to the Sunday school. He was formerly superintendent of the Zion's Hope Sunday School.

One of the noticeable things about our pastor, Brother H. A. Higgins, is his happy faculty of working the visiting missionaries who happen to come this way. On July 13 Elder J. E. Vanderwood, en route to his field, preached two excellent sermons to the Saints. Other recent speakers are Presidents Smith and McDowell and Apostle E. J. Gleazer.

The young people of the branch are interested in the different departments of church work and have several outings planned for summer and fall. The priesthood is holding regular meetings, and constructive work is being accomplished.

Chicago, Illinois

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, July 30.—Vacation days are over for most of the people of First Chicago Branch, and all are fitting back into their respective jobs. We are justly proud of our church, which has been redecorated from top to bottom, a new stairway built in front, and a new piano installed.

We were all agreeably surprised on June 29 to see Patriarch F. A. Smith, who spoke in the evening in his characteristic way. It seemed like old times to see him again.

District Missionary Jerome Wildermuth and family paid us a visit July 6. We are always pleased to have these valiant workers with us from time to time.

The branch picnic on July 4, at the reunion grounds at Elmhurst, was a decided success. Besides private cars, a large bus was provided to carry all to the grounds, which was much more convenient than going by train. The usual games, races, etc., were provided, as well as free lemonade and ice cream. We need more of these picnics.

Recent sermons by H. P. W. Keir, J. Louis Gautchier, and Pastor F. E. Bone keep us alive in the work, with a desire to do as well as hear.

Visitors of late are Brother and Sister Thorne, of Batavia; Brother and Sister McKiernan and family, of Iowa; Brother and Sister Stone, of Missouri; Sister Ethel Searl, of Wyoming; and a number of young people of Zion who are studying here. Visitors are always welcome at the little church around the corner, 4416 Gladys Avenue.

Columbus, Ohio

Sunday, July 20, marked a day of advancement for the Columbus, Ohio, Saints. The First Columbus Branch gained three new members through baptism just before Sunday school, and these were confirmed during the morning hour. The missionary effort is bearing fruit.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, the Central Columbus mission was formally opened under the direction of the two Columbus branches. Speakers during the afternoon were Brothers G. Kirkendall, of Union Furnace, Ohio; G. T. Griffiths; J. A. Becker, of Independence; J. E. Matthews and C. W. Clark, of Columbus. Brother T. S. Williams, who is in charge of the mission, offered a few remarks. Music by the two branch choirs greatly aided in this special service.

The hall in which the Saints are meeting was made beautiful by palms and flowers. A very good spirit prevailed, and the Saints of Columbus are looking for great results from this effort.

San Francisco, California

August 2.—We had the pleasure of having with us on July 2 Elder Walter W. Smith, his wife, and son. They were on their way to Southern California. He preached for us at our church, giving us a very interesting talk. We also had with us Apostle D. T. Williams and Missionaries E. B. Hull and Virgil Etzenhouser. Elder G. J. Waller, from Honolulu, and J. B. Carmichael, president of the Oakland Branch, with a number of others from Oakland, helped to make up the congregation.

At the branch business meeting July 9 we elected branch officers as follows: John A. Saxe, president; Emery S. Parks, priest; L. B. Parish, teacher; Cecil Smith, deacon. All are active workers who will take good care of the branch.

Two children were blessed at the Sunday service.

Preaching of late has been by J. A. Saxe, H. B. Simpson, George S. Lincoln, E. E. Hartsough.

We have had no services at our church for two weeks, as most of the members were attending the district reunion at Irvington. President F. M. Smith was among others welcomed there. Your correspondent was not permitted to be among them, but continues to hold meetings with the Park-Residio group each Wednesday evening here in the city. All is well with us.

Far West News

KINGSTON, MISSOURI, August 1.—Brothers O. W. Okerlind and J. W. Curtis made a flying trip through this part of the Far West Stake this week, on their way to Trenton to hold a series of meetings, stopping over night with the writer. We have known the Curtis family more than forty years. My father prophesied to Sister Emslie Curtis twenty-two years ahead of time that she would, if faithful, live to hear her third son preach the gospel. Apostle Frank proved to be that son.

We greatly enjoyed the visit of these brothers and hope they will soon return and make a longer visit.

The third Sunday of this month the Saints are going to spend at least a portion of the day with the children in the woods, where baptismal services will be held. We do not know yet how many will be baptized.

Our two-day meeting was enjoyed by all. Brothers O. Salisbury and Herbert Barto were the speakers, and their efforts were good and very much enjoyed by all. Sister Liggett, of Saint Joseph, was also in attendance and performed well the part assigned her.

Brother Fred Cook and wife are the proud parents of a baby boy. Both father and mother are doing well.

Let us press forward, ever looking for the redemption of Zion.

Pittsburg, Kansas

August 4.—Many of the Pittsburg Saints were disappointed when it was announced last Sunday that the Spring River district reunion, which was to be held in Lincoln Park, had been canceled. Hard times was the chief contributing cause.

Elder A. P. Crooker, of Topeka, was with us one Sunday last month and occupied the pulpit at the evening service. He preached one of his characteristic "gospel ship" sermons.

Sunday, July 26, the pastor being away, the pulpit was occupied by Brother J. M. Richards, of the local force. Brother Richards is well advanced in age, being about eighty-four years old. But he is still in the harness, preaching twice on this day. In the evening Brother S. Farrington, also of the local force, spoke.

The sacramental service August 3 was fairly well attended. Several were administered to, and an appreciable degree of the Spirit was present.

Brother J. L. Wheeler, superintendent of schools at Durant, Oklahoma, and his family, were among the visitors at the morning service.

Elder J. W. Gilbert, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, was also a visitor on the above date and occupied at the evening hour, preaching on "Stewardships and equality."

Topeka Entertains Saints From Second Independence Branch

TOPEKA, KANSAS, August 5.—On July 27 the young Saints from the Second Branch of Independence motored to Topeka to spend the day, some of them arriving in time for Sunday school. The old saying is, "It never rains but it pours," and "The joy of many a picnic dinner is had only in the anticipation of it." Such was the case when host and guest were nicely seated in the shade of a big tree on the church lawn listening to an interesting sermon on "Jesus as a witness of the revealed law of God," by J. D. Stead, missionary to the Northeastern Kansas District. Just before service began, plans had been made to motor to a grove northwest of town where all were to join in a picnic dinner, but before the sermon was finished some were sprinkled before they could get inside of the building, so dinner was served cafeteria style in the church.

The sun soon shone again, and we went to the grove for ice cream and cake. There is something in eating together that seems to draw us nearer to each other, and we felt that the bond of friendship had been strengthened between us in this visit.

We were glad to have among our visitors Brother Richard Lambert, of the HERALD editors, who gave an interesting talk in the afternoon, stressing the thought that "This is hay day in religious life, and if we are ever going to do anything it is now. God calls men to work, not to turn them down. Men turn men down."

Sister Vera Twombly, district chorister, of Lawrence, gave some plans for music for the reunion to be held at Netawaka beginning August 15. H. Ray Follett, of Omaha, was also present and gave a talk and had charge of the music at the open-air service in the evening, when J. D. Stead spoke on "The resurrection," this being one of a series of services based on "The busy man's tracts" used to advertise the meetings. His voice rang out clear and distinct, and many heard him from their porches who did not come to the grounds.

Thus closed a busy day. The presence of so many cars attracted the attention of neighbors, and some came to the service in the evening to see what was going on.

Prayer meetings are well attended in spite of warm evenings. We have been blessed in many ways for this effort and are made to realize that we cannot get along without the prayer meetings any more than we can get along without the church. Thirty-five were present at the sacramental service August 3, and there were ten prayers and twenty-five testimonies. F. O. Kelley, Sunday school superintendent, was called to the office of teacher, and Clayton Crooker to the office of deacon. Our aged sister, Mrs. Margaritte Chew, was present and spoke under the influence of the Spirit to the branch in general, to the young, and then to the priesthood. The young were admonished to improve their opportunity to assist in building up the work, and that if they were not educated in one thing they would be in another. The branch was admonished to continue to pray and to rejoice, for the time is at hand when this city should be warned, and God would bless his people with a double portion of his Spirit.

W. L. Chapman and Ira G. Whipple motored to Scranton with P. B. Anderson. They were called there to administer to Elder James Baillie, who has been in a very critical condition.

Brother A. P. Crooker preached the funeral sermon of the infant daughter of Brother and Sister C. W. Griffin July 9. Though the parents were not permitted to watch the unfolding of this little bud, yet as "the rose acquired its perfume while its petals are folded," so will this child which God has folded into his own arms for a little while blossom all the more sweetly and grow up without sin to salvation.

Four Weeks of Meetings Appreciated

WHITTEMORE, MICHIGAN, July 25.—The branch at this place is in a thriving condition. Elder S. T. Pendleton has been with us for four weeks and just closed a series of meetings in which he presented the angel message clearly and vigorously, without fear or favor to any. He spoke to large crowds almost every night, who gave him good attention. His visits among the members were much appreciated, and his advice should always be remembered. Four were baptized, and others appear to be interested. Some who thought the Book of Mormon taught polygamy, after hearing Brother Pendleton speak on that subject asked for the book. I loaned them mine and told them to pass it on to their neighbors, as it would speak for itself.

The sisters of the branch have started the Department of Women, and choir practice is under the leadership of Brother Steven Barr. We have Sunday school, with an attendance of fifty scholars. Our teachers are much interested in our young people, knowing that they must qualify to carry the message to others.

All felt sorry to part with Brother Pendleton, but he has gone to blow the gospel trumpet to others. We all look forward to the time when he can again be with us. May the Master's richest blessings follow him.

ADOLPH CATALINE.

Recreational Work at Glasgow

GLASGOW, MONTANA, July 29.—Those of our number who attended the Young People's Convention at Lamoni caught the spirit of directing the recreation of the young people in this community. A plot of ground was secured, the property of outsiders who willingly offered it for this purpose. A croquet set, a tennis court, a volley ball court, and playground ball have been installed, and a circle swing is being put up. The cost has been around fifty dollars, almost the entire amount having been donated by business men of the town with little solicitation. The place has become a lively one and bids fair to be quite a factor in the social life of the community. We hope to attract outsiders to the gospel message.

There is some reduction in Sunday school and Religio attendance during the summer on account of some going to the country, but the preaching and prayer services have been above the average the past month.

A very happy event recently was the visit of Apostle Roy S. Budd, who stopped off one day on his way to the Eastern Montana reunion. He preached in the hall to a good audience the evening he was here.

The Sunday school superintendent, Elmer D. Chase, with his family, has been absent in Canada for three weeks. They

REUNION NEWS

Kentucky and Tennessee

The reunion of the Kentucky and Tennessee District was held at Foundry Hill, near Puryear, Tennessee, July 19 to 27, the district president presiding. The speakers for the reunion were: Bishop Charles Fry, T. C. Kelley who is missionary supervisor, J. R. McClain, and J. E. Vanderwood. The attendance was not so large as in previous years, which seemed to be due to the fact that reunion was a week earlier than usual and many of the farmers were so busy they could not attend reunion.

Thursday of this reunion has for years been set apart as children's day, when the children contribute their part toward the success of the reunion. Sisters C. B. Gallimore and E. M. Seaton were in charge and had provided a program to occupy both afternoon and evening. After the usual prayer service at ten, Brother Kelley delivered a sermon to parents and children. In the evening the young people put on "The opportunity of the Sunday school." Some music and several readings completed the program. Those taking part in both programs, as well as their supervisors, deserve commendation for the very fine work done.

The spirit of unity prevailed throughout the entire session, and the meetings were of a high order. We feel sure that all who were present were benefited, and all went from this gathering renewed in hope and in purpose. Already plans are being made for the 1925 reunion.

The hospitality of the Saints of this district is worthy of special mention.

Florida Reunion Successful

MILTON, FLORIDA, August 2.—The Florida District's reunion closed on July 27, after nine days of pleasant communion and spiritual uplift for all who attended.

The attendance was larger than in recent years, and greater interest was shown. It is hoped that much good was accomplished.

The prayer services each day were very good, being well attended and marked by interest and spirituality. The Lord revealed his mind in prophecy, to individuals as well as to the assembly, on one occasion with words of admonition and encouragement concerning certain matters before the whole church.

A study class in psychology was conducted each day by Apostle J. W. Rushton, which proved interesting and helpful.

Departmental work was in charge of Sister N. L. Booker. The program was as follows: Monday, recreation and expression; Tuesday, Department of Women; Wednesday, Sunday school; Thursday, education; Friday, health; and Saturday, music. Professor Lisenby, of the Douring Industrial School at Brewton, Alabama, assisted with the program Thursday, and Doctor Hatchett, county health officer, assisted Friday. Miss Martha McCall, who is home demonstration returned July 28. The Sunday school has been in charge of the assistant, Brother Joseph Sandidge.

Branch President James C. Page went to Vandalia, Montana, July 27, taking a carload of young people with him, where they attended a union Sunday school and Elder Page preached to a crowd of thirty-five. Arrangement was made for Brother Page to return August 17, when several will be baptized.

agent of Henry County, Alabama, was home for the reunion and gave valuable assistance in the departmental work.

Elder N. L. Booker had charge of recreational activities, and Sister Bessie Clark was musical director, which parts were ably filled.

The preaching was done by Apostle J. W. Rushton, Evangelist Ammon White, Elder N. L. Booker, and W. A. West, district president. The sermons manifested spiritual power and gave moral uplift such as has seldom been equaled in this part of the country. Some of the vital questions of the church were presented with power and much assurance, in such plain terms as to be impossible for anyone to misunderstand.

Ten worthy young people were baptized near the close of reunion.

C. T. WEST.

Onset Reunion

ONSET, MASSACHUSETTS, July 30.—The first week of the Onset reunion, which is being featured by a young people's convention, is now well begun, and it is being attended by a large number from different parts of the United States and Canada. Newcomers are seen entering the grounds each day.

The first meeting was on Saturday night, July 26. This was a very interesting service, and the large tabernacle showed but very few empty seats. A brief address was given by the chairman of the Board of Selectmen, Mr. Holbrook, of Wareham, of which Onset is a part. Mr. Holbrook spoke in glowing terms of the Onset camp and declared his belief that it was a valuable asset to the town. He said town officials and other public spirited people of the town were glad that our reunion camp is situated near the Onset summer resort, for this fact made it possible for people to give some heed to the spiritual side of life. He extended a warm welcome to the reunion in behalf of the town and promised us every possible courtesy and ample protection in our worship.

Mr. Holbrook's talk was followed by a response from Bishop M. C. Fisher in behalf of the church. In a few fitting remarks he told of our appreciation of the courtesies of the past received from the town and extended to the citizens of the community and the surrounding country a cordial welcome to visit the camp during the reunion period. Doctor Sinclair then spoke briefly as president of the district, and he was followed by President F. M. McDowell.

Brother McDowell immediately won his way into the hearts of the people. He is hailed as "big brother" often, and in the excitement of recreation activities one occasionally hears some calling out to "Mac" as one of the boys. This is Brother McDowell's first visit to the reunion here, and he and the Saints are delighted with his visit. His sermons and talks are eagerly listened to, and his classes are well attended. The large number of "live wire" young people in this district feel that he is a worthy captain.

Other speakers introduced by Chairman E. L. Traver were Patriarch Richard Baldwin, who outlined the course on the Book of Mormon which he gives from a quarter of ten to a quarter of eleven each morning. He was followed by Bishop Fisher, who outlined the course on stewardships which he is teaching at the same hour. The next speaker was Sister Lucie Sears, who is giving a course on the psychology of adolescence. Doctor Sinclair followed, whose course is on religious education. Then Brother McDowell spoke briefly about his course, the social principles of the gospel. Elder Orval L. Thompson spoke a few minutes about the junior church work, which is a new feature in the East and which is being demonstrated each day. Brother Harold Cash, who has charge of the recreation activities, explained that elimination contests are to be held this year and that the team having the most points at the close of reunion is to carry home the athletic cup. The competitive games are tennis, volley ball, quoits, playground ball, and water carnival. Brother Orval Comfort, of New York, a first class scout, has charge of the scout activities and spoke briefly. As he arose to speak, some youthful voices outside the tabernacle raised a chorus of, "Boy Scouts! Boy Scouts! Boy Scouts! U. S. A. Scouts! Scouts! Scouts!" After Brother Comfort had briefly spoken, the service was turned into an entertainment consisting of readings, solos, music, and plays.

Sunday morning dawned bright, and everybody seemed happy and earnest. Sunday school convened from eight to nine. This was followed by one of the most beautiful prayer services the writer has witnessed for a long time. The theme was thankfulness. The testimonies were brief, earnest, spiritual, and to the point. The prayers were brief, fervent, and uplifting, and the songs were sung with feeling and zeal. The service was in charge of President McDowell and the rest of the reunion presidency. This service was followed by a wonderful sermon delivered by Patriarch Richard Baldwin. Brother Baldwin just returned from the British Isles where he has been for three years doing church work in company with his companion, Sister Baldwin, who is surely a valuable help to Brother Baldwin and the church at large. She is in charge of the kindergarten work at the reunion. President McDowell delivered a powerful sermon in the afternoon, first asking the question, as did Pilate, "What shall I do with Jesus which is called Christ?" and then answering it by the statement of the Almighty, "Hear ye him." These two statements he took as texts. In the evening the sermon was by Elder O. L. Thompson on the theme, "Inscriptions in sand." Each preaching service is preceded by a half hour of song led by Brother H. A. Koehler. Sister Needham, who is quite well known throughout the church, is here, and her beautiful solos are being enjoyed very much.

Everybody seems happy and enthusiastic. Smiles radiate in abundance, lighting up the camp with a warmth of unity. It is noticeable to the writer that not one disparaging word has been heard by him spoken by anybody in regard to another. And God surely is making this reunion one long to be remembered. Classes are eagerly attended, as are all services. The speakers attending the reunion are: F. M. McDowell, Richard Baldwin, Orval Thompson, T. J. Elliott, H. A. Koehler, G. W. Robley, W. A. Sinclair, and M. C. Fisher. The music is in charge of Brother Koehler, the young children are in charge of Sister Baldwin and assistants, the Orioles and Temple Builders are in charge of Sister Audrey Traver, the Boy Scouts are in charge of Orval Comfort, and Junior Church is in charge of Orval L. Thompson and assistants. Sunday school is in charge of Brother Daniel Joy, and recreation is in charge of Brother Harold Cash.

Prayer meetings are held each morning. This morning there were three in session at the same time: children, young people, and older folk. A sermon is preached each day at eleven and again at a quarter of eight. The afternoon is given over to recreation. O. L. THOMPSON.

The Spring River reunion, which was to have been held August 8 to 17, was called off on account of the small number of tents ordered and other undesirable conditions.

Brother and Sister J. M. Terry have returned to Independence from El Reno, Oklahoma, where they have been in charge of the branch. Brother Terry says he is ready for service, and is anxious for the advancement of the good cause.

Radio Flashes

K F I X Licensed by A. T. & T.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company, owners of practically all the important patents on radio telephone transmitting equipment, have instituted a vigorous campaign to protect their patent rights. The concern is requiring all broadcasting station owners who have equipment not made by their licensee, The Western Electric Company, to pay royalties or suspend operations. An extremely liberal proposition is offered to religious and educational institutions, which are required to pay only one dollar for the license. Many privately and commercially owned stations are licensed only upon the payment of license fees ranging up to several thousand dollars.

The Government requires all radio transmitting stations to be licensed by the Department of Commerce. Broadcasting stations must have licensed commercial operators in charge at all times. Our Independence station has on its staff four commercial operators—one first-class and three second-class.

"Every Ear Shall Hear"—by Radio

This is the slogan for the radio campaign. It is the subject of an interesting article in this number of the HERALD. Do you think that this slogan definitely suggests its purpose? It was proposed by Brother Howard Harder, a member of the radio campaign committee.

"Every ear shall hear." To make this possible, every church member will be given the opportunity to contribute to the powerful new broadcasting station. Watch for further announcements of "Radio Week"—September 7 to 14.

Meridian, Texas.—Last night (July 22) I heard your program for the first time and enjoyed it. Please send me schedule of your programs, so I will know when to tune in.—Thilman M. Rogstad.

Haverford, Pennsylvania.—I am receiving your programs regularly every week, for which I thank you very much. K F I X surely has interesting programs, and they are appreciated here. Your station is among a long list of western stations heard here.—Paul Looney.

Colfax, Illinois.—Kindly tell the entertainers that I enjoyed your program last night (Tuesday, July 22) and hope they come again. Wishing you the best of luck, I am yours for K F I X.—Harold R. Urnstatt.

Omaha, Nebraska.—Am very much pleased to report reception of the services from your station this evening. This is the first time I have had the pleasure of hearing your station and wish to say that it came in fully as strong as the Kansas City stations.—D. B. MacPhee (Announcer W O A W).

Lexington, Oklahoma.—I want to express my appreciation of your program Sunday (July 6), 7.30 to 8.30. Received good and clear; also sermon. Thank you very much. Please send me church literature.—Clarence W. Standridge.

"Supreme Directional Control" in Operation

The two divergent views that are now held by the Saints regarding the important question of church government are in documentary form and both have been presented through the columns of the HERALD.

The "Open letter" was signed and set forth by a group of general church officials in defense of the law and practice that has obtained throughout the history of the Reorganization. The document on "supreme directional control" was signed by another group which now seeks to enter new and untried fields and by means of centralizing supreme power in the hands of the President, hopes to build an efficient church machine like unto the army of Moses.

General Conference Must Decide

Everyone has recognized the vital importance of these questions, and it is clear to all that much depends upon the answer. Only the sovereign body of the church, assembled in General Conference, is empowered to make decision in so great a matter, and it was hoped that no attempt would be made to circumvent this. In fact, both sides to the controversy have urged that the matter be decided at the General Conference. The "Open letter" states:

We believe that the coming General Conference, in full possession of the facts, should speak and settle this controversy, in a definite, constructive manner. Only in such conference settlement can our people be reunited and confidence be restored and the cause of the Master advanced.

President Smith in his document says:

That since it seems the matters in controversy are to be brought before General Conference, it will be well for the Saints and delegates to study further the law and weigh matters presented for their consideration, reserving final judgment until the conference meets to hear the cause. And most assuredly none will finally reach conclusions from the basis of unanswered reasoning or statements, publicly or privately made.

We believe that the questions involved in this document and the "Open letter" should be discussed by the Saints at home and abroad in an attempt to discover the truth and with the purpose of reaching final agreement. Discussions should be free and open. Both sides should receive respectful hearing.

Hasty decisions should not be formed. Conclusions should not be based on ex-parte testimony, one-sided arguments or statements, or unverified and untested alleged spiritual manifestations.

We are unalterably opposed to anything which suggests machine politics, or an attempt to railroad measures, or to prevent free and untrammelled discussion. We believe it a mistake even to attempt to put something over on the people or to intimidate or coerce anyone. To pass any measure without free and full discussion, and then to select delegates without giving full opportunity for general nomination from the floor, and then binding the delegates thus selected to support conclusions thus arrived at, is, to say the least, questionable.

Strange Procedure in California

Quite recently the Northern California District held a reunion and district conference at Irvington, California. President F. M. Smith was in attendance and presided over the conference. Here is what took place, according to letters received from four different sources:

The first move was to do away with the spring conference and hold two-day meetings in their stead. This was a very unusual proceeding but quite significant in the light of what followed. This paved the way for the immediate selection of delegates to the General Conference. This would close discussion so far as Northern California was concerned—a significant move.

A motion was then presented and carried to change the method of electing delegates to the General Conference in 1925 from nominating from the floor to the electing of a nominating committee. A motion was then made and carried to allow the chairman, F. M. Smith, to appoint the nominating committee.

A motion was then made to indorse the "Church government" document as published in the HERALD of July 9, 1924, page 651, and that the delegates elected to represent this district at General Conference stand by this church document article. Before general decision had taken place the previous question was moved and carried, and the matter went to vote and was carried. Some voted "No," and many did not vote at all.

Please note that President Smith was present at this conference and presided over the same. He appointed the committee which named the delegates to the General Conference. After this procedure, President Smith spoke and indicated that he was pleased with the action of the conference, that the conference did well to indorse what the late council had indorsed, and also that the proper course had been followed when the resolution binding the delegates to vote for it was passed.

Action Versus Advice

What then becomes of the advice given by President Smith over his own signature on July 9 which states:

It will be well for the Saints and delegates to study further the law and weigh matters presented for their consideration, reserving final judgment until the conference meets to hear the cause.

Will such procedure as has obtained in Northern California tend to solve our differences and bring peace and unity to the church? We do not question the right of the Northern California District to determine the time and place of conferences, or to pass resolutions, or to elect delegates, providing it is carried on under the law of common consent reaffirmed at our last General Conference and clearly outlined in the standard books of the church. What we do object to is the manner in which this was done.

The question that persists is, Were the deliberations of the Northern California conference calculated to afford every member of the conference an opportunity to express his sentiments? Did it give opportunity for all sides of the questions to be heard? Was the selection of delegates with a view to secure proportionate representation? Herein lies the crux of the whole question.

It is true that certain individuals may gain their ends by abolishing spring conferences in order to put through partisan legislation without discussion, and when the people of the district may not be apprised of what is being done, but it will never solve our problems. It will aggravate our difficulty and may stimulate open revolt on the part of the membership who have thus been denied expression and participation.

To indorse a document containing provisions of such far-reaching consequences as: "The government of the church is by divine authority through priesthood . . . among the people";—"supreme directional control resting in the Presidency";—"effective administration . . . maintained only by effective discipline," and this without full, free, and untrammelled discussion, or the people of the district generally knowing that this action was to be taken, is a dangerous innovation and should be protested.

Why Take Hasty Action?

To do away with spring conference and then elect delegates nine months before the General Conference, and obligate them to vote for a given document which had not been generally discussed, and this regardless of developments or conviction, thus precluding reason as well as revelation in the interim, is rather out of keeping with Latter Day Saint procedure. Justice and equity and fair play would suggest, inasmuch as the question had not been discussed and several months might easily be given to an examination of this matter, that the conference should have deferred action and given notice to all of the Saints that the question would come up at the spring conference. This would have been fair to everybody. We may rightly ask:

Were those who rushed this legislation through afraid of investigation? Why did the Northern California conference do away with the spring conference at this time? Some reasons may be given other than the real one, but, in the light of what occurred, there can be only one answer given. It was desirable to take this vote while the President was on the ground.

If we are going to resort to such methods, then the group which can play politics the best wins, regardless of the proposition. I am sure that God will not place his approval on work of this kind. I am inclined to believe that there will be a reckoning among the people of God.

God Will Vindicate His Truth

I sincerely hope that those who stand for the organic law of the church and who believe in common consent as summarized in the "Open letter" will not so far forget themselves as to resort to such unusual and questionable methods to put over our program. For, if we do, then indeed we deserve to lose. If we cannot win by making appeal to reason and right, then a thousand times better to fail. If we cannot win by allowing the widest and most far-reaching and untrammelled discussion, then God grant our defeat. If we cannot have that faith in the merits of our cause to leave decision to the common wisdom of the ex officio and delegate vote of the General Conference without adopting coercive resolutions, then may God intervene and save us from ourselves.

This is God's work. He watches over his own. If we can only trust him and live worthy of his spirit day by day, we have nothing to fear. He cannot fail. Let us possess our souls in patience. Let us be faithful and steadfast and move forward with confidence, for God will vindicate his truth.

Help Save the World by Radio

The importance of radio broadcasting by the church is so great that every member should know something of its history and its possibilities. It is by no means a new thing to the church, neither is it a fad, to be frowned upon by those who want the gospel to go to every creature. President F. M. Smith and A. B. Church considered the matter of establishing a radio broadcasting station as early as in 1919, but it was not till the winter of 1920-21 that a low power broadcasting set was operated by Brethren Church, A. R. Moler, and Paul E. Anway in Independence, Missouri. Afterward the station was moved to Kansas City, and was one of the first in operation in the country.

These brethren offered the use of this and subsequent stations built by them to the church, and from their studio, W P E, religious programs were broadcast until the winter of 1922-23, when the equipment was taken to a building in Independence and operated there for a time. W P E was probably the first radio studio in Missouri, if not in the entire Mississippi Valley.

A 250-watt broadcasting station was authorized by church officials and was built by Brethren Church and Moler in the summer of 1923, being licensed as "K F I X." In the brick bungalow west of the Stone Church the first broadcasting studio owned by the church was at this time built. These brethren also installed a 100-watt broadcasting set about this time at Graceland College, which was licensed as "K F F V."

Wonderful Growth of the Radio Industry

No less an authority than Roger W. Babson has recently stated his conviction that there will be a constant advance in the radio industry. His analysis, given from a commercial viewpoint, notes that while many well established industries are necessarily restricted, radio is universal and appeals to all classes. Its future is considered very bright, as its potential growth seems assured. It is now established in many countries, including Europe, South America, Mexico, Ceylon, India, and Egypt.

While in 1921 the radio industry was not listed as a separate industry, to-day it is among the first thirty-five industries of the country. Already it ranks with the shipbuilding, leather, and chemical industries, and is considerably ahead of the steam railroad car industry. It has now grown to more than twice the magnitude of such industries as sporting goods and photographic supplies. Something of its future possibilities may be seen in the fact that while more than three million homes now have radio receiving sets, there are still twenty-one million homes without them. As more than half of the homes in this country now have autos and phonographs, it is reasonable to assume that a like number at least will soon use the radio.

The remarkable inventions recently made and those anticipated add to the probabilities that the growth of the radio industry will be almost as phenomenal in the future as it has been in the recent past. For instance, a radio telephone call system of moderate cost has recently been developed, and the future may see some such a system in general use. The United States Government is now using radio beacons in place of lightships and light-houses, as there is less interference from fogs. A new microphone has been invented that enables one to hear a fly walking, or a flying moth flapping its wings. Also experts are now working to produce radio television, which will enable one to see objects at great distances regardless of intervening objects. No one knows what wonderful achievements in radio may soon be realized.

Preaching by Radio; A 1,000-Watt Station

Many thousands of people have already been reached by radio preaching at the stations operated by the church, and some who had never known of the Reorganized Church have by this means received the restored gospel. Many letters of appreciation have been received from those who have heard the gospel by radio. The list of actual subscribers for our Radio Programs has already reached the extent of about two thousand. All this has been accomplished with a station having a normal night range of 400 miles, or an area of about 60,000 square miles. Probably ten thousand people have "listened in" at a single time on various occasions, though the possibilities are many times more than that number.

The urgent need and the economic advantages of a more powerful radio station have become so apparent that Brethren Church and Moler were asked to furnish an estimate of the installation and operating costs of a new station that would meet our requirements. The radio budget for the coming fiscal year was therefore made to include a new 1,000-watt station. The Appropriations Committee authorized by General Conference recommended that such a station be provided for by special contributions, desiring in this way to relieve the general church treasury of obligation beyond the cost of operating the station when built. This matter was therefore placed in the hands of the radio committee, with power to work out the details.

Your Opportunity to Help

It has been decided to give opportunity to every one who desires to help in this very important work. To this end the period from September 7 to September 14 has been appointed in which to receive contributions from every member of the church and from their friends. In order that the new station may be completed in time to use for early winter broadcasting, it is desired that each person make his contribution in cash at that time. This is an unusual opportunity to help spread the gospel to an extent never before possible with the facilities hitherto possessed by the church.

The proposed new 1,000-watt station is to be erected in Independence, the center of the United States. Its normal range will be about four million square miles, or more than sixty times greater than the present station, K F I X. We should therefore reach at least sixty times as many people, and may conservatively expect that some of our programs may be heard by no less than half a million people.

With the growth of the radio industry it is possible that our message may be heard eventually by several million people in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and even South America and various parts of Europe. This could be done by means of re-broadcasting stations. In fact, our message may eventually be broadcast in various other languages, thus reaching millions of people that otherwise might never know of the church and its doctrines. The possibilities of radio for this work are so great and of such economic value that it is hard to realize them. There are other important reasons why the proposed station should be built at once, therefore it is hoped that the work will be generously and widely supported by the contributions asked for.

Journal of History

The Journal of History in the past has supplied a great need of the church in the preservation of documents, of biography, and of events. It also reaches a number of nonmembers in an advantageous way. But it is not supported by our own church people as it should be.

The July, 1924, number just off the press includes the account of a military campaign which passed through Independence, Missouri, in October, 1864. Another article takes up the conditions in Missouri in 1830, how the State was then divided into counties, and what were the counties adjacent to Jackson. In other words, what is included in the term, "The regions round about." Another query concerning Nauvoo University is answered in pointing it out as one of the first municipal universities in America and a brief statement of its position in education in Illinois at that time.

Early Lamoni, how it was organized, how it got its name, is discussed by several visitors, while later history and the reorganization of the stake in 1916

Protest Against "Supreme Directional Control"

For many months the Presiding Bishop called the President's attention to the fact that the expenditures of the church were greatly exceeding the income, and on January 5 and February 4 of this year, sensing the acute financial condition of the church and the need of some official action, he sent communications to the First Presidency requesting that the Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric be convened to deal with the situation. Time passed by and finally the President issued a call for the assembling of the Presidency, Twelve, and Order of Bishops. (Attention is called to the fact that this is not the council asked by the Bishop, but one for which there is no provision in the law.)

This council convened for business on April 16, at which time President Smith proceeded to outline what he considered were the principal things making for the present financial condition. Although the council had been called to devise some way to meet the financial situation, President Smith, at this juncture, proceeded to discuss the official differences between the Presidency and Bishopric and stated that this body of the priesthood, would be called upon to decide as between himself and the Bishop, and so far as he was concerned he was willing for this council to make decision and he would abide thereby. It provoked heated discussion and from the very beginning Bishop McGuire and his associates were forced to defend against attack the prerogatives and responsibilities of the Presiding Bishopric as set forth in the revelations and enactments of the church and which have been in operation in the Reorganization from its inception to date.

The Bishop upon the request of the council sup-appears in the Lamoni Stake History by Duncan Campbell.

John J. Cornish continues his autobiography up to the time he left Canada in 1911, and William Henry Deam writes concerning his father, Henry Harrison Deam, who received the revelation for the reorganization of the church, and was a prominent member of the early church, a member of the Quorum of Twelve, and probably the senior member of the priesthood at the time of the reorganization. In addition to this there are several short items of general interest.

plied detailed figures covering the various phases of the financial situation and offered a program for the consideration of the council looking to a financial policy that would meet the emergency and permit a balancing of receipts and expenditures for the year ahead.

During the discussion of the Auditorium situation the question of official prerogatives, which had been projected at the first, again came to the front, and the Presidency presented the following document on church government.

This church, as defined by the late Joseph Smith, is a theocratic democracy—not man-made, but of divine appointment and origin. (Matthew 16: 18; Doctrine and Covenants 1: 5; 17: 7; Book of Mormon, 1 Nephi 3: 221; Book of Nephi 10: 1.)

Its government is by priesthood which is the divine authority (Doctrine and Covenants 1: 2, 5; 68: 4; 104; Acts 20: 28). The government in its objective is beneficent and its purpose is betterment of human conditions. The divine authority becomes operative through the consent of the governed—the common consent indicated in the law (Doctrine and Covenants 25: 1; 27: 4). It is divine government among the people, for the people and for the glory of God and the achievement of his purposes towards ideal conditions.

God directs the church through clearly indicated channels (Doctrine and Covenants 43: 1, 2; 27: 2;) and his voice is the directing power of the church; but to this the assent of the people must be secured.

In organic expression and functioning there must be recognized grades of official prerogative and responsibility (Doctrine and Covenants 104; 122: 9), with supreme directional control resting in the Presidency as the chief and first quorum of the church (Doctrine and Covenants 122: 2, 9; 104: 42). This control it is presumed is beneficent. Protection against prostitution of this power is amply provided in the law.

To carry into effect the purposes of the church effective administration is imperative, and organic solidarity is maintained only by effective discipline which is in consonance with the beneficent purposes of the church, but yet strongly enough administered to prevent the purposes of the organization being frustrated by individual caprice and rebellion. Authority to be effective must be respected.

This view of the organization of the church does not admit of independence of departments, and holds General Conference as the instrument of the expression of the will of the people.

Two amendments to the above were made by the council, viz:

The first sentence in the second paragraph was changed to read, "The government of the church is by divine authority through priesthood."

The last paragraph was changed to read, "This view of the organization of the church affirms the interdependence of departments and coordination of action and holds General Conference as the instrument of the expression of the will of the people."

This document, dealing with the organic law of the church and proposing fundamental changes therein, necessarily provoked intense discussion. A number of the brethren fairly challenged the right of the council to deal with the matter and called attention to the fact that this council at best could only be advisory to the Presidency and had no legislative powers whatever. This was conceded by the chair, but the contention was made that any action of this council should be considered binding on the members of the council.

Bishop's Questions

Following the adoption by the council of the foregoing document, the Bishop presented the following questions in an effort to determine the interpretation and application of "supreme directional control" by the Presidency:

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, April 21, 1924.

President F. M. Smith

Office

Dear Brother: With a view to preparing my answer to the question which you propounded to me on April 19, which question you refused to submit in writing following my two requests for same, but which, as we recall it, is in effect as follows:

"Brother McGuire, I am going to say something to you and I will carefully weigh my words. Before this council closes I want you to tell this body whether you are going to abide by the decisions of this group of men. If you are not I want to know it so that I may take some official action. I do not ask you to answer now but I do want an answer before we close these meetings."

which we wish to be in a position to fully and frankly answer before the conclusion of this council; and inasmuch as you have said that it was not your purpose to interest yourself in the detail of departments, we would be pleased to have a statement from you as to what your future attitude shall be with respect to the following:

1. Appointment of Bishops' Courts.
2. Soliciting information from, or giving orders to, subordinates without the knowledge of the department head.
3. What is going to be your attitude in acting as censor on articles submitted to you by the Presiding Bishop for publication in church papers? Will you continue to ignore these articles without even the official courtesy of an acknowledgment or statement as to why such should not be published?
4. Is it your interpretation that the Presiding Bishop must make expenditure and investments when you so express your desires even though in the opinion of the Presiding Bishopric such expenditures and investments should not be made?
5. Does it mean that we cannot issue instructions to our agents without first submitting the same to the Presidency for approval?
6. Does it mean that the general correspondence of the Presiding Bishop's office must be submitted to the Presidency for approval?
7. Does it mean that the Bishopric has not the discretionary powers to receive and disburse church funds and dispose of church property, as given in General Conference Resolution No. 238?
8. Will your directional control be interpreted to grant to the Presidency the right to contract debts without the consultation and approval of the Presiding Bishopric?
9. Will bishops or Bishop's agents be appointed and installed without the knowledge and approval of the Presiding Bishopric?
10. In the light of your statement, "I cannot conceive that General Conference has a right to direct any officer of this church to do anything," will your position be that you have the right to direct a department head to do something in contravention to General Conference orders?

11. Will you continue your policy of calling, ordaining, and installing bishops without the knowledge of the Presiding Bishop?

President's Answers

President Smith replied as follows:

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, April 22, 1924.

Bishop Benjamin R. McGuire
Office

Dear Brother: The request was for a statement of what your attitude is or would be towards the expressed opinion of the council, such statement to be given while the council is in session, so that the Presidency shall have opportunity to seek whatever further counsel might be necessary.

If at any time the Presidency has stated that they are not interested in details of departments, we have done so inadvertently. We are; but that is not to say we desire to arrange details. That is the task of the department head and is the reason for his appointment. It is presumed in this statement that the department head is in harmony with and functioning according to the general or even specific policy of the Presidency as affecting that department. Deviations therefrom by the department head might make it necessary to examine or even control details.

And in answering the presumably hypothetical questions propounded in your letter, we base our answers on the assumption that there is harmony of policy between executive and subordinate and harmony of endeavor in carrying on the work of the church.

Question 1: "Appointment of Bishop's Courts." In regularly organized districts or stakes where a bishop is a part of the organization, the "appointment" of the court is automatic. Where there arises necessity for special bishop's courts, the Presidency appoints.

Question 2: "Information from subordinates." It is the duty of a department head to keep his superior officer fully informed of the work of his department. Information not so given should by the superior officer be sought through the department head. This applies also to "orders."

Question 3: "Articles for publication." The editorial rules and customs apply to articles from the Presiding Bishop, that apply to other officers or members of the church. The editors determine the articles admitted, and they may reject without assigning reasons. This has been the prevailing custom as long as I can remember. I have not ignored articles submitted by the Presiding Bishop, nor denied him the customary courtesy.

Question 4: "Compulsory expenditures and investments." I have not so expressed myself.

Question 5: "Instructions to agents." "Instructions" to agents in accordance with the understood policy or policies need not usually be submitted to the Presidency before issuing; but if the Presidency should request it there should be cheerful compliance on the part of the Bishop.

Question 6: "Approval of general correspondence." The answer to Question 5 will apply here.

Question 7: "Discretionary powers of Bishopric." General Conference resolutions can apply only in harmony with what we term our constitutional law. There are certainly limits upon "discretionary powers" of the Bishop in handling the funds and property of the church.

Question 8: "Right to contract debts by Presidency." Should occasion demand, yes. Under ordinary conditions the usual interaction should run.

Question 9: "Appointment of bishops and Bishop's agents."

Bishops may be selected, ordained, and even installed without the "knowledge and approval" of the Presiding Bishopric. "Bishop's agents," when agents of the Presiding Bishopric, are selected by the Presiding Bishopric; but inasmuch as these agents are financial agents for the church, they should not be appointed or selected by the Presiding Bishopric without approval of the First Presidency.

Question 10: "Right to direct in contravention to General Conference." I have no recollection of saying what you attribute to me here. I may have said, for I hold, that General Conference, being legislative, should not presume to issue orders to any man or officer. Such "orders" should issue only through the administrative line. As to the last part of the question, I cannot but say: It ought to be presumed that the Presidency will do the right thing.

Question 11: "Appointment of Bishops." Answer to this is contained in answer to Question 9.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

Status of the Council

This council at best was nothing more than a number of the ministry of the church being called to advise the Presidency. It had no official standing. There is no provision in the organic law for such a council.

This council possessed no legislative powers whatever. It follows that any conclusions reached which, in any sense, affect or change the accepted law or its interpretation, together with any policies or programs, must, in the nature of things and to be in harmony with the constitution of the church, be held in abeyance until submitted to the General Conference for consideration and indorsement.

The document presented by President Smith arrogating to the Presidency supreme directional control would encroach upon and radically change the essential nature of the government of the church. Any attempt to apply this, or to hold any member of the council amenable thereto, would be an invasion of official rights and of the law.

President Smith insisted that the members of the council as they went out should agree to abide by the decision of the council. It was even urged that any member of the council not willing to abide by the actions of the council should be man enough to resign. This statement in effect was repeatedly thrown out in the council speeches, by those who were favorable to the theory of "supreme directional control."

In view of the foregoing and the further fact that members who opposed this innovation were put in a wrong light by the reports going out from the council, we feel that we are justified in stating to the church at large our reasons for not agreeing with the conclusions of those who have already gone on record as indorsing the new doctrine of government through priesthood and centering supreme control or sovereign power in the hands of one quorum.

Why the "Open Letter"

Considerable stress has been placed on the fact that some members of the council, in connection with others, signed and published an "Open letter" dealing with phases of this question.

The "Open letter" was not published until after President Smith had given publicity to the document on church government and publicly stated that there were now two groups in the church—that anyone who had not allied himself with one camp or the other undoubtedly would be called upon to do so, and he urged the priesthood of Independence to discuss the matter thoroughly. We, therefore, believe it was our right as well as duty to publish the "Open letter," so that the church at large may know our attitude upon the question of church government.

At a subsequent meeting President Smith made the following statement:

I cannot yield to the voice of the opposition, so I am in the fight, and it will undoubtedly be a finish fight. Either the opposition which has asserted itself is going to become supreme and the rest of us eliminated, or vice versa. . . .

We decry any effort to make the present differences of opinion the basis for a finish fight unto the elimination of either those standing for the old order of things in our church government or of those who believe that changes should now be made providing for greater centralization of power in the Presidency. The Lord knew that differences of opinion in regard to his law would arise from time to time and gave us the following instruction:

Continue ye in the ministry unto which you have been called; and if ye cannot fully agree on all the points of the law, be patient and be not contentious; so far as you can agree work together without heat, confusion, or malice. . . . Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called.—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 16, 17.

Bishop Stands on Law and Practice of Church

In response to the demand made upon him, Bishop McGuire, before the council adjourned, presented the following letter which speaks for itself:

President F. M. Smith
Office

April 25, 1924.

Dear Brother: Herewith reply to your request that I declare myself as to the position set forth by you claiming for the Presidency supreme directional control of the church in all departments.

During my eight years in the office of Presiding Bishop my attitude has been to seek the counsel and advice of the Presidency and other quorums and councils of the church as the necessity of the case and opportunity for counsel would permit. I intend to pursue this course in the future, as I believe it to be in harmony with the letter and spirit of the law upon which the conduct of the affairs of this office should be based.

In cases of controversy, where to my mind the responsibility of my office demands it, I claim the right to exercise the powers vested in me by the organic law of the church as trustee-in-trust for the church, and to refuse to pursue a course which I cannot justify as a servant of the body which has intrusted me with the responsibility of guarding and promoting the temporal interests of the church.

It is my firm conviction that when General Conference sustained the officers and quorums of the church it did so with the understanding and confidence that, as representatives and servants of the body, they would do all within their power to honor and sustain the laws of the church.

Deep conviction to principle, therefore, will not permit me to comply with your demand which, for the first time in the history of the church, seeks to place "supreme directional control" of the temporal affairs in the hands of the Presidency.

To my mind, compliance with this demand would be tantamount to a betrayal of the confidence and trust reposed in me by the people of the church and a violation of the law.

From its inception the Reorganized Church has consistently stood for the coordinate functioning "of the spiritual and temporal divisions of the work."

If a change is to be made, why not wait till the next General Conference and then place the matter squarely before the people for decision?

I feel it my duty to God and to the church to discharge the functions of my office in accordance with the law and usages that have obtained in the Reorganization for over half a century.

BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE.

Who Is Responsible?

The responsibility for the present disquietude of the church over this question must rest with President Smith. The advisory council was called to deal with the financial situation, yet President Smith proceeded to inject into the deliberations of the council a discussion of organic law and proposed resolutions of far-reaching consequences. As a result the council was divided and the entire church is now being drawn into the controversy.

The attempt of the President to make the action of the council binding upon its members was irregular and there was nothing left to the members who could not accord thereto but to protest as has been done. We feel we would have been derelict in our duty and to the trust of the people who sustained us in our calling had we permitted the changes to go into effect and get entrenched in the church between general conferences.

That you may contrast the two theories of church government, the "Open letter" which was signed by a large group of general church officers, is printed again:

An Open Letter

To the President, Ministry, and Membership of the Church; Greeting: The controversy regarding church government, which began several years ago among the leading quorums, has now spread throughout the membership and a crisis has been reached which demands serious consideration. There are fundamental issues which must be decided before peace can come to the church.

We believe that the organic law, supplemented by the experience of more than half a century on the part of the Reorganization, has established certain definite and abiding principles which are essential to progress. We issue this open letter so that a frank consideration of them may be had throughout the church.

We believe that the coming General Conference, in full possession of the facts, should speak and settle this controversy in a definite, constructive manner. Only in such conference settlement can our people be reunited, confidence be reestablished, and the Cause of the Master advanced.

We affirm our belief in the following principles and pledge our adherence thereto:

1. General Conference, the enactments of which combine both the inspiration of God and the will of his people, is the highest authority in the church.

2. To obtain the common judgment, and to insure the cooperation and support of the people, all general church programs and policies must be submitted to the General Conference for consideration and decision before being initiated.

3. The law recognizes two general divisions in the administrative work of the church—spiritual and temporal—and specifies "that the temporalities of the church were to be under the charge and care of the Bishopric." In temporal affairs the bishop acts as trustee-in-trust for the church and is directly responsible to the General Conference.

4. All quorums, departments, and institutions within the church shall operate on budgets appropriated by General Conference. The bishop shall limit expenditures to such budgets and General Conference appropriations.

5. We accept the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants which contain the constitutional law of the church, and recognize the rights and powers of the priesthood as therein defined. We declare for government in the church by lawful and orderly processes and hold that General Conference enactments are binding without exception upon members, officials, and quorums.

The Issues

The issues are drawn as between a Theo-democracy and a Theo-autocracy.

The "Open letter" champions theo-democracy and says: "General Conference, the enactments of which combine both the inspiration of God and the will of his people, is the highest authority in the church."

The President's theory of government, while he terms it a theocratic-democracy, under analysis proves to be a theocratic-autocracy. No provision is made for the membership outside of the priesthood participating in governmental affairs except to assent to what is proposed by or through a hierarchy. Is not this the extent of the privileges of the membership of the Utah Church in conferences? Has not the Reorganization denounced this form of church government from the first?

President Smith demands "supreme directional control." This is an innovation out of harmony with the revelations and practices of the church. What becomes of the coordinate functioning of the spiritual and temporal divisions of the work? Shall one man or quorum now have supreme direction in both spiritual and financial matters?

The two documents speak plainly. One is a new and we believe dangerous doctrine. The other is a simple statement of the principles under which the

Facts About the Bible.—No. 4

It has already been noted in a previous article that at different times many people rejected the word of God which when reduced to writing became known as the Scriptures. We have also noticed that differences of opinion arose as to what books were to be received as scripture. From a very early period there arose defenders of the sacred literature, of which instances are traced to the times of Enoch, Moses, and later prophets. In the New Testament era similar instances occurred, the defense of Paul before King Agrippa being a notable example of this kind. In the early church there soon arose much of this class of literature, which was known as Christian apologetics.

Apologetics in time represented a valuable contribution to Christian literature, and included both philosophic and theological questions concerned with Christianity. There were four more or less distinct periods, each of which was marked by a particular form of controversy growing out of the conditions produced by the ages respectively represented. At first discussions were intended to support Christianity in general and the identity of the church in particular, and included the chief doctrines held. Members of the church were therefore assisted to an understanding of their faith in a great measure. Charges against the Christians were answered as to moral conduct also, and an analytical comparison of certain Jewish and Christian doctrines was made from time to time.

When the church had become more firmly established, theological conflicts arose that caused much internal disturbance, and Mohammedan opposition church has grown for sixty years. We ask only that in the discussion each document be considered upon its merit and be carefully compared with the organic law of the church as found in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants.

We believe that God will be mindful of our needs in this present crisis, as he has in times past, and we have faith in the integrity and judgment of our people. Let the church decide.

also brought forth notable churchmen as defenders of the faith. In this period the foundations of dogmatism grew quite noticeably. This was followed by many heresies and a strengthening of dogmatic forces in the succeeding period. Superstitions of the most degenerate and disgusting nature multiplied rapidly, and bitter persecutions of so-called heretics abounded everywhere. These conditions hastened the great Reformation led by Luther, Zwingli, and others of that age.

An Age of Criticism

As early as the second century Tatian, a pupil of Justin Martyr, had produced his Diatessaron, which was an attempt to harmonize the gospels. In succeeding ages many other similar works were produced. While these studies showed the remarkable harmony existing between the New Testament writings, there were also revealed certain textual difficulties or apparent discrepancies. The divisions following the Reformation period centered on certain radical differences in regard to the doctrine of infallibility, the reality of biblical miracles, and many theological questions. This developed what is termed an age of Rationalism.

A large number of rationalistic works followed the sixteenth century. In modern times they have been largely concerned with questions involving Bible criticism, and to a great extent grew out of developments of apologetic literature. Two general divisions of the subject engaged attention, Lower or Textual Criticism, and the Higher Criticism. The Masoretic text was the outgrowth of textual comparison and criticism, but contains thousands of words not found in the Septuagint. Documentary sources have an important bearing upon textual criticism, which therefore involves comparison of many manuscripts. Not only do the readings differ, but omissions, interpolations, and figurative terms, all add to the difficulty in many instances.

Among the figurative texts that involve uncertainty are those containing hyperbole (see 1 Corinthians 1:25; James 3:6; 1 John 5:10), figures of speech, metaphor, analogy, parable, and allegory. There are also certain ambiguous terms that a comparative reading helps to clarify.

The Higher Criticism largely concerns the evidence upon which may be determined the characteristics, genuineness, integrity, age, authorship, and source of the biblical writings. It is assumed that they are impressed with the atmosphere and times in which they were composed, and that the writers used distinguishable forms of speech and style. Much light has resulted from examinations of biblical literature by modern critics, though many of their conclusions have been proved faulty. The study is based primarily on documentary materials, of which some of the most valuable were written by early Christian writers in Greek, Latin, and Syriac, and are known as the patristic writings.

Critical scholars have painstakingly compared the more important versions and manuscripts with the patristic writings. It is concluded by some that in the third, second, and probably first century Greek manuscripts unlike any known to-day were used by certain Christian writers of those times. The variations in the most ancient manuscripts indicate that memory, scriptural knowledge, and accuracy were not uniformly possessed by all writers. Much of the results of critical study may be found in the various critical editions of the New Testament that have been produced by leading translators and writers of this class of literature from the sixteenth to the twentieth centuries. (See Helps to Bible Study, pp. 72-82, for a more complete discussion of these subjects.)

Radio a Missionary Aid

BY HUBERT CASE

When one thinks of the thousands of people "listening in" to sermons, talks, and programs which proclaim the angel's message, one is filled anew with zeal and enthusiasm.

At Decatur, Nebraska, the Bond Brothers (bankers), of Walthill, listened to a talk being made at Omaha by President F. M. Smith on stewardship. One of these men was so pleased with what he heard that he went to Council Bluffs to hear President Smith again at Convention Hall. Mr. Bond said it was the greatest thing he had ever heard.

We have the greatest message on earth. Why should we not do all we can to let the world hear it?

While in the Osage nation last winter, I learned of the rich Indians who have the best radio outfits money can buy, who are also getting our programs.

In El Reno a year ago, a prominent lawyer of that city was pointed out to me, who had been hearing the sermons from K F I X and had become so much interested that he was talking the doctrine to others. In this way openings are being made for our missionaries. The success of our effort in El Reno at that time will doubtless be remembered.

Many are hearing our message in this way who might never have the opportunity in any other manner. Many prominent men of the earth will hear it and love its sound, and as we work out the ideals of the church, and the news of Zion goes to the end of the earth, we shall be made to appreciate the significance of the statement so familiar to us as a people, "The hastening time is upon us." Let us all boost for the new station.

Constitutional Government in the United States Constitutional History

BY R. S. SALYARDS

It is of prime importance that every citizen of the United States should have a knowledge of constitutional history and of the constitutional principles upon which free government is founded. Latter Day Saints have especial reason to appreciate the United States and its system of government. To appreciate, they must understand, hence they should study and comprehend its fundamental principles and leading outlines. Citizenship, with right of franchise conferred upon both men and women, means responsibility for good government. "Knowledge is power!" Our church people, as all other people, are limited or capable according to the degree that they are qualified to comprehend and to act intelligently. Salvation, spiritual or temporal, means growth, increasing comprehension, attainment, power to see and to act upon the basis of knowing the truth. It means, in other words, that degree of developed intelligence that qualifies men and women to discern clearly the principles involved in any situation or question, and that integrity to act from such clear apprehension that the truth shall be maintained in all its bearings upon our human life. There can be no growth, no progress, no liberty, no salvation, in time or in eternity, for any people who do not develop the power to see and to know and to act. He who leads men and women to see and to act upon the basis of clear thinking and right doing, is a genuine benefactor and emancipator.

The American System of Government

The great democracy is "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people," as was stated by Abraham Lincoln. It was manifestly ordained of God and established under his overruling providence. Walker, in his American Law, states that, considering the opposition of European monarchical governments, it is miraculous that the American patriots ever succeeded in establishing it. Space does not permit extended presentation of evidence in support of divine intervention in its behalf. The state papers of Washington, Franklin, Adams, Jefferson, Monroe, Lincoln, and of others, together with the glorious history of the Great Republic, bear abundant testimony to this claim.

Conditions in Europe and Asia, under the so-called "divine right of kings," oppression of the masses, the universal desire for liberty, the Reformation, and the discovery of America and her history, support the idea that God has overruled the destiny of America and given to her the mission of "Liberty enlightening the world." Latter Day Saints, however, have added reasons to confirm this claim. They are, briefly stated, these:

The church was "regularly organized and established agreeably to the laws of our country." (Doctrine and Covenants 17: 1.) Only in a government providing religious toleration, the right to worship God according to the dictates of conscience, could the church exist and do its work. The church was instructed thus:

Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet.—Doctrine and Covenants 58: 5.

The word enemies here used we understand to refer to those who opposed truth in any phase of life.

And now, verily I say unto you, concerning the laws of the land, It is my will that my people should observe to do all things which I command them, and that law of the land, which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me; therefore, I, the Lord, justifieth you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these, cometh of evil. I, the Lord God, maketh you free; therefore, ye are free indeed: and the law also maketh you free; nevertheless when the wicked rule the people mourn; wherefore honest men and wise men should be sought for diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold; otherwise whatsoever is less than these, cometh of evil.—Doctrine and Covenants 95: 2.

Certainly this commandment requires preparation in knowledge of political principles and the exercise of careful, unbiased discrimination, if our people are to discharge in a creditable manner their duties to God and to their country.

And again I say unto you, Those who have been scattered by their enemies, it is my will that they should continue to importune for redress, and redemption, by the hands of those who are placed as rulers, and are in authority over you, according to the laws and constitutions of the people which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles, that every man may act in doctrine, and principle pertaining to futurity, according to the moral agency which I have given unto them, that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment. Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood.—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 10.

These statements should be critically analyzed. It is clear that God inspired men to formulate the Constitution, and that as a system of government it contains eternal truth designed to affect the conditions of men in time and in "futurity."

The Supreme Court of the United States has stated that the Declaration of Independence is the foundation of the Constitution. There is striking resemblance between the early Declaration, written by Jefferson, the political seer, and the statement given through Joseph Smith, the prophet-seer. Both had their origin in the bosom of God, whose truth is the harmony of the world.

Constitutional History in Brief

Our constitutional history is linked up with the struggle of all peoples for constitutional liberty, especially with that of the people of Great Britain, whose system of law we inherit. To understand our system it is necessary to know constitutional history. To save space and secure accuracy we shall quote freely.

The Papacy.—The Christian bishops of Rome began early to claim supremacy over all other bishops. They based their supreme authority upon the primacy of Saint Peter, whom they alleged was the first bishop of Rome and who "was appointed by Christ to feed the sheep of Christendom." The claims of the Roman bishops were enhanced from the first by the name and prestige of imperial Rome among the nations. This advantage was not diminished when misfortune overtook the imperial city by the onslaughts of the barbarians. The removal by Constantine the Great of the seat of empire from Rome to Constantinople, instead of diminishing the power and dignity of the Roman bishops, tended powerfully to promote their claims and authority. In the phrase of Dante, it "gave the Shepherd room." It left the Pontiff the foremost personage in Rome.

The bishops of Rome assumed almost imperial powers. The missionary labors of the church of Rome made her the mother of many churches among the various peoples. Thus was Rome exalted in the eyes of the churches of the West. Strong bonds of friendship bound the Carolingian kings and the Roman pontiffs; they became very serviceable to each other.

The popes made the descendants of Charles Martel kings and emperors; the grateful Frankish princes defended the popes against all their enemies, imperial and barbarian, and dowering them with cities and provinces, laid the basis of their temporal sovereignty.

Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction: Appeals to Rome. Charlemagne had recognized the principle, held from early times by the church, that ecclesiastics should be amenable only to the ecclesiastical tribunals, by freeing the whole body of the clergy from the jurisdiction of the temporal courts, in criminal as well as in civil cases. Gradually the bishops acquired the right to try all cases relating to marriage, trusts, perjury, simony, or concerning widows, orphans, or crusaders, on the ground that such cases had to do with religion. Even the right to try all criminal cases was claimed on the ground that all crime is sin, and hence can be properly dealt with only by the church. Persons convicted by the ecclesiastical tribunals were subjected to penance, imprisonment in the monasteries, or handed over to the civil authorities for punishment.

Thus by the end of the twelfth century the church had absorbed, not only the whole criminal administration of the clergy, but in part that of the laity also. Now the particular feature of this enormous extension of the jurisdiction of the church tribunals which at present it especially concerns us to notice, is the establishment of the principle that all cases might be appealed or cited from the courts of the bishops and archbishops of the different European countries to the Papal See, which thus became the court of last resort in all cases affecting ecclesiastics or concerning religion. The pope thus came to be regarded as the fountain of justice, and, in theory at least, the supreme judge of Christendom, while emperors and kings and all civil magistrates bore the sword simply as his ministers to carry into effect his sentence and decrees.—Myers, pp. 418, 419.

To be brief, the struggles between the popes and the emperors—the first claiming the right to invest all temporal authorities, and the latter claiming right of investment in civil affairs—resulted in stripping from the popes all temporal sovereignty, the separation of church and state, the civil power supreme in the affairs of government, with the modern world practically democratic in its systems of government.

The Divine Right of Kings.—According to this theory, the nation is a great family with the king as its divinely appointed head. The duty of the king is to govern like a father; the duty of the people is to obey their king even as children obey their parents. If the king does wrong, is harsh, cruel, unjust, this is simply the misfortune of his people: under no circumstances is it right for them to rebel against his authority, any more than for children to rise against their father. The king is responsible to God alone, and to God the people, quietly submissive, must leave the avenging of all their wrongs.

We shall see how this theory of the divine right of kings worked out in practice,—how dear it cost both kings and people, and how the people by the strong logic of revolution demonstrated that they are not children but mature men, and have a divine and inalienable right to govern themselves.—Myers General History, pp. 590, 591.

Magna Charta, (1215) the Great Charter, is held sacred as the basis of English liberties. It was an instrument which the English barons and clergy forced from King John. In it the ancient rights and privileges of the people were definitely defined and guaranteed. The following were among the important articles which the king was compelled to grant: That no freemen should be deprived of life, liberty, or property, "save by legal judgment of his peers." No taxes, except some minor feudal aids specified, should be imposed upon the people, "save by the Common Council of the realm."

The article affecting taxation fell into abeyance during the reign of Henry III, John's successor. It was not until one hundred years after the granting of Magna Charta that the great principle that the people should be taxed only through their representatives in Parliament became fully established.

In consideration of the far-reaching consequences resulting from the grant of Magna Charta—"the securing of constitutional liberty as an inheritance for the English-speaking race in all parts of the world—it must always be considered the most important concession that a freedom-loving people ever wrung from a tyrannical sovereign.”

The House of Commons.—During the reign of Henry III (1216-1272) the second important step was taken in securing English constitutional freedom. Parliament had to this time consisted of a single House, made up of nobles and bishops. The royal misbehavior led to this great change in the English national assembly. Henry had violated his oath to rule in harmony with the Charter and had exceeded his father in tyranny. The aroused barons rose in revolt, and Henry and his son being defeated in the battle of Lewes, were made prisoners.

Simon de Montfort, a Frenchman prominent in the government under Henry, assumed control of affairs. He issued in the king's name writs of summons to the nobles and bishops to assemble in Parliament; and also sent writs to the sheriffs of the different shires, instructing them “to return two knights for the body of their county, with two citizens or burghers for every city and borough contained in it.” It was the first time that plain untitled citizens or burghers had ever been called to take their place with the lords and bishops in the great council of the nation, in affairs of the realm. (“At first the Commons could only take part in questions relating to taxation, but gradually they acquired the right to share in all matters that might come before Parliament.”) The Commons, at first a timorous body, quite overawed by the great lords, “were destined to grow into the controlling branch of the British Parliament.”

Doubtless the reader is familiar with the struggles for liberty of the French people. Louis XIII reigned (1610-1643) with Cardinal Richelieu as his minister of state. Richelieu's own words indicate “how he proposed to use his double authority as cardinal and prime minister to effect his purpose: ‘I shall trample all opposition under foot,’ said he, ‘and then cover all errors with my scarlet robe.’” Myers 580.

Louis XIV (1643-1713) succeeded to the French throne. He became his own prime minister, and for more than half a century thereafter ruled France as an absolute and irresponsible monarch. He regarded France as his private estate, and seemed to be fully convinced that he had a divine commission to govern the French people. It is said that he declared, L'Etat, c'est moi, “I am the state,” meaning that he alone was the rightful legislator, judge, and executive of the French nation. The States-General was not once convened during his long reign. . . . He was the first man at home as well as abroad. He had able men around him; but they served instead of ruling him.—Myers, 592.

kings. They held that hereditary princes were the Lord's anointed; that their authority can in no way be questioned or limited by people, priest, or Parliament. James I's own words were: “As it is atheism and blasphemy to dispute what God can do, so it is high contempt in a subject to dispute what a king can do, or to say that the king cannot do this or that.”

The Commons insisted upon their right to debate freely all questions concerning the common weal, without being liable to prosecution or imprisonment for words spoken in the House. James denied that these privileges were matters of right pertaining to the Commons, and repeatedly intimated to them that it was only through his own gracious permission and the favor of his ancestors that they were allowed to exercise these liberties at all, and that if their conduct was not more circumspect and reverential, he should take away their privileges entirely.—Ibid., p. 604.

James I was succeeded by Charles I, and the old contest between king and Parliament was renewed. He was tried finally and executed. Charles I dissolved the first two Parliaments of his reign, because they persisted in investigating public grievances. He endeavored to raise money without parliamentary consent. The Houses met and offered to grant subsidies provided he would sign a Petition of Right which they had formulated. Next after Magna Charta the Petition of Right is the most noted in the constitutional history of England. It reaffirmed the ancient rights and privileges of English people as stated in the Charter and by the good laws of Edward I and Edward III. Four abuses were provided against: 1, the raising of money by the king by loans, “benevolences,” taxes, etc., without the consent of Parliament; 2, arbitrary imprisonment; 3, quartering of soldiers in private houses—a vexatious thing; and 4, trial without jury.

Charles was obliged to grant the Petition, but was insincere and continued to resist Parliament until he lost his head.

James II (1685-1688) also held exalted notions of the divine right of kings to rule as they please “and at once set about carrying out these ideas in a most imprudent and reckless manner.” But he was obliged to flee to France. His last act was to disband the army and fling the Great Seal into the Thames, in order that no Parliament might be legally convened.

(1689-1702): The army and the people went over to the Prince of Orange whose fleet had touched the shores of England. The prince issued a call for convention to make provision for permanent settlement of the crown. The convention met and declared the throne to be vacant through James's misconduct and flight. They resolved to confer the royal dignity upon William and his wife Mary as joint sovereigns of the realm. But the convention did not give the crown without proper safeguards for the conduct of the government according to the ancient laws of the kingdom. "They drew up the celebrated Declaration of Rights, which plainly rehearsed all the old rights and liberties of Englishmen; denied the right of their king to lay taxes or maintain an army without the consent of Parliament; and asserted that freedom of debate was the inviolable privilege of both the Lords and the Commons." William and Mary were required to accept this declaration and to agree to rule in accordance with its provisions.

George III (1760-1820) was born and educated in England and regained some of the old power and influence of former kings. "But he was the last English sovereign who had any large personal influence in shaping governmental policies." Since his time the government has been carried on by a prime minister, dependent upon the will of the House of Commons. The forms of government are in the name of the king, but he has no power to veto legislation. "This marks an important step in the process by which sovereignty has been transferred from the crown to the people."

The American Revolution (1775-1783).—By a violation of one of the principles which the English people had so stoutly maintained against the Stuarts, the ruling powers in England now drove the American colonies to revolt. A majority in Parliament insisted upon taxing the colonists; the colonists maintained that taxation without representation is tyranny,—that they could be justly taxed only through their own legislative assemblies. The Government refusing to acknowledge this principle, the colonists took up arms in defense of those liberties which their fathers had won with so hard a struggle from English kings on English soil. The result of the war was the separation from the mother-land of thirteen colonies that had grown up along the Atlantic seaboard.—Myers, 631, 632.

On the monument of Governor Winthrop, first governor of Plymouth Colony, is this inscription: "Do not basely surrender that which the fathers labored so hard to obtain!"

This article will be followed by a brief statement of the Articles of Confederation, the Declaration of Independence, and an outline of the main features of the Constitution of the United States, including our system of government. This will be followed by a third article on "Constitutional government in the church."

Love, in its highest sense, can harbor nothing but happiness in life because it breeds good manners. If we love our neighbor, we can not do him harm. If he loves us, he will do nothing harmful to us. The thirteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians is the greatest chapter in the Bible that links us up with the very atmosphere of good manners. Read it. Ponder it. —Glad Tidings.

NEWS AND LETTERS

The Work in Wales

ABERCROMBOI, ABERDARE, WALES, July 20.—We are sorry to lose by death Brother Silas Evans, who was one time a very faithful member of our church. He was ordained an elder when the old Aberaman Branch was reorganized. We have not been gaining any new members for some considerable time, for Abercromboi Branch, as it is now called, has been more or less in a state of disorganization.

The South Wales District is also in a state of disorganization, and we all hope and sincerely trust that there will be a rapid change before long. The writer of this letter has been a member of the church for the last twenty years and has never known the work of the Master in this part of his vineyard to be at such a low ebb as it is now. I still have a strong desire to do something in return for the love Christ has for me. The only way I can love him is to work and try to assist others who may come to labor in this part of the vineyard.

I was very much pleased and thankful for the visit of Brother Baldwin, who did great work a little while ago when he was the means of bringing Llanelly Branch to life once more. He was the means of bringing such an able worker as Brother Price to light. We have had great pleasure from the visits he has paid us. I hope and trust the good Master will yet raise others to his service in this place, as we are sadly in need of laborers in the Welsh District.

I would like so much to see an intense campaign carried out, as this beloved Wales wants reawakening from her slumber. With infidelity on one hand and all kinds of gospels preached to-day, we are "up against something." Of late years the Pentecostals and the Spiritualists have been doing their utmost to conquer everybody, but I am glad that I have had the assurance they will fail.

With love from all Saints of Abercromboi Branch,

Your brothers in gospel bonds,

H. C. SNOOK, Secretary.

JOHN PUGHSLY, Branch President.

Anniversary Services—Beresford Road Branch, Manchester, England

Deuteronomy 26:11: "And thou shalt rejoice in every good thing which the Lord thy God hath given unto thee."

A year ago, July 15, 1923, there was great rejoicing among the Saints in Manchester, England, when, through the mercies and blessings of our heavenly Father, the sacrifice of the Saints (and many friends, too,) resulted in the erection of a "house unto the Lord." The opening services will long be remembered by those who were privileged to attend, and the messages of gratification and good cheer received from a variety of continents, countries, and nations gave further stimulus to the worthy efforts joyfully given up to that time.

To the Saints and friends scattered throughout the globe, who know the situation appertaining to our little corner of the vineyard, further joyful tidings can now be brought, and so that the news may be circulated I am writing to the HERALD, trusting that our happiness will be universal and that the glorious work being attempted will perhaps help others to labor on.

The first anniversary of the opening of the Beresford Road Church was celebrated on Saturday and Sunday, July 12 and 13. The noble work of weeks past, thoroughly and willingly performed, gave a secure foundation upon which a delightful superstructure was raised.

On the Saturday evening at half past seven, Madame Lucy Green and a corps of talented entertainers amused, delighted, and instructed a large audience. Under the able chairmanship of Elder John W. Green, the happy community proved that "expressional" work was surely a means of unification. To enumerate the items, to describe the talent displayed, or even to voice the sentiment permeating the hearts of those present would take longer to write than the period given for the Interval, and the joy in perusing would no doubt be equal, if my pen would write according to my feelings, to the happiness indulged in, as the merry assembly sampled the cooling lemonade and the still cooler ice cream.

Much credit is due to Brother Eric Gayter and a number of his friends who kindly gave of their best, presenting a worthy and pleasurable entertainment, which, after the several items and particularly at the close, was loudly applauded by the fortunate auditors.

The decorations—flowers and plants in abundance—were the result of the kindness of Sister Ada Green, who had provided a "Nature feast" for our eyes. Favorite English flowering plants and some, whose names and qualities my ignorance in botanical matters will not allow me to describe, evidently of other tribes, were arranged around the platform, the window ledges, and some even were suspended gracefully over the heads of the company. As the evening sun peered through the windows, the scene amidst the verdure was particularly picturesque. The garden must not be forgotten, as the ground appears to have been obstinate, but to the delight of all, through the workmanship of Brother John R. Dewsnup, the past few months have seen a remarkable change. Yes, there set out—as only a gardener can arrange—passers-by could see borders, bushes, trees, familiar homeland flowers—a veritable proof of hours, yes, days of patient labor. Much work, too, has been rendered on the vacant ground by a number of friends of the brethren, and I am sure from the hearts of all flows appreciation.

On Sunday morning the Saints gathered at the "house of God" to sing praises and to hear the word. The service in charge of Elders David Hughes and Edward Maloney was opened at the usual hour. Elder Hughes read from 2 Corinthians 5: 10-21. The choir, under the leadership of Elders S. F. Mather and John W. Green, rendered an anthem, "Daughter of Zion," with much fervency. They had indeed been cultivating the gift of music, and their praises were verily akin to the Spirit's sweet influence.

High Priest W. R. Armstrong, pastor of the branch, spoke briefly on the theme, "Whom do men say that I the Son of Man am?" The great revelation in these the last days has given to Latter Day Saints the answer that God gave to Peter, and there are many tasks, opportunities, and responsibilities before us as a people, made plain by the selfsame manifestation that has come our way. These sentiments and a spiritual appeal were expressed by the servant of the Lord. The hour was well spent, and rejoicing hearts looked forward to the further services of the day.

The children, daintily dressed, marshaled for a procession, some carrying beflowered crooks and others resplendent baskets of roses, irises, and foliage. About the hour of one, the sky became cloudy and the rain fell—rather steadily, too, for a while. Then as a break in the clouds appeared, the elements were braved. The Provident Temperance Prize Band let the march; the district banner followed. To the strains of the music, the procession advanced around the new residential neighborhood, in which the church is situated. Many familiar faces were seen, and one could sense the joy in the hearts of even the little ones, who proudly walked under the daffodil-covered arch and in the wake of the silk banner inscribed Beresford Road Sunday School. Before reaching the church again, a slight shower rather dampened the bandsmen and those who followed in their train, but even wet clothing did not dampen the ardor of those participating.

Following the adventures amidst the elements, a service of song was held in the church in the afternoon. The service was in charge of High Priest John W. Taylor, the bishop's counselor; the singing under the leadership of Elder S. F. Mather; and the reader of the inspiring story, "Joe and the squire," was Elder Thomas Brien. The choir and the soloists rendered their songs to a splendid congregation, and at the close appreciation was expressed at the admirable effort made.

The closing service of the day commenced at half past six. The pastor in charge presented Elder W. H. Chandler, of Warrington, as the speaker of the evening. The influence of the Spirit was present to a marked degree. Every eye was keen and every heart rejoiced as the ambassador for Christ told the congregation in Paul's words that God was beseeching them through his ministry. He outlined the "way of life," and closed with a direct appeal to all. His words were written on the hearts of the people. His meaning was plain and worthy of emulation.

The choir rendered two anthems during the service. They were happy to give of their talents, and after the inspiring message of Elder Chandler, the rendition of "Jerusalem, my glorious home," was as a sweet savor ascending to the Lord.

The anniversary is passed, the second year for progressive labor has commenced, and happy hearts are planning for further efforts, so that the latter-day glory shall prove a source of light and encouragement to the region wherein the Saints of this branch have been called to labor.

HAROLD DEWSNUP.

Ten Baptized at Woodbine

WOODBINE, IOWA, July 30.—Since last writing we have had the pleasure of listening to the truth as taught by Brethren D. R. Chambers, George Beatty, Joseph Lane, and the local priesthood.

Brother Lane, so near death recently, is again able to drive his car over the district, of which he is president. He delights in telling the people the gospel story that is so dear to his heart. His visits in the homes of the Saints are a real pleasure, as he does not fail to drop some thought that will encourage us to greater service to man and devotion to God.

Our pastor, Brother Fred A. Fry, has given some very instructive and spiritual sermons along the line of loyalty and faithfulness to our covenant with God, notwithstanding human weakness that may be manifest by others. Again he spoke on conditions in the world and sought to impress on the minds of his auditors that by divine appointment there is a place of protection awaiting the Saints when they are worthy to enter and honorably occupy.

Ten have been added to our number by baptism during the summer.

At the Young People's Convention the work of the Temple Builders received credit in the contest.

On July 2 the Department of Women invited the branch to the park for a social time. After the basket supper was justly dealt with, a spicy program was given by the Orioles and Sister Clara Sparrow, who is acting monitor to the girls during her summer vacation from Graceland.

We feel that we should mention the well-rendered Children's Day program and the beautiful decorative background of evergreens and pink peonies.

Bible and Book of Mormon Lectures

BEVIER, MISSOURI, July 30.—Sunday, July 20, J. W. A. Bailey, one of the missionaries of the district, began a series of illustrated lectures on the Bible and Book of Mormon. The lectures began with the creation and came down to the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the restoration of the gospel. Bible evidence and modern archaeological discoveries of American antiquities, with lantern views of prehistoric ruins, made a strong case for the divinity of the Book of Mormon. The meetings have been fairly well attended, with increasing interest as the lectures progressed. Many outsiders have been present. Services closed July 31. From Bevier Elder Bailey went to Macon for a lecture Sunday night, after which he goes to Hartsburg, Missouri, for another series of lectures. It is hoped that Brother Bailey will sometime return to Bevier for another series of meetings.

Elder E. F. Robertson, missionary, was with us for about a week in July and assisted in the sermons and lectures given by Brother Bailey. He left July 19 for Des Moines, in company with Brother and Sister J. W. Rudkin in their car. The latter had been visiting in Bevier for a short time.

Sister Elizabeth Morgan, who has been a student at Grace-land and the University of Iowa for several years, is spending a week here with relatives. She will teach in the primary department of one of the Kansas City, Missouri, schools the coming year.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held July 24. A heavy rain for two hours in the morning dampened the enthusiasm of some of the older ones.

The Religio has returned to a study of the Book of Mormon. The books truly again "rose from the dust" which had accumulated during the years of disuse.

Moorhead, Iowa

July 29.—Elder B. F. Creel, of the Eastern Nebraska Indian mission, was the speaker at the church the evening of July 6. He spoke in the interests of the Indian work, and we understand that the Saints responded liberally. We hope this work will prove successful.

Elder T. O. Strand occupied at the Jordan church on July 27.

Brother and Sister Boswell and family, of Independence, have recently located in our midst and are proving useful in church work. With the rest of the locals, he is taking his turn in preaching.

One of our recent visitors at services was Brother Richard Mann, of Independence, Missouri, who has been visiting his son Bert and family, also his sister, Mrs. J. B. McElwaine, and other relatives. Brother Richard was a resident of this community for many years, so we were pleased to renew his acquaintance.

Brother and Sister Perry Mann were visitors in Missouri Valley July 27.

Brother Rasmus Mortensen and wife motored to Council Bluffs July 27 and were accompanied home by their son Dale who has been visiting at that place.

Sister M. F. Minthorn, of Castana, Iowa, was a week-end visitor with Moorhead relatives and friends and attended the Sunday services.

During the past month Brother and Sister Cole Amundson, also their son Elmer and family, visited at the Arthur Baughman home near Lake View, Iowa. While there they attended the services being conducted by Brother W. A. Smith at Sac City.

Sister Grace Richwine, of Three Rivers, Michigan, arrived two weeks ago for a visit with her parents, Brother and Sister Ellis Davis, and other relatives.

The Department of Women held a social service at the home of Sister J. W. Townley July 20, with Sister Townley and Mrs. Chester Blackman acting as hostesses. About thirty-five attended.

Sister T. O. Strand and Frances are at Mason City helping care for the twin boys who arrived at the Clair Inlow home July 18. Mrs. Inlow was formerly Miss Ruby Strand.

Moorhead Saints were made sad Sunday morning when Grandma Bollinger went to the home of Grandma Peterson to find her lying unconscious on the floor where she had apparently fallen while preparing for bed the previous evening. Medical aid was called and it was found she had a stroke. She died that evening. Although not a member of the church, Sister Peterson has been a faithful attendant at church for several years and had expressed herself as enjoying worshiping with the Saints. Her presence will be greatly missed at our services. Funeral services, on the afternoon of July 30, will be held a few miles west of town, from the Lower Danish Lutheran Church, of which church she was a member.

The funeral of Brother Thomas Crandell was held at the church July 2, with sermon by Joseph Lane. Brother Crandell passed away the last day of June after an illness of about two months. His father was among the pioneers who settled at Gallands Grove, and Brother Thomas had spent most of his life in western Iowa. His sister, Saphrona Bell, of Dow City, Iowa, was present for the funeral.

West Virginia News

MOUNDSVILLE, WEST VIRGINIA, July 29.—The branch here is still striving to carry on the work, and priesthood, Sunday school, and sacramental services were held July 6, with good attendance at each service.

July 10 the Department of Women met and elected officers for the year. Sister Callie Castilow, who has been a faithful president for three years, was sustained.

The Department of Women picnicked July 11 on the State Prison Farm, which lies just at the edge of our city. At eleven o'clock the sisters offered up a prayer to God for the success of the department, and at noon a fine lunch was served. The afternoon was given over to needlework for the department.

Near by were about twenty prisoners, called "trusties" because of their good behavior, who are allowed to work outside the penitentiary under a guard. This guard told the ladies during the afternoon that he had just received a small order for lunch the next day at the penitentiary, which is located on the main street of Moundsville. This order was for two hundred fifty dozen or three thousand onions and six barrels of lettuce.

On July 17 another day's work called the Department of Women, and they spent the day at the historical camp ground of the city where camp meetings have been held once a year. August 17 will celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary.

Wednesday night prayer meetings are being attended by the faithful few. However, they are strengthened by their attendance and feel that the Lord is with them.

Thomas Clark, district missionary of Port Huron, Michigan, gave a stereopticon lecture July 20. Two illustrated songs were given: "Jesus, Savior, pilot me," sung as a duet by Lela Dubois and Fayette Dobbs; and "Abide with me," sung by a chorus. The lecture was much enjoyed by all.

Preparation for the Kirtland reunion is occupying the attention of the Saints. All who can are expecting to go.

Rich Hill Saints Mingle With Other Branches

RICH HILL, MISSOURI, July 26.—The Sunday school at Butler has invited the Rich Hill Sunday school to join them in a Sunday school picnic to be held soon. We feel this mingling together of the Saints promotes sociability and is very helpful. We are thankful to them for their thoughtfulness, as we have so few young people here to help.

We recently met with the Saints at Cross Timbers, and also visited Elder Haden at Johnson City, where he is holding tent meetings with large crowds and good interest.

Two of our Sunday school children were baptized by Brother F. A. Winders. A young man also expects to be baptized soon, as he has so expressed himself.

An Isolated Sister at Work

CHERRYVILLE, MISSOURI.—It has been a long time since I saw any of the Saints. I came here from Independence about four years ago to be near my son. I get very lonely, as there are no Saints near that I know of. I live about three miles from town, near the Davisville Road in Crawford County, and would be very glad to hear from any Saints living near, if there are any.

Not finding any Saints, I sent to the Herald Office for a supply of tracts, which I have been distributing. I have also given out Ensigns and Stepping Stones and quarterlies. Then I got the children and young folks to come to my house for Sunday school quite a while. Some walked two miles. But it finally got so hot they didn't feel like walking so far.

I have tried to interest people, so if an elder ever comes they will keep him while he preaches. There may be Saints who would like to locate here, as land is very cheap.

MRS. HARRIETT C. SEDORIS.

Interest in Services Is Strong

DAVIDSON, OKLAHOMA, July 30.—Elder Wilfrid Tordoff just closed a series of meetings here in the tent used for reunions. The time chosen was not very good, as the farmers could not leave their cotton crops, but the congregation grew from eighty-five until the last night about five hundred were out to meeting.

One of the local ministers attended four or five nights, and he announced from his pulpit that he had heard four of the most damnable sermons and lies, or words to that effect, that he had ever heard. These are the damnable things he heard: Reconciliation, baptism of water, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? and the judgment. Jesus said that those who would not believe in the things he taught would be damned. It is evident that the affirmative presentation of these subjects was too much for this man, and he announced that he would show the people that after death those who went to hell would go there, and to a literal hell with a literal fire, and stay forever. We thought these statements might affect our meetings, but on the very night of the exposure of these so-called terrible teachings we had an audience of five hundred people.

The meetings closed with four baptisms; also ten children were blessed. The interest is so good that many are requesting Brother Tordoff to return in September and hold another series of meetings. Among the interested ones is a university teacher who has asked for our literature. He said Brother Tordoff's sermon on "The destiny of the wicked" was certainly fine.

The Saints are encouraged to press on, and now our great need is to have a missionary stay here for many months, for there are people within a radius of thirty miles who have attended the meetings night after night and who want meetings in their vicinity.

At the home of J. Tom Skinner, where Elder Tordoff stayed, the Temple Builders surprised him one afternoon with a shower in appreciation of his work. He said he had heard of showers at weddings but never a shower for a missionary. He received various articles of wearing apparel such as shirts, ties, handkerchiefs, and hose.

Elder Tordoff is held in high esteem by the young people of the branch—in fact, by all—but he has especially interested himself in the young people. He had a good word for Grace-land and advised the parents time after time to send their children where morals are taught with the philosophies.

In relating numerous experiences while laboring in the British West Indies, Brother Tordoff admitted that his closing night quite outclassed the others. He was preaching on character building in his usual vigorous style when a young couple decided it took two to build character. They called out one of the local priesthood during the preaching, switched on the lights of their car, and there in the middle of the street were married.

Perhaps one of the most enjoyable services of all was the demonstration of the junior church by Brother Tordoff, using the material at hand. He proved in an unmistakable way that young children and adolescents have been quite neglected by ministers of the past. In his address on "Future church builders," many were heard to say that it was one of the most effective addresses they had heard.

The meetings will not soon be forgotten. Brother Tordoff has made many friends among nonmembers, and the Saints are hoping for his return in the near future.

Spiritual Meetings at San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, August 7.—Sunday, July 27, the San Antonio Saints were favored by a visit from Brother S. A. Burgess, of Independence, Missouri, who preached both morning and evening. His discourse at the morning service was concerning the temple, giving a brief history of the temple at Nauvoo and the temple at Kirtland. Just before closing the Spirit rested upon him in power, and he spoke to the Saints, telling them there would be a temple built and that Zion would soon be redeemed. The Spirit was felt to that degree that there was scarcely a dry eye in the house.

The evening of August 1 three carloads of Saints, including Pastor T. J. Bett, jr., and family, left for Pipe Creek, where Brother S. D. Palmer was conducting a few meetings. They remained there over Sunday. The few who were left to care for the work here missed the presence of those faithful Saints but were made glad to meet with Brother and Sister Hilds and their daughter Mary and Brother and Sister Wait, all of Beeville, Texas, who attended services all that day.

As this was the first Sunday of the month, the eleven o'clock hour was devoted to prayer and sacramental service. The Spirit was felt to a marked degree, inasmuch that a lady not of our faith bore testimony to the good Spirit which she felt in our midst. After services another young lady remarked that we had such a good spirit with us.

The Saints are looking forward to the remodeling of our church building, which they expect to begin in the near future.

A departmental program will be given at San Antonio on the evening of August 29, prior to the convening of the district conference. All are invited to attend.

Peter Muceus Returns to America

Atlantic Ocean, Near New York, August 12.—It may be of interest to HERALD readers to learn of my return to the States after an absence of two years.

I left Southampton, England, on August 5, on the American sea giant, the steamer Leviathan, the biggest floating craft in the world. We were to have been in New York yesterday morning, but owing to the accident of breaking off a blade or two of one of our four propellers, the speed was reduced about one fourth, and we are not expecting to land till to-night.

The journey has been a wonderful experience, first because of a wonderful ship, and second, because of wonderful weather conditions. No storm or even strong wind has been experienced, but smooth sailing, just as it would have been if on the Home Pond. When walking on the first cabin promenade deck, it was as steady as on the Lamoni streets, and a good deal smoother than when I left Lamoni. This deck is three hundred ninety-one yards around. Four and a half rounds make one mile. Though I really belonged on the third cabin, I had quite a few pleasant walks up there. It was more enjoyable, not because of the company, but because of the grand view of the mighty blue around us. The sea was like a vast sheet of crystal blue glass bathed in glorious sunshine from a clear sky. There is only one thing grander than the water, the snowcapped mountains, whose diamond-studded covering glistens on a clear day, and even that may be disputed.

We have just had our first-class dinner in our third-class dining hall, with a capacity of five hundred ninety-eight revolving chairs. Just think of it, roast duckling, boiled potatoes, tapioca pudding, cherry sauce. But I must not say more, or you will think I have been on a pleasure trip to the Riviera.

I left happy on July 28, 1922, and return happier in August, 1924, also heavier, older, and more experienced. Hope that all this may be an argument to preparation for future service to the church.

Friends and fellow Saints, accept best wishes for successful cooperation in the future. Success to the HERALD.

P. MUCEUS.

Islands of the Sea

Papeete, Tahiti, July 29.—We are still busy. This is really the best time of the year, the cooler season. The natives think it rather chilly, and many of them have colds and other seasonal afflictions. I have been called for more administrations this month than in any previous month. However, we regard the weather as being much like our most pleasant days of June in Ontario, Iowa, or Missouri. The nights are quite cool, though some of the days are rather hot when there is no sea breeze.

The past month we have had a party of our members from the distant island of Amanu here visiting—about ten in the party. Amanu is about four hundred miles from Papeete, a ten or eleven day voyage in a small sailboat, same as the time measurement between San Francisco and Papeete.

One of the party from Amanu is Pahoa, the president of his branch and district. Another is Tangaraoa, the governor of the island and a teacher in the church. Rogotama, president of his branch at Hao, about twenty miles from Amanu, the governor of the island, arrived here a month or so earlier. These two government officials looked quite handsome, dressed in their best and wearing their insignia of office at the 14th of July celebration.

July 14 is the big French national holiday. The celebration started on Sunday, the 13th, and continued till midnight of the 16th. That is, the official celebration closed then, but the unofficial celebration, drinking, dancing and such revelry continued for the rest of the week. During the four days the stores were closed, and all kinds of sports, games, contests, horse racing, canoe racing, diving, and swimming were carried on. They had a Midway similar to those at state fairs in America with all kinds of games of chance, eating, drinking, and dancing pavilions. Thousands of people of assorted nationalities were there. One very noticeable feature was the immense quantities of confetti thrown at people as they walked about. The streets were literally covered with confetti.

Rogotama told us about the banquet tendered by the governor general to the governors of the various islands. When the champagne was passed our Latter Day Saint governors refused it. Those sitting near said that their refusal might displease the governor general and cost them their jobs. They did not fear this, for they had been seeking to be released, and the governor general had insisted on their retaining office. When the cigars were passed, they again refused. Some one asked if they were Mormons. They replied that they were not "Momoni" but rather "Tanito," the Tahitian pronunciation of "Saint." Rogotama explained that it was inconvenient for him to smoke since the Lord had not furnished him with a chimney.

A large number of our members are now on their way to the diving islands, where they will dive for shells and pearls. Fourteen members left Taronia Branch last week, going to the island of Takume.

Yours sincerely,

R. J. FARTHING.

W. W. Smith at Work in California

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, August 8.—After years of service in departmental activity, I had almost given up thought of regular pastoral work, but at the call of the Presidency and Twelve I gave up the library and Institute work in Independence and accepted an appointment to Los Angeles.

Sister Smith, Ronald, and I left Independence June 28, stopped for a short visit with Brother and Sister Levitt, in Salt Lake; also preached one evening in San Francisco, and enjoyed the hospitality of Brethren Save, Hartsough, and others, and arrived in Los Angeles in time to celebrate Independence Day with the Saints of Southern California District, at the home of Brother O. C. White, near Redondo Beach.

We have been recipients of many courtesies from the Saints of Los Angeles, particularly at the hands of Doctor and Sister Joseph Mather, who met us at the train and entertained us in their home until we were located. On July 13 I was chosen president of the Los Angeles Branch and have now found a permanent home at 3837 South Flower Street, about a block from where the Los Angeles Saints are building their new church, permit for which has been granted. This church will be very complete when finished. It will be beautiful and practical and the best of its kind in the church.

The Southern California reunion at Hermosa Beach is past; the attendance was said to be larger than heretofore. It was a very good reunion; all the services were well attended, and the sociability on the ground was very pleasant. We met President Frederick M. Smith, D. T. Williams, Bishop I. A. Smith, William Anderson, James Yates, and H. W. Savage, all of whom preached, and Sister Blanche Edwards who conducted departmental work. Brethren John D. White and George H. Wixom were visitors for a few days. Provisions were made for improving the grounds, and we hope to have a larger reunion next year.

The Saints of Southern California are like the Saints elsewhere, loyal to the cause of Christ and interested in building up the kingdom. We miss the associations in Zion but feel compensated in the opportunity to labor in the interest of the cause of Christ in this field.

Your brother in Christ,
WALTER W. SMITH.

Aged Member of Providence Branch Passes Away

Matthias Gondolf died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John D. Suttill, 28 Sheffield Street, Pawtucket, Rhode Island, June 27, in his ninety-second year. Brother Gondolf was one of the "old line" shoemakers and for nearly thirty years conducted shoemaking establishments in Providence. He had a large patronage, including former Governor Dyer, of Rhode Island. He retired from active business about twenty years ago.

Brother Gondolf was born in Alsace Lorraine, emigrating to this country when a young boy. He learned his trade in New Haven, Connecticut, and just before coming to Providence, at twenty years of age, he married Miss Ellen Ray. His wife died at the age of seventy-eight years. He was baptized November 16, 1884, having heard the gospel preached by Elder George W. Robley, who at that time was a teacher. He was ordained to the office of deacon May 8, 1887, by the late Francis M. Sheehy. He was treasurer and Bishop's agent's solicitor for many years in the Providence Branch. He was faithful in every line of duty until advanced years and failing health required that he relinquish the duties to the younger generation.

Two daughters, Mrs. Nellie E. Worthington, of East Orange, New Jersey, and Mrs. John D. Suttill, of Pawtucket, Rhode Island, and five sons, Charles R. of Chicago, George, Fred, and Allan of Atlantic City, and Edward W. Gondolf, of Providence, Rhode Island, survive him.

Good Spiritual Condition in Connecticut

GROTON, CONNECTICUT, August 8.—The services here have attained a higher spiritual standard during the month of July than for a long time.

A Mormon elder, accompanied by his wife and several children, attended one of the prayer and testimony services, and his respectful attention and interest made his presence very welcome. The gentleman extended the invitation to have a prayer meeting at his home in New London.

A goodly number of the Saints attended the Onset reunion, also nonmember relatives of some, who seemed to take a keen interest in the services. May the seed sown bring forth good fruit and the fulfillment of many earnest prayers.

A sister from Provo, Utah, writes: "Not having seen anything in print from this part of God's vineyard for a long time I wish to write a few lines of thanksgiving and praise for this glorious latter-day gospel. Although we here at Provo are not many, and are slow and indifferent at times to launch out and enjoy our blessed privileges, I feel that the Lord is feeling after us, as was manifested in our prayer meetings last Sunday. We surely have good meetings from time to time. Oh, how I wish more would turn out and enjoy them. The Lord is my rock and my stay. May we step out in the strength of the Lord and enjoy his glorious blessings is my earnest prayer."

Courtney

Brother Andes had charge of the sacrament service and reports a fine meeting. In the evening Brother Alvin Knisley was the speaker. An ice cream social was given last week. Eight dollars was cleared.

Lees Summit

A very spiritual sacrament meeting was held on the third inst. Three prophecies were given. In the evening at seven thirty the Saints enjoyed a half hour song service. The preaching was by Brethren Charles and J. F. Roberts. A good attendance at the mid-week prayer service Wednesday. The Department of Women gave an ice cream social on Thursday, the 31st. Our Religio and Sunday school is showing development. A keen interest is shown in both departments, especially by the children.

Blue Springs

Brother Amos E. Allen who has charge at Blue Springs reports, "Our sacrament service was by far the best we have enjoyed yet."

Lexington

We have had some very enjoyable times of late. We have been visited by the following stake officers: Brethren G. W. Rodger, C. F. Scarcliff and D. J. Krahl. These brethren have encouraged us very much, because of the spirit of God which they possess. Brethren Pete Vanques, Finis Beebe and Charles Orndoff and family were with us at our sacrament meeting Sunday. Their presence was enjoyed by all, and we hope they can soon find employment at home, so they can be here as usual. Brother and Sister J. E. Johnson have been doing stake work in the various groups in the stake.

Holden

Sunday, August 3, was observed as a special day of fasting and prayer in the Holden Stake for "A closer union with God and Christ and greater unity among his children." A very good spirit was present at our sacramental service which was well attended. The voice of the Spirit was heard. Brethren Phillips, Ross, McWethy, and Krahl were in charge. Brethren Lovell and Thompson had charge at the Home. Bishop Phillips was the speaker at the church in the evening. Brethren G. F. Baker and F. A. McWethy gave the sermons at the church on the 27th.

We call attention to the Square Deal Dining Hall which is conducted by the Holden Stake at the Missouri State Fair, at Sedalia, Missouri, August 16-23. The proceeds from this project go toward building churches in the stake. Tell your friends. The responsibility of caring for this is placed upon the stake presidency and bishopric, Brethren W. S. Macrae and I. M. Ross having the immediate active supervision. Anyone who is willing to help in this work for two days or more, please write Brothers Ross and Macrae, care of Fair Grounds, Sedalia, Missouri. To those who help they offer admission to the Fair, board, and lodging, with plenty of time off to attend the attractions and exhibits.

Word comes from Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, that the increase in spirituality the past year has been very marked, though there is great need yet for progress. Brothers F. E. Dillon and Simmons, both of whom have done much good there, recently returned from district conference and report a good time, which means that the Spirit of God was there. Both are now attending the conference of the Western Oklahoma District at Eagle City.

Omaha, Nebraska

August 11. Our Sunday school picnic, held at Elmwood Park July 12, was the most largely attended in our experience, 235 being present at the dinner and participating in the games and general visiting of the day. Mr. J. Weston, of the Young Men's Christian Association, had charge of the sports and kept things moving in a lively manner. Our new pastor, Brother Peter S. Whalley, showed his versatility by refereeing the ball games, which held the enthusiastic attention of the men and boys until darkness hindered further playing.

Average attendance at our Sunday school for first six months was 115. The largest attendance was on Mothers' Day, when 195 were present. Twenty-two special numbers presented at the regular sessions during this period. This does not take into account the "program days," such as George Washington's Birthday, Easter, Children's Day, and Mothers' Day, all of which were properly observed.

It is with sadness we have to report the death, on July 1, of the week-old daughter of Brother Jay Leeka. The fond hopes centered about her were crushed, as she fought her losing battle for life. The branch grieves with the bereaved parents in the loss of this little one.

Brother W. Teeters, of Lyons, Nebraska, worshiped with us July 27. His wife was in a local hospital for a couple of weeks but was able to return home last week. Others who have been sick among us are: Sister Alice Ensign; Brother Bryant's youngest daughter; a grandchild of Brother T. A. Edwards; Sister Fay Drew. All of these are recovering. Sister Dorothy, daughter of Brother and Sister Rob Grenawalt, is still quite ill with a facial infection.

Pastor P. S. Whalley was called upon July 24 to preach the funeral sermon for little Jimmie May. Because his mother was of the Catholic faith and his father a Protestant, neither minister nor priest would officiate. A neighbor called Brother Whalley, who was glad to perform the little service.

On August 3, at our Sunday school session we had the pleasure of hearing Sister Marguerite Wickes, of Los Angeles, play a piano solo. Surely a gifted and a devoted sister, it was encouraging to hear the spiritual word that was given to her at the sacramental service which followed. Talents are given by God for use in his work; our young people who are improving the talents God gave them should be glad to render service in our branches. Sister Wickes labored long and arduously with the musical forces of Chicago Branch, and now, for three years, Los Angeles has been receiving the benefit of her consecration and devotion.

Others worshiping with us on sacrament Sunday were Brother and Sister R. D. Williams, of Lucas, Iowa, parents of our Brother Robert J. Williams. Accompanying them were Brother and Sister Fred H. Baux. Sister Bert Bainter, from Waterloo, was also in attendance.

Tuesday afternoon and evening, the young people of the branch enjoyed a swim, picnic dinner, movies, etc., at Carter Lake Club. They were the guests of Brother and Sister Harry O. Wrenn, club members, who were assisted in their duties as hosts and chaperons by Brother and Sister H. G. Fredrick, and Sisters Thiehoff and Scott. The young people of this branch are undoubtedly among its most cherished possessions. Sometimes we wonder where they all come from. They seem to have sprung up as by magic within the past few years. Truly they put life into the branch activities and can be counted upon to do their full part in any undertaking. Many of them bring along with them to Sunday school, Religio, or picnic other friends not of our faith and thus help to scatter the good seed of truth and upright living. All success to the young of the church!

Sister A. E. Larsen, a bride of a few weeks, was honor guest at a little gathering at Sister Fredrick's, August 7. She is not a stranger to Omaha Saints, since her childhood and early girlhood were spent here as Mary Grace Marmoy. We are glad to welcome her again and wish her and her young husband a life of happiness and service among us.

August 10 we held a splendid service commemorating our first anniversary in our new church home. It was in charge of Sister Rose Adams, superintendent of the Sunday school, the program following the lesson hour without intermission. Short speeches expressive of the relations of the various departments to the branch, their labors for it in the past, and hopes for it in the future, were given by Assistant Superintendent Howard Elliott, Grace Wallace for the Religio, Audentia Anderson for the Department of Women, and Pastor Whalley for the branch. These speeches were interspersed with musical numbers, presented by Sisters Ann Self, Doris Fredrick, Cloe Fleming, and Brethren R. W. Scott, H. G. Fredrick, and Harold Madsen. The attendance was close to two hundred, a record breaker. At this service Marilyn, daughter of Mr. L. E. and Sister Sarah Hester, was blessed; and at its close Ollie James Watts, of Silver Creek, was baptized. This young lad, with his mother, has come to Omaha for the purpose of baptism and for consultation with doctors concerning his physical condition. May the blessings of God, in rich abundance, come to him, according to the righteous desires of his mother, an isolated, tried, and devoted Saint.

Years will come and go. Sometimes their passing is the occasion of happy episodes, without which our lives would be drab and humdrum. Without ever telling how many previous ones she has seen, Sister Rose Adams's birthday was the occasion of a well-planned and well-executed "surprise" party, given in her honor by the officers and teachers of the Sunday school. Thirty-five people enjoyed her surprise and delight, and entered spiritedly into the games and entertainment of the evening, near the close of which Brother Howard Elliott, her "running mate" in the superintendency of the Sunday school, presented her, on behalf of his colleagues, with a set of sterling silver teaspoons. While beautiful and acceptable in itself, the gift but poorly expressed the love, admiration, and appreciation Sister Adams has, by the kindness, faithfulness, and devotion of her service the past few years here, awakened in the hearts of our members. Her constant thought is for the upbuilding and success of the work, and she has been untiring and undiscouraged in the effort and labor required.

Omaha Saints have regretted the necessity which took from their midst Sister Miriam Parmenter. This young sister, against odds which life often places upon individuals, is climbing steadily upward on the ladder of development and achievement. Still in public school life, Miriam has found time to study music and to attain a considerable degree of excellence in that art, along with her uniformly good grades in school. The Saints of Omaha wish to commend her to the kindness and attention of the Saints in Kansas City, Kansas, whither she has gone to live with her sister, Mrs. E. F. Helman, 3004 North Ninth Street.

We are grieved to note the passing of Brother James M. Kelley, sr.; grieved for our loss, while we can but rejoice at the good fortune that has come to him in cherished reunions on the other side. Brother Whalley accompanied the sorrowing sons and daughters to Glenwood, Iowa, where his body was laid beside that of his good wife, to await the summons to renewed life. The sympathy of the Saints is with the bereaved ones.

Sister Anna Ford, Sister Hattie Hall and son, from Council Bluffs, and Sister Ada Hopkins from Lamoni were among recent visitors. The announcement of our services appearing weekly in all the city papers often attracts to our little church building many who are passing through, as well as helping newcomers to the city to find us and establish their membership with us. Brother and Sister Delbert Calhoun and Brother William J. Moore are among new arrivals from Colorado. Two small children belonging to the former were blessed by Brother Whalley at a recent Sunday evening service.

Our pastor is finding his place among us, he and his wife rapidly endearing themselves to all by the completeness of their consecration. Sixty calls, upon most of which he was accompanied by Sister Whalley, is not a bad record for the hot month of July. The members have appreciated these kindly calls in their homes, which serve to build up a most cordial relationship and bid fair to contribute markedly to the interest and success of the branch in general.

Independence

August 19.—The speaker at the Stone Church Sunday morning was Elder B. J. Scott, of Walnut Park Church. Brother W. I. Fligg, missionary in Kansas City Stake, was the speaker on the Campus in the evening, where a good crowd was gathered to enjoy his sermon. Brother Fligg is at present holding meetings on Blue Ridge Boulevard, where quite an interest is being worked up among nonmembers as well as members.

One night this week the Temple Builders of the Stone Church group gave an ice cream social on the church lawn. The girls did well, clearing about fifteen dollars. This money is to be applied to help the girls go to Young People's Convention next year. This same group of girls will give a play at the Stone Church Religio on August 22.

The radio studio of the church has been moved to Bartholomew Hall, and the first program was broadcast from the new quarters last Tuesday night.

Brother R. J. Lambert, of the HERALD editors, is at present attending the reunion at Dow City, Iowa, where he is working in the interests of the church and the publishing house. Brother S. A. Burgess, editor of the Journal of History, is attending the reunion at Glenwood, Iowa. The bishops and members of the Quorum of Twelve are also out on their regular reunion work.

Englewood

Pastor J. E. Warne has just returned from visiting his old home town in Indiana. Sunday morning he gave a very fine sermon of instruction to the Saints, which was much enjoyed.

Two prayer meetings were held last week, and more were present at each meeting than had attended any one meeting before. The two meetings will be held again this week, and probably will be continued while the advisability of dividing the group is being considered.

East Independence

The basement for the new church is now ready for the frame work to be put up. A business meeting will be held next Sunday morning to consider the matter of finishing the church. It is hoped these people will see their way clear to finish the building, as they greatly need the room.

J. J. Teeter spoke Sunday morning, and Brother Francis Smith occupied in the evening.

Liberty Street

The people of the Liberty Street congregation held a special business meeting last Tuesday evening to consider measures that would work for the betterment of the work in that congregation. At this meeting provision was made for the organization of the young men of the congregation as well as for the boys of younger years. A committee was also chosen to promote the interests of music. This committee has met and will soon have some interesting things started along musical lines.

Pastor J. M. Baker was the speaker Sunday at eleven o'clock. He spoke especially to the musicians of the congregation, but the sermon was interesting to all.

The Temple Builders are to give the history of temple building on Tuesday night, August 26. They have a very fine program arranged, so everyone should come out to hear what they have to present. This will be an opportunity for people to learn what the Temple Builders really can do and what is their aim in having such an organization.

Enoch Hill

Brother William Worth was the morning speaker Sunday, and Brother S. S. Smith spoke in the evening.

Another Friend Passes

Mrs. Jane Cogburn Pickering, wife of W. R. Pickering who was at one time a member of the Standing High Council of the church, passed away Sunday, August 17, after an illness of five weeks. Complications resulting from an operation were the cause of her death.

Mrs. Pickering was born and reared in Missouri, in which State she spent all her life. Before her marriage to Mr. Pickering in 1870 she was Miss Jane Cogburn. Her father, who was a surgeon in the Confederate Army, was killed just before the close of the Civil War. They moved to Kansas City in 1898, where they have since lived.

She became a member of the church on June 15, 1885, and among friends and acquaintances was known for her strength of character. Though she was not a member of charitable organizations, for many years Mrs. Pickering was active in charity work, and much was accomplished by her without the knowledge of even most intimate friends.

Funeral services were held at half past two on August 18 at the home, Fifty-ninth Street and State Line. The sermon was by Elder Joseph Luff, who was assisted by Patriarch I. N. White. Music was furnished by a mixed quartet composed of Sisters I. A. Smith and T. C. Lentell, and Brothers George E. Anway and O. K. Fry. Interment was in Forest Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Pickering leaves her husband, one son, William Alfred, and three grandchildren, besides many friends.

Brother E. F. Shupe sends in two HERALD subscriptions which are the result of a paragraph printed in The Little Missionary, and which refers to a sermon preached by Elder Evan A. Davis. The paragraph reads:

"Loyalty"

"Did you hear the sermon last Sunday on 'Loyalty'? If so, you surely want to know what is going on in the church. How are you going to get the needed information? By reading the SAINTS' HERALD. Yes, read the HERALD. One issue is worth six months of the Denver Post. What is the church doing? What is the church going to do? Read the HERALD and you will find out. I will take your subscription. Do it now.—E. F. Shupe."

REUNION NEWS

Lamoni Stake Reunion

The theme chosen for the Lamoni Stake reunion for this year was, "Hear ye him"; but the theme which eventually developed as the meetings proceeded was, "God will deliver us."

The lateness of the season made it impossible for many of the farmers to camp and in many instances interfered with their attendance at the services. In spite of this situation the various services were well attended, this being particularly true of the morning social service, the evening preaching hour, the girls' meetings, and the Sunday services.

The daily program outlined for the reunion was about as follows: Young people's prayer service, seven forty-five; social service, nine o'clock; preaching, ten forty-five; recreation, about every other afternoon; preaching at eight; with special services of various kinds breaking in now and then to prevent monotony.

The young people's tent was quite well filled each morning, and a spirit of unity prevailed, which was notable. The young people were not at all concerned about church policies, but examined their individual lives and characters, praying and testifying of their soul's needs and desires. Some of the themes used in their morning prayer services were: "Where art thou?" "What hast thou done?" "The lights along the shore"; "Climbing"; and "God first, others second, self last." Brother W. E. Prall was in charge of these meetings, and associated with him were E. J. Gleazer, John F. Martin, Walter Hayer, L. S. Wight, and Roy Roberts.

It was planned by those in charge of the social hour at the auditorium tent to create a spirit of faith, hope, and charity; to bring all in communion with God so that difficulties would melt away and all see eye to eye; and to keep out of these meetings anything which might cause discord. It was their plan that no church issues should be touched upon, but this was found impossible, as the people sought to speak of their problems, and to touch upon that which was in their hearts. God, himself, added to the meetings, and his Spirit spoke in warning of no uncertain tones. A list of some of the topics used as themes for these services were: "Faith"; "Hope"; "Charity"; "Self examination"; "A good neighbor"; "What stands between us and God"; "He leadeth me"; and "The breaking of light which dispels the clouds." Sacramental services were held at the opening prayer service and also the closing Sunday.

The sermons were delivered by E. J. Gleazer, John F. Martin, E. F. Robertson, W. W. Scott, E. R. Davis, G. R. Wells, L. G. Holloway, J. F. Garver, C. E. Wight, and W. E. Prall. These services were of the nature to fire the hearers with a desire for action and were on such subjects as "Hear ye him"; "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brother"; "Strengthen your hands"; "Undivided support"; "Our Father's business."

Each afternoon was given over to rest or organized recreation with an idea of giving a proper balance and allowing time for a fuller social life, that visiting Saints and resident Saints should become better acquainted with each other. For a twelve-day reunion, those upon whom the responsibility fell welcomed the few hours of relief and were enabled in consequence to give a better measure of service because of the needed relaxation.

Several afternoons were given over to organized games, and in the absence of bathing facilities, special trips were made in autos to the river on two afternoons that the young people might enjoy a swim. Fifty-three boys went on Tuesday and sixty girls on Thursday.

At the young people's tent and the scout tent special services were held for the girls and boys at ten forty-five a. m. on alternating days. Story hours for the children were had on Friday, Sunday, Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday.

Sister Olive Elefson had charge of the children, Sister Florence Thompson provided for the girls, and Wilbur Prall looked after the boys' programs. The boys at the scout tent heard the following talks: "What is the use of praying?" Marcella Schenck; "What's the use of going to church?" John F. Martin; "What's the use of making friends?" E. J. Gleazer; "What's the use of playing together?" J. F. Garver; "Foreign boys of the city streets," Victoria Blackburn. At the girls' meetings, besides music and readings given by the girls themselves the following talks were listened to with interest: "Freedom of truth," E. J. Gleazer; "Foreign girls of our cities," Victoria Blackburn; "Girlhood and character," Estella Wight; "My mother," Francis Davis; "The girl of South America," Olive Mortimore; "Lord, teach us how to pray," Marcella Schenck; also a talk by Brother L. G. Holloway.

A short play, "Lydia, seller of purple," was given Wednesday morning. The faith of Lydia and her trials were nicely portrayed by the young ladies who took the parts. On Friday evening the Oriole Girls presented another play, "Beyond the gates." This lesson of making the right choice was strongly presented. Both plays are highly recommended for those who are searching for Religio material.

A band concert was given on Monday evening by the Lamoni Band. This was surely enjoyed, as was also the camp fire which followed where wieners and marshmallows were toasted, and songs and rounds were sung.

The task of preparing for the reunion is an arduous one and was participated in by a large number. The first bee was called for July 21, to which over thirty boys and men responded. At this time the roads were graded, trees trimmed, grass and weeds mowed, and pasture refuse removed. Lunch was served by the Department of Women of Lamoni, which enabled the workers to remain the entire day. Five days later twenty-five men assisted in the erection of the service and auditorium tents. On the following Monday the last preparations were completed.

There were 66 resident tents, 10 service tents, and 4 pup tents on the grounds. The visitors numbered 175, and these represented 24 different stakes and districts. The camp residents were 218 in number. Every branch in the district was represented except two, the outlying branches tenting in larger numbers than usual. Creston, Chariton, and Hiteman representatives were exceptionally numerous, Hiteman having about thirty-five people in attendance.

The order of the camp was up to the usual high standard. Little if any sickness was among the campers this year, which speaks well for the people in obeying the laws of health and sanitation, and further suggests the blessing of the heavenly Father.

Surely God was in the midst of this camp of Israel.

MARCELLA SCHENCK.

Oriole Girls to Reunion

SAGINAW, MICHIGAN, July 30.—On account of financial conditions, the Saints here have had to give up their plans for decorating the church and making other improvements.

Saginaw plans on being well represented at the Central Michigan reunion. Some men will let their wives stay on the grounds, and they will drive back and forth so as to be there for evening meetings.

July 26 the Oriole Girls initiated five new members into their ranks. They are planning to attend reunion en masse and will have a tent for their circle.

The Kirtland Reunion

God's Holy Hill

The peaceful, picturesque, and historic village of Kirtland awoke from its slumber on August 9 by the invasion of many latter-day pilgrims to the sacred shrine of God's Holy Hill.

Beautiful for situation midst the rolling hills of Ohio's beauty spot nestles this hamlet, made sacred by the feet of those that brought "good tidings of great joy" and who, by consecration, devotion, and endurance erected a monument to their sincerity and zeal for God (the temple) which challenges the admiration of the worldly wise and implants in the soul of the godly a spirit of humility, love, and sacredness.

Willing hands soon assumed the task of converting God's quiet acre into a reunion camp ground where at the time of writing many Saints and friends are as comfortably situated as the changing weather will permit—living in their flimsy houses of whiteness beneath the uniformly planted and rapidly growing hard-maple grove. Those only who have visited this place at reunion time can appreciate the scene and enjoy the thrill of soul.

Organization of Reunion

At 8 p. m., August 9, the committee consisting of Elders F. J. Ebeling, James E. Bishop, Robert Miller, and T. G. Neville took their places in the stand, and the meeting was called to order after the usual preliminaries. James E. Bishop then offered a feeling invocation which was later followed by a brief talk built around the slogan, "Bigger and better reunion."

The members of the committee have worked indefatigably since last year to carry into effect their slogan. The treasurer, James E. Bishop, has worked faithfully and is, with the cooperation of all, expeditiously liquidating the heavy debt on the auditorium.

The organization of the reunion saw the sustaining of the incumbents of committee and departmental work.

Editors Make Visit

On Friday three editors representing The Plain Dealer, The Cleveland News (both Cleveland papers), and the Painesville Telegraph respectively, visited Kirtland.

Brother Pitt invited them into the temple and soon had them interested in the building, the tenets of the church, and the reunion which resulted in the appearance of articles in each paper. A number of copies of the Painesville publication were forwarded to the temple for free distribution.

Spiritual Meetings

Able and spiritual sermons have been delivered by Patriarchs W. A. McDowell and F. G. Pitt; Seventies C. W. Neville, Jacob Halb, and Elders J. D. Shower and Thomas Newton. The prayer services which are well attended are of a very spiritual nature. Few outward manifestations have been given, but one is greatly impressed by the relation of rich experiences and sincere desires to take up the work of the Master. May these experiences be the basis for future and more lasting activities.

Congregational Singing

Under the direction of Elder T. G. Neville the congregational singing is very commendable. The brief song service preceding each evening service is greatly appreciated and indulged by the many.

Recreational Activities

Elder Joseph Jaques has charge of the recreational activities and each afternoon is given over to him. After each evening service the young people of all ages assemble in the illuminated grove and take part in games and social exercises under their leader.

Summer School

Each morning Sister Addie Halb has charge of the summer school, and the little children are eagerly drinking in Bible and other moral stories. May the application of these stories to the little ones make them strong in Christ to meet the issues of life. What a grand opportunity these workers have of making possible the development of character. Molding life is the greatest of occupations.

I took a piece of human clay
And gently molded day by day,
And fashioned with my skill and art
A young child's soft and yielding heart.

I came again when years had gone,
It was a man I looked upon,
His life that early impress bore
And I could change him nevermore.

Others to Attend

With eager anticipation we look forward to the arrival of President Frederick M. Smith, Apostle James A. Gillen, and Brother Cyril E. Wight and wife to Kirtland.

Not only has the committee provided for the spiritual and mental needs, but the physical man is cared for in the large cafeteria and refreshment tent.

The weather frowns and smiles alternately, but the Saints are smiling perpetually.

—WILLIAM PATTERSON, Reporter.

Reunion at Eldorado Springs

Eldorado Springs is an ideal place for a reunion. The town is situated off the beaten track of travel. It is a summer resort, and is a quiet, peaceful place, ideal for rest and recreation. We find here a large floating population during the summer months. These tourists, many of them in quest of health and recreation, have ample time on their hands and are not averse to attending camp meetings if they are attractive and interesting.

Our camp this year was located in an ideal grove with magnificent shade trees and a fine carpet of heavy grass. This grove is on the edge of the town and its use was donated by the school board, it being a part of the high school grounds.

The reunion opened on Friday, July 25, and continued until Sunday evening, August 3. Permanent organization was effected on Sunday the 27th. The district presidency: R. T. Walters, of Eldorado; F. A. Hawley, of Fort Scott; and W. H. Lowe, of Eldorado, were chosen to preside. Brother T. W. Williams was associated with them in the presidency of the reunion. Sister Lucy Silvers, of Nevada, was chosen secretary; L. C. Hughes, Mapleton, chorister; and Sister Clive Heath, of Nevada, organist.

Brother U. W. Greene was the only speaker present at the commencement of the reunion. He was drafted for every service, preaching two and three times a day until Tuesday when Brethren T. W. Williams and Charles Fry arrived. Brother Greene won his way into the hearts of the people. Members and nonmembers commended his work.

After the arrival of Brother Williams the night meetings were assigned to him, and Brethren Greene and Fry cared for the preaching during the day.

There were not many people camped on the ground, as room and board could be secured for less than the cost of tent and beds. The cost for room for two people was $3 for the ten days, and good meals cost sixteen and two thirds cents per meal. This was due to the alertness of Brother Walters in anticipating conditions and making preparations ahead.

Brother R. T. Walters and his reunion committee had things well in hand. The needs of the people were amply supplied, and we heard not one complaint throughout the entire reunion. Saints were present from the adjoining country as well as Fort Scott and Mapleton, Kansas; Butler, Rich Hill, Taberville, Johnson City, Nevada, Walker, and Eldorado Springs, Missouri.

Priesthood in attendance were: T. W. Williams, U. W. Greene, Charles Fry, R. T. Walters, William Lowe, P. R. Davis, F. A. Hawley, Abner Lloyd, C. M. Schroder, C. W. Keck, Ed. Reynolds, Charles Athey, A. M. Beal, A. S. Leeper, O. C. Andes, John Noyse, Alma Lockling, and J. P. Budd. Apostle F. Henry Edwards came in on the last Saturday afternoon and left Sunday afternoon. He spoke once.

The preaching was by U. W. Greene, T. W. Williams, Charles Fry, F. H. Edwards, A. M. Beal, and W. H. Lowe. The attendance increased nightly, the closing service being the largest of all, with some four hundred present.

There was so insistent a demand from nonmembers that the services continue that a vote was taken Sunday night, and many expressed themselves favorable to the plan. Brother T. W. Williams consented to remain over for a portion, if not all, of the week. He was billed to attend the Western Oklahoma reunion, but knowing that there was ample missionary force to care for that reunion, he thought it a mistake to turn down the request of nonmembers for services here. The conclusion was demonstrated as timely, for the first night there were one hundred and twenty-five present, seventy-five of whom were nonmembers.

The order of services during reunion was as follows: problem meeting, half past eight; prayer meeting, half past nine; preaching, eleven; afternoon, recreation; preaching at eight in the evening. There were held: Prayer services, 9; priesthood meetings, 1; Sunday school sessions, 2; problems meetings, 6; illustrated lectures by Charles Fry, 2; programs after night services, 4.

Five were baptized, with a number of others near the kingdom. The Saints were encouraged, and a magnificent spirit pervaded the camp throughout the entire time.

The Methodist minister was present on the last Saturday night and heard Brother Williams lecture on "Democracy, the hope of the world." He was so impressed with the patriotic sentiment of the lecture that he suggested it be repeated in some public building in Eldorado later on. He volunteered to make arrangements for the lecture and care for the advertising, etc.

The one noticeable feature of this reunion was, it reminded one of the old times when the Saints gathered together and, in the spirit of devotion and humility, gave themselves over to thinking and talking and praying about distinctive Latter Day Saint problems. And the Spirit gave evidence of approval, for the prayer meetings in the morning were spiritual feasts. There were prophecies and tongues and interpretation of tongues, and the Spirit's presence was so visible that the people were overwhelmed and, at times, there was scarcely a dry eye in the assembly. God was with us, confirming the truth of the angel's message. The reunion has passed into history as one of the best, if not the greatest reunion ever held in the Clinton District.

Radio Flashes

In addition to the letters of acknowledgment, we are this week printing several letters containing comments on the campaign for a new 1000-watt coast to coast radio station. The radio department will be glad to receive comments from other HERALD readers.

Iola, Kansas, August 2, 1924.

RADIO STATION K F I X,
INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

Dear Saints:

I read with great pleasure your intention of increasing the power of your radio station. I have a Westinghouse two-tube receiver. It is a fine little radio, but I haven't been able in the past month to tune you in satisfactorily although I get W D A F and W H B with good volume.

I think with the increase of power from your station it will be a great benefit to those living at a distance, also to those who have small receiving sets.

Count on me as a booster.

Your brother,

L. E. CLARK.

Onset, Massachusetts, August 5, 1924.

Dear Brethren:

On June 1st, 1924, we broadcasted from the studio at Medford Hillside, Massachusetts, (a part of Boston) a program which included musical numbers by soloists, a quartet, and chorus, as well as an address by myself on "Religion, a Social Remedy." In this we endeavored to set forth our belief in the social ideals of the church. This was the first radio program broadcast in the East by our church. The sermon appeared in a recent number of the ENSIGN.

Before we left the studio on the night that the program was given, we received a telephone call from a listener. He commended very highly our effort, requesting a copy of the sermon and the song composed by the President of the Church, "Come, Sweet Comforter." Later many letters were received from various people. These I took and made reply, inclosing tracts, giving information concerning the location of our church and sending a copy of the sermon when it was requested. We also sent the dates of our Onset reunion. I am very enthusiastic about the possibilities of the radio along this line and feel that the good that can be done by it is inestimable. I am very glad to hear of the higher step made by the church in this direction. We contemplate many programs in the East this coming winter.

Any time that I can be of service in any way do not fail to request it.

Your colaborer in Christ,

Orval L. Thompson.

Cottage Grove, Tennessee, August 4, 1924.

Brethren:

I was made to rejoice when I noticed in the HERALD that we (the church) are to have a powerful broadcasting station. I have been advocating such for two years. I am sure this is a wise move.

This letter is to assure you of my hearty cooperation in the matter. Please send me all the information you can on the subject as soon as possible so I can get busy.

Sincerely yours,

Curtis L. Ross.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—Your program Thursday evening, July 24, was excellent. This is the first time I have heard you. Will listen often. Your station comes in loud and clear. Keep up this splendid work.—Rudolph Pape, 491 Thirtieth Avenue.

Wesleyville, Pennsylvania.—I wish to thank you for the many fine programs I have heard from your station during the winter and spring. It is now impossible to pick you up, as my summer range seems to be about five hundred miles, so please do not send me programs until October 1, when I expect conditions will be better, and my range will be up to two thousand or more miles.—M. L. Glenn.

Box 408.

El Paso, Illinois.—Your radio concerts are greatly enjoyed. Thanks for the schedule you send me each week.—Gail Johnson.

Adrian, Michigan.—It has been my pleasure to receive your programs through the mail as well as by radio, and I wish to say that I am greatly pleased to be able to tune in on K F I X when they are on the air. Thank you for your wonderful programs.—W. W. Suman.

A Lasting Tribute to Consecrated Saints

Whatever may have been the mistakes of the early Saints in Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, and elsewhere, and what the temporary work they did, there are some marks that abide the years and constantly bear a tribute to the source of their inspiration, as well as to the devotion by which they followed the leadings of the Spirit which builds for eternity.

One of these, and one which is located where many of the sightseers of the Nation have had opportunity to view it, is Kirtland Temple, builded by the devoted consecration of a comparatively small band of Latter Day Saints in the thirties of the nineteenth century. It is fortunate that the Reorganization has possession and control of the property, and it is not unfortunate that this ownership came after a fight in the courts of the land, for by this fight certain truths were brought into prominence and established which have been useful to missionaries, isolated Saints, and congregations ever since the opinion of the court was made public, February 23, 1880.

Kirtland Temple has many advantages because of its location, and among them our attention is called by the recent appearance of the accompanying write-up in the Painesville Telegraph, and the account of the Kirtland reunion from the pen of Brother William Patterson, to the fact that within a short distance of the sacred walls are a large number of enterprising and competent journals, some of which have been eminently fair in their treatment of the Saints during past General Conferences and reunions.

To make such favorable publicity as this, requires several factors, including the industry, faith, and wisdom of the early Saints; the devotion and careful living of Saints of the present day; breadth of mind and freedom from prejudice of journalists dealing with our people at Kirtland; and back and at the bottom of all the spirit of consecration to God and his purposes, to man's chosen field of activity. Even then HERALD readers might never have been permitted to have perused these appended lines from the Telegraph had not the eyes of a man who is awake to the interests of the cause beheld them, and had this man failed to sense the pleasure HERALD readers would take in reading what a journal of the world has to say about a building and a people which is sacred to them.

We are indebted also to Brother William Patterson for transmitting this newspaper cutting:

Mormons Assemble at Place Where Founders of Faith Once Dwelled

Pilgrims Who Gather at Kirtland for Reunion, Pitch Tents in Shadow of Venerable Old Temple Which Has Nobly Withstood Storms and Strife of Years

The annual reunion of the members of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints began this morning at Kirtland with the arrival of the first pilgrims from far-away points of the Nation—pilgrims who arrived early and who came in a steady stream all morning and will continue to arrive until more than two thousand voyagers are gathered in the quiet little village on the hill.

They are pitching their tents on the ground where dwelled the founders of their belief and in the shadow of the venerable old temple which their forebears built and which has nobly withstood the storms of nature and of political and religious strife.

Ninety years the temple has stood there on the hill, defying the ravages of time and bigotry, a monument to the faith of its founders and the artistry of its builders.

Reminiscent of the day of the temple's dedication must be the scenes that surround it to-day, when friend meets friend in joyous handclasp and the mingling of a thousand voices raised skyward in a harmony profound.

Kirtland is a pretty little village ten miles southwest of Painesville and four miles south of Mentor. It was settled in 1831 when Joseph Smith led fifty families of the Mormon belief to the highlands overlooking Lake Erie where they hewed themselves homes out of the wilderness; and to-day the visitor still feels the spell of years long since past and senses the spirit of a dauntless people who, whatever the virtues of their religion, possessed the fullest measure of faith.

Remarkable Architecture

The building of the Kirtland Temple began in 1833, and it was dedicated in 1836, and it stands to-day as one of the most remarkable examples of architecture and construction on the North American continent.

Four distinct styles of architecture are blended into an harmonious whole—the Roman Doric, the Egyptian, the Gothic, and the Colonial—a feat to test the capacity of the highest-trained architect of modern times; and yet the men who designed and built the temple at Kirtland were unlearned woodsmen who knew nothing of the science of Archimedes.

Every stone, every piece of wood that went into the temple, was hewed into shape by hand.

From the sandstone walls to the sixty-foot girders and beams, from the fine-turned moldings to the smooth pannels of the doors and pews, all was gathered in from the frowning hills and circling forest, and fashioned into shape, and fitted into place without the aid of a blueprint or an engineer's quadrant.

In the building of the Kirtland Temple, every one of the village shared, men and women, officers and laity. It is said that Joseph Smith dug in the quarry and that Sidney Rigdon, his chief lieutenant, labored on the walls.

The temple is little changed from the day on which it was dedicated. It is a massive structure of hewn native stone and is plastered both within and without.

The dimensions are 59 by 79 feet and the walls run 60 feet in height. The height of the tower is 120 feet. The two main walls are 55 by 65 feet in the inner court, and the building has two vestries in front and five rooms in the attic which were devoted to literature and for the meetings of the various quorums.

Imparts Sense of Sacred Awe

There is a peculiarity in the arrangement of the inner court which makes it more than ordinarily impressive—so much so that a sense of sacred awe seems to rest upon all who enter.

Four pulpits stand one above the other in the center of the building from north to south, both on the east and west ends; those on the west are for the officers of the higher priesthood and those on the east are for the officers of the lower priesthood, called the Aaronic.

Each of the pulpits was in earlier days separated by curtains which were let down and drawn up at pleasure.

In front of each of the two rows of pulpits is a sacrament table for the administration of that ordinance.

In addition to the pulpit curtains there were others intersecting at right angles which divided the main floor into four equal sections, giving to each section one half of one set of pulpits.

The second floor is similar in arrangement to the first, and the entire building is planned, not alone for convenience, but, it is apparent, for the creation of a devotional atmosphere.

The interior woodwork is curiously and beautifully carved, and all the decorations have dignity and grace.

Is Imposing Structure

All in all, the Kirtland Temple is an imposing and impressive structure and, whether inspired by God, as believed by the members of the faith, or whether inspired by men, one cannot but feel that its builders were animated by deep and abiding purposes.

Opposition to the faith of the Latter Day Saints, which grew to the extent of actual oppression, drove the Kirtland religionists out of their temple in 1838, and they fled east into Illinois.

There the persecution flared out anew after a few years and had its culmination in the assassination of Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum by a mob in Carthage, Illinois, in 1844.

Out of the confusion attendant upon the assassination came the rise of Brigham Young to the leadership of many of the faith who followed him into Utah where they established themselves on the shores of the Great Salt Lake.

The larger part of the Saints had refused to accompany Young as a leader, and these people settled down in small groups in Illinois and Iowa, repudiating every change that Young made in the original doctrine of Mormonism, particularly in regard to polygamy.

In 1860, the Saints who had rejected Young's leadership reorganized the church under the guidance of the son of their slain founder and continued their mission where he had left off.

In the interim between 1836 and 1860 the Kirtland Temple was left to its own resources. While the Saints were away, it was put to various uses by residents in the vicinity, and at one time the garret rooms were used as a high school.

It is said that a young fellow who was afterward to drive a canal boat and become president of the United States—one James Garfield—worried over the square root and sought the missing dimension in one of the garret rooms in the Kirtland Temple.

For a while following the Reorganization, the title of the temple was obscured, but finally, by the findings of the Court of Common Pleas in Lake County, it was decided that the Reorganized Church was the true successor to the original church and as such entitled to all its property and legal rights.

Joseph Smith, the second, President of the church from the time of its reorganization in 1860, died in 1914, and his place was taken by his son Frederick, grandson of the founder of the sect, who is the church's head to-day, and in attendance at the Kirtland reunion.—Painesville Telegraph, August 9, 1924.

Inaccuracy of Newspaper Accounts

The following clipping from the Kansas City Post, under the heading, "Mormon aide dies; Woman, 93, once in attempt to save Joseph Smith," has been sent to us with the request that we discuss it.

GALESBURG, ILLINOIS, August 13.—Funeral arrangements were made to-day for Mrs. Almira Janet Bacon, ninety-three years old, who made an attempt to save the life of Joseph Smith, Mormon leader, who was killed while trying to escape from jail in the Mormon war in Nauvoo. She was present when a mob burned the Mormon Temple in Nauvoo and started the Mormons on their hejira to Utah. She came to western Illinois in an oxen-drawn wagon in 1839.

Joseph Smith was assassinated eighty years ago last June, so that Mrs. Bacon would have been thirteen years old if now ninety-three. As to the nature of the attempt, if any, by a girl of thirteen, we have no information. In fact, we have no information of an attempt to save his life at Carthage.

Also, Joseph Smith was not killed while trying to escape from jail. He had voluntarily surrendered, had placed himself under the protection of the governor of Illinois, who was present in Hancock County in person and who had left Carthage that morning to go to Nauvoo. While the governor was absent, the Carthage Greys who were left as guard to the jail, themselves conducted the assault. The most that Joseph Smith did was to try to escape being killed. Being wounded, he went to the window to give a signal of distress, and was there again shot and fell from the window. The statement that he was trying to escape from jail is not correct. It is a very different proposition: he was trying to get out of the way of the bullets of a mob.

As to the burning of the Nauvoo Temple, that took place about October 8, 1848, in the nighttime. The immigration took place in 1846. Brigham Young and party reached the location of Salt Lake City in July, 1847. Evidently, therefore, the burning of the temple did not "start the Mormons on their hejira to Utah." It did not start anything. Those who were going had left some two years before.

Joseph Smith, the late President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was a boy in Nauvoo at the time. Of course he was not in the presence of the mob, so was not present at the burning. Possibly this statement means only that Mrs. Bacon as a girl was living near the City of Nauvoo, for one would be reluctant to believe that a girl of seventeen was present with the mob when the temple was burned.

A girl coming to western Illinois in 1839 in an ox-drawn wagon has undoubtedly seen much of very great interest in the history of that State in the past eighty-five years. It seems a pity that in this very brief account of her life so many inaccuracies should have occurred.

Problems Raised and Solved by Radio

There is no question but what the radio has come to stay, and that it will become a mighty factor in the preaching of the gospel; and it may be one of the factors that is to play an important part in the hastening time, which is doubtless upon us.

Before us lies a chart giving the progress in the various sciences from the twentieth century B. C. to 1922 A. D., and the astounding fact is presented that the first twenty-two years of the twentieth century A. D. has seen more progress than any whole century preceding. This indicates that the hastening time is here in more ways than one. And if this progress in scientific discovery better equips men for the common business of life, is it not just as true that the man who desires to carry the gospel message to men may also be better equipped for his work by the application of the discoveries of science? May we not conclude, too, that these discoveries in the realm of science, are especially designed of God to assist in the spreading of truth to the nations?

The benefits of radio in church services are pointed out by a writer quoted by the Literary Digest for August 23. He listened in on a service of a splendidly equipped church in a city. The music was delightful. The prayers and reading of the scriptural lesson were very much enjoyed. The sermon was simple, practical, and wholesome, and he was glad that he had listened in. A few Sundays later he attended a service held in a small village church. And this is what the Digest quotes him as saying:

The music was monstrous. The organ was out of tune, and a choir composed of the neighborhood cats would have rendered, or rended, the anthems more effectively. The psalm and scripture were read in a way that showed the reader had no comprehension of what he was doing. The prayer was an insult to the Creator and a slander to the congregation. The sermon was noisy, silly, unpractical, weak, and worthless.

He sums up his observations by saying in substance that the people who listened in to the first sermon were probably numbered by the thousand, while those who heard the second numbered but fifty-one, and he concludes that was forty-five too many; that the preacher, organist, and quartet had a right, perhaps, to torture each other, but they had no right to torture the people who sat in the pews.

To some this is seen as a menace to the country church; that people will stay at home and listen in to the services of the well-equipped city church while the country church will be neglected. But this writer makes some very trite observations upon this feature, and sees in the radio the opportunity to make the country church much more effective for good than it is now. He foresees a speedy revolution in the country church, and its salvation from "utter dissolution." He says:

Instead of the ordinary barnlike meetinghouse there will be a chapel good to look at and an interior suggestive of worship, meditation, and prayer. Instead of an organ, there will be a well-equipped radio. Instead of a choir making day hideous, songs will be caught out of the air, in which the congregation may join, led by some one who knows enough to beat time. Instead of a preacher who cannot preach but makes up for his defect by noise and bluster, the people will listen to some one who has something to say and knows how to say it. The radio, when a little further perfected, as Marconi assures us it soon will be, must certainly supplant the pitiful and painful service of the ordinary country church.

And what is to become of the country parson? He will give himself to the work which he can do, that of organizing the social life of the rural community, and superintending the Sunday radio services. To that end he will have to be trained. He will have to know what to do with boys and girls who now run wild in the village streets; he will have to know what to do with the young men who now loaf about the station and poolroom and tell smutty stories. He will have to know what to do for the women whose chief recreation is gossip, and the men who work, work, and have no idea of adequate recreation. We are on the verge of a tremendous revolution in the conduct of the rural church. Let's get ready for it.

There are men who can preach, but they cannot organize the social life of the community in which they may labor. There are men who cannot preach, but they are experts in the work of organizing the local forces and enlisting them in the cause of right and advancement. To these latter the radio offers wondrous opportunities for the accomplishment of good.

A Glimpse at Government

BY RALPH W. FARRELL

We get an understanding of government by studying the meaning of the word govern: "1. To regulate by authority. 2. To regulate; to direct; to restrain; to manage." And in an intransitive sense, "To exercise authority; to administer the laws; to have control." Government, then, is "Mode of governing; system of polity in a state; body politic," etc.

A good government exists when it includes good laws, wise and honest administrators, and willing, intelligent subjects. Just laws might be evaded or poorly administered. Proper rulers might have unwilling subjects. And there might be good leaders and intelligent followers hampered by unjust laws. Any one of these difficulties could be remedied. The most savage tribe possesses government of some sort. One cannot imagine progress without government. The home, the office, the prison, the army, the game must have government; for they all need managing, regulating, directing, restraining. This must be done by authority; some one must be responsible; the competent head of the home may be a woman—if so, we say, all blessing to that mother. The Lord has said that in the church "The elders shall see that my law is kept." This is in harmony with the meaning of government—the administration of the "rules of the camp" must rest with some authorized person or persons; and in this case the Lord has placed it with the priesthood.

There are governments despotic, in which the laws curtail the God-given rights of the people. There are governments too lax in law enforcement. There are governments which have too many laws; and still others, which have, possibly, too few. None will deny that the ideal form of government is God's kingdom. However, we do not affirm that this form of government is possible at all times in all places. Quite the contrary is the fact. A kingdom would connote a king. The kingdom of God can never be established perfectly on earth till he comes to reign whose right it is to reign, even the Lord. Latter Day Saints understand this matter very well. One of the last revelations given through the President of the church contained this information: "The Lord has said that this condition of obedience to law must continue until he comes whose right it is to reign over his people." (Doctrine and Covenants 128:7.) In 1831 it was declared to the church that in due season the Lord would come and reign with his people. (Ibid. 43:7.) He "now reigneth in the heavens, and will reign till he descends on the earth to put all enemies under his feet." (Ibid. 49:2.) "Wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet." (Ibid. 58:5.)

In this paper we need only refer by name to the governments which exist in the Old World; in fact, not even by name, for they do not concern the subject under examination. It is necessary, however, that we refresh our mind with a few facts about the Government of the United States.

First, it is well to note that the country in which most of the readers of the HERALD live, is a republic, which is "a state in which the sovereign power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them; it is a commonwealth."

In this definition, we note, there is no reference to God. In the Government of this Republic there is no one chosen by the people to represent God or be God's officers or ministers. In this respect the Government of the United States cannot be compared to the government of the Church of Christ, for in the body of Christ we find that God himself set "apostles, prophets, pastors," etc., for the work of the ministry, the edifying of the body of Christ. These representatives are called by the person they are to be agents for, ordained by one having authority, and chosen by the people to perform such work as they have been called to do. Here, then, we have an order which has no parallel in the organization by which this country is governed. We have in the church the element of supernaturalism, which is distinct and by itself. This power can be used for good but never for bad purpose. When the people ceased to honor it, it was "caught up." Moses and the priesthood were taken out of the midst of Israel.

It has been well and truthfully said that the "church is a theocratic-democracy—not man made, but of divine appointment and origin." Also, that "the government of the church is by divine authority through priesthood."

For a century the ministry has been contending for the recognition of this great truth. To-day the proper emphasis must not be shifted. A clear understanding of the relation of theocracy to democracy, and vice versa, must obtain if the church with united front is to go forward. Whoever writes or speaks to bring about a correct understanding of the great and terrific problems before us is not out of tune with the demand of the hour, provided he is moved by sincerity and seeks to make plain his meaning by appeals to the law.

The citations in support of this affirmation may well be given here: Matthew 16:18: "I will build my church," says Christ, "and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Doctrine and Covenants 1:5: "Behold I am God, and have spoken it; these commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding; . . . might have power to lay the foundation of this church," etc. 3 Nephi 10:1: "I will establish my church among them."

"The government of the church is by divine authority through priesthood." Can anything be said more truthful than that? The laws come from God. Doctrine and Covenants 38:7: "Go to the Ohio, and there I will give unto you my law." Paragraph 9: "I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded."

"Through priesthood." If the government of the church is not carried on by the officers of the church, by whom is it carried on? "My elders shall see that my law is kept." The word elder is a synonym for priesthood. The scripture is plain: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood" (Acts 20:28). "Obey them that have the rule over you" (Hebrews 13:17). "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor" (1 Timothy 6:17). "God hath set in the church" different officers.

But this "ruling" (as Paul uses the term, in no ill sense, of course, for no man of himself is to be a ruler, as the Lord has said, "Let no man think that he is ruler"), this "overseeing," etc., must be done in harmony with the law of the Lord; "all things must be done in righteousness." And inasmuch as the church of Christ is not composed of hundreds of independent churches (or branches or stakes or groups), the government of the lesser organizations must be in accord with the government of the main organization, or division and disaster to the cause of unity would result. It is utterly useless to suppose that any body of people can prosper, can build up the work of God, if that body does not work along the line God has marked. For this reason, if any part of the church fall into disorder that fact must be determined by the proper authorities, who, with minds illuminated by the spirit of light, will consult the laws governing such matters. For example, if a branch is out of order, the fact could hardly be determined by the parties concerned directly, for they would naturally be prejudiced—and to be prejudiced is to have the mind darkened.

God has provided district presidents, stake presidents, mission presidents, and in the last analysis, main church presidents, whose duty it is to investigate and act according to the findings.

Such system (and no good is accomplished, as a rule, by incoherent methods) protects the smaller bodies; it provides for appeals, redress, and final settlement in harmony with organic law. When a part of the body is out of order the whole body is affected, states Paul, and any remedy must be such as to heal the wound without injuring other parts of the body. This happy result cannot obtain if bodies are working independent of other bodies. This fact is so apparent that I feel like apologizing to my readers for presenting it at so great a length.

"God directs the church through clearly indicated channels; and his voice is the directing power of the church." Believing the church to be built on the divine Rock, we gladly agree to the foregoing proposition. And we have already learned through whom this direction comes. We are further agreed on the proposition that the Lord will not give conflicting direction.

"In organic expression and functioning there must be recognized grades of official prerogative and responsibility, with supreme directional control resting in the Presidency as the chief and first quorum of the church."

To the first phase of this proposition everyone will agree—that there are grades of official responsibility; that the priest, for example, is endowed with authority to perform official acts (such as baptism) which are not required of the teacher. If we admit the logic of the first part of the proposition, we virtually admit that of the last; for in an organized priesthood, with its ascendant order of prerogatives, we eventually come to officers who hold the highest or most complete functioning power or authority. In harmony with the revelations given to the church, by which it is to be governed, this highest or supreme directional control is the First Presidency, or the president and his counselors. Before we furnish proof to support this statement, let the mind dwell for a moment on the meaning of the terms before us.

Why excitement over the words supreme, directional, control? The word supreme, as used in this connection, is a well-chosen term, for it does not mean exclusive; it simply means the highest. I have heard no objection raised to the statement that there are a higher and a lower priesthood in the church. Who objects to the fact that there is a highest quorum in the church? Would we claim that the deacons quorum is as high in its prerogative, scope, power as the quorum of the First Presidency? Then what quorum is? We can hardly descry the word directional for we read that the seventy are to act under the direction of the twelve (Doctrine and Covenants 104:13); the twelve under the direction of the presidency (Ibid. 104:12); etc. It is well to note that the seventy do not direct the twelve nor do the twelve direct the presidency. Why not? Because there is a gradation of authority, or prerogative, or scope of office.

The word control is an appropriate word. Others could have been used to express the same thought. The noun has several synonyms; such as, regulation, check, restraint. The verb is well supplied with meanings; such as, to restrain, rule, govern, manage, guide, regulate, hinder, direct, check, etc. There is nothing terrible in this term, is there?

The term, then, supreme directional control, does not infer that no other officer has control, that direction is confined to the First Presidency. The word supreme implies the reverse; on every officer is placed authority to direct; but such direction must be mediate (that is, acting between the highest authority as its representative and the persons directed). Or, if we like the word immediate better, then we may say that all lesser (the person who is bound to see only "honor" in holding the priesthood will get tangled in the words lesser, chief, etc.) officers work directly with the people as assistants to the president of the church, for his task is to be overseer of the entire church. Is it inconsistent to claim that the man directed is an assistant to the one directing? that the twelve are assistants to the presidency, the seventies to the twelve, and that the seventies labor indirectly (and if necessary directly, as every other officer) under the direction of the first presidency? In the light of this reasoning, what is the objection to the term chief overseer? for surely the president of the church is such; not of the souls of men, but of the official workings of the church. Paul was not misled in using the term overseer, when he said to the elders: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flocks, over the which the Holy Ghost has made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he has purchased with his own blood."—Acts 20:28.

I cannot conceive how the thing can be otherwise if we are to have concerted action, a united policy. Surely the president of the church, through whom comes the revelations to the people, and to whom is given the right to interpret the meaning of the message which comes through him, will be held responsible for any neglect on his part in seeing that those instructions are carried to complete fulfillment. The term theocratic is not a mere play on words. And a contemplation of the principle of God working in an orderly way in his church, reveals the beauty and power of the latter-day work. Tear away the garments of divinity, cast aside the priesthood, and you have nothing left but a naked skeleton pointing a hideous finger of condemnation at the people who deny the power of God. (And I do not mean that all there is in the church is priesthood and skeleton; I mean that without the priesthood we have only the skeleton of a church.)

This question of distinctive authority (priesthood) is the whole kernel of the nut—the crux of the whole matter: the thing that segregates, as it were, our church from other churches. Break down this wall and we walk freely into sectarianism; the wall of partition is rent from top to bottom. If we hold to priesthood we must hold to the order or orders of that priesthood. We must recognize authority or quit the game. And if there is no authority, there is nothing under the church more than under any other church. If a president is simply a chairman, wherein does he differ from the rest of the membership, for any member might preside over a business meeting, a general conference? If lesser officers or non-officers hold equal right with him, wherein does he differ from them? If we keep on running down the gamut to the lower end we shall have nothing but chaotic sound left. And I assert that while there are many superficial issues before us, and issues which appear plausible on the surface, and are parts of the big issue, the real issue, underneath all factional issues, is the issue whether or not we are willing to respect the rights of and recognize the existence of priesthood, properly functioning, in the Church of Jesus Christ.

Central government is government by the priesthood. It is called central government because supreme directional control is located at the center, or headquarters; the center is the nearest of approach by all parts of the rim; from the center comes the law, and to the center go cases for final adjudication. At the center is located the presiding bishopric who, with twelve high priests, try the president in case of transgression. At the center is located the "highest council of the church of God, and a final decision upon controversies, in spiritual matters." (Doctrine and Covenants 104:35.) Here the general conference meets, to which every member of the church by his vote may send a delegate to represent him on the floor of that assembly, and here the humblest member has a right to be heard and is heard, and has the power (the agency) to vote against a revelation itself which comes from God.

Such are some of the features which must characterize central government, and which though pictured by some as a danger, does not have a sinister look upon its face; but rather reflects the wisdom of God who restored the church to earth, bright as the sun (which is in the center of our solar system, but reflects its rays in all directions) and terrible as an army with banners.

Neither does this system, which protects the humblest member and provides for the impeachment of its president if guilty of wrongdoing, support even the hint of a reigning earthly monarch, or an autocrat or anything else that is contrary to the principles of liberty and justice.

The Prophet Daniel saw that the time would come when the God of heaven would set up his kingdom (Daniel 2: 44); and Jesus, in speaking of this kingdom, said that it was not of this world. Emerson, speaking of truth, said that though it were born in a manger it would live till it had all souls for its kingdom. And the prophet said that the kingdoms of this world would become the kingdom of our Lord (Revelation 11: 15.) The "little stone" was not cut out of the mountain by mortal hand. The church of Jesus Christ is not man made. It is neither a democracy nor a republic. The constitution of the church is not the Constitution of the United States nor of any other State. God's laws come direct to the people through God's mouthpieces. In these laws there is no provision for the uniting of church and state. When the will of God is done on earth as it is done in heaven, there will be but one government, and its king will be God.

To some this may sound platitudinous and superfluous, but the seriousness of the case we plead justifies the use of every honest effort to make plain the subject before us. It is true that hearts bleed, but they can never be healed by man-made ointment; nothing but truth will save, and not that unless believed and obeyed. Honest investigators will not raise the question of who's who? but of what's what?

In another paper we shall consider the subject of democracy and other phases of government, and submit further proof-texts taken from the three books, in support of the claim that the government of the church is inherent in the priesthood with supreme directional power resident in the first presidency. Also evidence to prove that what is commonly called a pure democracy cannot exist, and that the United States is a republic with democracy as one of its elements only; that "pure and unadulterated democracy" has always been a failure, except, possibly, in primitive communities or in village life; that there is not a purely democratic government among civilized races anywhere on the globe; that "common consent" in no wise includes in its meaning the moral right on the part of the non-official member (except in case of dire emergency) to dictate, initiate, direct, or in any way usurp the prerogatives of the priesthood. I shall attempt to show this and more.

The Case From Another Standpoint

In the SAINTS' HERALD for July 23, under the caption, "Other apostles express views," is found reference to the work of the April council, misrepresentative of the said council, and innocently set forth, since the brethren were not possessed of the full facts in the case. We, the undersigned members of the Quorum of Twelve in attendance at the council, that there may be no misunderstanding among the Saints relate here the real genesis and action of the council. We do it in kindly feeling, with malice toward none, and in love for all.

As the Saints well know, funds were not coming to the coffers of the church in sufficient amount to carry forward the program of the fiscal year as outlined and undertaken. The Presiding Bishop had asked of the First Presidency a council of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, to advise as to the best course to pursue. In consultation with the Standing High Council of the church, and acting on advice of the High Council, the Presidency called a council of the First Presidency, members of the Quorum of Twelve in America, and the Order of Bishops, to include all the bishops in America who could attend. These men met April 15 and continued in session until April 25, there being present the three of the First Presidency, eight of the Twelve, and twenty-one of a total of twenty-eight bishops.

It was clearly stated and understood that the function of the council was advisory only. The council was not called to give direction, neither did it undertake to do so, nor was it requested to do so at any time.

In the first session for discussion, it developed that among the things contributing to the financial embarrassment of the church was a difference of opinion between the First Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric as to the relation of these officers one to the other. It was quite generally if not unanimously conceded that any provision omitting a rapprochement of the First Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric would not realize the results sought. The discussion naturally and of its own accord drifted until it took in the entire field of church government. At this juncture the council by vote asked the President of the church to formulate in a documentary statement his opinion covering the entire matter of government in the church.

The next day, the First Presidency submitted in compliance with the request of the council their joint opinion, covering not alone the temporal affairs of the church, but the entire field of government in the church. With some emendations these articles were indorsed by the council, as already published in the HERALD.

This, with other advisory conclusions of the council, also published, concluded the work of the council, which was adjourned, our understanding being the articles on church government would be submitted to the next General Conference for consideration.

Speaking of "supreme directional control" in its general aspect, we understand that the position of the President of the church is as follows: General Conference (with the possible exception of the General Assembly) is the highest legislative body in the church. But General Conference is not executive. The law and order of the church as set forth in the three standard books, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, and in the resolutions from time to time adopted by the General Conference, and policies from time to time approved by the conference, are and must be administered and executed by the executive officers of the church in their various capacities and callings; chief and first among these executives, having oversight of the work of the whole church in all departments, is the First Presidency. This in no way invades the rights of the General Conference, and the Presidency though first in the executive branch of church activity must administer in harmony with the constitutional law and in harmony with General Conference enactments.

This position was clearly set forth by President Frederick M. Smith at one session of the joint council, and more recently in a personal letter to one of the brethren in reply to a letter of inquiry, as follows:

In the church, as in all organizations where a form of efficient government is needed, there seems to have been provision made in the law for the fine balance had when the three divisions into legislative, judicial, and executive departments are recognized and maintained. For efficiency of administration to be had, supreme directional control must lodge somewhere. Our law clearly places this with the Presidency, as the April council has expressed. And this directional control is for the purpose of carrying out the policies which have been determined by prophetic instruction and legislative approval and legislative enactments in harmony with constitutional law and divine command. It is of course not presumed or assumed that supreme directional control shall be exerted outside the purposes of the church as determined by the law and the objective of endeavor. That is to say, the directional control shall be in harmony with law and General Conference enactment based on the constitutional law, but in the executive line shall be supreme.

With reference to the direction of the funds of the church, the President of the church stated before the council in effect: I do not claim the right to dispense the funds of the church. My contention is not that in this matter I am supreme. It is that the Bishop is not supreme. I hold that no man has the right to spend the money of the church, obligate the church to pay, or otherwise order important temporal affairs of the church, only as the church in General Conference shall direct, or as in emergency between conferences the proper councils shall of necessity determine.

To summarize the situation, with a few additional statements for information, it may be stated as follows:

1. The Bishop asked for a council of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric. This council as asked for—confining the call to the Twelve in America—was brought together; together with twenty-one of the twenty-eight bishops resident in America, who were added thereunto. That this addition of the bishops was not prejudicial to the temporal interests of the church will be clear when it is recalled that these are the very men who administer for the church in things temporal in all the country, and that it put the bishops in the council overwhelmingly in the majority.

2. The sole purpose and endeavor of the council was advisory. And most assuredly there can be no reasonable objection to such a council for advisory purposes.

3. The council did not seek arbitrarily and on its own authority or in any other way to change the governmental practice of the church. It only expressed an opinion, in the hope that this might help bring together the First Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric, eventually to be carried to the General Conference for consideration. That in this the council was well within its rights is attested by the custom in quorum and council work from the beginning. Indeed, anyone of the council, or anyone else for that matter, might so formulate matter for conference consideration, as is the universal practice among us.

4. The council made no demand of the Bishop to comply with its advisory action in the matter of church government. Nor are we aware that anyone else has undertaken to direct the Bishop to comply therewith.

5. The President of the church asked what was to be the attitude of the Bishop. This, however, was not with a view to compel him to conform to the opinion of the council. And, indeed, when the Bishop announced at the closing session that he could not conform, the President only commended the spirit manifest, expressing the hope the spirit exercising the man might come to exercise the officer, and stating we would move along to work out matters together the best we could, with frequent consultation between officers and quorums.

6. Among courses open to the council in its advisory capacity were these: To advise retrenchment; or work to the end of a better understanding and spirit in the hope such would bring the funds needed. The council took the latter course, believing the fraternity and fellowship developed during the sessions might and ought to continue, bringing to the church coffers necessary funds, the church thereby avoiding the cutting of departments and institutions below the naked necessity basis, and the calling in of missionaries from the field.

7. A committee of three was appointed by the council to publish such news of its work as might serve to this and other good ends. It was the original purpose of this committee, as we are advised, not to refer in any way to the articles on church government passed by the council, but they were to be left for the General Conference. Nor were these articles made public until after the Presidency had been notified of their release from the editorship of the HERALD, and "An open letter" had been drawn up and signed; their first public appearance being on reading at a priesthood meeting in Zion, Sunday, June 1, the action releasing the Presidency from editorial work, and the drawing up and signing of "An open letter" antedating that day. That the publication of "An open letter" in the HERALD preceded that of the articles on church government is well known, the former appearing June 4 and the latter June 18; all of which should make it clear that the entire matter has been crowded by neither the council nor the committee of the council.

8. At no time was there protest against consideration of matters before the council, the only observation being the council was without jurisdiction to issue direction, which was at once and always admitted.

9. The council adjourned under an excellent spirit. Good will and fellowship were unanimously expressed. A better day seemed at hand. The undersigned went forth under their pledge to help make this new day possible, lifting up their voices among the people in hope and confidence. So it was that to us as well as to the Saints in general "An open letter" came as a very great shock.

We calmly await consideration by the conference. We counsel moderation. We have hope of Zion's redemption, to which consummation with the faithful we shall bend our every energy.

Some Educational Problems Involved in the Establishment of Zion.—No. 3

This number deals with discipline, amusements, and other fundamental questions in an incidental or primary way.

BY A. MAX CARMICHAEL

We have been discussing the ways and means whereby youth absorbs the moral and spiritual heritage of the race. In our last article we delineated and illustrated one of these methods. It was that the child tends to accept as true whatever we pass on to him as truth; that if we can pass it on to him without any implication that it is to be questioned, it will be accepted the more easily; that the child in solving the problems which come up in life is indeed looking for advice from those who have solved these problems, and when these older ones appear to know how to solve these problems, he has a tendency to accept their solutions without question, and to apply these solutions to his problems.

We Desire Approval and Avoid Disapproval

We come now to a second method. This second method finds its innate basis in human nature in our desire to have the approval of those persons who make up our social world, and to avoid their disapproval. Nothing is so effective to restrain us from doing a thing as the disapproval of those persons around us who make up our social life. Nothing invites us to do a thing so much as the approval of these persons. To have the disapproval of our fellow beings brings us a bodily and emotional discomfort that is almost unbearable. It is a very unusual person that can withstand the disapproval of his friends. Then, too, if these persons whose approval we desire add along with their disapproval of our acts an accompaniment of bodily discomfiture or pain, it is still harder for us to resist their disapproval. If these persons whose disapproval we shun actually go out to strengthen their disapproval with ostracism or physical pain, we find it irresistible, almost without exception.

Illustration From Family Life

Let us illustrate in the family. We will use an illustration that we have used before. Not only does eight-year-old Johnnie not play with dolls because father's looks tell him not to, but also because father's looks are such as to show Johnnie that he seriously disapproves of it. Johnnie not only accepts father's looks as the truth, because Johnnie is ignorant, and he wants to know how to act, but also because father's disapproval brings discomfort to his own spirits. Johnnie finds that to throw the doll to one side brings a look of approval in father's face, and a resulting state of satisfaction to himself. Johnnie now feels good. He didn't feel good while father was looking his disapproval. If father should supplement his look of disapproval with ostracism, that is, by putting Johnnie in the closet, or woodshed, or out of the room, temporarily, Johnnie's inclination to stop playing with dolls will be much strengthened. It is very difficult for Johnnie to withstand ostracism. Ostracism is one of the most potent methods to supplement one's disapproval of another's actions. To have to get down from the table at mealtime, when all of the family is there, is hard to endure, not so much because of failure to get food, as the desire not to be ostracised, to be out of one's social circle. It is a very effective method of punishment. Or if father should supplement his disapproval by inflicting bodily pain, Johnnie finds it harder to resist father's desires. It is beside our point here to discuss which mode of strengthening father's disapproval, some form of temporary ostracism, or inflicting of bodily pain, is the more effective. Undoubtedly when both are used together, as the method of sending Johnnie to the woodshed to await the thrashing, it is a very effective method, so far at least as getting results temporarily. Our desire here is to illustrate this method whereby society can pass on to its youth its moral and spiritual heritage. The youth tends to absorb that which his social world approves, and to avoid that which his social world disapproves, and particularly so if the disapproval is supplemented by this social world ostracizing him, or shunning and avoiding him, or by this social world inflicting him with physical pain.

Or, father may reward Johnnie if he will quit playing with dolls. This is also effective in bringing Johnnie into complete accord with father in his desire that Johnnie should not play with dolls. Father may bring him a horn or a whistle or a kite and actually take part with Johnnie in the playing with the horn or whistle or kite. This is the opposite of ostracism and inflicting of pain. This is increased association. It brings Johnnie a great deal of pleasure, and thus adds to his willingness to abide by father's sense of propriety or sense of moral values. Even though Johnnie in his own heart would prefer the doll to the kite, father's willingness to associate with him, to play with him, which in itself brings pleasure to Johnnie, may be sufficient to bring Johnnie into complete accord with father, and to bring about a complete removal of the desire to play with dolls. Increased association brings satisfaction, as ostracism brings dissatisfaction.

We could probably get up quite a discussion among our readers should we advocate that buying a kite to substitute for the doll, and father's actually helping Johnnie to fly the kite is or is not a better method of passing on to Johnnie father's sense of propriety than that of merely telling Johnnie to drop the doll, and sending him to bed to emphasize father's disapproval. Especially within the last two decades, reformers of methods of rearing children have been advocating, rightly or wrongly, the increased use of substituting something which the child can do in the place of the thing we wish him not to do, and the increased use of association with the child in the thing we would have him do in place of the thing we would have him not do. Some are advocating that it be used entirely; that ostracism, or bodily pain be absolutely forbidden. Some admit that ostracism and bodily pain may be used sparingly and as a course of last resort; some advocate using it considerably, and fear the "soft" pedagogy of the modern parent. These stress Solomon's wisdom in the advice, "He that spareth his rod hateth his son; but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes." They cite the alleged increase of crime among modern youth to prove their point.

We will discuss our opinion of the relative merits of these methods further on. We are attempting here only to describe what is being done by parents; just what ways society does use to pass on its moral and spiritual heritage to its youth, and to bring out some questions relative to their use. In the meantime we would like our readers to be thinking about the problems raised, and perhaps tentatively form some opinions.

Illustrations From Social Life

Perhaps the one illustration from family life will be sufficient to amply illustrate our method in family circles. Let us go into the larger social life. In the day school this method is used much in the same way that it is used in the family. Temporary ostracism is effected by standing the child in the corner, or sending him from the room, or even from the school. Infliction of pain is used much in the same way as it is in the home. In some schools infliction of pain is forbidden, or is surrounded by executive limitations, so as to preclude the school-teacher from using it as freely as the parent. In most schools, however, the teacher uses it with the same freedom as does the parent. Large social pressure is being brought upon school-teachers to use corporal punishment less and less. As the teacher uses corporal punishment, or infliction of pain less and less, there has been an increased resort to ostracism. This, too, some reformers are advocating that the school-teacher should altogether drop using. These reformers are advocating than the teacher use more and more, or even entirely, methods of substituting something in the place of that which they wish not done, and of rewarding the child when he does the substituted act, and of the teacher associating more with the child in the substituted act. School-teachers are probably making more use of the social disapproval of the group towards the refractory child. It is very hard for a refractory kindergarten child to withstand the united disapproval of all the other children in the room. He might withstand the disapproval of the teacher, but when all the children shun him, that's too much. He must conform to their desires. But we hasten over the discussion of the method now being described as applied in the schoolroom, to its application in society at large and in the church.

As the child grows, the social spheres in which he operates grow in numbers and in complexity. The five-year-old child finds companionship with the neighboring children. The eleven-year-old boy enlarges his companionship to the gang and its activities. The twelve-year-old girl becomes a member of the club. As their social life increases in numbers, the number of those whose social approval they desire increases. The boy who is a member of a "gang" wants the approval of the gang. The girl desires the approval of the members of her club, or of her clique. If she has a chum to whom she is attached, the approval of the chum must be had at all costs. How many invitations to smoke a cigaret from the members of his gang can a good-intentioned boy resist when everytime he refuses he realizes the feelings and looks of scorn upon the part of those inviting? "All the other girls do," says the girl so irresistibly to her mother who is objecting to her using the lipstick. The approval of the group is now worth more than the approval of her mother. She simply cannot go out among the girls and have the uncomfortable feelings of self-disrespect which she has with her lips not colored, and all the others with their colored.

When the writer was a lad attending high school, his father ordered him to start home from high school parties one hour earlier than the rest started home. The father was fighting against one of the strongest forces that an individual has to actuate his life, self-respect. The writer's self-respect could not permit him to attend the parties among his friends, with whom he "lived and had his being," and bring upon himself the disapproval of the gang in being the first one to start breaking up the party, especially when he had escorted to such a party a girl, to whom must be given the privilege of saying when we should start home. Needless to say, the injunction was not obeyed, and a crisis was only averted by the writer going to Graceland.

However much we parents may bemoan the fact that now our boy finds satisfaction in the approval of the group rather than in ours, it is a fact with which we must reckon. It is one of the ways the youth learns and establishes his moral standards.

As an evidence of how strong the motives of social approval in life is, consider what boy can steal an article all alone, and not tell his companion, who might approve of the act. Indeed, what young man can commit sexual immorality without telling some of his friends, who he thinks will approve of his act, and glory in his supposed manhood? Illustrating the proposition the other way, what child would dare smoke if all the gang was against his doing it? Don't let us adults think that this method is effective with children and youth only! What man can risk the scorn of the negro porter by giving him a small tip. Even though he knows he will never see the porter again this side of heaven or hell; even though he may actually hate the negro, he simply cannot stand up against that scorn, and the smile of the bystanders amused at his discomfiture. We men simply cannot understand how a woman with a haughty look that starts the porter off merely mumbling to himself can hand him a few remaining pennies for carrying an enormous suitcase. But by no means is woman immune. To go later than February in buying a spring hat! Impossible. No matter how much she may at first be shocked when she sees everybody coming out with dresses with no sleeves in them, she soon orders a dress with no sleeves, and feels a relief that now the struggle between her preconceived notions of good morals in dress, and her desire to have the approval of even strangers on the street whom she never expects to know personally is over. Let her girl wear knickers! Never! But as soon as mother finds out at the club that the other mothers are talking admiringly of the knickers that their girls have recently secured, she feels a relief, and knickers are soon a part of her girl's equipment. When the girl wants knickers, does she tell her mother that she wants them because her chum has them, or does she tell her mother than Mrs. So-and-so thinks knickers are nice. What a triumph she has scored when she sees her mother's look of disapproval wilt under the pressure of Mrs. So-and-so's opinion. The girl is well aware what methods are effective in teaching her mother morals.

What political demagogue dares defy the crowd's opinion. His speech is mainly made up with the announcement of "principles" for which the crowd can whoop and yell. Even the statesman who desires to lift the citizenry to higher levels of citizenship, who wishes to initiate the practice of some higher conception of citizenship, must spend the greater part of his speech in announcement of those principles for which the crowd can clap its assent. In a few brief words, perhaps sandwiched in in the middle of his speech, the statesman announces the new principle which he would have the audience consider and put into practice. Of course there are other motives back of all of this besides the one we are here illustrating and describing, such as working up a feeling of harmony between the speaker and the crowd so that the crowd will be more willing to listen to the new proposal. But there is also the strong feeling within the speaker that he must have the approval of the crowd. It takes a strong, self-opinionated man, with lots of courage, to go strongly against the opinion of the crowd.

Are We "Fit"?

BY JOSEPH LUFF

Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.—1 Corinthians 10: 31.

No one can assist in this work, except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity, being temperate in all things whatsoever shall be intrusted to his care.—Doctrine and Covenants 11: 4.

Trifle not with sacred things.—Doctrine and Covenants 6: 5.

Motive and equipment figure in these scriptures, accompanied with warning against insincerity. The value and importance of the counsel and admonitions admit of no question once we admit that God thought it necessary to give them. We are custodians of divine property when handling the gospel of Christ, or as Paul puts it in 2 Corinthians 4: 7: "We have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us."

In the preceding verse he tells what that "treasure" is:—"The light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

In other words, it is the divine intelligence as focused and illustrated in Christ, committed to our use and benefit that God may be glorified in "earthen vessels."

No time is more opportune for the exhibition of what this implies and for a demonstration of its virtue than when the Adversary is doing his best or worst to divide and destroy the church. And it might be well to remember that the gospel claim has poor vindication, and God would starve on the glory given him by a discussion or contention where the only object of the disputant was to crush his opponent. The first question then for us to decide before beginning is as to what is my object?—is it the glory of God? Becoming satisfied on that point, then look into my equipment. Am I "humble"? or is pride of self and achievement figuring in my movement? Next: Am I "full of love" for my brother with whom I am at a disagreement in judgment, and with whom I am contending over certain questions of principle or procedure, or is it revenge I seek?—to pay him back with heavy usury for injury I think he has done me. Have I faith, hope, and charity? Is my trust in God and my confidence in the righteousness of my attitude in such degree that I am sure he will vindicate it and bring desired results when I have faithfully done my part, without any resort on my part to methods or utterances that have not the Christ ring to them, satisfied of his being at least as much interested in the triumph of right as I possibly can be? Is my charity sufficient to exclude all sarcasm, bitterness, and arrogance from my delivery? Am I satisfied that my position and its advocacy and defense carries all its own needed emphasis when plainly presented in terms I have learned from the gospel? Or do I fear God's lack of interest or his unwillingness to interpose, necessitating the shaking of my fists, the questioning of my opponent's motive, and the harsh denunciation of his attitude by my arraignment? Have I studied myself till I am certain that I know the difference between a Saintly appeal and a hustings harrangue? Am I determined to be "temperate in all things that shall be intrusted to my care" in issues before me? Has the clapping of hands or the laughter of hearers lost bearing upon me so far that I will not indulge in cute, cutting, unkind, jocular, insolent, or retaliative remarks to provoke them at my brother's expense? Am I preparing a shepherd's crook or a driver's whip with which to sway my listeners?

Are the interests involved sacred? If so and I move forth to their handling with any other motive than God's glory and any other equipment than the panoply of Christ as indicated in the above scriptures, am I not "trifling with sacred things," and will not my trifling provoke the indignation rather than secure the favor of him whose cause I am ostensibly defending?

It is right to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered," but it is well to remember that crowning comes only to him who strives "lawfully." To strive lawfully is to do so in accordance with the spirit and letter of the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" and not for mastery alone.

Humility, gentleness, meekness, and brotherly kindness for their residence and exhibition do not necessitate the abdication of courage, force, and directness. All these may go hand in hand. More than that, they must go hand in hand. There can be little hope of achievement without the latter where duty calls us to action, and there will be no sanction and cooperation of God without the former.

A bad cause may be won by good methods, and a good cause may be lost by bad ones. We surely desire no outcome that God will not rejoice as fully over as do we. We may even have conquest as to ends desired, and yet be unworthy to occupy on our acquirement because of the Spirit that actuated us in the strife. We surely want no estate where God and Christ will be unwilling to occupy with us. Hence if these "earthen vessels" desire to contain that "treasure"—that divine intelligence which was focused in Christ—then the spirit as well as the methods of our strivings must accord with those of his engagements.

A church that is not the residence of God is incapable of gospel work as intended by him: hence any achievement on our part as disputants will be valueless and unworthy of our effort to acquire it, except in so far as it will give God a more complete "right of way" among us.

One of the chief causes for the stagnation of our work in places is the fact that a comparison of our spiritual whereabouts with that of others reveals little difference. The lines of conduct—distinction—are so faintly drawn as to be indiscernible. The craze of others is ours, and we are found in all the resorts of their selection and preferences. The query on their lips is: "Wherein is the fact of God's residence with this people more beautifully manifest than with us?"

To carry the seal or approval of God in our work, divine property must be handled in a divine way, under the motions of the divine spirit. Debate and legislative contentions in the church, like sermons and ordinances, should be esteemed as opportunities to glorify God and handled as divine property or privilege, and too sacred to be "trifled" with.

The writer was told many years ago by a member of the church that he entered the church because with its doctrines he could "lay out" every other religious creed that lifted its head, and as long as he remained outside of it, people with whom he contended kept asking him, "Why don't you join that church then if you believe that way?" We believed then and believe now that that man had not yet seen the kingdom of God; he certainly had not been "born again." He was by nature a pugilist, and the church to him was of use only to secure triumphs as such—not as a means to glorify God.

It would be a deplorable discovery to make, by and by, that our labors in the church had really been hindrances rather than helps to our salvation—that Christ had been obscured or dishonored by the very efforts we had put forth ostensibly in his cause and interest. It would be worse than awful to find then that while we were trying by loud doctrinal appeals to waken the world from slumber, that we ourselves had been "talking in our sleep." Let us shake ourselves, and ascertain whether we are really wide awake to our situation and its demands upon us as agents for Christ.

Facts About the Bible.—No. 5

BY A. B. PHILLIPS

Though the books of the Bible were written at different periods embracing many centuries of time, the doctrinal unity of the work as a whole is revealed in underlying fundamental principles, which like golden threads weave together its parts and form a sacred fabric of wonderful beauty and priceless value. No other religious production of any age has been found to equal it, no other has so completely supplied the needs of the human soul, and none has unfolded a vision of such transcendent glory, light, exaltation, and perfection. The very touch of the sacred record seems to lift man nearer to God, for its divine benediction hallows each worshiper.

In the Bible is found the world's most absorbing history, the most charming romances, the sublimest poetry, the loftiest ideals, the most thrilling narratives, the most remarkable biographies, the truest philosophy, the safest morals, and the divinest theology ever penned by man. To properly understand it is an education in itself of untold worth. Repeatedly it has been declared by great scholars to contain the world's greatest literature. No one is truly educated who has not carefully studied this Book of Books.

A Universal Book

In whatever portion of the Scriptures we study the fact is made undeniably plain that the divine law is of impartial and universal application to all in every age. The records handed down therefore hold a present value aside from their historic significance. Many of the writers record expressions and even incidents that could easily have been borrowed from the experiences of any age, so well is the general purpose of the work suited to the needs of all.

A comparative study of the sacred books shows an underlying purpose in which the growth, welfare, and happiness of man is sought by application of the divine law of his life. It reveals an all-wise Father who sees beyond present allurements, and who seeks to lead his creatures into the more abundant and abiding realities of a life that satisfies—that is complete. The life revealed therein never grows old, nor do its precepts become obsolete.

The Bible is not a book apart from life, but is a book of life in its most important relationships, dealing with fundamental phases of human experience and revealing unfathomed depths of wisdom never to be outgrown. Its symmetrically beautiful life patterns are kaleidoscopic in infinite variety and glowing colors, and perverted indeed is the spirit that cannot respond to its rich charms. It is the most condensed, yet the most complete history of human experience that ever brought together the prismatic colors of life and blended them into one perfect radiance, the revealing radiance of God.

Discoveries Confirm the Bible

That the biblical story of Eden is as old as it assumes to be seems clear from the discovery of prehistoric Babylonish records containing an account of the creation, the tree of life and its guardians, the serpent seducer, and the conflict between God and the Dragon—powers of evil. In the Inspired Version this account is remarkably confirmed (Genesis 3: 1-31), including the rebellion and casting out of Satan by God. This remarkable event, so wonderfully supported by recent discoveries, is not found in the Genesis account in other versions.

Other records confirm various biblical statements, some of which are of unusual interest. The deluge, the ark, the raven and dove, and other incidents connected therewith, are closely paralleled on inscribed Babylonian and Assyrian tablets of a very ancient period, which have now been deciphered. Discoveries on Babylonian seals and temples of Nineveh, with deciphered cuneiform inscriptions, remarkably support the historicity of the story of Jonah, from which may have arisen the worship of the Assyrian fish-god, Dagon, as shown on the monuments of Nineveh. A considerable number of names and events found in the Bible have also been discovered in recently deciphered inscriptions. (See Helps to Bible Study, pp. 85-89, 141, 405-423.)

It is among the miracles of the Bible that many of the attacks made upon it by critics have resulted in a clearer revelation of its great worth. The effort to discover something that would discredit it has often demonstrated more convincingly its reliability, while the folly of the puerile objections sometimes made against it has been laid bare. In the majesty of its strength it stands supreme, the refuge and bulwark of the soul.

The noblest question in the world is, What good may I do in it?—Glad Tidings.

DAGON, THE FISH-GOD

The Fish-god is inscribed on temples of Nineveh, and on Babylonian seals.

NEWS AND LETTERS

News From Australia

Apostle C. F. Ellis and I sailed from Wellington, New Zealand, March 28, on the last lap of our trip to Australia. At daybreak on April 1, we were off the coast of Australia, and as the morning light was breaking we entered Sydney Harbor. As we passed the famous Sydney Heads, a homelike feeling came over me, and I have felt at home ever since.

A preconference council of all conference appointees of the mission convened April 10 to 17 at Balmain church, Sydney. This gave a chance for a better acquaintance among the missionaries, and some profitable sessions were held.

Mission conference convened April 18 and continued over the 21st. The weather was fine; a good spirit prevailed generally, and the attendance was good, some coming as far as twenty-seven hundred miles to be present.

I left Sydney on May 8, while Brother Ellis remained there for a series of meetings which he and Elder Barmore were to conduct. He has since gone to Melbourne with Brother Barmore and will attend to the needs of the work in the states of Victoria, South Australia, and West Australia, while I am endeavoring to meet the demands in New South Wales and Queensland.

One hundred miles by rail brought me to Newcastle, a city of about 100,000 people in the center of a coal mining district, where we have four thriving branches. That afternoon I addressed a mothers' meeting at the Hamilton Church, about thirty mothers being present. Sister Williams was the oldest, and it was her birthday. She bore a beautiful testimony, telling of her baptism by Glauod Rodger in the fall of 1874. She is still happy in the work. The gospel wears well. The more we use it, the better it becomes.

The same evening I attended a Religio social at the home of Bishop Lewis, at Wallsend. George G. Lewis, the Religio president, demonstrated his ability to direct games, etc. He leaves for America in July to attend Graceland, and we predict that he is to be popular among our young people there.

Going north sixty-two miles by auto, through the beautiful coastal mountains, brought me to Bulahdelah, a peaceful village of about five hundred inhabitants, in the Myall River Valley at the foot of Alumn Mountains. These mountains reminds me very much of the beautiful Ozarks of southern Missouri.

As we had a beautiful moon, I held a week's meetings in the Bulahdelah church, quite a number of nonmembers attending. Bishop Lewis joined me there the latter part of the week, and for three weeks we have been visiting the branches and groups of Saints in northern New South Wales. Brother Lewis has one of Bishop McGuire's charts, "Stop the leaks," and preached some fine sermons on the financial law, giving sound advice to the Saints and admonishing compliance with the action of the late General Conference on stewardships. All are encouraged to develop the habit of regular and systematic giving of tithes and offerings.

I have been attempting to give the Saints a vision of the missionary responsibilities of the church and the opportunities confronting us in this field. Of course I could not refrain from mentioning some of the things which we might do if we had the means.

The past year has been very dry, and the dairy industry has suffered heavily; but recent rains have fallen, and we are looking for a good season the coming spring (August). Many have paid their tithing, and others have expressed their intention of doing so when their means will permit.

May 25 to June 1 was set apart as "self-denial week" in Australia and New Zealand, with a request that all who could do so contribute a week's wages or income. Complete returns are not yet received, but several hundred pounds were collected. The city branches did especially well.

From Bulahdelah we visited Nabiac, Tuncurry, Wingham, Johns River, Argent's Hill, and Bowraville. We enjoyed the privilege of again meeting the Saints and were well received. As quite a number of the ministry were present and there was a public holiday (the king's birthday), we arranged for a two-day meeting at Argent's Hill Sunday and Monday, June 8 and 9.

The first Latter Day Saint minister to visit this section was Elder J. W. Gillen, father of Apostle J. A. Gillen, about 1880. The church building is beautifully situated on a hill overlooking the river. It is the largest rural branch in Australia.

At the Sunday school institute, Brother C. A. Butterworth, until recently a member of the Twelve, gave an object lesson talk on character development, using good and bad fruit, which he had plucked off near-by orchards, to illustrate the subject. I preached at eleven o'clock, after which a basket dinner was served in the church yard. Plenty of lemonade, sandwiches, cake, etc., were in evidence, and a spirit of good fellowship prevailed.

In the afternoon A. V. Robinson was ordained a seventy by Elders M. A. McConley and C. A. Butterworth. He is one of the four of Australia's young men who were selected for this office at the last General Conference. Bishop Lewis preached in the afternoon and Brother Robinson at night.

Monday, June 9, the Department of Women gave a program, followed by a sermon by A. L. Loving, who was ordained a seventy at the recent mission conference. As the brother related the difficulties which had at times surrounded his work among the Maoris in New Zealand, we observed that the spirit of sacrifice so notable in the careers of our early missionaries still lives. May it never die, but on the other hand, may the spirit of consecration so permeate the membership of the church that if need be, greater sacrifices than any yet made in latter days will be undertaken, to the end that God's purposes may be accomplished.

The afternoon was occupied by a priesthood meeting, and in the evening the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a program under the direction of the district leader, Hazel R. Ballard. A wiener roast completed the program.

The Bowraville Branch have purchased land and are considering ways and means to get a church building.

While at Tuncurry we visited the Tiona reunion ground. The ground is on a peninsula fronting on a beautiful, sandy ocean beach and backing on Lake Wallis, and with the beautiful coastal range of mountains for a background it presents great natural beauty. It is still largely undeveloped, and Brother and Sister J. W. Davis have had a camp there several months directing the improvements. The principal work has been the building of a jetty four hundred yards long into the lake. Brother Davis has worked hard on this and has been assisted by Missionaries A. V. Robinson, A. L. Loving, Herman Peisker, S. W. Ballard, at different times, also by the Wright brothers, from Tuncurry, and others. A mission reunion and conference will be held there the next Christmas holiday. If wisely administered, this will prove a great asset to this mission.

Our prayers are offered daily on behalf of Zion and the church throughout the world. May the day be hastened when we may indeed put on our beautiful garments.

Soliciting an interest in the prayers of God's people,
June 13.

MYRON A. MCCONLEY.

Portland Buys Car for Their Pastor

PORTLAND, OREGON, August 2.—Four young people, Dorothea Stoyhoff, Stanley J. Stoyhoff, Mildred Cason, and Mrs. Effie Verhei, were baptized in the font at the church July 27.

The regular quarterly business meeting was held the evening of July 8, and the subjects of building a gymnasium and of purchasing a car for the use of the branch president were discussed. A special business meeting was called for July 22 to dispose of the two questions, thus giving everyone ample time to consider the advisability of such action. At the meeting July 22 the motion to build a gymnasium lost by an almost unanimous vote. The motion to purchase a car for the use of the branch president carried.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a watermelon party at Laurelhurst Park Friday evening, August 1.

The reunion committee is very actively engaged in preparing for the annual reunion which will be held August 8 to 17. The grounds lie in a shady grove at the intersection of Base Line and Craig Roads, one mile east of Montavilla, a suburb of Portland.

Elder Nelson Wilson returned July 25 from Winnipeg, Canada, where he has been for about a year.

Missionary Spirit a Factor

JOHNSON CITY, NEW YORK, August 11.—Although there are only a few Saints here, we have been holding Sunday school for almost a year. Services are held in the different homes.

We were visited Sunday, July 27, by Brother James Pycock, who held preaching service after Sunday school. All enjoyed his talk and felt benefited by his visit.

While Brother Pycock was here, he suggested that we have a mission. There are so few Saints here he thought a mission would be better than a branch. Lot Bishop was appointed to have charge.

Saturday, August 2, we held our Sunday school picnic at the farm of Brother and Sister Alfred Knapp, who kindly invited us to their place. All had a good time.

Our first sacramental service was held August 3 after Sunday school, and it proved to be a spiritual benefit to all.

Although we are few, we hope to do some good in this town.

Webster Groves Is Interested in Zion's Coming

WEBSTER GROVES, MISSOURI, August 12.—Quite a little work has been done recently around the church property, which has served to beautify the premises. The front lawn has been graded, and a granitoid walk was put in up to the church door, while a uniform cinder walk was made along the sidewalk line to the grade.

The priesthood is active, and reports from their camp indicate that they contemplate another vigorous campaign of visiting that will without doubt bear much fruit toward spiritual advancement.

Pastor C. J. Remington gave a fitting talk on the morning of July 27 on the subject, "What is your job?" After the service quite a number expressed themselves as just having found out what their job really is as Latter Day Saints.

Elder Ivor Davies occupied the Sunday evening hour July 27, August 3, and August 10, using as a basis of his remarks the subject, "making the dream of Zion come true." This series included the several policies of the church relative to the establishment of the work. The interest is remarkable, and the attendance is so steadily increasing that a two-week series of lectures may be arranged for on this subject, in which Brother Davies is particularly well established.

The local young people presented the branch with a fine new piano on August 10. As a request with their gift they asked that the first song to be sung be "The old, old, path," which seems to be a favorite with the young especially. Brother Struebing spoke on "Are ye in the faith?" which was a timely subject.

The sacramental service on August 3 was a most enjoyable occasion, at which time the infant grandson of Charles J. Remington was blessed.

Fort Madison Branch

August 11.—The work here is progressing, although at the present time a number are out of the city for various reasons.

The Fort Madison "L. D. S." Band have just acquired uniforms and make a very good appearance at their concerts. They have given concerts at several places lately for various civic clubs and organizations. They are greatly applauded wherever they go. This is an eighteen-piece band from the Sunday school and is the result of the efforts of W. E. Sanford, bandmaster. They are now giving concerts on the reunion camp ground at Nauvoo, and also on the streets of the city, which is an asset to the reunion.

Our Sunday school superintendent, Cecil W. Davis, was recently ordained to the office of teacher.

Two new members were added to our branch August 10, having been baptized at the Nauvoo reunion by our pastor. We are looking for other baptisms from this branch before the close of the reunion.

A number of our people are in attendance at Nauvoo reunion. All report the very best of services, and they are making arrangements to attend again next summer.

Recently all-day services were held, with Brother U. W. Greene as the principal speaker of the day. Dinner was had in the basement of the church. Members from the different branches in the district were present, and all greatly enjoyed the services. The following Sunday we drove to Keokuk where like services were held.

All visiting Saints are requested to worship with us at 2929 Santa Fe Avenue.

Interesting Baptisms at Colorado Springs

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO, August 11.—A very interesting baptismal service was held recently when Brother B. E. Brown led two brothers into the water. One was a Japanese brother, who was formerly a member of the Utah Church; the other was a local brother. Also last Wednesday evening Brothers Brown and Ebeling baptized a Sister Springer, who has waited for two years to be baptized. She has been in a sanitarium all that time, and only lately would the doctors consent to her being baptized.

The following have visited Colorado Springs recently: Sister Stringer and son, of Wichita Falls, Texas; Sister Atkinson, of Ramah, Colorado; Brother Clark Woodford, Sister Peterson, Miss Margaret Chafin, Mrs. L. S. Moore, Hazel Billingsley, and Annie Glenn, of Independence, Missouri; Brother Hans Andersen and family, of Council Bluffs, Iowa; and Sister Munday, of Uteville, Colorado, who will stay until after reunion.

Brother Alfred Rich, son of Brother and Sister Calvin H. Rich, was married two weeks ago.

Minnesota Saints Are Active

DULUTH, MINNESOTA, August 5.—Elder C. B. Freeman was the speaker July 27. Other local men have occupied as opportunity offered. Brother George W. Day, district president, met with the Saints here in a sacramental service August 3, assisting Brother C. B. Freeman, who was in charge. A profitable time was spent in prayer and testimony.

Brother Day also met with the Sunday school and preached a fine sermon on "Water baptism" in the evening, with fair attendance.

Brother Grant Byce, Elder Samuel Sloan, and Sister Kate Hastings, all of Two Harbors, were in attendance. May they meet with us often.

Sister W. A. Barney, of Grand Marias, Michigan, and Sister Corda McAllister, of Munising, Michigan, have been here the last two weeks visiting with Sister Eva Tourville, daughter of Sister Barney. They have materially and spiritually helped here in this part of the vineyard. They will always be welcome.

Sister Emma Freeman, daughter of Pastor C. B. Freeman, was baptized July 13, her father officiating. She was confirmed August 3. May many take hold on the rod of iron and follow the footsteps of Christ, thereby receiving a crown of eternal life.

Several Duluth Saints attended the reunion at Minneapolis, and all report that it was the best ever. The gospel was preached in a simple manner, showing the magnitude of the gospel so that each one realized that God is indeed at the helm, guiding his work to victory. One sister remarked, after being in the gospel for thirty years, that she did not realize there was so much in the church.

Drives Two Hundred and Fifty Miles to Preach

TUCSON, ARIZONA, August 5.—Interest in the Tucson Sunday school seems to be growing, as attendance is getting larger lately.

We have preaching twice a month now, and some seem interested. Brother Lamb drives up from Bisbee in his car twice a month and preaches. He makes the trip all the same day, about one hundred twenty-five miles each way. Last Sunday he brought three with him, Brother and Sister Davis and one of their neighbors.

We had fine meetings, with twenty-nine at Sunday school, which was held at the home of Mrs. Rawsthorn. Preaching service was held at eleven, with Brother Lamb as the speaker. Sacramental meeting was held at Sister Mills's home at half past two, with a good spirit manifested throughout the service. After sacrament Brother Davis spoke many words of encouragement, and we indeed felt renewed and encouraged by their presence with us. They will be back again in two weeks.

Sister Davis played the piano, and Brother Davis took charge of the singing as well as the Sunday school. Feeling the need of talented people like Brother and Sister Davis and Brother Lamb we much regret that they cannot remain with us. We ask the prayers of the Saints in behalf of the Lord's work in Tucson, that those who seem interested may see their way clear to accept the gospel and apply it to their lives.

This would be a good place for an elder who is looking for a good climate and a place to help with the work. I have heard it said at different times since Brother Lamb delivered his sermon, "Oh, I see it differently now," and "Wasn't that a wonderful meeting?" This was all from nonmembers. I hope some day as missionaries pass from east to west they will have occasion to stop at Tucson.

California Saints Enjoy Good Preaching

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA, August 11.—The last two Sundays of July were spent by the Saints at the district reunion held at Irvington July 17 to 27, which was a source of strength and enjoyment to the Saints. The instruction given by members of the First Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric was very edifying and uplifting and much appreciated by those of the Saints that have the redemption of Zion at heart.

Elder C. J. Cady was the speaker the morning of August 3. Those noticeable among the visitors at this service were Brother and Sister Carstensen and Brother Alvin Smith, recently from Independence, Missouri. Brother Virgil Etzenhouser, missionary to the bay cities, also dropped in on us after the meeting had started. Brother G. H. Wixom is another recent visitor, who dropped in on us unawares last Wednesday night. He was fresh from the southern California reunion and gave us an interesting report of the reunion at that place.

Brother Cady again preached the morning of August 10. He handled his subject well, and it was favorably commented upon by all who heard it. Priest R. E. Cowden preached the sermon at the close of Religio.

Cupid is making the best of it so far as San Jose Branch is concerned. On the evening of July 11 he made another raid and carried away captive our young sister, Hazel Christopher, who became the bride of Mr. McEachren, of Los Gatos. C. W. Hawkins, the pastor, officiated.

At nine o'clock the night of July 31 we were called to the San Jose Hospital to administer to a Sister Detrick, a member of the Chico Branch, who had met with an automobile accident near this city, and who was lying at the point of death. She passed away a few hours later. The body was taken to Chico for burial.

Second Annual Home-Coming of Deselm Branch

MANTENO, ILLINOIS, August 13.—The second annual home-coming of the Deselm Branch at the home of Brother and Sister Reginald Jones, near Wilmington, Sunday, August 3, was attended by nearly ninety people, many of them not members, and was an inspiration to young and old.

Sunday school was held at ten o'clock in charge of Sister Emma Studtman. The sacramental service, in charge of Elder J. L. Cooper, of DeKalb, district president, and Earl D. Rogers, pastor, opened at eleven o'clock. This was a season of rejoicing. Several of the Saints present rarely have the opportunity of enjoying the sacramental service.

A sumptuous cafeteria dinner was served at noon on the lawn. Sister Mamie Hayer, of Marseilles, district superintendent of the Department of Women, gave an interesting talk following the dinner, bringing out the ideals and responsibilities of the women and girls of our church.

Sister Hayer was followed by Elder Philemon Pement, of Chicago, who preached an excellent sermon, which included some of his personal experiences in finding the Latter Day Saint faith.

Visitors present from a distance besides those mentioned were: Sister Philemon Pement and Brother Harold Pement, of Chicago; Brother and Sister J. H. McGuire and Mr. and Mrs. Max Schmidt, of Hammond, Indiana; Sister Winifred Hayer and Brother Jason Closson, of Marseilles.

Elder J. L. Cooper was called to Wilmington July 29 by the serious illness of Sister Henry Allott, where he spent the remainder of the week visiting scattered Saints.

Sister Elmer Kaler, who underwent an operation last January, is again suffering with an abscess in her side.

Brother and Sister J. H. McGuire, of Hammond, Indiana, and Sister James Keir and daughters, of Independence, Missouri, spent the last week end with Deselm Saints. Also Brother Phillip Rogers, of Independence, Missouri, is the guest of his brother, Abe L. Rogers, and other relatives.

Three of our Sunday school boys, Regie Jones, Russell Rogers, and Paul Kaler, were baptized July 13. It is a cause for rejoicing when the children enlist in the army of King Immanuel.

Detroit Saints Desire Prayers

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, August 13.—The Saints here are bravely marching onward against great adversity. Like every other large city, the temptations and trials seem harder to bear than they would be in some quiet little village, where the ringing of the church bell can be heard by almost everyone living there.

Since writing our last letter we are sorry to say Brother Innis Fenton is very sick. He is greatly missed at church, as both he and his wife are always there ready and willing to do their part in the work. Also Pastor A. B. Smith has been very sick. We ask the Saints to remember both of these brothers in their prayers, as they are greatly needed in the work here.

We realize more and more that the sifting time is here, and that we must "put our shoulders to the wheel" in order to do our part in the redemption of Zion. To all our brothers and sisters we say, Keep going and don't give up. We are with you in spirit and prayer. Our sacrifices will not have been made in vain, for Christ is at the helm. United we stand; divided we fall.

Two Baptized in Norway

Norway, in the summer, is indeed a beautiful land. It seems that Nature tries to outdo herself in an effort to provide beautiful scenery and pleasant little nooks and corners here and there for the people to enjoy. Yesterday, as I sailed down the Christiania Bay by steamer en route to Porsgrund and gazed upon the many mountains, valleys, bathing places, and summer resorts, I could not help but think that God had indeed been good to this land in blessing it with so many beauties of nature. Norwegians are naturally lovers of the great out-of-doors, and they take advantage of every warm day to go to the mountains and woods for an outing, or out on the rivers and lakes in their motor boats. I noted yesterday that the summer resorts were crowded, not only with Norwegians spending their vacations, but also with many tourists from other lands. The English and German languages could be heard on every hand.

At this time of the year it is difficult to attract people to a church service held inside of a building. They want to remain outside as much as possible. In order to solve this problem we have to take the services out to them. During the past month, we have held several open-air services and have enjoyed a goodly portion of the Spirit of God in some of them. The attendance at those services was not as large as we like to see, but some that were present manifested an interest. July was Brother Muceus's last month here before sailing for America, so he has been doing most of the preaching and has enjoyed good liberty.

On July 13 all of the Saints in Porsgrund and a few friends went down the river a few miles in a motor boat to a small mountain to enjoy a day's outing. We took well-filled baskets to provide for the outer man while we enjoyed the day out in God's first temple. In the afternoon I had the privilege of baptizing two young ladies, 18 and 21 years of age respectively. Their parents are members of the church. It is indeed encouraging to see the children of the church members uniting with us. When we came to Norway nearly two years ago there wasn't a child of Latter Day Saint parentage in the church. Since that time four have been baptized, and one other is very much interested at present and no doubt will be baptized soon. Most of our members have large families of grown or nearly grown children, and we still have an important work to do among them in trying to convert them to the gospel. If we could only convert the children of our members it would be well worth the effort of our sojourn in this land.

Again, on July 27, we went to the same place out in the pine woods to hold a farewell meeting for Brother Muceus. Several visiting Saints from surrounding towns were present as well as quite a number of nonmembers. The weather was ideal, and everyone was in good spirits. We held two preaching services during the day, and the Spirit was present in a marked degree at both services. Brother Nilsen, a native brother who holds the office of priest, and I did the preaching in the first service. Brother Nilsen is a fine man, well liked by all who knew him, and has a large influence in Kragerø, his home town. He has a pleasing personality, a good understanding of our work, and has fine talent in the preaching line. He would make a good missionary in this country if he were free to devote his time to that work.

Brother Muceus did the preaching in the second service and was unusually blessed in the presentation of the word. The nonmembers who were present were greatly moved upon, and they expressed themselves as being greatly pleased with the day's experiences and that what they had heard was the true gospel of Christ. Some who had been enemies to our cause before are now its friends. They say that that day's outing will always stand out as a bright spot in their lives. We hope to be able to add more fuel to the fire that has begun in them, that their interest may be kept alive until they see the necessity of taking up the cross of Christ and wandering in his footsteps.

Brother Muceus sailed for America July 31. He has been away from his family two years and is entitled to return home to them. His leaving has caused a greater responsibility to fall upon Brother Hunker and me. He has had oversight of the work, and we have depended upon him more or less to help us in the solving of the problems that came to us. But now we must move out alone on our own initiative. So far as I am personally concerned, I can humbly say that I do not fear for the future. I know that I am engaged in the work of God and not my own work. I know, also, that God is more interested in his work than I can possibly be and that he will take care of it. I have learned from past experiences that when I am alone and entirely dependent upon God, he never fails me. The blessing is always forthcoming. The greatest problem I have is to keep myself in the right condition so that God can bless and use me. If I can be humble, faithful, and full of love I am sure that God will bless me in my efforts to serve him. V. D. RUCH.

PORSGRUND, NORWAY, August 1, 1924.

Elder Ward A. Hougas, of Venango, Nebraska, reports the baptism of five near Champion, Nebraska, August 17, with prospects of more in the near future.

J. J. Billings, of Little Deer Isle, Maine, writes that their reunion held at Brooksville this year was a success. Many attended, and much good is being done.

Work Progressing in Detroit District

FLINT, MICHIGAN, August 9.—The work of the Detroit District points upward, and from present outlook much will be accomplished during the summer months. The various activities of the departments are being ably handled, and thus far no one has felt satisfied with results, but all are working forward with a determination to bring the membership to a higher plane.

The young people's convention, held at Detroit June 28, 29, was a huge success. The services were well attended, and the program very well rendered. The church was well filled Saturday evening to hear three splendid talks, given by Patriarch John F. Martin, of Kirtland, Ohio, and Elders John R. Grice, of Saint Clair, Michigan, and E. K. Evans, of Grand Rapids, Michigan. These talks dealt with the young people in the home, church, and the world. Each handled his subject in a commendable manner.

At eight o'clock Sunday the opening service of prayer found the upper auditorium comfortably filled. The fervent prayers and testimonies of the young assembled were a source of strength to each other. At nine o'clock a like meeting was held in the lower auditorium, which accommodated those driving in for the day from outside branches. At eleven o'clock the junior church was held in the lower auditorium, in charge of Elder John R. Grice, while President Frederick M. Smith addressed the congregation upstairs. His subject was "Church fundamentals" which was presented in a very forceful manner.

The afternoon sermon, presented by Patriarch John F. Martin, has left a lasting impression with the audience. In his pleasing way he admonished the young people to prepare for the service before them by applying the principles of the gospel to their lives. By these principles they would be able to build such characters that they would become factors in the establishing of Zion.

At seven o'clock the church was packed to capacity to hear President Smith. This discourse called attention to the great things of moment, which should demand the attention of the membership of the church to-day. Events are happening with such great rapidity that the world is looking to and fro to find a solution for its many ills. The church should take advantage of this golden opportunity to present to them the social order of our work, which will bring about the condition for which we are all longing.

This closed a busy day, and one long to be remembered by all present. Many from neighboring districts took advantage of this treat and returned home well paid for the effort. Others saw with a clear vision the work before them and are now assisting in carrying out the program as outlined for the work of the young people. Brother Carlisle Whitehead and his corps of workers are to be commended, and the district is to be congratulated for such young men and women who have the desire to work for the interests of all.

One of the summer features of the young people's work is the establishing of the recreational center at Lake Orion, the center point of the district. At this place the young people of the district can assemble on Saturday and enjoy various recreational activities during the afternoon and evening. Brother Vincent Schaar has provided for the keep of twelve people by turning the upstairs of his garage and store room into sleeping rooms. Sunday is spent in the spiritual development of the young. Thus this department is functioning in the district in a very commendable way.

On Sunday, July 20, the priesthood of the district met at First Church in Flint. This was one of the most successful ministerial conferences held in the district. The day opened with prayer at eight o'clock at which the priesthood met. The regular prayer service at nine was presided over by Apostle James A. Gillen, Elders Kenneth H. Green, of Detroit, and Matthew W. Liston, of Flint, representing the district presidency, W. E. Alldread, pastor of the First Church, and J. Charles Mottashed, representing Detroit Branch. The opening remarks of Apostle Gillen were of such a nature as to cause the membership to feel more keenly their responsibility as workers in this church. Never has more power attended a speaker in the church than was present on that occasion.

At eleven o'clock the quorums met at the Dort School. Arrangements had been made so each quorum attended to its business, and had the pleasure of hearing some of the visiting brethren along the lines of their work. At the same hour the joint reunion committee was in session, making final arrangements for the reunion at Port Huron August 8 to 17.

The priesthood met in mass session at two fifteen. The afternoon program consisted of talks by the brethren, which had been previously arranged. Elder John R. Grice was unable to attend on account of the sickness of his father, Elder William M. Grice. His talk will come at the next meeting. Elder J. Charles Mottashed, of Detroit, spoke on the subject "Shifting gears." This being an automobile center, every one understands what it means to shift gears. Many applicable points were made regarding church work, and many good thoughts were presented which were of special interest at this time.

Elder Robert Coates followed, his subject being, "Detours of the priesthood." His topic was very timely, and he presented it in a very forceful way. He named many of the detours which members of the priesthood take while on their official journey in the interests of the church. Elder Ernest A. Webb, of Kirtland, Ohio, followed with a chart talk. He used some of the standards of the church, showing how they can apply to many of the important things with reference to the bringing forth of the gospel.

Apostle Gillen next gave a short talk on "The greatest need of the hour." Briefly he presented the need of the priesthood learning their duty and doing it in humility, and with the one aim of unity in mind. The keynote of the day, which was struck by Apostle Gillen at the opening of the prayer service, was "To your tents, O Israel."

The rest of the afternoon was spent in a general discussion of important questions, some presented from the quorums and some from individuals. Just as the hour for closing arrived, those present were pleasantly surprised to have Elder David E. Dowker of Des Moines, Iowa, slip into a rear seat of the church. Elder K. H. Green called him to the platform, and briefly he expressed to the priesthood his appreciation of meeting with them, and urged them to keep pace with the movements of the church. Elder Dowker preached the evening sermon, his subject being "Sacrifice."

Thus the work of the district moves on, and daily problems come up which call for inspiration and wisdom to solve. An all-day meeting will be held at the Otter Lake Branch August 31, and many are making arrangements to attend.

Tulare, California

August 13.—The Northern California District reunion is past, and what a grand one it was! If the Saints will only live up to the high ideals which were placed before them surely Zion would soon be redeemed. Twenty-nine Saints and four nonmembers attended the reunion from this branch.

On Monday evening, August 11, the Temple Builders gave a surprise party and shower at the home of Brother and Sister J. T. Smith, jr., in honor of Sister Ethel Brooner who is visiting her father, Elder W. A. Brooner, and who will soon return east to attend school. Many useful little gifts were given Sister Brooner, and all enjoyed the evening by playing games. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

The different departments are moving along nicely under the leaders.

Flint, Michigan

August 9.—Progress on the new church is slow, but certain. Under the supervision of the local brethren, the work will be of a permanent nature. The former church in the north section of the city was only temporary. The present structure will be of concrete block, with heavy "I" beams through the center to strengthen the floor and remove all obstructions from the basement, thus making it free for use as needed.

The activities of the Department of Recreation and Expression show considerable life. This department has been functioning in near-by branches. The dramatic classes of the local organization have visited outlying branches, and displayed their talents before the footlights. They have assumed the job of providing speakers for Otter Lake and Juniata churches, and each Sunday they provide transportation to these places. On August 1 the three local organizations drove to Montrose, the home of Brother and Sister Roy Leighton, and enjoyed a marshmallow roast.

Elder B. F. Anspaugh has been on the firing line at one of the outlying schoolhouses for the last few weeks. He has been assisted by Brother Frank Eddy. They have been holding meetings every other night. Complaints are heard among the farmers because of the heavy rains during the past month. Reports show an inability to harvest the grain crops, which if not harvested soon will be a complete loss. Many of the local membership are attending the reunion at Port Huron.

MATTHEW W. LISTON.

Sioux City Saints Active

SIoux CITY, IOWA, August 21.—Regular services are held in Sioux City every week. A small leaflet, The Saints' Pilot, is issued each week, giving a program of both morning and evening services on Sunday, and giving other valuable information with regard to services and happenings in the branch.

Speakers for the month were: Brothers C. Streeter, R. L. Sheetz, H. O. Smith, George M. Vandel, N. O. Cahoon, W. J. Smith. The Saints greatly appreciated having Brother H. O. Smith with them, and many regret that he could not remain longer to give them their patriarchal blessings.

Some unnecessary decorations in front of the church were torn away by Deacons Milo Hall and W. J. Smith recently preparatory to repainting the church. Brother Hall is to have charge of the painting, but many of the brethren will help with the work.

On July 17, at the home of J. E. Keck, occurred the marriage of Brother John A. Phillips and Sister Flossie Martin, of Omaha, Nebraska. Brother Phillips is a merchant in that city.

Commencing with the third quarter, picture lesson cards have been used in the primary classes of the Sunday school. These pictures are proving to be all that is claimed for them. The children enjoy them, and the teacher finds they develop a great deal of interest.

Brother George M. Vandel preached to an attentive audience in Sloan recently, where several are investigating the work. On Sunday following he preached twice to good audiences near Kingsburg, South Dakota. A standing invitation is held out to any of our ministry in that neighborhood.

Mrs. Alice Bower and Mrs. Lola Jolley were admitted to the Temple Builders at their regular meeting. This club, with their husbands and friends, held a picnic at Riverside Park August 14, where fried chicken held a prominent place on the menu.

Independence

August 25.—Elder S. S. Smith was the speaker at the Stone Church Sunday morning, and Elder William I. Fligg preached on the Campus in the evening. The evening was ideal, and many came out to hear Brother Fligg, who spoke in his usual vigorous manner.

Bishop Mark Siegfried's Sunday school class is now meeting in Carson's chapel, which has a seating capacity of something over a hundred. They are now taking up the study of church law, and it is expected that some interesting points will be brought out.

The picture shown on the Campus Saturday night, "Boy of Flanders," was very fine. An unusually large crowd attended.

Plans are being made for a big Labor Day celebration to be held on the Campus. A baseball game has been arranged for ten o'clock in the morning. Athletic contests will be held at one o'clock, after which the rest of the afternoon will be devoted to baseball and a band concert. E. C. Ellis will speak in the evening on "The business of government," and pictures will be shown at eight o'clock.

Walnut Park

The speaker Sunday morning was Pastor J. A. Dowker, who also spoke in the evening at the farm home of Charlie Hurshman, six miles from town, where Sunday school is held and a number of nonmembers are interested in our work.

On Wednesday evening the young people, who usually have a prayer service by themselves, by invitation met with Group Twenty-nine South, at the home of Brother Atwell. More than fifty were present.

Walnut Park has a rather unique way of getting janitor work done free. The young people started the move last winter by volunteering to do the cleaning and fire building each week so as to save church money to apply on our building fund. Later the different groups agreed to share the work, the women of Group Twenty-nine keeping the building swept and dusted for one month, then another group taking its turn, etc. The lawn also must be mowed, and a lawn mower is now to be purchased and left at the church for the use of the group doing the work.

Sister Bertha Constance has charge in the primary room during the absence of Sister R. Barnhard, and makes a most satisfactory substitute.

Next Sunday Brother E. E. Moonman, who has charge of the junior meetings, will be the speaker in the upper auditorium, where he wishes to address the parents of the children in his charge, and others interested in them.

Second Independence

Brother William Postma was the speaker Sunday morning, August 17, and Frank Veenstra spoke August 24. These two brothers recently returned from missions to Holland and Utah. It is expected that they will soon leave for Michigan, where they will labor the rest of the missionary year.

Quite a number of baptisms took place this week. Brother Delbert Whiting baptized two, Norman Inman and Erma Huggett, while Elder A. K. Dillee baptized Alma Welton and wife at Walnut Park, though they belong to the Second Independence congregation.

The funeral of Sister Lottie Inman Seaton was held at the Second Independence Church Tuesday afternoon, August 26. Brother Delbert Whiting was the speaker, and interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. Sister Seaton is the daughter of Brother and Sister John Inman. She was born August 7, 1906, near Braymer, Missouri, but moved with her parents to Independence at the age of nine years, at which time she was baptized. She was married to Elvin Seaton August 31, 1922. Six months ago she went to the home of her grandparents at Braymer, thinking she might the better recover there from an attack of pneumonia. Though everything possible was done to restore her, she passed away Sunday morning, August 24.

Spring Branch

Brother George Weston, local priest, was the speaker last Sunday morning, giving an interesting talk on archæology and the travels of the Nephites. He used one of his own maps in illustrating his talk.

August 17 Elder W. D. Bullard preached on the subject of charity, which was appreciated by those present.

The Spring Branch Religio has been invited to give a program at the Walnut Park church Friday evening of this week.

A social will be given on Brother McLean's lawn Thursday evening for the benefit of the piano fund. Ice cream and cake will be served. All are invited.

Brother J. E. Soderstadt and family returned from an automobile trip to the Ozarks and are now located at their home in Broadacres.

Enoch Hill

The speaker at eleven o'clock was Elder J. W. Metcalf, and at seven o'clock Bishop A. V. Karlstrom gave an illustrated lecture on the South Sea Islands. A large crowd was present to enjoy the lecture.

The campaign for liquidating the local church debt is progressing nicely. Each week sees the mercury rise in the large barometer erected for the purpose.

Next Friday night at the usual Religio service there will be the final debate between two teams representing Walnut Park and Enoch Hill. Each team has previously won one decision, and the concluding event is arousing considerable enthusiasm. Both sides are strongly represented, and all are invited to witness the trial of strength in debate among the young people of this locality.

Englewood

George Shearer was the morning speaker at Englewood. Prayer meetings of the week were well attended, which is a good record for this hot weather.

Liberty Street

Brother Hubert Case was the speaker Sunday morning. His sermon was very fine, and something could be found in it to apply to every person in the audience.

East Independence

The social given for the benefit of the building fund was quite a success, and $23 was raised. At the business meeting Sunday morning it was decided to go as far as possible with the finishing of the church. It was at first thought that they would put a roof on the basement, but they will now go as far as possible toward finishing the building for use.

Elder A. H. Parsons was the speaker Sunday morning, and Elder William Bath occupied in the evening.

The New York Times discusses the problem of the country church in a recent issue, and quotes Wilbur Caswell, associate to the rector of Saint Thomas's Episcopal Church, in New York. This church broadcasts its service each Sunday. This clergyman told the Times writer that other ministers were complaining that the radio was stealing some of their hearers; that their hearers were more inclined to remain at home and listen in to some of the renowned pulpit orators, whose sermons were being broadcasted, than to make the exertion of coming to church. Doctor Caswell cites an incident of how one of the small Episcopal churches has met the dilemma. The Times writer says:

According to Doctor Caswell, a little Episcopal chapel in Maryland actually rigged up a radio horn in its pulpit one Sunday morning, got in tune with the cathedral in Washington, and the congregation sat in silence while the services of the great church came to them through the instrument. When the preacher in Washington announced a hymn, the congregation got out its books and sang, too.

The incident suggests a question, Is this a forecast of the real church of to-morrow? Will the devotional feature of religious activities become centralized in a large metropolitan center, with the country parishes becoming only provinces of "ministration," presided over by pastors whose sole duty will be that of making pastoral calls and officiating at marriages?

Of course this may not altogether apply to "our" church, and yet it may. But the fact that other churches are installing receiving instruments through which their congregations may listen in to services that are broadcast, makes it all the more imperative that we should have such a powerful station that we might attract the attention of such churches to our message. We have attracted attention to our message with individuals. Is it a stretch of the imagination to foresee that we may at times attract the attention of whole congregations who may be listening in?

In a recent trip taken to the north we were told by a sister who was the only one of her family who had come into contact with the church, that her sister was greatly prejudiced against the faith, and would not listen to her when she tried to tell her of the gospel as she had received it. In a letter that she had received recently, however, her sister became very enthusiastic over some radio sermons that she had been listening to, and expressed herself as never having heard such fine sermons. This sister asked her what station she had been listening to, and she wrote that she had been listening in to sermons preached from the Stone Church in Independence, Missouri, but she did not know what denomination was represented. The sister could not refrain from telling her that this was the church with which she had become connected. This knowledge somewhat cooled the ardor of this listener in, but who can tell to what extent the seed had taken root? People will listen in when they will not come to church, and the seed thus sown will be sure to bear fruit.

There are two ways in which the small church may be benefited by radio. Either the pastor may install a radio for the benefit of his audience, giving them the advantage of listening in to men who may be better qualified to entertain and instruct them than he is, or he may by preparation and study give them something better than can be offered them by the radio message.

Some years ago Joseph Cook in one of his lectures on Transcendentalism uses the following to illustrate a point, and it is very acceptable here. He says:

When Ulysses sailed past the isle of the sirens, who had the power of charming by their songs all who listened to them, he heard the sorcerous music on the shore; and, to prevent himself and his crew from landing, he filled their ears with wax, and bound himself to the mast with knotted thongs. Thus, according to the subtle Grecian story, he passed safely the fatal strand. But when Orpheus, in search of the Golden Fleece went by this island, he being, as you remember, a great musician, set up better music than that of the sirens, enchanted his crew with a melody superior to the alluring song of the sea-nymphs; and so, without needing to fill the ears of the Argonauts with wax, or to bind himself to the mast with knotted thongs, he passed the sorcerous shore, not only safely, but with disdain.

That is our mission. We do not want to fill our ears with wax, and make ourselves deaf to the surrounding good, disdain a thing because it may not have originated with us, but we should avail ourselves of the discoveries of science, if those discoveries make us more proficient in spreading the gospel of truth. As a church we should take our place as the most potent influence for good in this world, filling the ears of the world with better music, and using the very best instruments that can be obtained for sending that music out to our fellow men. If we fail to use that which science has placed in our hands, we fail to avail ourselves of the opportunities that present themselves to us for the accomplishment of our work.

"Help Save the World by Radio,"

which appeared in the HERALD last week as an editorial signed by A. B. Phillips, could have been placed in the Official column and signed by the radio committee. The article was handed in by Brother Phillips and was unsigned, but was intended as an official announcement by the radio committee in the interests of the effort to provide funds for the new 1,000-watt radio station, for which contributions will be asked during the week of September 7-14.

REUNION NEWS

Midland District Reunion

EDGBASTON, BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, July 21.—The Midland district reunion convened in the Saints' chapel, Priestley Road, Birmingham, on Saturday and Sunday, July 12 and 13. Business meeting was held Saturday evening, during which several items of business were attended to.

At ten o'clock Sunday morning a prayer service was held, and although only a few were present at the meeting a good portion of the Spirit was with us. Prayer service was followed by preaching by Brothers J. Holmes and J. E. Meredith. Both these brothers gave interesting talks. From two to five o'clock short addresses were given by the following: W. Bailey, J. E. Meredith, Brother Eldridge, H. Meredith, and Sister Bailey. This was followed by a prayer and testimony meeting in which the Spirit was present.

Last, but not least, was the preaching service which began at half past six. In the early part of the meeting a duet was sung by Sisters R. Swan and N. Schofield. Brother Abel Hall was the speaker for the evening, and he gave an excellent discourse, the chief themes being "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul," and "Be ye perfect, as God, who is in heaven, is perfect."

There were not many visiting Saints, but all felt that we had spent a good spiritual time together and that it had been good to "wait upon the Lord." MAVIS MEREDITH.

Alabama District

MCKENZIE, ALABAMA, August 3.—The beginning of our reunion, which started August 1, bids fair for a grand time to the Saints here. The good Spirit prevails, and we are looking forward to some good work being done the coming week.

We have with us already Brother J. W. Rushton, of the Twelve, and Patriarch Ammon White; also Brother T. C. Kelley and Brother and Sister Fate Booker, all of whom we are truly glad to have with us.

The work is partly outlined as follows: Prayer and preaching services in the morning; and lesson study or departmental work and recreation in the afternoon; preaching in the evening.

We have a good many visiting Saints, and Brother White was the speaker last evening to a full house, a good many of whom were nonmembers. The services to-day were well attended. Apostle Rushton was the speaker at eleven o'clock, portraying very beautifully the love of God for his children. After the preaching service there was a bountiful spread of good things to eat, which was free to all. Everyone enjoyed it to the fullest extent.

There will be a further report of the reunion.

G. W. MINIARD.

Back to Work From the Reunion

BROCKTON, MASSACHUSETTS, August 7.—The reunion is now nearing an end, and soon the Saints will be gathering back in their various church homes, telling of the wonderful meetings held at Onset.

During the reunion period, the church discontinued its services on Sundays, enabling many to attend reunion who would not otherwise be able.

The Wednesday evening prayer service is held as usual, and a few gather each week to give expression to their gratitude and have an hour of thanksgiving for the many blessings endowed by His ever ready and bounteous hand.

At the close of reunion, activities will again be resumed with a greater vigor, after the inspiration received by the leaders and good times Onset has afforded.

Brother Frank and Sister Emma Dobbins are the parents of a daughter, Lucille Bryant, born July 7.

Chatham Looks Forward to Reunion

CHATHAM, ONTARIO, August 9.—Things have been running along nicely in Chatham Branch since last report. Services have been fairly well attended in spite of the holiday season.

The branch recently voted to have the church decorated inside and out. This has been done, and it certainly looks nice. Two scripts have been painted on the front of the church, which add greatly to its appearance.

The Sunday school has decided to hold its annual picnic at Erie Beach after the reunion. The children are looking forward to the event with interest.

The annual reunion of the Chatham District will soon be in full swing, and Patriarch F. A. Smith, Apostle J. A. Gillen, and Elder and Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser are expected to be in attendance, as well as the missionaries from this and neighboring districts.

The Department of Recreation and Expression meets on Friday evening. The first part of the hour is spent in playing volley ball, which is proving popular with the younger folks. A baseball team has been organized in the branch, and several games have been played with good success. Elder Ezra Miffin is captain, and he is rounding the boys into shape. Games are expected soon with church teams from Windsor and Sarnia.

Southern California

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, August 8.—As secretary of the Southern California District I am pleased to make report of the reunion and conference which was held at Hermosa Beach, California, from July 25 to August 3, inclusive.

The attendance at the daily and evening meetings was about two hundred fifty, and at each of the Sunday meetings, more than four hundred. Our speakers included President F. M. Smith, D. T. Williams, Israel A. Smith, James E. Yates, H. W. Savage, and William Anderson. Great interest in the work was manifested, particularly among the membership.

The questions of "supreme directional control" resting in the Presidency with the power of "effective discipline" also resting in the Presidency, were our main topics of thought and discussion. Both sides of the issue were debated. President Smith and D. T. Williams hotly contended for the claims of the Presidency. James E. Yates displayed in his humble and honest way the feeble foundations of the claims. The last speaker also gave a careful character analysis of President Smith, which the latter said he enjoyed very much, as did also the Saints.

Brother Israel A. Smith preached the last sermon of the reunion. For more than an hour and a half, with great liberty and eloquence, he presented the views of the Bishopric in reference to "supreme directional control." His talk was well supported with facts and figures, as well as frequent citations to the standard books of the church. His sermon was particularly appreciated because of the humble manner in which it was delivered. It was Brother Israel's first meeting with southern California Saints, and we all hope that he will visit us again soon.

Notwithstanding the turmoil existing because of "misunderstandings" between leading quorums of the church, the membership here express the sentiment that we are all glad to be Latter Day Saints. We all feel a personal responsibility and are keeping our minds open on the big issues before the general church. We want to hear both sides of the controversy. We have not committed ourselves officially, or otherwise, to support any man or faction. On these issues we will wait for General Conference to speak. We feel that it will speak. But we know it can only speak the truth when each delegate goes there with a free, open mind, prepared to receive a full presentation of the matter.

On the whole our reunion was instructive and enjoyable. We have adjourned with an increased knowledge of the work and in gladness.

ARTHUR CRUM, Secretary.

Des Moines District

DES MOINES, IOWA, August 13.—The twenty-fifth reunion of the Des Moines District went into session Friday, August 8, at the regular camping grounds at Runnells, Iowa. This, so far, has been the largest reunion in the district, there being fifty-six tents on the ground.

The Pershing group, one of the newest groups in the district, is well represented by thirty-one people. This speaks well for the leadership of our young brother, George Orr.

The visiting speakers in attendance are Brothers J. A. Koehler, E. J. Gleazer, and J. F. Martin. Brother Martin came into this district the first time last fall, and although he was with us but a short time he endeared himself to our people. There is something about Brother Martin that makes one feel that he has been very close to God. He is especially liked by both young and old.

Variety has been aimed at in the departmental work each morning. One morning special attention was given the older people; that is, the oldest residents of this district. The district historian gave a brief review of its history for the last sixty years. This was followed by reminiscences from pioneer Saints. A splendid faith was manifested. One could not but compare their early experiences with ours and marvel at their faithfulness. The youth of the church may be an inspiration to us, but so are some of our noble adults.

Another morning Sister Margret Davis's class gave a demonstration of an ideal Religio class, showing how to properly teach the Book of Mormon. Another morning an ideal Sunday school was presented under the direction of Sister John Lentell. She is also doing very fine work with the younger children. They are not merely being entertained while the other services are in progress, but they are being instructed along various lines. She is being assisted in this work by several of the Temple Builders, who have told stories portraying the theme of each day.

Stephen Robinson is director of recreation. Religious services are held from early morning until noon, and each evening, but in the afternoon the camp becomes a playground, and wholesome sport is enjoyed by all who wish to participate.

One of the most worthwhile features of the reunion is the young people's prayer meetings, at which the Spirit has been in evidence.

Sunday morning a very helpful and beautiful prophecy was delivered, in which we were told that out of all this difficulty, turmoil, and travail, through which the church is now passing, will be born a new child, the church which Christ could accept.

MARGRET DAVIS.

Green, to which union were born nine children. Their home was often the headquarters for missionaries. Died at his home in Sacramento, California, June 24, 1924. Leaves wife and six children, five of whom were at the funeral. Sermon by J. D. White. Interment in East Lawn Cemetery.

Radio Flashes

"Every ear shall hear"—By Radio

Remember this slogan and connect it with Church Radio Week—September 7 to 14. If every member gives according to his ability our drive for the powerful new coast to coast broadcasting station will be a success. A number of contributions have already been received, mostly from isolated Saints, and some apparently from outsiders to whom we have been mailing our program booklets.

Everyone should have a keen desire to help in spreading the gospel by radio. What other means can the church employ at the present time to introduce the true church to millions of people in the United States and Canada? The possibilities of radio as a missionary aid are almost limitless. Certainly they appeal to the imagination and desires of every Latter Day Saint.

Let every member, then, decide now to give liberally toward the new Independence station and the improved Grace-land quipment. Let's make really effective our good slogan: "Every ear shall hear"—by radio.

Others See Radio Possibilities

A letter from Brother Fred D. Dreyer, branch president and publicity agent at Milwaukee, tells us that Wilbur Glen Voliva of Zion City, Illinois, is planning to greatly increase the power of his broadcasting station. W C B D, the Zion City station, has been operating for about a year with a power output of 500 watts. It cost about $30,000, being the best that could be bought at the time of its purchase.

Brother Dreyer's complete letter follows:

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN, 863 Mineral Street,
August 12, 1924.

Dear Brethren: I take this occasion to express my delight over the information in the HERALD that the church is contemplating the installation of a 1000-watt radio station. I have long felt, and have written the HERALD in the past that I thought we should increase our station's output and that I was sure the church in general would support such a move.

We have recently been informed by Wilbur Glen Voliva of Zion, Illinois, that he just completed a deal with the Westinghouse Electric Company, for the purchase of a sending apparatus that "would reach the ends of the earth" (using his own language). It is astonishing how his prestige has increased since he has started broadcasting. People resent his ideas and even threaten to have him put off from the air, but yet they listen in for his fine musical programs.

I am sure that with the talent in Independence we should be able to put on just as good programs as Voliva, and in place of the "kick" that he invariably gives them, together with numerous shocks, we could give them something to think about. I am waiting for the day to come when our church will get the publicity that Zion City has received through broadcasting.

I shall await with keen interest the news that work has started, that we will soon be able to hear K F I X thunder the gospel message over the radio, and that it too will be heard "to the ends of the earth." Sincerely yours,

FRED O. DREYER.

West Point, Nebraska.—K F I X came in fine on underground aerial Wednesday, July 30, using a 3-tube regenerative set. Very little static.—Warren Davee.

Kansas City, Mo.—We are regular listeners to your programs and must say that you have some excellent talent in your church. Would be pleased to have your program booklets sent to us. Success to you.—Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Baker, 411 N. Oakly.

Eastland, Texas.—I thought I might let you know that you were being heard down here in the "Lone Star State." I had the good fortune to hear part of your fine program last night and certainly enjoyed every bit that I heard.—Osgood Hunter.

Kansas City, Kansas.—I am a regular listener to your programs, and I enjoy them very much. Your signals come in very strong on my two tube regenerative set. Thanks for your fine programs.—Lynn Rawlins.

Independence, Missouri.—Just a word of praise for your wonderful program of last evening (August 12). Through the goodness of Mr. Gibson, the man in charge here of the county jail, we have installed a small crystal set. We listened last evening and were entertained very royally. The quartet was very good, as were also the solos, but what appealed to us was the talk by the editor of the Independence paper (Mr. William Southern), for it was instructive and interesting in every detail. We hope to hear some more. Unfortunately we are inmates of the county jail.—John Rak, Bert Heaton, and A. S. Kiefer.

Send the Sound the Earth Around

Who among the Saints has not thrilled to the old missionary song: "Send the sound, the earth around, from the rising to the setting of the sun."

Radio now offers a vehicle by which we may literally send the sound the earth around. The great commission to the church is to preach the gospel in all the world. The first work of the church in all ages is to preach the gospel. It is first at least in point of time. It may not outrank in importance the "perfecting of the Saints" which comes later under pastoral care. But first of all in all ages the church must go out after those who are ignorant of the gospel message and win them to Christ.

If the church should in any way or to any degree lose its missionary spirit, it would quickly diminish or perhaps die in other departments. The zeal aroused by the proposition to enlist radio as a new and valuable vehicle by which to "send the sound the earth around" attests the fact that the missionary spirit is not dead or diminished.

Jesus was first of all a missionary. Matthew tells us that he went through all Galilee preaching the gospel in every synagogue. Meeting Peter and Andrew, James and John, he said to them, "Come and follow me." They left their nets and followed him, I do not think that he just came along casually and said, "Follow me," and that without thought or reason they dropped all and followed him. I doubt not they had heard his message preached and had responded to its appeal. In other words, they were the fruits of a careful and systematic missionary campaign carried on through all Galilee in the various synagogues. Jesus thus set the example in missionary work. When he later said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel," he was but projecting his own effort through others.

Paul said, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." By every means within his reach he sought to preach the gospel. He was one of the most aggressive and resourceful missionaries that ever lived. Upon Mars Hill, the center of Greek culture and religion, in the most conspicuous place in the intellectual world of that time, he declared the message. All that publicity could offer, he took. Had there been a press, who can doubt that Paul would have used it to the uttermost. And could he upon Mars Hill have found some means by which he could have projected his voice to Rome, and throughout all Asia, and down into Africa, we have but to reflect upon his intrepid spirit to know that he would have seized and used that method of expression.

We have not hesitated to enlist the press in our work. We should not hesitate to use the radio. And if we are to use it at all, we should use it to the best advantage. Every increase of power to our station increases the radius of operation. And as the circle grows larger, every increase proportionally takes in an enormously larger population. "The pebble dropped in the water" sends out waves that "circle round with the shock." The message flung into the air sends waves in every direction. The first hundred miles of sweep takes in a considerable population, but when you add another hundred miles, the area covered is so much greater that the first appears small, and so on. With a station four times as powerful as our present station, with the same amount of effort we can reach an enormously enlarged congregation.

Our readers may make it possible for us to have such a station, equipped, built, managed by our own people, sending abroad our own distinctive message, the gospel of the latter days. The "hastening time" is at hand. Providence has put at our disposal that which Paul did not have. Shall we use it?

Not only does radio cover a broad field geographically, it covers a broad field intellectually. I had carried on a series of Sunday night radio sermons in Independence last winter, when on an occasion I dropped into a fish market to buy a fish for dinner. After the deal was completed, the fish vender, a total stranger, with an expletive said, "By —, I know you. I recognize your voice. I have been listening to you every Sunday night for a long time." A little later I was talking with the cultured and refined rabbi of one of the largest and wealthiest Jewish congregations of the West, and learned that he, too, was listening to my sermons. From fishman to rabbi we reach diverse classes that would never be brought together in one congregation in a church building.

It has been said that radio does not afford personal touch. But I heard a standpat Democrat confess that when he heard Coolidge's address to Congress the intimate sound of the President's voice in his ear thrilled him with a feeling of personal contact. And he added, "If a Democrat could so respond to the speech of a Republican President, I am sure that radio can establish a sense of contact in gospel work."

More than that, however, radio opens up the way for personal contact with local workers and missionaries. A nonmember in Toronto, hearing a radio sermon from Independence, sought out Bishop McLean. Thus personal contact came about. And this should work out in many branches and missions. We should be able by radio to break down an immense amount of prejudice, thus clearing the way for the apostles, seventies, and elders who go forth to preach the gospel to men face to face—for the latter work is fundamental and the radio work must ever be an auxiliary to it. That effect alone is worth the money and effort.

We have been told that we are all workers together, minister and man of business and of labor, for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all. Now is offered an opportunity for all to contribute and make it possible for us by radio to "send the sound the earth around."

Reunion Season Closes

The last day of August marked the close of the 1924 reunion season in the church. Four reunions closed on that date: Glenwood, Iowa; Stewartsville, Missouri; Monona Park, Wisconsin; and Vicksburg, Michigan.

Reunion season is an eventful period of each year's work, and the minister or member who is denied attendance has met with a material loss. There has been a growing tendency to provide for all the legitimate demands of the religious life of these annual gatherings of the Saints, and wherever reunions represent large enough membership there is not only the conventional preaching, which is always the principal activity; the prayer and testimony meeting, probably the sweetest hour to the great majority; but in addition there are study classes for men and women, for boys and girls; departmental activities of various kinds; organized play and recreation; and social functions which do not partake of the nature of worship.

As the writer sees the case, there is much good to be secured from each line of activity, and while there is necessity for a good organization in order that the program may be carried out, the democratic tendencies of our people can be made to do good service also, and none need be overburdened for the purpose of providing a splendid and complete result.

Lamoni Stake has been one of the sections developing the reunion to its present highly efficient organization, and we are glad to note that the prayer service each morning there is probably the most influential activity of the entire work. Neither have authorities there forgotten that preaching is valuable and effective, and a plenitude of good preachers is provided. The junior meetings, called by many the Junior Church, the sports and recreations, the lectures and study hour, and the general and individual social work are not neglected, and there are therefore few, if indeed there are any, locations in the church where more good is done, and the reunion has come to be recognized as a more necessary factor. We were permitted to visit them for a few days in the opening of their meetings, and witnessed much to commend.

The section of the church where the fall reunion had its birth is western Iowa, including Fremont and Pottawattamie Districts, which have just closed their reunion at Glenwood, Iowa; and Little Sioux and Gallands Grove Districts, which closed their reunion at Dow City, in Crawford County, August 24.

In this section of the church there was formerly held what was known as the world's reunion. Very few sections then attempted anything along this line of activity, and consequently the leading officers of the church were often present, and membership from many States generally camped and enjoyed the ten days of meeting.

Conspicuous among those who made these annual reunions of great value to the church, were such men as Presidents Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair, Charles Derry, Joseph R. Lambert, William H. and Edmund L. Kelley, David Chambers, and many others, not forgetting such song leaders as S. B. Kibler, T. A. Hougas, and Brother Mark H. Forscutt.

And the reunion spirit still lives and thrives in the minds and hearts of Saints in western Iowa. At Dow City the Little Sioux and Gallands Grove Saints met on August 15, one of the rainy days of an extremely backward and rainy season, and organized for reunion work. Roads were heavy and grounds were soaked and soft, but Dow City Saints and citizens opened their homes to care for the visitors and organization was effected and work begun. For a few days attendance was light, but the finishing days were glorious, bringing together many hundreds of Saints from all parts of the districts. The morning of the last day, just before the nine o'clock prayer meeting opened, there drove in from Sioux City, a distance of nearly ninety miles, a truck load and two or more touring car loads of people of all ages, who had risen before dawn that they might get just one whole day at the reunion. This is the spirit which made the reunion a success in days gone by, hunger for association with those of like faith in the activities of the church.

A copy of the Tribune, published at Glenwood, Iowa, gives an encouraging account of the opening days of reunion there, and the writer of the report is so pleased that he suggests, "It would be a good move for the Chamber of Commerce to have a meeting with the directors and invite them to come again."

It is wonderful what new life and gospel energy is gathered both by ministers and Saints in the reunions throughout the church, and those Saints who neglect attending because they want to spend their vacations in sightseeing or in idleness are losing much; those who are denied these meetings have much taken from them.

This week finds minister and member returning to the routine of life, cheered, strengthened, fortified by a better understanding of brother and sister and of the privileges and opportunities and duties and requirements of the gospel of Jesus Christ, which have been received while in reunion. Surely the reunion effort of 1924 has been worth while.

Elder Waller Returns From England

The editors received the following laconic message from Elder Gilbert J. Waller on the morning of August 30, written on the margin of a newspaper cutting from the New York Daily Mirror for August 28: "Thursday, August 28.—Arrived per Homeric, safe and well; now en route San Francisco." The principal news in the fragment of Mirror was the arrival in New York, on the same day as Elder Waller's landing, of the White Star liner Arabic, with one hundred twenty-five injured passengers aboard.

Two large pictures show the great liner listed heavily and landing the injured passengers, and accompanying is this information: "Battered by a hurricane off Nantucket that listed the Arabic forty-three degrees at one time, or within two degrees of rolling over and sinking, the White Star liner limped into port yesterday a veritable floating hospital, with more than one hundred twenty-five of her passengers injured. . . . A terrific wind storm, accompanied by gigantic waves, smashed through the upper decks."

There is no real security to be obtained by the sword.—Jan Christian Smuts.

President Smith Speaks for Radio

Radio and Zion

In contemplating Zion and the gathering of the Saints to Independence and the "regions round about," I have given not a little thought to the question of communication, of which broadcasting is but a phase of recent but rapid and large development.

In the time that we as a church have been operating radio communication and broadcasting, being early in the field in both lines, it cannot be doubted that we have demonstrated the feasibility and benefits of both; but in neither have we developed as rapidly as our early entrance into the field would have justified us in hoping we would. It is therefore with pleasure we see efforts now being put forth to enlarge the capacity of our broadcasting station.

In this field we have by no means approached the average of possibility, to say nothing of touching its outmost limits, and we shall be slothful if we fail to move promptly into the position of advantage before us.

I am, of course, alert to the social value of radio entertainment, and therefore interested in having concerts and music of all good kinds, as well as readings, etc.; but the strong appeal to me is the possibilities for wider and more facile dissemination of knowledge and learning. And in this is comprehended the religious as well as secular development.

From our station at Independence should, therefore, be sent out as nearly continuously as we can do, programs of all varieties within the scope of reason, with due regard for the fact that uplift and improvement through additional learning are the prime factors to which we must give the largest valuation. To preach the gospel and teach the things of the kingdom of God is our chief justification for K F I X and its enlargement to the limit of our ability to maintain and operate. And we sincerely hope and believe that the Saints will generously rally to the support of our department of communication in its effort to make K F I X more useful to the church at large, so that from this station can be sent out the best of sermons on the principles of the gospel, the finest lectures on the problems of Zion and their solution, the highest grade of entertainment, and the most harmonious and beautiful of music. I hope most sincerely that our station may soon wave its way into the hearts and lives of our people in "the regions round about" because of ministering to their needs; that we shall because of generous contributions have the means of enlarging the station and then establishing relay stations, until we can eventually circle and encompass the globe with the glad sound of the gospel and with knowledge of the kingdom of God.

Let your response be generous.

Some Educational Problems Involved in the Establishment of Zion.—No. 3.

BY A. MAX CARMICHAEL

What Will the Church Do With This Method?

Let us consider this method especially as applicable to the church. One of the most important rationalizations for a belief in the inspiration of the command to gather "in the regions around about" is that this principle of passing on to our children our spiritual heritage through the approval and companionship of people of like minds might the more easily be used. We use the word, rationalizations as meaning a reason for a principle being thought up as a reason after the principle has been announced. We conjecture that the motive of religious development did not loom up as strongly as an eschatological expectation in the mind of the Seer. He had more in mind the establishment of a New Jerusalem preparatory to the second coming, than a method of religious education. This is not at all incompatible with attaching a broader significance to his inspiration, especially as the eschatological motive could easily comprehend the educational motive. In any event we are quite sure that this method of passing on our spiritual heritage to our children is more under our control, although not less operative, whether for weal or woe, in a gathered condition than in a scattered one. In other words, we will have a far easier opportunity to pass on our spiritual and moral culture to our youth, whether that culture be higher or lower than those surrounding us, in a gathered condition than in a scattered condition. This will mean, on the other hand, that the problems which arise over the proper use of this method are more intensified in the stakes than in the districts, in Independence particularly, and in Lamoni, Holden, Kansas City, and Saint Joseph to a lesser degree, but in the surrounding districts to a still smaller degree.

Let us illustrate more concretely: Whatever be our standards or levels of morality, e. g., with reference to the use of tobacco, or of cosmetics, or to mixed bathing, or to spending money on theaters, motion pictures, dress, or to the need of obtaining a college education, or to what vocations one can properly and best enter, or to the proper size of family our people should rear, whether these standards or levels be high or low, they can more readily be passed on to our children when we are more in each other's presence, as we would be when in a gathered condition. Every Boy Scout leader is well aware of the working strength of this method of teaching morals. The individual boy will bow to the conscience of the group. Every ecclesiastical group is well aware that it can the more easily pass on to its growing boys its own stamp of morality, theology, and spirituality, if it has its own boys in a group to themselves. Consequently we have Latter Day Saint Boy Scout troupes, Methodist Boy Scout troupes, Catholic Boy Scout troops, etc. The negative aspect of the principle has been sung by us all, "Shun evil companions." Likewise, whatever theological principles or formulæ we have can the more readily be passed on to a child when all of his companions believe these formulæ. Whether our intellectual formula be that the Scriptures are verbally inspired or vitally inspired, we can pass it on the more easily to our growing youth if he grows up amid those who accept it. Even if he wanted to question the formula, he would hesitate to do so in face of the withering opposition he might receive.

Many a minister has, through his subsequent study, developed theological beliefs which are far different than the orthodox beliefs of his congregation, and the congregation has never suspected it. He has either continued to preach straight orthodoxy despite his own different opinions, or he has continued to preach in orthodox terms, which allow the congregation to interpret them orthodoxly, but permit him to interpret them in his own heretical way, or he has left such subject matter on which he has developed his heretical opinions entirely out of his preaching, and has preached a conventional morality to which all could subscribe. While there are other reasons, one reason is that he hates to find himself unpopular with them because of these heretical beliefs. He must have the approval of those to whom he has ministered all the years, those whom he has baptized, married, and consoled in sorrowful moments. This is very likely one of the reasons that liberalism could grow up so unnoticed, and then break out all of a sudden in so old and conservative church as the Protestant Episcopal Church of America. There is probably many a minister who is not overly taken with the "virgin birth," but isn't saying so. He hates to undergo the gauntlet of disapproval upon the part of his fellow churchmen. Even the minister who is conscientious and has some new moral or theological principle that he would have his congregation adopt makes every endeavor to sandwich the preaching of this new principle in among many principles with which the congregation already agrees. Even a Latter Day Saint minister who speaks heatedly on the conference floor is pretty sure to "bear his testimony" before and after, because he feels his heated words may have estranged him from his fellows.

There is a very strong innate desire to get back into oneness with the fellow churchmen. Don't think for a minute that we are either condemning or praising such a minister. We are simply trying to illustrate how strong this method of determining our morals, and of passing them on to others, is. Even ministers hate to have the disapproval of their congregation. Of course, there are some other very good reasons why they should not have.

Our youth even adopt the signs of piety or the symptoms of spirituality which they feel they are expected to adopt. The lad of evangelical parents knows the signs of piety which he is expected to manifest. He knows how "to get religion"; how "to give himself to Jesus." At least he knows what he can do that will evidence to the congregation that he has given himself to Jesus. Kneeling at the mourners' bench will be concrete evidence, and for all he might know, that act itself is the essence of the spiritual experience. We have no doubt that many a young unctuous Latter Day Saint youth feels himself entirely void of spirituality because he hasn't wept yet in prayer meeting. He wants to be able to say, "I know that this work is true." Not until then will he feel that he has the approval of his fellow churchmen. He lacks that sense of unity with his fellows which we all crave. We suspect that many of us younger men are really anxious to be able to prophesy in the first person largely because (although we might not want to admit it) we crave that sense of oneness with our fellows that it would bring. We want to feel that we share all that our terms of fellowship imply we should share. An older brother has remarked that he does not exercise the gift of tongues, which he feels he possesses, because for one reason the exercise of it was scorned by the members of his branch. We imagine that this is a powerful motive in inhibiting the exercise of the gift. This is not the only person who we feel has refused to exercise the "spiritual gifts" because he felt he was not appreciated by some influential members of the congregation. To be perfectly frank, we must say that we have at times thought that the content of the gift of prophecy in the church has deteriorated into mere exhortations towards humbleness, etc., and into mere reiteration of present standards of morality rather than an announcement of new and higher, though perhaps disputed, codes of morality, and spirituality, and a stimulation and exhortation to the Saints to come up to this specific higher moral principle which we announce. Why? Largely because we know that if the content of our prophecy is conventional, no one will question the "source" of our gift, but if we call for a higher climb to some specific moral principle which we announce in the name of the Lord, our gift is apt to be questioned.

We are more "touchy" with reference to our gifts being called into question than most anything else. We feel we must have the full concurrence of everyone in the prayer meeting that our gift is from "above."

Needless to say that if Joseph the Seer had waited until people agreed with him before he announced his novelties as inspirations, he would never have announced them. The manifestation of the gift of prophecy which impressed the writer more than any other manifestation was one delivered in Lamoni, and which actually denounced certain activities that were then being committed in Lamoni by various members of the church. The writer admired the courage of the deliverer in his call to what he considered a higher moral life. Yet this prophecy was criticized by members of the congregation more than any other that the writer ever heard.

We are aware we are giving our bias away here, as to what we really feel the gift of prophecy is for or should be for. This will probably come up later for fuller discussion. We do not want to draw our minds away from the illustrations of our method of passing on our spiritual heritage that we are here discussing. Even in the manifestations of the "outward gifts," we are moved by our desires for approval, whether for gain or loss to the Saints.

Shall the Church Use Punishment?

Can the church supplement its approval or disapproval by any system of reward or punishment or of fellowship or ostracism. We are wondering whether the church (we speak of the entire Christian church) has lost anything, or the spirituality of its adherents has been lessened, by virtue of the increasing lack of emphasis upon heaven and hell by the pulpit. Perhaps the protest against our losing the sense of the existence of a personal devil has some pedagogical value.

There was little difference between the Catholic Church and John Wesley with regard to their use of hell. The former certified to the certainty of its existence, and to the surety of the Catholic going there except through the merciful mediation of the Mother Church, while the latter certified to the awfulness of it. Yet this little difference was significant. Because Wesley's portrayal of the awfulness of hell could not make up for the power which the Catholic priest had in getting one out of hell, the Catholic priest had a greater hold on the morals of his communicants than did Wesley. The Catholics have pretty well held to their position regarding hell, and are in a position to use it effectively to keep their members up to the standards of the morality which the church advocates, and to keep their members protesting their beliefs in the church's creed. On the other hand, the followers of Wesley, along with many other Protestants, have so altered their conception of God within the last half century, have so ethicized him as a principle of love, that they are becoming convinced that a personal devil and his abode, hell, are incompatible coexistents with such a God and hence do not exist. That precocious Englishman, John Stuart Mills, gave this sentiment one of its early expressions in the following words, "I will call no being God, who is not what I mean when I apply that epithet to my fellow creatures, and if such a being can sentence me to hell for not so calling him, to hell I will go." With what is the Protestant church to punish its recalcitrants? Excommunication is evidently losing its diabolical terrors. But if we lose our Devil, are we not also apt to lose our God? If we lose our hell, the place of eternal punishment, are we not also apt to lose our heaven, the place of eternal reward? Are we social-religious workers prepared to abandon these, and affirm that in the future sufficient motivation for good morals, and for the moral progress of society can be drawn from this terrestrial life, irrespective of expected and threatening eschatological states of existence?

Or ought we to cling tenaciously to our hell, and indeed to our heaven, as living realities? Ought not our Protestant evangelical friends to hang tenaciously to the belief that to die without having "confessed Christ" is to bring eternal condemnation, but to have "confessed Christ," even though it be but a few hours before death, is to bring "salvation"? The writer verily believes that many of our church members are paying tithing because the possibility of hell is a living reality to them; they do not care to die without having paid their tithing. If hell is a living reality, why not use it? Perhaps when we sum it all up, the basis for the support of our moral life is drawn from expected eschatological states, and if we lose the basis, we lose our morality.

But let us consider the matter with more particular reference to our own church. We, as a church, have approached the authoritative attitude of our Catholic friends. We have the restored priesthood, which has authority to act for God. Of course, we have not broken with our Protestant background and training to the extent of saying that our priesthood can dispose of terms of residence in Hell or Purgatory, but it is our scriptural theology that membership in our church plus good works does assure us a celestial glory, while the same amount of good works without baptism assures the outsider a less reward. In fact, is not our missionary policy built up largely on the theory or belief that baptism into this church by our priesthood is necessary to draw an otherwise thoroughly good man over the line into celestial glory? Thus, in theory at least, excommunication from our church should hold out some eschatological terrors for us. We say "in theory," for we feel that while that is our theory, many of us are not particularly disturbed by it. The writer remembers that as a boy when we read about Jason W. Briggs and Zenas H. Gurley he wondered whether they felt any qualm of Satanic fury or regret at having missed the celestial gates, when they retired from ecclesiastical fellowship. We doubt it. Our point is that while we approach the Catholic position of authority and celestial heirship, we are not in a much better position to threaten our recalcitrants with eschatological punishment than in our historical background, Protestantism.

Permit us to interject an opinion here that while we approach the Catholics in our belief in authority, and have elements in church practice and belief that could lead us through to a thorough Catholic attitude as evidenced by the evolution of priestcraft under Brigham Young, we have also elements which can lead us, and we hope, although not without some misgivings, will lead us towards the goal which Protestantism is approaching but not yet fully accepting.

But this disregard for eschatology or "salvation" is growing, too, within the church. Why? Is it because a religion which avers itself to be mainly interested in this world only, in getting people to love each other here, in getting a Zion, that means a social reconstruction of society, avowedly the religion of many of our younger men, especially of those who have grown up in the church, is really incompatible and irreconcilable with a religion that is interested in "saving" people in the next world. The writer heard of a sermon that was preached by one of our men who perhaps is more concerned with getting people into the church because he feels that it will bring salvation for the next world, in which sermon this minister talked against a "social" gospel, an "Ellwood" type of religion. Perhaps this minister has gone further in his thinking than the most of us, and has sensed that there might be an irreconcilability between an eschatological gospel and a social gospel, between a gospel that endeavors to get members into a church which has the authority to save them in the next world, and a gospel which endeavors to get men to work together harmoniously in this world for each other's comfort and welfare under the principle of universal love.

Perhaps the statement of many of our younger men that they are interested in reconstructing this world socially, and not in the next world, is an intuitive though unreasoned and unrecognized admission of this irreconcilability. If there is this irreconcilability between a "redeeming Zion" religion, and a "saving" religion, there is a line of cleavage drawn in our church that is far deeper than any surface agitation over the relative rights of quorums of priesthood. We realize that many will disagree with us, but we believe this is an aspect of the question that goes to the core of our religious philosophy, and is its battleground. If so, to get the proposition stated is a long step towards its solution. What shall we do with this proposition? Shall we increase or decrease our emphasis upon the theory or fact, whichever it is, especially with the children growing up in the church, that membership in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is absolutely necessary to obtain the fullest eschatological glory. It will make a difference in our ability to "handle," or "train," or "educate" our people, whichever word you feel the most proper.

But even if excommunication from ours and other Protestant churches is losing its diabolical terrors, excommunication and heresy trials are not altogether popular yet. While the average heretic does not elude a heresy trial and excommunication because of fear of being consigned to hell, he does elude it because he fears the loss of approval, of companionship, and of prestige among lifelong companions and friends here upon earth. In other words, the church, as any social institution, organized or unorganized, can very effectively ostracize its members. Just as a girl club has a very effective way of ostracizing the recalcitrant member, just as the woman's club has a very effective way of ostracizing, snubbing, and shunning the recalcitrant member, so does the ecclesiastical congregation have a very effective way of ostracizing its recalcitrant members. Even if the church cannot hold excommunication with its possible eschatological terrors over us, it still can effectively punish us with some phase of ostracism.

Can the church reward us with increased fellowship, as the father can do in playing with the kite along with his child? We believe it an easily demonstrable fact that the church is tending to use the method of increased fellowship with its youth more and more. Larger efforts are being made to suggest something to the youth that he can do, in doing which we as adult members of the church can associate with him instead of merely telling what not to do. At least religious educational reformers are loudly advocating that the church should do this. Efforts at such increased association on the plane of interest of the child and youth are illustrated by our Catholic friends playing cards and dancing in their church basements, by our Utah Latter Day Saint brethren dancing with their young under church auspices (this statement is only hearsay with the writer), our own church in the center place supplying motion pictures, and almost all churches conducting boys' and girls' clubs, either of their own initiation, as our Orioles, or of nondenominational initiation, as the Boy Scouts. We have wondered at times whether the thing we would permit him to substitute is any better for religious progress than the thing we condemn; for instance, attending motion pictures under our auspices instead of dancing. What do you think? This also must come in for fuller discussion when we discuss the relative merits of all these methods.

Throughout this article we have brought forward the questions which the use of this method of passing on our spiritual heritage raises. They are much the same questions as raised by the first method discussed. This second method is especially pertinent to our religious educational policy in the stakes. Shall we try to rely upon it considerably within the stakes; or shall we use it only as supplementary to other methods? Perhaps we should rely upon it but very little. Where we have relied upon this method within our stakes, has it succeeded?

Again, we have brought in many illustrations without regard to whether we favor or disfavor their results.

There are still other methods.

Which Is the Greatest?

BY E. E. LONG

Two great tasks lie before the church. They are: "Go teach all nations," and "Feed my sheep." Both are vitally important, and they cover the whole ground of our activity in the field of gospel labor. But which of the two is the more important is the disturbing element that lies at the bottom of our present distress. All other differences are but the outgrowths of this controversy, for they have to do with policies and methods of procedure.

The primary object of the coming of the Son of God into the world was to "save men's lives" (Luke 9:56), to "save the world" (John 3:17), and not to prevent them from going astray, for they were already "lost" and in need of "reclamation." Nor has the situation changed since the gospel was proclaimed in Judea by the One who was sent to do a thing, and did it. The great importance of missionary work is emphasized by the fact that He left the ninety and nine in the fold and went in search of the one that was lost. And we are assured that there is "no variableness, neither shadow of turning" with Him. (James 1:17.)

The command to "Feed my sheep," and "lambs," is of great importance, and we have no desire to minimize it. But the measure of its importance, in comparison with the other command, "Go teach all nations," can only be determined by the relative size of the two fields. It is quite clear that the duty of the local ministry is to save the flock by preservation, their ministry being confined to those within the fold. The size of the force necessary to carry on the work of preservation is limited, being governed by the number to be ministered to. But the work of "saving" those in the fold from going astray should in no sense interfere with the work of "saving" the greater number who are lost.

It is the duty of the missionary, or "reclamation" forces, to extend the boundary lines of the local field by reaching out and gathering in alien material from all nations, tongues, and peoples, until the utmost bounds of the world have been reached. And that big task is not going to be done right away. If every member of the church to-day were ordained and sent out as a missionary to preach the gospel of repentance to those who are lost, it would require many, many years to give the world the once over.

Just by way of comparison: The field of activity of those who feed the flock is limited to a scarce 100,000, while the missionary force have a field of 57,000,000 square miles containing about 1,650,000,000 souls, and that number rapidly increasing. The relative bigness of the two tasks is quite apparent. The total number of sheep and lambs to be fed and preserved at this time could all be comfortably located in one small county in the State of Missouri, and there would still be room for more. Why, then, should we stress our social program to the neglect and hindrance of our missionary obligation? From what we have seen and heard of late, our social program will so absorb our time and attention that we will have no time for the millions of sheep and lambs who had no better sense than to get lost.

Aside from the slow process of procreation, the church cannot grow except it reaches out in fulfillment of its mission and reclaims the lost, whose multiplication far exceeds the growth of the church by both conversion and procreation. The sectarian theory of salvation by preservation is a fallacy and shows a shortness of vision that reaches little farther than our eye lashes. It is unthinkable, only as we lose sight of our missionary responsibility. Nor would I belittle the importance of saving our young people. God forbid! But a liberal estimate of the number of our young people, affected by our social program, would not exceed 25,000, while there probably are 500,000,000 lambs yonder in the wilderness who are lost and straying on the mountains, and "none to search or seek after them." And they are just as precious in the sight of the Good Shepherd as any who are in the fold. The dominant note in the voice of the Good Shepherd to this church is, "Go find my sheep! Go find my lambs!"

The inevitable conclusion then is, Increase the missionary force, and as they bring the lost ones into the fold the work of preservation will increase correspondingly. Such was the program from 1830 to 1844, and for half a century in the Reorganized Church, until a few years ago we shifted the emphasis in behalf of a popular social program and sacrificed our missionary policy, which has since become a mere bagatelle.

No big business concern would think of reducing the number of its salesmen simply because the office force had to be enlarged. If occasion requires retrenchment, it should not begin with the salesmen who are getting the business. All through the period of depression following the war, when retrenchment was the order, salesmen were constantly in demand.

But the church has gone about it in the other way. While our offices and office force have greatly multiplied, our salesmen have decreased over two hundred per cent in twenty years! Yet, in the face of these glaring facts, there are some who maintain that we have not departed from the old paths. Our General Conference Minutes show in glaring black type that we have departed, and our present distress is a danger signal. Under the divine policy of expansion, from 1830 to 1844 the church increased from six members to near two hundred thousand. Of course, it has been said that the tree, becoming top heavy, had to be cut down. But that was no fault of the missionary force. The fault was in the office. Administrative inefficiency was the cause! Nor can the divine arrangement be held to account for the Nauvoo wreck. Danger signs had been properly placed to insure safety, and men on the watch towers were sounding the alarm; but they were discredited because they were not "in harmony," and their warnings went unheeded. In the mad frenzy for increased speed, the traffic officers were run down, and the safety devices were destroyed, with disastrous results to the whole church. It was so on the way from Jerusalem to Rome, and it was so on the way from Kirtland to Salt Lake. But neither Catholic nor Brighamite will admit the fact.

That there is something seriously wrong has long ago ceased to be a "radical knock." It has become a conviction with the rank and file. It is the divine arrangement that when the local forces cease to function properly, certain of the missionary force may be called in to set things in order, and from present indications that thing will have to be done sooner or later, or the "sick lady" will surely die of "improvements." Divers remedies have been applied, but the patient grows worse the while! May it not be that some of the remedies prescribed are only aggravating the disease?

"Our sufficiency is of God," declared the great apostle to the Gentiles, and his admonition was timely. Already there was growing up in the primitive church a tendency to cater to the world, a grave danger of which the Lord had previously warned the saints. (John 15: 18, 19.) Although living in the world, we must be "not of it." (Doctrine and Covenants 125: 8.)

By the process of digestion we assimilate the food we eat. A lack of wholesome food, and an over-indulgence in sweets and "soft drinks," result in undernourishment. Likewise we absorb the things we see, hear, and read, hence the admonition to "forsake not the assembling of yourselves together," and to "study good books." The specification is good books, and good books teach the truth. The Good Shepherd came to lead his sheep into good pastures, and he warned them against the poisonous weeds of human wisdom. They were told to "beware of the leaven of the Pharisees," for "a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." A little poison will derange the whole physical system and endanger the life of the individual. The physical body is no more sensitive to the deadly effects of poisonous drugs than is the spiritual body of Christ to the blighting effects of "science, falsely so called," all the more dangerous because of its being sugar-coated with a smattering of truth.

A long time ago God said to Israel: "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways" (Isaiah 55: 8); and for us it is written:

Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these, shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:16.

We have heard much about "constructive" work, but the only way for us to be constructive is to construct our work according to the pattern given of God, and not after a sectarian model. In 1838 the Lord warned the Saints against a "secret thing" that was designed to overthrow them, but they failed to recognize that same secret thing when it appeared in their midst, because it approached them as a plausible means of assistance in the promulgation of the truth. And thus they were deceived! The sugar coating was sweet and alluring, but the poison was bitter and deadly.

To-day there comes to us a deceptive thing, cunning in design, alluring in character, but pleasing in appearance. Its ostensible purpose is the glory of God and the salvation of all men—on a plan never once mentioned in Holy Writ! Its first postulate is correct: "The child is right with God." The grossest errors in modern churchanity are based on the sublime truth that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Abandoning the creedal doctrine of infant damnation, sectarianism seizes on the fundamental truth proclaimed by the Book of Mormon and builds thereon an error as wicked and foolish as the other one just forsaken. Its next affirmation is as far from the truth as heaven is from hell! Listen! "Keep the child right, and there will never be any need for conversion or reclamation." Shades of the crucifixion! How strange it is that the Author and Finisher of our faith never mentioned such a thing! This popular pronouncement ignores the Bible doctrine that in human nature there was planted, by the fall of Adam, the seed of disobedience and death, and from the moment that the child utters its first cry that seed begins to germinate and grow, and by the time the child arrives to the years of accountability it begins to bear fruit, and unless that seed is destroyed by the process of conversion, and the individual becomes a "new creature in Christ," he cannot see the kingdom of God. (John 3: 3-8.) Otherwise the crucifixion of Jesus was a useless homicide. If salvation by preservation was right, why did not Jesus instruct his apostles to teach it then? And why does not the Book of Mormon, containing the fullness of the gospel, say something about it? And how does it happen that this new discovery, that would ultimately eliminate the preaching of the gospel under the terms of the great commission, originated with the sectarian ministry of whom it was said, "They are all wrong; their creeds are an abomination in my sight, and those professors are all corrupt"? This fanciful doctrine of Mystery Babylon is just as dangerous as was the leaven of the Pharisees, of whom Jesus said, "Beware!"

This child of Modernism, born in the shambles of Apostasy and nursed in the lap of Sectarianism, is offered to the Bride of the Restoration for adoption, and some there are who would take it in and provide for its entertainment the childish playthings its carnal nature craves, at the expense of the children of the covenant, and to the neglect of the lost and starving sheep and lambs who are wandering on the mountains. Is it right! Will we give this trouble maker a place in Zion? Or shall we, like Abraham, cast out this child of unbelief, because it has no inheritance with the children of the kingdom?

Let us moralize our social order, our educational system, and our politics, by adding a generous supply of the pure, unadulterated religion of Jesus Christ. But let us be just as careful that we do not demoralize our religion with a poisonous mixture of rationalism, atheism, and sectarian philosophy.

Never put confidence in such as put no confidence in others. A man prone to suspect evil is mostly looking in his neighbor for what he sees in himself. As to the pure all things are pure, even so to the impure all things are impure.—Hare.

Facts About the Bible.—No. 6

BY A. B. PHILLIPS

Among the various subjects the understanding of which helps to a better evaluation of the Bible, is that of other ancient writings. These may be grouped in general as either religious or secular literature, though it is at times difficult to draw this distinction very closely, as some writings appear to combine both elements in a degree. While modern facilities have made accessible all the great recent writings in every branch of science, philosophy, religion, fiction, and other literature, ancient methods by which writings could be duplicated were much more laborious and less accurate in detail.

The chief substances on which records were made included papyrus, skins, clay tablets, stone, and sometimes metals. Silk and linen were also used to some extent. Literally tons of papyrus manuscripts and fragments have been discovered recently in the course of archaeological excavations in several places. Many of these are thousands of years old. Papyrus was very widely used among leading nations of antiquity, and is represented in old Egyptian wall paintings in the form of rolls. The most ancient now known concerns the reign of King Assa, who ruled from about 3580 to 3536 B. C. It was also used by the Greeks many centuries before the Christian era, and continued to be employed for certain purposes until about the twelfth century A. D.

Ancient Religious Literature

Egyptian hieroglyphical records, extending back to at least three thousand years B. C., give us something of the religious customs and laws of Egypt. The pyramid texts, cut in stone, are nearly as ancient, being found in the pyramids of the fifth and sixth dynasties, and contain services for the dead, hymns, prayers, and rules of worship. The so-called Book of the Dead dates from about the sixteenth century B. C., copies of which, some of them a hundred feet in length, have been found in Egyptian coffins. Social and moral precepts, legends, hymns, and poems are included in many of the tomb inscriptions and papyrus records.

In ancient Babylonia magnificent libraries were established, in the ruins of which many thousands of clay tablets and cylinders have been found. They include works on various educational matters, civics, history, and religion. Some of them contain ancient Sumerian texts and religious traditions, including stories of the creation and the deluge. The Sumerians were a wonderful people who appear to have been identified with Shinar (Genesis 11:1) where the tower of Babel was built. The clay tablets, of which thousands have been discovered, contain many priestly inscriptions. The celebrated Code of Hammurabi (c. 2250 B. C.) shows interesting points of resemblance to certain features of the Mosaic law, such as parts of the decalogue, laws of the priesthood, tithes, temple service, and marriage questions.

The Vedic sacred writings, probably dating from 1500 B. C., contain many thousands of lines of devotional poems. The sacred book of the Persians, the Avesta, is a compilation the beginning of which dates about 1400 B. C., and continues through a period of about a thousand years. Persian influence among the people of the Bible is indicated in that book (Esther, Ezekiel 27:10-13; Daniel 5:28; 6), and doubtless became pronounced in the later period. Greek writings contributed less to religion than to a variety of other activities, but nevertheless the temples and religious customs of the Grecians were of no little importance in the influence they exerted.

Aside from the Bible, the Talmud, and the Targums, there remain but few Hebrew writings except various apocryphal works. However, mention is made in the Bible itself of about twenty other books that appear to have been familiar to the ancient Jews. The book of Nathan the Prophet, of Gad the Seer, of Iddo the Seer, and others are referred to in 1 and 2 Chronicles. Evidently these books have been lost, with the possible exception of two or three which some think may refer to matter in the biblical record.

Value of the Apocrypha

The name apocrypha was at first applied to writings or traditions believed to be intended only for select persons—the elect. From the secrecy thrown around such works they began to be held in disrepute, and finally the word was used to designate books rejected or uncanonical. Some of the early fathers considered many of the apocryphal books to be inspired, and they were included in both Greek and Latin Bibles for a time. Fifteen of the Old Testament apocryphal books are still included in the Douay Bible. There are about forty other works concerning Old Testament times which are of some prominence. They are known as the Pseudepigrapha, and are mostly of forged or spurious authorship.

The apocryphal works of the Christian era were apparently written to propagate certain ideas concerning Christianity not generally believed. Most of them were entitled Gospel, Epistle, or Acts, and some were esteemed by the ministry and churches in certain places. Besides the books published as the Apocryphal New Testament, there are thirteen "apocalypses," twelve "acts," twenty-eight "gospels," and a variety of other titles of more or less prominence. The vast amount of such writings that arose in an early period is convincing evidence that the influence of Christ and his message spread rapidly and widely in that age. Some of these writers perhaps made honest efforts to record doctrines and traditions concerning Christ and the church.

Early Christian Writers

By far the most valuable class of literature to the student of primitive Christian doctrines as represented outside of New Testament books is the sub-apostolic writings, as those of Clement, Barnabas, Hermas, Ignatius, Polycarp, Papias, Aristides, and Justin Martyr. These are all recognized to be genuine works of the respective authors named, and were written between 70 and 160 A. D. All of these writers had excellent opportunity to obtain information from reliable sources, and were men of distinction in the church. Barnabas and Hermas are both in the Sinaitic Codex, and with the Epistle of Clement were read publicly in the early churches.

More than sixty prominent Christian authors produced important works during the first four centuries. Such of these writers as had received ordination at the hands of apostles are generally regarded as trustworthy witnesses as to matters of fact with which they were personally acquainted. The precedents which they followed could be reasonably supposed to have been derived from the apostles themselves or their associates. Ignatius is said to have received his appointment from Peter, and Polycarp was ordained by the Apostle John, of whom also Papias was a disciple. The testimony of these early ministers of the church to the words of Peter, Matthew, Mark, and John largely confirms the scriptural text. Justin quoted extensively from scripture, and being learned in the philosophies of his day was competent to testify to the superiority of Christianity. (For these subjects see Helps to Bible Study, pp. 202-223.)

Statement and Question

When I was a young man the missionaries would come to my father's home, visit with us, and preach in the country schoolhouses, and I often had an opportunity to talk to the elders and hear them talk around the fireside. We had the HERALD and tracts to read, and one principle I want to refer to that was made very prominent, and that was the binding nature of the law of the Lord. "I am the Lord, I change not"; "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." Those who had been to Utah would tell us that when they got out there they were told, "Away with the books; they are not worth the ashes of a rye straw. Follow your file leaders and obey the living oracles." Because of the way we were educated in that day in regard to the sacredness of the law, the young of the present day need not think we are reactionary if we still stick to the teachings of our youth.

It seems from what we have read in the HERALD for the past several weeks that there was a council held in the month of April composed of the First Presidency, the Quorum of Twelve, and the Order of Bishops, and they were trying to take action on some very important matters connected with the work of the church. From what I can learn by reading the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, there are several councils named therein who have important work assigned to them. In Doctrine and Covenants 104: 11, last paragraph, provision is made for the assembling of the quorums. In paragraphs 12 and 13 we are informed that the Twelve and Seventy are regulating quorums of the church. In 123: 1 we have an account of a joint council to take into consideration important matters connected with the church work, composed of the First Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric. In 126: 10 instructions are given for a council composed of the First Presidency, Twelve, and Seventy.

Question: Where in the books is any provision made for an Order of Bishops, and for them to sit in council on important church matters? Will some member of that council, or some one else who knows, please answer through the HERALD?

Meditation

BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

As the years crowd upon me, I come to see more clearly the depth and importance of the Master's teachings. I have come to appreciate, as never before, the fact that he desires us to live the message of truth rather than to talk theoretically of it. His entire life and message here were intended to be a means of assisting us to discover the real purposes of life; to enable us to discover the law by which life is to be governed if it is to become a joy to us and a benediction to those with whom we are permitted to associate. He held constantly before us the transcendent life, and in the clearest possible terms bade us follow him. He sought to have us learn that nothing short of the best there is in us will suffice. He requires of me the very best, and insists that unless I shall excel I am not fit to enter into the kingdom of his Father. This may sound strange to the average believer, but I am persuaded that after you have canvassed this field with me, it will be clear to your minds also that nothing short of the very best will satisfy the demands of his law.

That we might approach the matter properly permit me to draw your attention to the language of our Lord: "Except your righteousness exceeds the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees ye shall in no case enter the kingdom of heaven." Let us examine this and see if possible what the Master is really saying to you and me; for this language addressed to his disciples two thousand years ago is equally binding upon you and me if we be his disciples. It seems the followers of Christ had a tendency to justify themselves that they were no worse, or perhaps were just as good as their religious neighbors; they seemed to think that being equally good with others was one of the commendable virtues, but our Lord tried to make clear to them that he who would enter the kingdom of heaven must be something more than just as good; he must be the best it is possible for him to be. To be less than this would be to be possessed of inferior qualities, and if we are to admit inferior qualities into the kingdom of heaven, it would be to admit that the kingdom of heaven is made up of inferior qualities.

Right here we enter a field of reasoning that has been but little explored, but the writer is convinced that it is of such great importance to us we can't afford to neglect it. Too frequently our reasoning is faulty, but let us see to it this time that we reason logically and intelligently, and in this way arrive at correct conclusions. You know the wise man has said that, "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he"; I therefore maintain, that if we think erroneously we are bound to act in the same way; and that the only way for us to reach the highest is through learning to think aright and in this way bringing ourselves in right relations with man and God. I therefore wish to draw your attention to what is a very fundamental truth in the Master's language before quoted. "Except your righteousness exceed!" What does it suggest to you? Does it mean that the life must exceed in righteousness the life of the scribe and the Pharisee? Yes, it means this; but it also carries with it a far deeper meaning than we usually get from the term. The deeper thought contained in this instruction of our Lord is: The Pharisees are capable of living far better than they do; they are not nearly so right as their information and knowledge would warrant them in being; they could be far in advance of what they are if they had applied, or would apply themselves. It is not a matter of whether they are inferior or superior to somebody else; no, verily no! It is a question of whether they are the best they could be under the existing circumstances. So, while the Master tried to impress upon his disciples the fact that the Pharisees were not living up to the highest and the best within them, and that it was because of this they were not entitled to a place in the kingdom of heaven, he also wishes his followers to see that if they do not exceed the scribes and the Pharisees in this, they too, will forfeit their right to the tree of life and to their place in the Holy City.

By this reasoning, we are able to understand the reasoning of Saint Paul, when he says that those who compare themselves among themselves are not wise. In the day of final accounting it is not going to be a question as to whether I was as good as neighbor Jones, nor yet as to whether I was as good as neighbor Brown; no, verily! For I may be as good as either or both of them and yet be unfitted for the kingdom of heaven. Let it be distinctly understood, then, that this question will not enter into the consideration at all. The thing though that will determine my worthiness to enter into the kingdom of God is, whether I have done all that I could; have I made the best of my opportunities; have I done all that it was possible for me to do? However righteous I may appear, if I have not done the best I could, and have not made of myself the very best possible, I have not exceeded the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, for neither did they.

Here I get a new light upon the words of the Master when he answered the question of the Pharisees, viz: "Are we also blind?" His answer was, "If ye were blind ye would have no sin, but now ye say ye see therefore your sin remaineth." In other words he might have answered and conveyed the same meaning. If you were doing the best you knew you would have no sin, but since you know better than you do your sin remains with you. I am also able to better understand his other statement: "Herein came condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men chose darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil." No one can choose between the light and the darkness until he knows the difference between them. It is obvious that sin consists in clinging to the inferior when we are able to see the superior.

No one should become discouraged because he is not able to reach the place occupied by some one else in this life; nor should anyone be satisfied simply because he has some advantage over his fellow men; for neither of these things will avail us. But the thing that above all else should concern us is, Are we making the best of ourselves? Are we excelling the scribes and the Pharisees in this? The highest tribute that was ever paid by Christ to mankind was his statement concerning Mary. Hear it: "She hath done what she could." If this can be said of you and me, then we will have the assurance that we have excelled the scribes and the Pharisees in righteousness. But if we have not done what we could, then are we under the same condemnation as the scribes and the Pharisees. And I see no reason for anyone to deceive himself in this matter.

We may here better understand the Scriptures, which say: "It is requisite with the justice of God,

Reflections Upon Visiting Scenes in Europe

BY PAUL M. HANSON

Owing to many calls in our field, Brother Curtis and I separated a couple of weeks ago in Basil, Switzerland. He went into Germany, and I came up this way via Rotterdam, Holland. We are to meet after a while and return to England. I am now up in the northern part of the land of my ancestors, at Aalborg, where Elders P. T. Anderson and Nels P. Hansen are laboring.

At Schiedam, Holland, I preached en route and spoke here last Sunday night, Brother Andersen acting as interpreter. All took part in the congregational singing, and as they joyfully sang my soul was thrilled with the Spirit's power. I though if our departed brother, Peter Anderson, could hear the singing made possible through his translation and printing of the books, surely he would rejoice, and in the courts above join in unison with the hearts and voices in the service.

Coming up on the train I found myself studying closely everything in sight—the green fields almost ripe for the harvest, here and there a huge windmill standing out against the horizon, picturesque houses of white with red-tiled roofs, or thatched reeds, in a setting of shade trees, many herds of cattle grazing in the meadows, and the people.

From this land my father and mother emigrated, my mother going as a little girl with her parents to Utah, where they discovered they had been misled. My father was a young man when he took his departure. As I have never that men should be judged according to their works; and if their works were good in life, and the desires of their hearts were good, that they should also, at the last day, be restored unto that which is good." It at least seems reasonable to the writer that God will only require of us the best there is in us; but we are assured that while we are living up to the best we are constantly in a position to gain more; and it is by daily living up to the highest and best we are able to grow into the likeness of the Just One. Good deeds and good desires are the essential things, and to the degree that we vitalize these things shall we be able to approach unto the life and character of Jesus Christ. To the degree we make these things a part of our daily lives are we able to come to know God, and it is this possibility of knowing God that constitutes eternal life.

May we, therefore, awaken to the privileges that are ours, and lay hold upon the only means within our reach for the securing of a place in the kingdom of heaven, where we may share the life that is highest and best, because we have throughout our earthly life gradually grown into the likeness of the Just One, by daily living to the highest and the best there is in us.

seen any of my relatives on his side, I am looking with happy anticipation to visiting them at Copenhagen.

Many scenes of interest engaged our attention after arriving in Italy. I wish all could visit Rome, which in the day of its power ruled the world with imperial grandeur. There would be lasting profit. To look upon the works of pagan, Christian, and modern epochs is possible in this city where men's ambitions climbed high and are now lying in ruins.

Though the Romans greatly influenced our language, laws, government, art, and military science, and were expert builders of roads, bridges, and great edifices, they left some things needful out of their reckoning.

A large part of the Colosseum, one of their stupendous material achievements, where gladiators fought to the death and Christians became a prey to wild animals, is in a remarkable state of preservation.

The River Tiber rolls on through the city which is situated on the famed seven hills.

Among the places of special interest to me were the Forum, Saint Peter's, Vatican Museum and Library, Arch of Titus, Palace of the Cæsars, Circus Maximus with its Imperial Box, Rostra of Mark Antony, Appian Way, Catacombs, Church of Capuchius, Church of Saint John in Lateran, works of Michaelangelo and Raphael, etc.

Remains of Nero's dining room are to be seen. One hundred and twenty different kinds of marble were used, which means that many mines were worked to satisfy his royal taste. Near by are columns standing where, after eating to the full, the diners would go out and tickle their throats with a feather, then go back to their delicacies.

In the Church of Capuchius are bones of four thousand monks of the Franciscan order. Adorning the chapels are gruesome decorations. Skeletons, partly clothed, are grinning. The ceiling and wall designs, arches, chandeliers, and all, are of human bones.

In the Church of Saint John in Lateran was printed and on display the following:

"The devotion of the Scala Santa is practiced by going up on one's knees from one side to the other of its twenty-eight steps, meditating meanwhile on the Passion of our Lord, or reciting vocal prayers in memory of his sufferings. An indulgence of nine years—applicable to the souls in Purgatory—is granted to those who perform this pious exercise with a contrite heart. (Pius VII, 24 October, 1819.) The same indulgence may be gained by going up one of the lateral stairways in the same manner, at certain times of the year, viz: "1. During the whole of Lent; 2. From the feast of all Saints till the Octave of all Soula; 3. From Christmas Day till the Epiphany."

"His Holiness Pope Pius X by an autograph Rescript of February 26, 1908, grants a plenary indulgence in perpetuum, applicable to the souls in Purgatory and to be gained toties quoties, by anyone who, meditating on the Passion of our Blessed Lord ascends on their knees the Holy Stairs."

To gain the indulgence, throngs were ascending the stairs on their knees.

What a commentary on man's credulity! Nowhere in the realm of human existence has there been a greater readiness to place one's God-given conscience and reason in the hands of others to manipulate than in the practice of religion. State religions have played their part; thumbscrews and instruments of torture have been resorted to by those who wished to hold in trust the religious welfare of others; heavy taxation, made effective by religious fear; vast structures built like Saint Peters, Saint Marks, and the cathedral in Milan, while the masses of the people in poverty struggled on in intellectual and spiritual darkness; suppression of thought was requisitioned as an expedient for entrenching religious power; and exiling courageous and enlightened men who made use of their intelligence was thought proper. What a revelation along this line does all history afford!

Under the operation of the doctrine of infallibility of the Pope, and its concomitant of a ruling priesthood, there has been throughout the world a numbing of the powers of man by which the Almighty can be found. The final result is that the people fear to think, lest they think wrongly. They are taught the priesthood should rule. The priesthood learn to do the thinking. The people cease to reason and analyze—their part is simply to rubber stamp what is offered to them. Some people define that as “common consent!”

Many worshipers forge their own chains, and then kiss the chains that bind.

The Pope claims to be a prisoner in the Vatican. A prisoner, when he can leave the large area of his quarters when he chooses. To go out would be a recognition of the temporal authority of Rome's rulers. He wants all temporal power.

There is a plate in the square of Florence marking the spot where Savonarola, of the Reformation, was burned for disagreeing with others.

In the same city I visited the house of Galileo, where he wrote his books affirming that the earth moves. This was so offensive to some that he was forced to recant; but it is said that he afterward remarked quietly to a friend standing near, “But it does move.”

A rule of external authority, shutting out the light of conscience and reason, turns the wheels of progress backward.

It is written of the everlasting kingdom of Christ:

“Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever.”—Isaiah 9:7.

One of its abiding qualities is justice. No form of society can long endure without this virtue. The leading officers of the church should be the first to be just. They should not, after the close of General Conference, attack delegates and officers of the General Conference who took part in its sessions in accordance with parliamentary procedure. A cloud has been thrown over some by picturing them before the whole world as “self-appointed, or aspiring leaders” and instruments of Satan—men who have after a long, sacrificial, and honorable career left a good name among their friends and with their families.

That blot should be wiped from the fair escutcheon of the Reorganization.

I am persuaded that the atmosphere of the church would be wonderfully cleared if what was set forth in a recent HERALD by an influential body of the ministry, were heeded: let all be “humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity,” all discension would flee away.

There are two phases of the present controversy that interest me. First, is it right for one man to have “supreme directional control” of all departments of the church? Second, if admitted, or believed to be a true principle, does the church want such revolutionary changes instituted between General Conferences?

Paul wrote to the “churches of Galatia” that he “withstood Peter to the face, because he was to be blamed.” Some say Peter was president of the church. The apostle evidently thought the man needed correction, and the church deserved protection. Such courage contributed in making him a chosen vessel of the Lord.

It shows at least that Paul would take a stand against a leading officer of the church, or one of his own quorum, when wrong existed. If such a course were not followed, the disastrous conclusion would be reached by the membership that the members of the Twelve would support each other, or remain quiet, whenever one did wrong. The same reasoning applies to the Presidency.

No one, from the President to the humblest member, has a right to remain silent when vital principles are violated meaning injury to the church, or, to some one, wrongful official oblivion.

Paul, not being an apostle of men, did not hesitate to challenge irregular actions on the part of men. He was called to be “an apostle (not by men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead.)”

Has more unity come through the action which has been foisted upon the church between conferences, more spiritual manifestations, more divine healing, more consecration? Is Zion's light burning more brightly, are all rejoicing, and do the missionaries feel more like going out into their fields and abroad to magnify their calling? Verily, no!

One of the leading spiritual quorums of the church, the Seventy, equal in its decision to the Presidency and the Twelve, has not been heard from, not even consulted.

All wish the Presidency to have a general oversight of the church and its welfare. In all my associations with leading men of the church, dead and alive, I have never heard that right questioned.

Possibly if a clear definition of the expression “supreme directional control” were given, an open road would be found to unity. Why has such not been offered? In what sense is the power to be used in connection with the finances of the church? Are general officers and others to be left in use of their conscience and reason, or are they just to “obey counsel” and hear “orders are orders”? All this should be made clear. As the President has asked for added power for himself, a lucid definition by him of his expression would be appreciated.

To me it is reasonable that all general programs and policies should be submitted to the General Conference for consideration and decision before being executed. In many instances this has not been done, not even referred to the joint council of Presidency, Presiding Bishop, and Twelve. Such a course does not invite the fullest cooperation.

Why not all agree that any general program or policy, not indorsed by the General Conference, shall not be initiated, and then wholeheartedly support the First Presidency in executing the will of the body when so expressed?

All of God's servants are called to have part in Zion's glorious accomplishment. It is well written in prophecy: “Thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favor the dust thereof.”

AALBORG, DENMARK, July 30.

Word comes from Sister Keith H. Rogers, Denver, Colorado, that she was operated on in Saint Luke's Hospital August 4. She has been improving each day since the operation and should leave the hospital about August 20.

Brother F. G. Whipple, of Groton, Connecticut, writes: “I have read with interest the many good articles appearing in the HERALD of late. The word of admonition by Brother Luff was grand. Brother Herbert Johnson preached a good sermon at Westerly last night. His theme was, “Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God.” He exhorted the Saints to keep away from the club rooms and dance halls. Sunday morning the writer addressed the Saints at New London. The theme was along the line of the text, “Without me ye can do nothing,” and the admonition of the Lord to us as a people was to come out of the world and be separate; a peculiar people.”

A Leaf From a Patriarch's Diary

May 23, 1920.—Last night I was suddenly awakened and saw a personage standing by my bedside, dressed in white, with a cape over the shoulders reaching more than half way to the waist. The personage had all the appearance of being a woman of medium size.

My first thought was, Is this some intruder that has broken into the house? But momentarily the thought came to me that a mischievous intruder would not be dressed as is that personage, and I spoke up, What do you want here? No answer came, and suddenly the mysterious visitor turned to leave and disappeared through the wall at her back.

All the blinds were up in my sleeping apartment and the large street light made the room light enough so I could see the time of night in looking at my watch. I had a group picture hanging on the wall, and I had noticed the messenger stood between me and the picture, hiding the picture completely from me; but when the messenger disappeared the picture could be seen plainly. This, I thought, was proof to me that the messenger was not transparent.

I wakened my wife and asked her if she had seen anything or felt anything peculiar. She answered me, No. I then related to her what I had seen, and we conversed a while over the vision, and marveled that the messenger had not left some message with us. Why should a messenger appear to us without a message of some kind, and leave so suddenly when interrogated, without leaving a word? This was a mystery we could not solve, and we marveled!

We prayed earnestly for light and a revelation of what this should mean. Was it some kind of a warning to us? Was it to teach us a lesson of faith and inquiry to learn the mind and will of God concerning his marvelous way of revealing things to his children?

Under this peculiar and prayerful condition I fell asleep and dreamed: I stood out in front of my home, close by the sidewalk which runs west towards the Independence Sanitarium, and I saw a lady, as I supposed, approaching me, going towards the Sanitarium. As she got even with me on the sidewalk, she spoke and said: "I am the messenger that appeared to you in your sleeping apartment to-night." At once I recognized this lady messenger as a school-teacher I had baptized some forty or fifty years ago, about fifteen miles southeast of Des Moines, Iowa, while laboring in that State, but now having been dead some twelve or fifteen years, dying a firm and true Latter Day Saint.

I approached her to offer her my hand in a friendly greeting, but she drew back and said, "Do not touch me," and made as though she were going. I begged her to remain longer, and she replied, "I am sent on a mission and I cannot tarry; I am on my way to the Sanitarium, going there to escort one of the Saints who is dying to the paradise of God. I must go." She was gone, and as I gazed after her, I thought, oh, how punctual even God's messengers have to be to his commands! I awoke, and the room seemed filled with the Spirit of God, and I praised him from whom all blessings flow.

I felt that I had learned a lesson, That sisters in the spirit land have mission work to do as "ministering angels," which work had always been accorded to men, such as Moses and Elias, John the Baptist, Peter and James, Mormon, Moroni, Nephi, and John the Revelator, etc. But now, here comes a sister from the spirit land, visiting me last night to inform me that true and faithful sisters to this great latter-day message, after death have something to do besides play on golden harps in the promised land, waiting for something to "turn up."

This glorious thought revealed to me in this heavenly vision by a sister messenger from heaven, whom I baptized with my own hands, near half a century ago, will ever prompt me to urge the sisters of the church to live to be worthy to carry such messages to a dying and perishing world. I hope I can live long enough to urge our sisters in the church to overcome all the arduous trials and wade through the many difficulties they are called to pass through, that at the end they may be worthy messengers, honored by our heavenly Father as ministering angels to the living and dying.

I will say now, August 13, 1924, by chance while looking over old diaries for other matter, my eye caught this vision, and hence I write it for publication. I. N. WHITE.

District Conference at Enfield

* ENFIELD, ENGLAND, August 5.—Our district conference was held here August 2 and 3, and was indeed a great success. Everyone attending had a good time from start to finish.

We had much pleasure in having with us Elder Harry Passman and wife, recently from Palestine. Brother Passman is a fine speaker and a faithful worker for the Master. Other visitors present were Abel Hall, missionary, E. Maloney and wife from Manchester, J. W. Worth, president of London Branch, and several others. We are always glad to meet with the Saints from different parts of the vineyard.

Sunday was a spiritual day for the Saints. A short prayer service was held at ten o'clock, after which Brother Passman spoke, taking for his subject, "Sowing and reaping." His remarks were based on Ecclesiastes 11. He closed by saying that what we need to-day is to be humble and full of meekness and at all times be careful how we sow or how we talk.

A fellowship meeting was held from three to four in the afternoon, at which time the Spirit was keenly felt by all, and God saw fit to bless us with prophecy through Sister Kemp and Brother Judd. All felt blessed and encouraged to go on with the work of the Master.

Evening preaching service was held at half past six, with J. A. Judd, district president, as the speaker. He took for his subject, "Go forward." This was the closing service of the conference. Music was provided by violinists under the supervision of Brother William Goulee and Brother Judd.

Food was provided throughout the day by Sister Judd, who was assisted by some of the sisters. No charge was made, but a collection was taken up after the meals.

The Saints here are very sociable, and they intend to go forward and do all they can for the work. The London Saints are meeting with the Enfield Saints whenever possible, as they are yet without a meeting place. They are hoping something will turn up soon so they will be able to meet together more often. Brother J. W. Worth has been carrying on the Religio in his home on Friday, but this is all he can do at present. ARTHUR H. WICKS.

Salt Lake City Entertains District Conference

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, August 17.—August 8, 9, and 10 district conference was held, with members present from Malad, Idaho; Ogden and Provo, Utah. Apostle D. T. Williams and Bishop James F. Keir were with us, and their sermons and talks were greatly appreciated. Also Elder R. L. Fulk, District President Guy P. Levitt, and Elder Roscoe Davey were present. There was one baptism.

One Sunday a bountiful basket dinner was provided for the Saints and friends by the Salt Lake Saints.

On August 14 the Sunday school had its outing in Liberty Park. After games and races about seventy Saints and friends, old and young, sat down to a fine supper. Apostle

J. F. Garver and wife partook of supper with us, after which Brother Garver preached to an attentive congregation.

The Saints greatly appreciate the visits of any church officials and other Saints and friends who may be passing through or who may be near us.

Trenton Sunday School Celebrates Anniversary

TRENTON, MISSOURI, August 14.—Elders T. W. Curtis and O. W. Okerlind have just closed a week's meetings here. Elder Curtis left the middle of the week to open up the work near Hickory Creek, a small station on the Rock Island about eight miles southwest of Trenton. He began preaching in an old neighborhood church building that had fallen into disuse on account of lack of interest. He reports that sixty were out at the second meeting. Elder Okerlind left August 8 to assist Brother Curtis in the good work.

The Saints of Trenton joined with others from Spickard, Jamesport, and Hickory Creek and had a basket dinner at Moberly Park in celebration of the sixteenth anniversary of Trenton Evergreen Sunday School, the fifteenth anniversary of Trenton Branch, and the fourteenth anniversary of the organization of the Religio here. A very fine program was given, after which the "Old Testament Cake," the recipe for which appeared in the Stepping Stones, was cut into fifty pieces, that all present could have a sample. They pronounced it fine. After singing a hymn, all returned to the church for baptismal service. Misses Hazel Morrison and Geneva Shipp were baptized in the font at the church, and were confirmed by Elders Curtis and Okerlind.

The infant daughter of Sister Robert Moore was recently blessed by Elders J. D. Profit and T. W. Curtis.

Flint Entertains and Welcomes Visitors

FLINT, MICHIGAN, August 9.—The interest of the church work in the city of Flint, is still at par, in spite of the industrial conditions existing at the present time. The automobile factories have cut production, and many of the membership are out of work. There is no relief in sight for the present, and little hopes are held out for a pick-up till late in the coming winter.

The local membership has had a real treat during the last month. The visit of President Frederick M. Smith was looked forward to by a large number of the young people. His sermon on the evening of July 1 was very timely, and his instruction to the priesthood after the preaching service will be long remembered by those present. The First Church was packed to capacity to hear him.

On July 20 the First Church entertained the quarterly ministerial conference. Apostle J. A. Gillen was present, and his opening remarks at the morning prayer meeting were very forceful and to the point. His talks to the quorums and the priesthood in mass session were enjoyed by all. He dropped in unexpectedly, but many were present to hear his timely counsel, and Flint looks forward to his return.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the past month was the delightful presence of Elder David E. Dowker, of Des Moines, Iowa. He was pressed into the harness and spoke at the evening service July 20. The renewing of acquaintances with those with whom he labored in Flint in years ago was enjoyed by all. Many strange faces greeted him, but with familiar surroundings, he soon found the Flint spirit and preached a sermon of his experiences as one of the first pastors of the city. Opportunity was not given him to visit the other two churches of the city, because of his lack of time.

Successful Meetings at Eads, Colorado

WILEY, COLORADO, August 15.—Hot weather finds Wiley Branch progressing about as usual. Brother J. D. Curtis just closed a series of meetings at Eads that had lasted over a month. Ten were baptized. The Wiley Saints were invited to a picnic August 10, not far from Eads, where the baptismal service was held. Only a few were able to attend, but nearly two hundred were there from near Eads. The crowd had no more than arrived safely home when a severe hailstorm broke, which did much damage to the crops.

During the early part of the meetings at Eads a minister supposed to fill a community pulpit, took it upon himself to enlighten the people concerning our doctrine. He used the publications of John D. Nutting in his first effort, and even misquoted them in one instance in order to make it stronger. His second effort, however, simmered down to the desire to say the very least he could so as not to be under the necessity of upholding his statements. Evidently he saw that Brother Curtis was able and willing to answer any evidence that could be produced. He held a special meeting to answer the charges made, conducting it in his usual courteous way, winning friends for the cause. Much prejudice was stirred up by the forces of the Adversary, which only time and the consistent living of the Saints there will erase.

More than the usual amount of sickness has visited us this summer. Brother Gordon O'Dell and Sister Edith Hughes have been ailing for some time and have now gone to Excelsior Springs for treatment. Others have been suffering from minor ailments more than usual.

Brother Curtis made a brief visit in the branch before returning home. At the invitation of Brother and Sister N. E. Berry, of Lamar, all the Saints who could met at their home where an enjoyable social time was held in honor of Brother Curtis.

Brother and Sister John Fletcher were visitors at the young people's convention and report a pleasant and instructive experience.

Many Attend Two-Day Meeting

August 19.—The two-day meeting held at Houghton Lake, Michigan, August 2 and 3, was well attended by many from a distance, there being between one and two hundred present. Saturday one hundred twenty-five were taken care of at the noonday meal, and Sunday there were one hundred ninety-five. Many others went home for their meals, and some had provided their own lunches.

Fine, cool weather prevailed, although rain threatened Sunday, but it did not rain till evening, for which we were thankful.

General good will prevailed. The ways and means committee did good work, and the tables were filled with plenty of good wholesome food. While accommodations were not of the best in some ways, yet we hope for continual improvement.

Much good was done at the meeting, and we hope all may profit thereby.

Immediately following the meeting Elder S. T. Pendleton was with us for two weeks, during which time seven were baptized, which caused great rejoicing. He left Friday, the 15th, with Brother and Sister Roark, to attend the reunion at Midland, after which he may be back among us, when we hope the good work may go on.

In the past year the church was moved to a better location, the interior was painted, and some new seats and indoor toilets were installed. Also new cement steps were built in front, and a large new sign is ready to be put up. This sign tells who we are and extends a welcome to all. Our next move will be to re-side and paint the exterior and finish the seating, when we will be quite comfortable.

MABLE D. JORDAN.

Good Interest at Ottumwa

OTTUMWA, IOWA, August 6.—The work here is moving along nicely. There was a good response to the call of the Bishop for two days of consecration, which showed the love of the Saints for the cause.

The Department of Women had their picnic in July and had a good time, as the ladies generally do.

Elder C. M. Clifford preached two sermons here on July 20. The evening sermon on "When thou art converted strengthen thy brethren," was especially good. He spoke on tithing very plainly and showed that if we were truly converted our tithing would be paid.

The pastor baptized one here July 27, for which some credit is given to the Sunday school and to Sister Green, who brought her to church.

A very sad and fatal accident occurred here July 17 when Sister Hawk's husband, twenty-nine years old, was drowned. He took cramps while in the water, and his wife saw him drown. He leaves besides his wife, two small children. Elder Sackfield, of Illinois, preached the funeral sermon.

Good Spiritual Meetings at Enfield

On July 26 at half past five a tea and social was held to welcome Brother and Sister Passman to Enfield. They had just returned from a long stay in the Holy Land and were very glad to meet with Enfield Saints and friends. We also had with us Elder G. Mesley, from Australia. He was on a visit to the British Empire Exhibition, Wembley, with some of his scouts, and he also was accorded a hearty welcome here. Several musical items were contributed by the Saints after tea, together with two or three recitations, and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Both Brother Passman and Brother Mesley gave speeches, expressing their delight and appreciation of the welcome they had received, assuring us they had enjoyed themselves thoroughly.

The following day, Sunday, we had a very welcome visitor in Brother Gilbert J. Waller, who has recently arrived here from Honolulu. The speaker in the morning was Elder H. Passman, who preached a very interesting sermon. In the afternoon Brother Waller gave us a few of his many experiences whilst in the mission field. In the evening the speaker was Brother Waller, and he delivered a powerful and interesting discourse which was enjoyed. The prayer and testimony meeting which followed this service was one that will be remembered by those who attended. The Spirit of God was present and was made manifest through Elder J. A. Judd. Words of encouragement were given to Brother and Sister Passman, also to Brother Waller. Many promises were made to them, and they were indeed comforted by the messages they received.

I pray that God's Spirit will be with all the Saints.

D. ALMA JUDD.

The Saints in Elberta, Michigan, though few in number, are still carrying on the work. They have a good Sunday school, where the classes are learning the books of the Bible, also the twenty-third psalm.

Independence

President Elbert A. Smith and family returned from Nauvoo August 29 after having attended the reunion at that place. Brother Elbert was unable to attend all the services because of quite serious illness, but he was able to make the trip home in the car.

President F. M. McDowell came September 1 to perform the marriage ceremony of Miss Myra Nelson, a former Graceland student, and Keith C. Harder, two years principal of the high school at Lamoni, Iowa. Brother McDowell will be in town until Wednesday.

Bishops B. R. McGuire, I. A. Smith, and J. F. Keir are back at their desks this week, following several weeks of reunion work.

The speaker at the Stone Church Sunday morning was Apostle Roy S. Budd, at which time he delivered a very fine sermon. Patriarch F. A. Smith gave one of his characteristically good sermons at the Campus in the evening.

The Labor Day celebration on the Campus Monday was somewhat interrupted by rain. A light rain broke into the morning ball game, but at noon, just when everyone was ready to eat dinner, a heavy storm broke and everyone had to run for shelter. During this storm the wind split one of the large trees, which fell across the road and did considerable damage to the light wiring. While the tree was being cleared away and the wiring repaired, the band gathered on the porch and played, "It ain't goin' to rain no more."

But the rain did not seem to scare people away, as new arrivals appeared all afternoon to enjoy the volley ball games and the band concert, staying for the pictures in the evening.

Clyde Robinson, twelve-year-old son of W. P. Robinson, met with a serious automobile accident Sunday morning just at the close of the preaching service, in front of the Stone Church. Clyde was coming out of the driveway of the church on his bicycle, and his wheel struck a car. The people in the car rushed him to the Sanitarium, where everything possible is being done for him. The accident resulted in concussion of the brain, his skull being fractured. He has been administered to several times and seems to be recovering nicely. No blame whatever was attached to the driver of the car, who could not avoid the accident.

Second Independence

The committee in charge of the fall festivities met Tuesday evening at the home of Brother E. E. Willard, West Sea Avenue, to perfect arrangements for the show of flowers, fruits, vegetables, and the general appreciation of the land of Zion which is to occur in a few weeks. This festival is an annual affair and is growing every year.

Elder J. W. Metcalf was the speaker Sunday morning.

Liberty Street

The Temple Builder program Tuesday night was very fine, but the attendance was very small. The girls are going to repeat their program some Sunday night after services at the Campus are discontinued for the winter.

Sunday morning the speaker was Bishop C. J. Hunt, who gave a very interesting talk.

Englewood

Lyman W. Fike spoke Sunday morning to an appreciative audience.

East Independence

East Independence is so far out that it is difficult for the Saints to meet at the Campus in the evenings so preaching services are held both morning and evening. Last Sunday Elder J. A. Farrow spoke in the morning and Elder William Bath occupied in the evening.

Lamoni Stake Items

August 31.—Things have been rather quiet in religious circles since the close of reunion, the activities being confined to the regular Sunday and midweek services. We have, however, been enjoying some very spiritual sermons. On Sunday, August 17, James Thomas delivered a splendid discourse, using as his text the words of Paul, "Fear not, little flock, for it pleases our Father to give you the kingdom." The theme uppermost in his sermon was the need for individual purity and active service, as the thing most necessary in the church to-day, for it is the Father's will if we do our part to give us the kingdom.

In the evening of the same day Elder C. E. Harpe gave a pleasing discourse, telling many personal experiences which bore out the thought that God was in the work and caring for his servants and would continue to work with his people and his church.

Last Sunday we had the pleasure of welcoming Elder Peter Muceus, back from his foreign mission in Norway. He preached a straight gospel sermon along the line of individual righteousness which was very timely, and much appreciated, though some of his audience were somewhat disappointed in not hearing more of his experiences while in a foreign field.

Elder Muceus had a very pleasant trip home. He left Norway July 31, coming by way of London, England, which necessitated a trip across the North Sea. At London he attended a National Exposition, where the finest productions of art and science from the entire empire were gathered together. He sailed as a third-class passenger on the largest boat afloat, the Leviathon, on August 5, arriving August 12 in New York, and in Lamoni the following Saturday.

The Leviathon is magnificent in every detail, even third-class passengers receiving the best of food and comforts. Something of the size of the boat may be seen from the following figures: It is 950 feet long and 100 feet wide and accommodates 3,397 passengers, requires 1,100 people to man it, making 4,497 aboard. There are 600 telephones on the boat, and there are in use 20,000 square yards of carpet and 3,000 square yards of oriental rugs. On a round trip the amount of food consumed is almost unbelievable, the quantities being something like this: 80,000 eggs, 600 boxes of apples, 15,000 pounds of butter, 20,000 pounds of jam, 2,000 quarts of milk, 70,000 pounds of flour, 6,000 pounds of game, 186,000 pounds of meat, 20,000 pounds of ham, 1,000 barrels of potatoes 16,000 pounds sugar, 3 tons tea and coffee. The trip on this immense boat was a pleasing experience, the sea was smooth all the way and the homeward journey in every way was delightful. Elder Muceus has been gone from home two years.

Sunday evening last we listened to Elder W. D. Tordoff, who was home for a few days from his mission in Oklahoma and who returned there again this week. No one goes to sleep when Brother Tordoff preaches, as he is full of the energy and enthusiasm acquired by his experience on the firing line, as he says, and he has a directness and fearlessness in his manner which holds his audience. He delivered a most excellent sermon.

Elder C. E. Harpe and family have been enjoying an outing at Wall Lake, Iowa, in celebration of twenty-three years of labor in the missionary field recently completed. Elder Harpe was called home during the week to preach the funeral sermon of Mrs. William Hart. Mrs. Hart, who died at the age of eighty-six, was a member of the Methodist Church but became so attached to the Harpe family while living neighbor to them for many years that she chose him as the officiating minister before her departure. She also named as assistant S. K. Sorensen, whom with others of our faith she counted among her best friends. Grandma Hart was one of the noble ones of earth, whose reward according to her works will be great. She was among the earliest settlers in this section, coming to Harrison County, Missouri, in 1857, and had lived in the same house in Lamoni since 1901.

Elder James Thomas and family moved last week to Tulsa, Oklahoma, his new mission field.

One feature of our church services which deserves especial mention is the work of our presiding deacon, C. F. Church, in keeping the church bountifully supplied with beautiful flowers. Four large baskets and vases of flowers are regularly supplied, and in winter those flowers which keep their color are dried and kept in shape so that the rostrum and choir loft are not without nature's adornment in the coldest weather. Brother Church is a splendid florist, and the flower gardens at his home are among the beauty spots. Under his supervision the church grounds and flower beds also are well kept. The work is a very important one and is well cared for.

The members of the choir, we understand, intend to hold a farewell party in honor of themselves next Thursday night. After a short rehearsal they will adjourn to the park for an hour of games, after which they will enjoy a Dutch treat and kiss themselves good-by, for the following week the choir will be merged in the reorganization of the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society. Brother Evan Fry has done good work keeping the choir together during the summer with so many of the members gone. Miss Mabel Carlile, the conductor of the Oratorio Society, is back now from a summer at the Northwestern University and ready for a hard year's work.

Will Dedicate Church September 6, 7

BRADNER, OHIO, August 27.—After much consecrated and concentrated effort on the part of the members of this branch, we are at last enabled to pay the remaining debt of the church, and plans are being made for dedication services to be held during conference, which is to be held here September 6 and 7. Each member has been diligent and faithful in the work assigned him in the various departments of the branch.

The ladies' aid has done its part in the work, having purchased a piano, besides paying a goodly portion of the debt itself.

At a recent sacramental service here, Brother Oria Smith was called to the priesthood, and his son, a fine young man, was called to succeed his father as deacon. At this time Brother Frank Slye, whose home formerly was in East Tawas, Michigan, was told to remain here, as the Lord had work for him to do in this vicinity. The prophecies were given through Brother Fred Cadow, formerly of Port Huron, Michigan. The meeting was unusually spiritual, inasmuch that all were moved to tears. Several were confirmed, and children were blessed at that time also. Our prayer meetings are particularly inspiring, and God is with us by his Spirit. We have fine testimonies from both old and young, and the attendance is regular.

This branch is fortunate in having so many splendid singers, who are a great help in the services.

Brother and Sister E. L. Ulrich, of our fold, have been doing missionary work in Indiana during the past several

Western Nebraska and Black Hills

The reunion for western Nebraska and Black Hills territory closed August 3, at North Platte, Nebraska, and was conceded by all to be the happiest and most successful ever held in the territory, the Saints once more being given cheer and comfort far more than commensurate with the effort put forth.

The Saints of western Nebraska are scattered and many of them are isolated from church privileges, but the first day of the reunion demonstrated that the lamp of their religious hope was far from being extinguished, as a goodly number of them had already gathered in.

They were greeted by Brother and Sister Burton, Patriarch Joshua Carlile, and the local Saints of Maxwell and North Platte, some of whom were already camped on the ground, and regular services were the order from the outset of the reunion.

The early morning hour was in charge of Brother Burton, who contributed eight lectures on the subject of elementary psychology. These lectures were well attended and inspiring.

The Department of Women was ably represented each afternoon by Sister Burton, who lectured on homes and home building, followed by round table discussion in charge of Brother Burton. The Saints were edified and went away with a broader idea of conducting their local work during the year.

A story-telling hour and junior service were set apart for each afternoon, and the reunion was characterized throughout by a large attendance of children and young people. Sister Burton is to be congratulated upon the paper cutting and handwork for the children; children building in paper cutting "The city of Zion" one afternoon, and another time "Noah's Ark" was constructed, and the eight souls and their animals were properly housed therein, while the simple story was told of the revealed will of Noah's God.

Volley ball and games between and after services contributed to the congeniality of the occasion and brought many children of nonmembers to the grounds and to the junior meetings. It was a pleasing sight indeed to see old men and young mingle together in play, and thus feel they were being brought to a better working basis in the gospel of love.

Mrs. Jessie Morant talked one afternoon on the value of recreation in the church. Mrs. Morant stressed play as a means of developing the child physically by helping him to develop a strong body, and making him a social being in helping him to learn to "play" with his fellows when the weightier problems of life fall upon him. Mrs. Morant months with splendid results. Brother Ulrich has been wonderfully blessed in his work, especially in healing the sick. Sister Ulrich possesses a beautiful voice and uses it for the glory of God and sounding his praises. She was brought up in the work, being the daughter of Elder Hettrick, of Philadelphia.

Brother Walter Wirebaugh is also in the mission field and has had much success in the East.

The reunion at Kirtland is pleasantly anticipated each year, and on Friday, August 22, most of the members of this branch journeyed there with well-filled baskets and happy minds. All returned knowing it was well that they had attended. The services were inspiring and helpful, and several prophecies were given.

stressed the missionary or teacher aspect of play, how the child may be led directly from the field of play to the junior meetings, and how there in the atmosphere of friendliness and comradeship he more readily receives religious instruction. This same atmosphere of friendliness and comradeship provides a means for the recreational leader in facilitating church membership in his missionary work.

The prayer meetings were well attended. They were participated in by old and young and marked by a spirit of devotion and praise. On the last Sunday at sacramental service God graciously spoke to his Saints through Brother Burton, commending them for their sacrifices in meeting together for the reunion and extending great promise in their homes and for the church work if they would continue.

Our worthy Brother Prettyman was also spoken to directly in commendation for his long years of diligent service, God telling him his work was accepted though not completed, and that he would yet be permitted to preach in the prison house to those who had rejected his voice while here in this life. Brother Prettyman has worked in this territory for twenty-six years and has had the pleasure of again greeting many of his children in the gospel and of hearing their voices mingle in testimony with his own.

Brother Harry Pell, who was able this year for the first time to come and spend full time at the reunion, was told God's Spirit directed that he should be called to occupy the Aaronic priesthood. Brother Englebrecht was called to the Melchisedec.

Brother E. R. Sivits, local pastor, spoke in prophecy, admonishing the parents to faithfully instruct their children that they might be prepared for the great work and their responsibility in the future.

The success of the reunion came as a culmination of past reunion work and as a great encouragement to those faithful few who have worked in this part of the vineyard.

Mrs. Richards has lived in North Platte and vicinity for almost forty years. Her home has always been headquarters for local church and missionary activities, and many are the Saints that have been cheered by the welcome and hospitality she has always extended.

Patriarch Joshua Carlile was kept busy all during reunion giving blessings, Brother J. W. Wight being the last patriarch who had labored here. Brother Carlile was given to know that God had noble children here, and one young girl while receiving her patriarchal blessing was given the words the patriarch would speak before they were uttered by him.

Seven babies were blessed, and fourteen souls were added to the kingdom, mostly children of Saints who had waited for the reunion to provide opportunity.

The attendance was better on the average than at any previous reunion, the number each evening reaching one hundred and twenty-five to one hundred and fifty.

The attendance of Bishop B. R. McGuire brought added happiness the last three days of the reunion. Brother McGuire talked to the Sunday school on the Christmas offering and instructed the Saints in his characteristic, genial manner on God's beautiful law of temporalities.

Fond good-bys were accompanied by many promises to meet with the reunion when it convenes at North Platte the coming year.

The two-day meeting at Houghton Lake, Michigan, August 2 and 3 was a grand success, with an attendance of between one hundred fifty and two hundred people. The Holy Spirit was present in a marked degree. Although no spiritual gifts were given, the spirit of love and good-fellowship predominated, having a tendency to raise the hope slumbering in the breasts of many for the redemption of Zion.

Nauvoo Reunion Successful

FORT MADISON, IOWA, August 18.—The Nauvoo reunion, August 8 to 17, had as speakers President Elbert A. Smith, Patriarch F. A. Smith, Elders C. M. Clifford, George Jenkins, L. G. Holloway, E. R. Davis, E. L. Ulrich, Bishop J. A. Becker. Preaching services were good, the prayer services spiritual, the gifts of the gospel being manifest in tongues and interpretations, admonitions, etc.

We were greatly disappointed that President Elbert A. Smith was taken ill and could not be in attendance the latter part of the reunion.

Fifteen were baptized during these services, seven each Sunday and one on a week day.

Saints were in attendance from seven States, and at one time there were over two hundred cars on the grounds.

Nauvoo is now a permanent reunion ground, and interest is growing each year. Arrangements are already under way for the 1925 reunion here.

The presidency of the reunion association are: Amos Berve, Nauvoo; G. S. Daniel, Burlington, Iowa; and W. H. Gunn, Fort Madison, Iowa. W. H. GUNN.

Onset Reunion

August 11.—The Onset reunion is now over. The closing session came last night. The campers began to leave yesterday afternoon. This reunion has been pronounced by many as the best ever held here. Peace and Christian love pervaded in the camp from the very first day and continued throughout the reunion to the last, cementing together the Saints into a band of unity and cooperation. No harsh words were heard, no unkind deeds were noticed, but all seemed united in the common purpose of making this reunion a complete success.

There were fifteen baptisms. One brother, Raymond Bradshaw, of Attleboro, Massachusetts, was ordained to the Melchisedec priesthood. There were about two hundred people under eighteen years of age registered and about six hundred people over eighteen years of age. The States represented were: Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, California, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Maine, Michigan, Iowa, Connecticut, New York, Illinois, Georgia, Colorado, and several of the provinces of Canada.

During the reunion three of the branches dramatized plays. These branches were Attleboro, Plymouth, and Fall River. The work was excellently done and points to another way that the ideals of the church can be put over to the people.

The recreational activities were under the direction of Brother Harold Cash, of Attleboro, Massachusetts. A loving cup was presented to the branch winning the most points in athletics during the reunion. The branches competing were Fall River, Providence, Brockton, and Boston. The games of the contests were tennis, volley ball, quoits, field meet, and playground ball. The cup was presented by President F. M. McDowell Saturday night to the Boston Branch. They must win it three years to hold it as permanent property, and it looks as though they will have to earn it if they succeed in keeping it, judging from the resolutions and determinations already expressed with reference to the coming year.

The speakers for the reunion were President F. M. McDowell, A. Max Carmichael, Patriarch Richard Baldwin, Elders George W. Robley, Calvin H. Rich, Herbert Johnson, Arthur Koehler, O. L. Thompson, T. J. Elliott, M. A. Etzenhouser, Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, and Bishop M. C. Fisher. Some of these were at the reunion only a few days. The visitors all were highly appreciated and added much to the success of the reunion. The sermons were very instructive and inspiring.

The prayer services were of a high order. Several gifts were manifested. The general admonition of these were: "Come out from the evils of the world"; "The hastening time is here"; "Have faith, this is my work"; "Labor on in mighty prayer and faith."

Much earnest activity was shown on the part of the young people. They were very active in prayer services, and eagerly attended class work.

Tears coursed down the cheeks of many as the parting words were said and the hearty handshakes were done, and all wended their way home with new determination, faith, and love in and for the final outcome of the work.

ORVAL L. THOMPSON,
Press Committee.

Western Oklahoma Reunion

EAGLE CITY, OKLAHOMA.—The reunion this year was a good one, a spiritual feast for all present. We had the largest gathering this year we have ever had.

Reunion speakers were Patriarch Richard Bullard, Bishop C. J. Hunt, and Elders S. W. Simmons, Hubert Case, and W. D. Tordoff. We were pleased to have them with us and were greatly strengthened by their efforts. Brother Bullard gave several blessings while here, and could have given more if time had permitted. Brother Hunt was busy most of the time helping the Saints of the district to a better understanding of the financial law of the church.

We regretted very much that Apostle T. W. Williams and Elder J. A. Thomas could not be present, as some of the Saints came expecting to see them.

There was a good representation from all the branches in the district. Davidson Branch had twenty on the grounds the first day, and they stayed until the close of reunion. While there was a good attendance from the other branches, they did not get here the first day in large numbers. A large number of the scattered Saints were present, as well as some from the Central Oklahoma District.

Wednesday, August 6, the Department of Women had their meeting. The district organizer from Central Oklahoma was present and told of some of their experiences. All in all it was a very interesting meeting.

Sunday school convention was held Thursday, and some good reports were read. Some changes in officers were made, as some had held office for a long time and intended leaving the district. We greatly appreciate the work of those relieved, as they always gave their energy in advancing the work.

District conference was held Friday, with good attendance and interest.

A program was given Friday night which was much enjoyed by all. Through the efforts of Lemuel D. Dyke we had in our orchestra two violins, two flutes, one bass viol, one saxophone, and one organ.

Prophecies were given in both the young people's prayer meetings and those for adults, giving admonition and encouragement. Three ordinations were provided for during reunion, all from the Calumet Branch. Everyone seemed to have had a good time, and all were strengthened in faith and have a renewed desire to press onward in the work. Ten were baptized during the reunion.

Swings were provided for the children, and the Davidson young people, led by Brother Tordoff, challenged any pick-up team to play volley ball. A few exciting games were played.

We owe our gratitude to the workers at the boarding tent, for they were handicapped by not having proper equipment to handle the large crowd, but no one had to go hungry. Sunday, the 10th, two hundred and eighty had dinner at the dining tent.

We hope for another good reunion next year, and we hope to be able to make greater advancement than in the past.

Eastern Michigan and Detroit District Reunion

FLINT, MICHIGAN, August 9.—The opening Sunday of the Eastern Michigan and Detroit District reunion at Port Huron, Sunday, August 10, was well attended by members of both districts and the general ministry. The big tent arranged for the various meetings was packed to capacity, and many found a suitable place and made themselves comfortable on the outside.

The "tented city of the Saints" was built Friday, the 8th, and everything was in readiness for the opening Friday evening. To some it seemed more like a "home-coming" than a reunion, as Elder Richard Weaver and wife, and Elder Roy Clark and family arrived at the grounds. Their story of the happenings of the past since leaving the Eastern Michigan District is like the story of Book of Mormon times.

Presiding Evangelist Frederick A. Smith was among the first to make his appearance. Following came Elders Grant St. John, William M. Grice, William Davis, and Bishop Fred B. Blair, of Kansas City. This force will be augmented during the week, as reinforcements will arrive from the Erie Beach reunion.

The Boy Scouts were very much in evidence. Their tent is well filled by boys from the various parts of the two districts, and their activities in charge of Carlile Whitehead, of Pontiac, and Cecil Blasdell, of Flint, are of such a nature as to make them very useful in church work. The work of the girls is being ably handled by Sister Martha Baker, of Detroit. She is being assisted by the various girl leaders of the districts.

The music department, in charge of Sister C. C. Whitford, of Port Huron, and Sister Myrtle Holden, of Flint, is in good hands. The song leaders of the reunion, Elders John R. Grice and Matthew W. Liston, are receiving hearty responses from the congregation. The preaching is of a very high order. Will give more particulars later. M. W. LISTON.

Brush Creek Reunion

ORCHARDVILLE, ILLINOIS, August 25.—The Brush Creek reunion opened on the mild summer morning of August 8, and the first day saw a goodly number established in the camp. Officers were elected Friday evening. Following the meeting we had a nice shower that settled the dust. Saturday the program was formulated, and the reunion was on in full force.

The routine each day was prayer services at eight; Book of Mormon lectures at a quarter of ten by Sister Higgins; departmental, round table, and congregational singing in charge of Sisters Sparling and Higgins in the afternoon at half past two; and preaching in the evening.

Due to the enormous crowds present in the evening, and to the fact that Brother Higgins developed throat trouble, the evening preaching fell to Brother J. W. Paxton, who had his first mission here twenty-three years ago. The speaker was well received, judging from the increase in attendance each night. One big factor that served to draw the crowds was the orchestra composed of the families of Carl Smith and his brother. The services of these people were greatly appreciated by all.

The dining hall was a great success and paid more this year than ever before. The Saints did nobly in their donations, there being twenty chickens given the last Sunday. The cooks and help were hired, and the meals were excellent.

While there was no great outpouring of the divine Spirit, the services were of a high character, and the spirit of peace and harmony prevailed throughout the entire time, which increased the zeal of the Saints for a bigger and better reunion next year. By another year, if the new committee is as progressive as the last one, we will have a large amphitheater, which will seat about two thousand people.

Northeastern Kansas

NETAWAKA, KANSAS, August 17.—The Northeastern Kansas reunion organized in the beautiful park at this place Friday, the 15th. Committee in charge is Samuel Twombly, John M. Green, and Frank G. Hedrick. Associated with them are Joseph A. Tanner and J. D. Stead. Sister Baldwin was elected departmental supervisor, and Sister Vera Twombly, director of music.

The number of tents ordered this year is not so large as in former years; yet the attendance is fair, as the good highways bring many from a great distance. Yesterday the local churches discontinued their services in the evening and many of their number were in attendance at the big tent. Evangelist Richard Baldwin, President Joseph A. Tanner of the Kansas City Stake, and J. D. Stead of the seventies are in attendance. The sermons by these brethren have been of a very high intellectual and spiritual character.

Elder Jonathan Koshiway, our Indian brother of Oklahoma, was in attendance at the green corn festival of the Pottawatomie Indians on their reservation fifteen miles south of here, and arrived on the grounds Saturday. He gave a very interesting talk Sunday afternoon.

Elder Evan A. Davies was with us two days. This is Brother Davies's old home, and a host of friends were glad to greet him.

Meals are served in the dining hall by the ladies of the Methodist Church. They served the meals last year to the satisfaction of all. A remark was made on the grounds that this was a Topeka reunion. Well, the attendance from the capital city branch is almost as large as all other branches combined. Good for you, Topeka. We'll beat you next year.

The mayor and council have been very kind to us each year, giving us the use of the park and lights free.

Brother Twombly was not with us last Sunday. That was Chatauqua day at the Sparks picnic, and he was in charge of the services there. FRANK G. HEDRICK.

Rhodes Benefits by Runnells Reunion

RHODES, IOWA, August 25.—The little white church was closed from August 3 to 20 but, as one writer expressed it, not because of epidemic or apostasy. It was because of the reunion at Runnells. There were sixteen families from the Rhodes Branch represented, and when they all returned and assembled Wednesday evening for prayer service they were unanimous in declaring it the best reunion ever held in the district. I think we are always inclined to think the last one the best, for we are apt to forget from year to year the wonderful blessings the Lord bestows upon his people when they put themselves in a position to receive them.

I was not permitted to attend reunion this year, except a part of the first Saturday, but I felt assured from the halloed influence of the Spirit attending each session that there was a feast in store for those who could remain.

There were sixty tents on the ground, including two assembly tents. The prayer services were spiritual, and the preaching was of a very high order.

An unusually large crowd assembled at the church last Wednesday evening for prayer service and to witness the baptism of John Savage, a young man from Greenfield, nephew of H. O. and V. G. Lentz. C. M. Richeson and E. G. Beye performed the confirmation.

So far as we are able to judge, the Saints of Rhodes Branch are optimistic in regard to the problems confronting the church. We believe that God is at the helm and that right will prevail. But we fully sense the great need for consecrated, prayerful lives, that every Saint may stand firmly at his post of duty. A good many years ago the Lord said, "I have established my church for the last time, and it shall no more be thrown down. My people have naught to fear, save it be they become negligent in duty." It behooves us to find out what our individual duty is and do it.

We have heard Saints seek to excuse themselves from paying their tithing because they thought the money was being misappropriated and that some of the missionaries' families were extravagant. But he who said, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse," has not changed; and when we pay our tithing our responsibility in that direction ends, and the other fellow's begins. Let us do our duty, trusting the results to the God who established the church and is abundantly able to bring it to victory.

We expect Elder J. R. Lentell to begin a series of meetings here August 31.

Eastern Oklahoma

Eastern Oklahoma reunion closed Sunday evening, August 24, adding to history a record of the largest and best reunion ever held in this district. The entire district had a better representation than before, and all worked in harmony, making more sacrifice for the common cause.

Arrangements were made for a dining hall and kitchen where all who wished might dine without any charge being made. The Saints of the local branch provided fruits, vegetables, meat, chickens, etc., while those taking meals there could contribute to the reunion expense. This proved to be a very satisfactory plan. A house was rented for this purpose, as well as to furnish rooms for the lady visitors who did not stay at the camp. These rooms were furnished by the Saints. Many others camped in tents and at the church building.

The speakers were Bishop C. J. Hunt, Patriarch Richard Baldwin, and Elders H. E. Winegar, T. B. Sharp, J. S. White, and Frank Pollard, and our district missionary, Brother Jackson, of Derricks, Arkansas. Some able and spiritual sermons were delivered to good crowds, especially in the evening, many nonmembers being interested.

The daily program outlined for reunion was as follows: Prayer service at nine; round table discussion on tithing, Sunday school work, and other departmental work at ten; preaching at eleven; recreation in the afternoon, including volley ball and swimming; preaching at eight.

Young people's prayer service was held two mornings at eight o'clock, which proved to be beneficial to the young and encouraging to the older ones.

A commendable work was done by Sister Addie Belle Chappell, who was in charge of the junior church. Many children attended who would not have felt they had part in other services.

We were fortunate in having with us Patriarch Baldwin and his wife. Brother Baldwin gave several blessings, admonished and encouraged the Saints, and preached some very spiritual sermons. The subject of tithing was given due explanation by Bishop Hunt. The Sunday School Department was presided over by H. E. Winegar, being assisted very materially by Sister Baldwin in a lesson, to both the children and adults. Sister White, who has charge of the Department of Women, gave an hour's discourse on that work, and the Department of Recreation and Expression, in charge of Brother Winegar, gave a special program Saturday night, featuring a drama by the larger girls, a play by the children, and several musical numbers and readings. The choir added much to the meetings, under the direction of Brother Sharp, and special music was given each evening.

The location was ideal, being just between the church, where the lights could be wired out to the arbor, and the schoolhouse, which furnished auditorium room for part of the work. This also gave convenience for campers. The water was fine and near the grounds; the only barriers were hot weather and dust.

The last day was well rounded out and seemed to be the best. Three were baptized at half past six, making a total of ten baptized during reunion. Young people's prayer service was held at eight, general prayer meeting and confirmation service from nine to eleven, and preaching at eleven, three, and eight o'clock.

The general purpose of the reunion was planned as educational, recreational, social, and a vacation period, as well as spiritual uplift. It assumed all forms, but the spiritual factor was predominant, encouragement being given through prophecy and testimony.

We hope to have an even greater reunion next year, and can do so by beginning now. EUNICE CAMERON.

Des Moines District

The reward of earnest endeavor is sure, whether it be in the coin of the realm, corn or beans, or spiritual blessings. Early in March this year, plans were made to make the reunion the largest and best ever held in the district. District President Henry Castings visited every branch and group during the summer; then other speakers were sent out in the middle of July to advertise the event. Yes, the seasons are late, the threshing isn't done, and prospects are none too good for crops, but old "Pluvius" sent copious showers so that the threshers were silent, and many attended who could not have done so had the skies been clear.

Sixty family tents were up on the grounds, and while the rain fell outside, and some inside, the Saints prayed and sang, and the preachers preached just the same as though the sun were shining. Not a murmur was heard by the camp cricket from anyone, but once in a while some one would sing, "Tain't goin' to rain no more."

The young folks, and old, too, played games in the afternoons. If the grounds were too wet for playing, then all enjoyed themselves in visiting.

There were eighty-seven at the opening prayer service on Friday at ten o'clock. A business meeting was held at half past two, at which the district presidency were asked to preside over the reunion and appoint all necessary committees. At eight o'clock a splendid entertainment was given, the Des Moines orchestra furnishing the music. The tent was packed, and a large number stood outside.

Sister Estella Lentell conducted a junior and primary church school each day. A prayer meeting for the children was held at half past eight every morning, which proved to be a great benefit to them. The children had the best that the camp afforded. Sister Lentell had a corps of splendid assistants to help her in the work.

Bishop J. A. Koehler and Apostle Gleazer and family arrived on Friday evening. The two brethren went to work immediately, and with lectures, sermons, testimonies, song, and example made their presence felt to the blessing and enrichment spiritually of all who heard and saw them in action.

Every day was "chock full" of good things for the soul. Three young people's prayer meetings were held at six o'clock in the morning, with a large attendance and much of the Spirit present. Evangelist J. F. Martin arrived on Monday, and our joy was made complete with three able speakers, each a specialist in his work. We partook greedily of the good things that they were able to bring to us. They are humble and consecrated men of God and left an imprint upon our lives that time will not efface.

The utmost peace and harmony characterized this gathering, and there was nothing to hurt or destroy in all that holy place.

Brother Gleazer had to go to Dow City Thursday morning, and Brother Koehler left on Saturday morning for the same place. Brother Martin remained until Sunday night. His physical condition was impaired because of hay fever, but that did not hinder his preaching the word.

A musical contest and declamatory contest were held on two afternoons which proved to be good. These were in charge of Sister Lentell and Stephen Robinson.

The general prayer meetings at eight fifteen each morning were spiritual, and the attendance was large. Two prophecies were delivered to us at these services in which the Saints were commended for progress made and admonished to be humble and prayerful during the trial that the church as a whole is undergoing. We were told that the church is in pain as a woman in travail, and that from this condition would be brought forth the people who would redeem Zion. The priesthood were admonished to beware of jealousies, because from such causes the church was suffering, even now.

One very enjoyable feature of the reunion was a service for the oldest members of the district, which lasted two hours and was not long enough.

Altogether the program was constructive and instructive. Negative criticism was entirely absent. The priesthood and members are carrying on with the help of God and are meeting with a goodly measure of success.

This reunion will always be a bright spot in the memories of all who attended. From early morning until the dying embers of the camp fire warned everyone that it was bedtime, or Brother Wilkie rang the bell, or some one turned off the lights, was a time of rejoicing and fellowship.

At the close everyone was reluctant to say good-by and go back to the work of making a living under the worldly environment that now exists.

All went, however, with the assurance that God will deliver us. His presence was felt by all, and his angels were in our midst we were told in prophecy.

Seventeen were baptized on the last Sunday.

C. E. McDONALD.

Services in the Little Kennebec Branch at Machias, Maine, were discontinued for two weeks beginning July 21, when repairs were begun on the church. A new cement foundation has been put under the church, and other repairs have been made, the work being in charge of Elder George C. Manchester, president of the branch, assisted by a few others. They hope to have it ready for services by August 10.

PRATT.—John W. Pratt was born near Rome, Georgia, June 2, 1846. Married Mary E. Motz April 18, 1883. Baptized September 27, 1895, by Mark H. Forscutt. Later was ordained a priest. Died in Mondamin, Iowa, July 25, 1924. Funeral from Saints' church, C. B. Woodstock in charge, sermon by David H. Chambers.

SIEGFRIED.—Mary E. Lambert was born June 22, 1849, in Rock Creek Township, Hancock County, Illinois, where the most of her life was spent. Married Samuel Siegfried March 4, 1869. To them were born William H., Charles R., Joseph A., Alexander A., twins who died in infancy, Mark H., Clara E., now Mrs. Clarence Conn, and a baby boy who died in early infancy. Her home was always a home for the ministry of the church. Baptized November 15, 1863. Died July 29, 1924, after a sickness of over two weeks. She was a wonderful mother, a good companion to her husband, and impressed her noble characteristics on all her family. Funeral from the Stone Church July 31, in charge of President Elbert A. Smith. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

DETRICK.—Addie May Hale was born in Iowa, June 21, 1867. Married J. L. Detrick July 3, 1885. Baptized June 26, 1892. Died in San Jose Hospital, San Jose, California, July 31, 1924. Leaves husband, eight children, and five grandchildren. Funeral in Latter Day Saint chapel, Chico, California, with sermon by W. H. York. Interment in Chico Cemetery.

Radio Flashes

Defiance, Ohio.—We listened in for your program Thursday evening and certainly were well repaid. The music came in strong and clear. This was our first tune in on your station, and it was quite a treat to get something other than jazz, jazz, jazz. I certainly would very much appreciate receiving your programs.—H. Reincke.

Denison, Texas.—I like your station as well as any other station I know of, and it is one of the clearest. I hope this winter to hear you on a loud speaker.—Raymond Southworth.

Bridgeton, New Jersey.—Your program booklets are appreciated; they are very handy when listening for you. Your station continues to please me very much.—Lowell E. Kitchener.

Mobile, Alabama.—I have been entertained by your concerts, and have liked the sermons from your church.—Charles E. Emrich.

Buckner, Missouri.—I listened in on your radio program Tuesday night, August 12, and enjoyed it very much. It was very clear and uninterrupted. I enjoyed Mr. Southern's lecture, also the songs and reading. I especially enjoyed the singing and the selection of songs.—Ernest S. Phillips.

Meadville, Missouri.—I do not have the privilege of hearing any Latter Day Saint sermons except over the radio. We have been unable to hear the church lately. I am not a member of the church, but I certainly do enjoy the missionary sermons. Pray for me that I may become a member and do my bit to help in this great cause.—Mrs. H. E. Bartlett.

1,000-Watt Radio Station to Be Built

A powerful sending station with coast to coast range easily attained with a brief, concerted effort by the Saints. Another progressive step.

Sixty times more people can be reached with the new station. Yet its operation will cost less than 20 per cent more than the 250-watt station now operated.

The 500-watt station at Zion City, Illinois, cost $30,000. But through our own capable radio engineers we are able to build a 1,000-watt station for only $10,000—a wonderful saving to the church.

Graceland College will put to efficient use the 250-watt station now serving us. Our church and our church school are radio pioneers in their respective fields and in many instances have gained recognition that otherwise would not have been obtained.

Thousands of interested people have in the past three years written of their appreciation of our religious programs. Many others have heard occasionally yet because of distance are deprived of getting all our programs.

Reach Millions With the Gospel

With an expenditure of about $10,000 the church can extend its message thousands of miles further and literally reach millions of interested listeners several times a week.

Radio Week—September 7 to 14

During this week the radio will be the subject of conversation in the home. Missionaries will tell the benefits of broadcasting the gospel. Pastors will acquaint their congregations with the possibilities of bringing into their own churches services from Zion. Every church member will have the opportunity to express his thankfulness for this new means of spreading the gospel.

How to Contribute

All branch officers will accept contributions in the regular way. Isolated Saints may send their contributions direct to Radio KFIX, Independence, Missouri. Give liberally and make effective our slogan:

What Will We Do About Radio?

There have been presented in plainness and strength the advantages of enlarging our missionary possibilities by increasing the power of our radio broadcasting station at Independence and at Grace-land College. There has not been a single contribution offered for publication in the church papers which would oppose this movement. For this reason we believe that the people are more nearly united in believing this should be done than is usual upon a proposition which involves a considerable expenditure of funds.

But there is a great difference between passive consent that it shall be done and the active determination which sees its accomplishment. We may say, If the church shall cease to increase the exercise of the missionary spirit, it will at once retrograde in its work of developing the Zion program, and may even die. And saying this may not impel us to the point of doing what is possible to increase our missionary activity; it may not open our purses. But when we consider the fact that instead of one hearer whom we have been reaching in the past with the saving message of the gospel of Jesus Christ, we may by the aid of the increased power reach sixty who are hungry or will listen to its glad tidings; when we realize that not only will the nonmember hear the good news, but the believer, the shut-in, the old, will bring to his fireside, even to his bedside, the message of peace, of comfort, of life, and this by one of the greatest factors possessed by any minister, his flexible, pulsating, thrilling voice, then our purses are reached for and we open and take from them that which makes accomplishment possible.

But further, and here is the item which makes our excuse for writing, when we reflect that for a moderate sum every congregation in America will be able to equip its auditorium so that the message of Zion building, of church organization, of program, may come first hand to every church attendant, then again do we reach for the purse and take from it that which will provide food that we may grow into Saints who can qualify for gathering to Zion as helpers in its building.

We are told that for an average of $200 the churches of the Mississippi Valley may be so equipped; that in the remotest congregations of America this cost might reach $500. But without the increase in power at the broadcasting station this would not be practicable.

Suppose President Smith or Bishop McGuire should have a church-wide problem which they needed to get to every Saint. Imagine how you would welcome the sound of either or both their voices in your own endeared church home!

We would not urge the enlargement of the radio facilities to the detriment of the tithing fund—this would be wrong. We would urge it from the point that there are luxuries in amusement, vacation, menu, attire, which we could profitably exchange for the luxury of hearing God's appointed leaders in our homes and our churches where it would give us more joy, more luxury in our gospel life than ten times the sum spent would give if used in the usual ways.

This is radio week; don't be a consentor that we shall do the work; be determined that it shall not fail, and send what contribution you can.

RICHARD J. LAMBERT.

Symposium on Value of Radio

Requests have been made recently that leading ministers of the church condense into a few words their sentiment as to the value of radio broadcasting in the church program. Very promptly have the following statements been handed to the Radio Committee in response, and you will be interested in perusing them.

I hope most sincerely that our station may soon wave its way into the hearts and lives of our people in "the regions round about" because of ministering to their needs; that we shall because of generous contributions have the means of enlarging the station and then establishing relay stations, until we can eventually circle and encompass the globe with the glad sound of the gospel and with knowledge of the kingdom of God.—Frederick M. Smith.

We should be able by radio to break down an immense amount of prejudice, thus clearing the way for the apostles, seventies, and elders who go forth to preach the gospel to men face to face; for the latter work is fundamental, and the radio work must ever be an auxiliary to it. That effect alone is worth the money and effort.

Our readers may make it possible for us to have a powerful radio station, equipped, built, managed by our own people, sending abroad our own distinctive message, the gospel of the latter days. The "hastening time" is at hand. Providence has put at our disposal that which Paul did not have. Shall we use it?—Elbert A. Smith.

An invention is a discovery, not a creation. God alone creates. Invention increases the power of man. It also increases his responsibility. Power may be used to bless or curse mankind; everything depends upon the use we make of our present power.

The radio is perhaps the most wonderful extension of man's power in all history. With it we can make the world about us more miserable, or we can make it a far better place in which to live. It is for the church to decide. Since the gospel of Christ is the greatest agency for the betterment of mankind, the gospel must be preached in all the world. The radio will reach thousands who cannot be reached in any other way.

A high-powered station at Independence will bring the gospel to the very homes of thousands who have never heard it before. Is it possible that any Saint can fail to heed this call? Do not fail us. If you do your bit, the wonderful mission of the gospel of Christ will yet be realized.—F. M. McDowell.

The radio is a "marvelous work and a wonder," and therefore is logically allied with our cause. Like other great discoveries, it has been brought from the economy of nature at the divinely appointed time—"the hastening time." It carries the reviving message of truth to thousands whom otherwise the church could not reach. It gives us entre to all classes of people. It will enable us to broadcast in English, French, German, Spanish, and other languages. The religious, social, and educational presentations of the church will open the minds of thousands to the universal spirit of our message—to "all the world."—R. S. Salyards.

We have long believed that upon this church rested the responsibility of preaching the gospel to every nation, and we have wondered how, with our limited man power, it could ever be accomplished. Undaunted, however, we have done what we could, and now God has opened the way through the radio that untold thousands may rejoice with us under the inspired message as it flows from the lips of his servants.

From everywhere in America comes a demand for a message from K F I X. We now propose to supply this demand. . . . Plan now not only to make your contribution, but also to get an adequate receiving set, so that you may get the opening message from our new station.—James F. Keir.

As I see the situation, as a church we should employ every means possible to give to the world the message of life as presented by our Lord Jesus Christ. The radio is now one of the greatest factors in assisting us to do this. Therefore we should spare no means consistent with reason to build a broadcasting station commensurate with the demands coming to the church.—James A. Gillen.

The greatest problem of our age of unprecedented scientific insight and mechanical skill is the direction of the forces at our command in this the "fullness of time" to the attainment of divine purposes. Radio has already been utilized for many good purposes. Yet there can be no greater association of the light and truth which is the glory of God than that the truth as it is in Christ Jesus shall be broadcast to the world. This can only be done effectively by radio.—F. Henry Edwards.

Jesus said, "Preach the gospel to every creature." We cannot fully comply with this command without the radio. I am for it.—Roy S. Budd.

For years we have been trying to solve the problem of getting our message before the masses. We have been able to reach, comparatively speaking, only a small number. Everywhere the great majority of people are not regularly attending church services. Our own church edifices and halls are inadequate. We do not have a sufficiently large missionary force.

Radio offers a partial solution to our missionary problem. It will carry the gospel message not only into hundreds of thousands of homes, but also to many of our own churches and halls at places insufficiently supplied with missionaries. We should by all means take advantage of the opportunities offered us by the radio and give immediate financial support to the radio department for the erection of the 1000-watt station.—E. J. Gleazer.

Millions of people in this country listen in daily on radio programs. Our friends already are many who have for the first time heard us over the radio. This circle will be enlarged manyfold from the first work of the new station, and as time passes will bring us an audience nowhere else brought together in radio work. . . . Let us move in upon this opportunity and have a part in the further, and we trust marvelous, spread of the truth.—John F. Garver.

The radio as an auxiliary in the proclamation of the gospel has a very important place and should be recognized as a means of arousing interest among some whom it would be hard to reach in any other way; therefore it should be utilized by the church as far as found practicable.—Frederick A. Smith.

The prophecy more or less familiar to Bible readers that "knowledge shall increase" has been fulfilled in astounding ways in the last century. To say that time and space have been annihilated is trite. Men have learned to use things of the earth, above the earth, and under the earth for the achievement of their ends. By the pressure of the little finger the work of giants which would have taken centuries is now performed in as many seconds. "Miracle" is no longer a monopoly of religion, but is a common-day experience in science. Faith no longer is shy and suspicious of knowledge, but is the advance guard which dares to venture and hope and vision where knowledge never trod. Of all the wonderful and miraculous things which men have applied to their daily tasks, none is so wonderful and impressive as the radio. The ethereal wings carry messages of commerce, of politics, of art, and of religion to the ends of the earth. It seems proper that this latest servant of humanity should be impressed and consecrated to carry the message of Christ and his saving grace, the hope of religion and the coming of the kingdom in which service there is a unity of all ministry divine, human, and natural for the accomplishment of the divine ends. In this perhaps we may find a deeper meaning to the promise of the Savior that the gospel of the kingdom should be preached in all the world for a witness to the end of this age and the advent of the age characterized by Christ and all he represents.—John W. Rushton.

Marconi's New Discovery

In a recent issue of Literary Digest announcement was made of Marconi's new radio transmitting equipment with which great distances may be covered using much less power than heretofore.

Since this article appeared the church radio department and the HERALD have received a number of letters from members inquiring if we deemed it advisable to proceed with the erection of a 1000-watt broadcasting station in view of Marconi's discovery. Most of these letters have been answered individually, but doubtless many HERALD readers who saw this article in the Digest would like to know how the new discovery might affect our church broadcasting.

Marconi's invention has to do, not with broadcasting, but with point to point communication. With the new type of sending equipment the radio waves are projected in a manner similar to a searchlight, in one direction, so that the transmitting energy is effectively utilized. While this system is the long-looked-for ideal of radio engineers for point to point communication, it is of course not adapted for broadcasting work in which it is desired to transmit in all directions.

In the broadcasting field the tendency is toward increased power, in order to more dependably cover greater distances. There are only a few 1,000-watt broadcasting stations in this country at present, but many stations are preparing to increase power to 1,000 watts, and several are preparing to install 5,000-watt stations, although at present the government does not permit the use of more than 1,000 watts output.

Until static is conquered there will be no tendency towards decrease in power for broadcasting purposes, and there are no immediate prospects for static elimination.

Graceland College Opening

Graceland's year opened Monday, September 8, and the prospects for a most successful year are bright. All available rooms had been taken and private homes are going to be opened and used.

The faculty is said to be complete and better equipped than ever for the work before them. Sixteen members of the faculty have recently returned from the leading educational institutes of the country where they have been taking special work, some of them having completed work for higher degrees.

President George N. Briggs is at the head of the faculty for the eighth year and is more enthused than ever over the work of the school.

No one is useless in this world who lightens the burden of it to anyone else.—Dickens.

Do We Follow Christ or Man?

In a recent editorial I said:

Jesus Christ is at once our Leader, our Witness, our Commander. He is our only Leader. There is place for but one leader in the church of Jesus Christ—all others are, at best, but followers. We may, and do, have many, many great men within our communion, but they are our brothers. Together we follow Jesus Christ. We dare not follow any man, however great, and wise, and good. The admission of such leadership and following is dangerous, for who is to determine where such leadership begins or ends?

This paragraph, terse, explicit, and to the point, embodies the essential elements of Christian leadership and relationship. The truth herein contained registers the dividing line between the divine institution and the institutions of men. It is the Rock against which all the selfish aspirations, the vain ambitions, and the sophistries of men will beat in vain.

I have no apology to make and I cannot recant. This truth needs no defense. The more it is studied the more impregnable it becomes. The more it is attacked the more formidable it appears. Any attempt to wrest it from its rightful setting will prove puerile and abortive. Only a careless and superficial reading would even suggest that this is an attempt to undermine confidence in any man. It was written to maintain confidence in Jesus Christ, who stands without a peer or rival in Christian leadership. Has it come to that point in our experience as a church that to extol Jesus Christ is construed to be an attack on the asserted rights and prerogatives of others? If so, then all the more necessary that we emphasize the supreme leadership of Jesus Christ.

Until quite recently I did not think there was even one man in all our communion who would, for one moment, take issue with the above statement. The thought here expressed is well-nigh universal and is in keeping with the content of the standard books of the church. One is led to wonder, when other and strange positions are set forth, as to what will be the next move in departure from the faith once delivered to the saints.

Any individual who cannot, without any mental reservation whatever, accord this sole right of leadership to Jesus Christ cannot rightly claim to be a follower of his. A church which cannot unreservedly avow such leadership has no claim to being the church of Jesus Christ. If Jesus Christ is not "our only leader," whom will you place beside him? Are we followers of Jesus Christ, or of some man or men? Is there any man, living or dead, to whom we can apply the term, Our Leader? Name him.

From the very beginning of our church history we learn that our enemies have charged that we were attempting to introduce human leadership between men and Jesus Christ. We have strenuously affirmed that we followed no man but Jesus Christ. We have lustily sung,

Jesus, mighty King in Zion,
Thou alone our guide shalt be;
Thy commission we rely on;
We will follow none but thee.
We will follow none but Jesus,
Jesus is the life, the way;
This the path in which he leads us,
This the gate to endless day.

I have said on many platforms and in many debates that Joseph Smith, nor yet any man was our leader. I have declared that members of the Reorganization do not follow any man. And I have met the enemy in pulpit, on rostrum and platform, in public and private, and silenced criticism on this point and very effectively. Shall we now change front and plead guilty to the charge, admit that we do have another leader, and thereby confess that we are followers of any man? God forbid!

There is nothing in the statement at the head of this editorial which, in any sense, detracts from or minimizes the powers and prerogatives of men who, under Christ, hold responsible and very important positions in his church. To render rightful homage to Jesus Christ should not be construed as detracting from the rights or ability of any man. To thus argue is, indeed, strange logic.

Please understand that I am using the term in the singular sense. Singularize the term and Jesus Christ stands alone. Pluralize the term and leadership is multiplied. Certainly the members of the Presidency can consistently be "leaders" to the Apostles, and the members of the Quorum of Twelve be "leaders to the Seventy," and the Presidency, and Twelve, and Seventy "leaders" to the entire list of itinerant and local ministers. But we have no one man in all our communion to whom we should apply the term, "Our Leader." The fact that even one man has objected to the statement that "Jesus Christ is our leader, our only leader," justifies the reiteration of the statement.

During the last few years we have heard the President of the church use such expressions as, "So far as I am concerned as leader of the church."—HERALD, March 19, 1924. "The vibrations of the voice of the leader of this church."—HERALD, February 20, 1924. We have listened to President Smith when he has referred to himself as the "chief executive of the church." Others have also made the same application. We have heard of President Smith's "program" and "policies." Without making any odious comparison or reflection, let me say here that I am impelled to question the propriety of all this.

of this church." Even though the term may have been used by others is no argument for its continuance. You may array all the passages in the books which sustain the position that he is President of the church, that he is prophet, seer, and revelator; you may make an analogy between himself and Moses or any other human being, living or dead, but even this will not warrant the assumption that he is "the leader of this church." And as to President Smith's "program" or "policies" they stand or fall on their merits, like that of any other man. We as a church want only the program and policies of Jesus Christ. And let me remark that I am not blind to the many splendid and masterful contributions which President Smith has made in setting forth the social program of the church.

God has very wisely made provision in the organic law of the church to protect the body from the possibility of the projection of the human equation into our church policy. Provision is made for the severe and rigid testing of revelations. A counterbalance of power is clearly indicated. The Quorum of Twelve Apostles is made equal in decision with that of the Presidency, and the Quorum of Seventy is equal with either of the other two in decisions, all of which is against the assumption of independent executive power or the claim to individual leadership.

I cheerfully accord to President Smith and every other man his rightful place in the church and will seek in every possible way to manifest due respect and courtesy and do all I can to dignify the office which each may hold. But I cannot apply to any man the title of "The Leader of this church." And this does no violence to the statement "For unto you (the twelve) and those (the first presidency) who are appointed with you to be your counselors and your leaders," nor does it modify or abridge the General Conference Resolution which says "that all the traveling ministry be under the direction and control of the First Presidency and the Quorum of Twelve."

Let me here quote some significant passages from the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants in confirmation of this position.

Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord: For he shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited. Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is.—Jeremiah 17: 5-7.

We have repeatedly made this passage do service in our indictment of the Utah Church, where men claimed to be the "living oracles" and demanded "obedience" from the rank and file of the church. We will do well not to follow in their footsteps.

Loyalty

BY JAMES F. KEIR

Much has been said in recent years in regard to loyalty, and it may not be amiss to consider and analyze this theme with a view to determining what we mean when we talk about it and to what we should be loyal.

Royce, of Harvard University, in his Philosophy of Loyalty, says:

One of the most familiar traits of our time is the tendency to revise tradition, to reconsider the foundations of our beliefs, and sometimes mercilessly to destroy what once seemed indispensable.

The word loyal is derived from the Latin legalis from lex, legis—law.

It is defined by Webster as

- 1st. Faithful to law.
- 2d. Faithful and true to lawful government or to the prince or sovereign to whom one is subject.
- 3d. Unswerving in allegiance.

Royce defines it as the willing and practical and thoroughgoing devotion of a person to a cause.

In a handbook on American Government, by William H. Bartlett, he points out the "obligations of the citizen" as follows:

Loyalty to his country is the first duty of every citizen; and this means that he is bound to support and respect its constitution, obey its laws, bear his just share of the expenses of government, and render such personal service as is required of him, whether in civil life or in defense of the country under arms.

We think it significant that the primary and fundamental meaning of this word is faithfulness to law. Faithfulness to the sovereign should only be pledged on the one hand or expected on the other so long as that sovereign remains within the law, so long as he does not arrogate to himself rights and privileges not contemplated in the law. This is very nicely put in the following poem by Cowper:

We love

The king who loves the law, respects his bounds,
And reigns content within them; him we serve
Freely and with delight, who leaves us free;
But recollecting still that he is a man,
We trust him not too far. King though he be,
And king in England too, he may be weak
And vain enough to be ambitious still,
May exercise amiss his proper powers,
Or covet more than freemen choose to grant:

Freedom can only be enjoyed and strength of character can only be developed by adherence to law. "The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death," says Paul. Loyalty to principle should be the guiding star of every man. Men change, but principles never change; they are as eternal as God himself; He who builds his life on principle will evince clarity and definiteness of purpose and stability of ideals; will be able to weather every storm and will grow in favor with God and man.

There is written into the constitutional law and practices of this church certain definite and eternal principles. Loyalty demands of every member that they guard jealously these principles. One is agency: "And in the Garden of Eden gave I unto man his agency."—Doctrine and Covenants 36:7. The other is man's right to participate in government not by assent but by consent, and by the right to initiate also. (Doctrine and Covenants 25:1; 64:7; 27:4.)

Loyalty of the right kind must be begotten by a deep and abiding conviction that truth, justice, freedom, and equality are the warp and woof of the governmental fabric to which we pledge allegiance. It cannot be preached into a people, nor can it be secured from thinking people either by request or demand. Loyalty which is given to a leader because of his superior power and position, or because the leader can reward the subject, is usually lost as soon as these advantages cease, either when the leader has been supplanted or has had a change of heart.

Loyalty is a word which we have not yet found in the Bible. Christ and the apostles seemed to have had but little, if any, occasion to use it. Aside from its application to law, we have little need for it in our gospel vocabulary, for the natural concomitant of one whose idol is the law, is loyalty.

Discipline

Self-discipline is the most effective discipline. It is the only discipline known to us in the gospel. Any external discipline which may be administered too frequently arouses the spirit of rebellion rather than correction, and this is especially true where the one being disciplined feels that it is unjust—and he usually does. Those who discipline self do it as a means to their development. It becomes an easy matter for them to be loyal to law, for they recognize its advantages and crave its benefits.

Loyalty does not grant to the loyalist the right to go outside the law to administer punishment to those who in his judgment are not loyal. There is a lawful procedure to follow in case of transgression. The offender should be labored with in the spirit of love and meekness, with a view to reclaiming. Failing in this he should be given a fair and impartial hearing before the proper tribunal.

Ostracism by official pressure or by appeal to the mob spirit of public sentiment, which too often is motivated by impulse rather than reason, is foreign to the spirit found in loyalty to Christ.

Loyalty to principle requires the exercise of toleration for the views of others. It is to our credit as a church that this spirit of toleration has from time to time been breathed into our legislation and that its benefits have been recognized. A committee in 1885, to whom was referred a matter from the Potawattamie District relative to the adoption of certain measures suggested to regulate the publication of articles through the SAINTS' HERALD, reported in part as follows:

That in its opinion, the enforcement of ironclad rules and arbitrary decisions by persons who were not governed in their work by broad and liberal principles of toleration, as is shown by the history of societies in the past, has had such a tendency to subvert the liberties and retard the progress of the race, as to make the enactment of any set of rules to be followed under all circumstances of doubtful propriety and final good.—Resolution 298, par. 1.

Any effort to submerge the rights of the people in the exercise of these liberties is contrary to the spirit of a theocratic-democracy, and loyalty demands that such a tendency be met with determined opposition.

Lawful Resistance

Loyalty to a cause at times demands resistance to constituted authority. When an individual stands in a position of trust, loyalty to those whom he serves as well as to the cause that he serves demands that he shall do those things which are lawful and preserve his integrity and which will be for the greatest good regardless of what effect it may have upon his personal interests or feelings.

It would have been a sad day in the history of England had not the persistent encroachments upon the liberties of the people under King John and Charles I been met with lawful resistance. It was this lawful resistance that gave to England the Bill of Rights and the Magna Charta, which has also been written into the Constitution of the United States, which has been so fittingly called the "bulwark of our American liberty."

We have a very splendid example of lawful resistance when in January, 1642, just before the outbreak of hostilities between King Charles I and the Commons, the king demanded the arrest of certain members of the House who stood in opposition to him. "He sent his herald to the House and made his demand, but it was denied. The speaker fell back upon an ancient privilege which gave the House jurisdiction over its members and which forbade arrest without consent. The conflict between the privileges of the House and the royal prerogatives was herein definitely initiated. The king resolved by a show of force to assert at once his authority; and, on the day following that upon which the demand was sent through his herald, he went in person, accompanied by soldiers, to the House. Then, having placed his guards at the doors he entered, went up to the speaker, and, naming the members whom he desired to arrest, demanded, 'Mr. Speaker, do you espy these persons in the House?'"

The journal of the House shows the following entry: "The speaker at once fell on his knees before the king and said: 'Your Majesty, I am the speaker of this House; and, being such, I have neither eyes to see nor tongue to speak save as this House shall command; and I humbly beg your Majesty's pardon if this is the only answer that I can give your Majesty.'"

Here loyalty rings in the clear note of lawful resistance to the unlawful encroachments of the rights and liberties of the people.

"The king might be offended at the refusal; but he could not fail to note that, for the moment, he had met with a personal dignity greater than kingship, the dignity that any loyal man, great or humble, possesses whenever he speaks and acts in the service of his cause."

Joseph Indorses Lawful Resistance

After having visited the Northwest and stopping off at Salt Lake City, where he had an opportunity to watch the governmental machinery of the Utah Church working, the late Joseph Smith made the following remarks after witnessing the operation of common consent in our own conference:

Not a great while ago I was present at a conference where the matter presented of a similar character to that was made from the stand, and it was made in this form: "It is proposed that we sustain" such and such a man. There was not a single motion that came from the body of the people, nor an opportunity given for any man to say one word as to whether the persons were proper or not.

And when I see a movement like that which I have witnessed this afternoon, it is a guarantee unto me that there has been no effort made to dominate the voice of the people, but that the spirit of a theocratic democracy is prevalent with us yet, and that this unity presages that should the effort be made, at any time, to dominate and influence the character of this government of ours by any pre-laid schemes that would put the liberties of the people in jeopardy, it would be met at its threshold and defeated.—1907 General Conference Minutes, p. 975.

Reason Calmly

We should learn to reason calmly and constructively about the foundations of our beliefs, not merely to clarify our minds, but to give vigor to our deeds.

In the present controversy on church government, let us not become hysterical, but in the spirit of fairness and with love and consideration toward all men, calmly and dispassionately examine the foundations of our beliefs and attitudes with a view to discovering whether our loyalty is to a cause or to a person, whether it has for its foundation truth and law, or is based on sentiment, superstition, and emotions.

Choosing a Cause

Loyalty is a relative term, and always implies that there is some object, some cause, to which any given loyalty is to be shown. We must consider what are the fitting objects of loyalty. We might pledge our loyalty to a wrong cause.

In choosing a cause to which we should be loyal, we should examine well our ideals. The cause which we espouse should be consonant with our highest ideals of right. We should aim to pledge our allegiance to that cause which has for its end the greatest good of all. This may seem for the time being to run counter to our immediate individual good, but if by the cause to which we are loyal the greatest good to all is served, eventually our individual best good is also served.

When we discover that the cause to which we have pledged our fidelity is less than the above, loyalty demands that we shall abandon it when a cause with more virtue appears.

What, then, is the cause of our choice? There is but one answer for those who are loyal to Christ.

It is the law of God!

"To the law and to the testimony."

Whenever, therefore, our feelings, sympathies, prejudices, personal interests, friendship, or what not incline us to cast our support elsewhere, let the monarch of all time, "Reason," and the spirit of truth direct us back to the pathway of safety and peace—the law.

Theocratic-Democracy

BY LEONARD G. HOISINGTON

The ideas that are presented by the writer in this discussion are not the result of a sudden conversion to the system of government that is supported. The larger portion of the discussion was developed several years ago, and the conclusions are not hasty judgments. The main questions that are discussed herein are not new; they were not new at the organization of this church in 1830. I believe they may be traced back to the beginning of creation.

The questions of who should lead the people of God, how they should be governed, their agency and common consent, have always been vital questions. But we believe God has answered them emphatically and very clearly whenever it was necessary to do so.

At various times in the history of the church of God there have been internal conflicts which assumed grave aspects and either for a time brought about the stoppage of the material efforts of God through his church or caused not merely schisms within the church, but apostasy.

In what follows we shall endeavor to present what we believe to be in harmony with the law of the church. Whatever comment I may make I hope will be free from contumely or acrimony, and will be affirmative.

We, as a church, have no apologies to offer for our belief in present-day revelation. To believe in God and Christ and the gospel as revealed in the Bible, affirms belief in continual revelation.

Without a sensing of the unity, by a man, which exists between God and this man, there can be no prophecy. When a man who is called and ordained and elected to the office of prophet, seer, and revelator, presents the word of God to the people, he knows that it is true. When he presents anything that is not of God, he will know that also. There is no place for doubt in his mind. Between God and his prophets always exists a sense of unity unless the man falls into transgression; then he ceases to possess prophetic gifts, and he knows his condition. Temporarily he may cease to be a prophet in fact, but repentance is the key that will reopen to him the mind of God. It has been done.

All the creations of God are under his supreme control or direction. At his word they come into existence and move in their orbits according to the laws of their times and seasons. God is the author of the laws.

His government of his creation is theocratic. He may not impose his will upon man; and if he allows man to invent, build, create, discover, without his O. K., he nevertheless certainly stamps his disapproval upon what is done that does not harmonize with his will. He speaks through his prophets approvingly, or emphatically disapprovingly. He passes judgments and inflicts punishments that always are testimonies that he is supreme. It may be said that man brings all of these according to the law of compensation, but man did not authorize by ballot that this law be placed over him. God is the authority back of that law. God is love. But just as truly God is law. Man never did and never will initiate fundamental laws governing moral relationships or governing the manner of his salvation from sin.

The free agency of man is not a liberty or right to initiate laws governing fundamental principles of life, either biological or spiritual in nature.

The free agency of man consists in the right of choice either to obey or not to obey what the God of all said; not merely that man may do, but that he must do if he shall come back into the presence of his Maker.

Man has for countless centuries attempted out of his experience to formulate a system of social organization which would insure salvation to him, but, due to the common consent of the majority in rejecting the revealed plan of God, the world is in the throes of social poisoning. The world is suffering to-day, not from the despotism of God, but from the despotism of the misuse of their free agency. The common consent of the majority is not always right and does not always represent the will of God. It is safe to say among a godly people it will, but among ungodly it will represent evil-mindedness. If a ballot of the world could be taken, Christianity would be voted into oblivion. Since the world began, Christianity has been preached. Adam, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, etc., unto Christ and our own latter-day prophets have proclaimed it, and it is not easy to believe that in all these ages the majority of the peoples of the world should have escaped all knowledge of the preached word.

Satan has had his day up until now; but God hath set his hand the last time in these last days to redeem his people. He will succeed.

In all this time it has been the policy of God to reveal his will and direct his people. They did not choose him as their king and law-giver, but he chose them. At all times the people voted upon whether they would obey him or not. In other words, they consented or did not consent to be governed as he said. "All that the Lord has spoken this day, that will we do," was the burden of the language of their assent. He never at any time commanded them in all things, but he certainly made plain to them when he disapproved of their actions.

His was a theocratic-democracy at all times. But shall we say that Moses and the elders of Israel never were permitted to inaugurate governmental action without God commanding first, or first obtaining consent of the people to do something which had already been authorized? Do we acknowledge that the God-given leaders could not carry into execution legislation previously resolved upon if there were a divided opinion as to the interpretation of such legislation? Were they compelled to wait till common legislation should interpret all that was comprehended in the previous legislation?

So long as a prophet is in unity with God, he will not inaugurate what ultimately can be shown to be out of harmony with the laws of God. It may be out of harmony with the interpretation placed upon the law by individuals. Who shall interpret the law? Who would understand it better than the prophet who was in unity with the mind of God when he delivered the word of God or who has been given the keys to obtain the mind of the Father, unlock the treasure of the intelligence of God, and obtain understanding regarding the interpretation of all that has gone before and all that will come?

My servants have been harsh one with another; and some have not been sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations which my church has already received. Until my people shall hear and heed those who are set in the church to teach the revelations there will be misunderstanding and confusion among the members. The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time.—Doctrine and Covenants 122:1, 2.

The ideal government in the kingdom of God is assured only when the people, using their agency to choose right or wrong, are so educated, or have their faculties of mind and spirit so unified and morally enlightened, that they will understand the compensatory effects of contacts, both mental and what the majority of people connote as spiritual, and then by reason of being so developed they "rightly divide the word of truth" and choose to abide therein.

The way of truth, of life, of salvation, has always been one and the same. God sent prophets into the world to be the leaders of the people. The people could choose to follow or not to follow these leaders. Up to the present the general conclusion is that the people have chosen not to follow these leaders. But note the results. More people died as a direct result of the last great war than history reveals were killed in all the wars since history began to give comparatively definite information. And now,

The Russian chemical industry has been reorganized and is already producing small quantities of poisonous gases under the direction of German chemists. The Russian munitions factories are working at top speed and are producing the same quantities of shells and cartridges as in 1917 under the direction of German engineers. The demoralized Bolshevik navy has been entirely reorganized and is now considered a formidable force in the Baltic and the Black Seas, and this is also due to the efforts of German officers. These facts, coupled with the information that the Red army is rapidly being equipped with gas masks and machine guns smuggled in from abroad, is causing serious alarm to general army staffs of both Esthonia and Latvia. Both general staffs are composed of officers who are considered the pick of the old Russian imperial general staff. . . . It is their opinion that Russia is preparing for a new military offensive, and should the London conference succeed in making peace with Germany they believe the Red army will be launched against Europe in a last desperate effort to cause chaos.—Chicago Tribune, European Edition, August 13, 1924. From Riga, August 12, 1924.

These conditions could not exist in a world ruled by a theocratic-democracy for the following reasons:

First: God calls and recommends righteous leaders.

Second: The people desire to live according to God's will.

Third: The people will be developed spiritually and educationally as above outlined and will recognize and accept the will of God when it is presented through the prophets. They consent to government under the leadership of men called and recommended by God.

Fourth: These men are prophets, that they might foretell, not only coming events, but, more important, expound the scriptures clearly and edify the people. They are seers, that they may see, not only into the future, but that they may see into and understand, discern the designs of men and leaders of men. They are revelators, not merely to reveal the laws of God and his will, but to reveal the true interpretation of these laws and how they should be applied.

Fifth: These men will lead the people who follow their leadership into the celestial kingdom of God, where the will of God is done rather than the will of designing men.

Under the conditions stated previously, the people will know the truth, and there is no excuse nowadays for saying we have no opportunity to develop these mental and spiritual powers. Prayer, and a firm yet humble, steady effort, with an eye single to the glory of God, will bring the needed development and understanding. One who absolutely cannot do this is mentally incompetent to live in an equal exchange of social life with the rest of humanity.

"The way" is to discover the truth and accept it. Charity, love, and faith in God and our fellow-men without a knowledge of the truth will not solve our difficulties. These characteristics are the keys to an amiable and righteous solution.

But We Must Have the Truth

The acceptance of truth depends upon the attitudes of the people. Attitudes are the expression of sentiments. Sentiments are firmly rooted in primitive instincts. These instincts are permitted to focus themselves with more or less intensity in various directions, so when we have a sentiment its expression will be an attitude for or against something. For a sentiment is the feeling of the fitness or rightness of something. We will be able to trace it back to some primitive like or dislike which is based in the carnal level of reaction to pain or pleasure, according to the instinct appealed to.

Where instincts are righteously sublimated, we will discover a very high type of culture of civilization. The carnal, the sensual, will not govern the spiritual. Here we will find types of sentiments, attitudes, and appreciations which will always favor truth and reject error. The celestial glory—the intelligence of God—the capacity, and the will, to do righteously and to know the truth and abide in it will characterize the people who have thus entered the path of salvation.

The people who would be God's people shall develop the affirmative attitude towards God's laws and his word. In order that this become effective for a continuity of progress and enlightenment, they must so educate themselves, so develop their powers of understanding, reasoning, imagination, and memory, that they will be able to solve the problem of establishing the truth of all that is presented to them with the stamp of the voice of the Lord upon it, and every problem dealing with the development and establishment of Zion.

Not until every soul of the children of this church shall realize that he must develop as well in intellect as in spirit will Zion be fully in the path of salvation. I doubt if a high degree of spirituality is possible with a low degree of intelligence or an undeveloped high degree of native intelligence. The more intellectual contacts one is able to command, the broader, deeper, more comprehensive, and steadier will be one's spirituality. I am, of course, speaking of godly spirituality, not Satanic. The law of compensation works just as effectually with one type as with another. The lower type of intelligence or understanding one has, the closer one's life is to the carnal (fleischlich or fleshly, as the German translates the word). The sex instincts of love, hate, hunger, sleep; the fleshly or carnal emotions of pain and pleasure rule the life. These instincts may be summed up in one phrase of the Apostle Paul, "lusts of the flesh." Upon such a level, life is almost wholly individual, seldom going further in its socialization than the immediate family. A godly spirituality cannot exist here. If the intelligence is such as to become fertile with the Spirit of God, and the understanding is cultivated, then, with this advancement in culture, spirituality will also advance.

There is one important thing to remember here: The Spirit of God will develop one up and out of the carnal, or instinctive level, to a level where the carnal nature of man is sublimated into righteous channels; while the Satanic spirit, even though one be highly intelligent, will bring the carnal appetites up and enthrone them in the character of the individual where they will rule the individual instead of the individual ruling them through the aid of the Spirit of the Lord.

One's right of choice, together with a knowledge of good and evil, is the essence of free agency. When an intelligent person chooses evil, therefore, he is exercising judgment, a principle of intelligence and agency. When an individual's intelligence is bound up, the instincts govern. For example, among the lower animals the sex call is instinctively answered. It is not governed by the intelligent question of propriety or expediency. There are no social problems that confront the denizens of the wild; at least, no such problems as set in motion the thoughts of a righteous man.

God never gave to an intelligent man powers too weak to overcome the carnality of his nature. - God never made an intelligent man who was originally too weak to choose the right. The question here is the spiritualizing of the man, his education, etc., to that point where his attitude and appreciations will always lead him to choose the right. Those who according to certain men, are too weakened by hereditary strains to choose rightly are the victims of the priestcraft and blindness that locked the intelligence of the forefathers and placed the whole line in bondage to Satan.

I say again, until every member of the church of God wakes up to the need of harmonious development of body, mind, and spirit, Zion will never become "the pure in heart," nor will she radiate the celestial glory of God, his divine intelligence.

The writer feels that we are much nearer this goal than we ever were before. The body of the church, the membership, is approaching higher planes of understanding. There may be some here and there who do not sense this, or the need or what has been said, yet I believe the next generation will reap a wonderful harvest due to the awakening going on within the church now.

There seems only to be the great question of whether we have leaders who are qualified as before mentioned.

In accordance with the constitutional law of the church we have chosen leaders.

And this is the ensample unto them, that they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost; and whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost, shall be scripture; shall be the will of the Lord; shall be the mind of the Lord; shall be the word of the Lord; shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation: behold, this is the promise of the Lord unto you, O ye my servants.—Doctrine and Covenants 68: 1.

The mind and will and voice of the Lord to the church is as follows:

The president of the church, who is also the president of the council, [of high priests.—L. G. H.] is appointed by revelation, and acknowledged, in his administration, by the voice of the church.—Doctrine and Covenants 99: 6. [See also 107: 18; 104: 42; 124: 7; 127: 8.]

The record here reveals that the present occupant of the office of prophet, seer, and revelator to the church and president of the church has been called and ordained in harmony with the voice and will of the Lord. Conference records show that the church sustained this calling by their vote to accept him.

As to whether he is or has been faithful to this calling I believe the record of his past achievements as well as his present efforts for the church, together with those of his associates in the Presidency, will carry a stronger appeal than what anyone may try to read into what they have said and done.

The social and economic program of this church is much nearer realization than ever before. The crying social and economic need of the world is the real reason for the kingdom of God on earth. We are out of Egypt, but we have not crossed the Jordan yet.

How long are we going to stand on the far side of Jordan, looking into the promised land, seeing its glory, but mourning and suffering because some one is afraid the leaders are not in harmony with God. If the membership as a whole would support their leaders and say, "Lead on! we are with you. We want the fullness of the blessings of God, not just a sight of them. On! let those who murmur remain this side of Jordan, but as for us we will support the Lord and his righteousness throughout eternity. Only you, who have the authority, make known unto us the Lord's will," we would soon be able to reveal to the world, through a definite example, the way of salvation.

"Supreme directional control" is synonymous to supreme administrative authority. This must be recognized by a people if they wish to have a unity of government, not anarchy or chaos. Imagine the president of Lamoni Stake having the same authority in Far West Stake as he has in his own. Or, carry it further, imagine him possessing equal authority throughout the whole church with the First Presidency. It would not work. People delegate very widely separated degrees of authority to various officials in their governments.

There are clearly defined degrees of authority in the kingdom of God. There are two priesthoods, a higher and a lesser. There are grades of administrative authority within these two priesthoods. See Doctrine and Covenants 129: 7; 104: 3-10; 122: 9, 10.

The Lord has revealed to his church in the Doctrine and Covenants the most unified system of group government that it has ever been my privilege to study. The more I study it the stronger becomes the impression of its unity and divinity. Equilibrium of justice and a unanimity of administration seem to me to be assured in every direction under such a system.

There is no chance for despotism in this system. It makes no difference whether it be called monarchical or archaic, so long as God is recognized as the head, the King, Judge, and Lawgiver, and the people intelligently exercise their right to choose good or evil, the administration could not long be out of harmony with God.

There are three phases of government recognized by most enlightened people and by the Lord; namely: social, purely temporal, and religious or spiritual. This followed by three definite departments for the facilitating of government: administrative, legislative, judicial. I believe that the first and third in both sets are very closely associated. But these two sets of governmental phases are recognized by God in his provisions for the government of his people. He also sets forth in his gospel five principles of government. These five principles may be so closely related that they might all be included in the first, yet they do have separate significance. They are absolutely essential to a government that embodies equality (upon a basis of capacity to serve and the supplying of needs to maintain that capacity at its highest), justice, and peace. They are as follows:

1. Unity of opinion as to the source of government, or the head of government.
2. Universal acceptance of one creed or doctrine of government.
3. Unity of interpretation of the law.
4. Unity of administration.
5. Unity of faith in application of the law, which unity will lead to unity of purpose, unity of hope, and ultimate perfection in the law of the Lord.

Christ's divine government through his church is the only system that sets forth principles that give promise of the above conditions. In Doctrine and Covenants 122: 9, 10; 104: 31-37, 42, 43, we find an outline of the administrative organization of this church.

First: Source of government, God. Is administrative through prophet.
 Second: Legislative... General Conference.
 Third: Earthly Head, First Presidency. Is judicial and administrative.
 Fourth: Unity of Administration.

Social	Temporal	Spiritual
Stakes and Districts	Bishopric, an appendage to high priesthood.	1. Twelve.
1. High Priesthood.		2. Seventy.
2. Elders.
3. Priests.
4. Teachers.
5. Deacons.
	Judicial
	1. First Presidency.
	2. Twelve.
	3. Seventy.
Purely Judicial...	4. Court, or council of high priests.
	5. Bishop's council, or court.
	6. Elders' court.

We have attempted to prepare the above outline according to the order of precedence in which these various organizations are supposed to function according to the law of the Lord. It will be seen that the General Conference, or chief legislative body of the church, stands between the First Presidency and God. God and the First Presidency are in direct communication with each other, but both recognize the legislative function of the church in General Conference. This is a parallel to the order of precedence in stakes, districts, and branches; that is, the legislative bodies in stakes, districts, and branches stand between the First Presidency, the local presidents, and God. It will be seen that in the priesthood organizations the First President is given the precedence of authority. In the standing ministry, the First Presidency has precedence over all; then follow the different grades of priesthood authority. The bishopric as an appendage to the high priesthood is part of the standing ministry and is not equal in authority to the First Presidency. Thus we find that the Lord placed the First Presidency in the position of supreme administrative authority.

Wherefore, it must needs be that one be appointed, of the high priesthood, to preside over the priesthood; and he shall be called president of the high priesthood of the church, or, in other words, the presiding high priest over the high priesthood of the church. From the same comes the administering of the ordinances and blessings upon the church, by the laying on of the hands. Wherefore the office of a bishop is not equal unto it, for the office of a bishop is in administering all temporal things.—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 31, 32.

We believe, therefore, that the First Presidency is given the authority of God to supervise, when necessary, in every department of the church. We find that a unity of organization runs from God to the humblest member. The Melchisedec priesthood may function from the First Presidency to that of a member. A high priest is only a member when he sits in a business meeting without a presiding elder's authority, and when he has no specially delegated authority. He has priesthood capacity which, if he be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity, may bring him wisdom to advise and bring unity and understanding when he debates a question.

I find no reason for believing, and basing that belief upon the "common consent" rights of the members, that the Presidency are overstepping their authority when between conferences they discuss with other quorums the critical problems of the church and attempt to put into operation steps to remedy conditions or solve these problems. I do see a need to loose the hands of the Presidency by giving them our support and aiding them to immediately check tendencies, or avert something that might prove disastrous to the church if we should wait till a General Conference should act upon these questions. Are we going to pass resolutions and then block the way towards the carrying out of them? It is far better to consider every question so thoroughly in quorum capacity before open delegate discussion is had in order that definite propositions can be presented to the body of delegates which they can easily understand, and which after they have been acted upon will not need several more conference actions to determine the real intent of the resolutions. Then the whole mem-

NEWS AND LETTERS

Increased Interest at Lucasville

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, August 21.—There has been very marked improvement in this branch in the last few weeks. Elder Mays, of Dayton, Ohio, has been with us and has awakened a lively interest among the Saints.

A program for our Department of Recreation and Expression is one of the many important things which Brother Mays introduced during his stay. It is meeting with great success. Brother Mark Crabtree was appointed superintendent, and all are agreed that he is a successful leader. Brother Crabtree's services are much sought after, as his untiring zeal has been demonstrated in many of the affairs of the church here.

Next Sunday Brother Crabtree and a number of the Saints will take a "hike" to the famous "Twin Nobs," and all are anticipating a good time.

New Members of the Priesthood

MITCHELL, ONTARIO, August 20.—The one-day meeting held at Mitchell August 10 was well attended by Saints from London, Saint Marys, Stratford, Rostock, Listowell, and McKillop. Roads were good, and the weather was fine and warm. District President Frank Gray presided and chose the speakers. Peace and unity prevailed, and as a result we had a good spiritual meeting.

Brother John Gleason preached at eleven o'clock, and Brother Gray spoke in the afternoon at three o'clock. Brother bership, priesthood and all, abide by the decisions of the conference.

But back of it all we have the law of common consent, the right of the branch, as a pure democracy, to vote and act; as a republic, the fight [Evidently a typographical error and should be right.—EDITOR.] of the membership to elect their delegates to district, stake, and General Conference; the right of the people to sustain or to refuse to sustain any officer in the church, as at least once a year every officer is appointed through the vote of the body in connection with which he serves; the right of the people to initiate legislation in branch or through their elective delegates in the conferences.

And further, there is the right of the people to accept or reject any communication which is given them or is presented to them as coming from God, whether it be the call of deacon or some other local officer in the branch, or whether it be a revelation to the whole church.

Following the teaching of the church, we find the revelation is given or presented to the prophet; it then goes before the various constituent bodies of the priesthood in quorum capacity, and finally to the General Conference assembled. This is not a right that has been grasped by the people, but it is part of the divine plan, that they also have the right to learn of God and know of themselves whether this which has been presented is indeed the word of God or not. And not only is it their right, but their duty and responsibility. . . . After all, the plan laid down by God is the perfect theocracy. —The Saints' Herald, vol. 67, No. 10, editorial, "Theocracy," March 10, 1920.

G. W. Tomlinson occupied in the evening. All preachers with power, edifying the Saints in the gospel work.

God has remembered his Saints in the various branches, speaking to them through the Spirit by way of instruction and admonition. Brother Edward Bell was called to be a teacher, Alma G. Gray a priest, and Brother John Blazey at some time previous had been called to occupy as a deacon, and Brother Alma Moore a priest. All these were ordained at London, at which time Patriarch F. A. Smith was present.

The work at this place has received great impetus as a result of the meetings held. The branch is now fully officered, and Brother S. W. Tomlinson has been visiting and preaching, lending books, etc. Several have become interested, and if he could come again and follow up his work, we might have more added to our membership. Two of Brother Alma Gray's children were baptized and confirmed August 17.

Washington Saints Use Several Agencies to Promote the Work

COSMOPOLIS, WASHINGTON, August 18.—In renewing my subscription to the HERALD, I want to say that it is a necessity and should be in the home of every Saint.

The Saints here on Gray's Harbor meet at Hoquiam in the Knights of Pythias Hall, and our numbers have been steadily increasing the last months. We are assisted in our efforts by Brother Cox and the orchestra from Centralia, and have also received aid from the district president, the District Sunday school superintendent, and Brother and Sister Jones of Seattle.

A number of the Saints from here attended the reunion at Silver Lake, which provided for a branch organization on the Harbor.

Several of the Saints motored out to Brother E. E. Fishel's on Quintalt Lake the evening of August 16 to give a surprise party for Brother Paul Fishel, who will soon start for Lamoni, Iowa, to attend Graceland College. The Saints all carried baskets of food, and a number of presents were presented to our young brother, who has been Sunday school superintendent the past year.

At an election of officers for Sunday school, Brother J. E. Phillips was selected as superintendent, Sister Scott assistant, and Brother A. L. Ward was retained as senior teacher. The Sunday school is now fully organized, and the branch will be organized soon. We expect the work at Gray's Harbor to develop and grow.

J. E. PHILLIPS.

Canadian Saints Active in Their Branches

ARTLAND, SASKATCHEWAN, August 13.—Brother Joseph Bates, who attends Graceland College, is home for vacation. He has preached twice for the Saints, and each time his hearers were delighted with the breadth of vision and the enchanting vistas of thought into which they were led.

Attendance at the meetings of the Department of Recreation and Expression and at Sunday school have fallen off slightly on account of a wave of chicken pox, followed by one of measles, which kept the little ones and their parents under quarantine.

Last Sunday Elder W. J. Cornish preached to the Saints and friends at Rutland. He discovered Brother and Sister Scott, who had lived there for eleven years and never knew there were any of like faith so near. The same Sunday Elder A. J. Cornish and daughter were at North End, where they worshiped with the Saints and Elder Cornish preached, pleading with them to hold up the hands of the leading men of the church, and to observe the law. Brother Joseph Bates in his usual happy way occupied the evening hour.

The following attended the annual conference held at Des Moines in July: Elders J. J., A. J., and W. J. Cornish, Brothers S. Cooper and Theodore Bates, Sisters Beatrice Huggett and daughters, Eva Land, and Lillian Bates.

Artland Branch has rather a monopoly of district officers. Leslie E. Mogg is district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; A. J. Cornish, superintendent of the Sunday school; W. J. Cornish, president of the district; Eva Land, secretary, and Sister Grace Huggett, Sunday school secretary.

Eastern Iowa Conditions

OELWEIN, IOWA, August 26.—We are moving on nicely in the gospel work in the Eastern Iowa District. I began a mission here last November, and since that time have visited most all the branches and localities where the work has been opened up. I have been pleased to find many earnest Saints, and have been able to hold some very good meetings.

It is true that in some of the branches the work has been at a very low ebb, but we are looking for better days to come. Division has been the enemy of God's work in all ages when the Evil One has been able to use his choice weapon. But we are glad "Glorious things are sung of Zion, Enoch's city seen of old, where the righteous, being perfect, walked with God in streets of gold. Love and virtue, faith and wisdom, grace and gifts were all combined; as himself each loved his neighbor, all were of one heart and mind."

Most of the past three weeks have been spent in Oelwein, a city of about eight thousand people, where we have had a small branch for several years. Brother C. D. Shippy, the city clerk for eighteen years, and other good men and women have kept the camp fire burning, holding a small Sunday school and other services in a hired hall.

The past few months Brother E. A. Davis and I have at intervals held meetings in the Saints' homes, mostly in the home of Brother and Sister Fred S. Clark, who are splendid church workers. Recently the Saints have purchased a small church building near the center of the city, and when it is painted and otherwise repaired, it will be a pleasant place to meet. It was purchased at a reasonable price, and the Saints raised $400 for the first cash payment.

Six have been baptized within the last few weeks: four adults, and two nearly grown.

We are happy to say the prospect for the future of the work here is bright. Several young men of the church here, who are active and clean, will, we hope, before long be called and ordained.

The Saints at Clinton are also remodeling and improving their church building, located near the center of the city, and when the work is done the church, though not large, will make a nice place for meetings. We think it is not wise for the Saints in these perilous times to build large or expensive buildings, as the Lord in times past has counseled against this.

I spent about ten days in July in Fulton, Iowa, and was pleased to find a loyal, earnest, and united branch of the Saints in that vicinity who have the good will and respect of their neighbors. Brother John Heide has been for several years the president of the branch and is one of the Lord's kind, faithful laborers. While toiling on his farm day after day, he has not neglected the work of the church, though it has often demanded considerable sacrifice. The Saints have a comfortable frame building, where they hold Sunday school and other services. We held a few meetings with good attendance, though it was a very busy time among the farmers.

We were sorry that because of financial conditions we were obliged to give up holding reunion in this district, as the Saints had planned a great deal for it, but we hope that we may be more successful next year.

The new radio stations at Independence and Graceland will certainly be a great help to the work of the church. They will advertise our faith in ways that could not be done otherwise and will assist in cities where we have churches as well as the scattered Saints.

We kindly remember the Saints in former fields and wish to say we are still laboring in hope and good cheer, believing the Kind One who has established his work will not let his faithful ones fail, nor the hope of Zion be lost.

LEONARD HOUGHTON.

Baptisms and Basket Dinner at Kingston

KINGSTON, MISSOURI, August 26.—Just a few lines to let HERALD readers know how the work is coming along in this place.

On August 17, according to previous arrangement, after the morning services the Saints in a body repaired to a beautiful grove on the farm of Brother C. E. Wood and partook of a sumptuous basket dinner. After enjoying themselves till about four o'clock, ten were baptized, all children of Latter Day Saint families, the products of our Sunday school and proper home training. Brother H. L. Barto did the baptizing and Brethren McPeck, C. E. Wood, and C. J. Craven took part in the confirmation.

It was decided by vote that we would not hold services at Kingston on the two Sundays while reunion was in session at Stewartsville, as nearly all the Saints wanted to attend. But Saturday afternoon and night we had such a rain and hailstorm that most of the Saints were prevented from going. Some are going this week, and probably most of them will attend next Sunday.

Our prayer is that God will bless every effort that is put forth for the progress of his work and that Zion will finally be redeemed.

C. J. CRAVEN.

Converted After Years of Investigation

GLASGOW, MONTANA, August 26.—On August 10, after Sunday school, two carloads of Saints motored to Nashua, eighteen miles east of Glasgow, to witness the baptism of Ben Dykstra, a farmer living just at the edge of town. For several years he had been reading and investigating our claims, and when he decided to cast his lot with us he invited the whole town down to the river to witness his baptism. Between forty and fifty responded, and Brother Page took advantage of the opportunity to set forth the principles of the gospel. The confirmation service was held at the home of Brother Dykstra's mother, and quite a number of strangers attended.

Church services during August have been well attended, and were it not for two or three families who seem to put other things ahead of the gospel so that they are often absent from church, there would be little to mar the peace of the branch.

On August 24 Brother Page was invited to Baylor to address the women's club on the subject of rural churches. From the favorable comments heard, the speech was well received.

Brothers Joseph Sandidge, Elmer D. Chase, and James C. Page have dispensed the word the past month, giving wholesome advice and good instruction. Glasgow is very much favored in having these able ministers among them.

A six-piece orchestra, under the direction of Brother M. E. Wilcox, favored the Religio with several very nice numbers on Friday evening, August 22.

All seem to be active in boosting for radio week, September 7 to 14. A letter is being mailed to all isolated members in the district, and the Religio is giving a play for the benefit of the radio fund.

Montana has splendid crops this year. Harvesting has begun and the lowest yield reported in this vicinity so far is twenty-five bushels of wheat to the acre.

Warton, Ontario

August 24.—Since last report we have been very busy attending all-day meetings throughout the district.

Elders Yager and Farrow have been holding forth at Harri-ston, with tent services and street preaching. Attendance has been very good, with prospects of some baptisms.

Last Sunday we journeyed to Ravenna to attend a special Sunday service. While en route some of our tires decided to be there before us, but they came to a halt in a fence corner some yards ahead of us. Considering our difficulties, Ravenna is worthy anyone's visit, for indeed it could be termed a second Eden for picturesqueness. The preaching services were enjoyed by all, as well as the splendid morning prayer service.

The district departmental officers were present, and one service was devoted to departmental work, consisting of Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression activities.

While absent from our branch on Sundays, during the week we have been preparing our building and have had a furnace installed.

Wants Acquaintance of Young Saints

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, August 25.—I would like very much to get in correspondence with a few of the many Saints in the different Ohio districts, both boys and girls.

I am a young man, twenty-three years of age, and have lately come into this glorious work. I am glad to state that I have found the work to be a source of much satisfaction to me, and at times I have received the manifestations of the Spirit and am daily witnessing many blessings, which is a great comfort to me.

I am a young, unmarried man, and want to get in touch with the young people of the church.

MARK CRABTREE.

Reunion Spirit Is Taken Home

TRYON, NEBRASKA, August 20.—Many of the Saints from this place attended the North Platte reunion and received much good. All hope for a bigger and better reunion next year. Elder and Sister P. R. Burton helped a great deal in making the reunion a success.

Brother and Sister J. P. Johnson are very poorly this summer. They came here from Independence last winter. Sister Johnson greatly misses the meetings, but they are cheerful in spite of trials.

The home department is very promising, and publicity workers are getting busy.

We need help here in Nebraska. Pray that God's directing hand may be over his work here as elsewhere.

Foraker, Oklahoma

The Foraker Saints are very much alive, and quite a number of them attended the reunion at Washunga, greatly enjoying the services. They were also first among the Saints in the district to bring their donations to the reunion, thus aiding materially in the work, as well as doing their full share of labor in the cooking and other necessary reunion work.

The Sunday school and Religio are both progressing nicely under the leadership of Brothers Arthur Slover and Edward Workman. Brother Chrestensen surely has reason to rejoice that he was led to this place. He is held in very high esteem by all, as is also Brother Case, who later assisted in bringing some into the work. The Saints were also much pleased to have Bishop C. J. Hunt with them at reunion.

The young people are not at all backward in doing whatever is assigned to them in Sunday school and Religio, and Sister Edward Workman is a great help to them, always being promptly in her place as organist.

We have preaching once a week by Brethren Slover, Chrestensen, or Workman.

We are glad to report that the wife of Brother Nathan Workman, who was so sick at reunion time, is much improved in health.

ELEN ADAIR.

Modesto, California

August 27.—During the last two months the Saints have been moving along as usual. During that time the Northern California reunion was held, at which Modesto had its largest delegation. A general good time was enjoyed.

Elder E. B. Hull has just spent two weeks with us encouraging the Saints to press onward and do the work there is here to be done. He preached four splendid sermons.

Two little boys were baptized the first Sunday of this month, so the young men are coming in to take the places of the older ones.

The fruit crop here is in full swing. There is a splendid crop, and prices are good.

Littleton, Colorado

August 29.—Sunday, August 10, the Denver church was closed all day and almost the entire congregation went by automobiles to the mountains near the residence of Brother Dell Kemp where they held Sunday school and preaching services. Everyone had a good time. Another such service is contemplated before the weather gets too cool.

The reunion at Colorado Springs is on, so the attendance at church services on the 24th was small.

August 25 Elder E. F. Shupe was called to Trinidad to preach the funeral sermon of George W. Pople, husband of Sister Martha Pople. He had been a resident of Trinidad thirty-seven years, where he and his sons have built up a prosperous business. He had never joined any church. A large number of the old residents of Trinidad attended the funeral. Interment was in Trinidad cemetery.

The Chappell sisters, of Lincoln, Nebraska, who have been visiting in Denver most of the summer, have returned home. They have been a great help in the music and will be missed by all.

Brother Glen Holmes is leaving soon for Graceland, where he expects to attend school the coming year.

Our choir leader, Brother E. W. Fishburn, has a smile clear across his face, caused by the arrival of a new son in his family.

Davidson, Oklahoma

August 27.—We have had the pleasure of having with us recently Elder S. W. Simmons and wife. Brother Simmons preached both morning and evening that Sunday and all enjoyed listening to him.

Since coming home from the reunion at Eagle City the Saints have taken renewed interest in church work. The different departments are all busy.

Our midweek prayer meetings are good, and many of the young take part. One young lady said the Lord had blessed her, and she was going to work for him. We have some earnest workers among the young here.

The health of the Saints generally is good.

Reunion Helps Anaconda Saints

ANACONDA, MONTANA, August 28.—The Saints are meeting regularly at Musicians' Hall, where Sunday school and church services are held in charge of Elders Peter Helstrum and Joseph Beck. Meetings were not held August 17 and 24 because of the Western Montana district reunion which was being conducted on the Dan Tewey picnic grounds.

The reunion was greatly enjoyed by the Anaconda Saints because of the help received spiritually and the information obtained in regard to the Sunday school and the Department of Recreation and Expression.

Because of the encouragement received, the young people especially are working with greater enthusiasm for the church and its departments. The Sunday school has decided to set aside whatever it can, both in money and anything else that can be used, to help make the reunion next year a success.

Saginaw, Michigan

August 27.—The Saints of Saginaw were well represented at our district reunion, all reporting having enjoyed themselves and the gifts of the Spirit through which the Lord spoke to his people.

Coming home from reunion, we brought Bishop F. B. Blair with us, and he spoke for us Sunday evening on his early experiences, which we greatly enjoyed.

Elder John R. Grice came here from our reunion and spoke for us Monday and Tuesday evenings, using for his text, "I press toward the mark," and "What lack I yet?" from which we gained much good.

Working conditions being poor, we have not very many plans for the future in reference to our church building.

Unfavorable Conditions at Bevier

BEVIER, MISSOURI, August 27.—Bevier is passing through one of the most serious industrial crises in its history. All the big coal mines have been closed since March 31, with no prospects of their resuming work this fall or winter. Almost every week some of the Saints are leaving for other places in search of employment.

The Department of Women held a farewell picnic August 21 in honor of Sister W. B. Richards, who was leaving for Kansas City, Kansas, where Brother Richards and their son are located. Sister Richards was the local president of the Department of Women for many years and was very active in all departments of the work.

Brother J. W. Graupner and Carl Weeks made a trip to the Knobnoster neighborhood to look at a coal mine. If a deal can be made for the property, probably a dozen families of the Saints will move there.

Sister Herman Loske departed recently for Roundup, Montana, to make her home.

Sister Carl Powell has moved to Macon. She is a fine musician and will be a great asset to the branch there.

Sister William Green, of Ottumwa, Iowa, was a Bevier visitor the past week, where she was born and reared.

Brother Sam Perry has been quite ill this week, but at this writing he is improving.

Encouraged by Baptisms

FAIRVIEW, MONTANA, August 19.—August 17 was a busy day for a small branch. We had a home-coming for former residents, and a baptism was announced for that date.

Sunday school was followed by preaching, after which the entire congregation motored to the Yellowstone River where four promising young juniors were baptized by Elder W. R. Hillman. Those baptized were the only son of the branch president, the son and daughter of the branch deacon, and a young woman who had come thirty-five miles for baptism.

Following a basket dinner at the home of the deacon, the Saints again gathered at the church where the four young people were confirmed, Elder Hillman officiating. Sacrament was then administered to all the members, some seldom having a chance to partake because of their isolation. Two years had passed since the last baptism, so the branch is greatly encouraged by these and the prospects of others in the near future.

Maine Saints Carry On

VINAL HAVEN, MAINE, August 17.—The Saints were wonderfully blessed with the Spirit at their sacramental service August 3. It is encouraging to see people willing to put forth their best efforts to see the gospel grow, and such seems to be the desire of the Vinal Haven Saints.

Elder Archie Beggs, branch president, has been our speaker each Sunday evening, and Brother Floyd E. Young has occupied in the afternoon during the absence of Brother Harvey Minton, missionary.

The Department of Women, in charge of Sister Frieda Barton, must be given much credit for the financial assistance it is giving to pay off the debt on the church building. They hold a public supper every other Thursday, from five to seven o'clock.

The Sunday school, under the direction of Sister Agnes Minton, is progressing rapidly.

An Isolated Saint Writes

WHITTIER, CALIFORNIA, August 18.—I do not take the HERALD but thought I would like to write a letter.

We came to this place in February. It is a lovely place, but we get homesick to see Missouri and dear friends there. My husband has a good job, and we are doing fine. I have not seen any Saints since we came here. There is no church here, and I long to be with the Saints. My husband does not belong to the church, but I pray and trust that he will some day.

I am in very poor health and would appreciate the prayers of the Saints. I have been wonderfully blessed many times and can truthfully testify to the goodness of God.

MRS. J. F. RICHALIEU.

Fanning and Troy, Kansas

TROY, KANSAS, August 20.—Attendance has been nearly up to normal during hot weather. Some have gone on vacations, others to summer school.

The officers of the branch planned a home-coming for August 10, to be held at Fanning. All one-time members of the branch were notified, as well as friends and regular attendants. They expected to have one of the apostles or J. W. A. Bailey, but these could not be secured, so we were made glad by having with us Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin, recently from England and Wales. They were to be at our district reunion, so we had an opportunity to get acquainted. The time was spent visiting the homes of the members, especially the sick, and holding several preaching services at Fanning chapel. They, with others, are now attending the Netawaka reunion.

The annual picnic that has been held for twenty-five years or more at Sparks, Kansas, has always had three or four days, ending with Chautauqua day on Sunday. This year Brother Samuel Twombly, our district president, had charge of that day. All the ministers and Sunday school superintendents of the county were asked to dismiss their sessions for the day and come to joint services in the grove, which resulted in a large attendance, and many denominations joined in the big basket dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Blauser and daughter Elizabeth, of Troy, are taking a trip to Ohio, visiting Kirtland reunion for a few days. They are expected home in a few days.

Miss Vera Twombly has returned from summer school at Lawrence, but expects to return for the fall term in September.

Southern England Conference

The semiannual Southern District (England) conference was held at Enfield on Saturday and Sunday, August 2 and 3. The business session opened at six fifteen with Elder J. A. Judd in charge, assisted by Elder Harry Passman, recently from Jerusalem. The customary business, such as reading of reports, etc., was entered into, and many items were discussed for the improvement of the work in the district.

Sunday could not have been a more enjoyable day. From the very beginning it was evident that God was with us, and he remained with us to the end of the day. A short prayer service was held at ten, with Elder Edward Maloney of Manchester in charge. Here prayers were offered and hymns sung, inviting the Lord's Spirit to be present.

Preaching service followed at eleven, with Elder Abel Hall of Manchester in the chair. Our small Enfield orchestra supplied the music and the choir sang an anthem, all this being under the direction of Brother William Goulee. A splendid sermon was preached by Elder Passman.

At half past two in the afternoon a fellowship meeting was held, during which the sacrament was administered. This meeting was one of the finest ever held in Enfield. The Spirit was made manifest on three separate occasions during the afternoon, and words of encouragement were twice delivered through Elder Judd. The other manifestation was through Sister S. Kemp. Certainly everyone benefited by this meeting, as their many testimonies proved.

The evening was occupied by preaching service at half past six, at which time the choir and the orchestra again supplied the music. A powerful address was given by Elder J. A. Judd, and thus a day, spent happily in the service of God, was brought to a close.

On Monday, August 4, a large party of the Saints gathered and journeyed to Alexandra Palace, a distance of about eight miles from our meetinghouse, and there we enjoyed ourselves. The weather was fine, and this, coupled with the various entertainments that are always provided at this place on bank holidays, made the day very interesting for us indeed.

The following day another large gathering of the Saints took place, this time at the British Empire Exhibition, at Wembley. Here we again enjoyed fine weather, and pleasant still are the memories of that glorious day.

Any Saints or missionaries visiting England will find a hearty welcome awaiting them at Enfield should they find themselves that way.

DOVER ALMA JUDD.

Moorhead, Iowa

September 1.—During the reunion at Dow City no services were held here, so all who could attend reunion were at liberty to do so.

On Sunday, August 31, District President Joseph Lane was the speaker at Jordon church in the morning and at Moorhead in the evening. His visits and sermons are much appreciated by the Saints of this vicinity.

Brother Nathaniel Mann, of Decatur, Nebraska, is spending the week visiting Moorhead relatives and was present at the Sunday evening service.

Brother and Sister Myers, of Hornick, Iowa, attended services Sunday morning, August 31. They drove some thirty miles and arrived in time for Sunday school at ten. This shows what can be done with the modern conveyances and willing effort.

Brother Bert Mann and family, except their son Harold who is teaching school, departed for a visit to Kansas City and Independence relatives. They expected to stay in Council Bluffs the first night of their trip.

Brother Edgar Butts and a carload of Saints from Decatur, Nebraska, spent Sunday afternoon in this vicinity.

Branch President T. O. Strand motored to Omaha Sunday, August 31, accompanied by his daughter Audrie, who there took train for Denver, Colorado, where she has accepted a position as instructor in the schools.

Brother Blair Jensen, who has spent part of his vacation in Michigan, stopped off on his return trip to Lamoni for a few days with home folks.

Brother and Sister T. O. Strand recently made a visit to the home of their daughter, Sister Ruby Inlow, of Mason City.

Sister Nellie Larson, who will teach at Humboldt, Iowa, also Sister Helen McDonald, who has a position in the Magnolia schools, departed for their work the last of this week.

Brother and Sister Charles R. Heild returned recently from Madison, Wisconsin, where he has attended summer school. They are now keeping house in Mrs. Peterson's residence. Brother Heild is starting his second year as superintendent of schools here. Other members of our church who are members of the school faculty are Miss Thelma Lane, of Lamoni; LaVonne Johnson, of Pisgah; and Aurilee Jensen, of Moorhead. Brother Herold Mann and Sister Ella Jennings and Pauline Pellissier also have positions near home.

Brothers Arnold Adams and Lloyd McIntyre, and Sisters Frances Strand and Fern Wilson will attend Graceland this year.

Brother Charles Blackman, accompanied by his wife and son Dale, motored through from Spokane, Washington, arriving August 23. They had been on the road just two weeks. These people were former Moorhead residents, so they are greeted by a host of friends.

Raise Money for Radio Fund

BOZEMAN, MONTANA.—The conference of the Western Montana District was held at Race Track August 23 and 24 at the close of a successful reunion.

The following officers were elected: E. E. Eliason, president; D. L. Allen, vice president; Frank Christofferson, second vice president; Mrs. R. M. Esgar, secretary; Doctor C. S. Chase, leader of Department of Recreation and Expression; Mrs. R. M. Esgar, superintendent of Department of Women.

A neat sum was raised for the Independence radio fund by a bazaar given by the Department of Women and a play, "An old-fashioned mother," by the Temple Builders. This play was given under the direction of Mrs. E. E. Eliason, who is greatly responsible for its success.

A gift of silverware was given Mr. and Mrs. Dan Toohy as a token of appreciation from the Saints for their many kindnesses and for the use of the reunion grounds.

Speakers were Apostle D. T. Williams, Elder George W. Thorburn, and Sister Blanche Edwards.

Next conference will be held in Bozeman, Montana.

MRS. R. M. ESGAR, Secretary.

Kansas City Stake Items

Central

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, September 1.—A number of the officers and workers have been away on their vacations, of whom Brothers J. A. Tanner and F. B. Blair have just returned. Brother Tanner attended the Northeastern Kansas reunion, while Brother Blair made an extended trip among the Michigan reunions.

Fourth Church

The Saints of this branch are thankful in their hearts for the wonderful blessings God poured out upon them in their sacramental meeting in August. The spirit of prayer and testimony was with them as never before, and they felt they needed this spiritual food which gave them strength and courage to come up higher. Attendance at prayer services is growing, both on Sunday and Wednesday.

The Department of Women is preparing for the big fall bazaar. They cleared $26.18 at a social in July, and another social event is scheduled for August 15. A social event of each week is the Thursday night swim, with refreshments afterwards, at Swope Park. All enjoy the good time.

Bennington Heights

The first service was held in the new church August 17, with good crowds present all day. The Sunday school had an attendance of one hundred fifteen, and Brother Ray Lloyd, stake superintendent, gave a short talk on stake Sunday school work. Enoch Hill orchestra, from Independence, furnished the music for the morning service. Elder J. E. Cleveland was the speaker in the morning, and J. W. Metcalf spoke in the evening.

Armourdale

A cottage meeting was held recently at the home of Brother Caselman, 327 South Twelfth Street, Kansas City, Kansas, with W. W. Hoover as the speaker. His effort was convincing in support of the gospel.

Brother William Canston passed away August 10. Funeral services were held at the home, in charge of Pastor John J. Gross, who gave consoling thought on the subject of the resurrection.

Second Church

Pastor Lafayette Ferguson was suddenly taken from us August 20. The immediate cause of his death was the excessive heat. It was a very severe shock to his family, which consists of his wife, son, and daughter. Prior to his coming to Kansas City, Brother Ferguson was president of the Alma, Missouri, branch for twenty years. Funeral sermon was by Elder W. I. Fligg at Second Church. Interment at Wakenda, Missouri, his former home.

Grandview

Sister Olive Evangeline DuRoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. DuRoy, was married to Doctor J. Wade Horne at the church, August 9, by Elder L. W. Hays. They are at home to their friends at 3415 Gillham Road, Kansas City, Missouri.

Independence

The general priesthood meeting at the Institute building Sunday afternoon was presided over by President Elbert A. Smith, and discussion of radio and the radio campaign was given by Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Bishop J. A. Becker, and Arthur B. Church. A great deal of enthusiasm was manifested in favor of the plan for expanding the radio. Plans were completed for the campaign in Independence during the week.

Brother R. V. Hopkins has been quite seriously ill at the home of his sister in Dahinda, Illinois, but he is now recovering.

Elder Hubert Case was the speaker on the Campus Sunday evening.

Elder and Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser have returned to Independence following quite an extended reunion season. They attended reunions at Toronto and Chatham, Ontario, as well as the Eastern Michigan, and Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana reunions. They visited several branches in Canada where Brother Etzenhouser preached and Sister Etzenhouser conducted class work. They report a very fine spiritual condition at the reunions and in most of the branches.

Quorum of Twelve

Apostles John W. Rushton, J. A. Gillen, Roy Budd, E. J. Gleazer, and F. Henry Edwards are in Independence following their reunion work. Brother Rushton preached the radio sermon from the studio Sunday morning.

J. F. Garver called in Independence on his way home from reunion work, and D. T. Williams is in Lamoni.

Paul M. Hanson is in Denmark, and J. F. Curtis is holding meetings in Germany with Brother Elmer Ohlert and Brother Smolny. They are meeting a great deal of opposition, but several have been baptized.

Second Church

This section of the city of Zion has been giving a few days each fall to the celebrating of the harvest. The dates for this season's celebration are chosen as September 25, 26, and 28. During these days the church will be decorated and displays of the products of Zion will be contrived, so that all may get an idea of what has been done in this year's growing season.

Flowers, fruits, vegetables, grains, will be the leading lines of display and decoration. Should any desire to help in making a truly representative harvest festival by donating flowers for the decorating, they can find out just what is needed and can be done by calling E. E. Willard, Independence 1993-W. If you have vegetables or grain or fresh fruit, call J. Alfred Curtis, Independence 2122-W. Canned vegetables, fruits, jellies, jams, etc., are handled by a committee of which Charles Edmunds is chairman; you can get in touch with him through telephone by calling another member of the committee, either Sister Charles Street, Independence 589-M, or Sister William Totty, 1181-W.

These products will be handled by the committees for the good of the church institutions and the poor, through the Bishopric of the city of Zion.

The evenings of Thursday and Friday, September 25 and 26, will be occupied by the best of entertainments, and the very best available speakers will give short talks. Sunday, September 28, will be given over to the celebration, and devotional and all meetings will have for their theme, "The Lord's harvest."

The young people's prayer meeting is quite a feature on Sunday morning. Last Sunday there was an attendance of more than fifty.

The little three-year-old son of Brother and Sister Lawrence Nave, died Monday morning at the Independence Sanitarium. About a week ago his shoulder was hurt, but the injury was soon forgotten. An R-ray examination later revealed that his shoulder had been fractured, and it was given attention, but blood poisoning set in inside the bone, and though all possible was done for him he could not be saved. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock at the Second Independence Church, with interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Walnut Park

The auditorium was well filled at the sacramental service Sunday.

Elder E. A. Curtis and family have recently moved into the Walnut Park district, and he will be the speaker there at eleven o'clock September 14.

Evening preaching services have been held the past week in Group 29 South, at the home of the group pastor, P. A. Sherman. Elders Veenstra and Postma, of the Holland mission, and Elder E. T. Atwell have been the speakers. A number of outsiders are attending, and more meetings will be arranged for.

A joint prayer meeting of the groups was held at the church Wednesday evening, with Bishop B. J. Scott in charge.

Enoch Hill

The overcrowded condition of the present church building was again made manifest at the sacramental service Sunday morning.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer occupied at the seven o'clock hour and preached a splendid sermon to a crowded house.

The final debate between the Walnut Park and Enoch Hill churches was won last Friday night by the Enoch Hill team. There was a very large attendance, and keen interest was demonstrated by supporters of both sides.

Englewood

The sacramental service Sunday morning was exceptionally well attended.

The Wednesday night prayer meetings are still divided, and at one there was an attendance of twenty-five.

Des Moines District

District President Henry Castings and Elder N. V. Anderson were at Webster City Sunday, August 31. The meeting place of the Saints there is at Head's Grove, several miles north of the city. On this occasion Doctor J. E. Slocum baptized six members into the church, some of whom were of his wife's family. The work of Doctors Hull and Slocum began there several years ago and is beginning to bear fruit.

Doctor Hull was at Pershing on the same day, where he reports a splendid time.

Ralph Wicker was the speaker at Dunreath and reported a very interesting service.

Missionary Supervisor John R. Lentell is at Rhodes holding meetings.

A series of home-comings is being planned for all branches in the district, beginning in October.

First Chicago Branch

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, August 27.—The Department of Recreation and Expression held a beach party August 2. The swimming was thoroughly enjoyed, but the wieners and watermelons were best of all.

Sacramental service August 3 was a spiritual feast to all who attended. Visitors at this service were Sister Lottie Keir and daughters, also Brother McDonald, of Independence; Sister Mary O'Brien of Kansas City; Sister Bell from Indiana; Joshua and Mayme Evans, of Tulsa, Oklahoma; Brother and Sister Anderson, of Beloit, Wisconsin; Sister Mary Ray, of Aurora, Illinois; Sister Ortleb, of Burlington, Iowa; and in the evening Brother and Sister Christy paid us a visit, Brother Christy being the evening speaker. Sister Ballinger, of Idaho, also was with us for this service.

Sister Keir and daughters have introduced a new feature of entertainment during their visit, surf riding on the dining-room table. This was successfully tried out at the home of Sister Grace Johnson during our recent rains. Come again, Sister Grace.

Brothers F. B. Baldwin and Clyde Bullard were the speakers August 10. Brother and Sister Hanson, of Logan, Iowa, and Sister Davidson of Saint Louis were visitors. Brother Roy Chevillie occupied the morning of August 17, at which time the young people of Central Branch visited us.

Our hearts were saddened when the grim reaper claimed the babe of Sister Crouse, aged seven weeks. She was buried at Mount Auburn on the 19th, with Elder Bone in charge of the service.

August 24 our former missionary, Brother David E. Dowker, and family visited us. It seemed like old times to have Brother Dowker with us again and to hear him speak at the morning service. Brother Clark, who is with the world's greatest circus, assisted in the morning service, at which time we had the following visitors: Brother and Sister Maxwell, of Kewanee, Illinois; Sister Burwell, of Louisville, Kentucky; and Sister Evelyn Baker, of Lake Geneva, Illinois. We are always glad to have the Saints visit us.

We are expecting our new city missionaries. Brother and Sister Baldwin, to be with us soon.

Good Work of Department of Women

Our society feels that our experience may be of some benefit to other branches.

A year ago last May, Brother J. R. Lentell conducted a series of meetings here. Sister Lentell helped the women to reorganize a Department of Women as we had not had one here for several years. Since that time we have held a meeting each Thursday afternoon. During the summer months we have our meetings in the church, but during the winter we hold them at the home of the branch president.

Each week each member pays fifteen cents for dues. At first we spent our time in making articles to be sent to the Sanitarium. However, due to our own great needs here in the church we decided to try making some money to use in fixing up the building. We finally decided upon quilting. We have never been without quilting to do, for we have made quilts for nonmembers as well as church members, and we have charged the regular price.

Last fall when the church installed a new furnace, our society was able to donate fifty dollars towards it.

About six weeks ago the members of the branch decided to redecorate the interior of the church. The work was put under the supervision of Brother Clarence Cosner, and with the aid of the other members the work went through nicely. Over half of the cost was met by our society, and we feel justly proud of the work we have done. All of the paper was torn off the ceiling and the walls, and they have all been painted, as have the woodwork and seats.

A nonmember, noticing and appreciating our efforts, has donated us a good piano for six months. We hope to be able to purchase this piano at the end of that time.

No doubt many branches will think they do not have enough members. Our society has only eight members, some of them coming several miles to attend our meetings.

I believe that any branch needing money will find that our way is as easy as any other, and if they have the will they can accomplish as much if not more than we have.

Sincerely yours,

MRS. CLARENCE COSNER, President.

CENTERVILLE, IOWA, September 1.

Toledo, Ohio, Branch Needs Help

This branch seems to be going through its Gethsemane, and I truly hope that it will soon be over and we can feel the Spirit of the Master more abundantly. Some few are still holding to the rod of iron, but the majority are drifting.

We are handicapped here for the lack of speakers, and we were very sorry to hear of some in the missionary field who passed through the city and were even here on preaching night and did not come out to lend their assistance. It seems to me that the Saints are of just as much importance as the outsiders, and I feel that the servants of God surely will not for long overlook us.

We hope in the near future to be blessed by God in some way so things may open up and all be once more in the good spiritual condition that we were in a few months back. We ask for your prayers and assistance. We also would be glad to have anyone passing through the city stop and meet with us, as it does us all good when we meet together. Asking the interest of your prayers again, I am your sister in gospel bonds,

MRS. D. S. MORGAN.

Spirit of Oneness Among Saints

SAN BERNARDINO, CALIFORNIA, September 2.—Under the able care of Pastor F. J. Lacey, this branch continues in a remarkable degree of unity and good fellowship. District President N. T. Chapman, in making a visit just prior to the reunion and conference, expressed great appreciation of the splendid spirit of oneness which he found among the Saints here. It was an added encouragement to the members to hear their presiding elder commend them in a public way. Brother Lacey has moved to Ontario, about twenty miles from here, but he is punctual in caring for his flock, and with the assistance of local brethren no service is neglected.

A pretty wedding took place in the church Sunday night when Oren A. Caviness, son of Bishop's agent George W. Caviness, of Durango, Colorado, and Miss Esther Yates, youngest daughter of Elder and Mrs. James E. Yates, were

REUNION NEWS

Eastern Michigan and Detroit Districts

The reunion closed August 17, after ten days of spiritual feast for all in attendance. The attendance was good considering weather conditions, and all meetings were of the highest order.

We were highly favored in having Apostle J. A. Gillen with us, and he fed us with that food divine for which we were all thirsting. It seemed that all sermons were of a nature to urge the Saints to come up higher and forsake worldly pleasures, consecrating their lives to the service of the Master.

Bishop F. B. Blair, of Kansas City, delivered some powerful sermons on tithing, consecration, and stewardship, and as a result many inventories were filed. He admonished the Saints to keep the financial law, for it is just as important as the other principles of the gospel.

Other speakers were Elders R. D. Weaver, William Grice, T. L. Clark, J. R. Grice, G. St. John, T. Richards.

Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser were with us the entire time and gave educational lectures each morning on the home. They were greatly appreciated by all and gave a new perception of the social duties in family life and also a keener application of these things in our religious experience.

The Boy Scouts were on the ground doing guard duty and assisting wherever possible. The young folks had some wiener and marshmallow roasts at the beach, and also two early prayer services which were both wonderful meetings, the last one being blessed with admonition and counsel from the Lord.

The prayer services were all of a very high order spiritually, the Lord speaking to the people on several occasions.

The music was directed by Elders John R. Grice and Matthew Liston, so some rousing community singing was enjoyed, which did much to bring the people closer. The orchestra was in charge of Brother A. Nye.

The dining tent was quite a success, and seven hundred were fed at Sunday dinner.

There were present of the priesthood: one apostle, four patriarchs, four high priests, two bishops, two field workers, forty elders, thirty-nine priests, nineteen teachers, eighteen deacons. Eighteen preaching services were held, ten prayer services, six of the Department of Women. There were two baptisms.

PRESS COMMITTEE.

Eastern Oklahoma

WINTHROP, ARKANSAS, August 18.—The Eastern Oklahoma reunion began Thursday night, August 14. Brother H. E. Winegar, district missionary, also serving as district president, came a few days prior to the reunion and was busy getting the ground in order, cooperating with the Saints to provide for visitors, which they did very successfully by renting a house and furnishing it with cooking and dining-room equipment and bedrooms for the ladies.

The reunion was organized Friday morning, and Brother Winegar was chosen to preside over the reunion. Brother married. Elder James E. Yates performed the ceremony, making some very fitting remarks before the ceremony proper.

Hunt is the principal speaker, and has proved himself to be a good one.

The three States in the district, Oklahoma, Texas, and Arkansas, are well represented, Saints coming in cars, wagons, and on the train, until we have a large number camping on the grounds, besides others who come each day.

Morning prayer service is held at nine o'clock, in which the Spirit has been given to a marked degree. Departmental work follows at ten. These meetings are largely round table discussions of problems met in departmental work. Preaching services are held at eleven and at eight in the evening.

The afternoon is given to recreation, hence we are being cultivated spiritually, intellectually, and physically.

A special feature of the reunion is the junior church, conducted by Sister Addie Belle Chappell from nine till twelve.

Thus far the attendance has been large, especially in the evening. We are looking for Brother D. R. Baldwin the latter part of the week.

Everyone is enjoying the reunion and meeting with friends.

Portland District

August 20.—The reunion was held in a grove east of Portland, on the Baseline Road, August 8 to 17. The first meeting was held Thursday evening, August 7, at which time the reunion was organized with the following officers: Roy S. Budd, presiding officer; L. May Belcher, secretary; Caroline Larson, chorister, to assist Fay Buchanan, chorister of Portland Branch, who had planned the reunion music.

Regular work began Friday morning with prayer service at nine o'clock, followed by preaching at eleven.

There were present at the first day's sessions, Elders Roy S. Budd, New Madden, John Wiles, A. C. Martin, M. H. Cook, A. A. Baker, Walter W. Barker, Nelson Wilson, John Hanson, William Smith, and Brother Cox and family. On Wednesday Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths and Sister Blanche Edwards arrived from the Seattle reunion to help us. Also N. T. Chapman and family arrived from Los Angeles. Brother Chapman had formerly been one of our district officers, and his smiling face added cheer to his many friends. The last day of the reunion we had with us Daniel Macgregor and Carl Crum; also Bishop A. Carmichael, who was motor-ing through. Sunday evening Brother Carmichael gave us an excellent and much appreciated sermon on stewardships.

The central theme of the reunion was the idea of service, and was ably presented in all the sermons and talks by Apostle Budd, as well as being manifested in all the prayers and testimonies.

Much to the regret of the Saints, Brother Budd had to leave Friday, August 15, but the good work was ably continued by Brother Griffiths. Sister Edwards won the hearts of the entire assembly by her pleasing personality and the splendid presentation of her lines of work.

The predominant features of the reunion were a great spiritual uplift, the promotion of deeper love for each other and for the work, a clearer understanding of our individual and collective duties to each other and the work. The interest of the young people was very gratifying, and much good was accomplished.

Young people's prayer service was held at six in the morning, with general prayer service at a quarter of nine, followed by departmental work at half past nine and preaching at eleven. In the afternoon a meeting was held for departmental work at three o'clock, with recreation at half past four. Song service was held in the evening at a quarter of eight, preceding missionary sermons at eight o'clock.

The recreation work was in charge of George W. Stover, and games of ball and volley ball, as well as other games, were enjoyed by all.

Much good was accomplished through the efforts of Brother Budd and Sister Edwards at the departmental meetings. A very interesting program was given Friday evening, at which a playlet, written by Helen Stover, and given by her associate Temple Builders, was greatly enjoyed. Then a musical concert was given the following Thursday, which was followed by a watermelon feed.

The music of the entire reunion was of a very high order, and it added much to the uplift and enjoyment of those present. Chorus work was principally under the direction of Fay Buchanan, who was assisted by local musicians. Solos were sung by Fay Buchanan, Bessie Young, Freda Young, Lila Smith, Mrs. Robinson, Alice Wilson, Miss Kinney, and Mr. Tooze.

The Saints camping on the ground cooked their meals on camp stoves. Many brought lunches from home and spent the entire day. A stand was provided by the reunion committee where light lunches and some few supplies could be purchased. Any profits from the stand were given to the reunion fund.

The Saints are enthusiastic for the 1925 reunion. The reunion committee has begun soliciting contributions, and the response has already assured the reunion for next year. At the district conference the reunion committee was authorized to make investigations with a view to purchasing a new and larger tent, also to consider the advisability of purchasing permanent reunion grounds.

Some of the visiting members enjoyed very much a trip over our wonderful Columbia River Highway, for which Oregon is noted, making the trip in machines that were kindly offered for that use.

The general sentiment is that this reunion is the best ever held in the district, and all are looking forward to next year, hoping to make that one still better.

MRS. L. M. BELCHER.

Netawaka, Kansas

August 24.—The sessions of the Northeastern Kansas district reunion were brought to a close at eight o'clock to-day. The attendance at all meetings of the day were unusually large, Saints driving in from all parts of the district. Sunday school was held at half past nine in charge of Cecil E. Schmid, district superintendent. The sermon at eleven o'clock was a masterful effort by Joseph A. Tanner. At half past one baptismal services were held, and four candidates were initiated into the kingdom by Frank G. Hedrick. An ordination and confirmation service was held at half past two. Frank O. Kelley was ordained to the office of teacher, and Charles J. Sheets and Clayton B. Crooker were ordained deacons. The sermon at a quarter of three was by Samuel Twombly. Jonathan Koshiway, Lamanite brother, spoke at half past four. His talk was very interesting.

In the business session Saturday it was voted to hold a reunion next year. A committee of five were elected to have charge. The committee are Samuel Twombly, chairman; Abram P. Crooker; Frank G. Hedrick, secretary and treasurer; John Green, and Mrs. R. L. Tilden. The committee are to select time and place of next reunion.

The departmental work was organized for active service next year by the district supervisor, Mrs. Emma Hedrick, and her assistant, Mrs. A. P. Crooker. In the sessions held by them Saturday and Sunday, the work was outlined and the following workers selected: Kindergarten and primary, Mrs. J. T. Westwood and Mrs. B. F. Deller; Boy Scouts, Clayton Crooker; Orioles, Edna Dittmore; Temple Builders, Mrs. Charles J. Sheets and Vera Twombly.

The closing sermon at eight o'clock was delivered by J. D. Stead. A vote of thanks was extended to the mayor, council, and citizens of Netawaka for their kindness and favors. All voted that the Methodist ladies who served the meals were the best cooks in Kansas.

The weather was ideal during the reunion—only two real hot days; one light shower. No sickness or accidents to mar the enjoyment of anyone.

On last Tuesday the following resolution was offered and passed unanimously: Resolved, That the Saints of the North-eastern Kansas District in reunion at Netawaka do hereby express their confidence in and loyalty to President Frederick M. Smith.

The general expressions of the Saints were for a bigger and better reunion next year. All are going to plan and work to that end. If they prayerfully and consistently keep this resolve, there is no doubt but that our reunions will be one of the big gatherings of the church.

FRANK G. HEDRICK.

Alabama District

The Alabama district reunion closed August 10. Attendance was good throughout the entire ten days. Preaching was by Apostle John W. Rushton, Patriarch Ammon White, and Elders N. L. Booker and T. C. Kelley. The preaching, generally speaking, was the best we have ever had at our reunions. The Saints were warned of their duty and exhorted by the power of the Spirit to seek to bring about closer unity. They were also told of things that would occur in the very near future, and that if the Saints would lay their all on the altar the devourer would be rebuked, the land would yield her increase, and their sick would be healed. The prayer meetings were well attended but seemed to be lacking in spirituality.

The departmental work was the best attended and most instructive we have had. The subjects of music, education, health, and Sunday school were taken up. Professor Peacock, of the Methodist Evangelical Order, gave some very good instructions along the line of music. The educational programs were of a high order, and help was given by Professor Jernigan, of the McKenzie high school.

Reunion closed with a good spirit prevailing and an addition of six by baptism. All are looking forward to the 1925 reunion.

G. W. MINIARD.

Far West Stake Reunion

The reunion, which was held on the camp grounds about one half mile north of Stewartville, Missouri, August 21 to 31, was one of the most successful held in the stake. The attendance was good; the interest was excellent; the weather on the whole was pleasant. All meetings were well attended, and there was a nice spirit in evidence throughout the sessions.

A wide range of wants was supplied. Religious services were conducted daily for young children, and they were taught how to play and how to work. The adolescent boys and girls had a good time; devotions, work, and play was the order of their activities. Not before have we had such an attendance of young people. After a short young people's prayer meeting on several occasions, this body of prospective

Zion builders marched into the general prayer meeting more than a hundred strong. And they prayed and expressed their hopes, desires, and purposes in both testimony and song.

In the afternoons young and old tried to learn how to play together so that we would know better how to work together.

The Department of Women was active. Lectures on such subjects as "Educative punishment," "Cooperation between parents and teachers in public school work," "First aid," "Symptoms of sickness in children," "Home hygiene," and "Experiences in the Isle of Pines," were well received.

Each morning, classes were conducted in "Public speaking" by O. Salisbury, and in "Church history" by J. F. Sheehy. The Department of Women did much of their work at the same hour.

The bulk of the preaching was done by E. J. Gleazer, U. W. Greene, and J. F. Sheehy, the order of the names being in the ratio of sermons preached. The preaching services were highly edifying and of course much enjoyed and well attended. The central theme was "Pure religion," or religion applied to everyday life.

One new feature was a parade by the children on Children's Day. The children carried various banners which they themselves had made, directing attention to such questions as "Kindness to animals," "Service," "Better homes," "Soldiers of the Cross," and "Gathering the children into the fold."

The attendants were ministered to by the following classes of workers: Patriarch, apostle, nurse, kindergartner, recreational leaders, stake officers, departmental heads, besides others experienced in mechanics and in the culinary arts.

Yours in the work,

J. A. KOEHLER.

Southwestern Kansas

WINFIELD, KANSAS, August 30.—Our reunion began Friday, July 18, with very small attendance, as the weather was rainy. The prospect was certainly discouraging to those in charge. But by Sunday people began to come in, also the cash which was very much needed to make the reunion a success, so things went off in good shape, and the Saints had many spiritual meetings.

This is the second reunion held at this place, and it was better attended by outsiders of the town than was last year. The Saints are anxious to get the gospel before the people, but we cannot yet tell how much good was done by the reunion.

Those of the ministry in attendance were Charles E. Harpe, missionary for this district; Patriarch Richard Bullard, of Independence; Thomas S. Williams, of Wichita, district president; W. H. Dexter, of Lamoni; and on Thursday Apostle F. Henry Edwards arrived. The closing night Apostle T. W. Williams stopped on his way home and delivered a fine sermon.

Prayer meetings were held each morning, which were uplifting and encouraging to the Saints. The talks and sermons were of a high order and gave the Saints some new thoughts, encouraging them to go on with the tasks set before them. The last Sunday morning the Saints were requested to come fasting to the prayer service. Four were spoken to by the Spirit through Patriarch Richard Bullard. It was a wonderful meeting. The prayer meetings were all good and several admonitions were given.

A program was given Wednesday by the children and young people. The children gave the play, "Rays from the cross," by Elsie Barraclough.

Meals were served in the dining hall in the park where the reunion was held. It is a very beautiful park, belonging to the city, so all it cost was $2.50 a night for lights in the tabernacle.

Reunion closed July 27, but it was decided to have another reunion next summer, the time and place to be decided by the reunion committee. The Saints are all hoping it will be here.

MRS. TESSIE FARMER.

Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana

The fifth annual reunion of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District closed Sunday evening, August 31, after a most successful session of ten days. The camp was situated in a grove just a few rods from Indian Lake, Vicksburg, Michigan.

District conference was held the first Saturday, when the business of the district was taken care of. Elder E. K. Evans was sustained as district president.

Prayer meetings, which were in charge of Patriarch James Davis, were indeed an inspiration to all. Although God did not speak audibly, his presence and Spirit were felt to a great degree. Several young people's prayer services were held at six in the morning, and on Sunday morning the young people met in prayer to prepare for the meeting to follow. The general meeting was indeed a spiritual feast and lasted two hours and a half without one dull moment. Many of the testimonies and prayers were on the redemption of Zion.

We had with us Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, who conducted class work each morning at eight o'clock. This was one of the greatest treats of the reunion. Their teaching was on social work, and each one present went home with a broader knowledge of what the church has before it. It was with regret that we saw them leave. The young people gave them a small token of their appreciation.

Bishop F. B. Blair was with us several days and preached several sermons which were greatly appreciated. Apostle J. A. Gillen arrived on Monday, remaining the rest of the reunion. He preached a number of sermons in his convincing way, which was a feast to his hearers. Elders E. K. Evans and F. F. Wipper were in attendance the whole time and occupied in their pleasing way.

The afternoons were given to recreation, with volley ball and playground ball each day. Many took advantage of the excellent bathing privileges provided at Indian Lake. Some entertainment was provided each evening, sometimes bonfires and wiener roasts, while at other times we met in the tabernacle and had games, after which refreshments were served. Saturday evening the cantata "Esther" was given, which was indeed a success. Much of the success was due to the untiring efforts of the district chorister, Sister Louise Evans, of Grand Rapids.

There were about forty-five tents on the ground, and although some did their own cooking, most of the visitors were provided for at the cafeteria, which was ably conducted by Brother F. M. Backus, of Lansing.

Since last reunion a new tabernacle tent thirty by fifty feet has been erected, which made it much more convenient. We look for a larger and better reunion next year.

MYRTLE PERRY.

God would have us pray and meditate, but he also would have us arise and sanctify the fruits of our meditation by rendering service to him through our neighbor.

The spirituality of a branch is a criterion of the activity of the priesthood. What is the story the condition of your branch is telling about your activity?

DO WE FOLLOW CHRIST OR MAN?

The Apostle Peter has very clearly set forth the relation of Jesus Christ to the church. He says:

Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.—Acts 4: 10-12.

Let nothing be done through strife or vain-glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Jesus Christ. Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.—Philippians 2: 3-11.

For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named—Ephesians 3: 14, 15.

Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people.—Isaiah 55: 4.

For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.—1 Corinthians 3: 11.

And the Book of Mormon places Jesus Christ in his rightful place:

There is no other name given, whereby salvation cometh; therefore, I would that ye should take upon you the name of Christ, . . . And it shall come to pass that whosoever doeth this, shall be found at the right hand of God, for he shall know the name by which he is called.—Mosiah 3: 11, 12.

And we talk of Christ, we rejoice in Christ, we preach of Christ, we prophesy of Christ.—2 Nephi 11: 48.

All things must be done in the name of Christ, whatsoever you do in the spirit.—Doctrine and Covenants 46: 9.

There arose a contention in the days of the apostles. Paul refers to it thus:

Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ. Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul? . . . For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are: That no flesh should glory in his presence. But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption. That, according as it is written,

Publicity Value of Radio

The Appropriations Committee, composed of two of the First Presidency, two of the Quorum of Twelve, and the Order of Bishops, at its June meeting gave a whole-hearted demonstration of its faith in the publicity value of radio. In recognition of this new method of communication and evidently judging it to be of more value than the old tested and tried forms of advertising, they to all intents and purposes abolished the Publicity Department and transferred its appropriation to the newly created bureau of radio.

In addition to an outright appropriation of $6,000 from general church funds for operating expenses, the radio workers were asked to solicit the membership for $10,000; this additional amount to be used in installing a new station. This action speaks louder than words in appreciation of the new method.

The campaign is now under way, and I have been asked to say this word about the publicity value of radio. No doubt others have a wider vision and are better qualified to speak on this than am I, but I am glad to bear witness as best I can.

Last year I handled the follow-up on the radio work. We issued programs twice a month and repeatedly invited the listeners to write in. We made a card of the name and address of everyone responding and thereafter sent them programs regularly. Letters and cards were received from all parts of the United States and Canada, and nearly two thousand names were put in card files.

An enlarged and more powerful station will unquestionably reach a wider circle of people. The name of our faith will be carried into the homes of thousands who otherwise would likely never know of us or our message. From an advertising point of view it is certain that our name and fame will be spread abroad as never before.

The actual and constructive good of the radio will depend, of course, largely on the program and message we have to offer. Of entertainment the air is now full to overflowing; of lectures there are many, learned and otherwise. That there is room for the gospel of Jesus Christ, there is no doubt, but that message must be interestingly and convincingly told. Above all else there must be a recognition on our part that there is no such thing as sectarian truth, that virtue and righteousness are not ours alone but belong and are found in all the world. For the radio audience is a cosmopolitan one and not greatly interested in creeds and dogma. If we can apply true principles to the healing of the world's ills, then our message will be received and gladly.

Once interest is awakened by the radio, we must have a careful follow-up system. The printed programs can carry our story into many homes, and literature can be used to supplement the wireless message. This is a new age, with new methods, and every avenue of publicity can well be tested out. Radio promises fine returns in favorable advertising.

ARTHUR E. MCKIM.

Have You Contributed Toward the Radio?

The first week of the radio drive for funds to erect a powerful coast to coast church broadcasting station has shown good results. Branch officers throughout the church who were instructed to receive the contributions of their congregations have not yet, of course, had time to make reports. But many contributions from isolated Saints, as well as from nonmembers who regularly listen to KFIX, have been received.

The amount to be raised is not large enough to work a hardship on anyone if all will give according to their ability. But to build the new station as it should be built requires the cooperation of all. No one should harbor the thought, "I am in favor of the radio, but there will be plenty given to erect the new station without my help."

This is an important opportunity to furnish a means of sending the gospel message to more people than we have ever reached before, and at a comparatively low cost. The project has the unified support of church officials who are in position to fully recognize its importance.

The question has been asked several times, "If you get more than the $10,000 you have asked for, what will you do with it?" Ten thousand dollars is absolutely the minimum amount that can be considered to build and erect such a station. More is really needed. The leading manufacturer of complete broadcasting equipment charges about $50,000 for their 1000-watt broadcasting apparatus alone. We must erect two towers, construct a radio building, and furnish a new studio, besides installing the broadcasting equipment.

Work on the new station will begin just as soon as the funds are in sight. It is desired to begin operation of the 1000-watt equipment December first. To make this possible all should give now.

Do not wait longer to be called on for contributions. Doing so may delay the erection of the new station, and delay is a serious matter at this time of the year, because winter is the season during which by far the greatest number of people can be reached by radio. If it is impossible for you to give your contribution to a branch solicitor, Bishop's agent, or bishop immediately, send it to Radio KFIX Independence, Missouri. All mail donations will be promptly receipted.

Homes Wanted for Four Children

There are in the hands of the Social Service Bureau four children, now temporarily located, for which the bureau desires to find a permanent home.

One of these is a twelve-year-old boy of rather exceptional mentality. He should find a good home with people who could give him educational advantages.

There is also a thirteen-year-old girl who is bright, and should have at least a high school education.

Then there are an eight-year-old girl and a two-week-old baby boy for adoption.

Any who can give homes for one of these children should address the Social Service Bureau, Room 20, Battery Building, Independence, Missouri.

World's Christian University

Mr. E. Peterson, of Miami, Florida, recently placed on the editor's desk a sixteen-page pamphlet which is an epitome of the World's Christian University and its subsidiary organization, The World's Christian University Mission, the product of his mind as he has read from the Word of the Lord.

Mr. Peterson's theory is that the world is in search of just what the Christian system offers, but that an attitude of aloofness will be maintained until the theories of Christianity are properly demonstrated, as he says, "by trial in the laboratory."

The pamphlet is interesting, from cover to cover, and will be mailed to any address for twenty-five cents. If interest is discovered, Mr. Peterson expects to establish the university, which he describes as a "vast laboratory to test out the ethics of Christianity in everyday life, to discover, if possible, the system which will produce the brotherhood of man."

A remarkable feature of his scheme is the liberal position he takes that no theory should be condemned and none accepted as the desideratum until it is tried out by modern methods and under friendly and supporting conditions. The author offers attention to all inquirers.

Graceland College Opened September 8

The opening of the year 1924-1925 at Graceland College seems to have been a delightful and promising affair. The weather was ideal, the community was in full sympathy, a splendid program was rendered. Students were welcomed by the community, if possible more warmly than is usual, and organization went on smoothly and successfully until by Tuesday evening 271 had been registered. It is believed attendance will exceed the 300 mark.

The address at the opening was delivered by a former student, Brother Lee E. Travis, and was favorably received. His subject was, "The other circle of human endeavor," and was a plea to the effect that all should "get the searching habit," so that new channels and items of knowledge might be opened up and appear—that new truths might be discovered.

The necessity for more room is pressing upon the college people, and the new convention hall will be welcomed. Time was, and that only a few years since, when the little chapel could not be filled, but now the chapel will not give standing room for any special occasion. The HERALD is glad to see the growth which is apparent, and rejoices with the educational forces of the church in the prospect of an institution which shall wield a strong and wholesome influence for advancement wherever it makes a contact.

Saints' Home Farm Cattle at the Fairs

For several years the Saints' Home Farms at Lamoni have been building up a herd of Holstein-Friesian cattle for dairy purposes, and this year they have been quite successful in showing these cattle at the fairs of northern Missouri and southern Iowa.

The Harrison County Fair Association at Bethany, Missouri, conducts a large and successful exhibition each year, and at the 1924 show there were more than one hundred dairy cattle in the show ring. Out of nine first premiums offered in classes where the Home Farm could compete, six were won by their animals. Of the two grand champion prizes offered, one was carried away by the Home Farm young herd bull, Sir Walker DeKol Homestead.

We have not heard just what awards have been given in the Decatur County exhibition at Leon, Iowa, but our men had high hopes of a like success there. Surely this should be regarded as good news to the church.

Radio Drive Comments

The first church Radio Week has passed into history. Throughout the country radio was the special subject of prayer meetings, sermons, and giving. Many encouraging letters, criticisms, and suggestions have been received by the radio department. The drive for the new 1000-watt broadcasting station was given an excellent start. A considerable number of contributions have come from nonmembers, as well as from scattered members.

Following are some of the comments accompanying contributions received by mail. The spirit of unselfishness is manifested in all these letters, as demonstrated by the rare mention of good the radio will bring to themselves and the unanimous reference to the benefits of telling others of the true gospel.

"I am sending a check as contribution to the new radio station. It is small, but the best my wife and I can do at this time. Radio is the only means I have of hearing a Latter Day Saint sermon, as the hand of affliction has rested heavily upon me so that I have been bedfast for over a year. . . . We want you to know how thankful we are that the church has and is availing itself of the opportunity of putting to a good use the wonderful invention, radio. We want to help warn our neighbors, and believe it can best be done by radio.—Brother and Sister S. D. Hastings, Kansas City, Missouri.

"I am at the state sanitarium taking treatment. . . . I am not earning anything, hence I cannot be as liberal as I should like, but I inclose herewith . . . as a little help."—Edward W. Weaver, Howell, Michigan.

"No better way has as yet been devised to get the gospel before the multitude. I trust that you will succeed in putting in a giant station. We inclose . . ."—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ferguson, San Antonio, Texas.

"My wife and myself have enjoyed not only your musical numbers, but the talks and sermons given over the radio. We inclose check for ten dollars to assist in furthering the spread of the gospel. We are glad of this opportunity to help along the good work. If you will remind me of my promise, will send you another ten dollars in ninety days. We wish you complete success in your new venture."—Mr. and Mrs. J. Cairns, 2736 Tracy, Kansas City, Missouri.

God's Watchcare

It is quite human when any controversy exists upon important church matters that our humanity permits the divine aspects of the Lord's work to become eclipsed, and when an eclipse occurs darkness ensues and we are in danger of stumbling or of going in by and forbidden paths. But when we can recognize that an eclipse is but a natural phenomenon that is only temporary and that behind the obstruction the sun still shines, then we may remember the counsel, "Stand still and see the salvation of God."

From time to time there has come to my ears the statements of some who have felt to withhold their tithes until matters were adjusted in keeping with their notion. This, to our mind, is a mistake. We cannot hope to invite the Spirit of God or the blessings of God by refusing to do the thing that he has required of us in his law. One tenth of our increase belongs to God. It is our privilege to recognize this ownership and from time to time turn over to the Lord's storehouse the portion that belongs to him.

We are just in receipt of a letter from a sister, touching upon the withholding of tithes. She says:

I had just about made up my mind to stop paying tithing until the present controversy was over, but I was warned in a dream to go on, as this is the Lord's work. I shall, therefore, continue as long as I am able.

My prayer is that God's people may be encouraged to do everything in their power to advance the cause of Christ.

Fraternally yours,

BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE.

request for radio fund. I feel it is a wonderful step forward and trust the church will respond to this most important call."—Mrs. G. E. Hemstock, Bangor, Wisconsin.

"Inclosed please find five dollars to be applied on the new radio. I feel this will be a glorious way to send the gospel the world around. I am isolated and know what it is to be denied the joy of hearing the restored gospel. I will soon be seventy years old and am alone in life with only a very small income, but am glad to send what I can to help spread the glad tidings. . . . Praying this may be a great success, I am a sister in the true church."—Mrs. Mary Potts, Central City, Nebraska.

"Inclosed fine one dollar on the new 1000-watt radio, from an aged sister. May God bless his work and people is my prayer."—(No name or address given.)

"Find inclosed check for ten dollars to apply on the new 1000-watt radio. Wish I could send one dollar for each watt. 'Send the sound the earth around' that 'every ear shall hear.'"—Mrs. G. R. Scruggs, Hot Springs National Park, Arkansas.

The Righteousness of the Saints

BY AUDENTIA ANDERSON

During the first week of the conference of 1919, I, with others, was greatly disturbed over what seemed to be an alarming estrangement between the President of the church and the men of the leading quorums. Especially was I distressed over the proffered resignation of the President. This perturbation was the greater because I sensed, in a peculiarly marked degree, the heritage of service which is my brother's, and I could not help but share, to a certain extent, in the responsibility and commission which has been placed by God upon the family of which I am a member.

Thus during that trying week, I found sleep almost a stranger to my eyelids, and only in prayer could a degree of comfort or reassurance be found. The following experience which came to me in the "wee sma' hours" of an almost sleepless night is one which had a deeply significant meaning to me at the time, and one which has, several times since then, been renewed in power and spiritual impress for me. I am impelled by the inner influences which move me, to present it through these columns to the members throughout the church, committing it to their thoughtful consideration, for whatever good there may be in it.

Lying awake, contemplating the situation which was then before the church and the conference, I suddenly found myself, with some six or eight other women, seated in a close semicircle, each one bending, with intense and earnest application, over a large garment which was spread upon our knees. We were plying needle and thread, embroidering in graceful design and color, upon the beautiful white fabric, each doing a portion, and working, with almost feverish haste, side by side.

All at once, in one of the sudden transitions familiar to our semiwaking consciousness, the garment, instead of being upon our laps, seemed to be upon a human form, and I found myself, with other sisters, still working busily and hurriedly upon the embroidery about the hem. Wonderingly, I lifted my eyes upward, until my gaze reached the face of the individual who wore the garment. I wish I might convey to my readers the thrill and the soul-comfort which attended my recognition of the face as that of my brother, Frederick M. Smith!

With the recognition came a swift uplift and illumination of mind, interpreting what I saw and felt. He, our President, his face aglow with eager welcome and love, represented the body of the church of Christ on earth; the shimmering cloak of purest white satin resting upon his shoulders, and upon which we sisters were so busily working, represented the "robe of righteousness" which the church, the Lamb's bride, must wear before it is fit to receive the returning Christ; and the reason for our haste and intense application was that the cry had gone forth, "Lo! the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him!" The bride must be made ready, and her beautiful wedding garment fitly adorned to meet her Lord; and her handmaidens were joyfully united in putting in the last lovely stitches, to make that robe entirely worthy!

At that time I had not been called into the active labors which I was later privileged to perform in the interests of the Department of Women. When the call did come to that work, the experience I have just related was one of the factors which caused me to accept the heavy burdens assumed, and its memory helped me wonderfully in "carrying on" during the two years I ministered in that capacity. And to-day the same glorious message is burning in my soul with a new meaning, constraining me to call upon the members of the church, everywhere, to remember how near is the coming of the Savior, and how vitally necessary it is that his bride shall be adorned for his coming.

Concern yourselves, I pray you, not with vain controversies, with strivings for place or power, with contentions over precedence, precedent, preference, or position, but most earnestly with the "perfecting of the Saints" in all righteousness. The robe which the Saints must wear—the wedding garment—must be pure, spotless, without a flaw, and as sweet and fair as it can be made, and the responsibility for this preparation and condition rests equally upon every individual in the church! If even one member is black at heart, is filled with envy, mistrust, suspicion, the beauty of the whole garment is ruined, and the angels must weep over our shortcomings!

In the same heart with the Holy Spirit of Christ can exist no evil thing. Perfect love casteth out suspicion and fault-finding; in the glory and majesty of its divine nature, it excuses human mistakes, while seeking in humility to help the erring to overcome. Love is of God, and he who loves most is most like God. The tongue, though a small member, is capable of blasting or blessing, of expressing love and confidence, or of broadcasting hate and suspicion. Shall we not turn the glass of our critical examination inward, instead of outward, and try to magnify, if possible, to our own eyesight, our own faults and shortcomings, instead of being so concerned over those of our fellow men?

Personal characteristics have little to do with great commissions. Lincoln was ungainly in appearance, and was criticized because he had few friends, confided in few men, and counseled with few when he was convinced which course was the right one for him to pursue. He was an instrument in God's hand for the accomplishment of certain mighty purposes. So long as he remained true to the ideals which led to that accomplishment, he was the Lord's anointed. Have we no lesson here? A rough exterior often covers a heart of gold. The very heaviness of the load often represses native tendencies to joy. Hands that should be upheld in battle against a common foe have sometimes had to be employed in defense against attacks from one's own. The boat whose oarsmen are engaged in fighting one another, can make but little progress upstream. Did not even the Apostle Paul warn: "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another"?

Nay; let us rather read again the 13th chapter of 1 Corinthians and try to apply it to our individual lives and attitudes, and thus help to correct the present strained and deplorable condition among the "Saints of God." If love be not the mainspring of our lives, if it does not operate in our dealings one with another, are we not "as sounding brass," shouting to a comfortless world, "Lo! See! Hear! We have the very bread of life!" and when they come to eat and drink with us, they find but stones and bitter waters upon our common board? Love suffers long, and is kind; envieth not; vaunteth not itself; is not puffed up . . . seeketh not her own; is not easily provoked; thinketh no evil!

But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law. . . . If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. Let us not be desirous of vainglory, provoking one another, envying one another. Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted. Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ!

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, September 8.

"Between the conception of Deity implied in the teachings of Jesus and the conception as it appears in 'God save the King' the distance is immense; and few theologians I imagine would be so hardy or so patriotic as to affirm that the latter conception is nearer to the Divine Reality . . . . Any proof of the existence of 'the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ' would certainly prove the nonexistence of the being adumbrated in 'God save the King'; and vice versa."—Religious Perplexities, p. 55.

Democracy in Prayer

BY JOHN W. RUSHTON

It may easily be that "great souls" reveal their depths of meaning in prayer more so than in the books they write or the lectures they may speak. Under the pressure of an inward sense of helplessness and dependency on God, there is expressed the soul's inner and essential being. Prayer is always introspective and naturally turns one in upon his own selfhood. He is concerned more with what he actually feels and needs than with appearances and impressions made for effect upon others. Truly prayer primarily means, "I lift up my soul to Thee."

The following prayer, taken from a number of such prepared by the late Doctor Walter Rauschenbusch, appeals because of the wide sympathy and all inclusive sweep which characterizes it. In these days, when ministers seem so easily deflected from the true function of shepherding and yield too readily to alluring invitations to personal ends leading them into entanglements more or less dishonoring to the cause of redemption, it may be good for us to consider the fine spirit and sentiment of these words.

When the Master had in his own most wonderful way uncovered some wonderful vista of spiritual meaning to his disciples, and under the solemnity of the divine splendor they said, "Lord, teach us to pray," they found, as some of us have since experienced, that the simplicity of prayer cannot altogether make us indifferent to the sublimities which prevailing prayer involves. Perhaps one of the most wonderful conjunctions of the Bible is found in that classic description of the "Suffering Servant of Jehovah" of which Isaiah speaks in the well-known 53d chapter of his prophecies; "He bear the sin of many and made intercession." It is only when we feel the burden of another's sorrow, and guilt, and limitation that we can offer intercessory prayer. Too frequently our prayers are stilted, narrow, and unavailing because we do not get from under the shadow of the perpendicular pronoun and its cor-relatives. Prayer, like all other values, must be democratized before it can be made "available."

O Jesus, we ministers bow before thee to confess the common sins of our calling. Thou knowest all things; thou knowest that we love thee and that our hearts' desire is to serve thee in faithfulness; and yet, like Peter, we have so often failed thee in the hour of thy need. If ever we have loved our own leadership and power when we sought to lead our people to thee, we pray thee to forgive. If we have been engrossed in narrow duties and little questions, when the vast needs of humanity called aloud for prophetic vision and apostolic sympathy, we pray thee to forgive. If in our loyalty to the church of the past we have distrusted thy living voice and have suffered thee to pass from our door unheard, we pray thee to forgive. If ever we have been more concerned for the strong and the rich than for the shepherdless throngs of the people for whom thy soul grieved, we pray thee to forgive.

O Master, amidst our failures we cast ourselves upon thee in humility and contrition. We need new light and a new message. We need the ancient spirit of prophecy and the leaping fire and joy of a new conviction, and thou alone canst give it. Inspire the ministry of thy church with dauntless courage to face the vast needs of the future. Free us from all entanglements that have hushed our voice and bound our action. Grant us grace to look upon the veiled sins of the rich and the coarse vices of the poor through thine eyes. Give us thine inflexible sternness against sin, and thine inexhaustible compassion for the frailty and tragedy of those who do the sin. Make us faithful shepherds of thy flock, true seers of God, and true followers of Jesus. Amen.

What Is the Matter With the Body of Christ?

BY FLOYD ROCKWELL

The writer does not hope to answer in full the above question, but rather to focus attention upon what (from our viewpoint) is the cause of the present disease, hoping that should our diagnosis be correct a remedy may be speedily administered and the body made whole.

Proceeding with our diagnosis, our first question is, Is the body sick? It is certainly apparent to all that our answer must be affirmative. Our next consideration is the seriousness of the affection. To us it is apparent that the body is very sick; but we do not believe unto death, provided the proper remedy is applied.

Our next question is, What organ or organs are most affected? Again it is apparent to us that in the body of Christ, as in the human body, some organs are vital, and when affected cause the whole body to suffer. Our answer to question three is, That some of the vital organs are affected most, thus causing suffering throughout the whole body.

What, then, do we consider the vital organs of the body of Christ? We base our diagnosis upon the best authority known to this branch of science, viz, the word of God. Turning to our authority we find in Ephesians 4: 11-14 and 1 Corinthians 12, that God set in the body certain organs (officers) whose duty it is to prevent the body from being tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, which we believe to be the very disease with which the body is affected. So our conclusion is that these organs (officers) are not functioning properly.

The edification and perfection of the body demands the coordinate working of every organ (officer), but it is evident that some exert less influence upon the body than others.

If our diagnosis be correct, the cause of our present sickness is an affection in our apostolic quorums, viz, First Presidency, Twelve, and Seventy. These quorums being most vital, it is evident that any affection in them must cause serious sickness. Also their recovery will remove most if not all of the affections in other parts of the body.

Our next consideration is the remedy, and if in offering the following suggestions it may seem to my superior officers to be presumptuous (and I am one of those who recognize superior officers both in heaven and on earth), I can only say that I do so in the spirit of charity and in the hope for peace and unity.

Our prescription, therefore, is, First heal the above mentioned quorums by a joint council. This council should be called prior to the convening of the next General Conference and should have sufficient time to canvass every question that is affecting them and come to a definite understanding upon all the issues. Second, after reaching a definite conclusion and working agreement between these quorums, call in the Presiding Bishopric and thoroughly canvass the temporal question and continue in session until an agreement, by the majority at least, is reached. Third, submit the results of the above council to the General Conference for approval.

The writer firmly believes that if this be done and the counsel of the Holy Spirit constantly sought in their deliberations, that the seat of the affection will be removed, and in a very short time the church will have recovered and every vestige of the disease will have disappeared. Then, and not until then, will the church cease to be tossed to and fro and carried about. As long as apostle is arrayed against apostle and prophet against prophet it is not strange if one should say, I am of Paul, and another, I am of Apollos, especially since both claim to be pointing to Christ.

But with these quorums united there is no longer need for any to be misled, for all will speak the same thing. Then with faith in God and confidence in each other, we will be able to go forward under the direction of God's Spirit and of those whom God hath set in the church for the work of perfecting the Saints, to the full accomplishment of his righteousness on earth.

Have I indulged in another phantasy? I hope not. That I may live to see all this accomplished is the earnest desire of my heart, and to this end I shall ever work and pray.

To Jesus first, then to your pulpit, to your Sunday school class, to your day's work. But to Jesus go first.—Central Christian Advocate.

Settling the Controversy

BY J. A. KOEHLER

If your watch had stopped running because the hairspring was broken, and if you should take your watch to one who understood the watchmaking business and ask him what the trouble was, what answer would he give you? Would he not say: "The hairspring in your watch is broken"? And if you should take that same watch with its broken hairspring to a dozen different men who understood the watchmaking business and make the same inquiry, would you not, in each and every case, receive the same reply: "The hairspring is broken"?

Suppose again that there were two or three fundamental defects in your watch, each of which must be corrected before the watch could be made to keep time, would not each and every one of a dozen men who knew the watchmaking business point to each and every one of these defects as the cause of your watch trouble? But if these twelve men, after having examined your watch carefully, should contradict one another in their opinions of the cause of your watch trouble, some contending that the cause was one thing and some another, what would you say of the understanding of these men in the field of watchmaking? Would you not be forced to the conclusion that this body of men needed to be instructed in the matter of watchmaking? Most certainly!

It is evident that our religious timepiece, the machinery of the church, is not in good working order, for it is not "keeping time"; some parts evidently are in conflict with other parts—they are out of adjustment. Now, brethren, what shall we say when men of the ministry, when our religious "watchmakers," when the men who are supposed to know the "government of God" business, examine the "works" and give to us contradictory opinions with regard to the cause of our trouble? What shall we say when some of these men tell us that one adjustment is needed, and others that quite a different adjustment is needed, the while each contradicting the other? What must we say? Are we not forced again to the conclusion that this body of "religious watchmakers" needs to be instructed in questions of divine government? How can we escape the conclusion?

It may be that some of the men who are parties to the controversy have a correct understanding, an adequate notion, of the cause of our difficulties; but, men, so long as others who do not know are to throw their votes into the balance in an attempt to settle the issue, it must be evident that we are on uncertain ground; and it is possible that we are on dangerous ground.

A Difficult Problem

The government of the church is a much more difficult task than the government of a watch. The machinery of the church is infinitely more complex than the mechanism of a watch. The action of the parts of the church is immeasurably harder to control than is the action in the parts of a watch, and for the reason that the direction in which the wheels of a watch must turn is positively determined by its structure; the relative speed with which each part must move is likewise fixed, and so on. But this is not true of the members or parts or organs of the church. Here action in the different parts is variable; we have an uncertain human element with which to reckon; and our calculations in the government of the church are frequently incorrect because of such variable factors.

Now a watch is a very ordinary affair. Most men carry watches. But how many of you know your watch? Oh, certainly, you can tell a watch from an alarm clock; but do you "know" your watch? I have carried the watch I now use for twenty years; but, men, I do not know my watch. When a watch gets out of order I cannot fix it; I cannot even tell what the trouble is; I do not know a watch. And so when my watch gets out of order I must take it to some one who has in his mind a mental image or picture of each and every part in my watch, of their relations each to the others, and of all the parts taken together and considered as a unit, or as a whole. One who has such a notion of a watch, "knows" a watch. Such a person, and only such a person, can positively be relied upon to tell us the exact cause of our watch trouble and to tell us the remedy and how to apply it. And there isn't enough wisdom in the heads of a dozen men who do not know a watch, even if they do pool their wisdom, to tell us with any degree of certainty what is the remedy for the trouble.

The Multitude of Counsel

Ten men with equal lifting power can lift ten times as much as any one man, because each man in such a case may be a unit of a common force. But each human mind must act in and of itself; it is not a determinate part of a common or public or aggregate mind, as each horse is of a team. Each of ten minds may know exactly as much as the other about a given thing, and yet the wisdom of the ten men together may fall short of even the average intelligence of the several individual members. Can ten men, each of whom knows a little about music, be said to have as a body ten times as much musical wisdom as any one of the ten? Certainly not. Let it be granted that each of ten men know a given amount about music, and each individually is capable of producing a harmony of a given grade; surely no one will contend that these ten men together can produce a harmony ten times as good as any one of them can produce by himself. Besides, the pooling of the judgment of ten human minds can give us at best, as a product, only "human" wisdom. We need more than that to solve the mysteries of the kingdom of God.

The circumstances of each individual's life determine his capacity or ability to judge. It is no reflection upon a man's "intelligence" to say that he does not know his own watch; his talents and his endeavors may lie in an entirely different field. God worked a miracle to uncover to even the "apostolic quorum" (the best minds in the primitive church) the meaning of such simple language as "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." There are many influences at work in the hearts and in the minds of men that leave them incapable of directing the affairs of the kingdom of God. And that is one reason why the task of shaping the course of the church has not been left to men; but God directs in "his" kingdom by revelation.

At the conference of 1922, one of the most intellectual and devoted members of the Far West Stake turned to another member, as a vote was about to be taken, and said: "I do not know how to vote on this question." It was one of the most vital questions of the conference; and yet the methods that were then employed in an attempt to settle that question made it necessary for this delegate, in common with all other delegates, to help determine the affairs of the government of God. Think of it—the course of the church of Jesus Christ being determined by votes that were cast in the dark. Brethren, is that good sense? to ask men who are not in a position to know to be parties to the inventing of rules for the government of a church that claims to be under the direction of a living God!

It is good for one to have some idea of his limitations, and we thank God for men who know enough to know that they do not know enough to order the affairs of the government of God.

"Divine Government"

The most primitive and the most pervasive doctrine of Latter Day Saintism is that God is and God talks to men now. At a time when men had been counseling with their fellows in vain endeavors to reestablish the government of God among men, the silence of the heavens was suddenly broken, and the voice of God was heard revealing "the mysteries of the kingdom" and declaring that one of the purposes of this new revelation was "that men should not counsel his fellow men" (in the determination of the affairs of the kingdom of God), but that, having the revelation of his will through his chosen servants, "every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world." And from that day to this, this body of people has stood (theoretically at least) upon the proposition that "the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." And we have preached to others the doctrine of church government by "divine" direction and not by the wisdom of men.

"If Any of You Lack Wisdom"

"Let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally." Joseph Smith proved that that promise is true. Hundreds of others have proved that that promise is true. It is as true for Latter Day Saints, individually and collectively, as it is for any other person or people. It was the common practice in the days of our "fathers" to ask of God when wisdom was needed in the conduct of the affairs of the church.

At the request of Martin Harris, Joseph Smith inquired of the Lord and learned his duty towards the work that God was beginning. Again, Joseph Smith inquired of the Lord respecting the question of baptism for the remission of sins, and received the answer. Again, Joseph Smith asked of God concerning the duty of Oliver Cowdery, and of Hyrum Smith, and of Joseph Knight, and of others, and in each instance God answered as he said he would. Again, Joseph Smith asked God for direction in the management of the French farm, and it was given him. And over and over again, the faith of our fathers was that "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God." And they asked and God heard; and he answered their cry.

Is this a time when we lack wisdom? Consider first of all the mental caliber of the men who are parties to the present controversy. Consider their official standing. Consider next the diverse opinions of the parties to the controversy. Some say one thing is wrong with our timepiece; this is the way to fix it. Others say another thing is wrong; this is the way to fix it. And each challenges the statement of the other.

Are the parties to the controversy such consummate imbeciles that they cannot understand the simple needs of the church? No; it is quite evident that we are face to face with a problem, to solve which requires more than the pooling of the wisdom of many men. Our claims to the prophetic office and to "divine" government make it inconsistent for Latter Day Saints to do anything short of asking "of God, who giveth to all men liberally."

A Fundamental Question

What is the nature of our difficulty? What kind of problems confront us? It is evident that there are differences of opinion on principles of government; it is a dispute over the rights and powers and purposes of leading quorums; questions of organic law are to be answered.

So far as we know, there are no moral issues. There is no question of the trustworthiness of either individuals or quorums. If there were questions of personal worthiness, of individual fitness for office, of moral conduct, surely the judicial or executive quorums having competent jurisdiction would have been called into action; surely no one who is disposed to play fair would attempt to get a verdict against an individual under the pretense of settling a principle. But the very fact that organic law is called in question, the very fact that the relations of quorums one to the other need to be more clearly defined, is the very fact that makes it inconsistent for a people who believe that it is the business of almighty God to "order" the affairs of his government to invite the delegates to General Conference to initiate legislation looking to the settlement of the controversy.

The Supreme Court of the Church

Congress may enact laws, but Congress may not pass upon the constitutionality of the laws it enacts. With a single exception Congress is a legislative body; it is not judicial. Only the Supreme Court of the United States may pass upon the constitutionality of the enactments of Congress. Now, while our church government is not patterned after any particular government, and while it does not follow that because certain principles of government are in force in our Nation, therefore they should be in force in the government of the church, it is nevertheless true that some facts of our United States Government help us to understand some facts of the government of the church.

It does seem to us that in all governments involving many activities of a large number of people over a wide territory, that there must be some representative body or quorum or court having power to make a final decision in controversies over the affairs of government. We believe that such powers have been vested by the organic law of the church in the General High Council which, in some of its powers, corresponds to the Supreme Court of the United States. Much has been said in this controversy about the "Reorganization." It is fair to assume that the pattern given originally for the conduct of the affairs of this church is quite as safe a guide for present conduct as any subsequent attempt to reorganize on the original basis or according to the original pattern.

The careful student of "early" church history should have no difficulty in tracing the genesis and ascertaining some of the rights, powers, or purposes of the Standing or General High Council of the church. It is evident from what is written that the man whom God called to "lay the foundation" of the church and "to build it up into the most holy faith" directed no small part of his thought and energy to getting this council into proper working order. And when that prophet through whom God gave the pattern for the building up of the church in these latter days had succeeded in his purpose, he expressed in these words a feeling of unusual satisfaction:

If I should now be taken away, I had accomplished the great work the ord had laid upon me, and that which I desired of the Lord; and that I had done my duty in organizing the High Council through which Council the will of the Lord might be known on all important occasions in the building up of Zion and establishing truth in the earth.—Church History, vol. 1, page 503.

This High Council was the most important council in the history of the "early" church. It was the highest council in controversies over spiritual matters. The most important business of the church was done by the High Council. Difficulties respecting doctrine or principle were settled by the High Council. The High Council administered in temporalities; it managed the purchase and disposal of lands; it fixed compensation for church employees; it directed the building of the temple in Kirtland; it performed both judicial and administrative functions.

In volume 1, page 566, Church History, it is said by Joseph Smith that "the High Council has been expressly organized to administer in all her spiritual affairs." To "administer" means to have the charge or direction; to perform officially executive duties; to regulate; to apply or superintend the application of." And those who look farther back than the "Reorganization" see in the High Council a body which, if permitted to function as ordained of God through the Prophet Joseph Smith, would relieve the church of some vexatious situations.

The Court of Last Resort

In Doctrine and Covenants 104:35, it is provided that

The most important business of the church [and there are many kinds of business to be done by the church], and the most difficult cases of the church, inasmuch as there is not satisfaction upon the decision of the bishop, . . . shall be handed over and carried up unto the council of the church" (the high council). And this high council "shall have power to decide upon testimony according to the laws of the church. And after this decision it shall be had in remembrance no more before the Lord; for this is the highest council of the church of God, and a final decision upon controversies, in spiritual matters.

First, "the most important business"; second, "the most difficult cases," are to be decided by the High Council of the church. Certainly our controversy is about spiritual matters—it is a question of how the government of God should be conducted. We wonder why it is proposed to settle this matter by vote of General Conference, in the face of such explicit laws.

Again (Doctrine and Covenants 99:10):

In cases of difficulty respecting doctrine, or principle (if there is not a sufficiency written to make the case clear to the minds of the council), the president may inquire and obtain the mind of the Lord by revelation.

We have a controversy over governmental doctrines. In the face of the claims of Latter Day Saintism, in the face of the original pattern given to the church; in the face of the laws and instructions given concerning the settlement of difficulties respecting "doctrine or principle" by the high council, how can we in reason justify the present attempt to settle the present issue by a vote of the delegates to General Conference?

Why the High Council Should Decide

The controversy before the church should be sent to the High Council for decision for the following reasons:

First: That is God's appointed way; it is a constitutional provision.

Second: The experience of the church while it honored the law of God by permitting this council to do the work that it is intended it should do is grounds for believing that through this council the church may be saved from present embarrassing situations.

Third: The government of God is from above. The laws of the church of Jesus Christ are originated not by man but by God. And to interpret a law is equivalent to making a law. The business of interpreting the laws for the church should be left to those upon whom God has bestowed the "keys of the mysteries of the kingdom." "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them."

Fourth: The conditions of debate in General Conference make a calm, deliberate, and rational judgment on perplexing questions for the average person (if not for all) a remote possibility. If my judgment of the issues before the church had to be formed in the heat of a conference debate, it would be little more than a guess. I am not willing to play with "my Father's business" in that way.

Fifth: The manner in which good men on both sides of the controversy have endeared themselves to the hearts of many is calculated to prejudice the mind and to influence the vote.

Sixth: The High Council does not specialize in any department of church work; it is a body having the general oversight of the whole church, and therefore it is not so subject to bias from limited responsibility and local viewpoints.

Seventh: The High Council is made up of men chosen because of their gifts and callings; that is, their fitness to discharge duties of high councilors.

Eighth: It is a comparatively small body which deliberates under conditions that make possible a careful survey of the facts and a calm and dispassionate judgment.

Ninth: It is not hurried in its work by calls to other duties in other fields. It may therefore reassemble from time to time and as long and as often as may be necessary in order to arrive at a safe conclusion.

Tenth: The work of the High Council over a long period familiarizes the members with the problems and the work of the church in a general way, and this with the gifts of God and the spirit of their offices makes the High Council the logical body to which to send important general issues of the church for settlement. God has promised to give them the answer to the problem when the matter is not clear to their minds. General Conference has enough work to do; but it is not to do the work of the executive and judicial councils of the church.

Government by XYZ & Co.

Government means "direction and control." If we are to be the government of God, we must continue to leave the direction of the affairs of this church in the hands of God, who has promised to direct through his chosen channels. To come together at next General Conference, as is proposed, and to formulate organic law (for that will be the effect of the contemplated action) is to have a government by "XYZ & Co.," but it is not the way to have a government by God. We cannot afford to turn our General Conference into a "Council of Nice" or of "Constantinople" or of "Rheims" or of "Paris." That mode of government was supposed to have been abolished once and for all, so far as Latter Day Saints are concerned, when God raised up prophets through whom to express his will to the people.

We should be able to keep ourselves in the spirit of the gospel so as to be able to perceive or judge the truth when it is revealed. That is quite a different thing from finding out God by our wisdom. If we are willing to hear, God is willing to speak. That is the testimony of men of God in all ages. The revealed will of God is the rock upon which the church of Christ is builded. Why should we in the heat of debate and in our anxiety to try to settle controversies, attempt to decide vital issues in a General Conference, that God has ordained should be settled by organs or quorums having competent jurisdiction?

"If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God" is

NEWS AND LETTERS

Series of Meetings at Oelwein

OELWEIN, IOWA, August 25.—Elder Houghton, of Madison, Wisconsin, has been holding meetings here the past two weeks, which have been both interesting and instructive, as well as inspiring. The Saints did well, considering the rainy weather; so also did some nonmembers, but those having automobiles did not pay much attention to the rains.

Elder Houghton preached some sermons that ought to touch the hearts of those that heard, unless they had hearts of stone. Several nonmembers attended the meetings and seemed quite interested, three of whom were baptized Sunday afternoon. They were Sister Irving Wiston, Sister Vivian Sims, and Sister McCuster.

This series of meetings closed last night by confirming those who were baptized. The confirmations were very good. May the blessing of God and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with them, is my prayer.

The Saints here have bought the Primitive Baptist Church on Fourth Avenue between Third and Fourth Streets, near the city pumping plant, where they held meetings shortly after the branch was moved from Oren Center to Oelwein. I am so glad we have a place of our own where we can worship God without draining our pocketbooks every time we have a meeting. Of course we have to make our payments, but we do not mind that when we realize that the building will be ours when we get it paid for.

We have Religio Friday nights, with some nonmembers in attendance occasionally.

Activities at Cherokee During Vacation Season

CHEROKEE, IOWA, August 27.—The past month has been an "off" month for branch work, the vacation fever getting such a strong hold on everyone that it has been hard to get a fair attendance at services. However, we are still striving to keep the work moving.

Sacramental services were fairly well attended, and the Spirit was manifest to a marked degree.

Brother W. W. Leonard, priest, was surprised on August 14 when about thirty-five of the Saints gathered at his home good doctrine. It is as good for Latter Day Saints as it is for anyone else. It is evident that we lack wisdom. We need the wisdom of God. Why come together and vote under conditions that at best may result only in a compromise? If we ask of God, we will receive the mind of God. If we deliberate and judge in our own wisdom alone, we will express only the mind of man. It does not pay. Let the matter go to the High Council, where the law of God says it belongs, and through which council he has designed to make his will "known on all important occasions." It will be time enough for General Conference to deliberate when through the properly constituted organs of the church the will of God is presented to the body for consideration and action.

to remind him it was his fifty-seventh birthday. A social time was enjoyed, after which the sisters served lunch. Brother Leonard was presented with some useful articles by Brother A. R. Crippen in behalf of the Saints. All departed for their homes wishing Brother Leonard many more birthdays and years of service in the Master's cause.

The Department of Recreation and Expression rendered a fine program to a small but appreciative audience Sunday evening, August 24. They now have their regular meetings every Thursday evening at the home of Brother Albert Haynes, who has charge of the young people's work.

Brother W. F. Landingham, who has been sorely afflicted the past two months, is now on the road to recovery after doctors told him they could not help him. Two special prayer services were held in his behalf, and after administration he received relief and is now rejoicing in the blessing received.

Our ministers are each one striving to do their duty to the best of their ability. Our president has only to assign each man his appointment, and it is filled. Our branch seems to be united in a desire for more and better work in the church and are striving to do their part by working in harmony for the good of all. We realize there must be unity in the church, and we hope to see some of the disturbing conditions removed. Our brothers at the head of the church should realize that much depends on their conduct in these high places, as many Saints do not see any reason for so much disturbance, and the weak ones fall out of the work as a result. Let us all work as the Lord directs.

Alliance, Ohio

September 1.—We are still holding services at the home of our pastor, Elder R. A. Smith. We have an enrollment in Sunday school of about sixteen scholars, divided into three classes: beginner, junior, and senior. We have a friendly contest going on between the classes to boost the Christmas offering, and the juniors are leading so far. Sister Vida Smith, a junior teacher, pops corn for the boys of the class to sell. They are very much enthused.

We had a quiet wedding in the branch August 21 when Sister Eva Lambert was married to Mr. George Hartzell at the home of our pastor. They have the best wishes of the branch for their happiness.

Since our last news letter, Frank, the eight-year-old son of Brother and Sister J. E. Gordon, was baptized into the fold. May he ever walk therein.

Sunday, August 1, Brother and Sister Harry Green and family, also Brother and Sister Sautters and family, of Canton met with the Alliance Saints. We are always glad to have visitors.

Quite a number of our people from here, including our pastor and family, attended the Kirtland reunion, or a part of it. There were those of the branch who because of being employed on the railroad could have only one day off, that was the last Sunday of the reunion, so Sunday evening they drove sixty-five miles to be at the service, desiring to hear President F. M. Smith and not knowing the exact time he would be there. Those of us who were privileged to hear him were not disappointed, and as we sang in that beautiful temple, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet," our hearts truly burned within us. This is the Lord's work. He has intrusted to us the greatest blessing that can come to mankind, the gospel, and the need of it all about us should make us take serious thought of our responsibility. Let us not withhold anything that will help in this wonderful work. Let us have faith in each other and in him whose church it is. As a branch we desire the work may go on, and we expect to do all we can to this end, by having confidence in those whom God has placed in charge of his work, and by giving our support along every line, withholding nothing. Our prayers are that we may all come to a unity of the faith, that his will may be done on earth as it is done in heaven.

A Substitute for Reunion

OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO, August 18.—Owing to our district being large and the membership scattered, we are not favored with the privilege of holding a reunion. As a result, the district presidency and officers of the departments conduct special-day services in the various branches throughout the district. The program usually carried out is as follows: Prayer service 9.30; preaching 11; joint session of Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression, interspersed with community singing, 2; preaching 3.30 and 7 o'clock.

We have enjoyed the presence of Patriarch John Shields, whose counsel and admonition have been very consoling and instructive to the Saints. The addresses by Elders J. A. Morrison, S. G. St. John, Percy Farrow, J. H. Yager, and Benson Belrose have been attended with interest.

The manner in which the visiting Saints and friends have been made welcome by the resident Saints of the various branches where special-day services have been held is worthy of commendation. Basket lunches have been served to the visitors.

The missionary arm of the church in charge of Elders S. G. St. John, J. H. Yager, and Percy Farrow, is actively engaged in holding series of services in the district tent. Many have been warned and interested, and a number have requested baptism. Arrangements are being made for an institute to be held in the near future.

Eldorado Springs, Missouri

ELDORADO SPRINGS, MISSOURI, August 18.—No services were held in Coal Hill Branch during the reunion at Eldorado Springs, and all seemed happy to be back home August 10.

The Eldorado Springs reunion is still fresh in the minds of the people here, and every little while we hear some of the Saints speak of something good they heard or something new they learned at the reunion. We are thankful that over half of the members of our branch were able to attend a majority of the meetings and wish all could have attended all the meetings, but farm work kept some away part of the time.

We enjoyed having with us Patriarch U. W. Greene, Apostles T. W. Williams and F. H. Edwards, and Bishop Charles Fry.

We had some fine early morning prayer meetings, also some very interesting round table discussions. In the departmental work Sister Ermina Perkins Kearney of Clinton and Sister Luff of Independence did some splendid work.

Brother Williams held meetings in the tent four nights after reunion. There was such good interest we were sorry he had to leave.

Brother T. P. Malott, who has been living with his daughter, Sister Pearl Davis, for the past two years, returned to Knox, Indiana, about July 18. He obeyed the gospel about half a year after coming here.

Sister Nellie Williams, who has been cooking for Grace-land College, at Lamoni, Iowa, the past two years, returned to her home here July 21.

Sister Jennie Reynolds of Nevada visited relatives here and attended a few services of reunion the last week of July.

Brother and Sister Robert Oliver and Brother Oliver's half brother from Independence were here last week visiting relatives and friends.

Several members of the branch attended the funeral of Brother William Lowe August 14. Brother Lowe was a member of the district presidency and was also president of the Veve Branch. He attended the reunion, also the services following, and was apparently in good health. He dropped dead while dressing. He will be greatly missed in the district, and his branch is left as a flock without a shepherd.

Several of the Saints are planning to go to Taberville next Sunday, where Elder W. E. Haden is holding meetings in the district tent.

Deaths and Baptisms in Society Islands

During the past month the Saints of the Makatea Branch, with the assistance of Saints from the Tikehau Branch, located about forty miles northward, completed the erection of their new church building. They expect to have it dedicated about the time that Apostle Ellis returns from Australia for the mission conference of the Society Islands, which will be held, beginning December 20, on the island of Apataki.

On August 18 the wife of Mahinui, president of Tikehau Branch, died on the operating table in the hospital here in Papeete. She was buried next day. Yesterday Tunui, a teacher from the distant island of Amanu, succumbed to lung hemorrhage. He will be buried from the Tarona Branch today. Two of the brethren and one sister died in the Makatea Branch during the month, while the president of the Niau Branch reports eight recent deaths. When attacked by disease, the natives seem to have very limited powers of resistance.

However, there are some gains, it having been reported that Paia and Taruiarii have baptized ten as a result of their recent missionary labors in the island of Rairoa.

Yours sincerely,

R. J. FARTHING.

PAPEETE, TAHITI, August 26.

Converted From Utah Church

DULUTH, MINNESOTA, September 1.—On August 11 our branch president was called upon to officiate at the funeral services of George W. Brown, a member of the Utah Church, but one who could not accept their teachings when the light of the true gospel was presented to him. He testified before his death that he desired to be baptized if the Lord would restore him to sufficient health. He also desired that his widow and children might come into the true gospel. His testimony seems to be bearing fruit.

Brother C. B. Freeman, branch president, has been in the pulpit lately for evening services, preaching fine sermons that should inspire his hearers to a deeper understanding of God's laws and help them to walk within the narrow way. Other local men are holding forth at the eleven o'clock services with talks to the Saints which will, if heeded, bring them closer to the stature of Christ.

Brother W. C. Stanty was called upon on the afternoon of August 17 to perform a marriage ceremony for two young people not of the church.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held Thursday, August 28, when the members of the school, with their friends, went up the Saint Louis River by steamer to Fond du Lac. All report a good time.

Sister M. A. Carlson of Barnum was here visiting for a few days. Also Brother and Sister Jay W. Walters of Carlton were down to the evening service August 31 and heard Brother C. B. Freeman preach one of his inspiring sermons.

The publicity department takes this means to thank the Saints for the bundles of papers that have been received. We would like to have more, especially Ensigns, as the field is large here. We could also use books of any description. Address bundles to W. C. Stanty, 403 Seventy-seventh Avenue West, Duluth, Minnesota.

Our meeting place is located at 320-322 North Central Avenue, over Boston Store. Any of the ministry or Saints traveling through here are welcome, and an invitation is extended them to meet with us. For information call Calumet 1427-W.

Branch Priesthood Doing Missionary Work

CHATHAM, ONTARIO.—The Chatham district reunion has passed into history. While the number of tents was slightly less than a year ago yet it was successful in every way. Among the speakers were Patriarch F. A. Smith, Apostle J. A. Gillen, Elders M. A. Etzenhouser, R. D. Weaver, J. R. Grice, B. H. Doty, Arthur Leverton, and Bishop J. L. Burger.

Two of Chatham's most popular and best workers have left to attend Graceland College. They are Mrs. Ezra Mifflin and Miss Eva Mifflin. We wish them Godspeed in their work.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held at Erie Beach on Labor Day. A good crowd turned out, and at both dinner and supper time all sat down to an old style picnic meal. Races were run with keen competition, and a soft-ball game was held between the single and married women, which resulted in victory for the single women. All present thoroughly enjoyed themselves and are looking forward to next year.

The Chatham priesthood, under the direction of Branch President Duncan Clatworthy, are conducting meetings in two branches near Chatham. The branches are Terminus and Lindsay, the latter being one of the oldest branches in Canada.

Quarterly business meeting was held on the evening of September 3, at which arrangements were completed for the anniversary services, which come on the Sunday nearest October 25. It was also decided to hold an anniversary supper on the Monday following.

Active in Many Ways

GROTON, CONNECTICUT, September 4.—While at the Onset young people's convention, two boys, Douglas Alves and Howard Donlevy, were baptized, becoming members of the New London Branch. Both are lads about eight or ten years of age. Douglas Alves is the son of the branch deacon, and Howard Donlevy resides with nonmember relatives, his mother having passed away some few years ago. The branch is steadily growing in membership of young people.

At a prayer service conducted at the home of Brother Theodore G. Goodrich, a Baptist minister and about nine of his congregation were present. Several took part in prayer and testimony, manifesting friendliness and respect. An invitation was extended by the Baptist pastor to hold a prayer meeting in the Baptist church at Flanders.

The annual Sunday school picnic was given on Labor Day at the home of Brother Theodore G. Goodrich, who lives on a farm at Flanders. About thirty people were present, including Reverend Collins, a Baptist minister, and his wife and son. Refreshments were liberally served, including ice cream and watermelon. Seesaws and swings were provided for the children, and a near-by lake afforded bathing for all. Boats were hired, and many went boating. Time passed quickly; all seemed to have the picnic spirit and enjoy the outing.

Missionary Work in Germany

GROSS WARTENBERG, GERMANY, August 25.—Possibly the Saints in other parts of the world will be interested in hearing about our work in Germany. Brother Elmer C. Ohlert and I are making a tour through this country, calling on the Saints in branches and other places. So far we have labored in Halle-Saale, Berlin, Gross Raschen, Gross Wartenberg, and other places near by. Brother and Sister Kippe are the only members we have at Halle-Saale. We have a few members in Berlin. The work there is just beginning. At Gross Raschen we have over one hundred members, and they have their own church in which to hold services. While there Brother Ohlert baptized four, and four more were to be baptized the following Sunday. Our meetings there were well attended by both members and nonmembers, and there is a splendid interest.

Brother John Smolny, our missionary, started the work here in Gross Wartenberg in March of this year, and previous to our coming had baptized forty-two people. He advertised our coming and secured a large hall in which to hold meeting. Our first service was on Sunday afternoon. The hall was packed. Brother Ohlert had his saxophone with him, and he announced that he would play and that I would sing a song in English. But several voices from the crowd yelled out that the singing must be in German. The storm was so great that we took our seats.

When the time came to speak, the cry came from the crowd so strong that I was not permitted to speak in English and have Brother Ohlert interpret it, so Brothers Ohlert and Smolny preached to them in German. After the brethren had spoken, a Lutheran minister came forward and harangued the audience as long as he pleased.

We thought best to continue the services a few evenings, which we did. The crowd continued to come. We asked for police protection, and a policeman came and was present at our services. When I arose to speak on Monday night, several voices cried out against me, but the policeman called for order and said "Americanish" was allowed. I spoke that evening, and Brother Ohlert interpreted for me, but at times the order was not good. I thought best to keep still and let the brethren preach in German, but the noise at times was great. Men smoked in the meeting over our protest; some sent out for drinks and drank liquor during the service. Two Lutheran preachers came and harangued the crowd, and others came to the front and cried out against us. The policeman was present, and we continually appealed to him for order, but most of the time he did nothing. He finally commenced smoking with the others. Brothers Ohlert and Smolny answered the objections made against us from night to night, and we made many friends. The disorder was so great that we closed our meetings Friday night.

Since coming here we have baptized twelve more. We now have fifty-four members, so yesterday organized a branch and ordained an elder, priest, teacher, and deacon. We also organized a Sunday school. The branch and Sunday school services are held in a large barn near town. Our meetings there have not been disturbed. We have also held services in different places in the country, but in these places we have had good interest and the best of order.

The last night at the public hall the speech against us by the Lutheran minister was so completely answered by Brother Ohlert that the minister was confounded, but the mob spirit was so strong that we thought best to close the services and hold meetings in other places. This is the only place we have had any disturbance. We find the German people to be of a very fine class, and many are anxious to hear the gospel.

Brother Ohlert makes a good interpreter for me, and he preaches in German. When I first met him in Genesee, Illinois, he was then a boy of about fourteen. He and his mother attended the park services held by Brother O. E. Sade and myself. Little did I think at that time that he would become a missionary and that he and I would be laboring together in Germany.

Notwithstanding the persecutions in this place, at times the Spirit has been with us in great power. Brother Smolny has done a splendid work here and is greatly loved by the Saints. He also has many friends, many of whom no doubt will yet come into the church.

At the close of our service yesterday, the Saints sang, "God be with you till we meet again." We found it hard to part with them. Some of the Saints walk for two or three hours in order to come to the services. God is pouring out his Spirit upon them, and they are truly rejoicing in the gospel of Christ.

To-morrow we go to Tilsit to visit the Saints there. Brother Paul M. Hanson is at Copenhagen, Denmark, on his way to Norway and Sweden. The recent war is responsible for much of the opposition we meet here.

J. F. CURTIS.

Machias, Maine

September 4.—Services in Little Kennebec Branch have been continued as usual since repairs on the church have been completed.

A few of the Saints from this branch had the pleasure of attending reunion at Brooksville, Maine. Elder George C. Manchester, local elder, with his wife and family, attended two or three days and report a very pleasant time. There was such a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit of God that those who attended were greatly benefited and felt well repaid for the effort they put forth to attend.

Veteran Elder Dies

Elder William H. Lowe, who was for many years active in church work, passed away August 12, 1924, at his home four miles west of Eldorado Springs, Missouri, where he had lived for thirty-six years.

Brother Lowe was baptized January 15, 1891, and was ordained a deacon in 1892. He became an elder in 1893 and held that office to the time of his death. He had been president of the Veve Branch almost continually since it was organized, and was vice president of Clinton District at his decease. He had endeared himself to the hearts of the Saints and the people of the community where he lived.

Born March 29, 1855, he moved with his parents to Nebraska in 1870. They later moved to Missouri, where he lived since that time. He married Mary A. Randall October 28, 1875, and seven children were born to them, three preceding him in death. He leaves his wife, four daughters, eight grandchildren, two brothers, and three sisters.

The funeral sermon was by R. T. Walters. Interment in the Blakey Cemetery.

Brockton, Massachusetts

September 3.—On August 24 the Saints had the good fortune to have as their speaker Elder George W. Robley, who delivered well attended and very impressive sermons at the morning and evening services. His subject for the morning was "The Golden Rule." In the evening he spoke on "Truth, liberty, and freedom," his text being, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

A number of the young men of the branch have expressed a great desire to attend Graceland College, the recent reunion being the incentive, and will strive to this attainment.

One new member was added to our enrollment, Miss Louise Nute entering the waters of baptism at Onset during reunion.

Has Long Desired Increased Radio Power

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA, September 6.—I was made very happy indeed when the announcement appeared in the HERALD a few weeks ago telling of the proposed plans for building a high power broadcasting station. This action is the realization of my ideas for nearly a year back, and I have talked a station of this kind with several of our people.

I consider this one of the greatest steps our church has ever made in spreading the gospel to all people. I heartily agree with President Elbert Smith in his article in this week's HERALD entitled, "Send the sound the earth around." The building of this new station is truly a realization of this wonderful missionary song. All Saints should read song number 21 in the Hymnal and note the words carefully.

By and through the use of radio, the marvel of the age, millions will hear the true gospel, and surely the barrier of prejudice will be shaken in the hearts of many.

The members of the Cedar Rapids Branch are very enthusiastic over the proposed campaign and are supporting it liberally.

May we all be true missionaries at this time in supporting this worthy campaign and be workers together in carrying out God's work here on earth.

RALPH R. WELDAY.

1005 First Avenue West.

Lincoln, Nebraska

August 16.—Church activities in this branch are very slow now. Our priest, teacher, and Department of Women are all there are to keep things going, and it is hard pulling for them, with no one behind to encourage and help them in the work.

There is a goodly number of young people here, but where there is no shepherd the sheep will stray, and in a city there are any number of places for the young people to find outside entertainment.

We would like to have a young missionary and his wife here to work with us. Young people usually understand young people better than older ones, and there is a chance for any amount of church work in a city as large as Lincoln.

We are all hoping and praying that we will be able to do something really worth while and uplifting for God's work in the near future.

ONE OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

Mrs. C. T. Donkin, of Pipestone, Minnesota, writes: "We have a nice Sunday school here with an enrollment of thirty-one, all nonmembers but four. The gospel has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I want to help others see its beauty. We need your prayers."

Gomer T. Griffiths Writes of Travels and Church Questions

On the morning of the 15th of July I left Columbus for the great Northwest country to attend reunions in the Seattle-British Columbia District and the Portland District. On the way I stopped off at Minneapolis, Minnesota. Had some difficulty in locating some of the Saints there, but finally got in touch through the telephone book with Frederick Green and wife, with whom I sojourned while in the city. I did not have the opportunity to meet the Saints in branch capacity for the reason that they held their midweek prayer meeting at four or five different places in the city; however, I had the pleasure of meeting with one of the groups, and to my delight I met Patriarch Hyrum O. Smith and had quite a pleasant visit which I enjoyed immensely. It is good to meet with one of these old-time warriors with whom we have been associated so many years in gospel work. By reason of my itinerary, I had to take my departure the next day. I was very sorry I could not have remained over the coming Sabbath and met with all of the Saints, many of whom I have been acquainted with for a great many years.

My next stop was at Deer Lodge, Montana. I was met at the station by my old-time friends, David Allen and wife, whom I have known since they were children. This brother labored under my supervision over twenty-five years ago in the Western Mission, and it seemed good to have his association once more. I remained over the Sabbath and spoke morning and night to good-sized audiences. I certainly enjoyed my visit with the Saints there, who showed me every kindness and respect, and I truly appreciated the same.

It was with much regret that I took my departure from them late Sunday night for Spokane, Washington, arriving there at about eight o'clock the next morning. I was met at the station by one of our missionaries, Eli Bronson, who took me to the home of Brother and Sister Curtis, where I was made welcome. Brother Eli was doing missionary work in the city in a good-sized tent, and I was invited to hold forth the two nights I was in the city. Brother Case and other officials of the branch, as well as the Saints, gave me a good welcome. I certainly enjoyed my sojourn among them, and I was reminded of the many days and weeks I labored there some twenty-five years ago. I met several whom I had baptized and ordained to different positions in the priesthood; I organized the branch and also the district. Many changes had been wrought since those days; also a wonderful change of the personnel of the branch. The babies of those days are nearly all married, and the middle-aged are old and waiting for the summons to come home. Such is life, and we are reminded of the statement: "Change and decay in all around I see; but Thou who changest not, abide with me." It is a glorious thing to know that He whom we serve changeth not, whose ways are one eternal round, and whose promises are sure and steadfast when the conditions upon which they are made are complied with. Here I was shown every reverence by all those Saints; and it is very cheering and comforting to feel that one has true, loyal friends.

I left there by the morning train and arrived in Seattle that evening, to wend my way to the Saints' chapel, as it happened to be Wednesday night prayer meeting. Brother C. E. Jones was to meet me but was held up at the reunion grounds where they were making preparations for the reunion near Everett. Brother McDole, president of the branch, escorted me to his pleasant home, where I was made welcome. Before we retired to bed, Apostle Roy S. Budd arrived on the scene, and we were indeed glad to grasp his hand as a fellow minister in Christ. The next morning I boarded a steamer and went to Tacoma, where I met my nephew, Edwin Thomas, and three nieces, two grand-nephews, and one grand-niece whom I had not seen for several years.

On Saturday I went to the reunion grounds in company with Brother D. S. McDole. Here I met very many people whom I had known for several years. To my surprise I met there Brother Silas Winn, whom I had baptized forty-five years ago in Macon City, Missouri; also Brother Frederick Holman, whom I had baptized in the fall of 1885. It did my soul good to find that those brethren were still in the faith and trying to serve the Lord in accordance with his holy plan. Here I also met very many of the brethren whom I had ordained years since to different positions in the priesthood. It is very elating that said brethren have been true to their trust and are still striving to magnify their callings. The reunion was a great success in all respects. It is said to be the best ever held in the district. The young people certainly deported themselves in a manner that is commendable, and the older people felt proud of them. Brother Budd proved to be a good mixer; he was apparently interested in every feature and won the respect and love of all. He preached some very interesting and beautiful sermons. He was under the necessity of leaving a few days prior to the end of the reunion, because he was scheduled to be at the Portland reunion, which convened on Friday, as the two reunions overlapped, which, in my opinion, is a mistake. Those having charge of arranging for reunions should try to avoid having one overlap another.

I remained until the close, and as a consequence the Portland reunion had been in progress several days before I got there. Here again Brother Budd had to leave on Thursday to reach Egermon to attend another reunion. This arrangement makes it very inconvenient for those who have been assigned to those different reunions, and breaks up the interest to a degree. The Portland reunion was also a success, and all present seemed to enjoy themselves and were glad they had been permitted to be present. The spirit of peace and true fellowship predominated throughout. I was privileged to meet many people whom I had baptized and ordained in the years gone by. I was instrumental in the hands of the Lord in organizing the Portland Branch and also the Portland District; also the British Columbia and Seattle District. As a matter of course I enjoyed my visit, and it was a great pleasure to meet with so many of my old friends again. Here, as well as the other places I had been, I was treated with every kindness and respect, far beyond my anticipations; and I am compelled to say, as I have said many times before, it is good to be a Saint of latter days.

I discovered to my sorrow that many of our people, officials and members, are considerably wrought up over the controversy carried on in the SAINTS' HERALD, and very many of them came to me and told me that they were greatly discouraged because of this contention that exists among the leading officials of the church. I admonished them to keep calm and possess their souls in patience, not to suffer themselves to become entangled in the controversy, and not to allow themselves to take sides, but to read frequently and carefully what had been and what will be written on both sides. There is a disposition in some places, on the part of some, to wrangle among themselves because some are inclined to take sides. They will tell you Brother So and So is all right, so they will take his version of it; but I noticed that these same parties that took sides because of their faith in certain men who are engaged in this controversy did not read the books to ascertain which of the brothers are right in the positions they take. According to my view, a great majority of the Saints do not read the books at all, and numbers of them do not have the Book of Covenants in their homes. What is worse still is the fact that only about one third take the HERALD. I saw but one HERALD in the month of August until I arrived at the home of Brother McDole, and it was quite a difficult thing to get hold of the August 6 number. I was traveling among the Saints during all that time, and I noticed that most of those people have two dailies coming to their home, and many worldly magazines, but no church papers hence the question propounds itself, How are those people going to be able to decide this important question when they do not put forth an effort to ascertain the facts in the case and do not read the church books or papers? I still contend that the only way to decide this important question before the church, which is causing so much confusion and dissatisfaction, is to place it before the general priesthood where it belongs, for the Lord has decreed in a revelation given to the church in 1831, and what was given to them to direct them in that day is applicable to us, a command which reads as follows: "Hearken, O ye elders of my church whom I have called: behold, I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together [not as a promiscuous general conference] to agree upon my word, and by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church, and to have all things right before me. And I will be your ruler when I come; and, behold, I come quickly; and ye shall see that my law is kept. [Not a promiscuous conference, but the ministry, his elders.] He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple; and he that sayeth he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple." Here it is pointed out by the Lord that the responsibility of seeing that his law is kept, and the interpretation thereof rests solely and entirely with the priesthood, namely the Melchisedec priesthood. Did the Lord mean what he said back there in 1831? Or has he changed his mind since to accommodate people down here in the last days? If these conferences consisted solely of the elders, it would be a different proposition. This is in keeping with the instruction which the Lord gave, which is found in Doctrine and Covenants 17:13: "The several elders composing this church of Christ are to meet in conference once in three months, or from time to time, as said conferences shall direct or appoint; and said conferences are to do whatever church business is necessary to be done at the time."

Our method of controlling General Conferences and our method of representation which consists of delegates, women or members in good standing, is not in accordance with the law of God given to govern this church as found in the law cited. The method of representation as presented by Joseph Smith years ago was turned down by the church, and as a result of turning down or ignoring said counsel given through the late President Smith, confusion has resulted.

If this church wants to keep off the breakers which confront it at the present time, the proper thing for us to do is to get back to God's way and honor his law which he has given to govern his church. All of these differences of opinion relative to the interpretation of law that outline authority and duties and prerogatives of the various offices in the church can be satisfactorily adjusted to all concerned if these officers of the Melchisedec priesthood would meet together, praying, as he also commanded them to do, in true humility and implicit faith in God who gave his law. If they would meet in the spirit of brothers in Christ, the spirit of meekness and love, and not as politicians, when all have stated their positions in the proper spirit, and we should not see eye to eye, or agree as to any interpretation of the law, there is a God in heaven who is willing and anxious to help us out of our dilemma, and who will tell us what the true interpretation is on the points on which we differ. Our ministry go out into the world and tell the people that we believe in present-day revelation, that we have communion with God, and that we have men occupying in the high priesthood through whom God speaks to his people. We should keep in remembrance the fact that God has more than one prophet, seer, and revelator through whom he can give instruction in case of emergency; if the President is involved, we have a second prophet, seer, and revelator in his church. Read the following in support of the above: "I appoint unto him that he may be a prophet, and a seer, and a revelator unto my church, as well as my servant Joseph, that he may act in concert also with my servant Joseph, and that he shall receive counsel from my servant Joseph, who shall show unto him the keys whereby he may ask and receive, and be crowned with the same blessing, and glory, and honor, and priesthood, and gifts of the priesthood, that once were put upon him that was my servant Oliver Cowdery; that my servant Hyrum may bear record of the things which I shall show unto him, that his name may be had in honorable remembrance from generation to generation, forever and ever.—Doctrine and Covenants 107:29.

It is to be regretted that the second seer, prophet, and revelator has become involved in this controversy in that he signed the open letter. He should, in my opinion, have remained neutral in this controversy, so in case of contingency the Lord could speak through him should the President be involved. Some might say: "Well, why not the counselors be resorted to?" For the reason they are both involved, since they have signed the declaration in sympathy with the President and others.

Doubtless some will say Brother Griffiths is opposed to women occupying in the capacity of delegates. I recognize the ability of our sisters, but I am utterly opposed to them or a male member of the church passing upon these important questions, for the reason the Lord has placed the responsibility on the Melchisedec priesthood to transact the business of his church, and the law given by him providing that the Melchisedec priesthood should settle these matters has not been revoked since the above was given. I do not believe there is any man who has traveled more extensively among the people of the church than I have, and I know from personal observation that two thirds of the delegates, women and lay members, that attend General Conference are not conversant with the contents of the three standard books of the church, for many of them do not have all of said books in their homes; therefore, they are not competent to pass on such important matters as are involved in the duties and the rights of the priesthood.

Now, dear Saints, I want to ask you a question: If you want information touching any point of civil law and its interpretation, do you go to a doctor, merchant, or some business man, or would you go to a lawyer who has made the law and its interpretation a study? To whom should we go for the interpretation of the law of God but to the elders who are supposed to make it a study and know its interpretation? For the Lord has said: "They shall see that my law is kept." And would they be competent to occupy in that position if they did not make the law of God a study? The fact that brothers and sisters are made delegates does not argue they are competent to pass upon all matters that come before the conference, for the reason they have been engaged in pursuits of life that do not involve these matters. The women have responsibilities in caring for their homes and children and do not have time to delve into these points of law and rights and duties of the priesthood. Moreover, I have witnessed people, yes, many of them, vote on issues that came before them because of certain brethren talking and voting that way. Some of them have said to me when I have questioned them regarding their voting: "Oh, I voted as Brother So and So voted; he is a good man and won't go wrong." Let us go back to God's way, and that will put an end to so much controversy, strife, and contention as now exists in the church, which, in the opinion of many good people, threatens the destruction of the church.

I am confident from my experience and association with all of the brethren involved in this controversy that unless God in a marvelous and miraculous way comes to our rescue this matter will not be settled at General Conference satisfactorily by a promiscuous body of men and women, and will tear asunder the church. Therefore, as a minister of Christ who has for over forty-eight years devoted his time and talent in its interests at a great sacrifice to himself and family, do hereby protest against this all important question, now being agitated by the leading officials of the church, being taken before General Conference, and insist that it be taken where it belongs, before a conference of the Melchisedec priesthood, who He has decreed has the power and authority from God to agree upon his word, and upon whom he has placed the tremendous responsibility of seeing that his law is kept.

I leave soon for Portland, Oregon, and California, and on the way East will visit many of my relatives whom I have not seen for many years. Yours in the right,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, September 1.

Holden Stake Items

Holden

A midsummer festival was held on the Holden Home lawn on the 14th of August. This was very well attended by the citizens. The L. D. S. Orchestra and a male quartet furnished the entertainment. About $50 was added to the fund which is to be used for the erection of porches at the home. They are conducting a stand at the Chautauqua, the proceeds from which will go to the same fund. It is hoped that ere long a sufficient amount will be in hand for the building of the porches, which will add to the comfort of the aged Saints.

Speakers at the church last Sunday were Priest Robert Dillon in the morning and Elder John Lovell in the evening. Brother A. H. Parsons was the speaker the evening of the 24th. Brother Parsons was pastor of the church here some years ago. He was visiting his mother who is living at the home.

A recital was given at the church on Friday afternoon, August 29, by the pupils of Miss Cora Young. It was highly appreciated and reflected credit on the work of Sister Young.

Sister Lou Rissa Dillon has returned to her school at Lamoni, Iowa, where she will teach home economics in the schools. Sister May Moler has accepted a position with the public schools at Clinton, Missouri.

Atherton

August 10 Brother and Sister Johnson from Lexington were with us and were given the eleven o'clock hour. Sister Johnson occupied a portion of the time in the interest of her work, and Brother Johnson used the remaining time, giving a very helpful message to the Saints. Sister Johnson is the stake chorister, and Brother Johnson is a member of the stake high council.

Brother John C. Schwab, our pastor, very ably occupied last Sunday morning, giving the Saints advice which is much needed in the trying times in which we are living. Brother George Blackmore preached in the evening and gave us a missionary sermon.

The Dorcas Circle gave an ice cream social last Monday night. They had a good crowd. Among those present were D. J. Krahl and wife and John Dowker, of Independence, and Brother and Sister Archibald, of Saint Louis, who were visiting at the Krahl home. Brethren Archibald, Dowker, and Krahl entertained those who came to the social by singing.

For the last three years our Sunday school has had its annual picnic at Swope Park. This year they chose to go there again, and last Thursday found our Sunday school as a body in Swope Park, enjoying immensely the outing. The animals are a great attraction to the young as well as the old. The one main thing to enjoy of course is the bountiful repast that is always spread before us.

Lexington

Brother D. R. Carmichael, of Atherton, Missouri, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression of Holden Stake, was with us Sunday and occupied the eleven o'clock hour. He outlined the work of this department in such a way that all present were really encouraged by his effort. Brother J. A. Brendel spoke at the evening hour, his subject being, "Determined in the gospel work."

Brother and Sister J. E. Johnson were in Atherton Sunday doing stake work. Many of our membership are out of employment. The mines have not worked since April 1. Brother Finis Beebe has returned from Kansas, where he has been employed. We will be glad when all of our members can come home.

We had one of the most spiritual meetings at our sacrament service that we have enjoyed here. We are determined to do our share as a part of God's church. Brother and Sister Gomer Macrae were visitors here Sunday; also Sister R. L. Macrae, of Cameron. We are trying hard to raise our part of the radio fund. Brother Brendel spoke Sunday evening on "Preaching the gospel to all the world," showing the need of the radio in our work.

The Religio had a picnic on Labor Day. Besides a big basket dinner, everyone had a good time. Our Sunday school and Religio are doing a fine work in the church here. The superintendents, W. T. Beard and Fred Furness, are to be praised for their efforts.

Buckner

August 24 Brother J. W. A. Bailey visited us, which was very much appreciated. He gave us two sermons.

The Saints at Buckner and Sibley are rejoicing over the addition to our group of three members by baptism on Sunday, August 10. The ordinance was performed by Elder R. B. Cook, our pastor. The baptism occurred near Sibley, confirmation following at the residence of Sister Jordon. The power of the Spirit was in evidence. They will be a great help to our church here. We had Brother D. J. Krahl with us, preaching at Buckner in the morning and having charge of the baptismal and confirmation meeting in the afternoon. He gave us real needed advice which was much appreciated and will prove a help to the Saints here. We have been having some very spiritual prayer meetings, which are much enjoyed. We rejoice to know God is still the same.

The Saints of Sibley, Levasy, and Buckner were made to rejoice by the return of Brother R. D. Weaver, who began a series of meetings at Sibley August 29. His discourses are so strengthening and edifying that we look forward with sorrow to the time of his departure, which we hope will not be for several weeks. Interest shown by nonmembers has increased steadily from night to night, and we are praying fervently that all the honest in heart will respond to the message made so clear and plain for them. Several auto loads of friends motored over from Atherton Thursday, September 4. They took charge of the music, and under the able direction of Sister Schwab rendered several beautiful selections. We hope they will come again, as their service was highly appreciated.

Sedalia

Pastor G. W. Rodger returned from his vacation August 29, and services are again resumed in our chapel, there having been none during Fair time. The Saints rejoiced in meeting together again and also in having with us the past week Elder Alvin Knisley, one of the stake missionaries. His discourses on Friday and Sunday evenings were much enjoyed, and we hope to have him with us again soon for a series.

Our venture on Labor Day was not as successful, financially, as we anticipated, but we were thankful under the circumstances to have a small amount to our credit. All enjoyed the day together, also the association and assistance of those who came from other branches, and an opportunity was afforded several to become better acquainted.

Lamoni Stake

LAMONI IOWA, September 13.—Attendance at services last Sunday was materially increased by the addition of a large number of college students. The church was crowded at the sacramental service Sunday morning, and a splendid meeting was enjoyed.

Apostle D. T. Williams, who returned last week from his western mission, was the evening speaker, using as the basis of his sermon the injunction, "Know thyself."

On the previous Sunday Elder L. S. Wight was the morning speaker, and A. Max Carmichael addressed the evening congregation on the theme, "The personal touch in religion."

At a special business meeting of the branch held Tuesday evening an indorsement of the proposed one-thousand-watt radio for the broadcasting station at Independence was voted, and the matter of raising Lamoni's quota of $400 was left in the hands of the stake presidency and bishopric, who promise to make known some plan for handling the matter at the Sunday service of September 14.

Bishop and Mrs. A. Carmichael and Bishop and Mrs. A. J. Yarrington returned home Tuesday from a summer spent in California and other western States. They made the trip by auto, camping on the way, and feel that the trip was beneficial to their health. While in California they attended several church reunions.

Elder E. E. Long is at home for a few days from Saskatchewan, Canada, where he has spent the summer in church activities.

Elder L. G. Holloway has been holding a series of meetings in Centerville, Iowa, the past week.

Apostle and Mrs. J. F. Garver returned this week from six weeks in Colorado, Utah, and other States, doing reunion work.

Two children were blessed at the prayer service last Sunday, the little son of Pluma Jamison and the little daughter of Grant Snethen and wife.

The smaller branches around Lamoni have been characterized by a goodly degree of activity during the summer. An all-day meeting at Andover August 31 was quite well attended though bad weather kept some away who would otherwise have attended. The speakers were Elders C. E. Wight,

W. E. Prall, and Carl Ballantyne, each of whom delivered an excellent sermon. The Saints felt the meeting altogether worth while.

A Religio has recently been organized in the Andover Branch under Brother Roy Roberts, stake superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, which is flourishing nicely.

A movement which is proving very successful in the Thompson Branch is a monthly junior preaching service. The old as well as the young are much interested in these meetings. Part of the time special music is furnished by local talent, and sometimes it is imported from Lamoni, while speakers are usually supplied by the larger branch. During the summer Peter Whalley, Vida E. Smith, Roy Roberts, J. A. Gunsolley, and W. E. Prall have given talks that have helped keep the young alert in their church work. The Thompson Branch is a group of rural Saints who meet in an unoccupied dwelling fitted up for the purpose.

Graceland Chats

LAMONI, IOWA, September 13.—Parents and friends of students will be glad to know something of the activities of the first week in Graceland.

Sunday, with its sacramental service and numbers of visitors attending, was a sacred preparation for the days to follow. The college halls were ready; the campus green and inviting; the dining room, redecorated and curtained, presented a pleasing prospect; and Monday morning the opening for the year was preceded by a concert by the high school band.

There were the usual welcomes from church and town authorities, good music, and prayer, but the principal thing of interest was the address by a former Graceland student, Doctor Lee Travis, of Iowa City, Iowa, his subject being, "The other circle of human endeavor," calling attention to the fact that there is much yet for even the wisest to learn. The attendance at this service was large, and the crowd filled the chapel and gallery, overflowing into the hall and stairs.

Monday afternoon was a busy time for students and faculty, for the matter of registration has been systematized until one half day of work completes the registration. This crowds some of the teachers, but everyone is able to meet classes and start work Tuesday morning.

Tuesday evening, deans, supervisors, and nurse met with the students and talked regulation.

Wednesday evening was devoted to the regular prayer meeting. The chapel was packed, and an excellent service was enjoyed. The spirit was sweet and inspiring and most encouraging.

Altogether we feel that the future looks good. Thursday was on schedule hour by hour. The second Friday chapel service will be held in the afternoon. The first Friday chapel hour, held one week before, was occupied by F. M. McDowell, dean of the senior college; Lonzo Jones, dean of the junior college; and Vida E. Smith, dean of women, on "Our college, its foundation, ideals, traditions, and achievements."

Friday evening the faculty reception for the new students brought out the school in its best raiment and festive temper. Saturday night the Athenian Federation of Literary Societies met in the chapel, and thus the week was finished.

Already there is a homelike atmosphere in dormitories and schoolrooms, and the library is immensely popular. There have been breakfasts in the woods and suppers by the campfire, song and prayer together, and the vision of the children of God seems enlarged and made brighter with hope pre-eminent in the graces granted us.

Independence

Elder H. E. Winegar was the speaker Sunday morning at the Stone Church, and Apostle J. A. Gillen occupied in the evening on the Campus. This was the last Sunday evening open-air service for this season, and evening services next Sunday will be held in the various churches in Zion.

The community was saddened Saturday morning, September 13, to learn of the death of Brother Royal Brocaw, following an illness of three weeks. Brother Brocaw was born in Harrisonville, Missouri, and had lived in Independence twenty-four years. He has always been known as one of the stand-bys of the church. He leaves his wife, Sister Nellie Brocaw; a daughter, Mrs. Velma Nunn; and a son, Wesley; his mother, a sister, and three brothers. Funeral services were held at the Stone Church Monday afternoon, September 15, in charge of President Elbert A. Smith, with sermon by Apostle John W. Rushton. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Bishop McGuire is back on the job and spoke in Atherton Sunday, where special services were being held.

Independence Institute

The Independence Institute will begin its eighth year of work this week with registration next Thursday evening. The Institute this year is in charge of Miss Lillian Zimmermann. Any elementary or high school subject is offered where as many as six students request it, and advanced courses in sociology, economics, psychology, etc., are also given. A chemical laboratory is being installed, and a dietetics kitchen is also being added. Classes of interest to mothers are being conducted each afternoon. No tuition is charged, but there is a registration fee of $2.50 charged for each subject. Regular work will begin Monday evening, September 22.

Second Independence

Brother Charles Koehler and his helpers have the harvest festival preparations under full headway, and September 25, 26, and 28 will be used for the exhibition and program which are under preparation. The Saints who are accessible to Independence or who are visiting here are invited to visit the Second Church at the corner of Delaware Street and South Avenue, on Thursday evening, Friday evening, Sunday at eleven o'clock, or at half past seven in the evening.

In addition to a varied program of music, vocal and instrumental, readings, etc., good special speakers have been provided, among them being President Elbert A. Smith, Bishops James F. Keir, J. A. Becker, and M. H. Siegfried, to whom have been assigned special topics.

It has been the ambition of the Second Church to get the entire city of Zion to see at least one of these programs, in order to give them an idea of what could be done in Independence if her entire population would go to work with the idea of making the name of the land of Zion what her fertility and resources would warrant. For this reason an urgent invitation is given to all.

Thursday and Friday the church will be open all day for receiving specimens of flowers, plants, and other material for decoration; vegetables, fruits, grains, canned goods, jellies, jams, and whatever you may have produced during this plentiful season, and which you wish to devote to the end that Zion's beauty, wealth, and utility may be emphasized and realized. Unless otherwise specified by the donor, these products will at the close of the exhibition be placed in the hands of the Bishop in Zion, for distribution where they may be needed.

A time of great enjoyment and profit should result from the untiring efforts of this small band of workers.

REUNION NEWS

Kewanee District

GALESBURG, ILLINOIS.—The Kewanee district reunion was held at Spring Lake Park, near Galva, from August 15 to 24 inclusive. The theme chosen for our services was "Confidence," which eventually assumed the form of "Trust God and fear not."

District President E. R. Davis had almost complete charge of the reunion and was ably assisted by his two counselors, Edward Jones and Bert E. Sartwell. They began to organize the reunion program immediately after the district conference in June, and much time was spent in planning each detail so the meetings might prove interesting and attractive. Brother Jones made many trips to the grove, so everything would be in readiness for the campers, and others assisted in the preparing of the grounds. The committee endeavored to make the reunion a success from the social, intellectual, and spiritual standpoints, and hoped that the people would not come solely for the purpose of spending their vacation there. All of these needs were most satisfactorily supplied, and the meetings most enjoyed were those of an educational and spiritual nature.

Attendance would have been better, but the farmers were too busy to attend regularly, and financial conditions prevented many from coming.

The program was about as follows: Young people's prayer meeting at 6.30; general prayer service at 8.30; departmental work at 9.45; preaching at 11; choir practice at 1.30; reunion forum at 2; recreation at 3; with song service and

Englewood

Regular services were held Sunday, with Elder W. D. Bullard as the morning speaker.

At a meeting of the building committee it was decided that it would probably be best to wait and not start the new church until next spring. The Saints have bought a nice lot on Northern Boulevard, and will have a nice location there.

Two boys, the sons of Elder Lyman Fike, were baptized Sunday.

Both the Department of Women and the choir will begin their winter activities in the very near future.

East Independence

Bishop J. A. Becker preached Sunday morning, and William Bath continued his series of sermons in the evening.

Two of our members, Sister Clara Thatcher and Brother Tom Bailey, were recently taken to the Sanitarium for appendicitis operations.

A round table talk will be held at the church next Sunday afternoon at half past two.

Enoch Hill

Brother Joseph E. Martin spoke Sunday morning, and Bishop B. J. Scott in the evening at seven o'clock.

Liberty Street

Brother E. T. Atwell gave a very fine sermon Sunday morning on "Divine healing." There was an unusually good attendance, and all wished that Brother Atwell had had more time to cover the material he had to present.

Spring Branch

The speaker Sunday morning was Elder Frank Veenstra. No services were held in the evening.

preaching in the evening, followed by playtime from 9 until 9.45. The program varied somewhat on Sunday, and we had special entertainment on other days.

Sermons were delivered by F. A. Smith, J. A. Becker, L. G. Holloway, E. R. Davis, O. T. Hayer, and W. W. Richards.

Our missionary, E. A. Curtis, could not be present and was missed by all. The young people regretted his absence, for he always puts life into all the recreational activities and enthuses them in spiritual meetings.

Young people's prayer meetings were in charge of Brother Holloway, who was assisted by other young members of the priesthood. Special subjects were arranged for several mornings, such as "Prayer," "Preparation," "My ambition," "Consecration," "Our heritage," "Praying for our president," "Direction," and "Experience."

The Department of Women was in charge of Mrs. J. W. Bean, who was ably assisted by Mrs. Harland Cady. Many stories were told the children by our younger sisters, and talks and sermonets were given by W. W. Holmes, W. W. Richards, Harland Cady, Clarence Heide, and A. H. McCormac.

The little tots strung beads, colored pictures, used the molding clay, and played with the bean bags. The older children sewed cards and made handkerchiefs, doilies, etc. The older girls embroidered red designs on white muslin squares, and two quilts will be made for the Sanitarium. The boys made wooden toys and other like articles under the supervision of Leslie Davis. One morning Sister Bean had a prayer meeting for the youngsters under twelve belonging to the church, and seventeen gave their testimonies who had never done so before.

Sister John Lentell, of Des Moines, was a great help in the departmental work. She interested many in her model church school in action. There were many songs, talks, classes, and a dramatization of the "Good Samaritan." She also superintended the junior church programs. One of the services was given Saturday afternoon so the adults might observe the advantages of such a service for the young. The subject chosen was "Kindness," and the songs, sermonet, and dramatization used all illustrated some form of kindness. At the close they all went out and gathered up the bits of paper strewn about the grounds.

Each afternoon was given over to organized games, including volley ball, baseball, croquet, pitching horseshoes, etc. At the playtime in the evening other games were played, songs were sung, and experiences were related. Brother Becker gave an interesting talk on his German mission.

Brother and Sister Becker celebrated their silver wedding on Thursday evening after preaching, which was a great success. The bride wore a mosquito bar dress and veil and carried a cabbage head bouquet. The bridesmaids wore kimonos, and the best men overalls and blue handkerchiefs. F. A. Smith performed the ceremony. A violin and cornet played "How dry I am," for the wedding march, which was very appropriate since it rained almost every day and nothing was dry. The bride and groom were presented with a silver-plated quart measure loving cup. Solos, quartets, and speeches constituted the program, while the camp police patrolled the crowd of charivariers, whom the groom treated to pop and peanuts. Brother Smith finally turned the fun to a more serious nature and pronounced a wonderful blessing on the happy pair.

A marshmallow roast was enjoyed Friday evening at the playtime, at which the Savanna Saints were "guests," for they had the highest average attendance at their services since January 1.

Brother Holloway accompanied the young folks to Kewanee on two swimming excursions. A large community pool is there, equipped with all the latest devices for sports in the water.

On the second Saturday evening a musical program was given. There is some good talent in the district, and the young folks are ever ready and willing to assist in all the musical activities. Leah Denton, district chorister, had charge of the music.

The weather man did not order sunshine for us, but every-one was good-natured about it. Tuesday night we had a cloudburst, and five inches of water fell. Almost ten inches fell in twenty-four hours, which is as much as Illinois sometimes gets in a whole season. The dam broke, and our lake disappeared with a roar. In fact, it rained most every day or night, and the bleachers were filled with soaked and faded quilts, pillows, sheets, and mattresses.

There were about thirty small tents on the ground and two large ones, one for cooking and one for the children, besides the pavilion where services were held. Three hundred five were registered on the attendance record. Special visitors were: Doctor and Mrs. O. T. Hayer, Marseilles; Sister A. B. Benjamin and granddaughter, of Danville; Brother Clarence Heide and family, of Fulton, Iowa; E. R. Davis and family, of Lamoni, Iowa; Brother O. E. Lindsay and family and W. W. Richards and family, of Davenport, Iowa; L. G. Holloway and Harley Lorange, of Lamoni; J. A. Becker and wife and F. A. Smith, of Independence, Missouri. There were campers from Millersburg, Joy, Victoria, Savanna, Kewanee, Dahinda, Galesburg, Rock Island, Moline, and Peoria.

Brother Smith gave many patriarchal blessings.

The dining tent was in charge of J. W. Bean. Harland Cady and his wife were assisted by others in cooking the meals which were served at cost. No meat or coffee were served, and the cooks are to be commended for their work. A refreshment stand proved successful and was quite popular.

The camp paper was one of the enjoyable features of the evening services. The editors were Naomi Davis, Mildred Boyer, and Hope Bean, who were assisted by many others.

Four were baptized at the close of reunion.

The order of the camp was splendid. There was very little sickness among the campers, and everyone tried to observe the rules of sanitation.

Everyone felt repaid for attending the reunion, and are looking forward to our next gathering, which we hope to make even a greater success.

The Maine Reunion

The second Maine reunion was held at Brooksville, on the shore of Walker's Pond. Since last year the committee has been actively planning for the 1924 reunion, and through the efforts of Brother Floyd Black and others, the Saints have been able to purchase a beautiful tract of land.

Reunion opened August 15 with organization meeting. President F. M. McDowell was chosen as president of the reunion, and he chose Brother O. L. Thompson to be associated with him. Brother H. A. Koehler was selected to have charge of the music.

The daily program was as follows: prayer meeting at 8.30; class work in charge of Brother McDowell at 10; preaching at 11; recreation in the afternoon, song service at 7; and preaching at 7.30. As Brother McDowell's time with us was limited, he was persuaded to speak every evening he could be present. A very noticeable feature of the reunion was the fact that the entire program was well balanced, and all entered with enthusiasm into every phase of work and play.

The following speakers were in attendance, representing the general ministry: President F. M. McDowell, Calvin H. Rich, O. L. Thompson, Harvey V. Minton, H. A. Koehler, Newman M. Wilson, and H. A. Chelline. There were also present several speakers from the Southern New England District, including our venerable Brother Charles Coombs, of Onset; Patriarch John D. Suttill, of Providence; Bishop M. C. Fisher; Elder E. L. Traver, pastor of Boston Branch; and Doctor W. A. Sinclair, president of the Southern New England District.

The afternoons were devoted to boating, bathing, fishing, volley ball, baseball, quoits, etc. Early in the week the missionaries showed their skill in volley ball by defeating a picked team from among the campers. Some of the missionaries are more adept at volley ball than at catching fish, if we are to judge by the results of a fishing trip.

Thursday was to be Brother McDowell's last night with us, as he was scheduled to go from here to the Deer Park reunion. All Thursday afternoon an air of mystery surrounded the tabernacle. When the time came for the evening service, some one had prepared a surprise. The entire tent was prettily decorated with ferns and foliage, and the speaker's platform had been made into a bower. Across the front of the tent was a large sign bearing the sentiment of the entire camp towards Brother McDowell, "We are with you."

On Friday morning a large delegation from the camp went out fishing, which is one of the principal industries of the State of Maine. However, the camp cook showed most admirable judgment in that he did not depend upon the results of the fishing party in preparing his menu for that day. If he had done so, some one would have gone hungry. We prefer to say very little about the results of the fishing trip, out of deference to the feelings of those who fished.

Another event of the reunion was a very pretty wedding which took place Sunday evening, following the preaching service, when Brother Herman Hunniwell and Sister Everdene Carter were married, Elder Harvey Minton officiating. The bridal couple were attended by Brother and Sister Maybury W. Birch, of Augusta.

On the last afternoon of the reunion a special effort was made to raise funds to assist in the purchase and development of the grounds. A hearty response on the part of the assembled congregation resulted in $450 being raised immediately. Thus far we have erected on the grounds a substantial two-story building which serves as dormitory and dining hall, and a similar building for a store and refreshment stand. The store this year was in charge of Brother Jesse Barton.

The dining hall was in charge of Brother Calvin H. Rich, and the manner in which this very necessary and enjoyable feature of the reunion was handled is deserving of much credit.

Surely God's Spirit was with the reunion, and on several occasions the Saints enjoyed the manifestations of the gifts of the gospel in tongues, prophecy, etc. While the "grown-ups" met for prayer in the tabernacle tent, the younger folks met in the dormitory with Brother McDowell. The preaching and teaching all through the reunion were of a high order, and we feel assured that all left the meetings with a stronger desire to offer to God and humanity a more consecrated and more highly trained service than ever before.

Brooksville is located near the shore of Eggmoggin Beach, in a section that is patronized by many wealthy summer visitors from all parts of the country. Our work has been brought to the favorable attention of many through the reunion.

PRESS COMMITTEE.

Western Colorado

The Western Colorado reunion, which was held at Delta August 17 to 24, was considered a very great success by all those who attended. The splendid attendance at all meetings was a manifestation of the appreciation of the good things gained at each service.

We were fortunate in having with us Apostle J. F. Garver, who was accompanied by Sister Garver; also Bruce E. Brown and wife, E. R. Davis, and our missionary, J. Arthur Davis.

The Saints were blessed and encouraged by the spiritual prayer meetings, the effect of which continued throughout the day. The Lord was pleased to speak through Brother Garver to Brother J. Arthur Davis in blessing and commendation for past service, and a promise of strength to continue in his work; and in encouragement to the Saints to press on in faith, reassuring them that Zion will be redeemed and that all church difficulty will finally be removed.

The sermons were instructive and well received. Sister Brown, departmental worker, gave some good talks and ideas concerning the different departments.

A pleasant social time was had at the wiener and marshmallow roast, and one afternoon was spent in boating and swimming, which was enjoyed.

The business session of the conference was held Saturday, August 23, in which one striking feature was a resolution declaring our allegiance to the church and reaffirming our belief in God's divinely appointed priesthood, and confidence in President F. M. Smith as president, prophet, seer, and revelator to the church; and that we indorse the resolution on church government as adopted by the council of the First Presidency, members of the Quorum of Twelve, and Order of Bishops, held at Independence, Missouri, in April, 1924.

One ordination was provided for: Brother George W. Caviness, to the office of priest. Three were baptized, and four babies were blessed.

Next reunion and conference will be at Durango, August 1 to 15, 1925.

JEWELL HARSHMAN.

Northwestern Kansas Reunion

The Northwestern Kansas district reunion met at Studley, Kansas, August 15, in a beautiful grove about three quarters of a mile west of the town proper. The place was well adapted for the reunion, with plenty of shade and a splendid well of good, pure water; and best of all, it was located about the center of the district.

Brother C. I. Carpenter, the district president, resigned a few weeks before reunion time, and this left the burden of the work on Brother John Nutt, who acted as district president pro tem. This was his first attempt at such a large undertaking, but if the past reunion is an indication of his ability, a bright future is before this young man, of whom the district is justly proud.

Brother and Sister Burton arrived on the ground some two or three days before the opening, helped to get the grounds cleaned up, and assisted Brother Nutt in putting up the tents.

A part of the reunion workers did not arrive, Brother McGuire for the Bishopric, and Brother and Sister Bruce Brown, missionary and departmental workers. But Brother U. W. Greene was there and did much towards making the reunion a success. Sister Burton did the departmental work, assisted by the local workers, and Brothers Burton and Greene did the missionary work.

Two were baptized, and many heard the message of peace for the first time. The crowds growing larger each evening was encouraging, and in time a splendid work can be accomplished at this place. All the meetings were of a high spiritual order, and peace prevailed in all the meetings.

The recreational features were under the supervision of Sister Burton and consisted of volley ball and races, and two afternoons were spent in bathing. Brother Greene has spent many years in the service of the Lord, and all the time he has purposed to overcome the works of Satan, and we believe he is making progress, for when he left camp he had Satan's horns (Devil Horns) in his grip. If anyone desires further proof, call at the home of Brother Greene and see them for yourself.

Friday afternoon the district conference was held, and Brother John Nutt was elected district president for the coming year. He named as his counselors Brothers Mark Williams and G. W. Ratcliff. Other officers chosen are: Sister Maud Teeter, of Selden, Kansas, secretary; Carl Frank, Norton, Kansas, treasurer; Sister Huber, Selden, Kansas, superintendent Department of Women; Sister John Teeter, president of the Religio. It was decided to hold a reunion next year, and the district presidency was elected as the reunion committee with power to select time and place for the reunion and make all other necessary arrangements.

Great excitement prevailed in the camp in the wee hours of Friday morning. Light sleepers were aroused from their morning slumber by strange cries. Some thought it was a baby that had wandered out in the timber; others thought it was the scream of a woman. One sister was so sure that it was the cry of a youngster that she went out and made investigation, first counting her own, of which there are quite a number, to make sure they were all there. Several were sure it was a panther or mountain lion, and they stayed safely within the walls of their tents and pulled the covers well over their heads and let the screams continue. One or two mustered up courage and looked out, and they are quite sure they saw the panther or mountain lion. The matter was reported to Brothers Burton and Greene, who were camp police, and whose duty it was to see that the camp was well protected from the dangers of wild animals. After breakfast an investigation was started, and the awful monster was discovered. The "mountain lion" turned out to be a neighbor's dog and a little screech owl. One saw the dog and another heard the owl at about the same time. Brother Burton said in his evening sermon that many of our troubles are just like the mountain lion in the dark. When we look at them in the daylight, with reason, they turn out to be a very useful dog and a harmless screech owl.

The committee tried to make this reunion a success from every standpoint. In the organization it was decided that Brother Nutt should preside, to be assisted by Brother Greene. Sister Burton was put in charge of the departmental work and was also given supervision of the young people. She selected as her assistants from the local workers, Sister Crystal Teeter, Sister Coop, and Sister Dora Frank. Brother Burton assisted part of the time. Sister Dora Frank is a wonderful story-teller, and with this wonderful gift helped keep the little tots interested in the departmental tent while services were being held in the big tent. Brother Burton, of the police force, reported that the Studley Orioles had the best-kept tent and tent yard. With swings and a special volley-ball court for the youngsters, songs and games and story-telling, the young folks were well cared for. When the vote was taken for the reunion next year, every hand went up, and some of the youngsters even snapped their fingers.

The morning services were as follows: Departmental work at a quarter of nine. The Department of Women was featured at this hour. Five lessons on "Homes and home building" were given by Sister Burton at this time. Brother Burton gave one lesson on "Children must be well born." One morning each was given to the Sunday school and Religio in round table work.

The prayer meetings at a quarter of ten were well attended and were of a high spiritual order. This service was very helpful to everyone.

Preaching at the eleven o'clock hour was by Brothers Greene and Burton. These were encouraging talks to the Saints, Brother Greene answering written questions two mornings.

The evening services were missionary. They were opened with a thirty-minute song service. A special number was given each evening, consisting of solos, duets, quartets, and choruses. Every evening after preaching a thirty-minute entertainment was given, consisting of a reading and songs, and three evenings Brother Burton lectured on "Historical Nauvoo" and showed pictures. This entertainment was a new feature, but it proved very successful as an advertiser for outsiders.

We are looking forward to a better reunion next year, and all expressed themselves well pleased that they had attended this year and expect to return next reunion with a greater hope and more zeal. We have been blessed with a splendid wheat crop this year, and the Saints are very thankful for it. With the wonderful prospects ahead of us, we have much to be thankful for. We have some splendid young people who are doing all in their power to develop themselves for service, and at the reunion the burden of the music and song service fell to them. We are thankful that we have talented young people who are ready to respond whenever God calls. We are glad to see the work growing in this district and trust it will continue till it shall come to the measure that the Lord desires.

Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts Joint Reunion

The joint reunion of the Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts of Iowa, convened at Glenwood, August 23, and was from the first a real success. At the organization meeting held Saturday, August 23, Apostle T. W. Williams was unanimously chosen to preside over the reunion, and Elders A. M. Chase and John A. Hansen were chosen as associates. Elder Charles F. Putnam was chosen secretary. The first sermon of the reunion was by Bishop Charles Fry, and right then the feast began. Brethren T. W. Williams, Charles Fry, S. A. Burgess, A. M. Chase, and Charles F. Putnam, all conference appointees, were present at the beginning of the reunion. Later Bishop E. L. Kelley came, and still later came Elder J. F. Martin.

By special invitation from the reunion committee of the Little Sioux and Gallands Grove Districts reunion, Brother T. W. Williams left Sunday morning, August 24, to preach at that reunion in Dow City, but after preaching there at half past two he hastened back to Glenwood where he spoke again that evening to a capacity crowd.

Brothers S. A. Burgess had charge of the services for the junior members of the church and did most excellent work. The young people manifested an unusual interest. Sister Burgess had charge of the music of the reunion, and special numbers were provided at every preaching service. Sister Burgess also had charge of the Orioles and Temple Builders. Here again she did her part well. Sister Temple had charge of the Department of Women, and provided a program that will bear fruit.

It sounded good to hear Brother Kelley in the same ringing tones that he has carried these many years. Many personal friends came to the grounds especially to meet him again. The sermons preached at the reunion were all of a high order. After many years of absence from the district, there was general happiness to hear Brother Williams again. By the insistence of his associates, he did a good portion of the preaching, and the crowds that came to hear him testified that they approved the insistence of the associates. His pleas for a universal brotherhood reached every heart.

Two features of the reunion deserve special mention. A program given by the girls from Tabor and Shenandoah on Thursday evening was a pronounced success; the priesthood meeting held Sunday, August 31, at half past two was one occasion long to be remembered by those who attended. The meeting was addressed by Brother T. W. Williams. Mention was made of the problems before the church, but no side was defended, and only a plea for unreserved service and continuous prayer was offered as the duty of the membership in this trying hour. Brother Williams said he thought it would be very unkind to enter into any discussion of the matter, inasmuch as no representative of those holding views contrary to those he held was present. General unanimity prevailed among the seventy-eight members of the priesthood present. The spirit of peace was in our midst.

General good health was the order of the camp. Excellent meals were served in the dining hall, and perfect order reigned. The ambitious police chief, Brother George Beatty, reported at the last business meeting that there had been no disturbances, and he could only offer his commendations. The games enjoyed by the young people added to the life of the camp. Oh, yes! The boys did beat the preachers in a game of indoor baseball! Brother Williams can preach, but he will never make a league team ball player.

During the reunion ten were baptized, and three children were blessed. We separated with regrets that the time had been so short. But after all, it will be at least one bright spot in this dark hour, and we hope to enjoy many more such reunions. May the Spirit of God continue with his people.

Southern Wisconsin

The Southern Wisconsin reunion of 1924 is now history, and we are pleased to report that it was a success. The weather was wonderful, the location ideal. Reunion was held in beautiful Olin Park on Lake Monona at the border of the capital city of Wisconsin, Madison. The beautiful lake, the picturesque landscape, the towering capitol standing majestically across the lake facing camp, together with the many tents that dotted the large park, was not alone pleasing to the eye, but was most wonderfully uplifting to the souls of men.

The first session was held Friday night, at which service Elder Ward L. Christy was the speaker. Saturday afternoon the organization meeting was held. Apostle F. Henry Edwards and Elders J. O. Dutton and Ward L. Christy were chosen to preside.

It can truthfully be said that never did such throngs attend our reunion before, and a great portion of this vast number were the most energetic, active, persistent horde one ever saw. No one could sleep during their activities; no one even stood still. They were a little folk with a long bill and an appreciation of life blood.

With this throng was a goodly crowd of faithful Saints,

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, September 8.

Our Departed Ones

JONES.—Ivea L. Yingling Jones was born February 2, 1876, at Carthage, Ohio. Was reared in Seven Mile, Ohio, where she met and married George V. Jones, of Hamilton, Ohio, April 28, 1897, to which union three children were born. Baptized when a young girl by Rudolph Etzenhouser. Moved with their family to Independence in 1918, where they have since resided at 1026 West College. Died August 26, 1924. Leaves husband, one son, one daughter, two sisters, and her father. Funeral at the home, with sermon by Joseph Luff. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

LIVINGSTON.—James Franklin Livingston was born in Clearfield County, Pennsylvania, May 28, 1837. Baptized in 1895. Died May 23, 1924. Leaves wife and a number of children and grandchildren. Funeral in the Saints' church near Durand, Wisconsin, May 25, in charge of Lester O. Wildermuth, of Plano, Illinois.

BIRD.—Richard Bird was born in 1840. Died March 22, 1924. He was one of the Saints who went to Texas with Lyman Wight. He was forced into the Confederate Army, but deserted at the first opportunity, crossed the Rio Grande, and enlisted in the Union Army. He was one of the pioneers of the Reorganization, doing active work in Spring River District. Held the office of priest and was widely and favorably known. John Blackmore assisted at his funeral.

DUNSDON.—Elizabeth Ann, daughter of Roy J. and Gladys Dunsdon, died Sunday, August 31, at the home near Tabor, Iowa, being two days over her third birthday. Services at the church at Tabor, with sermon by Charles Fry, assisted by A. M. Chase and H. N. Pierce.

more than usual, who pushed themselves through all difficulties and with patience and devotion, prayer and cooperation, found the way to the favor of God, who blessed us with many blessings of body, mind, and soul during the days that followed.

The special workers appointed to our reunion did not arrive until Monday, the 25th, namely Apostle Edwards, Patriarch W. A. McDowell, and Sister L. Lenore Christy, field worker.

The first Sunday was a beautiful day. A splendid prayer meeting was held at nine o'clock, followed by preaching at eleven by Ward L. Christy, and at two by J. O. Dutton. The evening sermon was by Brother Christy.

Upon the arrival of the special workers a definite order of services was established. The young children were given from seven to eight in the morning for prayer service in charge of Sister Christy, who developed these meetings into a splendid success. The general prayer meeting was held at nine, after which class work was conducted from fifteen minutes of eleven till noon. The people were divided into three classes: adult, young people, and children. Sister Christy, who was in charge of all class work, conducted the adult class, Brother Edwards the young people, and Sister Julia Dutton the children. These classes were very successfully managed and were surely a means of great uplift and blessing to all. Brother McDowell had charge of all general prayer meetings, and his kind and fatherly spirit endeared him to all the Saints of the district. Brother Edwards was the principal speaker, and his timely topics and effective instructions were well received by all.

There were visitors from Chicago, Belvidere, Rockford, and Dekalb, Illinois, and other points, some coming from as far as Creston, Iowa. These splendid people from other points added materially to the pleasure and spirit of the occasion. Of the general ministry there were present Leonard Houghton, E. J. Lenox, and J. E. Wildermuth; and there were H. Woodstock, O. A. McDowell, J. A. Daer, B. C. Flint, C. C. Hoague, G. Noble, Phil Davenport, and others of the local ministry there. Generally speaking the preaching was of a high order. Every man spoke as he was led by the Spirit.

During the afternoon preaching service, Sister Christy conducted a junior church, calling to her assistance Sister Dutton and some of the ministry. This department was especially interesting and uplifting.

The music of the reunion was in charge of Sister H. W. Woodstock, who was assisted by several local workers, among them Herald Beusith, of Chicago, and Brothers Wirth and Duncan, of Madison, who with violin and horn gave valued assistance at every program.

The commissary department was under the direct management of Brother and Sister Carl Wirth, who gave evidence of their capability from the start.

Financially, the committee, with District President J. O. Dutton at the head, went over the top with a nice balance for the coming year.

There was but one case of sickness on the grounds, and aside from a painful accident to a dear little child, everything was most enjoyable, and the spirit of the camp was at high tide most of the time.

There were eight baptisms during the reunion, all children. What promise there is in them, and how we rejoice to see them come into the service of the church!

This reunion was an occasion that will live long in the memories of those who were fortunate enough to be able to attend, and all look forward with pleasure to the time of the next gathering.

Among the Nebraska Indians

Latter Day Saints began their work of presenting the gospel of Jesus Christ to the American Indians in the year 1830. Much has occurred to interrupt the work since then, but efforts have often been made to increase our activity.

Recent years have seen numbers of this interesting race gathered into the fold of the church, and the gospel has been presented to many others. On the Omaha Indian Reservation, between Decatur and Macy, Nebraska, there are in the neighborhood of four hundred Indian members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Among them for several years we have had a missionary, and this year Elder Benjamin F. Creel and his wife, Sister Anna Myrtle Creel, are working under church appointment. They took up their residence at Walthill immediately upon appointment to the field, and have devoted themselves to the interests of the Indians and other Latter Day Saints of this section of country.

It became apparent to these missionaries that preaching to this membership would only be discharging a small portion of their responsibility and embracing a similar part of their opportunity, so they have busied themselves in looking after the financial, physical, and social problems which are prominently before the eyes of any who will see. Entering into the homes of their charges in times of need, giving them advice and showing them how to care for their homes and children, helping and instructing them in caring for their crops of fruit, vegetables, etc., advising them in their dealings, praying with them and for them, these missionaries have found scant time for needed rest, but they are happy and devoted to their work.

To the minds of the Creels it seemed that a distinctly advance step was demanded. A demonstration farm was the thing needed, and led by what they accepted as light of the Spirit, they began trying to bring it about. Consultation with the First Presidency, members of the Quorum of Twelve, and the Presiding Bishopric brought out the fact that all agreed that a demonstration farm would be the most effective way to accomplish the betterment of agricultural conditions among the people of that section. A forty-acre tract of ground was purchased midway between Macy and Decatur in April, and its improvement was begun.

Some of the hillsides were in virgin prairie grass, while the bottom land had been corned too long. A creek runs through the center of the land, and along its side the new Nebraska state highway has very recently been graded, and almost every foot of the farm may be viewed as one drives along this good road.

On the hillsides Elder Creel has established the orchard plot, having set two hundred apple trees of standard winter varieties, more than one hundred cherry trees, and forty plums. More apple trees and grapes will be added, for which the ground has been prepared. Sweet clover and alfalfa have been established in a tract of about eleven acres. A crop of nice potatoes is ready for digging. Considerable cane fodder and millet is growing in another tract.

Entering the farm on the new highway near the southeast corner of the tract, one sees on his right an excavation twenty-eight by forty feet and deep enough to make a good basement, just completed by the Indians themselves, and ready for the cement forms. Here is to be the church, a bungalow design, and the site is ideal.

Possibly twenty or thirty rods further northwest is the site selected for the farm buildings, a little to the south of the center of the tract. Here is now erected one unit of the future poultry house, twenty by forty feet, of tile, and occupied as the residence of the missionaries. The parsonage or residence has not been begun, but exists quite definitely in the minds of the Creels, and much material has been contributed to its erection.

The condition of the crops is quite good, considering the peculiar season of 1924, which rendered cultivation very difficult. We must also consider the fact that Brother Creel has been compelled to depend upon donated help, for the farm at present does not possess horsepower or implements, and his effort has been directed to obtaining help to finance the plan (a man's job); keeping up meetings and caring for a membership of several hundred scattered over a wide area; trying to help the Indians in the solution of domestic problems such as the preservation of fruits, vegetables, and meats for winter use; and other activities which rest upon a minister in a new country and among people speaking a strange tongue.

We wonder at the amount of work which has been accomplished, we admire the pluck and tenacity of the man and woman who are not daunted by what duties they know the future year holds for them, and they could not be so hopeful as they are if it were not for their living faith in God. We are gladened by contact with the friends these people have made among the Indians and the best whites in the country. We made calls on several business men in Macy and Walthill and without solicitation heard the finest commendations of the work of our missionaries, and great respect for them was expressed. Several volunteered the information that they were glad to be able to help these people in their good work.

A call at the office of the Farm Bureau in Walthill was greeted by the county agent as an opportunity to express his hope that "the important work begun by Mr. Creel will be supported by all. I shall support it every way that is in my power," said Mr. Winter, "and shall be at his call any time. It is a great opportunity to do a much needed work, and these people have a good comprehension of the situation. I think you have a great story."

On Sunday, September 13, we met with the Indians within a stone's throw of the new church site, addressing them for close to an hour through an interpreter, Brother Tom Walker, an intelligent Indian. We met many substantial, stable characters among the church's Indian membership, and of some of our experiences we will write again.

We bespeak a working interest among the Saints for this timely enterprise of the church. Your prayerful, practical help is needed that the church may be honored and its representatives rightly supported.

RICHARD J. LAMBERT.

"A Word of Consolation"

During the "Dark and Cloudy Day" "A word of consolation" was written under the direction of the Spirit, and this document became the basis of the Reorganization of the church. Its principles are still true and essential.

At Beloit, Wisconsin, in June, 1853, there was held a meeting that looms large in the history of the Reorganization. The church had been rejected; Nauvoo, like the lives of thousands of its people, lay in ruins; domineering leaders had taken many to the West; the faith and doctrine of the church had been perverted to ambitious and evil purposes. The Saints had been scattered like sheep before a storm, and all had been bewilderment and confusion. Now for the first time a ray of light was piercing the gloom.

Thousands of Saints, scattered and despondent as they were, had remained true to the original faith, and here and there courageous men stepped forth to champion the truth. Moved by a common inspiration, a few of them now met at Beloit, and they waited on the Lord in mighty prayer for help and guidance. A series of resolutions was then adopted by this little conference, rejecting the claims of Brigham Young, James J. Strang, and others; reaffirming their allegiance to the original faith; and declaring their purpose to take up the work of reuniting the loyal Saints. A committee was appointed to draft an appeal to the scattered Saints, this committee to report at a later conference.

Early in January of the following year a conference was again held, and the committee presented its draft of the address to the Saints. The conference took the matter to the Lord in humble questioning and asked: "Is there any addition necessary to the pamphlet before its publication?"—Church History, vol. 3, p. 214.

The answer they received to the above question, according to their testimony was:

As you have desired to know of me concerning the pamphlet, it is written in part, but not in plainness. It requires three more pages to be written, for it shall go forth in great plainness, combating this doctrine, and all who receive it not, it shall judge at the last day. Let this be the voice of the Lord in the pamphlet, for it shall go forth in great plainness, and many will obey it and turn unto me, saith the Lord.—Church History, vol. 3, p. 215.

These men were laying the foundation upon which the Reorganization was to be built. The "Word of consolation" was basic, and the Lord approved it, saying: "All who receive it not, it shall judge at the last day."

These godly men had gone through the tragedy at Nauvoo and the following apostasy. They had seen all power centered in the hands of a few, and they were "the governed" indeed. They had been cautioned to "obey counsel" and say nothing. They were now determined to restore the original government of the church. Listen to the inspired words of their great document:

But again in the midst of this darkness, we have lost sight not only of the true course, but of the principle by which to correct all deviations therefrom, to restore that which was lost. That principle is a rule known to the Nephites in their prosperity, and at the commencement of the reign of the judges it became a law, viz: "common consent," or "the voice of the people." See Mosiah, chap. 13, par. 2: "Now it is not common that the voice of the people, (Saints of God), desireth anything contrary to that which is right, and therefore this shall ye observe and make it your law to do your business by the voice of the people." See also Doc. and Cov., sec. 61, par. 4: "Behold I give unto you a commandment that ye shall assemble yourselves together to agree upon my word." See also Doc. and Cov. sec. 51, par. 4: "Neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church, contrary to the church covenants, for all things must be done in order and by common consent in the church." Here are three several commandments to the church directly, and one from the Book of Mormon, to enforce this principle of common consent.

It is amazing that there are those among us who would seek to discredit the principle of democracy, particularly as applied to the government of our church. A principle once proven to be true is true wherever found and cannot be discarded at will.

For why do some of our writers constantly hark back to Moses and the dismal forty years of wandering in the wilderness? Is there a man of Moses' proportions among us? Are we serfs newly liberated from an Egyptian yoke that we should need be whipped into a semblance of order and taught the first rudiments of self-government? Shall we revert to a government of the rod? Then why constantly liken us to the rebellious tribes who made a golden calf in Aaron's day?

Why this sudden distrust of democracy and the apparent revulsion against the principles that have made both our nation and our church the great institutions they are to-day? As a church we stand committed to democracy; as a people the Saints are patriotic and loyal. As is shown by the "Word of consolation," ours is an enfranchised people, and it is not only legal, but it is right and conducive to progress that the people should rule.

Joseph Smith, the instrument through whom an unchangeable God revealed to the church the principles to govern the Reorganization, during his fifty-four years as President, interpreted the operation of democracy in the church as follows:

In treating of the rights of the membership—"the rights of the Saints of the Most High"—it is safe to say that, all the rights not clearly delegated by commandment of God to the

Why Fear Discussion?

BY BENJAMIN R. M'GUIRE

Some reasons are presented why every member of the church should read carefully the discussion on church government now taking place in the HERALD.

From time to time there comes to the attention of the undersigned, as a member of the Board of Publication, objections to the discussion of church problems in the HERALD. This is no new criticism to be urged against the policy consistently adhered to by the official organ of the church. The history of the HERALD will prove that whenever important issues were up for decision, and honest differences were expressed in deep earnestness of debate, a few have become fearful of results and have insisted that the columns of the paper be closed to such discussion. Fortunately for the church, such fears have not been shared by the large majority, and so in due time full and free discussion has been had, both verbally and in print, and a better understanding of the questions and of each other arrived at by all concerned as a basis for decision by the church in General Conference assembly. It is evident to a student of church history that the welfare of the gospel cause has not been hindered, but rather advanced, by the HERALD policy of an open press and free discussion of vital problems.

Discussion Approved of God

The ministry, confident of the divinity of the church's teachings and mission, have persistently and consistently affirmed to the world the principles for which we stand, and have called upon men and women everywhere to "Come now, let us reason together," and to "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." The elders have even been told in latter-day revelation to call upon those who may be opposed to the work "to meet you, both in public and in private, and inasmuch as ye are faithful, their shame shall be made manifest . . . let them bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord."

Obedience to the laws of discussion, comparison, analysis, and proof has therefore contributed to the establishment and advancement of the work of the latter-day evangel. The glory of God (intelligence) has borne witness to the minds of tens of thousands that the message of the Restoration is true.

Why Change?

The Doctrine and Covenants tells us, "That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same." It stands to reason then that we should proceed cautiously, especially when we are without divine command, to change the laws or principles of procedure which have governed the work of the church thus far.

Why should any fear the continuation of the processes of honest discussion, comparison, analysis, and proof upon any subject vital to the continued progress of the cause we love? Surely such an attitude is an exhibition of little faith in the principles we cherish. An attempt to close the channels of discussion is antiscritural and foreign to the spirit of the restoration which the Lord breathed into the church at its beginning and which has animated the labors, both within and without the fold, of those who have laid the foundation upon which we are now building.

Joseph Smith Stood Out for Open Discussion in "Herald"

The following quotations from the writings of the late Joseph Smith will prove what heretofore has been the attitude of the official church organ:

Some of our elders object to anything of a controversial nature appearing in the HERALD. This idea is, in our opinion, a greatly mistaken one, for several reasons. Truth does not suffer from investigation; error alone flourishes in the dark, and resists examination. . . .

The policy of crying down discussion is one of the Devil's favorite themes. He is pleased when people are willing to glide along easily and dreamily without knowing just where they are, what they are doing, or where they are going. It is the people who think and act from an understanding of law that he is afraid of. He cannot easily mislead those who, acquainted with God's law, humbly but firmly refuse to be led by what is in opposition to it. . . .

The education and development of the people can only come about by individual and personal effort. . . . All men and women have powers of mind and heart that may be brought out, that must be brought out to their full extent if the units of society are to be happified and brought up to the possibilities open to all. This the gospel contemplates, hence individual action in faith, repentance, baptism, and in receiving confirmation is required. The trouble is that many practically stop here, waiting for the ministry to do the rest.

All our people should study the revelations of God to the church, and become familiar with them. They should know what they are doing and why they act. The Lord can scarcely be pleased with less than this. . . .

We believe in investigation. It was well expressed by the statement of a minister at one of our General Conferences: "We are here to cut gordian knots, and to solve problems."

No subject of general import is beyond the realm of proper investigation, and criticism, and analysis. We plead for open, unhampered, full investigation.—Editorial, SAINTS' HERALD, March 9, 1898.

We are constantly asking other men to examine, to read, to argue, to reflect, to hear other and adverse opinions to those they hold; to investigate, to compare what others present with what they have, and to reason. All these things we ask them to do in order that they may "prove all things and hold fast that which is good." Why is it, then, that we are so afraid of the expression of different ideas from each other? Why is it that the examinations attempted by some of the elders in the HERALD are construed into division, strife, and contention? Why should we not do among ourselves what we ask others to do outside of our own circle? Is it possible that argument is to be employed only in dispute with them that are without? Is it to be supposed that men will drift into oneness of idea without interchange of thought? If there is a foundation, may we dig for it? And shall our earnest digging be taken as a token of departure from the faith? We hope not. Dig deep, brethren, and keep digging till we agree, or understand each other in love.—Editorial, SAINTS' HERALD, February 23, 1884.

Changes in Government

Few things stir the hearts of men and women as do changes in rules of government which take rights away from the people and increase the powers of officials over them. The history of mankind abounds with accounts of such efforts in both church and state.

With a knowledge of history and human nature, nothing else should have been anticipated than what has happened as result of recent efforts to put into effect fundamental changes in the government procedure of the church. Opinion in the church is divided. Some are for the document on church government adopted by a majority of the advisory council last April, and others are supporting the principles set forth in the "Open Letter." The ministry and membership on either side are of sufficient number and honorable standing to be entitled to a respectful hearing.

Oneness Through Exchange of Ideas

Interest throughout the church is intense, and it must have channels of expression. As in the case of the river cutting its way to the sea, the deep feelings of the Saints in these matters cannot be checked. The HERALD has always been one of the legitimate avenues of expression, discussion, and analysis of all church problems of general interest and application. For this reason, the Board of Publication could see nothing else to do but meet the demand, as evidenced by hundreds of letters in our possession, that the HERALD columns be opened for free and frank discussion of present church problems on an affirmative basis.

Even now, when the question is asked, "What is the basis of the present differences in the church?" various and somewhat conflicting answers are given, depending upon the person's contact and experience with the origin and development of the questions at issue. Two members of the church seldom clear up a controversy until they get together as the law provides and both sides are presented in the proper spirit. The same principle holds true in attempts to unify the present divided opinion of the church. Before we can harmonize our conflicting views, we must first ascertain what the underlying issues are.

Who Fears "Herald" Discussions?

We wish to take this occasion to commend the spirit in which the present discussion in the HERALD has been conducted. While deep convictions move our writers to earnest and fearless presentation of their views, I believe it is uncharitable for anyone to say that the expressions used are intended to injure the feelings of their brethren, or that they are "personal" except as the necessity for clearness has demanded.

Occasionally the following statements are heard:

I will not discuss the church issues.

I do not read the discussion in the HERALD.

My mind is made up and I do not care to hear or read anything about the questions.

The conflicting arguments will only weaken the faith of church members and injure the standing of the church in the eyes of nonmembers.

Thus history is only repeating itself. All of these objections have been urged against the HERALD before and answered in the writings of the former editor from which quotations have been presented.

The above objections are not typical of Latter Day Saints. They do not manifest the attitude approved of God which caused those of our number, or our forefathers, to investigate the claims of the Restoration and upon presentation of sufficient proof to sever their former religious connections.

The signers of the document presenting changes in church government say in the HERALD of July 9:

That since it seems the matters in controversy are to be brought before General Conference, it will be well for the Saints and delegates to study further the law and weigh matters presented for their consideration, reserving final judgment until conference meets to hear the cause. And most assuredly none will finally reach conclusions from the basis of unanswered reasoning or statements, publicly or privately made.

The signers of the "Open letter," pleading for the established order of things, say in their document:

We issue this open letter so that a frank consideration of them may be had throughout the church.

The true student and scholar approaches investigation with an open mind, seeking truth rather than confirmation.

Subscriptions for "Saints' Herald"

In justice to himself and to the interests of the work as a whole, no Latter Day Saint can afford to deny himself the opportunity of analyzing both sides of the issues upon which the church must pass judgment. Since 1830 our people have been urging in their missionary work, "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him." It is good to bear this proverb in mind in all stages of our religious experience.

In many quarters of the church we notice an increase recently in the number of subscribers to the SAINTS' HERALD. In other places it would seem that some occupying official responsibilities are not cooperating to increase the subscription list. A crisis confronts the church, and it calls for the righteous judgment of the Saints which must be based upon an intelligent comprehension of all the issues and facts involved. Upon this thought the former President of the church once wrote:

Nor are we so fearful to see discussion and comparison of view and argument upon the subjects of interest to Israel, as are some of our more timid and conservative brethren. If Truth and Justice shake the sieve, and Fairness turn the fan, we like to see the chaff fly. Truth is a sturdy soldier, and though he may be lost sight of for a time in the dust and smoke of the battle, his smiling face will be seen at the close of the fight among the victors, waiting for the crown.—SAINTS' HERALD, August 15, 1881.

The HERALD is an established church institution. It has survived all controversies since 1860, and judging the future by the past it will continue its mission when the present questions are settled. Its interests are the church's interests, in which every member shares. Every officer and member of the church with the welfare of the work at heart spiritually and financially should encourage others who may not be doing so to take and read the HERALD. No real Latter Day Saint will close his eyes and bury his head in his prejudices and preconceived ideas, like the familiar story of the ostrich protecting itself by burying its head in the sand.

Remember

Truth does not suffer from investigation; error alone flourishes in the dark, and resists examination.

The policy of crying down discussion is one of the Devil's favorite themes.

Dig deep, brethren, and keep digging till we agree, or understand each other in love.

May truth and love prevail.

God's Watchcare

Recently we submitted an article for publication under the above caption. Knowing that these experiences which come to God's people are strengthening, we are passing along the experience of another brother in Oregon. He writes us:

I have prayed to the divine giver of all knowledge, and it has been made known to me that my duty was to pay my tithe as required, and that the responsibility for its proper handling rested upon others. That if I did that, my hands were clear.

It is encouraging to us to see the hand of God manifested in the leading of his children from time to time. It gives us courage, and I trust will inspire faith in the hearts of his people and will encourage all to do their duty in complying with the financial law of the gospel.

Let Contention Cease

BY HUBERT CASE

The last word of the Lord to this church was, "Let contention cease." I am wondering how long it will take to get the Saints to believe a word the Lord would say on any given subject. It seems we are much like the rest of the world; if it says just what we believe we will take it good-naturedly.

I desire to give you a few of the statements of the Lord on this subject: Doctrine and Covenants 119:5 says, "Contention is unseemly; therefore cease to contend," 98:3, "Behold, I say unto you, there were jarrings, and contentions, envyings, and strifes, and lustful and covetous desires among them; therefore by these things they polluted their inheritances. They were slow to hearken unto the voice of the Lord their God," etc. Could we take a lesson from this and apply it to our present condition and see if there is any danger of history repeating itself? Better look well to our doings today, for we are coming again to the very same condition of faultfinding, accusing the brethren, contending one with another, etc. Shall we build Zion, or shall we fight and contend one against the other and defeat the very plan of God? for the set time has surely come to build Zion.

Doctrine and Covenants 117:12: "Let contentions and quarrelings among you cease. Sustain each other in peace, and ye shall be blessed with my Spirit, in comforting and strengthening you for my work."

I have wondered for years if we would ever learn the lesson of working together in the Spirit of the Lord, or if we are determined to again pollute our inheritance and never see Zion.

God has appointed a leader for this people, and that Prophet has clearly outlined the great work ahead of the church, just as did the Seer of God when they polluted their inheritances the first time in the latter-day dispensation. And as they did in the days of Moses. Prominent men in days of old, men of renown in Israel; that is just what we are hearing now; we know these men; they are men of renown, etc. Exactly what was said of those men; but read the results in the 16th chapter of Numbers.

Why not pay some attention to the words of the Lord and the history of the past? For one, I am willing to obey God rather than men and see the church go ahead and see Zion built up; and to this end, as one of the workers therein, I shall ever dedicate my life and all my energies.

Again, read Romans 2:8 regarding those that cause contention, and in 1 Corinthians 11:16, "But if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God."

The above was the advice of Paul. Have we forgotten the advice given us in the Book of Mormon? Please read the following as a reminder: "And he commanded them, that there should be no contention one with another."—Mosiah 9:54.

Also in Mosiah the words of Alma in chapter 11:16: "Thus did Alma teach his people, that every man should love his neighbor as himself; that there should be no contentions among them."

The Book of Mormon and the Present Status

BY LOUISE PALFREY SHELDON

What Constitutes a Seer.—In an article entitled, "The present status," in HERALD for July 16, 1924, there are statements referring to the Book of Mormon that do not represent the book correctly. Mosiah 5:79 and 80 is quoted as defining some of the gifts of a seer. The verses cited are as follows:

And by them shall all things be revealed, or rather, shall secret things be made manifest, and hidden things shall come to light, and things which are not known shall be made known by them; and also, things shall be made known by them which otherwise could not be known.

These verses refer to the interpreters by which Ammon told King Limhi, Mosiah could translate the twenty-four gold plates. The instrument, not the man, is described. Without the instrument, the man is not a seer. There is no "supersensitive power of discernment" indicated as residing in the man. It is through the use of the interpreters that "secret things" are made manifest, "hidden things" come to light, "and also, things shall be made known by them which otherwise could not be known."

Ammon makes it clear that a man is a seer when he has the gift to use the interpreters. It takes two things to make a seer. A man must have the Urim and Thummim, and he must have the gift to use it. A man is not a seer without the instrument, and he is not a seer if he does not have the gift to use the instrument. The instrument and the gift go together, since one is useless without the other.

"Discernment," or the Written Word?—The article previously referred to speaks of the false teachers who appeared from time to time among the Nephites, and how they were detected by the "discernment" in the man who presided over the church. Nothing is said about their being judged by the written word which would make false teachings apparent. The effort seems to be to magnify the occult powers of living oracles. As we read the Book of Mormon, it seems to us that Jacob, Amulek, and Abinadi being well versed and sound in doctrine were able to vanquish the false assumption of priestcraft with the written word. The most powerful weapon that Jesus himself employed against the doctors and lawyers, and with which he met the Devil was, "It is written."

Book of Mormon Censors (?)—In one place the article referred to asserts "that invariably the things that were to go out to the people were in the hands of the prophet, seer, and revelator of the church for censorship and publication."

Two thoughts are involved in this statement: one is, that "the things that were to go out to the people" passed through the hands of one and the same individual, namely, "the prophet, seer and revelator of the church." Second, that "the things that were to go out to the people" were subject to the judgment of the "prophet, seer, and revelator of the church" before the people got them—were in his hands "for censorship and publication."

The brother does not indicate what he means by "the things that were to go out to the people," but we suppose he means anything and everything that came from the Lord for the people. We deny that any man was permitted to exercise censorship of that which God gave for the people. There is no foundation for even suggesting such a thing. Book of Mormon writers show that they tried to make a faithful record of the things God gave for the benefit of the people of their own times, and of future generations.

The vagueness of expression compels us to guess at what might be meant, and to consider different points of view. Does he speak of censors in the sense that the "prophet, seer, and revelator" (to use the brother's terms) decided everything, and left nothing to the discretionary powers or the judgment of the people? If so, we must take issue again. Alma instructed the people of the church to trust "no one to be your teacher nor your minister, except he be a man of God, walking in his ways and keeping his commandments." (Mosiah 11:15.) Alma was the founder of the church. He had been appointing priests and teachers in all the branches. He had authority to do so (see Mosiah 9:51), and yet here we find him making it the duty of the people to guard and protect the Lord's work. Not merely giving the people the right to assent to what he proposes, but recognizing their right to exercise judgment and initiative. There is no liberty where the people are deprived of initiative, and common consent becomes an empty term when it amounts to no more than assent to somebody else's plans or ideas. Had Alma desired to act as a censor, had he believed it was God's way for the priest, or the "prophet, seer, and revelator" to think for the people, or impose his wishes on them under the guise of being divinely appointed, Alma had the best opportunity in the world, for the people wanted to give him supreme control. He did not ask it; the people desired to make him king, and he reminded the people of their experience under Noah, who unmade priests and made new ones who were congenial to him and would carry out his designs. Alma said to the people, "I desire that ye should stand fast in this liberty wherewith ye have been made free."—Mosiah 11:14.

Some people seem to think that the lesson does not apply in the spiritual realm because of that term king. There are people who would suffer more dominance than any modern king exercises under some other name than king. The principle that Alma is warning the people against is centralization of power. There is where the danger lies, and Alma warns the people to trust "no man" with it. (See Mosiah 11:14.) We have heard it argued that the people are safe so long as they have the power of recall. Every student of the world's history knows better. They know it has taken revolutions to overthrow an established system, as Mosiah graphically shows. (Read Mosiah 13:28-31.)

"Prophet, Seer, and Revelator" Question.—Let us look at the proposition that "the things that were to go out to the people" passed through the hands of "the prophet, seer, and revelator of the church."

During the Mosaic dispensation, the church was presided over by a high priest. The writer knows of no instance in the Bible or the Book of Mormon where it is indicated that the presiding high priest was the only one through whom the Lord could speak to the people. Aaron was the first high priest over the Israelitish church or people, while Moses was the prophet. Aaron was succeeded by Eleazar, and Joshua becomes the prophet leader of the people, performing the miracles of dividing the waters of Jordan, causing the walls of Jericho to fall, and commanding the sun and the moon to stand still. After the Israelites are established in the promised land, and need a prophet leader no longer, the church is presided over by one high priest after another, but Joshua has no successor. From time to time prophets appear among Israel, coming through no particular line, filling no fixed office, just coming as God called a man here, or there, and bestowed the gift of a prophet upon him. Sometimes there were more than one prophet at a time.

The ability to be a seer or a prophet does not necessarily attach to position or priesthood. The latter-day prophet and seer, Joseph Smith, had the Urim and Thummim and worked on the translation of the Book of Mormon before he was ever called to the Aaronic priesthood. Certainly we are not able to find any more evidence in the Book of Mormon than in the Bible for the idea that the functions of prophet, seer, revelator, and presiding high priest must be combined in one and the same man. A striking instance in proof that these duties or powers may be separated is afforded in the case where Mosiah translated the twenty-four gold plates when Alma was in Zarahemla, had been establishing the church in that land, and was recognized the head of the church by Mosiah himself. Those who would like to read the proceedings of that time will find the account in the 9th chapter of Mosiah, verses 28 to 73, most of the 11th chapter, and the 12th chapter, verses 14 to 22.

In proof that all the revelations of God and inspired teachings did not emanate from, or pass through, the "hands" of the head of the church, we have only to refer to Amulek, Abinadi, and Samuel. Mormon and Moroni are prominent prophet teachers in the fourth century after Christ, but neither could have been the head of the church, for we read of no such office as presiding high priest over the church after Christ.

The Book of Mormon warns against the danger of centralization of power. It proclaims for civil and religious liberty. It raises the standard for freedom, impartiality, equal rights. It teaches the fallibility of man, and holds the Christ up as the friend of every man, from whose store of wisdom and knowledge every man may draw, each in his office and calling, as he has need. The Book of Mormon came to complete the work of spiritual emancipation that the Reformation began, and if there be any who would revert to the methods of the church in the Dark Ages, or who would adopt a similar method to that used by the church in the mountains of the West, they will be compelled to find support outside the pages of the Book of Mormon.

Constitutional Government in the United States

BY RICHARD S. SALYARDS

Constitutional History, Continued

Colonial Legislation.—In the Thirteen Colonies a variety of local governments existed preceding organization of the American Union. The Colonies claimed the rights of British subjects and the protection of the common law. They enjoyed quite generally the privilege of local self-government, with the right of voting taxes. Their assemblies, modeled after the House of Commons, asserted all the immunities against royal oppression gained in past struggles of the English people.

The Colonies learned to some extent to cooperate, in order to fight the French and Indian wars, but the king did not favor having them unite. As a result of the stamp tax, however, a Colonial Congress was called in 1765. It was not until the convening of the Second Continental Congress, that the colonies found it necessary to separate from the Mother Country. This they did by adopting the Declaration of Independence. It is "the fundamental law of America as to the relation between the sovereign people and their established government!"

We quote from the Declaration:

We hold these truths to be self-evident—that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

The government of the Union under the Continental Congress was revolutionary and consisted of an agreement by representatives of the people of the several States that Congress should exercise certain powers not very clearly defined, among which were power to declare war, conclude peace, form alliances, contract debts, etc.

The States themselves soon proceeded to adopt definite formal constitutions, applying, defining, and limiting the powers of their several departments of government. With but two exceptions they had completed that work before independence was won.

The revolutionary government of Congress was insufficient for the purpose of the Union. The powers exercised by the Continental Congress had never been formally conferred or agreed upon by the States. Congress was considered an advisory body rather than a government. Necessity determined the degree of obedience to its commands. Its orders were often disregarded, and the Confederation was "in danger of falling to pieces for the want of a legal bond of union and of legal power to compel performance of duties owing to it by its several members."

Articles of Confederation.—These Articles, designed to remedy the evils of the revolutionary system of government, were submitted to the States in 1777 and were subsequently ratified. This was the first express compact between the States. It marks the constitutional birth of the United States as a nation. It was not finally ratified by all the States until 1781. The defects of the system of Confederation made failure inevitable. It had limited authority to make laws but had no power to compel obedience. The States were jealous of each other. The success of the plan depended entirely upon the voluntary action of thirteen States, "all likely to recognize the pressure of home debts and home burdens sooner than the obligations of the broader patriotism in fidelity to the Union. . . . It became at last difficult to enlist sufficient interest in its proceedings to keep up the forms of government through the meetings of Congress and of the executive committee." (Cooley, on "Constitutional law.")

The Constitution

In February, 1787, the Congress adopted a resolution calling for a convention of the States to revise the Articles of Confederation. It was found necessary, however, to formulate a new Constitution. The Constitutional Convention completed its work September 17, 1787. The Constitution was submitted to Congress and by it was transmitted to the legislatures of the States, who submitted it to their people for ratification. It was ratified by conventions of delegates chosen by the people in each State. Within a year eleven of the States had ratified the Constitution, and in September, 1788, Congress made provision for an election and inauguration of the new government.

Amendments were subsequently made, in the form of a Bill of Rights. In substance these rights are: 1. Right of personal security, to be free from intrusion upon one's liberty by the government, save as a punishment for crime. 2. Right of personal liberty, without restraint, except by due process of law. 3. Right of private property without control or diminution, except by law. 4. Right to justice, including right to trial by jury and other securities to one charged with crime. 5. Right to petition for redress. 6. Right to bear arms.

The Enacting Clause reads:

We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Our system of government is dual in form. "The Constitution in all its provisions looks to an indestructible Union composed of indestructible States." "The government created by the Constitution is one of limited and enumerated powers, and the Constitution is the measure and the test of the powers conferred. Whatever is not conferred is withheld, and belongs to the several States or to the people thereof."

The purpose . . . was to perpetuate the States in their integrity, and to strengthen the Union in order that they might be perpetuated. To this end the grant of powers to the Confederacy needed to be enlarged and extended, the machinery of government to be added to and perfected, the people to be made parties to the charter of government, and the sanction of law and judicial authority to be given to the legitimate acts of the government in any and all of its departments. But when this had been done, it remained true that the Union possessed the powers conferred upon it, and that these were to be found enumerated in the instrument of government under which it was formed. But lest there might be any possible question of this in the minds of those wielding any portion of this authority, it was declared by the tenth article of the amendments that "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively or to the people.—Cooley.

Thus the line is clearly drawn between the national and the state governments. It is provided that "the enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people."

Distribution of the Powers of Government

Necessity of Separation of Powers.—When all powers of sovereignty are exercised by a single person or body, who alone makes laws, determines complaints of their violation, and tends to their execution, the question of a classification of powers can have only a theoretical importance, for the obvious reason that nothing can depend upon it, which can have practical influence upon the welfare of the people. But inasmuch as a government with all its powers thus concentrated must of necessity be an arbitrary government, in which passion and caprice is as likely to dictate the course of public affairs as a sense of right and justice, it is a maxim in political science that, in order to the due recognition and protection of rights, the powers of government must be classified according to their nature, and each class intrusted for exercise to a different department of the government. This arrangement gives each department a certain independence, which operates as a restraint upon such action of the others as might encroach on the rights and liberties of the people, and makes it possible to establish and enforce guaranties against attempts at tyranny. We thus have the checks and balances of government which are supposed to be essential to free institutions.—Cooley, p. 44.

Three Divisions.—The normal classification of governmental powers is into three divisions, under "that safe maxim, division of powers into departments": legislative, executive, and judicial.

The Legislature.—All the legislative powers—all power to make laws—granted by the Constitution, are vested in a Congress consisting of a House of Representatives and a Senate. The House of Representatives is the popular House and is elected every two years. All legislation providing for expenditure of funds must originate in the House. The Senate is a more conservative body, consisting of two Senators from each State, elected for a term of six years. One third of the Senate is elected every two years, thus dividing the Senators into three classes. Our system of legislation is bicameral, the two bodies passing upon it.

The President has power to veto legislation which he considers unwise, thus acting as a check upon the legislature. But the legislature may pass legislation over his veto, by a two thirds vote of both houses.

The Executive.—The executive power is vested in a President, with a Vice President, both elected for a term of four years. In case of removal of the President from office, or of disability to discharge its powers and duties, the same shall devolve upon the Vice President. Before entering upon the duties of his office, the President is required to take the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear or affirm that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

The executive departments, such as War, Navy, Justice, Treasury, etc., are headed by members of his cabinet, who with many government officers are nominated by the President, subject to confirmation by the people through the Senate.

The Judiciary.—The Constitution provides for a Supreme Court and other courts provided for through action of Congress. The President nominates members of the judiciary, subject to Senate confirmation. An additional check upon legislation is provided in this: That should Congress pass legislation, with or without approval of the President, and the Supreme Court declare it to be unconstitutional, it is no longer a law. Such decision by that court can only be overruled by constitutional amendment, which is in effect, an appeal to the body of the people. Such action became necessary to make the income tax and popular election of senators by the people legally binding.

Space does not permit extended treatment of the large subject under discussion. We have indicated the main outlines of constitutional functions. But we note some important items which have been made prominent by constitutional writers, as a result of long periods of usage and tested experience under our system of government:

National Powers.—In any sovereign State, the law-making department is the repository of most power, and it is also the most immediate representative of the sovereignty. Not that the others are subordinate within their respective spheres, but the exercise of governmental authority begins with the making of laws, and the other departments execute and administer what the lawmaking department enacts. For this reason the Constitution, in enumerating the powers which shall be exercised by authority of the general government, confers them in terms upon Congress. But this in legal effect is conferring them upon the United States, and by implication a corresponding executive and judicial power is also given, though to a large extent the exercise of these powers is left to be provided for in the discretion of Congress.—Cooley, Constitutional Law, p. 55.

Congress has power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, etc.:

The power to tax is an incident of sovereignty, and is co-extensive with the subjects to which the sovereignty extends. It is unlimited in its range, . . . so that security against its abuse is to be found only in the responsibility of the legislature which imposes the tax to the constituency who are to pay it. A people, however, in establishing their constitution, and delegating to their representatives this power, may impose at discretion limits to its exercise; and many limitations have been imposed in the constitutions of the States.—Cooley, p. 57.

Constitutionally a tax can have no other basis than the raising of a revenue for public purposes, and whatever governmental exaction has not this basis is tyrannical and unlawful.—Ibid., p. 58.

Congress shall have power "to declare war, to grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water." Congress may also "raise and support armies; but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years. The purpose of this restriction is to put it out of the power of the executive to keep on foot a standing army, when in the opinion of the legislature it is not needful."

Restrictions on the Powers of Congress. . . . No legislative body can delegate to another department of the government, or to any other authority, the power, either generally or specifically, to enact laws. The reason is found in the very existence of its own powers. This high prerogative has been intrusted to its own wisdom, judgment, and patriotism, and not to those of other persons, and it will act ultra vires if it undertakes to delegate the trust, instead of executing it.—Cooley, p. 111.

In this connection we quote:

In six cases the Supreme Court unanimously declared acts (of Congress) void on the ground that Congress had attempted to confer powers on the Court which the Constitution did not authorize and which it therefore declined to accept.—American Bar Association Journal, June, 1924.

Commander in Chief.—The President is Commander in Chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States when called into actual service. This important power is confided to him to be exercised in his discretion, but it is expected to be exercised through the war department, and not by taking command in the field, or by any personal direction of armies. As commander, while war prevails the President has all the powers recognized by the laws and usages of war, but at all times he must be governed by law, and his orders which the law does not warrant will be no protection to officers acting under them.—Cooley, p. 114.

The President has power to fill all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session. But he cannot by removals make vacancies in order that he may fill them.—Ibid., p. 119.

Appropriations.—The provision that no money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, applies with peculiar force to the President, and is a proper security against the executive assuming unconstitutional powers.—Ibid., p. 120.

Executive Independence.—The judiciary cannot control the President nor his subordinate officers in the performance of executive duties by mandamus, injunction, or otherwise. But if an executive officer is charged with a ministerial duty, involving the exercise of no discretion on his part, the courts may compel his performance of it.—Cooley, p. 122.

Checks and Balances in Government.—What are they?—The American system of government is an elaborate system of checks and balances. . . . First, the States are balanced against the general government. Second, the House of Representatives is balanced against the Senate, and the Senate against the House. Third, the executive authority is in some degree balanced against the legislature. Fourth, the judiciary is balanced against the legislature, the executive, and the state governments. Fifth, the Senate is balanced against the President in all appointments to office, and in all treaties. Sixth, the people hold in their own hands the balance against their own representatives by periodical elections. Seventh, the people are balanced against the senate by sexennial elections. Eighth, the electors are balanced against the people in the choice of President and Vice President. This is a complication and refinement of balances which is an invention of our own, and peculiar to this country.—Cooley, p. 160.

Madison, referring to the substance of a statement by Montesquieu, the French writer on "The spirit of the laws," wrote thus: "The accumulation of all powers, legislative, executive, and judiciary, in the same hands, whether of one, a few, or many, and whether hereditary, self-appointed, or elective, may justly be pronounced the very definition of tyranny.—The Federalist, vol. 1, p. 329.

Important Points in Constitutional Law

The Courts.—The protection against unwise or oppressive legislation, within constitutional bounds, is by an appeal to the justice and patriotism of the representatives of the people. If this fail, the people in their sovereign capacity can correct the evil, but courts cannot assume their rights.—Cooley, p. 167.

The lawmaking power of the State recognizes no restraints, and is bound by none except such as are imposed by the Constitution. That instrument has been aptly termed a legislative act by the people themselves in their sovereign capacity, and is therefore the paramount law. . . . The leading feature of the Constitution is the separation and distribution of the powers of the government. It takes care to separate the executive, legislative, and judicial powers, and to define their limits. The executive can do no legislative act, nor the legislature any executive act, and neither can exercise judicial authority.—Sill versus Corning, 15 New York, p. 297.

Mere ministerial officers must always at their peril keep within the limits of the law, for their duties are not discretionary, and the law is supposed to make plain for them what their duty is.—Cooley, p. 175.

. . . when moneys are to be paid by the United States, they can be appropriated by Congress alone.—Ibid., p. 175.

Judiciary and Executive.—From the foregoing it will appear that the judiciary has no control whatever over legislation, and no power whatever to question its purpose or animus, provided always that legislation is kept within the limits of the constitutional grant. The remark is equally true when applied to executive power. Within the sphere of his authority under the Constitution the Executive is independent, and judicial process cannot reach him. But when he exceeds his authority, or usurps that which belongs to one of the other departments, his orders, commands, or warrants protect no one, and his agents become personally responsible for their acts.—Cooley, p. 176.

Freedom of Speech and of the Press.—The First Amendment provides that Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press. In a constitutional point of view the chief importance of the press is, that it enables the citizens to bring any person in authority, any public corporation or agency, or even the government in all its departments, to the bar of public opinion, and to compel him or them to submit to an examination and criticism of conduct, measures, and purposes in the face of the world, with a view to correction or prevention of evils. . . . These advantages had been fully realized and enjoyed by the people during the revolutionary epoch; the press had been the chief means of disseminating free principles among the people, and in preparing the country to resist oppression; and its powers in this direction had appeared so great as to cast its other benefits in the shade. It is a just conclusion, therefore, that this freedom of public discussion was meant to be fully preserved; and that the prohibition of laws impairing it was aimed, not merely at a censorship of the press, but more particularly at any restrictive laws or administration of law, whereby such free and general discussion of public interests and affairs as had become customary in America should be so abridged as to deprive it of its advantages as an aid to the people in exercising intelligently their privileges as citizens, and in protecting their liberties.—Summarized from Cooley, p. 301.

We append the following from Don Tyler's late prize oration on the Constitution:

Our Constitution, the supreme law of the land, gave us a government with its representatives elected at certain fixed intervals with authority delegated to three departments: the legislative, the executive, and the judicial. But the startling fact for the first time in the history of the world was that no one department was supreme, that each department served as a check and a balance of the other, and the final supreme power was in the hands of the people. In other words, it provided that those who made the laws could not administer them, and those who administered could not judge them, and gave the supreme power to the governed.

In these articles we have briefly summarized some of the leading principles of our constitutional law—those having bearing upon our present situation as a church. We trust that the HERALD readers in general will be led to larger study of our constitutional system of government. The concluding article will be on "Constitutional government in the church."

Facts About the Bible.—No. 7

BY A. B. PHILLIPS

One of the most important and most interesting periods in Hebrew history is the period between the Old and New Testaments. A knowledge of this history enables one to more clearly understand many things referred to in the New Testament. For this reason the new Helps to Bible Study gives a careful and concise account of both secular and religious conditions existing among the Jews at that time, and the effect these had upon the people in the time of Christ. By one acquainted with prior developments these influences are quite readily discerned.

The early part of this period was marked by troublous times to the Jews. It was about the year 370 B. C. that the Persian governor of Syria appointed Joshua, or Jesus, to supersede his brother in the office of high priest. The brother, Johanan, became so enraged that he murdered the newly appointed high priest in the inner court of the temple. For this crime the Persian governor imposed a fine of fifty drachmas on every lamb that should be offered for sacrifice by the Jews. Some years after this two of the Persian monarchs were poisoned, and soon afterward the Persian monarchy gave way to the Grecian power. After the death of Alexander the empire was divided among his four generals. Between two of these divisions lay Palestine, which was the scene of many conflicts, being under first one ruler and then another.

Antiochus Epiphanes, supposed by some to be the one who should "peaceably" take the kingdom, as foretold by Daniel, twice despoiled Jerusalem, slew many thousands of the Jews, abolished Jewish sacrifices, burned all copies of the scriptures that could be found, and dedicated the temple to Jupiter. Jews were forced to observe rites of Grecian idolatry or be put to death. In this abolishment of Jewish religion he was assisted by renegade Jews.

Some of the Jews who fled from Jerusalem were afterward organized under the leadership of Mattathias and his five sons. They made war on the idolatrous people and the apostate Jews almost incessantly and established the Maccabean Dynasty, which continued with varying fortunes till ended by the conquering Romans. The last of the Maccabean line were murdered by Herod the Great, a monster of extreme cruelty who is mentioned in the New Testament. By his will Judea, Samaria, and Idumea were given to his son Archelaus, and Galilee and Perea were given to his son Herod Antipas, whom Jesus called "that fox," and who beheaded John the Baptist.

The Messianic Hope of Jews

During the period between the Testaments remarkable developments in the religious ideas of the Jews were taking place. In some respects the spiritual aspects of Hebrew life were deeply significant. During this period much of the most important religious literature was written, and is now grouped mostly as the Pseudepigrapha and the Apocrypha. Religious writings at this time were largely issued under assumed names, probably because one claiming to present a message from God was almost certain to suffer severe persecutions. Hence the names of revered prophets were borrowed and attached to some of these writings as authors.

The captivity of the Jews had given them much cause for reflection concerning their past unfaithfulness and the trials to which they had been subjected. They longed for their one-time national prestige and glory, and some in humility began to search the prophecies which pointed to their future hope. The development of higher ideals came from increased humility and religious integrity and centered in expressions of the Messianic hope, as is abundantly found in the literature of the times. One of these old writings contains the prediction that "there shall arise the Messiah from Aaron and

Contrast of Interest—Within and Without

BLOOMSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA, September 8.—Brother Cunningham and I have been out visiting among the Saints of late, calling on some who had not been visited for years. The "two by two" spirit was felt by us in our work, and we walked about seven miles, but felt rewarded by the stirring up of our spirits, as well as those visited, to a remembrance of the spirit attendant upon the preaching of the gospel.

We had a pleasant call on Brother and Sister Oscar Bairall, now resident at Mifflinville. They were brought into the church through the efforts of Brother Richard Hawkins, of Scranton, whom they hold in high esteem. This family will in the future have the association and fellowship of the Bloomsburg Saints.

There are a number of people here in the church who are really showing an interest, but we have as usual the counterpart in members who are not really interested in God's work and themselves as they should be.

I have discovered now, as in historical times, that the church itself is never free from heresies or innovations. This beautiful work ought, and deserves, to be free from disquieting factors. There have been changing scenes in the history of the church in these latter days: outside persecutions, inside heresies such as polygamy, Adam-God, and celestial marriage, then the usurpation of priesthood authority that led to the Utah apostasy.

The past few years have witnessed innovations which are so technical and highly controversial that we are making knotty ecclesiastical problems. Year after year these disquieting changes are taking up the time and attention of the greatest work of all, which is none other than the last will from Israel." During the early Maccabean period it was taught that the Messiah should come from the tribe of Levi, and some thought the Maccabees were the promised deliverers to release them from political bondage and establish the kingdom of God among the Hebrews.

It is astonishing to note the number of teachings recorded in this period that bear resemblance to the doctrines of the New Testament. An illustration may be of interest in this connection, as found in the writing called Ecclesiasticus (28.2): "Forgive thy neighbor if he hath hurt thee, and then shall thy sins be forgiven thee when thou prayest." The similarity of this exhortation to that of Christ in the sixth chapter of Matthew and Luke is no more noticeable than various other expressions.

The number of apocalyptic writings that arose in this period help to show why the Jews were interested concerning the coming of Messiah and were expecting that event to be soon realized. However those who were warped by human traditions or sordid considerations could not easily recognize in Jesus the one sent of God to establish his glorious kingdom on earth. The Jews were therefore greatly divided upon the question of his Messiahship.

and testament of our Lord: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," etc.

This people should be as clear on the present controversies as they are upon faith, repentance, and baptism. Each side of the controversy should make statements of their belief in the sincerity of the others.

Paul says, "The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life." The ministers are not ministers of the technical meanings of the words supreme directional control, but rather of the spirit of the gospel. It is this insistence upon the letter of the law that has brought about this deplorable division.

In order that my position may be clear, suppose that the Presidency, Presiding Bishop, and General Conference were each to go to ordaining bishops in competition with each other. Would that be coordination?

Then with regard to spending the moneys of the church. I remember one time in England when there was a mooted rule that missionaries, before they could call upon the Bishop or his agents, had to have the signature or indorsement of the missionary in charge. That was followed by the query as to who was to indorse the demands of the missionary in charge. Common sense shows us the need for the temporal arm of the church having power to receive and disburse the money of the body, subject to General Conference. If the Presidency can contract debts irrespective of the Bishopric, then we will soon reach a state of anarchy. There are emergencies that the letter of the law does not reach; but the spirit of it does.

My humble opinion is that every member of the church is first directly responsible to God. The testimony I received when I entered the work twenty-five years ago taught me that. Every minister of the church is likewise responsible to him directly and not through a chain of officials.

What I say does not destroy that relationship. That relativeness to each other is a demand from God to us and is a part of the divine plan. I do say, however, that supreme directional control is the role only of God and Christ through the gospel. Many good people have become discouraged in the work because of the spirit of dictatorship. Every man and quorum should be permitted the full liberty of the law of God centered in his will.

I expect to witness divine intervention in these matters. I do not say, Cease to contend for the truth, though it be an unpleasant duty. I became very much discouraged three years ago and planned to turn in my license and my missionary appointment, but in the course of time a divine messenger appeared to me with the Doctrine and Covenants in his hand which he held open to me at section 17, saying, "Teach that which is found there; it is the immediate need of the church."

Perhaps divine inspiration is more scarce than we are willing to admit. We are making history; let us pray to our heavenly Father, not for the success or abolition of any of the disputants, but that all may receive the Spirit of God to lead us according to his will, that the whole church and its ministry may become fellow workers together with God and Christ. The world needs salvation. God has reposed in us a weighty responsibility:

Ye are the salt of the earth:
But if the salt have lost his savor,
Wherewith shall it be salted?
It is thenceforth good for nothing,
But to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of man.

There are these two conditions of occupancy for the church. Which shall we occupy? May it please God to help us as a people to occupy that first-named condition in humility is my prayer.

THOMAS JONES.

What Reunion Did for One Sister

ALEXANDER, KANSAS, September 10.—I wanted to write and tell HERALD readers how I enjoyed the reunion of the North-western Kansas District. It was held at Studley, a town not very pretentious, but where dwell some noble Saints.

Ever since I have been in high school I have been studying the question of evolution. Last year I decided that there was more to it than my parents thought. I knew it hurt them, but I wanted the truth at whatever cost it came.

During the winter Brother Burton came here and of course tried to show me the foolishness of my thinking. At the time I was seventeen, just the right age to get mixed in right and wrong thoughts. All during the summer I worked under a heavy cloud and wondered whether the Bible was true or not. During this time I was planning to attend reunion, and a week before it started I left home to work, but returned on Wednesday in order to start to reunion the next day.

When I got home I found they were undecided as to whether they would go at all or not. I do not know why, but I felt I could not miss it, so finally father saw how anxious my sister and I were to go and promised to go with us Sunday morning. We started out in the mud, so anxious we were almost unwise. However, we arrived at half past eleven and remained all the next week.

I did not notice any change in my attitude except I wanted to attend services more than ever, which is saying quite a bit considering my enthusiasm before that. The mornings were taken up in services and the afternoons in recreation. We played volley ball and went swimming, and seemed to get acquainted more easily than is generally the case.

When I arrived home I began to notice a change. I can see clearly the wrong in the evolution theory. I feel like another person and no longer want to do the many little things that lead one down. I used to know that that time was coming, and I hated to see its approach, but now I feel happier than I ever have before. When I feel discouraged I sing "Consecration," and immediately feel better. I cannot do much, but by singing at services I hope to help myself discover other talents if I have any. I am trying to develop myself to the highest extent. Pray for me that I may be able to keep up my courage and go forward.

Pontiac, Michigan

August 31.—Some of the Saints of Pontiac attended the Detroit and Eastern Michigan district reunion at Port Huron, among them Sister James Mead and children. Brother Mead was driving down for the family on the closing Sunday when another car collided with his, and as a result he has been confined to his home for two weeks with a cut and bruised leg. He is now able to walk a little and is slowly recovering. Other Pontiac Saints attended reunion at Boyne City.

Brother Charles Bowen, of Birmingham, was struck by an auto one day last week and is not able to walk.

The lectures given by Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser at reunion have not been forgotten. We are still studying on the notes taken and hope to hand on some instructions to others.

We had one recent baptism, Newell Mead, ten years old, who was baptized at reunion.

The Saints have planned to spend Sunday, September 14, at the home of Brother and Sister Clarence Jewell, as two of their boys have decided to be baptized, and they also have a baby girl to be blessed on that day. Lunch will be prepared, after which all will go to the river, a short distance from the house, where the baptisms will take place. Preaching service will be held in the evening.

The Saints of Pontiac are planning a social to be held soon for the benefit of our church.

Splendid Prayer Meetings Reported

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10.—The Wednesday evening prayer services held at the Second Columbus Branch continue to be an unfailling source of inspiration to all who attend. And the attendance has grown from only a very few to practically thirty or more each week. In quite a number of instances each one present, whether very young or old, has taken part in the service and all have been much benefited thereby. Several weeks ago we were privileged to have Brother Floyd Rockwell, the district president, meet with us, and while here negotiations were made to hold the conference of the Southern Ohio District at our branch. This is our first attempt to entertain anything so big as this, but we expect a goodly number and will do the utmost to make everyone feel at home and be glad to come again.

The membership have almost all taken their vacations and are now returning with a renewed zeal to push harder and work better for the ultimate goal—Zion. Especially those of us who were privileged to visit the Kirtland reunion, with its wonderful spiritual leaders. It was a reunion never to be forgotten, and the best of results are to be looked for from those who were present.

Omaha, Nebraska

September 10.—The Department of Women has kept up its work through the warm season, by a series of "kensingtons," at which the sisters ply needle and thread upon bazaar articles. Two of these have been held since last report, one at Sister H. G. Fredrick's and one at Sister Cloe Fleming's. Dainty refreshments served by the hostesses helped to make these gatherings pleasant and enjoyable.

On August 17 Sisters Fleming and Fredrick sang at River-view Home, the place where juvenile offenders against the law are held. The song service they gave was accompanied by a series of chalk talks by Brother Norman Issott, and both efforts were enthusiastically received and appreciated. Ministry among these misguided children is a Christian service indeed. Would that the blessing of God shall enhance the value of each effort put forth to serve him in this way and greatly magnify its influence for good!

Apostle E. J. Gleazer and family were our guests one week end, en route from the reunion at Dow City to the one at Stewartsville. The sermons by the brother morning and evening of August 22, his talk to the Religio, and the one he gave Sister Anderson's class of young men in the Sunday school will not soon be forgotten. To sense the completeness of the consecration of our young missionaries, which consecration is shared in no small degree by their wives and children, is an inspiration and encouragement to all thinking Saints, and no human being can measure the sum total of their influence.

Patriarch John F. Martin was another whose "barque spoke us in passing." He spent twenty-four hours with us between reunions, giving us the benefit of reflected experiences and receiving a brief respite in the lull of activities. He is a sufferer from the hay fever malady and will no doubt welcome the end of his reunion itinerary.

Sunday, August 31, was a day which will long live in memory. Pastor Whalley had announced that the morning service would be given over to baptism and confirmation, and the little church was well filled with members eager to witness the sacred ceremonies and to bid welcome to the newly initiated. Preceded, interspersed, and followed with the singing of well-chosen hymns, the brethren participating in the confirmations being blessed with rare illumination of mind, and both candidates and witnesses being impressed with the solemnity of the occasion, the entire service was beautiful and received the seal of spiritual approval. Pastor Whalley performed the ceremony of baptism, Brethren Lewis, Self, and Merchant joining him in that of confirmation. Those coming into the fold at this time were Arthur Albright, Peter Neilson, Maxwell Hammer, Loraine Wildermuth, and Happy Francis. Sister Lois Francis added the beauty of her voice to the service by singing, "I come to thee." It is indeed gratifying to all of us when we see these young people enlisting on the side of Christ in the battle of life.

In recognition of the coming "Defense Test" Day, Pastor Whalley, on the evening of August 31, preached a sermon on the subject, adding thereto a recital of some of his own personal experiences in the World War, and deductions drawn therefrom. His talk was intensely interesting to his congregation, for there were few who listened but had made sacrifices of some sort in the same cause.

On September 3, at the Methodist Hospital in this city, a grand-niece was born to Brother John W. Rushton, in the form of a little daughter who came to the arms of Brother and Sister Norman Issott. This little girl bears the charming name of Frances Carolyn, the first being that of her paternal grandmother, Sister Frances Issott, of Leeds, England, and the second being that of her maternal grandmother, Sister Cloe Carolyn Fleming.

The reunion at Glenwood, Iowa, and a two-day meeting at Decatur, Nebraska, have reduced our attendance somewhat. At that, our little church was filled almost to capacity Sunday morning at sacramental service. In the evening Brother Raymond Rumel talked of present-day conditions, in and out of the church. Brother Duane S. Anderson sang, "Thy will be done." Pastor Whalley and wife spent the week end in Decatur, it being the privilege of the former to preach to the Indians—a novel experience, undoubtedly, for our eastern brother.

Visitors among us the past few weeks have been: Sister S. E. Marmoy, daughter Iola, and son "Junior," of Kansas City, all of whom have been visiting Sister A. E. Larsen; Brother and Sister C. C. Coffeen and son Elmer, of Kansas City; Leslie Flowers, of Clearwater, and his friend, Everett Gamet, of South Omaha; Brother and Sister R. L. Haynes, of Beaver Branch, Missouri; Brother and Sister Harold Edwards, of Independence, visiting their sisters, Grace Edwards and Iverne Paden; Sister Gladys Teeters, visiting her aunt, Sister Fryxell; Sister David Burtch, of Port Huron, Michigan; Brother George Preston and his mother, Sister John Preston, of Knobnoster, Missouri; Sister Frank Hawley and son Carleton, of Lincoln, Nebraska; Miss Hazel Fletcher, of Toronto, South Dakota, visiting her aunt, Sister Earl Lasley; Sister Ada Hopkins, of Lamoni, Iowa, and Sister Sue Dillon, of Independence, visiting Sister Mae Grenawalt.

Those who knew of his long, faithful service and loyalty to the church were saddened to learn of the passing on August 27 at his home in Magnolia, Iowa, of Brother Andrew Johnson, father of our Sister Augusta Graham. He had reached almost the centennial mark, being ninety-seven years and six months of age at the time of death. His life story was at one time written up and published in one of the church magazines.

Brother James Mills of Nebraska City, another aged and faithful Saint, lies critically ill in the University Hospital of this city. Brother Albert Merrick, a young brother who gave service in the World War, is desperately ill in a hospital in Saint Louis, Missouri. Brother John Ahlstrand, another young Omaha Saint, has been ill in a Kansas City Hospital, and is about to be removed to Saint Louis for a critical operation. Sister Rosa Ware, temporarily in Los Angeles, has also been sorely afflicted. The prayers of the Saints should ascend for these members in distress.

Department of Women Holds Successful Bazaar

FLINT, MICHIGAN, August 18.—We have long considered telling HERALD readers of the great success of our second annual bazaar, held in Flint December 6 and 7, 1923.

The bazaar was so planned that each group had its special line of work on display, and every woman had an opportunity to use her skill for the benefit of the local department. The baked goods were all donated, and also much of the bazaar material. Each group kept its accounts separately, and as a result each group knew exactly how much they raised. A total of $355.13 was raised, of which Oriole Circle Number 1 made $15.46 and the Temple Builders $60.85.

The bazaar was held about four blocks from the heart of the city, on the main street. The building was donated, so expenses were light, and we were able to turn $300 over to the building fund.

We believe each woman owes her part of work in the Department of Women as much as she does to the other branches of the work. Cooperation is the basis of our work in Flint, and thanks to the ability of our leaders, Sister Harder in 1922 and Sister Robertson in 1923 and 1924, our department is rapidly nearing its goal. May God bless this department of his work, and may the women rise to sense their duty in the work of God.

GRACE HAWKS, Historian.

New Canton, Illinois

September 7.—In a recent contest for membership in the Sunday school, the Reds were defeated and had to treat the Blues. Ice cream and cake was served on the church lawn, and all enjoyed themselves. Many new scholars were in this was added to the Sunday school.

The next day Brother E. L. Ulrich and family were with us, also Brother Henry Martin and his family, as well as other Saints from Quincy. As a result we were permitted to hold sacramental service, and a great degree of the Spirit was present. A basket dinner was enjoyed at noon, after which Brother Ulrich preached in the park. Evening service was held in the church.

The following Wednesday Brother Ulrich baptized two ladies, and on Thursday he and his family and some of the other Saints started to Nauvoo to attend the reunion. All were pleased to know Sister Ulrich. Brother Ulrich promised to return this winter.

A splendid Sunday school was held to-day. All were pleased and surprised to have with us Sisters Laura and Blanche Minton, of Independence, Missouri. It seemed good to have these sisters with us once more and to hear their testimonies again.

We ask the Saints to pray for this little branch that we may ever be found holding fast to the rod of iron and doing what is pleasing in the sight of God.

ALMEDA CALLIER.

Fall River, Massachusetts

August 15.—No meetings were held here for three Sundays during special services at Onset. A large number from Fall River attended either all or part of the time. Considerable publicity was given the Onset reunion in the Fall River papers. The Fall River Saints gave "Hansel's vision," at Onset on August 9, which was greatly appreciated.

The association and meetings at Onset were a wonderful opportunity, but it is believed by some to be a hindrance to the branches. Some go for all summer, others for week ends, leaving the Fall River church almost empty.

The first prayer meeting after reunion is usually well attended, but this year not one came who had been to Onset. Though the attendance was small, all took part, and surely the Spirit of God was there.

Recent speakers have been Elder Elmer B. Lewis, of Dennisport, who occupied July 13; Pastor James W. Heap, July 20, with Brother Alma Coombs in the evening.

Two-Day Meeting at Lachine, Michigan

We have a small branch here, but our Sunday school has five classes. There is no elder here at present, but we hope to have one soon, as we expect Elder Guy, from Hillman, for the branch there will be disorganized. We have two priests, one teacher, one deacon. On Children's Day we had a visit from Brother Guy, who had returned from Detroit. He also spoke in tongues, and we were made glad that the Lord had again remembered us in this way, giving us blessing and counsel. We also had some sermons since.

Brother and Sister Guy and six others were able to spend a week at the Northern Michigan district reunion. Two others were also there the last few days, where we had the privilege of seeing and hearing President F. M. Smith. Six were baptized the afternoon of August 12. On Saturday another small boy was baptized and was confirmed by Brother F. M. Smith. We were very pleased to meet our leader and to hear the words of counsel. The Spirit was felt confirming what he gave to us.

Brother Edwards was also with us and did some good work with the young people. Sister Christy also gave some fine talks to the members of the Department of Women.

I, for one, intend to do all I can in this great work, for surely the work is great and the laborers are few. But if we all work together we can and will do much. Let us make a united effort and carry this work onward. Let us hold up our leader's hands, that he fail not in this hour of need.

The debt of about $550 on the auditorium was paid on Saturday by Brother Dirk Schreur, which made it possible to dedicate the auditorium on Sunday. President Smith preached the sermon, and Brother Allen Schreur offered prayer, after which Brother Dirk Schreur presented the key to President Smith, who returned it to Brother Allen Schreur, president of the district. After the service about $600 more was raised to enlarge the dining hall, buy seats for the auditorium, and purchase more land.

The sweet spirit of peace prevailed to the end. All are looking forward to our two-day meeting, praying that the Lord will bless us with his Spirit and help us all to do our part in this great work.

MRS. S. PUSHMAN.

San Francisco, California

September 8.—All is going nicely in this branch. Meetings are quite well attended, and some nonmembers are always present, while the preaching is spiritual and instructive.

The Saints are now all home from the Irvington reunion and are settled down to home church work. Last Friday evening the sisters gave a supper at the home of Brother and Sister Lawton and cleared over forty dollars, which they donated towards building the assembly room in the rear of the church.

We have with us Elder Yoder, from Cleveland, Ohio. He has preached twice for us, to the edifying of the Saints.

Brother Briggs, one of our active members, has been in the hospital for some weeks. He is well again now, and all are glad to welcome him again into our midst. He is as busy as usual in his office of deacon.

Our members are making their donations for the church radio. Next Sunday morning the Sunday school will take up a collection for that purpose.

Sunday morning we had a pleasant, peaceful sacramental service that was enjoyed by all. The time was all spent in singing, prayer, and testimony. Among our visitors were Elder L. B. Shippy and family. In the evening Elder Virgil Etzenhouser, our missionary, preached for us. The young people's prayer meeting in the morning was well attended.

The group meetings on Wednesday evenings are interesting and instructive. The Religio and Sunday school and Department of Women are all in good condition.

San Jose, California

September 11.—San Jose Branch is still holding its regular quota of meetings. Since last report the following brethren have been our speakers: G. H. Wixom, B. R. Gilbert, M. H. Fonda, W. H. Dawson, C. J. Cady, and Harley V. Bates

The Department of Recreation gave a social August 22 at the home of Brother and Sister L. E. Harris, which was enjoyed by all who attended. The evening was spent with vocal and instrumental music and pleasing plays.

On August 28 the Department of Women gave a Fathers' Day entertainment at eight o'clock in the evening at the home of Brother and Sister Christopher. The evening began with an "Open business meeting," which was opened with an appropriate song by the department and prayer by the pastor, and concluded with speeches, readings, and songs in which the fathers and brothers were invited to take part. The entertainment was followed by refreshments served on the lawn, where bright, blazing bonfires were in evidence. Brother Christopher is noted for giving the Saints a warm welcome.

Last year the Department of Women paid out $900 for paving around the church, and this year they have ordered another contract let to cost $200 or more. They already have the money to cover this expense and the steam shovel is now at work on the street. The branch is justly proud of this department.

An enjoyable sacramental service was held September 7, with about forty present. The sick were not forgotten, the emblems being carried to them by the officiating priests.

Elder E. B. Hull, of the missionary force, is expected to be with us Sunday, September 14.

Some very interesting priesthood meetings are being held in the branch of late. We build up a straw man and then proceed to pick him to pieces. If any kernels are found among the shells, we pick them out and use them.

Central Chicago

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, September 11.—The summer months have been busy ones for Central Chicago. Many noted members have visited us recently, among them Wardell Christy and David Dowker and family; Roy Cheville, Forest Roberts, and Elizabeth Trachsel of Graceland.

During the hot weather and on account of so many leaving the city for vacations, no regular choir or Department of Women meetings were held. During this time the different departments took charge of the services for one Sunday each.

The Department of Women had charge July 26. Special music was provided, and Sister Christy spoke both morning and evening to appreciative audiences. Brother Christy was with us August 1 and gave some good counsel in his forceful way.

August 10 was Sunday school day. The theme for the service was "Carrying on our Father's work." Music by the junior choir carried out this theme, as did both sermons of the day. At the morning service John Petterson, of First Chicago Branch, gave an illustrated talk to the children, which was interesting to all. H. P. W. Keir spoke impressively on the same subject at the evening service.

Friday evening, August 15, was an important date, at which time the young people presented a two-act play, "Mother Briggs of the cabbage patch." It was well given, and the young people deserve great credit for their effort. A full house rewarded them somewhat and gave them a neat sum for the building fund.

Young people's day was August 4, and as usual they spared no effort to make it an interesting and profitable one. The music was well prepared and well chosen, and Roy Cheville spoke at eleven o'clock, using as his subject, "A rendezvous with life." His masterly presentation surely gave young and old much food for thought. David Dowker was the evening speaker, and in his cheery way gave us encouragement and counsel.

Our new missionary, Brother Baldwin, and wife, stopped over for a day or two en route to their old home. We are anticipating a busy and profitable year with them to assist us.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin

We read with interest the letters from the various branches and wish to congratulate the HERALD on this method of keeping in touch with the various branches throughout the entire church.

Since last writing we have been favored with a short visit from our district president, J. O. Dutton, and wife, of Madison, Wisconsin. Vacation time is now about past, and we look for an adjustment to regular routine and more concentrated effort. We hope to effect some changes which will give place for something more attractive for the young people of the branch.

We regret having lost so many members of the branch in the last few months. Brother B. C. Johnson and family have returned to Independence, Missouri; Sister Matie Cone, formerly of Beloit, Wisconsin, has returned there with her family; Brother Arthur Craven, having completed his dentistry course at Marquette University, has returned to his home at Cusson, Minnesota. These, together with several others, make a total removal of about twenty per cent of the total membership of this branch.

We are very glad to report the arrival of several earnest workers from Fargo, North Dakota. Brother Lindsay, his daughter and her husband, are now with us, and we hope the balance of the family comes soon. For the past eighteen years your writer has seen many come and go from this branch, and we many times expressed the thought that if we could have held all that came we would have a large following here. Many times we were forced to bid farewell to those whom we thought we could not possibly spare. But God has been good and we have struggled on, always hoping for the best.

Considerable preparation is being made by many of the membership here just now to attend the Madison, Wisconsin, reunion which will be held August 22 to 30. Those having cars will transport those less fortunate, making it possible for many to attend who could not do so on account of the expense of travel.

Before closing we want to welcome the news of the proposed new broadcasting station at Independence. For some reason we have never been able to bring in K F I X, although we have tried many times during the past two years. We believe the installation of the new 1000-watt sending station at Independence, Missouri, is a step in the right direction, and it will be welcomed by thousands all over the country. Every publicity agent in the church will hail this move, as space will be given in any daily paper for the announcement of our program. I will await with interest the notice stating that work has begun that will carry the gospel message into every radio home in this country and foreign as well. May God bless the good work and speed its progress, and may our faith increase, is the prayer of your humble coworker.

Sioux City, Iowa

September 16.—Our district president, Joseph Lane, visited us on sacrament Sunday. We are always glad to have him with us. His testimony is an inspiration for us to be of more service. The theme of his talk at the priesthood meeting was service.

The Misses Edna Haviland and Pearl Turner have commenced training at the Saints' Sanitarium. Edna is one of the three young people who graduated from high school the past year. Charles Bryant and Alice Keck are the others receiving their credits.

Mrs. Mark Brady of Saint Louis, Mr. James Horr, Mr. Ed Horr and wife; Ruth Sevy, of Long Beach, California; Mr. B. Jones and wife; and Albert and Lawrence Jones, of Pisgah, Iowa, have recently moved to this city.

Although we are located nearly a hundred miles from the reunion grounds at Dow City, forty-five from this branch attended services there the last Sunday. All felt repaid for their efforts.

The publicity department has mailed to members and non-members over fifteen hundred letters containing news items, tracts, etc., the past six months. The Saints are very loyal to the department. They are making it self-supporting by their subscriptions for themselves and their friends.

Sister Nicholas Reams died at her home early the morning of September 3. The attendance at the funeral was largely of nonmembers who heard the gospel message for the first time.

Master Russell Lytle has returned to his home after a summer's vacation with Brother and Sister Berve at Nauvoo.

Sister F. Palfrey, of Independence, mother of Sister G. M. Vandel, visited in the Vandel home a number of weeks. She has returned to her home.

The interior painting is practically finished in the church. White inside and out gives it a very pleasing effect after a number of years of a dark color.

Charles Hield and wife and Miss Thelma Lane, of Moorhead, Iowa, and Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Myers of Hornick have been recent visitors.

The week of September 22 to 28 will be Home-Coming and Rally Week at this place. Four programs are being prepared. A cantata will be given the evening of the 23d, a pageant on the 26th, a program at the eleven o'clock hour the 28th, and for Religio the evening of the 28th another program. Brother Charles B. Woodstock of Mondamin will be the speaker at the eight o'clock hour.

Salt Lake City, Utah

September 11.—Salt Lake Saints were pleased to have with them on August 31 their former pastor, who preached to them.

On Friday, August 29, the Saints and friends spent a pleasant evening on the lawn in a farewell party for Sister Lily Cummins, who was leaving for California. Sister Cummins has been a great help, as she is an active worker in this branch. All wish her Godspeed.

Brother and Sister Virgil B. Etzenhouser called on the Saints here as they were returning to California from Independence. All were glad to see them.

Our church has been thoroughly cleaned. Both pastor and Saints have worked hard with the cleaning and varnishing.

From Fanning and Troy, Kansas

September 16.—Radio week was observed here, and several good talks were made in favor of helping with the good work of sending "the sound the earth around, from the rising to the setting of the sun." The last talks were made September 14 by Brothers Twombly and Hedrick, which were surely fine. We believe this will aid materially in preaching the gospel of the kingdom to every tongue and people.

Brother J. D. Stead held meeting at a new opening here last week, and a basket dinner was held there last Sunday. Three carloads of Saints from Troy and Fanning went to help with the singing and were present for the afternoon meeting. All returned happy in the thought of being able to do something for the cause.

Brother Clyde Scott of south of Troy died September 14, leaving a wife and six small children. She is a member of our branch and has the sympathy of all. The funeral was held from the Troy church, with sermon by Brother Samuel Twombly of Fanning.

Services at Fanning are held as follows: Sunday school at ten, preaching at eleven, except on sacrament Sunday, Religio at seven, and preaching at eight. Prayer meeting is held on Wednesday night.

The Department of Women held a hen party September 11 for the benefit of the radio drive, each donating a hen or its equivalent in money. Refreshments of ice cream and cookies were served to those present.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

August 16.—Activities in Council Bluffs are centered in the meetings that are being held in the west part of the city. Apostle T. W. Williams is the speaker, assisted by Elder C. F. Putnam. Sunday evening the big tent, which is pitched on the vacant lot next to the Riverside Mission, was filled to overflowing, as was also the mission house where Elder Putnam displayed lantern slides of the famous Passion Play.

Brother Williams's sermons are very inspiring to all, and we are sure that we will all be better Latter Day Saints for having heard them.

The meetings are expected to continue for two or three weeks more, weather permitting. Several have been baptized, and more are expected as a result of the meetings.

Rich Hill, Missouri

September 17.—It is a pleasure to report that our branch is still growing. A young lady who has been a regular attendant for about two years was recently baptized, making the fourth one baptized this summer.

Attendance at regular meetings is about normal, while prayer meetings have a larger attendance. The midweek services have the best attendance of all.

Our Sunday school picnic was held Saturday, September 6, at the home of Sister John Ingram, six miles south of town. There were about thirty present, and a good time was enjoyed by all. An invitation was extended for us to come again.

We are glad to note that there seems to be a greater degree of unity and brotherly love among us than for some time; also some are becoming interested in studying the Scriptures.

Hope to Complete Church

COFFEYVILLE, KANSAS, September 13.—The Saints of Coffeyville have been organized into a Sunday school about three years and have an average attendance of thirty.

In the past year we have bought a lot and built a small church which is not finished on the inside, but we are hoping that in the near future we can complete it. The Department of Women deserve a good part of the credit for their untiring efforts.

Brother Higdon closed a three-week meeting here Sunday, September 7, as a result of which three were baptized, and others were interested. We feel that much good was accomplished.

As we have no regular preaching here, any of the elders passing through will be welcomed when they feel they can stop over and meet with us.

MARGIE PITCOCK.

Spokane, Washington

September 15.—Spokane Branch is still interested and trying to hold the banner of our great King sufficiently high to prevent its being torn down.

Elder Eli Bronson has just closed a series of tent meetings which were well attended. There were no baptisms, yet we know that a great deal of good was accomplished. Apostle R. S. Budd was with us one night during the meetings; also Brother G. T. Griffiths stopped over two nights, which were turned over to him. He made good use of them, showing his pictures of the Holy Land. It is good to have such men come along and spread a few seeds of encouragement.

The young people of the branch are making arrangements for a young people's convention to be held the last Friday, Saturday, and Sunday of this month. All are planning for a good time.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has voted to turn back to the Religio, and some have pinned on their old emblem, "Onward and Upward."

Elder Oscar Case was the speaker Sunday morning, September 14, and W. W. Wood occupied in the evening. Both services were well attended.

Sister Lou Gilmore passed away July 28, having gone through seventy-seven years of probation. In the twilight of her existence T. W. Chatburn led her into the waters of baptism, and when he brought her forth from the water, his heart broke forth in that grand old song, "'Tis a glorious thing to be in the light." He had led into the light one more companion of his comrades who wore the Blue in the great struggle between the North and the South.

Graceland Chats

Last Sunday found most of the college students in place, or seeking one, in the classes in Sunday school and Religio. The student who neglects this college opportunity is denying himself pleasurable and profitable seasons that will continue to yield joy for self and others so long as life shall last. These is a time made sacred by word and by spiritual atmosphere, a time that comes back to strengthen and inspire in moments of need; sometimes it is the Sunday school hour in the Brick Church in Lamoni, with the college group and the college impulse. The Sunday school hour may be one pregnant with power and vision and light and truth, most potent of all things.

Tuesday morning chapel was in charge of Brother J. A. Gunsolley, President Briggs being absent in Independence on college business. That latter statement seems superficial; business is spelled College for Brother Briggs.

The special topic of interest at chapel was the use of the library. This was conducted by Miss Lyda Elefson, the very obliging Graceland librarian. Sister Elefson is leaving for a year's work in her chosen field, the library. She is taking her work in Iowa City. She has been spending the past two or three weeks getting the library in good shape for the group of helpers she has had with her and is leaving in charge for the year.

Some of our faculty are busy in adjacent towns, establishing classes in music, both vocal and instrumental, giving recitals and awakening interest to the furthering of college support and community benefit.

The annual faculty recital occurred on Friday evening; one missing this missed a delightful treat.

Friday afternoon chapel was in charge of President Briggs. This was the day for one of our yearly freshman lectures by Dean Floyd McDowell. Giving it often has not lessened the force nor the value of this lecture, "Why and how to study." Few of us really know how to study, and especially is help in adjustment welcome to Freshmen. Friday's chapel was also enlivened with announcements. Coach Gilbert, athletics; Eugene Closson, games; Allan Houghton for the Record; and Forest Roberts, the societies.

Following the recital of Friday night there were various parties. One of interest to the Michigan friends was a reception to students from that State at the home of President and Mrs. McDowell. The big feature of the evening was the organization of a Michigan Club of some fifteen or more members. This of course includes collaterals in the way of a wife or husband or "some one."

One absorbing question when we come to Graceland is, "Where do we belong?" President Briggs settled this point for some of us Friday when he located us for the remaining chapel sessions. Located us from "A" to "Z" in our own place. Football boys are working their way where they belong. So, no doubt are we all in our various walks in life. Graceland is helping. Saturday evening the four societies met in their own rooms. The four corners of the recitation hall on the second floor are the rooms designated.

his main theme being the sacredness of the priesthood. The sermon of Elder G. E. Harrington in the evening on "How shall ye escape if ye neglect so great salvation" was enjoyed by those present.

East Independence

Apostle Roy S. Budd was the speaker Sunday morning. In the afternoon a round table discussion was held in charge of Brother A. H. Parsons, assisted by Brother Roy S. Budd. Brother Bath preached again in the evening, his last sermon for about three weeks, as he is going to Oklahoma to conduct a series of meetings.

The Saints had a birthday party for Sister Minton Saturday night, quite a few being present from town. Everyone had a good time.

The Sanitarium patients from this branch are getting along fine and will doubtless soon be able to return home.

Holden Stake News

Sibley

We had a most enjoyable time here last Sunday. The Buckner group joined us in our Sunday school service, which was followed with a sermon by Brother Weaver. We had as our honored guests Brother Joseph Luff, Brother Harrington, and Brother and Sister Shoupe, of Independence. A basket dinner was served at noon, after which we listened to a splendid discourse by Brother Luff. The Spirit was manifest to a remarkable degree, and he touched chords in my heart which I had not known were there. I enjoyed every word. Brother and Sister Meyers and Brother and Sister Scribner, friends of Brother Weaver from Kansas City, Kansas, were also in attendance. Sister Meyers and Brother Scribner sang at the afternoon service and again in the evening, songs which were highly enjoyed by all. Brother Weaver occupied at the evening service and preached the best sermon he has delivered since the opening of the meeting. The joy of the occasion was somewhat dimmed by the departure of Sister Weaver after the evening service. She left for Kansas City en route for her home in Traverse City, Michigan, where her mother lies very ill. Aside from that it was one grand, happy day long to be remembered.

Marshall

Elder Alvin Knisley held a short series of meetings here this month. Much interest was manifest in his sermons, especially Sunday morning, September 17. The subject, being on the Book of Mormon, was of a very convincing character.

A surprise party on Brother and Sister C. A. Ridge Tuesday night, September 16, at their home, was highly enjoyed by those participating.

Sister Levi Phelps is ill. Brother and Sister George A. Thayer and Sister Marion Terrell and little daughter have returned from their trip to Michigan.

Atherton

Last Sunday, September 14, was Women's Day at Atherton. Mrs. W. E. Harder, from Independence, occupied the eleven o'clock hour, talking in the interest of the Department of Women. In the afternoon Sister I. M. Ross, superintendent of the department in the Holden Stake, gave us an outline of the work, after which a round table was conducted, which proved very profitable. In the evening Brother B. R. McGuire occupied, assisted by Brother J. F. Keir. He spoke on the financing of the department. On Thursday following, the women of the Atherton Branch met at the home of Sister J. C. Schwab to arrange for the work of the women here.

Kirtland Reunion

The annual gathering of the Kirtland Reunion Association, has passed, leaving upon the memory its lasting impressions of rich experiences, and implanting in the soul higher aspirations for the future. The predominating desire at the end of reunion is to be present at the next one. Kirtland has a magnetic influence on the soul of the Saint.

Larger Crowds; Young Conspicuous

As the reunion hastened to its close, the numbers increased. Over six hundred men and women registered, but this number falls far short of the visiting people. The young people were very conspicuous by their presence and conduct. It would be very difficult for the chronic faultfinder to find fault with this devoted band. They manifested those social graces so essential to group life and so helpful to leadership. After each evening service the young would indulge in games until a quarter past ten when, at the sound of the bell, they would quietly repair to the front of the temple for prayer and song prior to retiring.

Prayer Meetings Spiritual Feasts

Each morning at eight, prayer meetings were conducted in the Temple. Evangelists W. A. McDowell and F. G. Pitt had charge of the senior meetings, while Elders J. D. Lewis and William Patterson cared for the young in the upper auditorium. What a privilege to sit in this sacred edifice, under the spell of heaven. The young greatly appreciated their occupation of the room that was dedicated as the School of Sister Schwab has been chosen leader of the women in Atherton.

A series of meetings will begin here next week, the speaker being Brother Ammon White. We invite those who read this announcement, and can, to come and help us out with your attendance and with any musical numbers you can give us. Notify Sister Schwab when you come with musical numbers, and she will gladly place you on the program.

Lexington

The baby daughter of Brother and Sister W. W. Snell died on Wednesday, September 10. Services were held at the home, J. A. Brendel officiating. Sister Snell is improving nicely.

Some of the mines are opening up again, after being closed since April 1, giving employment to some of the Saints. Brother W. W. Snell and Ivan Beebe are operating a mine employing about forty men. Because of lack of work our church work has been hindered considerably, but we hope to move forward again now. The Spirit of God is present in the activities of all departments of the work here, for which we are thankful. Brother Finis Beebe spoke at the eleven o'clock hour and J. A. Brendel in the evening.

Knobnoster

August 31 we were favored with a visit from Stake Sunday School Superintendent C. F. Scarecliff, and I. M. Ross, of the stake bishopric. They occupied the pulpit morning and evening respectively. A splendid sacramental service was held September 7. The voice of inspiration was heard, giving comfort, admonition, and instruction to the Saints. Elder R. E. Burgess was the speaker at the evening hour; he also occupied the pulpit at both services on the 14th.

Radio Flashes

Glendale, Rhode Island.—"I wish to especially commend your Sunday evening programs, as they are very good. I have certainly had comfort listening to your programs. Write me."
—Frank MacKenzie.

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"We wish to show our appreciation of 'Ave Maria.' Both vocal and instrumental very clear and steady. Also enjoyed recital by young Miss and violin duet. Your power wavers slightly. Announcing excellent."
—William J. Mesmer.

Kalamazoo, Michigan.—"Congratulations to you and the artists for the wonderful work you did Tuesday evening. Please send a schedule, so we will know when to listen for you."
—Mr. and Mrs. James Boardman.

Madison, Wisconsin.—"I enjoyed your program Tuesday evening. It came through good and strong. This was the first time I have heard your station; just happened to tune in during the speech 'The New Americanism.' Also enjoyed the Prophets. Both groups were blessed with spiritual direction in prophecy, dreams, visions, and verse.

Leading Men Present

Since last reporting the reunion was greatly enhanced by the presence of President F. M. Smith, Apostle J. A. Gillen, and C. E. Wight and wife.

Brother and Sister Wight had charge of the Institute and Women's Department work respectively, and contributed much to the success of the reunion.

Brother Gillen's sermons were fraught with inspiration and humility and were a source of inspiration, comfort, and strength to the Saints. His work was much appreciated.

President F. M. Smith was present for the last three days of the reunion. Though the Saints thought the stay was a short one, the time was intensified by the many powerful addresses delivered. All were greatly benefited by these talks.

Following the service Friday evening, a reception was given the President in the public auditorium.

Entertainments

In addition to the recreational program, which included a field day and trip to the lake shore, local and visiting talent staged two plays and one musicale.

The Closing Day

The last day was the big day. The prayer meetings in the morning were largely attended and very interesting.

At a quarter to eleven F. M. Smith preached to a full house, while Apostle Gillen took charge of an overflow meeting in the shade of the maple trees.

F. M. Smith again occupied the pulpit at half past two, and C. E. Wight addressed the overflow meeting on the lawn.

Brother Gillen delivered the closing sermon of the reunion in the evening.

The committee have been very busy and will continue so until they accomplish their work. Come again, and they will meet your needs.

Many aver this was the best ever. The next is going to be better.

The seeds of unity only were permitted to be sown, and only unity and love grew in our garden.

WILLIAM PATTERSON, Secretary.

the Mount Washington community chorus. Will be pleased to be on your mailing list."
—H. W. Pickford.

Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.—"We enjoyed your entire program this evening and thank you for your fine entertainment. Hope we will have the pleasure of listening to you again very soon."
—Sergeant R. O. Matzke.

Word come from Waterloo, Iowa, that several of the young Saints from various parts of the State, who attended the summer session at the Iowa State Teachers' College at Cedar Falls, frequently met with them in Sunday morning services, which was a mutual pleasure. The superintendent of the Sunday school, Sister Ivy C. Fisher, recently enjoyed a vacation of two weeks visiting with Saints in Saint Paul and Minneapolis.

"A WORD OF CONSOLATION"

ministry, nor prohibited by it to the people, are reserved to the people. And that therefore their voice is made essential in the government of the church of God. And this is upon the principle that the Lord will have the people learn to govern themselves under his law and from the fact that, "it is not common that the voice of the people desireth anything contrary to that which is right" (Mosiah 13:4), and from the further fact that men are sometimes inclined to use their authority, opportunities, and powers, under the promptings of blind ambition, selfishness, or other evil motives such as have corrupted some leaders in the past and thereby brought blindness, reproach, and ruin upon the people.—Editorial, SAINTS' HERALD, December 17, 1892.

Let us have a care lest insidious propaganda shall undermine the very foundations of our church government and destroy the principles upon which our fathers builded so well.

Radio Drive Report

Scattered contributions for the new 1000-watt radio station have flowed in during the past two weeks. Only a very few branches have thus far had time to report, and all those heard from are small. Several letters received indicate that certain districts are "going over the top." Practically no large donations, however, have been reported. This means that no one should hold back his or her contribution, no matter how small. Apparently many who have already given have thought that the total amount to be raised is so small considering so large a membership that it would not be necessary for them to give as generously as they would had a larger amount been asked. It should be remembered that it is a very difficult matter to reach the entire membership in any kind of campaign; also that conditions are such in some parts of the country that it is impossible for many who desire to give to this special undertaking to do so. This means that all who are able to give should contribute the maximum amount possible.

Many encouraging letters have been received. There is no question but that the church members as well as the leading church officials are unified as to the importance of the radio project. This moral support is very helpful, but financial assistance is also essential.

The radio committee feels that HERALD readers will be glad to know some of the comments received during the past week. It is of course impossible to publish all the letters that come in. Following are a few that are representative of all the letters that have been received:

"I am sending . . . for the new radio. I think it is a fine move. It is hard for the elders in the field to reach the people in the mountains, and many of these people have radios to keep them in touch with the rest of the world. I am one of the isolated ones. We live sixty-five miles from the nearest branch. I hope that we may have the pleasure in this State of California of hearing the wonderful sermons and lectures."—E. B. Hinton, Anderson, California.

"I want to help spread the gospel to the world, so I am sending the widow's mite which I hope will help some—and I wish it were a million instead of a dollar."—Mrs. Helen Logan, Tulsa, Oklahoma.

"Am sending a $5 check to be used in radio fund. I do not have a set, but I have a friend who has a five-tube set; he says he cannot get Independence on account of the broadcasting set not being strong enough. I do hope the Saints will see the need of radio and will respond."—Howard M. Mousley, Baltimore, Maryland.

"Please find inclosed our contribution to help enlarge your station. We feel that the church is taking a good step in increasing the power of our station to 1,000 watts. And we are sure that the Saints ought to be pleased and even delighted to know our church officials are progressive enough to undertake so important a step. We are quite certain the present station is too small. Many a night we have tried to tune in with our three-tube set, but only two or three times have we been rewarded with hearing your programs. But with a large and powerful station, such as you contemplate, we have no doubt that we will be able to tune in at any time. We firmly believe it will be the means of doing much good."—Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Walters.

Quite a number of contributions have been received from nonmembers, both in and out of Independence. Following is a typical letter:

"Find $10 inclosed for the new radio station. I am not a member, but would be if I had the opportunity, for I believe the sermons I read in the Ensign contain the true doctrine. May the Lord send a missionary this way is my prayer."—J. W. Blankenship, Cripple Creek, Colorado.

Have you made your contribution yet? Isn't right now the time to do it? Address Radio K F I X, Independence, Missouri.

Claims Too Much for Himself

Brother Victor A. Hall, 625 Iowa Street, Waterloo, Iowa, writes of being visited by a man calling himself Thomas, and claiming to be a reincarnation of Saint or "doubting" Thomas. This man says he is a Latter Day Saint but doesn't produce the fruits of the Spirit; claims he is a powerful influence and intellectual giant; tells of his mission to reform the political government of the Nation, and after that the spiritual government of the church. He is boastful, incriminating, threatening, and does not deserve the hospitality of the Saints as he travels from point to point.

Brother Hall asks that Saints everywhere be informed of this man, who says he is going back to Lamoni where he has caused some trouble, and from there likely to Chicago. He is of rather careless appearance, medium stature, about fifty-five or sixty years of age, with dark eyes and graying hair.

MISCELLANEOUS

Conference Notices

Pastoral Notices

This district's quota for the new broadcasting station at Independence is $175, and branches have been notified, I believe, as to their share of this quota. Let each endeavor to do his part toward this worthy cause, that we may have part in the fulfillment of the prophecy, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness, and then shall the end come."

Let us not forget that Brother Edward Jones, Bishop's agent, lives at 926 North Vine Street, Kewanee, Illinois, and will be glad to receipt for tithes and offerings at any time. E. R. Davis, district president.

Attention Florida Saints

Brother and Sister George Gordon, 418 South West Second Avenue, Miami, Florida, will be glad to meet any of the Saints who are living near Miami or who may visit there this winter.

Conference Minutes

EASTERN COLORADO.—At Colorado Springs, August 30 and 31, on district reunion grounds. District President B. E. Brown presided. Apostle J. F. Garver addressed the assembly, which was larger than any previous conference, every branch in the district being well represented. B. E. Brown reelected president; W. E. Wolfe, secretary; A. E. Tabor, Bishop's agent. Saints of Uteville asked for branch organization. Request granted. Max Beebe ordained priest; Ray Webb, teacher; Irby Mundy, deacon, all of Uteville; Elder Bausell resides at Uteville. Place and time of next conference left to district president and counselors. W. E. Wolfe, secretary.

EASTERN OKLAHOMA.—At Winthrop, Arkansas. H. E. Winegar chosen to preside, with Mrs. J. S. White as clerk. Following officers reported: Elders H. R. Harder, W. H. Colley, J. W. Jackson, T. B. Sharp, and H. E. Winegar. Brother Winegar has also been district Sunday school superintendent, district president, and superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression. Patriarch Richard Baldwin was present and gave several blessings. Bishop C. J. Hunt gave some wonderful advice on temporal law. Following Sunday schools reported: Lenwood, Haileyville, Mount Zion, Texas; also the following branches: Haileyville, Wilburton, Winthrop, Oklahoma; Shawnee of Dalby Springs, Texas. Committee on tent fund continued. District Department of Women reported. Committee selected to sell church at Euclid, Arkansas. Motion passed to send President F. M. Smith word of our confidence, faith, and prayers in these trying hours. Next conference will convene at Wilburton at call of president. Ten were baptized. Junior church was a success under direction of Miss Addie Belle Chappell. Winthrop Saints did a wonderful work in caring for visiting Saints, and it was greatly appreciated. Mrs. J. S. White, clerk.

Advertising Accepted by Church Papers

The Following Resolution Was Introduced at Last General Conference

“Resolved, that inasmuch as the church printing plant does commercial printing and that the costs of printing of the publications and the materials entering into are gradually increasing in price, making it necessary to raise the subscriptions from time to time to meet said costs.

“Be it resolved, further, that the Board of Publication be and is hereby instructed by this conference to accept legitimate advertising for the periodicals published by the church and to further employ an advertising manager, or employ an advertising representative to represent said publications, and that said employee be instructed not to accept questionable advertising of any nature and that any advertising that may be questionable be held from publication until sufficient proof is supplied to prove otherwise.

“And be it further resolved, that, as the earnings from this source warrant a reduction in subscription price, that said reduction be made.

“INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, October 8, 1923.”

It was moved and carried to refer this matter to the Board of Publication with power to act. The board, in response to the demand, passed a resolution opening the church papers to legitimate advertising at the following rates, to apply at once.

A Succinct Statement of a Religious Educational Policy

Aims

We shall assume as our ultimate religious goal a society which is organized upon the basis of universal brotherhood. This assumption finds scriptural support in the words of Jesus, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself."—Luke 10:27. It involves a society in which each person accepts every other person as of ultimate worth, that each person accepts the interests of every other person as his own.

This statement may sound like a glittering generality. The ideal so generally expressed may sound meaningless, so meaningless that any person, thinking or unthinking, might accept it as the ultimate goal or value. The meaning of this goal will become clearer if we speak of specific applications. It means that everyone engaged in the activity of mining coal will mine coal as if the interests of the suffering people of Germany were their very own interests. It means that the wealth of the entire world will be taken possession of as if the best interests of all persons were to be served. It means that every person will take as his interest the proper rearing of every newly born child into this brotherhood. It means that every woman, or adult, will take as his own interests the reclaiming of every wayward girl. It means that no individual, no family, no nation, or no church will take its own will as the sovereign will of its own course, but will rather be guided by the will of all mankind, in the formation and discovery of which each person is having a share. It means that the Caucasian will forget his unscientific and prejudicial presuppositions of color superiority. These are but a very few concrete illustrations of the full meaning of our goal, but they will be sufficient for the present to show the vastness of our assumption.

We called our statement of our ultimate religious goal an assumption. By no means do we wish anyone to take this statement of aim or any of the specific illustrations of it as given in the second paragraph as axiomatic, nor do we wish the reader to feel that the instances cited in the second paragraph are derived a priori from the general statement. The relationship is of an opposite nature. We feel that the statement of aims, both general and specific, can be very largely derived from facts, of nature and experience. Human nature, human experience, and history will give us large support for our statement of aims. But we shall have to admit in the last analysis that the statement is an expression of our faith, our supreme faith, in the ongoing of nature, humanity, and God into a union of complete brotherhood. Human brotherhood has not yet been demonstrated. We simply have faith based upon much fact that it is demonstrable. A leap in our logic seems necessary. It is not the faith of an unthinking man, nor of the man who does not love. It is not the faith of a man who seeks only to conserve the past, but rather of the man who seeks to discover. It is the faith of the man who thinks and loves. Let this short statement of aim suffice here to get the matter before us.

Methods

Toward this goal the race has arrived but partially. Further, each succeeding generation of newborn children must start at the beginning, and arrive not only where the present status of adult society has carried the arriving, but it is hoped that it will advance the ongoing. Thus even as adult society approaches the limit as a variable, we still have the problem of providing for this growth by each child born into the world. Growth seems then an eternal requisite, or better perhaps a synonym of the discovery and maintenance of our common brotherhood, or democracy. We are concerned, then, with the processes whereby society may arrive at this goal, and whereby each succeeding generation of children may also arrive quickly to the existing status of adult society and help carry it on to further heights. At one end we have the child entirely dependent upon adults for subsistence or life, and the more or less mature individual who has much in his character that opposes our ongoing, and in the other direction we have the desirable in our present society that we would like to mediate to him, and the undesirable that we would have him escape, and beyond that the vast untried and undiscovered fields of human relationships into which we would have him travel as the discoverer and demonstrator of the unprecedented.

It would seem self-evident that we must start with the person or child as we find him. Our second preliminary statement or assumption is that the process is an actual practice of various units of the type of life we accept as our goal. This would involve the practice of units of life's activities appropriate to the growing capacities of the child. It would further involve activities in which the experience of brotherhood is had, in which the child is making the fullest contribution to a discovery of himself and to a discovery of the common will. Increasing practice is another way of stating the process. If we practice we may hope to arrive. This involves a technique by which the child may rediscover what is desirable in our present life by practice and experience, a technique of self-criticism, but also a technique by which the child may be stimulated to the discovery of unprecedented satisfactory human relationships.

This preliminary statement of our process finds its support in the very nature of our aims, and in science and history. A. MAX CARMICHAEL.

The Radio Drive

Contributions continue to come in from scattered members and branches. District reports should make their appearance during the first part of October.

Construction of the new station will begin just as soon as sufficient funds are in sight. The radio committee had hoped that reports of the drive would be sufficiently complete to warrant beginning work on the 1000-watt equipment October first, but delays in completing the drive have occurred in nearly all branches.

Many people have asked why a higher goal was not set, so that contributions would not be limited to small amounts. The reason is simply stated. $10,000 is the amount authorized by the appropriations committee. Some donors have stated that they would give more if necessary.

Just because we have a comparatively small goal we must not think that no work is required to reach it. Rather we should sense the importance of the undertaking and support it in the same manner as though ten times the amount were asked.

The fact that some do realize the responsibility of the present undertaking is demonstrated by letters such as the following:

ROCKLIN, CALIFORNIA, September 21, 1924.

BISHOP BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE,

Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brother: Inclosed please find check for $50 for K F I X. We are very anxious for the radio to be put in. We are a very small band of Saints, and I think we have done well. It was gathered as follows:

Fifteen dollars from Relief and Service Fund; $12.00 from twelve friends of Sister Crocker (nonmembers); $10.00 from Sunday school fund; $7.00 from Sister Crocker and Brother and Sister Earle, and $6.00 from members of Sunday school.

Hoping we will soon have a receiving set and can get all the good things broadcast by K F I X, and that it will be a good missionary and win souls for Christ,

I am yours in bonds,

ADA M. EARLE, Secretary Rocklin Sunday School.

B. R. MCGUIRE,

Dear Brother: Will you please hand this dollar to the radio brothers? It is not much, but it is the best I can do now, at least. My husband does not belong to the church. I am alone in the gospel here, since my daughter died three years ago. We have no radio and perhaps never will have one, but I want to do something towards helping others to hear our Master's voice (from others), telling the gospel in its fullness. Yours in the faith.

(The name and address of this sister is, for obvious reasons, omitted.)

SENECA, ILLINOIS, September 16, 1924.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Lamoni, Iowa.

Have been reading with much interest in the HERALD in regard to a 1000-watt broadcasting station, and feel we as a people have no better way to let the world know what we are and what our aim in life is than through a station which when tuned in has volume enough to hold the listener, so if some station nearer by broadcasts at the same time, the station you desire to get will be strong enough to overcome any difficulty or interference.

We installed a four-tube set in our home last fall, and through the winter months when you were broadcasting we usually were able to locate you, but living near Chicago, other stations are on the air with so much more volume it was hard to get you clear.

And through the experiences we have had we feel we can enjoy a program, talk, or sermon only in proportion to the degree it can be received. It looks to me we as members can be greatly benefited, as well as people not of the church.

Some have said: Well, if we can hear a sermon over the radio we will not have to go to church. This may be true; however, I think this should bar none from attending church, but rather should be an incentive to us, or whoever may hear, to try to put into action those things which should make us progressive and a people who are intended to be a light unto the world.

So, being a firm believer in what radio can accomplish, I desire to add a contribution which will help a little towards the installation of a new station. I sincerely hope the amount you need for this great project will be yours in a short time, that K F I X may sound this latter-day gospel around the earth.

Your brother in the gospel,

E. E. ANDERSON.

C. B. Woodsock, superintendent of the Mondamin, Iowa, consolidated schools, solicited for the radio there. In sending contribution he wrote in part:

We expect to have more to send later. We rejoice in the possibilities of the radio in church work. We have a fine set owned by Brother J. E. Gunsolley, which will be available for use at the church building as soon as the new sending station is ready.

F. L. Freeman, branch president at Webb City, Missouri, writes that they have almost doubled their quota.

Sister M. B. Keith, Davilla, Texas, in sending contributions for the members of her family writes in part as follows:

I think the radio is one of God's plans in the hastening time. We picked cotton to get this money. May the Lord's Spirit guide all his people.

W. H. Mannering, in sending a contribution from the San Antonio Branch, gives the information that the Saints there are broadcasting semimonthly from W C A R and goes on to state:

We vision a big future for radio and think that the Independence 1000-watt station will wield a mighty influence in gospel work.

Is there a single reader who does not want to assist in the building of the powerful new station?

Delay in making your contribution may delay the time of putting the 1000-watt broadcaster in operation. Do not wait longer to be solicited. Mail your contribution now to Radio K F I X, Independence, Missouri.

THE RADIO COMMITTEE.

"On the surface of things there is discord, confusion, and want of adaptation; but dig down, first to the center of the world, and then to the center of your own nature, and you will find a most wonderful correspondence, a most beautiful harmony, between the two—the world made for the hero and the hero made for the world."—Religious Perplexities, p. 53.

Business Outlook

BY BENJAMIN R. M'GUIRE

We are always interested in the business outlook. It has definite bearing on tithes and offerings. When the Saints are fearful and apprehensive as to business, they are very apt to delay the payment of the tithe; but when there is a reasonable assurance that the business trend is upward, they feel happy and hopeful and are more cheerful in their giving. The following, taken from the Kansas City Star a few days ago, is encouraging:

Stocks steady: foreign exchange higher; curbs firm, and bonds slightly irregular.

R. G. Dunn & Company report 291 failures this week, against 319 last week and 302 corresponding week 1923.

Bradstreet's report continued moderate improvement in trade, which is most pronounced in retail lines as result of cool weather.

Plans being made to reopen twenty-five banks in Minnesota; three will open in a few days, stockholders having paid sufficient assessments.

Petroleum imports into United Kingdom week ended September 15 were 27,000,000 imperial gallons, against 19,500,000 preceding week.

Western Electric billings for the first eight months of 1924 were $195,167,000, increase $37,676,000 over 1923; bookings were $198,892,000, increase $7,566,000.

With the improved prices of farm products:

With the presidential election soon over:

With the revival of the building industry that always comes with spring:

We feel that there is reason to feel sufficiently optimistic to move courageously forward, both in our business and church activities, remembering that reward always comes to men of faith.

"I have seen countless deaths in battle, executions, deathbeds—men, women, and children. It has never quite lost for me its awfulness. The materialism which makes it seem the mere stopping of a machine, into which I once reasoned myself, lessened and left me long ago. Once, by a deathbed in a hospital, I heard a surgeon say as a man ceased to breathe, 'It has stopped; the engine has ceased to go.' His senior, an old man, replied, 'No, the Engineer has left it.' I have ceased to reason about it. At every dead man's side, I feel more and more that something, immaterial as the Being who willed the thing to live, has escaped me and my analysis. Life, seems to me a thing as real, as positive, as death, and trust me, Saint Clair, as we live on and on we get to have more and more trust in recognitions of truths indefensible by mere logic."—Wier Mitchell.

Leadership and Church Government

BY E. R. DAVIS

In all ages of the world since the beginning of Adam's time, God has chosen individuals to be leaders among the people in connection with church government, has prescribed through these God-appointed leaders certain well-defined laws, and has held before the people certain definite aims towards which to work, directing these leaders by his Spirit in the formulation of plans and policies for the accomplishment of these definite aims.

The crowning objective at all times has been the salvation of souls, but each age has had special goals and special problems peculiar to itself, and these have required special plans, methods, or policies towards their accomplishment or solution. A change in methods or policies does not necessarily change or interfere with the underlying principles governing the crowning objective, "the salvation of souls."

The principal problem in Adam's day seemed to be the first introduction of the great plan of redemption. Noah's problem was to warn the world of impending disaster and point out to them a way of escape in an age when the world was ripe for destruction, and then to reestablish the work of God upon the earth following the deluge. The work confronting Moses seemed to be the leading of a stiff-necked people out of Egyptian bondage and into a promised land. The work of the Christ seemed to be the reestablishment of the church on the earth in the meridian of time, and in an age with problems, conditions, and governments peculiar to itself. Joseph Smith comes as the leader to restore the gospel and establish the church following a long period of apostasy and a great reformation. He started a movement looking towards what we are pleased to call Zion. The late Joseph took up the work following the Brigham Young apostasy and led the people on to a closer approach to the realization of Zion. The work of Frederick M. Smith seems to be the near approach to if not the complete redemption of Zion, in which stewardships and the social problem must play an important part.

Each of these leaders, in trying to reach the special goal and meet the problems peculiar to the age, has had to resort to different methods and policies in the prosecution of the work. The different methods and policies have not hindered the progress of the great plan of redemption, and of the carrying of the people forward towards the crowning objective,

"the salvation of souls," but have been augmentative towards such goal.

Now in the face of the fact that God has chosen these men to be leaders of the people, where is the condemnation if they refer to themselves as leaders, or if the people refer to them as "Our leader"? In Doctrine and Covenants 54:2 we read, "Appoint whom you will to be your leader," and in Doctrine and Covenants 105:12 we read:

For unto you (the twelve) and those (the first presidency) who are appointed with you, to be your counselors and your leaders, is the power of this priesthood given, etc.

In both of these references the Lord refers to man as a leader to the people.

And again, the duty of the president of the office of the high priesthood is to preside over the whole church, and to be like unto Moses. Behold, here is wisdom, yea, to be a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet; having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church.—Doctrine and Covenants 104:42.

And thou shalt not command him who is at thy head, and at the head of the church.—Doctrine and Covenants 27:2.

In these two references, who is it that is referred to as "the head of the church"? Is it Jesus Christ, or is it the prophet of the church? If the Lord refers to the prophet or president of the church as its leader, or head, why should the people be taken to task for using these terms that the Lord uses in the revelations? Would some who object so much to this term being used in referring to the President of the church, object to it if they held the position of president?

With reference to church government, we refer the reader to Doctrine and Covenants 120:4, 5, especially the following:

He that heareth him that is sent heareth the Lord who sent him, if he be called of God and be sent by the voice of the church.

Also 1 Thessalonians 5:12, 13:

And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labor among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you; and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake. And be at peace among yourselves.

My servants have been harsh one with another; and some have not been sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations which my church has already received. Until my people shall hear and heed those who are set in the church to teach the revelations there will be misunderstanding and confusion among the members. The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time.—Doctrine and Covenants 122:1, 2.

Let us canvass the foregoing briefly. Is the present President of the church called of God and sent by the voice of the church? If we hear him, do we hear him that sent him? Is he over us in the Lord? And does he admonish us? Do we esteem him very highly in love for his work's sake? Are God's servants harsh one with another? Are there some who are not sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations? Is there misunderstanding and confusion among the members? If so, why? Is it because there are some who will not hear and heed those who are set in the church to teach the revelations? Are the President and his counselors entitled to teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and to be directed by revelation from time to time?

And this shall be your business and mission in all your lives to preside in council and set in order all the affairs of this church and kingdom.—Doctrine and Covenants 87: 5.

Just what portion of the affairs of the church and kingdom does the term all cover?

That the Presidency is the leading quorum in the church. That the duty of presiding over the church devolves on that quorum. That it is the prerogative of the President to preside over the whole church, to bear the responsibility of the care and oversight of the work of the church, in all its different departments.—General Conference Resolution No. 386.

How much ground does the term all its different departments cover?

Inasmuch as the Presidency is responsible for the direction of the affairs of the whole church, it is obviously proper that all the departments of the church ministry should work in harmony with and under supervision of the presiding authority of the church.—From a committee's report adopted by the Joint Council May 1, 1917.

According to the above report, what portion of the affairs of the church is the Presidency responsible for? How many of the departments of the church ministry are to work in harmony with, and under the supervision of, the presiding authority of the church?

These tracts to be written by those in the ministry . . . who have a talent for writing, and to be submitted to the Presidency before being published.—Doctrine and Covenants 125: 11.

Evidently, then, the Presidency has some supervision over the publications of the church according to the law. Does the publishing department come under the terms, all the affairs of this church and kingdom, and all its different departments?

Who is prepared to say that the words of W. W. Blair were not indited by the Spirit of God, as he claims, when he wrote the following:

The Lord made Joseph the Seer the "head," and the "leader" of his church on earth. Therefore let him lead! The Lord called his son Joseph to succeed him in leading and in teaching the church, and for that reason I have always said, Let Joseph, by the grace of God, lead! Let him act as the "head" of the church on earth! His official "position" demands this! Let no person, directly, or indirectly, attempt to lead the leader God has appointed! Don't do it by preambles and resolutions; don't do it by any species of coercion or undue influence; but on the other hand support him by faith, confidence, prayers, and in every other godly way. His responsibilities are great and numerous, and he should have no obstructions cast in his way by perverse or by over zealous persons. His official teachings and ministrations should be first among the ministry and the Saints. Let this be religiously observed by all, and unity, peace, power, and great progress will come to the church. And while I write the Holy Spirit testifies, Yea, saith the Lord God, let my people hear and heed my servant Joseph, and so will joy and gladness and prosperity come to Zion and her children.—W. W. Blair, in SAINTS' HERALD, vol. 41, p. 157.

Are there those in the church to-day who have fallen into the same error as did David Whitmer when the Lord saw fit to admonish him thus:

And you have not given heed unto my Spirit, and to those who were set over you, but have been persuaded by those whom I have not commanded.

Have the Saints so soon forgotten the admonition of the Lord given in Doctrine and Covenants 131: 4? Better read it again, brethren.

May right prevail, and may peace, unity, and wisdom be the guiding forces in all our decisions.

"Prove All Things"

BY PAUL M. HANSON

As for the future of the Lord's work—what thoughtful man has any doubt?

The Lord, omnipotent, possessing unlimited knowledge and wisdom, knowing the end from the beginning, makes no mistakes. How could any plan of the Eternal One fail? The mind amidst majestic conclusions moves on, without demurring, to a victorious termination of all divine plans, heavenly purposes, and celestial projects.

When God and man unite towards accomplishing a given object, the situation is changed. Divinity and humanity become intermingled. The plans, purposes, and designs of men do not invariably lead to a happy conclusion. The mind is as certain of that as of successful endings of all heavenly undertakings.

A close association of divine and human factors makes it imperative to carefully analyze and discriminate, or the divine may remain unseen and unknown because of an unbroken gaze upon what is human in character; or human elements may not be recognized and properly classified because of looking only on what is divine in essence.

The great commandment directs one to love the Lord with all the mind, heart, soul, and strength.

To allow filmy human obstructions to obscure the divinity of the church of the Son of God, would be a mistake; and to behold no works of man would result in attributing too much to God, in time weaken faith, and lay a foundation for apostasy.

Prove all things; "hold fast that which is good."

The realm in which human agency finds expression is very large—yet the whole earth is full of the glory of God, and over nations, the church, and men are superintending providences.

Our calling is to be "workers together with God." Only as one works with him can success crown as a diadem labor that is performed.

It is written: "Truth is knowledge of things as they are, and as they were, and as they are to come." An acquaintance with what has occurred enables one in many instances to secure a better close-up view of events that are occurring. An insight into history frequently provides a means of forecasting with reasonable certainty the results of initiated principles and policies.

To be able to see "things as they are," and as "they were," and as "they are to come," is to possess the spirit of truth. It can be acquired only by a high development of the critical faculty. Criticism is not a synonym of faultfinding. It means focusing the eyes so as to see "things as they are." True believers in God are not only permitted, but also enjoined, to engage unceasingly in the noble pursuit of truth.

"If any man have ears to hear, let him hear."—Jesus.

The Lord is pleased with the mind that is active, which analyzes, and discerns the exact status of divine and human affairs, and then profits thereby and proclaims what is known. Without this procedure, man stops in his ascent to the point of eminence from which an unexcelled portrait of God may be obtained.

With an unobstructed view of what is divine, comes power and skill in judging human parts in the drama of life.

There is no one in all the world who should be so critical as persons in possession of the Spirit of God.

The time apparently has come for the Reorganization at this stage of its development to say whether it now desires one man or one quorum to have in its hands, in addition to the courts and laws provided in the standard books of the church, "effective discipline" to prevent "individual caprice and rebellion"; and, besides, "supreme directional control" of the press, "supreme directional control" of the Board of Publication, "supreme directional control" of the finances of the church, etc., etc.

It should not be difficult to decide.

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK, August 28, 1924.

REUNION NEWS

The Nauvoo Reunion

At a joint priesthood and reunion committee meeting held several months ago, the Lord promised that if the Saints were faithful and came prepared, he would bless them with an abundance of his Spirit at the coming reunion. With this promise in mind, the Saints throughout the district labored to make the reunion a success. The theme of the opening meeting was "Unity," and unity was preserved throughout the ten days.

Nowhere throughout the church is there a more ideal reunion ground than in Nauvoo. Far removed as it is, from all the evil influences of a large city, one may commune with nature and thus draw nearer to God.

The large meeting tent was erected at the foot of Main Street, between the old historic Nauvoo House on the left and the Old Homestead on the right, with the mighty Mississippi River in the background. The river at this point is considered the most beautiful of any place along its course. When the Keokuk Dam was built, the river widened, forming what is known as Lake Cooper, so named in honor of the man who built the dam. Viewed on a moonlight night, it thrills the heart of all nature lovers.

It seemed very fitting that the children of those to whom Nauvoo meant so much in the early days should be present with us. These were President Elbert A. Smith, son of David, and Patriarch Fred A. and Vida E. Smith, son and daughter of Alexander who passed away in the Mansion House at the close of a reunion fifteen years ago. We also enjoyed having with us Brother Elbert Smith's mother, whose reminiscences of the old days were enjoyed by all.

It was estimated that there were three hundred and fifty to four hundred present at the services. Seven States were represented, and at one time there were as many as two hundred automobiles parked on the grounds. The people of Nauvoo threw open their homes to all who did not care to tent and assisted in various ways to make the visitors' stay as pleasant as possible. One business man of Nauvoo, a non-member, gave $15 to the reunion fund.

Meals were served in the Nauvoo House on the cafeteria plan. This was in charge of Brother Elmer Sherman, of Rock Creek. Judging by compliments and general satisfaction manifested by all who ate there, everything was very satisfactory. Sister Smith of Fort Madison was cook and general manager, and she was ably assisted by Sister Langford.

The reunion was in charge of A. Berve of Nauvoo, W. G. Gunn of Fort Madison, and G. S. Daniel of Burlington. The sermons were delivered by E. A. Smith, F. A. Smith, J. A. Becker, C. M. Clifford, E. L. Ulrich, G. Jenkins, E. R. Davis, and L. G. Holloway. We also had with us C. B. Hartshorn, V. A. Reese, and N. Carmichael, of Independence, and W. E. Prall of Lamoni.

The speakers were blessed with liberty and an abundance of the Spirit, and their sermons were an inspiration to all. The wonderful experiences related by our missionaries were equal to any recorded in the Bible, and they testified that the people of the world were hungering and thirsting for the gospel as never before and that now is our opportunity to gather them into the fold. As Brother Ulrich says: "Let's get our baking-powder cans busy." He was marvelously led to a woman who had been dropping her tithing into a baking-powder can for years before hearing the gospel, and had it all ready to hand to the missionaries as soon as she recognized them as men of God. Bishop Becker expressed the thought that candidates for baptism should be taught the law of tithing and consecration so they would be willing to file their inventories immediately after baptism. This was a new thought to the missionaries, but one worthy of consideration. Our missionaries should not be handicapped by a lack of funds when people everywhere are hungering and thirsting for the gospel. "Freely ye have received, freely give," should be our motto. Patriarch Fred A. Smith's sermons were greatly appreciated, especially by the outsiders, as many of them grew up with him as a boy. As they talked over the old days together, they spoke in affectionate terms of Sister Emma Smith, who mothered all the boys in the neighborhood and passed out cookies with a generous hand.

The reunion was planned as a spiritual uplift, with all other features of it as a secondary consideration. It remained spiritual throughout. The general social condition improved under the spiritual influences until it became a factor of helpfulness. Many attended the reunion who were greatly burdened in mind, but under the melting influences of the Spirit their burdens were gradually lifted, and they were cheered and comforted. The words given through inspiration at the prayer meetings were very encouraging to those who have sought to build up the waste places and who have lived in hopes of seeing Nauvoo again restored. The Lord spoke through Brother Berve at one of the first meetings of the reunion, saying that a nucleus had been called to this place whom the Lord would bless if they sought to carry out his purposes; that he had decreed this place should be a corner stone, and from this corner stone should go out lines to other places. He would lay the plummet to this line and many should be measured and found wanting, while others should be measured and found doing the Master's will; even the relatives of those who went on before should carry out his fixed principles. The following day a message very similar to this was given through Brother Elbert Smith, who was not present at the previous meeting. He said we look about us at the crumbling buildings and say that much time has elapsed, yet with God it is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. He blessed the Saints that were here in days gone by and he is ready to bless those who are here to-day, for he loved not the children of the past more than those of to-day, but they should be a blessing here and should help the church in its time of need. If they would put out of their lives the things that grieved him in the past, he would be near to bless.

Sister Emma Burton spoke in tongues, and the interpretation was given through Brother Berve, which said that though the clouds have been thick and some have almost been submerged in doubt and fear, yet the clouds should be dispelled by the power of the Spirit and the light would come, for the Lord would not allow anything to overthrow his work. Brother Elbert Smith suggested as a topic at one of our prayer meetings in the early part of the reunion, "What does my church mean to me, and what do I mean to the church?" This theme was carried throughout the reunion. There were fourteen baptisms, twelve children and two adults.

During the study hour the children under twelve met in the Nauvoo House with Sister Emma Bromann, the young people with A. L. Sanford in the Old Homestead, and the older ones with Brother Berve in the tent. Those who had charge of the various groups were ably assisted from time to time by those who were called upon. Sister Vida Smith gave valuable assistance to the women and young people.

The music was in charge of our district chorister, Sister G. S. Daniel of Burlington. She commenced early in the season to drill the various choirs. She was always to be found at her post and faithful as the day was long.

The recreational department, which was in charge of E. R. Williams, rendered a very fine program Saturday evening, and many compliments were received on the talent exhibited by the district. Brother James McIntyre of Fort Madison, who is quite skillful in the use of colored chalk, gave several very fine illustrated readings. He is also talented along musical lines and has charge of the orchestra, which gave concerts on several occasions.

A marshmallow toast was held on Tuesday evening and a wiener roast on Thursday evening at the close of the evening services. There was also a moonlight hike to David's Chamber. Bathing in the Mississippi was the principal recreation in the afternoons.

On Thursday afternoon a historical trip was taken through Nauvoo. All gathered at the little graveyard near the Old Homestead and sang, "I came to the spot where the two Martyrs lay." Prayer was offered by F. A. Smith and a short talk was given by Brother Berve. Several of the old historic houses which are still standing were then visited, after which all drove to David's Chamber where another short service was conducted with Brother Elbert Smith as the speaker.

The Fort Madison Band, under the leadership of Brother Walter Sanford, rendered several concerts on the lawn Saturday evenings, and Sundays between one and two o'clock in the afternoon. They also gave short programs in the street uptown. They made quite an impressive appearance in their blue and gold uniforms. Brother Sanford deserves great credit for the way in which he has drilled the members, who are mostly youngsters.

Brother Elbert Smith was taken ill Friday and was unable to meet with us for the remainder of the reunion, much to the disappointment of all. Bishop George P. Lambert, who had worked hard trying to make the reunion a success, was also taken sick at the close and was hurried to a hospital in Keokuk, where a serious operation was performed.

The reunion work for the coming year was taken up at the regular business meeting of the reunion association and plans made for the coming year. These plans will be put into operation at once, and the slogan will be "A bigger and better reunion."

MABEL A. SANFORD.

Stockton, California

August 30.—The Northern California reunion was held from July 17 to 27, and the Saints from here who attended enjoyed it very much. Our branch was well represented, a number being able to attend nearly the whole time, while others went over the week ends. We had a peaceful and quiet reunion, and all came home very much enthused for next year's work and with their faces Zionward. We have all faith and confidence in our President and are looking forward to a bright future when all doubt shall flee away and right eventually triumph.

The Department of Women was planning a vacation from reunion until September, but some one wanted them to tuck a quilt, so we met and tacked it. While we were there it was decided to clean the church the next week, and as a result six of the sisters took their lunches to the church and washed windows, mopped the floors upstairs and down, dusted, and did a general house cleaning. At noon the husbands came from their work to eat lunch with them and helped them with some of the hard work.

Sister Addie Snively has been quite sick for some time but is gradually getting better.

Meetings have not been so well attended during vacation months, but we look for brighter days in the near future.

We have a new member in the branch who throws a spell around everyone who sees her. She is the infant daughter of Brother and Sister Maurice Holden, Bessie May.

The Sunday school is planning a rally day soon, which is to be an all-day meeting, with lunch in the basement. Invitations are to be sent to every member and friend who does not attend regularly, together with the parents of our members who do not belong to the church. Our district president has promised at least one or two speakers from other places for the day.

Brother and Sister Evans are to be gone for a few months, and they will be greatly missed. Brother Evans is not a member, but he attends our meetings.

We believe Zion has become more real to us than ever before, and we hope to qualify ourselves more fully for work in that city which is sure to be builded if we but work for it.

Eastern Colorado Reunion

Peace, sociability, and spiritual power were the outstanding features of this district's reunion, which came to a close last Sunday, August 31. It was the largest and probably the most valuable reunion held in Eastern Colorado. Over two hundred fifty were served at the camp dining room, and many more cooked their own meals.

The weather was ideal, and except for a shower each Sunday the campers found no discomfort from wet weather which sometimes prevails in the Rockies at this time of the year. The camp ground lies in the shadow of Cheyenne Mountain, and in the clear dry air of the early morning the vision of the towering mountains, rearing their snow-crowned heads in solemn grandeur, was inspiring to everyone.

These mountains are a great drawing card to thousands of tourists, many of the eastern Saints falling to their lure. As a result there were in attendance at the reunion visitors from Kansas City, Independence, New York, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Michigan, Texas, and New Mexico.

The preaching was affirmative and inspiring. No attempt was made to interject any of the controversial issues at present under discussion by the leading quorums. The reunion is a place for spiritual uplift, for the upbuilding of moral character, and for the rededication of our lives for the service of Christ—and not for argument and strife. So the brethren who preached recognized, and their sermons were inspired with a purpose to build and strengthen. Those who preached were: Brethren Petrie, Prettyman, J. Arthur Davis, J. F. Garver, B. E. Brown, Frank B. Almond, J. D. Curtis, Reno Auld, Richard Bullard, and R. T. Cooper.

Brother Almond also presented each morning a lecture on the general theme of "Church leadership." The following were the subjects presented: "The call of to-day for leadership," "The distinctness of the church's message," "The composite nature of church membership," "Zion, the perfected brotherhood," and "The price of leadership." A lecture was also given by the district president, Bruce E. Brown, on "Things to do to make people like you." These lectures were well received and brought quite a large attendance.

In the afternoons there were regular hours of recreation from two to four. At four o'clock, as the heat of the day somewhat diminished, we had institute work by the Sunday school and the Department of Women. Inspiring addresses were made by various workers, and Sisters Louisa Fishburn and Letha M. Tilton are to be commended for the splendid assistance they gave along this line. One afternoon a program was rendered by the Denver women, under the leadership of Sister Laura Kohankie. This also was good.

On Friday evening the Colorado Springs Saints gave a play, "The opportunity of the Sunday school." This was very well given, and to many of the audience who happened to be teachers it was an admonition to recognize the greatness of their task.

The Sunday school session each Sunday was so arranged that the little ones were led into the junior tent, where they had regular class work, and the adults remained in the big tent to hear a lecture. The first Sunday Brother Frank Almond spoke on "The Bible and the Sunday school," and the last Sunday Mrs. H. C. Halley, of Lincoln, Nebraska, lectured on her experiences in juvenile court work.

Perhaps the biggest feature of the whole reunion was the young people's prayer meeting, held at Stratton Park, at six o'clock each morning. From the beginning the Spirit of the Master was with us, in vision, in admonition, and in prophecy. More than one hundred attended the last meeting, and forty-five testimonies were recorded within one hour. Many of the young people will remember these meetings as long as they live.

The Conference

The usual district conference was held Saturday and Sunday. Upon the recommendation of the reunion committee, it was moved to accept the plan of the reunion ground, divided into lots, as drawn by the committee. It was further adopted that these lots be sold by deed, in order to meet the expense incurred in the purchase of the ground, and the improvements made necessary. This recommendation was carried unanimously, and before the reunion closed twenty-seven lots were purchased, and a deposit made of more than fifteen hundred dollars. A wave of consecrated enthusiasm swept the camp, and everyone was determined to see that the uncertainty as regards the financial situation of the reunion grounds should exist no longer.

The lots for sale are platted around the main camp ground, leaving plenty of room for the usual camp site. If any of the Eastern Saints feel they would like a beautiful mountain cottage in one of the prettiest spots of Colorado—over a mile high, with a mountain creek running near, and the air laden with the smell of spruce and pine—it would pay them to write to any of the committee chosen to carry out the recommendation of the conference: Brethren J. D. Curtis, E. J. Williams, A. E. Tabor, and Bruce E. Brown.

One of the happy events of the conference was the presentation of a lot by the district to Brother J. D. Curtis, whose unstinted assistance and whole-hearted service made the purchase of these grounds possible. For more than three years Brother Curtis has borne the financial burden of the reunion, mortgaging even his own home to meet the situation, and his sacrifice merited the recognition of the Saints.

Other features of the conference were the recommendation of the district president and Apostle J. F. Garver, to organize the Saints at Utleyville into a branch as soon as convenient; and to carry this out, it was also recommended that the following named brethren be ordained to the ministry: Max Beebe to the office of priest, Ray Webbe to the office of teacher, and Irby Mundy to the office of deacon. These three young men had been called to special service through the voice of the Spirit at the young people's prayer service, and many evidences were presented from various ones showing their call was divinely approved.

Bruce E. Brown was sustained as district president, and E. J. Williams and Wilbur Richards as counselors to him. We believe that it was to the district president's wisdom and prudence that the success of this reunion was due.

With feelings of thankfulness tinged with the sad thought of parting, the camp broke up Sunday night, after singing "God be with you till we meet again," and after receiving a special blessing from Apostle John Garver. The following is an expression of his experience by Patriarch Richard Bullard:

"After ten days of spiritual enjoyment, such as have never been excelled in this district, the farewells are being spoken and the smiles so radiant upon the faces of the Saints are fading away under the sadness of parting, yet with the hope of meeting again. This has been one of the best reunions I have ever attended—not the largest, but a real good social or spiritual time is not dependent upon numbers. The preaching has been fine, exceptionally so—inspiring and very earnest. The morning lectures given by our Frank Almond were exceptionally instructive and inspiring and were listened to with rapt attention. I certainly enjoyed them very much. The prayer meetings were spiritual and uplifting, the Lord remembering his people by speaking to them and calling several to positions for service to him. The committee are deserving the highest commendation for their faithful, efficient, and untiring service. oGod, faithful Jake Curtis, leading and supervising this department, and with his associates working in sweet harmony, have given to all a splendid service. We have been carried toward the Mount where the three with their Lord witnessed the transforming power and glory of the Holy Spirit, and such moments are not easily forgotten. Oh, that we may live and labor so that this may not be to us a passing experience, but that harmony and peace which should be our heritage may prevail throughout the church."

Dow City Reunion

The joint reunion of the Little Sioux and Gallands Grove districts was held August 15 to 24 in the comfortable and convenient city park at Dow City, Iowa. Every courtesy was shown the Saints by the residents of the town during the ten days, and at the business meeting a petition signed by one hundred fifty citizens invited the reunion of 1925 to return to their village.

The commodious tents belonging to the districts had been set up by volunteer help from near-by branches. But the opening day was rainy and cold, so but few were able to enter camp. Organization was effected by choosing Apostle E. J. Gleazer and District Presidents J. W. Lane and F. T. Mussell to preside, with power to make all appointments.

Almost ideal weather was had for the remainder of the reunion, and the attendance was generally good. While there were only thirty-five tents on the grounds, the roads were excellent and autos brought a daily attendance of two or three hundred, with twice that many at night. On both Sundays generous auto loads came from all points in the two districts, bringing earnest worshipers to share in the services of the day.

The usual daily program opened at half past seven in the morning with a study hour lecture and round table. The themes covered a wide range of subjects of vital interest to the Saints, especially to the young, centering in character building, the essentials of spiritual growth, the elements of success, and our outlook as a church, presented by various members of the priesthood. A splendid spirit of intensive study was manifested throughout. The early morning and the late afternoon study hours were well attended and a strong sentiment was expressed favoring the presentation of definite courses of lectures another year and at a time of day when more could be present.

The prayer meetings at nine o'clock were usually well attended, inspirational, and comforting. The young people were directed by Brethren Gleazer and Martin. Their meetings were always well occupied in cheering song and happy devotion. On several occasions the Lord spoke words of commendation and counsel. The young were encouraged to prepare for an active, consecrated service. Many were former Graceland students and others were planning soon to leave for Graceland's opening. Often stirring testimonies were borne of the wonderful opportunities Graceland offers our young people.

The morning preaching service was preceded by a song service which helped prepare one for the message of the hour. The preaching was of a character to develop the faith of the Saints and to inspire confidence in the ultimate triumph of the cause. At the same hour junior church services were had for the youth in the young people's tent, under the direction of Sister Elva Merrill and those whom she called to her assistance. Sister Merrill, who had caught the inspiration from the Young People's Convention, was able to render a commendable service.

At half past two each day departmental problems and ideals were presented for discussion. Sister Effie Hield, of Janesville, Wisconsin, was present throughout the week and directed work among the women. In response to a demand for a course of lectures on one of the women's study courses, Sister Hield conducted a model study hour each day at half past four, using as a text, The Mother Teacher of Religion. Much interest was shown in the class work and many went home convinced that they could and should adopt some systematic study in their home branches to help prepare for efficient Zion building.

The departmental work was generally under the direction of C. B. Woodstock, whose years of experience as a teacher and worker in the church enabled him to bring good counsel and inspiration to the problems of the day.

Two afternoons were occupied by Bishop J. A. Koehler in presenting the plan of stewardships as a solution of the social-economic problem of the church. Brother Koehler presented his plan in a clear and convincing manner. We eagerly look forward to the day when such an ideal may be realized.

The afternoons, with the exception of Sunday, were given over to organized play under the able direction of Jay E. Keck of Sioux City and his assistants. Volley ball, handball, tennis, croquet, and horseshoe were popular. Interesting contests were had each day. On two occasions the young people gathered on the hill after evening service and enjoyed a marshmallow-wiener roast around a roaring bonfire. Songs, games, and stories were the order.

Before the evening sermon a half hour was spent in music and song under the direction of the choristers, Gladys Silsby and Clifford Brown. Several orchestral instruments rendered valued assistance.

The evening sermons by Brethren Gleazer and J. F. Martin were of distinctive missionary character; forceful, entertaining, and convincing. The presence of these brethren was a blessing to the Saints. Young in years and heart, with clear vision, devout and earnest, they won the love and esteem of all. On the closing Sunday a number were baptized by Brother F. T. Mussell.

Apostle T. W. Williams was present on two days and preached stirring discourses. Brethren Charles J. Smith and R. J. Lambert also assisted in preaching the word. The latter attended the reunion in the interests of the Herald Office publications.

Following a time-honored custom Friday evening was given over to a literary and musical program presented by Graceland students, past, present, and future. The platform was tastefully decorated, and the program was in keeping with the real Graceland spirit.

The Camp Herald, edited, typed, and mimeographed by Brother Jay E. Keck, contained the daily announcements and notes of the camp. These were distributed free each evening and placed in the stores of the town. It was neat and spicy in appearance and served as a good publicity medium.

The camp dining hall was conducted in a vacant store building down town, providing good home meals at twenty-five and thirty-five cents.

Invitations for the 1925 reunion were received from the mayor and Chamber of Commerce of Storm Lake, where a Chautauqua building and park are to be had free; also from the mayor of Denison, and from the citizens of Dow City. The Saints are favorably known in these towns of western Iowa.

A joint committee was elected to provide for a reunion in 1925, to whom was referred all matters of location and preparation.

The reunion continues to function in the lives of the Saints. However, the convenience of auto travel induces many to choose to drive in every day, or as often as possible, rather than to arrange to leave home for ten days while they come and camp. Thus it would seem that the days of the big camp with its hundreds of tents is past, and the new day of quick transit is with us. We must adjust ourselves to the circumstances. It may call for a modification of reunion plans. The worshipers receive in the measure in which they have been willing to give of effort and sacrifice to be present. We only regret that the inspiration of the reunion might not have come into every home in the two districts.

Central Michigan Reunion

COLEMAN, MICHIGAN, September 12.—To say that the Central Michigan reunion was a success is putting it mildly. All went away with a spirit of enthusiasm that will make the coming year one of the greatest in the history of the district.

The reunion was in charge of Apostle F. Henry Edwards and the district officers. President Frederick M. Smith was with us from Wednesday morning until Thursday afternoon, and all who heard his three sermons were made to realize the necessity of the immediate redemption of Zion and the establishment of stewardships in the church. Brother Edwards left an impression with the young folks that will not soon be forgotten.

Elder O. J. Haun was there to greet the many friends he left behind when he went to Indianapolis, and imparted spiritual food of which many were in need.

Elders B. H. Doty and John R. Grice furnished the music, with the help of others, besides doing part of the speaking.

The Department of Women was in charge of Sister W. L. Christy, and all have a good word to speak for her. She filled her part of the program well. May God bless her in her work.

Elders Tomlinson, G. W. Burt, S. T. Pendleton, G. W. Davis, Matthew Umphrey, and others had their part in the program, and all worked to one end—the glory of God. Thirty-one were baptized during the reunion.

Brother Gene Harder had charge of the recreation exercises, and many interesting games were played and enjoyed by all.

Old and young were entertained after the evening services Tuesday and Friday with a wiener roast and watermelon feast and community singing in charge of Elders J. R. Grice and B. H. Doty.

There was a great degree of the Spirit of God manifested all through the reunion, but on the last Sunday the Saints enjoyed a regular pentecostal shower, and brethren who have been in the gospel work all their lives and have traveled far and wide made the statement that never before had they witnessed anything like it.

Meals were free, each branch contributing to the expense of the reunion. The plan proved very satisfactory, and there were from three to five hundred present during the entire week, with many more on Saturday and Sunday. The grounds were donated us free of charge, and the lights were furnished by the Consumer Power Company. This, with the cooperation of the business men of Midland, made everything very pleasant.

Hagerman, Idaho

August 26.—The Idaho reunion has passed into history and is written in the hearts of those present as the largest and most successful one Idaho has ever had.

The wheels started to move at the winter conference at Boise, when the following committee were named to make the arrangements: R. C. Chambers, of Rupert; W. F. Glauner, S. D. Condit, J. W. Glauner, M. G. Parks, and B. F. Woods, of Hagerman.

After much consideration the Binder Tourist Park in Hagerman was decided to be the most convenient place, it being in the main part of town.

Friday evening, August 15, found the district tent erected on the campus equipped with electric lights, a fountain of cool spring water near by, and Apostle D. T. Williams on hand to make the opening address, which he did, using the subject, "Pressing onward to the goal."

Saturday morning District President R. C. Chambers, Roy S. Budd, and Guy P. Levitt arrived, and the organization was completed. R. C. Chambers was chosen to preside, with power to choose his assistants, they to arrange the order and time of meetings, choose speakers, etc.

Meetings were as follows: Six a. m., young people's prayer meetings, in charge of Roy S. Budd; 8 a. m., class work in charge of Guy Levitt; 9.15 general prayer meeting; 11 o'clock, preaching; 2.30 p. m., departmental work by Guy Levitt and James Keir; 4 o'clock, recreation in charge of Ed. L. Haas. Volley ball, baseball, and other interesting games were indulged in, but volley ball seemed the most popular. At 7.40 p. m., song service in charge of Rena Haas and Emma Benson; 8 p. m., preaching.

The prayer meetings were very spiritual, and the gift of prophecy was manifest, encouraging the Saints onward and admonishing them to continue in the faith they had embraced. We would not forget to make special mention of the young people's prayer meetings also, as they were very spiritual and well attended, even at the early hour they were appointed. Brother Budd endeared himself to this band of young standard bearers, and when he went away he left many sad faces among them.

Friday night a special program was rendered to a large and attentive audience. The tent was not large enough to accommodate the crowd, the seating capacity being about two hundred, so the walls of the tent were lifted and cars were parked close enough to enable those outside to hear the program, which consisted of a cantata under the direction of Rena Haas, Mrs. Keathly at the piano. Charlotte Condit read the Camp Cricket; many of the jokes were aimed at Brethren Fulk and Keir who had ventured out fishing one morning about four o'clock. A song was given by Brother Keir, which he declared to be his national air; we recognized it to be Chinese, but it pleased the audience well enough to call for another. Miss Winona Gilmore gave a reading, and it was followed by a play, "The risen Peter." Brother Paul Fishel, who arrived that night, gave us a splendid oration, "Universal peace."

A survey taken Saturday revealed twelve tents on the grounds, a vacant building near by containing seven beds which had been supplied by the Saints, and a number of visitors entertained in the homes of the local Saints.

Meals were served at the home of Mrs. S. D. Condit by a committee of the sisters at the rate of twenty-five cents each; and by the donations of fruits, vegetables, etc., we were able to furnish meals free to the missionaries and still come out even. Those in charge were Sisters S. D. Condit, McKnight, and Charlotte Condit, with others helping when occasion demanded, all donating their work.

We had an average attendance of two hundred or more, many being nonmembers, and many favorable comments may still be heard by them.

There were present of the General Conference appointees: D. T. Williams, Roy S. Budd, James F. Keir, R. L. Fulk, and Guy P. Levitt; also many local elders and priests.

We do not want to forget to mention the "caravan" which arrived Saturday night. R. L. Fulk and family, Will Story and family, Sister J. F. Curtis, and Brother Keir decided to return to "The old paths," so they made the journey from Rupert to Hagerman, a distance of eighty-five miles, by team. They no doubt had a good time on the road. If anyone doubts it Brother Keir will bear his testimony which caused so much mirth.

The reunion was a decided success, the spirit of unity and peace prevailing to a marked degree.

Saturday afternoon fifteen were led into the waters of baptism by Brother Chambers.

At the business meeting Friday afternoon, it was decided by a unanimous vote to hold a reunion in 1925, the time and place to be decided by the district presidency.

S. D. CONDIT, Correspondent.

Northern Michigan

The reunion of the Northern Michigan District was held at Park of the Pines August 8 to 17. There was a good attendance of people from all parts of the district, and some from adjoining districts. A wonderful time was enjoyed by all. Those from headquarters who met with us were Sister Christy, Apostle F. Henry Edwards, and President F. M. Smith.

Sister Christy gave lectures for the women and conducted classes for them and for the children. Brother Edwards lectured to the men and conducted classes for them as well as for the young people.

The privilege of meeting the President of our church and hearing the wonderful sermons and lessons he gave is one the people of this district will not soon forget.

The Spirit was enjoyed in all the prayer meetings, and the young people were blessed with the gift of prophecy, through Elder A. M. Boomer, at their early morning meeting the last Sunday of reunion.

The young people organized the Northern Michigan Young People's Association during reunion, with Elder Hector McKinnon as president.

The new auditorium was dedicated the last Sunday afternoon. President Smith delivered the dedication sermon to about five hundred people.

Mobile District Reunion

The fourth annual reunion of the Mobile District, held at Gautier, Mississippi, August 8 to 18, was one of the most successful held in the district. Gautier is a small town at the mouth of the Pascagoula River, which empties into the Gulf of Mexico. The grounds used were on the banks of this beautiful river, where huge live oak trees are seen, laden with their massive robes of clinging moss which hang from the branches almost to the ground. We were thus favored with both shade and beauty.

The committee worked hard to make this reunion a success, and to make it as interesting and beneficial to all as was possible. The educational, recreational, social, and spiritual uplift were all considered.

Apostle John W. Rushton, Patriarch Ammon White, and Mrs. N. L. Booker were appointed special speakers. With them we had two others of our missionaries, Brother Alma Booker, president of the district, and Brother N. L. Booker.

Brother Rushton delivered lectures of a very fine order every evening to an audience of from two to three hundred people and conducted a class every morning on "Teaching," which was very profitable and instructive.

Few will forget the instruction and counsel given by Brother White, who is a very spiritual man. In his admonitions to the Saints every morning a goodly portion of the Holy Spirit was felt.

The burden of the work fell on our missionaries; hence they were not able to bring to the prayer meeting every morning as much of that richness of Spirit, peace, and concentrated thought which invites the Spirit as they could otherwise have done. We hope this may not be the case another year.

Two classes of the girls met each day. The girls from eight to fourteen were under the supervision of Sister Clyda Rogers, and nice reports of her work have come to us. We trust she may be able to accomplish much next year in this work. The older girls met every day after dinner and organized a circle of thirty to be known as the Reunion Utopia Circle. We started work for our Sanitarium, each girl planning to make one set of scarfs (dresser, table, and tray cloth) to be sent as a thank offering from their circle at Thanksgiving. Sister Vida Solomon, of Jackson, Mississippi, was made sponsor, and Miss Irma Tillman, of Bayou La Batre, Alabama, secretary-treasurer. We trust this organization will develop into something better and greater next year.

One afternoon was given over to the department of music, one to education and the department of health. Doctor Sharp spoke on sanitation and hygiene, and Doctor Hauley on the care of the teeth. We enjoyed having these men with us, and they expressed themselves as being pleased with our camp, stating that they would be pleased to camp with us another year.

Feeding the crowd was on the cooperative plan. Funds were raised in each branch of the district during the year, and vegetables, fruit, jelly, eggs, chickens, etc., were donated by Saints and friends, making it possible to give free meals to one hundred and fifty people three times a day at a cost of about eight cents a meal. Large families were there and enjoyed the whole ten days, and no one realized the "high cost of living," but enjoyed the ten days of "living high." We believe this is a fine plan and would like to pass it on to other reunions to try out.

The kitchen and dining table work was voluntary. Sister Alma Booker was in charge of the girls and made out a schedule for waitresses and dishwashers for each day. It was indeed a pleasure to see the joy they got out of service, and the work was not burdensome to any.

Attendance was much larger this year than last; there were nine tents last year, and this year we had twenty-eight tents and one house boat.

The reunion committee is starting to work and plan for a bigger and better one next year, and all will hope, trust, and boost for it. "Come over and help us."

Janesville, Wisconsin

September 10.—August 21 saw the Saints of the Southern Wisconsin District gathering to the old camping ground in Monona Park, located on the shores of beautiful Lake Monona, Madison, Wisconsin. The park belongs to the city, and a part of it is a tourist camp. The Saints were given a location on the lake front near the dining hall, where usually no one is allowed to camp or park a car. This insured a quiet place for services. We were blessed in having such a location, for the large dining hall and kitchen, the big auditorium if desired, and the use of the grounds were all free.

Attendance from this district was light this year, as many of the Saints were unable to attend at all as a result of the severe wind and electrical storms which have passed over southern Wisconsin this summer, in which many crops were ruined and all work was hindered. However, the committee was encouraged by the word that Saints from Northeastern Illinois and Northern Wisconsin Districts were planning to attend.

Reunion was formally organized Saturday, August 22. Apostle F. Henry Edwards, Missionary W. L. Christy, and District President J. O. Dutton were chosen to act as the reunion presidency; and Brother W. A. McDowell, as patriarch, had charge of the general prayer services. Sister Christy came Monday as field worker for the departments.

The dining hall committee, consisting of Allan Houghton, Brother and Sister Wirth, and Sister J. O. Dutton, with Sister Olson, of Readstown, as cook, served wholesome meals that gave universal satisfaction and were a success financially.

As reunion was held at the time of the awful mosquito plague, neither the preaching tent nor the auditorium could be used for services, so the large dining hall was divided by tent walls and services were held in an airy, screened-in room, where all were comfortable.

The daily program was as follows: Prayer service for children under twelve, eight o'clock; general prayer meeting at nine, study classes at half past ten, preaching at half past two, recreation at half past three, and preaching again in the evening at seven forty-five, preceded by a short song service. Evening service was followed by recreational games.

The children entered heartily into their services, which were in charge of Sister Christy and Sister Julia Dutton. The general prayer services were marked by a good, peaceful spirit throughout the reunion, and the Saints were admonished, commended, and encouraged to press onward. Several of the brothers were directed through the Spirit to prepare for the Lord's work. Several children were baptized and one baby blessed. There were three study classes: one for the children in charge of Sister Dutton, a young people's class in charge of Brother Edwards, and an adult class under Sister Christy. Brother McDowell gave several blessings but was handicapped in this work by having no stenographer.

The recreation work under Brother Norman E. Hield consisted largely in playing baseball and volley ball. The mosquitoes were so bad that the young people tried but one evening to have games on the lake front. The rest of the time games were played in the dining hall.

Friday evening the program was varied by having the evening services preceded by a literary and musical program by the young people of the Madison Branch.

Though the reunion had been preceded by many severe storms, there was but one stormy night during the ten days, and this did no harm.

Sunday, August 31, was a beautiful day, and many who had not been able to attend the full time came long distances for the closing day. About three hundred and fifty ate dinner in the hall, while a number had picnic dinners in their cars.

Apostle Edwards and Patriarch McDowell were the only speakers sent to the reunion. These men, with Brother Christy and Brother Dutton, assisted by local men, were the speakers of the reunion, until the last Sunday, when the presidency asked Brother Oliver McDowell to speak in the afternoon and Brother J. E. Wildermuth in the evening. These two brothers were present only for the last Sunday, and were more than welcome, as both had lived in Southern Wisconsin District in their boyhood days.

We hope more will be able to attend from this district next year, though Saints from other districts are always welcome.

JULIA N. DUTTON, Secretary.

Seattle, Washington

September 18.—The Seattle and British Columbia district reunion closed on August 10, after ten days of pleasant renewal of acquaintances and the making of new ones, together with the spiritual development attained to by all who attended.

The attendance by the membership was larger than ever before, and of greater interest, nearly all arriving earlier and remaining longer.

The prayer services were very good all through and well attended. Spiritual manifestations were frequent; some were spoken to individually, and important admonitions were given in general. Especially in one instance did the Lord express his pleasure in the enterprise that had its origin in last year's reunion, at which time a committee was appointed and empowered to look up appropriate sites that might be purchased, on which to hold our future reunions, directing the said committee to act quickly and procure the grove that joined the one occupied, it being one reported for consideration, to a conference session—one which possessed a goodly opportunity for developing and beautifying, having shore-line on the beautiful lake known as Silver Lake, around which the county had just completed a road that formed the opposite boundary of the site to that which the lake formed. So much did everyone seem to imbibe of the spirit and enthuse over the project, that $250 was quickly raised towards a $1,000 payment on a purchase price of $4,000.

Brother Gomer T. Griffiths and Roy S. Budd were in attendance, the former giving much valuable instruction, in his usual forceful manner, in both discourses and lectures; the latter presenting the world of life, becoming to an apostle. Sister Blanche Edwards, representing the general departments, also was present, imparting much valuable information and giving instruction pertaining to departmental work.

Quite a few were baptized. Others who resided near by were interested and were also pleased with the purchase made and that our annual gatherings would be permanent as to location.

F. W. HOLMAN.

Hold Baptismal Service

ORCHARDVILLE, ILLINOIS, September 17.—July 6, at the Skillet Fork Branch, the Saints held baptismal service and had a basket dinner. Sunday school was at ten o'clock, and at eleven there was preaching by Brothers Hallic Milner and Jeff Henson, who enjoyed good liberty.

After services part of the people went to the river where there were baptized by Brother Henson, while the rest stayed at the church to prepare dinner. There was a larger crowd than we have had before.

After dinner we had two more good talks by Brothers Dug Goosetree and Jeff Henson, after which confirmation service was held. The good Spirit was present, and all were made to rejoice.

We left the church about four o'clock, feeling that we had spent another day in the service of the Lord. We are trying to do all we can to build up the work and spread the gospel.

The reunion at Brush Creek was very good.

CLARA FLEEHARTY.

A Successful Conference

TAYLORVILLE, ILLINOIS, September 13.—The conference of this district opened August 30 with prayer service at half past eight. There was a good attendance, and all enjoyed the spirit of the meeting.

The weather was extremely hot, and all had great difficulty in keeping cool until some electric fans were called into service. These were greatly appreciated.

Business session opened at half past nine, and the coordination plan was adopted for the meeting, which proved a great help in transacting the business of the various departments. The meeting lasted till noon, at which time the ladies served lunch in the basement. This part of the program was greatly appreciated, as we have some artists in the culinary department. At half past two the business of the district was transacted, with Brother Fred Pritchett in the chair, assisted by Bishop A. B. Phillips, of Independence. This meeting adjourned at five o'clock, and we again enjoyed a nice supper prepared by the ladies.

Saturday evening the musical talent of the district presented a program consisting of readings, solos, and orchestra numbers by the ladies of the Beardstown orchestra. The ladies of the Taylorville choir presented a one-act comedy entitled "Larry," and all voted the program a huge success. After the program everyone was invited to the home of Brother William Van Hooser, where all played games and were served with ice cream cones, a treat for which the Department of Recreation and Expression is to be thanked.

Sunday morning, at half past six, the young people of the district enjoyed a ride to the woods, where prayer service was held. The Spirit of the Master was there to bless and comfort. Priesthood meeting was held at half past eight, when they were addressed by Brother Phillips.

Half past nine found Sunday school assembled, and the question of providing room for classes seemed a big one. Several classes had to go outside, but the officers handled the situation admirably, and all voted the Sunday school a grand success.

Brother Phillips addressed a full house at eleven o'clock, and his talk left a lasting impression of the duty that lies before us.

Communion service was held at half past two, each renewing his covenant with his Master. The evening service was well attended, although quite a few had to leave for home earlier in the day, and a storm came up about five, which detained many who would otherwise have attended. Brother Phillips again presented the gospel in such a way that no one could misunderstand. The people of this district surely appreciate having him with us.

The music at the preaching services was rendered by the choirs of the district, and the songs were ably sung under the direction of the district chorister, Brother J. A. Williams.

We feel that our conference was a great success and trust that we can keep up the good work, and that when we meet at our next conference in February we shall be able to report one as good as this.

Three young boys were baptized Saturday afternoon.

Concerning the Work of Eliza M. Walker

Believing that the value of "a rose to the living" is of inestimably greater worth than any amount of tribute that we may pay to the dead, I feel impelled to write a few words concerning the work of Sister Eliza M. Walker, for many years a member of the Jonesport Branch, and in every sense of the word a mother to the church in this town.

In one of our recent prayer meetings Aunt Eliza, as she is widely and lovingly known, informed us that it was just fifty years since she first came to Jonesport. In this half a century she has seen the work grow from a small beginning, a few members with no regular meeting place, and meetings only on occasions when an elder came through this way. Now the Jonesport Branch numbers about three hundred sixty members, with a fine church building, and with the largest seating capacity of the nine church buildings in the town.

When Aunt Eliza first came to Jonesport she was asked to teach a Sabbath school class in a denominational school which she attended. There were objections on the part of some, who feared that she might inculcate too much of the Latter Day Saint doctrine with her teachings. Her innate desire to teach the gospel, and especially to teach the gospel to the children of the Saints, caused her to turn her thoughts to the probability of organizing a Sunday school. When Elders F. M. Sheehy and M. H. Bond came to Jonesport upon their next visit, Sister Walker broached to them the subject of a Sunday school organization. Brother Sheehy was inclined to favor waiting, as the obstacles seemed too great at that time; but Brother Bond said, "Go ahead and organize the Sunday school here." That was more than forty years ago. Aunt Eliza was selected as superintendent, in which office she continued for twenty years. The average attendance now is about one hundred twenty, and in the winter-time the attendance goes to nearly two hundred.

There came a time in the vicissitudes of the branch when the membership consisted almost entirely of women, and very few officers holding the priesthood. Then it was that Aunt Eliza and a few other faithful Saints met regularly as members of the sisters' Prayer Union, and had special prayers for a selected list of men of the town, praying that the Lord might guide these men into the church. One by one the men came into the church. Some of them are to-day occupying in important office work in the priesthood.

But the work of Sister Walker is of far more than local influence. Many of the men who have occupied in the leading quorums of the church will remember with grateful appreciation the help they have received from this venerable mother in Israel. Patriarch U. W. Greene, in conversation with the writer last year, referred to Aunt Eliza as his "mentor" in the days when it was facetiously said concerning this noble brother that he was "Greene by name and green by nature."

Changing conditions have made it necessary for Sister Walker to remove from Jonesport, after fifty years association with this branch. About a month ago she removed to Little Deer Isle. We commend her to the love of the Saints in the Little Deer Isle Branch, and feel assured that the loss of the Jonesport Branch is a great gain to the branch where she has taken up her residence.

At the recent reunion at Brooksville, a word of inspiration was delivered to Sister Walker, informing her that there still remains a work for her to do. No message could be more acceptable than this to one whose whole desire is to work in the interests of the Master's cause.

May God continue to bless her in her work. We greatly miss her in this branch and district. I am sure this is the sentiment of the entire membership of the Eastern Maine District, and many others who have gone out from this district.

H. A. CHELLINE,

Work of the Women a Success

LONDON, ONTARIO, September 1.—For the encouragement of those interested in the work of the Department of Women, I wish to report a favorable year's work.

Our organization started out this year by deciding upon a definite course of study, "Food and the body," and all who attended the classes found it very instructive and interesting.

A joint bazaar was held December 4, 1923, including the Social Progressive Club, the Temple Builders, and Orioles, and a goodly sum was realized.

At the conclusion of Brother H. A. Koehler's winter campaign of services, we held an oyster supper, which was followed by an interesting program. The whole evening proved to be one of our best social events, where Saints and friends mingle in the spirit that binds.

With the department funds, we have tried to work out along the lines of relief and service. In the summer of 1923 we had a pleasant evening with Sister Koehler, surprising her with a grocery shower, and we had another on Saint Valentine's Day this year. A like shower was carried to the home of another sister. Our friendly visitor and her assistants have also done good work in helping to care for the sick and the needy. This spring we aided the branch in providing baptismal outfits, and by making the baseball suits for our boys in the church league we were able to conserve a few dollars to their interest. Twenty-five dollars was set aside to aid in the purchase of land behind the church building for recreational purposes, and ten dollars was sent to the Independence Sanitarium. The Progressive Club and the women united in purchasing cork linoleum for the basement platform, and with the aid of the branch a phone was installed in the home of Sister Koehler.

Our faithful home department worker, Sister William Harrison, frequently visits the members, encouraging them in all the ways she can. The amount she reports in the treasury made us feel that they appreciate the good work and are willing to support it.

Our consecrated cradle roll worker, Sister Epsworthy, continues with her good work and hopes this year to add many new babies to the roll.

We tried out a new line of work this spring in the way of a rummage sale and found this to be one of the best paying enterprises we have undertaken. We cleared over forty dollars in the afternoon and evening.

The women always lend every assistance to the branch effort to take charge of one of the large dining halls at the Western Ontario Fair which is about to open. Last year over $600 was cleared by this effort in a week's time. We hope to do as well this year.

A joint picnic of the department was held at Springbank Park last month with a crowd four times larger than last year. All seemed to enjoy the event, and we look for a larger crowd next year.

This year's work has truly made us feel that if we will arouse ourselves and work God will bless the effort. Standing idle does not pay, and the London Department of Women wishes to do its best to make this part of the church work a success. We trust we shall grow as a student body also, for we feel we have gained from the talks and papers read this year. We appreciate the efforts put forth at headquarters to bring to us knowledge of those subjects of which we stand in need, and hope to live up to the standard of excellence for locals this year, believing God will bless our efforts inasmuch as we are faithful.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

Fargo, North Dakota

September 10.—A farewell party brought the Saints together at the home of Brother and Sister J. F. Rotzien on Monday evening, September 8. The party was in honor of Sister G. W. Lindsey, who has gone to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, to make her future home. The evening was spent in singing, visiting, and a reading composed in honor of Sister Lindsey, after which a small purse was presented her as a token of the love and esteem of the Saints. A delicious lunch was served. Brother Lindsey and their two boys went some time ago, so Fargo Branch is losing another family of Saints, much to their regret. The Sunshine Club, of which Sister Lindsey was monitor, gave her a pleasant surprise one evening, presenting her with a sandwich tray. All feel sad to lose their monitor.

The Department of Women held an open meeting at the Bungalow Church September 3, presenting the pageant, "The evolution of an ideal girl." The evening passed pleasantly, and a good crowd was present.

Sunday, August 24, Elder W. E. Shakespeare, of Minneapolis, was with us, preaching at eleven o'clock on the subject, "God loveth whom he chasteneth." The lesson was that we must fit ourselves to stand when the shaking times come.

The same day the Saints enjoyed hearing Elder Thomas Leitch in the evening, his subject being, "This is my beloved Son, hear ye him.—What does he teach?"

Brother Ferd Hamel visited us on his way back to Lamoni and gave a very interesting talk about Graceland. He made all the young folks feel enthusiastic about wending their way to Graceland.

Sunday school, Religio, and prayer services are held regularly, and the Saints are glad they can still meet in public worship, as it is good to mingle our voices together in worship and song.

Elder Weddle, our pastor, has nearly all the preaching to do now. His little son, Freddie, is afflicted with a diseased bone in his hip and will have to wear a cast for perhaps a year.

Saints here are interested in the stronger radio station at Independence and believe untold good can result from it.

Spiritual Conditions Augmented

VALLEY CENTER, MICHIGAN, September 15.—The work is progressing here. The membership is growing spiritually, the meetings are of a high spiritual character, and each member is very much awake to his duties. The Lord reveals his will regarding our respective positions as occasion demands. At a recent meeting a very powerful prophecy was delivered through Sister Harold Muir which conveyed good counsel to some individuals and commended in a general way the efforts of the Saints here, while former promises were renewed. We were emphatically told that the work we are engaged in is of the Lord and will move on to its final triumph; also that the presence of his angels would be felt in our midst, and that great power would be demonstrated in and through the gospel, to our good and that of the community.

We have all confidence in the accomplishment of God's purposes and are endeavoring to do our part to assist. The promise of God to us has been that many we least expect would embrace the gospel in this locality. We were permitted to baptize some this summer who had been foreign to our faith, and again yesterday we had the privilege of baptizing an elderly woman who was formerly a Methodist, and only a month ago we did not know she was considering such a step, though now she is fully converted.

As a band of people the Saints should be the most happy people in the world. We have a great deal to be encouraged over, and nothing over which to be discouraged. The Lord's work is intrusted to our care, and it remains for us to do. Let us bear this in mind and help the leading quorums by being loyal to God, always keeping the interests of the work at heart.

H. E. C. MUIR.

Rouleau, Saskatchewan

August 4.—The sixth annual convention of the Southern Saskatchewan District was held at Viceroy July 3 to 6 inclusive. Weather conditions were ideal. There was a good representation from the various districts, and visitors were welcomed by the Viceroy Saints, where every provision had been made for their comfort.

The convention opened with District President O. L. D'Arcy in the chair, who gave a talk on the condition of the district, whereupon the following resolution was passed:

"Whereas the Lord has laid a great burden of responsibility on the church to send the gospel to the nations, and whereas the finances are being diverted to carry on a 'social program' not provided for in the law, and whereas the missionary force has been continually reduced as a result, therefore be it resolved that we, the Southern Saskatchewan District, in conference assembled, most earnestly protest against any policy or program that interferes with the missionary program provided for in the law; and be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of this document be sent the general church secretary, R. S. Salyards, for presentation to the next General Conference."

Business then proceeded with the election of officers.

Each department gave its report, and all showed much thought and work. Everywhere there is breathed a disposition for more intense church effort in Southern Saskatchewan. We realize what we need here is more church support.

The business session closed with a bonfire and open-air concert.

O. L. D'Arcy baptized five young girls on Sunday afternoon.

The speakers of the conference were O. L. D'Arcy, E. E. Long, and J. R. Neil.

ZELLA N. MALDEN, Secretary Pro Tem.

Alexander, Kansas

September 15.—The Alexander Saints are plodding along with the faithful ones in attendance, with sometimes an additional recruit or two. On Sunday, September 7, Brother and Sister Jacob Schadel and the children of Sister Gladys Schadel worshiped with us. They live eleven miles south of town and do not get to attend often. Although Brother Schadel is near seventy years old, he knows when scripture is quoted correctly. He and his wife were baptized twenty years ago by Samuel Twombly.

Sister John Teeters, her four daughters and son Herald, motored to Studley, Kansas, to attend the reunion August 17. To say the girls enjoyed the reunion would be putting it mildly. Volley ball, teetering, swinging, races, and ice cream and watermelon treats were all features of enjoyment for the young, and some older ones could not but feel young again. The children are already planning for reunion next fall. Some of the other Saints here had planned to attend, but sickness hindered.

September 7 Sister John Teeters and family entertained the Saints with a basket dinner at their home, and after dinner the girls and Sister Teeters gave talks on the reunion, telling of testimonies, incidents, and those things which would enable those who did not attend to get a glimpse of the reunion. All seemed to enjoy it.

School has now opened here, so the youthful members of the branch are busy. All the churches have two periods on Wednesday which are devoted to religious study. At this time the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth grades go to their respective churches and study. At half past two they return to school, and the first, second, third, and fourth grades go and study until three fifty, then return to school. Sister John Teeters is teaching the children in our church until Brother Teeters finishes his fall work, and she has taken up Hurlbut's Teacher Training course. The older students are deeply interested in the study. May God help us all never to fail to do our duty at home or abroad.

Two families have moved from fifteen miles southwest of Alexander to McCracken, Kansas, so there are now living in McCracken about thirty Saints. There are now enough Saints there to form their own group and have Sunday school and preaching services. We know the Lord will bless them if they make the effort.

Lucasville, Ohio

September 15.—The work is coming along at this place, and we are blessed in many ways. Nearly every family has members of the church.

We have a number of members in our branch but lack for officers and are praying that God will call more laborers in this part of his vineyard. We needed more land and were able to buy property on the south side of our church building.

We had a wonderful sacramental service September 7, as the Spirit of the Master was present. Brother Clarence Burnt spoke to many of the Saints in prophecy.

Brother Luther Crabtree, our branch teacher, has been absent several weeks on account of his daughter having typhoid fever, but we are hoping he will soon be with us again.

Many of the Saints of McDermott attended service here September 7.

The hike to the Twin Knobs Sunday, August 31, led by Brother Mark Crabtree, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, was participated in by about twenty. All enjoyed a spiritual talk by Brother Crabtree.

First Chicago

OAK PARK, ILLINOIS, September 20.—Brother and Sister Harry Passman, our recent missionaries to Palestine, have returned. After browsing on the leeks and onions of Egypt, they have decided to come home and take a drink of good old Lake Michigan water. We certainly are pleased to see and welcome this brother and sister who have spent five years in the Old World, and to see them well and active. May God bless all the missionary force, as well as his other servants.

Our sacramental service September 7 was well attended. Visitors at this service were Sister Trout, of Grand Rapids, Michigan; Brother Ely, of Niagara Falls, New York; Glenn Beaman and family, from Kansas City; and Brother E. Sosey and boys passed through early in the morning. The evening speaker was J. L. Gautchier, district Bishop's agent.

All were cheered by the genial smile of our district president, J. L. Cooper, September 14, who gave us one of his sermons that will not soon be forgotten, a masterpiece indeed. We wonder who could help being better after being in the presence of this man.

The same evening Brother L. L. Hadley spoke on "Building for life and for eternity."

Visitors on the 14th were Sister Grace Reese, of Independence, Brother and Sister Silk, and Sister Pement.

The Dramatic Club of the Department of Recreation and Expression gave three short plays the evening of September 19, with music furnished by Sidney Barrows and Everette Pettersson. All were well received. One thing that spoiled the entertainment was the downpour of rain that continued all evening, preventing a great many from attending.

We are pleased to see Brother and Sister McDonald looking for a home in our midst.

Visitors are welcome at the little church around the corner, 4416 Gladys Avenue.

Tulare, California

September 17.—The summer vacations are nearly over, and there is better attendance at the meetings of the Department of Recreation and Expression and Sunday school.

A kitchen shower was given Friday evening, August 28, at the home of Elder and Mrs. A. J. Damron, in honor of their youngest daughter, Leila Damron.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the church Tuesday evening, September 9, at eight o'clock, when J. N. Renaud, of Hollywood, and Miss Leila Damron were married. Elder J. T. Smith, jr., performed the ceremony. The young couple will make their future home in Hollywood.

A neat sum of twenty dollars was raised Sunday, September 14, for the Independence Radio fund.

Santa Ana, California

September 17.—Brother J. W. Inman is still conducting his little mission among the Spanish people at El Modena, assisted by Sister Teresa Koonce. These are a kindly people who respond enthusiastically to the interest shown in them and the hymns and lessons they are taught. We expect baptisms to result from Brother Inman's work there some day. He has shown himself willing to help in other branch work as well.

Perhaps there are not many branches as well blessed with a worthy, willing, and capable deacon as we are here. In spite of the heavy work and long hours on his farm, Brother Parks is seldom missing from his post of duty. He keeps the branch treasury and finances in excellent condition and makes friends doing it. He is a man not easily tossed to and fro by the winds of adversity and prosperity.

Brother Rabe's son, Roland, has been suffering some time from an injured foot that refused to heal. At present, however, he seems to be recovering, and we are praying for him. His father is a man of sturdy character, and we are sure Roland will become like him. Leona Rabe has recently gone to begin a course at Graceland, where we are sure she will make and merit friends.

September 10 a fine young couple from Los Angeles called at the parsonage to be married. They were Ira F. Cook and Miss Helen Dahl. At half past twelve they were pronounced husband and wife by Brother Leonard S. Rhodes. After a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Cook will make their home in Los Angeles.

The attendance at our services is improving, now that vacations are over; also the spirit and interest. May God endow us with a rich outpouring of his Spirit, and the church at large with the spirit of peace.

Eldorado Springs, Missouri

August 15.—About three weeks ago the Coal Hill Saints went to Taberville to spend Sunday, where Brother W. E. Haden had been holding a series of meetings in the big district tent. The day we were there he baptized ten, and the Sunday before he had baptized four. We enjoyed the day very much and rejoiced with the Saints in that place over the additions to their number. While in Taberville our branch president asked Brother Haden to come to Cedar Springs and hold meetings. The question was not decided then, and the Saints came home praying that if it were best Brother Haden might come to Cedar Springs.

About ten days ago we received word that our brother was ready to come if we would get the tent and have things ready for the meeting. The men made haste to make the necessary preparations, and last Tuesday night we held the first service. The crowds have been gradually increasing, until last night there was a large crowd, many coming who have never before met with us at the church. We hope much good will be accomplished.

We have a nice location for the tent, in a beautiful little park in Cedar Springs. The Saints have been very busy on their farms, but nearly all have attended the services at night, some going four and five miles. Yesterday we had Sunday school and three sermons at the tent, and a picnic dinner under the trees.

Last Monday night our aged brother, R. S. Reynolds, who has been a sufferer from paralysis for the last six years, passed peacefully and quietly from this life. He was a deacon in this branch for many years, and before his illness his home was open to missionaries whenever they desired to go there. Our hearts have ached for him and his faithful companion because of his condition. He was one of the first in this community to accept the gospel and had been a member over thirty-five years.

Sister Beulah Mays, of Colorado, is here visiting her parents, Brother and Sister Jesse Blystone.

Brother J. R. Corrick, Saint Louis, Michigan, writes that they had a very fine one-day meeting at the Alma Branch July 27. The weather was fine, and there was a nice gathering of the Saints to enjoy the goodly portion of the Spirit which was present. There were two baptisms.

Rally Day at Minneapolis

The Minneapolis Branch devoted Sunday, August 14, to a rally day for the Sunday school. The feature of the day's services was that beginning at eleven o'clock, which was in charge of the young people's class. A fifteen-minute talk on "The relation of the Sunday school to the church" was given by Brother Carroll Olson; another by Brother Wesley Elvin on "The relation of the Religio to the Sunday school," and a paper on the work of the Temple Builders was read by Grace Tutty. A duet was sung by Gladys Young and Bessie Jordan, a couple of readings were given by other members of the class, and several responses were sung by the class as a whole.

Dinner was served in the church basement, different sisters having brought different parts of the meal and all eating together. In the afternoon a short program was put on, and at the Religio meeting in the evening they continued the spirit of "rally day" and closed the day with a sermon by Brother Charles Johnson.

Last Sunday the pastor, Elder Kress, announced that the week beginning September 28 would be set aside as "radio week" for the Minneapolis Branch.

A well-known man to most Latter Day Saints, Elder E. E. Long, passed through Minneapolis on his way south from Canada and addressed the Saints here on the night of September 7. They were glad to make his acquaintance and get his views on important church problems and invited him to stop in again when he gets the chance.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

September 14.—During the last month the Saints of this place have had the pleasure of listening to some interesting sermons from Bishop C. J. Hunt and Elder S. S. Smith, both of Independence. They also enjoyed a discourse by Elder Christensen. This evening, Elder E. L. Kemp, who with his family has recently moved here from Wichita, Kansas, is to preach here for the first time.

Brother Dillon and family of Independence, and Brother J. C. Darnell and family, of Choctaw, Oklahoma, have also moved here.

Prayer meetings and preaching services are good.

Pioneer Saint Passes

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA.—Brother William Naaman Dawson, one of the pioneers of the West, passed away at his home in Sacramento June 24, 1924. Brother Dawson was born in Muscatine County, Iowa, August 6, 1854. When ten years of age he crossed the plains by ox team with his parents and was baptized at the age of twenty. He married Sarah C. Green, and their home was headquarters for many of the early missionaries. He held the office of priest. The funeral sermon was by District President J. D. White, with interment in East Lawn Cemetery. His wife and five of the six living children were present at the funeral.

Brother Dawson was always cheerful and hopeful, inspiring all with whom he came in contact to a greater love of the gospel of Jesus Christ. He taught his children the gospel, and all are members of the church. I received the witness of the Spirit as I sat by his bedside that his was the death of the righteous. He had a vision some time ago and was sure of his reward.

Brother Dawson held the office of priest and was active in church work up to the last.

W. H. DAWSON.

Saint Louis, Missouri

Vacation days are over, and work has started in earnest in this branch. Just now we are enjoying some very instructive and interesting sermons by Brother J. W. Rushton. This is the second week of these meetings, and the attendance and interest are growing from night to night. Many of our non-member friends are attending each night, and very favorable comments are heard on the sermons.

During the month of August, quite a number of the Saint Louis Saints were in attendance at the reunions held in the surrounding States. Very interesting talks have been given to the Sunday school and Religio by those returning from the reunions.

The different departments are very much awake, and new interest is being shown throughout the membership. The classes are showing much enthusiasm in their study, and as a consequence the attendance is growing. The Department of Women has served some very fine suppers in the church, which not only promote sociability but add considerably to the finances. This department also has a very interesting Book of Mormon class.

Brother Charles May preached two very fine sermons from our pulpit on August 10, en route to his mission in Kentucky and Tennessee.

Some sickness has been reported among our members during the last month, but God has been merciful, and they have received blessings, and most of them are convalescing.

Sister A. C. Curry is visiting in the East. She is expected home in a short time.

Brother and Sister George Barraclough have returned from their extended trip through the West. They visited the principal places of interest from Canada to Mexico.

We are glad to welcome to our midst Sister Muriel Cliffe, of Los Angeles, California.

Brother J. A. Ahlstrand, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Brother A. W. Merrick, of Omaha, Nebraska, are at the United States Veterans' Hospital, Jefferson Barracks, for treatment.

Detroit, Michigan

September 9.—The Saints of Detroit who have been privileged to attend the different reunions and picnics and conferences surely have a stronger and more determined desire to live the life of true Saints and to press nearer each day to Zion. The attendance at both branches has increased lately, and the testimonies at the prayer services show that the Spirit of God is indeed striving with his people.

Brothers A. B. Smith and E. Fenton are improving somewhat in health. Sister Rachel Stewart underwent an operation on her eyes, and although it was a very serious operation, she is now on the road to recovery.

The Religio at Central Branch is progressing nicely. Brother Crowley is teacher for the senior class, and his talks and explanations of the Book of Mormon are wonderful. Truly the Saints in that district are fortunate in having one so able to teach.

The Religio at the Eastern Branch, although small, has not lost its zeal. Unfortunately those who might aid this department have moved nearer other branches. We are pleased to note that although Brother and Sister Silk have moved more than ten miles from the branch, yet they are there at most of the meetings, ready and willing to do their part for the gospel.

Our prayers are that all may hold fast to the rod of iron.

Kansas City Stake Items

Central

September 28.—The regular stake priesthood meeting was held Sunday afternoon, September 21, at Central Church. Elder J. A. Tanner gave the address, using a chart outline which showed the relationship of the different orders of the priesthood. He explained the difference between supreme directional control and supreme dictatorial control. The former is the right of a president, while the latter is only the right of a monarch.

At the meeting of the Department of Women the same afternoon, Sister Cowan, who has charge of the women's work in Independence, talked to a representative audience from the thirteen churches of the stake. She used the seventh section of Doctrine and Covenants as a basis for her remarks, and the vision she gave of the work was much enjoyed by all present. Her experience as a teacher has made her a valuable leader in our work.

The activity of the women in Kansas City Stake is increasing. In addition to social meetings, preparations for bazaar, etc., plans are being completed for class work in the various churches. The first to start fall study will be Quindaro, where Brother J. A. Tanner will conduct a class in Bible research. Many of the women will teach again in the week-day religious training classes beginning October 1, which means opportunity as well as responsibility.

Girls' Camp

This year marked the beginning of a festivity that we hope will become an annual event, a short camping trip for the girls of the stake. The camp was situated near Dodson, Missouri, on the Blue River, and a prettier, more quiet and secluded spot one could not wish to find. Cottages were secured on the grounds, which were furnished with tables, chairs, brick furnaces, cots, and a piano which added much to the interest of the girls. Sixty-four girls with their leaders were present to enjoy the outing provided by Sister Fern Lloyd, leader of the Department of Women, and Mrs. Roy Newkirk, leader of the girls.

Arrangements were complete, and a hearty welcome awaited the campers. Soon the grates became the center of attraction, and they remained in favor the three days the girls remained there. Perturbed, muddy waters failed to discourage the jubilant bathers, and every morning and afternoon found the leaders and their girls enjoying a swim. Games and other recreational activities, all supervised, took the time that was not otherwise provided for.

Saturday evening a lively stunt program, provided by the girls, was held in the main cottage, which was greatly enjoyed.

The most enjoyable event of all was the sunrise prayer meeting held at half past six Sunday morning. It was an occasion never to be forgotten, and some who had never had the courage to do so before bore their testimonies at this time. Even the little Orioles, ten to twelve years of age, arose to tell of the goodness of God to them. It was a spiritual feast, so much so that one little ten-year-old girl told her mother, "If all prayer meetings were like that one, I would always be glad to go."

At half past ten Brother Ray Lloyd conducted an interesting Sunday school.

In the afternoon, before leaving for home, the girls voted to have another camp in August of 1925, to last at least a week. A vote of thanks was also extended to the committee and to Brother Newkirk, who made such a wonderful vacation possible. About half past four the girls started home, tired, but beaming with happiness over the many new friends made, and in anticipation of next year's camp.

The camp proved to be a great success in every way. The girls became better acquainted with each other, which had been one of our first aims in establishing the camp. Love and peace and harmony prevailed from the first, and not a word of discord of any kind came to our ears. Each evening at half past nine the girls gathered in the living room of the main cottage for family prayer and good night. The memory of this camp will always be sweet to those who had charge, and the girls gathered round us more than once to tell us how happy they were. One leader, who is not a member of the church but who was formerly a Girl Scout leader, remarked that she had never enjoyed anything as much as she had the association of these girls. Such reports made us happy, and we are satisfied that a nobler group of girls cannot be found.

There are about two hundred girls organized in the stake, and we hope that next year our camp will see twice as many in attendance.

Fourth Church

A single sheet, called The Pilot, mimeographed on both sides, setting forth the schedule of meetings, the speakers, etc., and giving a short article, "Thoughts for the week," besides notes, comments, and a scripture lesson, is issued weekly by this congregation. This shows an enterprising spirit and will be followed by good results.

J. Harry Paxton was the morning speaker on the 21st, and W. O. Hands gave a historical slide lecture in the evening. S. S. Sandy was a recent Sunday evening speaker.

As a group they feel to rejoice over the goodness of God to them, especially as manifested in their prayer services. The daily effort is to become more spiritual. God has spoken by his Spirit in admonition and encouragement. The young people's prayer service held early in the morning is greatly blessed.

A social given by the Progressive Club in August netted $18.50.

Sunday school attendance is growing. The Religion has two new Book of Mormon classes and continues its teacher training class.

September 14 was young people's day, and Brother Harold Burgess occupied at eleven o'clock.

Grandview

Sister Pearl Peterson, one of our sweet singers, was married September 13 to Mr. Lewis Cartwright at the home of her parents. The ceremony was performed by Elder W. I. Fligg. They will make their home in Syracuse, New York.

Malvern Hill

It is with happiness that we view our now nearly completed brick church. An ice cream social was given recently for its benefit, at which three hundred were in attendance.

Labor Day and its showers found the Sunday school enjoying its annual picnic at Swope Park.

The Department of Women is diligently working for a bazaar to be given in the near future.

Argentine

A pleasant surprise reception was held September 16 in honor of our former pastor, Apostle J. A. Gillen. The congregation was there, with the lights turned off, when Arthur, as he is known here, was escorted into the vestibule not suspecting anything unusual. When the lights were turned on, he had difficulty in expressing himself. His difficulty was short-lived, however, and he soon made up for lost time. A quilt which the Department of Women had spent several years making, with the names of all the members embroidered on it, was given him. The acceptance speech was feelingly made. Brother Gillen also was the speaker the evening of September 21.

Death has again claimed another of our number, the only daughter of Brother and Sister Bondie Shireman. She had battled throughout her entire life against great odds, but she showed a fortitude such as heroes possess. Everything possible was done for her, but she passed away August 31. She leaves father, mother, and one brother to mourn her departure. Elder Ammon White preached the sermon at the church. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery. Little Phyllis will be much missed at the various services, at which she was a constant attendant.

Lamoni Stake

LAMONI, IOWA, September 28.—The most fortunate occurrence of the past week here has been the averting of a disastrous fire at the Children's Home Sunday, September 21. The fire started in the attic, and soon after the odor of smoke was scented by the superintendent, Miss Myrtle Ballantyne. She immediately turned in an alarm and then quickly gathered the older children to aid her in the use of the hand extinguisher provided in the building, but the smoke was already so dense in the attic that they could do little.

When the news was scattered that this group of orphans was about to be made homeless, the largest crowd assembled that has been seen here at a fire for a long time. Many hands were busy and soon emptied the building of its contents, while the fire boys fought the flames, which had burst through the roof. A strong wind was blowing, the fire spread rapidly, and it seemed that the building was doomed to destruction, but with apparently more than human ability they were able to quench it and keep the flames from spreading beyond the roof.

While the work of saving the building was in progress, others were comforting the smaller children, who were crying at the thought of losing their home. By night, through the cooperation of many friends, the water was all cleaned up and order restored so the children could go to bed as usual. The loss was estimated at $300 and was covered by insurance.

The Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society made their initial appearance at the morning service last Sunday. They sang "The lost chord." It was not new to us—so much the better—for the choir had worked on it last year and by this time were able to give a very masterful interpretation of it. The Oratorio Society is larger than last year. The A Capella Chorus, a select band of about twenty voices chosen from the chorus, have formally organized and plan to extend their activities this year, filling concert dates in near-by towns. Miss Mabel Carlile, the director, is very enthusiastic over her work and anticipates a very prosperous year.

The speakers at the church last Sunday were W. E. Prall and Bishop A. Carmichael.

The fast-thinning ranks of the Civil War veterans was invaded again the past week when Brother Jacob Waltenbaugh was called home. He had been a great sufferer for many months. He leaves a companion and a son, David.

The Community Club has renewed activities after a summer vacation. They have taken up as a special issue the financing of our public library, which though small has proved a very great community asset. It has so far been housed in a room in Herald Hall, where the efficient librarian, Mrs.

Audentia Kelley, has labored under great difficulties. They propose to move the library down town, keep it open more hours, and increase its efficiency in various ways. President F. M. McDowell is president of the library board.

Stone Church

Four simultaneous promotion services were held Sunday morning at the Stone Church Sunday School. Mrs. C. R. Smith, superintendent of the beginner department, presented certificates to forty-four children who left her department. Miss Ruby M. Williamson promoted sixty-five from the primary department, and Superintendent S. A. Thiel gave forty-seven diplomas to boys and girls leaving the junior department at the Campus. Seventeen were promoted from the intermediate department by Charles Chapman. Suitable exercises were held in each of the assembly rooms in acknowledgment of the work which had been finished by each group and to receive those who had been promoted into the higher grades. Altogether 185 certificates were issued by the school at this time.

One year ago the Sunday school officers instituted a grading system in the primary, junior, and intermediate departments, which is similar to that used in the public schools. In addition to class work bimonthly reports have gone into the homes, grading pupils on matters of deportment, attitudes, and habits which are involved in religious education. Many encouraging reports have been received by the executive committee as to the general effectiveness of this home reporting in Sunday school. The system will be continued the coming year, with the elimination of minor details.

Patriarch H. O. Smith was the speaker Sunday morning, and W. D. Tordoff, one of our missionaries, occupied in the evening, using for his subject, "Church unity." Brother Tordoff is looking for a home in Independence, as he wishes to move his family here from Lamoni.

President F. M. Smith is expected at his office October 4. Elbert A. Smith is at this time in Colorado Springs.

Brother R. V. Hopkins is still confined to his bed and is yet unable to do any church work. All are hoping for his speedy recovery.

There were no pictures shown on the Campus Saturday night because of bad weather. It is hoped the picture can be brought back at a future date. Next Saturday night the picture will be "The shepherd king," the story of David taken from the Bible.

Of the bishops, Brother James F. Keir went to Saint Louis Saturday where he delivered two special sermons Sunday on the financial needs of the church. Brother I. A. Smith is confined to his home on account of the fact that his son Donald is quarantined with scarlet fever. Monday evening Bishops McGuire and Keir left for Omaha, Walthill, North Platte, and other points in Nebraska, to be gone several days.

The Twelve are busy in the work pertaining to their office. J. A. Gillen is in Michigan. John W. Rushton is in Saint Louis but will be in Omaha soon. T. W. Williams is holding successful meetings in Council Bluffs. Paul M. Hanson and J. F. Curtis are laboring together in Holland. R. S. Budd is in Spokane, Washington; and J. F. Garver is in Lamoni. E. J. Gleazer is in Joplin, Missouri, but will be at Mapleton, Kansas, next Sunday to attend the conference of the Clinton District. F. Henry Edwards is at the office in Independence.

The Laurel Club held its first meeting of the season Tuesday at the Campus. Mrs. J. F. Curtis and Mrs. W. O. Campbell were hostesses.

Elder J. W. Metcalf goes this week to his mission field in Southern Indiana, having improved much in health.

Elder J. M. Terry and wife will labor in El Reno, Oklahoma, for the remainder of the conference year, having been so appointed by the Presidency and Twelve. Their address will be 200 North Barker Avenue, El Reno, Oklahoma.

Elder J. D. Shower was made very happy last Sunday afternoon when he baptized his mother, Mrs. Margaret J. Shower, of Barnes, Kansas. This baptism fulfilled a promise of the Lord to him twenty years ago, when he was baptized. His parents so disapproved of his act at that time that for five years his father, and for three years his mother, refused to recognize him as their son. It is hoped his father will soon obey the Father's will. Sister Shower was confirmed immediately after her baptism by Brothers W. H. Garrett and J. D. Shower.

Second Church

The harvest festivities occupied the time of Second Church people from the middle of the week until Sunday night. Thursday the church was decorated with flowers, grasses, grain, vegetables, fruits, and canned goods, until it was like entering a beautiful garden to enter either auditorium from any one of the entrances.

The profusion of flowers and taste of their arrangement, and the presence of more than six hundred quarts of fruits, jellies, and vegetables, almost all in glass containers, also nicely displayed, gave an atmosphere which in itself was instructive and entertaining.

The programs drew large congregations, and the church was comfortably filled at each service. Voice and instrument were used to splendid advantage in the rendition of musical numbers, and readings of a high order were given by good artists. On Friday evening a pleasant surprise was given the congregation when Mrs. Red Eagle, a cultured Indian woman, came to the church and sang two difficult classical numbers, displaying perfect control over a beautiful voice.

Sunday morning President Elbert A. Smith was to have been the speaker, and the house was filled to its capacity, many standing rather than go away disappointed. But the disappointment was not to be entirely averted, for Brother Elbert had gone to Colorado and the pastor, R. J. Lambert, had to substitute for him. The remaining portion of the program was of such great excellence, however, that the congregation was well pleased, and many of these people returned for either the afternoon or evening service.

Bishop J. A. Koehler was present, taking in every meeting of the festival, and he presided and directed the round table meeting Sunday afternoon. He was able to get a strong emphasis of some salient truths, and clearly stated some of the ways in which it is necessary that Saints of city and country must cooperate to advance agriculture and manufacture. The committee feels very grateful to Brother Koehler for his influence and his work. The committee for 1924 was chosen to act for 1925, and Bishop J. A. Becker was added to it, and at the organization meeting was made its chairman.

Bishop B. R. McGuire was the speaker Sunday evening, according to appointment, and his work was well received, he making a spiritual application of the lessons of nature and plant life.

Tuesday morning Bishop J. A. Becker was busily engaged in storing and distributing the grain, vegetables, fruits, and canned goods, the value of which is considerable. We expect that 1925 will have a story much better than this of 1924, for indications are abundant that the Second Church congregation will no longer be permitted to bear the brunt of this work of saving the waste, giving a thank offering for the harvest, and making merry at the time of year when God's blessings are so bountifully bestowed upon his creatures.

Walnut Park

At the close of Pastor J. A. Dowker's sermon Sunday morning occurred the marriage of Brother Peter Burke, of Lincoln County, Nebraska, to Sister Emma A. Payne, of Independence, Brother Dowker officiating. They will make their future home on the former's farm in Nebraska.

Sister Vida E. Smith, of Lamoni, was a Sunday school visitor and gave a friendly talk full of good advice at the close of the session, reminiscing somewhat concerning her early life in Independence.

W. H. Kelley was the evening speaker.

Liberty Street

Bishop J. A. Becker was the Sunday morning speaker, using for his text James 1:27. At night Patriarch U. W. Greene occupied, calling attention to the fact that that night was the 101st anniversary of the angel's visit to the boy Joseph.

Enoch Hill

Last Tuesday night the choir, under the leadership of Charles Warren, went out to Blue Springs to give musical assistance to Alvin Knisley in his missionary effort at that place. One of our local priests, Amos Allen, is in charge of the work there and is enthusiastically working to establish the cause more firmly by carrying the gospel message to others.

Sunday morning Amos E. Allen spoke at the church, and Patriarch F. A. Smith occupied the evening hour.

Englewood

Sunday morning the Saints had the privilege of listening to an excellent sermon by J. A. Farrow. J. W. Metcalf was the evening speaker. The time for evening meeting has been changed to seven o'clock.

The Department of Women is now occupied in making quilts for the commodity shop. This service will prove to be quite valuable.

Attendance at Religio is increasing, and the first program for some time was given last Friday night. Religio was held all summer, but attendance was very poor. They are studying the Book of Mormon.

East Independence

Sunday speakers were A. H. Parsons and Elder George Essig.

The Sanitarium patients are now at home and doing well.

Simcoe, Ontario

September 17.—With Elder Dickhout in charge, the Saints here are still trying to let their light shine.

An all-day meeting was held August 31 at which Elders Koehler and Gray, of London, did the speaking. In the morning, prayer meeting was held at nine o'clock, followed by preaching at eleven by Brother Gray. At half past two and seven Brother Koehler preached.

On August 19 Sister Cox and Mr. G. Marlatt were married; and on September 1 occurred the marriage of Albert E. Martin, of Independence, and Mary J. Little, of Simcoe. Elder Dickhout performed the ceremony.

We have a baptism occasionally. We ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that we may arise and shine.

Southwestern Texas Conference

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, September 13.—The Southwestern Texas district conference met with the San Antonio Saints on August 30 and 31. The attendance was fairly good, although the congregation was composed mostly of local members. Three preaching services were held, Brother D. S. Palmer speaking both morning and evening on Sunday, and Brother Miller, formerly of Houston, Texas, occupying Saturday night. Both of the brethren had a goodly degree of the Spirit.

Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, prayer and communion service was held, at which the same good Spirit prevailed. Two business sessions were held, at which time district officers were elected, resulting in nearly all of the old officers being sustained.

Friday evening, August 29, a departmental program was given by the local members, which was enjoyed by all.

Sister Emma Jackson, who has served long and faithfully as pianist of the San Antonio Branch, left us on the last night of the conference. She has a position as music teacher in the high school at Taft, Texas. We regret losing her, but hope she will be able to use her talent to better advantage.

The Department of Women had a vacation through the summer but expect to revive this fall and begin work again. They expect to hold a bazaar in December and would appreciate any contributions. Parcels should be addressed to Mrs. John Harp, 118 West Dittmar Avenue, San Antonio, Texas.

Topeka, Kansas

September 15.—A large number of Saints attended the reunion at Netawaka and are looking forward to the next one with interest. Some plans are already made to promote the success of the 1925 Northeastern Kansas reunion.

The funeral of Mrs. John W. Copp was held at the Methodist church at Scranton August 19, former home of Sister Copp. The sermon was by Samuel Twombly of Fanning, assisted by A. P. Crooker of Topeka. Music was furnished by the Topeka choir. She was the recipient of many rich spiritual visions and dreams, and though bereft of our sister, we wait in the excellence of a glorious hope for her return.

Brother F. O. Kelley was ordained to the office of teacher August 25, and C. J. Sheets and Clayton Crooker to the office of deacon, at the conference held in connection with the Netawaka reunion.

August 31 Elder Jack Koshiway and family, of Perry, Oklahoma, visited a few days in Topeka following the reunion. He preached an interesting sermon on "The Book of Mormon" to a full house in the evening. Sixty-eight Saints and friends gathered at the home of Elder Ira G. Whipple on Tuesday evening and had a good social time. Refreshments were served.

The sacramental service September 7 was in charge of A. P. Crooker. The introductory remarks, given by L. F. Eden, a visiting deacon from Omaha, were very impressive. Previous to the opening of this meeting ten of the priesthood met in another room and marched in and took their places on the rostrum, forming a circle. A sister in the audience saw a light resting above their heads just before they were seated. Many testified to the presence of the Spirit, and the prophetic utterance through Brother Crooker was quite lengthy. Afterwards Sister Margaret Chew, her hair white with the snows of many winters, arose, her physical frame shaking with weakness, but her voice was strong, and the Spirit's message of admonition and encouragement was distinctly heard as she gave it utterance.

On September 14 Sister Marjorie Hamilton, of Salina, Kansas, sang a beautiful solo at the morning service. She is a teacher in the employ of the State for the blind and plays her own accompaniments, although she herself is almost blind. This affliction is no handicap when it comes to seeing the beautiful light of the gospel, and through the sense of touch she manipulates the keys of an instrument in a manner that would do credit to those who see. In the evening a problems meeting was held at half past six, at which the pastor, W. L. Chapman, talked on the duties of the priesthood and the law of the church. He admonished the Saints to be loyal to it.

Following this service Elder A. P. Crooker took for his theme, "Spiritual gifts," in connection with a series of sermons on the principles of the gospel. The presentation of this subject was visualized by the use of a "two-way" chart. District Chorister Vera Twombly of Fanning was present and had charge of the music. Visiting Saints were present from Lawrence, Carbondale, and Whiting, Kansas, also Independence, Missouri.

Elder James Baillie of Scranton has recovered from his recent severe affliction enough to be present and assist in the service in the evening. Under spiritual and social influences the Saints seem loath to leave the building.

Nauvoo, Illinois

September 24.—At the close of the reunion, the meeting tent was shipped to Disco, a small country town, where Brother Solomon Tripp and several of the brethren are located, baling straw. Brother Tripp felt impressed that there was a good opening in this place and agreed to pay all the expenses. Elder Amos Berve was the speaker every night for three weeks and three times on Sundays. The services began with fifty in attendance inside the tent and eight autos lined up outside, the occupants preferring to remain in their autos, listening quietly. The attendance continued to increase, notwithstanding it was the busy threshing season, until the tent was filled and between forty and fifty autos lined up outside. On the evening the difference between the two dominant churches was taken up, one hundred and fifty autos were counted, and more were coming. The Holiness man from Dallas City took exceptions to "the minister that was a sinner, telling sinners not to sin." He desired very much to tell the people what real salvation was, so Brother Berve allowed him one half hour on the proposition, "Resolved: I, James Bassett, am holy and without sin. I cannot sin and remain a Christian." This was his own proposition. In replying to this holy (?) man, Brother Berve made many friends, and congratulations came to him from Methodists, Christians, and Catholics. Four baptisms took place one Sunday afternoon. One man said to Brother Berve: "I have never understood the Bible or seen things as I do now. I have learned more during this series of meetings than in all my past experience as a church member. I shall be glad to talk to you about the river some time when you come again." Several of the Methodists have asked that their names be taken from the church books.

The Saints living in Disco were organized as a group of the Fort Madison Branch with Solomon Tripp elder, Darrel Smith priest, and Walter Sanford teacher. A Sunday school was organized by A. L. Sanford, and meetings will be held regularly. The pulpit will be supplied from the various branches, and Brother Berve will occupy once a month.

Through the efforts of Sister Irene Layton, a teacher in

Radio Flashes

Cupar, Saskatchewan.—Your program on September 16 and that of to-night (the 18th) came in fine. Both were much appreciated.—B. Rutherford.

Hager City, Wisconsin.—Your program came in loud to-night (September 16). The address on "Private property" was splendid. We particularly enjoy addresses and sacred and classical music.—T. A. Gustafson.

Rivers, Manitoba.—We listened to the Thursday evening program broadcast from K F I X August 28. Everything came in loud and clear in spite of static. Many thanks. Keep up the good work. Have heard you many times.—Charles A. Anear.

Waterville, Maine.—Your concert this evening (August 26) greatly enjoyed. Came through loud and clear. I especially liked the singing of "Asleep in the deep." Many thanks.—George P. Beckett.

Napoleon, Ohio.—I enjoyed your concert last night (August 28) very much. First time I have heard you. Your signals came in at absolute zero on my outfit—a homemade Haynes circuit set. Your signals were louder than W W J, 517 meters, 500 watts, less than one hundred miles away.—C. T. Harrison, jr.

Prosser, Nebraska.—I heard the latter part of your concert last night (August 26), and it was certainly fine.—Irving M. Hart.

Honey Grove, Texas.—I caught the last of your splendid program last night. This is the first time I have heard your station, which came through as clear as a bell and with splendid volume. Shall be glad to tune in on you regularly after this.—H. L. Allen.

Kansas City.—I heard your program last evening and enjoyed it very much, especially the Indian talk by Mr. Case. You come in loud and clear on my crystal set.—Martin McKiddy.

Fairmount, Missouri.—Just a line to show my appreciation for the programs you have been broadcasting from your church and studio. I was especially interested in our home town talent of last Tuesday evening. Have thoroughly enjoyed some of the fine sermons on Sunday from your church. I have been a shut-in the past seven months and am a close friend of the radio.—Dave Valentine.

Covington, Kentucky.—I hear that your station is going to increase power. I hope the drive will succeed, because I do not hear you very often. Am a great radio listener. Will try to send you a contribution. Though small, it will help.—Ed. Harrison.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Your program of last night came in very fine, almost like local. I enjoyed it very much. Am operating a radiola super-heterodyne set.—E. L. G. Argert.

Courtright, Ontario.—Dear A. B. C. I listened to your program last night, broadcast from the Campus. Most of it came in very clear. Heard every word of opening prayer as also closing prayer. Got most of Brother Gillen's discourse real plain. Was wondering how much louder and plainer it would be with the 1000-watt. Hurry and build it. I am inclosing my mite towards its building. Please accept it with wishes for success from your missionary brother.—B. H. Doty.

Kansas City, Missouri.—Your services received Sunday evening on loud speaker. Came in very good and could understand every word. Had eighteen people here listening.—H. Stoltze, 3536 Woodland.

Graceland, three Nauvoo boys, all nonmembers, are attending Graceland this year. They are Arnold and Oscar Ourth and Alvin Marzolf. Bertram Lewis, son of L. H. Lewis of Kirtland, who is moving to Nauvoo with his family, is also attending, making four boys from Nauvoo.

In the Nauvoo news published in a recent issue of a Keokuk paper, we notice the following: "The Latter Day Saints are gaining a permanent foothold in the old Mormon capital. They are all good, industrious people and are welcomed to Nauvoo."

A little daughter was born to Brother and Sister T. J. Henderson, and while the branch was rejoicing over the news that another baby would soon be added to our cradle roll, word was received that little Ethel, their one-year-old daughter, had passed away in a convulsion, just a few hours after the little sister was born. The entire branch mourned with the bereaved parents. Little Ethel was our only cradle roll baby and had won a place in the hearts of all.

Word comes from Sister Ada Aldread, secretary of the Northern Michigan District, that Allen Schreur, district president, and his two associates, Elders R. D. Davis and Elmer Parks, organized a branch at Cheboygan September 7 with the following officers: Irving Sheffer, president; Sarah B. Hilla, secretary. The Saints there have rented a building and will be glad to be able to hold church services.

Now Is the Time to Place Your Order

1924 Calendars were all sold out before many churches were able to get their supply.

1925 Calendars Now Ready. Be sure to order full supply.

Don't wait! Don't delay! 1925 Calendars now ready. Be sure to place your order for full supply. Our experience has been that by far the greater portion of these calendars are sold months in advance of the New Year. Hundreds of churches have found that the demand grows greater from year to year, and as our supply is necessarily limited, we urge you to estimate how many you can dispose of now and send your order at once. Each succeeding year brings increased sales and greater revenue to the church distributing them.

November 9 Is College Day

Graceland College has fairly started her thirtieth year of school work, and reports from those who are attending and from people living at Lamoni are to the effect that a most successful year is in prospect.

We ask you to read "Graceland chats" in the news columns of this HERALD, that you may understand something of the progress being made in the standing of the school. We are surely gratified at this news, and the church should rejoice with the corps of men who have worked hard and continuously for many years to bring the college to the point where it can furnish the youth a chance to gain educational training of an advanced order within its confines. We believe that the school will be able to make advance steps from the point now attained in keeping with the advance steps which we confidently expect the church body to take.

The part which College Day has had, as it has been observed for many years in many parts of the church, in bringing the school to its present happy and influential position among schools of the State and Nation, and in the church, is not negligible. College Day is generally celebrated by addresses and the rendition of productions of varied nature by those who have or are attending Graceland College, or who are in touch and sympathy with the aims and work of the school. By this means a sentiment has been created in favor of the church school which is a very tangible support.

An important part of the activities of College Day has always been the taking of an offering in sums of money for support of the institution. This work has been directed from the general offices of the church, through the various branch organizations.

Special needs of Graceland this year make it necessary to suggest to the Saints that they be liberal in their contributions of sums of money. An added building, which is very much needed, is being erected; necessary equipment is also being purchased, and the opportunity is offered to lift the burden from the general fund by increasing the College Day donations.

Graceland College was born of the sacrifices of Saints of moderate and very limited wealth. It has been largely supported and continued to the present time by this class of people, and this largely accounts for the consistent support which the institution is receiving. When people invest a few dollars, they want to see their investment fruitful, and they read and write and talk Graceland. This condition also insures a much safer and better school than if it were built by a few wealthy people.

The authorities in the local organizations should begin their activities at once that College Day may be celebrated in a manner commensurate with the importance of Graceland and her work in the achievements of the church.

Neither should the collection taken on that day nor the literary activities be permitted to monopolize the program. They should be made complementary to each other, planting Graceland and her work in the hearts of the young men and young women of school age to such an extent that they will not be denied a chance to gain the mental and spiritual training to be secured there; supplying the means to purchase instructors and equipment which shall make it possible to serve a larger percentage of those who hunger and thirst after learning.

Are you interested? Try to decide how much and be ready to contribute effort and means on College Day, November 9.

Gospel Preached by Radio

We have from Elder Wilfrid D. Tordoff, who was the speaker at the Stone Church Sunday evening, September 28, the following letter; and we call attention to the probability of many such instances existing of which we never hear:

I think you will be interested to know the sermon I preached in the Stone Church Sunday evening, September 28, was heard here in Alva, Oklahoma.

Also at Hardtner, fourteen miles from here, some non-members heard every word of the sermon, and said they would go and hear that fellow preach if possible. The Saints were not slow to tell them I would be preaching here at Alva, and also a few sermons at Hardtner, and that I had been preaching at Alva for three weeks.

Thus the radio opens up the way; at least it has done so in this instance.

Answer Provided to Perplexing Question

It has been the part of the objector to developments in science, to ever ask perplexing questions. And if true in the field of science, it has been doubly true in the realm of religion. Many questions which were asked in the latter part of the nineteenth century and which taxed the mentality of Latter Day Saint ministers, have become obsolete before the first quarter of the twentieth century has passed into history.

Only a few years have gone since Latter Day Saints have been joined by other denominations in believing that the law of tithing and stewardships should have application now. This movement has effectually answered the question which used to be common, Is it not strange Joe Smith could put over such a doctrine as would confiscate one tenth of the wealth of his converts?

There are many other questions which have provided their own answers in the developments of recent religious movements and in the various fields of discovery and exploration. One of these Evangelist Isaac N. White canvasses in a short communication which we produce:

Early in the days of my ministry, and many times since, when preaching upon the "signs of the times," and a fulfillment of the Scriptures in regard to the early coming of Christ to reign upon earth with his people, I have been met by opponents of the latter-day work with Christ's answer to his apostles when they asked, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"—Matthew 24:3. Christ answered, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come."—Matthew 24:14.

I have often been confronted with the perplexing question, "How is this to be accomplished in so short a time, with only a mere handful of Latter Day Saint elders who have not, up to this time, even been able to reach one twentieth part of the earth's inhabitants, after a trial of more than two thirds of a century?"

You may imagine our timidity, at times, when attempting to answer this question, and at a time when we were declaring Christ's coming was close at hand, even at the door, and "this gospel" we are promulgating is a restoration of that which Christ said should be preached unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people. (See Revelation 14:6.) We found it no child's play to satisfactorily answer this question; even we were not satisfied with our attempted answer. But, after having established a radio in our house, which enabled us to reach Washington, District of Columbia, then Chicago, New York City, Des Moines, Salt Lake City, Omaha, San Francisco, etc., a satisfaction commenced to invade my mind as to the feasibility of the day being at hand when the sound of the gospel could penetrate every nook and corner of the civilized world. It is not a "radio craze" that has struck the world and will soon be relegated, tossed to the moles and bats, and will find a final lodging in the junk pile.

No, indeed, the radio has come to stay, and it is taking its place, in God's providence, to send the gospel news to a benighted world. Soon every civilized nation in the world will rely upon the radio for the news. How the world is moving!

I hope no Latter Day Saint will be so remiss to his duty as to fail being a helper to erect the new 1000-watt station at Independence, Missouri, the heart and center of America, which will enable our people to send the good tidings out from Zion to the millions. The thousands will "pick up" our new station at Independence, and whether by accident or from curiosity, many will be moved upon to "listen in," and thus will the restored gospel reach the ears of the thousands where our elders could never go. It will, also, open avenues for preaching, or sending literature to parties that otherwise could never be reached by our elders.

Contributions to this end are needed now. There will, no doubt, be but a few that could feel satisfied in their minds to see an enterprise like this, "Broadcasting the gospel news" almost to the known world, and yet not have a hand in the matter. It may call for some sacrifice, but who of us would feel we had done our duty should we fail or refuse to make a contribution to this enterprise, that all the leading men of the church seemingly favor in order to send the gospel to the "ends of the earth."

Persistent Error in Accounts of Joseph and Hyrum Smith

It is not surprising that from time to time the publications of the country contain accounts of the work of Joseph Smith, jr., who was martyred at Carthage, Illinois, in the evening of June 27, 1844. These accounts have been and will be forthcoming, for the life and work and the manner of death of this man constitute a remarkable drama which is exceeded by none and equaled by few Americans.

From the time of his early teens until his death at less than forty years of age, there was an almost incessant misunderstanding and persecution of himself, his family, and the adherents of the religious faith which he was instrumental in founding. Yet fair-minded writers have always been found who can see and have the courage to record the fact that notwithstanding the remarkable persistency of the opposition aroused against him, there has also been a remarkably loyal and persistent following of men of unquestionable ability and integrity, and of his individual qualities of greatness.

Figures of the Past, a work by Josiah Quincy, American statesman and scholar, living from 1772 to 1864, contains the following regarding the Martyr, which is an example of what fair-minded men of strength have seen in the remarkable character developed in the man Joseph Smith:

It is by no means improbable that some future textbook, for the use of generations yet unborn, will contain a question something like this: What historical American of the nineteenth century has exerted the most powerful influence upon the destinies of his countrymen? And it is by no means impossible that the answer to that interrogatory may be thus written: Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet. And in reply, absurd as it doubtless seems to most men now living, may be an obvious commonplace to their descendants. History deals in surprises and paradoxes quite as startling as this. The man who established a religion in this age of free debate, who was and is to-day accepted by hundreds of thousands as a direct emissary from the Most High,—such a rare human being is not to be disposed of by pelting his memory with unsavory epithets. Fanatic, imposter, charlatan, he may have been; but these hard names furnish no solution to the problem he presents to us. Fanatics and imposters are living and dying every day, and their memory is buried with them; but the wonderful influence which this founder of a religion exerted and still exerts throws him into relief before us, not as a rogue to be criminated, but as a phenomenon to be explained.

Joseph Smith, claiming to be an inspired teacher, faced adversity such as few men have been called to meet, enjoyed a brief season of prosperity such as few men have ever attained, and, finally, forty-three days after I saw him, went cheerfully to a martyr's death.—Figures of the Past, page 376.

He was told, as he claimed, by the revelation of God, that his name should be taken for good and for evil among all peoples, and the prophecy has been verified, and the end is not yet.

In some quarters there are, even at this distant date from the time of his life and activity, organizations to defame and vilify his name; and there is at least one organization, numbering a hundred thousand people and scattered widely over the earth, which believes he was a prophet of God, possessed of a high degree of divine inspiration, and of a sound and defensible and manly character.

Not only has his fame made his posterity prominent in the places of their habitation, but certain spots where a considerable portion of his life's activity was enacted, are to the present time remembered and visited because of it. A little inland village several miles from the city of Cleveland, Ohio, known as Kirtland, is visited by thousands of tourists each year, that they may view the temple which Joseph Smith and his followers erected, as they claim, under the direction and at the command of God; another out-of-the-way spot, once the metropolis of the great State of Illinois, Nauvoo, is known from one end of America to the other as the location where he achieved his greatest influence and accomplished most wonderful results; the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri, is widely known; and the jail where Joseph and his brother Hyrum were killed, while supposedly under the personal protection of choice troops commanded by the governor of Illinois; the hill known by the name he gave it, Cumorah, in New York State, where he says he found the golden plates at the direction of the angel of the Lord, and from which he translated the Book of Mormon, and other spots are recognized and time and again gain publicity in the journals of the country because of his connection with them.

Sometimes the accounts are quite accurate, but more often they are obtained from irresponsible sources and are quite inaccurate, and one of these we reproduce from the columns of the Burlington Gazette of September 3, 1924, published but a short distance from the site it describes, but which is full of miserably mischievous error. We quote it in its entirety:

Building in Which Joseph Smith, Leader of Sect, Was Slain, Still Stands

CARTHAGE, ILLINOIS, September 23.—Hancock County, Illinois, celebrates its 100th anniversary in 1925 and one of the most outstanding events in its early history was the killing of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, pioneer Mormons, in the Carthage jail on the evening of June 27, 1844.

The building is still standing, in good repair, and is used as a residence, although owned by the Mormons of Salt Lake City, Utah, they having bought it several years ago from the estate of the late J. M. Browning, one of the county's leading citizens, who with his family, occupied it as a residence for many years, and built additions to it. Mrs. Browning's beautifully kept lawn and flower garden were noted, not only in Carthage, but throughout the county.

The grounds occupy one fourth of a city block on the corner of Walnut and North Fayette Streets and just one block south of where hard road Number 9 crosses Fayette Street, going east and west through the city. The building is two and one half stories high and the stone walls are so thick that it has never been known to get cold enough inside to freeze the most delicate flowers. It fronts the south and in appearance is just as it was in 1844, with the exception of the front porch and the frame ell on the east side.

Mormons Once Prominent

The story of Joseph Smith and his tragic death in this building, now known as the "Old Jail" is of interest to many because of its connection with the history of a religious sect, once very prominent in the county.

Joseph Smith was born in Sharon, Vermont, on December 23, 1805, and came with his parents, when ten years old, to Palmyra, New York, and later to Manchester. Early in his life his nature showed dreamy, mental cast, and he claimed supernatural powers in the finding of stolen articles. When fifteen years old he claimed to have had a vision of golden plates revealed to him by an angel named Moroni. This story is well known to all versed in Mormon history.

With the aid of Martin Harris and Oliver Cowdery, he prepared the "Book of Mormon," claiming that he had deciphered it from heaven sent characters, through the aid of miraculous spectacles. The book was published in 1810 and was accepted by many as a divine revelation, but Smith continued to see peculiar visions and dream such unheard of dreams that the credulity of many of his followers became strained and they left him, but others were gained and in 1832 he led some to Kirtland, Ohio, and others to Jackson County, Missouri.

Responsibilities of a City Church

BY JOHN W. RUSHTON

The church of Christ in a large city not only carries a heavy responsibility, but is confronted by oppositional forces, varied as well as mighty. Serious problems press upon pastor and congregation alike, to meet and neutralize these forces and discharge the duties to the community which the church is obligated to do.

One cannot ignore the facts of crime, vice, and sin which on every hand threaten and challenge, nor can they be met by impatience and intolerance. Both of these attitudes have been tried by the church and by Christian people but never with success.

Again, it seems clear that we cannot depend altogether upon what might be termed the mechanisms of the church. Canons, sacraments, codes, and institutions are useful and have their place, but we have to admit that morality is not the product of legislation and prohibitions, either political or ecclesiastical. Environment has value, but goodness may and has developed in unfavorable conditions, while badness may defy carefully prepared surroundings.

It is urgent and immediate that the church shall meet and overcome evil in human life. The challenge of evil reveals at once the colossal task which tests her power and the glory which may be hers in success. How can the challenge be met?

The question baffles many noble minds, and one would hesitate to speak boldly, but we may suggest with some modesty a solution based upon a study of our Lord's methods as recorded in the New Testament. The church, being the selected instrument through which Christ continues the work of his earthly ministry, surely cannot make a mistake in following his lead.

First, we note that Christ did not attach much, if any, importance to environment, but did place emphasis upon life. The heart is the symbol of the human emotions, the fountain of good and evil. His mission was to make life abounding, to ennoble, to enrich, and to divinize the life of man.

Second, He always met evil frankly in all of its manifestations, physical, moral, and spiritual, with an all-dominating and unfailing goodness. He cast out evil. He subjugated evil always by overwhelming goodness. Quite in keeping with modern pedagogy, he emphasized that which he desired, and when man or woman became charged and vitalized by him, evil no longer was the dominant thing. Goodness controlled the consciousness. With the increase of goodness, the consciousness of evil diminished, and life became correspondingly richer and fuller with increasing harmonizing with God. The more man responded to the divine stimuli, the less were the responses to evil. The life which at first was, "All of self and none of Thee," became a life that was, "All of Thee and none of self."

The church, therefore, might save souls and develop the kingdom of God more effectively if she were less concerned in dealing with evil, primarily and directly, and would make positive goodness her first and chiefest duty. In this way evil would indirectly, but none the less effectively, be eliminated—"cast out."

This interpretation of the word of Christ himself is not unreasonable: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

Let the church of Christ make him the drawing power and the attractive feature, so that which attracts and compels will master every rival influence. Christ must be the Master of his own church, and when the church will bring men and women to him the defects and deformities of human experience will be healed and the Devil cast out.

The Proper Poise of Life

BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

We are often confronted with things that cause us to wonder just how our fellow men reason, and I suppose they at the same time wonder how we are able to entertain our ideas, when we differ upon the matters involved. To-day I read the argument of a certain person that caused me to draw some reflections, and the more I reflected the more strongly I was impressed to write an article under the above caption. I am quite aware that it is an easy thing for us to become lopsided, and everyone think he is right, and that the other fellow is wrong, but I maintain that when we come to have the proper poise in life we will be able to see the rightness of the other person, and as well our own mistakes; and seeing our own mistakes we will be in a position to correct them.

In writing to Timothy, the apostle to the Gentiles said: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Of what a lot of trouble this would relieve us, if we could just put it into practice in everyday life! I think the greatest affliction we mortals have is our own limitations; we see things only in a fragmentary sense and therefore fail to judge rightly. In other words, we make the mistake of supposing that "I" see the thing just as it is, and because "I" haven't seen the matter just as my brother has seen it he of course is in error, for "I" am the one who is authority on this matter. I am therefore inclined to interpret the whole philosophy of life in keeping with my narrow vision, and perhaps think unkindly of my brother just because he sees that which has not yet been revealed to my understanding.

When we can come to understand that all the departments, and all the members are of importance, and that no one of them should be advanced to the detriment of the other, we will come to approach more nearly the purpose of the Master's instruction to us. For example, we find certain ones trying to fathom which is of greater importance in the church, the missionary or the pastoral arm. To me there should be no room for argument in this matter, for both are alike needful. A man need not be a philosopher to see that either of these departments of the church would be incomplete without the other. Surely it is a waste of time and energy to bring people into the church just to have the pleasure of bringing them in, and then let them go and perish again by the way because they are not cared for and fed with the bread of life! The pastoral department could do but little were it not for the assistance of the missionary force, who bring in the members and thus increase the work for the pastors. Both are alike honorable, both are alike needful, and both are of equal importance. Anyone can see that it is just as unwise to bring people into the church and then neglect to feed and encourage them as it would be not to do any missionary work at all. He who has the proper idea is interested in the success of both of these departments.

One other error that seems to creep into the theories of men is that, since Christ gave his life to save and redeem mankind, it is necessary for all mankind to become bad that he might have the privilege of reforming them. This to me is a very erroneous idea and should never enter into the consideration of Latter Day Saints. The Book of Mormon writer tells us that parents should be taught to repent and become as their little children, and that then they would be saved with their little children. In addition, we are told in latter-day revelation that parents should teach their children the principles of the gospel of Christ so they will understand its purpose and have a desire to honor its requirements by the time they are eight years of age, and that if these children do not thus receive and honor the gospel law by this time the sin is to be charged to the parents. What does all this tell us? I think it is not hard for us to tell that this at least very strongly suggests the idea of preservation. Retain the original purity of the child, of whom Jesus says, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," and you will not have a wrecked life to gather up and try to rebuild. This part of the work is quite largely pastoral.

Nor does this in any way detract from the excellent work of the missionary department of the church. What a woeful thing it would be for the youth of the church to be neglected and be permitted to go into the way of perdition in order to give the missionary department a chance to reclaim them. All who are saved to the church need not be reclaimed, and hence it is one of the best adjuncts the missionary department can have. I see no need of any arguments being made in this case, for both are alike important, and either without the other would be incomplete and inefficient.

He who said, "Go ye into all the world," also said, "Feed my sheep," "Feed my lambs." One of the weaknesses of the church in the past has been its failure to properly feed the sheep and the lambs. He who said, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations," also said, "If you love me, you will keep my commandments," and in our time he has said, "If you love me, you will serve me and keep all my commandments." If we keep all his commandments, we will go and teach all nations, and we will also feed the sheep and the lambs. While it is a very worthy and noble work to be able to go into all the world and preach the gospel of repentance to an unregenerated world, it is equally worthy and noble to be able to guard the innocent children and bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; and also to feed with the bread of life all who have been begotten unto a lively hope through the preaching of the missionary department. Had the one and all-important ministry of the pastoral department been properly attended to, the great apostasy need not have occurred. Had all those who have been brought into the church been saved to the church, what a different condition we might see to-day in the church! I think we ought not limit the statement of scripture which says, "You shall call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins," to the mere baptizing them into the church, for this smacks too much of sectarianism.

To save, means to keep, preserve that which you have gained, as well as to snatch from danger those who are about to perish. In order, therefore, to be workers together with God and Jesus the Anointed One in the salvation of men, we must preserve those we have gained as well as go out and bring in others. If we go out and save one from the pitfalls of sin at a great expense, and while we are doing that lose another through neglect, wherein are we gaining ground? If those who constitute the church will poise their lives so as to have them correspond with the life of Christ, then will the work of the church also triumph and prosper among men, and the redemption of Zion be speeded. But so long as we try to advance one department to the exclusion or the neglect of the other, we will find ourselves failing of our purpose.

We should heed the admonition of Paul and carefully study to show ourselves approved of God, workmen that need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. This will evidently bring us to the place from which we will see the need of all and will begin to understand that "I" cannot do the work, but with your help and with the assistance of the Spirit of God "we" can do it. The man who is properly poised will come to see that Paul was right when he said that no man liveth unto himself; he cannot get along without God; neither can he get on very well without the aid of his fellow men. He who is in tune with the Infinite will be able to join hands with all that is good, and will be a builder in that he will take the material that is furnished him in the gospel of Christ and with it will build for himself a character of truth while he is doing all in his power to lift his fellow men to the height of truth that is revealed in Christ Jesus.

When I learn that all the teachings of Christ are of equal importance in their place, and that it is my privilege to get in line with them, I will have made a wonderful discovery. May we not apply ourselves to this end and thus unite rather than divide our forces, and in this way hasten the accomplishment of the work that has been intrusted to us? Surely if we are able to rightly divide the word of truth, it will properly poise our lives, and we will come to know God because we are growing daily into his likeness. Why not unify rather than divide our forces, that our successes may become the greater?

Query or Tradition—Which?

BY JOSEPH LUFF

"When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth."—Luke 18: 8.

Our aim in writing this article is not to criticize; but solely to stimulate investigation, in the hope that readers of the scripture under consideration may thereafter extract from it only the meaning its author sought to invest it with, and thus do him justice in employing it.

Our caption text is the passage in mind. It might not be an exaggeration to say that during the fifty years of his adult life the writer has heard it quoted from the pulpit of our own and other churches, as well as in less public places, a thousand times, and on every occasion employed as a question. For at least twenty years, however, he has believed that such a use of it was unwarranted. Now for his reasons: Please read the whole parable of which it forms a part, and then note:

That Jesus was counseling that "men ought always to pray and not to faint." A judge who cared neither for God nor man is shown to have avenged a poor widow merely to get rid of her, being tired of her importunity. Then the recital contrasts our just and loving God with this godless and indifferent judge, and urges, "Hear what this unjust judge saith." Next follows the proposition:

"And shall not God avenge his own elect, who cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with men? I tell you that he will come, and when he does come, he will avenge his Saints speedily. Nevertheless, when the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"—Luke 18: 18, Inspired Translation.

The point so far is: Will persistent prayer succeed more surely or bring better results from an unjust and godless human judge than from your Father in heaven? I tell you, Nay! God will avenge when he comes, though he bear long with men.

Why does he "bear long with men"? Peter covers this question with his explanation in 2 Peter 3: 9, "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance."

This explains apparent delay in avenging: too many would have to be destroyed to suit the loving heart of God if he moved more speedily; but the context says, "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up."

Peter further asks us to not forget that God does not reckon time as we do—"one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" with him.

This means, if anything, that the long-suffering heart of our loving Father leads him to postpone to the last limit the calamity that must eventually fall upon the world. So many would be engulfed, so few escape, or as Isaiah in treating on the same subject in Isaiah 24: 6, says: "And few men left." A curse will devour the earth and the inhabitants thereof are destroyed, beginning at the pulpit and ending at the pawnbroker's and covering the whole human circuit in its sweep—priest, people, servant, master, maid, mistress, buyer, seller, lender, borrower, usury taker, and usury giver—the land utterly spoiled "for the Lord hath spoken this word." The reason for this is given plainly—the earth is defiled—the laws of God transgressed—his covenant broken—his ordinances changed. Nothing but a complete deluge by fire, as once by flood of water, can purge the earth of its corruption.

Peter, Isaiah, and Jesus are here in agreement. The same Spirit made all see alike, and in this parable before us Jesus sought to convince his Saints that their “crying day and night” would not go unheeded. God was not less heedful than the unjust judge, though he bear long with man. “I tell you he will come, and when he does come he will avenge his Saints speedily.”

Nevertheless—notwithstanding, or in spite of this awful condition demanding this universal calamity, some will be spared—all will not go down in the fearful crash. Why? Because, notwithstanding the awfulness of the condition “He shall find faith on the earth.”

But, says the reader, you have transposed the first two words. It does not read that way. True, but have I given the intended meaning? That is the important question. This same Jesus was in the habit of making his prophecies or affirmations in that way. Don't you remember when he answered the thief on the cross, he did not say, “Verily, I say unto you, To-day thou shalt be with me in Paradise?” What he said was, “Shalt thou be with me.” But what did he mean? Was he announcing a fact or asking a question? When you have answered that, your answer will fit equally well in this case.

Can we imagine Jesus going through the details of that parable and then winding up with, “Nevertheless I ask you a question,” and then submitting such a one as that?

Can we imagine his asking them such a question at all? Did he not know that not one among them could answer it if he himself was in doubt about it? Were they not absolutely dependent upon him for every item of knowledge they possessed concerning such matters? Is it not more reasonable to believe that he was simply assuring them that the ruin coming when he started to avenge would not be complete as to the populace, that a remnant would be spared, that faith would not be entirely extinct? So it seems to the writer, and as fortifying this idea he submits further:

That when Jesus comes it will be to avenge (to vindicate their devotion by punishing their adversaries). These are his own elect, whose faith has withstood the actual contempt of men and the apparent indifference of God, as indicated by his long unexplained delay in answering their day and night appeals to him; in other words, to reward their faith.

The Psalmist (102: 16) says, “When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory.” It would seem an anomalous proposition to build up such a Zion as to secure that without faith.

In Matthew 24: 31 we read that just before his coming he will send his angels to gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other, and in Doctrine and Covenants 36: 12 we are informed that they will be gathered to the place prepared, and be looking for the time of his coming, and it shall be called Zion. That smacks strongly of “faith on the earth” at that time.

In the parable of the virgins, five were found out of ten prepared for his coming; some faith there, surely.

Paul says some at the coming of Christ will be changed in the twinkling of an eye and be caught up to meet him. Evidently they will be ready and waiting for him; that spells faith to the writer.

Doctrine and Covenants 45: 6 says a remnant shall be gathered, looking for him, and shall see him in the clouds of heaven, clothed with power and great glory. Only faith is expressed that way.

Malachi 3: 1 says the Lord shall suddenly come to his temple, and our later revelations locate that temple, it is claimed, in Missouri. Others read 1 Corinthians 3: 16 and see in that the temple referred to the Saints as a body. Choose which you please. If it is to be a man-made building then, to be accepted of God when he enters it, holy hands must have built it, and there is no holiness without faith; or if that temple be the membership when God comes to it in glory, it will not be destitute of faith, I opine.

Doctrine and Covenants 97: 4 distinctly declares that Zion shall be redeemed, for if those being spoken to failed he would raise up a people who would serve him in righteousness. Could they do that without faith? Time and space permitting, we might introduce evidence enough to make our quotations as tedious and annoying as the widow's prayers were to the unjust judge, from the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, but if what we have given are not sufficient more would not be. We submit, therefore, that Jesus knew all this. In fact, he himself has given us most of this information. Is it then consistent with reason to think that, knowing it, he would ask a group of men who received all their knowledge from him, if he would find faith on the earth when he came?

Evidently that form of expression was, as we have shown, common at that time, and back co-equal with Bible history, not only with Jesus but nearly all others. Witness, for instance:

Though he were dead, yet SHALL HE live.—Matthew 11: 25.
Yet IS SHE thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant.—Malachi 2: 14.

Yet WAS SHE carried away, she went into captivity.—Nahum 3: 10.

Yet HAVE YE not returned unto me.—Amos 4: 6.

Yet WILL I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come.—Ezekiel 11: 16.

Yet WILL I not hear them.—Ezekiel 8: 18.

Yet SHALL I be glorious.—Isaiah 49: 5.

Yet WILL NOT his foolishness depart.—Proverbs 27: 22.

Yet DO I not forget thy statutes.—Psalms 119: 83.

Yet HAVE WE not forgotten.—Psalms 44: 17.

Then SHOULD I yet have comfort.—Job 6: 10.

Yet IS HE not crowned except he strive lawfully.—2 Timothy 2: 5.

We venture to say that no intelligent reader of these passages as they appear in the Scriptures would think they were intended as questions.

We might go on to weariness, gathering similar statements from the Bible, beginning with Genesis 40: 23, "Yet DID NOT the chief butler remember Joseph," and ending with Revelation 6: 10, "How long, holy and true, DOST THOU NOT judge and avenge our blood?" But if they ran into hundreds, a reader would simply dispose of them by saying that only the idiomatic expression of those ages was revealed therein. He would smile at any suggestion that they were questions. Instinctively he would imbibe a meaning from the reading of each that he would express by transposing the words we have underscored.

Our suggestion is, therefore, that he give our heading text a place with these passages under that verdict, and stop using it to make Jesus appear more ignorant on that subject than were those he came to teach.

Constitutional Government in the Church

BY RICHARD S. SALYARDS

Having shown that the Constitutional Law of the United States was written by men raised up of God for that purpose; that it was designed to permit men to act in freedom of conscience in matters pertaining to "futurity" as well as to the present (Doctrine and Covenants 95: 2; 98: 10); it will be interesting to note the spirit of harmony existing between the Constitution of the United States and the constitutional law of the church.

We expect to make clear the following principles: 1. The church possesses a system of constitutional law. 2. It is instituted to make all peoples free. 3. It is the supreme law of the church. 4. It provides a system of divine government based upon "the consent of the governed." 5. The system is dual in form, hence we have both general and local government. 6. Human agencies are appointed to administer the government, as servants of God and of the people. They are administrators, not masters; hence "that safe provision in law, division of power into departments," and not concentration of authority into one department, is provided for.

Constitutional Law.—The three standard books contain the constitutional law of the church: (Doctrine and Covenants 17: 2; 6: 18; 32: 3; 42: 5, 16, 21, etc.)

That the whole law of the Church of Jesus Christ is contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants.—General Conference Resolution No. 6.

That this body, representing the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, recognize the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, the revelations of God contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and all other revelations which have been or shall be revealed through God's appointed prophet, which have been or may be hereafter accepted by the church as the standard of authority on all matters of church government and doctrine, and the final standard of reference on appeal in all controversies arising or which may arise in this Church of Christ.—General Conference Resolution No. 215.

The law is given to make men free: (Leviticus 25: 10; John 8: 31, 32; Romans 8: 15; Doctrine and Covenants 38: 5.)

Consent of the Governed.—The church constitutes a system of divine government based upon the consent of the governed; hence it is, under God, a "government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

The Almighty gave unto man "his agency," the right of choice. He could not therefore institute a form of government which did not provide for the "consent of the governed." This "goes without saying"; but in these days of avowed government by "supreme directional control," "maintained by effective discipline," it becomes necessary to call attention to this fundamental principle of consent in the system of divine government in the church.

When Moses presented the law received upon Sinai, Israel accepted it and pledged themselves to be governed by it. Though but poor, undisciplined slaves from the brick kilns of Egypt, God respected their right of free choice. He did not force upon them a system of government:

And Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before their faces all these words which the Lord commanded him.

And all the people answered together, and said, All that the Lord hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the Lord.—Exodus 19: 7, 8.

The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.—Deuteronomy 5: 2, 3.

In all ages when people hear the gospel, acceptance, obedience to it, is always a matter of individual choice. The Jews rejected Jesus, and he wept over their city because of their refusal to receive the truth:

But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God.—John 1: 12.

In the Book of Mormon, when the government, both civil and spiritual, was based upon the law of God, we have this:

Now it is not common that the voice of the people desireth anything contrary to that which is right; but it is common for the lesser part of the people to desire that which is not right; therefore this shall ye observe, and make it your law to do your business by the voice of the people.—Mosiah 13: 35, 36.

God in this day has commanded observance of this principle. In the history of Joseph Smith, we read:

We were, however, commanded to defer this our ordination until such time as it should be practicable to have our brethren who had been and who should be baptized, assembled together, when we must have their sanction to our thus proceeding to ordain each other, and have them decide by vote whether they were willing to accept us as spiritual teachers or not.—Church History, vol. 1, pp. 60, 61.

The historian comments thus:

One provision mentioned in the above instruction is of peculiar importance. Notwithstanding the Lord appoints these men to a high and responsible position, he recognizes the rights of the people, and shows no disposition to force upon them a man not indorsed by them. He instructs them not to carry out his direction until they present the same before their brethren for indorsement. Is not this a grand condescension upon the part of God, that having called men to be collaborators he recognizes their right to a voice in the things done? But he is just, and this is justice. This principle, if true, ought to admonish men who aspire to be coworkers "together with God" that it is necessary to work in the same spirit in which he works, and with the same motives to purify and bless mankind; otherwise they will not be worthy to retain their standing, and, in harmony with the inexorable laws of justice, must fall. Further; they should be admonished that as God recognizes them, and their rights of voice and vote, they should recognize their brethren. Again; as God permits man the privilege of ratifying his choice, is it not disrespectful for men to select and ordain, without consulting him and obtaining his will? Another indorsement of this principle is found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 107, paragraph 46, where, after giving names for all the important offices of the church, it is said:

"I give unto you that you should fill all these offices and approve of those names which I have mentioned or else disapprove of them at my general conference."—Church History, vol. 1, pp. 61-63.

The principle of "common consent" is revealed:

And all things shall be done by common consent in the church, by much prayer and faith; for all things ye shall receive by faith.—Doctrine and Covenants 25: 1.

Common consent means general consent. It is obtained by vote of the people direct, or by action of their representatives, in local and in General Conference. It includes "all things" done by the church. (See also Doctrine and Covenants 101: 12, 13.)

The following, providing for action by the voice of the church in General Conference, are in evidence:

The several elders composing this church of Christ are to meet in conference once in three months, or from time to time, as said conferences shall direct or appoint; and said conferences are to do whatever church business is necessary to be done at the time.

The elders are to receive their licenses from other elders, by vote of the church to which they belong, or from the conferences.

No person is to be ordained to any office in this church, where there is a regularly organized branch of the same, without the vote of that church; but the presiding elders, traveling bishops, high councilors, high priests, and elders, may have the privilege of ordaining, where there is no branch of the church, that a vote may be called.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 13, 14, 16.

... and my servant Joseph shall be appointed to preside over the conference by the voice of it . . . neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants, for all things must be done in order and by common consent in the church, by the prayer of faith.—Doctrine and Covenants 27: 4.

See also 58: 12, 13; 73: 1, where common counsel and the voice of the conference are provided for.

The General Conferences of the church have passed a body of resolutions or statutory law which is binding upon the church. These resolutions cover all lines of church activities; some of them defining the duties of general and local church officers, some instructing such officers, while others express the position and policy of the church on special matters, spiritual and temporal. These rules and regulations have binding force upon the First Presidency, the Twelve, the Bishopric, and all officers and members of the church. Such laws or rules have been adopted as a means of executing the constitutional law written in the three standard books.

The conferences are comprised of ex officio members ordained, appointed, and sustained by voice of the people. Lay delegates also form part of the law-making assembly. "Membership and good standing" is the only qualification for appointment as delegate. (Doctrine and Covenants 125: 9.)

The Presidency cannot preside over the conferences, nor can any officer act therein, without the vote of the body; and at its sessions all church authorities must be sustained by such vote, in order to act for the church during the interim. Thus the church is, under the law, a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, as much so as is the Government of the United States under the Federal Constitution.

The theory set forth in the report of the April council, as published in HERALD for June 18, 1924, that it is a government "among the people" "by divine authority through priesthood," is an erroneous theory of church government. It is not the system of government provided for in the revelations of God, but is another and entirely different system, and as such, is contrary and in opposition to the law of God. Supreme directional control by one quorum means supreme sovereign power exercised by one man or three men, and would reverse the order of common or general consent, to an order requiring not consent, but submission. It would practically create a spiritual dictatorship. It would thus bring the people into bondage, into subjection, and place all spiritual and temporal control in the hands of the man or men designated. Then, too, this astounding doctrine provides that supreme directional control shall be "maintained by effective discipline." Certainly, that is the only method by which such absolutism could be maintained—by force! Hence the church would be turned into a government controlled by a supreme dictatorship, presumed to be "beneficent," as such governments have always claimed to be, and all opposition be swept aside by "effective discipline." In other words, quoting the formulæ of this new and strange procedure,

To carry into effect the purposes of the church, effective administration is imperative, and organic solidarity is maintained only by effective discipline, which is in consonance with the beneficent purposes of the church, but yet strongly enough administered to prevent the purposes of the organization being frustrated by individual caprice and rebellion. Authority to be effective must be respected.—SAINTS' HERALD, June 18, 1924, p. 579.

Members of the church, readers of the HERALD, intelligent, liberty-loving men and women, what think you of such transformation of the spirit and letter of the government of God? Are you ready for such an ukase, such "official" decree, such advance step backward? Can it be explained, softened down, interpreted, sugar-coated, and made palatable, and thus easily swallowed—can it be done at the conference by any apologist under a plea of "unity," of so-called brotherly charity which "hopeth all things and believeth all things"? If so, why not cease to contend with the people of Utah concerning their claims, and with our "evangelical" brethren over baptism, authority, and other "doctrine"? Why not conclude just to "love one another," as brethren, and let all such issues obtain upon the plea of presumed beneficent intention? "To argue or to contend is wrong!" Therefore, let us not think of any possibility of wrong to come from acceptance of this new-old theory, and just be good, and not have any definite opinions at all! Why not, surely; for we shall hear again this plea in effect, this soft-pedaling, as we have heard it at recent conferences.

Can you be influenced to accept and to bind upon your children and others such a system of misgovernment? Can it be possible that in these enlightened days, anyone would indorse such theory and practice, even through a misconception of spiritual authority! What is it the Book of Mormon says? "Surely, this thing leadeth into captivity" (Ether 3: 27). Yes, surely, captivity of mind, of soul, and of resources.

What would the intelligent, civilized world think of us? Who having self-respect would become a member of such an organization? It is astounding! impossible!

Why this decree by "council"? Are we to follow the footsteps of Rome? Has the Lord been derelict—has he failed to make clear the functions of the Presidency, through all the years since 1830? And has it become necessary for men to make up for his deficiency? We read:

The church has sought the Lord and received from time to time that which was deemed sufficient for the time to govern the church and its ministers, both of the spiritual and the temporal divisions of the work.—Doctrine and Covenants 129: 8.

That Safe Maxim in Political Science, Division of Power Into Departments.—This God has instituted in his law. Knowing the weakness and ambition of humanity, he has provided that no one man, no one department shall exercise supreme power.

Of the Melchisedec priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the presidency of the church. The twelve traveling councilors are called to be the twelve apostles . . . and they form a quorum equal in authority and power to the three presidents previously mentioned. The seventy . . . form a quorum equal in authority to that of the . . . apostles . . . The decisions of these quorums, or either of them, are to be made in all righteousness, in holiness and lowliness of heart . . . And in case that any decision of these quorums is made in unrighteousness, it may be brought before a general assembly of the several quorums which constitute the spiritual authorities of the church, otherwise there can be no appeal from their decision.—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 11.

Here we have three apostolic quorums (1 Corinthians 12: 28), or "presiding councils," or general authorities, whose "decisions" are "equal in authority and power." And here the possibility of error or "unrighteousness" by any of these quorums is stated, with provision for appeal therefrom. Thus there can be and is no "infallibility" in the action of any of them.

And that the quorum [of Twelve] may be filled and be prepared to stand as a unit in the councils of the church, in equality with the presidency and the seventy, . . .—Doctrine and Covenants 124: 4.

I inquired what quorums of the church were meant, and I was answered, the three quorums the decisions of which are provided for in the law—the presidency, the twelve, and the seventy.—Doctrine and Covenants 126: 10.

President Joseph Smith understood this provision of the law very clearly:

www.LatterDayTruth.org

Now there is one item of the law that requires or states, that the three leading quorums of the church have what may be called concurrent jurisdiction, and the decision by either one of them is equivalent to a decision by either of the others, thus exercising or maintaining a neutralizing power in cases of conflict, so that the rights of the people may be kept free from imposition by false doctrine or theory by anybody; and also in the rules of the Doctrine and Covenants, which require that matters of that importance shall be submitted to the body for their action, for approval or disapproval, at the conferences held from time to time when they meet.—Abstract of Evidence, pp. 85, 86.

He also stated that it would be understood that when anything comes before the church for examination it was to be passed upon by the three quorums of Presidency, Twelve, and Seventy. If it passed these quorums it would then be given to the other quorums for examination, and finally to the public in open conference.—SAINTS' HERALD, vol. 53, p. 381.

This division of power into departments is further provided for, in both general and local affairs:

The standing high councils, at the stakes of Zion, form a quorum equal in authority, in the affairs of the church, in all their decisions, to the quorum of the presidency or to the traveling high council.

The high council in Zion forms a quorum equal in authority, in the affairs of the church, in all their decisions, to the councils of the twelve at the stakes of Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 14, 15.

It is clear from the revelations that the First Presidency constitute the head of the executive department, having oversight of the entire church. This is acknowledged. But it is also clear that, like the executive Presidency of the United States, their functions are strictly defined and limited and to be exercised according to and strictly within the laws and regulations adopted by the body. Here is a statement and rule signed by President Joseph Smith:

That the Presidency is the leading quorum in the church. That the duty of presiding over the church devolves on that quorum. That it is the prerogative of the President to preside over the whole church, to bear the responsibility of the care and oversight of the work of the church, in all its different departments, and through the constituted officers of the church in their various callings, according to the laws, rules and regulations in force and recognized by the church.—General Conference Resolution No. 386, par. 7.

The President of the United States cannot set aside or assume the functions of other departments of the Government; neither can the Presidency of the church legally ignore or encroach upon the rights and duties of other departments of the spiritual government.

Doctrine and Covenants 122: 2, 3 has been cited in support of the theory of supreme directional control in the Presidency.

My servants have been harsh one with another; and some have not been sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations which my church has already received. Until my people shall hear and heed those who are set in the church to teach the revelations there will be misunderstanding and confusion among the members.

The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time.—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 1, 2.

The joint council, convened to interpret this revelation, adopted the following:

Counsel to be Honored.—Resolved, that it is the opinion of this council that the statements found in paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 of the revelation of 1894 should be understood in the same sense as paragraph 3 of the revelation of 1882 and paragraph 4 of the revelation of 1890, and that it is the duty of the saints to honor more fully the counsel and advice of the first presidency, the twelve, and the seventy in spiritual things.—Doctrine and Covenants 123: 22.

When President W. W. Blair appeared officially before the First Seventy, to give information, when they were considering that revelation, he stated that President Joseph Smith was instructed that the church was to honor more fully the advice and counsel of the three leading quorums, and that they were also to honor every other ordained man according to his office and station.

It will be noted that the word shall in 122: 2 is mandatory, and not declarative. God does not beforehand unreservedly indorse all the teaching of any man. He did that only in the case of the Christ.

"Two Divisions, or Grand Heads"

In the general revelation on priesthood we have the following:

All other authorities, or offices in the church are appendages to this priesthood; but there are two divisions, or grand heads—one is the Melchisedec priesthood, and the other is the Aaronic, or Levitical priesthood.—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 2.

Here the spiritual head is removed and relieved from the burden of administration of temporal things, "for the office of bishop is in administering all temporal things" (par. 32). "The bishopric is the presidency of this [Aaronic] priesthood, and holds the keys or authority of the same" (par. 8).

"It is written":

Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand. Even so. Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 44.

The following are also in evidence:

The work to be done belongs to those who are by command of God made the custodians of the properties of the church; and these by their appointment are empowered to prosecute the work of caring for and using such properties as are confided to their care to accomplish the end designed.—Doctrine and Covenants 128: 2.

The Spirit saith further: The attention of the church is called to the consideration of the revelation, given in answer to earnest supplication, with regard to temporal things. The word has been already given in agreement with revelations long since delivered to the church, that the temporalities of the church were to be under the charge and care of the bishopric, men holding the office of bishop under a presiding head acting for the church in the gathering, caring for, and disbursing the contributions gathered from the saints of moneys and properties under the terms of tithing, surplus, free will offerings, and consecrations. The word which has been given at a late period should not have been so soon forgotten and disregarded by the church or any of its members. "I am God; I change not"; has been known to the church and the eldership since the coming of the angel with the message of restoration. Under it the church has sought the Lord and received from time to time that which was deemed sufficient for the time to govern the church and its ministers, both of the spiritual and the temporal divisions of the work. The church has been directed to accede to the rendition of the bishopric with respect to the temporal law; and until such heed is paid to the word which has been given, and which is in accordance with other revelations given to the church, which had been before given, the church cannot receive and enjoy the blessings which have been looked for when Zion should be fully redeemed. Therefore, hearken once again unto the voice of inspiration, in warning and instruction, and conform to that which is given and receive what is awaiting the upright and the pure in heart.—Doctrine and Covenants 129: 8.

The Constitution of the United States and the constitutions of the several States separate the department of the chief executive from the department of financial administration. The legislatures make laws and provide appropriations, and the specified departments of government execute the same. In like manner the constitutional law of the church provides for the administration of spiritual officers and of temporal officers by appointing "two divisions or grand heads"—the Presidency assisted by other quorums in spiritual matters, and the Bishopric and their assistants in temporal affairs:

In regard to the gathering and the work of the bishopric in regard to the law of tithing and consecration, I made inquiry what should be the attitude of the church in regard thereto. To this question I was answered, that the Book of Doctrine and Covenants as accepted by the church was to guide the advice and action of the bishopric, taken as a whole, each revelation contained therein having its appropriate bearing upon each of the others and their relation thereto; and unless the liberties of the people of the church should be in jeopardy, the application of the law as stated by the bishopric should be acceded to. In case there should be a flagrant disregard of the rights of the people, the quorums of the church in joint council should be appealed to, and their action and determination should govern. I inquired what quorums of the church were meant, and I was answered, the three quorums the decisions of which are provided for in the law—the presidency, the twelve, and the seventy.—Doctrine and Covenants 126: 10.

The Judiciary.—The judiciary department is duly provided for: Common courts, consisting of the local and Presiding Bishopric; emergency courts for special cases, consisting of high priests in the various fields of the church; and appellate courts, the stake high councils and the General High Council, the latter the court of last resort in appellate jurisdiction. It is not the function of the High Council to decide such general issues as those now in question. This we have shown to be a function of the three presiding quorums—Presidency, Twelve, and Seventy. The functions of the High Council will be presented in a later article.

Local Organizations.—Branches, districts, and stakes are local organizations, subject to the principle of local self-government within the general or federal government of the church. Stakes are divisions of Zion, any one of them being the church in miniature, with a presidency and a high council and a bishopric in charge, with presidents of groups or branches and their assistants—and all operating subject to the law of the church and the voice of the people comprising such local divisions.

Thus we have a system of divine government in which the duties and prerogatives of all officers general and local, and the rights, duties, of the membership, are clearly prescribed and regulated, according to law; and in which the liberties of the people are safeguarded by divisions of power into departments, with checks and counterchecks, and all subject to the principle of free common consent obtained by the voice of the people.

Facts About the Bible.—No. 8.

BY A. B. PHILLIPS

Our highest ideals of worship and of religion generally, including its divine origin, come to us from the Bible. Religious principles are there made plain and are consistently related, giving us a well-balanced concept of God and man's proper relationship to him. But the history of religious experience is by no means confined to the biblical narrative. Many aspects of that experience have not only been remarkably influenced by the religion of the Bible extending to other than Bible peoples, but other religions have also exerted a degree of influence in the experiences recited in the sacred book. A better understanding of certain parts of scriptural history can therefore be had if one knows the religious concepts of those peoples with whom the Hebrews had dealings.

The origin and cause of religion as expressed by leading nations of ancient times, and the relationship which it bore to the political activities of the people, must be discerned in order to trace adequately the economic and social forces employed in maintaining its prestige and purposes. A study of these factors as revealed among those of different religions shows many things held more or less generally, and certain qualities seemed to be recognized in all of the more important religions. Thus justice, mercy, vengeance, retribution, beneficence, and evil usually figured in the ancient religions, though not by any means uniformly expressed.

Practically all the noteworthy religions were controlled and propagated by means of priesthood. In fact, priesthood must have been a very ancient concept, and was fundamental to such religions as the Egyptian, Babylonian, Brahman, Zoroastrian, Hebrew, Grecian, and Roman. The aboriginal American religion also had a remarkably developed priestly system.

Babylonian religion extended its influence to the Greek and Roman peoples, and even to the Hebrews in some degree, as shown in Hebrew religious literature. There are also evidences of Babylonian influence among some of the Gnostic Christians. From the fact that the Sumerians exerted an influence upon the Babylonians, it is interesting to note that many Sumerian hymn tablets have been discovered among Babylonian remains, some of which are about four thousand years old.

For several centuries before the establishment of the religion of Moses the Hebrews were surrounded by Babylonian, Egyptian, and Persian religious influences. Recent archaeological discoveries show that Babylonian influence extended over Palestine before the days of Abraham, and in one of the tablets deciphered the Habiri, or Hebrews, west of the Jordan are referred to. Though at times the Hebrews were guilty of idolatry, their religion was monotheistic from the earliest period traceable in history, and no female deities have been recognized in their worship. Some critics assume to find two periods in which the name of deity differed. The names of Yahweh and Elohim are found in the biblical documents, and some think the name Yahweh was not known until the time of Moses.

It seems probable that the priesthood and the custom of sacrifices were both derived from religious observances of the time of Adam. This would reasonably explain the fact that from remote times widely dispersed nations, such as Babylonia, Egypt, Phœnicia, Canaan, Persia, Africa, India, and even China, offered sacrifices in their earliest traceable periods. So also the practice of circumcision was widespread among the ancient Semitic races.

At least some of these observances may easily have been derived from a common origin. It is probable that in the course of time identical or similar customs would be so changed that at least some of them could be traced to their origin with great difficulty if at all. In this connection it may be noted that such similarities have been found between various religious customs of the aboriginal Americans and those of certain Old World nations.

It should not be supposed that the religion of Jesus contained only new ideas and practices. On the contrary it is evident that his mission was particularly intended to emphasize ideals that had been held in remote times, but had become obscured by the doctrines and traditions of men. It was the pure religion formerly revealed from God that he came to declare, a religion that should come from the heart and find its expression in sincerity and purity of life. A divinely called priesthood was established, through which his message should be taught and the solidarity of his church facilitated. In his teachings are found many things that established points of contact with the higher ideals held by many nations, by which they were enabled to perceive the Christian truths and to worship the only living God. (See Helps to Bible Study, pages 224-252, for further details.)

We hear of young men and women beating their breasts, lamenting the fact that all opportunities have been embraced. There are yet wonders to unfold, discoveries to be made beside which the airplane and wireless are simple as two and two.—F. L. Brittain.

NEWS AND LETTERS

President Smith at Church Opening

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN, September 22.—After years of effort and considerable sacrifice we have at last provided ourselves with a new church, the opening services taking place on Sunday, September 21.

From the time the contract was let in May, we began to plan to have President Frederick M. Smith with us for the opening, and were indeed delighted to have succeeded.

Prayer and testimony service was held at eight o'clock, followed by the opening sermon by President Smith at fifteen minutes after ten. He immediately got the earnest attention of the audience and held it throughout. Any synopsis of the sermon or the following sermons would only do them an injustice. It is sufficient to say that we all received an enlarged vision of the ideals and purposes of the church. He also preached at three and at seven in the evening, the sermons all being linked together. The last one especially explained the law of stewardships. Inspiration was manifest, and with it, of course, light and wisdom. With one accord the large audience stood to its feet to express its loyalty to their prophet and leader, with their determination to be with him in his efforts to carry the work to a final success.

He expressed himself as having enjoyed preaching to us and associating with us, and said he would like to return.

Our church is not a complete building. We have built a most substantial lower story of cement and facing brick, fire-proof and modern throughout. It cost approximately $12,000, which, with about $4,000 for the two lots, makes a total of about $16,000. It is hoped the balance due on it can be paid in two or three years and the superstructure added, when we will be equipped with a building probably equal to anything in the church.

The Church Is Sufficient

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND, September 7.—In the HERALD for August 13 I was reading a letter from Brother C. C. Randall who believes the church is sufficient. I am of the same opinion as this brother, and have so believed ever since I had the honor to be initiated into this grand and glorious work something like thirty-four years ago.

For the encouragement of others I wish to state my experience, not in the least in the way of boasting.

Some thirty-two years ago, soon after I joined the church, there was a great deal of writing in the church papers about paying money into the church instead of into worldly or man-made organizations. At that time I was a Free Mason, also a member of the Ancient Order of Foresters, but after my initiation into the Masons and I had become a Master Mason I left that part of the country, Scotland, and never bothered about them since. Of course when once one becomes a Mason he is always a Mason, because he knows the secrets of the organization, which cannot be taken from him. The oath taken at the initiation is something horrible and wrong before almighty God, and no Latter Day Saint would take such an oath if he knew what it was before initiation. The trouble is no one knows what it is before he is made a member.

I was a member of the Ancient Order of Foresters for many years and used to pay my subscriptions every quarter. It was held at the old Thatched House Tavern, Red Lion Street, Holborn, London. My quarterly subscriptions ran about seven shillings, and the most I ever paid was eight shillings.

When there was so much writing about paying our subscriptions into the church, I thought the matter over and found that I had paid to the Order between forty and fifty pounds and had never required anything for sick pay or a doctor. All that money was clear to the society. Perhaps some who know me will say that is all very well, as I have always been a strong, healthy man; but where did I get my health and strength? You know. And the same God will help and bless you if you will study the church instead of worldly societies.

Now the most I paid quarterly into the Ancient Order of Foresters, as I said before, was eight shillings. I ceased paying that eight shillings to the club and paid it into the church every quarter and never once missed for the thirty-two years. I am still in the best of health, and although in a few months I will, if spared, be seventy-nine, I am still working and doing well, for a common man, financially. My weekly salary is very good considering I am a man of the laboring class. I am also an army pensioner of the Life Guards after a little over twenty-one years of service. Since that time I was twenty-eight years with the Manchester Board of Guardians, and was superannuated from there nine years ago. I have been at my present work nearly nine years. God has been good to me, and if you want to get on, pay your tithing and keep the Word of Wisdom.

WILLIAM MADDOCK.

Cherokee, Iowa

September 24.—Sunday, September 7, Brother Moroni Traxler, of Lamoni, and Brother and Sister J. A. Halberg and daughter and Sister Pusey, of Storm Lake, were visitors, attending sacramental services with our branch. Sister Pusey has been deaf for twenty years, and Sister Halberg is also afflicted. Both sisters were administered to during prayer services, and the Spirit was manifest in performing the ordinance to such a degree that the sisters were promised a blessing. The Spirit bore testimony to us that we were careless about praying for our sick and afflicted and must be more diligent if we would receive the blessings desired by our brothers and sisters. There was a large attendance for this service.

We have a sister, Estella Reeder, living at 427 Forty-third Street, Rock Island, Illinois, who is afflicted and unable to attend services. We would like to have some of our elders call on her, as she is in need of consolation and prayers.

Saturday evening, September 20, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Tilton, occurred the marriage of Sister Etta Webb and Brother Charles W. Evans, Brother A. R. Crippen officiating. Sister Webb has been superintendent of the Sunday school for several years and active in all church work. She recently returned from a three months' visit with her children in Oregon and Washington. Brother Evans is a new convert to our cause and is a worthy and upright man. All join in good wishes to them.

Monday evening about sixty Saints and friends gathered and proceeded to the home of Brother and Sister Evans to give them an old-fashioned serenade and surprise party. The invaders took lunch, and after spending a pleasant evening a bountiful lunch was served. After congratulating the bride and groom, all departed for home feeling it was an evening well spent.

We are looking forward to the time when our new radio station at Independence is working so we can hear what is going on in our future Zion. At present we are unable to get Independence, but with the new station we should be able to hear with ease.

Elder A. R. Crippen was called to Coalville Branch Sunday, September 15, and preached for them in the afternoon. His place here was filled by William Shore in the morning and W. W. Reeder in the evening.

Curb and gutter have been laid in the street in front of the church, making a very fine and much needed improvement.

Baptismal services have been announced for next Sunday.

We are still trying to keep our light burning and hope to be able to report a much greater work being done in this place.

Warton, Ontario

September 20.—Radio week has come and gone. The branch decided to make up a subscription list, and from reports it has done well. We are glad to know that K F I X has become aware of the fact that others want to hear. We do; and we wish you success in the new 1000-watt station.

Brother and Sister Joseph Yager, accompanied by Patriarch John Shields, have gone to the Manitoulin Island on church work.

We were privileged to have Brother and Sister Percy Far-ron with us on Sunday en route to Port Arthur.

Brother and Sister A. Perry of Sarnia returned with some of our church members Sunday and attended service at the church.

We believe the present controversy which is being discussed in the HERALD is coming to a head as to where, when, and before whom this should be decided. Brother Gomer T. Griffiths' letter in the HERALD of September 17 was welcomed by some at least. We are confident that this could be thoroughly discussed before the Melchisedec priesthood who are going to be at the next General Conference. They might assemble a week or ten days previous and decide this question, their findings and decision to be given to the conference. This, we believe, would avoid wasting time that should be given to other business and would benefit the church as a whole.

Glasgow, Montana

September 23.—Fine interest has been created at Vandalia, twenty-five miles west of Glasgow. On August 31 Elder James C. Page baptized five. The service took place on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. John Betz. A nice crowd was present, nearly all outsiders. A picnic dinner was served in the grove, and Brother Page addressed the crowd three times. Confirmation was also held in the grove. There were many expressions of appreciation of the Spirit present and the message heard, while several others expressed their intention of being baptized. There is quite a demand for a series of meetings there, and an effort is being made to get a missionary to come and meet this demand.

The sacramental meeting September 7 was not so well attended, but there was a good spirit present, and nearly all took part in the meeting.

The Religio gave a play on September 12 for the benefit of the radio fund. There was a public reception being held for the school-teachers and a Defense Day program being held at the same time, but we still had a good attendance. Over sixteen dollars was raised by the branch, and twenty-two dollars by the scattered members.

Joseph Sandidge preached Sunday, September 14, on "It does make a difference." The other three Sundays were occupied by Brother J. C. Page, branch president. One noticeable improvement in the Sunday evening service is the increase in the number of young people attending.

Occasionally people who are not members of the church call for the elders to administer to the sick. An instance occurred recently when a Mrs. G. M. Taylor, a member of the United Brethren Church, called for the elders.

The lives of the faithful are a joy and comfort, and they bear up the spirit of other faithful ones and give much encouragement to press on.

Moorhead, Iowa

September 24.—Meetings were not held here during reunion, which was held the last part of August, but since that time they have been resumed as previously. The speakers since our last report have been Elders T. O. Strand, John Boswell, and Mark Jensen.

At the Jordan Church the Sunday school and preaching services are kept up as usual by the Moorhead local, assisted by visiting members of other denominations. Once each month they hold a picnic dinner, followed by a program and preaching service in the fine natural grove near the church. This brings out quite a number from the neighborhood that otherwise would not be in attendance.

The Moorhead Saints are expressing themselves as being tired of the controversy being carried on in the SAINTS' HERALD and in its place would prefer some good testimonies of the progress of the work from the foreign missionary force.

A committee has been busy soliciting for the radio fund. We have not as yet learned the results.

On the evening of September 21 Brother John Boswell gave us a very interesting talk on the church institutions, especially the Sanitarium and the Children's Home. The latter place he and his wife had been connected with.

We failed to mention in our last report that Sister Effie Hield, of Janesville, Wisconsin, had been visiting at the home of her son, Professor Charles Hield and wife. She was accompanied by her daughter Ethlyn.

September 14 Brothers Rasmus Mortensen and Perry Mann, accompanied by their wives, visited their children who reside at Missouri Valley.

Sister Thelma Lane, who has been employed as instructor of music in our school, had to return home on account of sickness, but we trust she will soon be ready to return and resume her work.

Bevier, Missouri

September 25.—Things are very quiet here, both temporally and spiritually, with so many out of work and winter coming on. We are trusting and praying that God will open up the way and that better conditions will prevail. The controversy prevailing in the church is not conducive to progress, and we pray that those in error may be led to see the error of their way.

Brethren Carl Weeks and J. W. Graupner have gone to Kansas City where they have found employment, thus depleting the ever-decreasing membership. Many have left here on account of unemployment since the mines closed down.

Elder E. F. Robertson, of the missionary force, was the speaker both morning and evening of September 14 and 21. All the sermons were good and edifying.

Des Moines District

RUNNELLS, IOWA, September 25.—Fred Wilkinson, district Sunday school superintendent, and William Robinson, associate superintendent, met with the Saints at Newton on the 21st and organized a group Sunday school. There are fourteen Saints who reside there. Brother Wilman, whose home is in Moline, Illinois, but who is employed here, is superintendent of the group. An effort is being made to get a hall for meetings; for the present they are meeting at the homes.

A district rally is being held at Boone October 11 and 12 by the Department of Recreation and Expression. Games will be played at the park, where reunions were held in former years, on Saturday afternoon. A program will be given in the evening. Sunday President McDowell will be the speaker. A good time is expected.

District President Henry Castings and George Orr, of Pershing Branch, spent Sunday, September 14, at Creston.

Stephen Robinson of Des Moines who was recently ordained to the priesthood, preached his first sermon at Sandyville last Sunday, September 21.

Brother Ralph Wicker preached at the Dunreath Mission on September 21 and Fred Tingle at Vandalia.

Elder L. B. Wolf has returned to Nevada. He will run the hotel and will be of great assistance to the branch.

Clitherall, Minnesota

September 24.—On September 21 Union Branch met at Almora, expecting to hold preaching services; but a hard rain the previous night and during most of the day cut down the attendance to such an extent that prayer meeting was the only service held. This service was held at the home of Sister Iva Pearson, who with her family will soon leave Almora for their future home at Wright, Minnesota.

The body of Keith Sarver, the six-year-old son of Sister Gladys Sarver, was brought here for burial from Melrose, Minnesota, on the 24th of September.

Ackworth, Iowa

September 24.—I want to tell the Saints of the good meetings we had at Sandyville last Sunday. Brother Stephen Robinson of Des Moines gave his first sermon in the morning, and Brother Henry Castings preached in the afternoon. Brother Robinson's subject was, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." His sermon was good and gave encouragement to the hearers. He pointed out some of the things that would solve the economic problems of to-day, and how the young people should be taught and trained to be efficient in church work. It gives us cause to rejoice when these talented young men step out in so noble a cause. Would that more of our young people would "catch the vision," not to preach the gospel, necessarily, but the church needs their service, their talents, their all.

Brother Castings gave a good talk in the afternoon on the "Open door," taken from Revelation 3:8. A man who is associated with Brother Castings came with his wife a long distance to hear him preach, and they said they thought highly of him. He enjoyed a great degree of the Spirit in his discourse, which was felt by all present. Brother and Sister Anderson were with us, and a profitable day was spent.

My prayer is that we may all so live that those with whom we may associate will know that we have the Spirit of Christ and that our lives will be an honor to the name we bear. It is much easier when we are at reunion or in a good meeting where the Spirit of God is being poured out upon us, to say we will do our duty and reconsecrate our lives to the service of the Lord, but when we are at home and the cares and worries of life almost weigh us down, it is easy then to neglect our duty.

We are looking forward to the young people's rally or meeting which will be held at Boone October 11 and 12 and hope the weather and roads will be good so we can attend.

Northern Wisconsin District

The work in the Northern Wisconsin District is moving along very nicely, and the outlook is very good where we have been laboring.

The latter part of August and early part of September I labored for a while in Appleton and Green Bay on the eastern side of the district with very good interest. Two boys were baptized from Appleton and one young married man at Green Bay, who I am sure will make his mark in the church and be of great assistance to the Saints at that place, if faithful. Since the time of baptism he has read the Book of Mormon through and is now studying the Bible carefully and says it is much easier now than before. After the services one evening at that place, his wife came up and said they would like to know more about the tithing law, for they wanted to keep the whole law. I thank God we have just such people as these who want to keep the whole law.

One lady, not a member, asked that her little nephew about four years old might be blessed, which was also provided for. She afterward came up and handed me some money which she said was to help the work along.

I am very sure that more can be added to the fold of Christ in that place as soon as we can get the time to conduct services there.

At this time the writer, in company with our missionary supervisor, is conducting services at Harshaw since the seventh of September. The interest has been fine from the beginning, and the people are very sociable and seem anxious over the work. During the past week two boys handed in their names for baptism, and on Saturday night after the services a little girl of a Catholic family came forward and asked for baptism also. She was later followed by a mother and daughter from another home, then by a man whose wife has been a member for some time.

Baptism was administered yesterday by Brother Wildermuth and the writer, after which confirmation was provided for. The Saints are rejoicing to have these new additions. Two children of Latter Day Saint parentage were also blessed and two of Catholic parentage.

Brother Howe and family, and Brother Utnehmer from Antigo were present with us in the services of yesterday, and all enjoyed a very good time together. We anticipate several more baptisms ere we leave here. The Saints are anxiously looking forward to our district conference which will be held at Black River Falls, possibly on October 18, 19. We expect a visit from President F. M. Smith then.

We are doing all that we can to keep the good work moving and find great pleasure in so doing. We also find the Saints in very good spirit, happy and hopeful in the work.

I ever pray for the final triumph of the work.

E. J. LENOX.

Holden Stake

Blue Springs

The Saints of Blue Springs witnessed their first increase by baptism Sunday, September 21, Sister Isabelle Atwell, wife of Brother Melvin Atwell, Brother A. E. Campbell officiating. Confirmation was by Brethren Alvin Knisley and E. T. Atwell. Brother Knisley began a two-week series of meetings on the 21st. The work here is progressing. The congregation, though small, is composed of earnest and diligent workers.

Courtney

Brother J. A. Bozarth was the speaker at 11 o'clock and C. H. Schofield at night. A supper on the 23d added $10.25 to our fund.

Lees Summit

Brother F. J. Lewis was with us Sunday evening, September 14. Sunday evening, September 21, Patriarch F. A. Smith was the speaker. Our Sunday school, Religio, and prayer meetings, have been very helpful and uplifting. The Saints are busy making up their portion of the radio fund. We feel that it will be helpful in the spreading of the gospel.

The Saints of Lees Summit spent a very enjoyable and profitable Sunday September 28. The Women's Department planned for a whole day's meeting. Brother Roderick May spoke in the morning, after which a basket dinner was had in the church. In the afternoon we were very much pleased to have Sister I. M. Ross, of Holden, Missouri, Sister Cowan, of Independence, and Sister Vida E. Smith, dean of the girls of Graceland College, with us. Each gave us a splendid talk, causing each one to leave with a more noble purpose and more determined to serve the Master.

At the eight o'clock hour Brother I. N. White addressed us. He gave us a very uplifting and inspirational sermon. Special music was furnished by the choir and different members of the choir. The day was well spent.

Sedalia

On September 28 we were glad to have with us Brother C. F. Scarcliff, stake Sunday school superintendent, and I. M. Ross of the bishopric. They occupied morning and evening respectively, and their sermons were much enjoyed by those who heard. After the close of the morning service, seven carloads journeyed to the Fair Place School, where we were met by Saints and friends from Houstonia, Nelson, Booneville, and the neighborhood. A basket dinner was enjoyed at the home of Sister Sowash, after which another meeting was held. Brother D. J. Krahl, had charge of the service, Brother Ross delivering the sermon. Brother Scarcliff also gave a brief address. This is a point where Brother C. L. House of Houstonia has held services every two weeks for some time. He has good interest. It is a point which should be given attention by our missionaries.

Rain on Saturday hindered some from going, but there were about sixty present besides the children. Brother and Sister Graham and family, from Kansas City, Kansas, have recently located here, Brother Graham being employed at the Missouri Pacific shops. Also Sister Kirkhart, and her mother who has recently come from Council Bluffs to make her home with her daughter. Mr. Kirkhart is not a member but is interested, and two grown daughters are desiring baptism. Also a Sister Ashburg has located here. The Saints feel encouraged by these additions, as they are all live Latter Day Saints.

An all-day meeting of the women was held last week at the home of Sister Galloway, who expects soon to leave for Alabama. There were nineteen present, and all enjoyed the day. New work was outlined and plans laid for holding a bazaar before Christmas. We are working to raise all we can for church building fund.

Sibley

Brother R. D. Weaver closed his meetings on Sunday evening, the 28th. There were two hundred present at the closing service. Three adults were baptized, and many non-members are intensely interested. Friends were made to the cause, and the Saints were all strengthened.

Holden

A loud speaker has been installed in the Holden Home chapel. It was made possible by those living in the home and their friends who forwarded offerings for this particular purpose. It is one of the best sets obtainable and was purchased through Brother A. B. Church of Independence, head of the church Radio Department. Sister Edith Carr, the matron, desires to thank all those who have contributed and made possible the installation of this receiving set. Brother A. R. Moler came from Independence last week and connected it up.

Topeka, Kansas

September 30.—Several members of the priesthood and Saints were in attendance at the meetings held each evening last week at Scranton, Kansas. These meetings were in charge of District President Samuel Twombly and Missionary J. D. Stead. Fine sermons are reported. The Topeka choir assisted in the music. Dave Little, a son-in-law of our aged Elder James Baillie, who resides there, was baptized and called to the office of priest. His two daughters were blessed. The Saints are glad to help revive this branch again.

Brother and Sister Kelley, of Independence, Missouri, were in the audience September 21 and witnessed the fulfillment of a prophecy when their son, F. O. Kelley, occupied the stand for the first time. Brother Kelley is a young man and was recently ordained to the office of teacher. The effort showed careful thought and study, and we rejoice with the parents in the fulfillment of this prophetic utterance. In the evening Robert J. Holman spoke on "The King," in connection with the "Kingdom of God" which had been presented in the morning theme.

Brother C. J. Sheets, a newly ordained deacon, occupied the eleven o'clock hour on September 28. Complimentary to this his first effort was the divine attest of the Spirit witnessed by many as he talked on the law of tithes and offerings. Among the visitors from Lawrence, Kansas, at the evening service was Ray A. Whiting, who offered the opening prayer. Our pastor, W. L. Chapman, presented "The true Shepherd, and how to know him."

September 29 the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a box social at the home of Sister Helen Hays. The proceeds amounted to $115 and will be applied on the church debt. Boxes of homemade candy were awarded to the three having the prettiest boxes. Mrs. W. L. Chapman won first prize, Mrs. Anna Alfrey the second, and Mrs. C. J. Sheets the third. Sister Hays is of the lineage of loyal stock, being a niece of Gomer T. Griffiths.

Amid the cares of branch responsibility a fatherly look is being detected on the face of the pastor. The young man's name is Walter Leslie Chapman, junior, on the cradle roll.

As we write these items, our mind reverts to the spot where our reunion was held in a beautiful little park by the side of the road in Netawaka. We seem to hear again the voices mingled in our camp song, sung to the tune of "The church in the wildwood." The verses used were of fitting sentiment and fused the singers into a perfect union of sentiment.

Stone Church

Sunday services at the church were well attended. The regular sacramental service was held in the morning in charge of Presidents F. M. Smith and E. A. Smith and Bishop M. H. Siegfried. Sunday evening President F. M. Smith was the speaker, and a large crowd was present to hear him. His theme was stewardships and the carrying of devotion into every field of activity.

The quarterly conference of the City of Zion convened in the Stone Church at eight o'clock Monday evening, Presidents Frederick M. Smith and Elbert A. Smith being in the stand, President Frederick M. Smith presiding. Routine business was transacted, and a resolution was passed as follows:

"Resolved, That the selection of delegates to represent the City of Zion in General Conference shall be made so as to give each of the eight local congregations one or more delegates."

The conference was brief and not important.

The First Independence Religio is again holding its sessions at six o'clock on Sunday evening. Election of officers was held September 28, which resulted in the following being chosen: John Lloyd, F. A. Cool, and Clifton Resch sustained as superintendents; Carol Williams, secretary; and Alden Russell, chorister. A very gratifying report for the past year was made. The attendance of the society is increasing each week, and a splendid interest in the study of the Book of Mormon is being manifest. The Rod of Iron, the official organ, is becoming a very popular paper.

A student-faculty reception was held at the Institute Saturday night, October 4. President Frederick M. Smith addressed the students.

Evangelist F. G. Pitt arrived in Independence Wednesday from California where he had been for a brief visit. He is on his way to Kirtland, Ohio, where Sister Pitt has been caring for the temple during her husband's absence. Brother and Sister Pitt expect to start for Florida about the first of next month to spend the winter at Howey, a new city being built in about the center of the State. It is a real beauty spot, surrounded by hills, lakes, and orange groves. He thinks the Saints visiting Florida should try to locate near each other so as to hold services and let their light shine. Those wishing to communicate with Elder Pitt on the matter may address him, until November 1, at Willoughby, Ohio, Route 2; after that date at Howey, Lake County, Florida.

Mrs. Mary Jennette Strauss died at the home of her niece, Mrs. Frank M. Sheehy, October 3. She was born in Ohio and has lived in Independence the past five years. She leaves one brother, Washington Runyan, of Los Angeles, and one sister, Mrs. Sarah Ellison. Funeral services were held at two o'clock Saturday at the home of Mrs. Sheehy. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Second Independence

Sacramental service at eleven o'clock was well attended, and the evening sermon by Bishop B. J. Scott was preceded by a good song service of old gospel hymns very much enjoyed by the congregation. Next Sunday evening Elder J. S. Roth expects to be able to speak at the Second Church.

Sunday morning, October 12, will be promotion day at the Sunday school, and the service will be largely given over to special exercises, the school meeting in a body in the large auditorium.

An accident during an automobile ride Saturday evening has confined the president of the choir, Sister Vera Redfield, to her bed, she being badly bruised, and her hip sprained, and possibly a bone fractured.

Liberty Street

There was a good attendance at the sacramental service Sunday morning. In the evening Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith spoke on revelation of the present day.

The people of this congregation have a full schedule for the winter season. The Temple Builders meet at the church Monday night. The attendance is now so large that they do not have room to meet in any of the homes.

Thursday night, October 2, the young men of Elder J. B. Barrett's Sunday school class met and formed an organization which is to be known as the Sons of Zion. Brother R. W. Wilkie was chosen as leader. They determined upon parliamentary law as their first course of study, using for a text the rules of order put out by the church. Brother Jack Dillon has been secured as coach for their athletic games. For the present they will meet at the home of Roy Settles, 529 South Pleasant. Their regular meetings will be held on Monday night.

Orchestra practice is held Tuesday night under the direction of Brother V. W. Gunsolley, and much is being accomplished under his direction.

Wednesday night group twenty-five meets at the church for prayer service, while the choir practices on Thursday night.

An old fashioned singing school to be held on Friday evening is soon to be started under the direction of Brother Gunsolley, and everyone interested in learning to sing is invited to attend. A great deal of interest is being shown in this new venture, and we believe it will be a big success. Religio, which has been held on Friday nights, has been changed to Sunday night at half past six.

Englewood

There was only a fair attendance at the Sunday morning sacramental service, but a good meeting was enjoyed by those present. Pastor James E. Warne was the Sunday evening speaker.

The evening speakers at the other churches in Zion were: J. J. Teeters at East Independence, Richard Bullard at Enoch Hill, and J. A. Dowker at Walnut Park.

Lamoni Stake Items

LAMONI, IOWA, October 4.—The day is bright and warm, and the people are anticipating the pleasure of a sacred concert by the Lamoni band in Central Park this afternoon. Our band, under the direction of Brother J. H. Anthony, is one of our greatest community assets. Just now it is particularly in the limelight because of an article recently published in the Des Moines Register, Iowa's largest daily, entitled, "A smokeless band." It called attention to the fact that Lamoni has a band of eighteen members, not one of whom is addicted to the use of tobacco. The absence of the pipe and cigaret was the subject of much comment at reunions and county fairs in southern Iowa and northern Missouri where they filled engagements this summer. Our traveling salesmen tell us the band is being talked of throughout the State. This is the kind of advertising we like.

Services last Sunday were as follows: Preaching in the morning by Apostle J. F. Garver on the subject of obedience, quoting from Paul, "I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision." In the afternoon Miss Blanche Edwards addressed a meeting of the Department of Women. Special music consisted of vocal solos by Misses Gertrude White and Dora Dexter and a violin number by Florence Juergens. Elder L. G. Holloway was the speaker of the evening.

Lamoni Stake is progressing nicely with its radio drive. Four of the branches have failed to raise their quota, but others have oversubscribed, and some have not sent in a final report. In Lamoni but a few dollars remain unpledged, and some families who were away on the day of the drive have not been solicited. The full quota will quite likely be raised.

Joseph Foreman, a pioneer citizen of Lamoni, and his son Verdun were baptized by Elder T. J. Bell last week.

The repairs made necessary at the Children's Home by the recent fire have been made, and everything is running smoothly again.

Graceland Chats

October 4.—The college people have swung into outdoor games and indoor studies with keener zest as the weather turned cool. There is nothing that dampens the ardor of college folks for long. Now that about everyone is settled in his chosen society, real work begins in the field of forensics. Last week witnessed the initiation of new members, and Saturday night the programs were put on by representatives from their ranks. Adjustments are being made amicably. While the classrooms where they meet are equal in desirability, there is the matter of the little piano that is shifted from room to room, from week to week, as the societies in turn put on their musical numbers. (Of course there is always music, but only in regular order the piano.) Then there's the matter of the chapel, with opportunity for dramatics; that, too, is a matter of rotation in occupation. Isn't it splendid that when people must live together happily and accommodatingly, they can?

President Briggs returned from a week's absence and found everyone busy and glad to see him.

The Dean of Women, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, returned on Tuesday evening from Independence, Missouri, having spent ten days there assisting a research man, Mr. Swisher of Iowa City, in verifying quotations from old church books and letters in a history of Mormonism in Iowa, the work being put out by the Historical Society of Iowa under direction of Doctor Benjamin F. Shambaugh, written by Heman Hale Smith.

On Thursday the college was visited by state inspector J. R. Sage, of Ames, Iowa, a member of the Intercollegiate Standing Committee of Iowa and Registrar of the Agricultural College at Ames. Mr. Sage and wife were delightful guests of the college during the morning and at a luncheon prepared by the domestic science girls under the supervision of the head of the department, Miss Lulu Porter. Officially Mr. Sage was looking us over in our capacity as a three-year college. In his after-dinner speech he presented the little story of our venture in three-year work. Three-year college was a new term and was not making a strong appeal to the committee, but after Brother Briggs had visited the committee, talking to each in person, they recognized the merit of the proposition, and, while it may have had no precedent, it did not lack necessary virtue and was approved. This visit of inspection completed the conversion. Mr. Sage stated very earnestly that conditions were exactly as represented by Mr. Briggs, and the work being done was superior to that of any college of its size in the State. It was not a flower-decked speech; it was a plain, clean statement of facts from a clean-cut, businesslike state official; but we liked it and pass it on. Although Ames has one of the finest campuses in the State, Mr. and Mrs. Sage were most generous in their expressions of appreciation of our own lovely grounds. Just now the trees are taking on new glory, and the autumn blooms are gorgeous.

Superintendent Bullard is moving flowers from the open to the interior, and window box and pot are full. Soon classrooms will be glorified by the beauty of plant and bloom.

Friday's chapel hour what? An animated talk by Brother Max Carmichael on "College ethics," the relation of teacher and student, or of student and teacher.

A number of visitors have been in our midst, note: Elder Charles Fry, visiting his son Evan; Mrs. Robinson and son Steve, and granddaughter, Mrs. Vern Duskin and husband, who are visiting our commissary man, Brother Wolfe, and wife; and in the dining room the center of interest was a little girl, Dorothy Thompson, with Miss Lurene Laughlin, who came with her grandmother, Mrs. Laughlin, from Oskaloosa, Iowa, to visit Graceland.

Moundsville, West Virginia

September 22.—The Department of Women held their monthly meeting September 11, which was enjoyed by all present. Quite a number of plans were laid for future work. On August 29 they took a basket of flowers to a bereaved family consisting of a mother and seven children, nonmembers. Five of the children go to Sunday school.

The Sunday school has a special program day the second Sunday of each month. On the 14th the theme of "Love" was carried out through the entire program. All enjoyed the services and look forward to next month.

Sister Anna L. Schoenian, branch and district chorister, has been greatly missed recently, as she has been at East Liverpool, Ohio, helping Brother Thomas L. Clark in a series of meetings.

During the Kirtland reunion another was added to our number, the husband of Sister Taylor. Sister Taylor and their three children have belonged for several years, but Brother Taylor did not have a desire to join until he attended reunion.

Brother George F. Criswell, of Columbus, Ohio, has been with us for a few days. He addressed a goodly number on the 21st.

Quite a few of our members have been under the hand of affliction, which we trust will soon be removed.

Brother and Sister J. R. Criswell are rejoicing over the arrival of a little daughter, which was born the morning of September 7.

San Francisco, California

September 23.—We had a good spiritual sacramental meeting on the 7th. Two people spoke in tongues with interpretation, assuring us that our heavenly Father was pleased with our efforts to serve him, and that the nearer we would draw to him the more of his Spirit we would have. He acknowledged us as his people. God is surely mindful of his people out here in the West.

Our missionary, Virgil Etzenhouser, was the speaker in the evening, and on the 14th we were favored with a visit from Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths, who preached for us in the morning. He preached at Oakland Monday evening. We were all glad to meet him again, as it had been years since he was here. He has now gone to the southern part of the State.

Brother Etzenhouser preached for us again on the 21st.

Sister H. B. Simpson has returned from her visit to Zion and surrounding country. At Sunday school and Religio last Sunday she gave us a good report of her visit. She speaks highly of the Saints wherever she meets them and is pleased with the work at Independence and Lamoni. We were glad to hear her report, for all have their eyes Zionward.

Sunday we had a sailor boy among our visitors, Brother H. G. Valentine, of Philadelphia, who is aboard the W. S. S. Colorado.

All church auxiliaries are in good condition, and the general health of the Saints here is good. We are all strong in the faith.

Protracted Missionary Effort at Council Bluffs

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, September 22.—We are at present right in the middle of a missionary effort here and have been going since September 3. We expect to continue indefinitely. Brother T. W. Williams and I began these meetings in the big district tent, and despite a good deal of rainy and cold weather the crowds have outnumbered our fondest hopes. The tent has been more than full nearly every evening that the weather has been at all favorable. Sunday evening, September 7, the crowd reached a total of more than five hundred people, and during the week several evenings found the tent too small.

Sunday, the 14th, the crowd reached such proportions that we held two services. The Riverside Chapel is right by the side of the tent, so while Brother Williams preached in the tent I used his stereopticon in the chapel, showing slides of the "Passion play." The tent and the chapel were both filled to capacity, and then some people were compelled to stand outside.

Yesterday the wind blew the tent down in the morning, and we were compelled to seek other quarters for the afternoon meeting. The pastor of the Riverside Mission, Brother M. A. Smith, got busy and secured the use of the Dodge Memorial Chapel just a block from our tent and the chapel.

Immediately after the afternoon service the Saints got busy and sewed up the many torn places in the tent, and it was again ready for evening services. The crowd that night was beyond the seating capacity of the tent.

Two have been baptized, and two more are to be baptized to-day. Others are coming, and the work is just nicely begun. I have done but little preaching, and the credit for the success of the meetings so far belongs to Brother Williams. His pleasant manner and manifest sincerity would break down any fence of prejudice that might be built. His knowledge of the work is displayed in every word which his magnetic voice drives into the listening ears of the crowd that come to hear. The big question before the church is forgotten during these meetings, and we are affirming the principles of the gospel and pleading for proper fruitage in the lives of the members.

Brother Williams has been happy to visit the homes of so many old acquaintances and meet again the friends he has not seen for many years. He spoke at Crescent Sunday at three o'clock, the crowd being gathered by telephone calls during the noon hour. I was busy at the same time in the Dodge Memorial Chapel.

Everyone is happy, and the interest is increasing. One unique feature of these meetings is that not one cent has been spent for advertising in any way. Not a bill or tract has been used so far, and no space hired in the newspapers. It is a feast free to all, and the hungry are coming to be filled. May God bless all his people.

CHARLES F. PUTNAM.

Good Conference; New Officers; New Library

BRADNER, OHIO, September 30.—Bradner Saints were unable to dedicate their church on September 7 as they had planned, but they expect to do so in the near future.

Conference convened here September 6 and 7 and was largely attended. Among the visitors were Elder O. J. Hawn, wife and daughter Ina, of Indianapolis, Indiana. We had the pleasure of listening to several very edifying sermons by Brother Hawn at that time. New officers were elected, when Franklin Slye of this place was chosen district president. Brother Slye has a pleasing personality; is a tireless and zealous worker. Our prayers and good will go with him in his work.

Of our retiring president, Jesse Hardin, of Uniopolis, Ohio, enough cannot be said. For nine years he has labored among us and has given his all for the good of the district. He is held in high esteem by all with whom he was associated. It can be said of him that he was true to his convictions and a friend to all. May the Lord continue to bless him is our prayer.

The Department of Women has decided to install a library for the benefit of our young people and children in the church. A committee has been appointed to make necessary arrangements, and work will begin at once. None but the best books will be placed on the shelves. The women have the cooperation of the entire branch and hope the library will be a decided success.

The members of this branch continue to labor together in perfect unison, and we feel that God is with us at all times. By the help of Him who reigns supreme, we hope to accomplish great things for the church and the gospel. May the Lord guide us all at all times and in all places.

Groton, Connecticut

September 29.—A beautiful baptismal service was conducted at the Thames River Sunday morning, September 7, where two girls, Elsie V. and Hazel M. Whipple, also Homer H. Whipple, were baptized. Elder Alma T. Whipple, pastor, officiated. Quite a large gathering of Saints was present to witness the impressive ordinance.

District Missionary Orval L. Thompson has been holding a series of meetings at the home of Brother David G. Tourtellot. Services were conducted nearly every evening for about one week and a half. An interest was manifest not only by Saints but by a goodly number of nonmembers. Reverend Mr. Collins, a Baptist minister of Flanders, Connecticut, attended several times. Brother and Sister Hill and family, of Wallingford, Connecticut, were present for a Sunday morning preaching service. They came from a distance of about sixty miles. The sermons were inspiring and unusual, from the point of enthusing one not only to aspire but to do. Brother Thompson seemed greatly blessed by the Spirit in his worthy efforts.

A farewell party was given in his honor Friday evening, September 26, following the preaching service. Cake and ice cream were served, after which there was an auction of candy and cakes. Brother Thompson is loved by the Saints of New London Branch, and his gentle frankness and sincerity have won him a warm place in their hearts. The Saints look forward to the time Elder Thompson will be here again.

Sister Blanche Lanman, of Boston Branch, has been visiting here. Her coming is always welcome.

Bishop Arthur B. Phillips is expected here on his way back to Missouri.

Chatham District Conference

The annual conference of the Chatham District met at Sarnia Saturday, September 27. The opening session was a business meeting which convened at ten o'clock. At this time the regular routine business of reading reports, etc., was had, also the organization of the conference. District President R. T. Brown and his counselors, Stewart Lamont and Duncan Clatworthy, were chosen to preside, with power to choose assistants.

At two o'clock another business session was held, at which time the reading of reports was concluded and officers for the coming year were elected. One change was made in the district executive when Elder R. H. Jones was elected superintendent of Sunday school in place of Brother Duncan Clatworthy, who expressed the desire to be relieved of the responsibility after having it for several years.

The business of the conference was completed Saturday evening, and also time was given for two very interesting talks, one by Brother Clatworthy, retiring Sunday school superintendent, and one by Brother Ezra Miffin, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

Sunday morning was rather gloomy from the viewpoint of the weather, but for the Saints attending conference it commenced with a prayer and sacramental service that lasted until eleven. During this meeting the Spirit of God was the prevailing power, all feeling its presence.

At eleven o'clock Bishop J. C. Dent occupied and gave us many beautiful lessons in harmony with his particular calling. He gave us the privilege of asking questions, and many things of interest were made plain.

In the afternoon at half past two Elder J. R. Grice of Michigan occupied and in his pleasing and forceful way burned the truth into the hearts of his auditors. At this hour B. H. Doty, missionary for Chatham District, was asked to go and preach to the Chippewa Indians on their reserve. He did so, and those who accompanied him reported that the power of God was there and the Indians seemed to drink it in. He spoke to them from the Bible and Book of Mormon.

At seven o'clock Elder Doty occupied and was blessed by God in delivering his message to the Saints.

Visiting members of the missionary force were Elders William Grice, William Davis, and J. R. Grice. Many other visitors from Michigan were present and found the same welcome they always do in Canada. The line here between the United States and Canada is only imaginary, as far as brotherly love is concerned. Everyone present seemed satisfied as to the result of conference and expressed a desire to continue.

B. H. DOTY.

Persia, Iowa

September 25.—During the month of August the Persia Branch had no services on two Sundays, so those who desired could attend the reunions. Not many were able to camp, but a few went for Sundays. Those who attended seem to think that the reunions are beneficial to all, and many find it convenient to make a short visit among church members and friends, and attend a series of gospel sermons at the same time. They have the best of preachers in the church, and the best is never too good.

The reunions for this year are past, and those who could attend received encouragement and are thankful they live in reunion neighborhoods.

Let us vote for the reunions.

Pueblo, Colorado

September 25.—Coloradoans are enjoying the State Fair at Pueblo this week. The weather has been ideal for this occasion, as there is plenty of sunshine and very little wind. The exhibits of farm products and stock are very fine.

The Pueblo Saints are back at work endeavoring to uphold the banner of King Emanuel with renewed enthusiasm since their meeting with other Saints at the Colorado Springs reunion.

During the summer, evening services were held in the various parks of the city. The attendance was good. We are now back in the hall and have resumed our Sunday evening Religio study and program, which is greatly enjoyed by all.

Quite a few nonmembers have been coming out, and they are interested. There have been two baptisms in the past month, and we are looking for others to surrender.

Prayer meetings are held at the homes of the Saints, and they are uplifting and helpful. Elder Petre stopped over on his way to the western coast and attended prayer meeting. He gave some fine counsel and many evidences of his faith in a living God.

Stresses Necessity of Increased Missionary Activity

OREGON CITY, OREGON, September 21.—The last time the Saints heard of me I was in Oroville, Nevada, where my homestead is, but on account of dry weather in the West we left Nevada for a while. In harmony with the wishes of Brother Walter Barker, I am looking after the mission work here.

We are busy and happy. I work week days, and preach on the streets Saturday nights and at three o'clock Sunday afternoons. A good many of the Saints go with me and sing the songs of Zion; then when the crowd gathers preaching begins. We are having good success.

My first preaching was in San Francisco in 1906, with Brothers J. A. Anthony and L. Dagner. We held services on the streets. I cannot go to church every Sunday with only a few Saints and let the thousands walk the streets and listen to "lo here's and lo there's." We as a church ought to wake up. When I think of so many branches with many of the priesthood idle, only preaching once in a while to a few Saints, maybe not one nonmember, I wonder what the Lord thinks of it.

Let us pray that the Lord will some way awaken his people to a sense of the missionary need in the church, so they will get busy. This work is true, we know, so let us ask ourselves what Jesus would do if he were in our place.

J. F. WILES.

Fairview, Montana

September 19.—One of the charter members of the Fairview Branch, Elder B. D. Stratton of South Dakota occupied the pulpit here September 14. He is the only officer of the church to visit here in nearly a year. The branch was glad to receive the message of a former resident, and to see that years of isolation had not prevented spiritual growth.

Only a few words by local officers were needed to arouse interest in the enlarged radio station at Independence, and the branch's quota was soon raised, though none have radio outfits.

PERSISTENT ERROR IN ACCOUNTS OF JOSEPH AND HYRUM SMITH

Driven Out of Ohio

Five years later he and his followers were driven out of Kirtland, and most of them went to Missouri, but Smith and some of his people came to Hancock County and founded the city of Nauvoo, which was incorporated in 1840. Here he began the next year to erect a wonderful temple out of pure white marble, but again he aroused a feeling of antagonism against himself and his teachings but was by this time wielding considerable political power.

He began to teach polygamy in a way that aroused considerable feeling and an editor came out in his paper quite strongly against it as his own wife, it is said, was greatly desired by Smith. One dark night the printing press was completely destroyed, type being scattered all through the city and surrounding country. For years after, school children would gather up pieces of type from the destruction of this plant.

Mormon Leaders Arrested

Joseph Smith and his brother, Hyrum, and others of his followers, were mentioned in this affair but no arrests were made, yet public feeling ran so high that Joseph Smith and some of his followers were induced in the early summer of 1844 to surrender themselves, under promise of protection and a fair trial. They were taken to Carthage, the county seat, and all, with the exception of Joseph Smith and his brother, Hyrum, were discharged, under promise to appear in court, when called. The Smiths were held under a new charge of treason and placed in jail and so intense was the feeling against the Mormons that Governor Ford, not only sent several companies of the state militia, but came himself.

After the arrest most of the militia disbanded, and Governor Ford left, leaving only one company and of this company only eight men guarded the jail. The Smiths were not behind the bars, the cells being in the north end of the second story, but in the large front room in the south end of the same story.

Smith Killed by Mob

In the evening of Sunday, June 27, a mob of one hundred fifty men, thoroughly disguised, came from outside of Carthage, surrounded the jail, overpowered the guard, which is said to have made little resistance, and shot both Joseph and Hyrum Smith and wounded a friend who was with them.

Joseph came to the east window, which is plainly seen in the picture, and tried to talk to the mob, and as he was shot, fell from the window to the ground below. There are blood stains on the floor of the room and bullet holes in the door on the west side of the room, leading into the hall, that can be seen after all these years.

The death of Joseph Smith in this way undoubtedly won for him the reputation of martyr and gave a new impulse to his teachings.

Brigham Young, an apostle, announced himself the leader and took charge of affairs, but the feeling of antagonism increased so rapidly and ran so high that in 1847 Brigham Young and his followers crossed the Mississippi River and after many journeyings and intense suffering located in Utah.

Note the statement that by the aid of Martin Harris and Oliver Cowdery Joseph Smith prepared the Book of Mormon and published the same in 1810. This would make this remarkable man a publisher at five years of age or less, as he was born December 23, 1805, as noted in the preceding paragraph of the article. The date of publication is known to be the early part of the year 1830.

Several errors of like magnitude are woven into the narrative, but we will call attention to but one, and this is important. The article says he began to teach polygamy and relates circumstances which are said to have occurred in connection with this development.

Just why reputable publishers will permit the repetition of the completely and often refuted statement that Joseph Smith taught polygamy we cannot understand. The courts of the land have found it to be untrue; there has never been produced any children or child which claims to be his by a polygamous wife, though his wife, Emma, gave birth to several children, and surely if he had been guilty of this heinous crime his wife would have known something of it, but her testimony is direct and conclusive that she was his one and only wife.

It is, however, a happy fact that such grievously erroneous writings are of much less frequent publication than they were a few years since, and Saints of the Reorganization may see the results of their examples and their teachings by precept in the tone of the articles produced from time to time.

K F I X Now on 268 Meters

The Radio Department has just received a letter from the radio supervisor of the ninth district authorizing an increase of wave length for our broadcasting station from 240 to 268 meters. This will enable a great many people to hear K F I X who have been unable to tune down to the extremely low wave length used during the past year.

Owners of neutrodyne receiving sets with dials graduated to 100 degrees will find K F I X at dial settings of approximately 15. Users of other types of receiving sets will pick up K F I X on nearly the same adjustment as that employed for K F N F, the Henry Field Seed Company, at Shenandoah, Iowa, which has a wave length of 266 meters.

The Radio Department will greatly appreciate letters from all reading this article. Please give a comparative report of reception on the new wave length and the old wave length. Also state the type of receiving set being used. Communications should be addressed to K F I X, Independence, Missouri.

 2.30 p. m. .... Prayer Service
 7.00 p. m. .... Song Service
 7.30 p. m. .... Preaching

We believe this rally day gathering will be one of the most inspiring meetings in the history of Denver, and the branch extends a warm invitation to every Saint in the district to come and enjoy it with them.

E. J. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

One-Day Meeting

The Garafraxa Branch, Owen Sound District, will hold their new church opening at Grand Valley, Ontario, Sunday, October 19. Prayer service at 9 a. m., preaching at 11, 2, and 7. Prominent speakers will be present. Mary Thompson, secretary.

Young People's Convention

To the Young People of Michigan: The annual young people's convention of Michigan, at Flint High School, Second and Crapo Streets, October 25, 26. An interesting program has been arranged, and all are invited. Visitors will be cared for in the homes as far as possible, and the hotels are cooperating with reduced rates for Saturday and Sunday nights. Two study periods and lecture will be held Saturday morning and afternoon, with musical program in the evening. Sunday morning will be prayer service and junior church, and preaching afternoon and evening. Speakers will be Apostles J. A. Gillen and F. Henry Edwards, and Bishop F. B. Blair, of Kansas City. Take second Delaware car to Crapo Street. Parking space is arranged for those driving cars. Everyone come. The weather will be fine. M. W. Liston, publicity manager.

Southern Ohio District

To the Officers and Members of the Southern Ohio District: At the conference of the district held with Second Columbus Branch September 27 and 28 my appointment as district president was ratified, and Floyd Rockwell, former district president, was chosen one of the vice presidents. We, with Gard Kirkendall, the other vice president, hope to be able to offer efficient service to the district. We trust departmental heads will continue the good work they have accomplished and that with the same spirit of cooperation the work in the district may go forward. Let all holding the priesthood give their best service in further preparation and in discharge of

Conference Minutes

WEST VIRGINIA.—At Jerome Park, Morgantown, September 5 to 7. Conference convened in Sunday school convention Friday at 10 a. m., with Thomas Newton in charge. Officers' and financial reports given; statistical reports as follows: Clarksburg, 120; Parkersburg, 62; Morgantown, 79; Harmony, 41; Mount Zion, 24; Nonresident, 23. Department of Women occupied Friday afternoon in charge of District Superintendent May R. Griffin. Conference business session convened Saturday at 10 a. m. with Thomas Newton in charge, assisted by H. G. Johnson and Baronet Beall. Financial report of Bishop's Agent Harry B. Smith, from August 1, 1923, to August 1, 1924, showed receipts of $1,477.80, an increase of ten per cent over previous year. Per capita average for district, $4.56. Officers elected: Thomas Newton, president; H. G. Johnson and C. W. Germon, counselors; Mabel Smith, secretary-treasurer; Harry B. Smith, Bishop's agent; May R. Griffin, superintendent of Department of Women, also district publicity agent; Harry B. Smith, Sunday school superintendent. It was adopted that district expense for one year be met by a collection to be taken up by each branch the second Sunday of the second month of each quarter. Meals served at the church free of charge. Speakers during the conference were E. D. Finken, James McConaughy, and Brother Clarke, missionaries. Ordinations: Harry Givens and Sam M. Givens to office of elder. Time and place of next conference left to district presidency. Prayer meeting Sunday morning 9.30. T. L. Clarke was the afternoon speaker and James McConaughy the evening speaker. A vote of thanks was extended to the Saints at Morgantown for their hospitality during the conference. Mabel L. Smith, secretary.

SEATTLE AND BRITISH COLUMBIA.—At Silver Lake, Washington, on the reunion grounds, with District President C. E. Jones and Secretary F. W. Holman in the stand, Apostle R. S. ## Radio Flashes

Bainbridge, Georgia.—K F I X was heard by me September 25 between 9.30 and 9.45 p. m. Your program, especially the orchestra, was appreciated, and I wish to thank the orchestra leader very much. Have heard you often. Am using a five-tube Fada neutrodyne.—M. A. Ehrlich, M. D.

Portsmouth, Virginia.—Heard your station last night, first time since last winter. The health talk was good, and the musical program came in clear. Hope to hear from you again.—G. S. Long.

Thurman, Iowa.—Am enjoying the program very much this evening; it is coming in quite clear and loud; music fine. I especially enjoyed the talk of Mr. William Southern, jr., on the newspaper business in small towns.—Mark Leeka.

Zion, Illinois.—Tuned in your station for the first time tonight. It came in very good and clear on horn. I heard the last two numbers on the program. The solo, "The two roses," was especially good. I heard you announce your schedule and will listen for you again. Your announcer easily understood.—E. H. Sourby.

Chatham, Ontario.—I was visiting with a friend of mine in London, Ontario, Sunday evening, September 14, and heard Brother Gillen's fine sermon from K F I X. It is a fine feeling to have an outsider listen to one of our sermons over the radio who would never enter a church door.—(Brother) Ivan N. Pritchard.

Kaw City, Oklahoma.—I was in a drug store here to-night installing a new cash register. Had just finished and walked to the rear of the store to see what I could get on the radio. The first place I got I heard a voice that sounded familiar, but it was several minutes before I could place it. . . . My belief was confirmed by the announcer, saying it was William Southern, jr., of Independence, talking from K F I X. . . . Your talk, as well as the balance of the program, came through fine, and I enjoyed it very much.—George B. Foster, jr. (From a letter to Mr. Southern.)

Burlington, North Dakota.—We have had the satisfaction of hearing the services in the evening from both the church and the Campus. They usually come very fine, and we recognize the familiar voices of those we know personally. Elder Tordoff's discourse last night was a fine, fearless presentation of the gospel message sent out in positive form. The prayers by Elder J. W. Peterson, who has been often in our home, seemed good to hear, and when the hymn, number 60, was sung, it rolled in like an angel choir, bringing a spiritual blessing with it. We love to hear the old familiar songs sung by our people. Nowhere else do they seem to have the same spiritual qualities. Sister Burgess is always good, and her voice comes in fine over the radio. With best wishes, Brother and Sister M. D. Graham.

suing year: C. E. Jones, president; I. S. McMullen, vice president; F. W. Holman, secretary; H. A. Sprague, treasurer; Mrs. D. S. McDole, member library board; H. A. Sprague, chorister, with Melva Ward, assistant; Irene Emslie, member auditing board for three-year term. Petition from Gray's Harbor Saints, residing in both Hoquiam and Aberdeen, was presented asking for branch organization, signed by 23 names. Petition granted. Time for next year's reunion was set in August, according to district by-laws, exact date to be decided by district officers and general reunion committee. Place will be decided by executive committee. February conference will be held at Centralia. Arrangements were made for the ordination of Paul E. Fishel to office of priest and A. L. Ward, deacon, both of Gray's Harbor. Arrangements were made for purchase of a grove of five acres, fronting the lake, adjoining grounds occupied for $4,000, $1,000 down and $600 a year. Reunion committee empowered to establish ways and means of raising funds. Wilford W. Powers, of Seattle, appointed by secretary as permanent assistant. Appointment ratified by the conference. Frederick W. Holman, secretary, 406 North Thirty-sixth Street, Seattle, Washington.

Our Missionaries in Norway

In the current number of Zion's Ensign there is a somewhat lengthy letter from the pen of E. Y. Hunker in which he gives a detailed account of some activities in the Scandinavian mission.

There are interesting features incorporated in this letter from Brother Hunker. He states that in Christiania a most interesting opportunity presents itself for the study and investigation of different religious beliefs, and calls particular attention to the work of an Englishman by the name of Barrat, who has become enamoured of the Pentecostal doctrine and is now wielding a strong influence in the capital city of Norway. His estimate of the strength of this man's work is very high, placing him second only to the Lutheran faith and very strong with his following. He has the largest and finest assembly hall in Christiania and pursues the usual methods, and, quoting the words of Brother Hunker, they "are a veritable Babel and confusion of noises. According to the Scriptures, their God is not the same God that Paul admonished all people to worship, for Paul stated that 'God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints.'"

But the most interesting and confirming part of the letter from Brother Hunker is the account of his own extremities and how the Spirit of God worked with him and enabled him to get great satisfaction out of the presentation of the word in his public effort. Quoting his words again:

The second meeting was again held in the home. This time I had tried to think all day preceding the service about what I should try to preach, but my mind seemed to be clouded, and I felt ill at ease. To make matters worse, just before time to begin the meeting a young man who is studying and preparing for the Methodist ministry came. If ever a human being felt the need of divine assistance, I felt it then. A dread surged over my entire being and I really shook from fear, I felt so little and unfit to meet the needs of the hour.

While those present were singing the opening songs, a scripture flashed into my mind as a beginning point, but aside from this I did not know what to look for. At the appointed time I began to speak, still fearful, but by using the scripture presented to me I found a plan immediately began to unfold for my mind. All fear suddenly left me, and instead I felt the warm power and influence of God's Holy Spirit fill my being. From that time until the end of the service the whole was like a trance. I felt directed to speak on the foundation of the gospel, and although I have many times used this same subject and many times enjoyed good liberty, never have I experienced the same degree of light and liberty that I did that evening. Scripture after scripture was presented to me in a way that proved each point, as well as the fact that "the word of God is sharper than any two-edged sword."

All present felt the power of God. One young man who had his little son on his lap had to leave during the service and take his son home, which had to be accomplished by means of a motor boat. But before the service was over, he was back again, listening and eager for more. He said afterwards that each scripture used was like driving a nail through a board and then clinching it on the other side.

Another young man present, who had never been interested in religion before and who at the beginning sat in his chair and looked at the floor because of some prejudice in his heart, became interested. After that evening he was present at all the services and took part in our discussions and conversations. He began reading our literature and investigating our work. He lives in Christiania, and on my way home I called on him and found him still interested and anxious to learn all he can regarding our faith.

The young Methodist minister had nothing to say to me afterwards against the sermon. What he thought of it is a matter of conjecture, but at least he heard the principles of the gospel for one time, if he never hears them again. This experience has been one of the bright spots in my life, and the glory and praise belong to God who gave the blessing.

The remaining portions of the letter are interesting indeed, one of which tells of the baptism of four precious souls, whom he describes as follows:

First came a young boy, aged fifteen, following in the steps of our Savior. The second, a fine young lad of seventeen years, willing to forsake the pleasures of the world and face the sneers and scoffs of his former comrades, was obedient to the command. The third, a young lady aged twenty-four, was buried with Christ in baptism and arose to walk in newness of life. The last, a young man thirty-five years old, then came forward, rejoicing in the privilege to obey the Christ.

We surely should be interested in the closing paragraphs of this letter, and Saints should observe the request he makes and support these missionaries, not alone by tithes and offerings paid in according to the law that they might not be stinted in the future as they are at present, but with our uttered prayers to God, that they may have the endowment for which they pray.

Religious prejudice confronts us on the one hand, and disregard for God and his work faces us on the other. People who otherwise seem to be good and honorable are cold when it comes to the breaking away from old religious traditions. The propaganda of the "Reds" in Russia has gained a strong foothold in this land. With their theories regarding politics, their teachings about religion and against God, and their methods to win the young people, they are doing much harm in the circles of the younger generation.

Brother Muceus has now left us, and we feel the loss keenly. He was an older and experienced man, acquainted with the language and customs of the people. We as younger men and unable to use the language fluently, feel the need of the Spirit of God to aid us in this field. I ask the Saints, then, to remember us in mighty prayer to God. It is our desire to efficiently and properly carry on the work intrusted to our care. Our prayers are ever for the unity of the children of God, the preaching of the gospel for all the world, and the final and triumphant redemption of Zion.

Graceland Approved as School for Immigrant Students

A letter comes from President George N. Briggs bearing the intelligence that application had been made by the college authorities for approval as a school for immigrant students under the Immigration Act of 1924, for the benefit of our missionaries abroad and for other prospective students in foreign countries.

The final reply of the Secretary of Labor is contained in the letter of that officer under date of August 25, which we produce herewith. This will solve some of the difficulties experienced by foreign students who wish to enter Graceland College, but have been debarred because of immigration restrictions. The letter follows:

MR. G. N. BRIGGS, PRESIDENT,
Graceland College,
Lamoni, Iowa.

Dear Sir: It gives me pleasure to advise you that your institution has been duly approved by the Secretary of Labor as a school for immigrant students under the Immigration Act of 1924. The Department of State has been notified of this action for the information of American consular officers, who will then be in a position to consider applications for the required non quota student visas.

There are inclosed herewith several copies of a bureau circular explaining the status of students under the act referred to, which may be of value to you in communicating with applicants. You will note that the matter of issuing visas is entirely in the hands of American consuls. In other words, this department and bureau have no part in the procedure after a school is approved until applicants for admission as students reach a United States port.

It is unnecessary to communicate with the bureau relative to the expected arrival of individual students. However, it probably would be helpful in many cases if the immigration officer in charge at the port of arrival could be informed as to the date and ship on which students are expected to come, together with any evidence which may be available showing that such persons have definitely arranged to enter the school concerned.

Very truly yours,

W. W. HUSBAND,
Commissioner General.

Encouraging Outlook for New Radio

The Radio Committee reports total cash receipts at this writing (October 13) of $6,500. Forty-four districts have been heard from, leaving about thirty districts and stakes yet to report. This outlook should furnish a stimulus for the radio workers and all who are helping to make the campaign a success.

Ten thousand dollars is the minimum amount necessary for the erection of a 1000-watt station. A few thousand dollars more would permit further refinements of the broadcasting equipment—a better building, stronger, better appearing towers, finer appointments for the radio studio and reception room—in short, would greatly increase the over-all efficiency and usefulness of the new church broadcasting station.

The requirements for a Class B broadcasting license are very exacting, and to pass the thorough inspection we must have a station first class in every respect. A Class B license would permit us to use a higher wave-length which would be within the range of every type of receiving set.

As pioneers in radio broadcasting, should we be content with anything but a first-class station? High power is desirable and necessary for our purposes, but refinements, too, are essential.

With the excellent beginning we have made in the drive for a 1000-watt station, all should be encouraged to add their help and put this project over the top at the earliest possible date. Delay in beginning construction of the new radiocaster is serious, because we are losing out on the best months of the year for broadcasting.

Why not everyone determine right now to swell the radio fund to $15,000? The builders of the new station will show real results for every penny spent. Mail a check now to Radio K F I X, Independence, Missouri.

The following comes to us by telegraph from Flint, Michigan: "Detroit district young people's campaign launched to-day, October 12, with good crowd attending at each place, with Edwards at Central Church in Detroit, F. B. Blair at Pontiac, and J. A. Gillen at Flint. Old and young working together for success, with everyone looking forward to state convention. Work well organized; expect excellent results."

Appeal for World Peace

Under this heading, the World Peace Mission is sending out copies of an article intended to stimulate thoughtful effort in the direction of abandoning the settlement of disputes by means of war. Besides the signatures of the officers of the Council of the World Peace Mission, there are appended the names of fifty leading citizens, mostly members of college faculties, who indorse the movement.

Accompanying this signed document is an article by John Fredstrom on "Internationalism and Christianity," and we are also reproducing this. We call attention to this succinct paragraph from the latter document:

Christ taught us to pray: "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." But the kingdom of God cannot be realized on earth until the peoples of the earth have been taught to deal in the spirit of Christ one with another. Under prevailing political and religious conditions a most vigorous and highly systematized campaign of education in all lands is called for to bring about in actuality the brotherhood of man.

It is manifestly the duty of Christian peoples to do what they can to overcome hatred, to plant love and understanding, and thus direct their effort in harmony with their convictions of justice and righteousness. If the prophecies must be fulfilled and war must come again to the world, bringing untold horror and grief and destruction, let not Latter Day Saints be parties to the condition. We cannot afford to be found among the lukewarm in striving to abandon war, for the reason that we believe it must come in order to fulfill prophetic scriptural utterances. It is also prophesied that in the last days "false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall show signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect." Yet we are always found combating the work of these frauds and falsifiers that we may not be responsible for their deeds.

We find much to commend in the appended quoted documents:

Appeal for World Peace

The time has now come when powerful efforts must be made to create a new spirit in world affairs. If selfishness and hate are to continue to be the ruling passions of nations, the human race is irredeemably doomed to a greater disaster than that of 1914. But such folly must not be again. The dominant perils of earth must be conquered by Christian love and the divine power of truth. This can be brought about only by an effective campaign of enlightenment carried on systematically among all the nations of the world. A World Peace Mission is imperative. Noble, clear-visioned champions of peace must show the peoples how a system of international justice is to be put into practice.

The time to begin this work is now. Now, if ever, nationalism and chauvinism can be superseded by a sound world conception making for a union of all peoples in a common world parliament.

For the reasons stated the World Peace Mission appeals to all noble-minded men and women possessed of a desire to go to other countries as missionaries for world peace to unite with this movement by applying at once to The World Peace Bureau, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Applications should be in by the 1st of November, each applicant giving age, occupation, state of health, education, and language used, besides English. In addition, send certificate by the governor or other higher official as to qualifications as speaker, writer, or organizer.

The plan contemplates that every peace missionary shall, within the field of his or her activity, by public addresses, published articles, and pamphlets, in a forceful and convincing manner show up militarism as an inefficient and antiquated system, disastrous in its consequences, therefore to be supplanted by an international system of jurisdiction.

A truly civilized world order can be evolved only by an intensive campaign of education raising the intelligence and moral conceptions of nations step by step. The World Peace Mission must teach men to think soundly before they can act nobly. From a sense of brotherhood and unity of interests will grow other human virtues, essential to the establishment of a new world order, in keeping with high culture and true civilization.

Very respectfully,

REV. E. J. WERNER, D. D.

Internationalism and Christianity

The enormous development of trade and intercourse between the peoples of the world during the past century has made nations dependent on one another to a very great degree. The time is therefore ripe for undertaking, as a common task, not by isolated efforts, the creation of a new and truer civilization. Old dogmas and prejudices, the baneful outgrowth of ignorance and selfishness, must yield to a higher conception of the world and the interests of humanity.

The foundation for that judicial order which is destined to unite men into a brotherhood of international cooperation was laid by the Great Master of Nazareth two thousand years ago. He was called the Savior of the world. In his teachings, a religion of wonderful ethical beauty, we not only find the wisest laws of conduct, based on divine love supreme, but we discern therein the ground plan for a civilization that shall make for human happiness and welfare.

Holy Writ tells us that when the Lord came in the flesh, under the simplest circumstances, the angels sang this song in the hearing of the Bethlehem shepherds:

"Glory to God in the highest,
And on earth peace and good will to men."

No matter how we interpret this glorious hymn from the realms above, it remains a prophecy of a new world order to be established along lines of true Christian doctrine.

On one occasion Jesus said that he was come to kindle a fire on earth, and that he wished it were already burning. What was the fire Christ had in mind? We may be sure that he meant the fire of love, divine truth, and eternal righteousness, destined to destroy all evil and untruth in the world. The great Nazarene proclaimed powerfully, especially in the Sermon on the Mount, that lies and all manner of evil shall be overcome by the power of truth and Chris-

Where Is the Danger?

BY E. R. DAVIS

From what we read from some of the articles appearing in the SAINTS' HERALD of late, one might be lead to believe that a radical change in church government is about to be forced upon the people, in which their rights are to be jeopardized; that the law of "common consent" is about to be set aside and the church imposed upon by a sort of a domineering leadership.

There seems to be grave fear on the part of some that the "Restoration" clock is about to be turned back to the "third hour" government of the rod, or to a more recent departure to a government of "living oracles," rather than adhering to the law as established by God and contained in the written word.

Some would lead us to believe that a portion of the church had lost sight of the fact that Christ was and still is the central figure in the gospel economy, and that their allegiance is being turned to human leadership rather than to the great leader, "Christ."

We are led to believe that there is great need for the people to be awakened to the fact that there is danger of their "gliding along easily and dreamily without knowing just where they are, what they are doing, or where they are going," and that radical changes in church government which take away from the rights of people and increase the power of officials over them are about to be suddenly forced upon us. That the term common consent is about to lose its original meaning, and is to be understood to mean that the people are to blindly assent to that which is proposed by some one else; and that we are about to suffer a sort of a dominance like unto that exercised by a king.

We are warned that we are about to step back into methods that were in vogue during the Dark Ages.

The civil law in our day and the civil law in the days of Nephite history are used as parables as to what should govern in church matters.

We are warned that a peculiar kind of monster called "Supreme Directional Control" is about to appear and pounce upon and devour the rights, liberties, and freedom of the people.

All the above advice is good and wholesome, were it not for the fact that it is made to appear that such a condition as is portrayed in the above thoughts is about to be fastened upon the people as a yoke of bondage. But where is the evidence of this greatly portrayed danger?

Let us examine carefully the following definition of "supreme directional control":

In the church, as in all organizations where a form of efficient government is needed, there seems to have been provision made in the law for the fine balance had when the three divisions into legislative, judicial, and executive departments are recognized and maintained.

Are we not willing to admit that efficient government is needed in the church? Are we not agreed that the law provides for such a fine balance as is mentioned above?

For efficiency of administration to be had, supreme directional control must lodge somewhere.

Are we going to take the position that we can have efficiency of administration without the lodging of supreme directional control somewhere?

Our law clearly places this with the Presidency, as the joint council has expressed.

Are we going to contend that the law does not place this right with the Presidency?

And this directional control is for the purpose of carrying out the policies which have been determined by prophetic instruction with legislative approval and legislative enactments in harmony with constitutional law and divine command.

If this directional control is for the purpose of carrying out the policies which have been determined by prophetic instruction with legislative approval in harmony with constitutional law and divine command, why should we fear it?

It is of course not presumed or assumed that supreme directional control shall be exerted outside the purposes of the church as determined by the law and the objective of endeavor. That is to say, the directional control shall be in harmony with law and General Conference enactment based on the constitutional law, but in the executive line shall be supreme.

Is the above in respect to law and order, and the right of the people, or in opposition to such? Does it in any way jeopardize the rights of the people, set aside the right of common consent through General Conference enactment, or in any way do injustice to the constitutional law of the church?

A Moses Man

The question has been asked: "Is there a man of Moses proportions among us?" Let us examine the written word briefly:

And in a day when the children of men shall esteem my words as naught, and take many of them from the book which you shall write, behold I will raise up another like unto you. . . . —Doctrine and Covenants 22: 24.

Therefore I will raise up unto my people a man, who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel.—Doctrine and Covenants 100: 3.

From the above should we gather that there would be those in the last days that would be possessed of at least some Moses proportions?

It has been intimated that there might be other means whereby God may communicate to the church by way of revelation and law, other than through the president of the high priesthood. There may be such provision, but first let us give due consideration to the following:

But, behold, verily, verily I say unto thee, No one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church excepting my servant Joseph Smith, jr., for he receiveth them even as Moses; and thou shalt be obedient unto the things which I shall give unto him, even as Aaron, to declare faithfully the commandments and revelations, with power and authority unto the church. And if thou art led at any time by the Comforter to speak or teach, or at all times by way of commandment unto the church, thou mayest do it. But thou shalt not write by way of commandment, but by wisdom; and thou shalt not command him who is at thy head, and at the head of the church, for I have given him the keys of the mysteries and the revelations, which are sealed, until I shall appoint unto them another in his stead.—Doctrine and Covenants 27: 2.

Has the Lord appointed another in his stead? Or should we look to some other source for revelation to the church?

He, Being Dead, Yet Speaketh

BY JOSEPH LUFF

Ezekiel, the ancient prophet, after fortelling a number of events, wound up his forecast with these words: "And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come,) then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them."—Ezekiel 33: 33.

The writer hereof was struck with the significance of the vindication of this while reading recently some of the writings of our late lamented president of the Reorganization. We could not, at the time his pen was busy writing some things, discern the wisdom or necessity for them, so far as their application to conditions then existing among us were concerned. But the lapse of years has furnished the necessary evidence of their prophetic merit, though they were not written as prophecy. As is stated in Psalms 102: 18, they were "written for the generation to come." The following, which is copied verbatim and entire from the magazine number of the HERALD for 1905, page 266, is in evidence. If the prophet's eye had been fixed on the year 1924, he could not have written words more directly applicable in the way of counsel and warning to help settle our contentions. Only in this way is he yet among us. "He, being dead, yet speaketh."

Safeguards in Church Government. Are the People Safe?

The one thing most to be feared in a kingly government is kingcraft; in an ecclesiastical government is priestcraft.

In a kingly government, if the king is a good man who loves his subjects and is willing to share in the adversities incident to the condition of his kingdom in relation to other kingdoms and nations in its time and place, has the interests of all his subjects at heart and unselfishly gives his attention and efforts to alleviate their distresses, improve their characters, and enhance their every good, then in such a case a kingly rule may be tolerated. But when a king is too susceptible to love of display, love of power, intent upon gratifying himself in ruling for his own benefit and aggrandizement, too intolerant, careless of and indifferent to the good of others, the rule of a king becomes unbearable.

A king is liable to be surrounded by a band of courtiers more or less subservient to his will according to their nature and the object held in view by them in regard to their own interest and advancement.

The pageantry of the court of an earthly king is dazzling. Strong and good men see in it the hollow mockery of human interest and frailty; weak and unstable men take part in it to gratify their lust of the eye and desire for the spectacular; bad men bow to the king and mix in the pomp and revelry to cover up evil designs and forward their own selfish ends. The free man, in view of the instability of human affairs in a kingly rule resulting from the liability of humanity to err, and the corrupting influence always attendant upon a kingly court, can have no desire for such a rule. Added to these things mentioned is the almost universal liability that the possession and exercise of irresponsible power results in fixing upon the mind of the occupant of a throne that "the king can do no wrong," and turns a good man bad and makes a bad man a wicked one; under the rule of such the liberties of the people are insecure, repressed, or altogether disregarded.

And ecclesiasticism in which there is a centralization of power in a ruling head may be as dangerous to the liberties of the people in a spiritual sense as a kingly rule of despotism may be to political and temporal welfare. Priestcraft is subversive of the good of those over whom it rules. The idea that the priesthood can do no wrong, or that all the words and acts of a spiritual ruler are directed by divine wisdom and power, is a dangerous fallacy, and wherever either becomes a rule of acceptance of what is said or done and forms a basis of action on the part of the people bad results are sure to follow. Just as a king may become corrupt and turn his rule into unequal and evil ways for self-aggrandizement and oppression, so may evil creep in and take captive the priestly ruler and make merchandise of the people's rights and subvert their liberties to selfish ends.

History Confirms These Propositions

In the restoration of the gospel by the discovery of the Book of Mormon and the revival of the principle of revelation, the Lord has been mindful of the results to his people of the rule of kings and priests in wickedness. Whatever may have been the rules of organization and procedure in church government as set forth in the Bible and in religious bodies, abundant safeguards have been provided to secure the people against encroachment on the part of irresponsible rulers. There is no need to discuss the "divine right of kings to rule." The Lord has said "in time ye shall have no king on this land." This takes this danger out of the way. Is there danger from priestcraft? Joseph Smith, the Seer, wrote, "If any man exercises his priesthood in any degree of unrighteousness," "amen to that man's priesthood." This shows that God does not intend that what he conferred to bless men should be used to subvert their faith or destroy their liberties.

One of the earliest revelations given at the very beginning recognized the necessity for distinctive organizations within the body; holding one common priesthood—right to act—and having different offices acting in harmony each with every other for the establishment and carrying out of one common object.

Of necessity, there are presidents, or presiding offices, growing out of, or appointed of, or from among those who are ordained to the several offices in these two priesthoods. Of the Melchisedec priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the presidency of the church. The twelve traveling counselors are called to be the twelve apostles, or special witnesses of the name of Christ, in all the world; thus differing from other officers in the church in the duties of their calling. And they form a quorum equal in authority and power to the three presidents previously mentioned. The seventy are also called to preach the gospel and to be especial witnesses unto the Gentiles and in all the world—thus differing from other officers in the church in the duties of their calling; and they form a quorum equal in authority to that of the twelve especial witnesses, or apostles, just named. And every decision made by either of these quorums must be by the unanimous voice of the same; that is, every member in each quorum must be agreed to its decisions, in order to make these decisions of the same power or validity one with the other."

Nothing could be plainer than this. In order to the proper carrying on of the work a division of responsibility and authority in labor was a necessity. To preserve the liberties of the people over whom the men who might be appointed or chosen by themselves to preside, instead of there being but one in whom authority is vested without the responsibility of answering to any for official action, and whose priesthood is made superior to that held by others, there are three who are to be chosen and appointed from among those holding a priesthood the same as themselves, neither lower, nor higher. These by the choice which their fellow members in the priesthood with them are invested with the duty of presiding—having chief official charge—for the accomplishment of the common object of the whole body. They are made a responsible quorum upon whom the dignity of office rests only as they discharge the duties placed upon them in faithfulness and honor. By the investiture of presiding authority they are authorized to represent the body in accordance with the fundamental institutions and spiritual constitution of the church under the divine instruction of the Holy Spirit.

In order that the people may be safe from the undue advantage of the position accorded to this leading quorum in case ambition seize them or any one of them to the overriding of the integrity of the others, two other quorums composed of larger numbers are provided, the members of which quorums hold the same priesthood as these presiding officers, each quorum being invested with equal authority in decision, so that if the three presidents should attempt to take from the people any, or all the liberties that membership in the church entitles them to, it is in the power of the Twelve and Seventy to check such ambition and secure the people from imposition.

Should either quorum attempt to introduce into the corporate body false doctrine, or to institute what would vitiate the spiritual life of the people, whether such effort arose from the spontaneous action of the quorum, or was the result of the ambitious efforts of one to serve the ends of selfish desire to rule, such attempt may be met by the other two and must fail of effect.

There are three in the first quorum, twelve in the second, there may be thirty-six, or four hundred and ninety members in the third. In the church as now organized there are about one hundred and thirty in the Seventy, one full quorum and one nearly full. No measure tending to the supervision of the liberties of the people, originating in either quorum, could possibly pass the scrutiny of the other two, unless there should be such collusion between the membership of all of them as is inconceivable under the light of present information and personal integrity known to exist in these several quorums. We know of no body of religionists having an organized existence the membership of which is so amply safeguarded against extreme imposition from misguided or ambitious men as is the Church of Jesus Christ organized April 6, 1830, by virtue of divinely enacted organic laws given to govern its spiritual existence and continuation.

JOSEPH SMITH,

President Reorganized Church.

Is Our Work Superior to Others? If So, Why?

BY ELLIS SHORT

Wherefore, I, the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets; the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh, but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; that faith also might increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fullness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers. Behold, I am God, and have spoken it; these commandments are of me.—Doctrine and Covenants 1:4, 5.

The above are some of the chief fundamentals upon which our work is based, and anything that tends to subvert, eliminate, or cheapen this wonderful proclamation is calculated to destroy the faith and confidence of the people and bring disastrous results.

The summum bonum that makes our work of worth above others is that of divine authority, centered in the priesthood, for without that "the power of godliness is not manifest among the people." (Doctrine and Covenants 83:3.) Now this high and holy priesthood, not being on the earth, the Lord began its establishment through his messenger, John the Baptist, that he might gather out a people which would not hesitate to accept divine guidance of a God-called prophet, seer, and revelator, and thus become fortified against the calamities referred to by the Lord. His first step was that of a preparatory organization.

Joseph Smith stated:

While engaged in the work of translation and much praying, a messenger from heaven, saying that he was John the Baptist, gave us much counsel and heavenly instruction, and laid his hands on us [Joseph and Oliver], and ordained us, bestowing on us the priesthood of Aaron, commanding us to be baptized. He also stated that the Melchisedec priesthood would be bestowed hereafter upon us.

This event occurred May 15, 1829, upon the banks of the Susquehanna River, and while the solemnity of heaven was resident there the foundation for a God-directed form of divine government of angelic origin was laid, thereby bridging over a chasm poor humanity could not span.

Now as the Aaronic priesthood was conferred, men and women began being baptized, and the work of translation moved forward. Joseph and Oliver continued to pour out their souls in prayer that God would bestow the higher priesthood, in order that the promised blessings would not be withheld, and many marvelous manifestations and heavenly direction were continually conferred upon the brethren from time to time, with which our readers are doubtless familiar.

I now call your attention to the memorable day referred to so often by the Saints, April 6, 1830. Prior to this date, the Savior had proclaimed to the people that a great and marvelous work was about to come forth among the children of men and that the word of God was sharper than a two-edged sword. Upon this date the Lord gave to the prophet one of the most far-reaching communications with which we as a church have to do. This revelation is known as section 19 of Doctrine and Covenants, and is fundamental to the life and existence of the church. Do not hastily conclude that I make this section paramount to all others. It is important because it brings to us the day and date of the organization of the church, and in connection with others opens to us a God-directed form of government. That is what doubtless makes the church attractive to you and me.

The historic account of this day is that the brethren were met together in the chamber of Brother Whitmer, seeking the Lord in humble supplication and prayer that they might receive the promised blessing, the Melchisedec priesthood. As recorded by Joseph, the voice of the Lord came unto them, giving directions as to procedure. While the solemnities of eternity rested upon them, Joseph and Oliver were commanded to ordain each other to the Melchisedec priesthood, and they were then to ordain others. They were commanded not to ordain each other until those whom they had previously baptized should be present, and decide by their vote whether they were willing to accept them as spiritual teachers or not. From that which follows it would seem there was doubtless a sufficient number present so that the vote was had, and the ordinations were attended to. We find that the Lord did counsel as to the people having the right of agency. That is a God-given principle; but when abused, dangerous consequences will follow. Had those people present on that occasion refused by their vote to accept Joseph and Oliver as their spiritual leaders they would have been inviting disastrous conditions which always result when individuals or groups reject God's chosen servants.

The word of the Lord came to Joseph as recorded in Doctrine and Covenants 19, stating that a record should be kept and in it he should be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, and an apostle of Christ, an elder of the church, through the will of the Father to lay the foundation of the church and build it up unto the most holy faith, which church was organized and established in the year of our Lord, 1830, and on the 6th day of the month which is called April.

Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith; for by so doing these things, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea, and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you, and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory. For thus saith the Lord God, him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power.

From the foregoing it seems conclusive that on this organization day, the Lord especially desired that a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the divine relationship between the Lord, the people, and the prophet must be had, hence we hear the admonition as above to the church, which has no uncertain sound to the faithful believer.

Brethren, is it not about time that we have faith that the gates of hell will not prevail, so that the Lord can begin the dispersing of the powers of darkness? (See section 19, paragraph 2.) The blessings, as promised to the people through the Lord's first prophet in relation to privilege and duty are the same to-day as when given, and that which brought blessings then will bring blessings now. And that which caused Israel's bones to bleach in the wilderness through rebellion against their God-given prophet and leader, will cause mine and yours to bleach in Joseph's fair land. That which should be highly entertaining at this time is stated in part as follows, Doctrine and Covenants 43:2:

He that is ordained of me, shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.

I do not believe there are any who call into question the call and ordination of our deceased prophet, or our present prophet and leader, but there may be those that seek to reverse the above order and become teachers unto him. Please see Doctrine and Covenants 104:42. Here the Lord reveals the duty devolving upon the president of the high priesthood as being that of presiding over the whole church and to be like unto Moses; behold here is wisdom, a translator, a seer, a revelator, and a prophet, having all the gifts of God, which he bestows upon the head of the church. The qualifications and duties of him who is to preside over the whole church are so clearly set forth that no grounds for dispute or doubt should exist among the people. Was Moses a leader and teacher of the people under the direction of God? If not, then the comparison used is without application. In 1834 the Lord gave to his people concerning Zion that which is far-reaching as to consequences and results, and we quote in part Doctrine and Covenants 100:3:

Behold, I say unto you, The redemption of Zion must needs come by power; therefore I will raise up unto my people, a man, who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel, for ye are the children of Israel, and of the seed of Abraham; and ye must needs be led out of bondage by power, and with a stretched out arm.

There is no ambiguity in this comparison, as to divine leadership, be the leader whomsoever he may. Should there be any who question divine leadership, it may be well to prepare for the above leading, and thus assist in the building up and redeeming of Zion.

The foregoing may serve to answer the question recently asked by one writer, Why do some constantly hark back to Moses, serfdom? etc., and while these Mosaic references may not seem refreshing to some, we make use of them because the Lord has done so, and they are applicable and form an unanswerable link in the chain of God-appointed leadership, with its duties and responsibilities. Some years prior to 1894 there was a number of church men who took issue with the prophet and leader of the church, and the following revelation was given, which is quite readable and states in part as follows:

My servants have been harsh one with another; and some have not been sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations which my church has already received. Until my people shall hear and heed those who are set in the church to teach the revelations there will be misunderstanding and confusion among the members. The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time.—Doctrine and Covenants 122:1, 2.

The above communication through our late prophet and leader as to existing conditions and the remedy, are so clear as to the needs of our work both then and now that further comment is unnecessary. Patrick Henry made a wise statement when he said there was no way of judging the future so well as by the past. Rejection of prophetic leadership and priesthood in all ages, including the Nephites, has brought spiritual bankruptcy and moral decay upon its votaries. The foregoing are some of the reasons that make our work superior to that of others.

Our friends of other churches have and do affirm a belief in Christ as a chief fundamental to religious success, but our work couples with that an authoritative form of divine government known and recognized by his people as the government of Christ on earth. Hence to preach Christ and extol him highly and fail to represent his form of authority and government instituted for the saving of humanity would be disloyal to him who has established the system of redeeming grace and has said, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

Where Do We Stand?

BY H. E. MOLER

Reasoning from the instruction given by the voice of inspiration to the church in each dispensation, and by a consideration of the history of the people of God in every age, there is never a time when we do not need to inquire in reference to the stability of the foundation upon which we stand or build. The counsel of Paul as given in 2 Corinthians 13:5 is applicable to all: "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." There was never a time in this last dispensation when this self-examination was more necessary than now. This examination should be made in the fear of God and without regard to the opinion or position of any other individual so far as determining our own standing is concerned.

Notwithstanding some progress has been made, we are still far from where we should stand as a church. In some respects we have retrograded. The church of Jesus Christ in all ages is a missionary institution, and its greatest work is that of conveying light and salvation to a sinful and dying world. With the increase of membership it would seem that the missionary representatives of the church should be correspondingly increased. Yet today, with a membership of 100,000, we have fewer missionaries in the field than when our membership was less than half the present number. This fact I am sure is lamented by all. But what is the matter? Why this decline in the chiefest work of the church?

We have heard a great deal said about confidence. Confidence is the one great thing needful, for confidence is very much akin to faith, without which we can do nothing. But confidence must be in methods as well as in men, even though men are called to be representatives of Christ. Lack of funds is one reason assigned for the decrease of our ministerial force. But this is not the only reason. Funds have been used for local purposes that might better have been used in the spread of the gospel. Here is where confidence began to fall. Failing to consider the uncertainty of continued prosperity in the financial world for any definite length of time, we made our program too big and our appropriations too great, with the result of the terrible burden of debt that now confronts us. In this we were not wise. Confidence has waned, and discouragement followed. We should have learned long ago that this work cannot be carried on after the methods of the world. Of us there is required sacrifice and self-denial that the world knows nothing of. Until we all recognize and practice this self-denial and observe the most rigid economy, we will not succeed.

The cause of our present plight of distress and humiliation cannot be laid at the feet of any one individual, and I question if it can be lodged with any one group of individuals. The entire body is responsible so far as it has authorized excessive and unwarranted expenditures of money not in sight and with no assurance of its availability. All are responsible so far as we have assented to any change in the work of the ministry from that which was characterized by the favor and blessings of God in former years. Upon the entire body rests the responsibility of returning to the "old paths."

Any slackening of the missionary work in order to give support or maintenance to local or temporal institutions will weaken the church, and decline is sure to follow. This requires no argument, as the facts are painfully apparent. I ask, why should stakes maintain offices, stenographers, bookkeepers, etc., at the expense of the church, when missionaries are being forced to leave the field? Why not, in the name of consistency, dispense with some of this local equipment and leave more men in the mission field? Which is the most essential? Who will answer? There are a number of districts in the church in which not an official receives any compensation from the church treasury and yet these officials attend to all their own correspondence with their own hands. If district presidents can maintain themselves and do this clerical work without the expense of stenographers, why cannot stake officials, receiving their support from the church, themselves do a little extra work and dispose of some of the hired help? These conditions are too apparent, and it is useless to attempt to evade the issue. These are questions for the consideration of officials as well as the membership. We have a right to inquire into these things, and our inquiries should receive consideration. These conditions must be corrected before we get ourselves right before God and the people.

Yes, we know it is all very nice to have everything convenient and up to date, and sometimes the effect and influence is mentioned—that is, the influence we will have before the world. This is all right when we can afford it. We know of some families who for the sake of appearance and "influence" live far beyond their income. The result is failure and humiliation—that is the "influence." What is true of the family is likewise true of the church. Best not to try to follow ways and methods of the world. God's way is the best way. We seem sometimes to have forgotten what the Lord said to the elders of the church in Doctrine and Covenants 43:4: "Ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach the children of men the things which I have put into your hands by the power of my Spirit." If we would only heed what God has already given us and subject ourselves to the direction of the Spirit, we would give the world some wonderful lessons, even in finance.

What about our creation of a theological department in Graceland College? Why did we violate our pledge made at the time of the founding of the college in which we stated to the world that it was nonsectarian and that no religion should be taught therein? While all true Saints believe in education, a great many question the wisdom of this move.

Peter and John had no such training; neither did the early elders of this church. Were they wrong then? In this respect also we seem to be following the world. The success attained by the early ministry of the church vindicates their qualifications.

Our practice of authorizing the expenditures of large sums of money for the maintenance of departments of the church, many of them local, with no positive assurance of the forthcoming of the means, is a great mistake and extremely risky. Success will never attend us so long as we follow such methods. The peril of the times and the uncertainty of financial conditions in the world should be recognized by our people and should make us very careful to avoid involving ourselves under the burden of debt. The writer has always believed that no program should be laid out for any year's work, or for a lesser period of time, except what can be met from funds in hand or by pledges made and available as needed. In other words, "Cut the garment according to the cloth." Should such a plan be adopted, it would be a great encouragement to the membership, who would become interested and delight in building up a fund for the next year's work. A horse may be very good to pull, but if poor judgment is used and he is overloaded there is danger of his being discouraged and becoming balky. He will work much better when he feels that everything is right and that he is not expected to work beyond his strength. The same principle will apply to the membership of the church.

Another matter that bears seriously upon our present condition as a church I cannot forbear mentioning, although I know there is danger of being misunderstood. I refer to the segregation of members of the church, in respect to age, in the services. I sincerely believe this practice has been most destructive of the spirituality of our members. The church of Jesus Christ is "one body," and there division cannot exist in it and be accepted of him. There can be no "junior church" nor senior church in it. Too far has the idea been advanced that our young people must have separate prayer meetings, separate preaching services, separate revivals, and finally a separate conference, or convention. I have watched this movement from the first until now, and so far as I have observed (and my observation has not been limited) the result has been a weakening of the spirituality of members and a disregard for the regular services on the part of many young people. The absence of our young members from the regular services where the older members are sure they are welcome, creates a feeling of sadness.

The presence of the youth is sadly missed and the loss keenly felt. Society in general is composed of both young and old. There is danger in breaking up this order and in making too great a separation. The aged need the presence of the young, with their fresh vigor and ardent ambition to comfort and cheer; the young need the counsel and testimonies of the aged. If the aged were deprived of the presence of youth, they would age much more rapidly; but with the young in their presence they forget their age and seem to feel young themselves. Of all places the house of the Lord is the place where all should feel free and desirous of worshipping together. Why should the presence of older members who love God and perhaps have had great experiences be repugnant to young people who desire likewise to serve God? I repeat, I have never as yet seen anything like continued success attend the effort to place the young apart from the other members in the worship of God. The effort has been a failure. Henceforth let us endeavor to maintain the unity and oneness of the body of Christ.

The sincerity of all those who hold views adverse to those herein set forth is not for a moment questioned. I impugn the motives of none and have faith in the integrity of my brethren. But whereas this division exists, it is evident that one side or the other to the controversy is wrong. Both might be wrong, or partially wrong, but both cannot be absolutely right. It is also evident that as a body we are not being led by the Spirit of God—a regrettable statement, but true nevertheless. Therefore let us become very humble, repentantly seeking the favor of God, in love and kindness bearing with each other, studying the law given us, and faithfully obeying the same.

I feel as though we could make a confession upon our part similar to that made by Daniel in Daniel 9:5: "We have sinned, and committed iniquity, and done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments."

God grant that unity and harmony may obtain, and that he may cause his face again to shine upon his sanctuary, is my prayer.

At the battle of Marengo a general, fearing his army would be lost, ordered a drummer boy to beat a retreat. "I cannot beat a retreat," he cried, "but I can beat a charge. I can beat a charge that will wake the dead." And victory perched on the banner of the drummer boy's army.—F. L. Brittain.

The Church and Religion

BY C. A. SMURTHWAITE

All students of religion have noted the varying mental and spiritual characteristics prevailing among church people. This writer has been led to say on more than one public occasion that we of the Reorganization have all shades of religious idealism among us. We might say that we are Protestants of all shades, with some Catholicism among us. This is not said in any sort of disparagement, but rather as a compliment. It is quite naturally explained, for we have had different origins, physically and mentally, to say nothing of environment. The church can never be a company of people holding the same opinions about religion. The church is a group of people coming together because of a common ideal, the endeavor to reach the standard of a man in Christ Jesus. People cannot be turned out of a mold and become uniform. Nature doesn't work that way. The Creator doesn't work that way. Everything we know in nature cries out against the idea of uniformity. Yet probably every single Christian denomination has been founded on the idea that uniformity of ideas regarding religion is fundamentally essential. That is sectarianism, pure and simple.

There appear to be three classifications of religious minds: authoritarian, individualistic, and democratic. There are varying forms in all three.

The authoritarian type of mind feels that God has one organization which he permeates, dominates, overrules and perpetuates, therefore is infallible. This type feels that his membership warrants him salvation. If the church is infallible, then it does warrant salvation, for to follow the church is equivalent to doing God's will. So this type of mind puts his entire trust in the church, in the organization, in the infallible head whom God will not lead astray nor permit to be led astray. He may be unable to harmonize all that the church or the head of the church does with his own reasoning, but he sinks his own individuality into that of the organization, submits himself completely to it in order to insure his salvation. He cannot see any other way. Such an organization does not seek the wisdom of its membership; all wisdom comes from above; the priesthood instructs, the people obey. The authoritarian type of mind is content to have it so. He wouldn't have it any other way. "Common consent" to such a mind would be a burden. He does not realize that God may have instituted an organization which he may subsequently be compelled to reject because of its failure to visualize and therefore to carry out his purposes. Or the institution gets old, it has been stretched too far already to carry new wine; an attempt to carry new wine disrupts, bursts it. New wine always demands new containers wherein there is room for expansion.

The individualistic type of mind is the antithesis of the authoritarian type. He can find no church which suits him. He has had individual mystical religious experiences which seem to him to be outside of the ideal of the church and its membership. He doesn't find solace in the "communion of saints." It is of this type, however, that saints are made. He stands alone. Joseph Smith, the Martyr, was of this type. He must "join none of them." His experiences were individualistic, peculiar to himself, not comparable elsewhere. The fact that he subsequently was moved upon to bring a church into organized existence does not change his essentially individualistic mind. He stated, in substance, in his King Follett sermon, that he knew more than any other man living. There would appear to be authority for this type in the words of Christ to Peter, i. e., that upon the principle of Peter's individual experience in discovering Jesus to be the Christ he would build his church.

The democratic type exists probably in all churches. It is probably destined to be the chief dominating type of the future, at least in the Anglo-Saxon world. This type emphasizes religion itself rather than the institution. He seeks agreement on principles. He does not care for dogma. He is not much interested in mere statement of religious belief. He doesn't fasten his intellect on a creed. He has discovered the common kinship of all men in all forms of religious institution and among men of no church membership. He speaks the spirit rather than the form. He doesn't believe the church is for the "standardization of theological opinion to the exclusion of all variations." The religion of the spirit is the democratic type. He believes in all men regardless of their "name or sign." He does not seek for uniformity. He seeks for unity but in diversity; because that is his experience on every hand. He is not seeking for the things of disagreement but for points of agreement. He believes that the church is a home for men of good will, regardless of prejudices or theological ideas. He feels that that is where Christ put the church. He does not want to see the church narrowed either in doctrine or practice. He is perfectly willing for men of all types, providing they are men of good will, to belong to one church: the authoritarian, the individualistic, and the democratic. If there isn't room for all these types he looks upon the organization as a sect and not a church in which the universal Father and Creator would love to associate. The democratic type is not an anarchist; he is simply democratic.

He believes in giving authority to his church officers. But he does not believe in ecclesiastical authorities arrogating to themselves authority and power. It is not that he cares much about voting on any sort of proposition. Of course he will vote. But he places the emphasis upon the wisdom of the whole and wants that wisdom to permeate his church; it is the leaven in the meal, the expansive power. He is the first to listen carefully to the voice of his church officials, but he does not believe in their infallibility. He feels they may perhaps have a better judgment on some matters than he himself. But he wants to consider, to weigh the proposition, believing that he must understand it, he must digest it, it must become a part of him and all the rest to become wise and effective.

In the Reorganized Church there are all these types. We have the authoritarian dogmatists, the individual mystics, and the spiritual democrats. That is the way it should be. They all have their place. The fact that they all seem to exist in our common human nature is sufficient reason why we should tolerate all of them. The writer's consciousness is that if they are not all tolerated we are not the church of Christ, but are a mere sect having an arbitrary idea which we think all men should conform to before they can bask in the sunshine of God's pleasure. Our authoritarian form of government is modified by the doctrine of "common consent," making it democratic. The individual mystic can find voice in our "social" meetings where the floor is free for him to bear his testimony. "Common consent" is a democratic principle, not because it allows people to vote, but because it implies the use of the reasoning faculties by all in common. I repeat, by all, not by a few. That is what I mean by democratic religion. The principle is carried to the extreme limit in requiring submission of revelation to the body of the church. Not only a revelation propounded by the president of the church, but all revelation, i. e., the Bible, the Book of Mormon, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants: the whole body of revelation from whence it comes no matter. The practice of the church in this regard might with profit be extended by submitting the whole body of revelation to the people for consideration and for acceptance or rejection. This is in fact what was done in the early Christian church immediately following the apostolic period. It should be done now. Or, what would probably be still better, let it be understood that any man in the church may have his own individual opinion and the right of expression as to any principle or doctrine or revelation; and as to the form of our church government. We have no right to set up any bar of entrance to the church or condition of continuous membership which is contrary to that used by Christ and his apostles. The church must be maintained at all hazards as a home for men of good will. It must have room for men of all types of religious mind. The church must preserve the religion of the spirit, which is the spirit of liberty and the spirit of progress. Christ was essentially a critic of the religion of his time. We must be critical of the religion of our time and of our church. But it must be a constructive criticism. If we throw down it must be only to build up. Jesus deplored the failure of the church in his time: "Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how oft would I have gathered you . . . but ye would not." We may deplore the failure of our church in many of its aspects, but it must be in the hope to amend the causes of failure. It must be the vision of the church, nay, its duty, to keep its mind free and ready to receive in its day and generation ever renewed guidance in the understanding and expression of truth.

The president of the church is described to be "like unto Moses." Moses led the children of Israel out of bondage. One cannot lead without the operation of the free will of the people. There is no "will" without freedom. Therein is the essence of "common consent." We repeat, it is the operation of the will, not its subordination. The true leader always leads out of bondage into liberty. Bondage and liberty are antitheses. The leader must of course be qualified by training, understanding, experience, to lead out of bondage. Moses had these for his peculiar task in the most unique sense. Such a leader must have been in bondage, and he must himself have broken away from that bondage; otherwise he has not the primary qualifications for such leadership.

In the Christian dispensation leading out of bondage is essentially a leading into spiritual freedom. The president of the church therefore is a spiritual leader per se, leading by reason of his peculiar qualifications and the exercise of the will of the people into spiritual liberty. When a people is led without the operation of its will, it is led into captivity. That is the lesson of all history. No people can be led into captivity by the exercise of its own intelligent will. The government of the Reorganized Church is essentially democratic-authoritarian. The democracy confers the power. To confer religious power it must possess it. The government of the Reorganized Church is the "call" of God plus the authority conferred by the intelligent free will of the people.

Good Books

BY EDWARD RANNIE

And again, you shall be ordained to assist my servant Oliver Cowdery to do the work of printing, and of selecting, and writing books for schools, in this church, that little children also may receive instruction before me as is pleasing unto me.—Doctrine and Covenants 55: 2.

The above instruction was given to William W. Phelps in June, 1831, and the quotations that follow from the Life of Garfield, by William M. Thayer, published by Hurst and Company, of New York, in 1908, will help the reader to understand the importance of it.

James A. Garfield was born in Orange, Cuyahoga County, Ohio, on November 19, 1831, which is in the northern part of the State and bordering on Lake Erie and is approximately twenty miles from Kirtland; and it was in that part of the State that he spent most of his life, and especially when a boy and young man. When he was fifteen years old, 1846, he went to work for a man near Cleveland and made his home with the family, and what he found there I will let the historian tell and will quote from page 157:

A book-loving boy like James would not be long in a strange place without finding all the books there were; so books were among the first things that attracted his attention in Barton's house. There were Marryt's Novels, Sinbad, the Sailor, The Pirate's Own Book, Jack Halyard, Lives of Eminent Criminals, The Buccaneers of the Carribbean Seas, Plundering a Spanish Galleon; and perhaps some others of the same character. The adventures and marvelous exploits contained in these volumes were suited to fire his imagination and inflame his heart. He was thus introduced into a new experience altogether, more perilous to him than a regiment of coarse, brutal men. He made books his most intimate companions and trusted them with entire confidence. He could read deceitful and designing men around him and bluff them off; but he took the volumes that he read directly to his heart and communed with them as friend communes with friend.

On pages forty-nine and fifty we read the following:

The books used in the best pioneer schools of Ohio were Webster's Spelling Book, the English Reader, Pike's and Adams's Arithmetic, and Morse's (Old) Geography. The Garfields possessed all of these. They had, also, the Farmer's Almanac, and a copy of Davy Crockett's Almanac which was found, at one time, in almost every cabin of the West. Reading books were scarce then throughout the country in comparison with the present time; in the wilds of Ohio they were not so plenty as panthers and wolves. Many of the few books found there related to exciting adventures with beasts of prey, hairbreadth escapes on perilous waters, and daring exploits of pirates and rascals; and they were illustrated with very poor pictures. Three or four volumes, besides the Bible and school books, constituted the whole literary outfit of the Garfields.

The above represents the time when James A. Garfield was about four years of age, or about 1835.

The books read when he was referred to as fifteen years of age, in the first paragraph quoted, so inflamed his young mind that he was determined to go to sea and become a sailor; and when he quit his work and told his mother he was going, it was not pleasing to her, and she succeeded in persuading him not to do it. He went to work for a farmer where he could see the boats on Lake Erie, and that only added fuel to the flame, and he was determined to go. His mother persuaded him to try boating on Lake Erie before going to sea, and so, with all he possessed tied in a red handkerchief, he started for Cleveland, and the first boat captain that he made application to for work swore vehemently at him and drove him off the boat. As he wandered along the shore, he met his cousin, who was a captain on a canal boat that was then in the harbor, and James was hired to him; that is how he came to be a canal-boat driver. Three months was all the time he worked, and then he returned home to his anxious mother. His canal experience was the turning point in his life. He returned to school, and with a good teacher, who took a kindly interest in him and the good books that came into his possession, though they were few, his outlook on life changed, and he became the great and good man that he afterwards was, and finally became President of the United States.

No doubt the reader by this time understands why the Lord told Oliver Cowdery to write books for children. First: It would make the first impressions upon their plastic minds to be of that kind that would give them the right start in life, and send them out into the world well equipped with good ideas of what was right and wrong. They would be good representatives of the principles of life that should govern us according to the ethics of Jesus Christ and be well prepared to tell the story of the restored gospel.

Second: By getting our own publications among the people they would get their first impressions of our movement from us, which is best, instead of from our enemies who did now know the facts and were prejudiced against the church.

The first book that purported to give an account of the church was written by those who were opposed to it, and naturally they would not tell the truth if they could. The conditions referred to were in northern Ohio, in that region of country where the Latter Day Saints did their most important work before going to Missouri, in connection with preaching the gospel and building the temple at Kirtland.

Is History Repeating Itself?

Conditions are not the same now as when the Lord gave the command for Oliver Cowdery to write books, but the need is just as great and the danger is ever present, menacing the morals of our young people and destroying their usefulness in the church. The world is pleasure mad, our own people are in the same condition, and a knowledge of the church, its history, doctrine, and ideals will help us in the struggle upward to higher and better conditions. We will not have reached our goal until the spiritual and intellectual sides of our life have gained the ascendancy, and the physical and animal are put under complete control of a pure and well-disciplined mind. It was an English poet who wrote: (The quotation may not be exact.)

Though I could grasp creation in my hand,
I must be measured by my soul; the mind is the measure of the man.

The present generation should always have the opportunity to read about what the past generation has done, and in no better way can that be done than by having the biographies of those men and women who have rendered service for the good of the generation in which they lived.

The faithful, devoted, self-sacrificing men and women of our church who have given their service so freely, without hope of earthly reward, to build up the cause of Jesus Christ should have their biographies written for the present generation. It would give the young a better knowledge (and knowledge is power) of the church, and to know what their forebears did and the example of sacrifice they had set would be an inspiration for them to do likewise.

The late President Joseph Smith was a noble example of what the gospel of Jesus Christ, when put into practice, will make of a man; the late Elder Charles Derry, who was his companion in gospel work, said of him, "I have been with him in public and private; I have sat in council with him; I have preached with him, and slept with him, and I never saw a man that so nearly represented the ideals of the lowly Nazarene." It is one of the several misfortunes coming to the church that we do not have the biography of so great and good a man for our young people to read. Is it possible that there is any other society in the world that would be so grossly neglectful as not to have it published before ten years had passed by after his death? Perhaps it fulfills the saying of Jesus, "The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light."

"If you lack education get it. Read one good book each month and spend thirty minutes of each day inside a dictionary. At the end of a year you will have gained a better knowledge of life and letters than one half of our one hundred million population."

NEWS AND LETTERS

Council Bluffs, Iowa

October 1.—The Department of Women of this branch feel they have accomplished a great deal along some lines. Regular social and business meetings have been held each month except July, when we held a picnic in the park. In August we met at the reunion in Glenwood. This meeting was enjoyed by many.

We have had different ones with us from headquarters occasionally. Among them were Miss Blanche Edwards, Mrs. Katherine Wolfe, President F. M. McDowell, and T. W. Williams. While Miss Edwards and Mrs. Wolfe were here we had a mothers' and daughters' banquet, which was very much enjoyed, and we believe it will be an annual affair hereafter.

Much good has been done in our educational department. Having organized seven study classes the first of the year, the work progressed nicely until June, when they were dispensed with for the summer. The average attendance each week was eighty-four up to June. The following studies were taken up: Mothercraft, home nursing, civics, and parents' and teachers' problems.

We felt especially good about our South Side group. Most of the women were nonmembers, and the teacher was also a member of another church.

The classes are now being reorganized as fast as we can get to them. The Harrison Street group is about to complete the Mothercraft Manual and will then take up story-telling. Riverside groups one and two are contemplating taking up the study of the Book of Mormon.

We feel that relief and service work in the branch is one of the most important duties of the Department of Women. Christ's mission here on earth was to relieve suffering humanity and lift them to a higher plane of living. That is our ideal in this work. Around and near our Belmont Mission are many of the poor of the city, and we have clothed many of them that they might be able to attend Sunday school. When we have been unable to supply them with necessary clothing, we have asked for assistance from the Red Cross and other clubs. We have also tried to cooperate with the welfare workers of each public school and those sent here by the Government. We have begun relief service in Belmont in earnest this fall. Fifty-two garments were made and sent out in one day. Many people are in need who have never been before, and much visiting is being done that we might learn their special needs.

The aid department also deserves worthy mention because of the help they have given the branch in a financial way. Five hundred dollars was raised from a bazaar and chicken dinner last December. We are hoping to do equally as well this year. The bazaars are held in a hall in the center of the city.

One hundred and six babies have been enrolled in the cradle roll department, and out of that number twenty-seven are now ready for promotion. Many others are yet to be enrolled, ten invitations having already been sent out. We feel that this work has been a great help in building up our Sunday school, because many of them are babies of nonmembers.

The Young Women's Department is progressing nicely, new circles being organized from time to time. Five Temple Builder circles and two Oriole circles have been organized at present. Two more Oriole circles should be organized, but it is a problem to find leaders.

We feel that we are going to accomplish a great deal the remainder of this year, judging by the attendance and enthusiasm shown at our first business and social meeting this fall. A fine program was given after the business session in charge of the president, Mrs. John Salisbury. At this time Brother T. W. Williams gave a very fine talk on woman's work as a home builder and the large field that is open for her to extend her influence to the world, both morally and spiritually.

At each monthly meeting a collection is taken up to be applied on what is called the flower fund. This money is used to buy flowers for the sick.

MRS. LEE E. LANDON, Secretary.

Kingston, Missouri

September 28.—Things are moving along about as usual. Of course we have some slackers, but when we consider the parable of the ten virgins, we can readily see that not everyone that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter in.

Last Sunday evening at Religio the audience enjoyed the literary paper, which was written and read by Miss Ella Clevenger, who is a nonmember but is a regular attendant at all of our services.

Brother C. E. Wood preached to the Saints at Hardin, Missouri, last Sunday at eleven o'clock, and C. J. Craven preached at Richmond, Missouri, in the evening. The two brothers went together to both places and received a warm invitation to come again. A basket dinner was enjoyed at Hardin after the services, and prayer meeting was held in the afternoon.

Brother Albert Place, junior, of Polo, will be baptized this afternoon at four, Brother C. E. Wood officiating. We hope to see others enter the fold soon. Some have said they would be baptized, and there are others who know the Father's will but do not obey.

South Sea Islands

PAPEETE, TAHITI, September 22.—To-day is a holiday in Papeete. It is the tenth anniversary of the bombardment of this city by two German men of war. We saw part of the program this morning in front of the government buildings, principally native music and dancing. Both are certainly much different from anything in their line usually seen or heard in America. There is no mixed dancing. It was something like a dancing contest. Group after group danced for about ten minutes each. Some groups were all young men, some were all young women. Each person danced separately. In spite of the native reputation for indolence, few Americans could work so hard at their dancing as these people did, nor could they easily imitate their manouvers. The musical instruments used were very primitive, and the costuming was wild and vivid.

In my last letter I mentioned the baptism of ten at Rairoa. A belated report has just come to us of the baptism of thirteen during the diving season at the end of last year at the island of Hikueru. Also I baptized recently Teariteviriviri the granddaughter of the president of Makatea Branch. This is no mean accomplishment when you remember that it is necessary to pronounce the candidate's name at the time of baptism.

Paia a Metuaaro, one of our native missionaries, was called back to his home island, Manihi, a few weeks ago on account of the death of his daughter.

I wonder if the Presiding Bishopric would approve the following practical interpretation of the law of tithing. On the first day of the diving season at Takume this year a certain woman diver, Tangake, brought up a pearl which she sold for 15,000 francs ($3,000 at pre-war exchange). Her father was a Latter Day Saint, and her brother is an elder in the church, but she is a Catholic. She decided to continue her usual practice of paying tithing, and paid 1,500 francs, half to the Catholic Church and half to the Latter Day Saints. I wrote her a receipt for 750 francs tithing.

R. J. FARTHING.

Ottumwa, Iowa

October 6.—The work here is moving along very nicely since our last report.

Elder C. M. Clifford recently made us a visit and preached two inspiring sermons. Elder L. G. Holloway visited us on August 28 and preached a sermon that found its place in the hearts of the Saints here. He also gave us a very fine talk on Labor Day at our Sunday school picnic. We have also had good sermons by our local men, Brethren D. T. Williams, sr., and John Baker.

The Department of Women is active and donated twenty dollars to the radio fund. They also recently gave a supper at the home of Sister Nevin, which was enjoyed by all. Over thirty dollars was raised.

Like many other places, we need a new church. Ottumwa has a population of 25,000, among which are many honest-hearted people whom we hope to reach when we are better located.

We think the pastor here has a very fine way of getting the HERALDS into the homes of the Saints. He has eight copies sent to him each week, which are sold to members.

The prayer services are of a very high order, which all enjoy. We regret that at present Brother John Baker is ill. Our branch teacher, Brother E. H. Lewis, has gone back to Chicago, Illinois, to work, which we also regret.

Rhodes, Iowa

October 2.—September 7, our last sacramental Sunday, was a day long to be remembered. The little church was well filled. Brother Lentell's series of meetings having begun the previous Sunday, some of the Saints came up from Montour, and some nonmembers came, expecting to hear a sermon. After church some of them expressed themselves as being well pleased with the services and that many of the testimonies were as good as sermons. This is always true when the Spirit is present as it was on this occasion.

Brother Lentell was with us four weeks and preached some wonderful sermons. As one sister said, "Each one was better than the last." He made his headquarters with Brother and Sister Veech, and Sister Veech said she realized she had the advantage over the rest of the Saints in being able to get the benefit of the private talks. We consider it an honor and a blessing to be able to entertain in our homes the servants of God when they are laboring among us.

The attendance during the meetings was fair, though somewhat shifting. The same nonmembers not attending regularly made it hard to pursue any chain of argument and give a clear understanding of the subject. While there were no baptisms, we believe some are very near the kingdom. We only hope and pray that they may not defer obedience until the Spirit becomes grieved and departs from them.

The meetings closed last Sunday night with good attendance. One lady who has lived in town for years, but who was never seen inside our church before, was there and expressed herself as being well pleased with the sermons. She afterwards declared it was the best sermon she ever heard and added that if the meetings had continued another week she would have gone every night. The sermon was based on Paul's words: "Quench not the Spirit; despise not prophesying."

Elders C. M. Richeson and E. G. Beye visited the Packard Branch in the extreme northern part of the district about two weeks ago. This branch, by reason of the Saints moving away and the few members left being so scattered, with no one holding the priesthood near enough to take charge, has become inactive. They have a little church building, but it stands there unused, for the lack of leaders. No doubt the Saints appreciated the visit of these brethren. They held preaching at eleven o'clock and sacramental and baptismal service in the afternoon. About eighteen of the scattered Saints attended the service.

The district Religio superintendent is planning for a Religio rally October 11 and 12, to be held at Boone.

The Rhodes Religio local has changed the hour of meeting from half past seven to half past six, and then preaching is held at half past seven. One of the grade teachers in our consolidated schools, who attends our services occasionally, said she would like to attend Religio if she might be permitted. Of course she was promptly invited to attend any and all of our services.

We believe the branches that are not keeping up the Religio are depriving themselves of one of the most efficient means of keeping the young people interested in church work.

Sister Lentell, head of the Department of Women, met with the sisters here in their September meeting, giving a good talk and much valuable instruction. The sisters have decided to take up the study of the Doctrine and Covenants.

Sister H. C. Hughes, of Mapleton, Kansas, spent several weeks visiting in Rhodes this summer.

Owen Sound, Ontario

October 1.—Elder Percy Farrow and wife, of the district missionary force, stopped with us on September 21. He occupied the evening preaching hour, using for the basis of his remarks the second coming of Christ, which was of interest to all present. They left Monday evening on the steamer Manitoba for the northern part of our district and will make their headquarters at Port Arthur.

Now that summer is past, the attendance at services is again back to normal, which means an adjustment in the program of the different departments of the work. The choir and other musical work has again taken active form, and with the association of Brother George T. Furness, district musical director, we believe they will be helpful to the progress and development of the branch. An orchestra of several pieces has developed recently and is forming part of the Sunday school program.

The Department of Women, under the leadership of Sister R. J. Wilcox, is working in its regular meetings to install such necessary features in the church as will make the assembling of the Saints and their friends more convenient.

The Institute of the Owen Sound District, in charge of the district president and the heads of departments, was invited to meet in Owen Sound. Efforts are being made to have Sister Blanche Edwards attend.

Sunday, September 28, was our annual Harvest Home. Prayer service was held at ten o'clock in charge of Elder Benson Belrose. A short exhortation was given by Brother W. C. Elliott, from Doctrine and Covenants 84:32. The Saints were admonished to seek diligently to present the gospel truths to their fellow men, that they might have that which would be of nourishment to them, that when Christ comes, they, with us, may have the opportunity to be with him. The Saints joined heartily in prayer, testimony, and song, in which many noble sentiments were expressed.

The Sunday school hour was occupied with the usual program, with the addition of orchestra numbers, several recitations by junior scholars, a duet by two senior members, and a short talk by the district Sunday school superintendent.

The evening service was in charge of the branch president, Elder Belrose, assisted by Elder J. A. Morrison. A splendid discourse was given, in keeping with the day's program. Also suitable choir numbers were given.

Duluth, Minnesota

September 27.—Duluth Branch is still alive and striving to place itself higher up on the gospel ladder. Our sacramental service September 7 was well attended, and many fine prayers and testimonies were offered. The meeting was in charge of our pastor, C. B. Freeman.

The priesthood of the branch met at four to discuss current issues and to take up such matters as were confronting them.

In order to better prepare the young of the church for higher spirituality we are having young people's prayer meetings at nine o'clock Sunday morning. Although the attendance is small at first, we believe that with effort and prayer we will be able to enlarge the attendance. We ask the prayers of the Saints that this effort may indeed prove successful. We realize that all great things are small in the beginning, even as the church was started in latter days with only six members.

The morning of September 14 Brother P. G. Schnuckle spoke to the Saints. Brother W. E. Shakespeare, missionary supervisor of North Dakota and Minnesota, spoke in the evening and stayed the following week holding meetings at our regular meeting place, besides two meetings at the home of the pastor. He spoke again to a few of the Saints September 21. Not many could be present because of a big storm that was raging in the Northwest. His sermons certainly were plain, leaving no grounds for misunderstanding.

Brother George W. Day, district president, came from Bemidji on the 21st and spoke in the morning on the subject of faith. He left for his home on the evening train.

Brother C. B. Freeman was called to officiate at the funeral of one not a member of the church. Six of the priesthood acted as pallbearers. The daughter and husband of the deceased are both members of the Utah Church who are investigating the true gospel.

The Department of Women is still forging ahead, meeting every second Thursday at the homes of the members. They are planning to hold a bazaar the last week of November and would be pleased with any articles that any would like to give to help out.

Sunday school is gaining slowly. We are trying to teach the children to walk in the steps of the Savior.

Brother Shakespeare was with us again September 28 and gave us two more of his plain, inspiring sermons. All are hoping he may return again soon and bring more of the light of the gospel to the people in this part of God's vineyard.

Our quarterly business meeting was held at the home of the pastor September 29. One item that came up was the matter of purchasing a church building at the corner of Sixtieth Avenue West and Bristol Street. Brother P. G. Schnuckle, deacon, was authorized to investigate in regard to terms and report back to the body.

A Conference With Some Special Features

SARNIA, ONTARIO, October 4.—July 19 the Department of Women held a sale of sewing and home-baked food in one of the stores at which they cleared a goodly sum of money which was applied on the building fund.

Quite a number of the Saints in Chatham District enjoyed the conference which was held here September 27 and 28 in charge of Brother Robert Brown. All the meetings were of great benefit and were thoroughly enjoyed by those who attended. The speakers were Brothers Duncan Clatworthy and E. Miffin, of Chatham; Bishop J. C. Dent, of Bothwell; Elder J. R. Grice, of Saint Clair, Michigan; and Elder B. H. Doty, of Traverse City, Michigan.

Meals were served by the Department of Women in the basement of the church, which deserved great praise as they were enjoyed by all who partook of them. The women also had an exhibition of their sewing from which they secured a nice sum of money for the building fund.

Lincoln, Nebraska

September 21.—We were very much pleased to have our district president, Brother Wells, drop in the other day after a long sojourn elsewhere, and now we feel as though we were once more in the land of the living. His first sermon was given this forenoon. We hope that fortune will favor us so he may remain. His presence is almost like a family reunion to us. We are sad to know that his good wife is in such poor health. She has our prayers for her recovery.

But we are still out of luck, when it comes to radio. We are not able to figure out why K F I X can be heard in Canada and from Pennsylvania to California, and we are unable to get it here. Saint Louis and Dallas, Texas, come in fine. We hope the radio is not going to pass us up as the traveling ministers do. But if we are in an out of the way place we are still going to try to do all that is required of us, that we may keep the fire of the Spirit burning, so when the Lord shall see fit to call us home we will be able to enjoy what we feel we are missing here. We are told that we have gone over our quota in radio donations, and we hope to get it good when the new station is in working order.

Detroit, Michigan

October 3.—The Saints at the eastern branch of Detroit have recently been caused to sorrow over the death of one of their most beloved and devoted workers, Brother Innes Fenton. Brother Fenton suffered a prolonged and trying illness and was confined to his bed for several weeks prior to his death on September 13. Not only will Brother Fenton be missed for his earnest and valuable services for the Master, but his pleasant smile and cheery word will long be remembered by all who were privileged to know him.

The Detroit Saints were also caused to mourn the passing of Brother Stephen B. Smith, who was the father of our pastor, Brother Blakeslee Smith. Brother Smith was also severely tried by a long illness, and the prayers of the Saints were many times exercised in his behalf, but the Lord chose to take him to his reward.

To add to our sorrows, Brother Bert Cooper was recently run down by an automobile and sustained a triple fracture of the left leg. He has been in the hospital about three weeks now, but we are encouraged to learn that he is doing nicely. Brother Cooper is the regular HERALD correspondent for this branch.

Several other members of the branch are suffering from illness, among whom is our pastor, Elder Blakeslee Smith.

The Detroit Saints are looking forward with great interest to the state young people's convention to be held at Flint on October 25 and 26, and also to the campaign to be conducted in arousing interest, which is to precede the convention. During this campaign we expect to have with us Apostles J. A. Gillen and F. Henry Edwards, and Bishop F. B. Flair, each for four days, who will give us some valuable lectures. The young people hope to be further favored with their services at the convention, so everyone is anticipating a wonderful time.

E. H. MONTROSS.

Portland, Oregon

September 29.—All meetings here have been unusually well attended since reunion. A packed house greeted Brother Gomer T. Griffiths, who stopped here four days. He gave four very interesting and instructive illustrated lectures on the "Restored church," "The Holy Land," and other subjects. He has a fine assortment of slides.

The Friday evening meetings of the Department of Recreation and Expression are gaining in attendance, and there is less difficulty in inducing members to take part in the programs. This department has again secured the use of the Montaville School gymnasium for the winter months.

September leaves a cloud of sorrow and sadness over the little group of Saints in Portland. Two of our young married folk have been called beyond the veil. One was Irving Dodge, who leaves a bride of one year, and two sisters, the latter faithful Sunday school workers here. The other was Sister Bertha Rader, a member of the Portland choir. She leaves her husband, four small children, mother, grandmother, and two sisters, as well as a host of warm friends. While the Saints and relatives know that God is just and kind and that their loved ones are in his hands, yet they find it hard to say, "Thy will be done."

An orchestra was organized Monday evening, September 15, at the church. Henry L. Livingston, a young man who has been studying violin for the past six years under one of Portland's leading instructors, is in charge of the orchestra and is mainly responsible for its organization. It is composed of five or six pieces, with fair prospects of increasing considerably in numbers. They meet every Monday evening at the church for practice. The leader promises to give us some real music in a few months.

Beardstown, Illinois

October 8.—The ladies' aid met at the home of Sister Wandless Thursday afternoon, October 2, to plan their work for the winter. A bake sale was planned for October 11, and a bazaar for the first part of December. Some time ago the church was remodeled, and some of the ladies are striving to do what they can to help pay off the debt. The Beardstown Saints have never had a bake sale or bazaar before, so we hope to make them a success and be able to turn over a good sum to the building committee.

Brother and Sister William Vanhoosier and Sister Caroline Owens, of Taylorville, Illinois, spent the week end here, and Brother Vanhoosier preached a fine sermon to the Saints on Sunday evening, October 5.

Brother and Sister Harvey Mose and family have moved back to Beardstown. They have resided in Independence, Missouri, for the past four years. The Saints here rejoice to have them live here again, as they were always good, active workers in the church.

Woodbine, Iowa

September 30.—It was with pleasure that many of the Saints from our branch partook of the spiritual food that was given out at the Dow City reunion. Often the young people in the branch meetings refer to the wonderful prayer meetings had there.

Some of the Saints, however, were not privileged to attend the reunion. These were cared for at the Sunday school hour by Brother George Young, our faithful superintendent, who remained at home for that purpose.

The local priesthood has been giving us some real practical sermons on true sainthood, emphasizing the necessity of getting nearer to God, that we may get farther from the world and its allurements.

Brother and Sister W. H. Ware have recently moved to Independence, and while we miss them greatly, we wish for them success and contentment, and hope that in very deed they may be true helpers in Zion.

Brother George Whitehead and family have also left us, but we trust that our loss will be Logan's gain.

We are pleased to learn that our young sister, Gladys Chiles, who has for some time been in an Omaha hospital, is rapidly recovering her health.

The Department of Women is preparing to hold a bazaar in the near future and later will resume class study. The Orioles gave a play that financed their way to the Dow City reunion. Since the summer vacation is over the Temple Builders are again back to work.

Springfield, Missouri

October 4.—I have been quite busy since coming to Springfield the past summer, having engaged in tent meetings about seven weeks. The last place we pitched our tent we had fair crowds and the people seemed to appreciate our efforts. Eight have been baptized, and one more bright little girl will be baptized next Sunday.

However, we cannot claim all this number as the immediate result of our tent meetings. One very peculiar experience happened while these meetings were in progress. My sister-in-law and her little girl were visiting with us for a few days. While here, much to my surprise, she requested baptism, and it was announced to take place the next day at the park. She had seen in a dream the place where she was to be baptized, and on going to the park she recognized the place at once. The little girl could not stay out of the water after her mother was baptized.

After they had returned the oldest daughter came through on her way to her childhood home, and while here she also requested baptism. She had a splendid confirmation that night, and she was given a vision while the hands of the elders were on her head. She left our place for home on Wednesday, and early Friday morning she passed away. The Thursday night before her death she could not sleep, so she and her mother talked late. During this conversation she related how during her confirmation a light came before her which appeared to be nearly as large as the sun. Her mother thought this might mean she was to become a bright church worker, but the girl replied: "No, in order to be a good church worker one must have good health. But it means my future will be bright. I have the impression that I will not live long." She was a bright girl, with high ideals, and about two months before her death had married a young man by the name of Charles Crowder. Brothers John Cunningham and George Davis of Thayer had charge of the funeral, and spoke consoling words to the bereaved family.

We expect to do church work here in the city this fall and winter by holding private meetings in the homes over the city and making a thorough canvass of the homes with tracts. Some of the local brethren have offered to help, and I am praying that God's Holy Spirit will direct the Saints in the examination of every problem confronting us, irrespective of all parties or men, and that we may rededicate ourselves to the work of God, that success may crown the efforts of the Saints everywhere.

A. M. BAKER.

South Bend and Hibbard, Indiana

The annual "group meeting" for South Bend and vicinity was conducted September 21 at the country home of Brother Charles Ferry, who lives six and a half miles west of the city on the Lincoln Highway. Saints attended from Buchanan, Mattawan, Elkhart, Mishawaka, River Park, South Bend, and Hibbard. Coldwater, Michigan, was represented by the preacher and Sister Myrtle Perry, who is attending business college at that Indiana center.

A good spirit was manifested throughout. Sermons were delivered at eleven and half past two, with a wonderful dinner served in between that would satisfy the daintiest epicurean present. The get-together was a success from every standpoint.

The Hibbard Saints returned about half past four with about sixteen in the party. The journey of about forty miles was most of it made through the storm of that evening. It seemed that the cloud burst just overhead, with much thunder, lightning, and wind.

Arriving at Hibbard safely, we entered upon a series of eight meetings with clear spiritual atmosphere, resulting in the baptism of four people. Sunday morning fasting and prayer were announced for the sick and afflicted, and when we met at the river the same hour, one of the brethren for whom prayer had been asked was present. He had been confined to his bed the previous week.

The candidates were confirmed at the eleven o'clock service, and the infant daughter of Brother and Sister Glenn Reed was blessed. A fine spirit was manifest, which lighted up the way with golden touch and held all with willingness.

The series of meetings closed Sunday evening with many expressions of encouragement, edification, and appreciation. Brother Wipper had preached five evenings at Hibbard, making two weeks of services for that branch. A good work is imminent in that district.

S. W. L. SCOTT.

El Reno, Oklahoma

October 7.—After much prayer and counsel with authorities interested, wife and I concluded to return to El Reno, being thoroughly convinced it was the Lord's will. We started south and west October 2, and were met at the depot in El Reno at a quarter of twelve at night by a number of the Saints.

We found Brother Case earnestly engaged in a series of meetings, which have been disturbed by having to move about, but now the tent is up and the services are being well attended.

Sunday was a remarkable day. After Sunday school the Saints assembled for sacramental service, which was a very fine meeting, the gift of prophecy being manifested to the joy and comfort of the people. There were twenty-six testimonies and a number of prayers in the space of twenty-five minutes. The burden of the admonition was that all should labor together for the advancement of the cause, not leaving it for the ministers.

A beautiful park was resorted to after the service, and a community table of immense length was soon groaning under the splendid variety of viands such as El Reno and Chickasha sisters can prepare. It was a feast for the physical as we had had a feast for the spiritual.

After the afternoon service there were four baptized by Brother Case, making nine, with others to follow next Sunday.

Brother Case preached Sunday night on the justice of God, or degrees of reward and punishment, and last night on Zion; two remarkable sermons full of inspiration.

Brother and Sister Norris and son Paul from Chickasha rejoiced with us on Sunday.

Successful Opening Day

NEWCASTLE, CALIFORNIA, September 28.—Rocklin Branch to-day celebrated its opening day as a branch, having been a mission about five years. About fifty were in attendance, with several from Sacramento. District President J. D. White was with us, preaching another very impressive sermon, after which we placed the contents of our lunch baskets on a long table and each served himself cafeteria style. It was a day well spent and is one long to be remembered.

Five have recently been added to our numbers by baptism.

ROY C. BARMORE.

Oakland, California

October 2.—Sunday the Oakland Saints celebrated the eighty-eighth birthday of Brother Ferris. He preached Sunday morning, using for his text 1 Timothy 4.

When Brother Ferris was relating some of his experiences Sunday evening he told the story of a man who asked him if God was all powerful why did he not change the conditions and make peace on earth. He answered that God does not force any man to be good, but gives us our free agency to choose good or evil. His sermon was wonderful, and the Spirit of God was with him as he preached the old gospel. The choir also did its part, and Brother Parks sang a beautiful solo.

The evening sermon was short, and at the end Brother Ferris recited a poem. The Spirit of God came to him at this period, and the Saints were all spellbound.

After the sermon the Saints gathered in the back room where there was a cake for his birthday, and on it were eighty-eight candles. Brother J. D. White asked Brother Ferris to blow out the candles, and most of them went out at his second blow. Ice cream was served with the cake, and then all formed a circle to shake hands with him and offer their best wishes.

Brother Ferris has been on the firing line for a great many years and stands out firm for the gospel of Christ against all that are against Him. The Lord has wonderfully blessed him, he still having his eyesight and a quick, active mind.

From Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, we have the following from our correspondent: "September 27 closed a busy and profitable eight days for this branch, as the Saints operated a dining hall at the state fair. Brother William Bath of Independence began a series of meetings here October 2. He is preaching some fine sermons, and some are near baptism."

Anaconda, Montana

September 30.—A very inspiring sermon was enjoyed by the Saints of Anaconda Sunday, September 28, which was delivered by Elder Joseph Beck. Brother Beck spoke on latter-day revelation, emphasizing the fact that revelation is necessary in this day and age. His admonition was to the Saints to live close to Christ so it will be possible to enjoy the spiritual gifts.

The passing away of Andrew Peterson was a sad occurrence to those who knew him. Mr. Peterson was eighty-seven years old when he died. He lived most of his life in the Deer Lodge Valley and was the father of nine children, forty-four grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren. Brother George Thorburn preached the funeral sermon.

The young people of the Department of Recreation and Expression had a hard-time social. Lemonade, cocoa, coffee, and sandwiches were served. The social was kept quite lively by music which was rendered by a four-piece orchestra. The instruments were a piano, saxophone, accordion, cornet. The accordion player was a wonder considering the fact that he is only a very young man.

Chatham, Ontario

October 2.—Since our last report attendance has been getting better at our meetings. The holiday season being over and wet, cold weather setting in, the Saints are beginning to stay at home on Sunday. Over fifty were present at our last sacramental service.

District conference was held last Saturday and Sunday at Sarnia and was well attended. The officers elected are as follows: Robert Brown, of Merlin, president; Duncan Clatworthy and Stewart Lamont, of Chatham, counselors; G. O. Coburn, Blenheim, head of Department of Music; R. H. Jones, Chatham, Sunday school superintendent; Ezra Mifflin, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression; Mrs. R. H. Jones, Chatham, head of the Department of Women. It will be seen from this that Chatham has its share of district officers.

The Sunday school is planning to celebrate Thanksgiving and Armistice Day on the Sunday nearest November 11.

Miss Eunice Noltie, a prominent young lady of this branch, was united in marriage to Mr. William Hunter, of Windsor, September 28, Elder R. H. Jones officiating. The young couple will live in Windsor.

Sacramento, California

October 4.—Interest in church activities has increased here with the close of summer and vacation days. Elder G. H. Wixom has been appointed city missionary and is occupying the pulpit to the edification of the Saints, with good attendance and interest. Our radio quota was oversubscribed and forwarded. The installation of a local receiving set is now being considered, and a committee was appointed with power to act.

Elder Roy C. Barmore of Newcastle, president of the newly organized Branch at Rocklin, baptized six children in our baptismal font late this summer. We rejoice with them to see this addition to their branch.

We have with us now, living and attending here, Brother and Sister Charles R. Dempsey of Los Angeles; Brother and Sister Roy Day of Oakland; and Mr. and Sister Joseph A. Barr of Fresno. The latter couple were quietly married here by Elder W. H. Dawson on September 4, Sister Barr being formerly Sister Florence Brouner, cousin of Elder W. A. Brouner, of Tulare Branch.

Recent visitors were Sister Stella Kelley and Brother and Sister D. H. Crum of Los Angeles; and Sister E. Potter and son Billy of Spokane. These three sisters were here visiting their sister, our Sister J. A. Austin, and she with them went by auto, via San Francisco, for a week's visit in Los Angeles. Sister Kelley and Brother Crum favored us with beautiful solo and duet numbers for our church services the Sunday they were here. Sister Kelley is chorister of the Los Angeles choir.

Our first fall community supper was held at a local clubhouse last evening with a good attendance and an enjoyable time.

Lamoni Stake Items

LAMONI, IOWA, October 12.—Lamoni has been experiencing some real summer weather the past week, and the lure of the great outdoors has been unusually strong. The fact that colder days are coming has furnished sufficient excuse for the neglect of indoor duties, and picnics and nutting parties have been the call. This fact, coupled with the belief of our recreational leader that young and old should play part of the time, led President McDowell to accompany his Sunday school class of sixty-five members to the south woods for a wiener roast. After the eats they enjoyed games by the light of the moon, supplemented by the lights from the autos. As the evening waned, a circle was formed, and the air rang with the melody of their voices ere they wended their way homeward.

Yesterday a Religio class of twenty-three boys, aged ten to twelve, was accompanied on a hike by their teacher, Brother Leonard Bish, to what is known as the North Woods, six miles north of town, where they found enjoyment gathering nuts, playing games, and roasting wieners and marshmallows. Brother Bish is a Graceland student from Des Moines, who has succeeded in capturing the interest of this bunch of pre-adolescents.

A number of our church workers are spending the week end at Hiteman, Iowa, where the stake conference is in session. Among them are Stake Presidents C. E. Wight and W. E. Prall, Elders L. G. Holloway, H. H. Gold, and J. A. Gunsolley, Bishop A. Carmichael, Apostle D. T. Williams, Brother Roy L. Roberts, and Sisters Blanche Edwards and Mabel Carlile.

A series of meetings starts to-night at Oland Branch, which will be conducted by Elders C. E. Wight and W. E. Prall. Music is furnished from Lamoni. These services in smaller branches around Lamoni furnish a splendid opportunity for service to our young singers, who gladly accept it and respond cheerfully to many calls.

Two of our young musicians have recently been chosen from a large group of contestants to places in the symphony orchestra at the Iowa University. Charles Church, junior, was given second chair out of twenty chosen from a class of forty who tried out in the clarinet section; and Malcomb Barrows won first chair in the flute section over two members of last year's orchestra. These young men are very talented and have always been free to give their talent to church and community activities.

The sacramental meeting last Sunday was well attended, and a splendid spirit prevailed. The priesthood meeting was held early in the afternoon to allow attendance at the sacred band concert which was held in Central Park. The concert was fine and was enjoyed by a large crowd. D. T. Williams addressed the congregation at the church in the evening.

The Patronesses of Graceland are working hard on preparations for a bazaar and dinner to be held on election day, November 4, and especially on a three-act comedy drama, "Brown's in town," which will be presented in the evening. The society hopes to complete the $500 pledge made to the gymnasium fund.

The Boosters are presenting "The womanless wedding" Tuesday evening for the band benefit.

Miss Grace Savage, who has served nineteen years as efficient bookkeeper for the Lamoni Stake Bishopric, severed her connection with the office and Lamoni last week and moved to New Smyrna, Florida, where she will keep house for her brother Harry.

Elder E. E. Long was called to Logan, Ohio, yesterday, to the bedside of his father, who is critically ill.

Holden Stake News

Holden

Death has again invaded our ranks. On Sunday, September 28, Brother Lyle Evan Doty, son of Brother and Sister John Doty, was accidentally killed at Susanville, California, while in the employ of the Southern Pacific Railway Company. His funeral was held from the church in Holden on Sunday, October 5, sermon by Elder D. J. Krahl, Elders McWethy and Scarcliff assisting. The American Legion and Masonic Order had charge of the service at the cemetery. While Brother Evan was in France in service, his wife, child, and brother died. Three brothers and sisters preceded him in death. He leaves a son, father, mother, and sister, Mrs. Ralph Baker, of his immediate family.

On Monday the funeral service of Brother Henry Young was held at his residence. Sermon by Elder I. M. Ross, Elder D. J. Krahl assisting. Brother Young leaves an aged mother, Sister Priscilla Young; four sisters, Mrs. Lavina Bennet, Sand Point, Iowa; Mrs. Henry Masterson, and Misses Dora and Cora Young; five brothers, George, Houghton, South Dakota; Gideon, Sheldon, Missouri; David, John, and Romalia, of Holden.

The Department of Women had a meeting and arranged for the holding of their bazaar November 7 and 8.

Lexington

We are rejoicing to-day because of the blessing we received at our sacramental service yesterday. The Lord by his Spirit spoke to us, giving admonition and much encouragement. We enjoyed a very spiritual month last month and hope to have a better one this month. Brother Burgess preached at the evening hour. Sister Garvia Mayer underwent an operation at the Saint Luke's Hospital in Kansas City, Missouri. The operation was very serious, but she is now improving.

Atherton

Brother Ammon White held a two-week series of meetings at Atherton which was very profitable indeed. We were fortunate to get him, as he has about thirty places waiting for him. He felt that two weeks were all he could possibly give us at this time.

The Department of Women is being well organized, and that which we have chosen as a study course is home nursing. Mrs. Sarah Rodgers Chapman comes from Independence each Thursday afternoon and gives a free demonstration in practical home nursing. She was formerly head nurse at the Independence Sanitarium, and is consecrating her time and talent, being desirous of having her knowledge imparted to others.

We thank those who so generously assisted in our music during our series of meetings. The Walnut Park orchestra played for us last Sunday evening. The choir from Walnut Park also were with us one evening. There were those who furnished solos, duets, and quartets.

We were very pleasantly surprised to have with us last Sunday, Brother Hopkins from Grandview, a member of the stake high council.

Stone Church

The weather Sunday morning was very fine, which served to increase the usually good attendance at church, at which time Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith was the speaker. Regular services were held throughout the day, with preaching in the evening by President Elbert A. Smith.

Apostles J. A. Gillen and F. Henry Edwards are at present in Michigan attending the young people's convention held there. They, with Bishop F. B. Blair of Kansas City, are to be the special speakers of the convention. Apostle E. J. Gleazer is holding a series of meetings at Maple Grove Branch near Stewartsville.

The last of the outdoor pictures, which have been shown every Saturday during the summer, was shown last Saturday night, with a good attendance present, as the night was especially fine for this time of year.

Pastor R. V. Hopkins is improving in health, although he is not yet able to attend services. On sacrament Sunday he sent communications to both the young people's prayer meeting and the general meeting, which were well received.

The golden wedding anniversary of Elder and Mrs. J. C. Chrestensen was celebrated at the home of their youngest son, Lehi L. Chrestensen, October 10. Both Brother and Sister Chrestensen are seventy-four years of age this year. Brother Chrestensen's birthday and a three-year-old grandchild's came on the same day as their wedding anniversary, and it was made the happy occasion of a family reunion. The children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, numbering thirty-nine, were all present, to which a bountiful supper was served. This aged couple live at Tigris, Missouri. As their five sons and one daughter reside in or near Independence, they came here for the celebration. In the fifty years of married life death has claimed four of their family. In 1888 Brother Chrestensen was called to the priesthood and has been in charge of branches and districts ever since. In 1910 he was placed under General Conference appointment, and at present he is in charge of the Southern Missouri District besides being president of his home branch. To live together for fifty years, to share each other's sorrow, hope, and joy, is a great gift and blessing from the heavenly Father. Their long service in the church has been a blessing to many, and their reward is sure.

Second Church

Bishop Charles Fry was the speaker at eleven o'clock and was well received.

The priesthood met at six o'clock in the evening and took up some essential matters relating to improvement in the general work of Section Two.

The evening speaker was Elder William Postma, who answered a call to substitute for Elder J. S. Roth. Elder Postma is becoming a ready speaker in the English language and always has a good hearing at home.

The choir is taking on new activity and Sunday morning was present in goodly numbers, rendering a beautiful anthem in addition to leading the regular congregational singing.

Enoch Hill

The Sunday speakers were Elder F. J. Lewis in the morning and Elder W. H. Kelley at seven in the evening.

Sunday afternoon three children were baptized, Elders William Worth and J. V. Roberts officiating. A good-sized audience witnessed the ceremony.

There continues to be an influx of Saints into this locality, and the capacity of the present church building is being very severely taxed in accommodating the crowds. Especially is this manifest at communion services. In this connection the Enoch Hill Saints are busily engaged in paying off their local church debt in the hope that soon they will be able to enlarge their house of worship or build an entirely new one.

Liberty Street

Liberty Street congregation reports the baptism of ten people this summer. This is a good record for a congregation of this size.

Elder J. S. Roth, one of the old stand-bys of the church, was the speaker Sunday morning on "True religion and how to find it." Elder Joseph Luff gave one of his characteristic good sermons in the evening.

Monday evening the Temple Builder girls gave a surprise party for their leader, Sister Pearl Moriarty. As soon as business matters could be attended to at the church, where their regular meetings are held, the girls begged permission to go home as they were "so tired," and when they were dismissed they all disappeared. Sister Moriarty was piloted to the home of a neighbor, and there found the girls, all weariness disappeared. Sister Moriarty was presented with a large birthday cake with candles, and then fruit salad and cake were served to the crowd. The girls also presented her with a beautiful box of candy and a piece of silver in appreciation of the very fine work she is doing with them.

Spring Branch

The sacramental service October 5 was well attended. In the evening Elder F. G. Christy preached for us for the first time. He gave an interesting, instructive sermon. Elder R. S. Salyards preached again on October 12, giving his sermon in his usual convincing manner. In the evening Evangelist U. W. Greene preached, his sermon being preliminary to a series of meetings he is to conduct beginning next Sunday evening.

Sister Mattie Wells has been confined to her home with an attack of appendicitis, but her condition is now improved.

Brother and Sister D. D. McLain gave a dinner party at their home October 6 in honor of W. F. Smith and O. H. Bagley and their families, the occasion being the birthday of Brother McLain as well as his sixteenth wedding anniversary. Sister Bagley returned the compliment on October 10 in honor of Brother Bagley's birthday.

Other Congregations

The speakers at Walnut Park Sunday were Glaud Smith in the morning and Bishop B. J. Scott in the evening; at East Independence, A. H. Parsons in the morning and F. C. Smith in the evening; Englewood, Lyman Fike in the morning.

Spiritual Week of Meetings; Two Baptized

SARNIA, ONTARIO, September 30.—We are glad to announce that Brother Ernest Burt from Onaway was with us and spent the week ending September 28 in active gospel work, holding meetings every evening with as good interest as could be expected during county fair week.

When Sunday morning came our hearts rejoiced as we saw two much-loved candidates led forth for baptism. They were Samuel Holcomb of Spruce and Laurence Hickey of Hubbard Lake. As soon as they were again made comfortable with dry clothes, a meeting was conducted where they were confirmed, one was administered to, sacrament was served, and all enjoyed the wonderful Spirit of the Master in prayer, testimony, and song. The meeting was in charge of Brethren Burt and Rudd of Alpena.

Immediately after this meeting was dismissed, dinner was served cafeteria style to the hungry sixty-six present.

At three o'clock meeting was again resumed in which Brother Melvin Smith of Hillman, Brother Rudd, and Brother Burt each preached for half an hour. The farmers then hurried home to do their chores, anxious to get back to meeting at eight o'clock, at which Brother Burt preached, assisted by Brother Smith.

Then came the sad part, bidding farewell to Brother Burt and the visiting Saints from Hillman, Lachine, and Alpena. But our hearts were full of thankfulness that God had so wonderfully blessed us, and that we are again privileged to have meetings here in our own little branch.

MRS. LYLE HICKEY.

Eastern Michigan District Conference

The conference of the Eastern Michigan District convened at Sandusky September 20, 21. The prayer service held Saturday at nine o'clock was a spiritual feast. Brother Stanley Horton of Caseville was called to the office of elder, and Wilbur Provost of Sandusky to the office of priest. This blessing of the Spirit was a splendid beginning for the conference proper, which opened at ten o'clock with the district presidency in charge.

The same splendid spirit which prevailed during the prayer service continued throughout the business sessions, resulting in the accomplishment of a great deal of business without the necessity of crowding. The spirit of unity made it a pleasure to attend the meetings. What a blessing to labor when the Spirit of Christ is present and all labor to one common end!

After the usual routine business, election of officers took place. The official staff of the past year was sustained without an exception, as all seemed desirous of serving in the best interest of the work. Earl Deim of Carsonville was chosen to act as district Sunday school superintendent, as Brother G. T. Richards, who has been acting as a member of the missionary staff, and the quorum of Twelve do not desire missionaries to be tied up with local work. Brother Deim selected Elder Lewis E. Grice of Crosswell as his assistant.

Elder J. R. Grice occupied the Saturday evening preaching hour. Just preceding the conference he and Elder W. M. Grice had been holding a series of meetings in Sandusky. After the preaching service a short program was given under the auspices of the Department of Music of the district and the combined orchestras from McGregor and Sandusky.

The Saturday conference had ordered the ordination of five elders and one priest, so Sunday morning at eight o'clock an ordination meeting was held in the church. Here again the Lord poured out his Spirit in such power that all were caused to rejoice.

After this service all went to the McDonald auditorium, where the services of the day had been advertised. The building began filling fast at half past nine, and though it had rained the greater part of the day Saturday, the auditorium was filled to capacity with Saints from various parts of the district. Those who did not put forth an effort to be present missed one of the best conferences held in the district in years. The Lord poured out his Spirit in prophecy and tongues, and all were made to rejoice. The prayer service lasted from half past nine till noon, and all wondered that the time had gone so rapidly.

There was preaching in the afternoon by J. R. Grice and in the evening by W. M. Grice.

Those ordained to the office of elder were Ben McGeachy and Stanley Horton of Caseville, Herbert Swoffer of Marlette, Brother Allen of Port Huron, and our young district missionary, G. T. Richards, of Carsonville. Wilbur Provost of Sandusky was ordained priest.

Among out-of-town visitors were Elder Frank Slye and wife, Fred Cadow and wife and son Tom, Sister Sheffler and son, and Mr. and Sister McMasters, all of Bradner, Ohio.

Four were baptized Sunday by W. M. Grice.

Brother Thomas Jones, of Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, says their Sunday school, numbering sixty, had its picnic at Columbia Park. An enjoyable time was had. One of their scholars left for England on August 16, and all were sorry to lose him. The branch is improving spiritually.

APPEAL FOR WORLD PEACE

tian love. He exhorted to righteousness and peace in these words: "Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you." The Master's parable of the Good Samaritan likewise instructs us how to deal even with strangers and enemies according to the individual and the nation.

Christ taught us to pray: "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." But the kingdom of God cannot be realized on earth until the peoples of the earth have been taught to deal in the spirit of Christ one with another.

Under prevailing political and religious conditions a most vigorous and highly systematized campaign of education in all lands is called for to bring about in actuality the brotherhood of man.

A World Peace Mission is necessary. The time has come when the people of all nations must obey the mandate of the Prince of Peace requiring us to love all men.

When the various nations shall have been brought to the knowledge of wisdom and truth it will be a comparatively simple matter to outlaw war and put an international system of jurisdiction in its place. All that remains then is for each nation to declare by popular referendum for complete disarmament.

The United States of America, with a population representing all races and nationalities, offers the very best field for the work of an effective World Peace Mission. There is not the slightest doubt that among more than a hundred millions of people speaking all the languages of the earth are found a great number of high-minded and well-qualified persons who, with lectures, pamphlets, newspaper articles, will enlist as missionaries in the cause of peace and an international judicial system.

Bishop Fry Appointed to Kirtland District

Bishop Charles Fry has been assigned to labor in the Kirtland District, vice Brother L. H. Lewis, who expects to take up his residence in Nauvoo, Illinois. Brother Fry will assume responsibilities November 1. Until this time the solicitors will continue to report to Brother Lewis and thereafter to Brother Fry at R. F. D. 2, Willoughby, Ohio.

Brother Fry's long years of service in the church and his splendid ability qualify him well for this important task. He is genial; a man of wise counsel; of pleasing address; a man who makes friends easily and retains them long; peaceable and yet firm. He possesses qualities which will endear him to the hearts of the Kirtland District Saints.

We take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation for the splendid work done by Brother Lewis during his sojourn in Kirtland District.

FREDERICK M. SMITH, President.

Attention, Michigan Young People

The state convention to be held at Flint, October 25, 26, is to be the biggest thing of its kind. Apostles J. A. Gillen and F. Henry Edwards and Bishop Fred B. Blair of Kansas City, and, while the information has not been confirmed, F. M. McDowell of the First Presidency, are expected to be present.

Those driving to Flint will find arrows at the city limits of Flint, directing them to the new high school auditorium, at Second and Crapo Streets. Ample parking space will be arranged for everyone. Those coming by train over the Pere Marquette and Grand Trunk Railways can get street car direct by taking Second-Delaware car.

Everybody is urged to attend and to make due preparation for the best spiritual time of their lives. Letters are being sent to the various young people directors of the State and Canada, giving details of program, and outline of what may be expected by those attending. Remember, no age limit.

MATTHEW W. LISTON.

Presiding Bishopric

Mention has previously been made in these columns concerning the admission of Brother R. T. Cooper to the Missouri Bar. It will be recalled that he carried off the highest honors at the Kansas City School of Law. He has been associated with the Presiding Bishop's office since 1920, his work being chiefly in connection with the real estate activities of the office. His splendid ability and untiring energy have made him a most valuable associate, and it is with regret that we announce his separation from us.

When on account of the business depression which seriously affected church receipts, a program of retrenchment was contemplated, Brother Cooper graciously offered to devote himself to other work provided arrangements could be made to care for the affairs under his charge without detriment to the general work. By a distribution of these matters to others it has been possible to make this change. Brother Cooper, however, will be with us for some time during the period of transition.

It is impossible for the average member of the church to imagine the great volume of detail which attaches to real estate transactions of this office, the records which must be kept, and the many legal problems involved. While Brother Cooper will not be a part of the active working machinery of our office, we are assured of his continued interest and cooperation in the work of the church.

Those who seek his service in the legal profession will also have the benefit of his wide experience in the real estate business, together with the high idealism developed through his church association.

Our Departed Ones

SAGLE.—Elizabeth Rheyndress, wife of Thomas Sagle, was born October 22, 1834, at Gilmansbury, Ontario. Baptized August 20, 1912, by S. O. Foss. Died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Coe, The Slash, Ontario, August 4, 1924. Leaves five sons and one daughter. Funeral from the home of William Coe in charge of W. R. Smith. Sermon by M. K. Brown. Interment in Hilly Grove Cemetery.

SCRANTON.—Theresa Denkmann Scranton was born November 13, 1870, in Scott County, near Davenport, Iowa. Moved to Davenport with her parents when a small child. Married Albert James Scranton February 17, 1891, of Millersburg, Illinois, where they made their home. Baptized November 1, 1908, and gave an active service to the church. Died September 13, 1924, after a lingering illness. Leaves her seven children, four grandchildren, four step-children, five brothers and sisters. Funeral from the Saints' church at Millersburg, with sermon by Wesley W. Richards, of Davenport. Interment in Millersburg Cemetery.

Radio Flashes

The following reports are part of those received from October 8 to 11 inclusive. Note that many are hearing K F I X on the new wave length of 268 meters who have not been able to hear our station before.

North Little Rock, Arkansas.—Despite the awful static last night (October 7) I heard your program. Reception strong, modulation fine. The male quartet was wonderful. Hope to hear you again when static is absent.—J. A. Weas, Municipal Judge.

Liverpool, New York.—The last selections of to-night's program (October 7) were indeed fine. Picked up your station while trying to get K F N F. I heard you announce the new 268-meter wave length and request reports. This is the first time I have ever heard K F I X. Your signals were too weak for good loud-speaker reception.—T. H. Schuelke.

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.—It may be of interest to you that I heard your announcer state among other things last night that you were for the first time using 268 meters instead of 240 meters. I am using a Crosley Trirdyn, head-phones operating on the first two tubes. I got you on point 19 of each dial. Signals were strong, but there was some interference from several other stations.—Sidney J. Watts, Attorney at Law.

Norwood, Ohio.—I tuned in on your station at approximately 9.50 Central Standard Time on my one-tube set. You came in loud and clear, and I at first thought I had the powerful station K D K A. A male quartet was on when I picked you up, after which your announcer gave the wave length (268) and also said he would be glad to hear from the listeners. Norwood is five miles from Cincinnati and I think I am approximately five hundred miles from you. As acknowledgment of your loud and clear reception, I am sending you this letter.—Charles McGrath.

The True Philosophy of Church Government

I. A REVIEW OF THE JOINT COUNCIL OF APRIL, 1924

A Joint Council of Presidency, members of the Twelve in America, and Order of Bishops met in Independence during April, 1924. That much you have heard. No doubt you have heard much more. One man said to another, "I don't know if you have heard what I have heard or not?" The other replied, "I don't know what you've heard, but if you've heard what I've heard you've heard, you've heard wrong!" It seems to be human nature to think that the other man heard wrong.

Often it is a matter of surprise that men should report so differently upon that which they have had equal opportunity to observe. Noting the conflict, puzzled readers may say, What is wrong? But we must remember that men interpret that which they see in the light of their experiences and personal viewpoints. The thing the reader gets is each writer's interpretation. These interpretations may differ widely, and honestly so.

After the many testimonies borne concerning the council meeting referred to above, I bear my testimony latest of all—but perhaps not last of all. I come not to attack the minority members of the council. Men may differ as to that which they see, and differ honestly. But every man should be a particularly good witness as to his own intent, desires, purposes, and spirit. Any member of the council may thus speak. His testimony should have respectful hearing.

The Genesis of the Council

The Presiding Bishopric had asked for a council of the Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric. The President presented the request to the Standing High Council. The High Council voted to advise the calling of a council of the First Presidency, members of the Twelve in America, and Order of Bishops to consider matters involved in that request. The vote was unanimous.

The Spirit of the Council

Personally, not for many years have I entered upon a meeting with a more prayerful spirit, desiring to assist in some way to compose differences and save the church the travail now upon her. I assume that my brethren were even as I was in this matter. We opened the council with the communion service, the President serving the emblems.

The meetings proceeded with various fluctuations of spiritual power and temper, such as occur when matters of importance are discussed among men of strong opinion and feeling. During the closing sessions a fine spirit grew, giving promise, we thought, of a solution of our troubles, and that it did not so eventuate disappointed many.

The concluding statements, first by the Presiding Bishop, and lastly by President F. M. Smith were moderate and kindly and significant. The Bishop declined to accede to the findings of the council. The President deplored the decision reached by the Bishop, but commended the spirit in which he spoke, and stated that we would go on with the church work as best we could, with frequent consultation with the Bishop and frequent council with other quorums. In that spirit the council adjourned.

The Purpose of the Council

Originally the council had in mind the financial needs of the church. It may then be asked, Why did they not proceed to advise retrenchments? It soon became apparent that more than retrenchment was needed. The council apparently came to think that if a unanimity of purpose and feeling could be developed, revenue would be increased, which would be better than a curtailing of church enterprises. The church should think of growth and expansion, not of diminution.

It became then the purpose of the council to seek to formulate something to which all could agree as a basis of operation as being within the law and in harmony with the books and the procedure of the church. The council at no time endeavored to supersede General Conference or pass any law binding upon the church without General Conference sanction. Nor could it have done so, since it sat as an advisory council, so stated and recognized from the first day.

The Status of the Council

I know of no law providing for any permanent standing organization known as a Joint Council, or "The Joint Council." The term is one of convenience. It will be conceded that the Presidency may call into council and sit with any quorum or number of quorums to discuss matters particularly pertinent to their work.

In 1894 a council of the Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric met to discuss subjects of wide range, including "church government" in some of its broader aspects. Their findings did not become law by the voice of that council; but were subsequently approved by conference and became binding on the church (Doctrine and Covenants, section 123).

A council of the Presidency, Twelve, Presiding Bishopric, and Presiding Patriarch met in 1917 and adopted resolutions defining the authority of the Presidency.

Nor should we forget that in 1894 a council of the First Presidency, Twelve, and Quorum of High Priests met and considered similar matters, and their resolutions were approved by the General Conference. The council of April, 1924, cannot be lightly dismissed when we consider precedents.

The only change from the council as asked for by the Presiding Bishopric was the addition of all available bishops. The presence of these men could hardly fail to strengthen the council. They are able men of established standing, giving their time and thought to the temporal interests of the church, alive and alert to her financial needs, certainly not indifferent to the rights and prerogatives of bishops.

The Presiding Bishopric Lost No Quorum Rights

The Presiding Bishopric lost no quorum rights by sitting with the Order of Bishops in this council. We must remember three facts:

First, the vote in the council was not at any time by quorums, but always as individuals.

Second, that procedure was strictly in harmony with our usual procedure. There has never been a vote by quorums in any meeting of the Presidency, Twelve, and Bishops since I have been in the Presidency. I doubt if there has been one in the history of the Reorganization.

Third, there is no law anywhere in the three books by which the Presiding Bishopric could vote as a quorum in council with the Presidency and Twelve. Provision is made for the Presidency, Twelve, and Seventy to vote as quorums under certain conditions, and the vote of two is to overbalance the vote of one, a unanimous to outweigh a divided vote, etc., since these three in certain matters are accounted equal. And in such a meeting of these three quorums, anyone could demand a quorum vote.

There is no such provision in the law for the Presiding Bishopric to enter that balance of power and sit in council and vote by quorums and offset the vote of the Presidency, the Twelve, or the Seventy.

As before said, the vote in the April council was en masse, as is the rule in similar council meetings, and the Presiding Bishopric had three votes, as did the Presidency.

Did the Presidency or the Council Seek to Oust the Bishop?

It is desirable so far as possible to speak in the affirmative and avoid the negative. But in some instances it is almost impossible to avoid negation. It has been said that the Presidency, or the President, or both, sought through this council to drive Bishop McGuire out, to force his resignation. It has even been intimated that the council itself by behest or order sought to force him from his office.

The council at no time issued any order even intimating the driving of anyone from office, or to the best of my knowledge ever thought to do so.

As for the Presidency, such a proposition was never discussed or suggested in any of our meetings either before or during the council meeting, or at any other time. Personally such a purpose never entered my mind. I have worked with the Bishops on cordial terms and never have sought to undermine or overthrow them, either in private or in public.

The President at no time made such a proposal to the council. True, he has twice been quoted as saying:

Brother McGuire, I am going to say something to you and I will carefully weigh my words. Before this council closes I want you to tell this body whether you are going to abide by the decisions of this group of men. If you are not I want to know it so that I may take some official action. I do not ask you to answer now but I do want an answer before we close these meetings.—SAINTS' HERALD, August 20, 1924, p. 797.

President Smith Speaks for Himself

On this point I have put the question squarely to President Smith and have from him the following answer:

On Board Train No. 15, C. M. & St. P. Ry.,

September 24, 1924.

PRESIDENT E. A. SMITH,

Independence, Missouri.

Dear Elbert: Before me is your letter of September 20 in which you say that it is being urged that my intent in calling the council in April last was to effect the resignation of Bishop McGuire, and that in the HERALD I have been quoted as putting a question to Brother McGuire concerning his attitude towards the findings of the council, etc., which quotation is being interpreted as meaning I intended to demand Brother McGuire's resignation.

www.LatterDayTruth.org

The quotation in the HERALD evidently is but the effort of some one to recall what I said, for the language I used then was not taken by the secretary of the council. I do not think the quotation is accurate.

It is difficult at this distance from the time of the council to recall the exact words I used; but I do know what was in my mind at the time, and that was to elicit from Brother McGuire, before adjournment, an expression of what would be his attitude towards the actions of the council. I had in mind several official actions which it might be necessary for the Presidency to take, but asking for the resignation of Brother McGuire as Bishop was not one.

Very sincerely yours,

(Signed) FREDERICK M. SMITH.

One "Official Action" Which Was Contemplated

One official action contemplated by the Presidency upon the failure of the council to compose the situation was the early calling of a special General Conference, or a General Assembly, to pass upon the findings of the council and endeavor to settle church difficulties.

The taking over of the HERALD and the opening of the discussion in its columns caused that proposition to be held in abeyance.

The Findings of the Council

The council adopted three rather important papers. One had to do with the building of the Auditorium, the method of rehabilitating the Auditorium fund, etc. Another had to do with stewardships, outlining plans for teaching and executing the doctrine, etc. The third document I will refer to as the document on church government. The last mentioned document has several times been reprinted in the HERALD, so I will not now requote it in its entirety.

The document on church government I could never defend if given the extreme and unconstitutional interpretations that have been put upon it by adverse critics. I can support it when given a reasonable interpretation. It is always in order to interpret the findings of a council of the church within the meaning of the constitutional law, rather than attempt an interpretation obviously contrary to law.

Theocratic-Democracy

In succeeding editorials I shall therefore set forth the idea of theocratic-democracy, for instance, as it is found historically in the life of the church and in her books: God first, the people second, or as Joseph, the Martyr, first stated it:

I go emphatically, virtuously, and humanely for a theocratic-democracy, where God and the people hold the power to conduct the affairs of men in righteousness.—Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 510.

Joseph and Heman on Rights of the Presidency

The statement on "supreme directional control" I shall interpret in harmony with the books and the teachings of our fathers; for instance, as being neither more nor less radical than the position taken by President Joseph Smith and Historian Heman C. Smith in their attempt to define "the true philosophy" of the church government in the following:

It appears from this revelation that the primary right of presiding over the church and of regulating and setting in order all the affairs of the same, is resident in the First Presidency; and that the true philosophy of the organization is, that if others should be appointed to those duties, these rights and prerogatives inhere in them in a secondary sense, to be exercised under the direction and counsel of the First Presidency.—Church History, vol. 1, p. 281.

They were interpreting the revelation of March, 1833, which said to the Presidency:

And this shall be your mission in all of your lives to preside in council and set in order all the affairs of the church and kingdom.—Doctrine and Covenants 87: 5.

Joseph Never Claimed More Than His Official Right

Their statement is the more significant when we remember that Joseph never claimed more than his right as an officer; while Heman was the inveterate champion of the rights of the people.

Language could hardly be plainer than that used by these two veteran defenders of the faith, and they termed it the true philosophy of the church. It is in agreement with the document adopted by the council of April, 1924, and is no new doctrine. To claim that some department is now exempt would be a new doctrine.

No Encroachment on General Conference

The "directional control" set forth in the two utterances, that by Joseph and Heman in 1896, and that by the Joint Council of April, 1924, must in the nature of the case be interpreted as executive, i. e., "directional," not legislative, hence not in conflict with the legislative rights of General Conference; indeed it must conform to and be in harmony with legislative enactments of General Conference and the constitutional law of the church. If not so conforming, action may be taken against the Presidency, as no one is exempt from "effective discipline."

The two points just emphasized, that the theory of directional control applies to the executive, not the legislative, and the second point, the power of the people to discipline in case of abuse, are set forth in the following:

If you cannot trust your President, silence him. You can do it without filing charges, and he has no recourse. . . . It is your privilege and your duty not to sustain them [the Presidency], if you think the interests of the work are jeopardized. But so long as they remain in office, the supreme rights of the executive arm of the church lie in the Presidency. But do not forget to draw the line between the legislative and the administrative or executive arm of the church. —Frederick M. Smith, in SAINTS' HERALD, April 25, 1917.

Not Suddenly Become New Doctrine

Certainly that which was reverently received and published by the church as true when stated by Joseph and Heman has not now overnight become a new and dangerous doctrine. Now as then the very great powers indicated as primarily resident in the Presidency are within metes and bounds of law.

In these articles I do not at any time question the sincerity of anyone who has written or spoken on matters now at issue. Nor would I knowingly wound the feelings of any. We should not wound unnecessarily. And as soon as possible we should take up the work of healing. The next number will consider the subject, "The church a theocratic-democracy."

I remain yours in gospel bonds,

ELBERT A. SMITH.

To Begin Work on New Radio Soon

Those in charge of the construction of the 1000-watt church broadcasting station expect to begin work on the radio towers and studio before the end of October. Funds have come in more slowly than was hoped for by the radio committee, but with almost three fourths of the required amount on hand it appears advisable to get as much done on the outside construction as possible before severe cold weather.

Parts for the new apparatus will not be ordered until the necessary funds are in sight; and in event the new towers and studio are completed before the 1000-watt broadcasting equipment is finished, the present 250-watt radiocaster will be used with the improved antenna and housing accommodations. This alone would increase the range fifty to one hundred per cent.

With work actually starting on the powerful station, it is believed that everyone will hasten their contributions to hasten the date when K F I X can go on the air with 1,000 watts.

The radio committee has received hundreds of enthusiastic letters from members and friends of K F I X. HERALD readers would enjoy reading all of them, but this is impracticable. A number of letters have been published, and this week we are printing several more.

Bishop C. J. Hunt is a real radio booster and has helped the radio drive at every opportunity during his travels the past few months. In a recent letter to the radio committee he wrote, "Success to the radio. I am in the Spring River District this week.

Webb City, Missouri, went 'over the top' in helping the radio fund. Herein find newspaper clipping in favor of our position and contention for a big radio. The farmers are preparing to hear and we should be able to serve them." The clipping Brother Hunt referred to told of a survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture which indicated that there are now nearly 400,000 receiving sets on farms alone. A year ago, according to the estimate, there were less than 150,000 receiving sets on farms.

Can anyone believe that such a letter as the following was actually received?

Being a little late in handing my contribution to our branch solicitor, he refused to accept it on the ground that our branch quota had been exceeded. I told him that some of the other branches may not reach their quotas and it would not come amiss, but to no avail. Now I am determined to put in my mite, believing it can be used to good advantage.

Has any other person had the experience of this sister who had such difficulty in making a contribution toward the new radio? All should remember that in some parts of the continent crops and certain conditions make it impossible for our people thus situated to do what would be normally their just part. Those more favorably situated therefore should not try to figure out how small an amount they can send, but should contribute according to their ability and desire to make the radio work successful.

Brother W. E. Shakespeare, in a letter from Straubville, North Dakota, wrote to Bishop McGuire in part, as follows:

In sending in my report I am also sending in a little offering from Brother and Sister Muffel of this place, to apply on the fund for the new radio station.

Everywhere I go I find people very much interested, and looking forward to the time when they may be able to hear the good news direct from headquarters. I, too, am very much interested and have done a little toward helping some of the scattered Saints to hear the programs given in Zion. Some of them are very much delighted to hear the sermons and the good programs.

One sister for whom I had made a small set and installed it wrote me lately that she heard Brother Gillen one night, and that she could even hear him breathe; also that a train seemed to have gone by the Campus and she heard it whistle twice, and that he stopped talking until it had gone by. She said it made tears come to her eyes as she listened to the sermon and the songs of Zion, and that she felt the Spirit with her just as much as though she had been right there before him listening to him preach.

We are all hoping that the new station will soon be a realization.

Brother and Sister J. L. Phillips, Leeton, Missouri, in sending their contribution state that they have been listening to K F I X for a long time, and add:

We are certainly glad you are making an effort to increase your power, making it possible for so many more to hear.

The Facts About Northern California District

To the Readers of the "Herald": Under ordinary or normal conditions we would refrain from invading the columns of the HERALD with matter of controversy, but since the HERALD published in its issue of August 20, 1924, a certain article wherein unkind insinuations and reflections were hurled against the Saints of the Northern California District conference, we feel justified in seeking publication with this reply.

In the HERALD of August 20, 1924, there appeared under the caption, "Supreme directional control in operation," an article which later was printed in pamphlet form and, together with a letter by the same author, distributed among members of the church.

By reason of the author making unwarranted inferences and advancing unjust conclusions, both the article and letter do a grave injustice to the President of the church and to the entire membership of the Northern California District.

District Reunion Organized

July 17 last, the largest reunion ever held in the Northern California District met for organization. Brother D. T. Williams, of the Quorum of Twelve, (officially assigned to this territory) was present. Announcement was made that the President of the church would be present within a few days; that possibly Apostle Roy S. Budd (also officially assigned to this territory) might arrive later. A motion was made by one in the audience,

That the President of the church, Brother F. M. Smith, Brother D. T. Williams of the Twelve, and to include any other member or members of the Quorum of Twelve who might later be present, they to have associated with them the district presidency, preside over the reunion.—Minutes of the Reunion.

This motion carried by a unanimous vote of the assembly. (Common consent.) President Smith had not yet arrived.

District Conference Organized

July 25 the delegates to district conference met for organization. Again the usual courtesy due visiting general church officials as well as respecting the law relative to the highest authority present (Doctrine and Covenants 104:7) was recognized and observed without objection. President Smith, Brother D. T. Williams of the Twelve (Apostle Roy S. Budd having wired he would not attend), together with the district presidency as associates, were chosen to preside over the conference. This was done through the regular procedure by motion and vote of the members. (Common consent of the people, and not supreme directional control of the President or anyone else, as inferred by the author of the article criticizing our district conference.) President Smith did not in any way thrust himself upon the conference.

There is no foundation in fact for criticizing the President of the church for his having presided or assisted in presiding at the Northern California district conference. It is unjust to cast reflection on the delegates for asking the President to preside. The delegates were mindful and respectful of the courtesy always due general church officials when present at such gatherings.

Discontinuing of Spring Conferences

The district president's report was read at the second business session on the first day of the conference. It stated "that the district presidency recommended the discontinuance of spring conferences" and urged the holding of one- and two-day meetings in various branches at different times. During the same session, a motion by one of the delegates was made and was seconded by another delegate,

That we adopt the recommendation of the district presidency and discontinue the holding of spring conferences, and in their stead hold one- or two-day meetings at various times among the branches.

This motion was discussed and when put to vote (common consent) carried almost unanimously.

Please note: Before the vote was had, the conference was advised that if the motion carried it would be necessary for the present conference to elect delegates to the next General Conference.

The Facts

Let us here state that last winter, prior to the February conference held at Sacramento, and before the Joint Council was held in April at Independence, the advisability of doing away with spring conferences in this district was discussed with Brethren D. T. Williams and Roy S. Budd, the two members of the Twelve officially assigned to this territory.

A Committee Named

The day following, after the conference had voted to do away with February conferences, the delegates again met in business session. At the urgent request of the district president, President Smith again occupied the chair, although he publicly asked to be excused.

During the course of disposing of the conference business, announcement was made that it would be in order to choose delegates to the next General Conference. This was followed by a motion that a committee of three be appointed to prepare and submit later to the conference a list of seventeen names as proposed nominees for delegates to the next General Conference. Inquiry was made as to how this committee should be named, whereupon both the mover and the seconder of the motion included in their motion that the committee be named by the chair. The question was asked by a member of the conference, "Could such action be construed as giving the proposed committee the power of choosing the delegates. The conference was told by President Smith and the district president that any names prepared and submitted by such committee could be considered as nominees only, and that the body still had the right of making additional nominations, all of which, before becoming delegates, should be voted upon by the conference. This motion was discussed and voted upon and declared carried. The vote was almost unanimous.

Was this act and vote by the body "supreme directional control" by the President of the church or anyone else, or was it another demonstration of procedure by common consent?

The names of W. H. Dawson, of the district presidency, C. W. Hawkins, president of the San Jose Branch, and J. B. Carmichael, president of the Oakland Branch, were announced as such committee. The committee retired immediately to prepare the proposed list of nominees to be voted upon by the conference. (Note the personnel of this committee, for we shall hereinafter refer to same.)

Delegates Instructed

During the absence of the committee just named, a motion was offered by Gerald Hawley, a priest, and seconded by Fred Hutchins, a layman:

That in the event the document on church government, as published in the HERALD of July 9, 1924, page 651, which document had been indorsed by a council consisting of the First Presidency, the Quorum of Twelve in America, and the Order of Bishops, held last April, comes before the next General Conference for consideration, that the delegates elected to represent this district at such conference be hereby instructed and directed to vote for the adoption of said document.

Copies of Article on Church Government Distributed

Immediately following the stating by the chair of the motion to instruct delegates, printed copies of the said document on church government were distributed to the delegates, thus precluding the possibility of any delegate voting on a matter not in black and white before him.

The Vote to Instruct

While the motion to instruct was being discussed, the previous question was applied for, but the chairman (President F. M. Smith) did not at the time entertain the request. He sat down and allowed opportunity for further discussion.

It is not true that "Before general discussion had taken place, the previous question was moved and carried and the matter went to vote and was carried," as stated in the article criticizing the Northern California district conference.

There were one or two more talks made against the motion to instruct than were made for it, and it was noticeable that those opposing said motion to instruct offered no real argument against the indorsement of the document on church government, but simply objected to the principle of ever instructing delegates.

"Supreme directional control" was not in operation as is charged by our "critic." The only real substantial speech in favor of the issue was made by Brother B. Franklin Parks of San Francisco, a brother who holds no grade of the priesthood. We mention this fact only that the Saints may see that the conference presidency made no effort to "coerce," "intimidate," or "unfairly" "put something over on the people." Neither President Smith nor any member of the district presidency spoke on the question.

The People Express Their Will

When the motion to instruct was finally put and voted upon, it was carried by a very large majority. (Another act of "common consent" exercised by the people.)

No Surprise

In reading the criticism entitled "Supreme directional control in operation," one is apt to form the opinion that this matter was sprung upon the conference very suddenly. Such was not the case.

Note What San Jose Branch Did

On July 2, three full weeks prior to our district conference, the San Jose Branch, at a regular business meeting, at which time delegates to the district conference were named, the following resolution was adopted: "That the delegates be instructed to support the principles of the open letter as published in the SAINTS' HERALD."

Admitting that the verbiage is a little weak in identifying what "open letter" was referred to, it nevertheless can be successfully established that the instigators of such motion at San Jose knew what they were doing and had in mind the "open letter" published in the HERALD of June 21, 1924. It would seem that they were acting under counsel, especially since it is a fact that one of the instigators of the motion has since stated "that he had been and was, in correspondence with certain members of the Quorum of Twelve." Said members to whom he referred are not officially assigned to this territory either. Why did our "critic" fail to mention this act of the San Jose Branch?

The news that the San Jose Branch had instructed twenty-seven delegates to the district conference to support the "open letter," soon spread like wildfire, and the week following, at a business meeting of the Oakland Branch, the largest branch in the district, and at a well-attended business meeting, the members being informed of the fact that the San Jose Branch had actually instructed its delegates to support the "open letter," they in turn adopted a resolution wherein its fifty-two delegates to the district conference were instructed as follows: "That in the event any matter comes before the district conference relating to the administration of the church, that its delegates be instructed and directed to support such policy or policies sponsored by the First Presidency." This motion was adopted by the Oakland Branch unanimously save one negative vote, after same had been thoroughly discussed both for and against. In justice to those who opposed the motion, let it be stated that their arguments were not directed against the administration of the church, but quite to the contrary. They were for the administration but did not like the idea of tying the hands of a delegate.

From the very moment of the appearance of the "open letter," prior to our district conference in July, it was noticeable that the membership generally, not only the active ones, but including many who had been inactive in church work for some time, were more or less agitated, and the question was being discussed pro and con at the churches, from the pulpit, in the prayer services, in the homes, and wherever a few members were assembled throughout the district. Certain documents mailed into the district created suspicion and distrust. Communications from the outside, bearing upon the "issue" were frequently mentioned. The very atmosphere of the conference was pregnated with a keen desire to express its views upon the issues. The Saints acted. There were good reasons for it.

The Committee

As previously stated, we call attention to the personnel of the committee named by the chair at the request of the body to prepare a list of seventeen names as nominees for delegates to the General Conference, namely:

C. W. Hawkins, president of the San Jose Branch, whose delegates to the district conference were under instructions to support the principles of the "open letter";

J. B. Carmichael, president of the Oakland Branch, the largest branch in the district, and whose delegates were instructed to support any administration measure coming before the district conference, and

W. H. Dawson, the third member, one of the district presidency. (In our opinion, a very equitably chosen committee. Not a single objection was voiced against it or any member thereof.)

Delegates Named.

In submitting the report on behalf of the committee, Brother W. H. Dawson stated to the conference that the committee had no way of knowing who might be in attendance at the General Conference next spring from among the membership in the various branches, hence they knew of no better way for each branch to obtain representation other than to include in their list the names of the general church officers and the missionaries now laboring in the district, together with the district presidency, who are in touch with the branches throughout the district; and further include the names of those regarding whom the committee had heard were planning on attending the conference. Therefore the committee submitted the following names as nominees for delegates to the General Conference:

Apostles D. T. Williams and Roy S. Budd. (Pacific Coast Mission.) G. H. Wixom, E. B. Hull, Virgil Etzenhouser. C. W. Hawkins. (Missionaries Northern California District.)

Blanche Edwards (General Superintendent Department of Women), present.

J. D. White, W. H. Dawson, and J. T. Smith, jr. (District presidency.)

A. J. Damron (Tulare Branch); J. B. Carmichael (Oakland Branch); Bessie Hollings (San Francisco Branch); Frances White (Oakland Branch); M. L. McRoberts (residing at Yuba City); Herbert Walker and Etta Cooper Walker (Santa Rosa Branch).

All seventeen persons proposed for delegates were present at the conference, with the exception of Apostle Roy S. Budd.

No Other Nominations

Opportunity was given the conference to make additional nominations, but none were made. The motion to adopt the committee's report when put to vote was carried.

A motion was next made and seconded, "That the seventeen names submitted as nominees by the committee constitute the delegates from this district to the next General Conference to be held in April 1925." This motion was not opposed and was adopted by the body. (Common consent.)

Capable of Decision

In our opinion it is begging the question for any man to assume that the membership of the Northern California District, many of whom have spent a long life in the church, are incompetent and unqualified to read and interpret the laws of the church, or that they possess no agency or right of determining and expressing their will.

It is asserted by our "critic" that, "it was desirable to take this vote while the President was on the ground." In this there is couched an accusation that the President by remaining was seeking to influence the delegates of the conference by his presence. These words hold further seeming insinuation, that the Saints of the Northern California District lack the courage to express themselves in the presence of the President of the church. Such an implication is without justification in fact. The delegates attending the conference at Irvington were men and women of courage and intelligence and feel a serious degree of resentment at this reflection.

Who First Instructed?

In view of the fact that the San Jose Branch first initiated the instruction of delegates to the district conference wherein they were pledged to support the principles set forth in the "open letter," we do not hesitate to charge the "opposition aligned with our critic" of doing the very thing "our critic" denounces, namely: The arriving at and expressing a conclusion on the issue publicly placed before them prior to next General Conference. They, and not those favoring the Joint Council action, began the act of instructing delegates.

Do Not Condemn

Shall we denounce the members of the San Jose Branch and, in the language of "our critic," accuse them of "questionable methods"? No! God forbid. Why criticize and deny the San Jose Branch, the Northern California district conference, or, for that matter, any individual or group throughout the church the privilege of expressing opinion on this "issue," or of forming conclusions? Do not such have the same vested right as "our critic" and those associated with him, who have already formed and publicly announced their opinion and conclusions, and who are now actively engaged in a desperate campaign to convert others to their way or expressed views?

Common Consent Prevailed

The Northern California district conference was carried on quite according to parliamentary procedure; "common consent" was the rule of action, and a majority vote the end of controversy, all of which was regular and according to the general procedure of the church.

While it is true the President of the church acted as chairman a part of the time in some of the business sessions of the conference, he did not attempt to influence or participate in any manner in the matters coming before the body, other than as a servant and not a master of the conference. He did only those things which he was asked by the body to do.

Prior to the closing of the last business session and after all the hereinabove legislation had been done, President Smith remarked that he was well pleased with this, a delegate conference, and congratulated the assembly because of the manner in which it had conducted the business coming before it, and expressed his opinion that the conference had acted within its rights, or words to that effect. His comments related to the efficient organization of the conference, the good spirit that had prevailed, and to the manner of conducting the business, rather than to the nature of the business enacted.

We repeat: The criticism against the Northern California district conference and against President Smith for his connection with the conference is unjust, and does both President Smith and all the Saints of the Northern California District a grave injustice.

Good Advice

As those who are desirous of Zion's weal, we wish to commend the splendid counsel given by our brother, the contributing editor, in the HERALD of June 11, 1924:

In our discussion we must not forget that all we are brethren. Let friendship govern. Let us lift our discussions above petty bickerings or personal animus and give each man the credit of being equally honest with himself.

And again,

If we can discuss these principles in fairness and frankness, without personal reflection, and in the spirit of Jesus Christ, manifesting all the while Christian forbearance and consideration, we may hope that this discussion will clarify our vision and thus dissolve our differences.

This is indeed wholesome advice, and it is to be hoped that if in the past we have been heedless of such counsel, the future will find us upon the high-road of repentance, seeking only the glory of God and the service of humanity. In humility, we pray for the Church of Christ and for our brethren of whatever school of opinion. We plead that the time may speedily come when we will all see eye to eye and when the great heart of Zion will beat with but a single purpose.

Some Educational Problems Involved in the Establishment of Zion.—No. 4

A. MAX CARMICHAEL

A child may passively accept the existing morality because of his ignorance of what to do under a given situation, because of his incapacity to determine what he should do, and because of his becoming habituated to do what he finds his elders doing and to accept without question what his elders tell him to do; a child may, because of his desire for the favor of those around, do what he sees them doing, and fail to do what he sees brings their disfavor; but his intelligence soon becomes mature enough for him to discover that the "authorities" differ, and that the same act does not always equally please the different groups in his social environment.

When the Authorities Disagree

Even father and mother disagree as to what is best for him to do. When one of his parent's sense of dignity is offended by his actions, and this parent starts to punish him, he finds much to his surprise, yet much to his joy, that the other parent is more or less inclined to sympathize with him, and object to the punishment the offended parent is inflicting.

It's pretty hard for the unoffended parent to put himself, or herself, in the place of the offended parent. Father and mother may keep up a policy of absolute agreement for quite a long time, some longer than others; father and mother may keep up the appearance of complete agreement for a long time, deciding their differences alone; but sooner or later, the child senses that there is really a difference between them. He soon finds that Mrs. So-and-so treats her child differently than his mother treats him, that Mrs. So-and-so tells her child to do differently than his mother tells him to do under like situations.

He finds that his parents differ from his school-teacher as to what courses of study he should take at school; his school-teacher says he should take Latin, his parents say otherwise. They differ as to what punishment the teacher should bestow upon him in the event he breaks a school rule. He even finds that the teachers at school differ among themselves as to what is best to be done in any given situation. Or that the community as a whole differs from the school-teacher, or that there is a difference of opinion in the community. He finds that his Sunday-school teacher differs from his public-school teacher as to what is the truth in a given situation, e. g., how long the earth was in making. He finds his parents differing from his pastor, that preachers differ among themselves, e. g., whether a belief in the absolute omniscience of Jesus while on earth is necessary to entitle one to be called a Christian for a theological proposition, or whether card playing is a sin against God for a moral proposition. The church ecclesiastics may for a long time keep up the appearance of absolute agreement as to theological beliefs or moral sanctions, but at last the difference that exists creeps out and the layman gets hold of it. Yes, the Catholic boy finds that even the priests differ a little among themselves. All the sisters who teach him at the parochial school do not do just the same in identical situations.

A Sunday-school teacher has been telling her primary class those stories which bring out the kindness and love of Jesus for us. She has accompanied each story with the thought that God is our heavenly father, and he loves us, and will take care of us. But a hole seems to have been shot clear through her teaching when a six-year-old boy in the class asked when looking at a picture of the flood, "Were any children drowned in the flood—and very little children that didn't know how to do right?" A primary child was invited to look at a Tissot picture of the crossing of the Red Sea. He remarked to his teacher, "It doesn't seem fair that horses, too, should be drowned." Thus naively, but penetratingly, does the child discover a difference between our modern standard of God's ethics and the standard which our forefathers held, but which we still acclaim as our ethics.

J. W. Colenso was bishop of Nabal in South Africa, and interested himself in giving the Bible to the native Zulus. In translating the Old Testament, he had the help of an intelligent native, "one with the docility of a child but the reasoning powers of a man of mature age." When they came to the book of Exodus, the translator's attention was called to the law, "If a man smite his slave or his maid with a rod and he die under his hand he shall surely be punished; notwithstanding if he continue a day or two he shall not be punished; for he is his money."—Exodus xxi, 21f. The Zulu, who knew the lot of the black man when in the power of a white master, was quick to feel the injustice of such a law and asked whether it was true that God had given such a law by direct revelation.—Henry Preserved Smith; Essays in Biblical Interpretation, 1921, Boston, pp., 128, 129.

Thus even does the savage catch an irreconcilability of our teachings and even our present-day standards with what we claim to be God's word. Not long ago the writer heard even an adult challenge the God that would command an Abraham to kill an Isaac, and wonder whether such an Abraham would be permitted to stay outside of the asylum to-day. A Religio teacher in Independence came to the writer asking for the explanation of a God that would command a Nephi to kill a Laban. The children were challenging the ethics of such a God. Youth with his unsophistication but with the growing sense of ethics founded upon respect for personalities seems prone even to the extent of being irreverent to some of us in picking out seeming inconsistencies between our growing standards of morality, and those of the scriptural past.

Youth becomes utterly amazed at the variety of theological, political, and moral opinions that he finds in the world.

He would like to have the approval of his mother; he would also like to have the approval of the boys in his gang; but he finds that they differ in what they would have him do. Mother would have him not smoke; the gang would have him smoke. The football coach would have him play football; his mother would have him not play. His father would have him work and earn some money in his spare time; the companions in high school want him to join the football squad. His mother would have him go to prayer meeting; he feels that he would stand higher in the favor of his boy companions if he did not go. He finds that the young people at the reunion are somewhat fervent in their worship; so he is inclined to "bear his testimony"; but he finds that the boys at his place of employment are eager to tell obscene stories; so he is inclined to tell obscene stories. In the center places, he finds the spiritual authorities of the church telling him it is wrong to dance; but he finds that his public school companions tell of their good times at the dance; he would like very much to have their favor as well as that of his spiritual authorities.

When the Authorities Do Not Themselves Do as They Say

But there is a third way this same dilemma of having to make a choice between standards of morality and spirituality comes to him. It is considerably more tragic in its results upon his moral and spiritual status, or it is very apt to be, than the other two ways just mentioned. He comes some day to the recognition, shockingly, that the authorities do not do themselves what they say he should do. Father has been telling the boy that he should not say a certain word, but some day he hears father in an unguarded moment say this same word. Or mother has severely punished him for saying a certain word; suddenly he challenges mother with the fact that father has been saying that word. Mother has been telling her growing adolescent girl that it is very wrong to dance; but the girl hears around among the neighbors that her mother was quite a skillful dancer when she was a girl. Worse, the young pastor who is now conducting the prayer meetings danced once upon a time himself. How soon the child learns to watch the "good church members" to see what they do. The good deacon is himself a good schemer in selling real estate. Even the Bishop's agent proves crooked. But these are isolated cases only. He finds that all of our protestations of universal love on Sunday, in the Sunday school lesson, in the sermon, and in the prayer meeting are absolutely unpracticed on Monday. He has thought from his mother's teachings that honesty is of course the procedure for everybody; but he finds that dishonesty seems to be the rule in actual life. As a result of his mother's teachings he has built up habit upon habit of sincerity until sincerity is an imperial law of his moral life; but he finds suddenly some day in his high school classes that even some of his high school friends have already drawn the conclusion that a man cannot succeed in business if he is sincere. Having his suspicions aroused, he looks around, and finds that the salesman in the clothing store tells only the facts about the article that will sell it, but keeps back the facts that would hinder the sale. The real estate agent tells only those things about the house which will sell it, but says nothing about those facts which would hinder the sale; in fact the agent tries to cover up the facts which will hinder the sale. From babyhood he has never doubted the stories of Daniel in the lions' den or the three Hebrews in the fiery furnace; but in his high school, when he begins to take on a scientific attitude towards life, he begins to doubt; and some day he awakens to the fact that the preacher has not told him the facts upon which some people base an honest doubt as to their historicity. The preacher, like the clothing salesman, and real estate agent, has in actual practice relied upon the moral law of salesmanship of long generations ago, viz, caveat emptor, let the buyer himself take notice, but which has been outlawed in the overt public conscience of to-day, or at least ought to be. All of these salesmen, the clothing man, the real estate agent, and the preacher, have proved insincere and actually dishonest, he now feels. Their actions speak so loud that he does not hear what they say on Sunday any more. What a shock to the girl who is raised to feel that every woman is virtuous when she first finds out that prostitution is practiced. What a rude shock many a "protected" girl has, when she finds out that many of her boy friends are not "straight." All of her ideals that she has accepted upon authority are shattered. The youth finds that the churches are claiming that the world needs Christianity, that, Christ's love, but that they are all fighting each other over some differences of ritual which actually keep them from loving each other. He wonders if God is love, why the Christian church should be so eternally telling each coming generation how cruelly the Jews killed the Christ, and thus keep alive the impossibility of the Christian obeying the most important injunction of Christ, to love. He wonders if God is love, why the poor man seldom enters the church. He wonders if God is love, why there ever existed such conditions as would cause the Bolshevik uprising in Russia. Was the Greek Church proclaiming love but refusing to live it? Sometimes he wonders whether Jesus would still have his followers worship him as the Christ, when that very act in itself will always keep the Christian from loving the Jew. He actually wonders if Jesus himself is sincere in his protestation of love, and would be willing that people stop quarreling over whether he was actually the Christ or whether he was born of a virgin, if that would permit Jew and Gentile, fundamentalist and modernist, to actually get together and live together upon a basis of love.

What Is His Response to These Conflicts?

What are his possible responses to these differences which he finds between those in authority, between two sets of people whom he would please by agreeing with them, and between our protestations of what we should do and what we actually do. They bring him a problem. What are his possible solutions? Perhaps if we knew, we could help him in his dilemma. In the main there are two courses open to him. These two courses give us our third and fourth methods whereby our youth absorb the moral and spiritual heritage of the race. In our last two articles we have discussed the first and second methods. In this article we shall discuss one of the two courses open to him, which will constitute our third method.

One Possible Response

He may take these differences as a matter of course, as the normal thing, and accommodate himself to them. The accommodation of himself and his activities to these differences may be along the line of least resistance to the inclination to accept upon authority, and do those things which please his social environment. This will most usually whenever possible take the form of having a different standard of action for each crowd that he happens to be with, such standard conforming to the standard of the crowd he is in at the given time. Whatever the rules of the game of life are at home, he will conform. He will not smoke at home, because it is against the rules of the game of home-living; but he will smoke out among the "fellows." He will not talk about any matter with reference to sex with his father and mother because he has learned that the rules of the game make such conversations a matter of taboo; but he will talk "sex" out among the "fellows." He refrains from telling any of the obscene stories at home; it is out of harmony with the spirit there; but he will tell obscene stories out among the "fellows." Thus he has one kind of morality at home and another among the fellows. In this way he obeys the "authority" or chimes in with the normality that is pressing at the moment; in this way he pleases everybody.

We could illustrate this having two or several sets of moral standards or sources of moral authority in a variety of ways. Do we not all know Johnnie, who is a different boy at Sunday school than at day school; indeed, who is a different boy under one day-school teacher than another? Do we not all know the boy is a "lamb" at day school, but sits on the radiator and makes "smart" remarks all through the Sunday school class to the discomfiture of the helpless teacher? The young man is quite reverent and respectable with the church crowd of young people but practices many immoralities when out with the other fellows. Many a young fellow who was sent to Graceland to get his morals reformed is quite "religious" when he first comes: It is the new crowd he is with which makes the change. Many a wife has for many years never suspected her husband of gambling or adultery; his vocabulary, his actions, would never give her the least suspicion that he knows another world at all. The facility with which he can assume an entirely different character is wonderful. Even the Latter Day Saint minister may drink coffee while eating out at some restaurant but never thinks of doing so when in the family of Saints. Even the good deacon may never think of using "darn" when in the men's Bible class, but it may be a frequent word of his when out trading horses. This alteration of personalities may become a thorough habit; it may be done so easily that the person becomes unaware that he is changing his personality. Yet many a boy remembers the first time that his tongue slipped, and he uttered his first "swear" word in front of mother, when he has been uttering "swear" words before the fellows for these many months. The habit of unconsciously changing personalities to suit his social environment fails him at some moment.

Even in scientific matters a lad can shift his thinking and his responses to suit the environment that he is in. The writer heard a Boy Scout leader in the city of New York tell of his experience which illustrates this. His troop was made up of young high school boys, the most of whom had general science in high school. In this course they were undoubtedly taught that the earth was æons in the making. The class was one the majority of whose members had the same leader as their teacher in a Sunday school, a Protestant Sunday school. But in the week-day activities of the troop, others were permitted to enter, Catholic or Jew. There was one Catholic boy in the troop. As an experiment one day in the week-day activity, the leader asked each boy to write down answers to certain questions, among which was, How long did it take God to make the earth? All answered six days but one, and that one answered several thousand years. To his immense surprise (he being a Protestant) the one boy who answered consistent with his general science was the Catholic boy. The Protestant boys had given as their answer to their religious teacher, six days; undoubtedly they would have answered the question of similar import in day school, which would of course leave out any mention of God as the maker, with the answer in accordance with their general science teaching. The Catholic boy answered the question as he would normally do for a non-religious leader; but he, too, undoubtedly if he had been answering this question before one, whom he unconsciously sensed as a religious leader, would have answered quite differently. No doubt these boys did not think of the inconsistency. They unknowingly responded to the environment they felt themselves in. One can see the influence of a catechism in the answer of these boys. No doubt their catechism had been teaching them an orthodox catech-biblical origin of the universe.

The fact is, that all breaches of the laws of health are physical sins, and when this is more generally seen, then, and perhaps not till then, will the physical training of the young receive all the attention it deserves.—Spencer.

Big institutions are not built by bosses—half the time the big ideas, the inspiration, the urge is furnished by the lowly employees. Sooner or later business men will open their eyes to this fact, and then if they but open their hearts they will usher in the perfect day.—F. L. Brittain.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Bishop Waller Writes of His Visit to England

You were good enough to report through your columns my return from England to the United States. I have thought, therefore, that perhaps you and some of the HERALD readers might be interested in learning further with regard to my visit to my native land.

For many years I have had an earnest desire that sometime I might be privileged to raise up my voice in the Master's cause in England, amongst my own countrymen, as I have been doing for many years in Hawaii, and as I have also been privileged to do in different parts of the United States and on business visits to Australia and New Zealand. My recent trip to England, for the purpose of visiting loved ones there, afforded me this opportunity.

The first Sunday I was in London, July 27, I attended a meeting of the Enfield Branch, just outside London, and although not known to any of the members of the branch personally, I received a very cordial and kindly welcome. I also had the pleasure on this occasion of meeting Brother and Sister Passman, who were on their way home from the Palestine mission. In the afternoon I addressed the Sunday school and told them of some of my experiences in the work in Honolulu. In the evening I preached to an interested audience, being blessed with liberty, and, after the preaching service, presided with Elder Judd over a prayer meeting, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present on account of the Spirit that was present. Words of comfort and encouragement were spoken by the Spirit through Elder Judd to Brother and Sister Passman and myself, and I was encouraged to lift up my voice amongst my own countrymen, with the assurance that the words spoken would not fall upon barren land.

The Sunday following, August 3, I spent in Manchester, making my headquarters there at the hospitable home of Elder and Sister Hughes. In the morning I spoke at the North Manchester Branch and in the afternoon talked to the Stockport Sunday school; in the evening I preached to the members of the Beresford (Manchester) Branch.

On Thursday evening, August 7, I spoke to some of the Bradford (Yorkshire) Saints, who gathered for the occasion at the home of Sister Schofield, where I received a very kindly welcome.

The following Sunday I spent with the Saints in Birmingham, being kindly received there by Brother J. E. Meredith. I preached both morning and evening to interested congregations and hope that good was accomplished by my efforts. In the afternoon I spoke to the members of the Sunday school.

It was my intention on the following Sunday, August 17, to visit the Warrington and Rochdale Branches in Lancashire, but Brother Chandler, the district president, with whom I was making arrangements for my visits, had to attend the conference in Manchester, and I thought it best, therefore, not to go there. Furthermore, I was anxious to spend this day with my wife and daughter, from whom I was about to part on the following Wednesday, when I was booked to leave per S. S. Homerie, from Southampton for New York.

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing my gratitude to the English Saints for their kindness to me while amongst them. Through the kindness of Brother Meredith and some of the Saints in Birmingham, I was able to visit Stratford-on-Avon and places of historic interest there.

While associating with the English Saints I felt many times that it was a good thing to belong to the family of God, for assuredly amongst his children is found to-day that love which Jesus said should characterize his true disciples.

While there I was able to visit, in my native county (Yorkshire), many of the places where I spent my boyhood days. I found that many of the relatives and friends I knew then had passed away, but I thoroughly enjoyed meeting with the few that remained, two sisters amongst the number.

I left Southampton at noon on August 20, by the S. S. Homeric, a White Star liner of 34,000 tons. After calling at Cherbourg at 6 p. m. of the same day, we sailed for New York. The voyage was very pleasant, with the exception of the afternoon of Tuesday, August 26, the day before our arrival in New York, when we passed through a terrific storm, in which a lifeboat was lost and about a dozen passengers slightly hurt. This was the storm in which the S. S. Arabic fared so badly. While passing through the storm I thought of the words of promise given to me through Elder Judd, at the prayer meeting already referred to, at Enfield, on Sunday, July 27, when the promise of protection on my return voyage was extended.

I stayed in New York only from six o'clock on Wednesday evening until ten o'clock the following morning. While in New York I had the pleasure of meeting with Sister Murphy of San Francisco and her husband, and also administered to her mother, Sister Kaighin, who had been for some time, and was then, in a very serious condition.

While en route for San Francisco, over the continent, I learned that the Lake Shore Limited, which left for Chicago over the same route that I traveled over the day before, had been run into by the Detroit, and that twenty-seven passengers in one of the sleeping coaches had been injured. I arrived in San Francisco safe and well on Monday morning, September 1, having made the trip from New York in four days.

I left San Francisco by the Matsonia at noon on September 3, and arrived in Honolulu about eight o'clock on Tuesday morning, September 9, according to schedule arranged when I left London, having been nineteen days on my nine-thousand-mile journey.

I found that Brother and Sister Williams had taken good care of the work of the Honolulu and Japanese Branches during my absence. Brother Foo and his companion had also kept busy devoting their main efforts to the work amongst the Chinese. Brother and Sister Williams returned to Hilo to resume charge of the branch there on Monday, September 15.

Last Sunday I had the pleasure of baptizing a Japanese man and his wife, who are a welcome addition to our Japanese Branch. A young boy whose mother is a member of the Honolulu Branch was also baptized at the same time.

Joppa, Illinois

October 13.—Joppa Branch is small, but we are trying to keep the work moving. We still have Sunday school every Sunday morning, and usually have preaching in the evening and prayer meeting Wednesday night. Our district president, Brother R. H. Henson, was with us from Saturday night till Monday morning, and his visit was appreciated by all.

On Sunday, October 12, the Saints gathered at the church and had a basket dinner. The rest of the day was spent visiting and singing praises to our Father, who has blessed us in so many different ways. Brother Henson gave us some good advice and encouraged the Saints to wake up and get to work, buy us a lot, and build a church of our own.

Brother Henson delivered three fine sermons while he was here, and we hope he will visit us often. The Saints resolved to do what they can to obtain a church, and believe that with the Lord's help they will succeed. MYRTLE A. FERGUSON.

Omaha, Nebraska

October 8.—Defense Test Day in Omaha was marked by an immense parade, speeches in the Auditorium and at all theaters. The Saints quite generally joined in the public demonstration of loyalty to the Government.

Saturday, September 13, our Sunday school held another successful picnic in Elmwood Park, two hundred forty partaking of the bountiful supper provided. Sports and prizes were enjoyed by the younger ones, while all the men contested in baseball prowess until dark prevented further indulgence in the pastime.

Joseph Cloyd, a colored brother, (of whose presence in the city for a few months prior to his death we had not been aware) was buried on September 15, Brother Whalley performing the last rites. He had been baptized at Osceola, Iowa, where his father, Green Cloyd, had been an elder, according to information obtained by Brother Whalley. He left no family.

Some of the sermons which have recently edified us have been along the following lines: "Atonement of Christ," "Does God direct his church to-day?" "God so loved the world," "Church organization and its purposes," and "The gospel a preventative of evil." A baptismal service occupied one Sabbath morning hour, Sister Mildred Winder and Brother Edward Wildermuth receiving the inductive rites, which were followed by confirmations, and a short talk by Pastor Whalley. Brother William Wellman was ordained a deacon at a recent prayer service.

District conference was held from Friday evening, October 3, through the Sabbath of October 5. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was the missionary guest of the conference, and preached the three sermons. Friday evening a musical entertainment was given, in charge of Sister Vera Gamet, district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Sunday a dinner, free to all comers, was served by the Department of Women of the Omaha Branch. South Omaha Branch canceled their services for the entire day, and participated most heartily in the activities of their sister branch. Outlying branches of the district were unusually well represented, and the conference proved to be a very successful and enjoyable one, after a ripple or two caused by a slight misunderstanding was cleared away. As long as we are in the flesh and subject to its limitations and weaknesses, there must be differences of opinion, and misunderstandings are liable to occur; but as we learn to "live and love" together, we can successfully weather the little storms caused by different convictions, relying on each other's integrity, sincerity, and devotion. And with the living and the loving, we must have faith—faith in our fellow men as well as faith in God.

"Wherefore be thou wise,
Cleave ever to the sunnier side of doubt,
And cling to Faith beyond the forms of faith!
She reels not in the storm of warring words,
She brightens at the clash of 'Yes' and 'No,'
She sees the best that glimmers through the worst,
She feels the sun is hid but for a night,

She spies the summer through the winter bud,
 She tastes the fruit before the blossom falls,
 She hears the lark within the songless egg,
 She finds the fountain where they wailed 'Mirage!'

—Tennyson.

Among those who have delighted us with their songs of late have been Sisters Nelle Kelley and Cecil Stark, Brethren R. W. Scott, Harry Greenway, and Harlow Fredrick, and Mrs. Bertha Scott, sister of our Sister T. A. Edwards. During the conference, quartet music was furnished throughout, under charge of Sister Fredrick.

Sister Thomas Kinney has been in the hospital, where she suffered a painful operation. Her sister, Sister Gustaf Platz, arrived yesterday from Lamoni, to aid in caring for her. Sister C. J. Frey and daughter Esther have both been ill, but are better. Sister Frey has had the pleasure of a visit from her aunt and uncle, Brother and Sister Z. J. Barstow, of Helena, Oklahoma.

Sister H. Parmalee of Plattsmouth; Sister J. Johnson, mother, and sister, from Fremont; Brother and Sister B. F. Creel from Walthill; and Sister Madge Head, from Saint Joseph, Missouri, have been among recent visitors. From headquarters, passing through, have been Bishops McGuire and Keir, Editor Lambert, and Apostles Gleazer and Budd. Apostle Williams and Seventy Putnam called briefly upon some of the members at the close of their tent services, and attended the business session of the district conference on Saturday afternoon.

The young people of the branch "surprised" Sister Harlow Fredrick on the evening of Monday, October 6, helping her celebrate her birth anniversary. Music, games, and refreshments brought by the surprisers combined to give the surprised a very happy memory, a visible token of which, in the form of a lovely framed picture, was presented to her by the group which appreciates her untiring interest in their behalf.

Report of the branch secretary to the conference discloses the fact that 379 members are enrolled on our records. Much time and labor have recently been spent in an effort to locate "missing" members, transfer in the newly-arrived, and transfer out the departing ones. Only the initiated can have a conception of what work is involved in this attempt in a city and branch where membership is constantly fluctuating. Only those same initiated can know, too, the joy which comes from locating some who may have drifted, or become careless or indifferent, and see them gradually assuming again their responsibilities as "children of the King." Pastor Whalley and his good wife are untiring in their ministry among the people of this branch, who have only cause for gratitude that such a consecrated pair has been sent to them. May God continue to bless their unselfish efforts and devotion, as well as the work of all others who are trying faithfully to serve and honor him by giving the cup of water in his name!

"Give us room that we may dwell," is the cry of our Sunday school children! Sunday evening study of the Book of Mormon has been abandoned in favor of the young people's special meeting hour. Former classes are to be provided for in the Sunday school hour. Brother David Lewis is to take charge of a beginners' class in Book of Mormon study, while Brother Self continues with the more advanced one. The young men's class threatens to outgrow allotted space, twenty-two facing Apostle Edwards last Sunday morning, as by request of their teacher he addressed them. We feel that in the very near future we will be under the necessity of instituting a campaign for funds with which to complete our building. Such expansion and such necessity is gratifying to us all, a mere mention of which caused Pastor "Peter" to smile broadly and with an expressive gesture say, "Go to it! I'm with you! We'll have a building bigger than that cathedral here in Omaha, some day—and people to fill it!" That's the spirit that wins! Speed the day!

New Branch at Pensacola Is Active

PENSACOLA, FLORIDA, September 26.—Since having been organized into a branch, the Saints here have not let the time go idly by but seemingly have grasped every opportunity to try to build up the work in this place.

Brother Wiley Cobb, superintendent of the Sunday school, has been conducting a little contest to help increase the attendance. Leaving Pensacola, the two captains, with an equal number on each side, set out on a journey to San Francisco, California, one going the northern route, the other going the southern. Those arriving first were the winners. The sides were known as the Blues and Whites. The contest was arranged so that regular attendance, new members, punctuality, visitors, etc., counted so many points, thereby helping along the journey. A certain number of points meant so many miles. Each place of importance on the route was discussed, making the trip a very enjoyable one. The contest put a great deal of interest in our Sunday school and greatly increased the attendance. The Blues arrived several days ahead of the Whites, so were declared the winners.

One of the many affairs given to help increase our building fund was a chicken gumbo supper September 18. It was well attended, and we realized a neat sum. We hope soon to have our church completed.

For a new branch that is made up of members who have been isolated from church work for years, we feel we have done our best under existing conditions. We hope by the help of our Master to become as one, that unity and love can be felt when others come into our midst. We are expecting Brother T. C. Kelley to be with us soon.

It is our prayer that God will open up the way here, that a good work may be done and many be gathered into the fold. While Brother Ammon White was with us, he gave a number of blessings, and those of us who received them are anxiously waiting for our copies. Brother White's talks with us were truly a spiritual feast, and we hope he can soon be with us again.

Several of our members helped with the radio fund, and I am sure that when the church here is completed we will be doing our bit in every way we can. MRS. L. J. McBRIDE.

Branch Organized at Rocklin, California

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, October 8.—I have been laboring in this district for a year, having come here in September, 1923, from the Hawaiian Islands, where we had been for two years. There are hundreds of loyal Latter Day Saints in this beautiful State, and it has been a pleasure to live here and make their acquaintance.

We organized the Saints at Rocklin, California, into a branch on September 7. They are few in number, but are well qualified to advance the work in that section under the leadership of Elder Roy C. Barmore, their president. Elder Barmore was ordained to the Melchisedec priesthood at our last reunion. He is a wide-awake young man, well-qualified for the position to which he has been chosen.

Elder Clarence Earle, who for a number of years has piloted the little flock at this place as a mission of the Sacramento Branch, has done a good work, and his counsel will always be sought in the future because of his many years of experience in the work. Sister Earle was chosen secretary of the branch. She has been secretary of the Sunday school for a long time, besides holding similar positions in other societies here.

Brother Earl R. Curry, a priest in the branch, lives some miles away from Rocklin, at a place called Lincoln. He and his family are on hand every Sunday to assist in the work, of which department he is superintendent. Every Tuesday evening Brother Curry conducts a round table at his home in the interest of some nonmembers who have become interested in our work through the diligent efforts of Brother Curry and his wife. Here is one example of an isolated family letting their light shine in a community where our work has not been known.

E. B. HULL.

Manteno, Illinois

October 9.—An all-day rally was held at Deselm Branch October 5, in charge of the district officers. The priesthood meeting at half past eight was in charge of Elder J. L. Cooper, district superintendent. Many helpful ideas were presented, which enthused those in attendance.

Sunday school at a quarter of ten was in charge of the local superintendent, Sister Emma Studtman. The adults were divided into two groups and taught by Sister Mamie Hayer, district superintendent of the Department of Women, and Sister Mildred Rogers. Sister Ava Wildermuth, district Sunday school superintendent, gave an interesting object lesson at the close of the lesson period.

Patriarch W. A. McDowell was the speaker at the eleven o'clock preaching hour. His subject, "What must I do to be saved?" was rendered more graphic by the use of a large chart showing the two roads. Brother McDowell has been a friend and help to Deselm Saints for many years.

At noon a sumptuous cafeteria dinner was enjoyed by all. After dinner some of the Saints drove to the creek, where Leslie Allott of Lockport was baptized by Brother Cooper.

Elders W. A. McDowell and Oliver McDowell presided at the half past one testimony meeting. At half past two Patriarch Richard Baldwin gave a forceful sermon on "The church of God in action." After the sermon Brother Allott was confirmed by Elders W. A. McDowell and J. L. Cooper.

Brother Oliver McDowell had charge of all the singing.

Saints and friends from a distance who attended were: J. L. Cooper, Brother and Sister Oliver McDowell, of DeKalb; W. A. McDowell, of Plano; Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin, of Chicago; Brother and Sister O. T. Hayer, Sister Williamson, and Sister Ethel Williamson, of Marseilles; Brother and Sister Jerome Wildermuth and sons, and Sister Ava Wildermuth and daughters, of Aurora; and Brother and Sister J. H. McGuire and Mr. and Mrs. Max Schmidt, of Hammond, Indiana.

Sunday evening the local Saints and the few visitors who remained until Monday gathered at the Earl Studtman home to hear Brother and Sister Baldwin tell of their missionary experience in England and Wales.

All in all, the day was one long to be cherished, because of the outpouring of the Spirit of God and the pleasant association of those of like precious faith. Deselm extends thanks to all who helped make the day a success.

Brother and Sister Baldwin have promised to give our branch a series of meetings when they get settled in Chicago, so we are anxiously awaiting their return.

The Saints here were grief stricken by the death of Sister Jean Kahler, wife of Elder Elmer L. Kahler, which occurred September 14 at the Silver Cross Hospital, in Joliet, following an operation the preceding Tuesday. Sister Kahler had been ailing for some years and underwent an operation last January, from which she never fully recovered. She died strong in the faith of God and in the latter-day work. Funeral services were held at the Kahler residence in Wilmington, Wednesday afternoon, September 17, and were attended by hundreds of sorrowing relatives and friends. Elder J. L. Cooper preached the sermon, with Earl D. Rogers in charge, assisted by Reverend Hom, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful, and the entire service was characterized by the divine Spirit. Sister Kahler is survived by her husband, four children, father and mother, and one brother. The Saints extend their sympathy to these lonely hearts, for Sister Jean was loved by all the Saints and was devoted to her family, especially her invalid mother. "The good she tried to do shall stand as if 'twere done; God finishes the work by noble souls begun."

Saints Enjoy Privilege of Meeting Together

JOHNSON CITY, NEW YORK, October 12.—The Saints here have greatly enjoyed our meetings the past month. Every Sunday except sacrament Sunday we have a little talk after the regular Sunday school.

We were pleased to have with us at our last sacrament meeting a family from Waverly. They have also attended our Sunday school twice. They were glad to meet with us, as it was the first opportunity they had had to partake of the sacrament in two years. They have promised to try to attend every other Sunday. We seldom appreciate the privilege of attending church until we are deprived of it. We hope to make the best of the small privileges we have here.

Meetings in New Church at Oelwein

OELWEIN, IOWA.—Elder Leonard Houghton, of Madison, Wisconsin, held a series of meetings here that were interesting and instructive, as well as inspiring. The Saints did well in coming out to meeting in the rainy weather. Several nonmembers were at most of the meetings, and some of them were baptized August 24. A few more are interested.

The Saints here have bought the Primitive Baptist Church between Third and Fourth Streets on Fourth Avenue East, where the branch used to hold meetings when it was first moved here from Oren Center. We are glad we can have a place in which to worship whenever we wish without having to pay extra for every meeting. Of course we have to make our payments, but we know the place will be ours when it is paid for.

Sunday school is held at ten o'clock, and after Sunday school some short talks or sermonets are given every other Sunday. Prayer service is held on the alternate Sunday, except for the first Sunday in the month, when sacramental service is held. We also have sermonets on Sunday night. If the Saints will put their shoulders to the wheel we will be rewarded according to the work we do.

Three more have recently been baptized, and we believe they will be helpers in the vineyard.

Brother Houghton preached the funeral sermon for my wife last January, which was highly spoken of, by nonmembers especially. He also preached two weeks in February, and his sermons were again highly commended by nonmembers, who attended most of the meetings. We hope he may come back again some time this fall.

I was baptized thirty years ago in November, and I have never had a doubt worth mentioning since. I first became interested through reading the HERALD in 1894. Although I have made many crooked paths, my faith in the gospel has never entirely failed me. I am not able to work much for men, but I can scatter literature among the people. Even though some of the seed may fall by the wayside, I hope enough will fall on good ground to bring forth a bountiful harvest to the honor and glory of God. If some of the Saints have tracts to spare I would appreciate two hundred or more for free distribution. I would like to have tracts in the Italian language, too, as there are a great many Italians around here.

J. G. HODGES.

Columbus, Ohio

October 9.—Since June 1, as a culmination of cottage prayer meetings held by T. S. Williams, we were organized into the Central Columbus Mission by Floyd Rockwell, district president. Later a Sunday school was organized. The mission is progressing both numerically and financially under the able leadership of Brother Williams, and the Saints are being blessed with the Spirit in all the meetings. At one sacramental meeting alone, eight prophecies were given, and each time the Lord declared that he is pleased with the mission and that it will grow because he is with us.

The work here has grown against much opposition, but encouragement comes from the fact that the Lord has spoken through those opposed in exact contradiction to their way of thinking, and they are now boosters.

At the sacramental meeting of October 5 the oblation amounted to $9.15 from our small number. We have the old Masonic Hall, and prayer meeting is held Tuesday night, and Sunday school and preaching on Sunday morning. Sunday evening cottage preaching services are held because we cannot get the hall Sunday night. We pay $25 a month rent and have never yet been short. We also gave $21.80 to the radio fund. We feel it a pleasure to do this because of spiritual manifestations from time to time giving us encouragement.

We have had four baptisms, and others are interested. The attendance at Sunday school runs from forty-nine to sixty. Our sisters who form the choir are all taking vocal instruction from Sister Gribbon, of Columbus Second Branch, an able teacher. We are all trying to comply with the law of finance and cultivating our gifts and are trying to be humble in the sight of God, doing all in our power to promulgate the gospel.

Brother J. D. Shower is coming in November to hold meetings, and we ask the Saints to pray for him that the Lord will bless him in this effort.

Shenandoah Invites New Members

The church at Shenandoah, Iowa, extends the invitation to any of the Saints who are isolated and have not church privileges and who are looking forward to locating in or near a small city where they could attend regular services and raise up their family under the church influence, to locate in our city.

The church at Shenandoah has a membership of about one hundred, holding regular services throughout the year. Sunday school, Religio, Department of Women, Temple Builders, Oriole and Boys' Clubs, all organized and pulling together. The Shenandoah Branch is in the Fremont District, located in the southwestern corner of the State, about one hundred miles west of Lamoni, within easy reach of Graceland College, where all young people of the church should attend college.

Shenandoah is a nursery and seed house town, having the largest nurseries in the United States and the largest seed houses in the central States. Shenandoah is located in the corn belt, in a rich farming country, and is an industrious community.

If you are contemplating making a change of location, write to me and I will give you any information that I can, and it will be free. I assure you there is no commercial intent in this invitation. I, being a member of the publicity committee, have been instructed to make this invitation in behalf of the branch at Shenandoah. We want a larger membership; we need your help and association.

Saints From District Points Visit Michigan

EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, October 13.—The two-day meeting held at Brimley Indian Mission October 4 and 5 was well attended considering the distance many had to go. Three carloads from lower Michigan, Elder Ernest Burt of Onaway, R. D. Davis of Boyne City, Hector McKinnon of East Jordan, arrived at the Soo in time for evening service and enjoyed listening to Elder E. N. Burt. The Soo Saints were very hospitable, entertaining the visitors until Saturday morning, when they, with two carloads from the Soo, went to the mission about twenty miles away, where they were joined by two carloads from Gladstone, and later in the day by another carload from Gladstone. The three carloads from Gladstone had driven all night.

Brothers R. D. Davis, E. N. Burt, and Harvey VanDuzen had charge of the meetings, and Sister Hannah Davis led the music.

Song service and preaching were announced for two in the afternoon, and all went to dinner with our Indian friends, everyone doing justice to the meals, which were well prepared. After the song service Elder C. H. McKinnon, inspired by the song "Jesus is passing by," talked very forcibly on how to let nothing obstruct the view of Christ.

At four o'clock R. D. Davis spoke to us, telling how to find our place and work in it.

After preaching by Brother E. N. Burt at seven, a marshmallow roast was enjoyed by a number of old and young who congregated around a large bonfire and played buzz, double tag, and Simon says.

Two carloads of visitors arrived Sunday morning from Canadian Soo. The morning prayer service was in charge of Brothers Foster and VanDuzen. There were almost a hundred present, and no time was allowed to go to waste. Many enjoyed hearing the Indians express themselves in their own language.

The sermon of Elder Boomer at eleven o'clock was enjoyed by about ninety people. At two Brother Davis preached an unusually good sermon which answered many questions in the minds of the congregation.

At half past three, on the banks of the Saint Mary's River, just a little way from the church, many witnessed the baptism of six people from the Soo. Confirmation meeting followed, and Elder Davis explained the laying on of hands.

Elder E. N. Burt preached the evening sermon, taking for his text "The two ways." Brother Burt stayed with the Soo Saints and is holding services every evening. Brother Davis planned to stay at the mission a few days.

We are hoping we can meet with the northern Saints again.

MRS. JOHN MCKINNON.

Haverhill, Massachusetts

October 12.—Winter work has started in earnest in Haverhill Branch. There are two classes, one for the adults and one for the junior members of the branch. The adult class is to take up the study of church history, while the younger members are going to study the Book of Mormon and its history.

We have organized with the following officers: Susie Jordan, president; Ella Thayer, organist; Frank Hatch, secretary. Sister Jordan teaches the senior class, and Brother Leon Jordan has the junior class.

The branch here is in good spiritual condition, and we are having some very fine services. We had the privilege of going to visit the Boston Branch recently, at which time we were glad to hear President F. M. Smith.

Among recent visitors with us we are glad to note Bishop M. C. Fisher and family. We are always glad to have the brethren with us and hear from them the grand old story.

We are ever praying for the success of God's work everywhere.

F. E. HATCH.

Des Moines Religio Rally at Boone

District Superintendent Stephen Robinson arranged for a Religio rally at Boone to be held October 11 and 12, which proved to be the biggest event of the year for the Religio. A large attendance taxed the Boone Saints to the utmost in caring for visitors. The ladies furnished excellent "eats," served cafeteria style, and all who came were made welcome.

There were about seventy-five at Herman Park for recreation Saturday afternoon at half past two. The indoor baseball game resulted in a tie. At half past five the crowd gathered at the church with healthy appetites to partake of the splendid dinner which had been prepared in the basement of the church.

Promptly at half past seven everyone gathered in the upper auditorium of the church to listen to a very fine program. Brother Dowker, with his usual pep, led the congregational singing. A vocal solo was sung by Howard Anderson, small son of N. V. Anderson, after which Brother Malcor made the address of welcome. District President Henry Castings responded with thanks to the Saints of Boone for making possible that splendid gathering. James Meehan then sang a solo, which was followed by a talk, "Full speed," by K. C. Harder, and a duet by David Dowker and Victor Lents.

The originality of Brother Robinson was manifested in the following part of the program:

The Religio is a

R—Religious—David Dowker.

E—Energetic—V. G. Lents.

L—Loyal—Stephen Robinson.

I—Intellectual—Mrs. K. C. Harder.

G—Grateful—Mrs. J. R. Lentell.

I—Interesting—C. E. McDonald.

O—Organization—F. M. McDowell.

Each speaker occupied from five to fifteen minutes, speaking on the topic assigned, and many new thoughts were advanced regarding Religio work. After these talks Sister Loretta Baker sang, and Masil Dalbey gave a reading. Brother Malcor then demonstrated to the young people how they could get along when married, and the Lents sisters showed how a quarrel usually starts.

An attendance of one hundred and eleven at Sunday school and a full house at all other services of the day furnished an interested and appreciative audience. General Superintendent F. M. McDowell was the speaker at eleven o'clock. He gave three rules of life for the young people: Stay persistently in the realm of the best; search honestly and unceasingly after that which is true and hold fast to the truth; and cultivate intimate acquaintance with spiritual realities. His sermon was full of living truth from first to last and was given in the power of the Holy Spirit. A beautiful violin solo was played by Brother Vern Deskin.

Sacrament was served at two o'clock, and a grand spiritual feast was enjoyed. The theme of the meeting was, What the Religio has done for me; or, What I am going to do for the Religio. All testimonies were on this general theme. Brother McDowell urged the Saints to put God into everything they do, whether they are mothers, musicians, teachers, lawyers, business men, or farmers. He stated that the afternoon meeting was the greatest booster for the Religio he had ever attended.

A great many had to leave before the night service. Brother Beye was to have spoken on the subject of loyalty Sunday evening, but was detained because of the death of a relative. Sister Malcor had also to leave because of the death of her brother-in-law, so in the midst of great rejoicing sadness came to some of our members.

Brother McDowell suggested that we make the meeting next year a "young people's convention" and it is hoped that it will be an annual affair.

Troy, Kansas

October 15.—The work here is onward. The Sunday school is taking on new life, and the Christmas offering is climbing. The school is under the leadership of William Twombly.

The Department of Women is very busy. Much work is furnished, and we have several quilts and comforters ahead now. We made a comforter to give to a family that had lost their home by fire last month.

Much interest is shown in volley ball. The team from Fanning went to Atchison, Kansas, last week, and this week they played Saint Joseph Third Branch.

Beginning last Sunday, September 12, Brother J. D. Stead and Brother Twombly began a series of meetings at Troy, but on Saturday Brother Twombly was called to Centralia, Kansas, to preach the funeral sermon of Sister MacDougal, of that place.

The weather so far is fine for the meetings, and we are trusting that much good may be done.

Webb City, Oklahoma

October 14.—The group of Saints near Foraker are at present very busy gathering in the abundant crops with which they have been blessed this year. However, they find time to keep up a lively interest in Sunday school and Religio, the usual attendance being forty or more. They also have a good attendance at all church services. Brother Slover preaches in the morning on the second and fourth Sundays, and Brother Edward Workman occupies in the evening on the first and third Sundays. He also preached the night of October 12, which was much enjoyed by a good audience.

Since our last report Brother George Swain and family have moved near enough to attend our services and were gladly received here. They were formerly at Arkansas City, Kansas. Brother Swain is a teacher, so we now have an elder, priest, and teacher. We hope soon for a branch organization.

Several of our young people are away at school. Three are at Arkansas City, one is at Foraker, and two attend at Webb City.

Brother Chrestensen has not been among us of late, but we hear he has been busy laboring elsewhere.

The Sunday school gave a box supper October 8, and about $40 was raised to be used in the purchase of a new instrument for church services.

Some friends came from near Lamoni recently and almost failed to locate us. We live one fourth mile south of Webb City.

The group of Saints here can truly be commended for their faithfulness to duty, and they are not unmindful of the widows and fatherless children among them.

ELLEN ADAIR.

Vinal Haven, Maine

October 5.—There was a large attendance at the sacramental service at the church to-day, and the Saints were wonderfully blessed by the good Spirit. Brother Archie Beggs, our pastor, recently underwent an operation at Knox Hospital for appendicitis, and his presence was missed at this meeting. Brother Floyd Young preached in the evening, and he was blessed with the Spirit.

Elder Harvey V. Minton has gone to Eastern Maine conference at Jonesport. He will go from there to the Western Maine conference at Stonington.

The Sunday school is progressing under the leadership of Sister Agnes Minton. There are many small children in attendance.
