The Quest for Happiness

Happiness is the goal that mankind has ever striven to reach and is ever fighting for. It is a thing that always seems to lie in the future, for after an objective point is reached, it is always just beyond. Like searching for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, the thing of allurements is separated from us by just one more hill. So we go on through life, seeking, searching, until at the end of the way, happiness is still a promise. In the great beyond we expect to find that which life has not given us.

Little do we think that happiness cannot be acquired. Little do we realize that it is not at the end of the rainbow. But, you say, why go on seeking, searching, longing, drudging, climbing?

Happiness is synonymous with salvation. When the soul is saved then will happiness be eternal. Like salvation, happiness must be built. It is not a thing to be found. "Have I not found happiness?" "No. You have built it." Happiness is not in the past, neither is it in the future. It must be now or never. Happiness is a thing that is lived. It is the partial taste of this supreme emotion that enables us to build for more, to go onward and upward. Happiness is the Spirit of God that touches our lives and fills us to overflowing. We reach the fullness of our capacity only at times, in moments of great ecstasy. At other times we sense its presence in less degree, but it is enough to cause us to build, ever build. The fullness of happiness that may be ours depends upon how well we build, how large our souls have become, that more happiness may be held. It is always limited by our size spiritually.

How can we build, you ask, that great happiness may be our lot? It is a little secret, discoverable only by trying. The sum of pleasures will never be happiness. You may seek pleasure in the wild hope that it may bring happiness, but it may only bring pain. Pleasure must be controlled or it will react upon itself. Pleasure is the result of the functioning of the organism up to its functional limit. Pain

(or displeasure) results when that limit is overrun. The doctor may administer an opiate to dull pain and give pleasurable result. But continual use of the drug after it has accomplished its rightful work results in the drug addict. The pleasure has reacted and will eventually kill the organism. The heart, when exercised to its normal limit, may bring the pleasurable sense of vigor and health, but the athlete may overwork it, and an athletic heart turns the pleasure to pain.

So pleasure has its limit, and as a limit it can never reach happiness. It is only the false idea that pleasure may bring happiness that causes man to seek the wrong path. Realizing that pleasure can never bring happiness, what then is there left? What other way to go?

When you have found the secret of happiness you will see it consists of a harmony of life's factors. The memory of the past and the plans for the future must so harmonize that the result is a pleasurable feeling at present. If your life is so adjusted that a sense of satisfaction enables you to go joyously about your work, then the secret of happiness has been found.

Day by day you are laying the foundation for the eternal happiness; you are building, that your capacity may be enlarged for the fullness of happiness. Day by day you are growing happier as your soul grows and is filled with that Spirit of God. Life is a harmony, the greatest symphony in the world.

The church helps to plan the future. It points the right way, and all that is left for the member to do is to so harmonize the memory of his past with the plans for that future that it brings happiness. The warning signs of danger are always present. When that sense of dissatisfaction with your lot in life gets the better of you, and is depressing, it is time to right-about face and get back to the true path.

Cease the endless quest for pleasure if you would be happy. Hunt for God and you will find the road of happiness, not a happiness in the future, not a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, but a condition of the present, now or never.

A Church Tramp Comments on Our Order of Worship

One of our local churches, never mind where, was visited recently by a reporter who had been visiting various churches in that city and noting the results for the local paper. Our people not knowing of his presence naturally were not on display, and he saw them at an ordinary service during the absence of the regular pastor, at a time when the service was in charge of local men. His comments and criticisms may be of interest to the people in more than one of our local churches. First, his criticism on the order, or lack of order, ought to be helpful in many places. Second, his more favorable criticism on the sincerity, fervor, and spiritual power of the sermon delivered by a local man, who during the week earns his own living, is in itself worth reading. The item follows:

The Church Tramp Visits Church of Latter Day Saints

By the Church Tramp

Yesterday morning my wife and I attended the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. Some folks call it a Mormon church, but they don't. We were treated with the utmost courtesy, and it seems ungrateful to say anything but complimentary things about the service.

The regular pastor was out of town. When we came in, the choir was singing a hymn. Perhaps the congregation was helping; I don't know. Evidently Sunday school had just been dismissed, and there was still so much confusion that it seemed like some other churches which I have visited. After the song a layman stood up and announced a hymn 'from the black book.' To a wandering worshiper like myself the hymnals (church and Sunday school) were an interesting study. The tunes were for the most part familiar enough, but the words were often quite different from those ordinarily sung. A layman offered prayer, and a layman gave the address of the morning. I learned afterwards that these men were all elders in the church, but not professional religious workers. In fact, the speaker of the morning is connected with a prominent Government office in the city.

His experience of John 15 was most interesting. It would have been equally acceptable with very minor changes as the sermon of the morning at Saint Mary's Cathedral or the First Baptist Church. There was a reference to a sort of church authority that went back to Melchisedec which was a bit different, but otherwise the thought was straight, simple gospel. This address was another conspicuous instance of how much the Bible has meant to the world. Here was a man who spoke with hesitance and diffidence at first. Yet as he warmed up to his subject you discovered that his mind was richly stored with scripture and that he was a sincere, simple believer in the Lord Jesus. He preached a spiritual message about the fruits of the Spirit, and it did us all good to listen to it. If some other preachers could be sure of as good preaching in their pulpits in their absence, it would pay them to stay away for a Sunday.

I came away with a Sunday school quarterly in my pocket which I had filched from the book rack on the seat ahead of me. I knew they would be glad to have me study it. Oddly enough there was no collection. So far as I could see no man came to church with more than one wife.

The Rainbow Maker

[From Builders.]

What a pity it is that many humble workers who create beauty for others have no share in that beauty themselves. Not that they do not have the opportunity: many of them go stumbling about blindly, when a word from those who do see beauty would restore their sight. To give sight to the blind is part of the work of every executive, who likes to look upon himself as a real leader. Let us learn to show the rainbows to those who help to make them. You will understand where this thought of ours came from when you read the poem by Willis Boyd Allen.

Humbly he plodded, in dingy attire,
Along the road with its dust and mire,
Dumb with the dogged dumbness of work,
Without ambition, save never to shirk;
Without reflection, joy or regret,
Hopeless, mannerless, stolid, and yet
A maker of rainbows.

Dragging the heavy coils of hose
Over the turf, past lily and rose,
He braced the nozzle, pointing aloft,
Then at his bidding a flower of soft
White spray unfolded petals bright,
Opening its heart to the morning light:
Over it hung suspended, gleaming,
A magical arch of glory seeming,
The perfect rainbow!

The laborer dully mopped his brow,
Stretched his lethargic limbs, and now
Reclined in the friendly shade, nor heeded
The miracle he had wrought—the beaded
Palpitant, quivering crown of light;
But turning his head from the sunbeams bright
Yawned, nodded and slept.

And while the maker slumbered, the bow
In radiant splendor glittered; and lo!
Each hurrying, careworn passer-by Pausing a moment to linger nigh,
As mutely craving a benison,
Received its blessing and hastened on,
Refreshed by hope.

The Habit of Saving

One of the fundamental reasons for failure in business is the failure to establish the habit of saving money.

The longer the formation of this habit is put off the more difficult will be the task of forming the habit and the severer will be the results of extravagance. When "opportunity knocks" there will be no savings account with which to open the door to success. Disappointment will follow and with disappointment comes a loss of spirit and confidence which spells failure.

The habit of saving, like other habits, should be tude then established. If a child be taught to clean his shoes he soon observes the same quality of cleanliness in other things. If he had never cleaned a formed in childhood. At this early period of life it is comparatively simple to establish certain ways of doing things that in later life will be almost impossible to establish. The child learns to do things first, and having done them is governed by the attitude he would fail to notice that shoes or other things were clean. It is forming the habit of doing things in early life that governs one's attitude in later life. Cleanliness comes from the habit of being clean. It is learned in childhood.

As with cleanliness, so it is with other things. The habit of saving can and should be established while young. It not only gives the right attitude toward life but it produces what is also concrete, a bank account.

Everybody wants a bank account but many do not know how to get one. It is done by saving, and the earlier in life the saving habit is established the larger will be the bank account. It is necessary to success, not just the bank account, but the attitude of frugality, of conservation of resources.

Bishop Keir pledged himself at conference not only to live within his income during the current year but also to have a surplus at the end of that time. With him many others also made the same pledge. What a successful year it would be, not only for the individual, but for the church, if everyone created a surplus and paid tithing thereon!

Living within the income, the habit of saving, the creation of a surplus are stepping-stones toward success. How many families in the church will use the family budget book during the year? How many will live frugally? How many will start a savings account for their children, that those children may learn the habit of saving? How many will lay the foundation for the success of their children on a firmer basis than that upon which they built theirs?

The essence of failure is failure to establish the habit of saving.

An Ancient American Civilization

Ancient America arises and speaks for itself. It says, "I am over 2,000 years old. What do you think of that?"

Doctor Herbert J. Spinden, head of the Peabody Museum of Harvard University, announces the discovery of an ancient Mayan civilization and sets the earliest known date in American history as August 6, 613 B. C. This bit of American archæology is perhaps the greatest triumph achieved so far. Besides the discovery of a calendar which was adopted December 10, 580 B. C., there is also evidence that the ancient race was versed in the sciences of mathematics and astronomy, and these were developed to a high degree. They preceded Einstein in their discovery and knowledge of the theory of relativity about twenty-five centuries.

We have a cheer for these diggers for ancient history. Their remarkable discoveries, even though a little belated, only add to the line of proofs which support the authenticity of the Book of Mormon.

The World's Greatest Need

Sermon by Paul M. Hanson at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, November 18, 1923.

The biggest text in the Bible is the following:

God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believed in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

The most marvelous truth ever injected into the mind of man is contained in this text. Upon whose ears can the words fall without the soul being stirred to new activities and all of one's powers becoming vitalized? All truth and righteousness center in Jesus Christ. The world's greatest need is the Man of Galilee. The reason is because he is one of the godhead. Paul in speaking of His character wrote to the Colossians that all things were created by him that are "in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him: and he is before all things, and by him all things consist."

All Life Is in God

John wrote that Jesus was with God in the beginning. He also declared that "all things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of men."

I love to think of Jesus as the Son of God. It at once convinces me, as I become conscious of it, that in him is superb supremacy and that he possesses power to lift up every soul.

But I also take delight in thinking of him as the Son of Man—one who experienced life as we know it, and who understands our problems of every character, individual, communal, national, and international.

"We have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." He took upon him not the nature of angels, but the seed of Abraham and was clothed in flesh as we ourselves are.

Wherever Jesus is left out of consideration, crowded out, confusion and decay appear. This is true, whether we consider the history of nations, the questions of the world to-day, or go to our own hearts and face our delinquencies and much of our unhappiness and diseases; because Jesus, the world's Savior, has not been considered as it was intended by our heavenly Father that he should be regarded. Marvelous is the thought that God so loved man that he gave his only Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life. God is not on the trail of anybody, attempting to make some kind of a case against him, to find a reason to condemn, to judge, or to harass. From the beginning he has moved towards man with a view to bless, and will so move until the final consummation.

Acquaintance With the Material

The world has formed a close acquaintanceship with the material world, but the knowledge gained in this realm is not balanced by an acquaintanceship with those things that exist in the spiritual world. We have such achievements to the credit of the scientists as the blotting out of yellow fever and other diseases. Where once were regions well-nigh if not entirely depopulated by that dreaded fever, we now find happy communities of men and women going to their labors, the children playing, cities built. The most sacred thing in the world is human life. Marvelous is that accomplishment as I view it.

There is the taking of the power from the great waterfalls—like Niagara—the harnessing of that power, as in the province of Ontario, and many other places, and the starting of the wheels of industry humming, enabling men to work in cleaner and purer environments. That is a marvelous thing to me.

And there is the radio telephone. At this very moment we have a large audience listening to this service who are not visible to us. God bless the scientist! God bless the medical men, and all who are endeavoring to give to the world as a result of the use of their God-given powers that which will help the world, and enable them to live under happier conditions. It is all the result of what God did for man when he was created. In the very beginning of his creation God said to man: "Have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth." But man, in the exercise of his sovereign sway, in putting in operation what was intrusted to him, in the gaining of dominion, has not used certain powers of his soul along some lines in research as fully and as faithfully as he has some other powers. And so because of the mind being unsymmetrical in its development, the knowledge of the material world has not a corresponding balance of knowledge in the spiritual world. Everyone's perspective of life should be symmetrical. It is absolutely necessary for everyone whether he takes up a religious theme for consideration and examination, or a question that relates to the stars, or to the atom, or the electron, to approach his subject with an open mind without prejudice and without fear. Many religionists hold to their faith not as a result of reason, but of environment, and so in the great world of to-day we have Mohammedans who were born in the homes of parents who were Moslems, who have grown up and have espoused the faith of Mohammed. Probably nearly all of them will die in that faith. We have those in the different branches of the Protestant faith who have grown up in the same way, and they have espoused the cause of Protestantism. Others have grown up under parents who believe in Catholicism and they believe that the headquarters of the true church is in Rome and that God presides directly or indirectly over the destiny of the church in which they hold their membership; and it is probably true that some Latter Day Saints are Latter Day Saints, not because they have real reasons, but because of the law of suggestion to them. How great is the loss!

World Needs Christ

The world to-day needs Christ. Every community needs him. No individual can make progress without him. He declared, "Without me ye can do nothing." The reason we cannot get along without Jesus is because all truth and righteousness are centered in him. Therefore, whoever does not believe in Christ is losing great parts of truth relating to life. It was not intended that man should simply make progress in the gaining of wealth, or in the obtaining of a high place of social standing, or in the securing of fame. It was and is the design of God that man should fit into a part of the divine order. We are a part of the divine order that he has established. A true belief in Christ leads to an application of his truth, and this brings melody into the lives that we live.

He was not concerned about splitting theological hairs. If ever anyone is in doubt as to just how to proceed when some abstract question is causing concern, just let the golden rule be remembered and the mind will be illumined by the light that comes from Christ. You will then know quite well how to proceed. "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." That is simple. Christ took great delight in what was obvious and reasonable.

Individual Responsibility

One of the big things that comes to my mind in meditating and studying the work of Christ is a sense of individual responsibility. He asked, What if a man gain the whole world and lose his soul? Wherein is he advantaged? What if he is able to provide himself with a palace, and concerns himself with a high-powered automobile, and lives to himself, when the great day comes, what shall be his standing as he stands alongside of Jesus Christ of the godhead?

The Prophet Micah well expressed what Jesus unfolded to the world: "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Germany, filled with resentment against an invading army, needs the teaching of Jesus. France, who is fast becoming a great military power in the world, needs Christ. There is no one anywhere in the world to-day but needs the Savior of the world. And if he is unreservedly accepted he will make life a joy, where before there was gloom because of a large interrogation mark constantly rising up resulting from not understanding the meaning of life.

Interest in Others

Jesus was always interested in what was happening to others. At one time as he rounded the Mount of Olives, coming from the Jordan valley, he looked upon Jerusalem. He was using his eyes more than some others were using their eyes. He was using his ears more than others were using their ears. The door of his heart was opened wider than the doors of the hearts of those around him—and so he was able to see what those around him could not see. His eyes at once fastened themselves, not on the hills around, but upon the city that lay before him, and then he cried out, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how often would I have gathered thee together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, but ye would not." Jesus wept. Do we visualize with the mind of Christ the needs of those around us, our community and our nation? If we possess the spirit and mind of Christ we become enabled to do that. That is why I love the plea that is set forth in the Holy Scriptures to man to look to the risen Jesus. He was interested in man and acquainted with life.

He associated with all classes, sometimes with the well-to-do to show that their souls were precious in his sight, and at other times with the poor and diseased and poverty stricken to show that he was also in sympathy with them.

The Sonship of Christ

I read of his banquet in Bethany where he was the guest of Mary and Martha, and their brother was with them. What there transpired, if there was nothing else in the Bible on the same subject, would convince me that the Nazarene possessed divine sonship. The sisters were joyful in the fact of Jesus being with them. Mary looked at her brother Lazarus at her side who had been dead for days, and had been raised to life. She cast a glance at Jesus and then the climax came. She left quietly, hastily, and secured her alabaster box of costly ointment, and anointed the feet of Jesus. And then she wiped his feet with the hair of her head. No mere man would permit a woman to do that! Jesus revealed to as many as would believe in him that he was the Son of God.

Another outstanding act of Jesus that illustrates to us what we should do to join with him in saving the world is what took place when he and some of his disciples moved near the gate of the city of Nain. As they drew near, a dead man was being brought out, the only son of a widow. A large procession followed. Jesus looked upon the woman and showed compassion. He spoke to her, and our elder brother, I believe, laid his hand upon her shoulder as he lovingly said, "Weep not." Then he put his hand upon the coffin and said, "Young man, I say unto thee, Arise." And he that was dead was brought to life, and presented to his mother.

Making Others Happy

Tears troubled Jesus. He wanted to stop every tear. It was a matter of great concern to him to see furrows in the cheeks of any of God's creation. He wanted to stop every funeral; he wanted to keep tears back so far as he could.

There, too, is something for us to learn in his attitude towards children. On one occasion some of the disciples in their efforts possibly to safeguard him, as he was living a very strenuous life, told certain mothers, who had brought their children for him to bless, to lay his hands upon them, to stand back; but Jesus when he saw it said, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

The eyes of Jesus saw many things that others perhaps thought he did not see. The disciples might have believed that these children would trouble Jesus, that he had not time to employ for those who wished to claim a part of his attention. But he said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." How many of us love to have the children run in our direction, run towards us, and how many of their little feet move hastily as they come? How many of us do they desire to move away from?

Jesus saw in the little children the members of the church of to-morrow. He saw possibly in some of them those who should take a prominent part in the governmental affairs of the nation. He saw in some, perhaps, men who would take a leading part in his church—little apostles, little elders, little deacons. Perhaps among the girls he saw some who would perform a great and lasting service among the sisters, and so he said, "Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

The Prodigal Son

To impress the right attitude upon men, including the members of the church, Jesus taught the parable of the prodigal son. A young man wanted his father to divide the inheritance with him. After securing his portion he went out into the wide world and soon wasted his substance in riotous living. He lost all of his money and came to want and finally secured a job feeding swine. Then he began to think and to make comparisons. That is what we all do. We often sum up our experiences and compare what we are doing with the thing that has been taught us by those whom we esteem most highly. This young man thought of the past, of his father's house, and he concluded that he would return; and he made up his mind what kind of a speech he would recite to his father, that he was not worthy any more to be called his son but that he would be glad if he would just make him one of the servants. He started towards home. But his father saw him a great way off and ran out to meet him. The son said that he was not any more worthy to be called his son, but the father said, "Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet: and bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry for this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found."

That illustrates the attitude of God towards man. No soul in the church or out of it ever inclined itself towards the throne of God before the forces of heaven were active in that person's behalf. The powers of the universe are on the side of right. He who attempts therefore to get happiness out of life, at the same time disregarding the truth of Christ, will make an utter failure. It cannot be done, for all of the powers of the universe are against the one who is not on the side of right.

When this prodigal son turned his eyes toward his father's house and started on his way, his father was glad to greet him and there was no censure. How vibrant with sympathy is this teaching of Jesus. What the world needs is more of human sympathy. The wife needs it; the husband needs it; the sons and the daughters need it. All need it. It is human nature that one cannot do his best work unless there is appreciation.

Salvation Through Jesus

Remember that salvation comes through belief in Jesus, and through belief recognizing him as one whose word should be obeyed. He commanded his church:

All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.

The work of the church, therefore, is one of permeation and not of isolation. Jesus said to the church, "Ye are the salt of the earth." A boy once defined salt as being "what makes potatoes taste bad when you don't put any on." Salt impregnates that which it comes in touch with and preserves. It is given to the church to be the "salt of the earth," not alone in the little circle where we live. How can one, conscious that he is the possessor of the effulgent glory of the Son of God and that his teachings have touched the cords of the heart and music has been created in the soul, remain quiet? When he sings, there will be something that makes the world better. When he talks, there will be cadences in his voice that somebody will note and be happier for the hearing. There will be something in the handshake; there will be something in the very countenance that will hasten the time spoken of by Micah when he said, "The law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

There is a splendor about the teachings of Christ that enables one to see more clearly any subject that is taken up for consideration. His teachings are the sanest in judgment and the safest in practice of anything that the world knows anything about.

Conference Appointments

At the late General Conference a number of appointments were made to foreign fields. One foreign appointment embraces the assignment of Elder J. F. Curtis and myself to the British Isles, Continental Europe, and Palestine. We intend to sail on the S. S. Samaria from New York, bound for Liverpool on December 1. It has been my lot to have been thrice appointed to Australia, and I have also labored in a number of other foreign fields, so I may say that there is no special novelty in this appointment that is beckoning me on, only the outstanding message of the Son of God and his mission being made known to a dying world. I have no time to talk about sacrifices, nor have I the disposition so to do. I do not think anyone here has heard me talk of anything that I have done as being a sacrifice. When I compare my works abroad and at home with what I know Christ has done for me, what I have done is as rags. I realize from a certain angle there is sacrifice; but the largest sacrifice falls on the one at home. There is the sacrifice, largely.

May God bless the church. May it rise and shine and be a light to the world. It is not a matter of importance especially to me whether I live to see the triumph of the kingdom of God in earth life or not. By faith I now enjoy what is certainly to transpire when that great time comes that was sung in one of the hymns:

All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown him Lord of all.

By faith I look forward to the time when the shouts of victory will be heard. Whether those shouts shall be heard soon or in the by and by is to me a matter of little importance.

Our Personal Responsibility

Extract of sermon by C. W. Clark, Columbus, Ohio.

Presuming that a text is required, I am going to call your attention to-day to a passage found in Isaiah 62:10 reading as follows: "Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people."

The church which we have the privilege of representing comes to-day with a vital message to the world of a restored gospel. The silver-tongued prophet, while perhaps not having a full vision of all things, surely, in the verse just quoted, outlines our own responsibility. For almost a century has been proclaimed the wonderful message, and yet I am to-day wondering how much nearer we are to the point of lifting up a standard to the people than when we started. I am fearful at times that we fail to take the steps necessary to advance the mighty work of Zion. I am wondering just how many here to-day realize that after going through the gates of the gospel plan, they have just entered upon the real task assigned them. Are you, dear brother and sister, helping by your efforts to build such a highway that the path of righteousness will be more plain to those that follow? As you go along this highway, helping to build for others to follow, do you leave the path clearer for your having been in it, or do you, fearing to undertake the tasks before you, stand idly by while others do your share of construction work? There are some weak souls in life who fear to overcome difficulties that confront them, but such should not be found among the Saints who have such glorious understanding.

Opportunity to Serve

It is said that Bunyan wrote Pilgrim's Progress on the untwisted papers used to cork bottles of milk brought for his meals while falsely incarcerated. I am wondering if we would have just as much courage and perseverance under trying conditions of this nature. We have been called to a high and holy calling by coming into his kingdom, but I fear that the gates of entrance will avail little if we fail to start the construction work. We enter that we might have an opportunity to serve. Our reward will depend upon the service rendered. Beecher said victories that are easy are cheap. They are only worth having which come as the result of hard fighting; therefore, if entrance only was all that was necessary, our victory would be cheap; but it is the process of casting out the stones and going on to perfection that brings the reward.

In proceeding to eliminate the stones from the highway by overcoming the imperfections in our own life and being of assistance to others we set an example that begins to raise us up as a standard to the people. The Latter Day Saint who fails to visualize this part of his personal responsibility falls far short of preparing the highway. There are already too many who live only a selfish life and fail to catch the beauty and rapture of a heart that burns with gratitude within them by failing to render service to others. That remarkable servant of old, Alma, gives us a glimpse of the work of gathering out the stones.

And now behold, I say unto you my brethren, if ye have experienced a change of heart, and if ye have felt to sing the song of redeeming love, I would ask, Can ye feel so now? Have ye walked, keeping yourself blameless before God? Could ye say, if ye were called to die at this time, within yourselves, that ye have been sufficiently humble?—Alma 3: 46-48.

The entire chapter is well worth reading and we recommend to our hearers that they make a study of this and see if they can, by the process of elimination, cast out any of the stones that are in the way of setting themselves up as a standard to the people.

A Standard to the People

It is our heritage to be this standard, and if we fall short, shall we not be like Esau of old who sold his birthright for the mess of pottage? What are all the riches of this world, the most beautiful attire, or oceans of commerce compared with conscious rectitude, with one whose heart never throbs with fear of exposure, whose life shows no stain of dishonor, who has not signed his name to any document that the angels of heaven might not view, especially since the gates were opened to you and your sins forgiven, where the law of righteousness is the only thing standing between you and the fulfillment of wrong desires? When you have attained this position then truly you will be a standard to the people.

In Isaiah 60: 1, we read: "Arise and shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." Whether this applies to a people as individuals or to nations in the particular sense in which it is used, certain it is that it must apply to us individually in these the latter days if Zion is to be the pure in heart. Sometimes we feel despondent and say that we cannot arise against the power of the adversary. Rogers has tritely said:

The good are better made by ill
And odors crushed are sweeter still.

Trials Are Not Too Great

It is a well-known fact that kites rise only against the wind, and that no ship can sail through a dead calm. It may be propelled, but that is not sailing. In that wonderful vision on the Isle of Patmos John saw those who had on white robes as those who came up through great tribulation. The promise of the Master that we will not be tried greater than we can bear should be all-sufficient to us, and do you know, when I hear Latter Day Saints saying they cannot stand their trials I feel like saying, "O ye of little faith, you are failing to arise to your duty." The story is told of Lord Nelson at the famous naval battle of Trafalgar, that when he had commanded his ships to enter the harbor to drive out the enemy who outnumbered the English many times, he was fatally wounded, but as he was being carried below, he gave this last word of exhortation, "England expects every man to do his duty." The battle was won by the enthusiasm of that message.

Saints, Awake

Saints, awake. The command has gone forward and Jesus expects every Saint to do his duty. We must not be only hearers of the word but active doers of it too. We are taught in Titus 2: 11-14 that a part of our duty while living in the world is to overcome the lusts of the world, that is, to overcome all ungodly or unrighteous desires. It is God's pleasure to give his people the good things of this world, but he has a right way of doing these things. I have no use for those long-faced, dried-up, weazened professors of religion who do not wish to enjoy the good things God has given for our proper use. But in all ages it has been the Devil's trick to misappropriate the good things and make evil out of them. I want to live to possess the good things God has in store for us, but I feel I am always safe if I can kneel and ask God to bless those things to my use.

We should, however, be very careful that good only will result and then we may be sure that our enjoyments are approved. We must avoid everything which leads to evil, as these things are the lusts of the world that we should shun. We are

Home Building

PART IX

[The feeding of children is ably discussed in this article by Mrs. Donaldson-Mader. It deals directly with the subject of the same title in Chapter 9 of the textbook. For those who are not following the Outline Course of Study, the article is especially enlightening because of its practical plan for feeding children. The percentage of malnutrients in the United States is appalling, and it makes us wonder how many about us are suffering from the same condition. Too much attention to the diet cannot be given growing children if they are to become healthy men and women.—EDITORS.]

References

If the series of articles on home building is to be studied in class or by the individual, a textbook is recommended, Mothercraft Manual, by Mary L. Read, Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, price $2.10 postpaid. Other references may be cited at the end of each chapter of the outline, which follows each article.

The Feeding of Children

By Mrs. Bertha Donaldson Mader

Mary L. Read, in her Mothercraft Manual, says this of feeding children:

"To feed a child so as to produce one hundred per cent efficiency in his health to-day and fifty years from to-day should be the ambition of everyone who has the care of that child—not merely to keep him from death and present illness."

Two mothers met not long ago at a clinic. Their babies were about the same age, and, to the inexperienced and unobservant, both looked hearty and well. But the doctor had just pronounced the larger, heavier of the two the victim of malnutrition. This mother simply couldn't understand, because, as she expressed it, the child had never been ill and was in good flesh. It was not until the physician demonstrated the child's deficiencies by comparing it with babies of normal development that she began to see the child's defective points and realize that her doctor was setting the same goal for her as the author had in mind when she made the statement given at the beginning of this article: "Feed to produce one hundred per cent efficiency to-day and fifty years from to-day."

How Malnutrition Is Observed

Malnutrition, as Doctor George Newman, chief medical officer of the Board of Education (England and Wales), expresses it, is a "low condition of health and body substance." It is measured not alone by height, weight, and robustness, but by the absence of many characteristics that are found in a healthy, well-nourished child. Lydia Roberts, in her pamphlet, "What is malnutrition?" illustrates the meaning of malnutrition by describing first the picture of a healthy child, then that of a malnourished child, as follows:

"A well-nourished child, first of all, measures up to racial and family standards of his age in height and weight. He has good color, bright eyes—no blue or dark circles under them—and smooth glossy hair. His carriage is good, his step elastic, his flesh firm, and his muscles well developed. In disposition he is usually happy and good-natured; he is brim full of life and animal spirits and is constantly active both physically and mentally. His sleep is sound, his appetite and digestion good, his bowels regular. He is, in short, what nature meant him to be before anything else—a happy, healthy young animal.

"A malnourished child lacks several or all of these characteristics of a normal child, depending on the degree of undernutrition. He is usually thin, but may be fat and flabby instead. His skin may have a pale, delicate, waxlike look, or be sallow, muddy, even pasty or 'earthy' in appearance. There are usually dark hollows or blue circles underneath his eyes, and the mucous membrane inside his eyelids and in his mouth is often pale and colorless. His hair may be rough like that often seen in poorly cared-for farm animals, his tongue coated, and his bowels constipated. His skin seems loose, his flesh is flabby, and his muscles are undeveloped. Because of the lack of muscular tone, his shoulders are usually rounded, sometimes protruding to such an extent as to make the deformity known as 'wings'; his chest is flat and narrow. Decayed teeth, adenoids, enlarged or diseased tonsils may also be present."

To what extent malnutrition exists in our own country cannot be accurately determined, for we have no method for gathering data. The best we can do is to take certain typical investigations as indicative of general conditions. In March, 1918, the Bureau of Child Hygiene, of New York City, gave out a report that summarized the situation in New York City about as follows: Of New York City's 1,000,000 children, about 173,000 were normal; 611,000 passable; 216,000 seriously undernourished. These figures apply to New York City only, but Doctor Wood thinks that it is pretty safe to say that 15 to 25 per cent of our children are suffering from malnutrition.

Dealing With Malnutrition

This condition may be produced by insufficient or unsuitable food, by lack of sleep, by fatigue, by defect and disease.

We shall attempt to deal with malnutrition produced by incorrect and insufficient feeding. Except in cases of real poverty, malnutrition is usually caused by giving unsuitable food. To correct this, the one who cares for a child must understand a child's physical development and the fundamental principles of feeding. The author in Mothercraft Manual outlines the fundamental principles of feeding as follows:

Principles of Feeding

I. Cleanliness and purity of foods; accomplished by meeting the following requirements:

1. Unadulterated foods; 2. protection from dust, dirt, and insects; 3. preparation under sanitary conditions (both in factory and in the home).

II. Regularity:

1. Meals served promptly whether three or five times daily.
2. No food between meals.

III. Simplicity as to variety and method of preparation and as to serving.

IV. Cheerfulness.

V. Sufficiency:

1. As to total quantity of energy and fuel foods (caloric sufficiency).

2. As to quantity and proportion of each food element (balance ration).

Of these five principles, the carrying out of the last is the most difficult because of the lack of training of the average mother. However, the difficulty is not so great to-day, for a number of publishers are putting out literature that is simply and interestingly written as well as authoritative.

The author of the text very clearly sets forth the proportion of the different food elements needed daily by children of different ages for a balanced ration and also classifies a number of the important foods under the food element of which they contain a high per cent. She also gives menus for children from ten months to eight years.

Relative proportion of elements for a balanced ration based on the total calories for the day:

Protein, 10 to 15 per cent; carbohydrates, 50 to 60 per cent; fat, 25 to 35 per cent.

Classification of foods:

1. Foods containing a high percentage of protein:

eggs	cereals	peas	fish
milk	almonds	beans	lean meat
cheese	peanuts	lentils

2. Foods containing high percentage of starch:

potatoes	cereals	macaroni
rice	tapioca	farine

3. Foods containing a high percentage of sugar:

sweet fruits	carrots	molasses
dried fruits	honey	barley sugar
beets	maple syrup	cane sugar

4. Foods containing a high percentage of fat:

cream	cotton seed oil
butter	nuts (except chestnuts)
egg yolk	meat fats
olive oil

5. Minerals are found in grain, in fruit, green vegetables, milk, eggs, meat.

High percentage of phosphorus and calcium in:

grape juice	maple sap
rhubarb

High percentage of calcium, phosphorus, and iron in:

spinach	apples	whole wheat
celery	prunes	whole cereals
peas	peaches	egg yolk
lima beans	pears	lean meat (except calcium)
string beans	dates, raisins

(The foregoing outlines are from Mary Read's book, The Mothercraft Manual, and will give you a hint of its valuable contents.)

We shall attempt no specific menus or directions for feeding children because authorities differ so widely on various points that we feel each mother should study various texts, attend clinics, etc., and then in consultation with her physician as a first-hand guide, work out her own special problems, using her own powers of observation and common sense.

As mothers looking forward to helping establish better conditions for posterity, there are two more avenues open in which we can work. One is to cooperate with school authorities in planning and serving healthful noon lunches to children who must eat lunch at school. The other is to teach our children at home the fundamental principles of feeding and cookery and give them opportunity to practice in our own kitchens.

The references following the Outline Course of Study will be found helpful in the various phases of the subject treated.

Outline of Course of Study

(The outline follows the chapters in the textbook. Questions are selected from manuals, Mothercraft, by Etta Hunt, 10 cents, and Mothercraft for Girls, by Alice Mae Burgess, 15 cents, and other questions are based upon the articles. The question manuals and any reference books as listed may be obtained from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.)

living in a day when these things are being publicly displayed until it tries our very soul, yet if we are pure in heart we need not let these things interfere with us in any way. The best tools receive their temper from fire.

Zion in the Home

As a people we talk much of Zion. We pray for Zion, but I wonder, do we live Zion? How many of us to-day are making our homes a Zion? Do we appreciate the fact that if we are ever to accomplish this wonderful social reform we must commence right in our own home? Have you built a highway of righteousness by your example and precept? Do you want the church to be judged by your actions? It is being judged in this manner. Let no one pray for the redemption of Zion as a social center who is afraid to start it in his own home. A perfect home life must prevail if we ever reach the ideal. If we are to accomplish the great social task, fear must be overcome and love prevail in its place. I almost apprehend that those who have not faith in the abil-

Sunday School Wins in Trenton Attendance Contest

TRENTON, MISSOURI, December 11.—The departments here are progressing nicely. The Sunday school beat the Department of Recreation and Expression in an attendance contest for last quarter by only one and a half points. They are hoping to tie this quarter. The Sunday school, through the efforts of the Department of Women, will put on a Christmas program and have a tree. They expect to give a cantata on "The life of Jesus."

At the Wednesday night prayer meeting, November 21, Forest Giles was baptized and was confirmed at the 11 o'clock service the following Sunday. At the same meeting the infant son of Sister Eveline Moore was blessed, and on Wednesday night, December 6, Sister Eula McElwee's little son was blessed. Sister McElwee is here from Kingston visiting her father and mother.

Elder O. Salisbury, counselor to the stake president, visited Saturday and Sunday and preached a fine sermon at 11 a. m. on "Leadership," and at 2.30 p. m. on "Charity," and at 7.30 p. m. on "What we believe." The Trenton Saints are always glad to have Brother Salisbury with them.

Plans are now being made for a series of meetings by Elder W. H. Kelley, of Independence, Missouri, to be held after the holidays.

Tuesday, December 4, the young people had a box social and program, the proceeds to apply on a much needed roof for the church.

Northeastern Illinois Conference Held at Chicago

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, December 19.—First Chicago Branch has had a very pleasant month of services.

The Northeastern Illinois district conference held at this place on December 7, 8, and 9, was one of the best conferences held in the district. The ministry was well represented and the genial smile of Apostle John F. Garver was an inspiration to all, and his spirituality an incentive to each one more fully to serve. His sermon Sunday evening will long be remembered.

In the branch election Brother Bone was sustained as pastor, Sister Johnson as clerk, and Brother Newman as ity to build a temporal Zion are in that condition because they are not prepared by their home life to enjoy it.

Do you realize the stupendous task of Zion building? Do you want the responsibility of this work?

"Arise and shine, for light has come." Be more Zionie in your home, your branch, your district, and before we realize it Zion will be here. Remember no unclean things can enter Zion, and that Zion is the pure in heart. Let us resolve to put our good thoughts into action that a place of refuge may be established. And let us remember that we need to help put Zion in our own hearts and make it a personal question, not worrying about our brother or sister.

financial deacon. Brother C. A. Edstrom was chosen as superintendent of the Sunday school, and Brother Clyde Bullard as assistant. The Department of Recreation and Expression sustained Brothers E. U. Edstrom and J. Louis Gauthier as president and vice president.

The Saints here are pleased to have in their midst Brother Barrows of Lamoni, who is organizing an orchestra.

All are busy preparing for the holiday season and laying plans for the new year. First Chicago wishes all its friends a Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Spokane District Conference Closes

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON, December 17.—The Spokane district conference was held at Spokane, December 8 and 9. Reports from six branches showed a membership of 724. Reports from ten Sunday schools show a total membership of 300. The Bishop's agent's report showed that the tithing and offerings for the past six months amounted to $1,020.

The reunion committee reported progress on plans for the coming reunion to be held at Sawyer, Idaho. Money is being raised to purchase a large tent, and over $260 was pledged at the morning service. According to report, there has been 1,500 quarts of fruit canned for reunion purposes.

The Temple Builders held a supper in the back room of the church Saturday evening of the conference.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is showing some increase in both attendance and interest. The men lost in their contest with the ladies and therefore had to give the ladies a box social.

The general outlook shows that the work is onward and that the Saints are still interested and willing to help.

Elder Rich Visits Vinal Haven Saints

VINAL HAVEN, MAINE, December 9.—Elder Calvin Rich made his first visit to the Vinal Haven Saints and preached two sermons. The church was crowded, especially in the evening, and a good spirit was present. Brother Rich brought blessings to the Saints because of his wide experience in the faith.

The sacrament service on December 2 was a feast to the many Saints present, and all felt at the close of the meeting a greater desire to devote their best to the work.

The Sunday school expects to have its annual Christmas tree; many presents will be given to all who are present, as is the usual custom.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is growing under President Candage, and all are doing their best to make this department a live wire in the branch.

Two Weeks' Meetings Close at Marshall

MARSHALL, MISSOURI, December 19.—Elder R. D. Weaver, of Cameron, Missouri, has been holding meetings nearly two weeks at the Saints' chapel. He expects to bring them to a close Sunday, December 23. His efforts have been appreciated, as is evidenced by the good attendance of nonmembers and the good attention accorded him.

Elder Weaver is now free to preach wherever needed in Holden Stake, having almost fully recovered from the operations recently undergone at the Independence Sanitarium. The branch with one accord desires the return of Elder Weaver at some future time when they can procure a more spacious building that is more centrally located.

Two young men of the church, R. F. Hampton of Kansas City and R. P. Hampton of Independence, are attending meetings while here doing some metal finishing work on the new high school.

Two young ladies were baptized on November 25, and a young man on December 5.

Home Department Active in Pleasant View Branch

TRYON, NEBRASKA, December 20.—Pleasant View Branch is not holding meetings at present. Missionary work has not been done here for over two years. The Home Department, however, is continuing to carry on the interest in the gospel. The Publicity Department is also active in the vicinity in the way of taking subscriptions for papers and books and distributing tracts.

Holden Stake News

Buckner

Elder W. S. Macrae, of the stake presidency, was with the Buckner Saints Sunday morning, December 16. The attendance was very good, there being over fifty present at the Sunday school.

Elder R. B. Cook was reelected pastor. Brother Cook is doing effective work in looking after the work here and also at Sibley. They meet in a hall and are in need of a church building very much.

Bates City

Sister Lola A. Johnson of Lexington, stake music director, and Sister Gwendolyn Johnson, director of piano and organ work in the stake, were at Bates City Sunday in the interests of the Department of Music. In the evening a musical program was given by the Walnut Park Orchestra of Independence and the Sisters Johnson. The church was filled to its capacity, the Presbyterian Church kindly lending chairs in the emergency. The Saints and friends at Bates City appreciated the work of the musicians and extend an urgent invitation to come again. Brother W. S. Macrae was in charge of the concert and desires to thank the musicians of Zion for their assistance and also the brethren who furnished cars.

The recent election resulted in the following being elected: Elder George W. Hancock, pastor; department superintendents: Sunday school, Frank Cotterall; music, Mrs. Frank Cotterall.

Lexington

Lexington Saints are organizing a junior chorus and a junior orchestra. Elder James A. Brendel was unanimously elected pastor Monday evening, December 17.

Elections

Elections of pastors and department superintendents held in some of the other churches in the stake during the month resulted as follows:

Knobnoster

Elder Frank Goode was reelected pastor; Department superintendents: Sunday school, Earl Ross; Recreation and Expression, Mrs. Ellsworth Moorman; women, Mrs. R. E. Burgess; music, Mrs. Ernest Moorman.

The Spirit was present to a marked degree, the Saints testifying that they never had experienced such a spiritual time at a business meeting. This is as it should be when the Saints meet together to do business for God.

Atherton

Elder John Schwab, pastor; Department superintendents: Sunday school, D. R. Hughes; Recreation and Expression, D. R. Carmichael; women, Mrs. J. J. Boswell; music, Mrs. John Schwab.

Sedalia

Elder G. W. Rodger, pastor; superintendent Sunday school, Roscoe Moorman.

Brooklyn Installs New Heating Plant

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK, December 19.—The Brooklyn Branch is spending several hundred dollars to install a new heating plant, including the enlarging of the chimney from top to bottom. Plans have also been made to install oil burning equipment. Brother Charles Harris, sr., is the chairman of the committee responsible for the undertaking. No services could be held on Sunday, December 16, due to the progress of the work.

Patriarch Stone arrived in Brooklyn during the first week of December to do work among this membership. His headquarters were established at the home of Brother and Sister William White. Brother Stone recently officiated at the funeral of Brother White's mother in Connecticut.

The Department of Women are providing a bit of Christmas cheer for the "shut-ins." Their thoughtfulness is highly commendable and will be sincerely appreciated, not alone by those directly interested but by their friends as well. But after all, is there anything more worthy of the true spirit of Christmas than the gift given in remembrance of the Great Gift? One bestowed upon a loved one or acquaintance without thought or consideration of this holy purpose, is bereft of the finer attributes involved in social stewardship.

Several years ago, when the place known as Brooklyn was a town of comparatively small extent, there came here our faithful brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Squire, sr. The mark of their valiant service in establishing the work of the Reorganization in the city of Brooklyn will never be effaced. In late years they established a home in Kirtland, from which they have recently returned to our midst and will winter with their children. They are comfortably located with their daughter, Sister Violet Haan, and her husband.

General Chorister Welcomed at Toronto

TORONTO, ONTARIO, December 20.—General Chorister Albert N. Hoxie visited the branch on Sunday, November 25. He created a great interest and enthusiasm among the membership and friends by his leadership in congregational singing and beautiful execution of the violin. An audience of four hundred greeted him in the evening.

As there was no piano in the upper auditorium it was decided to rent one for the occasion, but the Department of Recreation and Expression said, "Let us buy one," and they did, a used Steinway grand, a magnificent instrument.

A renaissance has certainly taken place in the Department of Women. They are working toward an all-round development. The bazaar recently held netted them nearly $300.

Brother and Sister Robert Farthing, of this city, left Friday morning for their mission to the Society Islands. They are well qualified for the mission and Toronto is proud of them. A farewell reception was given them in the church, a talented family from the late R. C. Evans church assisting along musical lines. Various presents were given Brother and Sister Farthing, the branch presenting them with a wardrobe trunk and a purse. Brother C. E. Miller showed on the screen with his lantern a number of views of the Society Islands and the mission house where the missionaries will live, the people they will labor among, the boats they will travel in, etc.

At the annual business meeting the old order of presiding priest, teacher, and deacon was adopted, with C. Edward Miller as presiding elder. Brother Miller presented an outline of priesthood activities, which embraced every man in office. It was unanimously adopted. One suggestion he made was that the automobiles of the branch be mobilized for official visiting, especially on Sunday.

Brother Miller started his illustrated lectures on the Book of Mormon on November 25. The attendance is large and is increasing.

Southeastern Illinois Conference at Mount Vernon

MOUNT VERNON, ILLINOIS, December 14.—The Southeastern Illinois district conference was held with the Mount Vernon Branch on December 1 and 2, with an entertainment on Friday evening before.

The conference opened with Brothers L. C. Moore and Henry Sparling in the chair. The district was well represented. Sermons were preached during the conference by P. G. McMahan, L. C. Moore, and Harris Curtis. Sister Sparling had charge of the district Sunday school work and the Department of Women, and was elected to represent these departments for the coming year.

Prayer and sacrament service was held Sunday afternoon. An admonition of the Spirit was encouraging to all.

Conference adjourned Sunday evening and the Saints parted, feeling much strengthened and desirous of moving forward to a perfect condition of unity.

Brother Sparling has been the speaker for meetings that have been conducted in the church every evening since conference. Brother and Sister Sparling have located here and will doubtless make this their headquarters in the district for the year. Only a small program has been planned for Christmas as the time is so soon after the conference entertainment.

Lectures on Book of Mormon Given

WATERLOO, IOWA, December 17.—Elder L. Houghton, of Madison, Wisconsin, the new district missionary, visited the Waterloo Saints a few days and held several preaching services, occupying two evenings in a lecture on the Book of Mormon, showing the nature of the book and the evidence of its authenticity.

The branch held its annual election of officers on December 10. The branch members desire to take a more active part in missionary work and build up the work here the coming year.

Banquet Concludes Attendance Drive

HAMILTON, ONTARIO, December 15.—The Hamilton Saints have enjoyed a good year in many respects. Several one-day meetings were arranged by Pastor Hannah throughout the summer with large attendance. Those occupying were Elder C. M. Clifford, District President David Pycok, Bishop McLean, Patriarch John Shields, and Elder C. E. Miller who gave several lectures with slides. District Chorister Seaton and the North Toronto choir assisted on November 16 with the music.

The annual conference of the Toronto District was held here in Labor Temple. All the branches were well represented and much business was transacted. The conference as a whole was encouraging and marked a forward step in the work of the district.

Early in the summer Brother Ibbotson, superintendent of the Sunday school, undertook a drive for new and redeemed members. The school was divided into the Reds and Blues and a captain was elected for each side. A drive was made by automobile from Hamilton to Independence on a chart. Members present, new and redeemed members, and collections all counted a certain number of points. As a result fourteen new members were added to the list. The contest ended with a banquet on Halloween night, given by the Reds.

November 25 was Christmas offering Sunday. Sunday school was in charge of the boys and girls of intermediate age. A program was given with a lecture by Elder Wagner.

Christmas Offering Swelled by Social

TULARE, CALIFORNIA, December 12.—A social evening under the auspices of the Sunday school for the purpose of boosting the Christmas offering was held at the home of Brother and Sister A. J. Damron, November 16. Refreshments were served, which consisted of pie, sandwiches, coffee, chocolate, and punch. Instead of charging for the refreshments, a special collection was taken on Sunday, November 18. About forty dollars was raised for the Christmas offering.

The Sunday school is at present working on plans for the Christmas tree and program.

The branch business meeting was held Saturday, December 1, at which time the new officers were elected. The election of officers for the Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression was held Sunday, December 9.

Elder E. B. Hull and wife of Fresno have been visiting here. Brother Hull held a series of meetings beginning Wednesday evening, December 5, and ending Sunday, December 9, the Sunday morning theme being, "What has the world gained by the great World War?" The evening theme was, "The thief on the cross." Many Saints drove over from Dinuba to hear Brother Hull speak in the evening. All of his lectures were very interesting and instructive. Sister Hull gave some interesting talks on the life of the Hawaiians, and some of their experiences while doing missionary work in Honolulu.

Saints Are Delighted With Christmas Entertainment

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, December 15.—Elder Anderton, of Columbus, Ohio, is expected to be in Lucasville Sunday, December 16, for a short stay with us. Many of the Saints are very eager to have him come, as all feel that the able assistance of some good elder would terminate in much good.

A movement is on foot to have a Christmas entertainment at the church Christmas eve, and everyone seems much delighted. Brother Luther Crabtree and Elder Clarence Current are expected to be present on this occasion and the Saints are glad to have their valuable cooperation.

The Sunday school is prospering and all are anticipating a more prosperous year to follow.

Weston Has Rally Day

WESTON, IOWA, December 20.—The Rally Day meeting November 25 was a great success and many Saints from far and near, as well as nonmembers, were in attendance to listen to two forceful sermons by Elder C. F. Putnam.

One Sunday the speakers were Elder C. B. Bardsley and W. J. Darrington, priest, who spoke on the needs of the church.

The annual business meeting was held on December 20 in charge of District President J. A. Hanson, assisted by Elders Hans Anderson and H. H. Hand. The following officers were elected for the year: W. J. Darrington, president of Boomer Branch; Paul S. Nielsen, clerk and treasurer; Sisters Christina and Bertha Darrington, chorister. The only changes made in the Sunday school were Ione Darrington, for secretary and Fern Butler for librarian.

Elder C. B. Bardsley is now superintendent of the newly-organized Sunday school at Neola. A committee was also appointed to look after painting and reshingling the church, and if found advisable to sell the barn that is on the lot.

Successful Meetings Extended at Cleveland

CLEVELAND, OHIO, December 19.—The two weeks' series of meetings held here by William Patterson was so successful that the congregation requested that the meetings be continued another week. There is good attendance and interest, with five baptisms.

The branch has adopted a new system of collections for branch finances. Heretofore there have been both subscription and evening offering, but now they are combined under a new plan.

The effort put forth by the Herald Publishing House for more readers of the church papers has met with some success here, though there has been no special sermon on the subject. Brother Patterson mentioned the fact that Harry Dudley, a peace officer, was shot by boys who had been reading cheap novels. The Dudley family were here again Sunday because of the serious condition of their son who has just had a rib removed because of the shooting.

Cottage Meetings Held at Pueblo

PUEBLO, COLORADO, December 20.—The Pueblo Branch has been the scene of much activity during the past few weeks and the hustle and flurry will not be over until after the holidays.

Elder Bruce Brown made his debut with the Pueblo Saints Sunday, November 18, and Sister Brown joined her companion the following Friday. They stayed until November 30. Cottage meetings were held, with the exception of Sunday. Brother Brown endeavored to "feed the sheep" spiritual food that will be helpful along the way. Sister Brown talked instructively to the Sunday school, November 25. This first visit was much enjoyed by all and the Browns have a standing invitation to return as often as their many duties will allow.

The Department of Women had their bazaar December 14. The booths were decorated in red and green crepe paper and the many articles were attractively arranged on the counters. The long tables spread with snowy cloths and a bottle of catsup set every few feet apart brought anticipations of the serve-self supper at 6 p. m. The proceeds went beyond expectations, but that always happens when a few Saints get together and push.

The Christmas program will be given by the Department of Recreation and Expression on Christmas eve, which will include a Christmas tree.

Testimonies Borne by Nonmembers

OGDEN, UTAH, December 19.—The Saints of Ogden have felt the general feeling of "let's go" that seems to extend all over the church. Many good spiritual prayer meetings have been held. In the last meeting four were present who are not yet members of the church, but one of them bore a testimony of the truthfulness of the gospel, particularly in connection with the Book of Mormon, saying that she had read some parts of it for the past several months and as yet had been unable to find a flaw in it. At another meeting every member took part, either with testimony or prayer, or both.

In line with the above the local priesthood has put forth a renewed effort to accomplish something here in the "valley of the mountains," and they feel that they have accomplished considerable since making the new start. They have been holding some very fine priesthood meetings, and in them have outlined a definite plan of work for the coming year. If the work is carried out as outlined, much will be done in and around the Ogden Branch.

Indianapolis Branch Starts Building Fund

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, December 19.—The Indianapolis Sunday school has an enrollment of forty with an average attendance of about thirty-four. Offering averages about 12 cents per capita each Sunday. Two years ago a building fund was started and there is now over $200 in the treasury. In addition to this fund, $50 was set as the goal for this year's Christmas offering. The Sunday school will do even better than this.

Religio is held every Sunday evening at 7 o'clock with good interest and growing attendance. Once a month some social event is planned. This month a free-for-all spelling match will be held. Last month there was an interesting debate on "Resolved, that the United States should become a member of the League of Nations." The judges awarded the decision to the negative.

The Department of Women is making a gallant effort to help out with the building fund. Last September, during the State fair, they had a concession that cleared about $75, and on December 8 a fancy work bazaar cleared another $75. Meetings are held every other week and interest is good.

San Francisco Welcomes Visiting Apostles

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, December 21.—Several apostles have favored the branch with their presence recently. On December 3, Apostle M. A. McConley visited here on his way to Australia, preaching a very interesting and enjoyable sermon. On December 7, Apostle R. S. Budd was here and he too preached a very fine sermon in the morning, going to Oakland for the evening meeting. Then on December 12, the Saints had the pleasure of meeting Apostle D. T. Williams who has preached here twice and is now visiting some of the other branches. It is hoped that with the help of these two brothers some useful work will be done after the opening of the new year.

Elder L. B. Shippy, a newly ordained elder, preached the evening of December 3. He also baptized a young lady here on the 17th.

The Department of Women held a bazaar recently, clearing $310.

All branch officers were reelected at the annual election of officers, and hopes for the future are bright.

Soldiers Grove Scene of Early Hardships

SOLDIERS GROVE, WISCONSIN, December 24.—Soldiers Grove Branch truly has a "little brown church in the wildwood." And a beautiful spot it is, neither in a valley nor on a ridge, but in a dale. The membership numbers about one hundred twenty-five.

The work started here in 1895 when Elder Leonard Houghton, then a young man of some twenty years, sowed the first seed at great sacrifice, sleeping in the schoolhouses and undergoing many other hardships. Many have cultivated the seed sown at that time.

District President J. O. Dutton visited here Wednesday, December 12, and stayed over Sunday, preaching some very good sermons.

Brother Hield, district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, gave the Saints a pleasant surprise when he dropped in Saturday evening and stayed over Sunday. This department is moving forward, and some interesting discussions are being held on such subjects as, What does the church need most? Which is more important, the pastor or the missionary?

Honolulu Branch Has Full Weekly Schedule

HONOLULU, TERRITORY OF HAWAII, December 3.—Activities at this place are continuing lively. A full program every week results in increasing interest. For the week of December 2 to 9 the following schedule will be observed: Sunday, December 2, Japanese Sunday school at Kalihi, also at the main branch; sacrament service at 11 o'clock; Sunday school at the home of Brother Mahuka, 1 p. m., meeting of Japanese branch, 2.30 p. m.; choir practice, 5 p. m.; Department of Recreation and Expression, 6 p. m.; preaching at 7.30 p. m. Many of Hawaiian, of Japanese, and of Chinese parentage are leaders in these activities.

Monday, December 3, at 7.30 p. m. the Mizpah Club will meet at the mission house.

On Wednesday, December 5, the regular meetings will be held: 6.30 p. m., Doctrine and Covenants class; 7.30 p. m., prayer and social service; 7.30 p. m., prayer and social service at the home of Sister Violet Lee; 8.30 p. m. choir practice.

Thursday meetings for the week will be: 7.30 p. m., meeting at Waikiki and one at Kalihi.

Another meeting is scheduled for Friday, December 7, at 7.30 p. m., at Kalihi. The Department of Recreation and Expression, Waikiki local, is to meet at the home of Sister Sterling.

It can be seen that Honolulu is very active in the gospel work, and much good is resulting. The schedule given is an example of what is being done to spread the gospel.

East Saint Louis Gives Beautiful Christmas Program

EAST SAINT LOUIS, ILLINOIS, December 27.—The Christmas program here in charge of Mrs. Elsie Barraclough was such a success that it would bear passing on. The rostrum was beautifully decorated in white with red poinsettias and silver tinsel. Even the Santa Claus banner which decorated the blackboard made a picture appealing to the eye. The entertainment of music, vocal and instrumental, pantomimes and living pictures, dialogues, etc., was of a very high character, and the committee deserves high praise. The church was all too small for the crowd, among which were visitors from Saint Louis.

The Sunday school, on the morning of December 23, with ninety-six in attendance, had a collection of over $20 for the Christmas offering.

The Department of Women are to hold an open meeting the first Thursday of the new year. Each one is to take her own cup for use in serving refreshments.

Two of the brethren are now associated with a leading East Saint Louis paper, The Daily Journal, so that the branch is treated very nicely in the matter of space.

The budget system is at present engaging attention as an effort is being made to establish one in this branch.

Radio Flashes

Clearwater, Nebraska.—We heard the program and masterly effort of Brother F. M. Smith broadcasted from Omaha. It seemed at times we could almost see him in his forceful eloquence. It did a world of good, especially when the intelligent mind realizes his position is the only solution for prevailing ills. Brother Jay Butler, of Inman, Nebraska, also tuned in and a number there were permitted to enjoy the program.—F. Gatenby.

Poteau, Oklahoma.—I heard the sermon to-night from the Stone Church. It came in clear and plain. I certainly did enjoy it. If I understood the name correctly Bishop Koehler was the speaker.—Abbie Judkins.

Thurman, Iowa.—Got your signals very plain last night and want to commend Doctor Smith for the excellent address on the very appropriate subject. I consider it a real pleasure to be able to hear such talks and remain at home. Seems that I can understand how the word shall go out from Jerusalem.—Mark Leeka.

Maple Park, Missouri.—Just a line to let you know that your talks which were broadcasted from your station Sunday, the 9th, at 11 a. m., also at 8 p. m., were greatly enjoyed. It was just by accident that I caught your station, as I did not know until then that anyone was in the air at that time on Sunday. I take this as a means to show my appreciation as they were certainly enjoyed by my wife and me.—John W. Truss.

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.—Have been listening to your broadcasting for some time now—two or three months, and let me assure you it comes in very satisfactory at this point. I have a list of about one hundred stations on my log and the strength and clarity of your signals are very pronounced, in regard to mileage and general location. Please reply, giving description and condensed schedule.—Howard L. Powell.

Chicago, Illinois.—Listened in Sunday evening to your program. It came in like a ton of brick. You also had a wonderful program. Do you send on week days? and what time? Please let me know. Your station could easily be heard 800 miles from here, it came in so good.—William Best.

Saint Augustine, Florida. Your concert came in fine last night.—J. I. Hellier.

Oconto, Wisconsin.—Just a word to tell you of my appreciation of your fine entertainment last night. I especially enjoyed the talk on "Our children." My sincere thanks to all who contributed to the entertainment. All came in loud and clear on my loud speaker away up here in northern Wisconsin, the gateway to the virgin timberlands.—H. W. Eckardt.

Cape May Courthouse, New Jersey.—I tuned in your station for the first time this evening; very clear and good volume. Much surprised when you announced the power. It was coming in much better than some of the higher power stations. Hope to receive your program soon. Thanks for same.—J. M. Bowen.

Fair Haven, Vermont.—I received your station last evening very clearly. The last part of your program and the announcement of your future broadcasting came through exceptionally well. The set used was a single circuit regenerative with one step of audio amplification.—W. Spencer Lloyd.

Leavenworth, Kansas.—Received your 11 o'clock program this morning on Western Electric loud speaker and it certainly was fine. The reception was extraordinarily loud and clear. We listen to your services every Sunday morning and have been doing so for some time. There is always a large crowd gathered at my residence every Sunday morning to listen to and enjoy them. In reality we have a radio church service here every Sunday morning and we sure enjoy your broadcasting. Since we have been receiving your Sunday morning services, some people have begun to go to church again who have not been inside of a church house, so they tell me, for years. May our Father in heaven in his divine mercy bless you all in your great work and also bless you for what you have done for us here. I hope with all my heart that sometime in the near future I and my family will have the pleasure of meeting you all and also the brother who delivered the sermon this morning. Don't forget to send me one of your future broadcasting programs.—George Cross.

Lacey, Iowa.—I hear your programs quite frequently and certainly enjoy them. You are sending out a fine grade of material, in excellent style. Your signals always come in fine. We are farmers, living ten miles from Oskaloosa where we attend church, but wireless is making up a deficit of bad roads, so we do not lose our two sermons on the Sabbath. You are doing a fine work. Keep it up. One of our neighbors who never had attended church services now makes a special effort every Sunday to get their chores completed in time to hear church services. Radio has gone where men have had no influence.—Raymond Good.

Neola, Iowa.—I will drop you a line to request that you put my name on your regular mailing list. I have been trying to pick up your station for a good while, but did not succeed until last night. I had been listening to WCY in New York; WHAS, Louisville, Kentucky; WSAI, Cincinnati; KDKA, Pittsburgh; and others, when WOAW, of Omaha, came in with a program that I did not care to listen to. I had picked up several other stations and was about ready to quit and go to bed and call it the end of a perfect day, when I heard a plain, sweet voice singing "Annie Laurie," I believe it was. It was coming in plain and clear, and I knew it was a new station from the position of the dials, so I waited to see where it was. Imagine my surprise and pleasure to find that it was the one that I had been trying to get ever since I got the outfit last June. Do you realize that by having such a low wave length you can be picked up loud and clear while other powerful stations are sending at the same time, and not be bothered with them? I got you last night clear and plain while WOAW was sending, and without a sound from anyone else. I have a three-tube Clapp-Eastham Set and am going to get a Magnavox Loud Speaker and invite the neighbors in to hear the church services direct from headquarters. I wish you success and a Merry Christmas.—Walter L. Bardsley.

Lamoni Items

LAMONI, IOWA, December 22.—A series of meetings was held in various branches throughout the stake the first four days of this week, the subject under discussion being "stewardship." In Lamoni Bishop James F. Keir was the speaker. The meetings were well attended and much interest shown.

The Sunday school will present the play "Balancing the Christmas Ledger" at the church Sunday evening.

Community Christmas Tree

Among other Christmas festivities in Lamoni will be a community Christmas tree in charge of the American Legion. It stands in the center of town and was lit up for the first time last night. It will gleam each night till after Christmas. On Monday evening there will be a program in connection with it, featuring community singing in charge of Sister Mabel Carlile. Other numbers will be an address of welcome by Post Commander Raymond McElroy, and a reading by Brother Joseph Anway. Treats will be given to the children.

The singing of the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's Messiah is an annual event much enjoyed and looked forward to. This year the rendition was by the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society of one hundred trained voices, and was indeed inspiring.

Another Graceland romance culminated to-day in the marriage of Miss Anna Torrence of Guilford, Missouri, and Brother Roy Roberts, of Independence, President Floyd McDowell officiating. Brother Roberts is engaged this year as instructor in the public schools here but expects to return to Graceland next year when he and his wife will both enroll. Mrs. Roberts is a student of music and has devoted part time as linotypist in the Chronicle office.

Graceland Debates

The preliminary intersociety debates were held at Graceland the past two weeks at which two very important and timely issues were discussed. The boys forever settled the possibility of granting independence to the Philippines, the negative teams winning in both debates. The Kappa Delta team, consisting of Philip Lewis, Sidney Phillips, and William Ely, affirmed the question against the Niketes, composed of Byron Roberts, Lloyd Heaviland, and James Thomas. While Brother Thomas is a minister of much experience, nevertheless he entered the realm of politics with equal vehemence and power of persuasion which did much toward influencing the judges in their decision. The other debate on the same subject was between the Victorians, Evan Fry, Allan Houghton and Ivan Johnson, affirmative; and the Alpha Pi Sigmas, Leland Omans, Albert Brackenbury and Ray Henderson, negative.

The girls chose the weighty immigration problem on which to display their forensic ability. The question was: "Resolved, that the present immigration law should be continued." Misses Julia Travis, Helen Stewart, and Tess Morgan for the Vics affirmed, while Misses Doris Nelson, Doris Mitchell, and Myra Nelson for the Kapps denied, and Misses Catherine Clancy, Mabel Gamet, and Cecil Graham affirmed for the Nicks against Winnifred Weinheimer, Dorothy Barber, and Helen Page for the Pi's. Both affirmatives won in the girls' debates.

The College Players presented their first program for the year December 14. It consisted of three one-act plays.

College Vacation

Graceland closed yesterday for a two-weeks' vacation and many of the students and teachers went home. However there are always the lonesome few whose homes are too far away and they must remain. Holiday festivities are always arranged for them, however, and little time is allowed for homesickness.

The weather in Lamoni up to the present time has been quite California-like, ideal in every respect. It was very fortunate for building projects in operation. The new railway station is completed and the last bit of pavement around it is being laid this week. Brother A. E. Bullard and his corps of student helpers completed the foundation walls of the new gymnasium and convention hall at Graceland. Brick laying will begin early in the spring and they hope to have the building ready for use by June.

At present Brother and Sister Bullard are enjoying the Christmas vacation with relatives in Denver and other Colorado cities.

The Graceland radio programs have been resumed. A religious service is broadcasted Sunday evening at 6.30, a musical program Tuesday evening and an educational program Thursday evening.

LAMONI, IOWA, December 29.—The crowd which gathered at the church to hear the play, "Balancing the Christmas ledger," is estimated to be the largest which ever assembled there. Close to one hundred were turned away. The play was very successful, the children and young people all taking their respective parts well, and the whole was enhanced greatly by a hidden chorus which sang from the balcony.

A group of singers visited the sick and shut-ins Sunday evening, singing carols that brought cheer and comfort to many a sad home.

We note the following missionaries who came from their fields to spend Christmas with their families: E. E. Long, C. E. Harpe, L. G. Holloway.

Independence

Stone Church Sunday School

Total Christmas offering for the year at the Stone Church Sunday school is $3,005.85. The special collection on December 23 netted $300.93, and the collection on December 30 was $186.72. The Christmas offering is obtained by class offerings, and by special collections four times a year known as Quarter Days.

Recently the junior service children of the Stone Church Sunday school purchased a second picture for the walls of the lower auditorium. The first picture is of Christ blessing the little children. The second picture is "The Good Shepherd." The junior service is an extension of the Sunday school and is composed of children who do not wish to attend 11 o'clock services in the upper auditorium. Junior service is held at the same hour in the lower auditorium.

Bishopric

Bishop Israel A. Smith left December 30 for Washington, District of Columbia, on Graceland College business.

Athletics

The L. D. S. Athletic Association was not active in matched games during the holidays, as the K. C. S. S. L. had no games. The next game will be between the Independence L. D. S. team and the Kansas City L. D. S. team on January 3.

Visitors at Independence

Miss Blanche Edwards, assistant superintendent of the Department of Religious Education and instructor in Graceland College, is visiting in Independence during the college vacation. She was guest of honor at a supper given by Mrs. Frederick M. Smith at her home in Kansas City Sunday evening, December 30.

Mrs. Walter W. Smith entertained at a tea January 1 for Miss Edwards and Miss Ruth Fisher. Miss Fisher is from Boston and at present is instructor of Expression at Grace-land College. She is spending the holidays in this city.

Superintendent A. Max Carmichael, of the Department of Religious Education, is in Independence and Lamoni during the season's vacation. He has been studying at Columbia University, New York City, where he will return shortly for the new semester.

President G. N. Briggs, of Graceland College, is also a visitor in the city during the vacation.

Spread Holiday Cheer

Holiday cheer was passed on by one of the large Sunday school classes of the Stone Church. Bishop J. A. Becker writes of the work done:

"The I. X. L. Class of the Sunday school, under the leadership of Sister E. S. McNichols, believes in the brotherhood of man as well as the fatherhood of God. Three years ago, at the request of the class, Sister McNichols presented to us their desire to help make Thanksgiving and Christmas a time for more universal cheer. This year they furnished us with thirty-five baskets which were taken to that many homes the day before Christmas. The cost of these baskets was over one hundred dollars. The gratitude of the recipients cannot be measured in dollars. The thrill that accompanies the doing of a deed of kindness came to us as we visited the homes, but it belongs to Sister McNichols and her class, and we graciously pass it on to them.

"Brother J. G. Clark has been our stand-by in this work of cheer. He has assisted us each year, using his truck in delivering the baskets. We express our deep appreciation for the service rendered."

Book of Mormon Pageant.

"The first Nephite Christmas," written by Madge Seigfried, was staged Friday night, December 23, at the Stone Church by the Junior Department of the White Masque Dramatic Club. A full house witnessed the pageant and there were many who could not obtain entrance.

The theme was concerned with the birth of Christ, and the conflict in beliefs among the early American people. A synopsis of the play follows:

"And behold he cometh according to the words of the angel, in six hundred years from the time my father left Jerusalem."—1 Nephi (son of Lehi) 5: 236, Book of Mormon.

After six hundred years of health and prosperity in the Promised Land, the descendants of Lehi grew cold and heedless of the workings of the Spirit of God.

Their accursed and wayward brothers, the Lamanites, at this time warmed to this same Spirit, and were repenting of their evil deeds. From among them God sent the Prophet Samuel to warn the Nephites of destruction coming upon them and their lands, if they did not repent, speedily.

This prophet was rejected by the angry Nephites, and he fled for his life. Commanded of the Lord and protected by him, Samuel returned and completed his mission, foretelling the birth of Jesus within the next five years; also foretelling signs of the times.

Wondrous signs were seen in the heavens; miracles were performed and finally the great sign was given, at the moment when all Christians were to have been killed because the five years were so nearly past when the Son of God should be born:

There was "one day, and a night, and a day, as if it were one day, and there was no night." . . . "And they knew that it was the day that the Lord should be born." . . . and "the more part of the people did believe and were converted unto the Lord."

"Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd."—John 10: 16.

Scene one was a "Street in Zarahemla," a city of the Nephites, 5 B. C. Harold Morgan played "Samuel," the Lamanite prophet, supported by a mob of Nephite unbelievers.

Scene two was in the "Garden of Omar's home," a faithful Nephite family. "Omar," Neville Cool; "Leah," Fern Cox; Moriah, Alden Russell, were the leads in this scene. They were attended by Nephite maidens, converts to Christianity.

"The wall around Zarahemla" was scene three. It showed Samuel and the Nephite mob.

Scene four was in the "Garden at Omar's home." Kenneth Trowbridge played "Aho," Niles Resch played "Laban," and Jack Gardner, "Ormiah." A cast of Nephite youths was in support.

Scene five was in the year 1, in the "Garden of Omar's Home." The "Prophet Nephi" was played by Earl Page. "The lament of Leah and Omar" was written by Paul N. Craig.

Doctor Frank Criley was the "Voice" in scene six, "A day and a night and a day." Ruth Landfried played the "Madonna."

Costumes, lights, stage setting, and action were good. The production was beautiful and the effect upon the audience one of solemnity. The attitude of worship pervaded all as the vast audience left the auditorium.

Mrs. J. A. Gardner was manager, and Gladys Newton coach. President Elbert A. Smith offered the opening prayer.

Davidson Branch Carries on Work

DAVIDSON, OKLAHOMA, December 36.—The Christmas program here was a great success, and was said to be the best in town. There was a fine tree, and Santa Claus did his part.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is growing in interest and the Sunday school is a live wire. A pastor is greatly needed, and it is hoped one will occupy here sometime.

New Branch Active in All Departments

SYRACUSE, NEW YORK, December 6.—The Syracuse Branch was organized July 14 and 15 of this year, and is presided over by Brother Arthur Richardson, his associates in the priesthood being one priest and two teachers. Though the Saints are few in number, they are trying to carry on the work in different departments. One has been added to the number recently by baptism and Brother Glen L. Davison and family have moved here from Sherrill. They will be of great assistance along musical lines especially.

The Sunday school is alive and has for its superintendent Morris E. Whitehead. All are now busy preparing for a Christmas program.

The Department of Women is in charge of Eleanor B. Whitehead, and all the women are interested in the study taken up. They are also planning a Christmas sale.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is moving forward under the leadership of Clara E. Bradt. A new class has been formed in public speaking in charge of Arthur Richardson, who is well qualified to teach this subject. A program of thirty minutes is given every meeting and a social is held once a month, the proceeds from which go to the Christmas offering.

A recent visit from Brother and Sister F. G. Pitt and Sister

Frederick was enjoyed. They spent one week with Brother and Sister Whitehead. The stories of their travels as well as their music were highly appreciated. Brother Allen also visited two weeks since conference.

Brother George Robley left a few days ago for his mission in Winnipeg. All were sorry to see him go.

Professor Purfurst Dies at Hilo, Hawaii

At the age of seventy-four, A. B. Purfurst, for many years an elder in the church, died November 27 at Hilo, Hawaii.

He was born at Sclietz, Germany, in 1849, was sometime professor of languages at the University of Madrid, Spain, and since 1916 a teacher of music and languages at Hilo where he made his home. Brother Purfurst visited Hilo while on a health tour, and becoming fascinated with the place returned in 1916 to make his home there.

He is survived by a nephew, Alfred Purfurst, a resident of Dresden, Germany. Funeral service was from the Saints' chapel. Burial was in Homelani Cemetery.

Big Brothers Club Discovers Talent

DES MOINES, IOWA, December 17.—Much attention is being given to the recreational, social, and religious phases of church life in this branch recently. The Big Brothers Club is beginning to show results. This club is composed of the boys of the branch, ranging in age from eight up. They meet every Friday night, spending part of the time in recreation and the rest in debating. From the experience gained from appearing before the few, some of the younger boys have not hesitated to debate before the Department of Recreation and Expression on some of the big issues that are confronting the Nation. The good this is doing them or the development the boys are acquiring cannot be estimated. The Department of Recreation and Expression is a big factor in developing self-expression.

Priesthood Meetings

A meeting of the priesthood was called one night last week by the pastor, that he might outline the work for the coming year. Even Brother David Dowker was surprised at the splendid response he received. It was nearly a hundred per cent meeting of the priesthood present. This feature alone was encouraging, but greater than this was the ready indorsement of his plan. The slogan adopted for the coming year's work is "Double tithing and every man a steward." A systematic plan was outlined with the hope that every member of the priesthood would be busy and that every member of the branch would be visited, not just once but as often as possible during the year. There are over two hundred and sixty-five families represented in the city. The group system was more perfectly organized, making eight groups in the city, covering the entire field.

Bazaar and Dinner

The Department of Women, besides holding their regular meetings during the month, held a bazaar and dinner in the business district recently and cleared nearly $200.

Instead of the regular council meeting this month, the Ci-ku-des-ka Chapter of Temple Builders presented a play entitled "Christmas in the shoe" which attempted to show something of what the real Christmas spirit should be.

Recent Visitors

Sister Blanche Edwards visited in this city Sunday, speaking both morning and evening. Her morning subject was "The home," and the evening "The great adventure."

Another welcome visitor, though present only a short time, was Elder Daniel Macgregor en route to his western mission. His friends were as usual glad to see him.

Those who have radio receiving sets were delighted with President Smith's lecture from Omaha. The entire program came in clearly and concisely.

Missionary Meetings

Sunday night Brother J. F. Martin concluded a very successful preaching tour of the district. He has been in the district seven weeks and held services in all branches. They have been of a very high order, and in each branch he has been especially blessed with the gift of prophecy, and through him the Lord has spoken to many. Both he and the people have been mutually benefited by his visit here.

On Tuesday night the young people banqueted the older people in honor of Brother Martin. The word power was the topic for after-dinner speeches. It was divided into five parts—personality, originality, wisdom, energy, religion. The topics were discussed by five different persons, showing that to be a real power for service in the world one must to some extent possess them all. Brother Dowker toasted Brother Martin and presented to him, as a token of appreciation, a purse for him to give his wife as a Christmas present from the Des Moines Branch. Sister Edwards, a visiting guest, also gave a very splendid talk. Stephen Robinson, as toastmaster, with his sparkling wit and usual good humor, presided most effectually. Readings and musical numbers harmonized well with the rest of the program. All will be glad to have Brother Martin return in the future.

Four Weeks' Series of Meetings Close at Mapleton

MAPLETON, KANSAS, December 24.—Brother W. E. Haden has just closed a four weeks series of meetings at this place. Eight were baptized and others are near conversion. Brother Haden's sermons were so uplifting one could not listen without having a greater determination to live a higher life.

Previous to these meetings the women's organization built on a new room and painted and cleaned the church.

The Saints met Thursday, December 20, for business meeting and the following officers were chosen: Hollie Dennis, president; William Duncan, priest; D. M. Dennis was called and ordained a teacher and chosen as teacher of the branch; A. L. Needham was called and ordained deacon and was chosen as deacon of the branch; J. L. Gunsolley, clerk; Roy Hughes, chorister; Nellie Dennis, pianist. The work seems to be on a firm basis and a promising year is ahead.

Young People Present Entertainment

SAN BERNARDINO, CALIFORNIA, December 23.—The Christmas entertainment this year is to consist of a play, "Balancing the Christmas Ledger," to be given at the church Christmas eve. Thirty-five young people and children will take part, and all are doing their best to put on something worth while.

A new Sunday school has now been organized in Redlands, twelve miles from here, with Brother W. J. Murray as superintendent. It has caused the loss of some of the good Sunday school workers here, but all are happy to see the work start in a new place.

The choir is being reorganized with great success under the capable and willing hand of Brother Anthony.

Brother George Wixom, missionary for the Northern California District, preached here to-day, both morning and evening.

Faith "Healers" at Work in New Zealand

From a Letter to the First Presidency

AUCKLAND, NEW ZEALAND.—The month of October found us busily engaged as per usual in a variety of activities. We have preached on street on Sundays and also on Friday evenings and cared for the branch work and any spare time has been spent traveling from house to house and working on the section.

I feel we can say that the work is onward and there are more openings for visiting nonmembers than we can fill.

The Sunday school, Religio, and branch meetings have been well sustained, and most of the Saints have displayed reasonable zeal in attendance.

The city is now being visited by an evangelist named Wiggleworth, who advertises thus: "Wiggleworth prays, Jesus Christ heals." I attended and studied his methods and cannot indorse them. He asked anyone with a pain to stand and when they stated where their pain was, he said, "Put your hands over your head while I pray." He prayed and then said, "Touch the floor three times; twist your body; walk down the aisle; run down. Now, have you any pain?"

"No."

"Praise God."

Then more serious cases he marshaled in front of the rostrum, took off his coat and assisted. To another he shouted, "Come out, evil spirit," and at the same time passed right down the back for spinal trouble and the front for chest, etc., shouting all the time, "In the name of Jesus Christ, come out." Then he would slap the man on the back or chest, sufficiently hard to necessitate the assistant catching him to prevent falling. I came home feeling ill, and am satisfied that the methods suggest magnetic healing.

The Hickland (Church of England) healing craze is dead in Auckland, and most people outside the church and many in it think the Church of England has made a bit of a fool of itself. It is easy to find patients who went up for cure, but to find a cured person is another matter. I've never found one of the latter. I have met evidences of injury to some people's faith, some saying that the disappointment has made infidels of them.

New Zealand ought to be very healthy as we have the medical fraternity, the mineral baths and miraculous healers on the wholesale scale, such as Ratona, Hickson, and Wiggleworth; and yet one still sees cripples of all kinds and grades, and it cannot be wondered at that the infidel and agnostic place these healers in the same category as the patent medicine men and advertisements whose rostrums "cure everything" and yet leave the patient much as they find them. The query is, "How much money do they get?"

While these visitations have been in progress, we have tried to get before the people the correct and scriptural manner of healing in contradiction to such palpable erroneous methods and we feel that when these spasmodic efforts are dead the sure way will still be open for all who love the truth.

J. H. N. JONES.

Joy E. Baker of Versailles, Illinois, writes that the Sunday school election of the Pleasant View Branch resulted as follows: Clay Moore, superintendent; Myrtle Yockey, assistant superintendent; Joy Baker, secretary; Nina Baker, treasurer; Catherine Yockey, organist; and Doris Moore, librarian.

Attendance Contest on at First Saint Joseph Branch

SAINT JOSEPH, MISSOURI, December 17.—The various departments of church work in the First Saint Joseph Branch has shown a commendable activity in the prosecution of their interests. For the last three Sundays the pulpit has been acceptably filled by the following: On December 2 Brother Salyards was with us and preached two splendid sermons. Seldom do we hear such fine delineation of the character and attributes of the Christ as that given in his evening discourse.

On December 9 Bishop J. A. Koehler was the speaker morning and evening and his sermons were both interesting and instructive. His evening subject was "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye were baptized?"

Brother Coventry Archibald preached on October 16, taking for his subject the text, "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." His effort was very fine and he made clear the significance of the brotherhood of man. In the evening Brother Milo Burnett preached on "Ye must be born again," and emphasized the spiritual birth as typical of the natural.

Attendance Contest

The Sunday school has only one more week in which to decide the contest between the so-called stronger and weaker sexes in point of attendance. As the weaker sex is now 182 points stronger, it seems fair to presume that on next Sunday that side will do the shouting.

The Girls' Day program brought out an attendance of 208 and was very enjoyable.

The oyster supper given by the Department of Recreation on Thanksgiving evening was well attended. All voted it to be a social success. The Social Service Department asked for donations of food, clothing, bedding, etc., and what was received was distributed by the ladies on Thanksgiving Eve. This department also gave an entertainment the evening of December 13 for the benefit of church needs. The program consisted of a one-act play entitled, "Sewing for the heathen," a pageant portraying the work of the department, and some good solos. The program was well received and netted a nice little sum.

The Department of Recreation and Expression elected the following officers for the ensuing year at their last meeting: George Bowser, president; Leonard Koehler, secretary; Roscoe Peterson, treasurer; Letha Burnett, pianist; Ethel Burnett, chorister.

Classes and Lectures Held

The prayer meetings on Sunday and Wednesday evenings are increasing in interest and attendance of late.

Brother Salisbury is conducting a class in public speaking, which is largely attended. The class meets every Monday evening. Tuesday evening Brother Paul Craig, of Independence, conducts a class of about fifty in voice culture and chorus work at the church. During the ensuing summer the class expects to render several fine programs. Brother Craig also gives private lessons on Tuesday afternoon.

Brother Koehler is giving a course of lectures on "Stewardships" at the church every alternate Sunday afternoon. Those who attend them speak in terms of highest praise of these lectures. Brother Koehler also spoke on this subject before the Department of Women at its last meeting on the first Sunday evening in December. He seems thoroughly acquainted with the subject and presents it in a very clear manner.

The girls' chorus is doing some good work under the direction of Miss Letha Burnett. This is a large and attractive class of girls, and if they will make their lives correspond to their looks, they will certainly be full of good works and a great asset to the church.

One of our young sisters, Viola Dempsey, is in the Ensworth Hospital at this time, having been operated on for appendicitis. She is a faithful Sunday school attendant.

A number of new people have been with us of late, Brother and Sister Boe from Montana, and family, Brother and Sister Morgan and children from Nebraska. All are welcome who cast in their lot with us.

EDITH COCHRAN.

Branch Organized at Galesburg

It was the writer's pleasure to have part in the organization of a branch and the opening of a new church at Galesburg, Illinois, on Sunday, December 16, (and a very small part it was, too) for to those who by lives of devotion under handicap have made possible this creditable organization and church opening in one of Illinois' many thriving cities, goes the credit. These had the larger part on the Sunday mentioned; and from the light of God clearly seen in their countenances, they are already rewarded for the good work done.

The church is well located in a good neighborhood, on Harrison Street. It is a frame building, thirty by forty feet, with entrance in addition. It has a pleasing appearance. With full basement, font, and all nicely arranged, when complete it will be a credit to our cause. Services are being held in the basement until the upper auditorium is finished.

Contributions of Saints and Friends

Galesburg Branch is composed of some forty members, most of whom are interested and moving along well in the work. We have here, too, some very warm friends not of the church, who have generously contributed both in their attendance and by their means to the success our cause has realized at this place. Chief among these latter perhaps is our congenial friend Samuel Denton, the hospitality of whose home has all the years of their residence at Galesburg been extended the church for meetings, and to the elders for their entertainment while in the city. Under such devotion by friends and Saints, the work must prosper in Galesburg.

The branch has a full quota of the ministry, elder, priest, teacher, and deacon. The organization will be completed shortly, by selection of the heads of departments, under a splendid coordinating plan recommended by E. A. Davis, president of the district, and adopted by unanimous vote of the branch at its organization meeting. Recommendations for departments are to be made after careful thought and consultation, the people of course to nominate if and as they may desire.

By the way, Elder Davis, appointed here at the late conference, has been well received by the Saints of Kewanee District. He and our congenial missionary, E. A. Curtis, are working together nicely and are getting results. And mentioning Brother Curtis, it should be said the only thing to mar the day for the Saints was his absence. Brother Ed, as he is affectionately called by these good people, among whom he has so long and so faithfully labored, had been summoned home to help care for a little son very ill with diphtheria. The Saints rejoiced, however, in a letter to Elder Davis just received saying the boy was better.

Font Dedicated

The writer was honored in being privileged to dedicate the font in our new building at Galesburg by the baptism of two fine lads, sons respectively of Mr. Samuel and Sister Leah Shoemaker Denton, and of Brother and Sister Holmes, formerly of Joy, Illinois, given names of the latter having slipped from mind. Such boys as these are the stuff of which staunch Saints are made. May God keep them and all such for the triumph of his cause.

Saints of Kewanee and Dahinda Branches were with us for the day, save the evening services, adding their due portion in spirit and devotion, and, of course, enjoyed well their part.

Blessed by Spirit

The writer was blessed in goodly degree in dispensing the word, especially to the Galesburg Saints alone at the evening hour. Indeed, the Spirit's presence in confirmation and light was with us in all the services, in the organization meeting as well, and in the latter with as much blessing as in any one of the others.

If it might be mentioned here, I would add that in Nebraska, and in Illinois, and in Wisconsin, and in Michigan, and in Iowa, since the General Conference, I have been most abundantly sustained by the grace of God through his Holy Spirit. Never have I enjoyed more liberty in preaching; and, indeed, on a few occasions has it been my privilege to occupy under a spirit the like of which I have not heretofore known. This I attribute mainly to the excellent spirit among the Saints, and especially to their desire to move on in the work. Everywhere I go, the good news of the wonderful spirit prevailing at the closing conference session, and in the priesthood meeting of the day following, has been carried on before by the brethren returning to the fields from the conference. To this good word from our devoted men are the Saints responding most beautifully. So, through them, are we blessed in our efforts.

May God continue to work, and he will, so that in "unity, honor, sanctification, and glory" we may unfold into his wondrous Zion, and for the preaching of his glorious gospel in all the world.

J. F. GARVER.

Vision Gives Encouraging Outlook

I was privileged to attend the prayer service on Tuesday evening, October 2, and was associated with Elder L. O. Pearson in presiding over the meeting. Near the close of the meeting I asked for the singing of hymn number 347, and the singing appeared to be so full of expression and harmony that I quit singing after the first two or three lines and listened to the remainder of the hymn. Some one then asked for number 171, and again the harmony and unison of the voices impressed me.

Suddenly the faces of the Saints sitting before me seemed to undergo a change until their faces became illumined with a peculiar light, and there was a happy and joyous expression on their faces. They were clothed in pure white garments and were wonderful to look upon. All were singing and it appeared more sweet, harmonious, and full of expression than before.

I then noticed a number of faces of those who had lived in the branch in previous years and who had passed away. They also were clothed in white and had a happy, contented look upon their faces, which were so spiritualized that their faces seemed almost transparent. They also were singing, and I could very clearly hear the old familiar tones of their voices.

I also noticed some new and strange faces, about six or eight in number, who were intensely interested in the singing, although they did not join in the singing. They were not dressed in white but their garments were light in color and were very clean and neat. The impression came to me that these were some who would later yield obedience to the gospel.

There were three personages among the singers, sitting to the right and left and in the center. Their faces were illumined by a most wonderful light and their garments were even more clean and white than those upon the other singers. They also were singing and I could clearly distinguish their voices which were the sweetest I ever heard. There seemed to be other beautiful voices as well which were joining in the singing but I could not see more faces than the three, which I knew to be angelic messengers.

The faces of all in the vision were clear and distinct and the singing was indeed wonderful, and everything was made as plain as if the natural eye saw it all.

Missionary Work in England Moves Forward

From a Letter to the First Presidency

LONDON, ENGLAND, November 13.—We are in receipt of your short note of encouragement this morning, and I thank you for the interest you take in our work here.

The month of October has been a busy, happy one. The first part of the month was spent in Manchester, during which time I attended their northern conference, on the 6th and 7th. I preached for them morning and evening and had charge of their social service on Sunday, and believe that I was able to encourage and help them.

Meetings at Manchester

During the following week I held some meetings there, and also had the pleasure of ordaining Brother Harold Dewsnup to the office of elder, and Brother Tower, of the North Manchester Branch, also to the same office.

At the end of the week I made my way to Leicester for the Midlands district reunion, and I had charge of the social service in the afternoon, and also preached for them on Sunday evening.

Baptism at Clay Cross

From Leicester we came to Clay Cross. We immediately started to hold meetings the first week of my arrival, and I preached to the Saints that week, and made no effort to reach the outsiders. But for the second week the Saints here had cards printed, and also had a poster painted, and we had an article in the paper; so on the first Sunday evening of my stay we almost filled the church. The interest was wonderful during the week that followed, and it surely speaks well for the lives of the Saints here, that they are able to bring so many listeners to hear the sermons. During the week seven gave their names for baptism. These baptisms were attended to last Sunday. Brother Times baptized his own boy and girl, and I baptized the other five.

We had planned to stay here only for two weeks, but the interest was so great (for on last Sunday night there were between one hundred and fifty and two hundred in their little church, nearly every seat being taken, and of course more than half of them were outsiders, and the Saints just begged us to stay longer) that we have decided to continue our meetings here for awhile. However, I had to run down to Wales this week, to make final arrangements for Sister Laura Mason, the young girl from Llanelly, of whom Brother D. T. Williams has probably reported to you, who is coming to Graceland.

The Saints here are working hard this week, doing some further advertising, and putting out the subject on cards in the homes of the people here, for next week's meetings, and are anticipating a good time. The Saints tell us that all Clay Cross is talking about our meetings, and about the sermons that are being presented. We are getting a lot of free advertising from those who have already attended, so we expect to do much good before we finish our meetings. There are just numbers who are interested.

RICHARD BALDWIN.

Good Spirit Felt at District Conference

From a Letter to the First Presidency

MOUNT VERNON, ILLINOIS.—I will say that our district conference passed off and it was one of the most spiritual conferences that this district ever had where I attended. The Spirit of prophecy was with us to a remarkable degree, and I say that we did carry with us the spirit of love that we partook of during our General Conference.

I am pretty sure that the same Spirit was shared by all present, and all departed for their homes with a much better feeling and a stronger desire to do good.

I will continue the meetings here for the balance of this week, and perhaps longer. That will depend upon the interest, which I believe will be good, judging from yesterday's meeting. Mrs. Sparling was elected district superintendent of Sunday school, also supervisor of the district Department of Women.

HENRY SPARLING.

Radio Message of President Smith Enjoyed

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

MALLARD, IOWA.—I hope that this will find you well and happy. Just a few lines to let you know that several others with myself heard your message Sunday evening at 9 p. m. over the radio on Broadcast Station WAOW, Omaha, Nebraska, and it came clear and plain. I am holding meetings at this place, and after the close we went with several others and heard you. The announcement of the program, and the subject, What is the matter with the world, and what is the remedy? with your message came in plain and fine, and all enjoyed it. The entire program was good and Brother Elliott's prayer was excellent; the announcements were plain, and such wonderful advertisement for the church and what a wonderful message was delivered and the spirit of cooperation accompanying it. I wrote the radio station WAOW at Omaha, and thanked them for the wonderful message and asked them to please come again. Oh, may God speed the right and God bless you.

W. A. SMITH.

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

DES MOINES, IOWA.—Through the kindness of Brother L. E. Anderson, who has a radio receiving set, I was privileged to listen to the most of the program rendered by yourself and others at the Omaha broadcasting station last night, and was thrilled by your most masterly effort.

We heard almost every word distinctly. The invocation by Brother Elliott was also a masterly petition.

E. O. CLARK.

Preparation for Fair Increases Interest in Work

From a Letter to the First Presidency

STEPNEY, SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—The month has been a very successful one, for though we have had no additions by baptism, the general development of talent and amiability in the branch has been more than ordinarily encouraging.

For instance, our fair and sale of work was held on the 27th of the month, and all the work in connection with it was a veritable foretaste of our Zionical ideal, where all shall be working for the good of all. Such joy and good will as was experienced in the making of goods, the building of stalls, and the work on the day of sale, could not be enjoyed where the work was for self-interests, but true soul satisfaction comes as a result of cooperation by many workers for a common cause, when that cause is for the church of God.

Two thousand handbills were prepared and distributed in the vicinity, a number of willing boys helping me enthusiastically. The picture screen showed our advertisement too, at a small cost, the slide having been prepared by myself, by printing on opaque glass.

Nearly thirty-five pounds was raised altogether, but that was not so great (though it was very pleasing) as was the beautiful spirit that prevailed, for nonmembers by the dozens, and members who do not attend regularly, could not but feel what a fine sociable spirit was prevailing. Many expressions have come from nonmembers to that effect. Really it seems to me that where there is such a fine unity among the Saints, more good can be done for the cause in one afternoon and evening like that, than years of preaching could do without such associations.

Our street meetings are maintaining very good interest. Colin Cornish, priest, is doing well at street preaching. He will not be eighteen until next year, and his youthfulness, together with his good reasoning and use of scripture attracts favorable attention.

Victor Alberts, eighteen, deacon, is also doing splendid work, and preaches very well for a beginner. The departments are doing better I am sure than ever before. We are anxiously awaiting conference news, and wondering whom we may expect to take charge of the mission. We will surely welcome whoever it may be, for questions arise whereon we need advice.

HAROLD I. VELT.

Old-Time Concert Given by Texas Saints

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, December 14.—The Saints of San Antonio are still alive, notwithstanding the fact that they have been silent for some time. The members, assisted by a few outsiders, have just put on an old-time concert which was rendered by about forty characters. The first rendition was at the Y. W. C. A. on Broadway, which netted about $80. Then the Methodist Church of Harlandale requested that it be given in their church on December 11. They sold their tickets for half price, and as the weather was bad, only enough was realized to pay for our costumes. The Baptist people have requested that it be rendered for them, but their offer has not yet been accepted. However, they expect to render it again after the holidays in Beethoven Hall and expect to get good returns.

The Saints are hoping to build a new church, and the above effort was to help raise funds for that purpose. Brother Sheetz, who is employed by the Government, is located here for the present and is rendering valuable assistance in solving the financial problems of the branch. We are now trying the budget system and hope to make it work when the members get converted to it.

Brother W. H. Mannering, with a few other talented members of the branch, has been furnishing programs for the broadcasting radio station every two weeks. Next Monday night they will put on a few numbers from the old-time concert with an old-time sermonet by Brother Mannering.

The branch election of officers for the year resulted in the election of the old officers. Brother T. J. Jett, jr., branch president, has done much in preserving unity of spirit among the members.

MRS. JOHN HARP.

Elder's Expense and Family Allowances. In reference to missionaries who have been laboring in foreign fields, it should be stated that where they have received funds from other than direct from the Presiding Bishop's office, as elder's expense and family allowances, the prewar rate of exchange has been used. In the statement as published, in many instances this shows an excess cost for missionaries expenditures compared to the amount actually received by the missionary and his family. While we have ordinarily printed the contributions of tithing and offerings from foreign fields in the exchange which is prevalent in the territory in which same were made, we were under the necessity of publishing elder's expense and family allowances in the one list, using the dollar and cent unit.

Items charged to Clyde F. Ellis under elder's expense published as $311.63 would read $254.27, and contributions from Saints and friends of $331.95 would read $101.17 had the current rate of exchange been considered.

Charges to A. V. Karlstrom's family allowance of $1,027.28 would read $420.00; elder's expense of $1,790.44 would read $878.20; and contributions from Saints and friends, $112.35 would read $65.17 under the prevailing rates of exchange.

We are pleased to publish this corrected list, and wish to thank each one concerned for having called the above items to our attention, as we are anxious that our records shall be as nearly complete and correct as it is possible to have them.

BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE, Presiding Bishop.

Pastoral Notices

To the Saints of the Saint Louis District; Greeting: It has pleased the appointing powers to ask me to labor in the Saint Louis District as missionary during the present conference year. I greatly appreciate the opportunity of again laboring in the district where I have, in the past, spent many pleasant years in missionary work. The Saint Louis District has become very dear to me as a result of these many happy experiences, and I hope in renewing our acquaintance with the district that a repetition of past experiences will be enjoyed. I believe I sense as never before the great importance of a consecrated effort on the part of each one, in assisting in every possible way in getting the gospel before the people, in a way that will appeal to them. I believe there are thousands of people in the world who are actually starving for the message we have, and our great problem is to present it in a way that will appeal to them. This can be done. In the spirit of humility and much prayer, with a consecrated life as an example, the task will be a much easier one. We therefore ask your cooperation in every way possible, that we might reach, at least, some of those thousands this year, that they too might begin to partake of the better things of life through receiving the gospel.

We would be glad to hear from you, no difference what part of the district you are in, with reference to the opportunities for preaching in your locality. There is nothing that gives us more pleasure than to help some struggling soul to see the better life. Let us all be workers together, that this may be accomplished.

My mission address will be 3711 Hebert Street, Saint Louis, Missouri. Mail will promptly reach me when sent to this address.

In gospel bonds,
J. W. PAXTON.

A Course in Recreational Leadership

We Need Leaders

An authority on the problem of recreational leadership says:

To meet the need for recreational leadership the church must challenge the capacities and abilities of thousands of Christian young men and women. Recreational leadership is one of the most difficult tasks in the ministry of the church. Not only does it require intelligence; it also demands a flexible personality to live with children and boys and girls and old folks. If any young person is looking for a real live job, let him or her undertake the task of leading the church and parish in that most socializing of all activities—namely, play.

The call for qualified leaders comes from every department of the church to-day. It is quite easy to find people who are willing to help but who are absolutely unqualified to do so because of lack of training. It is possible also to find a few people who are very well trained but who are not willing to serve. To put it in other terms, some people are willing to go but have no idea which way to go, and are incapable of journeying safely in any direction. We need leaders, men and women who are both willing and capable, who not only have adequate knowledge and efficient habits, but also proper attitudes.

Recreation Must Be Supervised

In no field do the above statements apply more directly than in the field of recreational leadership. In this field sins of omission as well as sins of commission are imminent. The path of least resistance would be to do nothing, but this would most certainly be the greatest sin of all. It appears that any observing student of modern life must be forced to the conclusion that herein lies one of the greatest educational opportunities of the present day. With equal certainty it must also appear that the results of mistakes in this field may be, and often are, so far-reaching as to nullify the effects of our social institutions, the home, the school, and the church. In a word, recreation must be supervised. It must be supervised in harmony with and towards those ends set by the highest ideals of human development.

Anything short of this will be disastrous to civilization.

The Aim of the Church

It is the aim of the church to make men Christlike. This means that the entire life of the individual must be modeled in harmony with the ideals of Christ. The body, the mind, and the spirit must be blended into a perfect whole. It means, further, that men must be taught to play, to work, to study, and to cooperate religiously. Recreational leadership means nothing other than the supervision of leisure time to the end that Christlike men and women shall result. Leaders who can accomplish this result must be God-fearing, trained, and consecrated men and women.

A Course of Study Provided

In trained leadership the church can find its only assurance of meeting successfully the recreation problem. As a step toward the furnishing of such leadership a correspondence course of twenty lessons on recreational leadership has been prepared. These lessons are based upon the best and latest books on the subject of recreation. No one interested in planning a recreational program can afford to miss this opportunity for preparation at home and practically without expense. Further information in regard to this course can be had by addressing the office of the Departments, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa.

A Sample of the Material Offered in This Course

One of the lessons outlines the principles of play supervision as follows:

1. The director of recreational life must be recognized as an officer of the church, and must keep in mind at all times the spiritual ideals of that institution.
2. The play program should be graded, that is, it must keep in mind ages, activities, and interests.
3. The active participation of all rather than a favored few should be encouraged.
4. The play program should be balanced.
5. The play program must take into consideration the work and the play already engaged in by those who are expected to participate.

6. Existing organizations should be used rather than new ones created.

7. The church program should cooperate with the community program as far as possible.

8. The use of artificial motives should be restricted.

Another lesson will deal with the principles of program construction by seeking to answer the following:

1. How to build a program.

2. How to classify the various activities.

3. What are the characteristics of the different ages to be provided for?

4. What kind of activities are suitable for the different ages for different occasions, for different seasons?

Other lessons will deal with such subjects as the "Nature and meaning of play," "The value of play," "Guiding principles in good times for children," "Principles and materials for programs of physical activities," "Scouting under church control," "Dramatic play in the church school," and many other similar subjects.

Do not wait. Decide now that you will qualify. Write at once for information to the office of the Departments, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa.

"The Fool"

"The Fool," an outstanding play of the year, ends its 1923 run in Kansas City, having had a record attendance and more than ordinary publicity during its many performances.

Advertised as "the most talked-of play of the year," it merits its slogan. "The Fool" propounds the very doctrines of our church in a clever theme which has thrown consternation into the ranks of the sectarian world. It challenges the world to try Christianity, and in the character of the hero of the play it proves the feasibility. Applying to life such statements as "I am my brother's keeper," "Do unto others as you would be done by," it forcefully demands an acceptance of these standards in the name of reason.

But more striking in its appeal for Christianity than either of these, is the manner in which it deals with the distribution of surplus wealth. The hero is heard to say in the phraseology, so familiar to our own people, "From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his needs." For this he is called "The Fool."

Can it be that a Latter Day Saint sermon formed the basis of such a theme? Or perhaps it suggests that God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. Thousands of people have seen this play; thousands of people have heard sermons preached upon this play; thousands of people have been made to think upon a subject entirely new to their line of thought.

The play closes upon a mystified audience as the happiness of the wealthy man and that of the man, poor in worldly goods but who has lived a life of service, are compared. Secure in happiness the man of service knows, but the rich man, his eyes beginning to open, but still skeptical says, "I wonder, I wonder."

Unconscious Discipline

A friend of the children died the other day. He was only the custodian of a grammar school but he held the highest station life can bestow. He was a friend. There was in this man an intangible something that linked him with the children of the school. For thirty years he was the comrade of boys and girls, joining in their play, understanding them, leading them. Now he is dead, but thousands of men and women, once boys and girls, remember him. His life stands for something the world is in need of—friendship.

It is not important who the man was or where he worked. But the principle that made him a success should not be forgotten, for that principle should operate in others.

Children are queer beings. We don't understand them. They do so many things that should not be done. When we think of them as little men and women we lose our patience. They get flogged. That is discipline of the old school. It means that we have blundered, and to cover the blunder we punish the child. It is rule by force—obedience to power—might versus right. This is conscious discipline.

The true way to discipline a child is by an unconscious attitude toward him. He is not a little man who knows how to act on all occasions. He is a boy, and therefore must be made to feel the responsibility of his own behavior. It is his work to govern himself, not the work of his parents or teachers. He must learn self-control.

The custodian who was a comrade and friend to the children never punished them. He did not need to. He governed by leadership through love. They were just pals. If only every father could be a pal to his boy and every mother a chum with her daughter, boys and girls would not do wrong. That would be unconscious discipline. Just pals.

Religious Life Day

A symposium by A. Max Carmichael, C. B. Woodstock, and F. M. McDowell, at the Young People's Convention, Lamoni, Iowa, June 14, 1923.

BY A. MAX CARMICHAEL

I am very much pleased to see as many men here as there are this morning. I have had occasion to feel that our men seem not to have gotten the idea that they are religious educators. Our pastors do not seem to realize at times, it seems to me, that they are the chief religious educators in the community, and, I fear, that the priest has also failed to realize that he also is a religious educator.

As a talker on religious education, our name is too prevalently mentioned in connection with children. Religious education is a process of teaching religion, whether it be to adults or children. The average pastor does not appreciate the fact that the larger part of his congregation is children under twenty-four, and many of our priests when they visit the homes think only of the father and the mother and do not think of the children. They have failed to appreciate that some gambler down on the street corner is visiting the young man of that family religiously. While our priests themselves have made a formal visit to the home, yet they have failed to remember that they, too, should visit the child religiously on the street corner. It seems that they do not realize that they can visit on the street corner as well as in the home and visit members of the family apart from the entire family.

The Meaning of Religious Education

The term religious education may have bothered a lot of people. It probably bothers those who fear education. The term itself is of recent origin. It has come in part from those public-school teachers who have been interested in religion and who know that the public schools are not putting over religious education. These public-school teachers have helped to bring the term into use. The term religious education is a new name for an old process that has been going on since Adam existed. It is simply the process of teaching religion or promoting religious development. Our mothers, fathers, pastors, priests, teachers, and deacons have as much to do with this as anyone else.

The field is so broad that I do not know what to say this morning. I am embarrassed by the fact that I came here with the material unorganized.

However, I shall try to cover what I feel are very important features of it.

I hope the point I have already made is seen by you folks, that is, that in all of our work, both missionary and local, we are in the job of educating people religiously. It is very recent that the theological schools of the country have been doing it at the behest of our public school administrators who know that the public schools are not fulfilling their mission. It would seem to me that the ordinary training school for religious educators ought to provide for at least one fourth of their training on the teaching process. In what I am about to say I hope to be constructively critical. Up to date I have felt that the course we have put on at Graceland for our ministry is not sufficient. We have been teaching history, doctrine, a little economics, a little sociology, but the person goes out without much consideration of the question of how to teach religion. To my mind that ought to occupy one fourth of the training. One half of the training should be the social sciences, such as sociology, economics, history, etc., in preparation for his career, and perhaps the other fourth should be spent on English and the natural sciences, with the idea of being able to interpret the subject matter of these sciences in terms of religion. Pastors, priests, Sunday-school teachers, Oriole leaders, etc., need this sort of religious education.

The Goal of Religious Education

The most vital thing for our religious educator, it seems to me, is to determine what his goal is. We must know our goal. There is no need of my spending much time upon that, but I shall say a sentence or so which will give you my opinion of the contribution which our church can make to the world, which will be but another way of defining our specific goal.

Our church carries with it the idea of God's presence much more intimately and much more intensively than do other churches. I am speaking of the theological principle of continued revelation of truth. That is the theological principle upon which I base one of my reasons for adherence to this church. All truth has not been told us yet. So far as closing the canon of scriptures with the present section of the Doctrine and Covenants or the present page of the Book of Mormon is concerned, we have not yet in the three books one millionth part of all the truth that there is yet to know. The three books help to determine our goal philosophically and also give us a medium by which to interpret the experiences of the present in terms of the experiences of the past. I wonder if you catch the real significance of what I have just said. I think I have said everything that is necessary to overcome one chief criticism of the religious educational movement.

I shall take up two of the chief criticisms. One of these is that the religious educational movement leaves out the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants. That seems to be a point of contention among us, and when we have differences of opinion the only thing to do is to come together and talk it out in the spirit of Christ, pray about it, discuss it, and sermonize about it.

Does the religious education movement, as advocated by some of us, leave the "three books" out? Personally I feel that the movement as advocated by us would make the Bible more vital to us than it is now. How did you missionaries learn your Bible? Did you learn it by having your Sunday-school teachers set off chapters for you to read one after the other? Or did you learn it by going out into the field, meeting a problem, and saying to yourself, "Where is that passage? I know it is there, but I can't find it." Brother John Martin illustrated that for us the other day. No doubt he had had a whole lot of Sunday school training, but he hadn't learned his Bible. He met a concrete problem, and that is when he learned his Bible. We are not going to learn our Bible by any present Sunday school methods or present college methods as well as we are going to learn it when it serves to help us solve a present problem in our life.

I have struck the pedagogical keynote of how to use the Bible and of the Bible's worth in religious education. When the Bible helps me to solve a problem, I am going to use it, and the Bible will continue to help us solve our problems largely because the great prophets of the past have interpreted their common experiences in terms of religion, and when we meet experiences in this world we can go through those pages and find there experiences that are common with ours, and we find out how those great men of the past have interpreted them.

The Bible will continue to have many of the proverbs, many of the maxims of life that meet our particular situations. The Bible will continue to have the bulk of the stories that we tell our children, not because they are in the Bible, but because those men of the past have told the stories and experiences that are common to the great mass of the people of all ages, and they have told those stories as if God's purpose was a part of their lives. We find in the Bible, then, a great storehouse of material with which to help our children solve their present problems of life.

It is true that there are many problems that our children run up against that the Bible does not help us to solve fully. I advocate that we go and get the material that is necessary. When my girl reaches seventeen years of age and wants to dance, I haven't very much out of the Bible with which to help her, but I have my own experiences and the scientific revelations which I can bring to her and help her to be directed in the solution of that problem. All of these shall be brought to bear in helping her to solve and make her answer of her own free will and accord.

The Church School

In other words the church school is not strictly a Bible school. It is not a Bible school. It is a school for the promotion of religion. It means then that the Bible will be used to promote religion whenever it can be, but it also means that the history of the United States, that biology, that the science of physiology, or any other science shall be brought to bear in solving our present spiritual, moral, and social problems. And I suppose that is largely why Professor C. E. Irwin is making the hit he is, because he has a science that contributes to a present problem. And only in so far as the science of religious education helps us to solve a present problem will we make any contribution to the solution of the problem. I hope that that fully answers the criticism or differences of opinion with reference to the three books. I have even said with my father, that if I were to keep any one of the three books, I would rather keep the Doctrine and Covenants than the other two. I may not be right, and so far as the children are concerned the Bible is more valuable. The Book of Mormon in its present shape is very invaluable for children. Some day some of us are going to see the light and attempt to work this out as it should be. Our brethren in the mountains have done so to a limited extent, but the Book of Mormon itself is worth while to us only in so far as it helps us to solve some present problem.

Use of the Spirit of God

The other criticism of the pedagogical men in the church is the feeling that they are leaving out the Spirit of God. I meet this criticism once in a while, largely from the person who, I fear, has only half way thought out the problem. It is an old fight—the fight of the ages.

Sixty years ago when we started the Sunday school movement, some pastors were against it, and even intimated that the Sunday school movement was of the Devil. In olden days all religious education had to be given by the men. They did not let the women do it. It seemed to be the opinion that religious education could only be put across by one ordained and set apart to that task. In that day women were not considered as valuable as they are now. Both the introduction of the Sunday school and of women teachers in the Sunday school were ostracised because it was largely a feeling that God was being left out and because some man-made method was being used to teach the children. The same sort of criticism is in evidence to-day.

Now let me tell you about the Sunday school. The Sunday school was not an institution as it started. It was a method, a process, and there is quite a difference between those two things—a method or process and an institution. We institutionalized the method, and we only institutionalized one phase of the method, and that was the process of pouring into the child Biblical information. The Sunday school institutionalized itself. Some great man found out that we could teach a little religion by teaching boys how to live, and so the Boy Scout movement started. That is a man-made institution, and yet the Boy Scout movement is not in the main an institution; it is rather a method. I should say that Floyd McDowell, who is probably to blame for using the Boy Scout institution, has absolutely no brief for the Boy Scout movement as an institution. It is the method that he wanted. I would like to kill the Sunday school as an institution and get it back on its old process basis.

The Method or the Institution

I haven't answered the question fully yet. It seems to me, my dear folks, as long as we admit that there is a God, God is in it whether we will or not. We will have to admit that ninety-nine per cent of the process we do not understand, but if we understand one per cent, for heaven's sake, let us use our brains and our intellects in carrying out the one per cent that we do understand efficiently. Do any of you folks mean to tell me that Brother R. V. Hopkins didn't plan the prayer meeting this morning with every ounce of thought and every ounce of pedagogy that he had? He used every bit of pedagogy that was in his soul. Are we going to have a chorister sitting up here with no pedagogy in him? Is it leaving God out of it because Brother Hopkins with malice aforethought planned ahead of time and got us all thinking together? He got us all so we each could make a contribution to a common ideal and idea, and that is all pedagogy is. He revolutionized the process a little bit. He analyzed it, and he probably got his idea of using the picture two or three days ago and thought he would try it out. I do not know whether he would next bring a statue of Christ in before us as the Catholics do or not.

I will tell you that the Catholics have some good common sense. I will admit with you that the use of pictures and statuary by the Catholics started in the day when they had to convert the heathen, but to-day the Catholics have institutionalized that process, and we react against it. Why? Because they quit using them as a pedagogical method, and their use is now an institution rather than a process, things to be worshiped for themselves.

Education and Religion

I can't conceive for a minute how God is left out of the pedagogical process through which we are taking our child. There seems to be a feeling that education and religion are separate things. I am going to define these terms for my own purposes. Religion is our interpretation of life, and education is the process by which we get people to have the same interpretation of life that we have. So religious education is simply a process by which we get our people to have the same idea of life we have, whether that idea be wrong or right.

But it is not only to the inspiration of the past that we must take our children in the educational process. We must take them to the discovery of truth in the future. Not always backward, but more often forward to the truths yet to be revealed. I am not so sure but that in our efforts to conserve the inspiration of the past, we are not succeeding in killing out the prophetic spirit within our own ranks.

Problem of the Church

Now that comes to the second contribution I spoke of a while ago. First, is the continued revealment of truth; second, is that as a church we have a project ahead of us to carry out. We have a problem ahead of us—the social reconstruction of society, Zion. And do you know that as a church we would be in the best position to use pedagogy of any people in existence? Why? Because we have a project to think of. We have an idea to put across—a social idea which involves the inter-relationship of the human mind. Our evangelical friends are in exactly the same position as the rich young man who came to Jesus. All they ask of their brethren practically is to be good men, believe in Jesus Christ, and you will get there. We have something more than to tell people not to steal, to lie, etc. We say, Let us work together to reconstruct the rest of the world. Further we must have a technique worked out to put over this reconstruction. And so the religious educational program is an attempt upon our part to use the entire educational processes, fired and enthused by the feeling that God is at the helm to help bring about his kingdom here on earth. That is the statement in a nutshell.

Warning to the Church

Having answered the two great objections to the religious educational movement, I want to sound a note of warning to us as a church. I have been teaching public schools for a good long time, ten years now, and you folks will take this from me that all during that time those children were getting religious values in that school, either positive or destructive. In this particular community of Lamoni I could see that those children were going to that school five days in a week and were getting certain problems of life solved and were having certain problems of life brought to them, but that on Sunday morning those same children were going to Sunday school and were not getting one ounce of help in reinterpreting those problems of school life in terms of God's purposes.

I had a class of sophomores learning biology. For six weeks they discussed the recreative processes, and I wish to God that I could have taken that class on Sunday morning and shown them how God is behind and back of it all. But no, that public-school teacher was required to go through that process as if God was not concerned with it, as if there wasn't any social purpose in it. The teacher had just to give the pupils the bare facts and put in a little moral training, depending upon her nerve and her courage. But it was like pouring syrup on the top of the life rather than fusing it into life. The Catholics have one of the best arguments for parochial schools that there is.

Religious Agencies

We must stand back of the public schools; and the public school, outside of the home and the movie, is the third most important agency in determining the religion of our child. The home probably is the greatest factor, amusement is the next, and the public school comes behind in determining the religious values of our children. But if our public schools interpret life for our children, just that much more must the church reinterpret that same life religiously for the child. We have one of the greatest problems of the ages, and that is to take the children who are reared in the public schools, bring them into the church school, and there reinterpret that same education as a part of their vital religious experience.

Some will say, Does that mean that you are going to bring the reproductive processes into the school? Does that mean that you are going to bring American history into the church school? Yes, it does mean that. That is just what it does mean. Some of our good brethren of other churches have seen the need for this and have started a new agency called the week-day school. Public school educators over the country realize the need of reinterpreting the education they are giving the children in terms of a purposeful life, which is religion. They are glad to give up the time. Somehow I rather feel that the statement made by a Jewish rabbi in Chicago a year ago is to the point. He said, "I do not have the nerve to go out and ask the public school to give up its time when I am treating Sunday morning as rotten as I am." What right have you to go out and ask the public schools to give you an hour on Wednesday when you are not using your Sunday morning hour advantageously?

Three-Hour Church School

I am setting out a goal that some day we will have a church school on Sunday morning run for at least three hours, for both adults and children. But I know our adults will be the last to do it, so I am starting with the children. That is the vision I have. And three hours is not any too much. When we are using those three hours, fully interpreting the whole of life, not the Bible only, but the whole of life in terms of a purposeful living, in terms of the kingdom of God on earth, then we can begin to ask the public schools to give up some of their time for our benefit. That is a big goal ahead of us. I wonder sometimes whether we can do it with our present departmental organization. I have felt at times that it cannot so be done. In fact, I have at times looked forward to the entire abandonment of our departmental organization, within say the next twenty years. I have felt that the education I would like to do cannot be organized around the present departmental system. I believe it is too stereotyped. But perhaps it can, and it is our first task to try to develop our present organization toward these goals.

I want to give you an illustration here of what I mean. In this community a year ago we started lengthening the Sunday school from an hour and a quarter to two hours. I expected some of the parents would object to the children doing it, and then among the older children who are more or less free in their decision I expected some defections. The question I had to decide was which was the better, to have some fewer with the average quality raised, or larger numbers. I am not worrying about converting the world. I would like to convert two per cent of the members of the church. I am going to be satisfied in redeeming Zion if we have five per cent of the present members on a stewardship basis. I suppose some one will say I haven't any faith in humanity. That is one of the greatest struggles of my life. If five per cent of our people outside of the missionaries are living on a stewardship basis twenty-five years from now, I will be satisfied.

Well, the community responded better than I believed it would. There were some other features which would make them drop out. They didn't appreciate what we were doing. Naturally they would make statements with reference to the way in which we were doing the thing. It was to be expected. As an expert in education I must remember that an expert in any democracy must not expect to be followed by any people blindly. He must go out and tell the people all about his methods. I am wondering whether in a large community it would be possible suddenly to lengthen the Sunday school to three hours. Would the people stand for it? It may be that the thing for me to do is to organize a three-hour Sunday school in every community and have those attend who would and still run the other shorter Sunday school. I hope it can be done otherwise. I hope we can do it through an expansion of our present departmental system and get some better coordination than we have.

BY C. B. WOODSTOCK

I do not know just where these boys have placed me. I presume that I may start in this way with a little contribution that I wish to make. I wanted to bear my testimony this morning, but just as I felt that I should arise somebody directing the meeting urged that the young people should testify. Fearing I no longer qualified under that name I kept my seat.

Offers Testimony

I believe I may offer that testimony now. Seventeen years ago next month my wife and I came up to these grounds to offer our contribution to the church and to Graceland College. For eight or ten years we served the church in those days when it meant a great deal to serve. From that day to this I have been questioning in some way the value of the service we rendered. I have sometimes even prayed that God might directly in some manner manifest to me that our contribution was acceptable. This morning there came the confirmation I desired, and I no longer ask God to give me a special manifestation, for I was made to realize as I looked upon these men, these young men who came to Graceland in those days, that my work was in some measure bearing fruit. While I cannot feel that my life contributed much to their success, yet I am taking some satisfaction in thinking that my contribution may have helped them.

We must look upon this religious education movement under the vision which has been developed and is being developed by these young men, and especially by Brother Max Carmichael. It is the product of long years of development. There is some tendency for us to hold up our hands and say, "Hold on, boys! hold on!" As we view the situation there is a tendency for us to feel that the boys are seeing only one side of the problem. Two men went out to see a mountain. One saw one side which was beautifully wooded with great forests; the other saw only the other side of the mountain, and there was no growing thing there. There was not a tree upon it. When they came back, their descriptions did not agree. One said, "It is a beautiful forest"; the other said, "There is not a tree upon it." There are some who would say, "Let us stay in the old paths. Let us cherish the traditions. These are the things that have brought us satisfaction; these are the things that have carried the church all these years." On the other hand, there may be a tendency for some to say, "Away with the customs and traditions of our fathers. Let us now get at this new thing, this new order."

I haven't given twenty years of my life in the field of education and church work without having come to some conclusions. I wish to bear my testimony this morning that these young men—Brother Carmichael, Brother McDowell, and others, standing as they do in places of responsibility—are thrilled with a desire to serve this church, and I am satisfied that God has blessed them with a vision in which they are enabled to see some of the unsolved problems of the church. I thank God that we have men of this type, not only men who can see, but men who have stability of character, in whom we may have confidence. This church cannot progress and develop without them, and some of us who are older will have to modify some of the ideas we have had. Possibly these young men will find some day that a few of the ideas they have been developing will also have to be modified.

Services Acceptable

This, then, will be my contribution. It is that we have faith and confidence in God. I no longer plead for any evidence of his acceptance of my services. If my little contribution helped to make men like Brethren McDowell, Carmichael, Irwin—and I might name a score of others—I am satisfied, especially when I feel the influence of the Spirit of God in our midst under their direction, under their leadership, and in their work. That is the only evidence I need, though I hadn't thought it out as being the evidence that I was pleading for. Our plea is that the young people of this church, and so far as possible every member of the church, shall not stand on one side of the mountain, satisfied with our own limited vision and content with our own limited ideas. Remember the men who went out to see the elephant—the blind men. When they came back they described the elephant. The one who went to the head of the elephant felt of his trunk and described the elephant as being an animal very similar to a snake. The other examined the leg of the elephant and described him as being very much like the trunk of the tree. Let us not wrap around ourselves the robes of our own self-satisfaction. Let us not live altogether in the past. Let us realize that the work we are engaged in is a work of progress and growth and development, that God is in the lead, that we have consecrated men and women who have given their lives, their devotion, and their time in the hope that God may lead us on to victory. I plead that we may stand on the top of the mountain, if possible; that we may come up into the higher atmosphere where we shall leave the one-sided view, that we may be able to realize the mountain has two sides.

May God bless the efforts of these brethren who are seeking to lead us. In closing I can scarcely refrain from urging that these young men in their pioneering shall not run so far into the forest that they shall lose their bearings, and we shall not be able to hear their voices.

BY F. M. MCDOWELL

I am sure that Brother Woodstock's long experience as a teacher justifies him in recognizing that the process of education is a slow one. I am sure we appreciate his kind words and the wisdom which he brought.

I wonder if we may get at the problem in still a different way. I would prefer to have had some beautiful child about four years of age here for you to see, but I will let you use your imagination instead. Can you see him there? How many think this little imaginary child is evil? How many would raise your hands and say this child is evil, just naturally bad? How many think he might possibly be held in ways of righteousness? What are you going to do about it? In the next ten years, the community in which this child lives will spend hundreds of dollars to teach him to read, to write, and to spell. You will insist in that community that the teacher who teaches him that "two times two are four" be a trained teacher with a state certificate. How much time will you spend to teach the child about God? We must have a trained teacher to teach the child that two times two is four, but when it comes to saturating child's life with religion, do we need any training for that? Think about it.

Extent of Religious Training

In this country, between the ages of six and twelve only one out of four of our children is getting religious education, or going to Sunday school. If that continues, it means that three out of four of the next generation will be practically without religious education, unless they get it from other sources; and it means, my friends, that we are playing a losing game and are developing a generation three quarters of which will be without religious education.

You said this child might be conserved religiously. He need not go to the bad. Shall we let this little four-year-old child go to the bad and then send a missionary out after him to convert him and say, "What a brave boy I am. I have baptized one more"? What shall we think if we have lost ten and gained one that way? What shall we think if we have lost seventy-five per cent and gained twenty-five per cent that way?

In our religious education to-day, we are trying to drain the pond with the inlet still open. We are trying to convert a few adult sinners and allowing the stream of children to continue on as always before. You said these children might be conserved religiously. It is our duty to do so, and if we would increase by one hundred per cent, by one thousand per cent, our missionary force, we would still continue to play a losing game.

Saving Religious Lives

The challenge of religious education is this: the saving of a religious life rather than the reclaiming of a sinner. We need both; we must have both, but if we had one hundred times as many missionaries as we have to-day, we would still play a losing game. There is no way out. We are playing a losing game when we allow a great stream of children to go to the bad and then convert a few.

I once attended a small reunion in which the one great purpose was the baptism of a sixty-year-old lady. It seems that their attitude was, "If we can just baptize that sister, we will all go home happy." It did seem to me that they were willing to let the children go untaught in their effort toward the conversion of this one individual. What shall it profit us if we gain one and lose ten?

Another reason why we must get this attitude is that childhood is the best time of all for education. It is the opportune time. God gave us a period of infancy and made it long that we might develop in the child the social attitudes, the religious attitudes, the habits of thought that are necessary to make a full-grown man and woman.

Religious Educators

The religious life we need to-day is going to come over into the life of an individual only as it is made to saturate the life of that individual every year of his life. This new interpretation of religious education means that we must interpret all the agencies of the church as working towards this same goal—the bringing of the individual to God and Christ, to the fullness of the stature of Christ. That means that the missionary is primarily an educator. It is his duty to reach a particular class of people, to teach them according to their needs, the methods determined by their development, and to bring them just a step or two nearer the goal that is set for us. This also means that the priest is primarily an educator, and that he must go into the home as a teacher, teaching that group as Christ would have taught that group according to their needs. Have the priests conceived that mission? Have they gone into the home and adapted their teachings to the ages of the group there? How many times have you priests here visited the home when you have thought to yourself, Now there is a high school boy in this home, and I must get down to his level. The priest is one of a number of teachers whose duty is to help bring all men progressively to God, to help saturate their lives with the spirit of the Christian religion. If a Boy Scout leader in our church cannot come to conceive of himself as a teacher of religion, then we don't want the Boy Scout organization at all. The Boy Scout leader must come to realize that out on that hike, around the camp fire, with the evening story and prayer, he has brought those boys in touch with the divine, that he is better than any teacher or priest if he has brought some religion into their lives that the teacher or priest failed to bring. The Oriole leader has the same opportunity. Our play-time is the most golden opportunity for the teaching of religion, and if we try to limit the teaching of religion to a little half hour on Sunday morning, and do not realize the opportunity of teaching religion during the play life of the child, we are going to fail.

This view says that the church as an organization, the ordinances of the church, the sacraments, the baptisms, the Sunday school, Religio, Sunday-school teacher, the Boy Scout leaders, the ministers, the pastors, the missionaries, the priesthood, everyone of them is working towards the same goal, and that is the development of the religious life of the individual.

Young People's Meetings

Brother Carmichael has said that seventy-five per cent of the group are below the age of twenty-four. How many of your branches within the last year have had meetings adapted to the age of the children? As a pastor, what percentage of your time is spent with the children below the age of twenty-one? How many children's meetings have you had? Some one comes to your town who is going to hold a day's services. What percentage of that day did you give to the consideration of the children of that group? Was it like the reunion in Lamoni not more than five or six years ago when it was an adult affair and the young people had their activities over the fence? We made them irreligious. Now that has been changed. To-day we have our watermelon feeds and our "weenie" roasts and our play on the ground. We try to get religion into the child's play life. We don't have to have policemen now.

Meaning of Religious Education

What does religious education mean then? It is the process by which the individual is brought progressively to the measure of the fullness of the stature of Christ. It is a terrible thing, isn't it? Again it is an attempt to make the religion filter into the whole life of the individual. Religion is not a matter of organization. It is a matter of life. Religion is not a matter of speculation as to what kind of a rooster crowed when Peter denied Christ. When you find a religious individual who combines head, heart, and hand, and combines intelligence, organization, reason, and service into one, then you have the right type of religious individual that we must have if we build Zion. To get this result, we must apply the well-known laws of pedagogy. Let us try to teach religion as well as we teach arithmetic, and we will get somewhere.

I do hope that this hour will result in one thing. If there is a way to raise beans, I submit that there is a way to develop the religious life of the human soul. Why should I cry when I want some string beans out of my garden if I have been so lazy that I did not plant beans. If there is a way to plant beans, there is a way to touch the religious life of the individual. There are some fundamental truths of life, of pedagogy, of teaching. These are the processes we must bring to bear upon the work of making a man Godlike.

Whether it is the heathen or the Boy Scout, the Mohammedan or the Latter Day Saint or the unconverted individual, it makes no difference, it is still a program of religious education so far as that individual is concerned. Our Boy Scout leader is only a teacher, a minister. Our Oriole leader is but a leader, a minister, and if they do not function as such let us get rid of them. If there is anything in the process of any one of these agencies that does not make them Godlike, let us get rid of it.

This, then, is the program of religious education. It is the bringing to bear of the great fundamental truths of education on the stupendous task of making people Godlike.

Travel by teachers is encouraged by the board of education of Tulsa, Oklahoma. Every third summer any teacher who spends the vacation time in travel is paid full salary at the same rate per month as in the regular school term.

PART X

[The contribution in this issue of the HERALD on home building is by Mrs. Eunice Winn Smith, director of Kindergarten Primary Teacher Training Course, Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences. Mrs. Smith has for many years been actively engaged in teaching children and in directing student-teachers in the art of training the child. She is also head of a number of kindergartens in Independence and is superintendent of the beginner department of the Stone Church Sunday school. Mrs. Smith gives some of her ideas in a splendid article, "Training our children."—EDITORS.]

Training Our Children

By Mrs. Eunice Winn Smith

The third paragraph of the introduction in the textbook is an inspiring text to mothers. The conscientious, well-intentioned mother who heeds the promptings of her instinctive mother love is well equipped to care for her child, and she should be encouraged to do so. There are many definitions of education, but all educators agree that the purpose of education is to develop a well-rounded, complete character. Our more modern educators define education as life, and we know that nothing teaches one to live like living. Participation is the test-word of education.

Great Educators

The author mentions certain educators who have studied the little child. It might be well to know more about them. Rousseau brought forward the individual from the masses, insisting that every person is an individual and should be educated as such and not be molded in the same mold with everybody else. The idea of the training of the individual was his great contribution to education. His book, Emile, explains his theory.

Pestalozzi was a follower of Rousseau. He introduced sense education and inspired teachers to regard their pupils as individuals to be made into men and women. He gathered a group of children from the slums of the city, lived with them, worked for them, taught them, and one writer said of him: "He lived as a pauper among paupers to teach paupers to live like men." He was the teacher of Froebel.

Froebel's contribution is education through play—his text: "Come, let us live with our children and they will teach us how to teach them." On the basis of child study and education through play, Froebel founded the kindergarten.

Doctor G. Stanley Hall in America stirred educators of children by bringing modern psychology into their training. His great message was that the child is not an adult and must be allowed to live completely his life in the station where we find him.

Doctor John Dewey is contemporaneous with Doctor Hall and he emphasized the right of the individual, experimenting with the methods of teaching children in the classroom as individuals rather than in groups.

Madame Montessori has greatly influenced education the world over. She was the best trained educator of her age. She was a medical doctor, who had practiced with the best psychiatrists in Europe. Her first work was with feeble-minded and idiot children. By means of material which she designed, her work with them was very successful and she was encouraged to transfer her work to normal children. She was a philanthropist as well as a scientist, and while she approached her work in a scientific manner, she conducted it with great zeal and love. Her most successful work was her House of Childhood conducted in a tenement in Rome, where she gathered the little children who lived in the tenement and whose mothers were employed, into her school and kept them all day long, teaching them how to live. She stressed the right of the individual to develop without hindrances, according to his inclinations. She stressed the development of the individual so persistently that her message on this subject has influenced education all over the world. Our schools in America are working toward the development of the individual as a result of her stirring voice to our educators.

Three Phases of Education

The author considers education under three phases: instruction, training, and development. Instruction is the least important because the child is going to find out about things anyway. He will learn many things if he never goes to school. Under training we consider habits and skill. Attitudes and sentiments begin under training. If you teach your child to brush his teeth regularly, he will form the habit to do so. He will also develop an attitude on the subject. Most attitudes begin with habits.

Development is the most vital part of education. It means growth; it means self-activity growing towards creative productivity, and it is creative productivity that we are trying to get from the child.

Instincts

The subject of instincts is mentioned in this chapter and it would be profitable to pause in the study of the chapter for a lesson on instincts. Another lesson on the development of the nervous system and the formation of habits could profitably be taught before this chapter is finished. Our modern psychologists are taking into consideration the development of the nervous system more and more in the study of children, and educators are being cautioned to note the stage of the development of the child's nervous system in assigning work to the child. When Froebel founded the kindergarten, he knew nothing of neurology. He prescribed such fine work as sewing cards, pin-pricking, and fine mat weaving. Modern kindergartners have practically discarded this fine work because the nerves and muscles of the child have not developed sufficiently for him to do this fine work without injury. Instead, they have substituted work and play that call into action the larger muscles and nerves of the body.

Self-Activity

Self-activity and participation are the things we are trying to get from the child, and all education, physical, mental, social, and moral, attempts to get this. One writer on self-activity compares an individual to a musician who is not only the instrument on which he plays but the symphony which he produces. Or he is the sculptor, and at the same time the clay he molds and the statue he creates.

In children self-activity is manifested in their play. The child reveals himself through play. As parents and educators we should see that the children who come under our care have opportunities for real play. There is a difference between presenting work playfully to children and real play. Children are very imaginative and a teacher may utilize this trait and get children to do things that are not play to them. In howsoever playful a manner work may be presented, that is not real play to the child. The teacher is not getting participation from the whole child. If the children may do the work in their play, it will bring splendid results.

An illustration of this thought is found in the modern teacher who started in the first grade with a description and imitation of their community life, beginning with dolls and families, playing house; and finding need for stores, the children began to make a store. Stores in the community were visited. The things that could be made were planned. Notices of the opening of this store were written and sent to the other children in the school. Money was made and the children learned to count it and make change. Goods were made for the store and prices marked on them. Children were trained to be clerks and add sums of figures. Letters about the store were written to parents and friends. Stories about the store were composed, read, and written in books until they made a reading book about the store. This store work continued for half the year, the children suggesting, the teacher assisting and placing at their disposal materials with which to work out their plans. When the store was finally completed, the teacher found that this group of children had learned more about reading, writing, numbers, language, nature study, and art than any other first grade class in the school. Besides this, they were vastly further advanced in initiative, in planning and executing, and in social intercourse than children who had been taught in a more formal way. The reason for this was that it was real play and the whole child was engaged every day in the work of the day. This is a sample of what modern educators call the project method where children are encouraged to propose, plan, execute, and judge each step leading on to another.

Knowing the Child's Interests

The surest guide to knowing what is best to do for your child is to know his interests. Those things in which he is interested are the things he needs physically, mentally, morally, and socially. His instincts, nerves, muscles, inner urge—all reach out for the things he is ready to do, and for the things which are best for him. For instance children up to six years of age lounge about a great deal and lie on the floor. This is such a common experience that Madame Montessori had small rugs in her classrooms on which the children might lie. Why do they do this? There is a very good physiological reason. Until a child is six or seven years of age, his head is too large for his body and he becomes weary and must lie down and rest.

Educators nowadays are making use of the child's interests. He is going to do the thing he is interested in doing and the mother or teacher does best who works with that interest instead of against it. This author brings up and discusses very helpfully training and observation, reasoning, morals, punishment, etc. It might be well to think about the imagination because many people regard imagination as something to be repressed. On the other hand, imagination is the basis for all creative work and all sympathy with others. One cannot have sympathy unless he is able to put himself in the other person's place. People without imagination are cruel and stupid. The author mentions various ways of cultivating imagination.

Eugenics and Hygienics

The subjects of eugenics and hygienics deserve some notice. Mothers ought to know something of biology. They ought to be able to understand reproduction in the plant and animal life and bring striking examples of it to the attention of their children thus leading them to a reverence for God who has provided this divine ordinance. Instruction in sex hygiene should begin very early in the child's life, before there is self-consciousness, and the door between the mother and the child should be always open that he may be free to ask questions about things which trouble him or rumors which he hears, knowing that mother will answer truthfully and wisely.

Social Education

The author barely touches social education. Modern educators are making this the basis of school work. They are trying to teach the child how to live with others, to obey laws, to do his part, to cooperate, to be kind, to be fair, and to become good citizens. This socialized activity is the special effort of the kindergarten, and children who have kindergarten training are much better prepared for school and for life than those who miss it for they make many adjustments in their relations with other children of their own age. If children cannot have the privileges of the kindergarten, they should have other children of their own age to play with under the sympathetic, watchful eyes of wise parents or teachers.

Sunday School

The author makes the statement: "Religious worship, however, is not to be forced." On the whole, this is true, but it does not mean that parents may be lax with their children about attendance at Sunday school and religious services. They may have to influence the child without his being aware of it, but they will be paid for their efforts if they are able to keep the child in line. Religious education begins and is fostered very largely in the home. The attitude of the mother and father toward God and toward their fellows very largely influences the child. It is an easy thing for a mother to lead her little child to wish to pray and worship. Bible stories should have a prominent place in the religious education of the child. They are stories which have stood the test of ages. We may know many other stories, but we cannot be sure that any of those are as good for our children as these stories which have endured. The Bible stories were told by people in the growing process, progressing as the people progressed. For instance we have the question of loving our fellow men first raised in the primitive story of Cain and Abel, when God said: "Where is thy brother?" and Cain replied: "Am I my brother's keeper?" He raised the question of the ages. Jesus mentioned it and Paul stated it briefly when he said: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." The Bible stories were told about a people and by a people who worshiped the one true God, and there is a God-consciousness running through these stories as through no other book in the world. These stories tell about God as though he were in the next room and they could go to him and get his advice when needed.

That is the way we wish our children to feel. Most Latter Day Saint mothers are asking anxiously: "How can we teach this to our children?" The mother must have that feeling of nearness to God, that God-consciousness, and if she has, every day she will give it both consciously and unconsciously to her little child.

The Real Educators

In conclusion I would say the mothers are the real educators. In this connection I remember a widow who had four children, one of them a daughter. The daughter wished to be a teacher. The mother provided for her sons in a way that pleased the community, but when she went to work in a factory in order to send her daughter to be a teacher, the women of the community said: "She is very foolish. When the girl gets her education, she will marry and what will her education amount to?" But the mother was wiser than her neighbors. She knew that her girl would probably be a mother and need her training to inspire her children. That mother has gone to her reward to-day, but the girl is the leader of the family. She sets their ideals; she takes care of them financially, mentally, and morally. I believe that mothers ought to educate their daughters for their great work as well as their sons for their place in the business world, because the mothers are the true educators.

Pupils assume responsibility in matters of behavior at the Gordon School, Cleveland. A "behavior council," consisting of a representative of each room in the school, formulates whatever rules it considers necessary for safety and order. Guards elected by the pupils enforce these rules, and in cases of extreme misbehavior the teachers may be consulted.

KIRTLAND, OHIO, December 31.—Sister Martha E. Van-Voorhis writes that the sisters of the Department of Women gave a supper and bazaar on the evening of December 4, which netted $366.36, this sum to be applied on the debt of the auditorium building.

LETTERS

Meetings Held Near Council Bluffs

From a Letter to the Twelve

COUNCIL BLUFFS, December 5.—Since last writing you I have been anything but idle. Recovering somewhat from my indisposition I started a series of meetings in a schoolhouse near Council Bluffs. I am only about a mile from the paving in a little brick building and there is only limited room, but the interest is of a good kind. Several good people are quite interested and I shall not be surprised to baptize two families. We have electric lights right from the city plant and the heat we get from the school stove. So we are pounding away. Meetings have been going now every night since November 20.

I attended the conference of the Fremont District at Tabor, November 10 and 11. A good crowd and a fine spirit were features of the conference. Brother Chase was present and was elected president of the district for the ensuing year.

Preaches Funeral Sermon

I came from the conference expecting to start a series of meetings at the Riverside mission chapel and the Council Bluffs Branch but the branch president thought best to change the plan and defer until after the holidays. My plans were thereby upset and I took up this other opening after a few days delay. During the delay I was almost constantly with the family of our beloved president of the Woodbine Branch during the illness and death of his wife. She left this earth life on Saturday evening, November 17, and I was asked to preach the funeral sermon on Monday, November 19. The funeral was held in the Christian Church chapel in Woodbine. This building is intended to seat one thousand people, and the crowd filled every part of the building excepting the choir loft. Estimates from those familiar with the building indicated that at least nine hundred were present. The occasion was a sad one as there were several small children left behind. Brother Fry of course felt very sad at best; but his sadness was increased because of the fact that he was also ill and could not attend the funeral. He is out again now and attending to his business.

Cottage Meetings Held

Because of a community meeting at the schoolhouse to-night I am attending a meeting of the Hazel Dell and Boomer Saints, at the home of Brother Harry Olsen. Brother Olsen is one of the number baptized at the Hazel Dell meetings this summer. I am glad to have the opportunity of meeting with these good people in one of their regular Wednesday evening meetings. The order of the meeting is first a short talk on some church topic and then a round table for awhile and then this is followed by refreshments. (Of course I shall be present to-night at the refreshment service.) These meetings are bringing good crowds and attracting quite an interest. They are held at different homes each Wednesday evening and when they have gone all around the list, the plan is to start over again. I really think the idea is worth while.

I am enjoying my work and feel that the Good Spirit is with me. I shall try to do what I can during my stay in these districts and hope to be able to assist in the building up of the kingdom of God.

With a desire to see the establishment of Zion,

CHARLES F. PUTNAM.

Missionary Sends New Year Greeting

With this writing we are entering upon the work of the New Year, and I am once more reminded of the good people with whom I, in the past, have had the pleasure of laboring. I want to express my appreciation for the blessings of the year that is past and once more to say that I have faith in the power of the gospel to save the race of humanity. Twenty years of constant service has endeared the church to me, and I want to be able to give the church a far better service this year than I have ever been able to do in the years that are past.

The years of service that I have tried to give to the work of the church have enabled me to understand that no one can attain unto the best without helping his fellow men up to that which is best. In other words, we can only receive that which we put out, and he who would attain unto the best must constantly give the best to others. The years have enabled me to understand what the Master of men meant when he said: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Happy indeed is the man or woman who has found real joy in giving, for such a one will receive of the Spirit of the Christ, and shall thereby be fitted for the highest and best.

New Year Resolutions

It is common for people to make New Year resolutions and I am of the opinion that this is not a bad custom, but I would like very much to see every person make good resolutions. Personally I do not know of anything that could be better for us to resolve to do than to live during the year that is just beginning, so that all who see us or hear our conversation may be led to honor and glorify the God we are trying to teach to our fellow men. I am a strong believer in the philosophy of Solomon wherein he says: "If a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." I am convinced that we can teach our neighbors the truth without antagonizing them if we will employ the right methods. If we are kind in our attitude toward others we generally find them considerate enough to hear our message. So I trust our resolutions this year may be such as shall cause our friends and neighbors to see the Christ life reflected in us, and that then we may live up to them faithfully.

Surely we are all aware that the church of the future ought to be far in advance of the church of to-day, and I trust we are all aware that this can only be made possible by the growth and development of the membership of the church. We should therefore avail ourselves of every legitimate means of unfoldment and development. Those who have gone before us have done well, but it is up to us to do better. The church of the past has demonstrated many principles of the truth, but there is yet much of truth that we are required to demonstrate if we are to carry out the program of the church that has been outlined for us by the Lord himself. The big question for us is, Are we doing what we can to reach the state of efficiency that the good Master would have us attain unto?

Church Curriculum

When the child enters school he has before him all the possibilities of an education, but he can get that education only by doing the things that are required in the curriculum of that school. So it is with us when we come into the church. We have the possibilities of life and of Zion before us but we can only attain unto those things as we are willing to do the things that are outlined for us in the curriculum of the church. That is to say, we must not only learn the laws of the church, but we must do them, and do them faithfully.

Permit me to remind you that the thing we would do well we must practice, so if we are to succeed in the great work that has been intrusted to us we must practice living as well as we practice other things that we would become proficient in doing. It is evident then that we will find plenty to keep us real busy during the year that is just opening.

The demand for workers is great and he who will qualify will be able to find opportunity to assist those with whom he comes in touch. May it be that we will increase our work and in every way possible qualify for a better and higher work. When we have mastered the requirements of the first grade let us pass on to the next one and continue to pursue our course until we reach the goal that has been set for us by Christ Jesus our Lord.

With the best of wishes to all I remain your servant for the sake of Him who gave his life for us.

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

Roll Call Meeting Held at Saint Joseph

SAINT JOSEPH, MISSOURI, December 27.—The Second Saint Joseph Branch is showing great interest in the work. There has been much enthusiasm shown at nearly all meetings. The efforts put forth have brought splendid results and everyone has that spirit of working for a greater success during the coming year.

Thanksgiving evening we had a Thanksgiving and roll call meeting which was well attended and appreciated by all. Brother J. L. Bear, pastor, had charge of the services. Every member present was given an opportunity of expressing thanks to God for all he has done for them; also all addresses of members were given during the roll call that the priesthood might learn of any change in address during the year, which keeps them in touch with all.

On the evening of December 6, the four Saint Joseph branches consolidated in rendering a very interesting program at the Second Branch for the purpose of keeping a good feeling of fellowship in the recreation and expression work. Many took part in this program and a new spirit of enthusiasm seemed to flow through everyone present. And the house was packed.

Election of Officers

The Sunday school has taken another step forward for the new year and hopes to send forth glorious rays of sunshine to all and make them feel the necessity of the Sunday school to them. New officers, all young people, have been elected for the coming year as follows: Gerald Phillips, superintendent; Paul Bear, assistant superintendent; Calvin Gurwell, secretary; Zelda Whitlow, pianist; Morgan Gurwell, librarian. These people have the Sunday school spirit, which makes everybody feel happy and glad to have the opportunity of attending every Sunday.

During the past few weeks there have been eight baptisms and two marriages which makes us feel the work is growing in this community.

Sunday morning, December 23, Brother O. Salisbury delivered a very impressive sermon to a full house. His topic was "Christmas." Brother Burnett delivered a good sermon to a good crowd in the evening and all enjoyed the message.

Christmas eve we had a fine Christmas program which gave much pleasure to a large audience and spread Christmas cheer to all. There was something to please everybody. The children were especially pleased when old Santa Claus came crawling out of the fireplace and gave them all a Christmas treat and then darted back up the flue.

Gospel Rapidly Spreading Among Lamanites

WALTHILL, NEBRASKA, December 11.—When Uncle Sam asked for volunteers in '98, I offered my services, and was assigned to a company of "Regulars," and the first time I attempted to talk after I had been assigned to my quarters, I was advised by an old "Vet" that I was not supposed to be heard from for at least a year—that the "Non-coms" and sojiers of more mature ability would do my talking for me.

To the Editor: If the same rule applies to the missionary arm of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, you will kindly consign these feeble words to the waste basket.

Indian Plays Joke on Friend

About twelve years ago Brother R. O. Mann appeared upon the scene in this part of the Lord's vineyard, traveling a la foot. One evening about dark he appeared at the farm home of Mrs. Florence Henika, cold, tired, wet, and hungry. When he arrived at the kitchen door he advised the Indian landlady that he had a message for her, and as it was about dark, she invited him in so he would be able to deliver the message in a more dignified manner.

After a change of clothing, and Brother Mann had warmed his shins before the fire, he began to deliver the latter-day

Lamanite message. It did not fall on fertile soil. However, the bigness of the Indian heart of his hostess caused her to treat him kindly, and at her first opportunity, which was two days later, she sent him to Mrs. Minnie Hamilton's home, near Walthill (Mrs. Hamilton was a Presbyterian and a good friend of Mrs. Henika who wanted to play a joke on her by sending the Mormon preacher to see her) where he stayed and preached from October until March, baptizing six, Mrs. Henika being one of the six. She became inculcated with the germ of truth while ministering to the servant of God at her own home.

Sister Henika's home is four miles east of Pender, and is pointed out by the passers-by as the most up-to-date and prosperous Indian home on the reservation. There was a time when she thought the United States Government gave her her homestead, but since she has understood the Book of Mormon she realizes that it is an inheritance from God, and considers it as sacred ground. She continues to minister to all who come her way, whether they be saint or sinner.

In the accompanying photograph, Mrs. Henika is explaining to a white boy that this is the "land shadowing with wings," and it is the inheritance of the Lamanites.

Other Missionaries Come

About a year after Brother Mann left, Brother Ether Lewis came and did some good work, followed by Brothers Shakespeare and Baker, who baptized about fifty. After this came Brother E. E. Long who also did some splendid work. A great many of the Indians attribute their acceptance of the gospel to his untiring efforts, for he tramped on foot through the snow and mud that they might have a knowledge of the things that God had done for their forefathers, and what he was willing to do for them if they would accept the message.

Brother Pierce was the next to appear upon the scene of battle. He, too, did some good work towards bringing back into the fold those who had halted.

Brother Hubert Case was the next to appear upon the gospel horizon. He baptized quite a number, among whom were four entire families of the choicest of the reservation. Finally he and Brother P. R. Burton blended their services, and baptized them by the score. Brother Burton continued his campaign until the 13th of November this year, never satisfied for a moment without taking some one into the kingdom of God through the waters of baptism. On Sunday before he left he baptized a splendid Indian whom he had been working on for two years.

Brother Bernard Case and his good wife Julia who took up the work where the missionaries left it, are doing some noble work in developing the Indians. They are always on the job, driving six miles every Sunday, rain or shine, and have won an enviable place in the hearts of the Lamanite brethren.

An Indian Thanksgiving Dinner

On Thanksgiving Day we were invited to a dinner at the home of Brother Tecompse Dick, given by the members of the mission. We enjoyed it very much. While eating, my mind wandered back to that Thanksgiving Day in 1621 when those New Englanders met to thank their heavenly Father for protection from the ire of the Red Men. And here we were eating, drinking, and worshipping the God of our forefathers together.

Surely God is assembling her that halteth, and bringing to perfection his marvelous work and a wonder.

We hope to be able to leave our footprints upon the sands of this part of the Lord's vineyard if it be his will.

Sunday School Worker Encourages Cooperation

MOUNT VERNON, ILLINOIS, December 10.—Those of you who were not in attendance at our late Southern Illinois district conference surely missed a treat, to say the least. It was indeed one of the best conferences the writer has ever attended, and I have been in the habit of attending most all our district conferences both in my former district and in this. The business was dispatched with the spirit of good will and fellowship, and from the very opening prayer to the close there was a splendid spirit prevailing.

The gift of prophecy was manifest with a remarkable assurance of God's approval, and the instruction given to the Saints was encouraging. All unitedly felt the presence of God's Spirit and went to their homes with a deep feeling of gratitude and a stronger determination to do more for the upbuilding of the work in the future.

The writer was elected district Sunday school superintendent with a very able assistant, Cora Henson. Sister Philips was elected district secretary. We are in hopes that we shall see decided improvement in the number at our district conferences and conventions in the future.

As you will have noticed from the report of the conference, we are to have four conferences a year instead of two, so let each school in the district help and all try to attend next convention, which will be held at Springerton in February. I would like the address of each superintendent and secretary so I can supply them with blanks. My address will be 1515 West Broadway, Mount Vernon, Illinois.

MARY M. SPARLING.

Baptisms Follow Meetings at Inman

INMAN, NEBRASKA, December 26.—Elder George J. Jenkins closed an interesting series of meetings at Meadow Grove, Nebraska, last Sunday night. At the close two gave their names for baptism, which will be attended to next Sunday. We feel glad to have Brother Jenkins in the district and are sure he will do good work. It was my good fortune to be with and assist him in the meetings part of the time and I have found him to be a genial associate, as well as an able exponent of the faith.

Apostle McConley Arrives at Honolulu

From a Letter to the First Presidency

HONOLULU, TERRITORY OF HAWAII, December 14.—We arrived in Honolulu safely on December 12 after a very rough seven days at sea. It seems good to be on land again, although I have not yet lost the motion of the boat.

We left San Francisco on schedule time, 12 noon, December 5. The passengers were seated at dinner at 1 p. m. and were on the first course of the meal when our ship passed through the Golden Gate. When we hit the bar, there was great commotion and spilling of soup and upsetting of dishes in general. And this continued to be the regular thing at almost every meal during the entire seven days.

I preached to an attentive audience aboard ship on Sunday and was able to do considerable missionary work among the passengers during the balance of the voyage.

We remain in Honolulu over the coming Sunday and then on to Hilo on the island of Hawaii. The Saints have made us welcome and we have appreciated the fraternal tie manifested. May the day be hastened when it may be extended to all mankind.

Our hearts were cheered aboard ship by the receipt of numerous cards and letters wishing us bon voyage and we certainly appreciate the spirit which prompted their sending.

After being away from it for a few months it feels good to be again on the firing line. We are hoping and praying that this way be one of the most successful years the church has yet experienced. I pray that the Spirit may be with you all at headquarters and solicit an interest in your prayers on behalf of all who are on the outposts.

MYRON A. MCCONLEY.

Missionary Tells of Work in Utah

OGDEN, UTAH, December 27.—A few lines from the Utah District may be of interest to some who read the columns of our church papers.

I returned to my appointed field soon after the General Conference, accompanied by my wife and son. As there was much work to do, I was soon back in active service.

Being given charge of the district work, I made each branch a visit, telling the Saints of the splendid conference, getting acquainted, and trying to discover that which needed immediate attention. The Saints were ready to do their part, so we adopted the slogan, "Let's go," for the district.

On November 30 the writer and Brother Fulk went to the Malad Branch to conduct an institute, as had been previously arranged. Our institute met with a splendid response from the Saints, and many encouraging reports came to us of the work that we were trying to introduce.

Three Weeks' Meetings

Following the institute, we began a series of services. We had planned on holding forth for only two weeks on account of the approach of holidays; but when the time came to close, the people were anxious that we continue for another week which we did, making three weeks in all. Splendid interest was aroused, and every service was well attended.

The Saints are to be commended for their presence, many never missing a service. They were there to take part in the half-hour song service which preceded each service.

Though there were no baptisms, we were given the assurance that many were near the kingdom, and new desires were created within them to live better lives.

Malad has a membership of nearly one hundred seventy members, presided over by Elder E. E. Richards. Brother Richards has faithfully carried the burden of presiding officer for fourteen years without much assistance as far as being associated with other members of the priesthood is concerned. But he has had the support of faithful Saints, and God has blessed him in his ministry. He and the Saints rejoice as the Lord saw fit to pour out upon them a wonderful blessing through the gift of prophecy, commending them for their earnest and faithful efforts and encouraging them to press on. Three men were called to office: Brother Lee, who was a priest, to the office of elder, Brother Hill to the office of priest, and Brother W. P. Jones to the office of deacon, making a full corps of officers to minister to the Saints.

Business Meeting at Malad

The writer was called to Malad to be present at their annual business meeting, and again Brother Richards was chosen to preside, assisted by two counselors, Brothers Lee and Hill.

The branch starts out facing bright prospects for the year 1924. The Saints declare themselves built up and encouraged after our series of meetings and are ready to launch out and give their best for the building up of the kingdom of God in their community and carrying the spirit of that kingdom into the lives of their fellow men.

We have a program and arrangements made for the holding of an institute at Provo beginning January 5.

We expect then to go into the Idaho District for a series of services. The field is white, and many calls come to us for work.

Laboring to the end that God may crown our efforts with success and to Him be given the glory. GUY P. LEVITT.

Pittsburgh Ministerial Conference Has Good Attendance

LOCK NO. 4, PENNSYLVANIA, December 17.—Conditions in the branch are favorable for great events in the near future, and greater interest is expected from every member of the branch. To many it has been a trying year, but all are resolved to go forward and build up the work.

Brother W. C. Neville, district supervisor, recently gave a very fine series of sermons and lectures on the gospel plan, using a large chart to represent the world from the beginning up to the present. These lectures proved to be very beneficial to all who attended.

The Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, district ministerial conference convened here December 15 and 16, and there was a good attendance of Saints from all parts of the district. Brother Neville, of Canton, Ohio, was one of the main speakers of the conference, but District President J. A. Jaques and Vice President Shinn, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, were live wires in making the conference worth while. Elder L. F. P. Curry was on the job with his outline work on priesthood duties. A good social service was held at which Elroy McCain was ordained to the office of teacher, and Arthur Howes to the office of priest. Both were members of Lock No. 4 Branch. J. C. ANSELL.

Resigning Pastor to Do Missionary Work

BLOOMSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA, December 31.—Elder H. C. Cunningham, after leading the Bloomsburg Branch for fourteen years, has given up the presidency to do missionary work in this locality. Brother Walter Lewis, one time of Philadelphia, succeeds him in the branch presidency.

Brother Thomas Jones has been chosen superintendent of the Sunday school, and the officers are considering plans for instruction in physical recreation and education.

The vocal and instrumental work is in charge of Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Jones.

The great task amid all the pleasure calls is to make the will of God our pleasure. THOMAS JONES.

Los Angeles Building Fund Is Increased

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, November 19.—More than the quota of $500 dollars set by the women of the branch for themselves was raised at their annual bazaar. Forty dollars was realized at a rummage sale just preceding the bazaar. The proceeds are to go to the building fund, for Los Angeles is working for a new church building.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave an entertainment recently, which netted a neat sum of money.

The Hermosa Beach Sunday School, under the direction of Sister Thompson, had set $65 as its goal for the year but it has more than passed that mark.

Christmas week is to be marked with celebration and fitting observance. Friday night, December 21, there will be an entertainment at the church, Christmas tree, presents and program. On Christmas day at 11 o'clock there will be a Christmas service, consisting of music and an address.

CHURCH NEWS

President McDowell to Speak at Convention

FLINT, MICHIGAN, December 24.—The young people's organization of the city is working hard for the coming campaign to be conducted beginning January 27 and continuing for two weeks, terminating in a district convention the last three days. President Floyd M. McDowell will be the speaker. The advertising for this campaign will be done by the branch, by using the new multigraph recently purchased. Two extra sets of type were included in the equipment, which makes it suitable for most of the work. This brings the cost of advertising down to a minimum.

The publicity work of the church is in charge of the publicity agent. Saints and friends traveling through this part of the country will have no trouble in finding the churches. They are listed three ways in the city directory. The Flint Daily Journal carries weekly notices as does also the Detroit Free Press, of the meetings of the churches. The churches are accessible from the main part of the city, not more than fifteen minutes time being necessary to get to any one of the three churches. Any of the traveling brethren will find a hearty welcome here.

Membership Increased

Many new members have moved here recently. The first of the month the membership was six hundred and seventy-eight. More are moving in every week. The automobile industry is responsible for the great influx of people.

The annual business meeting of the branch was held the fore part of December. The election of officers resulted in the selection of Elder A. H. DuRose for branch president, with Elders F. Z. Harder and F. G. Smith as counselors; Elder W. E. Alldread, pastor at First Branch; Elder F. G. Smith at Second; and Elder B. F. Ansbaugh at Third.

Some advance steps were taken by the branch as a whole at the annual meeting. The Third Church was ordered sold, and the united effort of the city for a new building in that section of town was pledged. At the present time the building is taxed to capacity for most of the meetings, and it is impossible to do any special work in that locality. With the completion of the Second Church, which will be finished shortly after New Year, the efforts of the Saints will be directed toward the Third Church building.

With the closing of 1923, one of the best years in the history of the church in Flint, not from the standpoint of new members but from a spiritual and financial standpoint, is found. It has been a year of prosperity, and the toll of the "grim reaper" has been very slight. With the coming of the New Year the Saints are hopeful of accomplishing some of the aims and ambitions they have set out for.

Windsor Encouraged by Branch Reports

WINDSOR, ONTARIO, January 2.—The Windsor Branch held its annual business meeting December 12, and has reelected Elder Leslie Brown, president, for 1924. Any of the ministry contemplating a visit to Windsor may locate him at 1059 Howard Avenue, phone Seneca 2058-W. He will arrange to take care of them in person or by representative.

The largest number of reports in the history of the branch were in hand for this meeting, and were found to be very encouraging. Prospects for the new year are for a more united effort and better service.

Christmas Play

On Friday evening December 21, the Sunday school put on the playlet, "Balancing the Christmas ledger," by E. P. Kearney, which showed what can be accomplished by systematic effort in collecting Christmas offerings. The characters were: Russell Beemer as "New Year," Sister Yolah Garnier as "Christmas Spirit," and Brother A. F. Moffat as "Father time," the remainder of the cast being Sunday school pupils also. The parts were well taken, showing that a great deal of time and effort had been expended in the training of the cast to make the evening such a remarkable success.

The little folks were out in full force and were delighted to have Santa Claus pay them a visit and assist Superintendent Gordon Brown in taking the gifts from an overburdened tree.

The entire evening reflects great credit to the untiring officers and committee.

Patriarchal Visit

Many were pleased to meet Patriarch John Shields at a meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression on Friday night. His presence seems to be an inspiration to love God more and serve Him better. On Sunday, December 31, Brother Shields gave two instructive and impressive sermons, using the text "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith," at the 11 o'clock hour, and at 7.30 p. m. he dwelt upon the personal benefit to be enjoyed both here and hereafter by becoming holy.

He gave an earnest plea for the Saints to acknowledge themselves as stewards, exhorting them to carry out in faith, and love to God and their brethren, the provisions of the resolution adopted by the late General Conference.

Cantata Given

December 16, the choir of the Windsor Branch presented the cantata, "Eternal light," words by Bonner, music by H. W. Petrie, to a large and appreciative audience. This cantata is a difficult composition and has a brilliant accompaniment. Elder H. A. Koehler of London assisted with the bass solos, and Elder G. Orlo Coburn of Blenheim, district chorister, with the tenor. Sisters Nellie Andrew, Lillian Selden, Myrtle Cousins, Audrey Moe, and Brothers A. F. Mocat, A. C. Harnden, E. Beemer, and B. Barreck sang in this, the second cantata given this year by the choir. It showed that much effort and time have been expended in the training of the soloists and choruses to accomplish such a well rendered program. Music Director Edith Moore is sparing no effort to develop the talent of those desirous of assisting in the Music Department.

Monday evening, December 17, the choir honored Elder H. A. Koehler, and Sister Edith A. Moore, music director, with a reception. The entertainment took the form of an impromptu concert and a banquet.

Brothers Koehler and Moffat vied with each other in storytelling and kept the guests convulsed with laughter.

During the course of the evening Sister Moore was presented with a purse as a token of appreciation from the choir for her untiring efforts in laboring with them.

Services Discontinued at Battle Lake

BATTLE LAKE, MINNESOTA, December 26.—The Union Branch at Clitherall has had no regular service since the first Sunday in November, due to the scattered condition of the members.

On December 17, Branch President Lester Whiting was called on to preach the funeral sermon of Sister Ruby Saffell Holt, who died at her home in Duluth December 13. Burial was at the cemetery in Old Clitherall. One nonmember made the remark that the sermon was the best funeral sermon he had ever heard.

The weather here has been more like April and May all winter with the exception of a few days in November, when a taste of real winter was had.

Reception for College Students Given at Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, January 7.—New Year's Day resounded to the lusty college yells of ninety young people gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Walter W. Smith. The occasion was a reception in honor of Misses Ruth Fisher and Audrey Traver of Boston and the Smiths' sons, R. Wayne and Dudley Winn.

Miss Fisher is a graduate of the Leland Powers College of Expression in Boston and is at present an instructor in Graceland College. Miss Traver is a graduate of Boston University and is now doing post graduate work at Graceland. R. Wayne Smith is a senior at the University of Kansas and a member of the Phi Delta Kappa honor fraternity. He recently represented the Kansas chapter at a convention in Chicago. Dudley Winn Smith is a freshman at the Kansas City Junior College. He is interested in the Boy Scout movement, is an Eagle Scout, has held world records in scoutcraft, and was recently an instructor at a scout camp.

Preparation for the afternoon affair at Brother Smith's was made many weeks ago and it was only necessary to wait until the holidays came around for the young people to return from the various colleges for vacation.

Colleges Represented

Colleges and universities represented were, New York University, Columbia University in New York, Clark University in Worcester, Massachusetts, Temple University in Philadelphia, Brown University in Providence, Rhode Island, Boston University, Leland Powers College in Boston, University of California, the University of Missouri, the University of Kansas, Kansas Agriculture College of Manhattan, Graceland College in Lamoni, Junior College in Kansas City, the Kansas City Law School and the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences.

All were vibrant with the spirit of youth while the college atmosphere and the holiday flavor made the charming reception lively and interesting. Happy New Year was on the radiant faces of the many youthful guests.

Besides those attending school at present were several college instructors and some who had graduated, but all were bound together by a common feeling that here was a representative bunch of men and women of Zion with hearts set upon one goal, its building.

A hum of voices announced many chattering groups, old friendships being renewed, new acquaintances being made. The vacation period was a reunion for many Independence boys and girls who are away at college during the year. Refreshments were served from three to five. Several entertained with special numbers. As part of the entertainment vocal solos were sung by Paul N. Craig and Evan Fry, and a reading was given by Miss Ruth Fisher. New Year's greetings were presented by Doctor Floyd McDowell, of Lamoni, A. Max Carmichael, and Bishop B. R. McGuire.

The speakers and entertainers were greeted by cheers given in the characteristic college rhythm. Each college, which was adequately represented for the purpose, then gave the college yells. The old rivalry, loyalty or school spirit, call it what you may, was then aroused. It seemed good to witness the untold energy, power yet unspent. The young people of the church represent the means for putting into effect the ideals of the gospel.

The reception was a delightful gathering of college people, mingling in the holiday spirit. Assisting Brother and Sister Smith were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cox, Mrs. R. D. Etzenhouser, Mrs. J. R. Green, Mrs. Ellis Short, jr., Miss Dorothy Etzenhouser and Miss Frances Keys.

Everett Has New Church Building

EVERETT, WASHINGTON, December 28.—Everett is a new branch in possession of a new church, which means work and sacrifice for all. The Department of Women did especially well with a Christmas sale, the proceeds of which are to be applied on the church debt.

The Saints here, with many outsiders, enjoyed a very successful Christmas program last Sunday, December 23, under the direction of Sister Shippy. The Christmas spirit was there for all to enjoy.

The Saints here feel to thank God for his goodness to them, and hope that at the end of another year they will have less to ask forgiveness for, and that all will merit a prosperous New Year.

Kansas City Stake News

KANSAS CITY STAKE, January 3.—The holiday season just past has been filled with many delightful experiences in which the church folks, both old and young, have indulged themselves. The weather man promised good weather and kept his word faithfully, changing the order only to introduce a spell of winter weather which arrived with the new year.

Christmas exercises were observed at all churches in the stake. Various forms of religious dramatics which were in advance of former years, made a favorable impression.

At Central, the cantata "Holy Night" was given very creditably by the choir, under the direction of Brother T. B. Dunn, on Sunday night, December 23. This was followed on Monday night by a beautiful entertainment, consisting of plays, cantatas, and the familiar dialogues, by the juniors, all interwoven by the beautiful spirit of giving which added the touch of divinity to a pleasing setting.

New Year's Eve

On New Year's eve there were many in the city who observed the passing out of the old and the ushering in of the new year. Social functions were indulged in by the orderly, those of the merrier sort making considerable noise. Still others employed the radio to broadcast their somewhat hilarious programs. The church people were usually satisfied with the old-fashioned watch party.

The meeting of the Department of Women on December 16 was addressed by Sister Ida Etzenhouser, her theme being "Habits that show marked defect." A fair-sized and attentive band of the sisters was in attendance.

At the same hour a meeting of the priesthood was held in the north room to discuss "The individual responsibility of the priesthood." Stake Missionary W. I. Fligg read a ten-minute paper, making use of the scripture "Occupy until I come." He said the rights of the priesthood were from heaven—the commission from God. Learn to represent God. It is a great responsibility to represent things of God to men. To live at random in business and pleasure will bring chaos. The Savior manifested himself to destroy the works of the Devil. "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." "He that is warned must warn his neighbor."

Bishop F. B. Blair was the speaker at Central on the morning of December 30, and President Tanner in the evening.

The force of Sunday school workers at Central will be in charge of Sister Lydia Wight the coming year.

Stake Missionaries Fligg and Ammon White are at present looking after house-to-house work near Sheffield. They will start a series of special meetings at Grandview January 13, to continue for at least two weeks. Recent speakers at Grandview were Bishop Blair and Thomas Newton.

Modesto Branch Enjoys Christmas

MODESTO, CALIFORNIA, December 26.—The Christmas entertainment was held on Friday evening, December 21, and the children did their part splendidly. Sisters Anna Home and Lottie B. Rose had the program in charge.

The Department of Women held their bazaar on December 8 and did very well considering the number available for the work. Only six or seven women are available for this work.

The branch is going along nicely and meetings are fairly well attended. Elder W. C. Griffin, who was so painfully injured, is improving as well as could be expected, but is unable to use his right hand yet.

Winter has come and the country is covered with frosts each morning. There is very little rain, which the farmers need badly.

"Wondrous Night" Given at Topeka

TOPEKA, KANSAS, December 31.—An appropriate discourse was delivered by Elder A. P. Crooker at the 11 o'clock preaching hour on December 23. In harmony with the familiar phrase that is being heard throughout the land to-day, he read Christmas greetings from the second chapter of Luke. Continuing, he said that the climate of this country, as it was that morning, was something like it was when the shepherds were watching their flocks on those Judean hills. Of all people, we should join with the world in singing praise to the new born King. Peace, good will to men, means more to us than to any other people in the world. Joseph Smith prayed in faith believing that God would tell him what he wanted to know. "This is my Son, hear ye him," in our day.

On Christmas night a program entitled "Wondrous night" was given by the Sunday school to a full house. The building was appropriately decorated for the occasion. The scene depicting the birth of Christ was made very effective by those who took part. At the close of the entertainment a treat was given to all.

Topeka Election

At the business meeting held on the evening of December 16, the following were elected as department heads for the coming year: W. L. Chapman, branch president; B. F. Deller, branch clerk and custodian of funds; Mrs. B. F. Deller, Department of Music; Mrs. H. C. Pitsenberger, publicity agent and branch correspondent; B. F. Deller, Sunday school superintendent; Lyman Pitsenberger, secretary; P. B. Anderson, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression; Clayton Crooker, secretary; Roy Whipple, superintendent of boys; Mrs. Emma Happe, superintendent of girls; Mrs. W. L. Chapman, superintendent of Department of Women; Mrs. Gale Hays, secretary.

B. F. Deller was the speaker at 11 o'clock December 9.

Closing the Year's Work

On December 30, Elder A. A. Goffe very ably discussed "How can we learn in a practical way that which will bring unity?" This was followed by a farewell address in the evening by Elder Whipple who has served as pastor of the branch for two years. He was fervent in admonishing the Saints to rally to the support of the officers for the coming year.

The activities of the year closed with a watch party at the home of Sister Emma Happe, New Year's eve. The Saints of Topeka join with other Saints in extending a happy and prosperous New Year greeting in the work of building up Zion.

Philadelphia Finishes Tithing Campaign

CHELTENHAM, PENNSYLVANIA, December 27.—Philadelphia has just finished a tithing campaign which started December 9. A special priesthood meeting was held, giving the bishops the opportunity of presenting the subject to the priesthood, so that they might go out and instruct the Saints more efficiently.

On December 16 two sermons were preached in which tithing, consecration, surplus, and free will offerings were brought to the front and their importance in the church dwelt upon at length. The campaign ended with a round table discussion the morning of December 23, which gave many the opportunity of obtaining a clearer understanding of the financial side of their religion and proved very interesting.

The announcement of Donation Day for the Sanitarium, by the Department of Women brought as a response the substantial sum of $169.50 in cash and a long list of articles which have been forwarded to the Sanitarium.

On December 16 the Department of Women collected $36.03 for the benefit of the Children's Home at Lamoni. Most of it will be spent to buy clothing and articles of use for the children.

Several more Italians, members of the Pentecostal Church, have been baptized, among them the pastor of that church. The indications are that a number of the older Saints will soon be called upon to instruct these men and women with their large families, in the principles of the church. When the call comes, judging from the earnestness of the Saints, there will be no lack of volunteers to choose from.

Nonmembers Request Prayers of Saints

GLASGOW, MONTANA, December 26.—Last week a long distance call was received from interested nonmembers requesting the prayers of the members of the branch for an afflicted one. The members of the priesthood met and had special prayer.

The brethren of the ministry are anxious to prosecute vigorously the gospel among the people of these parts.

The new missionary, Elder Carl Crum, made a short visit here the middle of December and was kept busy each night preaching in the different homes of the Saints.

The branch business meeting was held to-day, following the Wednesday night prayer meeting, at the home of Sister Alma Jordan. There was a fairly good representation of the branch present, and reports showed all four members of the priesthood active, about 60 sermons preached, 5 baptisms. The present membership of the branch is 33.

The officers elected for the next six months were: Elder James C. Page, president; Joseph Sandidge, priest; Elmer Chase, teacher; Earl Wilcox, clerk.

The Christmas program was given on Saturday evening, December 22. It consisted chiefly of a pageant, "Bethlehem" which was well rendered. About 160 were present. The oldest person present, a stranger to our work, remarked on leaving, "I am an old man. I have seen many Christmases but this is the finest program I ever saw rendered."

The Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression are moving along with good interest, the lowest attendance of late being 40, the highest 65.

A few of our number are sick just now, Theodore Crowl, Sister Caroline Sandige, and little Genevieve Couey. They are being remembered by the Saints in prayer meetings and at family worship.

The Sunday school at the beginning of last year set a goal of $100 for the Christmas offering. This has been practically assured, as only $3.80 is lacking.

Chatham Choir Gives Entertainment

CHATHAM, ONTARIO, December 31.—On Sunday, December 30, the Chatham choir put on a program of special Christmas services in the church. The service consisted of Bible readings, a short talk, solos, duets, anthems, and trios. The evening was a huge success and a good crowd was present. Many favorable comments were heard from outsiders, and Brother R. Wood, the local chorister who arranged the meeting, and the choir itself, is to be highly congratulated on its success.

Friday, December 21, the annual Christmas tree and concert of the Sunday school was held in the church, which was crowded to overflowing. A splendid concert was put on by the pupils, at the close of which Santa Claus arrived by automobile and distributed gifts from the tree. Every boy and girl present received a bag consisting of candy, nuts, and an orange.

The Chatham Branch recently held its semiannual business meeting and election of officers. Elder Duncan Clatworthy was elected branch president, the other officers being continued as before.

Elder Stewart Lamont, who has been superseded as branch president by Elder Clatworthy, has been president of the branch for twenty years and has served the branch faithfully and well. His aim was always to further the interests locally, and the favorable position the branch holds in the city at present is greatly due to his untiring efforts in this regard. A unanimous vote of thanks was carried for his long and favorable services.

Elder Clatworthy, the new president, is a young man, energetic, and has been for years active in the auxiliaries of the branch. He has also been district superintendent of the Sunday school as well as first counselor in the district presidency. It is felt that the branch under Elder Clatworthy's charge will move forward, and to this end the Saints of Chatham are praying.

Moundsville Has Rally Day

MOUNDSVILLE, WEST VIRGINIA, December 26.—Rally Day for the branch was held December 9. A special program was given during the 11 o'clock hour. At 2.30 p. m. District President O. J. Tary preached to an appreciative audience.

On December 23 the Saints enjoyed a very spiritual meeting at the 11 o'clock hour. In the evening the Sunday school rendered its Christmas program. One of the features was a story of the Christ child.

The Sunday school is progressing under the leadership of Brother C. Earl Dobbs, who seems to have a clear vision of the future of the work here in that line. When more room is afforded in the new church which is being planned, the departments of the Sunday school will be fully graded.

A good library has been built up during the past year. It is hoped that this year will bring even greater results.

Two normal classes are being held, composed of workers in the Sunday school and branch. They are studying Hurlbut's Old and New Testament Outline for Bible Teachers. Good work is being accomplished.

District Superintendent W. A. Schoenian visited the Steubenville, Ohio, Sunday school recently and encouraged them by a fine talk. He went to East Liverpool, Ohio, in the afternoon and preached for the Saints there. His subject was "Ye are God's builders." A Christmas program was presented by the Sunday school at the evening hour. They had a Christmas tree, Santa Claus, and gifts for all.

The bazaar held by the Department of Women of Moundsville Branch, December 1, cleared over $60.

The progress of the branch during the past year was very satisfactory. Much has been done in study and good enthusiasm has been aroused among the Saints. It is hoped the new year may be even better.

Local Ministers Leave to Do Missionary Work

BRADNER, OHIO, January 1.—Two of the brethren are leaving to take up missionary work, Elder E. L. Ulrich, formerly of Toledo, Ohio, Elder Walter Wierbaugh, an original member of this branch. Brother Ulrich assisted in bringing the gospel here. He will do a good work wherever he might chance to go. Brother Wierbaugh is comparatively a young man but this is more the reason why he should be able to put much vim and vigor into his labors. Both men are loved here and will be missed very much. The Saints will, however, smother feelings and permit the thought of the work these brothers must do in the bringing of this blessed gospel to others, to be first in their minds.

As regards the election of officers of the various departments of the church, this branch is ready for the new year.

On Christmas night, an entertainment was rendered, after which a treat was given to all present. Both were enjoyed immensely but the singing brought forth the greatest praises.

Lamoni Items

LAMONI, IOWA, January 4.—The coldest weather for twelve years was recorded here this morning when the Government thermometer registered 26 below zero.

Stake President C. E. Wight returned last week from Benton, Illinois, where he went in response to an invitation to talk to the county teacher's association.

Elder L. G. Holloway preached a splendid New Year's sermon last Sunday morning, urging the Saints to "press on toward the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus." The pulpit was occupied in the evening by Bishop A. Carmichael, who chose a very timely theme, the discussion between the fundamentalists and liberals which is absorbing the interest of the religious world to-day. He urged freedom of thought and argued that our doctrine was not designed to stilt men's thought but to develop it.

Patronesses Entertain

The Patronesses of Graceland entertained the college students who remained in Lamoni over the holidays at the homes of Mrs. Ida Monroe and Mrs. John Lane last evening. Twenty-nine students responded to the invitations and enjoyed a pleasant social evening. The evening was bitter cold and the wind blew a gale over college hill, but we have heard of only one case of frozen ears as a result of the trip to town. An entertainment committee supervised the games at each home and kept things lively, after which refreshments were served.

The inmates of the Children's Home enjoyed a treat last Tuesday, New Year's Day, in the way of a moving picture show in their own home. They were permitted to invite a number of young friends to share it with them, and after the picture the party was served with pop corn, which was equally enjoyable. Russell Pendergraft, a young man still under the care of the home, is employed by the Coliseum Company here to operate their moving picture machine and he has earned a machine of his own which he employs for the benefit of the children. Miss Monroe secured the film from Settlement headquarters in Chicago. It was a Pullman travelogue showing the details of Pullman cars from the factory to the life of the passenger traveling thereon.

A special prayer service was held last Sunday afternoon in behalf of Miss Laura Mason, a Welsh girl who sailed for America to enter Graceland and who was being detained on Ellis Island by immigration officials. Every means was exhausted by President Briggs through church officials, Congressman Judge Evans from this district, and friends in the East, but her deportation seemed inevitable when last heard from. The date set for her return was January 3. Definite news regarding it has not been received here yet.

Bishop Cooper Visits Bisbee Branch

BISBEE, ARIZONA, January 2.—The Saints of Bisbee Branch were favored with a visit by Bishop R. T. Cooper, of Independence, from December 28 to January 1. Interesting sermons both Sunday morning and evening by Brother Cooper were enjoyed by the Saints. The evening service was also attended by quite a number of the Douglas Saints who motored to Bisbee for the occasion. Sunday afternoon a priesthood meeting was held.

Monday evening the branch business meeting was held for the election of officers for the ensuing year, resulting in the following selections: Branch president, David L. Evans; superintendent of department of Religious Education, also superintendent of missionary department, F. M. Dearborn; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Henry Goldie; superintendent of Department of Women, Sarah Hall; superintendent of department of finance, Charles F. Rehwald; superintendent of department of music, Sister T. R. Davis. At this meeting Brethren David L. Evans and F. M. Dearborn were ordained to the office of elder, and Brother Henry Goldie to the office of priest, Brother Cooper officiating. At the close of the meeting the major portion of those present remained for a New Year's watch party and enjoyed games and refreshments.

Chariton Hears Bishop on Stewardship

CHARITON, IOWA, December 27.—The Saints have lately been privileged to hear four splendid lectures on "Stewardships" by our bishop, Albert Carmichael. Much good seed was sown which will reap results in the near future, it is believed.

The Christmas program was given Sunday evening, December 23, to a crowded house. It was probably the biggest thing attempted so far in Chariton along program lines. Those taking part surely need to be congratulated on the outcome. The committee certainly felt repaid for all their work.

The cantata, "Blessed is he that cometh," remodeled and enlarged to fit local needs, was very brilliantly rendered. About forty participated in the program. The story of Christ's coming was told in dialogue, song, and tableau, which, embellished with appropriate costumes and lighting effects, was most impressive both to those taking part and those who gathered to listen.

The future looks very encouraging along all lines. A special meeting is called for Sunday afternoon to talk over plans for closer coordination. Brother Ted Giles has been unanimously chosen president for the coming year. The hope is that he may be blessed in his work and be sustained by the prayers of the membership, that the year of 1924 may be marked by greater progress than ever before.

Annual Dinner Given at Cherokee

CHEROKEE, IOWA, December 24.—Thanksgiving Day was a day of rejoicing and pleasure for the Saints when they met in the church for prayer service, after which a bountiful dinner was served to all present. Some time was spent in visiting. In the evening Elder W. A. Smith delivered his closing sermon of the series of meetings. The Thanksgiving meetings here are an annual event and are much enjoyed by the Saints.

Elder James Sheldon has located at Long Beach, California, where all trust he will be as faithful in his work as he was in Cherokee.

The Department of Women has this month packed a large barrel of canned fruit, a nice box of homemade candies, and a box of dolls and shipped to the Children's Home at Lamoni.

The exterior of the church has been newly painted as a result of efforts put forth by the Department of Women in raising the funds for paint and some of the brethren in donating the work.

The Sunday school gave a very fine Christmas entertainment on the evening of December 22. There was no tree, but a collection of about $50 was taken up for Christmas offering.

Sunday, December 16, E. L. Edwards, Bishop's agent of Pomeroy, Iowa, delivered a very fine and instructive sermon on the law of tithing.

At the annual business meeting for election of officers, held December 20, Elder A. R. Crippen was again elected as branch president; Sister Etta Webb, superintendent of the Sunday school; Albert Haynes, teacher, head of the Department of Recreation and Expression. All departments were reported in good condition and each will strive to make the coming year a banner one for this branch.

Large Contribution Made to Christmas Offering

MOORHEAD, IOWA, December 31.—The effort made here to swell the Christmas offering was very successful. The goal set was $400, but over $650 was raised. The Department of Women held a bazaar on December 8 which brought in around $250 with but little expense to be deducted. The sisters have generously assisted in helping with the branch finances and in looking after the poor.

Frequent visits have been made during the past year by the traveling ministers, which visits have greatly assisted in the spiritual part of the work.

In viewing the progress that has been made in the Moorhead Branch during the year, most of the Saints are quite anxious to understand the stewardship plan, and express themselves as hoping to be able to comply with the plan soon. The financial part of the work has been greatly hindered because of the decrease in the value of farm products. Most of the Saints here are farmers, and after paying interest and taxes the majority are left without surplus. However, the Saints are trying to do the best they can under the circumstances.

Much literature has been distributed recently by the Publicity Department, which no doubt will bring results in the future.

The Saints have appreciated the privilege of listening in to several of the church programs that have been broadcasted lately. Many Saints, as well as nonmembers, have expressed themselves as being well pleased with the sermons of President F. M. Smith that were broadcasted from Omaha.

The holiday season has brought families together to spend their vacations, among them being a number of young people teaching in Des Moines, Humboldt, Lamoni, and some who are attending school at Cedar Falls and Graceland College. Sisters Charles Hield and Dorothy Briggs, of our school faculty, are visiting home folks at Pleasanton and Lamoni.

Book of Mormon Day at Stone Church

Religio Book of Mormon Day at the Stone Church is set for Sunday, January 13. A full day's program has been prepared, beginning with a young people's prayer meeting at 8 a. m. Special music and songs of the Book of Mormon are to be sung by the choir, congregation, and by soloists.

Sunday school follows the prayer meeting. The lessons will be on the Book of Mormon. At 11 o'clock J. W. A. Bailey will preach on "What need have we for the Book of Mormon?" The sermon will be broadcasted.

During the same hour the children in the lower auditorium will engage in a special Book of Mormon service prepared for them. There will be songs and talks.

Prayer meeting will be at 2.30 p. m. A Religio message to parents will be given by Sister J. Strachan, superintendent of the Junior Department of the Religio.

At 6 p. m. the Religio will meet in regular session. Lessons will be taken up and a sacred program rendered.

Radio service at 7.30 p. m. will follow the theme "The Book of Mormon and the land of America."

Preaching at 8 p. m. will be by Bishop James F. Keir on "The new covenant, even the Book of Mormon."

Something at every meeting is assured. Parents are especially urged to have their children attend the evening sermon at 8 o'clock.

Average attendance at the Religio is now about 425. It is the intention of those in charge to make 1924 a profitable Book of Mormon year. Visitors are welcome and members are encouraged to take advantage of the program before the Religio.

Preacher Becomes Member of Church

SAINT THOMAS, ONTARIO, December 31.—Sunday, December 23, Mr. Simons, a local preacher, was baptized and now his wife has consented to do likewise. They have heard little preaching but have been doing a great deal of studying and talking with several of our members and have finally become convinced that this is the true church.

The Sunday school held their annual Christmas tree and entertainment on December 20. Every available seat was taken in the little church, as at socials and entertainments of this character a good attendance of nonmembers is always assured. The children did well in their recitations, songs, dialogues, and tableaux. The proceeds amounted to over $20.

On Sunday, December 30, Elder H. A. Koehler came from London and preached in the morning. All enjoyed his excellent sermon. Brother Gordon Brown, of Windsor, was also a visitor.

Independence

Zion Conference

Conference in Zion, which met at the Stone Church, Monday, January 7, at 8 o'clock, elected pastors for Zion and then adjourned until January 14.

The First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric were given full supervision of Zion. This action also gave the First Presidency the pastorate of the Stone Church. R. V. Hopkins was chosen first assistant to the Presidency upon their recommendation.

Officers

Other Zion officers elected were: Mrs. Anna Murphy, superintendent of the Department of Women; Paul N. Craig, chorister; John A. Gardner, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression. Action on the superintendent of the Department of Religious Education was deferred until another time.

Pastors

The following pastors were elected: Second Independence, R. J. Lambert; Enoch Hill, Charles Fry; Walnut Park, John A. Dowker; Englewood, J. E. Warne; Liberty Street, J. M. Baker; Spring Branch, John Soderstadt; East Independence, A. H. Parsons. Vote was taken separately in each case.

President Smith Speaks

President Frederick M. Smith made a short address at the opening of the conference telling of the program the Presidency are desirous of carrying out. They have only the progress and success of the church at heart and to this end the closer organization in Zion was anticipated. The church must conserve its purposes, and one of the chief of these is the Christianizing of society. The people of Zion should represent a cross section of the church, showing the highest spiritual development. Opposing forces to right are sure to begin in Zion because greatest harm can be done there. President Smith warned the people to prepare, that the time was close when the Lord will call as he has not called in the past. He urged the people in Zion to be big enough to see that the center place was representative of the whole church and that it was not a local affair. It is because of this fact that the Presidency is desirous of a closer supervision of Zion's affairs than it has taken in the past. He closed by asking for the cooperation of the conference.

There was little opposition to the sustaining of the Presidency but some was raised on points of interpretation over supervision.

President Elbert A. Smith stated that the Presidency did not intend to insist upon the support of its program. The plan was presented and it remained only for the people to accept or reject. The people pledged their support, as evidenced by the vote.

Radio

Radio services Sunday, January 6, consisted of a musical program and sermon by Apostle E. J. Gleazer at 11 a. m. The evening services at the Stone Church were broadcasted. At 7.30 a half hour musical program was rendered. President Elbert A. Smith spoke at 8 o'clock on "The gathering."

Enoch Hill

Enoch Hill congregation presented retiring Pastor W. D. Bullard with a handsome brief case and autographed album on New Year's evening at the church. The album contained verses of appreciation from nearly every member of the congregation. Brother Bullard has been pastor for four years. He is succeeded by Bishop Charles Fry. A program was presented during the evening consisting of music and

Radio Flashes

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—I am very glad to mention even at this late period that I heard a portion of the Sunday evening church services which were broadcasted from Omaha recently. I arranged a temporary antenna over our little meeting hall and moved my set there the day before. Owing to the spark Q R M we were deprived of the first part of the program, but the last part of the music was heard quite clearly through the loud speaker by all present. We hope the time will soon come when the church will have equipment that can be heard at all times. I am sure that a fund for this end will be heartily supported by all outside Saints.—Fred V. Dreyer.

Genoa, Colorado.—President F. M. Smith: Must express my appreciation of the services from W O A W Sunday evening, December 2. Everything came in fine. We did not miss a word or a note. The music was fine. The discourse was clear, both as to subject matter and delivery, and we enjoyed every word of it. I could almost believe that I was not over fifteen feet from the speaker, and in the words of Longfellow, slightly varied, "It sounded to me like your father's voice speaking in paradise." Let us have more sermons over the radio.

May God bless your efforts to bring about ideal conditions, and may the people in the church respond by a unity of efforts. The last few years have been very trying to the Saints in many ways and no doubt much more trying to you who have so much heavier responsibility.

Pardon my intrusion on your time, but I enjoyed the discourse and felt like saying so.—Mrs. J. R. Sutton.

Boston, Massachusetts.—I thought you would be interested to know that we picked up your station last night. It came in very clear on a loud speaker.—The Edison Electric Illinois Company, of Boston, Massachusetts. Station W T A T.

Bastrop, Texas.—We were delighted to hear your program last night for the first time. The reading was fine and very clear.—Mr. and Mrs. W. I. McDaniel.

Eureka Springs, Arkansas.—Have been enjoying your programs and sermons very much. Would like to hear more religious talks on the radio but suppose we should be thankful for what there are, as there are not very many this day thinking about salvation. Keep the good work up.—E. R. Braswell.

Weyburn, Saskatchewan.—I have an Atwater-Kent radio outfit, as my firm sells them, and last night I heard the sermon preached by Bishop Keir from K F I X. It was grand. This is the first time I have been able to get K F I X, but I think since I have found it, I will try often. I got the finish of the sermon by President F. M. Smith preached some time ago from W O A W. If you would let me know of any special sermon that was going to be broadcasted from any station, I would be pleased.—J. R. Dickson.

A Young Man's Philosophy of Life

Among the many excellent and encouraging letters received at the office of the First Presidency, there is one that will always be cherished as ranking among the best. It is written by a young brother who lives in a far western city. After expressing his appreciation for the monthly letters which are being mailed to the young people of the church, he says:

In brief, my conception of life and my program is about as follows:

1. Religion is life to me.
2. Zion is a society, place, or condition where each and all may enjoy the maximum of human welfare.
3. Zion is the next great objective in the onward march of civilization.
4. Zion must be brought about by social reform.
5. The gospel of Jesus Christ is the means we must use in reforming society.
6. We must (in order to apply our gospel to society) go into the industrial and business world and make the gospel the foundation of the industrial life.

I have made a covenant with God that I will use all the energy and power, financial and otherwise, that I possess and spend my life in the interests of Zion. . . . For myself, I will say it is my desire to mobilize every force within my power, physical, mental, and spiritual, that I may help back you up as we move onward towards our goal.

God grant that more of our people may catch this vision and become enthused with this ideal. No doubt this young man is practically unknown to our church; perhaps he has had little opportunity to get in touch with the instruction and leadership which the church affords. Yet, how excellently has he organized his own thinking and formulated the philosophy of our church. Certainly Zion must be redeemed. With God's help it will be redeemed.

F. M. McDOWELL.

The Delusion of Success

The delusion that individual advancement is made by crushing others is one of the causes for the great suffering in the world to-day and it is at the bottom of man-made institutions which must necessarily fail on that account.

Germany built upon that delusion and Germany to-day is on the brink of utter ruin. Her former government has already fallen and her institutions to-day are tottering because of the theory which has been a part of her for generations. In the midst of defeat she refuses to accept a condition which she herself attempted to inflict upon others. France would be victorious, but her attitude in triumph is of the master over the slave, the victor over the defeated, advancement by crushing others. France has her fate in her own hands. We need not predict her future.

America in her foreign policy has maintained an attitude of big brother to the world. She retains the ideals of Washington and Jefferson and Monroe. Upon this attitude will she stand, for her foundations are upon solid rock. God himself has said his hand was in the forming of this Nation. Could America in business reflect the ideals of America in her attitude toward other nations, prosperity would be more abundant than it is possible at present.

What wonder God chose America as the land of Zion, a place of the pure in heart! Zion is in the center of a land whose government is built upon the ideal of brotherhood. From her, the heart of the Nation, should radiate truth in example to the world.

Zion as a material condition should set a standard for American business. Zion as a spiritual condition should send out to the borders of this country the highest ideals of brotherhood. Zion is building upon the idea that "I am my brother's keeper" and your advancement is mine and mine yours. "Each for all, all for each." Her buildings will never crumble, her walls will never fall, for her buildings are open to all who observe her laws, and her walls shut out only those who refuse to enter.

In Zion there can be no individual advancement upon the ruins of another. Success for one, means success for all.

Blue Pencil Notes

Why all this captious talk about mothers-in-law? Every man thinks that his wife has a very fine mother-in-law. And every woman is sure that her husband has one that is even better.

First speaker: "Did you go to the Stone Church last night to hear President Smith preach?"

Second Speaker: "No, I stayed at home and listened in on the radiator. It was fine, only there was a little statistic trouble in the air."

James C. Young, of the New York Times, visited the "rum runners' fleet" off the Jersey coast. He went aboard one vessel and was invited to dine with the captain. The captain ordered two cups of tea for himself and gave his visitor choice of tea, coffee, or cocoa. He explained, "I am here on business and can't take chances. There is no rum drinking on my ship. If anybody wants a drink he can go ashore and get it. I won't have drinking on board." 'Tis a rum ship, all sailors will agree. Yo! Ho! and a cup of tea!

Here was a wise rum runner who knew exactly the nature of his cargo and its effect on business. Precisely so the old-time bartender "of the better sort" never drank. A man "in business" has to be careful, you know. Sell carbollic acid to fools and razor blades to babies if it pays—but don't take chances yourself.

A voting majority of the dear public concluded some years ago that this philosophy would work on both sides of the bar. If it is good business to be sober behind the bar it is good business to be sober in front of the bar. So between perfectly sober persons who desire to remain sober the bar might as well become a lemonade stand. If it is good business for rum runners to keep clear heads aboard ship; it is good business for men on shore to know what they are about.

The sober bartender, the abstemious rum runner, profit financially by the sale of intoxicants—so do coroners and undertakers. But most people are not undertakers, and booze is bad for business in general. Even if there were no moral or sentimental reasons involved, the eighteenth amendment would stand the test of logic just as "good business sense."

As before stated, a majority of the voters of the United States came to agree with the rum running captain that booze was bad for business. William Allen White puts it thus: "They tired of the five-day week, tired of blue Monday, tired of wrecks on the railroads, and mistakes in the shops, tired of work left undone on the farm. Then a lot of Puritans got to owning motor cars and they were more determined than ever that their nice motor cars should not be messed up by a lot of alcoholic carelessness on the part of other men."

A drinking man does not fit into the cab of a fast passenger train. He does not sit well at the wheel of an automobile. He does not fit into the crew of an ocean liner. He does not fit into a smoothly running, complex business. He does not fit in anywhere excepting in the place where he is going when he dies.

Modern society is too complex to take the risk incurred when alcoholics of any degree run at large. Hence prohibition. An active and rebellious minority does not see the logic of the situation. They think a man should be free to tank up and get aboard an auto and careen down a crowded thoroughfare at his own sweet will. The voters say no. Neither do shrewd business men want the vagaries of addled brains projected into their business affairs in any way. Even the astute rum runner will have none of it on his own craft—"If anyone must drink, let him go ashore."

It is true that a vast amount of liquor still finds its way into America—partly by the help of shrewd and well-organized rum runners who are wise enough to drink tea themselves. A larger amount of poisonous substitute is manufactured at home and sold under high class names to low grade men. But the man who will drink soon eliminates himself by reason of the stuff he drinks, and so does not long continue his deleterious way to endanger and discommode others. The general welfare is bettered because many now drink tea (or water) with the philosophic rum running captain, who was "there on business."

Thus Wayne B. Wheeler compiles statistics to show that during the past four years the elimination of the saloon has meant one billion dollars added to savings accounts; a reduced death rate that has saved more than eight hundred thousand lives; a decrease in preventable illness; a very great reduction in arrests for drunkenness and crimes associated with drunkenness; fewer persons committed to penal institutions; less poverty; increased home building and owning; and a higher percentage of school and college enrollment.

Not all of this may be directly traceable to prohibition, though much of it is. But as he points out, only a sober and industrious community could have wrought these things. The contrast with the days of the open saloon with sloppy bars at every corner and drunken men on every street is too apparent to need argument.

Hence if the matter ever again comes to an issue at the polls the voters are quite likely to say with the rum running captain, "Come, have a cup of tea. We are here on business. If anyone must drink booze let him go to sea."

Two Virtues That Shall Yet Save the World

Radio sermon by F. M. McDowell, broadcasted December 23, 1923, from KFFV, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa.

Scripture lesson, Luke 2: 1-14.

Text: John 3: 16. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Two Great Principles

Let us examine the text closely: God so loved that he gave. Thus tersely expressed is the divine pattern. Thus summed up is the philosophy of Christ. In this brief sentence is couched that doctrine which shall yet save the world. When men have learned to love and to give in harmony with the divine pattern, then and then only will the conquest which was begun by the Master himself two thousand years ago have been complete. Then and not until then shall there be a kingdom of God on this earth.

There is little evidence that the wise men and the shepherds, leaving their gifts at the feet of the newborn Christ, realized the significance of the moment. There is no indication whatsoever that as they journeyed homeward they were conscious that they had witnessed the inauguration of the new era on this earth. There is, in fact, on the contrary, every reason to believe that they did not know anything of the nature of the new kingdom or that they could have been made to comprehend or appreciate it had it been explained to them.

Christ came to a world that had been taught: "An eye for an eye; a tooth for a tooth; and blood for blood," a world that believed in the justice of war and the righteousness of revenge and hatred.

Christ came teaching: "Blessed are the peacemakers"; "Love your enemies"; "Blessed are the pure in heart"; "Bear ye one another's burdens"; "If anyone smite thee on one cheek turn the other also."

Is it any wonder that they said: "This fellow is crazy. He ought to be shut up. He should be crucified for spreading such pernicious doctrine. He is a dangerous enemy of society, a disturber of the peace"?

The World at the Time of Christ

The world to which Christ came is described by a recent writer as follows:

The haughty, conquering Roman despised the poor conquered Jew; and when Christ, one of that "despised race," began to promulgate his strange heterodox doctrine, love was a dead letter in the world. The mere thought of such a thing was utterly foreign to the spirit of the times. Rome was practically "Mistress of the World"! She had enslaved it and made it minister to her pleasures and her vices.

When the Christ was born in Bethlehem, luxury and self-indulgence had already enervated the mind and enfeebled the muscles of that ancient mighty race. The most abominable vices and the most fiendish cruelty were the common practice. The poor, the weak, and the unfortunate were mercilessly flung aside and trampled under foot as waste material. We do not wonder that the cruel and lustful Roman governor, Herod, bred in the ethics of Rome, treated the Christ as a fool. He was a discordant note in the cruel, lustful Roman Empire. We marvel that such teaching as that of the Sermon on the Mount could ever have taken root anywhere in the brutal Roman empire.

Who could believe that there was any chance for the survival of such sentiments as "Blessed are the pure in heart" in the Roman capital, where such a thing as purity was scouted—was incomprehensible! Think of the injunction, "Love one another," being taken seriously in a country where the leading women in high Roman families, the wealthy and the aristocratic, would hurry with their children to the Colosseum to gloat over the torture and death agonies of human beings like themselves! The most popular entertainments provided for the masses by Nero and other Roman tyrants of that terrifying period in history were those Colosseum "shows" in which the men and women who had embraced the new Christian doctrine of Love, were forced to fight for their lives with wild beasts, which had been kept for days without food to make them more ferocious for this occasion.

Long after Christ had left his disciples to carry on the work which he had begun on earth, the noble Roman matrons used to take their sewing or their knitting with them when they went to the Colosseum to witness the torture of His believers. See them with the common people—daintily nurturing ladies and their children, applauding when the lions and tigers, maddened with hunger, corner their defenseless victims and tear them limb from limb! The little children clap their hands with delight at the cries of the human torches—Christians covered with pitch and then set on fire to illuminate the Emperor Nero's gardens!

The Philosophy of Love

What chance did the love seed planted by Christ have in such an environment? What hope had it to survive? And yet the fact that every year, nearly 2,000 years after Christ, we celebrate His birthday, is evidence of, pays amazing tribute to, the power of the philosophy of love to conquer the world.

May not this conquest be well called in the words of Orison Swett Marden, "The miracle of the ages"?

Drummond says: "Jesus had no money—had no army—organized no institution—yet he conquered the world."

Sociologists openly tell us that the progress of redeeming the world from its inherent wrongs and of reclaiming the fallen institutions of society has been made only by the application of the principle of love as taught by Christ. History pays tribute to this doctrine as, one by one, the great institutions of society, the home, the church, and even government have slowly emerged upon a higher plane. A score of leaders in the field of social science tells us in no uncertain words that there is no hope for the world save through the application of the principle of sacrificial love in all human relationships.

Doctor Marden, in a Christmas editorial which can be found in the December number of the Success magazine, says:

Love is to-day—and ever will be—the greatest thing in the world! It is the mightiest force that man can wield. In spite of the horrible aftermath of the World War—the poverty, the desolation and the discord, the angry passions that are still aflame, and warring against it—Love will yet conquer! In spite of the prejudices and hatreds of nations—the greed and selfishness of multitudes—Love is gaining tremendously! In spite of the opposition it is meeting—Love will yet make a paradise of this earth.

The Principle of Giving

God not only loved, but he gave. Christ loved us, but he gave his life for us. Giving is the second virtue that shall yet save the world.

In the editorial above mentioned, there is told the following legend in regard to King Solomon:

When the Queen of Sheba, attracted by the fame of King Solomon, came to visit him, legend says that among the costly gifts she brought the king there was one he treasured above all the rest.

This was a rare vase, filled with a marvelous elixir, one drop of which would restore health and prolong life indefinitely. King Solomon's friends heard about this life-restoring elixir and when desperately ill sent messengers to him to beg for a drop of the precious fluid. The king, fearing that if the vase were opened its contents would evaporate and none would be left for himself, refused all these requests. At length he himself was taken very ill.

And behold, when his physicians unsealed the precious vase it was empty! The life-giving elixir had all evaporated!

This legend illustrates a law of life. We lose that which we are stingy and selfish with, and strangely enough we retain only by giving. Who is sympathetic but he who is constantly expressing sympathy? Who loves most if it is not the one that gives most love? Refuse to express love and it dies; your heart is sealed and your affections paralyzed.

The measure of love is found in giving. God so loved that he gave. Christ loved us and he gave. The mother loves most because she gives most. "Where your treasure is, there your heart is also." No greater truth was ever uttered.

"People who pinch their output, pinch their supply." He who sows sparingly, reaps sparingly. We must give of our strength in exercise before we can take away greater strength. In all life it is the same; we must give; something must go out from us before we can get anything in.

Do you remember the story of Scrooge in Dick-ens's Christmas Carol? Surrounded by heaps of gold, his life was a wretched, miserable failure. Why? Because love and generosity were strangers to him. He cared nothing for his fellow men. He neither loved nor was loved. Then the Christmas spirit found him. He began to give, to love, to serve. For the first time in all its pinched, starved existence, his soul felt the thrill of happiness.

In the words of Doctor Marden:

There is very little happiness in getting, but there is a lot of happiness in giving. It is the plus of life, the generous overflow of kindness, of service, of love, that makes us of value to the world, that brings us real success and happiness. People who hoard everything they get, who never give of themselves or of their means, who never think of others, may manage to scrape a fortune together, but they never grow.

A son of a poor clergyman was asked one day what his father was doing. He replied, "I don't know what he is doing, but I know that he is helping some one somewhere."

Yes, here is the secret of life. Here is the virtue that shall yet save the world. Here is the builder of character. Here is that which can make humans divine.

To quote again from the Success magazine:

The candle loses none of its light by lighting another's candle. Our capacity for friendship, for being friendly, is increased by giving abundantly of ourselves, of our love. Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. "It is in giving—not in seeking gifts—we find our quest."

The Message of Christ

Friends, we live in a social chaos. This is not pessimism. It is a demonstrated fact. We are reaping the results of the folly of mankind. We have worshiped the Master in form but have belied him in actions. We have praised him with our lips but in service have been far from him. We have attempted to bring honor to his name at Christmas time and yet have been found unwilling to accept him as the divine exemplar of our lives. If Christianity has any message for humanity to-day, it is, "Hatred and selfishness must be forever banished, and love and sacrifice must come to reign not alone as ideals but also as actual principles which find expression in every act of human relationship."

May my unseen hearers have a Christmas that is made merry because each has found that life can only become life when it expresses itself in love and service.

Without any claim to originality, we offer as our third entry for the Bok peace prize the well-known Ten Commandments.—Dubuque American Tribune.

New Year's Resolutions and Habit

Radio talk by Howard W. Harder

New Year's Day is universally observed as the day of all days on which to make and begin to keep new resolutions. It is the beginning of a new year, the starting point of another period of time, and it seems altogether fitting that men should take stock of conditions and erect anew ideals for which to strive. In other words, they evaluate their present situations and resolve to better them in the future. Often we scoff at those who make New Year resolutions, and in this we are not altogether unjustified, for this attitude, of course, comes from the almost universal tendency on the part of men to fail to keep resolutions made, and the making of them becomes a joke. But the very fact that these new starts are made is significant. It shows that the desire to do other than we have been doing is still strong within us. The making of new resolutions is an index of our desires, at least, and helps us to take courage in the thought that we are not hopeless, even if it has become a habit with us to make them.

The Power of Will

However, there is much harm in continually making new resolutions without really trying to keep any of them. There is no more effective way to weaken your will power to the point where you cannot will at all. It is well to have good desires, but if you have good desires alone without the ability to put them into operation, you are like an automobile fully equipped and ready to run, but lacking a driver. The controlling mechanism of your mind, the driver, is will. You can strengthen it by doing. You can weaken it by failing to do. You develop your arm by physical exercise. Why not develop your will by mental exercise? We should not fall into the habit of making new resolutions with no expectation of keeping them.

We know, of course, that most new resolutions are made for one of two reasons: we wish either to form a new habit or to break an old one. Since habit is responsible for most of the things we do in life, let us see what habit is.

The Place of Habit

Habit implies a tendency on our part to do easily, naturally, and with growing skill and certainty what we do often. That is to say, the thing we do often in a certain manner becomes a habit. Habits manifest themselves in two ways: in increased facility of performance or in decreased power of resistance. The psychological definition of habit is "a new pathway of discharge through the brain by which certain incoming currents of nervous energy ever after tend to escape." A good illustration of this in the physical world would be the track made by an automobile on a dirt road after a hard rain. The first car over the road makes deep tracks. The next car over the road drives in the same ruts because the driver finds it is easier to guide the car there and the car requires less attention on his part. In other words, the tracks in the road offer less resistance to the wheels of the automobile. The succeeding cars deepen the ruts, until finally it is almost impossible to drive a car over the road without following the track made by the first car.

Thus we see that the physiological effect of habit is modified tissues. The tissues of the nervous system are changed and modified or, if you please, the ruts are formed, whenever we perform any act. Each time that certain act is repeated the tissues are still further modified and the ruts deepened. A habit, then, implies the modification of the tissues to the point where a given stimulus will, each time it is applied, call forth the same reaction. And once the tissue is completely changed and modified it is almost an impossibility to break a habit completely. The plasticity of the tissues is much greater in children than in adults. That is why it is easier for the child or young person than for the middle-aged person to break an old habit or form a new one.

Importance of Good Habits

The importance of habit in our lives thus becomes apparent, particularly the importance of forming right habits in youth. The Duke of Wellington, that veteran soldier, is said to have exclaimed, "Habit a second nature! Habit is ten times nature." And he might well say it, for he was in position to know. His long experience as a military man showed him that the daily drill and years of discipline end by fashioning the soldier completely over again. Even cavalry horses whose riders have been lost have many times been seen to come together and go through their customary movements at the sound of the bugle. We walk from habit, and we ordinarily walk either slow or fast just as we have become habituated. We eat certain foods and wear certain styles of clothes from habit. We even think certain things and in certain ways because of habit. Nearly everything we do in life is done from habit.

William James said:

Habit is the enormous flywheel of society, its most precious conservative agent. It alone is what keeps us all within the bounds of law and saves the children of wealth from the envious uprisings of the poor. It keeps the fisherman and the deck hand at sea through the winter; it holds the miner in his darkness; it nails the farmer to his cabin and his lonely farm through all the months of snow. It dooms us all to fight out the battle of life upon the lines of our nurture or our early choice, and to make the best of a pursuit that disagrees, because there is no other for which we are fitted, and it is too late to begin again. On the whole, it is well for the world that in most of us, by the age of thirty, the character has set like plaster, and will never soften again.

Habit thus visualized assumes an importance that cannot be overestimated. To the child it means that during the highly plastic years of his development there must be acquired by him those habits and ideals which will be an anchor and help to him all through his later life. He must learn to be neat and clean in his person, and to be courteous and frank when dealing with others. In short, in his kindergarten years he must acquire the attitude, the habit if you please, of respect for authority of the government, regard for the rights of others, and love for God, the all-wise Father.

To young men or young women, it means that the things they do now or the habits of thought formed now will be the determiners of their later lives; and more than that, these habits will be the index of success or failure in life. The things they do now will likely be the things they will do for the rest of their lives, for, later, habits become crystallized and cannot without great effort be broken or overcome.

Modification of Habits

To the older person this question perhaps brings the realization that it is never too late to mend, and that although at this period of his life it is hard to form a wholly new habit or entirely to break off an old one, he still has a chance to modify his actions and attitudes in some degree, thus adding to his ability to adjust himself to his environment.

But perhaps the hardest habit of all to overcome and change is the habit of thinking into which one unconsciously has slipped. An attitude of mind, such as optimism or pessimism, for example, is nothing but a habit of thinking, and these attitudes of mind are hard to change. To illustrate what I mean by attitude of mind, let me cite a little incident I witnessed one day just last week as I was going home to lunch. Ahead of me walked two or three small boys discussing the price of some little thing in which they were particularly interested. One of the boys said he thought it cost forty or fifty cents. Upon hearing that, the youngest boy, not more than ten years of age, spoke up and sneeringly said, "Such vast sums of money!" It was his attitude toward money I refer to. When I was a boy of his age, a half dollar was a fortune. I remember one time after a particularly hard storm the rural mail carrier paid me twenty-five cents for chopping up and clearing out of the road a large dead pine tree which had blown down. I worked nearly a half day on the job, and even then considered I had the best of the bargain. To-day, however, the average youngster has more spending money and many more luxuries, and all this is reflected in his attitude toward spending. The boy in the illustration I gave just now will undoubtedly grow up to manhood with the idea that the acquiring of money is only for the pleasure of spending for the gratification of self. This attitude of mind will become a habit, and when the habit is crystallized it will be the boy's taskmaster. Is there not reason to plead for the formation of right habits of thought?

New Resolutions

Since we have seen that habit is of such great importance in our lives, we ought to be able to recognize that if there are things we should do we are not doing, or vice versa, the sooner we change our ways the better it will be for us. Here is where the question of new resolutions comes in. The first requisite for making a new resolve is a desire to change from the customary way of doing. The second is the will to carry the new resolution into effect. In this connection it might be well to state briefly the four fundamental laws of habit-forming, as set out by one of our leading psychologists. If these four laws are faithfully observed and carefully practiced, results are sure to follow.

Laws of Habit Forming

The first of these rules is that we must launch ourselves upon the task with as strong and decided initiative as possible. We must make our resolution in good faith. We must not merely wish to overcome the objectionable habit or form a new good one; but we must will to do this. We must know not only the difficulty to be encountered, but we must strongly sense the benefits to be derived. The desire must be active, not passive.

Second, we must never permit an exception to the rule to occur until the new habit is thoroughly acquired. For instance, if we have resolved to attend some religious service each Sunday, we must never permit the weather or any other condition to keep us away from church on the Sabbath until the new habit is formed, and formed so strongly that there is no inclination to do otherwise. That is to say, after making a resolve we must not think or say, even to ourselves, as did Rip Van Winkle when in the Inn he was offered a glass of gin, "This one don't count!" We must begin to work at the acquiring of the new habit at the very moment we experience the desire and necessity for it. "This one don't count," kept Rip Van Winkle from acquiring the habit of abstinence, even though when away from the tavern he made all kinds of pledges and promises that he would never touch another drop. This is the rule that usually breaks down in the process of habit-forming. Exceptions are permitted, until the exception becomes the rule—and then the resolution goes to smash.

Third, we must assure success at the outset by siezing the first opportunity to act on the resolution made and on every prompting we may experience in the direction of the habit to be acquired. If we are to be successful in our task, we must at once begin doing the thing which will lead in the direction we wish to travel. Procrastination is the thief of time. It is the thief of other things, as well. It steals our moral strength and saps the very vitals of our will power. When once we make a resolution and do not immediately begin to "work at it" the likelihood of our ever acting on the resolution probably lessens in exact ratio as the time of procrastination lengthens. The safe thing to do is to act on the new resolution at the first opportunity.

The fourth and last rule for the acquiring of a habit is this: Keep the faculty of effort alive by a little gratuitous exercise every day. Translated into everyday language, this means that we must each day do something which we do not like to do, something for somebody else that is not required or expected: we must, without any hope of material reward, feed the beggar who calls at our door, bind up the wounds of the mongrel cur run down by the milk wagon, make some homeless and destitute child happy by our generosity, stand in the street car to enable an elderly person to sit, and the thousand and one little things that cost nothing but effort on our part. In other words, we must get the habit of strengthening our will power by doing for others the many little courteous things which are unpleasant. If we do this, we will be better able to launch ourselves on the task set and keep at it without permitting exceptions to occur.

Summary

Let me summarize these four rules for habit-forming in just a few words:

1. Begin with as strong initiative as possible.
2. Permit no exception to occur until habit is securely rooted in your life.
3. Seize the first opportunity to act on the new resolution.
4. Keep the faculty of efforts alive by some gratuitous or free exercise each day.

Have you made any resolutions for the new year? Or are you going to? Let me urge that at this time of universal introspection and retrospection you take stock of your physical, mental, and spiritual condition. Can you see room for improvement? If so, the obvious thing for you to do is to set about making what resolutions you know you are strong

Curriculum

By A. Max Carmichael

The content of Chapter XII in the textbook deals with the entire curriculum in the education of the child in a much more comprehensive way, too, than is administered by the ordinary public school.

Agencies Affecting the Child

There are probably three agencies that are consciously trying to affect the child for good, the home, the church, and the public school. Indeed, there are other agencies that are affecting the child, which may or may not be for his best welfare, and which are not consciously trying to affect the child. These are the street, the poolroom, the amusement park, the theater, etc. Of all these agencies, there is no doubt in my mind that the home is the largest contributing factor in the development of the youth either for good or evil. Perhaps the public school may be next. But the theater in modern life will run it a race for second place. The church in the power of its influence runs far behind these other agencies in my opinion. As I said before, the home probably stands first, yet I have seen some communities and some neighborhoods in which I felt that the street and theater were larger contributing factors than the home. But on the whole I feel that the home is the largest contributing factor. Mother's mission is at once so natural, so powerful, and so sacred that she needs no special commission from any human or divine institution to perform her maternal functions. So should be and is the father's. It is to father and mother that we are directing our efforts in this campaign.

The Question of Curriculum

The question comes to all parents, "What is going to be the content of our daily contact with our children, our week-day contact and our Sunday contact? In other words, what should be the curriculum of the child?"

I think fathers and mothers fail to appreciate sufficiently their problems with reference to growing children. I think too largely the average father and mother are going about the daily business in a sort of mechanical manner and little is thought of the development of the youth. Largely, what he and she do is a matter of habit. If Jack happens to have this experience, all right; if he happens to have that experience, all right. I think the ordinary father and mother are too unappreciative of their problems. It is evidenced by the fact that far too few women and men will come out to an ordinary parents' meeting.

After some of my talks I have had mothers of adolescent children come up to me and say that they have a very serious problem on their hands. The mothers doubtless have just begun to appreciate that they have these problems peculiar to adolescence. These mothers probably did not see the slightest prophecy of these same problems ten years ago. Yet, the things that started these problems probably happened ten or fifteen years ago. At the time of their incipency, the mothers failed to appreciate it.

The Destiny of the Church

The destiny of this church is not in its priesthood so much; it is not in the First Presidency, notwithstanding we may attach to these offices a very great dignity; it is not in the President's personality, or policies, or honor. The destiny of any institution is in its motherhood and fatherhood. There is no ministry that is greater than that; and it is to this class of people that we must direct our efforts.

Our first duty, then, is to get mothers and fathers to know they have a very real task ahead of them in the rearing of children. There is no doubt that the home is a very costly institution so far as dollars and cents are concerned. Yet it is up to the nation and the church to interest its mothers in their task. Teachers, priests, friendly visitors, you must carry into the home an unbounded enthusiasm which is not or which cannot be stifled by any refusal upon the part of the mother or father to accept your work or to think at your bidding. We must go into these homes, we must carry the enthusiasm to them, we must get the mothers and fathers interested in their problems and appreciative of them. We cannot say that parents have not been interested. They may have been interested to a very great extent in so far as they have taken time to think. Many of them have had a great desire to do their work effectively. But what does desire and enthusiasm amount to without the training and ability to do what one desires?

Problems of the Child

The book we have been using as a text analyzes the problem into several different phases; the sensory experiences of the child, motor experiences, language experiences, health experiences, mental experiences, emotional experiences, moral experiences, constructive experiences, etc. I will take these up somewhat in that order.

Sensory Experiences

There is no doubt that the first task of the mother and father is to increase and make as varied as possible the sensory experiences of the child: seeing, feeling, hearing, tasting, smelling. The ordinary child is not led to analyze his simple sensory experiences sufficiently. This was far too true of me in my early education. Early learning to read, I relied too much upon books for my education, and my parents seemed to fail to see that I was getting my experiences second hand through books, and not through the use of my sense organs, first hand.

The ordinary mother in order to quiet the child hands him a new thing. She does not hand him things with design, with purpose, with feeling, with knowledge, scientific knowledge. No, she hands them to him to get rid of the screams. That is the kind of way in which our children are too largely reared. You have all seen the ordinary mother when the baby cries take it up and go to the window and say, "See the horsie?" She has not shown him the horse with the purpose of increasing his sense experiences, but rather intuitively to keep the child from crying. Too many of our first sensations were gained under this motive. Once in a while you will find a mother who will take her child out at four years of age and actually show him the trees, the flowers, or the stars. Speaking more specifically, how many mothers with design in their hearts increase the number of smells the child can appreciate? Or is it rather just a casual happening of the moment when the child learns them? Of all the things to see and of all the things to hear, how little do we teach our children!

Transmitting Racial Heritage

Too much of our pulpit time is spent in training us about everything else but the job of child teaching. It seems to me, too, our mothers' clubs are responsible. Comparatively too much of their time is spent in matters of an æsthetic nature, so called, and too little upon the more beautiful matter of forming human character. We may be able to appreciate some of the wonderful compositions of our great composers; but these things come to naught unless we are capable of passing on and forming the thing called human flesh. It is a very wonderful thing to work with. There is no more wonderful task given to human adults than that of passing on to children the rich heritage of the past.

Let us therefore as teachers of men first attempt to apprise mothers and fathers of the problems involved in this wonderful and beautiful task. Let us help them to see that in the early days of the child, he should receive purposefully at their hands as many of the sensory experiences as possible so as to lay an early foundation for fuller development later on.

Motor Control

The ordinary person looking at a baby is quite interested in his motor control. In fact, that is probably what the father sees in the child more than anything else, the ability to use his arms, feet, and trunk. Not many fathers and mothers have made a study of just what motor coordination should be made at each stage of the baby's development. The ordinary father is unappreciative of the fact that the child will reach for things ten feet away from him when he is first learning to reach.

Then we come along to the child of six or eight or ten years of age. At which age in the child's life will a game, as tag, appeal to him? Suppose we were expecting to start this game in a group of children, at what age would we expect this game to be most appreciated by them? There is fundamentally in the original nature of man a desire to be accurate. At what age can you teach the technique of running? Does the four-year-old girl care anything about the technique of running? Does she care anything about perfection in running? There is an age, running all the way from ten to fifteen years of age, during which there is a desire upon the part of the child to perfect his running movement. As another illustration, you have noticed how the child wobbles when he first begins to walk. A few months afterwards his play and other activity seems to be designed to perfect the walking movement. If fathers and mothers actually knew these stages, how much more effectively they could help the children, and how much better off we could all be!

Mental Life of Child

The third thing that I wish to talk about is the mental life of the child. Mental life is one side of a child that is little appreciated and understood by the average mother and father. It is to the mental life chiefly that the public school is directing its attention. It is too bad that a few mothers in cities where kindergartens are supplied will attempt to get their children into school without going through the kindergarten. The feeling is that reading and writing, etc., are about all that the school can give the child. They are unappreciative of the fact that the kindergarten is probably the most all-round educative factor that comes to the children at that particular age. But as the school is a strong factor in the development of the child's mental life, let us hasten to other phases.

Emotional Experiences

The emotional life of the child is the one that is most misunderstood and the least appreciated by us. The child's emotions are very uncontrolled, and how to get those emotions under control is one of the biggest problems of parenthood. Let us take the emotion of fear. I suppose the emotion of fear is one that is very predominant in the life of the child. Some mothers seem almost with design to increase the fear of the child. I believe this one emotion has received the greatest emphasis among our mothers' clubs. As a result mothers are to-day doing much better in alleviating fear. I must say that one of the best sets of books for good suggestions for alleviating fear, in fact, suggestions of a very specific nature for many other problems of parenthood, is a set entitled, Practical Child Training, 16 volumes, by Ray C. Beery.

These have been written especially for mothers' clubs. Of course, you know what the ordinary mother does to increase the fear of the child. It is to show it herself. A thunderstorm comes up; the mother wrings her hands and carries on generally and the child perceives the attitude. As father stays out late at night, the mother begins to assume a fearful attitude and the child quickly catches it. Children imitate emotions.

It is during that impressionable age that the emotion of love has the most intense growth. I expect it is a shame that the ordinary child is not loved more than he is. "Well, we are all the time fondling our children," some parents will say. There is a great difference between fondling our children and loving them. Does that seem queer? Love is a synthesis of all the emotions that are constructive in their nature, the unifying of all the emotions that are constructive. Love may use fear once in awhile. It is the gathering in and using in due proportion every emotion. The emotion of fear, the desire to be master of others, the instinct of inferiority, or the feeling of superiority—all of these enter in and affect the emotion of love. The child, however, must glean his feelings of what love is largely from the concrete expression of it. It is a shame that we do not have more fathers who extend more of that concrete expression to the children. The concrete expression is too often treated as a joke before the children. It is a shame that the ordinary father forgets to woo his wife after he wins her, so the children do not get the benefit of this continued concrete expression of that which did once happen. It is from seeing the concrete expression of love between his parents that the child gets his attitude toward life. We must increase the formal expression of it upon the part of our parents. I do not know what a pastor or friendly visitor would do to bring this about in the home. I suppose they would not dare to talk about such a subject directly to some fathers and mothers.

You have heard what some mothers say to their children when they do wrong. "Father will do this or that to you when he gets home!" This does two things at once that are detrimental; it brings fear into the child's heart for the father, and at the same time it decreases his love for the father. It is a crime, but it is done occasionally even now.

Moral Development

I have given at various times before considerable discussion on the question of the moral development of the child. Consequently I will not dwell upon it long here. Suffice it to say that the general thesis of these discourses upon moral development has been that the parental authority should be sufficient in childhood to demand obedience, yet it should be of such a nature that it can be lessened as the child grows older without any loss of proper moral conduct upon the part of the child, that the authority should so be exercised that the power of self-control is gradually becoming stronger and sufficiently strong as the child grows older.

Constructive Thinking

We find, too, that the constructive side of the child is not developed consciously by the parent, as it should be. This seems to be one of the good things we get from the kindergarten for our children. The ordinary parent buys his toys for the child ready-made. This is a mistake. The parent should make them for him and with him. Better still, the child should be permitted to make his own toys. I made this mistake just recently. I did it under the excuse that I was overruled with work, that anyway, I was working for the Lord. That is a very poor excuse. To work with our children, to guide them in making their own toys is the most intensive way that we can work for the Lord. I bought a wren house for my girl; she showed it all around the neighborhood, as proud of it as could be. But I didn't increase the constructive ability of my child in the least by buying that wren house ready-made. The kindergarten is serving that interest largely.

Once in a while I see in a home—and it is a very fine thing to have in a home—a blackboard with a roller at the top, on which there are a multitude of things that can be drawn and colored on the board. There ought to be one in every home for the use of the six-year-old. Every child ought to have a painting easel in the home, and he should be taught the use of the crayola early in life. It will surprise you how soon children get the constructive attitude and begin to make pictures. It is true that the child does not go through a complete visionary process in his mind when he starts to draw anything. What is going to be on this side of the picture? He has not yet decided. But he will put something over there. It may be a church or a road. Do you know as the child is going through that mental process he is making a very wonderful advance and a very wonderful contribution to his own future development. That concrete mental process undergone in forming a picture is of great value to the child.

Toys for the Children

The toys that should be bought first are those that are constructive in nature. Every boy ought to have a chance to use a hammer. Buy the boy a hammer and saw first so that he can learn to make things. If you look around you will see that there are many parents who buy the toy ready-made before they even think of buying the things with which toys could be made. It is true that the boy really prefers the constructive toy rather than the ready-made one. A pair of scissors and some paste make very good constructive toys for the girl or boy either. Suppose the mother buys a doll for her little girl. She then goes to work to quilt a nice little quilt, and she must have the quilt for that little doll bed as perfect as possible. But mother forgets entirely that that is not teaching the girl to make her own doll-quilt.

Some parents refuse to buy these tools for fear the children will break or destroy something with them. The boy is apt to efface the good furniture of the house with the saw and hammer. This offers a moral problem. Their argument is, of course, that if they must meet a moral problem in buying these constructive toys, then they won't buy the boy any at all. The argument is stated to show how foolish it is. Too many parents would rather not give the boy a chance to make anything than to meet cour-ageously the moral problems of teaching him to use these tools properly. Such moral cowardice! Don't be afraid to meet these problems when they face you.

Outline of Course of Study

(The outline follows the chapters in the textbook. Questions are selected from manuals, Mothercraft, by Etta Hunt, 10 cents, and Mothercraft for Girls, by Alice Mae Burgess, 15 cents, and other questions are based upon the articles. #### NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS AND HABITS

enough to carry out. It may take many years of effort to reach the goal of your ideals. You will remember that Longfellow once wrote, "Heaven is not reached by a single bound," so although your ideal is high you should not try to reach it by making a single resolution unless you are reasonably certain you will be able to keep it. If a resolution asks too much of a radical change in your life or work, and you cannot keep it, discouragement is sure to follow, with a consequent lessening of your ability to keep any other resolution made. The ability to live up to good desires in the face of repeated failures decreases in the same ratio that that confidence which comes because of success increases. It is a cumulative proposition; so the making of resolutions should be gone into not only with courage, but with a full understanding of oneself, especially one's limitations.

Since habit is the basis of our attitude and actions in life, and since most New Year's resolutions have as their object the forming or breaking of some habit, it will be well if we each make only such resolutions as will improve our situations and help us to better meet the conditions of life.

Patriarch Holds Meetings in Rhodes

RHODES, IOWA, December 29.—The branch at Rhodes has had a treat in the recent past in the way of church services. On December 1 Patriarch J. F. Martin came for a week's visit. He has been spending a week in each of the branches of the Des Moines District.

December 2 was rally day, Saints coming from all parts of the district. A goodly number arrived in time for Sunday school, and by noon the little chapel was packed to the doors. Brother Martin delivered a fine discourse at 11 a. m. on "Love." The sisters of the branch served a warm dinner at noon in the basement of the church. About two hundred were served.

The regular monthly prayer and sacrament service was held at 2 p. m. Words of commendation, admonition, and encouragement through Brothers Martin and Holloway were given.

Most of the visitors returned to their homes after the afternoon services. In the evening Brother Martin gave another fine sermon on "The fullness of the atonement of Christ," after which about twenty-five Saints and friends, by invitation of Brother and Sister E. G. Beye, gathered at their home and listened to a radio program by the Omaha Saints. This was indeed a rare treat.

Despite the busy times, a goodly number of the town people attended the services throughout the week, some expressing themselves as being well pleased with the able manner in which Brother Martin handled his subjects.

As a mark of appreciation for Brother Martin's services, a little farewell party was arranged at the home of Brother and Sister Beye, following the services on the last evening. On behalf of the branch, Brother C. M. Richeson presented Brother Martin with a small purse as a Christmas gift for himself and family, to which he very feelingly responded in words of appreciation of the kindness shown him by the Saints since he had been among them. A verse of "God be with you till we meet again" was then sung, after which Brother Martin invoked the blessing of God upon the little band of Saints. Thus ended a week of service long to be remembered.

We would have loved to keep Brother Martin longer, but his time was limited. MATTIE HUGHES.

Wishes Happiness to All the Church

BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA, December 24.—At the opening of the new year, we wish happiness and prosperity to all the men of the church who have proven the reality of their love and the value of their manhood by the sacrifice of the fascinations of the workaday or business life for what might be the monotonous humdrum of church service; not because their part in the whirl of constructive endeavor in the world would be less important or of less service to their fellows or the church but because there is exhibited in the answer to the call of God and of men to them a vision which bespeaks to us all that their ministry can and will be made just as fascinating to them by calling forth and putting into play all of the powers of initiative and response that the other life might call forth.

To them and to their not less noble companions and loved ones do we wish a fullness of joy this coming year and may they that toiled in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with these and God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all. CECIL HAWLEY.

Ontario Ends Lively Season

LONDON, ONTARIO, December 31.—The last few weeks have been very busy for us as a branch. In fact, commencing from the General Conference, we have had the district young people's rally, our seventh anniversary services, including a supper and entertainment, the annual bazaar, and the Christmas playets.

The young people's rally was under the guidance and supervision of District President Frank Gray, Bishop J. L. Burger, and Missionary H. A. Koehler, who responded with such subjects as "The youth as an asset," "How can the young aid financially?" and "How best can we give service?" The sports were a feature enlivened with contests. The Saint Thomas girls played the London basket ball team, and while they were defeated they put some fine plays. The London baseball team defeated the district. The London team of volley ball tossers were the losers in a hard-fought battle with the Stratford boys. A true sportsmanlike spirit was manifested by all of the contestants, and each team is looking forward to some stirring hockey games this winter.

The anniversary services were attended by a number of outsiders and the Saints from the surrounding places. Elder H. A. Koehler, Elder William Grice, Bishop J. L. Burger, and Sister Burger, were the speakers, with Elder Koehler aiding in the concert given on the concluding night. The whole affair was enlivened by the presence of Brother Albert Hoxie and his violin and with Sister Needham's vocal selections.

The bazaar held by the Department of Women proved a great success.

The annual Sunday school entertainment, which included several playets, was one of the attractive events of the Christmas season and was enjoyed by all.

This ends the activities under Branch President James Winegarden, whose term expires at the beginning of the new year. Brother Hardey takes the reins. We are indebted to Brother Winegarden for his faithful service to the branch, a great deal of it under most unfavorable circumstances. We feel that he has done all with a willing mind and unselfish spirit.

We start the New Year with a series of meetings to be conducted by Elder H. A. Koehler. Special advertising of topics is being placed before the public. We hope for great success in this part of the vineyard. F. J. TIMBRELL.

Reunion Site Purchased in Australia

NABIAC, NEW SOUTH WALES, November 6.—It occurs to me to write you and let you know how we are getting along. Mrs. Davis and I are both quite well and are going along as best we can in the church work. We just came home the other day from an extended trip north. While away we visited a large number of scattered members. We have traveled more than five hundred miles by horse and sulky during the last two months. It is extremely hot here in the summertime, so we make our long trips by night. I will have more than a hundred miles to do within the next week, and then we will go into camp until after Christmas.

Purchase Reunion Grounds

As you know, we have purchased eighty acres of land on the sea coast for a permanent reunion ground. Our application was approved by the Land Board a few days ago, and we have possession now. We have a beautiful site. It is located between the sea and a beautiful salt water lake, the two bodies of water being separated by a narrow isthmus not more than two hundred and fifty yards wide part of the way. We have more than a mile of frontage on a lovely sandy sea beach which is ideal for surfing and fishing, and a lake frontage of the same length. The water along our lake shore is shallow with a clean sandy bottom and is free from stones or anything that would be in the way.

Our land is covered thickly with a variety of small green timber which will afford us an abundance of natural shade for our camp. We will have to clear away the undergrowth of course.

We have arranged to hold our first reunion there commencing December 22 and continuing until January 1. Mrs. Davis and I, with a number of others, will go into camp there next week and commence the work of preparation. We will have some buildings to erect, together with the clearing that will have to be done. We will remain there until reunion time. I will be able to fill Sunday appointments during the period. We expect a good crowd at our reunion and are confident that we will have a happy and profitable time. This will be the first real reunion in Australia.

We have had no General Conference news yet, and it will be a couple of weeks longer that we will have to wait. We hope it will be good news when it comes. J. W. DAVIS.

Apostles Hold Meetings in Northern California

From a Letter to the First Presidency

BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA, December 27.—I thought that I would write you just a few lines to let you know how we are getting along out here. I stopped in Portland two weeks ago last Sunday night, on my way out. The Saints greeted me very pleasantly and I preached for them at the night service. I continued my way on Monday evening and arrived in Berkeley the following Wednesday.

Brother Budd and I have held forth in the following places: Windsor, Santa Rosa, San Jose, San Francisco, and Oakland. Next Sunday night we will begin a short series of meetings at the last two mentioned places. These meetings will be held simultaneously. We will alternate between these two places.

We will stay in this part of the country until after the conference at Sacramento, February 1, 2, and 3. After that we will be going to the conference at Los Angeles. After the conference we will pass through the district visiting the branches and looking over the field. D. T. WILLIAMS.

Gives Religious Instruction to Members

NEW CANAAN, CONNECTICUT, December 20.—The closing days of 1923 are upon us, and with them there comes a let-up in religious activities. Minds are occupied with holiday preparations, gift making, Christmas shopping, etc., which makes it difficult to conduct services. However there are requests for services at the opening of the new year.

My time for a few days will be occupied in preaching occasionally, visiting members, and locating members that have neither been seen nor heard from for some time. I am not giving many blessings, as I see there is great need of religious instruction among our people, feeling that the blessing will follow as a result.

During my stay of two Sundays with the Brooklyn, New York, Saints, I surely expected to see President F. M. Smith, as it was stated he was expected to visit there. But the pleasure was not enjoyed. However, his radio sermon was read with interest. The matter treated is surely timely. This brings to mind a statement that we need a new social order which should read much like the statement of the Apostle John when he was speaking of a new commandment which was not new. Perhaps if we could have a revival of the old social order that worked so successfully with Enoch and his band, we too might make progress like unto them.

The social conditions referred to in the radio sermon surely produce misfits in various forms—moral, physical, and spiritual. If it were possible to keep them out of our ranks or eliminate what has already crept in, some hearts would be made glad indeed, and as we go from place to place, our work seems to broaden until it seems a stupendous task that will require time, practice, and tact, completely supplemented by the Spirit of God as well as inspiring the minds of his servants to attempt to engage in so wonderful a work as to convert saints as well as sinners.

I trust that God will sustain his faithful workers in their efforts to promote his cause so that Zion will soon become a reality, a city walled by the power of God for the defense of those who are worthy. May God grant to you all the blessings of his Holy Spirit.

A. E. STONE.

Bishop Kelley Expresses Appreciation for Christmas Message

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 25.—Dear Brother: It is with much pleasure that the special holiday greeting of the First Presidency, the Quorum of Twelve, and the Presiding Bishopric was duly received by the undersigned for Christmas morning, and I heartily return to you a similar greeting, which is also gladly devoted to the excellent workers and associates in the true and holy church of Christ whom you so well and encouragingly also set forth.

For sixty-two years I have been fully and truly convinced of the holy message of salvation, brought to the world for the redemption of all its children, by the greatest teacher, Christ, and all should heartily and hastily extend a devoted heart and hand to instructing the world's children to receive the word of life, and come to Christ, their blessed Redeemer.

It is pleasing to me to be able to extend the true and lawful Christmas greeting to you and all of your working associates. May each and all of you have a pleasant holiday, and a successful and triumphal year of grace and holiness in your labors.

EDMUND L. KELLEY.

German Missionary Again Thanks Saints for Help Given

HALLE ON SALLE, GERMANY, November 26.—Editors: Thanking you very much for publishing my lines of August last in your columns, in which I expressed heartfelt thanks in the name of the Saints of Germany for love tokens received in their favor, I to-day should like to repeat those thanks for several parcels meanwhile received containing food of several kinds, underwear, etc., that the kind sisters of the Department of Women of Detroit sent for our needy ones at Berlin, Tilsit, and other places. Kind thanks be said at the same time to the sisters of German descent of Southern California who gave some financial help for our needy ones, and several other helps held out in prospect.

We do not wish to forget Brother Purfurst of Hilo, Hawaii, the German brethren of Stewartville, and last, not least, Brother Zimmermann, jr., of Philadelphia, to the munificence of which brethren we owe very much, partly for needy ones, partly for general mission purposes, such as working capital for printing our mission leaflet Seher and fitting out the new meeting hall of Ræschen with heating arrangements, etc. We wish also to thank Brother Muceus, of Norway, and his relations for the aid they extended to the needy German Saints.

In view of the steady sinking of the German mark, it would long since have been impossible to get our "Seher" any longer printed, because whenever I receive the subscriptions from the part of the branches, the sums don't in the least show a compensation for what I paid the printer one or two months back. Often one cannot even pay the raised postages for the next month, so rapidly is the value of our money sinking. So it is a vital question for our mission paper to have some working capital on hand.

Besides the played-out paper mark we now have "weestbestandiges" (perpetual value) money. We name them "dollar-Schatzanweisungen," "gold-Anleihe," but only in exchange for dollar bills you can have them at the bankers in pieces of 20 down to one tenth of one dollar, and he that expends them in shops is a highly respected person in public.

Yet one cannot say that the American dollar has still the same "Kaufkraft" (marketable value) of the past. It has only about half of its former value, and with certain articles, such as meat, even one eighth of the former value. Pork especially is extremely expensive to buy. Before the war one could buy one pound of it at 80 pfennings (20 cents), whereas now one has to pay 7 goldmarks (one dollar and sixty-cents). However, prices fluctuate each day.

Old people and our youth are very badly off. As regards youth, the general type in the streets now is: a young body with an old head and features which show the ineffable deprivations most of them go through.

Trusting to see our hopes fulfilled, I am with kindest respects to all of our friends over there,

ALEXANDER KIPPE.

Radio Enjoyed at Thirty-Two Below Zero

ANDES, MONTANA, December 31.—We are experiencing here our first real winter weather. With the thermometer standing at 32 below zero and a strong wind blowing we are not anxious to venture out more than is needed. However, since a radio has been installed in our home, space has been eliminated and we can listen to many sermons, lectures, etc., and the daily paper is not missed. We have not yet been able to get the services put on by our church, but hope to before long.

and the little chapel was filled, over half the number being outsiders.

As we have not had a good crop since 1916 many of the Saints have moved away, but those who remain are trying to do what they can, and are hoping that our sojourn here will bear fruit for the gospel even though no financial gain be experienced. However, all are longing for the time to come when they can come to Zion.

The happiest two weeks of my life in the gospel work were spent in and near Independence last summer. Our prayers are for those who are trying to lead the church onward, and though it may seem to them difficult, if they will press onward, Zion will soon be redeemed.

S. M. ANDES.

Report Made of Work Among Scattered Members

From a Letter to the First Presidency

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, January 4.—We are hereby reporting something of the work done among the scattered members outside of branches and districts. We have on our list this year 763, an increase of 144 members. Letters returned ninety-seven. This number has been placed on the unknown list, which is a few more than we had last year. One hundred fifty have answered our letters. We wrote to 212 once. These were mostly new members recently placed on the list, at least during the year. We wrote to eight hundred sixty-four members twice. We have written to very few three times this year owing to the fact that we have been writing to those who have not answered last year as we had hoped to hear from them. This accounts to some extent for the lesser number that have answered this year and also for the increased number of returned letters. A number have been transferred to branches, which would nearly offset the unknown number of ninety-seven, for when they are transferred to branches, they are taken from my list.

Breadth of Work

The total number of letters written was 1,076. Seventy-five were for correction of names or addresses and other matters of inquiry upon their part. To one or two we have sent oil which had been consecrated at their request. A number have sent in tithing and Christmas offerings. I have not kept an accurate account of this but it has been turned over to the Bishop. As near as I can get the items, about seventy-five have been visited by missionaries or local officers during the year at my request. I have met a number of them who have not answered the letters, who have expressed to me their appreciation at getting a letter and the interest taken in them although they had not answered as I had asked them to do. I find a number of these people are not in the habit of writing letters and as a result we do not get answers from them but they get the letters and it seems to have an encouraging effect and makes them realize that the church has an interest in them. We have sent out from this office twenty-six bundles of HERALDS and Autumn Leaves to those who expressed a desire for them, but were too poor to subscribe for them.

Branch Organization Recommended

I make this report so that you can see some of the work that we have been doing. I have also tabulated groups of names in the vicinity of each other, sufficient for branch organization, which I have reported to the Quorum of Twelve. I have also reported to them a number of invitations for a missionary to come and preach where they would entertain them while doing so. So I have sought to make the work of this scattered list as beneficial as possible, thinking you would be interested in knowing what had been done and that we are using our opportunities as best we can, I am making this annual report. We have had many words of very keen appreciation of the interest taken by the church in those who are away from the church privileges. Some of them, it would do you good to read.

FREDERICK A. SMITH.

Los Angeles Choir Adopts Vestments

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.—At their last rehearsal on Thursday night, December 20, before rendering the cantata "Adoration," the choir members, already filled with the Christmas spirit, and with complete accord, decided it would place them all on a more common level to have vestments of white for each member. There being but two days left, it seemed out of the question to have them for Sunday. But the apparently impossible was made possible by the tireless energy, service, and sacrifice of Sister Grace McNichols.

There was not much time for the news to spread, so the congregation was entirely unprepared for the change. As the choir ascended the platform in their robes of white, it seemed as if the heavens had opened and angels twenty-four strong stood before us.

The rendition was very exceptional. The soloists were: Stella Kelley, soprano, and chorister; Grace McNichols, alto; Dana Crum, tenor. At each recital it was as if God leaned nearer and touched their souls with music divine.

Apostle J. W. Rushton, in a short address, gave his approval of the vestments and spoke of the poise and dignity added to the choir.

Repeat Cantata

Sister Marguerite Wickes invited the members of the choir to repeat "Adoration" for the Santa Ana Saints on Sunday night. Nineteen of them, and eight who were not members, made the trip, starting early and stopping over at the home of Sisters Wickes and Lewis, who, aided by Sister Clapp, had prepared a most tempting buffet supper. Here two most enjoyable hours were spent. The gracious hospitality of the hostesses and the mistletoe hanging above would cause the love to spring from a quiescent heart.

At the church we were greeted by a goodly number, among them our old friend Nat Carmichael, of Independence, who was in charge of the meeting. Brother Cox, of Long Beach, made a short talk.

The closing prayer was by Brother Anderson, the pastor, and was most fitting and touching. All felt that the Spirit of God hovered near and were more than repaid for the thirty-five mile trip.

FRANK A. GREGG.

Requests Prayers for Wife

It has been some time since my voice was heard "in the wilderness" or elsewhere crying repentance to the people, yet by the grace of God, I am yet alive and in the faith. I ceased to labor as a missionary in 1905. In 1912 was married and wife and I lived happily together for a few short years, when she became an invalid. She has been at the Independence Sanitarium now more than twelve months. That seems a long time—watching, waiting, hoping, saying, "Thy will, O God, be done, not mine." While at the bedside of my companion this morning she said she wanted the HERALD readers to pray for her. I believe that the coming year, 1924, will be a banner year for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ. Let us one and all work, watch, and pray to that end.

C. J. SPURLOCK.

Another Young Member Testifies to Truthfulness of Gospel

CALHOUN, LOUISIANA, December 31.—To the dear Saints and all those who read the HERALD: While sitting here at my fireside to-night after finishing my school studies, I decided I wanted to hear the people ring out the old year and ring in the new one, and thought while waiting it would be a good time for me to express in my weak way some things that it is my desire to do which might be of benefit to others.

We as God's people down here in Eros, Louisiana, Branch, still have a great determination to come up higher than we ever have, and do hope that we may be able to do so. Brother E. A. Erwin was with us quite a while and went from here to his home to spend the holidays with his loved ones and friends. He left us many words of consolation which are still burning in my heart like a flaming fire. The words he left with us and the spirit he had with him I know will never be forgotten by me. We had lots of good spiritual prayer meetings, and I pray that God will grant that he may come back and be with us again.

Church Papers Read

One young sister, Gladys Teeter, of Independence, Missouri, wrote in one of the late HERALDS, wondering if many of the young read the church papers. Not a HERALD comes to our home but what I read some of it, and I read it all when I have time. I receive more spiritual food than anyone can imagine. I want to say this much, that the letter this young sister wrote wrought a great influence upon me. It caused me to exert greater efforts to try to come up higher in the gospel and be an instrument in God's hands for doing much good some day. I hope she will write often.

Dear Saints, I love this work. It brings me more comfort than anything else. It is my desire to come up higher. We are either going upward or downward. I want to go upward. Although I am weak in spirit and have many things to overcome, we know what is promised to all those who overcome. On the first day of 1923 I asked God that he would give me rich blessings throughout the year, and I can say that he was not slack in his blessings. He heard my prayer. He is merciful.

New Resolutions

Now, Saints as I have seen and heard many requests that we all set forth with new determination the coming year, I will say it again, Let us all wake up and see what the real necessity of living a pure and good life means. Let us cling to that rod of iron which Lehi and Nephi saw leading to the tree of life, and thus not fall away and drift off into darkness. And let us pray for the missionaries that they may go forth from their homes with more of the spirit.

I want to hear from the young people, as well as the old, through the HERALD. We do not take any other paper, through hope we will soon take the others. I wish the prayers of the Saints all the time. My motto is: "I will do the very best I can and come up higher." What is yours?

HEAMON HAWKINS.

Former Missionary Is Preacher for Nonmember Congregation

ORAVODA, NEVADA, December 29.—I came here from California and have filed on 320 acres of good land. In other words, I have taken a homestead. I was shown by vision that there was a work in this State for me to do. When I was here in 1910 in the missionary work I also saw the need of work to be done; so I am here with my family.

There is a Sunday school here organized by a young man of the Brethren Church, but I do the preaching. I have a good crowd of nonmembers each Sunday to speak to. They all seem to like the preaching so far. I hope to baptize some here soon.

We hope soon to see Zion arise and put on her beautiful garments. We ask the Saints to pray for our success.

J. F. WILES.

Church Paper Gladdens Heart of Brother

MORELAND, SASKATCHEWAN, CANADA, January 7.—I received a sample copy of the HERALD and have read it several times and with much joy. It surely filled my heart with gladness to read the sermons and all the letters of those that wrote about hearing sermons at such great distances with the radio.

It made me feel that I must have the HERALD as I have drifted into a country where there are no Saints. I am forty-five miles from the nearest branch, so it is a year since I heard a sermon.

May God bless the gospel message.

Christmas Carols Sung in Maine

JONESPORT, MAINE, January 3.—Standing upon the threshold of the new year, with its possibilities and opportunities, it is quite natural that we look back over the past, to compare our achievements of the past with our ideals and aspirations for the future. It is a little less than a year since I entered the general ministry. My experiences have been varied, and new, and for the most part very pleasurable. I am not entirely satisfied with myself as a representative of Jesus Christ, but what mortal man can be!

Nearly everyone who comes to Maine feels the spell of the beauties of nature, and we can well indorse the thought suggested by Brother Elbert Smith after his visit to the Maine reunion last summer, that God was especially pleased with the completed product as he viewed his handiwork on the coast of Maine. But to the child of the Northland (I am one by adoption) the perfection of nature's beauties is seen in the winter.

An entire vocabulary of superlatives could not describe a more ideal night than Christmas Eve in Jonesport. Those who participated in our little celebration feel that it was quite in keeping with the spirit of Christmas, and those whom we visited were very generous in their expressions of appreciation.

The custom of carol singing has never been carried out in this town—at least, not in recent years. When we proposed to try it out, our suggestion met with a hearty response. Some of the older ones didn't take very kindly to the idea of starting out at midnight, but the younger people were "game."

About twenty of us young people assembled at our home at ten o'clock, and spent the evening in practicing, and in a social way. Sister Chelline had prepared refreshments includ-

Brother Thomas W. Price, of Robinson, Pennsylvania, writes that he is sixty miles from the nearest branch, but looks forward to the days when the field will be opened up in his part of the country. He also expressed himself as pleased that his wife desires to become a member of the church. Brother Price was married last year.

a birthday cake in honor of the writer's birthday (December 24). Promptly at midnight we offered prayer, and then stepped out into the cold night and started our carol singing, continuing until about two o'clock. Arriving at the home of Elder David Joy, we all entered the house to rest and to enjoy a luncheon prepared by Sister Joy and "Aunt Eliza" Walker. After about a half hour there, Brother Joy pronounced a benediction, and we all went home feeling the joy of service in that we were permitted to sound the echo again that was sung from the hills of Bethlehem.

May the spirit of Christmas remain with all the people of God in all the world until He shall come again, the next time in power and glory, is the sincere wish of your fellow servant.

H. A. CHELLINE.

Western Friendliness Appeals to New Pastor

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, January 14.—Ralph W. Farrell, of this city, has recently taken up his residence in Warrensburg, Missouri, as pastor of the church there. Brother Farrell has been in the ministry for a quarter of a century, his field including some of the large cities of the East. He declares, however, that the friendliness of the little western town, to which he now goes as pastor, appeals.

In a letter to the Star Journal, Warrensburg, he says:

"I deem it a privilege to take up my ministerial labors in Warrensburg, for the city is small and friendly, and a relief from the wilderness of the large cities.

"The cause I love is the cause of Christ. I have no quarrel with the man who differs from me in belief, and I am anxious to unite with every power that works for the uplift of humanity.

"It is my belief that God has saints in every denomination, and according to the good they do, their reward will be in the world to come. Let us all be brothers—brothers of the world.

"I am not affiliated with the K. K. K. I do not know whether its efforts are for good or bad in any community. I have nothing to say for or against it.

"I am a Free Mason, but have no quarrel with those who do not favor secret societies.

"I believe there is good in every man, and I am every man's friend. As a minister in this city I hold myself ready to visit the sick, help the helpless, and in every way possible assist men to find Christ.

"I am sure that it is necessary only to state that the Latter Day Saint Church in this city is not connected with the Utah Mormons; however, we do not persecute them and believe they have as much right to exist as any denomination, provided they uphold the Constitution of the United States.

"As for politics, let me be a liberal, voting for the best man.

"In my pulpit, I preach the belief of my church, as I understand it, not forgetting that one of its cardinal principles is the lifting up of Jesus Christ as the only Savior of the world.

RALPH W. FARRELL."

Northeastern Illinois Conference Held

From a letter to the First Presidency

December 21.—December 7 to 9 I was in attendance at the Northeastern Illinois conference at the First Chicago church.

A very good spirit prevailed throughout the conference, especially in the communion service Sunday afternoon. I found the same spirit here which has been present at the various places I have visited since the conference.

J. F. GARVER.

CHURCH NEWS

Poverty Relieved Among Nonmembers

SHERRILL, NEW YORK, December 26.—The Christmas sale of food and fancy articles scheduled for December 8 was a success, although there were three large sales by other churches in the little city. Part of the funds was turned over to the branch for the maintenance fund, especially for helping to meet Sherrill's part of the district budget. Part of it was used to help deserving families, not of the church, in whom the Saints are interested, and some shut-ins, to brighten their Christmas.

District President Arthur Allen was here a week the first part of December and gave some very good sermons.

The pastor and his wife were presented with a new pulpit for the church by a friend, Mr. Fred Comfort, whose wife and sons are members. It is a most acceptable gift, for it was much needed.

The church presented a very pretty appearance for the Christmas entertainment, a children's pageant, "Bethlehem," being given Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Seven children not of our faith assisted in this pageant, and in the audience there were a third more nonmembers than members to see the play. The gain is slow, but all are thankful for any gain at all. The American Legion and Boy Scout movement recognize the church and our pastor, but the churches do not. The Thanksgiving union services did not include this branch.

Double Parts Taken by Actors in Play

SPEARFISH, SOUTH DAKOTA, December 28.—Aside from the regular routine of services the Christmas playlet, "Wondrous night" was given Sunday night, December 23. This is a beautiful little play and was splendidly rendered, although there were only six young people available for the cast, necessitating all taking two, and some three, parts. With the splendid arrangement of the lighting system a beautiful effect was obtained in each scene.

As a prelude to the play the primary department gave a few recitations and songs and a mixed quartet rendered excellent music for the whole program. Also a brass quartet from members of the city band gave two numbers. The audience was very appreciative, some being enthusiastic enough to declare that it was the best program ever given in Spearfish.

On Sunday afternoon, the quartet consisting of Brothers A. O. Plumb, G. W. Newton, and Sisters Mabbott and Newton, were called upon to sing at the cemetery for the funeral of the three-year-old daughter of one of the Methodist neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Whitlock.

The same quartet started out about four o'clock Christmas morning singing carols to the "shut-ins" of the city. From appreciation that was shown, it was undoubtedly well worth the effort.

Revival Meetings Held in Oakland

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, December 27.—The Saints here are working hard for a series of revival meetings to be presided over by Apostles R. S. Budd and D. T. Williams, which are being greatly anticipated by all.

A diversion in Christmas entertainments was given last Sunday evening by the Sunday school. After a violin solo by eight-year-old Eddie Peterson, a cantata, "The crowning of Christmas," was given by a junior cast with the exception of Santa. The results were so good that the Sunday school is now anticipating a junior choir. The junior problem has partially been solved here by having the children meet in the "social hall" of the church during preaching services, which gatherings are presided over by various members of the priesthood assisted by members of the Department of Women.

A turkey dinner, followed by a bazaar, was held just before Christmas by the Department of Women. About $200 was cleared at that time. This bazaar is an annual event.

Brother John Carmichael is the newly elected branch president. Sister Inslie, formerly Miss Earlita Smith, daughter of "Aunt Vida" Smith, was elected superintendent of the Sunday school.

San Antonio Broadcasts Program

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, January 2.—The San Antonio Sunday school furnished a program for the W C A R radio station Monday evening, December 31, followed by a sermon by Brother W. H. Mannerling, in which he urged better living during the new year.

The Christmas exercises were marred by an accident, when little Marshall Richardson was knocked down by an automobile in front of the church. He was taken to a local hospital where several stitches were taken in his hip. No bones were broken.

On Sunday evening, December 30, the Saints were favored with a sermon from a visiting elder of Dallas, Texas, Brother Johnson, who used a large chart to explain the conditions of the religious world just prior to the restoration of the gospel. His effort was appreciated by all who heard him.

At 10 a. m. Sunday morning funeral services were held for Sister Effie Matthews, whose body had been shipped from Denver, Colorado. Services were in charge of Brother D. S. Palmer, assisted by Brother T. J. Jett, jr.

Three Baptized at Westerly

WESTERLY, RHODE ISLAND, January 2.—The Westerly Branch is still active in spreading the glad tidings, and results are being seen. Recently Brother Herbert B. Johnson led three young people into the waters of regeneration. As there is no church building here and therefore no font, baptisms take place in the river.

The children of the Sunday school gave a Christmas entertainment the evening of December 22 which consisted of singing and recitations on the birth of Christ; after this they were pleasantly surprised by a visit from Santa Claus with a pack of gifts on his back for them. His visit was enjoyed by both young and old, although he limited his gifts to the young. Santa also picked the gifts from the Christmas tree, which was a source of wonderment to the young.

As winter is setting in, the Saints expect to take up some of the educational work of the church, that they may be prepared to reach more of the flock who have not yet heard the voice of the Master.

Meetings Held at Wyeville

WYEVILLE, WISCONSIN, December 27.—Interest was renewed and the attendance good, during the meetings held by Elder Lester Wildermuth and Elder Ervin Lenox the middle part of December. The Saints were sorry to have Brother Wildermuth called home by the death of his mother. However Elder Lenox continued speaking for several evenings and was present at the branch business meeting December 20, at which a good Spirit prevailed. Branch officers elected were: Floyd Griswold, branch president; Charlotte Pratt, secretary; C. O. Root, treasurer; Leone Root, organist; Charlotte Pratt, chorister; Nora Root, superintendent of Recreation and Expression; C. M. Root, Sunday school superintendent; Lulu Griswold, leader of Department of Women.

The ladies' aid and Department of Women held their annual chicken pie supper and sale in the church basement December 7. Almost $100 was taken in, although the evening was rainy.

A mistake was made in the last letter from this branch, stating that Brother Floyd Griswold was an elder, whereas Brother Griswold holds the office of priest, there being no elder in this branch.

Fresno Remodels Church Building

FRESNO, CALIFORNIA, December 18.—Following the remodeling of the chapel here, the Saints are enjoying what is said to be, by the Fresno Republican, "one of the most attractive little churches in Fresno."

An addition of thirty-eight feet has been built onto the church. There is now a dining room, kitchen, and dressing rooms besides the auditorium. A special feature of the remodeling is the interior decorating of the auditorium. The ceiling is divided into three panels of equal size with a light in the center of each. The lights are two-hundred-watt lights encased in fourteen-inch filed glass globes, twelve inches from the ceiling, thus giving a splendid lighting effect. The side wall is divided into twenty-three panels, bordered with a small stencil. The color scheme is gray enameled woodwork, including the pulpit and seats, blended into a very pale cream ceiling and heavy cream in the paneled side wall.

Work on the building was personally directed by Pastor Samuel Wood. Much of the work was donated by friends of the pastor and of the branch.

Madison Saints Attend District Conference

MADISON, WISCONSIN, January 4.—Twenty-five of the Madison Saints went by automobile to Beloit, about fifty-five miles, to attend the district conference, December 1 and 2. All felt repaid for time and effort spent. The sermons by J. F. Garver, W. A. McDowell, and Ward L. Christy were very instructive and enjoyed by all. Brothers Garver and McDowell came to Madison December 5 and each preached a sermon before leaving for Chicago to attend conference there December 7 to 9.

While here, Brother McDowell united in marriage Sister Neva Brigham and Mr. E. G. Kuenzi. They have the best wishes of all.

On December 28 the regular branch business meeting was held and the following officers were elected: H. W. Woodstock, president; Leonard Houghton, jr., secretary; Russell Wirth, treasurer; Carl Wirth, custodian; Cleo Carpenter, member of library board; Mary Woodstock, organist; Carl Wirth, chorister. One of the encouraging things at the business meeting was the willingness of those nominated to accept office.

Any Saints passing through Madison will be welcome at the church located at 2119 North Jackson Street, or at the Saints' homes. Brother Woodstock's address is 1907 East Washington Avenue.

In response to the call for help for the Sanitarium several bushels of vegetables, eighteen quarts of canned fruit, some towels, wash cloths, and a quilt, besides some cash, were donated by members of the branch. The quilt was made and given by Sister Rogers who is past seventy-eight years of age. This is the fourth quilt she has made and given to the church. She makes them out of all new material and has them for sale.

In the past year the response of all the Aaronic priesthood has been very fine, none having been called upon for any service that has not been cheerfully given. There is a desire on the part of all the priesthood as well as the membership to attain higher ground this year.

There has been a general awakening of the membership to the responsibilities and privileges of a child of God, and the Saints have been blessed in many ways, for which all are thankful.

New London Saints Enjoy Interesting Program

GROTON, CONNECTICUT, January 8.—New London Branch enjoyed an interesting program under the direction of Sister Eleanor Whipple, on Tuesday evening, December 25, at the home of Chorister John E. Blastow. Young and old took part in the program which consisted of reading, recitations, dialogues, and vocal selections. The big attraction, however, was the Christmas tree loaded with gifts, fruit, and candy for the children, and a visit from Santa Claus.

Proceeds from Sale Applied to Church Fund

BROCKTON, MASSACHUSETTS, December 27.—The theme at this time is invariably the Christmas just past, and all the activities relative to it. The first thing on the Christmas program here was the annual sale by the ladies' sewing circle, held in one of the local stores. Many beautiful pieces of handwork and also food were donated by members. Practically everything was sold out before closing time and a sum of about one hundred and nineteen dollars clear profit was realized, which went toward clearing the church debt.

Some of the Brackton choir members attended the cantata rendered by the joint choirs of Boston, Providence, and Attleboro, given at Boston. The trip out was made by auto and a good time enjoyed.

Sing Christmas Carols

On Christmas eve, which was a wonderfully clear night, several gathered for carol singing. There were four auto loads all going together. Among those visited and to whom carols were sung were Sister Laura Nute, Brother Elisha Beech, Brother and Sister Booth, Brother James Howard, Sister Clara Wright, Sister Mary Chase, and Brother J. C. Hoxie, all of whom have been ill, with the exception of Brother and Sister Booth and Sister Chase. However at the home of Brother and Sister Booth, the daughter was found lying in bed, having been struck and run over by an auto, so it seemed the carols were opportune. The true spirit of service and the reward it brings certainly came to those who went out and they were amply rewarded when each and every one thanked them with eyes brimmed with tears.

Program

At 6.30 p. m. the Christmas program was begun. The church was beautifully decorated and showed hard labor and genius on the part of the committee. The program took the form of a playlet depicting the ideal Christmas in the time of Christ, and the Christmas of to-day. The name of this was the "Christmas quest."

The committee in charge were Mrs. Margaret Roberts, chairman, who is also superintendent of the primary department, Mrs. Sylvia Megathlin and Mrs. May Cowgill. There were 35 who participated, 22 adults and 13 children. A great many strangers were among those in the congregation. After the playlet the tree was stripped of its numerous gifts which were distributed by the young men of the school.

Women's Work Outlined

The Woman's Good Cheer Club, under the direction of Sylvia Magathlin, which meets every Thursday evening, have as their aim for the year 1924, a new piano and new carpeting and runners for the beautification of the church.

The business session of the church will be held December 31. The following Monday evening the business meeting of the Sunday school and the Department of Recreation and Expression will be held.

Cottage Prayer Meetings Started at Fanshawe

FANSHAWE, OKLAHOMA, January 8.—Elder J. N. Perkins has started cottage prayer meetings here and they have proven very beneficial to all who attend. The young people now want a prayer meeting for themselves, so plans are being made to grant their request.

The officers of the branch for the coming year are as follows: J. N. Perkins, presiding elder; W. O. Brannon, presiding priest; C. G. Smallwood, chorister; Ida Smallwood, organist; Cecil Goss, secretary. Brother Smallwood expects to lend his efforts the coming year to organizing the young people.

Brother and Sister Smallwood are to be congratulated on the fine Christmas tree and program that was put on at the church Christmas eve. Everything was in perfect order.

Though the Saints at Fanshawe are few, they are trying to do their part to keep the work going. There is a spirit among the Saints to try to do more this year than was ever done before. Though the branch came far behind in the paying of tithing and Christmas offering, a strenuous effort is being made by the branch solicitor, Brother Smallwood, to arouse the people to a sense of their duty. Even the young boys and girls are now talking about saving their money to pay tithing.

It is to be hoped that all the Saints will put their shoulder to the wheel the coming year and, by paying their tithing, help to put more missionaries in the field and help care for their families. A great deal of good can also be done by attending services and encouraging the young people to attend and take part.

Graceland Students Return to Work

LAMONI, IOWA, January 12.—Graceland began her work for 1924 early on the morning of January 7. From the radiant smiles and cheery greetings of student and faculty one would conclude that it was a real joy to be back and be busy.

The First Chapel Hour

The first chapel hour of the year fell, as they all fall this year, on Thursday morning.

The time was occupied by President Briggs in his happier mood. Presenting first three Victor numbers from his favorite artists, he followed with a short but excellent talk outlining the work of coming months. He set before student and faculty his unflinching high standard and made a strong appeal for the sanctity of that standard and pleaded that faith be kept with pledge and prayer of those at home. It was a good foundation and well laid on which the school may build the half year before them.

Athletics Handicapped

Students are greatly handicapped without a gymnasium. The open, pleasant autumn gave opportunity for outdoor athletics, but a registration of temperature below zero drives even the stalwarts inside. The halls are being utilized and a general effort made to "keep on smiling" and be patient.

Organization for the next half year's work in athletics is going forward.

The football record for 1923 was excellent, scores standing high and morale most excellent. Two men, Charles Curtis and Frank Ebeling, won mention in the honor roll for the State. This selection appeared in the Des Moines Register and the list was made from all colleges of the State. Much credit is due for success and morale to the work of the coach, W. A. Gilbert.

Forensics

Forensics swing along without any gymnasium. On Saturday evening all societies met in the chapel to witness the deciding battle in the men's final college debate. The Niketes and Alpha Pi Sigmas represent the two winning teams, and between them the question, "Resolved, that the United States should enter the world court," was decided when Niketes speaking for the affirmative won the pennant offered by the Athenian Federation of Societies. Interest centers now on the declamatory contest and that of short-story writers.

Graceland Radio

The Graceland Radio K F F V broadcasts each Sunday at 6.30 p. m., sending out a religious program of music and sermon, and on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7 p. m. with a program composed of musical and educational numbers.

From various directions come messages of encouragement and suggestions:

Tuleta, Texas.—This is to let you know that I heard your program. Your signals were not very strong but quite clear.

Omaha, Nebraska.—Personal congratulations to all responsible for the fine program of January 8.

Glenwood, Iowa.—Heard your station clearly.

Casper, Wyoming.—Your modulation seemed fine and you had volume.

Clear Water, Florida.—I picked up the latter part of the discourse this evening from your station and the song, "Joy to the world," came in distinct and clear.

Moving Pictures

The chapel is always crowded for the community pictures. These are shown on alternating weeks, two shows on Friday night and one Saturday afternoon. These are of high order and most satisfying to the screen lovers in the community. The Patronesses of Graceland, active always in their cause, are usually in attendance with homemade candies and pop corn.

Holden Stake NewsWarrensburg*

Brother Ralph W. Farrell, of Warrensburg, was unanimously chosen pastor Wednesday evening, December 26. Brother Farrell is getting in touch with college and civic matters as well as church activities. He arrived Sunday morning, December 30, and gave two splendid sermons.

The Department of Women held a supper in the lower auditorium of the church New Year's eve and also gave a program and reception in honor of the new pastor, Brother Farrell. The young people watched the old year out and the

New Year in at the home of Sister Bray and Sister Christensen.

Edna and Bertha Johnson, who teach in the high schools at Lamoni and Independence, enjoyed the holidays at home with their parents, Brother and Sister Nalmer Johnson. Sister W. S. Macrae is visiting relatives in Joplin, Missouri. Sister Clara Wood, a Graceland College student from Massachusetts, visited during the holidays with Brother and Sister I. M. Smith. The college students, who have been away on their holiday vacations, have returned and our town has put on college life again. Will the students attending get in touch with Brother Farrell whose address is Hotel Estes?

Lexington

Lexington has adopted the budget system for the New Year and it is hoped the financial condition will be placed on a better working basis. The superintendents of departments for the new year were chosen Sunday, December 30, as follows: William Beard, for Sunday school; Fred Furness, for Department of Recreation and Expression; Lola A. Johnson, for music; and Priscilla Irwin, for Department of Women.

Atherton

December 23, the Saints of Atherton enjoyed two powerful and spiritual sermons by Brother J. E. Vanderwood, sermons that will not soon be forgotten. The Saints desire to express their thanks through the columns of the HERALD for the wonderful spirit that accompanied the first Sunday of the new year at the sacrament meeting. Evangelist Richard Bullard was present. A very beautiful and encouraging manifestation of the Spirit was given through him in which assurance was given that God is mindful of this place, and promises of the future are such as to cause all to put their shoulders to the wheel and work. Brother John Schwab, the pastor, was promised that God would be with him in his added responsibility. Brother Bullard gave the evening sermon.

Holden

The Department of Women at Holden held a bazaar the early part of December and realized a good amount for us in church work. The Priscilla Club is working on a playlet to be given in the Home Auditorium in the near future. The Christmas entertainment given at the church on the evening of December 23 was very well attended. The numbers given were well rendered and the scenes beautiful. Brother C. F. Scarcliff, the retiring superintendent of the Sunday school, was presented with a token of appreciation for past splendid services. He has worked faithfully for the school and is held in high esteem. He resigned so that he might give more time to his work as stake superintendent. Pastor Krahl has been taking a forced vacation the past month on account of an affliction of the leg which interfered with his getting around. He is back at his work again and desires to thank those who have so kindly remembered him.

Two Weeks' Meetings Held at Persia

PERSIA, IOWA, January 12.—On November 25 Elder D. R. Chambers, of Magnolia, was here and preached morning and evening.

Elder Charles J. Smith, of Sioux City, commenced a series of meetings on December 2, which lasted for two weeks. All were glad to have him back. The meetings were much enjoyed, as well as the association with Brother Smith. Sunday, December 9, Brother Smith spoke on stewardships and made a masterly presentation of the subject.

No services have been held the last two Sundays.

Independence

Report of the Laurel Club

On January 8 the first meeting of the Laurel Club for the year was held at the home of Mrs. T. J. Watkins to hear the report of the year and to hold election of officers.

At the beginning of 1923 the work of beautifying Independence was continued by first making a survey of the groups, and by way of encouragement some shrubbery was purchased for the church grounds. Several localities were especially cared for during the summer.

The Laurel Club was asked to take charge of the dining room and kitchen at the Sanitarium on Hospital Day, May 10. Decorations were furnished, and refreshments were served to all guests visiting these rooms. The club also has purchased a set of dishes for the Sanitarium with "Independence Sanitarium" burned on them.

On July 4 the Club had charge of an old-fashioned celebration held on the Campus, asking the Sunday school to have charge of all games. The Chamber of Commerce and the citizens of Independence furnished fireworks. The Laurels looked after the amusement tent and the refreshment stand. Between 10,000 and 15,000 attended, and as a result they were able to turn to the Bishop $564.71 toward the purchase price of the grounds.

A reception was held at the Campus on August 3 for President and Mrs. F. M. Smith, the most successful social event of the year.

At the request of the priesthood a father and son banquet was held on November 20 in the dining hall, which was attended by 350 fathers and sons, all being seated at one time. Many excellent talks were made, nice music was furnished, and it was declared quite an enjoyable affair.

The bazaar on December 11 was quite satisfactory, the handwork alone bringing $250. Several donations were made by friends of the club, which added to the financial success. A cafeteria dinner and supper were served in connection with the bazaar, also a candy booth.

This year three bake sales and one rummage sale have helped swell their fund. This year $1,810.65 have been raised, of which $1,421.16 have been paid out.

The following officers were elected for 1924: Mrs. T. J. Watkins, president; Mrs. J. B. Rodger, first vice president; Mrs. H. L. Loosemore, secretary; Mrs. G. S. Trowbridge, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. R. J. Lambert, press agent; Mrs. Viola Short, historian.

Mrs. Watkins was assisted in serving by Mrs. Sarah Cochran.

Spring Branch

Sunday morning, January 13, the attendance at Sunday school was lighter than usual. Elder Oscar Okerlind visited for the first time, preaching a splendid discourse at the preaching service. He spoke from John, the eighth chapter, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

In the evening Elder Walter W. Smith gave an interesting sermon, using Matthew 4:4 as his central thought, "Man shall not live by bread alone."

The Sunday school and Religio work is progressing in this group, although somewhat crowded for space in the church. It has been announced that Brother Gard's class of the Walnut Park Religio will furnish the program here this coming Friday evening.

The work in the Spring Branch congregation is still progressing under the leadership of Elder J. E. Soderstadt, with L. B. Winslow as Sunday school superintendent, and Alma Tankard as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression. These same officers were elected to continue for the coming year.

The program given on Christmas eve was quite a success, and the house was crowded. Of course Santa Claus was there also with a treat.

Sunday school is nearing the one hundred mark in point of attendance. Recently Brother Frederick A. Smith spoke to a full house on the mission of Christ to the world and its broad application to the people in general. The same evening Brother Francis Smith delivered another forceful sermon, thus making an interesting day for the Saints in this branch.

New Year's eve a watch party, ending with prayer service, was held in the church.

The first Sunday of the year showed a good attendance at the communion service. In the evening Brother J. J. Bailey, of Michigan, a patriarch of the church, gave some very good advice along the line of everyday living.

Zion Conference

The second session of the first quarterly conference in Zion, 1924, was held Monday night, January 14, at the Stone Church.

Reports from the quorums of elders, priests, teachers, and deacons were read and spread upon the minutes.

The report from the Department of Statistics showed a loss in membership due to transfer, but these were simply the removal of names long held on the books that no longer belonged there. There was an actual gain in the number, due chiefly to transfer.

The First Presidency recommended for ordination to office of priest Joseph E. Martin and Dick Bullard, of Enoch Hill. The ordinations were ordered. Enoch Hill congregation had previously approved these recommendations.

The chief business of the meeting was the consideration of the Bishop's report, including the budget for 1924.

There are eight congregations in Independence, each with its separate church which requires local expenses to maintain. Bishop Becker prepared a budget covering the estimated needs of these various congregations, under the following items.

Janitor .....	$ 2,349.00
Fuel .....	900.00
Lights .....	527.00
Water .....	134.00
Repairs .....	1,220.00
Music .....	255.00
Advertising .....	220.00
Insurance .....	347.00
Interest .....	2,045.00
Social Service Bureau .....	1,265.00
Miscellany .....	2,331.00
Total budget of .....	$11,593.00

In addition to this local budget the bishop proposed a plan of liquidating the indebtedness that exists in the building fund of the various congregations which totals at this time $36,760. It is planned to pay off this debt in four years, which would mean that one fourth of the indebtedness, or $4,190, must be added to the budget for local expenses. This makes the total budget for Independence for the year 1924 $20,842.

There are forty groups, comprising 1,806 families and $4,190, must be added to the budget for local expenses. This so that each group would be given its share of the load. While this involves a considerable sum to raise for local expenses it is believed that by systematizing the work in this way the people will respond to the need and that at the close of 1924 the amount for the year will be raised. In addition to the money raised in Independence for local expenses there was paid in as tithing, offerings, and special consecration in Independence last year a sum of $32,742.27.

As President Elbert A. Smith stated at the meeting, our problem is different from that of most churches. Other churches make their great effort to get people to attend. Our effort is to get churches large enough for our growing congregations.

After considerable discussion the report and budget were accepted.

Walter W. Smith stated that no provision had been made for maintaining the library, but no action was taken on the matter.

Basket Ball

The First Christian team lost to the Independence L. D. S. team by a score of 55 to 14. The game was played in the Kansas City Sunday School basket ball league. The next game will be at the Central High gymnasium on January 15. The Independence boys will meet the Central Christian team.

The S. R. S. team takes the lead of the L. D. S. basket ball league as the only undefeated team out of the seven teams entered. The I. X. L. and Bar-Gar teams, which were leading them in the pennant race, both lost in their contests Saturday night at the Stone Church gymnasium.

The I. X. L.'s were defeated in the first game by the Y. K. T.'s, score 42-30. The Bar-Gars were humbled by a snappy quintet from Walnut Park in the second game to the tune of 21-12. The league standing now is:

	Won	Lost	Per Cent
S. R. S.	2	0	1000
I. X. L.	2	1	667
Bar-Gar	2	1	667
Y. K. T.	2	2	500
B. Blues	1	2	333
Walnut Pk.	1	2	333
2d Indep.	0	2	0

Volley Ball

Two regular teams of volley ball are now organized. The Herald Publishing House team meets the Church Office team after 5 o'clock twice a week in the Stone Church gymnasium.

The Church Office team is made up of three from the Presidency's office, two from the Quorum of Twelve, four from the Bishopric and one from the auditing department.

The game is becoming so popular that, it is said, occasionally suppers grow cold while interest in the deciding of a championship waxes delightfully warm.

C. B. Hartshorn is manager of the Church Office team and Clarke Buckley is manager of the Herald team.

Sunday School Installation

The Sunday school installation service at the Stone Church will be held January 20. At 7.30 p. m. the ceremonies will begin with a musical concert by the auditorium orchestra of the Sunday school. This will be followed by an address by James F. Moore, superintendent of Hyde Park Christian Sunday School in Kansas City and an executive member of the Missouri State Sunday School Association. His subject will be "Sunday school contribution."

Then will come the presentation of officers and teachers by the pastor and superintendency. A charge to the officers and teachers will be delivered by Walter W. Smith, dean of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences.

The Twelve

Apostle J. A. Gillen is at present in Independence, as is also F. Henry Edwards, who just returned from Iowa City and Cedar Falls.

Apostle John Garver, who has been in the Independence

Sanitarium having his tonsils removed, has returned to Lamon, Iowa. Apostle E. J. Gleazer has been in Kansas.

Apostle M. A. McConley writes that he expects to leave Honolulu the beginning of February for his Australian field.

The Bishopric

Bishop I. A. Smith has returned from Washington, District of Columbia, where he was called on Graceland College business. A student from England bound for Graceland was held up at Ellis Island because the quota was full. She was finally returned to England because she could not qualify for entrance as a student for an institution of higher learning. She had not completed her high school work.

Bishopric Day will be held at Walnut Park Church Sunday, January 20.

Bishop J. F. Keir will go to Lawrence, Kansas, Sunday, January 20, to be with the students of Kansas University at their Sunday services.

Pottawattamie Conference Held at Council Bluffs

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, December 20.—The conference of the Pottawattamie District was held in this city December 13 and 16. Elder John A. Hansen were elected district president to succeed himself, and upon his suggestion the conference elected as his associates Elders George Beatty and M. A. Smith. The secretary was elected to succeed herself, and the Bishop's agent was sustained. Brother J. Charles Jensen resigned as district historian, and Brother J. F. Mintun was chosen to succeed him. Resolutions of appreciation were ordered drawn up and presented to Brother Jensen.

It was decided by the reunion committee to hold the reunion for 1924 at Glenwood, Iowa, and the district conference of the Pottawattamie District approved their decision.

Conference Visitors

Present during the conference were: Apostle J. A. Gillen, who preached an inspiring sermon on Sunday morning; Charles Putnam, of the seventy, who preached a forceful sermon on the conscientious representation of self in the service of God with faith in the ultimate triumph of the gospel; Sister Dora Glines, general superintendent of the Department of Women, who spoke at three different sessions of the conference, giving instructions and information; and Elder M. M. Turpen, of Pleasanton, who assisted in conference sessions.

Five were baptized during the conference.

An interesting entertainment was enjoyed Thursday evening.

At the business session the first Monday in December, the branch presidency were reelected to succeed themselves.

Missionary Services Held

Elder Charles Putnam has been for over three weeks holding missionary services at Dutch Hollow Schoolhouse, about a mile from the city, and while few have attended, there has been a very marked degree of interest on the part of those attending, and some are very near the kingdom. These meetings will continue. Brothers J. B. Heide, M. A. Smith, W. T. Spanswick, and J. F. Mintun have assisted in these services.

Sister May Skinner is still unable to be present at the church services.

The Temple Builders held a social at the home of Sister Ivy Lewis on the evening of December 18.

Recently the marriage of Elder J. F. Mintun to Sister Sarah J. Moore occurred at Creston, Iowa, and they at once returned to Council Bluffs to make their home and to continue the missionary work that Brother Mintun has been engaged in so many years.

Radio Flashes

Imogene, Iowa.—Please send us your program, as we are listeners Sunday mornings and evenings to your services. You said to mention if we heard yesterday morning's service. We did and were much pleased. I was raised in a Latter Day Saint home. My husband and I are Presbyterians but still hold dear the memory of my parents' church. We were married by Elder Henry Kemp, who is still dear to our memory, but suppose he is in heaven with my dear parents.—Mr. and Mrs. Dew Kline.

New Orleans, Louisiana.—I certainly hate to hear you sign off, as your music and singing programs are the best in their class that is on the air. I always tune you in every time you are on the air. Wish you a Merry Christmas and good luck for the New Year.—A. P. Rabito.

Weskan, Kansas.—Will drop you a line to let you know your programs are coming in loud and clear. We are out on a western Kansas prairie, twenty miles from a church, and enjoy your Sunday programs wonderfully. Your program, and especially the speech last Sunday, December 16, was very good. I get you almost every time you are in the air. On Sunday I tune out all the other stations until I get Independence K F I X.—C. O. Livgren.

Petrolia, Ontario.—Thought perhaps you would be interested to know that I had the pleasure of listening to the lecture by Brother Koehler last night, broadcasted from the radio station there. I tuned in just before the last number was rendered by the choir from the Stone Church, anthem, "God is our Refuge." The lecture came in as clear as could be; and please tell Bishop Koehler for me, I think it was a masterpiece. I had just finished a discourse on "The establishment of God's kingdom on the earth" when I listened to him and was happy to hear some of the same statements made by him that were made by me.

I expect to be here until the last of the week and will try to tune in Tuesday and Thursday nights. If I can get your station again, I will be pleased to report to you. Wishing you success in your wonderful work, I am—Elder B. H. Doty.

Bates City, Missouri.—We have been enjoying your programs for some time, and although we have only a crystal set, we can get them very plainly. Our neighbors, who wouldn't think of going to our church to hear a sermon, listen to the sermons over the radio. Our postmistress says she never misses them if she can possibly get the time to listen. One of our business men says he never listens to any other sermons, so I think the radio is a wonderful missionary. Why do you have to broadcast the educational programs at nine at night? There are lots of people who would like to listen to them who cannot sit up so late on account of their work. Who should we send a little contribution to, to help with the sending expenses?—Frank H. Cotterell.

[The radio work is financed by the general church, and any who wish to contribute to the radio work can send their offering to the Presiding Bishop, Box 256, Independence, Missouri. In sending remittances it would be well to specify for what the contribution is sent.]

Joy, Illinois.—We have been trying to tune in on your station K F I X for some time. To-night we succeeded in bringing you in good and loud on the table talker, just in time to get Brother E. A. Smith's sermon. It was sure fine to hear a sermon delivered from the Stone Church, and by Brother Smith. His voice came in very natural. We are certainly delighted to know we can get your station. Please put us on your mailing list for your programs.—Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Holmes.

Mondamin, Iowa.—Being somewhat snowbound in western Iowa and unable to get to our place of meeting we tuned in K F I X and were pleased after listening to some excellent music to hear Brother E. A. Smith's kindly voice on the subject of "Gathering." Your message should have a strong appeal, not only to our friends and neighbors, but most of all to our own people. K F I X came in exceptionally loud and clear.—Everett E. Gamet.

Pleasanton, Kansas.—We heard your sermon over the radio Sunday evening January 6, 1924, which we enjoyed very much and would like to hear all of them in the future.—Mr. and Mrs. Adam Springer.

Pittsburg, Kansas.—Heard the radio program last Thursday night, January 3. Doctor Wood's lecture on better living was fine, also the music. We heard Elbert's sermon broadcasted Sunday. Could hear fine part of the time. The signals would rise and fall.—E. E. Gilbert.

Madison, Wisconsin.—Just a line to let you know that we built up a radio receiving set in the hope of tuning in Station K F I X, and am glad to say our hopes were not in vain. After three trials on different nights, we finally connected up. My wife tuned in the cornet solo that was being rendered prior to Brother Walter W. Smith's lecture. At the close of the solo she heard the words we longed to hear, the name of the church and the station. She called out, "I got them." Talk about excitement! I was busy working on my books but jumped up and rushed to the set, grabbed up a set of phones that we borrowed from a neighbor boy and connected them up. We heard most of Brother Walter's lecture and enjoyed it very much. For some reason unknown to us we could not hold him clearly all the time.

The two vocal solos at the close came in clear and fine and the closing remarks also.

You can imagine the good feeling we enjoyed in being able to hear from K F I X. We have marked our set so that we will be able to pick you up quickly on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Sunday services here are at the same hour that you broadcast so we will not be able to enjoy those services. We are living in hopes that you will broadcast on Sunday afternoons also.

Our prayers are that God's blessings may attend all that is broadcast from Station K F I X and that it may be a means of bringing a goodly number face to face with the pure and simple gospel of Jesus Christ, that may not hear it in any other way.

Wishing all Saints a happy and successful New Year spiritually and temporally, we wish to remain humble and devoted.—Carl Wirth and family.

Housekeeping Position Open

I want to make a request through the columns of the HERALD for a middle-aged woman to act as a companion and housekeeper for my mother who at the present resides in the city of Appleton, Wisconsin, on the main line of the Chicago Northwestern Railroad from Chicago to the Copper County of Wisconsin and Michigan. Appleton has a population of 20,000 and has a small branch of limited privileges. The home is well located within a few city blocks of the shopping district. The position carries a good salary with all living expenses paid. This is an excellent opportunity for a woman of settled disposition, one who is kind, considerate, and who can exercise a reasonable amount of patience. Anyone interested can get full details by writing Fred V. Dreyer, 863 Mineral Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

THE LAMONI ELECTRIC PLANT

Gold Bonds --- For Safe Investment

The Lamoni Electric Company is offering $50,000 worth of five-year Gold Bonds, bearing 5 per cent interest, payable semiannually. This money will be used to refund the bond issue soon falling due and to liquidate the balance of the purchase price of the plant.

When the Herald Publishing House plant was destroyed by fire in 1907 and replaced by a new building in 1907, provision was made for electrical power to operate the machinery and supply lights for the different church institutions in Lamoni. The town council requested the company to furnish street lights, and requests from the residents of the town were so insistent that gradually an electric light department was established. As it could not be operated legally under the articles of incorporation of the Herald Publishing House, it was deemed wise to organize a company to take over the electric department. In this way the Lamoni Electric Company had its beginning.

Year by year the business has grown and new equipment and machinery has constantly been added until now the Lamoni Electric Company is furnishing light and power to Lamoni, Kellerton, Davis City, and Grand River, and now has assets including the plant, transmission lines, and merchandise amounting to $105,000.

The plant is in excellent condition and really worth much more than the inventory figure given. By a system of reserves which are set aside each year there is always money available to make necessary repairs to plant and machinery. When these bonds are issued, every indebtedness will be liquidated.

The stockholders of the company are Bishops B. R. McGuire and J. F. Keir, of Independence, Bishop F. B. Blair, of Kansas City, and Bishop A. Carmichael and A. Otis White, of Lamoni, Iowa. These men each have their just wants and needs supplied from other sources so that the profit accruing from the conduct of the business will be turned to the church treasury as surplus as soon as the indebtedness has all been paid. The by-laws of the company provide that the stock shall be held according to the law of stewardship.

The highest class securities to-day are public utility securities. The electric light and power companies are rated high as investment opportunities. Aside from the fact that this business is conducted by men of known integrity and ability, the plant itself is placed where it has unlimited field for expansion. This investment comes as near being absolutely secure as any bonds could be.

These bonds may be subscribed in sums of $100 or more. Address applications to

A British Pastor Champions the Cause of the Boys and Girls

It is constantly our aim to encourage pastors to care for the needs of all their flocks, of every age and temperament. This means watching over the young boys and girls as well as ministering to the needs of the older members of the congregation. We realize that this necessitates much time, energy, and study; in fact, it asks for a deep consecration. In other words it is a high ideal towards which we all must aim but which very few actually reach. Yet from time to time it is encouraging to learn of the people who have advanced along this road with considerable success. You can understand, therefore, our delight at receiving the following letter from a pastor who for some time has been caring for the younger section of his congregation while not losing sight of the older. Quoting from his letter of January 2, we read:

I am pleased to say that we have an excellent group of boys connected with the church and affiliated with the Baden-Powell movement. We are warranted officers, and I, myself, have been appointed as district commissioner for the whole of the movement in this part of the country. I have had an uphill fight with most of the people but have won through because of results which have accrued through my efforts among the young. I have just baptized four of the boys and several more are on the verge of joining the church. When I started I could see the great need there was for an organization for young people in Great Britain, and can see how sorely it has been neglected in past years. In looking around I can see that the reason in my opinion for the seeming failure of the work in Great Britain has been simply because we have not been able to keep our young people, so I decided I would form a boys' club, but having a friend, a school-teacher who was connected with the Boy Scout Movement, he persuaded me to form it into a Boy Scout troop. This I commenced with six boys and success came to us to the extent that we have received great support from the local authorities, and a good staff of instructors in the Y. M. C. A., of which I am an honorary member. On two occasions we have been asked to form guards of honor to royalty and have been picked out for this work from about ten troops which are in the association. I am now doing my best to organize Boy Scout troops in all the branches of the British Isles. I am speaking this week-end on our aims and objects at the reunion conference of our district at Birmingham, and then I am going to Manchester to form a troop of scouts at the new church which has recently been built there by the Saints. As you see by this brief outline, I am endeavoring to do my best in behalf of the young people of this country, and can see that it will be for the salvation of the work here if only we can keep them interested between the ages of 11 to 17.

As I told you at the commencement of my letter, I had recently baptized four boys. One of these, the oldest, has won the silver challenge shield valued at 8 pounds ($40) through winning the most proficiency badges. This same boy has recently been recommended to be ordained to the office of deacon. Although only 18 years of age, this is the brightest boy that we have in the branch and he came in solely through the scout troop. At the same time he has been the means of his mother joining the church and she has also become one of the leading members. His mother, too, was the means of bringing in three more, so you can see that my work in this regard has not been in vain.

With regard to Temple Builders and Oriole Girls, I might say that I am organizing in this regard but along the Girl Guide lines of Great Britain. This still gives us the privilege of forming into Oriole Circles, etc., but also gives us the same privileges that accrue from belonging to the Girl Guide Movement, such as reduced fares, access to camping grounds, etc.

Although I am branch president, and have to consider all the ages and different temperaments, yet I am led to rejoice to know that God's blessing is being with me in this work, and although it has been an uphill fight, yet by God's help I am winning through, and can say that my desire is still to carry on the good work.

We are glad to know that this brother realizes his position as the father of the branch, and that he is caring for the development of all his people.

F. M. McDOWELL.

Reunion Survey

Elsewhere in this issue there will be found a report of a survey of reunion work which has been conducted by two of the members of the reunion committee appointed for last year. This survey contains a great deal of very interesting material which deserves the careful thought and consideration of all the Saints, especially those having direct supervision of reunion activities. This gives us the opportunity to say what we have had in mind for some time, that in our opinion the work of the reunion committee should be a year-round task, and should not be limited merely to recommendations for the appointing and routing of speakers, but should include more or less exhaustive studies of the whole reunion problem and the conserving of reunion experience, putting same in such form as will be available for reunion workers throughout the church.

There are now some fifty reunions held each season, costing the church tens of thousands of dollars annually. This is a huge educational endeavor and demands the most careful and experienced supervision. In our opinion this work can be best carried on by a small committee working throughout the year. This committee shall of course be expected to keep the office of the Presidency informed as to its work, program, etc. It will also be expected to consult frequently with all departments of church work, especially those departments affected by the appointment and routing of speakers. For the purpose of carrying on this work in accordance with the above ideals we are appointing as members of this committee the following: F. M. McDowell, chairman; F. Henry Edwards; A. Max Carmichael.

Book of Exodus Verified by Excavations

Absolute proof of the bondage of the Israelites and their exodus from Egypt has been established with the discovery of a stone tablet upon which is inscribed the first record of this people in the condition described in the book of Exodus.

Excavations in Palestine by the University of Pennsylvania have proved of tremendous value by establishing this fact, if for no other reason. The university has, however, achieved great success in its recent operations in the Holy Land. Given permission to carry on an archaeological expedition, following the mandate of Great Britain in Palestine after the war, the university has uncovered several ancient cities, built one upon another. The city at the bottom of the huge mound, and yet uncovered, dates back to about 4000 B. C., the report says.

The excavations are taking place at the little village of Beisan which is all that is left of the once large city and fortress called in the Bible "Bethshean."

Why the stone tablet, telling of the Israelites in bondage, was found in Palestine instead of Egypt is not known, for it bears the seal of the Pharaoh Rameses II. Heretofore the exact Pharaoh who persecuted the Israelites was not known, and some even doubted that the Israelites were ever in Egypt.

We look with interest for what may be the next startling revelation in discovery.

Blue Pencil Notes

Is it too late to borrow an illustration from the football field? No. Would it be beneath our dignity to borrow from that source? No.

Very well, then: when "the team" goes into action, particularly in a dangerous crisis, their fellows, the school or the town, join in a chant: "Go on, boys! We're with you! Go on, boys! We're with you!"

Hearing this clarion call, there is not a man on the team who will not do his best. His best may not be as good as another man might do. He may even fumble the ball at times. But he will do his best.

How different it would be if everybody on the side lines should jump up and down and all shout, "Rotten! Rotten!" You can imagine the effect upon the men.

If you would get the very best effort out of your church representatives, whoever they may be—if you would get the most out of the First Presidency, if you would get the most out of the Quorum of Twelve, the Presiding Bishopric, the district president, your pastor, your visiting officers, try this slogan: "Go on, men! We're with you!"

Ah, that has a sound! That has a thrill! It is a cold heart that will not leap to that call. It is a poor stick that will not quicken to that salute. It is a slothful servant who will not do his best and give his best in response. The man who will not respond is hopeless. Take him out and send in a substitute.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

With the amount of attention given to the subject of conversions by recent psychology and the ultra materialistic views expressed, it is extremely interesting to note what the eminent authority William James says upon the subject. "In the case of conversion I am quite willing to believe that a new truth may be supernaturally revealed to a subject when he really asks, but I am sure that in many cases of conversion it is less new truth than a new power gained over life by a truth always known."

Roads are manifold that men have sought in their desire for salvation. Henry Osborn Taylor says: "For one man shall find his peace in action, another in the rejection of action, even in the seeming destruction of desire; another shall have peace and freedom through intellectual inquiry, while another must obey his God or love his God and may stand in very conscious need of divine salvation." Religion is a means of adjustment or deliverance.

Boy Selects Bible as Best Book

In a prize essay contest in the city public schools on "The best ten books I ever read," fifteen-year-old Calvin L. Tinney, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, says the Bible leads them all.

His literary criticism was so remarkable for a boy of his age that the essay was published in the Daily World with very favorable comment. We are presenting the part dealing with the Bible as follows:

In its wide circuit, the Bible is known all over the world. No other book has made such an impression upon humanity as it. It is the day's best seller—in spite of the fact that it can be had for the mere asking. Of the ten books included in this discussion I consider the Bible the best—and justly so.

The Bible is the masterpiece of literature; a masterpiece of all time. It is as much above Shakespeare, Scott, Wells, Bok, Bunyan, and Defoe, as they are above the commonplace. The writing of it was guided by One who knew more about humanity than any historian, philosopher, poet, dramatist, or novelist.

In a discussion of this kind the Bible cannot be given justice. The task is too big, and the work is too large. I would not be able to cover it, no matter how I might handle it. I can but call it the greatest book I have ever read, and rest in the satisfaction that comes to me now, that my choice is undisputed, and that I have surely chosen

THE BEST AS BEST!

Asked to choose the most important passage of the book I select as best, the passage I choose—and my choice, I believe, will be agreed to by all laymen and reverend gentlemen—is the old, familiar verse we learned by heart in early childhood, and have treasured so much in later life: John 3: 16.

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

It is here, and here only, do we find the answer to man's greatest problems—the problems of life, death, and immortality. It is the belief to which you and I hold, and the promise that makes the world go round.

Changes in Creeds

Creeds have had a shake-up recently, especially in the Episcopal Church. The Faculty of the Cambridge Episcopal Theological School has sent out to its alumni a suggestion as regards the apostles and Nicene creeds in the Episcopal Church, which represents an interesting stand.

One of these creeds was obligatory in the regular order of worship, recalls the Christian Work, but with the present controversy over the Virgin birth, it becomes extremely unwise to continue its use. The suggestion in part appears as follows:

The church is greater than the creeds. The central faith in God as he is found in Christ, upon which the church is built, is not destroyed or diminished by doubts concerning the method of Christ's birth, of his return to God, or of his future judgment. The church made the creeds. The creeds did not make the church. The church was and is a fellowship issuing from the love and power of Christ which has shaped the creeds for its own purposes. What the church has made, it can remake. Tradition is still in the making; the inner life of the church is still forcing itself to expression. We do not find the creeds perfectly adequate as expressions of Christian allegiance, as summaries of the Christian view of life, or as tests of discipleship. To leave the church because of dissatisfaction with clauses in the creed would be to put the creeds above Christ and his church, and to pursue a fruitless sectarianism.

One of the statements in the letter to the alumni is that when formularies in their original intention have ceased to represent the mind of the society of which they were a part, the alternatives to literal adherence or withdrawal are interpretation and re-statement.

An admission of this sort would hardly be expected to come from leaders of so conservative a church as the Episcopal, yet that is what has occurred.

We, as a church, have long contended that creeds were not only unnecessary but that they hindered progress of a body of people. We have no creed, unless it be "All truth."

The Fundamentalist-Modernist controversy is evidently forcing certain changes in the traditional ways of some of the churches. They are beginning to realize that a restatement of their doctrines is perhaps necessary to meet with the advance of Christianity.

Denominational Distrust

"No denomination has a right to distrust another which in its creeds and confessions professes its allegiance to Christ and the gospel," says an editorial in the Christian Work, commenting on the meetings of the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ, held in Columbus, December 12, 13, and 14. At the same time it advocates a closer bond between Protestant churches, that the Federal Council may speak officially for the Protestant world. Denominations still outside the council are urged to come into the circle.

It appears that the sentiment expressed, that one denomination has no right to distrust another denomination, provided all express a belief in Christ, works well within the council ranks, but we wonder what would be the application if the Catholics or our own church were mentioned. Perhaps distrust would be too mild an expression of the attitude.

Vocational schools in several Michigan cities have assisted the State organization of parent-teacher associations by printing without charge its monthly bulletin for distribution in their respective districts.

Reunion Questionnaire Analysis

Annual Reunion

The annual reunion has become so important an event in the lives of so many of our districts, and the welfare of the reunions as a whole is so vital to the general church, that in this, as in all of our church work of any magnitude, it has become imperative that we shall give careful thought to what we are about, to the direction of our efforts to ends which we shall consciously choose as worth-while, to the perpetuation of those forces which shall aid us in reaching such ends, and to the elimination of all that would deter us in our advance to the accomplishment of our righteous purpose.

Wasted Experience

Many of us have deplored the wastage of experience from which we suffer. Too frequently the gains which have been purchased by many years of individual labor have been lost with the passing of the individual. We need to make our individual gains the permanent possession of the entire church, so that basing their forward movement on our achievements the workers of to-morrow shall be able to reach heights of which we have but a dim vision, but to the attainment of which we can in this way contribute.

Questionnaire

It is with this thought in mind that the reunion questionnaire has been distributed to General Conference appointees and reunion workers. Many of the factors which have made for success in one part of the country can be utilized in promoting reunion work in every other place to which the church has extended its efforts. We can standardize, possibly, on some of the fundamentals of reunion success. Some of the factors which have spoiled reunion effort in another part of the country will probably prove deterrent wherever they are allowed to have their place. Can we not determine that these forces shall have no entrance into any of our reunion work wherever it may be localized?

Purposes of Questionnaire

Our annual capital outlay on reunion activities is well past the $10,000 figure, so that this question is of moment from the financial viewpoint as well as on account of other considerations. We therefore issued the questionnaire in an endeavor to discover what are the factors mentioned. Put briefly our purposes are threefold:

- a. To discover the progressive and retrogressive elements in reunion work.
- b. To make known the results of the investigation for the benefit of those engaged in reunion work.
- c. To stimulate helpful criticism by giving it affirmative direction and focus.

While we wish to extend the use of helpful factors, we recognize the individual and local characteristics of each situation, and suggest that the general rule must have specific application to insure success.

HAVE REUNIONS IMPROVED?

We hope that the past five years have shown general improvement, even though the dyspeptic outlook of temporary "blueness" may make us feel that no progress has been made, so that it is faith-promoting to realize that so many who have been connected with various phases of reunion work are convinced that we are moving forward. Their view is of course quite general and depends for its value upon the basis of judgment recognized by those replying, but it certainly shows what the reunion workers feel. Here is an analysis of the replies received:

Unqualified statement of improvement .....	42
Not improved .....	1
Better five years ago .....	1
Miscellaneous comments .....	8
Replies expressing an opinion .....	52

Is Reunion Time Well Spent?

We spend plenty of time in reunions. Money, too. We have wondered whether this is really justified. Could we not put this same time and money into the improvement of our district conferences with better advantage to the general church? Are reunions just a fad which has "caught on," or are they a vital force in our development? This is what those who know think about it:

Reunion Time Is Well Spent:

Forces Tending to Improvement of Reunions

Replies received from missionaries and others whose experience has been gained over extended fields of observation are of more general application than those received from local workers who have been with the one reunion during the whole course of the period of this review. However, the local workers have had more time to study specific working of forces felt everywhere, and what their replies lose in breadth they gain in intensity. Some of the replies listed under the general heading of "miscellaneous" make a very distinct contribution, while others have a purely local application. However, where representatives of large and small and wealthy and poverty stricken reunions combine to pronounce certain factors helpful, these may well be put into operation wherever possible, and studied so that they may be the basis of still further advance. The following factors were enumerated:

Organization, with the working out of a definite program in advance .....	30
Supervision of recreation for, and general attention to young people .....	14
Leadership made efficient through prayer and preparation .....	6
Educational activity. Institutes .....	6
Prayer services .....	3
Miscellaneous suggestions .....	9
Replies expressing opinions .....	68

Helpful Factors Become Harmful

The replies to this question when taken in conjunction with the replies just tabulated show quite clearly the way that success lies. Compare the two analyses:

Excessive emphasis .....	23
Lack of effective organization, leaders, etc. ....	21
Intrusion of personal defects .....	6
Miscellaneous ways .....	7
Suggestions given .....	57

Forces Having a Harmful Effect on Reunions

It has been said that the road which leads to heaven leads also to hell. It is merely a question of which way one faces. This is confirmed by a comparison of the replies concerning the harmful forces with those about factors which tend to the improvement of our reunion work. In addition the importance of the deportment of individuals as it contributes to the success of the various gatherings is emphasized by the large number of replies which center on anti-social deportment as a widespread hindrance to success. Leadership, as here used, is to be interpreted as leadership of the meetings, conduct of the priesthood, preaching, etc., after the opening of the reunion. The summarized list reads:

Poor organization and management .....	20
Anti-social deportment—pleasures out of season, etc. ....	16
Inefficient leadership .....	10
Lack of care for old or young, or too much discrimination between ages .....	5
Miscellaneous .....	12
Replies expressing opinions .....	63

MAKING HARMFUL FACTORS HELPFUL

A route into an important city was almost impassable because of huge holes and numerous rocks. A far-sighted engineer used the rocks to fill the holes and so built a highway. The same policy seems to be recognized among our people, for most of the answers to this question were affirmative suggestions rather than demands for elimination. Note how these suggestions dovetail with the list of forces tending to improvement. It is difficult to classify the answers other than very generally.

Suggesting better supervision, leadership, and organization .....	13
Suggesting elimination .....	3
Miscellaneous affirmative suggestions .....	12
Suggestions given .....	28

COMMENTS ON SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

Supervised Recreation

Of late years there has been a remarkable growth of appreciation of the effect of physical well-being on every phase of social intercourse, from team work on the field to the spiritual communion with each other and with God which Paul evidently had in mind when laboring that the Saints might have "fellowship one with another." Reaction to this question was:

Unqualified approval of supervised recreation .....	56
Conditional approval .....	5
Replies expressing an opinion .....	61

It will be noted immediately that no one has expressed disapproval of supervised recreation. Judging from the replies received, we are more united in our approval of this aspect of reunion work than on any other under discussion. The trend of the conditions mentioned was toward the restriction of recreation within its own domain, so that it shall not become primary but shall continue to serve as a means to the end of total good.

Young People's Prayer Meetings

These meetings have become such a feature of our reunions that it is difficult to imagine a reunion of any magnitude in which they do not play an important part. Evidently the reunion workers as a whole have come to rely on these meetings for inspiration and power, and from the replies received it would seem that the question is not whether we shall have young people's prayer meetings, but how many shall we have, and under what conditions? Here are the summarized replies:

Unqualified statement as beneficial .....	55
Conditionally beneficial .....	3
Questionable .....	2
Conditionally harmful .....	1
Opinions expressed .....	61

Special Services for Children

The direct question as to whether special services for children are beneficial did not evoke many varying answers. It may be that here, too, the question is one of the extent of these services, as is the case with the prayer meetings.

Unqualified statement as beneficial .....	56
Conditionally beneficial .....	2
Danger of becoming mechanical .....	1

Special Reunion Themes

The practice of using a special theme for a reunion had its origin in the desire for some direction in mental and spiritual preparation by those about to participate, and a parallel desire that each reunion might be given a unique character by reason of its contribution to the solution of some specific problem or to the attainment of some specific ideal. Reunion themes are favored by some of our best-known workers, and opposed by some of those who have not had such general experience or experience with such large gatherings. This does not necessarily mean that themes are approved for all reunions by those having the greatest experience, but possibly that while they are advantageous to the successful conduct of a large reunion they are not so well suited to smaller gatherings. The note of warning is against mechanical adherence to the theme. Perhaps this can be interpreted as advice to leaders, or a suggestion that themes are not easily adaptable. The replies may be stated:

Unqualifiedly beneficial .....	40
Conditionally beneficial .....	10
Harmful .....	3
Miscellaneous suggestions .....	4
Opinions expressed .....	57

Special Daily Topics

This is an individualization of the thought governing the use of special reunion themes, and the same criticisms appear to apply here as in the other case. The warning is again against mechanism and consequent monotony:

Unqualifiedly beneficial .....	36
Conditionally beneficial .....	8
Harmful .....	3
Miscellaneous comments .....	5
Opinions expressed .....	52

Round Tables and Problems Meetings

These, too, have won their permanent place in our reunions. While they are unanimously approved, stress is laid in all the conditional approvals on the need for efficient direction and appreciation of their relation to the other exercises:

Unqualifiedly beneficial .....	51
Conditionally beneficial .....	10
Opinions expressed .....	61

Lectures on Special Subjects

Exactly the same remarks apply to the inclusion of lectures on special subjects in the program of the reunion. The program must be well-balanced. The leader or organizer who permits any fad or vagary of his own to lead to the inclusion of too much of one aspect of the reunion activities risks failure.

Beneficial .....	53
Conditionally beneficial .....	7
Opinions expressed .....	60

Literary and Musical Programs

The warning here is against "showing off," rivalry, and disproportionate attention. The tone of the literary and musical activities of reunions evidently needs to be raised. Here is the list:

Beneficial .....	47
Conditionally beneficial .....	10
Value dependent on time and frequency .....	3
Miscellaneous .....	2
Opinions expressed .....	62

HOW CAN WE IMPROVE ALONG THESE LINES?

Financing

Opinions here are fairly evenly divided. Apparently the replies reflect the systems in operation in the places in which those replying have labored, showing that here specialization is demanded to secure helpful data; or where the best means are conditioned by local practices or surroundings. Here are some of the means suggested:

Budget apportionments .....	9
Individual offerings and donations .....	7
Collections from those attending .....	7
Per capita subscriptions from district .....	5
Proceeds from the dining tent .....	3
Miscellaneous .....	6
Total suggestions .....	37

Arrangement of Dates

In the past individual committees have fixed the date of their reunion without regard to the dates of similar gatherings throughout the church, and have then sent in their requests for the assistance of one or more of the general officers of the church. The endeavor to comply with these requests has cost the church many hundreds of dollars through the necessity of doubling back, and even in spite of this only a small proportion of the requests have been filled, although these few months find the leading quorums working day and night. Apparently few had considered this phase of organization, since so few replies were received:

Arrange dates by agreement between local and general reunion committees, or by general committee only	14
Miscellaneous suggestions	8
Total suggestions	22

Character of Services

Almost every one replying has a different idea regarding the character of the services in an ideal reunion. However, some of the suggestions were decidedly helpful. We have grouped them:

Diversified	5
Spiritual—educational—entertaining	4
Miscellaneous	13
Suggestions tendered	22

Missionary Work

The replies to this question showed differences of opinion regarding the purpose of reunion work. Maybe the purpose is different in different parts of the country. Speaking generally, reunions are for the upbuilding of the work, and this building means strengthening local forces in some parts of the country and gathering converts in others. No one advises against holding missionary services, in fact everyone appears to recognize that a well-balanced local program demands that attention be given the missionary aspect of the work, but some advise against giving missionary work undue prominence. The replies were difficult to analyze, but here is the list:

Hold missionary services at night	9
Limit the number of missionary speakers	5
(These evidently approve.)
Put the main emphasis on local development	4
Miscellaneous	9
Opinions expressed	27

Cooperation With General Committee

Very few could suggest ways of cooperating with the general committee, and perhaps this is explained by the haziness apparent in the replies received regarding the functions of this committee; haziness which possibly extended to those who did not reply. In our opinion the function of the committee is to advise the Presidency regarding suitable allocation of the various general officers of the church, to seek to unify and strengthen the forces throughout the church, making for successful activity, and to advise and counsel with local reunion committees. Suggestions received were as follows:

Cooperate with the committee on dates, plans, etc.	4
Report needs—speakers, dates, etc.	6

Make early arrangements	4
Miscellaneous	2
Suggestions received	16

HOW LARGE SHALL REUNIONS BE?

Apparently the replies to this question were almost entirely conditioned by the experience of the person making the reply. Roughly, we are evenly divided. The considerations entering into a discussion of this question are primarily:

- Presence of efficient leaders in small districts.
- Location of the Saints:
  - Could many of them afford to travel the extra distances required by combination of reunions?
- Possession of a permanent reunion ground.
- Centralization round some historic spot.
  - Kirtland, Nauvoo, etc.
- Purpose of the reunion:
  - If for missionary work, smaller reunions appear to be preferred.
  - If for local development, larger reunions are in demand.

The voting was as follows:

For small reunions	31
For larger reunions	19
For large or small according to the local circumstances	6
Opinions expressed	56

HOW SHALL WE SERVE MEALS?

Everyone has an opinion about meals. They are varied, and the success of each depends on efficient organization, but the one plan is evidently more popular than all others combined.

Cafeteria	35

Family style	10
Free	4
Miscellaneous opinions	3
Preferences expressed	65

SHALL WE USE TENTS OR AUDITORIUMS?

Of those replying, thirty-three used tents, and fifteen auditoriums, but this is not a very valuable criterion since several connected with the same reunion may have replied and so duplicated or triplicated the reckoning for that reunion. However, the reasons given for the preferences expressed are quite enlightening and are presented here:

Preferring Tents:
More comfortable	7
Transportation easy	3
(This only pertinent if grounds not permanent.)
More seasonable	2
Miscellaneous	4
Reasons given	16
Preferring Auditorium:
Independent of the weather	15

More comfortable .....	4
More secure .....	3
Miscellaneous .....	3
Reasons given .....	25

Those advocating the use of auditoriums gave several reasons for their choice. Those advocating tents appeared to think that no reasons were necessary. It would seem that if the weather is fairly reliable, and there is no permanent ground, tents are slightly preferable.

PERMANENT REUNION GROUNDS

About eleven out of fifty reunions have permanent grounds. The purchase of a permanent place of meeting is of such importance that it should never be undertaken without communicating with the general reunion committee, for a number of factors will enter, and on these points the committee have information more easily available than is usual with local committees.

SUMMARY

Summarizing this summary, we would say:

Prepare in time:

Arrange dates and speakers in conjunction with the general committee.

Organize fully, but do not overorganize.

Work out a program and revise frequently and carefully and after consultation with others.

Give careful thought to your location, the use of tents or auditoriums, probable weather conditions, etc.

Remember that your reunion is distinctive, and keep before you continually your specific needs.

Leadership:

Must be both prepared and consecrated.

Must set the example in deportment, being in all instances such as will command respect.

Young people:

Need their own prayer meetings.

Need supervised recreation.

Need educational opportunities.

Need to have due regard for the rights of others.

In the conduct of the reunion:

Avoid excessive emphasis.

Do not try to crowd in too much.

Use themes if these will help your campers.

Do not preach too much. Give your departments a chance. Educate along the lines you need in your district.

Utilize your missionary opportunities. Avoid too many speakers at missionary services.

Keep your literary and musical standard high.

Financing:

Must be such as will enable the greatest possible number to spend the greatest possible time at the reunion.

Will differ according to conditions.

Meals:

Can only be well prepared and efficiently served after careful planning.

This is a vital factor and should receive early attention.

The principles of reunion success appear to center around three words: Consecration, organization, equipoise.

The complete analysis is being used by a number of our reunion experts to aid them in the preparation of a reunion handbook which we hope to have ready for publication within a short time. It will be a symposium embodying the best information yet available, and when completed will be about the size of the Young People's Convention Handbook issued last year. Look out for the announcements of publication.

An Intellectual Triumph

By Paul M. Hanson

One of the greatest intellectual triumphs of modern times was the deciphering of the Egyptian hieroglyphics inscribed on the Rosetta Stone, now in the British Museum, London.

This stone, which is of black basalt, was found at Rosetta, near the mouth of the Nile, in 1799, by an officer who accompanied Napoleon on his Egyptian expedition. From Rosetta it derived its name.

It well deserves the prominent place given it in the world's most wonderful museum. It is on the ground floor. Upon entering the building and after passing to the left through the Roman Gallery, one sees it in the middle of the floor near the entrance to the Egyptian Galleries. This stone in its present state is about three feet nine inches in length, two feet four inches in width, and one foot in thickness.

The inscription on it is in two languages, Egyptian and Greek. The Egyptian portion appears in two forms: in the character of hieroglyphics, a picture form of writing which was used for sacred, state, and ceremonial documents; and in the demotic character that was used by the common people, which was an abbreviated form of the cursive or hieratic form of hieroglyphic writing. The remaining portion is in Greek.

Hieroglyph comes from the Greek hieros, sacred, glypho, carve.

The text consists of fourteen lines of the hieroglyphic, thirty-two lines of demotic, and fifty-four lines of Greek.

The ancient Egyptians employed for their sacred writing pictures of men, birds, animals, and other objects, and continued so to do with some modifications until after the birth of Christ. The key to the meaning of these inscriptions was lost in the early part of the Christian era. The only information available was, therefore, through classical and early authors. Scholars attempted in later centuries to find the meaning of the picture writing, but without success.

Greek Translation

The Greek on the Rosetta Stone was translated and found to contain a decree promulgated B. C. 195 by the priesthood of Memphis in honor of Ptolemy V, Epiphanes, king of Egypt. In the beginning of the writing a number of titles of Ptolemy V are employed. Reference is made to his love for Egypt and the Egyptians. Various benefits which he conferred upon his country are enumerated, such as gifts of money and endowments to temples, forgiveness of debts to the government, and release of prisoners who had been in jail for years. Provision is made by the council of priests of Egypt for honors to be paid to the statue of Ptolemy, which was to be set up in every temple of Egypt. An annual festival was appointed, and copies of the decree were ordained to be engraved in stone in hieroglyphics, demotic, and Greek, and set up in all the temples of certain orders, which were to be placed by the side of the statue of Ptolemy. This stone in the museum had been set up in the temple near Rosetta.

Knowledge of Coptic

To translate the Egyptian language, a knowledge of Coptic was necessary. The Copts were Egyptians who embraced Christianity at Alexandria, likely after the preaching of Saint Mark, and the translations of the Holy Scriptures made by them from the Greek into their own language was in the Coptic. The knowledge of the Coptic has never been lost, and a comparatively large literature in manuscripts has ever been available for study.

Doctor Thomas Young, in the early part of the nineteenth century, was the first to discover and apply the phonetic principle in reading the hieroglyphs. Various scholars believed that in the oblong rings or cartouches, was a royal name. This was proved when the names Ptolemy and Cleopatra were successfully deciphered. These names are also in a bilingual inscription on an obelisk at Philæ. It was known from the Greek and demotic, which were regarded as a translation of the hieroglyphic characters, that the two names appeared several times in the inscription. Thus from these names was secured the first clue to the identification of the letters of the hieroglyphic alphabet.

J. F. Champollion, early in the nineteenth century, studied the Coptic language and literature until he became an authority on the subject. This knowledge enabled him to work out the phonetic value of many syllabic signs, and to give correct readings to many pictorial characters, the meaning of which was made known by the Greek text.

Alphabet Formed

He correctly deciphered the hieroglyphic characters of the names and titles of most of the Roman Emperors. In 1822 he formulated a demotic and hieroglyphic alphabet, which is practically the one used by all later Egyptologists.

This stone, deposited in the British Museum in 1802, proved to be a priceless key which led to the unlocking of the meaning of the Egyptian hieroglyphic writing. Its history illustrates that the value of archaeological relics lies not in the objects themselves, but in their interpretation.

As a result of this long step forward, there has been gained an intimate knowledge of the literature, customs, religion, and life of one of the greatest of the ancient empires, the origin of which reaches into the mists of antiquity.

Surely the truth is more interesting than theories and imagination.

Tithing As Observed by the Ancient Nations

By Bishop Edward Ingham

Tithing is not a modern institution. Among ancient peoples sacrificial gifts frequently assumed the character of a tribute paid to the deity in acknowledgment of the blessings bestowed upon the land in the form of abundant crops and the increase of flocks and herds which were attributed to his providential oversight. However inexactly it may often have been paid, the proportion of one part in ten seems to have been accepted in many ancient nations as the normal measure of sacred tribute paid from the gains of husbandry, trade, or even of war.

Tithe as a Tax

The tithe was not only sacred in character but appears to have been also a common form of tax upon the produce of land or other revenues for civic purposes. It was exacted on agricultural products and flocks by Hebrew kings and on imports by monarchs of Babylon, and still forms an important element in the fiscal system of Mohammedan states.

Its special home was in the East, although we find it in Greece and in Sicily, as well as in Asia under the Roman Empire. The proportion of one to ten was so commonly taken in antiquity as the basis of ad valorem taxes that any such tax or tribute might be called a tithe.

Caring for the Poor

Under the Mosaic economy, as set forth in Deuteronomy, we find not only the annual tithe required, but reference is also made to the triennial "whole" or "full tithe" which was primarily intended for the care of the poor and appears to be an innovation for this purpose. We find, however, that the Levites also participated in this triennial tithe, as, instead of remaining in the hands of the tithepapers to be doled out in charity, it was later proposed to store it in the temple. This latter plan, however, appears to have been very imperfectly carried out.

The provision of regular support for the priests and Levites, the ministers of the public ritual, received special attention from Ezra and Nehemiah who contended that the tithe was a tribute to the Levites, who in turn were to pay a tithe of it to the priests.

Offering the First Fruits

The tithe is probably nothing more than the old offering of first-fruits made definite as regards quantity. In the oldest Hebrew legislation, apart from the consecration of the firstlings, the amount of the sacrificial gifts to Jehovah is not fixed. In Deuteronomy, however, the tithe or tenth of corn, wine, and oil is required in addition to the firstlings of the flock and the herd.

In Genesis we have the account of Abraham paying tithes unto Melchisedec and also of Jacob making a vow to pay tithes on all the material possessions that God should bless him with, in the land whither he was going: a vow similar to that of the Arab, who, however, usually honored it more in the breach than in the observance.

Under the old Mosaic system, God's altar was to the Jew the central focus of all gifts; it was associated with his worship, and the gift laid upon it acquired a new dignity by so being deposited thereupon. The gift being devoted to a cause that had divine sanction became ennobled and exalted thereby. Association gave dignity to the offering. This is what Jesus had in mind, no doubt, when he said: "The altar sanctifieth the gift." Hence it is that giving becomes an act of worship when it has to do with the altar.

Generosity in Giving

When God's work appeals for aid, should there ever be a reluctance to respond or a doling out of a mere pittance? Is it not a shame and a disgrace that there ever should be a lack of meat in God's house?

Those who learn to give on gospel principles learn also to love to give. Such gifts become abundant and systematic and self-denying.

Once it was necessary to proclaim to the people of God that what they had brought was "more than enough" and to "restrain them from bringing." Should not that always be the case?

DEPARTMENTAL

The Status of the Departments

Just what is the status of the Departments of Sunday School, Women, and Recreation and Expression? This question has been asked, and the superintendents of departments think it is wise to join in a statement of their official opinion of this matter.

A Bit of History

1. The Woman's Auxiliary in its General Convention of 1920 passed the following resolution:

Having in view the necessity of making changes to meet new conditions of church work, and to complete the transition of the women's organization from a separate society to a department of the church, we see that the ultimate abolishing of the constitution under which we have been working will be inevitable, and inasmuch as some changes in the officers seem advisable now, we authorize the executive committee of the department to make such changes in the governing rules as developments demand in harmony with the church authorities. And in order to further facilitate the work of the executive in meeting the demands likely to be made upon our organization, we authorize our general director to appoint such officers as she may consider necessary in place of the present corps.

2. The Religio Department in its General Convention of 1920 voted to adopt the recommendation of the superintendent of the department:

We suggest dispensing with the present constitution as a separate rule of action and the incorporation into the general church law such necessary provisions as may govern this department.

3. The General Sunday School Association in its General Convention of 1922 voted to concur in the recommendation of the general superintendent, and asked him to recommend plans as soon as possible. His recommendation was as follows:

It would seem to your superintendent that the Sunday school is an integral part of the general church, and that rather than set itself up as a self-governing body it should not think to form any new constitution but submit itself to the control of the General Conference of the church. We would respectfully urge that this be the action of this body. If such action were taken it would throw Sunday school business on the General Conference floor, where we believe it should be.

Effects of Acts of Convention

The acts of the convention cited above are interpreted by us as having the following effect upon departmental administration:

1. They placed the responsibility of the work to be accomplished by the departments and the church upon all who were the constituent members of the church. The members composing the groups—the local, the district, or the general organization—could pass legislation for the respective departmental activities within the respective groups—local, district, or general—as was deemed wise and for the best good of the group as a whole. To illustrate:

- a. The General Conference could pass legislation affecting the general departmental work;
  - b. District or stake conferences could pass legislation affecting the work of the departments within their various territories in harmony with rights of legislation that were in the province of district or stake control;
  - c. Branches in their business meetings could pass such legislation affecting the departments within the branch as was in the province of the branch so to do.
2. It did not follow from this that these various church legislative bodies—general, district, and stake, or branch—would automatically take over all the distinctive legislative functions of these departments.
3. It is the privilege of the people comprising the district and stake or branch business meetings to say just how much of the business of the departments will be transferred from the separate business meetings of the departments to the business meeting of the church itself.
4. It was the sincere desire to be of assistance in these matters that led the departmental superintendents to unite in sending out in word-picture an analysis of four typical forms of local organization already in use in various parts of the country as forms of relationships that might exist between local departments and the branch. One form—Form Five—was the only new form of local organization outlined. Form Five is an ideal that presented a more simplified, coordinated organization when the proper material for conducting the same could be had. An article setting forth these plans of local organization was issued in the HERALD of November 8, 1922. It was the intent of the article to show that it was optional—that it rested with the people of each branch or district or stake to say just what should be done as to local organization. It advised ways and means whereby this might best be done. In a nutshell, our advice in that article was for branches not to take over the business of the departments until the departments had so voted, and until the district superintendents of said departments had given their consent. Our advice was not always followed. The branches and districts which did not follow our advice as to the ways and means of transferring this business were perfectly within their rights. Church legislative bodies could take over the business of the departments directly, if they chose, without asking the consent of respective departments, and such was done in several instances.

5. These acts of the General Convention did not destroy the identity of the departments. The departmental organization, with the exception of where its business could be done, whether in separate departmental business meetings or in one business meeting comprising departments and church, remained identically as it was. Its officers, general, district, and stake, or branch, were the same as they always were. Their constitutional rights and responsibilities, and ways and means of electing officers were exactly the same after these acts of the General Convention as before.

As so far explained, the departmental organization remains as it was prior to the General Conference of 1923.

An Analysis of Nomination of Departmental Officers in the Light of the Ruling of the Conference of 1923

The act of last General Conference with reference to the nomination of officers, we would interpret as applying to the departments. The nomination of departmental officers for locals, districts, or stakes, and for the general church is a right of the membership, but the respective presiding officers also have the right to make nominations. The body may delegate its right to the presiding officers and not use it if it so desires.

Local Departmental Superintendents

As applied to any local department, this would mean that the members of the body having jurisdiction have the right to nominate a local departmental superintendent. It would also mean that the president of the branch, or the respective district departmental superintendent, acting singly or conjointly, can place a nomination for the said local departmental superintendent before the branch business meeting, or if the business of the said department of electing its officers is still done in its own separate business meeting, the above-mentioned officers—branch president or respective district departmental superintendent, acting singly or conjointly—have the right to place nominations before such business meeting.

Assistant Local Departmental Officers

Members of the body having jurisdiction have the right to make nominations for assistant elective officers. Also, when elected the superintendent of said local department and the branch president acting singly or conjointly, can place before the proper business meeting nominations for the assistant elective officers of the respective department.

District Departmental Superintendents

As applied to districts, this would mean that members of the body having jurisdiction have a right to nominate a district departmental superintendent. It would also mean that the district president and the general superintendent, singly or conjointly, can place before the district or stake business meeting having jurisdiction, nominations for the district or stake elective departmental officers.

Assistant District Departmental Officers

In districts as in locals, members of the body having jurisdiction have the right to make nominations for assistant elective officers. Also, when elected, the district or stake departmental superintendent and the district president, either singly or conjointly, can place before the business meeting nominations for the assistant elective officers of the respective departments.

Recommendations and Suggestions

As general officers of the departments, we feel responsible for the conduct of departmental work throughout the church. We desire therefore to make the following suggestions and recommendations:

1. We wish to reiterate our advice:
  - a. That church jurisdictions should not take over the departmental business until the departments have expressed themselves as favoring such changes.
  - b. That such church jurisdictions have the right, however, to take over such business directly by virtue of the acts of the General Conventions cited above.
  - c. That as fast as possible there be an amalgamation of the business of the departments in the one church business meeting in the various jurisdictions.
  - d. That departmental superintendents act together with their respective church president in placing their nominations for assistant elective officers before the business meetings having jurisdiction in order that there may be an intelligent division of the work among the available workers.
2. We wish to recommend further that in as far as is consistent with the desires and needs of the people composing the group affected:
  - a. That the pastor and the superintendents of departments work together as coordinating officers in all affairs pertaining to all activities carried on by the several departments represented in the local church. We feel that this group of workers or leaders will, by their conferences, come to understand each other more thoroughly and be better able to work together more harmoniously than when each works in his own way for his own ends.

- b. That this committee or cabinet, get together at least once a month for the discussion of matters of mutual interest pertaining to the work under their care.
- c. That when elected or appointed such additional workers as Superintendent of Cradle Roll Department, Superintendent of Home Department, Leader of Young Women, Boy Scout Master, etc., work under the direction of the above mentioned group or cabinet. This arrangement will, we are confident, make for a more efficient administration of all the activities of the group.

The above is the system of organization under which the Presidency and general superintendents are working at the present time. Under this plan, conferences are held frequently and consideration given in turn to the particular work of each department as such relates to the work of the other departments as well as to the program of the church as a whole.

Any questions that you may wish to ask in regard to departmental organization and work will receive immediate attention if addressed to The Departments, Lamon, Iowa.

Entertainments and Socials in Our Churches

From a report of the Bishopric presented at a conference in Zion, January 7, 1924.

[During the first quarterly conference in Zion of the current year, Bishop J. A. Becker, representing the Presiding Bishopric, read a report which appears in part herewith. It explains many questions that arise from time to time in the branches, and because of its general nature we are sharing it with our readers.—EDITORS.]

Departmental Budgets

By action of the conference in Zion our office [bishopric] was made the depository for the funds of the various departments of the church work. Such funds should be reported to our office at least monthly. Each department should be operating under a budget and the officers be authorized to draw on the funds as per budget. No officer or committee of any department should want to go beyond the budget allowance or make any special effort to raise a fund outside of the budget without the approval of the department for which the fund is to be used. In this as well as in all other work in the center place there should be the closest cooperation between department and general officers.

The question as to the use of our church buildings has been discussed at great length among the membership, and varied conclusions have been reached. It is difficult to lay down a hard and fixed rule that shall govern universally in the church. Local conditions must be taken into consideration. However, the conditions in the center place are so nearly uniform that general principles may be safely adhered to without doing injustice to any particular group.

Entertainments

Sunday school and branch entertainments: The young, middle-aged, and aged are alike under obligations to shun the evils of the world, and adhere to the teachings of the word of God. They are not their own, but having been "bought with a price," they belong to Christ. That which is immoral in its tendency, or that which will in any wise interfere with the performance of duty as presented to us in the sacred word, or that which tends to prevent us from rising to that high standard of thought and action to which all the Saints of God should aspire, should be excluded from the entertainments held in different branches of the church. And we believe that the enactment of tragedies should be avoided, and that purely frivolous display, or farces which embody no moral, as a prominent feature, are improper.

While in the very nature of the case, it is difficult, if not impracticable, for us to denounce in a wholesale manner any class of performances known by a specific name, yet we may safely condemn all that we are unable to harmonize with the teachings of the sacred books of the church; that is, the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. That which is harmless and pure in its character and tendency may safely be admitted; that which is not should be excluded. The holding of Sunday school and church entertainments for laudable purposes, when of a proper kind, are not only permissible, but commendable. The exercises, however, should be of such a character as will tend to develop the latent powers of mind in the young, and those of riper years, imparting broader views of morality and social enjoyment, thus imparting that innocent pleasure which inspires those who possess it to reach still higher after that which is elevating and instructive. We are further of the opinion that those who are in charge of Sunday schools and branches where these entertainments are to be had, may with proper care, be qualified to choose between that which is innocent and beneficial, and that which is not. All should so live as to enjoy that measure of the Spirit of truth which will prevent them from indulging in that which would lead them away from God.—General Conference Resolution, Number 369.

Socials

God's plan for financing his work is by "tithing, surplus, freewill offerings, and consecrations," (Doctrine and Covenants 129:8) but there are many ways in which the members can earn, either individually or collectively, the funds with which to make these contributions. The church should not undertake to finance itself in any other way than that presented by the Lord. For example, the church need not sell aprons to erect a church building, but any member can do so and his contribution will be an acceptable offering. If two or more join in the effort, it is none the less acceptable. Any line of work, in which an individual can conscientiously engage for his own benefit, may also be conducted by him for the benefit of the church.

Bazaars and suppers may be conducted by members, groups, or organized classes in their own name and the benefit be given to the church subject to the law governing in temporal things. It would be well if we had a special building in each group or district in which such affairs might be conducted. Until such time we must do the best we can and use such places as we have available, including our church buildings.

The very nature of our work makes it essential that the closest cooperation exist between those conducting socials and entertainments and those in charge of the work where such affairs are conducted. Before proceeding, the programs should be submitted for approval. Anything of a doubtful character should be eliminated.

Selling at auction should not be engaged in at any time or place. As generally conducted, it does not give those bidding an opportunity to exercise their better judgment which frequently brings unfavorable results.

Action of General Conference makes the First Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric the presiding authorities in Zion. They have expressed their approval of the general plan as herein stated.

Application for the use of the property should be made to the pastor in charge of the congregation and caretaker, who, after consultation, may grant the request.

In the matter of the rendition of programs or entertainments where an admission fee is to be charged, the request should be presented to the presiding authorities in Zion in each instance for their approval or disapproval.

With the proper cooperation these entertainments and socials may be utilized for the benefit of the individual members, as well as for the groups as a whole.

Kentucky now has a State director of music. The creation of this office by the State superintendent of public instruction is the result of the action of the 1922 legislature, which passed a bill giving music a place in the course of study for all Kentucky schools.

Home Building

PART XII

[Miss Ruby Williamson writes on "Play" in this number of home building. She is experienced as a teacher of children, being a teacher in the Independence, Missouri, public schools, superintendent of the Primary Department of the First Independence Sunday School, and author of several quarters of the primary lessons for Sunday school use. The article in next week's HERALD will also be written by Miss Williamson.—EDITORS.]

References

If the series of articles on home building is to be studied in class or by the individual, a textbook is recommended, Mothercraft Manual, by Mary L. Read, Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, price $2.10 postpaid. Other references may be cited at the end of each chapter of the outline, which follows each article.

Play

By Ruby M. Williamson

What is play? "Play is spontaneous self-activity." Froebel tells us that play is the highest phase of child development, and that "it is the self-active representation of the inner, from inner necessity and impulse." "The plays of childhood are the germinal leaves of all later life; for the whole man is developed and shown in these." The young child instinctively imitates the activities of his elders. We call this play, but these same activities later become work. Play is nature's method of training for the responsibilities of maturity in human beings as well as among the animals.

Recognition of Play by Education

Early educators soon learned the value of play in the education of children. Many of the ideas of such educators as Plato, Comenius, Rousseau, Locke, and Rabelais have been used by later educators as a foundation upon which modern education has been built. Pestalozzi and Froebel were the first modern educators really to utilize play in the education of little children. Look where we may, we see the influence of play in the education of the youth.

Relation of Play to Work

When we watch children at play we do not realize the amount of energy they are putting into it. Neither do we stop to consider their motives and interests. This play leads into work that requires the utmost of their physical strength, endurance, and skill, and the greatest exercise of imagination, initiative, judgment, and patience in solving problems. The so-called work that the adult performs, when it is an enjoyable task, is really "grown-up" play. It is the interest in the end sought that makes the task easy to perform.

The child must perform many duties in his home, both for himself and his household as well as for the community. Without an interest in such the result will not be satisfactory. Imagination and play are required to make the doing more effective. Very early in life the child may be led to feel his responsibility in his small home community.

All learning should be introduced through play. In the schoolroom we find pupils who are unhappy, disinterested, and inattentive, which is proof that there is some fault in the educational system, when it has not discovered the instinctive interests of the child and his natural way of learning. The same may be said of the home. When a child does not respond to the parents' idea of work and play, something is wrong and a new method of dealing with the child should be sought. This may be done largely by studying the child's instinctive habits, activities, and interests.

Equipment Necessary for Play

Every child should have a playground near the house so that the mother may closely observe her child's activities and those of his playmates. This playground should have some shade for the warm days and open spaces for the sunshine in winter. A sand pile should be included, as well as swings, playhouse, houses for pets, and other apparatus that the family can afford.

For rainy weather there should be a playroom where the child may feel the principal care and responsibility. Mary L. Read gives an excellent description of a playroom and its furnishing in chapter thirteen, Mothercraft Manual. She also presents some good thoughts on the subject of children's parties.

Play Interests and Activities

The type of play varies with the age of the child. It begins with infancy and should be developed throughout the entire life of the child.

(a) Play interests from infancy to four years are sensory and motor activities, individual play, toys, simple, imaginative, dramatic play, and quiet games in preference to more active ones.

(b) From four to six years:

Sensory and motor activities.

Dramatic imitation, industries, animals.

Beginning of unorganized group play.

Beginning interest in circle games, singing games, traditional games.

Finger plays.

Climbing, jumping, sliding, swinging, etc.

Handicrafts.

Pouring, weighing, measuring.

Care of garden and pets.

Simple games.

Play with words.

Experimenting with colors.

Exploring.

(c) From six to ten years:

Sensory interests less marked.

More complicated games.

Running.

Ball play.

Dancing, balancing, swimming, skating, climbing, swinging, etc.

Dramatic play.

Handicrafts.

Decorating.

Weighing, measuring, counting.

Housework.

Rummaging, hoarding.

Collecting interest strong.

Gardening, care of pets.

Games of mental alertness.

Play with words.

Measuring of strength, wit, patience, personality, will, with others.

Observing industries.

Exploring.

Expression of natural ability in special phases of art.

Retired Missionary Again Answers Call

EL RENO, OKLAHOMA, January 14.—My companion and I came here in response to an invitation of the First Presidency to answer a call for pastoral work. Still having an earnest desire to labor for the cause we love more and more, we met the difficulties peculiar to making such a change, and against protests on the part of dear friends, we came.

By the great kindness of Brother and Sister Thomas Mc-Kevit we were taken in their auto from Independence to Kansas City to take the 11.30 p. m. train. By the kindness of our dear brother and neighbor, J. H. Scott, and group twenty contributing, we were enabled to have a berth in a sleeper, which was a great help, as my companion is in poor health. We heartily appreciate such kindnesses. "By this shall ye know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another," says Jesus.

We arrived on December 28, two hours late, and were met at the train by Brother G. C. Lewis, who knew us by spiritual discernment, we being strangers in the flesh. He took us in his automobile to his home, where we were made welcome.

Time has not permitted us to see much of the outlook, but we discern a field for active work in feeding the flock.

We enjoyed (?) a cold spell of 3 below zero soon after coming here, but when we learned of 15 below in Zion we felt fortunate.

El Reno is a well-built city of good brick business houses, two principal streets, and business well represented. There are about a hundred members in the branch, with branches roundabout. We see a cosmopolitan people here with a sprinkling of Lamanites.

Sunday, January 13, was a very profitable day on which Sunday school was held and two sermons delivered, one on "The business of angels" and the other in answer to the question, "Whose pulpit would Jesus occupy if he visited El Reno?" A Religio was organized at 6 o'clock, the work being entered into with great zest. The quarterlies will be used.

With faces to the front, we expect success.

J. M. TERRY.

Cold Weather Handicaps Missionary Efforts

DEER LODGE, MONTANA, January 3.—While at conference I bought one of the conference pictures, and I have been carrying it with me in the field and showing it to the Saints and preaching them a sermon on what I saw and heard and felt while at conference. It has put life into the Saints wherever I have been, so I intend to keep it up wherever I go.

The last two months have been very pleasant ones for me. The good spirit that was manifest at the close of our General Conference has continued with me, and I have been preaching with fine liberty. It has been quite common to see the whole congregation in tears, and I thank the good Lord for his goodness to the church and to me. I want to thank the First Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric for their nice Christmas letter. As quick as I got home my wife handed it to me, and as I began reading it the good Spirit accompanied the reading of it and for some time after.

At the present time it is hard to hold meetings, it is so cold. It has been thirty-two below zero; and as most people travel nowadays by car, they are afraid to let them stand out; but the few days I am around home I am putting in some of my time visiting the sick and the Saints. Yesterday I visited Sister Jenkins, who has been in the church over seventy years. She is ninety-three years old, and was in Nauvoo when Joseph was killed. I am also living right in a settlement of the Morrisites; some of them have been baptized in the recent past, and a number more are interested in our work and keep asking me to visit them, so I will do that during the cold weather.

Praying that God may continue to bless you in your labors of love.

GEORGE W. THORBURN.

Topical Prayer Service Adopted at Barberton

BARBERTON, OHIO, January 11.—Regular services are held here each Sunday: Sunday school at 9.30, preaching or social service at 11, Religio at 5.30, and preaching at 7.30 p. m. The senior Bible class has been changed to a Doctrine and Covenants class and all seem interested in studying it. There is also a fine Bible class of young people. Attendance at morning preaching and social service is fair, but there is a good attendance at Religio where the Book of Mormon is now being studied.

There has not been much interest in the midweek prayer service but plans are being made to change this service, which, it is hoped, will stimulate more interest. Last Wednesday evening the subject, "Our gardens," was taken up and many good thoughts were expressed. The plan is to announce a subject from the stand each Sunday for the following Wednesday night.

The Sunday school gave a very fine Christmas program, many of the smaller children taking part. The most interesting and impressive part of the program was a play on the birth of Christ. Many outsiders were in attendance and all highly complimented the play.

Brother Patterson is expected here in the near future to make a missionary effort. The Saints expect to advertise extensively and help in every way they can.

After the business meeting on December 31 all went to the basement where the young people entertained with a watch party. At three minutes to twelve all went to the auditorium and sang the old year out and the new year in, singing the "Old, old path," which was followed by prayer.

Apostle Curtis Tells of Visit to London

LONDON, ENGLAND, December 26.—Brother Hanson and I left New York December 1, on the S. S. Samarita and landed at Liverpool the tenth at 9 o'clock a. m.

Our trip across the sea was very interesting indeed. Most of the time we had good weather considering the time of year. On Sunday morning, the ninth, we came in sight of land at Queenstown, Ireland, where we stopped to let off several passengers. The sun came up clear and bright, and as its rays fell on the hillsides of the coast of Ireland, it was wonderful to behold. Land looks good after seeing nothing but water for over a week.

On board the steamer we made many friends. Somehow we formed quite an attachment to our Irish acquaintances and were loath to part with them when we reached Queens-town. From Liverpool, where the autos, teams, and single carts drive on the left side of the street, and where the trams, usually called street cars at home, have an upstairs department in order to handle the crowd, we went to Manchester where we soon found quite a large number of Saints. Three branches are located here. Two of them have church buildings in which to meet, while one uses a rented hall.

Visit Manchester

This seems to be a wonderful country, and Manchester proved to be a great industrial city. As Christmas was approaching, the streets down town were crowded with people looking for presents.

It seems as though we are almost in another world, as things are so different here to what we have been used to; but an Englishman has just as good a right to drive on the left side of the street as the Yankee has to drive on the right side. The climate being so different to what we had been accustomed, we found it necessary to put on more clothing, as the weather was cold and damp. At once we got busy visiting Saints, and services at the different branches where we found the gospel was appreciated as well as in other lands. Many of the Saints here have relatives in the States and were anxious to learn of them.

Arrive at London

After a week in Manchester we came to the great, wonderful, and ancient city of London. On arriving at Saint Leonard's, which is the missionary headquarters, we found Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin, Brother and Sister Dan B. Sorden and baby Sorden, Brother and Sister John Foster, and Sister Kemp, the head cook. Brother Baldwin and wife have spent about three years in this mission and will be returning to the States in the spring. Brother Sorden and family are getting ready to go to Palestine and relieve Brother and Sister Harry Passman, who have been so long in that far-off land.

London and New York City are the largest cities in the world. As to which is the greater, it depends on to whom you are talking. Both are so wonderful and so great that it seems that the whole country round about has been turned into a city. London has many places of interest, such as Buckingham Palace where the king lives, Westminster Abbey, Saint Paul's Cathedral, and the Tower of London, the last-named an old prison where many were forced to spend their last days, where many distinguished personages were put to death, and where the crowns of different kings of England are on exhibition as well as many instruments of gold. These crowns are studded with many diamonds, called the "Stars of Africa." The crown of King George V contains 6,170 diamonds. Here is seen the largest diamond in the world 516½ carats. Here is seen the block and large ax weighing 70 pounds with which many were beheaded; also a large collection of arms, ancient and modern, large helmets, and armor both for men and horses, showing how wars were carried on centuries ago.

British Museum

The most wonderful and interesting building to me in London is the British Museum. The immense collections from different nations, past and present, are beyond my pen to describe. We looked, we gazed, we admired. We spent hours studying the large collections from Egypt, Greece, Rome, and other places. We attended different lectures on these countries, which were educational indeed. Here is the great Rosetta Stone, which when found and interpreted gave the key to the language of ancient Egypt.

The Christmas time is passing, and we will soon be attending the conferences of the Northern, Midland, and Southern Districts. Then to the Continent, where we wish to establish the angel's message more permanently.

The harvest is great, but the laborers are few. Let every one who will, thrust in his sickle and reap. J. F. CURTIS.

Department of Women at Centralia Serve Dinners Twice Weekly

CENTRALIA, WASHINGTON, January 5.—The Department of Women here has been active of late in raising funds for necessary repairs on the church. About a year ago, feeling the need of funds, the women of the branch began serving meals in the basement of the church. Some business people came to those dinners and requested us to come to the Community House and serve for them at 60 cents per plate, 40 plates guaranteed. We now serve the Kiwanis Club each Wednesday, 40 guarantee, and the Chamber of Commerce Thursday, 30 guarantee. We have served several other organizations occasionally at $1.50 a plate, 100 guaranteed.

We did not know until August that money used for repairing should be tithed, but since that time all money has been carefully tithed and we feel that we have been directed in this work.

Our record shows $1,361.83 paid into the branch besides help given to the poor, flowers sent to the sick, cooking utensils bought, tithing, Christmas offering, and pay for labor on a box for the cooking utensils.

The aim of the department for 1924 is to order some HERALDS for those unable to subscribe, study along health lines so as to be able to help those in need, and organize a juvenile department.

The officers for 1924 are: Ella Ward, president; Blanche Davis, vice president; Agnes Steel, treasurer; Nora Crown, secretary.

Conducts Services at Genoa

From a Letter to the First Presidency

GENOA, COLORADO, January 8.—As best I can do I am conducting services here in Genoa in regular order. We have a very fine little band of Saints; they are all good, wholesome characters, and they all seem willing to do what they can to further the work. To meet with the band of Saints takes me more than twenty-five miles, or more than fifty miles the round trip. I always feel blessed in meeting with the Saints and more than repaid for efforts made. Over the radio last Sunday evening we heard Elbert Smith's sermon on "The gathering" and enjoyed it very much. However, the singing we could not get very distinctly for some reason. By radio, therefore, we are placed in touch with the headquarters of the church. May the Master bless you for the great duties of your affairs, I pray.

J. R. SUTTON.

Nonmember Invites Saints to "Listen In"

DOW CITY, IOWA, January 9.—It is a real pleasure to read of the happenings in the different branches, especially those of this district. It was also interesting to learn that Brother W. A. Smith and his congregation at Mallard were enjoying the radio program broadcasted by the Omaha Saints at the same time the Dow City Saints were assembled at the home of one of the members listening in to the same program. When the Omaha Saints broadcasted their first program the Saints here were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brill, nonmembers, to listen in. About forty responded to the invitation and all appreciated the opportunity thus granted.

Elder E. R. Butterworth, who has presided over this branch for the past seven years, has moved his family to Lamoni where he has entered Graceland. This loss from our membership is greatly felt by all. Brother Talcott and family have moved to Chadron, Nebraska, which proves to be another loss to the branch, but others seem to take up the responsibility so the "ball rolls on."

Christmas Play

The Christmas playlet, "Wondrous night," was put on here at Christmas time and was a decided success. Much praise is due the committee in regard to the costumes and stage arrangements. The quartet work was carried by LaJune Griffin, Beatrice Griffin, Julian Pearsall, and Amherst Anderson, with Zita Clothier at the piano. The program was witnessed by a full house, and after Santa had arrived and distributed the presents from the tree, each one present received a treat from the Sunday school.

Brother J. L. Butterworth is now presiding over the branch. He is also in charge of the Sunday school. The Religion is in charge of Brother John Allen.

The Department of Women has a class in home hygiene which meets at the home of Sister Bertha Rolls every two weeks during the winter. This class is under the instruction of Sister Beatrice Griffin, and those who have been regular in attendance feel that much practical knowledge has been gained.

BESSIE PEARSALL.

Seventy Visits Saints at Sandpoint

SANDPOINT, IDAHO, January 6.—The Department of Women met January 2 for election of officers. Sister Ollie Bronson was reelected as superintendent; Sister Lovina Bennett, as assistant superintendent; Sister Grace Keisey, secretary and superintendent of the Home Department; Nettie Faulkinghor, friendly visitor; and Zella Deeter, cradle roll superintendent.

There are only a few Saints here, and no member of the priesthood, but we are buying a lot and expect to have a church some day. Meetings are now held at the homes of the Saints. In spite of discouraging times, the Saints have had hours of rejoicing, when the Lord spoke telling us that he was pleased with the efforts at this place and that if we would go on he would bless us and more would come into the fold and a branch would be established.

Elder Daniel Macgregor visited us at Christmas time and delivered two fine sermons, strengthening our faith and giving encouragement.

ZELLA DEETER.

Church Papers Are Only Sermons

REEVES, LOUISIANA, January 6.—We are cut off from the church privileges as my wife and I are the only Latter Day Saints in this part of the State. We are therefore renewing our subscription for the Herald so we may read what others are doing.

Many people here do not know of the gospel. We would be glad to welcome any of our missionaries in our home and do all we could to help in spreading the work.

We would enjoy hearing from Saints anywhere as we are almost "spiritually starved" for want of church privileges. Pray for us that we may remain faithful.

R. E. BANKESTER.

Aged Saint Killed in Automobile Accident

LOS ANGELES CALIFORNIA, January 1.—The Saints were saddened at the death of aged Sister Bergerson, who was struck by an automobile on Christmas night. She died a few hours after the accident.

A number of years ago she lost her right arm by cancer and during the past two years was the victim of three automobile accidents. The fourth one was fatal. Sister Berger-son was a widow.

The Sunday school appropriated funds for a floral wreath at the funeral held December 31.

Services on Sunday, December 30, at 11 a. m. were devoted to preaching by Apostle John W. Rushton.

Report Made of Work in Utah District

From a Letter to the First Presidency

OGDEN, UTAH, January 9.—Acting as district president out here in the Utah District, I feel that I have been rather dilatory about reporting the district work to you.

I got busy and visited every branch in the district, remaining three or four days, and in one sermon I related the instances of our splendid conference, trying to encourage our people, asking them that we adopt as our slogan, "Let's go." The response was good, and the feeling of good will was beginning to be felt. I wrote a circular letter to all the branch presidents, and in a couple of weeks after I wrote a letter to every member of the priesthood in the district.

Institutes Held

I have been trying to create an interest in the departments. In order to do this, I have endeavored to introduce and conduct some institute work. I am glad to report that this work has received a splendid response wherever we have presented it. The other branches are asking that we hold institutes in their home branches; also, the Idaho District has requested that I come up there and carry on some work of that nature. It is rather encouraging to me. Previous to the three-week series of meetings that we held in the Malad Branch, we conducted a three-day institute. The people attended nearly one hundred per cent, and we felt that it was a contributing factor to the success of our meetings. We just closed our institute at Provo Sunday evening. We are making plans for other places.

All together the outlook is good in the district. Therefore we are optimistic concerning the year 1924 and look forward to a good year for the Utah District. There is much work to be done along all lines. May God direct in the affairs is my prayer.

I might say here that we begin a series of services in Salt Lake the thirteenth, hoping to create an interest, building up the faith of the Saints and stimulating others to render obedience to the gospel.

May the blessings of God attend you in your noble work, is my prayer.

GUY P. LEVITT.

Great Work Being Done Among Indians

KAW CITY, OKLAHOMA, January 12.—The new year reminds us of the deeds of the past, and desires and resolutions of the present.

Indians Baptized

My work began last year with the vision from the Lord of a beautiful field of golden grain, and instruction to go forward and gather it into the garner of the Lord. I was in Nebraska City at that time and it was the first night in my new field. I saw the field; as in the dream I stood at the corner of it, looking to the northwest. Loads of corn started towards me from near one side, four teams loaded with the beautiful corn. They were followed by many others, all having full loads. This was surely fulfilled when at the south-east corner of the Omaha Reservation, where I was preaching, four full loads of Indians came, full families asking for baptism. They were followed by many others until there were 175 of the Omaha tribe baptized into the church. I had worked five days at this work and had many names for baptism, my Brother Bernard assisting me, when we met Brother Burton, and asked him to quit his meeting at the northwest corner of the reservation, and come and assist in this great gathering of souls into the garner of the Lord at this place.

I started this meeting with the same methods I had used with the Cheyennes twelve years before, visiting their homes and taking their names for baptism after preaching to them and visiting with them, explaining the message. This will work with the white people the same as with the Indians.

Last year was my banner year in mission work, and this year is starting better than last. So far on the new conference year I have 56 baptisms, and believe I shall do better work than during any two years of the past, at least the prospects are very flattering. And best of all, the Lord is surely doing his part with the outpouring of his good Spirit to encourage.

HUBERT CASE.

Aged Member Enjoys Church Papers

DES MOINES, IOWA, January 10.—Dear Editors: As my subscription to the HERALD is almost expired, I am renewing same. The church papers are all I have to keep me in touch with the progress of the work. It is all I have to instruct me in this latter-day message as I am nearly eighty-four years old and cannot get out to church.

I hope to live a faithful life and do all I can for the work for I know it is true. I feel my weakness but pray my heavenly Father to keep me in the right way that I may obtain everlasting life.

I do not live in town and am too old to be out much in the cold weather, but my heart is alive to the work and I hope to be kept faithful to the end.

Wishing all a happy and prosperous New Year,

MRS. J. H. SHEELER.

Patriarch Griffiths Thanks Friends for Kindness

To all my many friends who remembered us in the time of our great sorrow and loss of companion: There were so many who sent letters and telegrams expressing their deep sympathy, and many floral tributes that we cannot in person thank you, but we wish in this manner to say to you that they were highly appreciated and were of much comfort to myself and daughters.

We thank you from the depths of our hearts and pray that God may bless you in all your lives as he has sustained us in our great sorrow. We especially thank the First Presidency, the Quorum of Twelve, the Presiding Bishopric, and other high officials of the church for their beautiful wreath and for sending Brother Patterson as their representative and who participated in the services in the Kirtland Temple.

Coincidentally, it was he who was with me when in Australia I received the notice of my wife's serious illness, nine years ago. It seems strange that he would be with me in America at the time the final summons came.

Thank you again.

Yours in gospel bonds,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

Elder D. J. Williams and wife, who have been appointed to the Hawaiian Mission, will sail from Los Angeles, January 26, on the S. S. Calawau.

CHURCH NEWS

Holden Stake News

Holden

Brother A. T. Cornelison, one of the oldest members of the church at Holden, died on Thursday morning, January 17. Brother Cornelison had been a member of the church for about thirty-five years, being baptized by Elder I. N. White while conducting services at Holden. His funeral service was held at the church on the 18th, Elder C. F. Scarcliff preaching the sermon.

Elder Alvin Knisley, one of the missionaries appointed to the stake, has been visiting the Saints in the region of Post Oak and Leeton. He came to Holden January 19 and is announced as the speaker for Sunday.

The departments of Sunday School and Recreation and Expression enter into a contest for increasing of their attendance on Sunday the 20th. The losing organization is to entertain and give a banquet to the winner.

A number of the Saints and citizens of Holden are enjoying the radio programs being broadcasted from the Graceland Studio and the Stone Church of Independence. Very favorable reports are given. It is pleasing to see the effort being made to make these programs of the best. The station at the Holden Home is not fully equipped for receiving at present. It is hoped that some arrangements will be made to provide a loud speaker so that our aged Saints may have the privilege of hearing the sermons delivered by our leaders and the other ministers.

Holden Home

On Saturday previous to Christmas the fifth and sixth grades of the public schools gave an entertainment in the home chapel, which was appreciated very much by the aged Saints. The Christmas exercises of the Home Sunday school were held Sunday afternoon the 23d. On Christmas morning the "family" assembled in the reception room around the Christmas tree, when the many presents were distributed. The usual gift of candy from Brother A. C. Dempsey, of Nevada, for the entire family was in evidence. The home also received a gift of a set of silverware from Sister C. C. Joehnk, an aluminum savory roaster from the kitchen employees, and a copy of the Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures for chapel use, by Brother John Stevenson, of the Home, Christmas being Brother Stevenson's seventy-fifth birthday. Brother G. W. Beebe, the superintendent, had charge of the program. C. F. Scarcliff was Santa Claus, and Sister Edith Carr, the matron, had charge of the distribution of presents.

Marshall

Elder R. D. Weaver returned January 12 and commenced another series of meetings Sunday, January 13. A good crowd greeted him from the first, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather. He has been well advertised, and those who came to his other meetings come again.

He speaks with power and demonstration of the Spirit, and what more need we say, along with his daily example of uprightness? He is a painstaking sower of the seed, and seems to think the pulpit is not the only place to teach, so at the firesides of the Saints he sows the seed of cheer and wisdom.

A committee of the branch assiduously strove to find a suitable hall in a more central location, but could not. Perhaps after all it is better as it is, for a score or more of interested people and new converts could not have gone up town, which would have been a great disappointment to them.

Each day at 3 p. m. the Saints offer up a prayer in their homes for the success of the meetings.

Omaha Reports Profitable Holiday Season

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, January 12.—Apostle James A. Gillen closed his series of meetings on December 16, having sandwiched in between on the last three days, several services at the Council Bluffs conference. Following his sermon on December 12, he presided at the annual branch business meeting, at which a wonderful spirit of unanimity and peace was evident. Brother B. M. Anderson was unanimously chosen president, with power to choose what counselors he desired, and otherwise perfect details of branch organization. Sister Rose Adams was retained as superintendent of Sunday school, Brother Elmer Riner, recently of Milwaukee Branch, chosen as president of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Sister T. J. Elliott sustained as leader of Department of Women, Sister Audentia Anderson as chorister, and Sister Charlotte McDonnell as pianist.

Thursday and Friday evenings, December 13 and 14, were record ones in point of attendance and interest in Brother Gillen's series. The little church was filled almost to capacity, many new faces being welcomed.

Reception Held

Sunday, December 16, was noteworthy because of the presence in late afternoon and evening, of Sister Dora Glines, General Superintendent of the Department of Women. A reception was held for her at the church at six o'clock, at which the sisters and others interested might meet their chief, and at which, also, Sister Glines gave a most instructive talk on different forms of branch organization. It was good to note that among the eager listeners and questioners were several of the brethren who carry various burdens of administration in the branch and district, and they, as well as the sisters, seem to receive much encouragement and benefit from Sister Glines's address. An informal luncheon followed, very enjoyable, creating a fine spirit of comradeship and friendliness preceding Brother Gillen's closing sermon. The Omaha Saints will have a warm welcome for both these consecrated laborers in God's vineyard when they may again visit here.

Christmas Programs

Outstanding events of the branch life the past month were the Christmas programs. Tastily decorated Christmas trees, with festoons in holiday colors back of the pulpit greeted the members of Sunday school at 9.30. Following the lesson, solos were sung by Sister Lois Francis and little Ann Self, and an anthem given by the young choir of fifteen voices, Sister Ruth Bryant accompanying with violin, Sister McDonnell at the piano. Sister Anderson then read the Christmas message from President Elbert A. Smith, and followed it with a very effective reading entitled, "The cup of loving service." These numbers occupied the usual eleven o'clock preaching hour, and finished with the usual Christmas treat of candy and nuts for all the children of the branch.

Play Presented

The next evening, under the general supervision of the assistant Sunday school superintendent, Howard Elliott, and the able coaching of Mr. Fred E. Parks, thirty-five young people gave "Santa's Christmas bargain" to a delighted audience. From start to finish it was a thing to be proud of, having much of the dash, assurance, and finish of professional work. The lame Mr. Tinkle, inventor of mechanical toys; the white fur-clad Eskimo lad with his parrotlike appreciation expressed always by "Me tink he fine"; the squad of camera girls, hunting for the kind of smile Santa wants on the mechanical man he would buy; the Fairy Princess with her sparkling crown, wand, and band of small fairies; the quartet of amateur detectives trying to find out who had been reporting their doings to Santa; fat but jolly Mrs. Tobey with her eight sons, of whom she was so inordinately proud and whose gifts and charms she told so fondly; and perhaps, greatest hit of all, the six or seven "tots" whose antics were mostly impromptu but wholly entertaining—one and all seemed to excel in each particular part, winning continuous applause from the appreciative audience. And we must not forget Santa, with his jolly songs and good cheer, nor—perhaps the most difficult of all the parts—the "mechanical man," who was compelled to stand like a wooden image, through long periods, nodding, bowing, or making gestures with jerky, impassive movements when the proper "button" was touched.

Besides the pleasure and delight this entertainment gave those who listened and beheld, the children and young people who participated have derived much benefit. They have been given to know some of their latent powers, and to find a confidence in themselves which can be of use to them. Then there was the nice little sum to be added to the Christmas offering of the school, the social good times during its preparation, the training in teamwork, and, development of the spirit of cooperation.

Work of Department of Women

On December 27 about thirty of the sisters met at the home of Sister Anderson, at which meeting annual reports were made and officers chosen or sustained for the coming year. Over two hundred calls during the year had been made by the sisters, and about a thousand dollars expended in furnishings for the new church. It was voted to donate about $250 more to lift the last bit of indebtedness on the building, and altogether the sisters feel well satisfied over their efforts.

Weather Affects Attendance

The weather has been severe, having something to do with small attendances at church. On the morning of December 30, there were more young people in the choir than individuals in the audience, and that evening three fifths of the entire number present were young people. There is a very fine set of young people in this branch, and the older members are looking forward to a year of constructive work among and with them. Brother Riner, the new leader, is a young man, and eager for progressive ideas. At a meeting of all district and branch executives, at the home of the branch president, the work was mapped out and coordinated to a great extent, so that all are moving forward into the year's work hopefully and earnestly.

San Bernardino Will Build

SAN BERNARDINO, CALIFORNIA, January 16.—At the annual business meeting Friday, January 11, the branch unanimously accepted the proposed plan of the committeemen, for a new church building, to be added to the old one, which will almost double the present seating capacity. At this same meeting Brother F. G. Lacey was reelected as president of the branch for the coming year.

The attendance at the first sacrament service of the new year was greater than it has been for many years. This is indeed a splendid beginning, and the need of securing more communion cups is very encouraging to the Saints.

Kansas City Stake News

KANSAS CITY STAKE, January 17.—An act well done is worth repeating, according to the Grandview Saints, for after many requests they again rendered the Christmas cantata, "The world's Redeemer," on Sunday evening, January 6. This cantata was first given December 23, by a select chorus of local talent consisting of twenty-five voices. The soloists were: Miss Pearl Peterson, soprano; Mrs. Ralph Johnson, contralto; Mr. Ross J. Evans, tenor; and Mr. Lawrence Hayes, bass. The chorister is Mrs. Ross J. Evans, under whose able direction the chorus was brought up to its present efficiency. The rendition of this cantata justly earned the profuse praise given them. The tableaux effects were especially inspirational.

The Grandview Saints are anticipating a strenuous two weeks commencing Sunday evening, January 13, when Elder W. I. Flegg began special services. They are having a very satisfactory attendance thus far, several not of the faith being present.

Sacrament service was observed at all the churches of the stake on January 6 at 11 a. m. Some who were experimenting as to the hour had tried changing the service to 6.30 p. m., but have found it is better to be in line, so have changed back to the old time.

The speaker at Central on the evening of January 6 was Pastor J. A. Tanner. On Sunday, the 13th, Patriarch F. A. Smith was the speaker at 11 and J. A. Tanner occupied at 7.45.

Notes From Brooklyn

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK, January 17.—The annual election of branch officers resulted in the sustaining of High Priest Ephraim Squire as president and Archibald Hawkins as secretary. No announcement has as yet been made by the president of deacons to be designated to act in the positions of property custodian and treasurer. Brother Squire, in addition to the trying responsibilities of "caring for the flock," also presides over the New York and Philadelphia District, in all of which he has served faithfully and well for many years. But let it be understood however that the brother is yet in the prime of life, having "enlisted" as a boy, and the "many years" of service is a record of which anyone may well be proud.

Sunday School Election

The Brooklyn Sunday School in selecting its officers for the year 1924 has made some changes. For superintendent, first and second assistants, Brethren Millard Friday, A. P. Hawkins, and Maynard Beardsley were chosen. The Bishop's agent, Frank Lester, will serve as treasurer, Ada Schenk as secretary, Leroy Squire at chorister, and Anna Truman Potts as organist. Brother Friday, the new superintendent and yet one of our "boys," has had two years training as an assistant under the retiring superintendent, Brother William E. Nichols, to whom credit is due for having inaugurated a policy of placing responsibility by degrees on the shoulders of his young coworkers that they might have the opportunity to qualify thoroughly before leadership might be thrust upon them. Brother Millard has proven his ability to serve in this capacity and all are justly proud of his past success. Sunday school work is not new to Brother Hawkins but to Brother Beardsley comes his first opportunity to make good.

Department of Women

Sister Ethel A. Potts, as secretary of the Women's Department of Brooklyn local, in issuing notices for their meeting has made use of this somewhat novel announcement:

On the 22'd of Jan., in business session we meet
 At the home of our Sister Mackenzie of 229 Adelphi Street,
 So take down your calendar for this the New Year
 And mark it with red, to make it quite clear
 That you should be present and ready to hear
 The business transacted with hearty good cheer.
 A goodly number were present at our meeting,
 The first one in Nineteen and Twenty and Four;
 If then you were one that was absent, be sure
 To come next time and make it, One more.

Member Returns

Only a few years ago, Brother Ray Frisbie came to this city from the Detroit Branch and performed faithful service in his office of priest. He then held a responsible position with the Chevrolet Motor Company which later called him back to the old home town. His many friends here were delightfully surprised on the morning of January 13 to see him enter the church again and participate in the services of the day. He is now a district sales agent for the Durant-Star interests with his headquarters at Saint Johns, Michigan.

Branch Orchestra

Never in the history of the Brooklyn Branch has it been better provided with orchestral talent than at the present time. Under the devoted leadership of Brother LeRoy Squire, the musical requirements of the Sunday school and the church services are well supplied. Brother Squire, however, is not the only artist who can perform acceptably in solo offerings. Of able assistance is Sister Ella Squire, his mother, also his sister Gladys, Billy Nichols, jr., Roderick and Alan Binnie and others. There is truly a marvelous power in music when the songs of the Saints are sung.

On Sunday morning, January 13, Brother Squire laid aside his baton between musical numbers and stepping down to the pulpit, delivered a very interesting sermon. This effort deserves mention as last moment developments made necessary a change in previous arrangements for the service which did not permit him to make special preparation, however he proved himself quite equal to the occasion.

Waterloo Issues Church Directory

WATERLOO, IOWA, January 18.—Monday evening, December 10, the Waterloo Branch elected officers for 1924, nearly all the old officers being reelected for another year. Sunday school and Religio officers were also elected at this time.

A small directory of the Waterloo Branch of the church has been issued for 1924, telling when the branch was organized, giving its charter membership, the branch officary, including the officers of the Sunday school, Religio, Department of Women, and the teachers of the various classes in both the Sunday school and Religio. This directory also gives the program of churches for the week and where the church is located. The directory is put up in an attractive way and should be of value to the Saints there or to those visiting Waterloo.

Independence

The Independence L. D. S. team met the Kansas City L. D. S. team in a special game at Manual High School Saturday night, losing by a score of 43 to 27. A part of the L. D. S. Band went over to boost the Independence boys. When these teams met before on their regular schedule, the score was 34 to 24 in favor of Independence. They will meet for a third contest Saturday night in the Stone Church gymnasium in a benefit game to help buy suits. Thursday night, January 24, they are scheduled to play the Benton Baptist team at Central High School gymnasium. The local league games this week will be played on Thursday night instead of Saturday. The Bar-Gars play the S. R. S. team in the first game. Walnut Park and Second Independence will also play.

The Second Independence team won a hard-fought contest with the Bennet Blues Saturday night with a score of 21 to 18.

The I. X. L.'s forfeited their scheduled game to the S. R. S. team with a score of 2 to 0. The league standing now is:

Team	W	L	Percentage
S. R. S. ....	3	0	1.000
Bar-Gar .....	2	1	.667
I. X. L. ....	2	2	.500
Y. K. T. ....	2	2	.500
Walnut Park .....	1	2	.333
Second Independence .....	1	2	.333
Bennet Blues .....	1	3	.250

Sunday School Installation

Installation exercises of the officers and teachers of the First Independence Sunday school were held at the Stone Church, January 20, at 7.30 p. m.

The Auditorium Orchestra rendered a concert preceding invocation by R. V. Hopkins. The I. X. L. class double quartet sang "Sweet and low" with orchestra accompaniment.

An address, "The Sunday school's contribution to present-day needs" was given by James F. Moore, Superintendent of the Hyde Park Christian Sunday School, representing the Department of Religious Education, Kansas City Sunday School Association. This was followed by another quartet number.

Officers and teachers were then installed: General superintendents, by President E. A. Smith; department superintendents, by Superintendent C. B. Hartshorn; presentation of staff officers and teachers, by department heads; charge to newly installed officers and teachers, Walter W. Smith, dean of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Dedicatory prayer, was by President E. A. Smith.

A hymn was sung, followed by benediction by Albert L. Sanford. The orchestra played an exit march, "Lights out."

Citizenship Course

Sister A. L. Yingling, of Independence, is to head a civic educational drive among women voters of Jackson County. The University of Missouri is furnishing the course supplied from the extension department.

Sister Yingling is third vice president of the Missouri League of Women Voters and chairman of the league for the fifth congressional district. She has been active in the Department of Women in the church for many years.

The plan for the citizenship course is to get in touch with women's organizations and clubs. A general institute with classes may be held later.

"We expect to cooperate with existing organizations in putting into effect this course," said Mrs. Yingling. "Its aim is to teach women to vote understandingly to bring about better conditions for their homes and children."

The league expects to get out seventy-five per cent of the voters at the coming presidential election. Sister Yingling believes the first step in getting women to vote is to interest them in questions on which they will vote. The citizenship course aims to do that.

Independence Sanitarium

The Independence Sanitarium staff, consisting of all the local doctors and the Sanitarium Board, made up of the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric, met at a banquet at the Sanitarium Monday night, January 14. Miss Copeland, superintendent of nurses, was hostess. Twenty were present.

Doctor C. E. Nickson took the place of Doctor G. Leonard Harrington of the staff.

The Independence Sanitarium has sold its interest in the Independence Drug Company to Mr. John Feldhahn.

The Bishopric

The Bishopric announces the sale of the church's mill and fuel interest of the Independence Storehouse to D. H. Crick.

Bishop I. A. Smith is at present busily engaged in the local drive for funds for the Boy Scout Movement.

The son of Bishop B. R. McGuire, "Benny" McGuire, who has been ill with diphtheria, is improving.

The Twelve

Apostle E. J. Gleazer spent the week-end at Council Bluffs. He will return to Independence to-day.

A series of meetings is being held at Joplin, Missouri, by Apostle J. Arthur Gillen.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards is holding a series of meetings for ten days at Topeka, Kansas.

Apostles Roy S. Budd and D. T. Williams are still in northern California holding meetings.

Apostle's Daughter Married

Miss Dorothy Rushton, daughter of Apostle John W. Rushton, was married to Mr. Orlo Backer, in Los Angeles, December 26. Both are active church workers and loved by the Saints and friends of that city.

Mrs. Backer also has many friends in Independence where she lived for a time. Since moving to Los Angeles, Mrs. Backer was graduated from the University of California Southern Branch and has been teaching school since. Mr. Backer attended the University of Southern California Law School and is now engaged in business in Los Angeles. The bride and groom will remain in California.

Subscription Contest

The young people of Independence have united in a subscription contest offered by the Kansas City Journal-Post which will present $20,000 worth of prizes.

The person obtaining the most subscriptions gets the first prize which amounts to $3,500. Other prizes are also of importance.

Frances McGuire, daughter of Bishop McGuire, is the candidate selected, and Frances intends that when she wins the prize she will contribute the money to the building fund of the gymnasium which is to be erected on the Campus. There is nothing impossible to accomplish if all will pull together. A $3,500 prize is well worth working for as it will be a tremendous help in starting the building of the gymnasium. This sum, together with the other money now in hand and already pledged from other sources, will go far toward paying for the new building.

The Journal-Post published the picture of Frances McGuire in the Sunday paper, as one of the foremost contestants.

A campaign committee has been arranged, with Howard W. Harder as chairman, and Mrs. J. A. Gardner and Mrs. Bea McNamara as assistants. Headquarters are Room 25, Battery Block. A printed letter has been issued, telling of the subscription campaign, upon which is also a picture of the contestant, Frances McGuire, and the automobile for which she is working. The prospects for winning the first prize are exceptionally good. The contest will close March 22.

Graceland Chats

The close of the semester brings feeling of anxiety to students. Examinations, whether the best thing to be or not, still prevail and with each passing day—well, hope springs eternal here as elsewhere. Next week will decide many questions of deep importance to the teaching force at least.

Chapel exercises were under the direction of Miss Margaret Armstrong, teacher of voice in Graceland. The program was delightful, consisting of vocal and instrumental numbers and a reading by Frances Van Fleet, whose appearance as a reader is always greeted with pleasure.

President's Office

The close of the semester finds the student who wishes to change his course of study seeking the office of President Briggs. Hustling across the frozen campus, we enter the wide west door, glad to be within shelter these exceptionally cold winter days. Stopping to remove outer wraps, we glance at the bulletin board to our left and comfortably near the radiator, since we have but one general meeting each week. This bulletin board is kept crowded with notices and it is well to consult it and see if something is liable to happen to you, whether you be faculty or student. Here you come to consult the oracle. Between the bulletin board and the clock stands the door leading into the reception room where you wait for two important men to say, "Come in." We wonder if they are not tempted to use the greeting of another eminent man: "Come in without knocking—go out the same way."

At least we are here. Furniture is simple: one large divan and the radiator to insure warmth to your welcome. The glass-cased room you face is the president's. The door opens in. He is there before an open desk, to one side files of catalogues, to the other a study table. A calendar is close. If you are on business, you will soon be telling it. If you are trying to fix a date or a meeting, his hand seeks an inside pocket and draws forth a small memorandum book and you get your possible date, and if so you need the schedule for school activities for most of the year.

This is a positive boon to workers. There is no typewriter, no stenographer in this little office—the president gives his whole attention to you. The long west windows are curtained with soft white material across the lower section, and if one were drawn open you would get a vision of the wide campus standing to the west, and beyond the hills the sky line so often radiant with glorious prairie sunsets. Reserving your visit to the other man and retracing your steps to the hall, you may meet a train of laughing, chatting students making a rush for class or library, and that brings us to the library. You must visit it sometime, and that room to the northeast, that's Dean McDowell's corner. He loves it and—but we will visit that some day.

This is the old building, the Administration Building, and is the most interesting of all buildings in the group.

The radio has been active as usual putting out programs that bring many letters from many directions.

Debates

The concluding debate of the girls' teams was held Saturday night the 19th. The contending societies were the Kappa Deltas, affirmative, and the Niketes, negative, the latter winning the banner. The question discussed was: "Resolved, that the United States should recognize the Soviet Government."

Fiftieth Birthday of President of Church Celebrated

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, January 22.—In honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the birthday of President F. M. Smith, January 21, friends associated with him at the church headquarters presented him with a gold fountain pen and pencil at 11 o'clock January 22.

The friends gathered in the council chambers at the general offices, and after a prayer by Bishop McGuire a short presentation speech was made by Patriarch F. A. Smith, expressing their congratulations. President Smith responded feelingly, his heart being touched by the joy of the occasion. He appreciated the motive that prompted the gift and thanked his friends for the remembrance.

A birthday cake had been prepared at the Independence Sanitarium for President Smith, and the superintendent, Miss Gertrude Copeland, presented it. This cake, together with ice cream and the famous Hav-A-Bons of Frank A. Russell manufacture, was served.

Just prior to the serving, Brother Russell proposed the following toast in which all joined:

"President Smith, you can't conceal it,
Though your pep does not reveal it,
But on yesterday, the record says, 'twas fifty years;
Don't know how this feed will strike you,
But we're here to say—'We like you!'
And we want to help to fill your heart with cheers."

After singing "Blest be the tie that binds," each one present shook hands with President Smith and offered personal congratulations.

Pueblo Saints Enjoy Cottage Prayer Meetings

PUEBLO, COLORADO, January 16.—The cottage prayer services held at the homes of the Saints are profitable to all. They are filled with spiritual, strength-giving prayers, testimonies, songs, and meditations. Afterward the people usually visit a little and then disperse feeling and saying that these are fine "get together, know each other" meetings.

The sacrament service January 6 was a pentecostal shower to the Saints of Pueblo. God's Spirit filled the room and gave assurance of the wonderful message given through the pastor, Wilbert Richards. Three brothers, Reuben Ard, Stuart Mapes, and John Eve, were called to take their places in the priesthood, and the Saints were encouraged in their work. It was a wonderful meeting, showing well how God is willing to own and to bless.

Sister and Brother Edward Burnham are sad and we sympathize with them over the death of their fifteen-months-old daughter, Betty Louise, who was buried January 11. Elder Wilbert Richards preached the funeral sermon and Sister Bertha Eve and Elder Richards sang "Lord, comfort me," and "Go to thy rest, fair child," from the Hymnal.

MISCELLANEOUS

Another Call for Clothing for the Indian Mission

We are very much in need of clothing for some of our Indians of this district. While the Saints have responded nobly to past appeals for help there is still an urgent need for anything that will help to keep them warm. Will the Saints kindly send any cast-off clothing? We can use anything that is clean. Mrs. B. F. Creel, Box 62, Walthill, Nebraska.

Appointment of Bishop's Agent

Having received the resignation of Brother J. W. Wooten, who has been acting as agent of the Southeastern Kansas District since its organization, we hereby appoint as his successor, Brother C. T. Pooler, 325 North Fifth Street, Arkansas City, Kansas.

Brother Wooten has rendered splendid services during his term of office and we feel that the district is to be congratulated to have one succeed him who is equally interested in this phase of the Lord's work.

We commend Brother Pooler to the Saints of the district and solicit their earnest cooperation in the interest of the financial department. Brother Wooten will continue to look after the work during the month of January.

BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE.

Radio Flashes

Lamoni, Iowa.—We enjoyed very much the sermon last evening by President E. A. Smith. My wife and I listened all through the program and we got the most of it, but it seemed that the microphone must have been most too close to the speaker and the one offering the prayer as well as the musical operators. Nevertheless it was fine and we enjoyed it, especially the treatment of the subject, "The gathering," for it has been a long time since we have heard a sermon on that subject. Kindly enter our names on your list for programs each month as we shall take pleasure in listening in whenever we can do so.—Charles F. Church.

Saint Olaf, Iowa.—We tune in regularly for your Tuesday and Thursday evening programs, but to-night is the first time we have heard your complete Sunday evening services. You came in loud and clear. The music was especially good and every word of Brother Smith's sermon eagerly taken in. By radio is the only means we have of hearing L. D. S. services and we surely count it a grand privilege. We wish to thank you for all the good programs we enjoy and ask you to please put our name on your mailing list.—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Werges.

Lockport, New York.—The writer, his family, and friends certainly enjoy your splendid programs, and as suggested by you last evening, we would like very much to have advance printed programs. Your station is received by us just as distinctly on the average as KFKA. We received your broadcast on a Fried Eisemann Neutrodyne and Music Master Loud Speaker. There are many stations that broadcast very poor programs, and those stations that are striving to broadcast superior programs should be complimented. Hence this letter. With very best wishes for the New Year.—Charles Upson.

San Antonio, Texas.—We got your station several weeks ago on a Fada Neutrodyne set, and have enjoyed several evenings as listeners. To-night we received you and the wonderful church services very fine. We not only enjoyed the sermon of President Smith, but all the service, including the saxophone solo. We thank you and will be set on 240 meters next Tuesday.—Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Wallace.

Meadville, Missouri.—Have been listening in over the radio to the L. D. S. sermons. Heard the sermon Sunday morning by "Brother Bailey." It was the first time I had been able to get this church. It came in fine, also Sunday evening at 7.30. Certainly did enjoy both. Also heard the Saints at Lamoni, Iowa, Sunday evening. I am not a member of this church, but I can truthfully say that I am persuaded in my own mind that this is the true church. I think the radios will finish carrying this gospel message around the world.—Mrs. H. E. Bartlett.

San Antonio, Texas.—Would be pleased to have our many friends know that we enjoyed the evening services broadcasted from the Stone Church very much. The program came in fine on January 13.—Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson.

Saint Joseph, Missouri.—Your Sunday musical program and sermon by President Elbert A. Smith was received for the first time and was very clear and distinct. You entertain our company very royally. I was just trying out a new speaker, which did its part well. Will try to tune in on your Tuesday program.—F. R. Gist.

The Spirit of Youth

The awakening of youth to a sense of power and responsibility is seizing the young members of this church as it has seized those of like ages in all parts of the world. We read of the Youth Movement in Germany, the youthful Fascisti of Italy, and about the Young Turks. Reports from the recent Student Volunteer Convention at Indianapolis, where nine hundred colleges were represented, contain an admission by many older leaders that the younger generation can be trusted to think through the "tormenting questions of the day and to commit themselves to working out answers to them."

In some quarters the youthful awakening has taken on the form of revolution, almost spontaneous in its rising. In others the young have reacted to existing institutions and their teachings, and declared for a new order. With the movement in Germany has come the conclusion that the church has failed, therefore each will seek God in his own way. Here youth has run away with itself.

Our church is not free from this spirit of youth, but we should welcome it instead of holding forth fear lest it overwhelm our traditions. Traditions are good so long as they hold us to the forward direction, but when they close in on four sides, then they have played their part. But youth is impulsive and may abuse its power, unless checked at times by the stable influence of the past.

Here we have two opposing forces, youth in its turbulent, headlong desire to go ahead, and tradition in its reluctant, resisting habit to hold back. A good combination truly!

It is not a matter of argument as to which is better. It is simply a matter of adjustment to existing conditions. Zion must be built. The work in the future must be done by the youth, but the structure must be built upon the foundation of the past. A gradual transfer of responsibility must take place, and that is what is happening. It is not a thing to be done at any one time and thereafter to remain complete. It is a never-ending process. Only its rate of progress can be noted. The process itself never stops.

Perhaps we have been going too slowly. Perhaps the older ones upon whom the responsibility rests are hesitating unnecessarily long in the transfer of their burdens. Perhaps the young have been loath to give up the interests of the world to accept the load of responsibility.

Whatever has been the situation in the past, at least now we are awakening to the vital need of hastening on to the finish. Youth is willing to take the reins. It declares its power. As fast as it is prepared to take on the responsibility of driving this church on to its goal, the transfer must be made.

The church needs missionaries, teachers, doctors, lawyers, business men—every honorable worker is called to service. But consecrated lives begin at home. Preparation must be complete before the gathering takes place. All must be prepared. In a warning issued by the President and Prophet of this church at a recent meeting in Zion, he said that the time is closer than anyone knows.

We can wait no longer. Youth, are you ready?

The Young People's Convention at Graceland College in June will tell a tale never before told. The enthusiasm of the first convention of the kind will have grown to great proportions. May the spirit of youth under the direction of wise counselors and the help of God move on to a triumphal accomplishment already too long delayed!

An Envious Record

A report from a branch of 190 members states that $1,361.83 has recently been paid into the branch in addition to operating expenses, such as help given the poor, flowers sent to the sick, cooking utensils bought, tithing paid, Christmas offering given, and pay for labor on certain things about the church.

Here is a record that would make any branch in the church "sit up and take notice." How could such a record be made? We answer that it was made by consecrated effort on the part of the women of that branch who were willing to sacrifice for a cause.

The history is brief. These women started serving dinners in the church basement to raise the necessary funds for repairs on the building. An offer was accepted to serve dinner once a week to the Chamber of Commerce at a certain minimum guarantee. Later a similar offer was accepted for the Kiwanis Club. Two dinners a week are now served, besides several special dinners which have been given on different occasions.

Needless to say, the women are workers. But the results of these efforts should be especially noted by others in the church who wonder what can be done.

What the women in this branch have done can be approximated by other branches, perhaps not in the same way, but in other ways. We merely wish to offer this as a suggestion. Wide-awake people do not wait to be told what to do. They do it.

The Age of Crime

Startling as it may seem, it is now a known fact that the majority of criminals in recent years is found among youths of less than twenty-one years of age. The average age of criminals has been lowered six or eight years during the last decade, according to information presented at an Indianapolis meeting in the interest of religious education, cites the Kansas City Star.

Decent, respectable homes have been suddenly awakened to this fact by reading in the morning paper that some members of their irreproachable families are held at the police station, charged with criminal offenses. This is not now a rarity; it has been too often repeated in recent months. To the parents of these young waywards such a thing seems too cruel to be true. It must be some one else's boy! Homes have awakened too late to save their youths and the respectability of their family names.

Children are not born criminals. They grow into lives of crime because of improper training and a mistaken concept of life. Many of those who are allowed to do as they please and who grow up to be a social menace might easily be saved to society. We need wide awake public-school teachers, trained and consecrated social workers, and above all wise parents who are not unmindful of the conditions of the world and the interests calling to youth. Parents who have withdrawn from the world too far, find that security for themselves has meant danger for their children.

Parents should know where their children are and what they are doing. When this is begun early in the life of the child and when parents are sympathetic, then control of their children is not lost when the teen age is reached.

Obedience in childhood must be demanded. But a lessening of authority should be had as the child grows older. This does not mean lessening of influence, but only a transfer of control from the parent to the child. That is our aim, self-control. The child must learn it.

Alas, how many parents say, "I can't do anything with him"? Of course not! And the child knows that, too. But if obedience were demanded in childhood and a lessening of control made by way of transition, that boy or that girl would not now be out of control.

The crying need is for men and women, parents and teachers, who understand boys and girls.

Editorial Inaccuracy

Arthur Brisbane seems to be becoming notorious for inaccuracy. We called the attention of our readers some time ago to a ridiculous misstatement of facts concerning our church in one of his ranting editorials.

The Christian Work, in referring to an editorial of Mr. Brisbane, in which he displays more ignorance of the Bible, calls his statements "arrant nonsense," and goes on to say:

If men are going to talk about technical questions touching the Bible, why do they not try to become as well informed about them as they would expect to be if they were going to discuss technical questions concerning radio or automobile carburetors? Questions touching the text of the Bible are just as technical as like questions concerning Shakespeare. After all, knowledge is knowledge, even when it concerns the Holy Scriptures.

Schools for the Blind

Statistics of sixty-four schools for the blind in 1922, with an enrollment of 4,947 pupils, are reported by the Bureau of Education of the Department of the Interior in a bulletin just issued. Nine other schools are listed in earlier reports, with 655 pupils, making in all 73 schools for the blind in the United States with a total enrollment of 5,602.

Forty-eight of these institutions are State schools, and 13 of the State schools are for both blind and deaf. One public institution is in Porto Rico; 16 are parts of city school systems, and 8 are private institutions.

These schools report libraries containing 140,905 books with raised type, and 61,785 printed books. Three institutions say they have no libraries, and 4 others failed to report on this feature.

The bulletin states that the receipts of 60 schools reporting on the subject from State, county, or city, from private benefactions, endowment funds, and other sources, were $3,414,973. The expenditures of the 58 schools which reported on this subject amounted to $2,664,999 for the fiscal year. These expenditures were for building and lasting improvements, teachers, salaries, books, and other current expenses. Fifty-six schools reported property valued at $5,909,768.

DEPARTMENTAL

Department of Recreation and Expression

We are living in an age of rapid change. This is true whether we wish it or not. It is true whether we are ignorant of it or intensely conscious of it. The extent to which an individual lives is determined by the extent to which he is able to make adjustments necessary to meet the changing conditions. The extent to which an institution lives will be determined by the extent to which it can adapt itself to the ever-changing environment in which it finds itself.

The lives of Saints as individuals offer no exception to this rule. Neither the church as a whole nor any of its departments are exempt from this. Safety, therefore, lies not in hiding our heads ostrichlike, but in a recognition of the changes coming, and intelligent and prayerful effort to utilize them in the realization of our aims.

Changes in Departments

The departments of the church are no exception to this general rule. They have been, they are, and always will be passing through stages of transition. Every living being is changing; every living organization is changing and always will be changing because it always will be growing. If the value and significance of change is recognized it should cause no one undue alarm.

A careful reading of the minutes of the conventions of the Department of Recreation and Expression since its origin will show that it has been constantly growing, constantly changing. This is as it should be. In spite of its reasonableness, however, this situation seems to be the cause of uneasiness and confusion among some of our members at the present time.

Present Misconceptions

There seems to be a feeling in some quarters that the Department of Recreation and Expression has gone astray in its attempt to find new fields within which to function. This feeling has been augmented by an intense desire on the part of many church people to study the Book of Mormon. Furthermore the general officers of the department in the preparation of an ever-widening variety of courses of study have often been interpreted as desiring to set aside Book of Mormon study. All of these situations have tended to culminate at some quarters in a movement to reorganize the Zion's Religio-Literary Society. It is the purpose of this article to show that in the opinion of the writer such an attempt is tantamount to the organization of a new society, and contrary to the spirit of the agreed-upon policy of the church in regard to its departments.

A Bit of History

At the twenty-sixth annual convention of the Zion's Religio-Literary Society, held at Independence, April, 1920, it was recommended in the report of the general superintendent, Brother T. W. Williams, that the name of the department be changed from Zion's Religio-Literary Society to Religio Department. The convention adopted the recommendation. Some two years later, Brother Williams again suggested that the name be changed from Religio Department to the Department of Recreation and Expression. While we do not profess to represent Brother Williams in stating his reasons for this recommendation, we presume that it was due to his sincere conviction that the department must somehow take over the supervision of the recreational activities of our church.

Although this recommendation was never formally adopted by the convention, yet General Conference has twice sustained the department and its officers. This makes the position of the department clear.

The Present Situation

The superintendent of the department would therefore seem to have sufficient reason for his position that any attempt to reorganize in locals the former Zion's Religio-Literary Society will simply bring confusion to the departments and be in effect no more nor less than the organization of a new department. But this is not all. Those who desire to reorganize are actuated by the desire to study the Book of Mormon which to some has for a time seemed neglected. The writer maintains that it is perfectly possible under the present organization and with the present machinery for any local to continue the study of the Book of Mormon, meeting as frequently and studying as long as they care to. The General Department of Recreation and Expression has recently reprinted one of the former courses of study in the Book of Mormon. The general superintendent has encouraged this study and has tried in every way to meet the needs of the locals who desire to take up this subject or any other course of study.

In the little pamphlet entitled What Can We Do at Our Religio? published in 1921, the writer at some length recommended a continuation of the study hour in what was then known as the Religio Department. There is absolutely no reason why the department as now organized cannot do the same. Resting under the sincere conviction, however, that we are right in our belief, we maintain that the work of this department should not be limited to one hour, or one course of study. We feel that we are supported by convention action, by conference resolution, as well as by the spirit shown in the minutes of the conventions and conferences of several years in our contention that there is a growing need and demand that the leisure time activities of our people receive proper supervision.

The office of the departments is at present in a better position than ever before to furnish suggestions for study work of all kinds. In recent material which has been mailed, the course of study in the Book of Mormon is advertised. Many locals have been encouraged to take up this study. There is absolutely no need whatever of organizing a separate department. No other department in the church is reprinting the Book of Mormon quarterly except the Department of Recreation and Expression. Everything is to be gained and nothing to be lost by utilizing the present machinery.

A Request of Local Workers

As your general officers, we are responsible for the conduct of the work of this department. We are responsible to the General Conference and its action, and to the people whom we represent. We are asking that before any change is made leading to a reorganization of the old society or an organization of a new society, that you consult with us with a view to getting us to meet your needs. It seems to us that this course is just, fair, and reasonable, and that the wisdom of this request will be apparent to anyone after a moment's reflection.

Conclusion

Let us repeat for the sake of clarity:

1. We are unqualifiedly in favor of the study of the Book of Mormon. We hope that it will be studied not only in the Religio but in the Sunday school and at other times as well.
2. The course of study in the Book of Mormon is being reprinted. It is available at a nominal cost.
3. There is available also a great variety of other courses of study along lines of the church problems to-day. The current lessons deal with the stewardship plan. Does anyone need to apologize for such a course?
4. There is available also a long list of suggestions for materials for recreational, social, and dramatic work. A special course for the training of leaders has been prepared.
5. All of this is provided by the Department of Recreation and Expression. This department is a legitimate department of the church and has had its work clearly assigned to it by the church.
6. Any attempt to reorganize we feel is absolutely unnecessary.
7. The departmental machinery as now organized

Caring for the Missionaries

By C. J. Hunt, Bishop of Holden Stake

Our blessed Master said upon one occasion, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work," thus manifesting his love to all by obedience and service. Have you partaken of that same spirit of utility, helping to "finish his work" by contributions of a substantial nature in order that missionaries could be cared for? Saint Paul, an enthusiastic missionary and church worker, also in charge of missionaries, was in his travels urgent upon the membership to provide for the Lord's ambassadors in their fields of labor, and their families at home, emphasizing the need of so doing, declaring it to be a work of true discipleship to be numbered with the "cheerful givers." This same truth is restated to us in encouraging words in Doctrine and Covenants 26: 2, 3; 83: 16; 129: 8, 9.

A faithful tithepayer observed that—

It is the things you leave undone,
Which give you the painful heartache
At the setting of the sun.

The Apostle Peter, full of missionary spirit and devotion to the church, earnestly appealed to the saints to be more faithful to their duties and responsibilities, saying, "I think it meet as long as I am in this tabernacle to stir you up by putting you in remembrance" of the greatness, the truthfulness, and saving power of the gospel, which message cannot be heard without a preacher, requiring substantial gifts to carry it forward. Then you should

Count that day lost, whose low descending sun
Views from thy hand no worthy action done.

It is a truism that the conquering and converting is prepared to direct the work of the authorized departments of the church. No legitimate demand up to the present has been refused.

8. We respectfully ask that local and district superintendents in this department cooperate with us by giving us a chance to furnish them with materials, and in other ways work with us, rather than organizing or reorganizing unnecessary and duplicating societies.

We are working under what seemed to be the spirit of the people as expressed in legislative action. Your cooperation is solicited, and you may be sure that it will be reciprocated.

Sincerely,

F. M. McDOWELL,

of self brings the human heart in subjection to the divine law, which effort should be a continuous one, witnessing, as we must, that "all victory and glory is brought to pass unto you through your diligence, faithfulness, and prayers of faith." (Doctrine and Covenants 100: 7.)

Helping Missionary Work

What we owe to the caring for the missionaries, and why we owe it, is a very important subject for every Latter Day Saint to meditate upon. We should train the mind to positive thinking along lines of helping the Master's great work, for he "requireth the heart and a willing mind." This church needs the overflowing service of "all for each and each for all" in order to more fully demonstrate this gospel of helpfulness, being "doers of the word and not hearers only," which thought is cleverly expressed in a commercial sense, that "One worker is worth a hundred shirkers on the market." "Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year."—Deuteronomy 14: 22. Jacob promised: "And all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee." A poet wrote:

Not what we gain, but what we give,
Measures the worth of the life we live.

Can people, who for years have listened to the first principles of the gospel preached, justify themselves before the Lord by excusing themselves or refusing to obey? Answer..... Can you justify yourself before the same Lord by trying to excuse yourself, or refusing to keep the temporal law? Answer.....

The following queries might also be in order: Will your children follow your example? Have you paid your tithing in full? Have you diligently taught your children to pay tithes? Have you given property to your children that has not been tithed? If so, would it not be well to request them to return a tenth to you for use and benefit of the church? Example is a powerful teacher. A modernized version of Lowell's poem might read:

Not what we give but what we share,
For the gift (the tithe) without the giver is bare;
Who gives himself with his alms feeds three:
Himself, the missionary, and his family.

The church is progressing. The mountain heights so hopefully sought are being reached where great and inviting fields of prosperity await the faithful builders of Christ's kingdom. In this forward movement the divine counsel is that—

All are called according to the gifts of God unto them, and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.—Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8.

An earnest church worker said, "It must be conceded that any spiritual or missionary movement will fail when the fires of the temporal law burn low, so that there are only smoldering embers where there should be the leaping flames." My brother, my sister, we should do all things that bring us closer to God, renewing our missionary zeal by paying tithes and freewill offerings as our blessed Lord and his church has directed. A noted writer beautifully expressed thoughts on the economic problem in the following:

To earn, to save, to spend, to give, these are four heavenly graces which must need grow up evenly out of one's economic relations to life; and these, rightly balanced, constitute a large part of the true Christian character.

The more of the Christ character we develop, the greater our desire to earn, to give, and the larger our vision and determination will be, to "press on to the consummation designed of God for his people—unity, honor, sanctification, and glory." (Doctrine and Covenants 129: 9.)

What Must a Citizen Do to Be Saved?

An address by M. A. Etzenhouser, at the General Conference, Independence, Missouri, October 3, 1923.

I think there are about sixteen subjects presented or will be in the course of this conference, on the various aspects of salvation. I have been asked to speak on one aspect of salvation, that which affects the citizen, and if I should not quote as much scripture as some others, it will be because I desire to stick very closely to the text assigned me, and I take it that the citizen in this connection is one not necessarily identified with any religious body, or has any church affiliation. However, I think the citizen has tremendous responsibilities.

In order that I may keep rather closely to the subject in hand, I want to define my terms.

What Is a Citizen?

A citizen is one owing allegiance in, and entitled to protection from, a government. There is a difference between a citizen and a subject. The subject implies a master or lord to whom the citizen owes personal allegiance, while the citizen implies membership through the tie of loyalty to a state with reciprocal rights, the enjoyment of privileges.

Let me emphasize that reciprocal rights. I want to define the term reciprocal. Reciprocal is indicated in the dictionary as something done by each to the other. Given and received; due from each to each.

Let me define rights, or at least refer to the source from which these reciprocal rights come. My rights as a citizen are not extended to me, or vouchsafed to me by the President; they are not granted by the governor, nor by the mayor, but the rights of citizenship are granted by every other citizen. So, then, I am going to talk about that aspect in which the rights of every other individual should be our concern, and if the citizen is to be saved, he must get that concept of his responsibility to his fellow man.

Perhaps I should define the term saved so that we will have each of our terms so clearly defined that we shall know the field in which we expect to occupy. To be saved is to make safe, or to bring to safety. To preserve; to be kept. Then, let us consider how the citizen may be saved.

Citizenship Applied

I think the best statement I have seen in support, at least, of citizenship, is one which I have noticed pasted on the windshield of automobiles: "Howdy. Half the road is yours." I think therein is the best statement of the citizenship, at least, in its implications, I have ever seen. Howdy. Half the road is yours. You have seen that, haven't you? I thought, That is magnanimous, generous. The individual driving the other car is going to see that I have half the road. It is liberal, altruistic. There is another implication, however, that is just as deep and just as strong; and that is, that only half the road is yours. Is not that a fine statement? Half is yours, recognizing my responsibility to you as we pass on the road; at the same time it calls to your attention your responsibility to me, as we pass on the road. The man who has that on the front of his car says to me that you shall have half and no more, but I am going to see that you have that half. Everything is couched in that implication that fits in with my concept of citizenship, in the relationship of man to man, in our civic and our political relations. The individualist of course says, I am going to get my half; and usually, when he is so determined to get his half, we find him getting our half, too, and in ordinary road parlance, he is a "road hog." You have to watch him because he does not recognize the rights of citizenship, my rights, and therefore will crowd me into the ditch.

Now, two men never pass each other and have an accident on the road when each is observing his right as a citizen, and also conferring on the other individual his right as a citizen. Men do not have automobile accidents on the road, colliding with each other, when both of them recognize that fundamental right of citizenship.

The individualist will say, I am going to get my half; but the socialist, on the other hand, says, I will see that he gets his half and then there will be half for me. There are two halves to every road, and if the other fellow gets his half, and his only, then there is vouchsafed to me the other half. Is that not true? If I see that your rights are secure, that you always have half the road, and no more, then I need not be concerned about my half of the road; and so it is in all of our activities and rights. If I see that you get your rights, I need not worry about mine, provided you get your rights, and your rights only.

Responsibility of Citizenship

A citizen, then, carries a great and tremendous social responsibility. Now if it is my business, as a citizen, to see that you and every other individual, gets his rights, then, do you not see my individualism must be concerned in the great social whole? That is the only way a citizen can be saved, to recognize the rights of every other citizen.

Paul, I think, made the statement, "No man lives unto himself," and no man does live unto himself, alone. If you have that concept of life, you are missing what life holds for the citizen; if you do not see the rights of others in your citizenship then you are missing that great benefit vouchsafed to us in our citizenship. My liberty, my happiness, my well-being, depends upon you, and your well-being and happiness depend upon me, as a citizen. My well-being depends upon the group in which I live in Independence, on all the groups in the State of Missouri, in the whole United States. Yes, my well-being depends upon the whole world of humanity. Let me illustrate.

You remember a few weeks ago there occurred in Japan a very serious earthquake. Well, you may say, that did not affect me. I do not know whether it did or not. I am inclined to think perhaps it did. I am sure all our women are affected by that earthquake in Japan; especially those who buy silks, because immediately there was an advance in the price of silks. Why? Because the Japanese furnish a large supply of the silk to the world. I am reminded that the prices of securities were affected in order that the insurance companies might meet the great loss from that Japanese earthquake. They sold securities in large amounts. This affected greatly the prices, here and elsewhere. Right here in Independence we were definitely affected through the loss of the buildings, and the necessity of rebuilding them. Very large orders for construction steel are being received in America, which means that our steel plant right here at Sheffield will have a greater amount of domestic orders, which affects a great many of our people in Independence; so, in citizenship, we must think in terms of the world. You and I are safe only when every other individual in all the world is safe.

No man lives unto himself. If the citizen is to be saved he must substitute social consciousness for the individual consciousness. Christ said, He who would save his life should lose it, but he who would lose his life for my sake, and the gospel's, shall find it. Is not that just as true with regard to the citizen? Christ did not desire that we give our lives primarily that aggrandizement might come to him, but in order that our fellow men should have better opportunities in this life, and so he says that he who loses his life for Christ's sake or the gospel's sake, or for the sake of his fellow man should find it.

Interests of the Citizen

The citizen, to be saved, must interest himself in all of the social institutions; that is, the churches, schools, economic problems, all of the problems that confront humanity.

There are only two factors that go to make up life; just two factors. One is heredity, and the other is environment. We are what we are because of the heredity which our forefathers gave us, and because of the environment in which we find ourselves. That goes to make up life. That is our life. I think the greatest right that any citizen could have vouchsafed to him is the right to be well born. I sometimes think we do not appreciate what it means to be well born physically, to be well born mentally. If the child is born physically at a disadvantage, he cannot do the world's work the way the world wants it done. If he is born short mentally, he cannot do the work that is expected of him, and as each citizen will fail to perform the function of citizenship, fail to do his part, then just to that extent am I disadvantaged. So if I fail to do the thing that makes for normal activity on your part, then you are disadvantaged. That is the reason why the Doctrine and Covenants says there shall be no idlers in Zion, because every other individual is disadvantaged just to the extent that we have idlers in our midst, people who are not willing to work; and if the citizen would be saved, he must see that every other citizen is well born.

This is one of the most serious problems confronting our citizenship to-day. Too many of our citizens are not being well born. In 1903 the United States took a census covering a period of fourteen years, and it found that in that period there had been an increase of 30 per cent in the general population, but there had been an increase of 100 per cent in the insane institutions. Now, I grant that a number of elements enter in there, perhaps, but the difference between 30 per cent in the general population and 100 per cent in the insane can hardly be accounted for in any such manner. That means to say that in fourteen years there was a greater increase in the number of insane than among the normal population. I do not want to have you confuse or use in the same terms feeble-mindedness with insane, for 60 per cent are born feeble-minded. There was something the matter with their heredity. They were not well born.

Laws of Heredity

You know the laws of heredity are as exact as any other of our physical laws. Like begets like. You may say there may be exceptions, but that will not disprove my statement. I am talking in the general, broad sense of the word. Other factors may enter in, but like begets like. In this feeble-minded class, we find three grades: The idiot, of a very low class, who cannot even feed himself; then the imbecile, which is a little bit higher; and then the moron, the class that gives us chief concern, for they seem to be perfectly normal. I saw a boy within the last few days, about twenty years of age, who has never been able to learn to read. He can speak only a few words. Physically, he appears to be perfect, but he was born short minded. His heredity passed this on to him, and that is the thing he finds himself with, shortmindedness, by reason of which he cannot meet the things of life in a normal way; and just to that extent every individual in this community of Independence is disadvantaged. The idiot would grade about three years mentally, three to seven for the imbecile, and seven to twelve for the moron. Think of an individual with the normal instincts of a fifteen-, sixteen-, or seventeen-year-old person, yet with only the mental capacity of a seven-year-old child to control it. Why are they problems? Because they are the great body of people who make up largely all forms of juvenile delinquency. We find them in the penitentiary, in the jails, in almshouses, insane asylums, homes for the feeble-minded. The delinquents are made up largely of morons. Do you know that 60 per cent of the prostitutes are feeble-minded? That is the reason they are prostitutes, because they have a normal instinct with a child's mind to control it. They were not well born. I say, it is the duty of every citizen to see that every one is well born. It becomes a serious problem with us. It is not only my right but duty to see that they are well born. We know nothing of the suffering and anguish that comes to such a person when he finds himself looked down upon. People make fun of him, and unfortunately some people are so unkind as to do that. They take advantage of their shortmindedness and poke fun at them.

Economic Aspect

Let us consider the economic aspect of this problem in the United States. It requires $150,000,000 annually to care for these people. Every mother's son of us is paying $1.50 a year to take care of them. Now that aspect should cause us some concern. That is not the most unfortunate part of it, because if this continues, this rate of increase in the feeble-minded over the normal population, it will take all the knowledge, strength, and ability of the normal people of America to feed these feeble-minded. They are increasing rapidly, much more so than the general population. Do you like to think of the normal, well-born people working as hard as they can to feed and care for these subnormal people who are not well born? That certainly is a very discouraging outlook.

The expense now of caring for this class is more in America than the expense of all the state universities combined.

This would be an extremely hopeless outlook if it were not possible to affect it. In New York it costs $1,000 to apprehend and dispose of every criminal case. Who is paying that? If you live in New York you are paying your share of the price for some citizen not being well born.

Unfortunately this type of individual is inclined to multiply, so Goddard says, from two to six times greater than normal individuals. I wonder if any one of you have ever read that little story, "Pigs is pigs." Some of you have. If subnormals increase from two to six times as fast as normals, do you not see that sooner or later they will overtake us?

Examples of Heredity

I want to call your attention to two instances of heredity, and the effects that grew out of it. I will refer first to Abraham. Abraham had two distinct families. One by the bondwoman; the other by his wife. Think, now, 3,800 years back. From them came the Israelites on the one hand, and the Bedouins, people of Arabia, on the other. Identical father. He cohabited with Hagar and started a line of progeny; then with Sarah, and started another line. What was the difference? The difference was in Sarah and Hagar. It could not have been otherwise. Abraham was the same individual. I grant there was a great difference in their environment, but usually environment is different because heredity is different. People of good heredity demand good environment. The other people live in squalor because they do not appreciate anything better. Heredity controls environment to a great extent.

Let me call your attention to another case. That of Martin Kallikak. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and when he was in one of the barracks he did perhaps as some other young men, met a prostitute who was feeble-minded and cohabited with her. This was the beginning of a long line of progeny.

Later on he came out of the service and married a normal young woman, and we have two lines of production or progeny, as we do with Abraham, except that we have more definite information on these two families. Martin Kallikak had one family from the feeble-minded woman, and the other from the normal woman. Mr. Goddard has gone to the trouble to trace five generations of his progeny, and here is what he found:

In family A, a normal father, that is Martin Kallikak, and a feeble-minded mother, there were 480 descendants, and they were as follows: 143 known to be feeble-minded; 291 whose mental status was unknown or doubtful; 36 illegitimate; 33 prostitutes; 24 confirmed alcoholics; 3 epileptics; 82 died in infancy; 3 criminals; 8 keepers of disreputable houses; 46 only known to be normal. Here were 480 descendants, out of which only 46 were known to be normal. Out of ten, nine were subnormal. Nine tenths not well born; nine tenths a menace to the community.

Now, let us follow the other family. Same father, Martin Kallikak, marries a normal woman, and they have 496 descendants; all but one are normal mentally. Only one was subnormal mentally out of 496. Two men were known to be alcoholic. One had a case of religious mania. Among the rest were found nothing but good citizens, doctors, lawyers, educators, judges, and others holding high positions. No epileptics or criminals; only 15 children died in infancy. Does that mean anything to you?

Take Abraham's case, and then take the case of Martin Kallikak. Do they show that heredity has anything to do with it? Does that bring home to you the need of seeing that every citizen is well born? From the feeble-minded mother, out of 480 progeny only 46 were normal; but the rest had to have some care more than the normal individual. We have spoken of subnormals, but remember this, my friends, that good traits are passed along just as well as are the bad traits. Some illustrious men were descendants from Kallikak and the normal woman.

State Laws on Heredity

The disadvantage of poor heredity has been so agitated that twelve States have passed laws that have said certain types of individuals shall not marry, but no State has enforced it, because public opinion has not yet been educated up to that point that they feel it ought to be done. There is still that general feeling that everybody has a right to produce that can, without regard to what they produce. So these States have passed eugenic laws, but are not enforcing them.

Remedies Suggested

Three remedies have been suggested for eliminating this type. One is education, which perhaps is the least effective, because that type of people are not people who respond so well to education. One of the others is segregation in colonies where they do not have a chance to intermingle. Feed them, take care of them, but do not allow them to bring in another crop of five, six, or seven of their kind. Treat them humanely, but do not allow them to reproduce. The other is sterilization. By sterilization they do not become unsexed, but have all the desires and expression, but do not reproduce. The operation is not a serious one. In the case of the male, he need not lose but one day's work, or perhaps two. All he loses by the operation is the possibility of bringing into the world a lot of others like himself.

I might cite you to a number of other cases on which statistics are available. One is the Jukes family, with its 310 professional paupers, 300 deaths in infancy, 440 physical wrecks from debauchery, 50 prostitutes, 60 habitual thieves, 7 murderers, 130 convicted criminals, out of 1,200 descendants, which have cost the State of New York alone $1,250,000 for the care of the progeny of this notorious family.

So I say that it is a requirement of every citizen to see that everybody is well born. How is that going to be brought about? By seeing that these people who are not physically and mentally capable to reproduce normally should be denied the right to reproduce. Twelve States have passed the law and some of you people live where that law is passed. I believe, now that the right to vote is being granted to women, that some of these days we are going to put into operation some of these laws in these States.

Control of Environment

Let us speak of the other element I cited. I said we are not only what we are because of our heredity, but also because of our environment. Let us speak briefly now of environment. We cannot help our heredity, and unfortunately we cannot help our environment very much, so far as the individual is concerned. The woman who cannot appreciate the difference between the children being clean and well-clothed, and the woman who can is the problem. The subnormal do not see that there is any great value in being clean. They only consider as values that which they eat and how they sleep. To them, that is life. But the normal individual demands something more than that.

We are born into the home, and therefore the home becomes the chief factor in our environment. In the first place the child spends 70 per cent of his time in the home. That would mean, then, to affect our home life would be the first necessary thing in order that the citizen might be saved. The right to be well born, in a good environment, we think is second only to that other first right to be well born. Yet we must concern ourselves as citizens in the home if we are going to be saved.

There is one way to get better homes, and that is to get better marriages. The foundation of the home goes back to the first day of courtship. If we have better marriages, we will have better homes. I have often said that the home is the foundation of Zion, and the child is the chief asset. To have better homes we must have better marriages. Better marriages make better homes, better children. Better children will make Zion, better civilization wherever we may live.

Elevate Marriage Ceremony

First I think we ought to elevate the marriage ceremony to a sacrament, and not encourage our young people going off to justices of the peace. Some young men and women meet casually in the park or street car and, for a joke, end up at the justice of the peace and are married. Such things, however, could be very easily managed if we had a concept of marriage as a sacrament.

Some individuals rise above the home environment, but most of us are not able to do that. We ought to have better schools. We ought to have a better concept of education than we have. Many consider only the idea of getting a college degree. In order that the individual may enter college he must meet college requirements. In order that he may enter high school he must meet high school requirements; and many start in the kindergarten with the idea of getting a degree instead of preparing for life. So I think we will have to get a new concept of education, because it is such an important part of the life of the individual. We learn to live by living and not in learning to make a dollar. That is the thing around which our educational system is built. We want an education that will fit us for life, as well as fit us to earn a dollar.

Control of Recreation

Another thing. We should concern ourselves about the recreational pleasures that our children have. There is no function in play that does not fit into the life of the individual, then and thereafter. We find the right sort of supervised recreation is the greatest character former outside of the home and school. With our highly specialized industrial life to-day we work eight hours, play eight hours, and sleep eight hours. We need not be concerned about that eight hours when we are asleep. We need not be much concerned about the eight hours when we work, but that eight hours in which we play is the problem confronting citizenship to-day.

How are we going to spend our leisure time? When we are idle is when Satan finds work for our hands. Then it is we get into the situations that make for the disadvantage of citizenship, and tear down our every moral fiber.

Civic Conscience

We ought to build up a civic conscience. You should keep the little plot behind your house clean. Does it occur to you that you should, if you are a good citizen, see that your lawn is cut and your place makes the best possible appearance? That you should paint your house? All that goes up to make better living conditions, and if Independence is going to be the City Beautiful we better get busy right now on beautifying and making beautiful. That is true anywhere you live. I do not have a very great respect for the farmer who does not cut the weeds along his place, but allows them to go to seed and blow all over the country, because every time the weeds are multiplied next year, and he may have to spend a large part of his time cutting weeds instead of raising a crop. That is the problem: Shall the farmer get a crop of corn or weeds? So I say the farmer owes it to every other farmer to see that his weeds do not go to seed. He must do that if the citizen is going to be saved.

Keeping Well

In the last few years we have been concerning ourselves somewhat with hygiene. If it is possible, we ought to keep ourselves well. It is wrong for you to allow yourself to get sick if you can keep well. I owe it to my fellow citizens to observe the rules of hygiene whereby I may keep myself physically fit. Then we think of that group hygiene which we call sanitation. My business is to see that the condition of the community in which I live is sanitary. Your business is to see that your premises are sanitary, that no filth be allowed to accumulate on your place as a nesting place for germs which would then be carried to my place. I must see that typhoid germs from my rubbish heap are not carried back to your house. I have no right to do anything that will jeopardize the health of any other citizen in my community.

You remember that in the Spanish-American War more men died of typhoid than bullets. We call the housefly the typhoid fly now, because it seems to be the chief carrier.

So it is our responsibility, as citizens, if we are going to be saved to keep sanitary premises. I might mention a number of other things. I hope the time will come when we will have brought medicine to that point that when anyone gets ill he can consult specialists and thus not be forced to go to bed, for it takes less to keep us well than to get us

PART XIII

[This is the second article by Miss Williamson on home building. Last week she told us about play. This week she tells us about the kinds of games children like to play. Her suggestions should help home builders in choosing proper games for their children, games that tend to develop powers at the right age for the greatest possible benefit.—EDITORS.]

References

If the series of articles on home building is to be studied in class or by the individual, a textbook is recommended, Mothercraft Manual, by Mary L. Read, Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, price $2.10 postpaid. Other references may be cited at the end of each chapter of the outline, which follows each article.

Games

By Ruby M. Williamson

Value of Games

Authorities tell us that "all games are play, but not all plays are games." Play is spontaneous and free, while a game always has some rule involved, some goal to be reached. Usually more than one person is required for a game.

Little children cannot play games, because they do not understand the rules. After about four years of age they begin to learn and sense the object of the game and are able to follow simple rules.

In addition to the educational values of play, Mary L. Read has given the following values of games: Training in social relationships, in group action, co-operation, competition; cultivating a sense of social interdependence; sharing experiences with mates; subordination to the rights, desires, and leadership well. It is a problem of citizenship. I have often said that as people of intelligence we can have anything we want, if we want it badly enough, and it is a problem of citizenship. Let me say, then, in conclusion that the citizen must be concerned in his fellow man. Christ was particularly concerned in this matter. He says, Love your neighbor as yourself, and that is one way that a man can have salvation. So if the citizen would be saved, he should see that the rights of every other citizen is vouchsafed to him, and then he need not concern himself about his own rights. He must see that every citizen has the right to be well born, and has a right to be well born into a good environment.

CHURCH NEWS

Faithful Members Taken by Death

BALD KNOB, ARKANSAS, January 19.—The branch at Bald Knob, Arkansas, lost one of its valuable and much loved members on January 6 when Sister Ida Rose Emde died. Sister Emde had been district secretary and organist since the organization of the district. She was the branch and Sunday school organist and also the teacher of the beginner class. The love the children had for her filled her heart with joy and they truly partook of the Spirit of Christ under her direction.

Sister Ida had belonged to the church about five or six years, during which time she was ever faithful to her post of duty and seemed every day to bring a more determined desire for more efficient service in the cause to which her life bore testimony.

She was also secretary of the county teachers association. Having been a public-school teacher for twelve years, she was well known. Three schools were closed for the funeral services, so it was necessary to secure the largest church in town. The Christian Church, which always treats the Saints kindly, offered their building and the services were in charge of their local pastor, Reverend Jesse Macon. Elder W. P. Bootman preached the sermon.

The congregation at Bald Knob are also missing Brother Charles P. Miller who died December 14, 1923. His death was caused by an accidental discharge of a gun. He was clerk for the Missouri Pacific Railroad company at the time of his death.

Branch Membership

The Bald Knob Branch has an enrollment of one hundred eleven members. The church is one mile from town and the membership scattered. Regular attendance with some is impossible so social functions are quite limited.

At present they have a full set of branch officers. County Judge F. O. White is the pastor; Thomas W. Emde, priest; P. S. Harbour, teacher; and W. J. Edwards, deacon. Thomas W. Emde and P. S. Harbour were ordained January 6 of this year.

The pastor preaches every fourth Sunday; prayer and sacrament services are held at eleven a. m. each first Sunday; and Sunday school at ten o'clock each Sunday, with interest growing. A class of young people has recently been organized. The branch is proud of them and is looking for some of others; loyalty to a leader or group; incentive to improvement of skill in order to compete with others; acceptance of the consequences of failure or inefficiency; opportunity for leadership to him who is able; realization of law, through rules of game; measuring of personal ability and personality with that of mates. After going over this list of values, who could deny the need of more games in the child's education?

Kinds of Games

Three classifications of games are given according to

- (1) the degree of physical activity involved;
- (2) the degree and kind of mental activity required;
- (3) the moral and social traits cultivated.

Any game tried should be suited to the physical powers and mental development of the child and should be expressive of his spontaneous interests.

Games for the little children should include surprise, imitation, observation, guessing, hiding, seeking, catching, chasing, running, and ball play. Every game involves some attention and conformity to rules. For example, "Follow the leader" involves activity, careful observation of the leader's movements, imitation, alertness, motor control, and reasoning in guessing. Any game mentioned could be classified in a similar manner.

Children from one to three years enjoy games of motor control, finger plays, hiding, observation, surprise, guessing, and imitation; from three to four years they are interested in sense games, sight and observation, touch, hearing, and simple motor control games, language games, games which develop poise, relaxation, and concentration. Simple circle games, singing games, dramatic imitation, and catching games may be used with children from four to six years of age. These are used in addition to games described for the earlier period. From six to nine, children are especially interested in traditional circle games as "London bridge," "Round and round the village," "Farmer in the dell"; motor control games as "Hopscotch," "Cat's cradle," marbles, and handicap races. Counting games, tag variations, catching games, "Pom pom, pull away," "Hawk and chickens," "Blind man's buff," and sense games, table games, imitation, and invention all are fascinating to children of this age.

Outline of Course of Study

(The outline follows the chapters in the textbook. Questions are selected from manuals, Mothercraft, by Etta Hunt, 10 cents, and Mothercraft for Girls, by Alice Mae Burgess, 15 cents, and other questions are based upon the articles. The question manuals and any reference books as listed may be team work from them which will mean much to the interest and enthusiasm of the school.

Meetings Held

Last August, Brethren W. P. Bootman and J. T. Riley held a four weeks' meeting in the city park with good interest from the nonmembers, many of whom assisted in the choir. At the close of the meeting four were baptized and many others became friends of the cause because of this opportunity to get acquainted with our position. Rural districts have been offered to the Saints where our ministers will occupy when conditions are favorable.

Bald Knob has had two reunions since the organization of the district by Apostles J. F. Curtis and W. M. Aylor in May, 1920. The next district conference will be held at Fisher, Arkansas, to which Bald Knob expects to send a large delegation.

Eleven Baptized at Columbus

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 10.—Preceding the regular prayer service January 9 the Saints witnessed the baptism of eleven people, and it was an especially joyful sight, as so many of them were young men and boys, the kind of material needed in the branch. Five of them were young men under twenty years of age, the result of particular labors with them. The Spirit of God was here in power during the baptism, and later during confirmation, and lasted through the prayer service that followed.

Last Sunday, January 6, was the first anniversary for being in the new church building. It was completed last year. The weather was bitter cold but a good attendance was had. All felt God's presence in the services throughout the day and were greatly blessed.

On the Sunday before Christmas the small church choir, consisting of five regular members and two substitutes, gave a Christmas cantata entitled the "World's Redeemer." It required much work and was the first of its kind to be given here, but the result was worth the effort. The choir was to have given special music for the branch anniversary, but on account of the serious illness of the mother of two of the members the music was postponed until a future date.

Bazaar Held at Conference

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, January 6.—The Women's Department bazaar was held on December 16, during the time of the district conference. A big effort was made to make this a success because of the debt on the branch for legitimate expenses, and an existing emergency. That this was successful is shown from the report in which there was received from the sale of goods and a chicken dinner and supper, $536 with an expenditure of $85, giving the net receipts at about $451.

The work of the helpers at the last district conference, especially that of Sister Dora Glines, shows good results in the various departmental work.

Elder Charles Putnam of Woodbine, Iowa, has been conducting missionary meetings at the Riverside Mission in the city, and despite discouraging weather conditions has been favored with some marked interest, that promises returns in the increased membership of the church, but more especially in the Saints having a better understanding of the faith of the church with added devotion to its policies.

Of late there has been considerable sickness, and although God has answered many prayers for relief, there is still some sickness among the Saints. Sister May Skinner has not greatly improved.

On the 6th, at the last sacrament, an excellent testimony meeting was held. On account of the severe cold, some of those appointed to occupy out in the district remained inside, fearing to make the trip.

The Temple Builders have changed their time of meeting, and now meet on Wednesday at 7 p. m., just before the prayer meeting. All the departments of the church are trying hard to work together, and to support the interests of the church in every line. The Women's Department meets in their regular monthly business and social meeting Thursday afternoon. At this time officers for the future will be elected.

Home Department Presents Medals

MANTENO, ILLINOIS, January 10.—The Sunday school Christmas program held Christmas eve was a decided success. The program consisted of parts by the children, three special numbers by the choir, a thirty-minute play, "The Christmas chime," by Brother and Sister Leslie Rogers and Brother and Sister Paul Pement. The hall was beautifully decorated, which added much to the enjoyment of the program. Nine members of the Sunday school and home department were presented medals for committing Scripture during the past year.

Brother and Sister J. H. McGuire, of Hammond, Indiana, were guests of the Deselm Saints from Sunday, December 30, until New Year's Day. Brother McGuire and Brother Paul Pement had charge of the New Year's dinner which was held in the hall. Mrs. O. C. Shreffler roasted the turkey and all agreed it was "the best ever." After dinner our "colored troupe" entertained with some plantation songs and Elder and Sister W. L. Christy, of Beloit, Wisconsin, who were present, each gave an interesting talk. It seemed like old times to have Brother and Sister Christy here as they have been on hand to render help and assurance many times during past difficulties. They stayed until January 3.

At present District Superintendent J. L. Cooper is laboring in this branch. He expects to remain over Sunday, January 13. The members are always cheered and encouraged by his visits.

The annual business meeting, including all departments, was held December 16. Several important changes were made and a good spirit manifest. The aim is to get in touch with every member on the church record either through the Sunday school or home department and encourage each to move forward in the Master's work.

Saints and Methodists Render Joint Cantata

PISGAH, IOWA, January 11.—Sunday evening preceding Christmas the Methodist and Latter Day Saint choirs rendered the cantata, "The angelic choir," by Carrie B. Adams, Sister Bertha Van Eaton acting as director. Several college students rendered valuable assistance, having learned their parts before coming home for the holidays.

The election of officers for the coming year took place December 27, and resulted in the choice of Brother George Meggars for president, to fill the place made vacant by the resignation of Brother Joseph Lane. Brother Meggars has acted as Sunday school superintendent for a number of years, and following his election to the presidency, Brother Charles Van Eaton was chosen to take the superintendency of the Sunday school.

Many regret Brother Lane's moving from our midst, for he has been identified with the branch from its organization and has been at the head almost all of that time. Not only does the branch here lose a true and faithful servant, but the community loses a worthy citizen.

Brother and Sister Reeves and family are leaving here to go to Logan. They will be greatly missed.

Portland Saints Have Oyster Supper

PORTLAND, OREGON, January 2.—An oyster supper was given by the Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression Friday evening, December 14, in the church basement. The Department of Women had a booth where fancywork and miscellaneous articles were sold. Brother C. O. Young also sold photographs of Oregon scenery. The proceeds, amounting to about $35 from the oyster supper, $10 from the booth, and about $8 from the pictures, were contributed to the Christmas offering. The Christmas offering superintendent expects to have a total offering for the year of about 200.

A very interesting and entertaining program was rendered in the auditorium of the church on Sunday evening, December 23. Each class provided a number, which was a surprise to the other classes, and the choir sang several selections, among which were two or three beautiful anthems.

The final scene was generally conceded to be the best of all. The little tots were discovered sitting on the floor in front of the fireplace from which Santa Claus emerged with his sack of candy and nuts. Each little boy and girl received a little treat. Some of the little ones were frightened at first, while others told Santa what they wanted for Christmas.

Sacramento Establishes Building Fund

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, January 7.—Recent elections in the branch and departments resulted in the reelection of presiding officers, with Elder George Daley, pastor, Elder T. J. Lawn, assistant, Elder W. H. Dawson, superintendent of Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression. The new building program was approved and made permanent and the fund now is close to $600. The annual bazaar held by the Department of Women, with Sister J. A. Austin, supervisor in charge, at the home of Sister Rose Dawson, netted $137.30 towards this fund.

District Organizer Ruth Clegg visited the Department of Women in October, at a special meeting. The members were encouraged by her counsel and personal report of the General Conference.

Interesting Baptism

A baptism of interest was performed here by the pastor late in November, when an elderly woman, Mrs. Sarah Osmer, united with the church. This sister was converted solely through the personal work of Sister Florence McDonald, in conversations and literature loaned, especially the Ensign and The Call at Evening.

Brother Daley has preached at the Rocklin Mission recently. The Rocklin sisters kindly included some of the unsold articles of this branch in their bazaar, selling $27 worth for this department.

The Oriole Girls Club, with Sister Orah Johnston, monitor, gave a Halloween party last fall, inviting the younger boys, and having a jolly party with games, prizes, and refreshments.

Cantata Given

The choir of women's voices, with several assisting singers, accompanied by the organ, piano, and two violins, under the direction of Sister Birdie Clark, local and district chorister, rendered the Christmas cantata, "The angel and the star." The chapel was well filled, over one hundred attending.

The Sunday school had its entertainment and tree on Sunday evening, December 23. The church was again filled and all enjoyed the program, Santa Claus, and candy boxes.

The district conference convenes here February 1 to 3. The reception committee, chosen at the recent business meeting, includes: Sister Pauline O. Napier, 910½ Twenty-second Street, phone Main 4954-M; Sister Gertrude Bidwell, 2300 Third Avenue, phone Capital 165-J; Brother E. Epling, 3216 T Street, phone Capital 999-W; Brother C. E. Ball, 717 Eighth Street, phone Main 7534-W. Sister Napier's residence is near the church. Brother Ball's residence is near several main depots.

First Chicago Choir Gives Cantata

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, January 18.—The choir sang their Christmas cantata, "The world's Redeemer," by Holton, on Sunday, December 23, which was very well rendered and greatly appreciated.

The Sunday school Christmas entertainment was a feast of talent exhibited by the children under the direction of Sister Petterson. Even old Santa was there to delight all with his jollity and gifts.

On December 30 the Central Church choir visited this branch and furnished a musical program of carols, which was very entertaining. These musical exchanges are enjoyed and they enable the departments to obtain new suggestions.

Pastor Frank F. Wipper was the speaker Sunday morning, January 13, and Brother E. K. Patterson occupied in the evening.

A New Year's watch party was given, at which games were played and speeches made, after which an oyster supper was served. As the bells and whistles were ushering in the new year all sang "Abide with me," and the pastor offered prayer; then all went home happy that they had started the new year off properly.

Many visitors stop at the First Chicago Branch. They are always welcome and are invited to attend the church.

All of the newly elected officers are fitting into their places and the work is going ahead. The Saints are pleased to report that their Christmas offering went over the top.

Out of Town Speakers to Occupy Pulpit

FALL RIVER, MASSACHUSETTS, January 17.—Branch business meeting was held Monday, January 14, and the old officers were reelected for the coming year. Plans were also made at this meeting for the district conference to be held in Fall River, March 15 and 16.

Between now and the time for the Onset reunion a different speaker will be in the pulpit twice a month from out of town. These speakers include some of the best in the district.

It seems probable that Elder O. L. Thompson will hold a series of meetings here March 9 to 15.

The Department of Women and the primary department have had various socials and sales and thereby earned money for coal, new furnace, hardwood floors, carpet, etc.

The boys and men from twelve years of age up, meet in the church on Friday evening for a social time.

The choir gave a sacred cantata, "His birthday," the Sunday evening before Christmas. A group of singers went out Christmas eve and sang carols at the homes of the Saints. Christmas afternoon a play was given by the Sunday school, called "Santa's slipper." A tree was enjoyed by all.

The Sunday school met at the church on January 1 and opened the Christmas offering banks. Over three hundred dollars was raised, with the aim still higher for next year.

Much sickness prevails in the branch. Elder John Rogerson, for many years pastor at New Bedford and Fall River, is confined to his home with inflammatory rheumatism. Several of the younger Saints are seriously ill.

Afternoon Prayer Meetings Held During Winter

ARTLAND, WISCONSIN, January 7.—It has been decided to hold the midweek prayer meetings at the homes in the afternoons while the cold is so intense. The plan was found to be very successful last winter.

The New Year ushered in the branch president, who is also district president. He had been on an extended tour of the district and reports many interesting experiences.

Elder W. D. Ellis and wife from Michigan are visiting their daughter, Sister E. Leslie Mogg, this winter. The Saints are pleased to have a new speaker with them.

As the cold begins to strengthen, the Religio takes on an added zest. Election of officers will be held next Friday. Branch officers were elected the first Sunday in the new year, which resulted in most of the old officers being reelected.

The Christmas tree and entertainment went off very nicely. The Religio girls did well in drills and songs.

Elder J. J. Cornish preached from the word "Shall" recently.

Farewell Concert Given Holland Missionary

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, January 10.—A farewell concert was given for Brother John Eggen, who leaves for a mission to Holland on January 15. Brother Eggen is a man of humility and he goes with the prayers of the Saints that God will bless and assist him in his labors.

The president of the Department of Women, Sister George Cummins, entertained the sisters at her home on January 2, with a new year's party. All present report an enjoyable time.

A series of meetings commencing January 13, is to be held in Salt Lake City by Brothers R. L. Fulk, R. E. Davey, and G. P. Levitt.

A Christmas tree and concert was held in the church December 21, children, officers, and friends taking part. It was greatly appreciated by the congregation.

Island Apostle Visits Coldwater

COLDWATER, MICHIGAN, January 16.—Apostle Clyde F. Ellis stopped over just for one night on his trip back to the West, giving a very timely talk. Brother Ellis has a very warm place in the hearts of the Coldwater Saints whose prayers are ever for his success.

Election of officers has taken place in the different departments of the work here and all seem to be full of zeal and energy to make this year a banner one.

Although the Coldwater Branch is sixty years old, it is still holding forth in strength. The regular branch services are conducted in good spirit and are very encouraging. Though the charter members of the branch have performed their work and passed to their reward and the mantle has fallen upon the sons and daughters, their efforts for the redemption of Zion are approved. The wish of all is to perpetuate the work so nobly started by these fathers and mothers.

The preaching services by Brother S. W. L. Scott have been and are interesting and instructive. The Saints here certainly know of Brother Scott's efficiency as an educator, and although he has been here so many years, his sermons are yet new.

Armistice Day was observed by the branch with an appropriate sermon by Brother Scott.

Instructive Topics Discussed by Priesthood

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, January 10.—The first sacrament service of the year was fairly well attended and a good spirit enjoyed. In the afternoon the priesthood of the Central District met in the first church and enjoyed an interesting and instructive session. Many important topics of special benefit were discussed, the value of strict adherence to church policies, faithful application to service and greater unity, and the art of approaching strangers, being taken up in order.

Tuesday, January 15, the leading officers in the different departments of work will be chosen for the Central District, and it is expected that a lively interest will be manifested in the coming months.

Branch business meeting was held January 8, and the following officers were elected: G. R. Kuykendall, pastor, with B. D. Smith and J. Charles Mottash as counselors; Scott Falkner, secretary; Stanley Parrish, statistician; Mrs. Wallace Janrow, city supervisor of Department of Women; Henrietta Davis, city musical director; Mrs. W. A. Blair, city Sunday school superintendent; Floyd Moore, city director of Department of Recreation and Expression.

The East Side are busy with their constructive work along building lines as well as showing an active interest in all departments, which is typical of this branch.

Saint Clair Officers Installed

SAINT CLAIR, MICHIGAN, January 15.—The officers for the new year have taken their places and the Saints here are looking for a prosperous new year with Elder George Skinner as president of the branch. Brother F. O. Benedict, of Carsonville, is here and his sermons are very inspiring to the people.

The Sunday school is progressing and it is hoped to see it move more rapidly with the effort now being put forth.

Group System Working Well in Twin Cities

SAINT PAUL, MINNESOTA, January 14.—The group system, as adopted two months ago, is working very well in meeting some of the ministerial problems in the Twin Cities. There are three groups at present, with the possibility of soon organizing another group in Saint Paul.

The Minneapolis Branch held its regular business meeting on January 7, the most important features of which were the election of officers for the new year and the calling of two men into the priesthood. Elder C. A. Kress was sustained as branch president, as also was Brother Wesley Elvin in his office as head of the Religio. A new Sunday school superintendent, Brother Arthur M. Smith, who has but recently moved into the city, and a new head of the Women's Department, Sister Baker, were also elected.

The brethren who were called into the priesthood are William Tutty, to the office of priest, and Robert Lister, to that of deacon. Their ordinations were performed the following Sunday night.

Prayer meetings held in two parts of the city besides in the church on Wednesday nights are meeting with the hearty approval of the Saints, and are proving a source of inspiration and spiritual help to all. A union prayer meeting was held on the Wednesday night following Christmas in the church, and a record attendance resulted. Nearly all the seats were occupied and there was a large number participating in the service, which lasted over two hours.

Boston, Attleboro and Providence Choirs Render "Messiah"

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND, January 8.—Sunday, December 9, this branch was visited by the choirs of the Boston and Attleboro Branches which combined with the Providence Branch choir to render the oratorio "Messiah." District Chorister James R. Houghton conducted. An unusually large and very appreciative congregation heard the profound composition. Miss Nester Williams played the piano accompaniment. The soprano solos were taken by Miss Helen Coombs, contralto by Miss Blanch Lannon, tenor by Mr. Louis Phillips, and bass by Mr. James Houghton.

"The Messiah," which is well known to all lovers of music, was composed in 1741 by George Frederick Handel and its text selected from scripture by Charles Jennens. On April 13, 1742 it was produced in Dublin under Handel's direction. In 1789 Mozart wrote additional accompaniments, and in 1884 Robert Franz inserted still more accompaniments required by the development of instrumentation after Handel's time.

The branch has recently been visited by Missionary Orval L. Thompson. Although Brother Thompson is a new man in this field, he has won a cozy corner in the hearts of the Southern New England Saints. The Saints recognize in Brother Thompson a true servant of Christ, a forceful preacher filled with the Spirit of God.

Services Stopped Because of Cold Weather

JOYFIELD, ILLINOIS, January 12.—Now at the beginning of the new year it is stormy and cold. No church services were held last Sunday, January 6, on account of the severe storm, as it is hard in a country place to go far in bad weather. It is hoped the weather may become better soon so services can be continued.

Sunday, December 30, Brother Homer Doty, district president, was in attendance at Sunday school and prayer meeting. He gave a very instructive talk, showing the necessity of keeping an accurate account of income and expenditures. As a result of his talk five members of the branch are keeping family budget books. By so doing they hope to be able to pay more tithing.

Sunday, December 23, the Sunday school had a Christmas tree after Sunday school. Each member received a treat and small gift from the tree. The spirit of the Master was felt and everyone reported a pleasant time.

Little Folks Take Part in Program

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, January 10.—The Christmas entertainment was held on Sunday, December 23. The program was rendered by the little folks. Much credit is due them and those in charge. A good attendance was enjoyed. Forty-six dollars was placed to the credit of the branch.

Ru Vera Robidoux, age three, daughter of Brother and Sister Arthur Robidoux, died December 26, 1923, of diphtheria.

The regular business meeting was held on December 19, one week earlier than usual, because Christmas fell on the scheduled day. Marcus M. Bilyne was elected president. Other officers were sustained in their respective offices.

The Department of Women held its regular meeting in the afternoon of December 19. Supper was served at 6 p. m. and all remained for the business meeting following. The Department of Women is working hard to aid in meeting the branch expenses and the street paving assessments.

Brother J. R. James, of Plattsmouth, spent the week-end with his daughter, Mrs. E. C. Taylor.

The Saints are pleased to hear of the improvement of Brother Lyle McFarlane, who has been in the Sanitarium for several weeks.

Missionary G. R. Wells is expected to visit this branch soon.

Vinal Haven Has Special Meetings

VINAL HAVEN, MAINE, January 13.—Elder Harvey Minton begins to-night on his second week of a series of meetings in the Latter Day Saint church, which will continue as interest seems to grow and develop.

The Saints have volunteered their services to install a font in the church for baptism. Work will begin at once.

Election of officers was held January 2 and nearly all the officers were reelected for 1924. In the Sunday school, Mrs. Harvey Minton was elected as superintendent and Mrs. Sadie Warren assistant superintendent.

Supper was served in the vestry of the church New Year's evening from 5 to 7 o'clock, the proceeds to go for the Christmas offering. A good social time was enjoyed, getting acquainted with each other, telling of the gospel and its peace and happiness to all who will obey.

Apostles to Hold Meetings at Tulare

TULARE, CALIFORNIA, January 12.—A series of meetings are to be held from January 13 to 20 by Apostles D. T. Williams and R. S. Budd.

The Department of Women held a bazaar December 13 and 14 which was said by many to be the prettiest ever held in town. About $40 was cleared. Articles amounting to $20 have been sold since the bazaar.

The Christmas program here was held on Christmas eve. The program committee deserves high praise for the entertainment of music, vocal and instrumental, recitations, and pantomimes. There was a fine tree and Santa Claus did his part well.

The Department of Women, with the help of the men, have been very busy cleaning the church, painting the floor and woodwork and calcimining the walls.

The Christmas offering treasurer has collected about $100 the past year.

The publicity agent has done a good work the past year.

Cherokee Sends Young Men to Graceland

CHEROKEE, IOWA, January 20.—Lynn White and Archie Walker, two of the best young brothers of Cherokee, Iowa, will start for Lamoni this week to enroll in Graceland College.

Cold weather has greatly hindered all branch work here this month. During the winter months the weekly prayer services are held in the homes of the Saints, alternating in different parts of the city each week. Some spiritual times are enjoyed at these services, so it is to be regretted that the attendance is not as good as it should be. However, the sacramental service of January 5 was attended by a goodly number of Saints who enjoyed the presence of the Holy Spirit. The severe cold weather excused those who could not come.

E. L. Edwards, of Pomeroy, Bishop's agent, gave an interesting and instructive sermon, Sunday, December 30, on "The leaks in the barrel." He used a chart illustration for the small but attentive audience. He was also the speaker Sunday morning of January 13, giving another chart sermon, "The ledger." A. R. Crippen, the local pastor, was the evening speaker on both those Sundays. W. W. Leonard, priest, was the speaker on the morning of January 20, with a good talk to a small audience.

To Organize Orchestra

The young people plan on organizing an orchestra providing they can find a leader for it. The Department of Women held a bake sale in a downtown store, January 12. Though the day was severely cold, the sisters realized about fourteen dollars profit.

Guy M. Haynes, deacon, has moved to Waterloo, Iowa, with his family. He will undoubtedly be a great help to the branch of that city.

Alfred Ballantyne was very badly burned about the legs and arms, January 1, by an explosion of gasoline. The fire destroyed the barn and Brother Ballantyne's car, also several hundred bushels of grain. The brother is still confined in the hospital and recovery is slow.

Prominent Member Heads Industrial League

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, December 21.—John Zimmermann, jr., of Philadelphia, has been named president of the Industrial Amateur Baseball League of that city. He was formerly vice president of that league.

This organization is the pioneer in local athletics and has been in the foreground in all branches since it was formed ten years ago, says the Public Ledger. Since the war industrial athletics have returned and Brother Zimmermann feels that the current year will be a successful one. He will outline the plans for the baseball season at the January meeting.

Brother Zimmermann, jr., is a prominent business man of Philadelphia as well as one of the most enthusiastic church workers. His father, John Zimmermann, sr., is a bishop as also is he himself. A sister, Miss Lillian Zimmermann, is at present residing in Independence where she has become a member of the faculty of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Winter Does Not Stop Good Work at Spokane

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON, January 20.—Spokane is having some real winter at present and during the past month which assures the enjoyment of the new furnace.

Last Wednesday evening there was a fine prayer meeting in which all present enjoyed a portion of the good Spirit. At the close of the service one more good lady made the covenant and passed through the waters of regeneration.

The class that is studying the Book of Mormon from a scientific point is making good headway, using the work of Brother L. E. Hills to good advantage. Sister Chloe Shaw, who has charge of the program work, is still doing a good work, giving everybody a chance to help.

Brother Daniel Macgregor stopped on his way to his mission field. In his characteristic way he gave some needed advice which was appreciated by all. Brother Eli Bronson reports that he is having a very successful series of meetings at Clarkston, Idaho.

Brother Carl Crum came over on a visit and on the Sunday before Christmas gave a fine talk here, Zion being the paramount issue.

There was a very good program rendered at the church on Christmas Eve. Everybody present seemed to have a good time and all were served with a treat.

Sister Effa Brett, who has been well known to Spokane Saints, died recently after a life of suffering.

The work here seems to be onward. No one shows any disposition to turn back. Even though weary of the same routine, when a call comes for actual service the majority are glad to help.

Explosion at Cleveland Causes Slight Damage

CLEVELAND, OHIO, January 17.—The first Sunday of the year and new administration of the Cleveland Branch brought the coldest weather of several years. The first thing in the morning the gas furnace exploded, wrecking the furnace and blowing out the basement windows. Brother Kurtz was standing right in front of the furnace but was unhurt.

The building was too cold and dusty for Sunday school or church, but the auxiliary coal furnace was hastily put in order for use and services were announced for evening. Brother Patterson spoke on "New Year resolutions."

Last Sunday the building was comfortable and the attendance better than usual.

Blue Rapids Renovates Church Building

BLUE RAPIDS, KANSAS, January 24.—When Elder Benjamin F. Jackson went to Blue Rapids, Kansas, he found that the branch had fallen far behind in its work. He took up the work and started things moving.

Subscriptions were solicited for reshingling the church, and the work done. The church also needed other repairing so it was proposed to the Sunday school that funds be raised for buying paper for the walls. The paper was purchased and Brother Jackson and his wife did the work of papering. Woodwork was also varnished. The result is a pleasing appearance for the meeting place. With the assistance of willing workers, the church is cleaned and kept looking well.

The district conference was held at this place January 12 and 13.

Macon Saints Hold Annual Election

MACON, MISSOURI, January 6.—The annual business meeting was held in the parlors of the church with Elder W. B. Richards of Bevier, Missouri, in charge. At the very beginning when the song, "Earnest workers for the Master" was sung, the Saints seemed to realize their responsibility.

The following officers were elected: A. R. Moore, president; Aliene Moss, clerk; A. R. Moore, chorister; Elma Welch, pianist; Mayme Joyce, correspondent; Henry Moore, Sunday school superintendent; S. J. Joyce, assistant; Mrs. Florence Gray, superintendent of cradle roll; Joseph Charles, secretary; Ed Moss, treasurer; Mayme Joyce, chorister; Elma Welch, pianist; Ed Moss, superintendent of Religio; D. F. Burchett, assistant; Mabel Joyce, secretary; Emma Moss, treasurer; Aliene Moss, chorister.

Brother J. C. Crabb writes from Sioux City, Iowa, that his sight is improving. He recently underwent an operation upon one eye, and this eye is getting better. The other one is almost well, and he is able to see with it farther than he ever could.

Lamoni Items

LAMONI, IOWA, January 18.—Following are some of the things brought out in the report of C. E. Wight, the branch president, at the annual business meeting last week:

A great spirit of helpfulness has been manifest on every hand during the past year, not only in the Lamoni Branch but throughout the stake. New vigor has been brought to many of the branches of the stake. In Lamoni progress has been made in a number of ways.

Department of Women

The Department of Women, which was formerly divided into four groups is now consolidated into two, the West Group, under the leadership of Sister F. M. McDowell, and the East Group, under Sister Oliver Hayer. An effort along study lines has been carried on this year with fair success, but they have experienced difficulty in interesting a very large number of women.

The women of the groups during the past year financed the repairing of the baptismal font, which was a great need. It had been unfit for use for some time, but is now in first-class shape.

Recreation and Expression

The Department of Recreation and Expression has continued its study period on Sunday evenings and has taken a supervisory attitude toward the community movies held in the college chapel. Brother Roy Roberts had this in charge until September when it was taken over by Brother Forest Roberts.

Sunday School

The Sunday school has continued under the direction of A. M. Carmichael, Brother Wilber E. Prall exercising an active supervision in his absence. The Sunday school has many advantages under the division this year over that of last, among them being the possibility of more adequate class work, thus better carrying out the musical program of the branch.

Social Service

The attendance at social service is not what it should be. Three new wards were added during the close of the year as a means toward increasing the attendance, and results so far have been very gratifying. The attendance at preaching and sacramental services is very gratifying also.

Oratorio Society

Through the consolidation of the College Glee Club and the Lamoni choir into the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society, this makes in all probabilities the largest choir in Iowa. This musical organization furnishes music at the morning services and gives a concert in the evening on the first Sunday of each month.

Priesthood

The work of the visiting officers was above that of last year. There were 818 visits made by five high priests, ten elders, thirteen priests, eleven teachers, five deacons, and the presidency. This is 178 more visits than last year, but by a peculiar coincidence 178 less than the high mark of the previous year.

The priesthood has met twice each month and a comprehensive program has been outlined for the coming year.

Church Improvements

Many improvements in church buildings and grounds have been made by the custodian, Charles F. Church, deacon. A. Otis White, the financial deacon, in his report showed all expenses for the year had been paid and a portion of the deficit of the previous year wiped out. Brother Wight expressed himself as being very optimistic regarding the future.

Lamoni Has Fine Cemetery

A report from the cemetery committee was very gratifying. It is conceded that Lamoni has one of the finest cemeteries in southern Iowa, if not the best. Something over a year ago a new tract of over five acres was added, making the whole over twelve acres. This has been planted to hard maple trees and shrubs. The whole plat is beautifully rolling and is kept in first class shape the year around by a hired caretaker. The grass is kept mowed and the unused portions beautified with flower gardens in the summer time. The general oversight of the cemetery is in charge of a committee, consisting of Brethren W. A. Hopkins, John Midgorden, and T. B. Nicholson. They have provided for the needs of the future as well as the present by establishing a trust fund, and one half of the money collected for sale of lots, etc., goes into this trust fund. It is felt that the proper care of this, the last resting place of friends, is one of the very important tasks of the community and the church.

Christmas Offering

Brother George W. Blair has been appointed to have charge of the Christmas offering for next year and has already commenced an active campaign to secure pledges for this fund. The offering this year was good but not what it should be. Brother Church was in charge of it but was not appointed till toward the middle of the year and was thus handicapped.

Debt Paid Six Months Ahead of Schedule

BRENTWOOD, MISSOURI, January 22.—This branch has, in the last two and one half years, through consecrated effort and the work of willing hands, purchased the ground and erected a church building. It stands in the Saint Louis District to-day free of debt, the deeds being recently filed in the Bishop's hand.

The church is of stucco construction with a concrete basement which is finished off for class rooms. The upper auditorium seats one hundred and has often been filled with eager listeners to the Master's message.

Free Labor Furnished

It is interesting to note that in the construction of this building all the labor was furnished free of charge, with the exception of $65 which was paid to a contractor in a line not familiar to any of our men. The Department of Women has been very active in their work to consummate the debt of the church. This debt was paid off six months ahead of time and to these women belongs much praise, along with many pleasant memories of the good home-made pies and the suppers furnished by them for the purpose of raising funds.

This church building can be truly looked upon as one that all the departments had a hand in, for the girls with their needles helped while the boys used hammers, shovels, and hoes. The fathers did their share, too, for they assisted the carpenters in laying out the work and in other duties too numerous to mention.

While paying for the material and ground for the church building the branch of ninety members paid also in tithes and to various funds for the general church, including the Christmas offering, some $2,000.

Brentwood Branch has just launched another six months for their officers who promise some real constructive work in the spirituality of the branch, so that all departments will become more efficient. The Saints here are enthused and HERALD readers will probably hear from them again.

Kansas City Stake News

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, January 24.—Experiences in making missionary calls were related by about ten men at the priesthood meeting at 3 o'clock, January 20. These were interesting, to say the least, and they show that the local force can do missionary work if they will. These visits were made to neighbors and to people in factories where the brethren were employed. The experiences related were results of the following letter sent out by W. O. Hands and W. S. Brown to forty of the ministry:

Letter to Priesthood

"Many of our leading men have been won by fireside talks and the reading of a tract. For instance: Joseph Burton was first interested by a tract left at his home. A little girl, by correspondence, converted two men who became elders and have baptized hundreds, one of whom was 'Open Bible' Thomas.

"For our next priesthood meeting, January 20, we want you to give us a verbal report on three missionary visits which you are to make prior to that meeting. We give below a suggestion for an approach which you might try:

"Mr. ———, the Men's Club of my church have put me on the program for the next meeting. I am to visit a neighbor and tell him about our church and then make a verbal report of it to the club. Will you be my victim? And when may I call?"

"You are to make these visits, reporting the results on the inclosed cards to the address on the card. They are numbered one, two, and three, and are to be mailed in the order given, within twenty-four hours after making the visit.

"The inclosed tract will be a help to your visit. Note on your card if your neighbor will accept more church literature if sent him.

"Don't put this off. You have two weeks, but do it now.

"If we don't hear from you by January 12, it will put us under the necessity of getting in touch with you again. Try to save us this trouble and expense."

The efforts of these letters and the visits can safely be said to be a success. They should be followed up.

Recent Speakers

Brother J. A. Tanner spoke at 7.45 at Central on January 20. President Elbert A. Smith was the morning speaker. He drew from the fourth chapter of Ephesians a lesson calculated to edify all but especially instructive to the ministry. He said that the old idea was to ignore the common individual. The military men and rulers were the ones honored, looked up to, and respected. When Jesus came he reversed this idea. He recognized the importance of each individual. This he taught in the parable of the lost sheep; the shepherd left the ninety and nine in the fold and went to the rescue of the one that was lost. Jesus gave gifts unto men, he gave the ministry for the perfecting of the Saints, for the salvation of the lost individual, for the edifying of the body of Christ.

The Department of Women, in charge of Sister Fern Lloyd, was addressed by J. A. Tanner on the future outlook of the work of that department. Walter W. Smith will speak to them February 17 at 4.15 on the psychology of the adolescent.

Cottage Meetings

A week's series of cottage meetings has been held at the home of Brother McLanahan, 27 Raytown Road, by Brother Joseph Curtis who will continue another week.

A mission, near Washington Boulevard and Ewing Street in Sheffield, has been opened by Brethren W. I. Fligg and Ammon White, where they have held forth for three weeks.

Brother White occupied last week, but they closed temporarily Sunday night. However, they will make arrangements to continue in the near future as the interest awakened warrants it.

Brother Fligg spoke at Grandview at both services Sunday. His text in the evening was, "The baptism of John. Was it of heaven or of men?" He wrote the text on the blackboard, adding to it other texts as he continued in support of the baptism. The baptism he proved was of God. Jesus Christ, apostles, and the Holy Ghost stand versus those who willfully change the ordinance and break the everlasting covenant. He made a clear-cut speech on this subject. His energy emphasizes his argument and wins his hearers to consider what he proposes.

Good Attendance at East Saint Louis Meetings

EAST SAINT LOUIS, ILLINOIS, January 24.—On the second night of his series of meetings Brother J. W. Paxton was greeted with a very fair-sized audience, considering the icy pavements. However Brother Higgins was the speaker of the hour. He delivered a very good sermon. Brother Paxton's chart deals with the narrow and broad ways, and the brother's effort pointed clearly to the thought that Jesus is the light, the truth, the way. These meetings will continue so long as interest justifies.

District conference will be held next Saturday and Sunday, January 26 and 27, in the Saint Louis church, Grand Avenue and Carter. No services will be held here, save Sunday school.

The local ministry, aided by Brothers R. Archibald and R. A. Lloyd of Saint Louis Branch, have occupied the rostrum the past month.

Brethren Brunkhorst, W. C. Carl, and Jesse Paxton held a meeting at 2 o'clock last Sunday. There was quite a nice little attendance and a very good interest. These folks had seen the weekly advertisement which led up to the services now being held. Brother Charles Smith baptized four recently.

The recent business meeting was a very good one. About the same roster of officers was chosen; the budget system was adopted after a little good-natured opposition, and a committee appointed to see about the cost of improving the present building, although there is some sentiment for a new location. The women of the local sustained Sister Rella Meloan and Sister Hayes and now have a complete set of officers. They are certainly doing an excellent work tracting, visiting and helping the worthy poor.

Los Angeles Sells Old Church Building

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, January 20.—The keenest interest is felt and manifest throughout the branch at the announcement of the successful sale of the church property at 1114 Wall Street for a better price and better terms than the majority had expected. At a special business meeting held last fall, a committee was appointed and authorized to sell the church for $20,000, or more, all cash or submit proposition for consideration.

The price has been realized, with $1,000, to bind the deal, balance at consummation of negotiations, calling for vacation within sixty days. This is gratifying and all now look forward to the speedy realization of the long-entertained dream, crystallized into a slogan becoming branch-wide, "A new church worthy of the Los Angeles branch."

The big problem under present conditions is to move from the present building to other quarters, at present unknown, until the new church can be completed.

There has been a marked awakening in all departments of the work here; the services are well attended, taxing the seating capacity of the present building.

On Sunday, January 20, Apostle T. W. Williams preached in the morning on "Is the church a failure," and in the evening, Apostle John W. Rushton preached on "Authority in religion."

The regular branch business meeting, postponed at the first of the year, pending negotiations relative to sale of church property, is now called for the middle of the week.

An innovation, unique in its character, interesting and helpful in its purpose, marks the issuance of a branch bulletin issued by the Sunday school superintendent, summing up the leading incidents of the month. This gives the reader an insight into the progress of the branch as gathered from a constant attendance at all services which but few are able to do. Several hundreds of the bulletins were handed out and greeted with favorable comment.

Speakers Exchanged Throughout District

FALL RIVER, MASSACHUSETTS, January 21.—An exchange of pulpits has been going on throughout this district.

Elder Benjamin Leland of Plymouth preached here both morning and evening January 20, to an attentive group of Saints. In the morning he took as a text, "But ye are of the mind of Christ," and he urged the Saints to be constant in service. His evening text was, "I am come that ye might have life and have it more abundantly." He spoke mostly from the Doctrine and Covenants. The peaceful influence of the Spirit was felt both by the speaker and the listeners.

One week ago, the pastor at Fall River, Elder James W. Heap, spoke at New Bedford Branch. Yesterday, January 20, Alma M. Coombs, a deacon of Fall River, preached both morning and evening at New Bedford. He also sang two solos.

Bishop Myron C. Fisher will speak at Fall River, February 10.

Those who know Elder John Rogerson will be pleased to hear that he has been more comfortable the past week.

Baptisms Result of Meetings at Wellsburg

WELLSBURG, WEST VIRGINIA, January 21.—The series of meetings which are being conducted here by Elder Thomas L. Clark of Port Huron, Michigan, have been well advertised with handbills and window cards. The local newspaper has been giving good front page write-ups, too, which helps considerably.

The meetings have been in progress since January 6 with a full house every night, and much good is being accomplished. Five have already been baptized and several others have signified their intentions of so doing on next Sunday.

Brother Clark is a real live wire, and surely has the Spirit of the Lord with him. His sermons have been of a nature both to edify the Saints and appeal to nonmembers. In his efforts here he has had the hearty cooperation of the Saints, both young and old.

Arrangements have been made for him to preach two or three evenings at the Methodist church at Brilliant, Ohio, which is just across the river. He anticipates following these up later with a series of meetings in the schoolhouse there.

As soon as these revival services are over, the branch expects to conduct meetings for the young people. A class has been organized to take up normal work, and these classes will hold their session on Friday evenings.

The Sunday school is getting along nicely. With a branch membership of seventy-two, the school has an average of sixty-four. Much of the good work in this department can be accredited to Brother Paul Lannum, the local superintendent.

"True Religion" Theme of Sermon

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, January 24.—During the recent visit of President Frederick M. Smith to Omaha, at which time he spoke over the radio on "Stewardships," he also addressed the Saints at Central Church on "True religion."

The Omaha papers published numerous comments and write-ups on his addresses. The sermon on "True religion" as reported in the Omaha Bee, contained the following statements by President Smith:

"Spiritualize man and his activities and you will have the solution of the numerous problems which are troubling the world to-day. Nothing but religion can do this.

"This religion can do nothing for you unless you have a consciousness of your social obligations. Our task is to socialize individual righteousness. Our task is to Christianize industry and commerce.

"Is this only a beautiful theory we have? What have we done with the Pearl of Great Price committed to this church? Have we hidden it under a bushel? Are we afraid some one will steal it? When we make no contribution to the welfare of our neighbor, we fail as human beings, be our personal virtue ever so great.

"We cannot live true religion by simply refraining from evil ourselves. The regeneration of the human soul is only the beginning of our social responsibility. You are but a cipher and a waste unless you can perform those social obligations true righteousness will demand. This expresses itself in service.

"There are two kinds of religion, positive and negative. The negative consists of saying 'thou shalt not do this, and thou shalt not do that.' The positive goes farther than merely prohibiting. It provides an improvement over that which is forbidden. Too many persons confuse the forms or ceremonial of religion with the thing itself. Everybody is either positively or negatively religious."

Attendance at Denver Affected by Cold Weather

DENVER, COLORADO, January 19.—The weather has been extremely cold all this month, 26 below zero part of the time. Sunday, January 20, was zero temperature so the morning congregation was small. Sister J. N. Duncan has returned from several months' visit in Missouri and reports real winter there as well as in Colorado.

Pastor E. J. Williams was called to Genoa on account of sickness in the family of Brother J. R. Sutton.

Sister Mary Almond, wife of our missionary, has gone to Wyoming to take charge of a hospital as head nurse. Brother Almond is "batching."

Latter Day Saints are getting quite popular in Colorado. The quartet at the memorial service of the Colorado State Grange was composed of three Saints and one other. The debating team of Littleton High School is composed of two of the sons of Brother Leo Shupe and one nonmember. They won the decision Saturday night, January 19, against Aurora High School.

The weekly prayer service will be held on Wednesday evenings instead of on Sundays. Those who enjoy the quiet communion and fellowship of the Saints and the spiritual strength and help which such meetings give will be glad to come. Topical prayer services are being held.

Independence

Ex-Governor Harding Speaks at Stone Church

Speaking at the Stone Church, Sunday, January 27, W. L. Harding, twice governor of Iowa, addressed a large congregation on "The church and education."

He took as his theme, "It is the duty of the State to furnish every boy and girl an opportunity early in life to find out the thing they want to do and then prepare them to do that thing well." The church, he said, was established by Christ to save individuals, not classes or nations. The church should support public education at least through the high school. But the one hour Sunday school, one day a week is not enough time for the church to have a hand on the child.

The boy or girl who is saved to the right, is worth more than a hard, flinty old sinner, said Governor Harding. Education and the church are twins in purpose. They both are working, that God, through Jesus Christ, may reign forever in the hearts of the people.

Governor Harding is a pleasing speaker. He impresses one as being earnest and forceful yet without wasted energy in delivery. The speaker stood perfectly still on the platform during his address, but at all times had a grip on his audience. His straightforward, simple statements, yet profound in their meaning, were interspersed by many live illustrations, some of which brought from the house a ripple of laughter.

Governor Harding came as a personal friend of Bishop I. A. Smith. Following the morning address, which was broadcasted, the governor was entertained at a dinner by Brother and Sister I. A. Smith in their home. A number of friends were present.

The address will be published in a subsequent issue of the HERALD for the benefit of our readers.

Sermons on Doctrine

Sunday night, January 27, President Elbert A. Smith spoke at the Stone Church on "Faith." It was the first of a series of six doctrinal sermons to be delivered by him during the following weeks. A large attendance was present to hear the wonderful message. It was broadcasted.

A musical program consisting of children's chorus and special numbers, preceded the evening speaker. This program was the usual 7.30 musical program, also broadcasted.

Children Blessed

At the Stone Church Sunday afternoon, January 27, occurred an unusually interesting and impressive ceremony of the blessing of children. Seven babies were brought to the altar. The parents were all young people, and one beautiful feature of the ceremony was that in each instance both father and mother came to the altar and remained during the ceremony. One couple brought a double offering—twins. To see young people interested in home building, in the rearing of a family, and both father and mother consecrated and devoted and eager to come reverently together to the altar with that which they hold dearest and best in life is a splendid and heartening spectacle. Such homes will endure. Such young people are the salt of their generation. The ceremony was preceded by scripture reading and song, and closed with the doxology and a prayer of thanksgiving for the group of young people and the offering brought to the church. Elders Elbert A. Smith, R. V. Hopkins, and Joseph Luff were in charge, and Elders Ecclestone and Bunt assisted.

Library Survey

A library survey was recently made in Independence by the Chamber of Commerce, showing 21,000 volumes available to the public. Of these, over 8,000 are in the Institute library now located in Bartholomew Hall. The other libraries represented in the survey are the public library and the William Chrisman High School library.

Golden Wedding Celebrated

The golden wedding of Brother and Sister J. B. Farrow was celebrated January 21 at 8 o'clock on the Campus at the Institute building by a gathering of friends. A pleasing program of music and other exercises was given, after which refreshments were served. Golden presents were presented to the couple. Brother and Sister Farrow were married at Sidney, Iowa, 1874, but have lived nearly all of their married life in Independence.

The Twelve

Apostle F. Henry Edwards has just closed a series of meetings at Topeka, Kansas, and has returned to Independence.

Meetings at Joplin, Missouri, have also closed, Apostle J. A. Gillen likewise returning to Independence.

The week-end was spent at Saint Louis by Apostle E. J. Gleazer.

Apostle M. A. McConley writes that he expects to leave Honolulu for Tahiti February 16. He is at present at Hilo, Hawaii. Apostle C. F. Ellis is at Tahiti.

Apostles Paul M. Hanson and J. F. Curtis are still in England but expect to leave soon for Holland.

California is fortunate in having four members of the Twelve there at present. Apostles Roy S. Budd and D. T. Williams are working in the north and Apostles J. W. Rush-ton and T. W. Williams are working in the south.

Apostle J. F. Garver is now in Lamoni.

Story Hour

A story-telling hour is being held every Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Bartholomew Hall. It is open to all children and their parents who wish to come. The class is being conducted by a story-telling class of the Institute.

Walnut Park Elections

Walnut Park has chosen for this year the same heads of departments as last year: Glaud Smith, superintendent of Sunday school, with five department superintendents; W. C. Norman, superintendent of Religio. Orlando Nace was made chorister, but as he has for some time needed a thorough rest, Mrs. Minnie Scott Dobson has charge of his work. Mrs. W. C. Norman is pianist.

The very active and efficient deacon, Fred Parman, has been seriously ill for several weeks and is still unable to be out. Guy Reynolds is filling his place as deacon.

Special Days

Pastor J. A. Dowker has made unusual arrangements for a number of Sundays beginning with Presidency's day, January 13, when the First Presidency spoke here; patriarch's day, January 20, Brother Frederick A. Smith preaching morning and evening and conducting an interesting round table in the afternoon. Many learned on that day for the first time the real significance and value of the office of patriarch or evangelist.

January 26 was missionary day. Bishop A. V. Karlstrom was the speaker at 11, 2.30, and 7.30, his subject throughout the day being the work in the Society Islands. He had with him in the afternoon handmade articles from the islands and gave opportunity for questions on conditions there. Accompanying him was Pataha, a native of Tahiti, who came to America with Clyde F. Ellis in September. He spoke a short time in his own tongue, Brother Karlstrom interpreting.

Pataha, aged eighteen, was brought up in the church and has been promised by the Spirit from boyhood that he would visit America. He expressed himself as happy over conditions he has found here and the treatment he has received. He can remain here only six months but hopes to return later to study. In the evening Brother Karlstrom gave an illustrated lecture, and Sisters Petis and Richmond from the Society Islands (now nurses in training at the Sanitarium) sang.

Round Table Discussions

Round table discussions may hereafter take the place, occasionally, of the afternoon prayer meetings. The young people have decided to discuss various subjects in place of some of their week-day prayer meetings, beginning next Wednesday evening with the subject, "Will all good people be saved regardless of church affiliation?" They meet at the homes of the young people.

Quilting Society

The Walnut Park quilting society reports work done in 1923: 13 quilts and comforts made, the work on them bringing from $5 to $14 each; number of days spent quilting 26, average attendance 8. Members bring lunch and share with each other at noon, spending one hour in a social time; at 2 o'clock business session and prayer; adjournment at 5. Receipts: quilting fund, $108.90; donations from members and friends $60.55. Spent for carpet for the new church $150; local church expenses $5; Christmas offering $10. Sister Ellen Kepley is leader, Sister W. H. Christy secretary, Sister L. Harbaugh treasurer.

Scout Troop Organized

A new Boy Scout Troop, to be known as number 7, was organized January 22, at the Walnut Park church. The full quota of thirty-two members is expected to be reached, as twenty-one were present at organization. The regular meeting night will be on Friday at Walnut Park church. J. A. Dowker, pastor, is aiding in the movement. A. J. Paris is scoutmaster.

Young People Meet in Groups

A new movement among the young people of Zion was started Thursday evening, January 24, in group one, when "Brother F. M.," with enlargements of pictures taken by him while abroad, was the center of an enthusiastic gathering of thirty-five girls and boys. Keen interest was shown in the descriptive talks accompanying the showing of the pictures, relating somewhat of the history and details of architecture of some of the famous buildings of the Old World.

The gathering was an entirely informal affair held at the home of Brother and Sister George DeTray. Pertinent questions from the young people concerning the building of Zion manifested their appreciation of the ideals and vision of Brother Smith. "What can we do?" was the leading subject of discussion while the popcorn balls and candy were being passed around.

Sister Ruth Smith, a welcome guest on this occasion, will speak to the same group of young people on the evening of February 21. Brother Smith expects this week to meet the young people of groups two and three and continue the service as time and circumstance will permit, until he has met informally all the young people of Zion.

TRYON, NEBRASKA, January 17.—No meetings are being held in this branch but the home department report shows good interest and the good letters are very encouraging. Pray that the Spirit may help each one that they may feel a desire to have more meetings and attend with a zeal.

New Pastor at First Saint Joseph Branch

President Elbert A. Smith and Church Secretary R. S. Salyards attended the annual business meeting and election at the First Saint Joseph Branch, Friday evening, January 25. Brother Salyards had tendered his resignation as president of the Far West Stake and president of the First Saint Joseph Branch. The Presidency had appointed Elder Orman Salisbury to succeed him as president of the stake, subject to the approval of the stake conference which meets in March. Accordingly the Presidency suggested to the branch that Brother Salisbury be elected as branch president to succeed Brother Salyards. A motion was made to approve the suggestion and it was adopted by unanimous vote. Elder Salyards was then extended a vote of thanks for his long service. The vote was unanimous. He then spoke a good word for his successor, appealing to the people to give him support and cooperation.

Brother Salyards leaves a clean and honorable record in both stake and branch. However he has been handicapped on account of being called to spend much time in Independence on general church work. He will probably move his family to Independence in the near future and devote himself to his work as church secretary and such other church duties as come to his hand.

Brother O. Salisbury is a business man of experience and as church worker has had experience in the Des Moines and Pottawattamie Districts over which he has presided with marked success.

Choir Leader to Sing With Symphony

Friends of James R. Houghton in Independence, having heard from him recently, tell of the continuation of his work in music.

Brother Houghton is at Harvard University where he is studying music. He sings with the Harvard Glee Club. During March, Brother Houghton will go to Davenport, Iowa, to sing with the Davenport Symphony Orchestra. While in that city he will also give a recital.

It is reported that the young musician has already refused several startling offers in the music world, but that he wishes to continue with his study for a while.

It will be remembered that Brother Houghton did some splendid work in Independence during the past summer. He conducted the conference choir and had part in several other musical productions. He was also the author of a series of articles on "Music appreciation" in the HERALD during the summer.

His friends in Independence and elsewhere wish him success in his adventures.

Mrs. E. J. Lumm writes from Nowata, Oklahoma, that Brother Amos T. Higdon has just closed a series of meetings at that place. Although weather was bad and the crowds were small, a few interested listeners returned each night. They feel that good seed has been sown which will bear fruit in the future.

THE SAINTS' HERALD has added to its staff of correspondents Brother Vasper Bihn, as press correspondent for the Bradner, Ohio, Branch. He has been blind since infancy, but the Lord has blessed him in many ways. He is a graduate of the Ohio School for the Blind at Columbus and is quite a musician, having a good voice. He uses the typewriter, thus doing his own work.

President F. M. McDowell Opens Meetings at Flint

By Telegraph

FLINT, MICHIGAN, January 27.—Opening the young people's meetings at this city with the largest crowd that ever packed the First Church, President F. M. McDowell addressed the expectant congregation Sunday evening, January 27.

The young people are rallying to the standard, and showing a spirit fired with enthusiasm. Song predominates and the great church anthems, sung by the lusty voices of youth, resound as they never did before in the First Church.

A splendid spirit is prevailing. Even the press is cooperating as is shown from every angle of the press reports. President McDowell is at his best and is willing to "go the limit" to do his part.

The meetings promise to be a great success. Preparations had been made and everything was in readiness for the meetings that just opened. More to follow.

MATTHEW W. LISTON.

Apostle Ellis and Party Arrive at Tahiti

PAPEETE, TAHITI, January 8.—We left Independence on the evening of December 16, and reached San Francisco on the morning of the 20th over the Southern Pacific. There we met Elder Robert J. Farthing and wife, who had arrived about one hour before, over the Western Pacific. All enjoyed the trip across the continent.

The next day being the day of embarkation we at once went to work to get our passage and passports in shape for leaving. This was accomplished without difficulty, and after some shopping, we were taken to the homes of Brother and Sister Harry Lawton and Brother and Sister John Saxe, where we enjoyed the hospitality of those of like precious faith, Brother and Sister Farthing at the latter and your writer at the former.

Sail for Tahiti

Everything being in readiness we embarked a few moments before 11 a. m., December 21, on the S. S. Mauanganui (S. S. Large Mouth). It was a new experience to Brother and Sister Farthing, but they adapted themselves very well to the new condition. Brother Farthing is a good sailor and will experience little difficulty in traveling on the small boats in this mission. Sister Farthing cannot boast of such ability, but we can testify that she is a very courageous little woman. We had a very calm sea all the way from San Francisco to Papeete, Tahiti, where we landed between 8 and 9 o'clock on the morning of December 31. This was a much shorter trip than we had expected, as it usually takes about 12 days to make the voyage. The steamship company is speeding up its boats to make better mail service, hence the short voyage. Of course, Christmas was celebrated at sea, but it was very much unlike what we are accustomed to in America.

Met by Natives

We were met at the wharf by several of the native brethren, who at once took our luggage to the customs. The customs' officers were very good, as we were acquainted with them, so we brought everything in without duty, with the exception of a rotary Neostyle. Even our typewriters were passed.

Learning the Language

Brother and Sister Farthing are busy studying the language, while your writer is working on land titles, native songbook, the statistical work of the mission, etc. I am also ready to leave for the distant diving island of Hikueru where several hundreds are gathered for the "mother of pearl." I will return to Tahiti again within one month.

Deaths Among Natives

Several of the natives have died during the past few months because of the rage of the influenza. Among those who died were Elders Tapu a Moana, Tufaunui, Tehani a Hiti, Mauna a Tetoofa, Metuaaro (the father of Elder Paia), Puta, Metahuiria Bellais, and Teuira a Haoa. Some of these men will be greatly missed in the branches in which they were very active. Living in these islands all their lives has lessened their power of resistance, and they succumb very readily to an attack of a severe disease. There are others, too, who have died, but we have not received their names, so we cannot give the exact number.

To Go to Australia

I will be here in this mission two or three months in all and will then leave for Australia, where Brother McConley and I will meet. We will return the latter part of the year for our mission conference, which will be held on one of the small coral islands in December, commencing December 20.

Mail will reach me at Papeete, Tahiti, Society Islands, Box 44, Via San Francisco, for the next two months.

May the blessings of the Master be with the church in Zion and in all lands is our prayer.

CLYDE F. ELLIS.

Nauvoo Saints Enjoy Beautiful Spirit

NAUVOO, ILLINOIS, January 17.—I have been waiting for some one who could do better than I to write up our Christmas entertainment, the most beautiful I have ever attended. It was not that the program was anything unusual, but it was the beautiful spirit that attended, so harmonious were the four acts blended together that one might think they were but parts of one act. This beautiful spirit was also felt by the nonmembers who were present, and they hardly wanted to leave the house at the close of the program, but lingered, pleasantly visiting with the Saints till all were ready to leave.

In Brother Amos Berve the Nauvoo Saints have a splendid branch president, and the coming of Brother Albert Sanford and his musical family, is an untold acquisition, especially to the Sunday school.

The cottage prayer meetings are very enjoyable. Last Wednesday's meeting was the most spiritual we have had. The rain poured down, but it did not hinder any from attending, nearly all the branch being present. All the adults spoke once and some twice. Brother Titus Henderson was called at this time through Brother Berve to the office of teacher, which call was indorsed by Brother Layton.

Nauvoo had been showing off a little in the way of weather up until Christmas, for the weather was beautiful, but not to be outdone, she sent the mercury down to between 16 and 21 below zero. However, we Californians were not disturbed by it and daughter went to her work as usual, while I made my rounds of the chicken house without catching any cold.

The river is frozen over hard and deep and recently the women at the bakery were taken out to see the men cut ice. The blocks are first marked off with an ice plow drawn by a horse and then a space is drilled for the saw. The blocks are then sawed and sent to the ice house in town for summer use as no ice is manufactured here.

Conference Minutes

CLINTON.—At Taborville, Missouri, November 16 and 18. H. E. Moler was chosen to preside with W. E. Haden as assistant. Mrs. A. C. Silvers acted as secretary. Friday was devoted to departmental work with a well rendered program at night. Mrs. Mabel Braden, our Religio superintendent, having removed from the district, Miss Helen Hawley was recommended as her successor; and Mrs. C. C. Martin, of Fort Scott, Kansas, was recommended for appointment as organizer of the Department of Women. The reunion having discontinued their organization and placed their work under the conference, it was voted to hold a reunion of 1924. Eldorado Springs, Rich Hill, and Fort Scott were placed in nomination, but it was decided to postpone action on the place of holding reunion until the next conference, giving opportunity to ask the several branches to send expression of preference. It was decided to hold the next conference at Nevada, February 29 to March 2. Bishop's agent's report from June to October showed receipts of $1,900.09. Preaching by W. E. Haden, R. T. Walters, H. E. Moler, and P. V. Davis. One was baptized. The weather was ideal and a splendid spirit prevailed, the only trouble being that the neat little chapel was too small. It was so crowded that all could not get in. Taborville has a nice group of young people who are not afraid to take hold of the work. Mrs. A. C. Silvers, secretary.

FLORIDA.—At Coldwater Branch, December 22 and 23. Officers chosen for the ensuing year were: W. A. West, president; D. M. Rudd, to assist in presiding; C. T. West, clerk; J. S. McCall, Sunday school superintendent. T. C. Kelley, of the missionary force, was present and preached in his usual forceful manner. Inclement weather caused the attendance to be small, but all services were blessed with the spirit of peace. Next conference is to be held in Pensacola, June 14 and 15. C. T. West, secretary.

POTTAWATTAMIE.—At Council Bluffs, Iowa, December 15 and 16. The following officers were elected for the coming year: J. A. Hansen, president; George Beatty and M. A. The reunion of 1924 will be held at Glenwood, Iowa. Time and place of next conference was left with the presidency. Elsie Lapworth, secretary.

ALABAMA.—At Pleasant Hill, December 15, 1923. Conference was presided over by T. C. Kelley, assisted by W. J. Williamson. D. T. Parker was chorister; G. W. Miniard, secretary, with J. W. Baldwin as assistant. The local deacons acted as ushers. T. C. Kelley gave an interesting and instructive sermon, after which the following of the priesthood and instructive sermon, after which the following of the priesthood reported: J. W. Baldwin, J. R. Harper, G. O. Sellers, G. H. Sellers, and A. A. Odum. Report of Bishop's agent showed: On hand at last report, $51.27; received since, $191.62; paid to Benjamin R. McGuire, $212.89; balance on hand, $80. The following officers were elected: W. J. Williamson, president; G. W. Miniard, secretary. Preaching by T. C. Kelley. Because of so much rain, the meetings were not largely attended. Time and place of next conference left with the district presidency. G. W. Miniard, secretary, McKenzie, Alabama.

Eaton, clerk.

Radio Flashes

Genoa, Colorado.—We got your Station K F I X Sunday evening, January 13, just fine. You said to write our comments favorable or otherwise. Everything was fine, music, and sermon on the Book of Mormon, etc. Just one little "otherwise." You made the statement at the last that it spoiled one's pleasure not to get the station clearly and you surely made the station plain. Now we were scratching around in the air to get your station and got it just as the sermon began, a little too late to hear who was to be the speaker. I believe the papers said J. F. Keir was to speak, but I did not think it was his voice, so let me suggest that you hereafter mention at the close of the sermon the name of the speaker.—Mrs. J. R. Sutton.

Clarksdale, Missouri.—We have just listened to Brother R. V. Hopkins' sermon over our WD-11 tube set. Will say that it came in very distinct and clear. We enjoyed it very much. We are always able to get your station as soon as you are on the air, if our time is right, anyway, a few minutes after you commence. We hope that you may be able to keep up the broadcasting of these services.—Mrs. L. L. Bean.

Warren, Ohio.—I am a member of the church, am a subscriber to the HERALD, and wish you to know that I enjoy it very much. We heard the wonderful sermon by Bishop Keir on "The new covenant, even the Book of Mormon." My neighbor next door has a radio, a three tube Westinghouse, and we heard the sermon fine. We heard K F I X on January 13, got the very first and heard all but the closing prayer. I am coming out that way some time next month if the Lord is willing and hope to call on you.—Cecil A. Reeves and Wife.

Laphridge, Alberta, Canada.—The early concert from K F F V on Tuesday, the 15th, came in very well on our small one-tube detector set.—B. W. Buchanan.

them. His acts were prompted by high motives and his sincerity of purpose cannot be questioned.

He led the Nation through the terrific struggle of the World War with a lofty idealism which never failed him. He gave utterance to the aspiration of humanity with an eloquence which held the attention to all the earth and made America a new and enlarged influence in the destiny of mankind.

In testimony of the respect in which his memory is held by the Government and the people of the United States, I do hereby direct that the flags of the White House and of the several departmental buildings be displayed at half-staff for a period of thirty days, and that suitable military and naval honors under orders of the Secretary of War and of the Secretary of the Navy may be rendered on the day of the funeral.

Preparation for Church Work

It is now time that the religious education class for next college year at Graceland should be determined, and the Presidency issues the call to service in this line.

It is greatly to be wished that we have reached a period in our development as a church when chosen work or activity will be entered upon only after proper and thorough preparation. To be properly prepared for church work, either missionary or local, means more than to determine the mental attitude. It means that there shall not alone be the desire to devote life and energies to the service of the church, but it should mean such decision should be reached early enough in life so that preparation for the service can be made at that period of life when nature makes preparation easiest.

It is desirable, therefore, that young men and women in the church shall early make choice of church work, as a life duty, and volunteer or consent to make long, but early preparation.

Who is ready?

The appeal is to young men and women of clean lives to enter upon a period of intensive study and application, under the direction of and with the help of the consecrated and devoted men and women of the Graceland faculty. The call is also to the members of the Twelve, the seventy, and the elders under General Conference appointment to be alert to the leadings of the Spirit in indicating these young people. District and branch presidents, high priests, and evangelists, all with their senses alert to the welfare of the church should be on the watch for these servants of the church; for it is our bounden duty to find them early and then give them every assistance to make the best preparation possible.

The foregoing officers should write the First Presidency concerning such prospective students, giving us full information. Young people who desire to apply for admittance to the course, or are willing to enter upon a course of preparation such as has been indicated above, should write to President George N. Briggs, of Graceland College.

The Presidency would like to see next fall's class a large one of finest quality. Can we find them?

PRESIDENT FREDERICK M. SMITH.

Making Marriages Divorce Proof

For fifty years the Legal Aid Society of New York has been the "Poor Man's Lawyer." It furnishes legal advice gratis to people who cannot pay for it. One of the most interesting of its departments is that of Domestic Relations. In this department over 100,000 cases of domestic disagreement have been considered and thousands have been patched up, thus preventing separation, annulments, and divorce or even worse.

In the World's Work appears a domestic relations decalogue for husbands and one for wives, sort of a ten commandment affair for home life. They represent years of experience by the department on domestic relations, and have been framed by the society for aid in marital affairs. We feel we can safely recommend them to our readers. Our only hesitancy is whether to run them under our Educational Department or among the Editorials. We have chosen the latter because we believe some of our readers may be less sensitive to this personal matter than if it were published for the purpose of education. Here they are:

Domestic Relations Decalogue for Husbands

1. Be generous according to your means. A woman rightly expects liberal support from her husband. She is duly considerate of sincere effort and tolerant of misfortune, but differentiates sharply between ill fortune and inertia.
2. Do not interfere with a woman in the management of purely domestic affairs. The average wife is far better qualified than her husband to plan for home comfort and to handle economically that portion of his income set aside for household expenses.
3. Be cheerful, even though it sometimes may tax you to the utmost. Nothing reacts more surely on the nerves of a tired woman to engender suspicion and ill temper than the home-coming of a gloomy, taciturn husband.
4. Be considerate. The average woman is a bundle of highly strung nerves. If she complains, it is rarely for insufficient reasons. Her efforts to make your home clean, inviting, and comfortable, merit appreciation and cooperation.
5. Make love to your wife; continue to be her sweetheart. Neglect begets indifference that is fatal to married life. Every true wife expects to be a sweetheart, and rightly. More than bitter disappointment follows disillusionment.
6. Do not scold. Sharp words and petty fault-finding eventually react to dampen affection, if not kill it altogether. Also, they will cause misunderstanding and engender a spirit of opposition and retaliation distinctly incompatible with sympathy and cooperation.
7. Establish your own home, if possible, remote from your wife's and your own immediate families. The frequent interference, although probably well-meant advice of those who by reason of family ties feel competent to inject their opinions

Christianizing Society

It cannot be denied that there is much of disorder in the world to-day. It is manifested in every walk of life by nations and individuals, and all the various social groups ranging between these extremes. At times and in places the degree of disorder approaches chaos, and only inertia prevents social dissolution.

It is apparent in the unstable political conditions existing generally, not even our own country being exempt. This alone would be bad enough were it unaccompanied by a decay of public morals. Who will deny that to-day integrity and honesty among public officials and servants are at a much lower standard than before? Disloyalty to public trust and grafting in public revenues and funds are rampant.

Public Morality

The decadence of public morality doubtless follows as a consequence of the lowering of the standard of individual morality, for it is scarcely likely that the obverse is true. It is not necessary for me here to give statistics to prove this statement that the tide of individual morality is ebbing, for it is apparent to every observer, though there are those who perhaps in the process of "rationalization" may claim otherwise. It seems to me, however, that we can be quite convinced by even glancing at the facts, unwelcome as they are, that the home is disintegrating under the influences at work weakening the bond of marriage and decreasing the birth rate; that there is an increasing perversion of the racial propagating powers, evidenced not alone in the decreased birth rate but in the alarming increase of illegitimacy and social diseases; that there is a steady weakening of integrity in business; that there is a steady increase in the crime of murder and other crimes of violence, as well as crimes against property rights; that there is a growing disregard of and disrespect for law which is surely undermining our civilization and political safety; that in general a revolt against authority is on.

What does it all mean? we might well ask, for not only must the problem be faced, but a solution must be found if civilization and enlightenment are to survive. It is always a complex question or a problem into which enter many factors; but in social problems it not infrequently happens the finger can be put on a dominating factor. And so I think in this case the meaning of it all can be pointed out by saying that it indicates the decay of religion as an influence in national and community life and steady weakening of the influence of the church in the lives of men and women of affairs. Remove from the hearts of men the fear of God and they will dare anything to promote their own selfish ends.

Position of the Church To-day

I do not hold the church and the men of the church who have been its leaders blameless in this, for the church has permitted itself to be made too much of merely a Sunday affair. The church has been separated from state entirely. Has the pendulum not swung too far? I fear so, for it is clear that those who fear the influence of the church in politics have taken advantage of every opportunity to push the church into a state of impotence in state affairs, and the men of the church have stood supinely by and permitted it to be done.

Can the present weak position of the church as an influence in everyday affairs be termed a failure of Christianity? If Christianity, as represented by the churches of to-day, has had a fair application; if the Christian religion has been truly reflected in the group life of modern church members, then we must say yes. But if modern church life and activity have been but a form of Christianity without entering into the soul and heart of it, a lip service rather than a spiritual expansion, then we can deny that present-day conditions constitute a charge of failure against the church and Christianity.

I strongly incline to the negative answer for reasons I shall try to set out briefly.

Objective of the Church

I have always felt that the words of Jesus, "I am come that ye might have life and have it more abundantly," has more than an eschatological application. It has a fine social content. To find and free that social power is or should be the task of the church and the objective or goal of church men. The prime law of Christianity, love of God, has never yet had its full social application by being closely and generally coordinated with the second great law of Christianity and so like the first, To love neighbor as self. The golden rule has not universal or even majority application in our social life; and in "business" it is so rare as to have been in some instances "capitalized" and used as a catch phrase in advertising. Modern business and industry is based on the appeal to self-serving interests, and "business" and "business methods" have saturated society with its spirit. It has invaded the church, and church men instead of impressing the spirit of Christianity upon "business" have permitted "business" to leave its sordid impress upon the church, and the spirit of Christianity has fled through the church door.

The social dynamic of to-day being self-serving interests, it is not Christian, for in a truly Christian nation of society, the dynamic will be love, not self-love, but love of neighbor based on love of God. This means a pervasive consciousness that God is and that our fellow man stands beside us as a brother.

The Social Remedy

Admit, then, that we are socially and industrially activating on a wrong basis, what is the remedy? The answer is obvious: Christianize the social order! But how? Obviously, again, by Christianizing industry; for society to-day seems to be based on industry, and rightly so if by this we can understand that persons should be producers or conservers of goods or wealth, contributors to the common weal.

Is it possible to Christianize industry? Yes, when professing Christians will live their religion, when it becomes more than formal, when they will permit their religion to lead them into the more abundant life.

The appeal to individual initiative to-day is the surplus. That is to say, men labor, toil, lucubrate, wear themselves out, in trying to achieve their desire to accumulate a "sufficiency," a competency, a fortune—for self. That there is something wrong with our present system in the matter of wealth distribution, is evidenced by the fact that less than five per cent of the population in our country own more than ninety-five per cent of the wealth. That means that to a high degree the surplus is individualized.

Socialize the Surplus

To socialize the surplus, therefore, would rectify the present errors of distribution, and go far towards curing our social ills. How can this be done? My answer is, Through religion. Repeated attempts have been made through legislation and various social organizations; but failure has followed largely because religion has been a factor of small evaluation or with a zero coefficient.

The religion which will bring this about must be fostered by the church, a socialized religion which will in turn religionize and sanctify social endeavor. The first task of those who would Christianize a society is to inculcate such a conception of the Christian philosophy as will create a pervasive social consciousness. It is thus a matter of education, but education with a strong emotional content. This means only to teach Christian principles, for all of Jesus' activities and teachings were social in import and calculated to bring the more abundant life by bettering conditions here; individual betterment in the interests of group advancement or protection. To so present for educational and corrective purposes the Christian philosophy means to engender a knowledge of the great Christian idea that all men are brothers, not opponents in fierce competition for the chance to live well and largely. Individual competitions, group competitions, racial competitions, national competitions, make even "civilized" life a struggle for existence unnecessarily and even cruelly harsh. Individual and group devotion to the welfare of humanity, a willingness to be content with a proportionate share of community accumulation will change our life into a beneficent cooperation where all share the blessings of nature and the results of the skill and intelligence and industry of laborers, for all must labor. All this is what will follow when we socialize the surplus. But to do so, let me repeat, requires a pervasive concept of the fundamentals of Christianity, God, and man associated with his brother.

Equitable Distribution

From the viewpoint of this social philosophy each person is seen as a willing contributor to the common weal, a real worker in his chosen line for which he is by nature qualified and improved by training. Misfits are out of the question. From every man according to his capacity, to every man according to his needs. His needs, as governed by his conditions, are what determine his remuneration. To bring about such a condition of society will mean a radical change, but not an impossible one where Christianity prevails. In a society impregnated with self-serving interests it is impossible; and the change in attitude can, in my opinion, only be brought about by religion. And this is the great task of the church. Is it equal to it?

The "more abundant life," which Christianity was designed by its founder to promote, must apply to the group, the community, and is impossible to the individual in the fullest degree until that individual can be conscious that his own well-being is equaled by the well-being of his neighbors. "I am come that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly," is strong in social content, but in this, too, we must work out our own salvation.

Doctrine of Stewardships

Christianity as thus envisaged offers a solution for the great social problem, but the solution will come only when we apply the principles. Are we equal to the task?

I have said that our task of social reform is to socialize the surplus by Christianizing it, my emphasizing the social content of Jesus' philosophy. The social significance of the Christian religion is crystallized in the doctrine of stewardships, according to which a person is held socially responsible for the manner in which he utilizes whatever of property and wealth he may acquire, holding only that which he makes productive, and this determined by his capacity. This envisagement of social responsibility requires that talents as well as property shall be directed towards community welfare, the compulsion being not law but public sentiment. The holding of only what can be utilized (according to the capacity or talent) requires that surplus shall revert to the common treasury or to the group. Wealth and property are not for personal pleasure according to caprice, but for service and enlarged contribution to the common weal. Riotous or extravagant living is incongruous with the doctrine of stewardships, while luxury is justified only when common.

From every man will be expected according to his capacity; his recompense therefor will in part be that sufficient to supply his needs. The other part will be satisfaction, soul satisfaction for services rendered. The criterion of success becomes not bank account, not piled-up personal wealth, but service and wealth contributed to the community. To appreciate such a social ideal, such a social organization, requires a social consciousness for the development of which we must depend on religion. It is foreign to the present social order.

Equality of Opportunity

Such an order means equality; not level equality, but equality of opportunity, equality of expression and contribution according to capacity. It means that each will seek that occupation which will permit the largest expression of innate ability.

The doctrine of stewardships can be applied to social reform only on a religious basis, for it is contingent upon attitude, and the attitude necessary springs only from a consciousness that service to God spells service to neighbor. The attitude required is that each will give his maximum contribution to the group measured by his equipment, turning all surplus into the common treasury. It may require activity in that which is not accompanied by a return in wealth yet is required by social advancement. Unremunerative labor necessary for social progress or weal will be supported from the accumulated community surplus.

The flowing of all individual surplus properties into the common treasury will make it possible to accomplish as legitimate and regular public activities many things now left to so-called charity and private philanthropy or by what may be termed commercialized social obligations only partially discharged.

And once service becomes the criterion, each will seek the activity best suited to his natural and developed endowments, whether common laborer, farmer, or banker, for "social standing" will not be determined by "income" or bank account but by common weal conserved. So the back-to-the-farm movement so much desired will start almost spontaneously, for, service being the criterion, those with innate inclination to till the soil will seek that outlet for their social expression. It seems that within all men is the inbred instinct for agriculture, and only commercialism with its shorter and less arduous road to a competency has deflected those with such agricultural inclinations away from the land.

Social Consciousness

For the development of society organized on the stewardship plan, a highly and pervasive social consciousness is essential to develop the idea with all individuals that the prime duty is to serve the group, the benefits of improvements and accumulated goods coming to the individual only through the common uplift, and individual success being measured by the amount he has contributed to the public good.

It is the duty of the church to develop and promote this social consciousness and agitate such social reform. To discharge this responsibility the church must be something more than a Sunday entertainment society, something more than a performer of ceremonies. The pulpit must stand for social reform, denounce selfishness in all forms, and free itself from the charge of being subservient to the interests entrenched behind the bulwarks of self-serving interests. It is not enough for the church in its efforts to promote Christianity to call on individuals to come to Christ, but the call must be to come with the tools of service in hand ready to devote time and energy and talents to the common welfare. "Get thy spindle and thy distaff ready and God will send thee flax." It is not enough to preach the entrance of a mystic kingdom of God into the heart, but a kingdom of God come in the form of a regenerated and ideal society where righteousness prevails and justice walks unhampered. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." The church must foster social reform, and its stalwarts may even have to enter politics to accomplish it. It must stand for social freedom, and this necessitates a break with present conditions, for the church must stand for wealth becoming pervasive and not the heritage of a privileged class.

Results of Christianity

Such an order is not communism, for the rule of all things common will not apply; but all surplus will become common, and all activity will be directed towards common maintenance and betterment. It is not socialism, but the great tools of industry will be under social control, a control promoted and protected by public sentiment fostered and preserved by religion. Such an order permits of no idlers.

Everyone a contributor is the ideal. The leisure class disappears, for leisure itself becomes communized, what there is being shared by all. Drudgery becomes abolished, for work being the natural expression of God-given or nature-endowed talents becomes pleasurable and wholesome.

The ideal society outlined above will demand a system of education more nearly universal than the present, and its universality must extend to the higher education; for society demanding the best of service from every member, it becomes of prime importance that every member shall be put through such process of development that will not only discover the special talent or talents, but, when discovered, the highest possible development of the special endowment shall be made, with the guarantee that opportunity shall be had for its full expression in accomplishment and contribution. Such a system of education must be far more flexible than our present one, capable of fitting itself to the needs of each pupil. Not only must the special endowment of each child or person be discovered and developed, but that must be vitalized, galvanized, electrified, by an aroused interest which will lend itself not alone to expedite development but to its fullest and freest conversion into community welfare.

That this ideal is attainable is beyond question, for evidence of the willingness of individuals to go on the stewardship basis has been seen. That it is time for some such reform to rectify the many maladjustments in our society cannot be gainsaid.

Shall not the church, led by consecrated men and women, be about the much-needed task of Christianizing society by educating the people that surplus is social, that our property as well as our persons belong to God and must be made to serve him? For the Christian doctrine of stewardships in this broad sense, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints stands, and for its establishment we ceaselessly work.

May God's Spirit, working mightily among us, awaken a real religion which will bear social fruit.

Noted Hymn Writer Dies

The Reverend Sabine Barrington-Gould, who in 1865 wrote the marching hymn, "Onward, Christian soldiers," died last week at his home in England, aged 90. The famous song was composed for a children's school festival. A low-church bishop thought it was sacrilegious, and the author lost his vicarage. But Premier Gladstone, who heard of the incident, gave the young minister a better church. In 1879 the hymn was given its present musical setting by Sir Arthur Sullivan, author of "Pinafore" and other popular operas.—Labor.

The Roman Gallery in the British Museum

By Paul M. Hanson

Of inestimable worth to any city is a library, art gallery, and museum. They are as important in their places as churches in which to worship. Anything that helps mankind to think and arrive at correct conclusions is deserving of unqualified support and universal praise. In the records and accomplishments of past ages may be found many excellences, and what indicates with a degree of certainty great things that may be achieved to-day. Truth is a "knowledge of things as they are, and as they were, and as they are to come." The truth makes one free. Its possession enables one to look upon many present events and circumstances with a prophetic eye.

Jesus said to his disciples, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear."

Who can visit a museum and not be lost in wonderment and profound study while gazing upon antiquities which throw a bright light upon nations that have lived and passed away? The story of life and civilization is one. If cut up and divided into water-tight compartments, man is cut off from his fellows.

Early Roman Emperors

When visiting the British Museum I paused in the Roman Gallery to view particularly the busts of the Roman emperors who ruled during the first century of the Christian era. For any student to look upon these subjects alone is to be well repaid for a visit to this marvelous storehouse of antiquities. Peculiar is the fascination which comes to one in beholding such authentic busts—seeing in sculpture those who ruled the Roman world and some of whom are referred to in the New Testament.

They are arranged on one side of the room in chronological order.

At the beginning is Julius Cæsar, statesman, lawyer, orator, and general.

By his side is Augustus Cæsar, who reigned B. C. 29 to A. D. 14. While standing before the portrait of this monarch, I took a small New Testament and read:

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. . . . And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:) to be taxed with Mary his espoused wife.—Luke 2: 1-5.

Thus this ruler had to do with Joseph and Mary being in Bethlehem, the place foretold by Micah where the Savior was to be born.

In following the line one next gazes upon Tiberius, A. D. 14 to A. D. 37. His rule extended till a few years after the crucifixion of Christ. Of him we read:

Now in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea and Herod being tetrarch of Galilee. . . .—Luke 3: 1.

Jesus was asked by certain Pharisees:

Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not? But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? Show me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a penny. And he said unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? They say unto him, Cæsar's. Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things that are God's.—Matthew 22: 17-21.

The image of Tiberius was probably upon the penny.

The Jews referred to Tiberius Cæsar when they cried out to Pilate:

If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend: whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Cæsar. . . . We have no king but Cæsar.—John 19: 12, 15.

This emperor spent the closing days of his life on the island of Capri, in debauchery and practicing cruelty. While Cæsar was living here in infancy, Christ was crucified. It was probably here Tiberius heard of the crucifixion, if at all, from Pilate.

Caligula, who reigned only four years, A. D. 37 to A. D. 41, had in Herod Agrippa a friend, and was the Cæsar to whom Cornelius gave allegiance. Near the Entrance Hall is an equestrian statue of Caligula.

Of Claudius Cæsar, A. D. 41 to A. D. 54, it is written:

And there stood up one of them named Agabus, and signified by the Spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world: which came to pass in the days of Cladius Cæsar.—Acts 11: 28.

The saints Aquila and Priscilla were under his rule banished from Rome. It is recorded:

After these things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth; and found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla; (because that Cladius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome:) and came unto them.—Acts 18: 1, 2.

Paul Appears Before Nero

Nero, A. D. 54 to A. D. 68, appears next. The Apostle Paul spoke of him when he said, "I appeal unto Cæsar."—Acts 25: 11. Nero's true character had not then been revealed. During Paul's first imprisonment in Rome, covering two years, he was permitted to receive all who came to him. He wrote to Timothy of his first appearance before Nero:

At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me: . . . Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me; that by me the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear: and I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion.—2 Timothy 4: 16, 17.

Onesiphorus, risking his life, sought out Paul when he was in Rome:

The Lord give mercy unto the house of Onesiphorus; for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain: but, when he was in Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and found me.—2 Timothy 1: 16, 17.

It was while in Rome that Paul, magnifying his apostolic office, wrote epistles instructing, regulating, and setting in order the churches in Galatia, Ephesus, Philippi, and Colosse.

Nero charged the Christians with setting Rome on fire. In his reign it was a capital crime to be a Christian. They were saturated with inflammable materials and their bodies served as torches to light up the public gardens of Rome. On the bust of Nero is this label: "The typical example in history of capricious and inordinate vanity combined with cruelty." He was one of the most notorious of the Cæsars.

At this time the gospel had reached to "Cæsar's household." Paul wrote to the saints in Philippi: "All the saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Cæsar's household."—Philemon 4: 22. This discloses that even among the attendants of the cruel Nero were followers of the Lord Jesus.

What an experience to look upon the sculptured features of these rulers! In Nero I saw the look of a lunatic. Perhaps this accounts for some of his horrible, loathsome crimes.

Jerusalem Destroyed

Vespasian, A. D. 69 to 79, restored the government after the civil wars which followed the overthrow of Nero. He was raised to the throne by the troops which he commanded in the East, a successful general and administrator.

The bust of Titus, son of Vespasian, emperor A. D. 79, recalls to mind the destruction of Jerusalem and terrible suffering of the Jews, A. D. 70. This long siege, predicted by the Lord, was the worst that ever befell the city.

A striking impression made upon me by the bust of Titus was his possession of great energy and driving power. There is a strong resemblance between him and his father Vespian. Both stand out as extraordinary characters. The siege against Jerusalem was started by the father, and upon his being called away to be crowned, Titus assumed command.

In the reign of Domitian, who succeeded his brother Titus, there was persecution of the Christians, and it was probably under his rule that John the Beloved, one of the Twelve, was banished to Patmos. When thus exiled the book of Revelation was given through him to the church.

Under Nerva the banished Christians were recalled. It was at this time the Apostle John returned from Patmos. He survived till Trajan reigned.

Trajan, A. D. 98 to 117, issued a command to exterminate the descendants of David. By his order Ignatius, disciple of John, was brought from Antioch to Rome, and there thrown to the wild beasts.

Beginning with Cæsar Augustus, the New Testament times are covered with the reigns of these Cæsars.

How briefly and swiftly, yet realistically, many scenes passed before me as I walked along the line and looked into the faces of these emperors. The opening scenes of church history were reenacted. The persecutors were enthroned. The church was powerless to resist. They were "persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed." For the weapons of their "warfare were not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds."

Right has in itself the power to prevail. Strength lies in gentleness—all else is brutality. What comes from the animal side, from the jungle, triumphs only momentarily.

The Cæsars are little thought of; their empire fell—while the gentle Christ, the head of the persecuted, is enthroned in the living hearts of a vast multitude.

Tithing a Divine Principle

By Bishop J. C. Dent

In defining the word principle, among other things Webster says it is "A settled rule or law of action."

In the beginning, man forfeited his right to the presence of God, so in order to get back into his presence man must necessarily accept a rule of action laid down by God.

There are certain of those rules that we must follow to become members of the church and others to guide us along the journey to perfection.

One of these rules of action or principles is laid down for us that pertains to temporal affairs and is the means that God has used to carry on this work and help to purify his Saints.

Temporal Law

If, then, a principle of God, it is just as imperative that we observe it as any other principle.

The Lord shows us that a failure to observe this principle grieves him. In Malachi 3:7, 8, he asks that the people return to him from whom they had strayed, in that they had not given him both tithes and offerings.

Tithing and Offerings

Tithing is an amount specified by the Lord definitely as an amount due him from our stewardship. He asks another payment, which is called an offering but differs from the tithe in that it is the steward who sets the amounts. And surely in our accounting it will be a test of our faith in the promises of God, and our selfishness will be measured by our offering.

He does not ask us to pay our debts (tithes) to him from the thought that he is in need, because he says all things are already his and we are but stewards over certain portions. We must, therefore, conclude that it is a principle or rule of action for us to follow for our own benefit both here and hereafter.

The payment of tithes ought not to be considered from a basis of monetary benefit, because Jesus said (John 14:15), "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Hence, to follow this request would find us serving God because of our love for him.

Again Jesus said (John 15:12), "This is my commandment, that ye love one another."

Purpose of Tithes

The payment of tithes will assist our fellow men to see the light of life, because it supports the missionary's family while he proclaims salvation to a dying world. It will further help to gladden the hearts of those who are unable to care for themselves. We will be conscious that in our act of paying into his storehouse, that portion which the Lord says belongs to him, we are pleasing God and Jesus Christ in caring for those in whom Jesus showed such deep concern. (See John 17:6-26.)

To obey this principle in the light of love for God and our fellow men will bring us into line as being workers together with God, and will give us the knowledge which Jesus had of his acceptance when he said, "I do always the things which please my Father."

Jesus said (Matthew 7:21), "Not everyone that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

Doing God's Will

Doing things is what will count when we stand before the king. (Matthew 16:27.)

There is a broad thought in the teaching of Jesus as he taught men to pray, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." We can see in this thought that to be able to approach God consistently for health, home, flocks, herds, business, etc., we should be able to say, Father, give to us as we have imparted to you your portion and to our fellow men their portion.

It would help us to have faith in the promise of God to be able to say to him, I have done the work which thou gavest me to do, What lack I yet?

The financial principle is not man-made or it would be undergoing many changes, but the apostle says (1 Corinthians 9:14), "Even so hath the Lord ordained," etc.

The command is to lay up treasures in heaven, and in order to do that we must get in touch with divine law here and then walk within the law.

In Matthew 25, Jesus in describing the judgment says that inasmuch as men do good acts to their fellow men they do them unto him. In this, then, our tithing will reach him in his eternal abode. (Hebrews 7:8.)

Its influences for good to our fellow men by making it possible for them to hear the gospel and consequently obey it, reaches into or becomes a treasure in heaven. In Timothy 5:25 we see our works finding lodgment in eternity by preceding us to the bar of God.

Peter was told that the exercise of his authority on earth would be recognized in heaven, so the act of tithing will be recorded to our credit in heaven as is the act of repentance, baptism, or any other ordinance.

Purifying Selfishness

The paying of tithing and offerings, then, will serve most in purifying our selfish nature, and the joy that comes to us in paying our debts to the Lord and seeing our poor brother and sister benefited will be one of the waymarks that will convince us of the truth of the statement: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine."

Doctrine and Covenants 119:8 tells us that all are called according to the gifts of God unto them, and to the intent that all may labor together, etc.

It is, therefore, plain that the man who is plowing for wheat and paying his tithing on his increase is just as acceptable to God, and plays just as necessary a part in the evangelizing of the world and supporting the poor and the needy as the man who preaches the gospel.

May God help us to work together for the good of all.

Religion is greatly dependent upon its power to interpret the hard things of life to those who bear them that they may still believe in the divine love and justice. Because the value of religion is found in this interpretive power, A. Max Carmichael, superintendent of the Department of Religious Education, urges that our Sunday schools be extended to three hours and that our teachers be so trained that they may help our young people apply religion to their everyday problems. This would make our religion truly felt in the lives of our children.

EDUCATIONAL

PART XIV

[Do you know what effect toy soldiers, guns, and swords have upon children? Should a boy be allowed to play with dolls? Do you know why a child should have toys to play with and what kinds of toys to buy? Perhaps you can answer all these questions readily, but on the other hand perhaps you are among the great majority who know little or nothing about the educational value of toys. Read The Toy Age and perhaps you will begin to understand some of the play problems of our children.—EDITORS.]

The Toy Age

By Mrs. Tessie Smith

Let us pretend we are visiting the toyshops to make our selection of toys for children. We must begin by using our best judgment as to what toys would be good and suitable for children of different ages. If we make a mistake our money is gone. The child likes the toy or does not like it. Hence we should pay attention to the kinds of toys to select for children.

How Toys Affect Careers

When visiting the toyshops we find toys from all countries. Every country's contribution to the toy store is an indication of the character of that country. The toyshops of some nations are more indicative than those of others in revealing pronounced national tendencies. It stands to reason that the continued use of certain toys is virtually an index to the future career of children.

Miss Elizabeth Harrison in A Study of Child Nature gives the following comments on the toys of the various nations:

French Toys

The French toys include nearly all the pewter soldiers, all guns and swords; surely, such would be the toys of the nation which produced a Napoleon. All Punch and Judy shows are of French manufacture, as are also most miniature theaters, and all doll tea sets which have wineglasses and finger bowls attached. The French dolls mirror the fashionable world, with all its finery and unneeded luxury, handing it down to the little child. No wonder Frances Willard made a protest against dolls, if she had in mind the French dolls.

"You see," said the guileless saleswoman, as she handed me first one and then another of these dolls, thinking doubtless that she had a slow purchaser whom she had to assist in making a selection, "you can dress one of these dolls as a lady, or as a little girl, just as you like." And, sure enough, the very baby dolls had upon their faces the smile of the society flirt, or the deep passionate look of the woman who had seen the world. I beheld the French salons of the eighteenth century still lingering in the nineteenth century dolls. All their toys are dainty, artistic, exquisitely put together, but lack strength and power of endurance, are low or shallow in aim, and are oftentimes inappropriate in the extreme.

German Toys

The German toys take another tone. They are heavier, stronger, and not so artistic, and largely represent the home and the more primitive forms of trade life. From Germany we get all our ready-made doll houses, with their clean tile floors and clumsy porcelain stoves, their parlors with round iron center tables, and stiff, ugly chairs with the inevitable lace tidies. Here and there in these miniature houses we see a tiny pot of artificial flowers. All such playthings tend to draw the child's thoughts to the home life. Next come the countless number of toy butcher shops, bakers, blacksmiths, and other representations of the small, thrifty, healthful trade life which one sees all over Germany. Nor is the child's love attracted toward the home and the shops alone. Almost all of the better class of toy horses and carts are of German manufacture. The "woolly sheep," so dear to childish heart, is of the same origin. Thus a love for simple, wholesome out-of-door activities is instilled.

And then the German dolls! One would know from the dolls alone that Germany was the land of Froebel and the birthplace of the kindergarten.

Swiss Toys

The Swiss toys are largely the bluntly carved wooden cattle, sheep and goats, with equally blunt shepherds and shepherdesses, reminding one forcibly of the dull faces of those much-enduring beasts of burden called Swiss peasants.

English Toys

The English rag doll is peculiarly national in its placidity of countenance. The British people stand preeminent in the matter of storybooks for children, but, so far as I have been able to observe, are somewhat lacking in originality as to toys; possibly this is due to the out-of-door life encouraged among them.

American Toys

When I asked to see the American toys, my guide turned, and with a sweep of her hand said: "These trunks are American. All doll trunks are manufactured in this country." Surely our Emerson was right when he said that "the tape-worm of travel was in every American." Here we see the beginning of the restless, migratory spirit of our people; even these children's toys suggest, "How nice it would be to pack up and go somewhere!" All tool chests are of domestic origin. Seemingly, all the inventions of the Yankee mind are reproduced in miniature form to stimulate the young genius of our country.

Oriental Toys

The Japanese and Chinese toys are a curious study, telling of national traits as clearly as do their laws or their religion. They are durable, made to last unchanged a long time; no flimsy tinsel is used which can be admired for the hour, then cast aside. . . . The carved ivory or inlaid wooden toy may be used without injury or change by at least one or two successive generations of children.

What Parents Should Know About Toys

From this review we should appreciate the decided influence of toys on the lives of our children. Should mothers be concerned that the dolls, wagons, drums, or other toys should turn their children's thoughts in certain directions rather than in others? Should children play that they are mothers or fathers or shopkeepers, or soldiers, as the case may be? Should we not constantly keep in mind that through their dramatic play they become interested more and more in those phases of life which they have imitated, and that which they watch and imitate they later become?

We believe that children should be trained to care for toys the same as other things so that when their interest in them is at an end the toys will still be in a condition to be of service to other children. There are certain toys which can be obtained that meet the demands of the child at the certain age when he likes to take things to pieces. This tendency, which becomes one of destruction if not watched carefully, can easily be made to have educational value to the child. Instead of vainly attempting to suppress the newborn power of the young pioneer, or searcher after truth, guide it aright. Give him playthings which can be taken to pieces and put together again without injury to the material; dolls which can be dressed and undressed; horses which can be harnessed and unharnessed; carts to which horses may be fastened at will. The nested playthings are good for this age. Blocks which fit one inside of the other and can also be built into a tower are one kind; also the wooden egg with numerous eggs inside is another. Through the use of these the child not only gets the idea of construction but steadiness and poise.

Purchasing Dolls

When buying dolls we are tempted to buy a very pretty doll for the child, and every time he plays with it we say, "Be careful; don't let it break!" But when they are free and want to play by themselves give them one with which they can play as they will. We had a character rag doll at our house called Raggedy Ann which could be made to do all kinds of things and in this way afforded much varied amusement for the children. Some of the very fine toys are too realistic. They are only one thing and cannot be made anything else. The children do not get near to them as they do some such toys as Raggedy Ann. A toy soldier fully equipped is only a soldier; it cannot represent his father or any other personage. A stool turned over is a boat, a carriage; set on its legs it becomes a horse or a table; a bandbox becomes a house, a cupboard, a wagon—anything. The too perfect toy chills the imagination and hence the child turns from it to objects, which, by remotely suggesting an ideal, heighten the activity of fantasy. The true plaything must be indefinite, capable of many transformations and able to act many parts.

Price of Toys

We go to the store and pay two dollars, perhaps three dollars, for a stuffed cat or dog, and as it is impossible to clean them they accumulate many germs and the child gets the use of them only for a short time. You can take a stocking and stuff it with rags, put the eyes and nose and mouth on it, and the child will love that kind of a cat just as well, perhaps better, than the other; it also has a tail that wiggles; but when this toy is dirty you can put it in the water and wash it. There is a difference in expense as well as sanitation.

Mechanical Toys

We do not say children cannot have mechanical toys or bought toys, as we believe some of them are very fine for children to have, because they afford a basis for the young creative genius along all scientific lines—the steamship, the locomotive, the telephone, etc. These miniature toys form the connecting link between the child's creative imagination and the world of reality. It is well to buy a number of them. Let the children use them as long as they are interesting to them and then put them away. When they ask for them again, get them out and they will be a treat. We remember one little toy automobile that cost only 25 cents which answered the purpose of the mechanical toy. Its special resting place was on the chimney closet or shelf. Maybe it wasn't asked for for a month. If it had been lying around all the time it would have become common to the children and they would not have cared half so much for it as they did when they had not seen it for a week or a month. Teach children to get permission to open the drawer or box containing such toys with which they play on special occasions. If you have a dress or a hat and wear it day in and day out you get tired of it, but if you put it away for a week or a month it is different.

In providing toys for tiny children we should purchase things which can be put in their mouths and chewed upon, and which are color fast. A good toy in this nature is the little tinker toy doll. There are any number of things of that kind in different colored beads, etc., the teething ring, rattle, etc. By all means these must be washable and kept sanitary.

DEPARTMENTAL

A Perfect Year

Brother G. J. Waller, of Honolulu, in a recent letter told us of a young Japanese brother, who has joined the church during the past year, coming to him and expressing his desire to do his full duty to God and his church.

After counseling with Brother Waller, it was agreed that the amount of tithing due on his possessions was $31, which amount he handed to Brother Waller with a statement that he wanted to end the year perfect.

During the year he had come in contact with the perfect law of liberty, and rejoicing in that liberty he desired to end the year by an observance of that law which had brought to him such a full measure of joy.

May others catch the spirit of this, our brother, that the gospel may go to many other nations as a result of our faithfulness.

Sincerely yours,

BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE.

LETTERS

Philadelphia Doing Work Among Italians

From a Letter to the First Presidency

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, December 12, 1923.—We had a very fine experience last Wednesday night with the Italian brethren. We did not attempt to preach to them but spent the time in a round table discussion. Another gave his name for baptism for next Sunday. This will be the third one of the Italians to be baptized, with several more very near the water.

We are at present putting on what we call a "Tithing campaign." It started last Sunday night and will continue until December 23, 1923. Next Thursday night we are going to hold a special meeting to create interest in the subject; then Sunday a few minutes of the Sunday school class period time will be devoted to the subject, followed by a short talk by Bishop Irwin. At the 11 o'clock hour Bishop Zimmermann will be the speaker. At 4 p. m. Brother Irwin will be the speaker. This attempt of ours is not merely to arouse some temporary enthusiasm over the question of tithing, but is an effort to plant the seed deeply in the hearts and minds of the people concerning their duties along this line. On December 23 we expect to hold a round table discussion at the regular 11 o'clock service.

We are now having the outside of the church pointed up. Praying for the advancement of the work.

ARTHUR E. STOFT.

English Saints Pleased With Apostles' Visit

CLAYTON, MANCHESTER, ENGLAND, December 29.—It has been quite an inspiration to read the various activities and doings of the church members of many lands during the past year. I thought it might interest many of the dear brothers and sisters to read a few lines from this little corner of God's vineyard, Northeastern Manchester Branch, Janes Street, Bradford. Some brothers and sisters who once lived with us and enjoyed our associations and are now making their homes in other climes, may be interested in us as well as the various ministers who have labored here when in charge of the English mission.

Church Improvements

Our branch contains some fine young brothers and sisters who are giving their time and energy to promote the best interest of the church. During the past year we have been quite busy. Our church needed renovating and redecorating. The sisters of this branch decided upon a ladies' effort to accomplish this, which resulted in fine success. The brethren in their turn made individual efforts for this.

The sisters in their zeal for the cause were spurred on to action through the offer of a nonmember to give two pounds to the first, whether brother or sister, who raised ten pounds in one month's time. We hardly need say that the honors for the two pounds were given to the sisters.

The seed sown by the brothers and sisters who have gone over the beyond are certainly being reaped in our day and time, for much of the bitterness which used to exist toward us as a body of people is completely changed to an extent that our sale of work, which was recently held here, was recognized by a member of parliament of the British House of Commons.

Visiting Apostles

We were also made happy by the presence of two members of the Quorum of Twelve, Paul M. Hanson and J. F. Curtis. We had the pleasure of hearing the brethren preach at our church the following Sunday, Brother Curtis in the morning and Brother Hanson in the evening of December 16.

Christmas Cheer

On Christmas morning the branch gave a free breakfast and distributed oranges to four hundred children of the neighborhood. The children sang, "Christians, awake." It made the occasion one worthy to be associated with to see the happy faces of the youngsters on receiving their bags, containing pork pie, mince pie, and a scone. The scene was enlivened by the appearance of Father Christmas who moved freely about among the children, giving each an orange as they left the church.

On Boxing Day, an interesting event was celebrated at the church, on the completion of twenty-five years marriage of Brother and Sister Fred Topping. About one hundred brethren and sisters, relatives, and friends were present and an enjoyable time was spent together. After the splendid feast was over and the short speeches were made, the president of the branch, Brother G. W. Leggott, proposed a toast to the health of the host and hostess.

Saint Joseph Churches Give Radio Program

SAINT JOSEPH, MISSOURI, January 22.—The branches at Saint Joseph consolidated in a musical program which was broadcasted over the radio from the Utz Electric Shop in the name of the church on the evening of January 12. The program continued for one hour and fifty minutes. A short sermon by Brother O. Salisbury was included in the program. He spoke on "Christ, the Great Philosopher." Many congratulations were received over the telephone and from surrounding towns and throughout the city. Postals were received from Texas and Ohio, stating they received the program loud and distinct. This program was arranged for and assembled by Brother J. L. Bear, pastor of the Second Branch. Another program is being planned to be broadcasted on the evening of February 14.

Annual Election

The general election for the year of officers in Second Branch took place Wednesday evening, January 2. Brother O. Salisbury had charge of the session. Brother J. L. Bear was sustained as president with Brethren F. R. Gist and V. P. Goodenough as counselors. The rest of the priesthood were sustained in their respective offices to carry on the regular routine.

The two sons of Brother and Sister Meltabarger and the daughter of Brother and Sister Robert Spillman joined the ranks by baptism Sunday evening, January 13. The outlook is good for a few more soon.

Lost by Death

The Sunday school lost a dear little friend at the death of Leona Sommers, daughter of Brother and Sister Sommers who are recent members of the church. Her death was from the effects of scarlet fever.

Brother J. L. Bear was called to Edgerton, Missouri, on January 20 to preach the funeral sermon of Brother Jerome Middleton.

Clarence Bear and LaJune Johnston were married New Year's Eve. The groom is the son of Brother and Sister J. L. Bear, and the bride is a daughter of Brother and Sister G. W. Johnston. They will make their home at Lamar, Colorado, where Brother Bear is a designer and architectural draftsman for the Brown Manufacturing and Lumber Company.

The work is still progressing with the spirit of enthusiasm. Those who are alive in the work are continually struggling against the adversary and everything appears to be gradually moving forward.

J. L. BEAR.

Saints Strengthened by Visiting Elder

HALFWAY, OREGON, January 17.—Dear Editors: I want to write of God's blessings to us this last week. Brother L. G. Hoisington was directed to come here, and all were glad to welcome him. We had sacrament at the home of Brother George Elmers, where the Spirit was with us in power and we had a foretaste of Zion in the gift of tongues and interpretation.

We cannot tell you how much good his visit did us spiritually. Brother Hoisington preached after sacrament, also the following Monday night.

Brother Hoisington is a humble, spiritual man, and knowing him, hearing him give his testimony of the divinity of the work, strengthened us.

We hope he may return to us at some time in the future for our community needs such a man. We are thankful for his short visit with us and will strive to live in this valley as God would have us live.

MRS. FRED L. MILLS.

Work at Oscoda Results in Baptisms

OSCODA, MICHIGAN, January 18.—The Saints of Au Sable and Oscoda are rejoicing in the good work being done here and feel that they have been strengthened and encouraged.

There are four denominations in the two towns, but they have done very little in building up their churches. Two years ago there was only one resident minister and he was the pastor of the Methodist church, and according to my information, there had been no conversions in that church for about ten years. The results of the series of meetings held here two years ago are the organizing of a splendid Sunday school and eight baptized. Later two others were baptized as a result of Sunday school influence and sermons by Elder Sommerfield of Tawas City.

I came here January 7 and started meetings with splendid attendance and interest, and yesterday had the privilege of baptizing two fine young ladies. Others express the desire to be baptized next summer.

There are no resident ministers here, as the Methodists did not retain their pastor and the only ones doing any real constructive work in the two towns are the Latter Day Saints.

We hope that the same spirit of moving ahead is manifested in other communities where there are Saints. There is no branch here, but in the two towns there are about sixteen Saints. Also there are no officers of the church, but the members can well be praised for their interest and determination to move ahead in spite of these handicaps.

CLARENCE GRIMM.

Invited to Preach in Baptist Church

RIDGETOWN, ONTARIO, January 27.—The branch services here are quite well attended. This is a good field to work in since the public seems so interested.

Brother George E. Perritt is the president and C. H. Jones the presiding priest.

Upon request, Brother Jones spoke in the Baptist church at the village of Palmyra a short time ago. It makes the Saints feel that a good work can be done.

The Sunday school has splendid interest. The Christmas offering was good.

Evangelistic Services Follow Home-Coming Events in All Branches of Des Moines District

By C. E. McDonald

DES MOINES, IOWA, January 31.—While at the General Conference last October, arrangements were made between the district presidency, the First Presidency, and the presiding patriarch for a series of home-coming services, followed by evangelistic services in all of the branches and groups that cared to have them.

There was inspiration in the minds of those who planned the work, for all were of the opinion that J. F. Martin, patriarch, of Kirtland, Ohio, should be the speaker.

First Meetings at Perry

Accordingly, Brother Martin came. The first meeting was at Perry, Iowa, on October 28. Perry has a small membership, but nearly all attended, and during the week-night services the crowds continued to increase. Many outsiders were attracted to these services. A uniform program was carried out at each place on Sunday. A social service was held at 2.30 in addition to the regular appointments.

Des Moines Saints Hear Patriarch

At Des Moines, on November 4, a houseful of Saints greeted the speaker in the morning, and nearly all remained the entire day. Besides the wise counsel which was received through his sermons, the Lord saw fit to speak to his Saints by the voice of the Spirit, to their encouragement and direction. They were admonished to attend to the visiting and caring for the "sheep" and "lambs" of the fold. The services during the week were well attended, the young people taking special interest and receiving a blessing thereby.

Runnells Gives Way to Boone

Runnells was to have been next, but by arrangement between the respective branch presidents, Boone had their meeting on November 11. This arrangement was made for the benefit of Brother Malcor, who is branch president there. His work is such that he has to work part time at night, and he thought he could better attend services during this week than the following one. Here, as at the former places, the Lord spoke to his people, telling them that he had put it into the minds of those in charge of the work in the district to arrange for these "home-comings" and that he was pleased with the support that the Saints were giving them. The Boone Saints had planned to follow their home-coming week with a series of missionary sermons to be given by Brother Holloway, but he could not come until a week later. Some of the Perry Saints drove over during the week and assisted with the music. Two young men from Perry, who are non-members, sang at the close of services one night. The collection was divided between them and Brother Martin.

The next meeting was held at Runnells, on November 18. The meetings at this place have already been reported, so no mention will be made at this time.

Rhodes Packs Church

At Rhodes, November 30, the little church was packed to its capacity. Again the Lord was present by his Spirit in great power. Again the speaker was blessed with power in preaching the word, and the voice of the Spirit spoke in prophecy to the people through Brother Martin. The Saints who had been hungering for a crumb from the Lord's table were filled, and those who were thirsty were satisfied, even as Christ has promised in his word. The faithful to duty were commended, while those who had been negligent were admonished.

Meetings Held at Pershing

Near Knoxville there is a small group of Saints who live at the little town of Pershing, a coal camp. This group of Saints is presided over by a young man, Elder George Orr. Here, on November 25, were found a large number of people who braved the threatening weather and bad roads to be served again at the Lord's table. They were not disappointed, for, as in the former meetings, the Spirit of the Lord was poured out in great measure.

Brother Martin stayed here until Friday night, preaching to ever-increasing crowds. On the last night they came through a storm, some wearing boots to get there.

Next Services at Dunreath

The town of Dunreath is located eighteen miles east of Runnells. Sixteen Saints reside there. These people came into the church through efforts begun by Henry Castings and Milo Burnett eight years ago. Their home-coming was on December 9. This was the seventh Sunday since Brother Martin came, and several came for the seventh time, some from Boone, Rhodes, Des Moines, Knoxville, Pershing, Hiteman, Lovilla, and Runnells. The Spirit of the Lord was present not only as a silent guest but was manifested in prophecy.

Brother Martin remained at this place until Wednesday, when he went to Sandyville, preaching there three nights.

Sandyville Hears Gospel

At this place resides an old brother who is loved by everyone in the vicinity. He has preached many sermons over the anvil in his blacksmith shop, and his life is above reproach. His good wife who stood by him for more than fifty years was called home during the year, and he is very lonely. If every husband had the same love and consideration for his companion and every wife for her husband that these had, the divorce courts would not exist. In his wife's sickness, when one side was paralyzed and she could not speak, he sat in a chair by her bedside, night after night, within reach of her hand, so if she wanted anything he could instantly get it for her. His name is Joseph Knox. His reward is that he has seen some come into the fold through his ministrations. When, on December 16, a large crowd of Saints gathered there for the final service, his heart was overjoyed.

Many of the same Saints who had attended previous Sunday meetings were here likewise. The Spirit that was present at Pentecost came in a peaceful, quiet way, filling every heart to overflowing.

A message from God was given to all the Saints, as had previously been given, though in different words each time. E. G. Beye, of Rhodes, was told that his work had met with divine approval. This brother is mayor of his home town, and his work is very heavy. The message greatly cheered him. Brother Beye is superintendent of the Religio for the district and counselor to the district presidency.

Reception for Patriarch Held

The young people of Des Moines held a reception in Brother Martin's honor in the banquet hall of the Rollins Hosiery Mills on the night of November 18, which was on the eve of his departure. Many times during the splendid program as it was rendered, the Spirit was felt in the hearts of those who were there. Stephen Robinson was toastmaster upon this occasion, and he showed unusual skill and wit in performing his duties as such. There were two hundred of the Saints in attendance. Youth and age mingled together in sweet harmony that was pleasant to see.

Brother Martin with others was invited to leave the hall, when a collection was taken which was given to him and Sister Martin as a gift from the Des Moines Branch. This over, the evening's entertainment continued. Sister Blanche Edwards was there, the Saints being very glad to make her acquaintance.

The toast to the Martin family was made by Brother David Dowker, it being very appropriate and fitting for the occasion. Then the gift was presented, after which Brother Martin responded in a very feeling manner. His visit will never be forgotten because of his spiritual worth to those who received his ministrations.

Sister Mabel Mussell attended nearly all of the home-comings, acting as stenographer in the taking of the blessings. She was very faithful in this and deserves credit for her work.

Brother Wilson, who is president of the Hiteman Branch, stated that their branch had been greatly benefited by the meetings that were held in the Des Moines District. Hiteman is in the Lamoni Stake, so these spiritual blessings have not been enjoyed by the Des Moines Saints alone. One brother present at Sandyville lives in North Dakota; another came from Wyoming. The time was propitious; the weather was clear and warm, with one exception. Who ever heard of eight Sundays in this period of the year with good weather and all clear but one? Surely the Lord had his hand in the work.

Stewardships to Be Preached

The next meetings will be of a different character. They will be along the line of the establishment of stewardships. Brother Albert Carmichael will be the speaker if he can be secured. We expect as much of the Spirit in these meetings as was manifest in those just closed. There will be one week's meetings held in each branch, beginning at Des Moines the first Sunday in January.

Brother Henry Castings, who is president of the district, attended every home-coming, and by his prayers and presence and his sincere testimonies, as well as his wise counsel, helped to make them a success. All the presidents of branches and local ministry cooperated also in all of these services.

Apostle M. A. McConley Writes From HiloFrom a Letter to the First Presidency*

Dear Brethren: Your farewell letter mailed to me in care of the S. S. Manoa at San Francisco was received in company with a number of other letters and post cards. They were all delivered by the steward shortly after we left the Golden Gate, and we read them as we sat on deck watching the coast of California fade away in the distance.

We certainly thank you all for your kind wishes and for your confidence. It shall be my constant effort to conserve the interests of the church wherever I may be sent, but from past experience I realize that without the inspiration of heaven to guide and direct, human judgment is bound to err. I trust I may be able to keep myself sufficiently in line of duty, that the quickening and enlightening influence of God's Spirit may be with me in my ministry. And as I pray for this for myself, my prayers are that my brethren in all the various quorums may be blessed in a like manner, as their various conditions and callings may require.

The church has lacked foresight in times past. May the day be hastened when our various visions may be broadened and our comprehensions enlarged so that we may be prepared for the ever-widening field of service before us, is my prayer.

The letter conveying Christmas greetings was unique, and the sentiment expressed therein is appreciated. I trust the day is near at hand when "peace and good will" may be the outstanding characteristic of all the quorums of the church.

M. A. McCONLEY.

Australian Church Membership Increasing

From a Letter to the First Presidency

STEPHNEY, SOUTH AUSTRALIA, December 3, 1923.—My heart rejoices as I report to you for the month just ended, for the success which has come to us has exceeded our expectations.

I have had the pleasure of baptizing five recently, and there are others very close. I told you in previous reports that I hoped to see additions to our numbers before the close of the year, so this hope has been realized.

It was granted to experience the down-pouring of the Spirit during the confirmation service yesterday. There were many who still desired to take part in the meeting, though we extended it quite considerably, and I suggested that for once we make special effort to attend the coming Wednesday evening prayer meeting, where again we may have great rejoicing before I leave for Tiona Reunion which is three days' and two nights' journey from here.

It will be two years next January since we were appointed here, and truly it is good to have witnessed such progress in the way of additions to our numbers, and development of talent by consecrated workers.

Though there have been trials and difficulties, the last two years have been the most precious of my missionary experience, and I thank God from the depths of my soul for the greatness of his gospel and its powers.

Street Meetings

Street meetings, while not as well supported by the Saints as they might be, these being their only shopping nights after many meetings during the week, are attracting growing interest, and with experience extending over some years now in this feature of work, I find means of holding greater attention as the time passes. The last few street evenings I succeeded in holding the attention of good audiences practically right through, and though our meetings are not in the direct vicinity of our building, much good has already been done through them. One elderly sister just baptized has learned much by attending street meetings, and another family is well on its way, having already helped financially. I find the presentation of our social ideals attracts favorable attention for our work. I preached on stewardships at the church last evening, a number of strangers being present.

The greater part of my work, of course, has been in the building up of the branch and its departments.

I was pleased with the conference resolution on stewardships and trust we may soon make it an accomplished fact that will enlighten the world.

With every good wish for your brethren who bear such heavy responsibilities, and desiring to do my part with the rest of the ministry and membership in building up Zion,
HAROLD I. VELT.

Spirit of Conference Reflected in District

From a Letter to President F. M. McDowell

MOUNT VERNON, ILLINOIS, December 12, 1923.—I am glad to inform you that since coming into my field I have been blessed with more than usual liberty in presenting the gospel, and the good influence that was manifested during the latter part of our General Conference meetings has continued with me so far. Our district conference passed off with a very good feeling, and during our social service the gift of prophecy was manifested to a remarkable degree.

HENRY SPARLING.

Pittsburgh District Sends Report of Activities

An unusually interesting report comes to the desk of the First Presidency. It shows the activities of branches in one district. We trust this district may be in a way typical of many. The optimistic, forward-moving spirit of this district is refreshing. The report follows.—EDITORS.

Punxsutawney and Dubois

Branch president, W. S. Shea.

Branch in very good condition. They do not have a regular meeting house at either branch, although they are fairly successful meeting in the homes. They have been holding their meetings regularly and also have a very nice Sunday school. A two-day meeting was held at Dubois on July 21 and 22, which was largely attended by the members of both branches. The district president and vice president attended and helped them in their program. These two branches are isolated from this end of the district, and it is necessary to take the meetings to them. A great deal of good seems to have been accomplished by this meeting. More of the Saints are paying tithes and making their inventories than ever before. The spirit of cooperation that was expressed in the report of this branch president was very encouraging.

Fayette City

Branch president, Samuel Winship.

This branch is quite small but is holding its own very nicely. They report the interest of the Saints as good. Meetings are held regularly and are fairly well attended. The

A Calendar That Grows in Value

Our Scripture Text Calendar is appreciated more and more as each month's page is turned over to reveal a new and beautiful reproduction of a famous painting of a biblical scene. There is a full description of these paintings.

The good influence of good pictures is an invaluable asset in character building. Teachers of children, in the home and in the school, highly prize these pictures as teaching aids.

Sunday school especially is growing, and, although a rather small school, they report a Christmas offering this year of $204.39. Personally we feel that this is a very fine showing, knowing the school as we do. A ministerial conference was held at this branch September 15 and 16. The branch feels that this was a great help to the branch. The district president with other officers attended and assisted in every way possible. A very fine word of admonition was given through Patriarch John Martin, and the Spirit was present in great power. This was a very encouraging experience indeed.

Lock Four

Branch president, James Raisbeck.

This branch president is very optimistic of the future and lays special stress on the fact that it is his desire to cooperate with the officers of the district. We held a ministerial conference here in December, and it seemed to have helped the branch to take on a new lease of life. It has been our aim in these conferences to especially instruct the priesthood. In this particular meeting we had a very good program and were ably assisted by L. F. P. Curry. Two young men were ordained at this conference, one to the office of priest and one as teacher. There are more in line if they will qualify for the work. Brother Neville held a very fine series of meetings in this branch immediately after the conference, and I have an excellent report of this.

Pittsburgh Branch

Branch president, L. F. P. Curry.

The spirituality of the Saints here is easily discernible. The cooperation of the officers with the president of the branch is 100 per cent. Brother Curry is a very able leader and having the knowledge is able to teach. The sermons are of the highest order and therefore are of great help to the Saints. The prayer and social meetings are very spiritual. A missionary plan has been adopted by the branch, and Elder Frank L. Shinn, until recently of Clarksburg, West Virginia, has been placed in charge of this work, the idea being to secure new openings around the city. Evangelist G. T. Griffiths and High Priest C. Edward Miller have visited the branch and given illustrated lectures that were greatly edifying. A very fine ministerial conference was held in this branch in June of this year. The Department of Recreation and Expression is doing good work in looking after the young people of the branch.

To the First Presidency

Brethren: The report of each branch is the high lights of each report as received from the branch presidents, with a little personal comment added so as to try to give you an insight as to the workings of each branch as the conditions actually exist. I feel very much encouraged by the spirit of cooperation that is being shown by each branch president. I think that the ministerial conferences we have been holding in the various branches have helped greatly. We are holding these quarterly. I have tried to give you the facts as I see them, and I hope they may enable you to have a little clearer view of the work in this district.

J. A. JAKUES, District President.

Sister Eliza Ketcham, of Boone, Michigan, writes that she is pleased with the copies of the SAINTS' HERALD and Zion's Ensign which she received and sends subscriptions for them. Sister Ketcham and her husband are among the older Saints who have had experience in life and love to testify of the goodness of God. She has been a member of the church eight years. She lives eleven miles from the Cadillac Branch, so cannot attend church often.

Professed Infidel Writes Letter of Appreciation to Missionary

From a Letter to the First Presidency

MYRONA, MORNINGSIDE, AUCKLAND, NEW ZEALAND, November 10, 1923.—Just a few lines to let you know how we are doing. I am pleased to say that the work is steadily gaining ground, and prejudice is being allayed. Numerically there are no gains since my last letter, but we are expecting a baptism shortly here and others are showing well in the country. One of the last baptized in Kerepehi has paid seventeen pounds (about $75) tithing, so we may count him converted properly.

The branch meetings are well maintained, but very few outsiders attend. The Sunday school is a live institution, and besides having a surplus financially they started late in the year and raised two pounds Christmas offering.

Street Services Held

The street services are still going strongly, and though none of the visitors join the church they carry our literature into the home and from that point our tracts also go abroad in every direction. I sold twenty-four Ensigns each of the last two Sundays. These were sent me by the office at Brother McConley's suggestion. I give the papers, and they give me a penny. We are not allowed to sell.

When we speak of discontinuing the street meetings, there are always requests sent in for us to continue, and one cannot give up in the face of these requests. The mission house and property are now in fine order, save a portion of the front which is not yet cleared of rock. We have some beautiful flowers and about twelve kinds of vegetables growing. Brothers Taylor and Thompson are here this week en route for Sydney.

I am inclosing you a copy of a letter sent me by one of the principal street service infidels, and this expresses the esteem in which not only I but all our men are held by these men. Certainly it is a peculiar phenomenon, and there is not a meeting like it in the southern hemisphere.

Letter of Street Infidel

"To my Friend, Mr. Jones: I shall only say that during your stay here you have endeared yourself to us, your constant cheerfulness, good fellowship, and sympathy, qualities which will make you friends wherever you go. I ask you to accept this gift [a half-pound note inclosed] from me in token of my regard and esteem. If gifts are valuable according to the feelings of the giver, then this one in itself will perhaps commend itself more to you than other more precious objects solely because it is the gift of a friend. I shall add no more than this: wherever you go you take with you my good will and my friendship, long life, good luck, and prosperity.

"Your old friend,

"JOHN NICHOLSON, Infidel."

"P. S. I hope you will not for one moment think this is charity; no such thought enters my mind."

Trusting all will go well with Zion, I am as ever yours,

J. H. N. JONES.

Sister Matie Cone, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, writes her appreciation of the sample copy of the SAINTS' HERALD which she recently received. She is awakened to the necessity of the weekly message it brings and expects soon to make it a constant visitor to her home. She adds her testimony, like many others, of God's willingness to answer prayers, and of his nearness in the hours of affliction and trial. She desires, too, the prayers of the Saints, that she may continue in the faith and let her home life show the strength of the gospel.

Italian Brother Bears Testimony of Truthfulness of Gospel

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, February 1.—I was born in Italy by Roman Catholic parents and I was taught since my tender age the Catholic faith. Many times I recited the prayer of the rosary with my mother sitting around the brazier. At the age of thirteen I had finished my common school, and in order to continue my studies and learn a trade I left my parental home and went to Bari, a city of importance twenty-four miles away from my little native town. While in Bari I clung to the faith which I had been taught. At the age of eighteen I moved to Milan, an industrial city of northern Italy, and then I began to work for a living.

There, far away from my parents, I was left to myself, to walk in the ways of my own choice, and little by little, with the help of bad companions, I became one of those of whom it is written: "The fool has said in his heart there is no God."

Investigates Protestantism

Several years were passed in this condition. At last it happened that I met a school friend of mine who had become a Protestant, and he gave me a New Testament and spoke to me of salvation and redemption in Christ Jesus. My heart was touched and I began to investigate. I became so interested in reading that book that I didn't depart from it even while working at my bench, so much so that the book became nearly illegible by dirt and wear; but the words of it were treasured in my heart, and I became a Protestant.

Comes to America

Later on I decided to come to America. Until then I had no idea there were so many sects composing the Protestant world. I believed that the Protestants were one family, of one faith and one doctrine. When I came to America I began to realize that it was not so, and I found out that I had embraced the doctrine and faith of the "Plymouth Brethren."

After a certain time I came in contact with a people called "Pentecostal," and by their teachings I was convinced that there was in store with God for me what the pentecostal people call the baptism of the Holy Ghost. I was taught to ask God for this baptism of the Holy Spirit and to continue to ask until I would speak an unknown tongue.

Preaches in Philadelphia

A few months later I began to preach in the congregation in Philadelphia, and I did that without receiving an ordination or special command from the Lord. I did not wait for that because I had no light on that subject. I took upon me the burden of preaching, moved by a sympathy for my people, and also because I felt as if it was a sin to be able to do so and not do it.

I believe the Lord has been helping me in the ministry, knowing that I was striving to serve him the best I could, and he gave me a blessing not only in the congregation in Philadelphia but also in other churches, especially in the neighborhood of New York. For several years I have been traveling from place to place comforting the churches.

During my stay in the Pentecostal movement I had witnessed many facts and manifestations that are far from being scriptural and pleasing to God, but I don't intend to speak of these things. It is sufficient to say that lately I came to the conclusion that the Pentecostal movement is not the church of God. With this I don't intend to say that in it there are no precious souls earnestly striving to serve God with the light they have, but the movement as a whole, I can say in the light of the word of God, that it is not the church.

I was in this condition when I came to know of the existence of the church which claims to be the restored church of Jesus Christ. I have been investigating nearly one year and I have come to the conclusion that this is the real church of Jesus Christ, the restored church, the twelve-star-crowned church, the true and living church in which the Lord is well pleased.

And I am glad to say that now this church is the church to which I belong, for the 23d of December, 1923, I entered through the door and came into the fold, and my desire is that I may be one of those obedient sheep who having heard the voice of the Good Shepherd do follow him.

News that I belong to this church is being spread among the Italian Pentecostal people like a fire, and many evil reports are being circulated to the intent of quenching the fire; but the desire of my heart is that the fire might go on, until the hearts of many Italians will be stirred to investigate this marvelous work and wonder wrought by the Lord in these last days. I know that if they do investigate with sincerity of heart they will come to realize that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is The Church. Amen.

FRANK FRACCASCIA.

Message From Presidency to Young People Appreciated

From a Letter to the First Presidency

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, January 30.—Our last sacrament and communion service at the Central Church was well attended. We had a very fine and spiritual service. I am sure much good was done and the Saints were moved much under the holy influence that so strongly prevailed. One could but feel happy to be one of the number worshipping there.

Brother Shields made us a visit. I was not aware that he would be with us until I saw him among others gathering early. He spoke for us. Very good.

I read a message from Brother Elbert A. Smith to the young people at night service. It seemed to cast a very solemn and profound influence over the congregation. I am sure they felt to respond strongly. I appreciated the message very much. I believe a heartfelt message sent to the Saints occasionally will do much to draw them more strongly together and to you brethren who occupy as their leaders. They can sense an earnest appeal from the heart, and our people are good and loyal by nature, and will move forward as they see the right and are held in confidence and love.

Surely a better understanding and the spirit of true saintly fellowship and love among our people will make them a mighty and holy force for good in the world; and you brethren can help much to that end by making them feel you more through such means as that of your recent message and close contact wherever possible.

With sincere regard for our church and its message.

G. R. KUYKENDALL.

Saints Urged to Support Graceland College

LAMAR, MISSOURI, January 16.—In the HERALD of January 9, we were pleased to read about the reception given at Brother Walter W. Smith's to the college students on New Year's Day. We are glad to hear that the young Saints are going forward and preparing themselves for the great battle that will be fought to establish Zion.

Graceland needs the help and patronage of the Saints in order to keep up her high standards as an educational institution. We feel that our members should support and patronize the church institutions in preference to those of the world.

J. C. SEVERIN.

into the home of a young couple trying to understand each other, seldom does anything but complicate an already delicate situation. Newlyweds usually will arrive at a satisfactory modus vivendi if left alone.

8. Do not keep a lodger. The constant presence of an outsider in a home frequently gives rise to ill-founded and unjust suspicions against the wife. She is only human, so don't expect her to be impervious to the direct or indirect influence which such a person may exert—and to the husband's own undoing.

9. Cultivate neatness and personal cleanliness. No woman can help contrasting a well-dressed and neatly turned-out man acquaintance with a slovenly husband. A wife wishes to look up to her husband, to be proud of him, and to admire and respect him.

10. Be kind and just to your children. A woman quickly looks with distrust and aversion upon the man who is harsh and cruel with her children.

Domestic Relations Decalogue for Wives

1. Do not be extravagant. Upon the proper and careful expenditure of your husband's income depends his willingness to exert himself for the maintenance of your home. Nothing appeals more strongly to a man than the prospect of acquiring that independence of which a bank account is the guarantee.

2. Keep your home clean. Nothing is more refreshing to the eyes of a tired, nerve-racked worker than the sight of a well-tidied home.

3. Do not permit your person to become unattractive. A slovenly wife makes a truant husband.

4. Do not receive attentions from other men. Husbands are often jealous and some are suspicious without cause. Do not supply the cause. Friendly attentions from others may be received in a spirit of perfect innocence. When reported by the busybody they become distorted, often criminal, in character.

5. Do not resent reasonable discipline of children by their father. Many mothers assume that all chastisement of a child by its father is severe and unjustifiable. Even just men consider such interference an impertinence. It may easily engender connubial hostilities.

6. Do not spend too much time with your mother. In such case you may easily spend too little at home for the proper administration of your own domestic affairs.

7. Do not accept advice from the neighbors or stress too greatly even that of your own family concerning the management of your domestic affairs. Think for yourself. Have a plan of your own for the solution of home problems. In all cases consult freely with your husband. Much advice of the wrong kind is worse than none.

8. Do not disparage your husband. Your ill-advised opinion of him, uttered in a moment of petulance, may be early seized upon by others as the true measure of his character and abilities. Ideas often become entities.

9. Smile. Be attentive in little things. The smile is an antidote to the toxic effects of ill-humor. Consideration for your husband's feelings makes him respectful of yours. An indifferent wife is often supplanted by an ardent friend.

10. Be tactful. Be feminine. Men, in last analysis, are but overgrown children. They do not mind coaxing, but they resent coercion. Most men prefer their opposites. Femininity attracts and compels them. By the same token masculinity in the female repels.

CHURCH NEWS

Church Is Dedicated at Macon

MACON, MISSOURI, January 21.—The church at this place was dedicated Sunday, January 20. A large crowd of Saints and friends attended, many being present from Bevier. President Frederick M. Smith made the dedicatory address.

The purpose of the church, said President Smith, is to make better the individual and home life of its members, and to saturate the community surrounding it with the ideals of the Christian religion. He believes that every public building in the community, including the church, should be for the purpose of better community life. The church should be used by the people not only as a place in which to pray, sing hymns, and listen to sermons, but also, in his opinion, it should be used as a community center.

He declared that this church stands for a high order of citizenship and for respect and obedience to law. It also stands for education, which may be defined as the highest development of the moral, physical, and intellectual powers of man.

Bishop Not Present

Owing to the sickness in his family, Bishop Benjamin R. McGuire was not able to attend the services as had been previously arranged.

Musical features were special numbers by Fred Miller, Mrs. S. J. Joyce, Mary Jones, and Lillian Cash, all of whom rendered beautiful selections.

Brother S. S. Joyce, sr., gave a brief history of the work of the church in Macon and expressed his appreciation of the assistance of Saints and friends in making it possible to present this building, free from debt at this time, to the Master. Brother A. R. Moore presented the titles and fees of the building to President Smith, who received them in the name of the church. He then returned the keys to Brother Moore with an appropriate speech.

Meetings to Be Held

Meetings will continue nightly for one week. Elder E. F. Robertson will do the speaking. Brother Robertson has been in the missionary field for twenty years, which has taken him to many parts of the world, including European countries, Palestine, Egypt, Australia, and the islands of the Pacific.

Indianapolis Branch Elects Officers

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, January 18.—To start the year right the Indianapolis Branch held its regular quarterly business meeting and election of officers on the evening of January 1. The attendance, interest, and spirit manifested were good.

The priesthood met on January 13 and outlined a constructive program for 1924. A splendid spirit of unity and cooperation was felt throughout the meeting and all look forward to a bright and successful year. A larger contribution toward this aim is being made by Brother O. J. Hawn, district missionary, who does most of the preaching. Since his arrival here early in January the Saints have supported him splendidly so that good attendance and interest is had at two preaching services during the week in addition to the regular meetings.

The Saints feel encouraged and hope to be able to report substantial progress during the year.

Kansas City Stake News

KANSAS CITY STAKE, February 1.—The Civic Choral Club of Kansas City, Kansas, for the third annual time, rendered Handel's "Messiah" at the high school auditorium of their city on January 29. About one hundred voices participated and it has been said to be the best of its kind ever rendered there. Brother Eugene Christy of Zion excelled himself in the leading tenor part. Leading musicians of that place hope he will appear frequently.

Fourth Church Remodeled

The Fourth Church finished the interior work on their newly remodeled building and are putting the additional room into sacred use. The Sunday school and Religio are benefited most, as they now can accommodate all who come.

New Pastor at Argentine

Brother J. J. Shimmel, long identified with the Malvern Hill Church, was installed as pastor of the Argentine Church, February 3. Brother Walter L. Gates had resigned from that position. Brother Shimmel accepts, subject to the action of the next stake conference. His long experience fits him for the new charge. Brother W. D. Bullard of Zion spoke to the Argentine Saints on Sunday evening of January 27.

Temple Builders at Northeast Mission

At the Northeast mission, January 27, Sister R. E. Newkirk, assisted by Sister Mitchell, initiated a class of six Temple Builders. This will be a nucleus around which it is hoped a large class will be formed. They recently held a bazaar which netted $23. The girls gave $5 of this to the Christmas offering fund.

President Tanner was the speaker at 11 o'clock at Northeast, and C. A. Selbe, their pastor, followed at 7.45.

Grandview Meetings Close

The special meetings conducted by Brother W. I. Fligg of Grandview came to a close Sunday night. A full house was in attendance. The three who were baptized were confirmed at the evening meeting and others are nearly ready for baptism. Brother Fligg will begin meetings soon at the Heathwood mission.

Evangelistic Work Among Central Groups

Brother Ammon White finished a two weeks' effort among the Central groups, Friday, January 25. Round table talks, sermons, and patriarchal blessings characterized his work there. He has been alternating with Brother Fligg at Argentine from Tuesday to Friday, January 29 to February 1, with about the same kind of services.

Mr. Raymond C. Barnett spoke in the interest of the Citizens' League of Kansas City, Missouri, at the Central Church on the Sunday morning of January 27. J. A. Tanner, pastor, preached for them that evening and again on the evening of February 3.

At the stake conference, which is to be held from February 16 to 18, at the Central Church, Bishop J. F. Keir will be the morning speaker and Brother Walter W. Smith will occupy in the evening.

Resolutions Theme of Prayer Service

PONTIAC, MICHIGAN, December 31.—Last Sunday the theme presented in prayer service was "New resolutions." Many caught the spirit of the theme and a good meeting was had.

A program and Christmas tree was had at this branch, which cheered the little ones and also the older ones.

Brother and Sister J. M. Riley have recently moved to Saint Clair, Michigan.

Graceland Chats

Social Affair at Herald Hall

LAMONI, IOWA, January 27.—The men of Graceland were entertained by the Herald Hall people on Friday evening. This affair was intended to promote good fellowship and engender better acquaintance. Every detail of the entertainment was worked out with this view, and the plan was carried out with an abundance of mirth and clean fun. The dean says he knows all the men better than ever before. House President Peter Whalley made a speech of welcome expressing the hope that a closer feeling of brotherhood might result from the meeting. About seventy-five were present, including President Briggs and other faculty members.

Dean McDowell Away

President McDowell, dean, is away on a preaching tour, and his absence is quickly felt in Graceland. "But then he always comes back with some thing good for us" was one comment. After his trip we will hear all about it, you see.

Splendid Opportunity for Old Student

Friends of Lee Travis are congratulating him on his latest opportunity. This is directorship of the Speech Clinic at Iowa University. This work will involve the treatment of post-operative cases coming from the dean's clinic. It includes treatment of ordinary lipping, nasal twang, etc., and the treatment of the speech neurosis, including stammering and stuttering.

Lee Travis was an energetic, careful student, and will use his present position as he has the past, as a stepping-stone to higher things.

Convention Hall

In a late letter from a former Graceland student, now a missionary in Europe, he says, "Where is the new gym located? Send me a picture of it." And so we would. Many others are asking, too, How long shall we be so crowded in college assemblies? and we answer, Until the new Convention Hall is finished. People unaccustomed to a small town cannot appreciate our situation. The influx of students in September taxes the capacity of Sunday school and dormitory. The chapel is small, having a seating capacity of only three hundred. When all students are present, there is little room for guests or townsmen without crowding the fire ordinance. Community pictures must be shown to three separate audiences, and then there may be many left out. College programs of interest and benefit lose much of their possibility for good by reason of inadequate room. We need the building in many ways aside from the very important fact that the finished building for gymnasium purposes is an absolute requirement of the State. Without it our certificate may be discredited. Already the building has given opportunity for students to work. Now the work waits for milder weather and the assurance of the eight thousand yet remaining unpaid from the student body. How much this will mean to the ambitious student of the future cannot be easily determined. Cast your bread upon the waters. Somewhere, sometime, the bread thus cast upon the waters will drift into your port again in a form far more acceptable than you can dream; and what if it should not? What if it drifts into some other harbor, and for some one else? None will be so glad as you if you start it on its evolutionary journey. Park College wants $50,000 for her new building. Already they have spent $80,000 and have only the exterior.

There are Graceland students the world over making money for comfort and doing work of uplift that were impossible had not Graceland opened up to them possibilities. To-day a greater Graceland needs this greater equipment and asks only a little help here and there from the eager spirits who found new hope, new strength, new friends in her walls in the past. Come, fellows, lead on.

Visitors

Mrs. Dora Howland, late of Los Angeles, spending the year in Independence, spent the week in Graceland at Bide-A-Wee Hall. Mrs. A. L. Jackson, of Dow City, was also a visitor at Patroness Hall.

Elder John A. Gardner, of Independence, spent the week end with friends at Marietta Hall, and Chris Hartshorn, of Independence, was seen in the halls of Graceland by old friends on Saturday last.

Mrs. Esther Salisbury, of Lanesboro, Iowa, spent the week end in locating her daughter in Graceland.

Societies Meet

The chapel is occupied each Saturday night by one of the four Graceland societies, first by Alpha Pi Sigma, then Kappa Delta, the Niketes, and then the Victorians. While one society is occupying the chapel, the others meet in classrooms assigned to them. On February 4 orations are due.

Recent Visitors at Graceland

LAMONI, IOWA, February 3.—Graceland has been fortunate in receiving callers this past week. Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, of the Social Service Bureau, at Independence, Missouri, was a welcome visitor on January 28, and Mr. John A. Gardner, of the Herald Publishing House, spent January 27 and 28 on the "Hill."

Apostle John Garver lectured to the Religious Education students on Thursday morning, January 31, on the subject of "Charge of the church."

Patriarch John F. Martin shook hands with old friends Saturday, February 2, and dined with students at the dining hall Sunday, February 3.

News About the Campus

Miss Virginia Carley, head of the piano department, Graceland College, has been ill for a week.

Business Manager J. A. Gunsolley spent the week at Ames, Iowa, returning to his office February 2.

Forest Roberts, public speaking man, acted as expert judge in a high school declamatory contest at Leon.

The Alpha chapter of Lambda Delta Sigma held its regular meeting Thursday evening, January 31. The time was spent in reading and considering a paper prepared by a committee, read by Miss Mary Curtis. The questions considered were on "The evaluation of Graceland as a socialized school." It was handled with great earnestness by every speaker. President Briggs and Professor Roy Cheville both admitted their toes had been stepped on, (and there were no doubt others) but they really were so heroic that the occasion was made momentous and interesting. The next meeting will develop the study of stewardships. Graceland objectives are the things we are all interested in.

Joint Recital Given

One of the most delightful occasions of the year was the recital given by advanced pupils of the following departments: Piano, voice, and public speaking. This was presented to a large audience in the church. It appreciated the work of each artist and reacted most inspiringly. The instructors may well feel gratified with the presentation and future prospects.

Society Programs

The society programs presented are the following: Niketes. Reading by Doris Jackson; talk on musical appreciation by Annie Torrance Roberts, and the society paper, Arrow Head, edited this week by Ralph Snively and Harold Hill.

Kappa Delta. "Sousa's Kitchen Orchestra" will be given by a dozen members of the society.

Alpha Pi Sigma. Pantomime, by several members; story by Rita Hart; a paper, "Spring athletics," Frances Frazer; and the society paper, The Star, edited this week by Harvey Carr and Boyd Shank.

Victorian. Piano solo, Bernice Jackson; musical reading by Alice Vandel; and a selection, entitled "A trip abroad," divided into seven parts: "Leaving home," by Clara Wood; "England," by Peter Whalley; "Sweden," by William Johnson; "Germany," by Ferd Hammil; "Russia," by Irene Rauch; "Japan," by Vera Bell; and "Voyage home," by Ethel Williamson.

Holden Stake News

The conference of the Holden Stake met at Lees Summit, Missouri, Saturday and Sunday February 2 and 3.

At 10 a. m. a prayer service was held, Patriarch Richard Bullard and Bishop C. J. Hunt having charge. An unusual degree of the Spirit was experienced, which gave assurance that the Lord had met with his Saints. A message to the conference was delivered by Brother Bullard. The prayer meeting was merged into the business meeting. Apostle E. J. Gleazer asked the Lord's special blessing on the work of the conference.

Presidents Frederick M. Smith and Elbert A. Smith, Apostles E. J. Gleazer and F. H. Edwards, and the stake presidency were chosen to preside; Sister Blanche Christianson, secretary.

Reports were received from the stake presidency, stake bishopric, departmental superintendents, recorder, quorums of elders, priests, and deacons.

The reunion committee appointed at the last conference reported, recommending that the reunion be held at Holden in Doctor Emery Thompson's grove. The recommendation was adopted and the committee, the stake bishopric, and the stake presidency were authorized to proceed with full power to act.

Dining Hall

A report was received from the dining hall committee treasurer, showing a net profit of over $1,900 from the operation of the dining hall at the State Fair last year. The report was received, subject to audit.

The following ordinations to the office of deacon were authorized: William K. Gard and W. C. Patrick.

To fill three vacancies existing in the stake high council the conference approved of the following brethren and recommended to the Standing High Council of the church their ordination: Elder Carl V. Hopkins, Grandview, Missouri, Priest Roscoe F. Moorman, and Elder Glaud W. Rodger, of Sedalia, Missouri.

Bishop C. J. Hunt Released

Bishop C. J. Hunt reported that he had requested the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric to release him from the duties of bishop of the Holden Stake and that they had complied with his request and assigned him to other work. The release of Bishop Hunt was approved by the conference. Resolutions of appreciation were presented by a committee consisting of C. F. Scarcliff, Sister Lola A. Johnson, and H. E. Moler, which were unanimously adopted.

Bishop A. B. Phillips Succeeds

To fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Bishop C. J. Hunt, President F. M. Smith nominated Bishop Arthur

B. Phillips. The nomination was approved by unanimous vote.

Brother Phillips stated he was not prepared to nominate his counselors.

Resignations Accepted

Resignations were received and accepted from the following: Sister Ticy Moler, stake recorder; Brother I. M. Ross, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Sister Gladys Teeter, assistant stake chorister. A vote of thanks was extended Brother I. M. Ross for his services as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

The stake presidency was authorized to arrange for a recorder to fill the vacancy in that office, subject to approval of next conference.

Ordinations

The following brethren were ordained: W. K. Gard, Milton Road Saints, deacon, by Apostle F. H. Edwards and E. J. Gleazer; William C. Patrick, Warrensburg, deacon, by Elders F. A. McWethy and W. S. Macrae; J. H. Post, Ather-ton, president first quorum of deacons, by W. S. Macrae and F. A. McWethy.

The teachers present met with the stake presidency and selected Doctor A. D. Kuykendall, of Lees Summit, as president. The conference indorsed, subject to the approval of the stake high council.

The Quorum of Priests met with Bishops Hunt and Phillips. Brother Hunt was released as president and Brother Phillips chosen in his stead.

Address of President F. M. Smith

President Frederick M. Smith addressed the conference Saturday afternoon on the question of stewardships. At the close of his address questions were asked of the President by many of the Saints which were very clearly answered, giving the Saints a more comprehensive view of the subject.

Departmental Work

Saturday evening the superintendents of departments, Recreation and Expression, Women, and Music, Brother I. M. Ross, Sister I. M. Ross, and Lola A. Johnson, presented their work. It was interspersed with music and reading by members from the various churches. At 8 a. m. Sunday, the Saints met in prayer. Apostle F. H. Edwards and Bishop A. B. Phillips were in charge. It was a peaceful, spiritual meeting. Words of advice and encouragement were given by the Spirit through Brother R. E. Burgess.

Elder C. F. Scarcliff, superintendent of the Sunday School Department, had charge of the service at 9.30, Brother E. F. Brace, superintendent of the Lees Summit Sunday school, assisting. At this session the Grandview Junior Choir, in charge of Sister Thomas Cairns, rendered a very pleasing number.

Sermon of President E. A. Smith

President Elbert A. Smith was the speaker at the 11 o'clock service. He was assisted by Brother Ralph W. Farrell, pastor of the Warrensburg church. Emphasis was placed on the statement that "All are called" to be "workers together with God."

An offering was taken up for conference expenses at this service amounting to $23.65.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer Speaks

Apostle Gleazer occupied the pulpit at 2 p. m., Elder Alvin Knisley assisting. His theme was "Our social responsibility." It was his introductory sermon to the Saints of the Holden Stake and very fitting after the sermon of the morning and the address of President F. M. Smith Saturday afternoon.

After listening to these sermons by our leaders one could not help but feel a greater interest in one's fellows with a desire to help in the reconstruction of society.

Speeches of the Bishops

After the sermon by Brother Gleazer, Bishop C. J. Hunt spoke briefly of his association and work in the stake the past seven years. He then introduced Bishop A. B. Phillips, his successor, who spoke briefly, asking for the cooperation and confidence of the Saints in his new responsibilities.

Visitors Entertained

The Saints of Lees Summit entertained the visitors in a manner most commendable. All meals except breakfast were served in the church in cafeteria style. A vote of appreciation was extended them for their hospitality. They replied, "The pleasure was all ours," and invited the conference to "Come again."

It was one of the most representative conferences held in the stake for some time. All churches but one were in evidence. One of the missionaries stated at the closing session that all the conferences he had attended lately were General Conferences, but this was so different. "No one had risen to a point of order even once." The Saints of the stake do not claim to be parliamentarians, neither do the presiding officers lay claim to any great efficiency along that line. There must have been some other reason. The effort from the beginning was to make it a devotional conference and every session was, whether business, social, or otherwise.

Conference adjourned to meet at Knobnoster in June, 1924.

Independence

Record Attendance at Churches

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 5.—After a month of severe winter weather, a perfect spring day appeared Sunday, February 3, and all Independence was out to enjoy it. Attendance at the churches of Zion reached a record mark. All the churches were crowded and reports from several of them verified the news. Over 6,000 persons attended the Central Church during the services Sunday. Liberty Street reports over 1,000, and South Side counted 805. Other churches were not heard from definitely, but the same record attendance seems to have been the case.

President Speaks Over Radio

President Frederick M. Smith spoke over the radio at 11 o'clock, speaking from the radio studio, while sacrament services were being held at the churches. He made a very splendid address urging cleanness in public affairs as well as in private life. The musical program was of a sacred character.

Problems Meeting Held

At 2.30 p. m. a problems meeting was held at the Central Church, at which President F. M. Smith was the speaker. He presented some of the vital problems of Zion, among which was that of family life. He urged that the home be a safe place for children to be, and warned negligent parents to watch over their children more carefully. Decorum in the church and other public gatherings was also urged.

President Talks to Kirtland by Radio

A most interesting experiment was tried at 6.30 p. m. when President F. M. Smith spoke over the radio to the Saints of Kirtland, Ohio, gathered in the auditorium across from the historic Kirtland Temple. A receiving set had been placed in the Kirtland auditorium, and this, the first experiment of its kind in the church, was tried. The Saints gathered there, listening while the President of the church spoke to them in audible voice, while he stood hundreds of miles away, invisible. One of the things he cited was that the radio will become the means for preaching the gospel to all peoples throughout the world.

Doctrinal Sermons Continued

The usual 7.30 p. m. musical program was broadcast from the Central Church. This lasted until 8 o'clock, when President E. A. Smith delivered the second of the doctrinal sermons in the series of six. His subject was "Repentance a gospel principle." This sermon was also broadcast. President Smith speaks in a convincing way and delivers the subject so clearly that no misunderstanding of the principles of this church could possibly be made. His customary humor brightened the serious phases of the subject at times and kept his audience not only attentive but also eager.

This ended a great day for the people in Zion from point of view of a record attendance and also spiritual and intellectual feast. The addresses were highly instructive and the sacramental services equally spiritual.

Spring Turns to Winter

One bright spring day in the midst of winter helped to buoy the spirits of the Saints and prepared them for the storm which swept down from the north during the night. People arose on Monday morning to find a white world and a driving snow fast filling up every nook and crevice. Winter was not yet over.

Revival Meetings at Liberty Street Church

A series of revival meetings was begun at the Liberty Street Church, Sunday night, February 3. Evangelist Ammon White will present "The message that is different." Members of the congregation have been busy the past week advertising these meetings.

Ira Barhart Dead

Brother Ira Barhart died at his home on the Courtney Road, Tuesday morning, January 29. Services were held at the Liberty Street Church, Friday, February 1, conducted by J. M. Baker, pastor. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery. Sister Barhart and her children have the love and sympathy of the entire congregation in their sorrow.

Spring Branch

The attendance at Sunday school and the 11 o'clock services Sunday, January 20, was fairly good, notwithstanding the extreme cold weather that prevailed. Pastor Soderstadt occupied in the morning, using for his theme the great necessity for prayer, both in secret and in public. He used the Lord's prayer as an example.

At 7.30 Brother Walter Betts used for his theme love and forgiveness as taught by the Savior while with his disciples.

As previously announced, Brother Gard's class from the Walnut Park Religio, rendered the program on Friday night, January 18. They gave a splendid program and insisted that they have a return visit from this branch.

The springlike sunshine on January 27 increased the attendance considerably at the morning services. The speakers for the day were from Independence, Brother W. L. McLean preaching in the morning on the texts: "Man shall not live by bread alone," and "Seek first to build up the kingdom of God and secondarily ourselves." Elder James Gault spoke in the evening, dwelling at some length on character building and faith in God.

The Twelve

Apostle J. Arthur Gillen is in Lamoni, Iowa, where he is delivering a series of lectures to the religious education class, Graceland College.

The island missionaries are soon to leave for New Zealand. Apostle M. A. McConley is at Honolulu, but will leave there for New Zealand, February 16. Apostle C. F. Ellis is at Tahiti where he will remain for about one month, then leave to join Apostle McConley at New Zealand.

Apostles Paul M. Hanson and J. F. Curtis are still in England. At present they are attending the Midland district conference.

Around headquarters at Independence, Apostles F. Henry Edwards, John Garver, and E. J. Gleazer are in and out quite often. Apostle Garver is now in Lamoni, having just returned from work in Minneapolis. Apostle Edwards is now in Independence, but expects to leave in a few days for Des Moines, Iowa, where he will spend the week end attending the district conference. Apostle Gleazer leaves for Oklahoma to attend several conferences and visit branches.

Basketball

The games scheduled for Saturday night, February 2, in the L. D. S. Athletic Association were not played. Walnut Park forfeited to the Y. K. T. team and the I. X. L forfeited to the Bar-Gar team. The league schedule ends on February 23 and the teams are now on the home stretch, with the race becoming more and more interesting every week.

The Prospect Presbyterians took a tight game from the Independence L. D. S. five Thursday night, January 31, on the Central High School court by a 30-25 score. The Prospect Presbyterians stand second in the Kansas City Sunday School Basketball League. The Independence boys also lost to the league leaders, the Maynards, Saturday night, February 2, by a score of 21-39. The game was played at Manual High School.

Brother James C. Page, correspondent of Glasgow, Montana, in speaking of the news letters in SAINTS' HERALD, writes: "If there are others who enjoy these letters as some of the Saints here enjoy the reading of the letters from other places, the effort is well repaid. Let's keep it up."

The Freedom of Washington and Lincoln

The two most loved figures in the history of America, which are recalled to-day as we commemorate their birthdays, are George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Their names stand for the ideals which they fought for, and which we are striving to maintain. They were the leaders of their country and in their hands was the destiny of a nation. We feel that God was with them, guiding them, protecting them, until their work had been accomplished. They were instruments in the hand of Providence as American history was being molded.

Washington led the armies of the Revolution in the great struggle for political freedom. A government was founded upon the principles of democracy.

Lincoln, at the helm of the ship of State, steadied the rocking timbers and brought it safely out of the sea of darkness. He saved the government founded by Washington, because it was a government of the people. In establishing an even greater political freedom than was known before, he freed the slaves.

Many have been the things men have fought for in the name of freedom. Freedom is more than a metaphysical conception of the freedom of the will. It represents a condition of life.

To be free one must be able to control all the factors which are involved in accomplishing a purpose. Freedom does not mean the liberty to do as one wishes. It means the power to do as the many wish.

The Revolution would never have been won had one alone desired its accomplishment. The many had to be desirous of its outcome before political freedom was obtained. A concentrated effort meant the loss of individual freedom, but a gain of tremendous power. Army discipline was necessary that all factors bent upon the fulfillment of a purpose could be controlled. The purpose was won by loss of individual freedom, in the larger interest of political freedom for the many. As a result of the Revolution individuals are freer than ever before because they are protected in their actions by law made and agreed to by themselves.

The freedom which Washington and Lincoln stood for is the same freedom that we maintain in our country to-day. Yet there is not a man, woman, or child living who could not be freer if only he would.

Freedom of body means strict observance of the physiological laws. It will result in the power of supreme physical endurance.

Freedom of thought depends not upon censorship of the press but upon right mental attitudes and habits of thinking. A clear thinker is free to accomplish his ends because he calls upon the laws of psychology to aid him. He becomes a power because of his understanding.

So it is in the spiritual realm. The man who would be free to converse with God is the man who best observes his laws.

Individual freedom in the church does not devolve around the right to be baptized in the manner suitable to each individual, or in the defiance of any other of the laws of the church. It lies in agreement, in order that power may result, thereby making it possible to attain the purposes of the church. The individual must sacrifice some personal freedom in the interest of a larger purpose and the freedom of the many.

Well may we look to the lives of these inspired men, Washington and Lincoln, for strength and light in moving forward to the ideals for which they fought. We enjoy political freedom because our forefathers pooled their efforts for this purpose. Spiritual freedom will belong to that body of Christians that pool their efforts in the interest of the Christian life.

Spiritual Healing Invades Sectarianism

At the end of three years of study by a committee appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, of the Church of England, to report on spiritual healing, the results of the investigation have been announced.

The report recommends, according to the Literary Digest, that methods hitherto confined to the Church of Christ, Scientist, or to psychoanalysts, should be established as part of the Anglican practice, except that while the majority of the faith-healing cults disdain the medical profession, the Church of England committee is fully mindful of medical science.

Of interest is the part of the report which argues that all kinds of faith healing "spring from belief in the fundamental principle that the power to exercise spiritual healing is taught by Christ to be the natural heritage of Christian people who are living in fellowship with God."

The acceptance of such principles, one by one, that our church has always stood for, may be looked upon with some wonderment. Such things as spiritual healing and the doctrine of stewardships which have been rigidly opposed are now being generally accepted by the sectarian world. Is it a dawning of a new light, or is it merely concession to a growing demand, which has forced itself into recognition? We are sincerely hoping that it is the former. How long will it be until the churches will recognize revelation as a present-day possibility? It seems to be the next step in line with the upward movement of the churches.

What We Spend for Luxuries

It is estimated that in the United States $8,710,000,000 was spent for luxuries in 1922. This averages about $83 per person. What the estimate will be for 1923 is yet unknown, but it is hard to believe there has been less extravagant living than during the year previous.

Of this enormous amount, passenger automobiles head the list of luxuries with $2,000,000,000, but not far behind is tobacco with $1,500,000,000. Theaters, ice cream, candy, cosmetics, and jewelry follow in the order named. Down at the bottom of the list is chewing gum with an estimated expenditure of only $52,000,000. It is surprising how little gum we chew!

At the rate of a tithe on $83 worth of luxuries per person, on 100,000 people in our church, the Bishop would keep books on $330,000 a year (almost twice the amount of our present total tithing income).

But chewing gum represents about 1/200 of the expenditure on luxuries, which if applied to chewing gum alone, would amount to over $4,000 in tithing.

It will of course be argued that our people do not use tobacco, or for that matter wear much jewelry. Neither do they spend all their money at the theater, nor does the fairer sex use an excessive amount of cosmetics. The candy eaten, the ice cream socials given, and the gum chewed, however, may not fall far below that of the average man or woman. And as for the automobiles owned, we do not claim any exemption. This is not by means of an excuse for our tithing reports, but rather to set us thinking. Is it too much to assume that, even with the less extravagant tendencies of our people, the average amount spent per person for luxuries during the year will not be far from $83? And of course tithing would be affected by it, wouldn't it?

Graceland College Annual

As a part of the program boosting our church college, students of Graceland are offering to alumni and friends this year, extra copies of the college annual, the Acacia.

This annual book contains pictures of picturesque Graceland and surrounding scenes, and tells of the activities of the student body. It sends out the spirit of Graceland and invites others to join the ambitious youth of the church.

The eyes of our membership are turned toward Graceland as the educational center of the church. The Young People's Convention is held on the campus each year, so the college also becomes the center place for our youth. They look to Graceland as a medium for expressing their desires for the future.

So it is natural that these young people who are privileged to study at this institution, should wish others to know of the good things they are obtaining, and urge others to come and prepare for service. They offer the Acacia for this purpose. It stands for what they are doing.

Blue Pencil Notes

Humanity instinctively thrills to combat. The prize ring, the wrestling mat, the bull fight, the cock pit are ancient if not always honorable witnesses to that fact.

Our modern games and contests hold interest for similar reasons. Football has the strategy of war, both offensive and defensive. It has formations for battle, individual collisions, and the crash of opposing masses. Such a contest holds thousands of spectators spellbound at the highest stretch of emotional tension—now dejected, desperate, now madly exultant. The players themselves are so nerved for battle that fear and caution are forgotten. Personal injury means nothing.

Back of all this is a long history. Many peoples in many lands and times for many succeeding generations found life itself a first-hand conflict. Existence hung daily upon the outcome of the contest. There was war against the elements, against wild beasts, against human enemies. Defeat meant pain, destitution, possibly slavery, often death. Victory meant comfort, plenty, power, conquest, life. No wonder that all that was in man's soul of emotion responded to such stimuli. No wonder that he developed a deep, primary, and abiding interest in combat.

That intense interest has come down the ages. Not even philosophers can escape from it. The last words of Socrates were, "Crito, I owe a cock to Asclepius; will you remember to pay the debt?" Religious people cannot escape from it. Luther threw an ink bottle at the Devil himself. Whittier, the gentle Quaker poet, could not carry a gun for conscience sake, but his antislavery poems were like shrapnel.

A lot of people who would not be seen at a ring-side read the newspaper accounts of important prize fights with keenest interest. A fife and drum corps is seldom without auditors, and on occasion of national crisis it is the very champagne of music, intoxicating the crowds and sweeping them to the recruiting officers.

"To arms! To arms!" The call goes down the ages. It never loses its potency and appeal. No generation ever refuses to heed it. The generation that would refuse to heed it would be dead and damned. But sadly enough the generations that do heed are often enough soon dead and damned.

This paradox is explained by the fact that the call to arms appeals to a deeply ingrained instinct of manhood devoid of which a given generation would hardly be entitled to the term manhood. And yet the call more often than not abuses its power and betrays the noble response.

Fortunately this instinct for conflict may be diverted to constructive enterprises. It need not run to bruising and blood letting. Its torrential powers together with all the noble qualities of courage, sacrifice, and loyalty which battles invoke and use can be harnessed and used to excellent advantage in peaceful enterprises.

The great work of a generation past culminating in the junction of the Union Pacific and Western Pacific Railroads forming a line across a great continent was a battle against mountains, deserts, natural forces, even hostile Indians. The laying of the first transatlantic cable was a conflict not only with the tides and storms of the ocean but also with public incredulity and ridicule. Again and yet again when the work seemed about to be completed the Atlantic rose in her might and broke the slender thread. Lost, it could not be recovered. The work must begin all over again. Two continents looked on and jeered the men who fought for supremacy. The spectators for once failed to grasp the significance of conflict. The men back of the project were enthralled with it as much as any crusader of old. They endured. And they won. They won by the same qualities that carried Grant to victory in military struggle. But their conflict was constructive.

Even the engines of war may be diverted to another sort of struggle. The commander of the Asiatic squadron of the United States warships, hearing the first rumors of the earthquake disaster to Tokyo and Yokohama even before the report was verified, arranged for supplies, steamed up, and soon his ships were driving full speed toward the stricken cities of Japan. Here were great engines of war rushing to fight hunger, thirst, disease, wounds. At least two great nations thrilled to the spectacle. The charioteers of Egypt would hardly have responded to such a challenge. A rival people prostrated by misfortune might have seemed to them an invitation to attack.

Even in the church the belligerent tendencies of humanity may be utilized. When it is known that a conflict is imminent at a business session, with orators arrayed on either side, a large attendance is almost assured. This is well when principle is at stake. But many times this love of contest can best be diverted to constructive effort. At times when we are agreed and united on one thing, and fling our courage, our devotion, our sacrifice, our might of body and brain against the forces that oppose, we gratify the natural taste for battle and yet in a splendid and constructive way.

Observe our people building the Kirtland Temple. On the frontier, surrounded by enemies, every sentiment of caution and economy apparently working to restrain, yet unitedly at the Lord's command they went forward. See Joseph Smith digging in the quarry. Observe Sidney Rigdon standing guard on the walls by night to prevent attack by enemies. Observe the women grinding their china to bits to glaze the walls that they might answer back the rays of the morning sun. It was a struggle. It took courage and faith and devotion. They won. That is our problem in every branch and district. To rouse our fighting blood, not against each other, but in a common cause, against every obstacle that confronts our constructive program. ELBERT A. SMITH.

There is not a woman in the world—if she has borne children—who does not know that there is no such thing as equality. I am for equality of opportunity. But Socialists insist that by legislation not only opportunity but human beings can be made equal. It is the limit of fallacy.—Viscountess Nancy Astor, British M. P.

Religious Leadership and the Young People's Convention

The Necessity

A prominent writer of social science in discussing the problem of religious leadership of the church said:

Upon the church as a whole rests the heavy responsibility of spiritual progress in our human world; and this responsibility cannot be met by the methods in present use. Unless every church turns round and becomes a recruiting station to enlist the strongest and finest young men and women it can reach for spiritual leadership, it cannot meet this responsibility.

While this writer is discussing the situation in regard to the Christian church in a general sense, I think our readers will agree that it applies to our own church in a very special sense. Certain it is that the task of leadership in spiritual lines is at once difficult and important. Certain it is that if those who are qualified to serve in this field are to be available, we must see to it that they are found and trained for this special service. To put it in the words of this writer:

Nothing is more needed in religious work to-day than the development and encouragement of an educated and consecrated lay leadership. What I am about to say, therefore, applies to all who are engaged in religious work of any sort.

A religious leadership which is adequate to meet the present crisis in religion and in our social life needs to be more carefully trained than the leadership in any other line of human endeavor.

Qualities Needed for Religious Leadership

In continuing his discussion of religious leadership, this writer lists six qualities that he thinks are vitally necessary. They are:

1. Social Intelligence. A religious leader will need a knowledge of the nature and possibilities of man. He will need to exercise good judgment in the handling of men and situations. He will need to understand thoroughly all social situations of the social classes. This is possible, of course, only through the acquisition of a highly trained social intelligence.

2. Sympathy and Love for Mankind in the Mass. "If the religious leader has an all inclusive love of man, a passionate devotion to their welfare, he will have no difficulty in cooperating with all others who enlist in the service of mankind."

3. Moral Courage. "Religious leaders have become too timid. They seem afraid to show that divine recklessness which was shown by the Master in order to save the world. A religious leader must be patient, must have moral courage and a resolute purpose."

4. Faith. The religious leader needs a supreme faith in God and in the possibilities of human life. Without such he is bound to become discouraged. This faith ought to be sincere and intellectually honest. The leader should have an unalterable faith that neither God nor man is going to fail.

5. Moral Enthusiasm. The religious leader of our day needs an enthusiasm for humanity in a superlative degree.

6. Consecration. "Consecration is a summoning and gathering together of all the energies which go to make up the religious life and focusing them upon the one purpose of bringing in the kingdom of God among men."

Consecration Needed

This writer's discussion of consecration as a necessary characteristic of leadership is so excellent that we shall quote at some length:

The church, to be sure, as a whole, needs a more consecrated life, but it especially needs a more consecrated leadership, a leadership which fears only God and not men, and which is ready to give all, if need be, in his service.

It is with great reluctance, I confess, that I have come to this conclusion. Once I believed that the scientist working in his study could dig out the truth, and that that truth would conquer and make the world right through its own inherent might; but now I see that that truth must be clothed in flesh and blood and find expression in the sacrifice of self and in other heroic action to establish itself. Truth does not work apart from the human will; it must work in and through us, and until it wins some of us to consecrate ourselves thoroughly to its service we cannot expect it to win the world. Our world is still too tightly held by error and by wrong for truth and right to win out easily. Mere intelligence can never save our world. There is just one way in which the transition can be effected from our semi-pagan civilization to a true Christian civilization, and that is for members of the Christian church, one here and one there at first and then the many following, to consecrate themselves without any limitation or reservation whatsoever, to the forwarding of the Christian cause. When the Christian church develops a fully consecrated leadership and itself assumes the spiritual leadership of mankind, the Christian cause will win out among men, but not till then.

The Call

We trust that we do not appear to be boasting when we say that this thought was in the minds of those who issued the call for the Young People's Convention of last June. In the call for that convention, printed in the Autumn Leaves of January, 1923, the purpose of the convention was stated as follows:

The Church Needs You

It needs your youthful vigor to carry out its mighty program.

It needs your idealism, lest it become a mere machine.

It needs your vision, lest it cease to grow.

It needs your criticism, lest it become self-satisfied.

Without youthful blood, an institution tends to become non-progressive, mechanical, and content with the deeds of the past. Youth demands growth, progress, accomplishment. It looks to the future, not to the past. Our church must have your allegiance. Will you give it willingly and wholeheartedly?

You Need the Church

You need the wonderful ideals of a new social order which the church program offers.

You need the organization of the church as a means of realizing your ideals.

You must have some means of harnessing your youthful vigor, making sure that it will be used for the betterment of humanity.

You need some guidance on the slippery paths of youth.

You need to be pointed to "a more abundant life."

You need an opportunity for cooperative service.

Youth, unguided and unharnessed, may destroy itself and the social order. The church assures stability and at the same time offers you a chance to express yourself and your personality in a cooperative progressive way.

The Result

The results of this call far exceeded our fondest expectations. These results may be measured in two ways: First, by an analysis of the number who attended; and second by their own testimony of the benefits derived.

From Lamoni, Graceland College, and vicinity 369 attended the convention; from Missouri 171; from Iowa, outside Lamoni, 130; from Kansas 34, Nebraska 15, Florida 4, Minnesota 2, Colorado 6, Utah 2, Illinois 19, Oregon 2, Idaho 1, Washington 1, Massachusetts 1, Texas 1, Ontario 5, Pennsylvania 5, South Dakota 3, Michigan 11, Wisconsin 7, North Dakota 4, Ohio 4, Arizona 3, Oklahoma 11, California 12, making a total of 825.

Perhaps the best measure of the results is furnished by the following excerpts from letters of those who were privileged to attend:

I can only hope that the countless blessings I received there [at the convention] may help me in my determination to become better and purer in the sight of God. And that I may be as a little leaven that may leaven the whole lump—that in my community I may have carried back with me some of the things I received that will be helpful and cause them to see things as clearly as I did.

Such a convention is the greatest thing by far the church has ever attempted, and it is going over in a big way. The prayer meetings each morning are filled with the Spirit of God in an unusual degree. Every moment is filled, and when we sang a song this morning more than a dozen stood to their feet and waited their turn to testify.

Welcome news indeed, that of the meeting of our next convention in the coming June. Yes, I hope to be there; my soul thrills whenever I think of our experiences together at our last convention.

No Age Limit

We have received from many quarters expressions of commendation and approval of our policy of placing no age limit in regard to attendance at the convention. That this policy has justified itself in the results achieved, may be shown by the following excerpts from letters written by two of the older Saints who were permitted to attend. The first is from a good sister, sixty-six years of age, who has been a member of the church for forty-six years. She says:

I have received your "monthly" letter since attending the convention in June, and though "not a young member," I want you to know that I thought the convention the best effort of the church to help the young (and old as well) I had ever known. My soul was stirred with praise and thanksgiving to God that the convention was made possible. None of us will forget the wonderful influences for good that were experienced. The remembrance of these experiences will strengthen us all through the coming year and make us the more hungry for the next convention. Though I may not be able to attend next year myself, I shall do all I can to help everyone else and especially the young. I have talked about it to several of our little branch here, and some told me they would make it a point to spend their vacation there next June.

I feel like the young brother whose letter is quoted on the front page of the HERALD for January 1, "Religion is life to me," etc. A brother with such ideals will surely be "a living epistle, known and read of all men." I, with you, wish there were many such.

I surely think the registration fee of one dollar most reasonable. I never spent a dollar in my life that ever brought so much joy to my soul, and I am now sixty-six years of age and have been a member of the church for forty-six years. May God continue to bless the faithful workers of his church, and may these young people continue to learn and to love this glorious cause until the gladsome news may be carried to all who would hear or be taught, is my earnest prayer.

The second is from a brother who has been laboring for a number of years as district president of one of our prominent districts. This brother is almost seventy-two. He attended last year's convention and brought with him both children and grandchildren.

I have received your circular letters addressed to young people, and am delighted with the thought of being numbered with the young people. Well, I am not young in years, but in mind and spirit I am right with you, and if God will permit me to retain my faculties, and grant unto me of his loving Spirit, I shall do all in my power to encourage and assist the young. YES, YES, I plan to attend the coming convention, and my plan is to drive across country as I did last year. I took two young people with me last year, and why not do that again?

Since there are a few of the older people who misunderstand the position of the young people's movement, and since there are others who seem to be a bit jealous of the opportunities afforded the young people, it is encouraging to read the above letters written by those who have mastered the art of growing old gracefully.

The Next Young People's Convention

Before the close of the convention last year, some of the young people started a paper in circulation

Christ in London?

By Paul M. Hanson

In walking along one of the busy streets of London I saw a young woman about twenty-four years of age standing on the pavement near the sidewalk curbing, holding a child in her arms. The baby was chubby, near eighteen months old, and had both arms around the mother's neck. Besides, the woman's peculiar condition was such that she should have been in a home. No cry was uttered. In one hand were a few boxes of matches.

The din of traffic was such as would almost have drowned any human voice. Numerous heavy carts rolled along, busses were starting and stopping, automobiles purred as they passed, and the street cars were frequently sounding warnings. Because of the Christmas holidays, crowds were everywhere to be seen looking into the brightly lighted windows, selecting their gifts.

The weather was not freezing, but damp and penetrating. A stranger would think rain had petitioning for another convention. With very little effort, more than three hundred names were subscribed, and this without any public announcement or any encouragement on the part of those in charge. Encouraged by this, together with the fact that there will be no General Conference in 1924, it has been decided to hold another convention next June. This will be held on the Graceland College Campus, Lamoni, Iowa, June 5-15, 1924.

Profiting by the experience of last year, we believe that this convention will be better than last year's. Scores of people have written us in an endeavor to encourage and help us in every way possible, and their suggestions are being incorporated into our program. You cannot afford to miss the coming convention. Your district cannot afford to be unrepresented. Begin now to make your plans to be here. Talk it up among the young people of your district and your branch. Get behind this movement to hold our young people to the church and to enlist them in the great task of building Zion.

All inquiries for information in regard to the convention may be addressed to the undersigned. Are you with us?

Very sincerely yours,

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By F. M. MCDOWELL.

recently fallen, but the wet streets were due to the fog. One could not see very far ahead.

I thought, Great God, suppose that young woman was my sister!

I know there is such a thing as misdirected charity, professional beggars, many undeserving. I also know it is too often a habit to look for an anesthetic to apply to the conscience. It is easy to philosophize. Events may move rapidly, overwhelmingly, and with tragical completeness in the lives of others, and we be little concerned.

The Beggar and the Rich Man

Perhaps the "certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day" looked upon the beggar who laid at his gate, full of sores, longing for cast-away crumbs, as having brought his misery and suffering on himself. But his reasoning needed revising. It led him to hell. The most awful place I know anything about is hell.

How handicapped in the race of life are the mentally crippled, physically crippled, morally crippled, and socially crippled!

I walked up the street, took a position from which this needy figure on the pavement, who was neither striving nor crying aloud, could not see me, and during my entire observation, there was no purchaser of her humble wares. No pennies were contributed. After starting on my way I glanced back several times, and then regardless of the surging throngs that jostled me, tears came as I contemplated the words:

Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee; or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in; or naked, and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his angels. For I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it not unto me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal.—Matthew 25: 34-46, Inspired Version.

Again and again I have asked myself, Was Christ passed on the street in London?

What Is It to Know?

By C. W. Clark

The Master promised in John 7:17: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."

As Latter Day Saints we proclaim the doctrine of the right of this knowledge to the world, and yet we find many skeptics among ourselves. This skepticism is superinduced by a misunderstanding of the words to know or their result, knowledge. I have heard men with brilliant religious experiences express themselves that they did not have that knowledge, while others with very slight religious experiences do not hesitate to declare their knowledge that the work is true. Why does this condition exist? Is one less honest than the other, or is there something in regard to knowing that is not understood? Is the one with a vital religious experience robbing us of our source of strength because of lack of knowledge, and is the one with perhaps just a dim light of religious experience doing himself an injustice in testifying as he does?

What Is Knowledge?

What, then, is knowledge? I fear some have translated it to mean the absolute. Such is not, however, the case. To be in position to obtain knowledge there must first be an acceptable standard to follow. Knowledge is the result of comparison of any object or idea with an acceptable standard. And right here is where faith gets its chance to operate in us. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Why is this so? Merely because we must have faith in order to raise a standard by which we acquire knowledge. Have you ever given consideration to 1 Corinthians 13: 8, where it says, "Whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away"? If knowledge is the absolute then we have God, who says in Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6 that his glory is intelligence, declaring that his glory is to fade away. But such is not the case. This great intelligence which God has given us will ever increase, but knowledge, which is the result of man's search for truth and light and which at best is only imperfect, will vanish away in the light of the absolute. Then we will not arrive at truths by comparison with acceptable standards, but we will be able to perceive these things at once by the light of the absolute.

There is a rampant dogmatic skepticism in the world to-day declaring it is impossible to know the truth. This is rather ridiculous as of itself it sets a standard that we cannot know and then declares that it knows we cannot know. The man that makes such a statement is setting up a standard that he believes to be truth and then by comparison tries to convince everyone else that his standard, though a negative one, is truth. There is only one way to measure truth and that is by the law of relativity. (I am not referring to the Einstein theory.) We judge the sweet because we have tasted sour. We judge joy by the sorrows through which we pass.

Knowledge Through Faith

In 2 Nephi 1: 113 we have the following: "Wherefore, they would have remained in a state of innocence, having no joy, for they knew no misery; doing no good, for they knew no sin." It is true that when the scriptures refer to the knowledge of God it is in the absolute, but it is also true that because of our imperfections we will only receive that absolute at the time when our imperfections have vanished. Before that time arrives we will have to look at all things spiritual through the eye of faith. We have faith in the gospel because it meets some standard that we accept.

You cannot convince one of its truth until you have first established faith in its standards. This is the reason why faith must be the first principle. This faith is the appeal to the standard and its acceptance as an ideal. The difference between this and faith as a gift is that faith as a gift brings us the assurance of the results of the gospel, while faith as a principle is an assurance as to the standard by which the gospel is reached.

In the law of physics there is a standard thermometer by which heat and cold are measured. There are standards of weight, also of measure. When any test is made it is in terms of these standards. God has given a standard, "My word is truth." We must judge for ourselves the legality of this standard. If we accept it, then our knowledge will be in terms of this standard. Anything revealed must be in terms of this truth. How do we know the truthfulness of these things?

God Sets the Standard

We are told that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. Even the spirit of knowledge comes by the same power, but it is all by the law of relativity or relation of things revealed to the law of the word of truth. True propositions are those that are consistent with one another and with a comparison with the standard. Many people are in tune with the infinite and yet because they cannot see the absolute in all things they reject these beautiful things. The word of God is constant and our knowledge comes to us by using it as a standard. We are told that Jesus came as a leader and a commander. Why this necessity? Simply that there must be an authoritative standard. God gives us our agency but he also gives us a standard.

I might illustrate by my own case. Many years ago a very beautiful religious experience was granted me relative to my work in connection with Book of Mormon work. In this vision an angel came to me and told me of my work to be accomplished. At the time the task seemed so great that I thought it almost impossible. I determined to put this manifestation to the test. There was nothing, except the joy I felt in doing as I was commanded, to assure me of its truth in the absolute. There was, however, a burning of my heart within me as I tried to follow the instructions given. It agreed with all that I had set up as a standard of revelation. Those of the Melchisedec priesthood I consulted were not over-enthusiastic, yet some gave me encouragement. I kept on putting this to the test. It took about nine years, but was literally fulfilled. Here, then, was a standard that was demonstrated truth, yet not in the revelation did I receive the knowledge, but in its fulfillment could I say that knowledge came.

During this time I lived in an atmosphere of relative truth only, yet I accepted it as knowledge because it agreed with the standards given and by faith I so testified of its truth. We may have many dreams and visions, and yet how are we to know that knowledge has come? I still feel that only by the law of faith can we acquire knowledge. Then vital religious experiences are landmarks to inspire a deeper creative faith. Knowledge only comes by active perception and work on our part. If knowledge came in the absolute and could be accepted as such then it would never vanish away. The Apostle Paul says, "For now we know in part," but we are assured that when that which is perfect is come that which is in part shall be done away. Knowledge, then, partakes of the same attribute as faith, namely, an assurance.

Know by Comparisons

I believe those who have vital religious experiences and fail, because of a misunderstanding of what it means, to place those experiences to the foreground as such, are missing an opportunity to strengthen others and will miss that reward. We say we know that three and four are seven. How do we know it? Simply because it comes up to a standard that we have accepted. In winter we say that it is cold. We know it by comparison with summer, but if an Eskimo from northern Alaska would appear suddenly he would say it was warm. He would also be right, for his judgment would be by comparison.

There are some who prefer to be doubting Thomases and demand an absolute before testifying, but I am reminded of Jesus' statement to Thomas, "Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." This indicates that the Lord was more pleased with those whose faith accomplished their belief and helped them testify of Jesus. Peter accepted the revelation of Jesus as the Christ through faith when he said, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

An expression of the revelation of Jesus the Christ is found in Luke 24:32, "Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way?" Sometimes we fail to recognize the still small voice as his word to us and by so doing deny him further entrance into our lives. When Jesus spoke to Paul out of the heavens, how did Paul come to recognize him as such? No doubt the teachings he had at the feet of Gamaliel helped him to recognize it as a vital religious experience. We are commanded in Doctrine and Covenants 85:36: "Seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning even by study, and also by faith."

Why this necessity of learning? We are told it is because all do not have faith. In other words, it is to help to establish knowledge of a standard that faith might be acquired. There is no gospel knowledge that is not mixed with faith that can be called such. Then faith must be a prerequisite to knowledge, and on account of the imperfection of knowledge faith must exist. Sometimes we are inclined to interpret vital religious experiences in the light of our own desires and preconceived notions.

Why are the Melchisedec priesthood given the right of determining the source of spiritual manifestations? It is so that we may be protected in the giving of vital truths and be able to have faith in them.

The Spirit of Revelation

In Doctrine and Covenants 8:1, 2, we find the following:

Yea, behold, I will tell you in your mind and in your heart by the Holy Ghost, which shall come upon you, and which shall dwell in your heart. Now, behold, this is the Spirit of revelation.

We find, then, the spirit of the still small voice is the spirit of revelation as much as visions and dreams. In section 88 we are given to understand that the Spirit will manifest the truth of the apocrypha unto those who desire to know it. Knowledge, then, is the reception by ourselves as facts those things which compare with the standards we have raised, and the person with vital faith, even though his religious experiences be not as brilliant as others, is entitled to proclaim his knowledge of truth, and those who are doubting Thomases are by their very nature holding back those who have faith in them.

Let us be careful to give our best to the work and not be the doubtful kind that do not realize the power of faith to impart knowledge.

The Power of Conversation

By Elba Todd

The power of conversation lies in the ability to interest others, to be sympathetic, to look beneath the surface to see the hidden treasures undeveloped in the hearts of others, and by the use of speech draw out these valuable qualities of the soul.

Thousands can think for one who can talk. To talk well not only helps one to make a good impression, but it helps to make and keep friends; it opens the door to the lives of others. Few people realize the power of tender, kind voices.

One may be a fine musician and but few people hear one's music. One may be a fine singer and but few hear one sing. Much money and time may be spent on those talents, and yet the development of speech, that is used with every person one meets in life, be thoughtlessly neglected. Nothing indicates fineness or coarseness of culture so much as conversation. It tells life's story. What is said and how it is said will betray all secrets. Conversation is an art.

Speech Is a Blessing

God gave man voice as a blessing to himself and others. We should be careful of its use. Jesus said that blessings and cursing should not come from the same lips. If we would live close to the Lord, our words should be so directed that our conversation would indeed be an art.

There is nothing we can use for a blessing to the world so much as our conversation. One word rightly spoken at the right time may go with some one through life, and sound in thunder tones years after it is spoken. There are a few people who are real artists in conversation; it is a pleasure to hear them talk. They draw everyone under their influence.

To talk well one must be a good listener. We may spoil the conversation by talking on after we have made a point or by repeating the same thing. The silence of a spiritually minded person is often a powerful influence for good. There is a quotation in scripture which says, "Let your words be few. A fool's voice is known by the multitude of his words." Those who talk best are those who talk only when it is necessary. Choose words carefully. Make them a blessing instead of a sin.

Conversation Reveals Life

"As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Paul, in exhorting the saints to be heavenly minded, said, "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how to answer every man." And Solomon says, "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up strife."

Speech reflects character. A narrow, stingy soul never talks well. A man who is always violating one's sense of fairness and justice is never interesting. "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man." Jesus was our great example of tact in conversation. While talking to the woman at the well, not refusing to drink out of her pitcher because she was an adulteress, he appealed to her finest qualities first. Then he told her of her sins in a way that caused her to realize that he was a man of God. We cannot bring out the best there is in a person by presenting the bad qualities; it only raises prejudices.

There is a true saying that spirit begets spirit, and mercy cleaveth unto mercy. By our words we are justified and condemned. Conversation reveals life.

Our dead are greater and more truly alive than we are! When we forget them, it is our whole future that we lose sight of; and when we fail in respect to them, it is our own immortal soul that we are trampling under our own feet.—Maurice Maeterlinck, Belgian poet-philosopher.

Another Year

By F. R. Havergal

Another year is dawning;
Dear Master, let it be,
In working or in waiting,
Another year with thee.

Another year of leaning
Upon thy loving breast,
Of ever-deepening trustfulness,
Of quiet, happy rest.

Another year of mercies,
Of faithfulness and grace;
Another year of gladness
In the shining of thy face.

EDUCATIONAL

PART XV

[We never grow too old to love a good story, and some of the myths and fairy tales of childhood still linger with us in our memories as the sweetest stories we ever heard. How important it is, then, that we choose for our children stories that will last as long and be cherished as greatly as those once told to us! The selection of the right kinds of tales for children and the art of story-telling are problems to home builders. Stories have a tremendous educational value and help to mold the lives of children. A knowledge of these things becomes necessary to parents who would intelligently direct the lives of their children.—EDITORS.]

The Story Hour

By Mrs. Grace P. Abbott

(Published by courtesy of the National Kindergarten Association.)

It had been one of the many romantic fancies of my life that some day, seated in front of a glowing fireplace, I would observe that holy of holies, the story hour, with my fair-haired boys and girls gathered at my knee. My girls, it is true, are fair-haired and dearly love stories, though they are young yet, but they do not love "the story hour" as I had so many times visioned it. Then, I was the story-teller and they the starry-eyed audience.

I know that I am not alone in this disillusionment, for I have seen other mothers try the same thing and then abolish the story hour, saying regretfully, "Somehow my children don't care much for stories. I guess they aren't like I was when I was a child. I used to sit by the hour and listen to my mother, and I well remember once how—" "By the hour" was probably how it seemed to them and not to their mothers, and they probably listened much as do the children of to-day, by doing all of the talking themselves.

It took me a rather long time to learn my lesson. I hated to give in to the fact that I was beaten, and

I would not give up that story hour, but at last I was forced to admit my defeat in order to keep the hour that has now become an even more precious thing than I had visioned it.

I have come to a happy compromise, which is really what all great happinesses are based on—we make up our stories together. I start in, or one of the children starts, or sometimes we all just sit there ever so quietly until a new thought comes along and hops right out of us. Or sometimes we have great fun telling nursery rhymes in turn, each one thinking up hers while the one in turn before, recites. The littlest one of us, my baby of three, has to be started on her rhyme quite often, or switched from her favorite recital, the "Now I lay me" prayer which she cannot distinguish yet from good old Mother Goose. My other daughter loves to tell stories of real life as she sees it, stories about good little girls who drink all their milk every day for weeks and weeks and weeks and grow fatter and fatter and fatter until I am afraid they will burst of goodness or too much milk. I get in one or two short, funny stories each night, but they must be very short and very funny. The ones which can be illustrated in life by the making of faces or gestures are the most popular.

I have learned how to tell a story and make it interesting (stubborn pride in my romantic fancy brought me to it, and for once I can be thankful for my stubbornness), but more than that I have learned how to observe the story hour and make it happy.

Let it be the children's story hour, guide their shapeless thoughts into laughing channels, but let it be their story always, and you will find they will love that time at your knee by the soft firelight quite as well as you, and be willing to sit there for the hours that we all think we so vividly remember.

CHURCH NEWS

Two More Missions May Be Established at Council Bluffs

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, January 29.—It is anticipated that two more missions will be established in this city during the coming year. Surely the field here is ripe and ready for harvest.

The membership of this branch is nearly nine hundred. Regular services are held in three churches and one school-house. Thirty-seven men hold the priesthood, ninety per cent of whom are doing their part. There is a large number of splendid workers among the membership, who trust that the efforts of 1924 will be increased with humility, devotion, and the support of actual living faith which drives on to the goal.

The Saints of the missions met with the Saints at Central for sacramental services on the first Sunday of the year. This is the usual custom of this place. A splendid service was enjoyed in which there were two prayers and forty-two testimonies, all of a very high order.

The church orchestra is making splendid progress under the leadership of Leslie Epperson, and plans are being made for the organization of a band. W. T. Spanswick was elected chorister for the Central Church and is making plans for an effective year's work in that department.

The Department of Women finished a good year's work with a bazaar and a chicken dinner which netted over four hundred dollars. The newly elected officers are planning an intensive educational program in preparation for Zion.

The announcement in the SAINTS' HERALD of a course of study in recreational leadership brings pleasure. May God help the Saints to see the need and give them the will to qualify.

Young People Organized Into Zion Builders

MOONSVILLE, WEST VIRGINIA, January 31.—The pastor here saw the need of taking care of the young of the branch, so about three years ago a service for the children was started which has been the means of keeping them interested. They are called Zion Builders and meet at 6 p. m. every Sunday. Sister Lela Du Bois has charge of this department and the work is progressing nicely under her leadership. It is expected that some of these will be baptized soon.

The Sunday School Council of Religious Education of the Washington District held a called meeting, January 27. Reverend D. Halpenny of Huntington, West Virginia, a State executive, was the principal speaker and imparted valuable knowledge not only for Sunday school workers, but thoughts which were inspiring and helpful to anyone. The local school here was represented by C. Earl Dobbs, superintendent, and W. A. Schoenian.

W. A. Schoenian, district superintendent, visited Wells-crime against childhood. Do you think children should read the daily newspaper? Why?

7. Should the moral of a story be pointed out? Why?

8. Stories told by the child are a clue to what?

9. If the children are given the great world myths, incidents from history and ancient story, a foundation is laid for study of literature later. Give illustrations from experience.

burg, West Virginia, on January 13, and organized a normal class of nine enthusiastic officers and teachers. That school is doing a good work under the able leadership of Paul Lannum.

The Moundsville Branch had a pleasant surprise when Patriarch J. F. Martin and daughter spent the evening of January 13 with them. Brother Martin preached a very instructive and helpful sermon at 7.30 which was enjoyed by all. On the following Wednesday evening he gave very timely advice in an official way to the officers of the branch.

Elder Thomas L. Clark has been doing good work at Wellsburg this month. He has baptized fourteen, and there are still others who he thinks may come into the fold before he closes the meetings on February 8. Plans are being made for Brother Clark to start a series of meetings in Moundsville, West Virginia, on February 11.

Missionary to Denmark Bids Farewell to Saints

MOORHEAD, IOWA, January 31.—Brother Peter Anderson of Council Bluffs, who came to bid farewell to the Saints at Moorhead, before departing for his mission in Denmark, occupied the pulpit here both morning and evening, January 27. He was accompanied by his wife and little daughter.

Brother Anderson's labors at Moorhead the past year have been greatly appreciated by the Saints, and friends as well. The Moorhead Saints wish him Godspeed on his foreign mission.

The interest in the church work by the Saints here is quite gratifying. Though the weather, during the past month, has been severe, the attendance at services has been good.

There seems to be an increasing interest in studying the lessons of the different departments with the desire of arriving at a more complete understanding of the stewardship plan. It is hoped that the near future will reveal good results.

The quarterly business meeting will be held Thursday evening, January 31.

Brother Mark Jensen was the speaker at the morning hour at Pisgah, Iowa, on January 27.

Brother Joseph Lane, the district president, has not been as well as usual this winter, so Moorhead has not been favored with his presence as formerly. It is hoped he may soon be about again with his good counsel and advice. The general health of the Saints, as a whole, is about as usual.

Surprise Marriage at Religio Meeting

GLASGOW, MONTANA, January 29.—Those attending the meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Friday, January 18, were pleasantly surprised when Elder James C. Page announced, just at the close, that there was a couple present who had requested to be united in marriage. Sister Georgia Wilcox stepped promptly to the piano and played a wedding march, while the contracting parties, Brother Lee Ellsworth and Ava Woodward, marched to the front, the minister leading. The pair were attended by Brother Joseph Sandidge and Miss Florence Olson. Brother Ellsworth lives at Vandalia, about twenty miles west of Glasgow. Miss Woodward is from Gary, Illinois.

Chicken Supper

A chicken supper will be served by the Department of Recreation and Expression, next Friday, February 1, in the hall, from 5 o'clock to 8. The rest of the evening will be given over to a social time. Southern Negro songs are to be sung and a playlet will be presented by four boys.

Brother A. E. Crowl and family left January 17 for Zion. They planned to go for some time but the sickness of their son, Theodore, delayed them. They have taken him to the Independence Sanitarium for treatment.

Juanita Richards has returned from spending the holidays at the home of her parents in Malta, Montana. She is an example of faithfulness to the church.

A number of family budget books were ordered by members of the branch. Some nonmembers seeing them, ordered several, and pronounced them the finest thing in that line which they had ever seen. More orders keep coming for them.

Prayer meetings have not been so well attended of late. Sickness and cold weather interfering.

Brother Earl Wilcox, the Bishop's agent, motored with his family to Andes, Montana, one hundred forty miles away, Sunday, January 20. He met with the Saints there and organized a local of the Department of Recreation and Expression. He reports a cold trip but a good time with the Saints of that place.

Elders E. D. Chase, James C. Page, and Joseph L. Sandidge, priest, are preaching here alternately.

Peace and good will prevail in Glasgow and all are anxious to see the cause of Christ advanced.

Spire Is Removed From Seattle Church

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, January 25.—The Saints here have started out to make some improvements, among which was removing the spire from the church. They now have the paint purchased and expect to give the building a new coat when the rainy season is over.

The Department of Women is planning big things for 1924. Knowing somewhat of their determination, Seattle ventures to say that whatever the Department of Women proposes to do will be done. It is remembered how they built their new kitchen and how they cleared $115 at their last bazaar.

Budget System Works

The budget system works fine and makes it much easier when the necessary expenditures are anticipated at the beginning of the year, and then a systematic effort to raise the funds is put forth. Even when contingencies arise, as fixing up the church roof, painting, etc., to say nothing of the running expenses of the branch, the Seattle Saints found it better, so have adopted the budget plan again for 1924.

President Recovers From Operation

C. E. Jones, former pastor of the Portland Branch, has been in charge of the branch here since the fall of 1922. He is also district president. Following the General Conference of this year, Brother Jones underwent an operation at the Independence Sanitarium, and after some weeks of confinement in this church institution has returned home. He has had a complete recovery and is able now to carry the branch responsibilities again. Brother and Sister Jones have recently been making the rounds of the district; Brother Jones looking after the presidential duties and Sister Jones laboring as district Sunday school worker.

The new preacher, Monte E. Lasater, is making a good showing, and with his hard study promises to make a true soldier of the cross.

Missionary Sermons

Missionary Daniel Macgregor dropped in on the Seattle Branch January 14 and preached three nights. Monday night, the 14th, he preached a fine inspirational sermon from Daniel 12, showing in his characteristic way the "sure word of prophecy," pointing to the restoration of the gospel in 1830 and the Reorganization in 1860. The second night a beautiful sermon on the Christ and his mission was preached. Many new and interesting side lights were brought out in his analysis. The third night was devoted to a recital of campaign reminiscences which proved highly entertaining and instructive.

The Seattle Saints have voted to have a real gospel revival and are planning on a missionary campaign. They have voted to engage Brother Macgregor to tell the gospel story. Hopes are high over the prospects, and a campaign is on for the necessary funds.

Brother and Sister Beltcher, of Portland, were among the recent visitors to this branch.

Branch Progressing

Seattle Branch is in a good spiritual condition and is growing spiritually and numerically.

The prolonged absence of news from the Seattle Branch may lead some to suppose that the place is dead. The Saints report that they have been too busy to do much shouting, yet it is not intended that the church shall forget its branch at "Alaska's gateway," even though beloved "Uncle John" and "Aunt Molly" Terry have left here for Zion.

Apostles Hold Meetings at Modesto

MODESTO, CALIFORNIA, January 28.—A visit from Apostles D. T. Williams and Roy S. Budd, accompanied by Brother E. B. Hull, greatly helped and strengthened the Saints of Modesto recently. These brethren held a two weeks' series of meetings here which was much enjoyed and some good accomplished.

At the annual election of officers, held this month, a change was made all around, except in the president of the branch. John C. Howe is president of the Sunday school; Lottie B. Rose, president of Department of Recreation and Expression; Anna Howe, head of the Department of Music; and Estella E. Swall, president of the Department of Women. With these officers Modesto hopes to accomplish much this year.

A few will attend the district conference at Sacramento, California, which is to be held, February 1 to 3.

This community has just had a splendid rain which was badly needed, since the sheep and cattle were suffering for the want of feed.

Clitherall Branch Goes into Winter Quarters

BATTLE LAKE, MINNESOTA, January 30.—In spite of the fact that the Union Branch at Clitherall has gone into winter quarters, its members are not idle.

They keep in touch with each other by occasional correspondence which in addition to business matters always contains some testimony of the writer's interest in the work. The news in these letters is passed on to others; and thus is a means of renewing and reviving their interest. When one learns of the difficulties and fears encountered by some of the isolated ones, the knowledge that they are still firm and true to the work strengthens the faith.

There are also encouraging items of news, such as the recent ordination of Brother Robert Zuelsdorf, a former member of this branch, to the office of priest, in Duluth.

Another means of great help is an occasional visit of distant Saints. These visits disclose many instances of the active interest of our winter-bound members. One sister in Deer Creek keeps her copy of The Call at Evening busy circulating among nonmembers. Church papers are exchanged and interchanged; then they are sent to married sons, daughters, and friends at a distance.

In some ways the leisure of the winter gives a broader view of the work and an opportunity to ruminate and digest the experiences of the busy summer, and in its way it may become as valuable as a constant association with others in regular church services.

Cottage Services Held at Tomahawk

TOMAHAWK, WISCONSIN, January 25.—E. J. Lenox, the district president of Northern Wisconsin, made a very pleasant visit in this city for a few days and held services at the home of D. W. Mair. There was a good attendance of about twenty persons, including some nonmembers.

While here he also found some Saints who had not had an opportunity to attend a church of their own faith for a few years and succeeded in encouraging them to attend the services. It seems that some of the Saints were afflicted, so he administered to those and did fireside talking.

From here he went to Harshaw to encourage the Saints there, then on to Goodwin, Wisconsin. On his way back to Wyeville, Wisconsin, where he expects to join L. O. Wildermuth, he preached here one evening.

There are about twenty-three Saints scattered throughout this city, so prayer meetings are held weekly. Many appreciate an opportunity to serve God in spirit and in deed.

A Department of Women was effected January 23. The officers elected were: Laura Clark, president; Agnes Smith, secretary; Lucy Mair, treasurer and chorister; Mildred Mair, organist; Mrs. Vera Jelette and Carrie Smith, program committee. The department decided to take up, for the lesson period, the Religio Quarterly, since there is no Religio or Sunday school here.

The Saints are praying for the success of the gospel work here.

Many Nonmembers in Plano Sunday School

PLANO, ILLINOIS, January 29.—This branch is small and several of the Saints here are aged and unable to attend the services. The Sunday school has over one hundred enrolled, but more than half of that number are nonmembers.

The pageant, "Balancing the Christmas ledger," was given by the school and was very beautiful. The costumes and setting were lovely. The church was crowded that night.

The Religio had a sleighing party lately which the young people greatly enjoyed.

The Oriole and Temple Builders of this place are both active organizations.

The Department of Women sent two barrels of canned fruit to the Independence Sanitarium for Thanksgiving. This department is studying the "Food and body" course, having finished "Child care."

The branch feels very lonely since the passing away of "Aunt" Jane Wildermuth in December. She was a kind, loving Saint, respected by all the neighbors. Her aged companion, Eli M. Wildermuth, who for many years was an active missionary, makes his home now with his daughter and her husband, Brother and Sister John Moore.

Toronto to Give Musical to Purchase Piano

TORONTO, CANADA, January 26.—The Toronto Religio has purchased a Steinway piano which cost $900. This was brought about by Brother A. N. Hoxie paying the branch a visit and stirring up the musical talent to action.

A recital will be given February 22 with a view to raising money to help pay for this beautiful instrument. The young people are endeavoring to sell 1,000 tickets here. They are determined to sell that number and have erected a ladder in the basement of the church with a little boy representing the Religio climbing up the ladder; with numbers on each rung from 50 to 1,000. Old Lady Gloom pays the usual visits, but each time finds that Miss Optimist is not at home and will not be in until the 1,000 tickets are sold.

Brother C. Ed. Miller is still putting on his illustrative lectures on the Book of Mormon, which are proving a great success.

Meetings to Be Held at Hutchinson

HUTCHINSON, KANSAS, January 24.—The Saints of the Hutchinson Branch are pushing the work of the Master to the best of their ability.

Brother C. E. Harpe, of Lamoni, Iowa, and Brother Williams of Wichita, Kansas, were here on January 17. Brother Harpe gave a heart-to-heart talk, which was enjoyed by all. The Saints also had the privilege of having Brother Allen of Independence, Missouri, with them January 20 to 24. He devoted one evening especially to the children.

It is a great encouragement to have these brothers come. All are looking forward with interest to a series of meetings to be held by Brethren Harpe and Williams in the near future.

Boys' and Girls' Organizations Started

PONTIAC, MICHIGAN, January 31.—Pontiac began the year with a new equipment of officers in the departments and with new resolutions. In the Religio, endeavors are being made to have a boy movement with Carlyle Whitehead as leader; also, a girls' organization with Grace Kenyon as leader.

The Department of Women are still giving suppers to aid in the building fund. The last supper netted about $16. In all, this department has turned over $495 to the building fund the past year. A bazaar they held brought in about $150.

The district organizer, Sister S. B. Smith, of Detroit, is expected to be present at the next meeting of the Department of Women, February 7.

Last Tuesday evening a number of the Saints met at the home of Brother Robert Kenyon in honor of all whose birthdays come in January. About thirty were present.

The Christmas offering for 1923 was over the $300 mark which Pontiac had set for a goal. They hope to make it more the coming year. Plans to this effect are under way now. Even the beginners clapped their little hands in ecstasy over an opportunity to help swell the Christmas offering this year.

Former Bevier Saints Now Compose Macon Branch

BEVIER, MISSOURI, January 29.—Fifty-five branch members were transferred to the new branch at Macon last year. The Macon Saints are a live bunch and are making good progress. Their neat church building and the lots are well worth $4,000, and are free from debt.

About forty of the Bevier Saints attended the church dedication at Macon, January 20. President F. M. Smith made the dedicatory sermon.

Elders Robertson and Bailey of the Northeastern Missouri missionary force have been conducting meetings at Macon this past week.

In the annual business session, the following officers were elected: W. B. Richards, president; J. L. Williams, clerk;

Mary Jones, chorister; David Richards, pianist; Paul Byers, trustee; Catherine Rogers, member of the Welfare Board; all members of the priesthood and other officers were sustained. Sunday school: S. E. Perry, superintendent; Ben Hepple, secretary; J. L. Williams, treasurer; Charlotte Rudkin, librarian; Margaret Thomas, chorister; Mary Jones, pianist. Religio: Ivor Surrige, superintendent; Charlotte Rudkin, secretary; Margaret Newlin, chorister; Carl Weeks, pianist.

The Sunday school Christmas offering was $444.47.

Many teachers have been favorably located through the efforts of the commission. Those knowing the prospective vacancies in teaching positions where our church people might be located will confer a favor on both the teacher and the Commission by rendering assistance in the matter.

Department of Religious Education Grows

WINDSOR, ONTARIO, February 5.—The attendance at the Department of Religious Education is steadily increasing, and in spite of the extremely cold weather of last Sunday, January 27, more than one hundred members were present. Much enthusiasm is found among the executive officers, and many attractions have been added since the New Year.

A juvenile choir, with about twenty-five members already enrolled who add much life to the singing, has been organized by Sister Edith Moore. Brother Harry Depew, newly appointed leader of the orchestra, has an orchestra of six pieces to start with, which assists largely in the after study hour program.

An efficient and dependable staff of ten teachers very effectively occupy the study hour, so that the Sunday school is indeed a Department of Religious Education.

The church was full to overflowing at the sacrament service, February 3. The Spirit was present in power, which seems to make all feel encouraged to press onward.

Patriarch John Shields is here and is magnifying his calling as a father to the church, which seems to show fruits of his labors. May he be spared especially to counsel and build up the Saints. There seems to be a good interest among non-members manifested at the meetings. Brother Shields has been wonderfully blessed in his preaching. The church was full on Sunday night. Two have been baptized, and others interested. The choir is doing excellent work.

There have been three funerals in the branch this past month: Brother Carey Treadgold, the father of Sister R. J. Shute; Sister Millie Moe, wife of Harold Moe and mother of little Donald; and the infant son of Brother Chester Land and wife.

Brother B. H. Doty, one of the missionaries, paid Windsor a visit one evening.

Missionary Leaves for Honolulu

BURLINGTON, IOWA, January 30.—The departure of our pastor and wife, Brother and Sister D. J. Williams, to their new field in Hawaii, also the rush of the holidays, with many other things, has kept the Saints here busy for some time.

After having Brother and Sister Williams here as spiritual instructors for eight years, it will take some time for the Saints to adjust themselves to the fact that their new mission has taken these two so extremely far away.

Burlington has realized that the time would come when the mission of Brother Williams would be changed. Under extreme anxiety this branch has waited for the conference appointments to be read, that they might once more be filled with rejoicing over the news of the return of Brother and Sister Williams for another year. Alas, this year it was not true.

Farewell to Pastor and Wife

In the past years Burlington has had some excellent pastors. When the time came for their departure to other fields of service, it was an occasion for regret, and once more Burlington has learned to love and relinquish. Yet the Christian tie of love which bound during these past eight years cannot be broken by absence. The good seed which has been planted during their stay here has taken root, and it will continue to grow under the influence of the new pastor and his wife. When Brother and Sister Williams return, it is hoped they will be able to see great fruits of their efforts here. Their labors in this place have put them in a position to accept added responsibilities. Though the Saints are filled with sorrow because of the departure, yet there is comfort in the fact that Burlington's loss is some one else's gain.

This place and other branches of the district have given a number of farewell parties and presented useful gifts for the journey. Each member of the local Department of Women wrote Sister Williams a letter. Several of these messages are to be given her each day after the boat starts on January 26. They will tell her of all the interesting things of both the church and the city which is still dear to her. She was a good worker in this department and a great strength to the sisters. Her willing and never-tiring service will be greatly missed.

New Pastor Received

"Who will be our next pastor?" was a serious question which is now answered. The Saints feel highly complimented that Brother and Sister Daniel, formerly of Cameron, Missouri, are appointed to this place. They are kinsfolk of Brother Elbert A. Smith who was the first pastor. When this fact was made known, the "get acquainted" feeling was no more needed, for the "magic love" had taken its place.

This brother and sister are young in the work, but they are sincere and very earnest workers for the Master. Burlington will not suffer a spiritual decline by the change, but will continue to rise steadfastly under the new leadership.

Donations to Building Fund

The Department of Women is making great efforts this year to obtain finances for the building funds. Two fancy-work sales and a number of food sales have been held in the business district each year. This not only swells the building fund, but advertises the church because the confidence and respect of the public has been won.

Just a short time ago the branch received a donation of $200 for this fund from a very kind-hearted and wealthy family of Burlington. It filled the cup of joy to overflowing, and there is a promise that when the new building is begun the sum will be increased.

Apostle Holds Meetings at Topeka

TOPEKA, KANSAS, February 5.—The Saints of Topeka have been strengthened and encouraged as a result of the ten-day meeting held by Apostle Edwards recently.

It is to be regretted that the activities at high school and Washburn College necessitated the absence of some of the young people from the services. Yet there was in the personal contact with Brother Edwards, in a social way in the homes, an influence which left a lasting impression, not only with the young but the old as well.

One could not mention all the good things he said, yet the thing he seemed to emphasize was "the necessity of right attitudes." The gospel, he said, should be interpreted in terms which affect life in 1924. The science of psychology is of modern growth; yet Jesus was the greatest psychologist that ever lived. He sought to change men's attitudes. A man's actions are judged by the attitude he assumes. Man's general attitude determines his reaction to life. He should see things as they are.

Extent of Faith

Jesus exemplified such attitudes as faith, consecration, appreciation, humility, and testimony. The Saints have not yet begun to realize the extent of faith. Jesus did in his prayer life, his ministry, and as the keynote of life generally. By the attitude of consecration one dedicates life to the service of God. By appreciation the good is gained and evil avoided. Jesus loved the beautiful, the good, and he did not bother about things which were not worth while. Dependence upon God is recognized by humility. Good news is spread by testimony.

Brother Edwards preached also upon stewardship, church organization, the place of religion, and the place of the church. At the special meeting of the young people, the subject was, "Yesterday, to-day, and to-morrow."

Although Brother Edwards was a busy man, having charge of the missionary activities at the general offices, he found time to visit in the homes of the Saints, and Topeka invites him to come again.

There are many signs of a spiritual awakening in the different activities of the branch. Some, both lay members and officers, are beginning to realize the responsibility that rests upon them, according to their gifts and callings.

Apostles Hold Week's Meetings in San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, January 31.—The budget system has been adopted for this branch, and a committee has been appointed to arrange for putting it into practice. They will attend to all the details and report back to the branch.

Apostles Roy Budd and D. T. Williams gave a week's service here recently, preaching every evening alternately. The Saints enjoyed the meetings. Time alone will tell the effect upon the nonmembers. These men are now laboring among the branches of the district.

The preaching in San Francisco is kept up by the local ministry, John A. Saxe, president of the branch; L. B. Shippy, H. B. Simpson, Emery S. Parks, and George S. Lincoln. All are enjoying the spirit of their office and calling to the edifying of the congregation generally.

The Sunday school and Religio here are doing well. There is good attendance and the lesson study is enjoyed.

Missionary work is being anticipated, and the groups are becoming active. The Sunset Group proposes to start their missionary drive soon.

All is well in San Francisco. The attendance is good, the services are spiritual, the Saints are alive to the work, the preaching is uplifting and instructive, and strangers and nonmembers are always present.

Money Raised at Social for Church Improvements

SAGINAW, MICHIGAN, February 2.—The church building at Saginaw has a wing on it which has been used for a classroom. At the business meeting, the first of the year, it was voted to put doors in the archway so that the wing could be closed into a classroom for the smaller grades.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, wishing to help finance this move, held a shadow social at the home of G. E. Burt, the pastor, on Tuesday evening, January 22. They report $21 raised, and all enjoyed themselves.

The Department of Women of this place has been reorganized, and there is now an East Side division and a West Side division. The east group, in charge of Sister Josephine Loomis, is taking up sewing for the present, but expects to take up some study later. The west division is under the leadership of Sister Ethel Larson.

An elderly woman, who a few months ago opposed the church, now desires baptism as a result of a better understanding and blessings received during illness. She was paralyzed three times in the past two months. Each time she called the elders to administer to her and has received a blessing. Following one administration, members of her family were heard to say, "My, isn't it wonderful! The relief she has received already!" Thus God's blessing has been felt in Saginaw.

Severe Weather Becomes Mild for Special Meetings

MADISON, WISCONSIN, February 5.—Brother and Sister Ward L. Christy closed a two weeks' series of meetings at this place on February 3. At each service there were some nonmembers present.

Brother and Sister Christy did more than sow the seed; they planted it down deep in the hearts of all.

On Monday evening, February 4, Sister Christy met with the ladies of the Department of Women, and Brother Christy met with the priesthood. Much valuable instruction was given by both. The Sunday school hour on last Sunday morning was used by Sister Christy in instructions to the departments.

On the Sunday of January 20, the weather was so cold that it registered twenty degrees below zero. In announcing the meetings which were to be held, the Saints were requested to make the weather a subject of prayer that it might not be so cold and more people would come to the services. The prayers were answered, and for two weeks the weather was fine. On February 4 and 5, after the meetings were closed, the worst storm of the season was experienced.

Four of the brethren, who have autos, made from one to three extra trips each night during the series that they might bring people to the meetings. They also took them home after the services. Thus they kept the good work moving along.

During the last two months, Windsor has heard sermons from the following: John F. Garver, W. A. McDowell, Lester O. Wildermuth, Leonard Houghton, J. O. Dutton, Ward L. Christy, H. W. Woodstock, F. F. Carpenter, and C. F. Clark.

February Autumn Leaves

One of the leading articles in the monthly church magazine for the current number is "An experience on shipboard," by Holmes J. Davison. This was sent to the editor shortly before the recent sad demise of Brother Davison, brother of Sister E. M. Burton, and is an interesting account.

An article on "Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences," by Alfred E. White, staff editor of the SAINTS' HERALD, gives one an intimate personal view of this unique educational institution. Some new winter pictures by Bishop Charles Fry illustrate it.

Edward Rannie contributes an interesting sketch of the life of Abraham Lincoln in keeping with the birthday observance concerning this great statesman.

President McDowell announces a new course in recreational leadership, whereby one may qualify for helpfulness to others who would lend intelligent assistance in this most urgent need of the church.

Kitty Karson has another good story on church life as too commonly seen to-day. This is one of a series, each separate, yet each related to the other.

Billie Carpender, the popular travel sketch writer, drops into a delightfully personal mood and tells of "Some helpful dreams."

"Games and stunts for your next party" is a contribution by the Department of Recreation and Expression. It will be much appreciated by those who would have wholesome social activities.

"Preaching by the Spirit" is a missionary experience by W. P. Bootman, short but convincing.

"How to make paper flowers" is an illustrated article that makes this accomplishment easy of attainment. There are in addition many other features, altogether making this a very desirable number. The subscription price is $1.75 a year.

Thermometer Used to Register Christmas Offering

SAINT THOMAS, ONTARIO, February 4.—The Sunday school has set $200 as its goal for the Christmas offering for the year 1924. A thermometer which registers the amount each Sunday is being used; more interest seems to be manifest by keeping it constantly before the school. A birthday offering has also been started to help swell the Christmas offering. Each one is supposed to put in one cent for each year of his age. There have already been some contributions to this fund.

Brother Edward Pantling was called to the office of deacon and Brother Samuel Johnson to the office of teacher, on February 3, when the Lord saw fit to speak words of counsel and advice through Bishop John L. Burger. Brother Pantling was baptized about thirteen months ago. He has been a very zealous worker ever since.

This branch is still trying to push its way Zionward, although like many others it has its drawbacks from time to time.

Branch President for Twelve Years Retires

CENTRAL CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, February 5.—Brother Henry P. W. Keir withdrew his name from the list of nominees for the office of president at the business meeting this year, and by so doing terminated his long period of twelve consecutive years as the head of the branch. The congregation was very loath to see him leave the office, but his explanation was satisfactory, and he was tendered a rising vote of thanks for his long and meritorious service in the interest of the branch.

This annual election was held January 7. The meeting was well attended and a fine spirit of interest and progressiveness was evident. Brother J. J. Oliver, for many years a stalwart worker in the branch, was elected president. Several members of the young people's group received offices. The agency of both temporal and standing committees was utilized in arranging for the needs of the branch. The congregation, encouraged by the result of the meeting, is looking forward to a successful year.

A recital was given at the church on the evening of January 31 by Miss Palmer, a teacher of voice, expression, and piano. This young woman, although not a member of the church, donated her services and furnished a very interesting performance in the three departments of culture which she teaches. She was assisted by Miss Mildred Horton, a member of the branch. The entire proceeds of the recital were added to the building fund for a new church edifice.

Boise Visited by Missionary on Way to Switzerland

BOISE, IDAHO, January 31.—Elder Leonard G. Hoisington, recently appointed to a mission to Switzerland, stopped off at Boise en route to Switzerland via New York City, and preached two splendid sermons, January 20 and 27, which were greatly enjoyed by the Boise Saints. Brother Hoisington completed the course in Religious Education at Grace-land College two years ago and since then has been taking an extension course from the University of Utah. The Boise Branch feels highly honored that one of its members should be chosen as an ambassador of Christ to assist in preaching "this gospel of the kingdom in all the world." Sister Hoisington and their two children will accompany Brother Hoisington to his foreign mission. They expect to sail from New York City, February 16. May the blessed Spirit of the Master ever be with them in their missionary labors.

The Boise Sunday school, with a membership of sixty-three, raised two hundred dollars Christmas offering which the school pledged itself to raise at the beginning of the year 1923. The plan which the Christmas offering committee used to create interest in raising the pledge, will be given in next Boise news letter.

The Boise Saints are making preparations to entertain the visiting Saints of the Idaho district conference to be held here March 1 and 2. A very enjoyable and instructive conference is anticipated. Brethren R. L. Fulk and G. P. Levitt, missionaries to the Idaho District, besides all the district officers, are expected to attend.

Lamoni Stake Items

LAMONI, IOWA, February 6.—Lamoni is just emerging from the worst blizzard it has known for years. Train service has been badly crippled, some trains being annulled for two days. From four to six inches of snow fell and drifted terribly. Traffic was at a standstill, especially in rural districts. The road to Togo, which is one of the main outlets by bus connection with the main line passing there, was impassable until a gang of men with shovels, led by Mayor G. W. Blair, dug through the drifts and cleared a way. "Everybody works but father," and he was no exception in this case. It took thirty men five hours to clear two and one half miles.

Stake Conference

The stake conference met in Lamoni from February 1 to 3. The meetings were well attended and a very spiritual time enjoyed. Patriarch John Martin, of Kirtland, Ohio, was present and gave two excellent discourses. On Friday evening he talked to the young people on the future work of the church, admonishing them to a life of preparation for service. The tasks are great, and in human wisdom and strength alone would seem impossible, but what God decrees he will help his people accomplish, Brother Martin said.

On Sunday evening Brother Martin addressed a large congregation on the subject "What the world needs most—love." He presented the thought that if love were dominant in our lives, the other fruits of the spirit would follow. Selfishness, disloyalty, intemperance, lack of faith, and hope cannot abide where love is. The subject is as old as the world but, handled by an able speaker and especially by the aid of the Spirit, is ever new and interesting. Brother Martin possesses a personality born of sincerity which carries conviction and is a very interesting and powerful speaker.

Ordinations Performed

The business done at the Saturday meeting was mostly of a routine nature. The stake officers were all sustained, and two ordinations previously recommended by the Lamoni Branch were ordered. They were Forest Roberts to the office of priest and Earl Anderson to the office of deacon. These ordinations were attended to at the Sunday morning service.

A spiritual feast was enjoyed at the sacramental meeting Sunday forenoon. A prophecy was given by Brother Martin which was mostly of a commendatory nature, especially recognizing the work of those intrusted with the work of the stake, but chiding the men of the ministry for lack of diligence in duties assigned them. The conference closed just in time, as the blizzard was ushered in Sunday night.

Blizzard Stops Meeting

Meetings in other parts of the stake were brought abruptly to a close by the bad weather also. Elder W. A. Smith, of Independence, has been holding meetings for a month with great success at Bloomington Chapel, north of here. Large crowds gathered nightly and interest was intense. Two baptisms were reported.

Elder L. G. Holloway has been occupying for three weeks at Pleasanton, Iowa, with equally good results. A good interest was aroused, and a number are investigating the work.

At Andover, Missouri, C. E. Wight and W. E. Prall of the stake presidency have been holding meetings. While their efforts were mostly directed toward the Saints who were aroused to greater activity thereby, yet a number of non-members profited and are investigating. One young man was baptized.

Agricultural Course Offered

The second annual short course for farmers and agricultural students will be held at Graceland College, February 20 to 24. A committee from the stake bishopric together with Oren Hartchen of the agricultural department of the college is arranging the program. Speakers from the State college at Ames and also local speakers will discuss subjects interesting to the farmer.

May Skinner Dies

The body of Sister May Skinner, daughter of Elder D. C. White, was brought to Lamoni for burial yesterday. Sister Skinner was of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and died on last Sunday. Our sister was raised in Lamoni, where she had endeared herself to all by her life of devoted service. Her death brought sadness to many. She will be greatly missed by the branch in Council Bluffs, also. She leaves her husband, C. A. Skinner, and two daughters.

Graceland Chats

LAMONI, IOWA, February 9.—The weekly chapel service was held February 7. In the past the boys and girls have often met in separate service. On these occasions the wide, sunny library has been used by the girls, and the boys occupied the chapel. Thursday the old order obtained, Roy Cheville, dean of men, addressing the boys after a rousing song service led by Evan Fry, while in the library Vida E. Smith, dean of women, had charge.

Miss Mabel Carlile led the girls in a song service. For one number Josephine Smith sang the solo, the others humming the accompaniment. Mrs. Belle Royce offered prayer, and Miss Blanche Edwards read a tribute to the life of Christ. Mrs. Vida E. Smith followed with a short address in tribute to Sister May Skinner, neighbor, wife, and mother, after which a number of songs were sung which she had often led. A reverent spirit attended as the girls contemplated the life of one who had so consecratedly met the responsibility of being a woman. Such lives leave lessons more beautiful and far-reaching than any sermon. The college girls wish to be able to sing harmoniously and with feeling, that their meetings may in the future have more stirring and inspiring service of song than ever before.

Lectures by Apostle Gillen

Apostle J. A. Gillen lectured February 4 and 6 to the religious education class on "Principles of the gospel": (a) Doctrine, (b) Ordinances and sacraments.

Brother Gillen's visit was a happy incident in the school life of Miss Carol, his daughter, who is a sophomore and has been with her father very little the past two years. A missionary father and a college daughter cannot always make home dates meet.

The Faculty

The serious illness of Miss Hazel Putnam, head of the academy, has caused anxiety and many expressions of regret. Everyone will be glad to know that she is improving.

Miss Virginia Carley, of the piano department, is back on duty, to the delight of her students.

The Faculty Women's Club received for the women of Graceland from 3.30 to 5.30, Friday afternoon, February 8, at Sunny Meade.

The regular faculty luncheon occurs Monday, February 11, at noon. These luncheons are intended to be served every two weeks. The preparations and service are under the direction of Miss Lulu Porter, head of the department of domestic science.

Prayer Meeting

Probably the best meeting of the year was that of Wednesday night, February 6. Patriarch John L. Martin gave the opening address and spoke under the Spirit later, encouraging, admonishing, and warning the young people.

Brother Martin won the hearts of the college folks during his stay and strengthened them in good resolutions. They will long remember his pleasant visit.

Courses in Agriculture

Professor Oren H. Hartschen, of the agricultural department, announces that a farmers' short course will be held at Graceland again this year from February 20 to 23.

The committee has planned the course to take up the following subjects: dairy production, horticulture, soils, crops, poultry, beekeeping, and home economics. Both local and State extension speakers have been secured to carry on the discussion and demonstration.

New Way for Making Prayer Services Interesting

BRADNER, OHIO, February 1.—The manner in which Bradner is now conducting its prayer and testimonial services, that is, by closing them as soon as they begin to drag, is proving a wonderful success. Since the meetings are becoming more lively, the Saints, especially the young people, take a greater interest and the Spirit of the Lord seems to be present in greater power.

Much interest was shown at the last meeting and nearly everyone took part, following each other very promptly. One sister said in testimony that the church papers are a blessing, and that the blessings of our heavenly Father should not be spoken of in our little circle only, but that good use should be made of the papers, allowing our friends to be benefited and strengthened by reading the testimonies contained in the papers.

Another fact which shows the progress or improvement of the Saints here is that for some time the doctor has been needed but seldom and the calls for administration from the elders have been few.

Play Given at Holden Home

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, February 8.—"A Southern Cinderella," a three-act play, was given at the auditorium of the Holden Home, February 6, by the Priscilla club. The Holden Progress reports the entertainment as follows:

"The cast was composed of members of the club: Madame Charteris, an old aristocrat, Mrs. I. M. Ross; Enid Bellamy, a Southern Cinderella, Mrs. Howard Danielson; Miss Rosie Winterberry, a famous settlement worker, Mrs. Floyd Danielson; Miss Johnnie Bell Randolph, a little coquette, Mrs. Walter Surber; Katherine Hawke, an English nurse, Mrs. Kenneth Scarcliff; Caroline Hawke, her sister, an adventuress, Mrs. Floyd Hazelbeck; Mammy Judy Johnson, a black, blue-grass widow, Mrs. Freelin Hampton.

"Each part was well rendered and some of the work showed exceptional ability along the line of dramatic art. The stage setting was well arranged and contributed much to the success of the play. The fine music by the L. D. S. orchestra, under the leadership of Mrs. Ralph Baker, was greatly enjoyed. Between the acts special numbers were given. Mrs. Ticy Moler and Miss May Moler played a piano duet, and solos were sung by Janis Hampton and Chilton Ross. The proceeds are to be used for benevolent work. Mrs. Freelin Hampton is president of the Priscillas, Mrs. Ralph Baker secretary, and Mrs. Walter Surber, treasurer.

"Previous to the rendition of the play, a short memorial service was held in honor of ex-President Wilson."

Kansas City Stake News

KANSAS CITY STAKE, February 10.—William I. Fligg, stake missionary, commenced a series of meetings at the Heathwood Church, North Valley and Troup Avenue, Kansas City, Kansas, to-day. The prospect is for a successful service.

At Grandview, Roy E. Browne, assistant pastor, occupied at 11 o'clock and J. Harry Paxton at 7.45. Apostle James A. Gillen spoke there last Sunday evening. He based his remarks on the experience of Peter and the other apostles who went fishing, as is contained in the twenty-first chapter of Saint John. They toiled all night and caught nothing, but by observing the suggestions of Jesus, caught the net full of great fishes. The query by Brother Gillen was, "Have we toiled and is our net empty? Have we heeded the Master that our net might be full?"

At Central Church, the morning speaker was R. L. Bishop, pastor of the Mount Washington Church, and Joseph A. Tanner filled the 7.45 hour. Next Sunday the conference services will be augmented by special music in charge of Bernice Griffith, stake chorister. A men's chorus will be featured at 7.15 p. m.

Temple Builder Chapter Organized at Brockton

BROCKTON, MASSACHUSETTS, February 6.—A Temple Builder chapter has been organized under Sister Emma Dobbins, since the need of some such organization was felt in Brockton. On the Friday following the first meeting, February 1, they held a clam chowder and salmon salad supper. A great many attended, and the supper was a decided success.

The Latter Day Saint Dramatic Club has had only one meeting this month. The election of officers took place at that time, and Donald Crowell is now president. Following the business meeting, there was a rehearsal.

Brockton has had two visits recently from Bishop M. C. Fisher, since the branch is so fortunate as to be on the road to Onset. Brother Fisher spoke on "Stewardships" and greatly enlightened the Saints on that subject. Alpha Baker, of Boston, was here once this last month also. Such visits are certainly enjoyed.

Brockton feels it a pleasure to report their activities and enjoys reading the reports from other branches. They have been greatly blessed recently in being delivered from sickness, and feel that God is watching over them.

Elmer Richards of Calumet, Oklahoma, writes: "We have a membership of over two hundred, although rather scattered. There are about sixty-five or seventy who reside near. We have a live Sunday school with an average attendance of sixty-five. We have preaching services every Sunday morning and evening with good interest. Each department is awake, and a good interest is manifested among the Saints, which causes rejoicing."

Holden Stake News

Grandview

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, February 10.—Christmas Eve, the pupils of the Grandview Sunday school presented "Wondrous night." The program was well rendered considering the fact that an epidemic of measles broke out a few days before, and a number of those taking part in the program were among the victims. A hasty rearrangement of the program was necessary. Everything taken into consideration, the program was a success. The amount of the Christmas offering here for the year was $128.

James Marse Dies

James Marse died at his home in Martin City, Missouri, December 26, being at the time of his death seventy-three years of age. The funeral service was held at the Saints' chapel at Grandview on the 28th. He is survived by his wife, Sister Clara Marse, two daughters, and three granddaughters. He was not a member of the church but faithfully attended Sunday school and was a defender of the restored gospel. Elder C. V. Hopkins was in charge of the service. Interment in the Quindaro cemetery, Kansas City, Kansas.

Stake Conference

A large number of Saints attended the stake conference which convened at Lees Summit February 2 and 3. They returned greatly strengthened and highly enthusiastic concerning the outcome of the work. Many expressed themselves as having a better understanding of "stewardships" as a result of President Smith's talk on Saturday afternoon.

During the Saturday evening program at the conference, Sister Thomas Cairnes contributed a solo, and Amelia Cairnes, Velma Gore, Melvin Martin, and Merrit Goddard, as members of the junior choir, a quartet. The junior choir also sang a number during the Sunday school hour Sunday morning.

Round Table Discussion

Sunday evening, February 3, a round table meeting in charge of Brother Hopkins was held at the church for the benefit of those not able to attend conference. During this meeting the members who attended conference arose and related those things which were of the most interest to them. Most of the Saints were impressed with the beautiful spirit of peace and enlightenment present throughout the conference. There was no doubt in the minds of those present that all received much benefit by attending conference.

Change in Stake Bishopric

The Saints regret the resignation of Brother C. J. Hunt as bishop to Holden Stake. While we will miss his friendly visits and fatherly advice, we welcome to our midst Brother A. B. Phillips who was chosen to fill the place made vacant by Brother Hunt's resignation. We also regret the resignations of Brother I. M. Ross as superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Sister Gladys Teeter as assistant chorister, and Sister Ticy Moler as stake recorder. The Saints here were pleased that our pastor was honored by being chosen as one of the high counselors of the stake.

Holden

Presiding Bishop Benjamin R. McGuire and Bishop A. B. Phillips were in Holden Friday, February 9, consulting and arranging with Bishop C. J. Hunt for the transfer of the work of the bishopric of the stake to Brother Phillips. Brother C. B. Hartshorn was also here looking after Holden Home affairs. Brother McGuire spoke to the Saints of the Home in the chapel while here.

Evangelist Richard Bullard, recently assigned to labor in the Holden Stake, preached both morning and evening at the church. He also spoke at the Home in the afternoon.

Priscilla Club Entertains

The Priscilla Club of the Department of Women gave the play, "A Southern Cinderella" at the Home auditorium Wednesday night. The cast included only members of the club. It was well rendered, some of the work done exhibiting exceptional ability in the line of dramatic art. The funds raised are to be used for benevolent work. The Priscilla Club is an organization of our young married women.

Home Sunday School

The Home Sunday school has sent to the Bishop over $60 as their Christmas offering. This indeed is a most commendable record. These Saints, though aged and infirm in body, are still hopeful and consecrated in spirit and eager to assist, as this splendid offering indicates.

Holden People Pleased With Appointment of Bishop

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, February 8.—Commenting upon the appointment of A. B. Phillips as bishop of Holden Stake, the Holden Progress says:

"Bishop Phillips comes to the stake from Boston, Massachusetts. The past two years he has been located at Independence, Missouri, giving his attention to special work and study for his church in Bible translations. He is not very widely known in the West, as his active ministerial work has been in the eastern part of the United States. He will be remembered by many of the Holden people by his special lectures in reply to an attack which was made upon his church and its doctrines about a year ago. His addresses were among the most scholarly ever heard in this community. The subject matter, so well handled, made them highly interesting, aside from the controversial nature. Many expressed the desire to hear him again. They will be gratified with the choice made by the stake conference, for it will place Bishop Phillips in Holden the greater part of his time."

Retiring Bishop of Holden Stake Tells of Work of Bishopric

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 12.—At the recent Holden stake conference held at Lees Summit, February 2 and 3, the resignation of Bishop C. J. Hunt as Bishop of Holden stake was accepted and the appointment of Bishop A. B. Phillips to succeed him was approved. The resignation of Bishop Hunt was tendered last August, but he was not released until the action of the stake conference was taken.

A Salutation

In part of the report of Bishop Hunt to the stake presidency and conference, he says:

"My acquaintance and association with you began July 15, 1915, the date of the stake organization; and since that time the calendar maker has added seven years, six months, and fifteen days to our lives. During my labors in the stake, you have exercised charity in my behalf; listened patiently to the word preached, been considerate in counsel, and responded liberally to urgent requests for funds to aid the church in its onward march and upward growth. I assure you that memory's door will often open to the pleasant experiences mutually enjoyed in sacred service. My work has been very closely associated with the stake presidency, and

I know them to be men of undeviating love for the cause of our blessed Lord, watchful and ready to give counsel for good, ministers who sympathize with the afflicted and unfortunate, rejoice with those who are blessed with health, temporal needs, and spiritual happiness. May prosperity attend them in their responsible labors.

Counselors

"On September 16, 1916, two months after organization of the stake, I recommended to the conference for approval Elders J. W. A. Bailey and Isaac M. Ross to be my counselors. My request was granted and they were ordained. Brother Bailey continued in that office until October 25, 1919, when he was released by request of the Council of the First Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, answering a seeming emergency call to do special missionary work in Kansas and other places. He was a faithful, capable, loyal counselor, an able, fearless exponent of the law, kind and considerate in court trials, whose association and labors were very beneficial in stake bishopric work.

"Brother Ross sold his farm soon after accepting stake bishopric labors and moved his family to Holden, devoting his entire time to church work. He has been a "minute man" in every sense of the word, always ready for duty, no task too hard or occupation too humble to faithfully fulfill. He has been benevolent, attentive, courageous in presenting the temporal law, fearless in court trials, yet kind and considerate. During my absence from the stake for months at a time, he has willingly and faithfully attended to all duties. Elders Ross and Bailey have been true counselors and fellow laborers in the Master's cause whose association has blessed and enriched my life.

Concluding Statement

"In concluding this summary, permit me to thank you for the hearty cooperation given during the years of humble performance of duty in the stake. Wishing you increased prosperity, I am sincerely, your brother and fellow servant in the gospel.

"C. J. HUNT."

Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 12.—Last week it was announced that the attendance at Independence churches had reached a high-water mark. Exact figures were not then known. Sacrament was served to a greater number in the combined churches than ever before, with the exception of General Conference. At the Central Church alone 2,016 individual trays were filled and all but a few were served.

Church Attendance

Attendance at the various churches was as follows: Central Church, 6,181; East Independence, 176; Enoch Hill, 516; Spring Branch, 228; Englewood, 167; Liberty Street, 1,040; South Side, 805; Walnut Park, 981, making a total of 10,094 for the day.

Prayer Meetings

At the Wednesday evening prayer meetings, February 6, in the groups, there was an attendance of 831. The problem in Independence is not to interest the congregations in attending services but to find places for them to meet.

R. V. Hopkins, assistant pastor of Zion, visited the young people's prayer meeting at South Side last Sunday. The attendance at this little church meeting was almost as great as that at the Central Church. A very spiritual meeting was had in which many young children took part and the Spirit of God was manifest.

The Twelve

Apostle J. Arthur Gillen has returned from Lamoni, Iowa, and is in Independence this week. He expects to leave shortly for Canada.

The meetings at Hilo, Hawaii, will soon be concluded by Apostle M. A. McConley, who will leave for Honolulu and then on to New Zealand.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards has returned from the Des Moines conference where he was the last week.

Basketball League

The undefeated S. R. S. team won their fifth straight game in the L. D. S. basketball league Saturday night by a 45-29 score from the Bennett Blues. The Second Independence team were easy victims for the fast-going Y. K. T. quintet. This victory puts the representatives of the Y. K. T. class, which was reorganized the first of the year with Mrs. Mansel Williams as instructor, in second place. Their nearest rival, the Bar-Gar team, has one more game to play and may be able to tie their score.

The standing of the teams follows:

Team	W	L	Pct.
S. R. S.	5	0	1.000
Y. K. T.	4	2	.667
Bar-Gar	3	2	.600
I. X. L.	2	3	.400
Walnut Pk.	2	3	.400
2d Indep.	1	4	.200
B. Blues	1	4	.200

The Bar-Gar class is giving a carnival in the dining hall, Tuesday night, to raise funds to purchase service sweaters for their team. Athletic events will be featured. Music will be furnished by the High School Athenian Orchestra.

The Independence L. D. S. boys go to Kansas City Thursday night, February 14, to meet the S. E. Presbyterian team.

Walnut Park

Bishopric day at Walnut Park was February 10. Bishop Benjamin R. McGuire preached at 11 o'clock, choosing from the Doctrine and Covenants his texts on the financial law, Bishops I. A. Smith and J. F. Keir assisting in the service. At 2.30 Brother Keir gave a suggestive talk on problems before us, preceding a round table in which the other members of the Presiding Bishopric and the stake bishopric assisted in bringing out how one becomes a steward, what constitutes an inheritance in Zion, the operating of storehouses, etc. In the evening Bishop I. A. Smith was the speaker.

Liberty Street

The revival meetings conducted by Evangelist Ammon White will be continued at least throughout this week. The attendance is remarkably good and increasing. Many non-members are becoming interested.

All meetings of groups thirteen, twenty-five, twenty-six, and thirty are postponed for the revival services, except the Sunday prayer meetings. There are two prayer meetings each Sunday at Liberty Street, one at eight o'clock Sunday morning for the young people and the other for the older Saints at 2.30 p. m. Both meetings were well attended Sunday, there being about fifty present at the young people's meeting which has just recently started.

Independence Music Club

Mrs. Wallace N. Robinson of Kansas City, Missouri, entertained for the Independence Music Club at her home in Janssen Place, Wednesday afternoon, February 6. In respect to the memory of Woodrow Wilson, the club stood while Chopin's D flat Major Prelude was played by Mrs. Thomason.

Mrs. Cora Lyman, president of the Missouri Federation of Music Clubs, talked on "Friends of American Music," a society for the development of American music which is being started in Kansas City. A Chopin program had been arranged by the committee. Two numbers were played by Solon Robinson, soloist, with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. Mrs. C. R. Smith read a paper on the life and works of Chopin. Mrs. John R. Green played three Chopin selections. Other numbers were furnished by Mrs. Minnetta Newton Isaacks, Miss Ada Griffice, and Mrs. Neal Thomason. Mrs. Robinson was assisted by Mrs. O. L. James, Mrs. James Neal Foster, Miss Anna Foster, Mrs. John Ihrke, Miss Louise Newton, and Miss Lillian Zimmermann.

Son of Bishop E. L. Kelley Married

David Emlin Kelley and Miss Mabel L. Curry of Chicago were married Wednesday afternoon, February 6, at the home of Mr. Kelley's parents, Bishop and Mrs. E. L. Kelley, Independence. The couple will make their home in Tulsa, Oklahoma, where Mr. Kelley is located in business.

Lamoni Electric Company

The Bishopric announces that the board of directors of the Lamoni Electric Company has approved a $50,000 bond issue. There are still some of these bonds to be sold.

Jessie Atkinson, a thirteen-year-old sister who has belonged to the church three years, writes that the Sunday school still exists at Breckenridge, Missouri, where she lives. The Saints are sometimes discouraged and feel that everything has gone wrong, but once in a while an elder from Cameron comes and revives them again.

There are only four families of Saints at Breckenridge, and some in the community are prejudiced; others who believe do not join for fear of unpopularity.

Sister Jessie is the only Latter Day Saint in the high school and has been asked to give a report on the Mormons. She has been praying for direction that she may be able to present the true situation before her class.

Brother Andrew Ruoff writes that although the Fourth Saint Joseph Branch, Saint Joseph, Missouri, was organized only last March, there are now about 40 members, and the work is progressing. Following four weeks' meetings held by R. D. Weaver, several were baptized and others are interested. Brother Ruoff declares it is the purpose of the branch to spread the gospel and push forward in the work.

LETTERS

Pledges Easily Obtained for Improvements at El Reno

EL RENO, OKLAHOMA, February 4.—Recently a very spiritual business meeting was held here. It was prefaced by some very earnest prayers. It is good when the Saints can transact important business under the spirit of love and unity. Among other items, the branch unanimously voted to purchase a Thomas communion service, also provided for a suitable sign for the church house. It required but five minutes to get pledges enough to cover the expense, which is excellent for the number of people.

El Reno received a pleasant visit from Brother F. E. Dillon, pastor of the Oklahoma City Branch. He was accompanied by his wife, a district worker for the Department of Women. While here she reorganized the work. Sister W. A. Connel was elected president; Sister W. A. Melner, associate; and Sister J. T. Smith, secretary. This organization will be a help in many ways to the work.

Sacramental service of February 3 was fully up to the standard, with room ahead to press forward. The service was peaceful and the time well occupied. Brother and Sister J. H. Norris, with their daughter Jessie and son Paul drove from Chickasha, Oklahoma, thirty-four miles, to attend sacramental services.

The young people here are musically inclined and are organizing an orchestra for church service. The branch appreciates this movement.

J. M. Terry was called recently to Oklahoma City to administer to a sick sister.

J. M. TERRY.

Stake President Acknowledges Holiday Greetings

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, January 12.—It is a little late, perhaps, for me to acknowledge the kindly holiday greeting which was forwarded by you from the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric.

While there are many so-called form and circular letters which come to us, this came to me with a different appeal, and I received it as a personal message from the brethren who are in charge of the great work of our Master. To me it was a message which revived my spirits and urged me forward in consequence of the love which it stimulated within me. I feel to renew my vow of consecration to make this year the best year of my life in service and devotion to the cause. . . . This is our intention, feeling assured that the Master rules and is acquainted with the secret thoughts of our hearts and knows our intentions and is the one who judges.

D. J. KRAHL.

Baptisms Result of Meetings at Clarkston

CLARKSTON, WASHINGTON, February 5.—The curious gospel lecture cards distributed from house to house, and the advertising in the local papers each day, brought out many who seldom hear preaching, to the four weeks' series of meetings just closed at Clarkston. Brother Eli Bronson, the Spokane missionary, assisted by the local priesthood, occupied from January 6 to February 3.

Surely Brother Bronson delivered some powerful sermons, and many can testify that, God being his helper, Brother

Bronson did much good for many souls. Even though only a few were baptized in comparison to the number who attended, yet much good seed was sown which will perhaps find lodgment and bear fruit later. Four were baptized.

Among others who attended very regularly was quite an aged couple. The gentleman was rather deaf and could hear only when one stood very close and talked loudly. Of course he could hear little of the sermon, but he said that it made him feel good to come. With what he could gather from his other senses and what his wife told him after they returned home, the gospel preached seemed good to him.

Many were convinced of the gospel, and many of the Saints were strengthened.

PETER F. KLAUS.

Davidson Young People Entertained in Country

DAVIDSON, OKLAHOMA, January 30.—The church here is still progressing. The building is now equipped with plenty of seats. The Saints are feeling enthusiastic.

The young people met recently for a little entertainment at the beautiful country home of Brother and Sister Zenos Renfroe. After games and amusements were indulged in, refreshments were served to about sixty. Most of these guests were members of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

The branch elected the following officers for the year: E. B. Stafford, president; J. F. Skinner, priest; J. Tom Skinner, teacher; Roy Skinner, deacon; and W. B. Burks, clerk.

MRS. ALICE SKINNER.

Missionary Sails for Hawaiian Islands

From a Letter to the First Presidency

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, January 29.—I was in Los Angeles to see Brother David J. Williams and wife off on their mission [Hawaii]. They seemed quite cheerful and courageous. I trust that the Lord will bless them in their new work. The ship sailed at noon Saturday.

I arrived at Sacramento this morning. Brother Budd has been holding meetings here since last Sunday. I will assist him from now until the time of the conference of the Northern District which will meet here, beginning next Sunday.

We have been having wonderful weather here—summer in the wintertime. The last few days we have been having a much needed rain. The farmers have been praying for this for a long time. Without doubt the crop prospects have been impaired materially.

D. T. WILLIAMS.

Says Radio Greatest of Modern Inventions

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 9.—Of all modern inventions the radio is the most marvelous. It is the most wonderful opportunity yet had to send the gospel broadcast, and thousands now listen to the message.

It is also a great comfort to those who are shut in by sickness and who would otherwise be deprived of the privilege of worshipping in the house of God.

This is the hastening time. Are we asleep when all these wonders are taking place and our minds filled only with frivolities? Our tables are covered with magazines but are there any church books or papers there?

Jesus Christ must have a prepared people and we must come up higher. The children of latter-day Israel must go forward or we will be left behind.

MRS. A. MCKENZIE.

Christmas Offering Books Close February 29

Sunday school superintendents and secretaries please notice: In accordance with our custom of past years the Christmas offering books will be closed at the end of the month of February. All funds intended for the 1923 Christmas offering should, therefore, be in our hands on or before February 29. It will not be sufficient to merely obtain a receipt from the local bishop or agent. Those received after that date will be included with the 1924 offering, credit for which will appear in the Blue Stepping Stones one year hence.

Immediately after the books are closed on March 1, we shall begin making up our report and hope to have the copy in the printer's hands in time so that he can publish the Blue Stepping Stones and send it out for distribution the last Sunday in March.

Yours truly,
BENJAMIN R. MCGUIRE, Presiding Bishop.

Centennial Year Book of Department of Women

There are a number of copies of the Centennial Year Book on hand at the Herald Publishing House. These books are, of course, very much out of date so far as instructions are concerned, but there are several articles in front of the book as well as the picture of Emma Hale Smith and the poem "The Elect Lady" by Vida E. Smith, which would make it desirable to anyone wishing a souvenir of the centennial of the church. Those desiring a copy may secure same by writing the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, inclosing five cents to cover cost of mailing.

GRACE MORRISON, Secretary.

Biblical Knowledge of the Average Boy and Girl

What the average American boy and girl does not know about the Bible has been revealed by a survey in the Missouri high schools, which was recently made public by Professor George R. Crissman of the State Teachers College.

The survey included one hundred students at the State Teachers' College and 1,800 high school students. These were given scientific tests adapted to different ages with the startling results as follows:

Sixteen per cent of the high school students neither knew where Christ was born nor the name of his mother. Sixty per cent knew not that Peter, James and John enjoyed the larger confidence of Jesus. Seventy per cent did not know what to call the Sermon on the Mount. Sixty per cent did not know what Christ said about loving one's neighbor. Twelve per cent did not know the first clause of the Lord's Prayer. Sixty-five per cent did not know the Golden Rule. Thirty-five per cent thought that the book of John was located very close to Revelation. In the following quotation from Lowell's "Irene," "No want of faith that chills with side-lone eye hath she; no jealousy, no 'Levite pride' that passeth by upon the other side," 80 per cent did not know what story is here referred to in the Bible.

The following are a few of the hundreds of humorous and pathetic examples of biblical ignorance:

- Forty per cent thought Paul "a book of the Bible."
- Twelve per cent thought Pilate "a book of the Bible."
- Twenty-five per cent thought Pilate "an author of the Bible."
- Twenty-five per cent thought James "a river."
- Forty-five per cent thought Galilee "a river."
- Seven per cent thought Agrippa "an apostle."
- Thirty per cent thought Jude "a king."
- Three per cent thought Herod "an apostle."
- Six per cent thought Mark "a king."
- Nine per cent thought Samaria "an author."
- Twelve per cent thought Peter "a king."
- Nine per cent thought Peter "a priest."
- Six per cent thought Revelation "a province."
- Six per cent thought Martha "a book of the Bible."
- Twenty-four per cent thought Allelulia "a blessing."
- Twelve per cent thought Allelulia "a loud noise."
- Nine per cent thought Amen "an applause."
- Fifty per cent thought Amen "a stop."
- Thirty-three per cent thought Centurion "a century."
- Fifteen per cent thought Centurion "the middle point."
- Nine per cent thought Elders "bushes."
- Thirty per cent thought Gethsemane "a city of Egypt."

- Twenty per cent thought immortality "death."
- Nine per cent thought immortality "breath."
- Twenty-five per cent thought resurrection "the building of the temple."
- Forty-five per cent thought Scriptures "quotations."
- Nine per cent thought tithes "things fastened together."
- Twenty-five per cent thought tithes "missionary money."
- "It is interesting to note," says Professor Crissman, "that nine per cent of the students defined sin as 'debts.' Could it be possible," he asks, "that the churches which recite the Lord's prayer using 'debts,' unwittingly teach this definition of sin?"

Professor Crissman had the support of eminent educators throughout the country and the approval of such societies as the National Survey Committee, the General Educational Board of the Religious Educational Association of America and the Research Committee of the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education.

The survey is of national scope in interest although carried on in the Missouri schools. It is a tremendous indictment of the religious educational methods of our churches. What is to be done about it?

Only such facts as those revealed will bring to the attention of the religious world the problems before it. The churches must face them. Latter Day Saint boys and girls were probably a part of those contributing to the results. Could such a test be given to the boys and girls in our own ranks and be passed with greater success? We fear to answer.

We must turn our eyes on ourselves and determine what is the matter. Can we give an adequate religious education to our children with one hour a week spent in Sunday school? The results of the survey are based on Biblical information. If these children cannot obtain a creditable degree of information in one hour of Sunday schooling what can they learn about right living in that time? How can they learn to interpret life religiously in half an hour study and half an hour ceremony a week?

More time must be given to our young people. One hour on Sunday is not sufficient. The public schools must eventually give part of their week-day to religious thought. The new generation must not be ignorant of life as revealed through religion. We cannot tolerate such results as have been forced upon us, yet the facts cannot be changed. It is our problem, and we alone must solve it.

Blue Pencil Notes

Oil seems to have lost its power to calm the troubled waters—at least in Washington.

No man who ever used hair oil can hope to be elected president of the United States this year: Such is our detestation of graft—when exposed; our abhorrence of grafters—when caught.

Unfortunately when one man goes bad he throws suspicion on all who may have been in any way associated with him. His misdeed breeds general suspicion and cynicism. Judas brought suspicion upon all the apostles.

Senator Fall has undermined the moral prestige of all Senators and Cabinet officers and has even disturbed the sleep of the dead. Sinclair and Doheny put all business men in a bad light. At least such is the reaction of the public mind.

There are two dangers in such a reaction. First, those of low grade honor conclude: "All men are grafters. It is a game that everyone plays. I will get mine while the game is yet good." Secondly, those who have a real passion for justice and honesty are likely to become cynical concerning the Government and determine to let it go to the dogs, since it appears determined to go that way, or with fiery zeal they may join the ranks of potential revolutionists. The effects of the recent revelations of graft and fraud in high places are bound to be far-reaching along the lines indicated.

But we must remember that blanket condemnation is not just. There are yet honest business men. There are yet honorable public officers. Both major parties have put crooks into office; and both parties have put incorruptible men into office—men like Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt.

Revolution would but turn one set of human beings out of office and put another set of human beings in. And the new set would quickly enough develop scoundrels and grafters as well as honorable men. We would then of necessity, after all the blood and turmoil, begin where we may begin now, and by orderly and lawful processes build up a citizenship from which might be drawn a force of government officers containing a maximum of high-minded men and women and a minimum of men and women with a price mark on their souls.

We have had but a revelation of small swindlers in high places with big opportunities. The grocer who cheats a few ounces on a sale of sugar, the farmer who slips a few bad eggs into a crate of "strictly fresh country eggs," the real estate man who gouges some one fifty dollars on a deal, the local politician who gets a few votes in return for favors, these all are but recruiting officers. They lift their hands in horror at Teapot Dome. But Teapot Dome is only their own affair on a big scale. They have swindled society according to their opportunities; others climbed a little higher and had bigger opportunities.

We should preserve such faith in the potential nobility of manhood as we can under existing circumstances. Christ died to save men. Men must be potentially worth while. We should preserve our faith in orderly and democratic government such as our fathers with God's help established.

We should reserve judgment and not condemn whole groups and classes because one Judas Iscariot was found in their number. We should obey the Doctrine and Covenants injunction, and without slavish adherence to party, endeavor to help put good men in office.

The man who by his own life, teaching, example, and influence, helps to develop a religious, God-fearing, industrious, and honest citizenry is doing, according to his ability and opportunity, all that he can to create a reservoir of social righteousness from which we may call reliable men to office. Some would begin at the top and tear down. Let us begin at the bottom and build up.

When the apostles came under suspicion because of the act of Judas, each immediately said, "Lord, is it I?" That is a good example. Let each man look first to his own integrity as his first contribution to a better commonwealth.

Morning Mist

By Elbert A. Smith

Through shining morning mists are seen
Dark blobs of evergreen;
While heavy shapes with rock besprent
Pillar the invisible firmament.
Pass two lovers from the skies
With lost Eden in their eyes.
Strange, distorted shapes in morning mist
Bespeak the impressionist.
Not by decade or by centennial
Works this Great Artist millennial;
But through all mornings, amethyst,
Back to the first great morning mist.
With virginal beauty unabated
This day, all Nature, recreated,
Thrust from gray chaos into form is seen—
While God works just behind the screen.

Greetings to the Kirtland Saints

By President Frederick M. Smith

The first experiment of its kind ever attempted by the church was tried February 3, 1924, at 6.30 p. m., when President Frederick M. Smith addressed the Kirtland Saints at Kirtland, Ohio, by radio, from Station K F I X, Independence, Missouri. The address was to have opened a series of meetings starting in the Kirtland Temple, and was to have been received in the auditorium on the loud speaker. The attempt was unsuccessful, in that the message was not caught by the loud speaker in the auditorium. Other receiving sets in the community, however, caught the message intermittently. A similar attempt will be made at another time when receiving conditions may be more favorable.

Because of the interesting historical value of the experiment in the annals of the church, we are printing the address of President Smith.

No method of thought transference has as yet been invented to excel that of speech in language.

The written word, its supplement, is the language of the spoken word. In the days before steam and electricity the dissemination of news and knowledge was by means of the itinerant lecturer or the carrying by swift runners and horses the printed or written speech.

The telegraph and the telephone, together with the rapid progress of railway transportation, permitted the broadcasting of news or the wide dissemination of knowledge over wide areas simultaneously by means of the printed word.

Effect of Radio on Educational Methods

To-day, because of the marvelous development of the radio, we stand at the threshold of a change in educational methods and of news dissemination, a change which may ultimately alter entirely the aspect and functioning of the daily newspapers. We enter a period when the lecturer, the learned man, the skillful announcer of news, will reach through the radio scores of thousands of listeners simultaneously, and more and more people will depend on their head phones and loud speakers for news as well as instruction.

It is not at all unlikely that the gospel preached by some able exponent of the Christian philosophy will yet be heard around the world instantaneously; and more than ever before there will exist a demand and opportunity for a universal language. The development of dependable relay methods and machinery hold large promise of experts in research and science and learning being able to deliver from their homes lectures which shall be listened to by students, also in their homes, in all lands at the same time.

An Experiment

To-night we of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are attempting an experiment which, if ultimately successful, will mark a distinct progress in our work. In the early thirties, shortly after the organization of this church in New York, the Latter Day Saints at Kirtland, Ohio, though comparatively few in number, began the erection of a temple. Because of the consecration, energy, and devotion of those few people, it was not many years before the building was completed and used, and to-day it stands as a worthy monument to the enterprise of those earnest church members. From its pulpit the leading men of the church in those days and since have proclaimed the gospel and taught the Saints the way of salvation and right living. But for their voices to be heard resounding from those sacred walls it was necessary for the men of the church to be there in person. If our experiment to-night is successful, for the first time in history the vibrations of the voice of the leader of the church, caught up by the marvelously operating microphone, in turn taken by amplified transformer, and valve, are sent out from the antenna of K F I X as a train of electrical waves, which in turn are caught up by the antenna stretching from the famous old church edifice at Kirtland, and by transformer and vacuum tube and amplifier and telephone again turned into sound waves which, emanating from the loud speaker, may fill the room in the temple with the modulations of the voice speaking in Independence. It is to be hoped we are successful to-night, as we must be eventually in any event, so that to-night shall begin what shall become a permanent institution by which programs shall be broadcast from K F I X, not alone for the benefit of Kirtland Temple Branch, but many others scattered throughout Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, and other near-by States. The short wave length assigned to us will permit us to do this without unduly interfering with other stations.

Greetings to Kirtland Saints

We send out into the ether our greetings to the Saints of Kirtland. We congratulate them upon their desire to keep abreast of the times, and to utilize the achievements of science and invention to keep more closely in touch with the headquarters of the church. We are glad to see this development, for as a people we stand for social reform in practical ways, which, if we are to demonstrate their feasibility, will demand rapid progress. This will demand unity of purpose and activity which perhaps may result only from careful and persistent educational efforts, efforts which must needs be directed more and more closely from the headquarters. Before us lies a wonderful opportunity. Our social philosophy is outstanding in its appeal and scope. Our task is the thorough Christianizing of society, a process which must extend ultimately to industry and business. To reach our goal, to achieve our purpose, to discharge our responsibilities as an organization, demands unity of thinking along reform lines, unity of action. That unity is attainable only by a consecration to the cause of Christ which will exalt our efforts above the possibility of discouragement by heavy odds, opposition, or indifference. May God strengthen us for our task, clear our brains for right thinking, fortify our souls against discouragements, and hearten us to the undertaking of a task above human endeavors alone.

We are anxious to learn what success we have had in our experiment, and ask that a wire be sent us to-night, if the Saints of Temple Branch have tuned in with success.

To the Saints of Kirtland, greetings and good night.

The Spirit of God in the Church

Sermon by Myron A. McConley at the General Conference, October 9, 1923, Independence, Missouri.

Saints and friends, I am indeed happy to have the privilege of standing before so many people to-night in defense of that which I am convinced is the truth, and as a premise upon which I may base my few remarks I will read from the Epistle of Paul to the church at Galatia:

“For ye are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye are Christ’s, then are ye Abraham’s seed, and heirs according to the promise.—Galatians 3: 26-29.

Paul, in writing to the church at Galatia, was writing to a people who had experienced the same spiritual manifestations that are among the people who are assembled here to-night. We have all been baptized—at least, I am assuming that the majority of this congregation is of the body of Christ represented by the church to-day—and by reason of that baptism we have been adopted as members of the family of God, becoming brethren of Christ and joint heirs with him in his Father’s kingdom.

I am glad that I have the privilege of being associated with what is called this great latter-day work, and as I listened to Brother Koshiway, our Indian missionary, and noted what he said about the Spirit which had come over him as he preached among the Indians and which he recognized when President Elbert A. Smith was speaking here to-day as being the same Spirit, I was made happy. And I recognized that it is as true to-day as it was in ancient times. Then there was neither Jew nor Greek. To-day there is neither white man nor Indian. There is neither American nor Australian. There is neither Chinese nor Japanese, but with those people who obey the gospel, national prejudice is erased, racial differences are blended, and we all become one as members of the family of God upon the earth.

It is customary to take a text, and if I may be permitted to do so at this juncture, I will select the statement of Christ found in the 3d chapter of John, 16th verse: “God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.”

God Is Still in Business

I am glad that God is still in business. I have attended important sessions with those who are members of this church, as brethren and sisters. I have listened to the testimonies borne, not only here but in meetings in the islands of the sea, in New Zealand and Australia, where they will testify that they know this work is true, testify regarding the things of God, that he has blessed them in healing their sick and intervening in various ways in their behalf when in trouble. I say I am glad that we are in this work, and there are no people on the face of the earth to-day who have more reason to appreciate the love of God than have we.

When the angel restored the priesthood on the 15th day of May, 1829, making it possible for men to go out again and authoritatively declare the gospel of Jesus Christ, offering the same promises which the disciples of old offered, the world was indeed reaching a day and a time when such a gospel was needed. I am satisfied that in establishing this church in these last days, God was not wanting to stir up an argument. He did not simply desire a new religious denomination, but he wished a people who would, by reason of their personal experiences, be able to testify that they knew Jesus was the Christ, and who, by reason of the change in life, that new birth, both of the water and of the Spirit, which they experienced in coming into the church, would be able to show to the world what Jesus Christ anciently stood for. I verily believe that God expects this church to-day to demonstrate to the world what Christian brotherhood really is.

Insight of World Leaders

While in Australia recently, I have tried to learn what was in the minds of the leading men of that country. I was so fortunate as to hear the administration speech of Stanley M. Bruce, Prime Minister of Australia, given in the town hall at Perth during the month of May. As he explained the fundamentals upon which Australia, or any other nation must build if they expect to stand, I recognized that though he might not comprehend the gospel, and may never have come in contact with our message, yet he had sufficient insight given him that he understood the truth, that righteousness is the only thing that will exalt a nation; and he stated to those people that if Australia were going to be permitted to take her place among the nations of the world, she must build upon the foundation of righteousness.

As we were coming across the country, in reading one of our American magazines I discovered a recent article from Woodrow Wilson, in the Atlantic Monthly, of August, 1923. He reviewed the situation which exists in the world to-day, and tried, by reason of his experience, to point out to the people a road of safety. He stated:

The sum of the whole matter is this, that our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually. It can be saved only by becoming permeated with the Spirit of Christ and being made free and happy by the practices which spring out of that spirit. Only thus can discontent be driven out and all shadows lifted from the road ahead.

And I can say Amen.

What the World Needs

As I came into Kansas City the middle of September, going through the railroad yards I saw thousands of cars. I saw this vast city, a sort of metropolis, a supply depot from a business standpoint for this section of the world, and recognized that there is just one thing and one thing only that Kansas City needs—and when we speak of Kansas City, it is the same no matter where one goes—and that is to have all this intelligence of man, represented by his creations for transportation, by the vast skyscrapers that make up the city, and all that which makes up our modern civilization, directed and permeated by the Spirit of God. When we have that, the millennium can start at any time.

When I left Independence to go to Australia in 1921, I did so with full faith and confidence in the fact that God was still in the church; that the Spirit of God would direct me in my ministry, inasmuch as I placed myself within the bounds of receiving direction; and I can say that by reason of my experiences there I came back strengthened in the faith and encouraged in the work. It matters not what some of you may have, so far as your viewpoint for the future is concerned, your speaker is happy to-night to state that he faces the future with hope and confidence. As I have been permitted to associate, in so far as our quorum activities have permitted, with some of the brethren of the ministry, and also those who are engaged in other lines but are members of the church, I have thought of what a splendid work there was lying before us. The hope has been strong in my heart that I may continue faithful in this work and that you may also continue faithful, so that for many years to come we may stand shoulder to shoulder in the accomplishment of the work that God has intrusted to our care.

Introduction of Gospel to Australia

A peculiar thing happened in the introduction of our work into Australia. It is doubtless known to those who are familiar with all the incidents of the history of the church, but I believe that it would be encouraging to this audience to cite a little bit regarding that situation.

In 1837 a young man by the name of C. W. Wandell was baptized into the church. Very shortly afterwards he was ordained an elder and sent into the mission field. At the time of the tragedy at Carthage, in 1844, this young man was in charge of the missionary work in the State of New York. He was recalled to Nauvoo and set to work in the historian's office, and while there he found out there were deliberate changes being made in the history of the church, so he turned his back on the church in disgust. He went down to Saint Louis, secured a position on a steamboat plying up and down the river, and finally secured a position on a boat going around the Horn to California. There, about 1851, he came in contact with the Brannon Colony which had sailed from New York in 1846 and settled in California.

Orson Pratt in California

Orson Pratt, you remember, was one of the original members of the Quorum of Twelve in the old church. He went out to California that year and was preaching rebaptism to all the Saints. If I have been correctly informed, Orson Pratt was a powerful speaker, and he succeeded in persuading Elder Wandell that the gospel was all right, and that everything would be lovely if he would just be rebaptized and go ahead. So he accepted rebaptism and was sent to Australia on a mission. As you all know, on the 29th of August, 1852, this same Orson Pratt was the spokesman in introducing what is commonly called "the celestial marriage revelation." They did not call it polygamy.

News of this finally reached Australia where Brother Wandell had baptized a number of people and was doing good work. He denied that the church stood for polygamy or believed anything of the kind. He had with him to prove his contention the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants. He had been personally associated with the old church for seven years, had listened to Joseph the Martyr preach, and knew what the church stood for in that day and time. He returned after about three years in the Australian mission and settled for a time in California.

In 1857 he was placed in charge of a wagon train going through from southern California to Utah, which reached southern Utah a few weeks after the Mountain Meadow massacre. After due investigation he continued his journey to Salt Lake City, but instead of reporting to the president of the church, he published a series of open letters to Brigham Young, accusing him of being implicated in that crime. Elder Wandell remained in Utah until 1862, and then for a time we lose track of him.

Unknown Member Chosen to Seventy

In a General Conference of the Reorganized Church in 1873, a revelation was received, section 117, given the 3d of March. In paragraph 8 we find that C. W. Wandell, together with Glaud Rodger and others, is called to the office of seventy. This revelation was accepted by the church, but they had no such man as C. W. Wandell in the Reorganization.

Alexander Smith went from that conference to the Pacific coast and found that the day after this revelation was accepted by the church in General Conference, C. W. Wandell had been baptized as a member of the Reorganization in San Francisco. He was accordingly ordained a seventy, and with Glaud Rodger, in October, 1873, set sail for Australia.

On the way the ship sprang a leak. You know God works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform. The boat had to put in at the South Sea Islands and stayed there for a few weeks being repaired. The brethren found Saints there who had been baptized under the elders of the old church. The church in Utah in the meantime had tried to introduce their new doctrines among them, but had not met with much favor, and these two brethren, during the few weeks they were there, organized the work and laid the foundation for what we to-day have as the South Sea Island Mission. They then continued to Australia, and on their arrival in Sydney Brother Wandell left Brother Rodger aboard the ship while he hunted up some of the old converts.

Twenty years had elapsed since Elder Wandell had been in that land. In the meantime the people in Australia had sent some of their own number over to Salt Lake City to find out whether the rumors coming from there were true, and when they found that polygamy was really being practiced they were so discouraged they gave up their membership in the church. One of these brethren, by the name of Ellis, had received evidence of the fact that the gospel was true, and when found by Brother Wandell he gladly accepted the message of the Reorganization. He took the elders in, gave them shelter, and became president of the first branch of the church in Sydney. With his own hands, and very largely with his own money, he built the first church we had in that land, now called the Balmain church, which has since been enlarged and is the leading church in that country. For many years Elder Ellis presided over that congregation.

Last Testimony of C. W. Wandell

Brother Wandell was not permitted to live very long after his arrival in Sydney. He died in the spring of 1875 in Saint Vincent's Hospital at Balmain. His remains were placed in the old Balmain cemetery. Before his death, he left as a heritage to the Australian mission his testimony, wherein he testified regarding the truthfulness of the gospel. He told regarding his experiences, for he knew that the sands of life were ebbing away, and it was only a short time until he should stand before his Maker. He testified that angels had sung for his comfort and that so far as he was concerned all was peaceful and serene, and he calmly waited the change which we call death. Remarkable as it may seem, to-day the grave of that first missionary of the Reorganized Church who died in a foreign land is the center of the district in the vast city of Sydney where our people reside. It lies just half way between the two churches we now have there.

He left his companion, Glaud Rodger, whose son resides here in Independence, alone as a missionary in that land, and as a result of the faithful work of that brother and others who succeeded him, the foundation was laid for the present work in Australia. You can go through that country to-day and meet old people who were baptized, some of them by Glaud Rodger, some by J. W. Gillen, some by Joseph Burton.

In those times when the elders visited, they found the pioneers going into the forest and blazing a trail for the settlements that followed, and they were excellent material. One couple had thirteen children, and practically all of these children lived to be grandparents. Fortunately for the church, to-day most of that increase are active members. As I have listened to the testimonies these people bear as to the evidence that came to them that the elders sent out were men of God, and that the message they carried was indeed divine, my heart has been caused to rejoice. I have felt it was indeed good to be a Saint of latter days. As I saw the great amount of work that one man or a few men could do, I realized that in this life we do not appreciate the opportunities that are before us. And I am satisfied that to-day if every member of the church were alive spiritually, if all were living up to their opportunities, if they kept themselves in the path of rectitude and right, kept themselves down in the depths of humility, actuated by the spirit of love, there is nothing on earth that would stop the progress of this work.

Influence of Members on Progress of Church

The worst enemy we have is self, and all that will keep this great work from progressing is those who are already in it. I felt ashamed for the white membership of this church to-night as we listened to the rebuke which was very kindly and very truthfully administered by our Indian brother when he spoke regarding the various things which he had heard, things of an unchristian character said by one brother to another since this conference was going on. I agreed with our brother when he said that he had oftentimes noted a spirit in the discussions with which he was not familiar, a spirit which was not working down there among the Indians. But he said that in some of the services and in some of the discussions he recognized that good Spirit which had been with him. What an example that is for the children of Ephraim to set!

As I traveled through the Australian mission I was glad sometimes that they were so far away. God knows where that land is, and as the people seek to apply the gospel of Jesus Christ in their lives, they are made happy and contented, but they have a goal toward which they look with fond appreciation. They look forward to the time when they, or perhaps if they themselves are not permitted to be there, their posterity, will be in Zion. They look for the time to be realized when the church will have reached her goal.

Now, I do not wish to be misunderstood. I do not want the people here in this vast assembly to-night to get the idea that I do not believe there is any Christian brotherhood. Thank God, there is. Before I went out to Australia, I went over fifteen of our middle-western States, visited many branches and districts, and attended eleven reunions. In all the places where I went I found the Spirit of God was working among our people, and though there were not so many active in the work and seeking to push it forward as I would like to have seen, yet there were everywhere the faithful few who were standing for principle and seeking to push forward the work of God. I am satisfied, as I have circulated among our people here, that there is a saving grace among us. There is at least that degree of brotherhood among us which will eventually be developed into that full and more complete brotherhood if we will just permit Jesus Christ's Spirit to work in our hearts.

Spirit of Lawlessness

I remember that James, in writing to the church in apostolic ages regarding the people in that day and time, and the means whereby they might come to God, states in the fourth chapter of his epistle, starting with the seventh verse:

Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the Devil, and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double-minded.

Never yet have I seen this statement of the ancient apostle applied but what God has carried out his part of the program. I am satisfied that to-day, to a certain extent, the same spirit that is in the world is in the church. The same spirit which our jurists tell us is such a menace to our civilization here in the United States, the disregard for law and order, the desire for mob law, I am certain that to a degree the same spirit has come into the church. And to-day we need to humble ourselves and submit to the influences of the Spirit of God in our hearts.

As far as I am concerned, it is not a question of who's who or who's the biggest. If God Almighty wants me to work as a deacon in this church, I am ready and willing to start in and work there. If he wants me as a teacher or as a priest, then there's where I want to be; and I might say that when, through the endowment of the Spirit of God, the knowledge came to me in the fall of 1918, while I was laboring in the Hawaiian mission, that the time was not far distant when I would be called to occupy in the Quorum of Twelve, it made me sick. The dread of the responsibility which would attach to that office was such that I was sick for a week, but during the year of 1919, gradually a spirit of reconciliation came over me, so that on returning to the General Conference of 1920, I came back feeling able to say, "Here I am, Lord. Use me. If the time has come when you want me to work in the Quorum of Twelve, recognizing my limitations and my many imperfections, I will move out the best I can, and I will seek to do that work." And I can say that while I have not turned the world upside down, yet as I have gone out and tried to do my work, God has blessed my efforts, and I am satisfied to-night that God is just as much in this church now as he ever was since its beginning in 1830.

I remember in 1915, some of my more experienced brethren thought the church was going to hell. I didn't feel that way. I knew that there was a mission in hell for the church, and that Christ had said that the gates of hell should not prevail against his ministry, but so far as the church itself making hell its headquarters, I didn't believe it then, and I don't believe it now.

In 1919 I was in the Hawaiian Islands on a mission during the time of the General Conference. I am not going to relate in detail the experience I had, but the Lord gave me to understand by his Spirit that I need not worry about what was going on at Lamoni; that he would attend to that. What he wanted me to do was to attend to my work there in Hawaii. I learned from my spiritual experience there—and I trust I shall never forget—that if I would do the work intrusted to my care, it would keep me so busy I would not have time to worry about the work I thought my brother had not done. I am satisfied if we could stand shoulder to shoulder, and every one of us go out and attend to the work of our office and calling, begin to have such a love for souls, such a desire to see this work move forward that we would make the sacrifice, no matter what that might be, to make it possible for us to go out, we would be so happy we would be contented. We would be so busy with the problems which would arise from the new converts that we missionaries would not be worrying so much about what the pastors were doing, and just what methods they had adopted to elect their Sunday school superintendent, and whether the pastor should appoint him or the congregation choose him. We would leave that to the high priests, and those who were placed in the church to take care of that particular line of work, and we would be out trying to gather sheaves into the garner.

The Purpose of the Church

As I have thought of the program that this church presents to the world, and have sensed in reading, in traveling here and there, listening not only to what our own people's experiences are, but to the statements of the ministers of other churches, to the remarks made from time to time and published by those who are the leading men, not only in one country but in other lands, I have recognized that the gospel is indeed the power of God unto salvation. It is the only thing that will solve the problems confronting the world to-day. And I feel that what little talent I have could not be better placed than upon the altar of sacrifice in promulgating this work.

You will remember the program of the church stated in a few words by President F. M. Smith is "Social reform by individual regeneration." I guess none of us will quibble about that. We all agree that this world to-day is neither any better nor any worse than the people that make it up, and the only way we are going to improve it is by individual regeneration under the Spirit of God which comes through obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ. We recognize that love, as stated in the program, must become the dynamic, controlling power, the moving force in the lives of all individuals. Justice must be the basis of social relationship. Upon no other foundation can Zion be built. And it is my task and yours, as stated in this program, to organize these men and women who have thus been taught, who have subscribed their willingness to follow this program, into the kingdom of God. I am glad to be engaged in that work.

Benefits of the Conference

Coming back to this conference, knowing many of the needs of the work, sensing at least to a degree the great problems that confront us, and feeling that we should be working with sincerity of purpose and humility of heart toward their solution, I have regretted to see how we will waste our time on matters not so important. I hope that all who have come to this conference may, by reason of their experiences here, go back to their home districts and encourage the Saints. It has been my experience that the law stated by Paul is indeed true, that what we sow we reap. I have gone among the Saints and have sought to build them up in the faith. I have sought to testify to them that the gospel is indeed true, that the promises of God can be depended upon, that they can anchor to these promises and know that no matter what comes or goes the promises of God will stand sure and be fulfilled. And as I have thus sought in my weak way to help others, my own faith has been strengthened. As I have tried to have love for my brethren, and instead of seeing their weaknesses and their failures I have tried to look upon them all as potential sons and daughters of God, my heart has been enlarged. I have appreciated the good that there is in all men, even those not members of our own church, and there has come back to me that fraternal tie which Christ says should be a testimony of the truthfulness of this work.

We have been in session a long time to-day. We are going to have a long session to-morrow. We are not going to detain you further at this time except to call attention to the fact that in the 13th chapter of John, Christ said, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another." You will remember John said regarding his experience, "We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren," and I hope that anything which may have been said thus far in this conference which might have disturbed the love that we should have for one another may be forgotten, and that from now on during the time that this conference is in session, it will be the sin-

EDUCATIONAL

PART XVI

(Should the church be satisfied with one hour a week in which to influence the child religiously? Should the church establish a three-hour Sunday school? In some communities the public schools are allowing children part of the regular school day in which to receive religious instruction by the church. A. Max Carmichael, superintendent of the Department of Religious Education, tells in the accompanying article why the religious interpretation of life is necessary to the child. A better understanding of the problems of the child may lead public opinion to demand greater consideration for the child.)

The Religious Interpretation of Science and History

By A. Max Carmichael

The ordinary young child is probably more appreciative of scientific facts than he is of historical ones. In fact, the child has not much of a historical cere desire and earnest effort of every man and woman here to exemplify the spirit of Christian love which should exist among us.

If we will do that, God will be pleased with our meeting together, and the missionaries of this church will be able to go out to the world having a more united front than they have had for many years. They will be able to go out with a faith and assurance that many of them have not been able to carry with them in the recent past, and all of us will feel that this conference, though in its beginning it was rather stormy, has indeed been a blessing to us all. Can we each one work toward that end? It is going to be my sincere desire, and there is going to be an earnest effort on my part to do that, and if all will do likewise I am satisfied that we will, though we are not able to see eye to eye, be blessed by the influence of God's Spirit, so that we will be able to arrive at common ground. And while we do disagree, let us hope these disagreements will be held in the spirit of love, and we will be able to work side by side in spite of the fact that we have not seen exactly alike in all things, until finally, by reason of our ripened experience, we will mount the spiritual heights that it is our privilege to climb, and we will be able to arrive more nearly at the truth. May God help us all to work to that end, is my prayer.

sense until he reaches his tenth year. There is absolutely no reason for telling the Bible stories chronologically up until the child is ten or twelve years of age. There is no reason for telling the stories of the life of Christ chronologically. Up to his sixth year, the child knows what this morning is as contrasted with this afternoon. He then begins to know that Monday is wash day, Wednesday is club day or prayer-meeting night, and Saturday is bath day. But he does not have any idea of how long a month is. He has no historical sense.

Children Interested in Science

Contrasted with that is the boy's interest in science. He is interested in the sun, moon, and stars, and is interested in flowers, trees, and bugs. He is interested in these things very early in life. These things in nature for which the child has such interest have not been having the religious interpretation for the child that they should. Nature or science in the past has not been receiving its religious interpretation.

Yet it is through science or nature that the child sees God most in his young days, perhaps with the exception of the family life. Probably fatherhood and motherhood are the first and greatest impressions of Godhood. But soon the child begins to conceive God as something over and beyond his father. The child begins to question you grotesquely about God. The ordinary child, if you ask him to draw a picture of God, will assume to be smart enough to draw him, or he thinks he can do it. It is then that nature offers the religious tutor the greatest opportunity with which to give the child an enlarged idea of God.

Teaching Religion

How many mothers actually take their children out and show them different kinds of trees, birds, and flowers? How many children five years of age know the difference between the robin and the bluebird? How many know the difference between a squirrel and a rabbit? Do you know the difference between the trees on our farms and streets? I believe fifty per cent of our children do not know the difference between an elm and a box elder. Yet more religion can be taught in this way than in many other ways. There is so much poetry about us, and yet we spend so much time with prose that we become so prosaic as to lose our poetic spirituality. I heard a mother at a reunion at Lamoni some years ago telling of her experiences in taking her children out and actually showing them the birds and trees. She there gave expression to the joy that she received in so doing.

Now it seems to me that I hear some one say,

"What has that to do with religion?" Let me say that nature offers the greatest foundation for a belief in God, outside of the family life, that one can give.

It is through nature that we expect to tell the truths of reproduction. A bird house built in the yard will become the home of the bird in which to lay eggs. Those eggs will hatch; then we can tell our children about them. We can use nature in teaching the great truths of reproductive life. It is in the things we see around us that we can find God.

Song number 145 in the Saints' Hymnal is an interesting example of religious pedagogy. That song is an evaluation of nature religiously, which you will see if you will read it. It attempts to put God into the planting of seed and into the growing grain. That is what we want done. The ordinary public school takes the child clear through the study of the flower without any mention of the divine in it. But somebody should put the divine in the formation of this flower. It is not being done even by the church. Nobody in the church school ever takes that flower and finds out how God can be in it. It is the task of the church school, so far not sufficiently recognized by the church, to give children a religious interpretation of nature.

Religious Interpretation of Science

So far as science is concerned as a study, it is just merely an attempt to classify knowledge. Scientific books necessarily discuss theories or hypotheses about these facts. These theories or hypotheses are simply the conceptions of men's explanation of these facts. They may or may not be true. As for me, I do not care what facts scientific men find out. It does not make any difference to me what their hypotheses are or what their theories are. I will take any fact they find out and give it a religious interpretation. Religion and science are not in the same field. Religion is an interpretation of the truth discovered by science. They are not the same thing: they are not in opposition to each other. They cannot be any more than electricity and food. As Harry Emerson Fosdick intimates, "When men have discovered how to make gas, the question then comes, What are they going to do about it?" The first is a problem of the scientist, the second a problem of the priest and prophet.

The ordinary child says, "I am going out to work for God." He does not seem to have the idea that doing something well, as being a farmer by applying the laws of science, for instance, is working with God and for God. Somehow he gets the idea that preaching is the only thing he can do and be working for God. Here, too, he gets the idea too often that he must preach without applying consciously any of the well-known truths of pedagogical science. In this idea he is like a good many mothers who are chairmen of committees, presidents of mothers' clubs, etc., who forget all about the question of rearing children, and who justify their course on the grounds of social service.

Life Interpreted in History

In history we also consider the interpretation of life. History differs from science as ordinarily conceived in that science concerns itself with our environment to-day, while history concerns itself with man's relation to his environment in the past.

Stories of human experiences of the past! How many children get good stories? How many children hear stories at home? Father has one old rusty story that he tells over and over and over again. The only consoling fact is that the child enjoys hearing the same story again and again. That is father's salvation. He can tell the same story over and over and still please his child. But, as I said some time ago, father is usually much more interested in learning to play hand ball or in gold than he is in telling stories to Johnnie.

I am asked to talk to Sunday schools wherever I go. Then I find out how few are the stories I know, stories of the great men of the past, stories of vital human experience. The Bible stories will live eternally, largely because of two reasons: first, they have vital and common human experience within them; second, they interpret these experiences in a religious way. These are the two attributes of the Bible stories that will make them live forever. The ordinary person cannot take the story of Columbus discovering America and give it a religious interpretation or significance. It certainly can and ought to be given such significance in its telling. Our school histories do not do so. Our church schools and our homes must do so, then. Some people disagree with Lucy Smith's stories of the Seer, but at least she had enough of the spirit of the prophet in her to give these stories a bit of religious significance.

I do know how it helps the child to have him hear human experiences related with their religious significance. I can remember very well sitting by and listening to my father and my uncle telling the experiences of their boyhood up in the mountains. They did not give these experiences a religious significance always. In contrast with them, there was a man who used to come to our house and relate his experiences with this religious significance. I would get up to him just as close as possible while he was relating these experiences. What a wonderful lot of good I received! In every story he told, he was just full of them. God was there. Some of us may have thought that he perhaps let his imagination run away with him; but at least he did interpret his own experiences as if God were there. He certainly could tell every story as if God were present. Whether He was or not, at least the story-teller put into those stories that religious feeling that made its appeal and had its influence upon my life. These are just some of the things of which I would like to see our people do more.

CHAPTER XVII

Science and History

1. Define (a) science; (b) history.
2. What is meant by religious interpretation of life?
3. What is the value of teaching science and history with religious interpretation?
4. What type of history should be given to children before the age of six? How may they be introduced to actual history?
5. How may the child's curiosity and interest for all things be utilized to cultivate a scientific attitude towards the world?
6. How should mathematics be taught?
7. How can knowledge of other countries be taught?
8. How may the child be introduced to the various industries at an early age?
9. How should the child be instructed about the origin of life?
10. At what age do you think the child should enter school? Why?

The custodians of religion have depended upon divine authority for their claim of exclusive administration. Protestantism has generally substituted for the authority of the Catholic Church the authority of its own creeds and fundamentally the authority of the Bible, says Doctor Gains Glenn Atkins. We as a church are unique in that we claim divine authority directly from God through the restoration of the gospel in the latter days.

Women who take all phases of their lives seriously, with thought, self-discipline, and prayer, may presently find themselves the fashion. Human progress appears to move in a sort of rising circle. Perhaps old-fashioned fidelity will come in again some day.—Kathleen Norris, famous American story writer.

LETTERS

Missionary Has Hopeful Outlook for Year's Work

From a Letter to the First Presidency and Twelve

BRINTON, MICHIGAN, February 4.—In the past week I have been holding services in the schoolhouse with good attendance, I have also visited from house to house and left tracts for their investigation. I think I will close the meetings now and return in the spring when the weather is warm. The Saints here are expecting to tear down their old church and rebuild in the spring. It is not a very inviting place to go into (the church they have now), and they think by adding three or four hundred dollars they can put up a very neat building.

My hope is brighter every day, and I am enjoying the sweet Spirit of the Master in my labors and am looking forward to a year of prosperity. If we can all labor together as we were united in that pentecostal shower that was bestowed upon us in the late General Conference, our work shall go forward with greater success than ever before. At that time a mutual chord was struck, and we could all truthfully sing, "Blest be the tie that binds." It is my purpose and faith to go forward the coming season and exercise all the talent and intelligence that God has given me for the advancement of his work, and I know that if I follow the instructions given in the three standard books of the church my success is assured even before I begin the work before me, for God forsaketh not his Saints. If we continue in his doctrine, we shall save both ourselves and them that hear us.

S. T. PENDLETON.

Patriarch F. G. Pitt in Florida

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

HARVEY, FLORIDA, February 1.—I was pleased to receive your letter and appreciate your kind wishes in my behalf. Am glad to say I think I am improving slowly, so I am hopeful.

We came to this beauty spot in Florida a week ago and expect to remain until we get ready to return home. I think you are acquainted with Mr. Harvey. He said you and Sister Smith were here at one time.

We attended church service in the schoolhouse here last Sunday and assisted in the services, which gave me no little pleasure. I am to occupy next Sunday, so it is possible I shall be able to get the gospel before the people before we leave. Their regular minister preaches every other Sunday. This will enable me to fill in once every two weeks.

The people here seem to be of a very nice class, and we both feel very much at home already. Sister Pitt has been telling the gospel to the people with whom we are making our home, and we sing our hymns to them. They seem to appreciate all we are able to give them. So perhaps our coming here will result in good. We hope so at least.

The weather here is ideal, about seventy every day at noon. No frost here this winter. Wish you could be with us to enjoy a rest and perhaps fish a little in the beautiful lake opposite our front door.

Have received several kind letters from Saints in Kirtland urging us to be with them next summer. I trust my health will permit. I cannot think that my work is quite finished yet.

Hope all is well in Zion. Sister Pitt joins with me in kind regards.

F. G. PITT.

English Missionary Enjoys Fine Spirit

From a Letter to the First Presidency

LONDON, ENGLAND, January 1, 1924.—This month we have the pleasure of reporting our work at Sutton-in-Ashfield. When we went to Sutton, we were pleased at the conditions we found there. It is rather a small branch, of about forty-four members, but we could depend upon finding at least forty of those members present at each night's preaching service. Their enthusiasm surely made our meetings successful. Every night the seats were all taken, and many of the Saints had to sit on benches around the sides of the room. We do not believe we have felt better or been more blessed in any of our labor over here than we experienced at Sutton.

Boy Scout Work

We found Brother George V. Willis, the president of the branch, to be a humble, whole-hearted man, and one who is forging ahead, too, in the business world as a successful contractor. He is an enthusiastic scoutmaster and organizer, and to this we attribute most of the success of their splendid Sunday school which meets both morning and afternoon each Sunday. They have an enrollment of one hundred twenty, with an average attendance of ninety, and it was an eye-opener to us to find a school over here with such a big attendance, for almost everywhere we have been we have found that if they have an attendance of about twenty the Saints thought they had a good school. Sister Baldwin attempted to help them in Sunday school work, and each Sunday we were there she occupied the hour in the morning in talking to the children. She also did blackboard work at two of the afternoon sessions.

There were four baptized as a result of our work, and on the Sunday we left five others gave their names for baptism. No doubt Brother Willis will attend to these baptisms.

Apostles at Saint Leonard's

Brethren Curtis and Hanson are at Saint Leonard's, and we came here to spend Christmas. We spent Christmas last year and the year before in Wales, so this was our first Christmas at Saint Leonard's. We enjoyed the association of the brethren very much. But we are now ready to go back to work.

We wish you a Happy New Year and trust this year may bring about a greater degree of peace and harmony in the church.

RICHARD BALDWIN.

Gospel Satisfies Longing of Nonmember

Extract From a Letter to President E. A. Smith

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK, December 13, 1923.—I find myself kept busy because there are so many real hungry souls anxious to hear the truth, as it was taught of old, and who are asking for visits to their homes. I am at present engaged in preaching on Sunday and visiting through the week. Only last Tuesday I sat and talked to members who live miles from the church, and when I was through one of the sisters said, "Do tell that all over again. It surely is food for my soul and I do want to be acquainted with it more fully."

In calling upon a nonmember and talking for nearly three hours, my soul was made glad when the lady said she had been watching the life of one of our sisters, and it was such a beautiful and consistent life that she desired to become acquainted with that which made for such a beautiful character. It was a pleasure to present the beautiful message of Jesus Christ. After our conversation the remark made was, "My soul is satisfied. I have found that which I have longed for for years."

My prayer is that more of our Saints will consecrate themselves to the work of God that others may be lead to remark as this woman did.

Special Meetings Held at Chico

CHICO, CALIFORNIA, January 28.—Apostle R. S. Budd and Elder E. B. Hull were the speakers at the church in a one week's series of special meetings. Our building was well filled with members and friends every night. The choir, under the leadership of Sister S. E. Boydston, did their part to make the meetings a success.

This was Brother Budd's first visit to Chico. He made many friends who were all sorry when he had to leave for Sacramento, California, where the district conference is to be held February 1 to 3.

At the January meeting, Elder H. A. Hintz was selected as branch president; Brother A. W. Bohall, Sunday school superintendent; and Lura York, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

E. B. HULL.

Small Branch Builds Fine New Church

GUELPH, ONTARIO, February 5.—The work was opened up here by Elder S. G. St. John, about six years ago, and organized five years ago last July by R. C. Russell, then of the Quorum of Twelve. The enrollment was about fifty and the Saints worshiped in a small hall, originally a meat market.

Being dissatisfied with their quarters they decided to build a church. A lot was secured in a good part of the city, sufficient money raised to pay for it, and a building 26 by 46, with cobblestone basement and cement top, was started.

The local Saints worked hard in their spare time and did all the work of erection. It took about two years and three months to build it. Practically every evening, Saturday afternoons, and every holiday were put to good use by the local Saints. It is not necessary to say anything of the sacrifices made by them, although they were many, both in work and in money. The auditorium drive was on at the time, too.

Church About Paid For

The building and lot cost about $4,400, which debt has since been reduced to $800. The Saints of Toronto, London, and Owen Sound Districts supplied Guelph with about $1,000, which was thankfully received. The building is very commodious, and said by some visitors to be the nicest little church they ever saw. The people of the city wonder how such a small congregation ever accomplished it. The objective for 1924 is to pay $600 and the interest on the remaining debt.

The Saints are making preparations for the district conference which convenes about July 14. The spiritual condition of the branch is good, yet there is room for improvement. A number of fine young people are found here, some of whom are developing very fast in the work and will make their mark in the church.

Apostle J. A. Gillen of the Quorum of Twelve is in this district and Guelph is expecting a call from him before he leaves this section. The Saints also look forward to the time when it can be arranged for the district president to spend his entire time in church work, for he is surely needed.

KING COOPER.

Elder Calvin Rich, writing to the First Presidency from Stonington, Maine, says in all his twenty-six years in the ministry he has not known a better outlook than now.

Plymouth Has Junior Department of Recreation and Expression

PLYMOUTH, MASSACHUSETTS, February 9.—Starting with an intermediate class of three boys and one girl, Plymouth planned a junior department of Recreation and Expression. They spend a half hour in study, supplementing the Sunday school lessons; then a social hour follows. A few visitors, averaging in numbers from ten to twelve, were had each evening.

Club Organized

A club was organized, choosing for its name "The Keystone Club," with a motto, "Be prepared." It has become quite customary for this club to meet at the Bungalow on Sunday afternoon to talk over plans, practice special songs for the evening service, then go to church together in the evening. A special effort is being made to adapt the sermon of the evening to the needs of these young people. Several of the nonmembers also attend the prayer meeting on Thursday.

The Keystone Club gave a musical entertainment and debate at the January social. They are now busy planning a valentine party for February 12.

The regular services here are quite well attended. The Christmas program was apparently enjoyed by all.

Salvaging Party

One Sunday, the boys with their leader, Alma Nickerson, tried to drive the "flivver" along Plymouth Beach and succeeded in finding two power boats washed ashore, which they thought might be worth salvaging. So they planned on Saturday, February 2, weather permitting, to go over after them. All the girls belong to the local Girl Scouts and they wanted to go, too. It being an ideal day, warm and absolutely no wind, a party of eighteen started out about 11 a. m. with two dories and the "flivver."

The boats were raised but were found worthless. About two o'clock fires were built and a large pot of baked beans, together with sandwiches, etc., was soon disposed of. The tide was out, and the afternoon was spent digging sea clams and exploring the beach, riding up and down in the Ford. About dusk the party returned home tired and happy.

Sunday afternoon they all gathered as usual at the Bungalow, and sea-clam chowder was served. Afterward they all marched to the church.

Business Meeting

Business meetings of all the departments were held in January, and practically all the former officers were sustained, with the exception of Sister Giovanetti, who resigned from active work to welcome a baby son, born January 13. Sister Doris has been a very active and dearly beloved worker in the branch and all of the departments. The Saints are rejoicing with her in her new happiness, though they miss her in the offices she has occupied so faithfully and well.

Elder James W. Heap preached on January 27, and Plymouth is looking forward now to having Elder Thompson here during a part of the coming weeks.

Brother Jay Hawkins of Eros, Louisiana, writes that he has had many blessings during the past year which he can never forget. He testifies that God never comes short of his promises when we do the things commanded of us. Life has brought to him many trials, but with the help of God and the prayers of the Saints he has been able to continue and to forsake the ways of the world.

Northern California District Conference Held at Sacramento

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, February 11.—The regular semi-annual conference of the Northern California District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints convened at the Saints' Chapel, Sacramento, California, February 1, 2, and 3.

Department of Recreation and Expression

On Friday, February 1, at 10 a. m. the Department of Recreation and Expression held forth with W. H. Dawson, field worker, in charge and Miss Cora Smith, of Tulare, acting as secretary. About eighty-five were present. After the usual business, a half hour was devoted to short talks by the following: Mrs. E. B. Hull, Elder E. B. Hull, Elder C. W. Hawkins, Elder George H. Wixom, Apostle D. T. Williams, and District President J. D. White.

Sunday School

Sunday School Department convened at 2 p. m. with Superintendent J. T. Smith, jr., of Tulare, in charge, Miss Leila Dameron, of Tulare, acting as secretary until the arrival of Secretary Lizzie Day, of Oakland. After the usual business, there were problem talks by the superintendents of the various Sunday schools.

Entertainment Given

Friday evening a joint entertainment program was given. The church was crowded with children and adults, there being two hundred sixty-four present. The program was pronounced the best ever given in the district. Much credit is due Sister Birdie Clark and Brother C. E. Ball, both of Sacramento, for securing the talent responding. Most of the numbers were by prominent Sacramento people. W. H. Dawson presided.

Business Session Opens

Saturday, February 2, at 10 o'clock, the business session of the conference opened, District President J. D. White in charge. By unanimous concurrence, Apostles Roy S. Budd and D. T. Williams constituted the presidency of the conference together with the district president.

Addresses at the Conference

Apostles Williams and Budd were called upon for fifteen minute addresses. The following are excerpts from Brother Williams's remarks: "Do we appreciate the responsibility that rests upon us? In the place we occupy, there is our responsibility. Make ourselves efficient. He who knows how to take advantage of time knows how to take advantage of life. Recognize the value of time. Time and talent—we have these two things either to use or abuse."

Brother Budd spoke in part saying: "This church is built on the foundation of revelation from God. We are equal as individuals but different in talents. We are a theocratic democracy."

Brother E. B. Hull spoke briefly on "Interest and enthusiasm." Elder George Wixom spoke on the "Value of time." Elder C. W. Hawkins talked a few minutes regarding "Responsibility."

Reports Submitted

Sister Ruth Clegg, district superintendent of the Department of Women, Nina L. Davison, district historian, and Birdie Clark, district chorister, reported on work done since being elected at last conference. The secretary, Cecil Hawley, stated that the locals had registered one hundred per cent in the matter of reporting to the district secretary.

District President J. D. White gave a lengthy and instructive verbal report, calling attention to the improvement of all the branches in the district in the way of new buildings, church building repairs, and remodeling; also he called attention to the fact that pastors or branch presidents were distributing the burden rather than overburdening one or two. Attention was called to the prospective improvements of the reunion grounds.

Alice M. Smith Speaks

Alice M. Smith, daughter of the President of the church, made a few fitting remarks in response to her introduction by Brother White.

Ordinations

Provision was made for the ordination of six priests, and recommendation was made for the ordination of one elder. The dispatch with which the business sessions were conducted was commendable.

Cantata Presented

The cantata, "Olivet to Calvary," was given on Saturday evening under the direction of Sister Birdie Clark, district chorister, with Miss Ella Knox at the piano. A number of prominent singers of Sacramento assisted in the solo and chorus work. The choir included singers from all choirs in the district. Sister Alice Smith and Sister E. B. Hull were also among the singers. The church was crowded with adults, over twenty-five persons being turned away from the doors for lack of room. Many complimentary remarks were heard regarding the excellent rendition of the cantata, for the fine attacks, shading chorus, and solo work.

Broadcast Speeches

On Friday at 6 p. m. Apostle Roy S. Budd spoke for fifteen minutes on "The Indians, their customs and traditions," from the radio broadcasting station of Sacramento, at Kimball-Upson Company.

Saturday at 6 p. m. Apostle D. T. Williams spoke from the same place on "European conditions, as observed on a recent visit." Several good reports were received from friends and members concerning these talks.

Good Publicity Obtained

Much credit is due Sister Hazel Blohm, the Sacramento publicity agent, for securing so many splendid write-ups in the local papers. She reports that the local papers were very generous with their space, using all write-ups sent in, daily, of the various services, etc. It was through her efforts that the radio program was arranged. At first the manager agreed to allow only five minutes each to the speakers, but when she introduced Brother Williams he talked so graciously and the subjects offered were so acceptable that the gentleman gladly said they could have fifteen minutes each evening. It was reported later that he evidently was well pleased, as he announced the speaker and the church and location before and after the speech. He further agreed to allow Brother Hull to speak some time soon, and when Brother Wixom returns an effort is to be made for him to speak.

Baptisms

Sunday morning at 8.30 a Catholic woman and her eighteen-year-old son were baptized, D. T. Williams officiating.

Sacrament Service

At 9 a. m. sacrament service was held with District President J. D. White in charge. After the emblems were passed, the customary order of individuals occupying by prayer, testimony, and song was not carried out. It was the firm belief that everyone present could be better blest and ministered unto by listening to one testimony and receiving words of admonition and counsel from him who had been sent into our midst to minister unto us according to his office and calling. Brother Budd was called upon to speak.

Tribute to Woodrow Wilson

The 11 o'clock service consisted of preaching by Apostle Williams. Just before the closing song was sung, word was received that ex-President Wilson had passed away. Brother White called upon Brother Williams to offer prayer, which was of an exceptional nature.

At the 2.30 o'clock service Brother George H. Wixom was the speaker.

The Sunday evening service was addressed by Elder E. B. Hull.

The choir furnished special music in solo, duet, and anthem at all church conference services.

Much thought and hard work by the Sacramento members was evidenced by the success of the conference.

NINA L. DAVIDSON.

Kirtland Desires Closer Connection With Zionist Ideal

Extract From a Letter to the First Presidency

KIRTLAND, OHIO, January 14.—A Doctrine and Covenants class had been studying the matter of the troubles in Jackson County in the olden days and the Spirit that evidently worked upon the Kirtland Saints before they got human messages [from Independence] to the same end. We compared thoughts relative to the late General Conference in which many of us who bided at home were made to feel that same relief and exaltation toward its close that we later learned was evident in power in that assembly. Since that time we have sensed the urgency of the need of our being more closely attuned to the spirit of Zion. Personally we have wished that more of the leading men of the church could see the value of a closer association with this place. If they would visit it leisurely, and all the country round about, it would help dissipate the feeling that sometimes comes, that this place is set on one side and neglected in the greater quest of Zion proper.

ERNEST A. WEBBE.

Meetings Being Conducted Near Port Whitby

PORT WHITBY, ONTARIO, January 31.—It is some time since I have written anything for the columns of the HERALD. My wife and I were baptized by Elder S. W. Tomlinson at Cypress River, Manitoba, in August, 1906. In 1909 we moved to Winnipeg, where we have had the pleasure of seeing all of our family baptized into the fold and kingdom of God.

The writer was called to the office of deacon in 1910, in which capacity I served the branch till July, 1922, when I was called to the office of elder and ordained under the hands of Elder W. B. Richards. Brother C. S. Case was called to the office of priest at the same meeting.

Before we left Winnipeg we were entertained at the home of Brother and Sister Arnold, where the Saints and friends had gathered to bid us good-by. We were presented with a lovely motor robe; and an address by Brother Arnold, reviewing the past and wishing us Godspeed, was given. We left Winnipeg on September 15 and made the trip to Ontario by motor, through the States by way of Saint Paul, Chicago, Detroit, Windsor, Chatham, London, and Toronto, to Port Whitby.

There are no Saints here that we know of as yet. Soon after our arrival we commenced holding meetings at the home of Brother and Sister S. D. Wilson some fifteen miles north of here, close to the little village of Utica, Ontario. We kept the meetings going as long as we could get there by car. We hope soon to resume our efforts at that place. Brother and Sister Wilson have done much in trying to get the work started there. They have not labored in vain, for quite a number have been baptized, through their efforts, by Elders A. F. McLean, J. T. Thompson, D. Pycock, and others. There are quite a few still interested, and a number of outsiders are attending. A Mrs. Myers has rendered us good service by acting as organist at our meetings.

We are ever praying for the good of the cause and the redemption of Zion.

W. W. COOMBE.

Apostle M. A. McConley Has Interesting Journey Among Missions in the Hawaiian Islands

From a Letter to the First Presidency

HONOLULU, HAWAII, January 30.—I left Hilo January 17, and Sister McConley left there on the 24th. By reason of our work there the branch has been warmed up and revived, the business affairs attended to, the buildings put in repair, and all in all I feel that our trip was worth while.

The Saints there regretted very much that Sister McConley had not planned to remain at Hilo during my trip to Australia rather than returning to Honolulu. There is certainly plenty to do at both places, but with Brother and Sister Williams at Hilo a good share of their time, I feel the work will progress nicely.

A Visit to the Island of Maui

Maui is about half way between Hilo and Honolulu. I left Hilo on the S. S. Haleakala on January 17 at 5 p. m. and landed at Mala, Maui, at 1.30 the next morning. It was a clear, moonlight night, and the trip from the steamer to the landing in the small row boat was enjoyed. Then a twenty-two-mile ride by auto took me to Wailuku, where I routed out some friends to the cause and found shelter and welcome.

I had instructed Brother Foo to come up from Honolulu and meet me in Wailuku. He had preceded me by one day and had brought Sister Foo along, as he has relatives in Wailuku whom he wished her to meet.

Brother Foo has three uncles there—his mother's brothers—and I found them to be prominent and influential people in the community, and especially among the Chinese. One is a banker, another a dentist, and the other is the leading authority on poultry on the island and the superintendent of a large poultry farm and head of the Poultry Producers' Association.

Through the banker, who is the treasurer of the Chinese Congregational Church, we secured the use of the Chinese church for Monday and Tuesday nights. The poultry man took us in his auto twenty-two miles, where we were successful in booking the big Hawaiian hall at Lahaina, the next principal town on the island. This was an improvement on walking, as I had done formerly.

Week End at Pauwela

Sunday morning the poultry man took us eighteen miles and left us at the home of Brother Nelson Kalo, at Pauwela, where we were booked for the week end with the little band of Saints. They had not been visited since I went out to Australia in 1921. Such neglect is criminal negligence and surely does not do the work any good. One brother explained to us that his wife had grown discouraged at the neglect of the church and had returned with her children to the Hawaiian Protestant Church.

We had sacrament meeting on Sunday morning with seven members besides the missionaries, and also a number of interested nonmembers present.

Sunday afternoon we held meeting in a Hawaiian home about seven miles from Pauwela with about twenty Hawaiians in attendance and a fine interest. I administered to two nonmembers at the close of the service. That evening we held forth in Brother Kaola's home and were scarcely able to accommodate the crowd. I collected some tithing, secured renewals for the church papers, and two subscriptions for the Ensign from nonmembers.

Preaches in Chinese Church

Next morning we were off on the train early for Wailuku where Brother Foo secured his uncle's big car, and we spent the better part of the day inviting people to come to the meeting, with the result that we had a very nice crowd at the Chinese church in the evening, about half Chinese and half Hawaiians. Brother Foo did most of the preaching that night, and I arranged to speak the following evening.

Next day the poultry man took us out for a ride and picnic dinner. We went up as far as the 6,000 foot level on the slope of Mount Haleakala. This is a noted mountain, being the largest extinct volcano in the world. The crater is about eleven miles across, and the mountain is 11,000 feet above sea level. It was a clear day, and the view was wonderful. We could see the better part of the island of Maui as we circled the mountain in ascending. And in addition we could see the Island of Hawaii with its two snow-covered mountains, Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea; also the Islands of Mōlokinī, Kahoolawe, Lanai, and Molokai. I presume the promised land, as shown from the mountain top to Moses, was a wonderful sight. If it looked any better than these tropical islands do from a high elevation it certainly was a grand sight.

Visit Mountain Sanitarium

On the slope of the mountain at 3,500 feet is the Kula sanitarium for tuberculosis, reputed to be one of the finest locations for that purpose that there is in the world. One of our Hawaiian sisters is a patient, and we visited her for a few minutes. She has gained twenty pounds in five months.

Tuesday evening after this wonderful ride I addressed a packed house in the Chinese Church at Wailuku. The Mormons turned out in force, six missionaries and many of their members being in attendance.

Good Crowd Addressed at Lahaina

Wednesday we were taken to Lahaina by Brother Foo's cousin, and the way opened up for us to be made welcome and at home with a family we had never met, but some of whose relatives belong to the church in Honolulu—relatives of Mary Ann Horner, of Irvington, California. I preached both Wednesday and Thursday nights in the Hale Aloha Hall to a good crowd, and good was accomplished.

I plan for Brother Foo and Brother Williams to visit Maui at least once every six months and follow up this work. If possible I want them to spend a month on that island in July. The present members need the pastoral work, and the missionary opportunities are simply crying for us to come in and occupy.

Off for Honolulu

At 1.30 a. m. we boarded a small boat at Mala and were duly landed aboard the S. S. Haleakala and arrived in Honolulu safely on Friday morning.

Meetings in Honolulu

At present we are busily engaged in a two weeks' series of meetings here. Crowds have been good thus far. We are expecting Brother and Sister Williams to arrive next Saturday morning, and are looking forward to successful work in this mission the coming year. But we need so many more men in the field! May the day be hastened when we can have them.

MYRON A. MCCONLEY.

To Sail for New Zealand February 16

HONOLULU, HAWAII, January 27.—I will leave Honolulu, nothing unforeseen preventing, on the S. S. Niagara February 16 for Auckland, New Zealand. We will be due in Auckland February 29, and I will land there to spend several weeks before proceeding to Australia.

I expect Brother Clyde Ellis to arrive in Wellington, New Zealand, on the S. S. Maunganui on March 15, and I will meet him to spend a week or ten days visiting Christchurch, Temuka, and Dunedin, and will reship for Sydney from Wellington in time to arrive in Australia about ten days before Easter.

Soliciting an interest in your prayers that our visit to New Zealand may be profitable and that our journey on the mighty deep may be effected in safety.

M. A. MCCONLEY.

Young People's Meetings Open at Colorado Springs

From a Letter to the First Presidency

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO, February 11.—According to arrangements our series of young people's services commenced yesterday; the morning services were well attended, and the little chapel was filled to its fullest capacity at the evening service. Brother Garver preached two fine sermons which seemed to be enjoyed by all. We did not do a lot of expensive advertising, but I wrote a personal letter to all of the young people of the church and all of the young people who are not members who have attended since I have been here. The response was fine.

Ever laboring and praying for the onward progress of God's work,

B. E. BROWN.

Recreation and Expression Department at Honolulu Advancing

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

HONOLULU, HAWAII, January 19.—I am pleased to report that generally the branch work is in good condition. All the members of the priesthood are doing some work, some more than others, and there is a spirit of unity and love prevailing which is pleasing, both among the members of the priesthood and among the members generally.

I am pushing the work that comes under the Department of Recreation and Expression. Committees have been appointed for athletics and games of all kinds, music, dramatics, pageantry, and public speaking.

I hope to get the young people enthusiastic in this work and trust the results will be gratifying.

When Brother and Sister McConley return from Hilo next week, Brother McConley will hold a series of meetings for which we are preparing.

Approves Recreation Course

The article by Brother McDowell on a course in recreational leadership appearing in the HERALD of January 9, which reached me yesterday, pleased me very much, and I am glad to learn that the church is preparing through Craceland College to give courses in this recreational work, as I feel that such a course of lessons is needed and will be of important service to those who are interested.

I am also pleased because of late I have been urging this work on the members of the branch and particularly upon the members of the Department of Recreation and Expression. I have felt urged to do this, and it is evidence to me that the same spirit that is directing you over there is also with others of the workers scattered in different parts of the world.

I am forwarding to the office of The Departments, Grace-land College, the names of some who desire to take up the course.

G. J. WALLER.

Joplin Meetings Close With Success

From a Letter to the First Presidency

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, January 29.—In making a report of my recent labor, I feel it would not be complete unless special mention was made of the meetings in Joplin, Missouri, which closed on January 27.

Despite the disagreeable weather prevailing the greater part of the time, there was a good attendance which increased each succeeding night until the close. I do not recall a time in my missionary experience when I enjoyed a heartier response, coming not only from the membership but from the nonmembers as well.

Time Ripe for Spreading the Gospel

I am more and more of the opinion that the time is here and now when the religion of Jesus Christ should be presented fearlessly and without reservations whatsoever. The religious disquietude is in evidence all around us. Some are being "tossed to and fro and carried about" by the opinions of men until many have lost their religious bearings, crying in anguish, "What shall we do?" In too many instances there is no one to offer a comforting answer or to point them to the path leading to the realms wherein our Savior dwells, and who, with outstretched hands, invites us to come.

Adverting to the meetings in Joplin, will say that while working under some handicap, nevertheless the majority are ready and anxious to do their part. I did not hesitate to admonish some of the young men to arise to their responsibilities in the fear of the Lord, for upon them would soon be placed greater responsibility.

I must not neglect to call attention to the help given these meetings by Webb City Saints.

In conclusion I want to say that a great work can be done in and around Joplin if the Saints will move out in faith, nothing doubting. Personally I was comforted under the holy and divine influence present during this series of meetings.

May the Lord's work prosper and soon Zion flourish is my humble prayer.

J. A. GILLEN.

Sunday School Organized at Fairfield

FAIRFIELD, ILLINOIS, February 9.—This is a town of many churches, there being about 2,800 inhabitants and 8 churches. Many are prejudiced toward our faith, but some of the Saints have caught the missionary spirit and are trying to tell the gospel story to those who will listen. God will add his blessing to every effort put forth.

On the first Sunday of December a Sunday school was organized here. There are twenty members, mostly adults, but no branch organization; yet there is a preaching service each Sunday except the first Sunday of the month when sacramental services are held. There is also a prayer meeting on Tuesday night. All these services are held at the home of Brother Kurtz, who has recently moved here from the Brush Creek Branch.

God has not forgotten Fairfield Saints, and some of the good Spirit that is pervading many of the camps of the Saints has not slighted this place. Very spiritual meetings have been experienced in the recent past, the gift of prophecy being present in the sacramental services, which gave the assurance that if the Saints were very prayerful and faithful the work would be built up in this place. A. H. WARREN.

"Brother Matthew Umphrey was at Alma, Michigan, from January 20 to February 3, preaching every night," writes Brother John R. Carrick of that place. "He had not time to visit with the Saints since the nonmembers took all of his spare time. Although none were added to our numbers, there are some who are about ready to obey the gospel. The Saints were built up spiritually and are hopeful for the future."

Autumn Leaves for March

The visit of Elder Paia a Metuaaro to America is pleasingly recalled in an article by Elder J. Charles May, who accompanied our Tahitian brother on a tour of some of the historic spots of the church. Good pictures from photographs illustrate the article.

"A field of ripe wheat" is the title of the missionary experience of Elder W. P. Bootman.

A young sister in Ontario, a relative of Elder R. C. Russell, was asked by a Presbyterian minister to write a paper for his congregation on "The perfection of divine law." The result was a masterly affair, and was read to a large congregation of people. It is reproduced in this number of Autumn Leaves.

The editor was asked to explain why it is so much easier to plan a garden in the winter time with a seed catalogue in hand, sitting around keeping warm than it is to care for such a garden in midsummer. The problem is discussed, as well as the tendency of some great and near-great persons to look humble and commonplace.

Of the series of twelve great sonnets for the year, the one for March is by Edgar Allen Poe, entitled "To my mother."

The short stories by "Kitty Karson," under the general title "The valley of Zion's Heights," are continuing with interesting developments.

There are two interesting essays: One by Chris B. Harts-horn on "Defeat as a stepping-stone to victory," and another by Anne Friend Roberts, on "Live and let live."

"Reform" by Elbert A. Smith, is described as a pleasant diversion that requires much personal practice.

"The Luck of Roaring Camp," a famous story of the West of other days by Bret Harte, is reproduced in this issue, with an illuminating analysis by Warren L. Van Dine.

"The common meeting place of humanity," by E. A. Kaler, well known among the Saints as a chef, is a pleasing discussion of the home dining table as a center of our family social life.

There are many other features, pictures, and articles, all combining to make a most excellent number of Autumn Leaves, the magazine for the youth of the church. It sells for $1.75 a year and brings delight each month.

CHURCH NEWS

Former Superintendent of Women Injured in Automobile Accident

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, February 15.—A skidding automobile accident on January 18 resulted in the injury of Sister Audentia Anderson. She suffered a fractured rib and some slight dislocations and bruises, which confined her to her home for over two weeks. Her Sunday school class of young men, as well as many friends, was glad to have her return and participate again in branch activities on February 3. Sister Anderson is the wife of B. M. Anderson, branch president of Omaha Branch, and a sister to President Frederick M. Smith. She has always been an active and prominent worker in church affairs, and only recently was superintendent of Department of Women. Acquaintances throughout the church will be pleased to know of her recovery.

Ordination Performed

On Sunday evening, January 20, a very impressive ordination service occurred at which time Brother Howard Elliott was ordained a priest, under the hands of his father, High Priest T. J. Elliott, and Branch President B. M. Anderson. Throughout the service, the presence of the Holy Spirit was evident in much power, and the occasion was one long to be remembered by those present.

Farewell Sermon Preached

The following Sunday evening Brother T. J. Elliott preached his farewell sermon to the Omaha Saints. He left on the 30th to take up branch work in the city of Providence, Rhode Island. It affords some comfort to the branch members here, that he left his estimable family behind for a few months. The branch can ill afford to lose any of these splendid workers. A notable incident connected with Brother Elliott's farewell sermon was the fact that his son, Howard, officiating for the first time in his priesthood capacity, was in charge of the meeting. Many dinners and other affairs were given in compliment to Brother Elliott and family prior to his departure, the largest being a surprise party held at the church on Friday evening, January 25, at which time Brother Elliott was presented with a very handsome briefcase in token of the esteem in which he is held by the Omaha Saints.

Religio Attendance Increasing

The Religio, with Brother Elmer Riner at the head, assisted by his capable little wife as chairman of the program committee, is steadily gaining in attendance and interest since it began holding its meetings at 6.30 Sunday evenings. Doctor Henry A. Merchant conducts a series of Book of Mormon talks preceding the musical and literary numbers. Upon one evening Brother Riner, who is a lithographer, explained and demonstrated the process of color printing.

Good Communion Service

Communion service of February 3 was marked by an overflowing attendance and a spirit of unusual peace, unity, and uplift. At the South Omaha Branch, also, a fine service was reported, many saying it was the best they ever attended. This is encouraging since it is evidence that humility, consecration, and devotion on the part of the Saints will bring recognition from the heavenly Father, to the end that all may receive added light and stimulation.

Junior Choir Work

Sister Olive Derry, daughter of Brother G. N. Derry, who has recently moved his family to Omaha, and granddaughter of Brother Charles Derry, one of the old-time warriors in the church and so long and favorably known by the membership, has taken the leadership of the young choir. They meet for rehearsal at 5.30 Sunday afternoons, follow with the Religio service, and will be offering anthems at the evening hour of worship. Sister Derry has had considerable experience in this sort of work and is peculiarly successful in winning the cooperation of young people. Work has already begun on the Easter cantata. The efforts of this band of singers will prove a most valuable asset to the branch.

Lincoln Program in Sunday School

A short program, commemorative of the life and service of Abraham Lincoln, was given at Sunday school by the young girls in Sister Thiehoff's class. Sister Rose Adams, superintendent, is alert to all opportunities, and has many a little surprise worked out for the school. A touch of decoration emphasizing the spirit of various occasions, and songs chosen to weave about the central theme, add zest and interest to what otherwise often becomes routine.

Richard Meredith Married

Brother Richard Meredith, for several years a widower, was married on February 6 to Mrs. Sarah A. Sullivan, ceremony performed by Carl T. Self, high priest. Following the ceremony and dinner, the couple left for a wedding trip to the western part of the State. The good wishes of all go with them.

Publicity Work Continued

Brother Carl Self, on the morning of February 10, gave a most instructive talk on church publicity, calling attention to the several ways to "spread the gospel." He urged all to take the church publications, wherein are many fine sermons and other "good news," a perusal of which helps to inform and enthuse all in the work of the church. In connection with this timely sermon it was a pleasure to the branch president to call attention to the new sign upon the front of the little church building. This beautiful sign was designed and executed by Brother Norman Issott, a nephew of Apostle J. W. Rushton. The letters are blown into the back of a piece of heavy, clear glass, and give the appearance of raised, frostlike work, very effective against the black background. A frame of heavy metal adds to the appearance, and it is felt there is no more lovely or artistic sign on any church building in Omaha. The execution of the work was a "labor of love" on the part of Brother Norman, the warm expressions of admiration and appreciation on the part of the Saints being his reward.

Valentine Party Given

On February 8 Brother and Sister Harlow Fredrick gave a valentine party to the young people of the branch, at the home of their parents, Brother and Sister B. M. Anderson. Forty young people, with plenty of well-thought-out and enlivening games, a spirit of good fellowship and close comradeship, did not let the hours drag, and the affair made another very pleasant picture to hang in memory's halls. Sister Fredrick has been appointed young women's leader for the branch and is rapidly making acquaintance and friendships among the young people. She and her husband are young enough to have identity of interest and sympathy with young people, and they will doubtless have increasing opportunities of doing good among them.

Death of Veretta Crane Bacon

One of the lovely young matrons of this branch, Sister Veretta Crane Bacon, passed away February 13 at the Methodist hospital, where a week or two ago she had undergone an operation. Apparently doing well until a couple of days before her passing, the news of her death came as a shock to all. She was the very successful proprietor of the Crane Mortuary Company of this city, having entered into business about three years ago with only women attendants and assistants in her work, and receiving an increasing amount of patronage. She leaves a son, nearly sixteen, by her former husband, a widowed mother, Sister Ellen Davis, and her husband, Mr. Greenville Bacon, to whom she was married but four short months ago.

Death of Henry Peters

The death of her father, Mr. Henry Peters, necessitated Sister Elliott leaving for Saint Louis on the evening of January 30. Fortunately Brother Elliott could route his trip to the East, via that city, and was at her side through the sad ceremonies following. Sister Peters came home with her daughter on the morning of February 11, and will, for the present, make her home here. The Omaha Saints deeply sympathize with these sisters in their loss, and trust comfort and peace will be their portion. The grim reaper chooses his harvest where he wills; it is the common lot of mankind to suffer the pangs of separation from loved ones. But to Saints, whose faith and confidence are living things, that separation seems but temporary, and they can look forward to a reuniting of severed ties.

Two-Day Meeting Held at Toledo

BRADNER, OHIO, February 6.—The two-day meeting of the Northwestern Ohio District was quite well attended in Toledo, especially on Sunday. There were quite a number of visiting Saints from the different branches of the district. All branches were represented except Saint Marys.

Brother Eberly, of Kirtland District, was present, also Brother Bishop, of Steubenville, Ohio. Their mission seemed to be to obtain money to reduce the debt of the auditorium and dining hall located at Kirtland.

Central Illinois District Conference Held at Beardstown

BEARDSTOWN, ILLINOIS, February 6.—The Central Illinois district conference convened at Beardstown, February 2 and 3. The district was well represented, the largest delegation of Saints coming from Taylorville, Illinois. Apostle John F. Garver was also present and was chosen to associate with District President Fred O. Pritchett in the chair. These two made a good team, and Brother Garver's counsel and advice during business sessions was highly appreciated by all.

Election of Officers

The annual election of district officers was held and they are as follows: Elder Fred O. Pritchett, of Springfield, district president; Elder Joe Williams, of Taylorville, counselor; Elder Joe Price, of Taylorville, secretary; Brother William Vanhooser, of Taylorville, treasurer; Brother Joe Williams, district chorister. The Sunday school district officers elected were: Brother Albert E. Johnson, of Taylorville, district superintendent; Brother Fred Ettinger, of Taylorville, assistant superintendent; Sister Pearl Jones, of Beardstown, secretary; Brother William Vanhooser, treasurer.

Program Rendered

Saturday ended with a program in the evening to an appreciative, crowded house. Too much cannot be said of this program, each rendering his part well. It ended with a talk from Brother Garver on "Service."

Sunday Services

Sunday began with the Holy Spirit a prominent feature, which remained all day. Priesthood meeting was at 8 a. m. with Brothers Pritchett and Garver in charge. Sunday school convened at 9.30 in charge of the district officers. Preaching was at 11 o'clock by Apostle Garver. His sermon was surely a spiritual feast. At 2.30 p. m. sacramental and social service, in charge of Brother Garver was held. The Spirit of God was present to a marked degree.

Ordinations Performed

There were two ordinations. Brother Fred Ettinger, of Taylorville, was ordained to the office of teacher, and Brother Ernest E. Thomas of Beardstown, to the office of deacon. Both are promising young men and sense the responsibility of their calling.

A great deal of praise is due the district chorister, Brother Joe Williams, for the able manner in which he conducted the singing and musical program. Brother Williams is a talented young man.

The best was saved until the last. Sunday evening Brother Garver seemed at his best and delivered a sermon on the "Love of God," which will long be remembered by the Central Illinois District.

Missionary Is Given Birthday Celebration

MAPLETON, KANSAS, February 13.—A birthday party brought the Saints together at the church on the evening of January 30 to remind Brother Lee Quick that he had reached another milestone in life. A program was rendered, consisting of songs, readings, and musical numbers. It being also the birthday of little Vida Hughes, she came in as a part of the program. She sang a song about the two birthdays, which had been composed by Sister F. J. Loar in honor of the occasion. Then little Nina Needham gave a reading. This was a poem composed also by Sister Mary Duncan. It was about the help and counsel which Brother Quick gives to others, and also of the service he renders for the Master.

Birthday Gift Presented

Brother Dennis presented Brother Quick with a mission rocker to remind him of the love and esteem which each one has for this brother who with untiring efforts built up the work in this locality. Last but not least, two lovely birthday cakes (one containing fifty-two candles and the other eight) were presented. The Saints were glad to be able to meet on an occasion like this. As Brother Joseph Smith said, "Let us give flowers while the people are here to enjoy them." Our missionaries need all the encouragement which can be given them.

The last sacramental services were well attended and very spiritual. Four young men were called to the priesthood through Brother Holly Dennis, the branch president; also Sister Lola Quick McCullum was inspired to read a song she composed.

Brother H. E. Moler is expected to be here February 17.

Brother John Loveland and wife of Independence, Missouri, wish to thank the Saints who took such interest in them during their recent sickness. About seventy-five Saints called and did what they could to assist. The family of Brother Will Horn took the great responsibility of caring for them during their trouble.

Third Annual Young People's Meetings at Flint, Michigan, Close

FLINT, MICHIGAN, February 16.—The third annual campaign of the Young People's Organization of the Flint Branch closed Sunday evening, February 10, at the First Church. President Floyd M. McDowell, of Lamoni, was at his best and gave to the young people of Flint and the state a broader vision of the church and its aim in the world.

He arrived in the city the evening of January 25. The combined Religios of the city had met at First Church to tender him a reception. He was met at the station by Matthew W. Liston and Elder A. H. DuRose, president of the branch. As the church was neared the party was inspired by the song, "Give me thy heart," which was being sung by the congregation, led by Sister Myrtle Holden. As the three marched to the platform, the audience arose, and after completing the song, Brother McDowell was introduced and spoke for a few minutes before they parted for the evening.

Detroit District Conference

On Sunday the quarterly ministerial conference of the Detroit District was held in the afternoon. A splendid address was given by Brother McDowell regarding the duty of each member in preparing himself for greater service. That evening, long before the hour to open, people began to gather. At the appointed time the church building was packed, and after putting in extra chairs standing room was at a premium. This interest manifested on the part of the old and young alike increased during the two weeks. Some bad weather crossed the trail, but only two evenings during the entire two weeks were the choir able to find seats in the audience in order to better enjoy the service. These two evenings were bitterly cold, but still the attendance was good.

President F. M. McDowell Addresses Lions' Club

Brother McDowell addressed the Lions' Club of Flint at their weekly luncheon on Monday, February 4. His subject was, "Socialization of education." Among the guests of the club that day were J. Dallas Dort, president of the Dort Motor Company, and E. E. Lewis, superintendent of schools of Flint. The comments on the address were such as: "The best talk ever given before the Lions' Club in Flint," "If you have any more like him bring them along," "That man has the right idea," and "That is something for us to think over and put into operation." Some of the members of the club attended the meetings, and some came personally to ask if it would be possible to have Doctor McDowell speak again before he left the city.

Quarterly Convention of Young People Held

The young people of the Detroit District held their quarterly convention at the First Church February 8 to 10. It became State wide, as representatives from the Central, Eastern, and Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana Districts gathered. It was the greatest gathering of young people in the history of the church in Michigan.

Reception Given for Visitors

A reception was held for the visiting members on Friday evening, February 8. After games, music, and refreshments, the young people left the church very reluctantly. They had become better acquainted and felt the social touch of their brothers and sisters from other cities who were meeting the same problems and striving to find their solution in the church.

Visiting Missionaries Address Convention

The first prayer service of the convention was held early Saturday morning. There came an influence long to be remembered, which brooded quietly over the assembly. The meeting at 11 o'clock was given over to short talks by visiting members of the missionary force. These talks were inspired with the thought of service and a plea to prepare for greater work in the church. At 2.30 Elder John R. Grice gave an interesting talk on the subject of "Making the church attractive for the young people." This was followed by a talk by Sister Lida J. Robertson on the subject, "The young woman's place in the church."

Round Table Discussions Begun

Then came the interesting part of the convention when Brethren McDowell and Grice presided over the round table. Many interesting suggestions were given as to the conduct of our people, the work which should be done to assist them in meeting their problems of life, and the erection of proper buildings for recreational and social functions of the church.

Musical Program and Address Given

The evening was given over for a short musical program, followed by an interesting and instructive sermon on the "Spirit of stewardship," by Brother McDowell. Outlines of the subject were passed out for the audience, and it was very easy to follow the speaker.

Beautiful Spirit Prevails at Prayer Service

Sunday was a busy day. President Elbert A. Smith was right last fall when reporting his visit to the Flint conference. He conveyed the thought of their getting on the job early and staying late. At 8 a. m. the young people gathered in the upper auditorium, and it was soon comfortably filled. A. H. DuRose, W. E. Alldread, F. M. McDowell, and John R. Grice were in charge. Eighty-three testimonies were borne, and the kindling influence of the Master again prevailed. The songs were sung with a hallowed reverence. It was a prayer meeting long to be remembered. No negative thoughts were presented, but the determination to press on and reach higher heights was expressed. The older Saints met in the basement at 9 a. m. for the regular prayer meeting. This service was also well attended.

"Preparation" Urged at Sunday School

The Sunday school, in charge of the local and district officers, convened at 11 a. m. The watchword of this session was a call to preparation on the part of the young, so when called upon they could take their place as competent teachers in the Sunday school.

Speaks on "A Challenge to Leadership"

Brother McDowell talked to another packed house at 2.30 on the subject, "A challenge to leadership." Many nonmembers were present and among them some representative business men of the city. Several references about the sermon have been heard during the past week. One man who was present has used the sermon to get his sales organization in line for their work the last half of the month. He has quoted from the sermon several times.

Closing Address on "Zion, the Beautiful"

The closing of the convention and the passing of the campaign into history came with Sunday evening. Every inch of space was taken up until there came a request to have some of the brethren entertain the children in the basement. Then the closing subject was presented, "Zion the beautiful beckons us on." After the masterful sermon, Brother B. H. Doty and Sister Louise Evans sang a duet written by President Smith on that theme. It was a fitting close to a busy day.

Gift Presented to President F. M. McDowell

After the ceremony of presenting a gift and purse to Brother McDowell, on behalf of the young people of Flint, and his response, the congregation sang with spirit and understanding, "God be with you till we meet again." Long after the closing hour and good-bys had been said, some still lingered for a parting word of counsel or cheer. The memory of this convention and campaign will long remain with the people of this place and the visitors of other places in the State.

Results of Convention Cannot Be Measured

The lasting influence on the Flint Branch as a whole cannot be measured. Many times the question was asked, "Are any to be baptized?" The answer is, "Our work now is to line up those who have their names on the church books, that they may comply with the whole law, and then the branch will be ready to add more to their numbers."

Several young men of Flint have resolved to enter Grace-land next year. They have caught the vision and now are desirous of preparing to shoulder the burden which will soon be placed on them by the older men of the church.

Two Baptized on New Year's

New Year's was celebrated right by Mr. and Mrs. Max Crum, who were baptized New Year's evening and became Brother and Sister Crum. They have been regular listeners for a number of years, working in the choir and Department of Women. They also start by making out an inventory and paying their tithe. It is gratifying to have people like this join with the Saints, since they can be depended upon. Thus Flint shows progress spiritually, numerically, and financially.

Multigraph Aids Publicity

With the multigraph recently purchased by the branch, 3,300 pieces of printed matter were put out for the campaign and convention.

Two of the local newspapers, the Flint Daily Herald and the Flint Daily Journal, gave space in their columns for publicity. The convention was quite fully reported and the program covered.

Saints Travel Forty Miles to Sacrament Service

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, February 11.—Saints living at a distance of forty miles were present at the sacramental services on the first Sunday of the month. Unity of spirit pervaded this well-attended meeting and a goodly degree of the Holy Spirit was felt throughout the meeting.

Last Sunday Brother T. J. Jett, jr., gave a good discourse at 11 a. m., choosing his subject from Daniel, "The handwriting on the wall."

Sermonets Given Over Radio

Brother W. H. Mannering still keeps up his sermonets over the radio, on Monday night at 8 o'clock, every two weeks. The programs are in charge of Sister Emma Jackson, who presides at the piano. Sister Mary Barber has contributed on several occasions with soprano solos. Gifford Edwards, aged thirteen, and Marshall Richardson, aged seven, contributed also on several occasions with violin solos. Brother Robert Jett, with several others not of the church, has also rendered violin selections.

District Conference

The district conference will convene on February 23. Brother D. S. Palmer of the missionary force is expected to be present.

Brother R. L. Sheets and family have returned to their home in Sioux City, Iowa. The Saints here regret their departure, but feel that San Antonio's loss is the gain of the Sioux City Branch.

The tithing cards are being used at Sunday school, and at present sixty per cent of the school are tithepayers.

Sunday before last a part of Brother Howard Harder's radio sermon, "On New Year's resolutions and habits," which was published in Saints' Herald of January 16, was read to the Sunday school. The object was to impress the importance of making a habit of prompt attendance. Last Sunday saw some of the teachers who had been delinquent in this respect, in their places on time.

Bobsled Party From Bevier Attend Meetings at Macon

BEVIER, MISSOURI, February 11.—The Temple Builders petitioned the branch for permission to partition off a room in the southwest corner of the church basement to be used as a meeting and workroom. The permission was granted.

A party of ten members of Bevier Branch drove over to Macon, Missouri, in a bobsled Thursday night, February 7, to hear Elder J. W. A. Bailey give one of his illustrated lectures. They enjoyed the lecture and pictures very much. Elder Bailey has been holding forth at Macon for several weeks, and the meetings are still continuing with good interest and fair attendance. The Macon papers have been liberal in the space given to the meetings.

Social Held

Most of the Sunday school classes have made a good start on the 1924 Christmas offering. Classes five and six held a social on Saturday night, serving oysters, chili, ice cream, and cake. About $25 was cleared. Other classes are busy with sewing and other activities. Ben S. Tanner, elder, and Frederick L. McKane, priest, recently purchased a flour and feed store with grinding machinery and building. They have added farm products to the business and are buying cream, poultry, and eggs. Both men are well known here for their integrity, and the business is rapidly increasing since they took charge.

W. T. Hicklin, deacon, who has been confined to his home with sickness, was able to attend the services of Sunday, February 9.

Sanitarium Box Prepared

The members of the local Department of Women have been busily engaged the past week or so fixing up a box to be sent to the Independence Sanitarium. The box will contain sheets, pillowslips, and articles of linen which are always needed in an institution of that kind. There will also be some canned fruit and other things.

Sister Charles Edmunds, of Independence, Missouri, returned home Wednesday, February 6, after a ten days' visit with her mother, Sister Mary Rudkin. Sister Rudkin suffered from a stroke of paralysis about a month ago but is slowly improving. She has the prayers of all the Saints for her restoration to health.

Apostle Clyde F. Ellis writes from Papeete, Tahiti, that they have postponed the mission conference until December, 1924, so that Apostle M. A. McConley can attend. He also says the native Saints have not had new Religio quarterlies since the last ones were written by A. H. Christensen and his wife, and no new Sunday school quarterlies since the ones which were written by Sister Ellis and himself before the attack of influenza in 1918. Brother R. J. Farthing is capable of writing these quarterlies, which he will do in English, and then they will be translated into the Tahitian. Brother Ellis says the natives are very enthused over the prospects of having new quarterlies.

Holden Stake News

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, February 18.—A memorial service in honor of ex-President Woodrow Wilson was held in the Holden Auditorium, Sunday, February 10, at 2.30 p. m. All the ministers of the town were assigned seats on the platform. Floyd E. Jacobs, of Kansas City delivered an eloquent address. The singing was by the choirs of the churches of the town. Sister Cora Young rendered a beautiful solo. The songs used were the favorites of the departed president. Brother I. M. Ross pronounced the benediction.

Communion Service

The communion service, which was held on February 10, was not so well attended as usual since the roads were nearly impassable. Elders Lovell, Beebe, Ross, and Krahl had charge. A very peaceful and hallowed spirit prevailed. Elder D. J. Krahl spoke at the church in the evening and Elder George F. Baker at the Home in the morning.

Bible Reading in Schools

The Holden high school improvement has received much commendation from those who have charge of the educational work in the State. The superintendent has high ideals which he keeps ever before the minds of the students. Professor Ryle has also succeeded in having the daily reading of the Bible in all grades. Three out of the four high school classes have selected for their presidents those who are from Latter Day Saint families. Miss Alberta Young, daughter of Brother and Sister D. P. Young, is the president of the seniors; Chilton Ross, son of Brother and Sister I. M. Ross, is president of the juniors; and Herbert Six, son of Brother and Sister R. C. Six, is president of the freshmen class.

Lexington

The church and departments at Lexington are in better active working condition than for some time. The priesthood are visiting among the membership. The communion service on Sunday, February 10, was a spiritual feast, one of the best ever held at this branch.

At the Sunday afternoon service, a review of the stake conference was given for the benefit of those who did not attend. Twelve of those who attended took part. A very profitable time was enjoyed. Members who have not been attending church for the past two years were present. The work is onward in Lexington.

Brother Martin Gaffin, mine boss of the big south mine of the Western Coal and Mining Company, is quite ill with pneumonia.

District Presidency Visit Ottumwa Branch

OTTUMWA, IOWA, February 8.—Elder Amos Berve, district president, and Elder W. H. Gunn, his assistant, visited Ottumwa two weeks ago, preaching two good sermons. All felt better for the visit.

The district missionary, Elder C. Clifford, who made a good impression by his two sermons, preached here also.

The officers for 1924 are: F. C. Bevan, president; Miss L. Scott, secretary; J. F. Jones, treasurer; J. Baker, Sunday school superintendent; Sister L. Scott, leader of Department of Women. This is a good staff of workers.

Brother and Sister J. F. Jones, of Wigan, England, came here last November and will be a help to the branch.

The Department of Women, under the leadership of Mrs. A. Epperly, did a very good year's work in 1923, being of much assistance to the work here.

Any Saints or elders passing through Ottumwa should not fail to visit at 226 Grand Avenue, West End.

Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 19.—Services at the Stone Church Sunday, February 17, consisted of preaching at 11 o'clock by President Frederick M. Smith on "Church and society" and at 7.30 a musical program followed by sermon on "Laying on of hands, a gospel principle," by President Elbert A. Smith. The meetings were crowded and the audiences extremely interested in the messages delivered. Both services were broadcast.

Revival Services Continue at Liberty Street

The revival meetings at Liberty Street continue with fine attendance and wonderful interest. Evangelist Ammon White preached stirring sermons during the past week, using a chart illustrating the dispensations. On Thursday night, February 14, he had brought his subject down to the eleventh hour. Even the little children understood his talks on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, he spoke so plainly and convincingly.

Friday night, February 15, Brother White continued with the same subject. The privilege to ask questions was given early in this series of meetings and much interest has been added along that line. The congregation has been pleased with solos sung by Sister Alice Mae Burgess and by Brother George Anway, both of the Stone Church, also a baritone horn solo played by Brother Philip Turner.

Services at Spring Branch

The communion service at Spring Branch on February 3, was well attended, with a good spirit prevailing. Elder Walter Self delivered a forceful sermon in the evening, holding the attention of his audience.

On Sunday morning, February 10, George Weston, priest, was the speaker. At the evening service, Pastor J. E. Soderstadt spoke on the various beliefs and creeds in the world today. Brother Soderstadt has recently moved with his family to Independence, but his work at Spring Branch will continue.

Patriarch F. A. Smith delivered a splendid discourse on Sunday morning, February 17, giving good instructions on everyday living. In the evening Elder B. F. Bean addressed an interested audience.

Elder William F. Smith, formerly of Detroit, is confined to his bed, having sustained a bad fall which resulted in some broken ribs.

In the foreign mission field, Apostles Paul M. Hanson and J. F. Curtis are now in Holland.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer is attending to work at Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Graceland Chats

The annual preliminary declamatory contest claimed particular attention the past few weeks. It assumed larger interest from day to day until Thursday, February 7, when the contest began in earnest. There were between forty-five and fifty contestants which necessitated a division of the speakers, so the oratorical contest was held on Thursday, the humorous on Friday, and the dramatic on Saturday forenoon. The judges were Mrs. Belle Royce, Miss Irene Layton, and Mrs. C. E. Wight. There were to be nine speakers selected from the whole group, but by reason of a tie in the dramatic class there are ten entering for finals.

Winners of Contest

The winners, alphabetically, are: oratorical, Ray Esgar of the Victorian Society, Philip Lewis of the Kappa Delta, and Alvin Woods of the Victorian; humorous, Dorothy Emmerson of the Victorian Society, Doris Jackson of Niketes, and Katherine Wolfe of the Niketes; dramatic, Dora Dexter of the Niketes Society, Jeanette Hass of the Victorian, Pauline Roberts of the Alphi Pi Sigma, and Ruth Walden of the Niketes. From these will be chosen the contestants for final place.

Head of Academic Department Ill

Lectures on Religious Education

Bishop Carmichael was the lecturer before the Department of Religious Education of Graceland. The bishop is an enthusiast on the subject of stewardship, and presented it, with other topics, in an interesting and able manner. His lectures were enjoyed by all.

Accident Causes Death of Student

Prior to prayer meeting on Wednesday, February 13, a distressing accident occurred at Herald Hall, the boys' dormitory, which resulted in the death of Donald Simmons on the evening of February 16. Everyone is deeply grieved over this untimely death. Father, mother, and fiancée were with him at his going. The bereaved ones accompanied the body to his home in Cameron, Missouri, on Sunday following. A feeling of gloom settled over Graceland.

Bisbee Branch Has Pie Social

BISBEE, ARIZONA, February 5.—The Department of Women held a pie social Friday evening, January 25. A short, interesting program was given, after which refreshments were served and a silver collection taken. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in a social time and in singing.

Elder John Lamb and son, John C., recently of El Reno, Oklahoma, arrived safely via Chevrolet, February 1. Brother Lamb has accepted a position with a local jewelry firm. Sister Lamb expects to come as soon as she has sufficiently recovered from her recent illness to travel. Bisbee welcomes this brother and his family back again.

Brother and Sister John Farley returned to their Sulphur Springs Valley Ranch, after having spent the past two weeks visiting old acquaintances in Bisbee.

An excellent spirit prevailed at the sacramental services February 3, and the Saints feel optimistic toward the onward progress of the work.

M. Fyrando, Bishop's agent, reported $2,119.07 received in tithes and offerings from September 1 to February 1. The missionary supervisor and presiding patriarch urged the Saints to pay their tithes and consecrate, that more missionaries could be sent. Statistical report shows 1,864 members in the district. Patriarch U. W. Greene preached three times. His kindly ministering touched the hearts of all. One hundred per cent of those at the young people's prayer meeting gave their reason for the hope of the gospel. A series of sermons by F. A. Smith preceded the conference. C. B. Woodstock was ordained a high priest under the hands of F. A. Smith and U. W. Greene. Recommendations from Woodbine of George Young as priest and Joseph Oscar Deal as teacher were indorsed. Conference adjourned to meet with the Moorhead Saints in June. Jay E. Keck, secretary pro tem.

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.—With the Blue Rapids Branch, January 12 and 13, Samuel Twombly and Edmund J. Gleazer in charge. Owing to severe weather conditions the attendance was very small. Ministerial reports were read from ten elders, four priests, one teacher, and two deacons. Tabulation of reports gave a total of 161 sermons, 1,341 services attended, 4 baptisms, 4 confirmations, 3 marriages, 9 children blessed, 115 pastoral visits, 116 administrations to sick, 29 books and tracts distributed. The ordination of William Marsh and Charles Marsh, of Bern, to the office of priest was approved. A budget of $75 for district expenses in 1924 was voted, the amount to be prorated among the branches of the district. Time and place of next conference was left to the decision of the district president. The sermons during the conference were by Brother Gleazer, and of a very spiritual and intellectual quality. It was unfortunate that more of the members of the district were unable to hear him. Frank G. Hedrick, secretary.

NORTH DAKOTA.—At Fargo, December 29 and 30. Business meeting opened Saturday at 2 p. m. with Thomas Leitch, district president, in charge, assisted by vice president, M. Rasmussen. Rolney Wildermuth acted as secretary. Program as follows: preaching on Saturday evening at 7.30; Sunday, the Sunday school session at 10 a. m. in charge of district officers; preaching at 11 a. m.; sacramental services at 2.30; and preaching at 8 o'clock. The sermons were all good and encouraging with a good spirit present at the prayer service. Jerome E. Wildermuth from the Northeastern Illinois District was present. Conference adjourned to meet again next June at Sykeston, North Dakota.

Radio Flashes

Berkeley, California.—(From a letter to the First Presidency.) We attended the conference of the Northern California District at Sacramento last week. We had a splendid conference. A good feeling prevailed throughout. Several ordinations were provided for. We had one experience of which you should know more. We had the opportunity of speaking over the radio of the Kimball-Upson Company. Brother Budd spoke on Friday night and I spoke on the following evening. Brother Budd's subject was "The American Indian." I spoke on the question of "The industrial and political conditions in Europe." We were treated very well by the management and asked to return.

All of our men should be in a position to take advantage of such opportunities as these. There will always be such privileges to be had, and we should see to it that we get our share of them. This means high class advertising. The listeners-in were told who we were and where our church was located in the city.—D. T. Williams.

Progress in the Church

The common conception of progress is that it is synonymous with growth. A thing may grow in quantity or improve in quality. We see that a change has taken place, and we call it progress. Intellectual progress is commonly thought of in the objective sense also: what has been produced. This, however, is an erroneous idea, besides being indefinite. Progress is more than growth and it is not to be found objectively.

Actual progress lies in the cause behind certain results. A child grows to manhood. It is not the amount of knowledge he possesses which is the progress. This is merely evidence that progress has been going on within the child. An actual biological change has taken place. This is the progress. Social progress is not to be found in the number of conveniences man has produced to satisfy his needs. These may be evidences of progress but the actual change must be found in the social structure. Change may be taking place, but it may not be progress. It may only be growth.

A tumor may develop in the biological organism. This is growth but not progress. The tumor may eventually destroy the entire organism. The social structure may have produced great ease and many luxuries of life. Yet Rome fell because of this very thing. Progress must be growth in the right direction, and that direction is invariable. Human progress is that which secures the increase of human happiness. Comfort and pleasure are not happiness. Ease and luxury are not happiness.

Unless happiness is secured by the social structure, no matter how great a civilization may be, it is not progressive. It is a well-known biological fact that an organism is perfect in proportion as its organs are numerous and varied. The greater the number of organs, the greater capacity for enjoyment. But these organs must be functioning normally, or exercising their faculties. The same is true, in this case, of society. Progress is in proportion to the number of opportunities given for exercising the faculties and satisfying desire.

Zion as the full embodiment of supreme happiness is the social structure for which we are working. The extent to which we put into operation the various organs of this Christian society will determine our degree of happiness. Progress for us is a well-balanced movement of the church society toward Zion. The amount of progress made cannot always be determined by the things we see produced.

Christianity Succeeding in This Country

An encouraging report of progress of Christianity in this country as viewed by a foreigner, comes to us from a speech by Doctor Y. Y. Tsu, Chinese convert, before the Philadelphia meeting of the American branch of the World Alliance for Friendship Through the Churches. He is quoted in the Literary Digest as follows:

As a matter of fact, Christianity has succeeded well here in your country. Most of you are of the impulsive, hot-blooded Caucasian race. Christianity, which came out of the East, has civilized and stimulated you to many kinds of service for mankind. Herein is one of the greatest of all Christian victories. The Orient is watching America. You have made right stronger than might. Your churches are cooperating across national borders—your churches are cooperating in foreign lands.

Denominations Represented in Congress

"While less than half the people of the United States are members of a church, it is interesting to note," says the Christian Century, "that only 17 senators out of 96 are unaffiliated with the churches, and 41 out of 435 members of the house of representatives." It further suggests that the fear of the Ku Klux Klan that the country is in danger of being overrun by Catholics is not justified, at least by the Catholic constituency in Congress, for their quota on a representative basis is less than they would be entitled to.

The following figures compiled by the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the

Some weeks ago Bishop C. J. Hunt resigned voluntarily and on his own initiative as bishop of the Holden Stake, feeling that his work in that stake had been finished. He was succeeded by Bishop A. B. Phillips. Now under date of February 12 Bishop Hunt writes to the Presidency and Bishopric that he will be ready for active service in any field selected, by about March 10. He adds, "I was baptized thirty-eight years ago, February 14—a real valentine added to the church. I did not wait until April first." Bishop Hunt was indeed a valentine to the church in one sense, since he has carried with him quite generally through his ministry a message and spirit of love. Our readers will be glad to learn that he is still ready for active work in any field to which the Lord may seem to call him.

To keep olive oil from becoming rancid after the can has been opened, put in a couple of lumps of loaf sugar. This will keep it in perfect condition to the last.—From Glad Tidings.

Using Mild Poisons

Latter Day Saints need not apologize for the Word of Wisdom as it stands, and we refer to it again only because it is being constantly supported by scientific investigation. In this, as in other things, our church leads by revelation years before science is able to demonstrate the truth. In the Journal of the American Medical Association appears an article which in part follows:

Fisher and Fisk, in How to Live, state without reservation that the best rule for those who wish to attain the highest physical and mental efficiency is total abstinence from all substances that contain poisons, including spirits, wine, beer, tobacco, and even coffee and tea. Not a few persons among the millions of our population evidently prefer to "take a chance" on the "milder" sorts of beverages, among which tea and coffee are usually classed.

Work

Work!

Thank God for the might of it,
The ardor, the urge, the delight of it—
Work that springs from the heart's desire,
Setting the brain and the soul on fire,
Oh, what is so good as the heat of it?
And what is so kind as the stern command,
Challenging brain and heart and hand?

Work!

Thank God for the pride of it,
For the beautiful, conquering tide of it,
Sweeping the life in its furious flood,
Thrilling the arteries, cleansing the blood,
Mastering stupor and dull despair,
Moving the dreamer to do and dare.
Oh, what is so good as the urge of it,
And what is so glad as the surge of it?
And what is so strong as the summons deep,
Rousing the torpid soul from sleep?

Work!

Thank God for the peace of it,
For the terrible, keen, swift race of it—
Fiery steeds in full control,
Nostrils a-quiver to greet the goal;
Work, the power that drives behind,
Guiding the purpose, taming the mind,
Holding the runaway wishes back,
Reining the will to one steady track,
Speeding the energies faster, faster,
Triumphing over disaster.
Oh, what is so good as the pain of it,
And what is so great as the gain of it?
And what is so kind as the cruel goad,
Forcing us on through the rugged road?

Work!

Thank God for the swing of it,
For the clamoring, hammering ring of it,
Passion of labor daily hurled
On the mighty anvils of the world.
Oh, what is so fierce as the flame of it?
And what is so huge as the aim of it?
Thundering on through dearth and doubt,
Calling the plan of the Maker out,
Work, the Titan; Work, the friend,
Shaping the earth to a glorious end,
Draining the swamps and blasting the hills,
Doing whatever the spirit wills—
Rending a continent apart,
To answer the dream of the master heart.
Thank God for a world where none may shirk;
Thank God for the splendor of work!

Special Railroad Rates for Visitors to the Young People's Convention at Lamoni

A reduction of one and one half fare for the round trip on the "Certificate Plan" will apply for visitors (also dependent members of their families) attending the Young People's Convention to be held at Lamoni, Iowa, beginning June 5, 1924. The arrangement will apply from the following territory:

All points in the United States except points south of the Ohio River and East of the Mississippi River; also from points in Canada east of and including Armstrong, Fort William, and Sault Sainte Marie, Ontario; points in Manitoba on the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railways only, and all points in British Columbia.

The following directions are submitted:

Restricted Date of Sale

1. Tickets at the normal one-way tariff fare for the going journey may be bought on any of the following dates BUT ON NO OTHER DATES:

From Arizona, British Columbia, California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, May 30, 1924, to June 4, 1924, inclusive; summer excursion fares on a lower basis than the certificate plan fares will also be in effect from most of this territory; tickets on sale from May 22, 1924, to September 15, 1924, inclusive, with return limit of October 31, 1924.

From Colorado (except Julesburg), Montana, Utah, and Wyoming, May 31, 1924, to June 5, 1924, inclusive.

From all other points from which rates are authorized as above, June 2, 1924, to June 7, 1924, inclusive.

Don't Overlook the Above Dates of Sale

2. Be sure when purchasing your going ticket to ask the ticket agent for a certificate. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. If, however, it is impossible to get a certificate from the local ticket agent, a receipt will be satisfactory and should be secured when ticket is purchased. See that the ticket reads to Lamoni, Iowa. See that your certificate is stamped with the same date as your ticket. Sign your name to the certificate or receipt in ink. Show this to the ticket agent.

3. Call at the railroad station for ticket and certificate at least thirty minutes before the departure of the train.

4. Certificates are not kept at all stations. Ask your home station whether you can procure certificates and through tickets to the place of meeting. If not, buy a local ticket to nearest point where a certificate and through ticket to place of meeting can be bought and get receipt for fare paid to such point as well as certificate from there to Lamoni, Iowa.

5. Immediately upon your arrival at the meeting present your certificate to Mr. H. H. Gold, as the reduced fare for the return journey will not apply unless you are properly identified as provided for by the certificate.

6. No refund of fare will be made on account of failure to either obtain a proper certificate, or on account of failure to have the certificate validated.

7. It must be understood that the reduction for the return journey is not guaranteed, but is contingent on our receiving not less than 250 regularly issued certificates from ticket agents at starting points showing payment of normal one-way tariff fare of not less than 67 cents on the going trip.

8. If the necessary minimum of 250 regularly issued certificates are presented to the joint agent, and your certificate is validated, you will be entitled to a return ticket via the same route as the going journey at one half of the normal one-way tariff fare from place of meeting to point at which your certificate was issued up to and including June 18, 1924.

9. Return tickets issued at the reduced fare will not be good on any limited train on which such reduced fare transportation is not honored.

Special Notice to Pacific Coast Visitors

Visitors from Pacific Coast points should inquire from agents regarding tourist ticket rates as the summer tourist rates are much less than the special rates outlined above and these tickets are on sale from May 22, 1924, to and including September 15, 1924, and are good to return till October 31, 1924. These permit unlimited stopovers at intermediate points and are good on all fast trains.

If you cannot get the information you wish about rates or routes, write me.

Every religion has in some fashion or other offered deliverance to its devotees through sacrifice or spiritual discipline, or the assurance that their sins were atoned for and their deliverance assured through the suffering of others. . . . Religion must offer some explanation of the general problem of sorrow and evil; it must, above all, justify the ways of God with men.—Gains Glenn Atkins.

A Business Aspect of Our Spiritual Affairs

By Orval L. Thompson

The scientific business methods of to-day include aim and system as requirements for progress and success. Indeed, aim, system, and practical efficiency are the watchwords of the successful and progressive business man. This is more insistent to-day than in former years, due to the increase of knowledge gained by educational development and discovery. The evolution of progress by increasing invention and discovery naturally causes a speeding up of business activity, and where success accompanies haste there must of necessity be alertness, keenness of insight, and accuracy. Due to this demand, the unalert, the inefficient, and the inaccurate find it very difficult, if not impossible, to keep in or near the "front line" in the contest for existence. For indeed it is a contest. A certain author made this statement in one of his books some time ago: "To exist is to combat, because to exist is to take from the common seat of life a portion of the substance destined for all." To dip down into the common kettle of life to obtain the share of the substance that is needed for the sustenance of each, is necessary.

Enough for All

The amount that is obtained from the "great kettle" is determined by the size of our dipper and the efficiency by which we manipulate it. This fact demands our reasonable acknowledgment of the need for study and adaptation to present-day problems by present-day methods to develop and increase capacity and to stimulate and produce dexterity in manipulation. There is sufficient in "the common seat of life" for all, but to secure one's rightful share, the times demand efficiency obtained by proper training. We must move along with, if not ahead of, the throng or we are pushed aside to become wistful coveting spectators while the more efficient and determined pass us by, thus obtaining not only their own share but a portion of our share as well. They who are wide awake, systematic, and diligent both in sunshine and in storm are sure to get the most out of life.

While we acknowledge and recognize all of this need of training, and while it is the general view of the business world of to-day that efficiency is the test of success, yet we believe that with education in the broad sense and by the proper training of the motives governing society, the contest or combat for securing one's legitimate and rightful share becomes less necessary and may actually cease to be real combat. It is the motives governing society and the false standards set up by it for success that creates within people the spirit of greed, of selfishness, of covetousness and of idolatry, and these increase the heat of the contest and the weight of oppression, and this engenders jealousy and friction, fostering barbarous pugnacity and war by which the burdens of the social order are increased.

Success and Happiness

Success and happiness are not to be measured by the amount of finance one may have in his possession to hoard and selfishly to gloat over. Not long ago we read an article in the American Magazine which told of a certain man who resided at Detroit, Michigan, at the time of the incipency of Henry Ford's automobile project. The man was urged by some friends to invest in what was then an infant enterprise. After studying the matter carefully, investigating its merits and possibilities, the gentleman invested five thousand dollars, part of which he had to borrow. The company succeeded. Dividend checks came in increasing numbers and value, until the man was transferred almost automatically from a station of a man of small means in life to one of wealth. His five thousand dollars finally returned to him sixteen millions of dollars! The reporter interviewing this apparently most fortunate gentleman, asked him how he felt when he began to realize that he was to be a rich man. He replied that at first the novelty of this realization impressed him and his wife, but he added that they soon found that happiness does not come to one because of money alone. He said that both he and his wife chose to live the common life still. His wife still prepared their food, though they are able to hire servants. He also stated that the friends they once had and whom they loved seem now to withdraw from them, feeling that now they were out of the social standing of these newly made millionaires. And at the age of sixty-one with the knowledge that they could have anything that money can buy, they longed for the old days.

Money Not an End

It is true that since we are in the world and that this medium of exchange is required for obtaining the needful things to sustain and support us, and we must recognize that we must have this means demanded by society before we can get our share from the "common seat of life," in this sense finance is a factor in our happiness. But this happiness does not come because of the finance alone; it comes because of what the finance will permit us to do for ourselves and others. It is only a means to an end and not an end in itself. The only possible value that a surplus amount of finance can be to any individual is the possible good that may be done with it. Money has a mighty power to construct or to wreck, to canker or to polish, because society has made it so. But a man's real power is never to be measured by the amount of gold he may hold in his possession by which he invites the false admiration of the covetous and oftentimes the all-too-prevalent, subtle tactics of underworld agents. He who makes a god out of his surplus means, has erected a perishable idol. He will awaken some day to find that his bushel of diamonds has turned to pebbles, for he has forgotten the key-flower to happiness and true success. Genius seldom develops itself under the influence of wealth.

Ideals of the Great Teacher

The greatest of teachers whose ideals could well be utilized by society to-day with profit, taught the great lesson that revealed the source of true power in man. His parable of the rich young man, as told in Matthew the nineteenth chapter, who allowed his wealth to become his god and a barrier to his aspiring to higher things, and his parable of the miser whose world reached but to the limited confines of his own farm, keeping his increasing surplus in more barns while his inner powers lay dormant and his soul corroding, impress the significant fact that, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of [material] things which he possesseth" (Luke 12). He taught that lasting immortal life and true happiness are obtained from a deeper mine of treasure, and that that treasure lies in the great possibilities within each of us. It is our personal worth that determines our power and value.

A man's true power is measured, not by what he possesses directly in material things, but by his power to do things; not by what he may hold, but by what he is. If his developed powers, his energy and his possibilities are efficiently directed and governed by high and worthy motives, he is an asset to society and his increase of constructive social and business ability is as oil poured out upon the bearings of the social machinery.

The Power of Religion

Now, to develop our personal value and to increase our powers there have been provided agencies to assist us, that when used will bring our possibilities to a realization and will utilize our forces for the engendering of social happiness. Religion is a most potent force as an agency for this purpose. When properly used and applied it molds the character into enduring value, it enlarges the heart, makes worthy the motives, and transforms life into beauty.

Religion is the dye that gives color and grandeur to life. It changes the motive of the individual from "I get that I might have," to "I get that I might have more to give." This is not removing incentive for progress, but it is the creation of a higher aim and purpose. And one possessed of this nobler incentive, soon finds the truth and practicability in the declarations made by the Divine Teacher, "He that loseth his life [in service] shall find it," and "To him that hath shall be given, and to him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he seemeth to have." One who has naught but material treasure at his command, devoid of personal power, has nothing in comparison with him whose personal power and influence constitute a living fountain sending forth into life the elixir that makes for greater happiness and more abundant life. This is what the Master meant when he said, "He that believeth on me . . . out of his belly [life] shall flow rivers of living water" (John 7: 38), and "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die" (John 11: 26).

Objective of Life

Therefore, our greatest object and purpose should be the development of personal power, not for the sake of becoming spectacular but to be really of worth. The gospel of the Christ, when properly applied and lived, will prove a most valuable factor in this development, for in it is contained all of the highest ideals for the directing of our forces into worthy channels. The Christ philosophy applied brings the best in man out where it can be of service to the end of elevating the individual and the glory of God.

But in considering the relations of the gospel to life's activities, we must recognize that the time in which we are living demands our recognition and the application of the same practical business methods that have been pointed out as applied to the secular business problems that confront us in the contest for material existence. Indeed, we should look upon our religion as a part of our business, and we should recognize in this consideration the admonition of Paul in his letter to the Romans (12: 11), that we must not be "slothful in business," and that we should be "fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." And if we do not appreciate the truth in this we find the inevitable consequence in our lives, failure in our "religious business" or spiritual affairs. Unless we are systematic, having an objective or aim in our religious endeavors, we cannot hope to get the best out of them. And as we said of those in the secular business world outside of religion, so say we of those in the business of spiritual development, "they who are wide-awake, systematic, and diligent both in sunshine and in storm are sure to get the most out of spiritual life" for the development of personal power and usefulness. Of course there would be no combat here. It is very improbable that there would even be contest, for it generally happens that those who are the most careless and unsystematic in religious affairs are so indifferent and unappreciative of their possibilities that the success of their more diligent fellows does not apparently affect them. However, the loss to the dilatory in spiritual duties is as great as the loss realized from inefficient business methods in general business affairs.

Making the Budget

At this season of the year business firms take an inventory of their stock and methods to find out their present worth, to find also what progress has been made during the past year, and to seek out possible errors and weak places in the business so that adjustment can be made. Then having found out the standing, or "present worth," of the business, they proceed to make plans or to make a budget for the new year, their object being to increase or build up the business. Since men are so systematic in their material business, why should we not be just as systematic in our personal development which is worth so much more? Why not each of us take an inventory of our religious business or our personal development and try to look at ourselves squarely to find our present worth, looking back over the past year to see what we have done, or what we have left undone, that has made us what we are to-day? Then having determined this, let us plan for the new year. Let us make our budget. Here are some suggestive items that might be considered in our annual review and inventory:

Suggested Inventory

1. Prayer:

- a. How much did I pray during the past year?
- b. Have I often felt the spiritual help that comes through prayer?
- c. Am I a better man or woman to-day because I have been with God?
- d. Have I felt a weakening or fainting in my spiritual life because I have failed to heed the injunction, "Men ought always to pray and not to faint"?

2. Study:

- a. How is my mental health? Is it keen and strong? If so, why?
- b. If my mentality is becoming slow and shallow, can I avoid it?
- c. How much did I study and develop my mental faculty during the past year? Do I know more now than I did a year ago?
- d. Have I sensed and appreciated the truth in the following:

1. "The glory of God is intelligence."—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6.

2. "Intelligence cleaveth unto intelligence."—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 10.
3. "Whosoever hath, to him shall be given."—Luke 8: 18.
4. "Seek learning even by study, and also by faith."—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 36.
5. "Study to show thyself approved unto God."—2 Timothy 2: 15, Inspired Version.

3. Health (Physical):

- a. Have I realized that the neglect of my physical and moral health necessarily hinders the development of my spiritual powers?
- b. Have I appreciated the fact that my body is the house of my spirit?
- c. If my physical health is good, what did I do to make it so?
- d. If my physical health is poor, could I have avoided the cause?
- e. Have I studied and applied the laws of health to myself?

4. Talents:

- a. Have I developed my talents during the past year?
- b. Can I do more with them now than I could a year ago?

5. Habits:

- a. What undesirable habits have I overcome during the past year?
- b. What desirable habits have I cultivated?

6. Cheerfulness:

- a. Have I been a willing, cheerful worker during the past year?
- b. Did I smile much during the year? Could I have smiled more?
- c. Did I appreciate the truth of the following:
  1. "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine."—Proverbs 17: 22, I. V.
  2. "A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance."—Proverbs 15: 13, I. V.
  3. "Do these things . . . with cheerful hearts and countenances; . . . with a glad heart and cheerful countenance; . . . inasmuch as ye do this the fullness of the earth is yours: . . . to strengthen the body and to enliven the soul."—Doctrine and Covenants 59: 4.
  4. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."—John 13: 17, I. V.

7. Industry:

- a. How much time did I waste during the past year?
- b. Time employed that might have been better employed?
- c. Did I recognize the following:
  1. "Let every man be diligent in all things. And the idler shall not have place in the church."—Doctrine and Covenants 75: 5.
  2. Nature never rests. She can be directed and utilized for constructive work, or she can be allowed to cause degeneration and destruction. She will keep busy. Hence the phrase, "An idle brain is the Devil's workshop."
  3. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." And where your heart is, there lies your ambition.
  4. "You cannot serve two masters." Your capacity will not allow you to do so. That which occupies your attention expels other things. If occupied at good things there is no room for other things. If occupied at degenerate and useless things there is no room for good and constructive things. Yours it is to choose. Your choices determine what you are.

8. Church:

- a. Did I attend church services as much as I could have done during the past year?
- b. What did I add to the church during the past year?
- c. What did I receive from the church services during the year?
- d. Did I appreciate the value of association and of unified worship with others?

9. Tithes and Offerings:

- a. How much did I pay during the past year?
- b. Do I owe any tithing? How much?
- c. Did I try honestly to gain all that I could so that I would have more tithing and offering to pay?

10. Receipts:

- a. Has the church brought me fair returns for all I have invested in it, both in active service and means?
- b. Has the church been a paying proposition in my business during the past year? Has it been an asset, a liability, or a loss?
  1. If I feel disappointed in the returns, can I determine the cause? Was I at fault?
  2. If I am satisfied with the result, what was the cause of success and profit?
- c. Did I recognize my church work as a part of my business during the past year?
  1. Did it help my business or did it hinder it?
  2. If my secular business paid during the past year was it not because I put more time or means into it? Will not the same rule apply to my spiritual affairs?

11. Am I satisfied with the past year and my present worth? Is my present worth what it should be considering the opportunities that I had? Can I profit by the past year's experiences during this year?

If we improve much during the new year it must be because we are going to proceed in a systematic, business-like manner with an aim or goal in view. This is necessary, as before stated, for the times demand it. There are so many distracting influences on every hand to-day that it is very easy to spend much time on things that do not pay. The statement of the wise man as told in the Proverbs (29: 18), "Where there is no vision the people perish," was never more true than to-day in this connection. Then if we succeed we must have an aim or a vision of what we wish to accomplish. The following items might appear in our budget:

Suggested Budget

1. Prayer:

How much and how fervently am I going to pray during the new year? "Pray without ceasing."—1 Thessalonians 5: 17, I. V.

2. Study:

How much systematic study am I going to do during this year? "Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man."

3. Health (Physical):

How carefully am I going to observe and follow the systematic and practical rules of health during the year? "Ye are the temple of God. . . if any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy."—1 Corinthians 3: 16, 17, I. V.

4. Talents:

How much time and practice am I going to give to the development of my talents? "Whosoever receiveth, to him shall be given; and whosoever receiveth not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have."—Luke 8: 18, I. V. Our talents develop and increase with use. They weaken and decrease when not used.

5. Habits:

- a. What undesirable habits have I that I am going to overcome and master during this year?
- b. What good habits am I going to cultivate during the new year? Christ is the positive way out and upward.

6. Cheerfulness:

How much am I going to smile during the year? Make it liberal. It is a healthy habit. "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine."

7. Industry:

- a. How am I going to utilize my spare moments during the year?

We sleep over 3,000 hours on the average each year.
We eat over 1,000 hours during the year.
We work or exercise mentally or physically on the average of 3,000 hours a year.
We still have at least 2,000 hours left. What do we do with them?

- b. How diligently am I going to discharge the duties at hand?

- c. I will practice to acquire speed and accuracy.

"Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men."—Proverbs 22: 29, I. V.

8. Church:

- a. How often am I going to attend the regular church services during the new year?
- b. How earnestly and consecratedly am I going to enter into the spirit of each service? "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, . . . it shall be done for them of my Father who is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."—Matthew 18: 19, 20, I. V. "If ye are not one, ye are not mine."—Doctrine and Covenants 38: 6. "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another and the Lord hearkened and heard it."—Malachi 3: 16, I. V.

9. Tithing and Offering:

How much am I going to pay and give in tithes and offerings during the year? Decide now! I will win!

"Prove me now herewith saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Malachi 3: 10, I. V. "Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days."—Ecclesiastes 11: 1, I. V.

10. I am determined to put into my religious business sufficient to bring returns that make it pay, and that will make it an asset to my life and to those around me.

11. Other suggestions.

Determine these, and success will come spiritually, mentally, physically, and temporally. If we will not resolve to be diligent and systematic, if we will not put as much heart, love, and life into our work, in a

Handwork

By Ruby M. Williamson

PART XVII OF ARTICLES ON HOME BUILDING

In the Mothercraft Manual by Mary L. Read, there are three fundamental principles to be noted in chapter 18: first, all is grist that comes to the mill of the handworker; second, the one element that will transform any object or combination of objects into a created product is imagination; and third, the purpose of the child's handwork is not the production of the finished product, but the production of creative self-activity.

Work of the Hand and Brain

The brain and the hand must work together in the solution of life's problems. The very young child in the beginning must become efficient, and that should be his aim. He must work with his hands. The greater part of the child's "work" is done with his hands. The material that he must work with should be plastic. We find several materials that are of this type. Clay is very good for small children. They can make various things with it. Every child should have a sand pile. He should, if possible, have a sand box inside when it is too cold out of doors. It is a very good medium for self-expression. There are so many things that can be made with it, and I believe children two or three years of age and older enjoy it. As they grow older they are able to re-create their experiences with it. Perhaps they business-like manner for God and humanity, let us not covet, envy, or complain if our brother who does these things comes to the end of this year's experiences with a broader smile, a lighter heart, and with much more to do with than we; for having done much he hath, and "to him that hath shall be given." If we will increase our personal power during the year by the application of practical business methods, we shall add a lubricant to the social weal that will make society feel that we are an asset to it. If each man and woman, young or old, in the church wherever he or she may be will but appreciate the significance of this and will conform to it, he will preach more convincing, powerful sermons in a silent way and add more value to his own personal power than anything else could possibly add; individually and collectively we shall march in the line of the successful under the banner of victory, "and the world confess that with us God has residence below."

have been to the park or to the city and may want to reproduce something they have seen there.

Plastic Material

Along with the plastic materials I might mention another that is very good and can be made in the home—a composition of salt and corn starch. It is a substitute for clay, cleaner than clay, and cheaper, too. Anyone can make it in the home, and the children enjoy it very much. The recipe is: two parts of salt, one part of corn starch, and one part of water. Mix it thoroughly and cook until it becomes thick. Cool and work as you would clay. If kept under a damp cloth, it will last one or two weeks, and may be used more than once if desired.

A child must have objects to work with. They add to his experience. They give him an opportunity for social development. He takes pride in doing or making something he can show. The work the child does should not be so much for the highly finished product as for the joy of doing and expressing his feelings and ideas. This may not be so apparent to the adult as to the child.

Utilizing Ordinary Materials

Many people think handwork materials are expensive, but I am sure you will be able to find many things that are not expensive. A very cheap and a very satisfactory way of educating the child is to make use of the many things you can get that are really waste materials, instead of buying expensive blocks, papers, and tools for him to work with. When it is hard to get black paper, go to the photographer's and ask for the old kodak rolls which he will be willing to give away. Boxes, brown wrapping paper, and many odds and ends are to be found in any home. The Mothercraft Manual suggests a great many materials that are easily procured.

Forms of Handwork

Forms of handwork suggested are painting, drawing, paper cutting, paper tearing, modeling, and carpentry. Paper tearing should be eliminated because the nine- or ten-year-old child is the only one who is really ready for it. The smaller muscles in the young child are not developed to this fine a degree. It is therefore not the proper handwork to give to small children. There is plenty of cheap paper in the home that the child may use for drawing purposes. This form of handwork will afford a great deal of entertainment for almost any child, for the experiences he has to pass through are the things he will want to represent. For instance: when the circus was in town, it afforded a medium of expression for children of our school. The results were representations in drawing, cutting, etc. Trips to the park, zoo, and such excursions will also be a source of inspiration to them. Carpentry tools are another aid to the child in expressing himself. I find some girls enjoy them as much as boys. If possible, the child should have a saw, hammer, and nails and some sort of a work bench. He will get much fun from it, and it is a good education in many ways.

Selecting Material for the Child

The materials used will depend upon the child's environment. The city child can more readily find spools, pasteboard boxes, wooden boxes, buttons, while the country child can find such things as cobs, twigs, acorns, and milkweed pods. Perhaps in small cities you will find most of the materials listed for the country child. Then you might add to the list given in this book. Macaroni makes good beads. They may be painted and cut in different ways. You will find there are many things around your homes that can be used. I know of a set of blocks you might like the dimensions of. They are building blocks which can be made in any planing mill. It calls for:

- 150 blocks, 3 by 6 by 12 inches.
- 50 blocks, 3 by 3 by 12 inches.
- 100 blocks, 6 by 6 by 6 inches.
- 25 blocks, 3 by 6 by 6 inches.
- 25 blocks, 6 by 6 by 6 inches, divided in half diagonally.

Then boards to make a base for the blocks, to build floors, etc:

- 4 boards, 3 ft. by 1 in. by 18 inches.
- 40 boards, 3 ft. by 1 in. by 24 inches.
- 20 boards, 3 ft. by 1 in. by 30 inches.
- 12 boards, 6 ft. by 1 in. by 10 inches.

You will not need as many blocks and boards as listed here; this set is more for schools than homes.

Children from the kindergarten age up, especially, like to play with them. Three- and four-year-old children can handle them nicely. They are large enough to build houses to play in; they can put three blocks on the floor and make a chair that they can sit on. From these blocks children can build steps, towns, etc. Kindergarten and first grade children like them very much, because they are able to represent their home, school, or street. They like to add to this small beginning, larger parts of their community, especially if there is a group working together. Blocks form a basis for handwork for any child. Light-weight smooth wood should be used for making them.

Injurious Handwork

Some of the handwork that is injurious is work that is too small for the child's fingers and muscles. All handwork should be large enough to be easily handled. Any work that the child has to be helped with is too difficult. If he cannot see its development and go ahead with it with very little suggestion, it is too hard. Handwork is a means for giving color and expression to imaginative ideas. Many stories can be portrayed. "No effort should be made before six years to create a finished product." I think that could almost be extended to eight years.

The Joy of Creation

As an example of the way children love to create their own things to play with, I heard of a case where the child had everything she wanted, a doll house fully equipped and dolls of all kinds. She enjoyed them until she went to kindergarten. There they made furniture, curtains, beds, dishes. One day she came home and took everything out of her playhouse and put in all the crude things she had made at school. She brought home dolls she had made out of paper sacks and tissue paper. Her mother wondered why she did that so she visited the kindergarten and found out what the children were doing there. She discovered the secret and saw what a good time the children had making those things and then she knew why her child did this thing. They were the playthings she had made for herself and what she was interested in doing. They were the product of her own hands. Before she had not fully enjoyed her playhouse. When she made her own equipment she enjoyed it and enjoyed working for it, too. Children will always do that. It is not the toy that costs the most money that brings the most enjoyment.

Dolls can be made of almost anything, clothespins, nuts, paper spoons, potatoes, carrots, lollipops, and corncobs. Rag dolls made from socks are good. If a doll is wanted just for the present, one made from a paper sack is satisfactory.

Playhouses

Perhaps one of the most enjoyable kinds of handwork is building with large blocks, making houses and stores. These can be made from any waste boxes—wooden boxes, fruit and orange crates—anything that can be used. You can obtain them very cheaply from the grocer or perhaps he will give them away. The child can be given them in their crude state and allowed to transform them. Six-year-old children brought boxes to school and decided what they wanted to make. One conceived the idea of putting a chimney on his box. He made it and put it on and it was not more than two days until every box had a chimney, whether it had anything else or not. All were different. Some were round, some had square corners, some were straight pieces of paper pasted up beside the building. One boy thought his store should have an elevator so he cut a door in one end of his building and used a match box for the elevator. Children are really ingenious when given a chance to express their own ideas. The child wants to have his box open so he can see in it. Still, he may want to have something that will look like the front of the building. A stiff piece of paper may be used on the side of the box. Windows may be cut on each side and a door in the center. The lower part of the window may be folded back for a shelf in the window and the upper half folded out for an awning.

The Community Project

Another playhouse that is very nice and can be used in the home as well as in the school is a house that can be taken down at any time. It is a screen and can be made in four or five sections and fastened together. It is a frame covered with burlap or plasterboard. A window and a door may be cut in it. The child can get inside of it. He can use it for a house or a store or a school.

Last summer I saw a community that had been built by kindergarten children. They used the large boards, placed their blocks on them and made all their buildings. They made the school playground, school garden, and everything they could think of. It is surprising how much children will find to do when they find something to interest them. Trains, wagons, boats, and vehicles add to the reality of the project. Furniture can be made of blocks, wood, paper, or cardboard. Paper is an easy material to use, but wooden furniture lasts a little longer.

Making Furniture

The sixteen-square fold as a foundation for folding and making furniture is given by Mary L. Read. Educators now believe experimentation to be the better way. Sixteen-square folding is an easy way for older children but is too difficult for beginners. It is better to have every child invent some original method of making his furniture. He will then use his brain as well as his hands and will thereby gain self-confidence.

"Mechanical toys that children make themselves are of educational value, as well as interest." An example of this kind of toy is the theater with shifting scenes. Curtains that may be put up and down add to the fun. I have seen very clever motion picture reels made by the children representing some story. These were drawn on strips of drawing paper. One child gets behind the box and slips the reel through slits made in the sides of the box.

In conclusion, I should like to leave this thought with you: "Joyous purposeful activity is the secret of honest, joyous living." If the child has some activity with some purpose in it, he is happy and is helping himself and helping others.

LETTERS

Small Aid Society at Fort Madison Contributes Large Sum to Building Fund

FORT MADISON, IOWA, February 11.—Picking up the HERALD for January 30 and reading your editorial "An enviable record," I thought that to write of our work here might encourage some others who feel as backward and afraid to try things as we did a few years ago.

We talked many times of holding a bazaar, but were afraid to try. About three years ago, our branch decided to build a new church, so we, the women of the church, tried to help the building committee all we could. We held a number of bazaars, served many dinners and suppers, ran stands at Labor Day celebrations and at fairs, and held home bake-sales monthly.

We have an organized aid society which does any kind of sewing and quilting they can get to do.

In the year 1921 we turned over nearly $1,000 to the building committee. Owing to the railroad strike which threw so many in our town out of employment, especially our church members, we hardly reached $500 in 1922. Yet we were not discouraged, and last year we worked harder than ever, so that in the three years we have gathered together $2,435.05. This is a special effort of the aid society of twenty-one members and does not include any fund raised by the branch officers.

Two Weeks' Meetings to Be Held at Jonesport

From a Letter to the First Presidency

STONINGTON, MAINE, February 4.—Your letter received regarding going to Jonesport, and I expect to leave here on the boat next Wednesday to go there and hold a two weeks' meeting. The services at Little Deer Isle were very well attended with wonderful interest. Only two young people were baptized in the icy waters of the Atlantic, but there will be an unusual ingathering there, as many expressed their intention of joining the church soon. I have never had better liberty in preaching and never have seen such results in administration so frequently as I have seen in the time I have been here. We had about 200 out last night at our regular preaching service in Stonington. Excellent prospects for an ingathering.

Church Building Renovated at Tawas City

TAWAS CITY, MICHIGAN, February 12.—The walls of the church were newly decorated just before the holidays, also a new rug purchased for the vestibule, and varnish for the woodwork, which greatly improved the appearance of the church. This was done through the efforts of the intermediate Sunday school class and their teacher. They also gave five dollars toward the Christmas offering.

In December the Department of Women held a bazaar at which they took in $92.15, with $21 expense. This goes toward the payment on the church.

The Christmas exercises, under the able supervision of Sister Belle Slye, were without doubt the best in town, and there are four other churches. The building was filled to capacity, many standing.

Brother W. A. Somerfield has an opening at Oscoda, about twenty miles north of here, where he has a standing appointment, going on the train on alternate Sundays.

Tawas City has for some time been hindered by much sickness and now a very severe winter. Yet they are grateful to be no worse off than they are.

A series of meetings is being planned, but the date has not been set. It will perhaps be in April when the snow is gone. At this series good music is desired, so if there are musicians, either vocal or instrumental, in Central Michigan or any of the nearer places outside of Central, who can come to assist, they should correspond with the writer at Tawas City, Michigan.

New Philadelphia Branch Makes Improvements on Church Building

NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO, February 8.—This branch is very much interested in improving the house of the Lord. Monthly socials have been held which have proved good in two ways: first, they helped the Saints get better acquainted among themselves and also with some of their neighbors; and in the second place, a nice sum of money was raised with which new pews for the chapel are about to be secured. The committee did much figuring and at last found a firm which will build the pews out of solid white oak for less than $500. These will be finished after they are placed in the church.

The completed platform, which reaches across the front of the church, certainly makes a decided improvement, and the Saints are delighted. A special collection was taken up on Sunday, and the Sunday school collection was over $12. It only shows what can be done if some one will but make the step forward.

Philadelphia to Get Conference

The next thing is to repaper the church and finish the windows in fine colors. This branch will feel very proud of its chapel when all is done. The Saints were so pleased over their recent efforts that they wanted their other brothers and sisters from the Kirtland District to come and worship with them. William Goudy, the pastor, made a special effort to get the district conference to meet here. It was doubtful since New Philadelphia is so very near the southern end of the district. To everyone's surprise a very nice letter was received recently from Elder T. G. Neville, president of the district, advising that the decision was in favor of this place.

Chapel to Be Well Kept

The aim of New Philadelphia is to keep the chapel in such a condition that it will be inviting to the Spirit. All things being equal, the Lord would rather come to a clean place than one not clean and tidy. Some branches do not keep the house of the Lord as tidy as they might. They do not realize that, though the Lord is very humble and kind, at the same time he loves a neat, clean chapel. Some people do not keep even their hands, faces, and clothing as clean and neat as they could. One can walk along the street and note the appearance of a horse, harness, and vehicle and tell the type of man who drives it. You can usually discern the amount of Spirit in man by his outward appearance, for the outside is usually a reflection from the inside. Of course some people appear nice on the outside and are really bad within, which may last for a time, but watch the end.

The branch is making progress according to prophetic promises, and much of the credit is due the officers who lead. This brings to mind the beautiful thought expressed by the poet Longfellow:

"Let us then be up and doing
With a heart for any fate,
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

Fifteen Baptized at Sutton, England

From a Letter to the First Presidency

LONDON, ENGLAND, February 1.—The first of January we started the month's work by going to Manchester and attending the conference of the Northern District, held the first Saturday and Sunday. We spent a few days in Manchester, and as it was very cold and damp I took cold, but on the following Saturday I attended the Midlands district conference held in Birmingham.

Meetings Held at Sutton-in-Ashfield

After this conference I returned to Sutton-in-Ashfield and held a series of meetings for one week, and on Sunday night two excellent young married couples gave their names for baptism. They are entire new blood and will be a wonderful help to the Sutton Branch. As a result of three weeks' meetings, two before Christmas and this one in January, fifteen people were baptized, which is quite an addition to their membership, previously being about forty-four. All during the week while I was holding these last meetings I was ill, and influenza took hold of me so that I was unable to take care of these baptisms. Brother Willis, the branch president, officiated.

Illness Postpones Meetings at Clay Cross

I was advertised at the close of the Sutton meetings to start in Clay Cross the following Monday night, the 21st, but on account of my illness I had to cancel my meetings for the entire week. However last Sunday I felt a little better and preached morning and evening. I had a relapse on Monday, so had to cancel my meetings until Wednesday of this week. There were so many outsiders interested that even though I did not feel equal to it, I made the attempt on Wednesday night. Thursday I felt better and preached to a large number who were present.

The interest here is remarkable. The Saints invite their friends, and those friends become interested and in turn invite their relatives and friends. I am of the opinion that if there were an effort made in this section for about six months between Sutton-in-Ashfield and Clay Cross Branches, there would be an abundant harvest, for the foundation has been laid and many people are interested and beg us to continue holding services.

Birmingham Meetings Advertised

We are advertised for Birmingham next Monday, and as we desire to visit the Northern District where the Saints have been so kind to us, and also desire to say good-by to the Saints in Llanelly and round about, and as we want to see my father's brother whom we thought dead but who is living at Newport, we shall have to leave Clay Cross. But we hope the brethren here will be able to hold the interest and that there may be an ingathering of precious souls.

We shall return home sometime in April and of course shall visit my mother first, as she has been longing to see us. She is over eighty years old.

RICHARD BALDWIN.

Two Weeks' Meetings Held at Woodbine

From a Letter to the First Presidency

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 9.—During the month of January I held a series of meetings in Woodbine lasting two weeks. Weather was extremely cold, and the roads were blocked so that people could not come in from the country, yet our number gradually increased.

Each evening our regular service was preceded by a fifteen-minute prayer meeting in the basement. These meetings were quite largely attended, many young people being present with a good spirit manifest.

From there I went to Missouri Valley and received hearty support from officers and members in my work. I was informed by the president that nearly fifty per cent of the total membership are not active in church work. In all I preached twenty-four times and held twelve prayer services and attended three other meetings.

I was called home by sickness and found three of my family down with influenza. All are improved, and I return to Iowa this week where I expect to attend the conference at Sioux City, Saturday, and hold special meetings at Pisgah, Iowa, next week.

Year Old Branch Progressing

LAKEWOOD, OHIO, January 28.—The Lakewood Branch was organized over one year ago, Brother J. F. Curtis of the Quorum of Twelve, and Brother George Neville, district president, being present at the organization. Reference was made at the time by both the men to the spirit of humility and love manifested at that time. So far it still exists. There is a membership here of about fifty, all fine Saints.

Brother William Patterson, as missionary supervisor in the district, has been laboring for some time at Geneva, Lorain, Cleveland, and Lakewood. He has accomplished a great work. While few have been baptized, many friends have been won to the work, and many others are near the water's edge. Brother Patterson is well liked by young, middle-aged, and old, being able to educate, instruct, and entertain them, and gain their confidence. He expects to go to Kirtland, Sunday, February 3, for a week or so. Lakewood will naturally miss him but trust he will meet with success in other parts of the district in which he labors, and feel at liberty to return whenever he can find time to visit here again.

The Department of Women is working well with Sister Berry, sr., at the head. The ladies had a pie social recently and $30 was cleared.

Building Fund

A building fund has been started already which the branch hopes will some day materialize in a lot on which a church building will stand. What a grand and glorious feeling it will be to have a meeting place all our own! The little church at Cleveland had a long, hard struggle to pay for their building, but it was accomplished as all others of like nature have been where the Saints are interested.

Lakewood has a fine Sunday school, with Brother Frank Barrington in charge. He is a young man who will make his mark in the work. Also the Religio president, Brother Roy Clough, is another young man of promise, a teacher in the branch. This place has three elders, one teacher, and one deacon, at present.

A visit from Brother George Neville, district president, is expected for February 10.

R. MILLER.

Work on the Isles of Pines Continues

From a Letter to the First Presidency

NUEVA GERONA, ISLE OF PINES, December 27.—We thank the First Presidency, Bishopric, and Quorum of Twelve for the Christmas greeting. It cheered us to have been given evidence of our connection with the rest of the brotherhood. We have not been having special meetings in which we could present the gospel to the world, but we have been trying to feed the sheep and those who are not of the fold who have been visiting with us. There are prospects of greater work in other parts of the island, and our hopes are growing greater and brighter. We wish for all of you a successful New Year individually and, as leaders, collectively. Our hope in the future of our church has grown greater and brighter also.

T. M. CARR.

Saints Have Wilson Memorial Services

FANNING, KANSAS, February 13.—Appropriate memorial services were held both at Fanning and at Troy on Sunday, February 10, in memory of ex-President Wilson. At Troy the Saints joined with other denominations which held their services in the Methodist church at that place. Brother Twombly and Brother Smidt were on the program, and some of the young Saints sang in the chorus with the high school.

At Fanning duets and appropriate readings were given and Woodrow Wilson's favorite sacred hymns and national songs were sung. All felt that a great statesman had gone the way of mankind.

Some of the members here have radios and tune in to hear the programs which are broadcasted from Zion. All are pleased as well as edified with them. Others are eager to install radios, so as to be able to participate in the educational and profitable pastime during the long winter evenings, which have been many this year.

Very little change in officers was made at the annual business meeting December 27. Everything has started off in a good way toward a prosperous year. Brother Roy Tilden is branch president with a corps of officers who are willing to help. Brother L. M. Smidt has charge of the work at the Troy mission.

MARGARET E. DITTEMORE.

Four Weeks' Meetings Close at Trenton

TRENTON, MISSOURI, February 16.—This branch has just closed a series of four weeks' meetings, beginning January 15 and closing February 10. They were begun by Elders W. H. Kelley and T. W. Curtis, but Brother Kelley returned to Independence near the close of the first week, leaving Elder Curtis to continue.

Brother Curtis had many obstacles in the way, but a fine interest was manifested. Representatives of the Utah Church were out a few nights and were very busy tracting the town during the meetings. Brother Curtis showed the difference in the two churches plainly in a sermon on "Latter-day apostasy."

Several people here were nearly converted, and it is hoped that Brother Curtis will return in the near future.

J. D. PROFFIT.

Five Weeks' Meetings Close at Montrose

MONTROSE, IOWA, February 18.—Saints and friends of the Montrose Branch are rejoicing that they have been permitted to enjoy a five weeks' series of missionary services from January 13 to February 17. These were conducted by Elder C. M. Clifford.

Brother Clifford has labored diligently, though under physical affliction during the entire time. Much educative work has been accomplished along with spiritual strengthening of all members who attended. Considerable interest was shown by a number of nonmembers, and Brother Clifford made many friends outside of the church as well as within. Among those interested were some of the business men of the town who seem eager to have Brother Clifford return during the summer to hold a series of meetings on the streets.

Nauvoo District is very fortunate to have Brother Clifford appointed as its missionary for this conference year.

O. T. MILLER.

D. J. Williams and Wife Arrive at Honolulu

From a Letter to the First Presidency

HONOLULU, HAWAII, February 4.—You will be interested in knowing that we arrived in Honolulu Saturday evening at 9 o'clock. We were about fourteen hours late as a result of a rough sea. Sister Williams was sick the first day after leaving Los Angeles but enjoyed the rest of the trip. Since landing, however, she still feels the motion of the boat and is somewhat sick, but we feel that it will not be long before she will be herself again.

We spent Sunday with the Honolulu Branch and enjoyed the day exceptionally well. A splendid degree of the Spirit was felt at all services, but a special degree was enjoyed at the social service. We feel sure that we will enjoy our work in this mission if the same Spirit is enjoyed in Hilo that we have felt here. From Brother McConley's description of the place and the Saints, we do not think that we will be disappointed.

We expect to stay in Honolulu for about two weeks in order to get acquainted with the Saints, then on to Hilo and sometime later to the island of Maui.

D. J. WILLIAMS.

Saints Urged to Prepare for Reunion of Gallands Grove and Little Sioux

MONDAMIN, IOWA, February 16.—The joint reunion of the Little Sioux and Gallands Grove Districts will be held at Dow City, Iowa, August 15 to 24. This is one of the oldest and most largely attended reunions of the church.

Dow City is situated on the Chicago Northwestern and the Illinois Central Railroads, also on the Lincoln Highway in western Iowa. The Saints have the free use of the beautiful city park. Every effort will be made to secure prominent and able speakers and departmental workers to make the reunion interesting and profitable to all who will attend in the spirit of the latter-day work. The Saints of these districts should begin to plan now to be present, and pray and work for its success.

The Saints, if they seek in humility and with willing sacrifice, may prepare for a great spiritual blessing and educational inspiration.

While ample provision will be made for athletic sports and recreational activities, the purpose of the gathering is to enable the Saints to grow in the gospel life, to catch a wider vision of their opportunities and responsibilities, and to prepare them for a more acceptable service to the Master.

How much is each willing to forego of ordinary and unnecessary expenditures between now and the middle of August that he may be able to attend and to share in the good things to be had at the Master's hand? How willing is each to seek a spiritual preparation which will enable him to partake in great measure of the promised endowment of the Holy Spirit?

There will be fine provisions for campers to care wholly or in part for themselves, good dining hall accommodations, tents for rent, and comfortable rooms in homes near the grounds.

CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK.

Father-Son Banquet Held at Philadelphia

From a Letter to the First Presidency

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, February 11.—I was able to attend four services yesterday without any ill effects, although I did not sleep as well as usual. I have not assumed the responsibilities of the leadership as yet, but of course am doing what I can to help along.

The Boy Scouts gave a Father-Son Banquet last Friday night after which they rendered a program and gave a demonstration of some of their work. Friday ended a contest for them, with the result that about twenty-seven new members were added to the troop. Now we also have about six first class scouts and about eight second class. Robert Campbell is the scoutmaster and really makes a good one. Sunday night there was preached a sermon for the boys who sat in a group in the church. Four of them took up the evening offering.

We are giving much attention to the prayer services and have been having good crowds and usually splendid meetings. Praying for the onward progress of the work.

A. E. STOFF.

Young People Appreciate Message From President

From a Letter to President Elbert A. Smith

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, January 15.—Your general letter addressed to the young people sent out from Lamoni was read before our young people on last Sunday evening, and it was greatly appreciated.

I take this opportunity of advising you that it was very good indeed, and sincerely trust that you may have a message for them occasionally, if you are able and have time to give it to them.

With kindest regards to all.

B. M. ANDERSON.

A Book of Mormon class composed of high school students organized eight weeks ago in the Stone Church Religio under the leadership of Roland Flanders, with a membership of seventeen has grown until it was found necessary to divide it into two sections. At the Sunday evening service, January 17, one hundred and four were present. The average has been about seventy-five.

CHURCH NEWS

Saints at Minneapolis Enjoying Period of Prosperous Work

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA, February 18.—Apostle J. F. Garver was in Minneapolis on January 27 and spoke to the Saints both morning and evening. The theme of his discourses was how the kingdom might come to us in an increasing degree, according to the promise of the scriptures, in proportion to the way in which we lived up to the law of the gospel and advanced toward the stature of the fullness of Christ. Brother Garver's visit was a source of encouragement to the Minneapolis Branch, and the words of inspiration and counsel which he gave to the men of the priesthood in an afternoon meeting proved to be of special advantage to those who heard him. Brother Garver has promised to visit here again soon, and the Saints will be happy to welcome him to this city.

Baptism Performed

A baptismal service took place in the church on February 17, and a large crowd came out in the afternoon to witness the ordinance. The young lady who obeyed the gospel call had been acquainted with the work for two or three years, and Minneapolis was glad to welcome her into the fold.

Department of Recreation and Expression

The ever-increasing interest on the part of all, and their readiness to move forward, are being manifested in various ways. The Department of Recreation and Expression under the leadership of Brother Wesley Elvin is moving forward rapidly. The number in attendance has grown so large that last Sunday he was obliged to form two new classes. The programs have proven of interest particularly and are bringing out talent of various kinds. The Minneapolis Religio Weekly, which is read at each meeting, is contributed to by various ones, and it shows some very good literary ability among the young people. Plans have also been announced for an oratorical contest for those above twenty years of age, and a short-story contest for those below twenty.

Valentine Parties

The Saint Valentine parties held last week were a grand success. They were held at three different places at the same time, in different parts of the city, in harmony with the group plan, which is working out so effectively in other ways. There was a good attendance at each party, and all enjoyed themselves.

Department of Women

The Department of Women also meets at two different places, and this arrangement is resulting in a better response and greater interest and efficiency.

Groups Expanded

A fourth group was started in Saint Paul last week. They met together for their first prayer meeting last Wednesday night at the home of Sister Freeman. This sister has been confined to her home for several years and has been unable to get out to the regular meetings, so this method of bringing the church to her was much appreciated. The other group prayer services are also proving successful in gathering the Saints together in the homes. It is better than just one meeting on Wednesday night at the church each week.

Reunion Preparations

The reunion committee has started to make arrangements for the Minnesota district conference and reunion which is to be held in Minneapolis some time in June. The speakers have already been asked for, and plans and preparations are being made for a good, live reunion for 1924.

Locating Scattered Saints

A number of Saints have moved into the cities recently, and several others have been found who were living here but who were not attending the services. The method of requesting those who know of any such persons living in Minneapolis or Saint Paul to write in about them has proven helpful in locating quite a number. It seems well, therefore, to repeat that request and ask those who have information along this line to write the pastor, C. A. Kress, 3808 Forty-second Avenue S., Minneapolis, Minnesota; or to Carroll Olson, 1923 Grand Avenue, Saint Paul, Minnesota.

Stereopticon Lectures Given at Wyeville

WYEVILLE, WISCONSIN, February 16.—Elder Lester Wildermuth arrived from Madison, Wisconsin, on January 15, bringing with him stereopticon views from the University Extension Bureau. Some of these he showed each evening, after which he preached some splendid, snappy missionary sermons to a goodly audience, considering the extreme cold.

Elder Ervin Lenox came January 19, and the two brethren spoke alternately until January 28. On Thursday evening the life of Lincoln was shown, followed by a speech on citizenship by Elder Lenox. The church was filled mostly with nonmembers, many being children to whom most of the talk was addressed.

Program and Pictures

The program committee of the Department of Recreation and Expression took charge Friday evening, rendering a very appropriate program in connection with the pictures of "The life of Christ." Songs, music, recitations, and readings accompanied the pictures. On this night also there was a good crowd and many nonmembers.

Other slides shown during the series were: Views on Archaeology, The prodigal son, The other wise man, and Our church properties and officers.

Much good has been done by this series of meetings and seed has been sown which it is hoped will bear fruit in time. Many appreciative remarks have been made by our visitors, especially children who seem to thoroughly enjoy the song service before each meeting and the questions asked them by the elders.

Department of Women

Mrs. Goldie Stout and Sister Hattie Wood entertained the ladies' aid and Department of Women on January 24, in the church basement. A luncheon was served and seven dollars taken in. Eight mothers and two school-teachers, all nonmembers, were present for the class in child training besides the regular members.

Elder Lenox returned Saturday, February 2, to meet Sister Lenox and two sons from Chetek, Wisconsin, and spend Sunday with the Saints here. He preached a fine sermon especially for the Saints and spoke again in the evening. He left Monday.

Elder J. O. Dutton, of Madison, Wisconsin, spent Sunday, February 10, with the Wyeville Saints, assisting in the sacrament after Sunday school. There was a great degree of the Spirit manifest. He preached Sunday evening to a good audience.

The Department of Recreation and Expression entertained at a valentine party in the church basement. Sixty-four guests were present, and the decorations, refreshments, and games were appropriate for the occasion.

Cleveland Church to Be Recarpeted

CLEVELAND, OHIO, February 20.—Cleveland is desirous that all the Saints coming this way should stop and get acquainted. The place of meeting is at Seventy-First Street on the Wade Park Avenue car line.

This branch is trying to get its list of membership corrected. This is a large city, and all the resident members should cooperate, first by giving their mailing address to the branch secretary.

The church is progressing favorably here. Cleveland has invited the Kirtland district conference to convene here.

The building is well provided for now except a new carpet, which is under active consideration. The Department of Women took the lead, the Religio followed next with a supper and entertainment. Now the Sunday school will give a supper. At the Religio program Friday night a special offering for the carpet will be taken.

The branch at present is presided over by H. Talbut, with two other priests as associates.

District President Is Visitor at Fall River

FALL RIVER, MASSACHUSETTS, February 12.—At the sacramental service of February 3, Elder William Sinclair, M. D., and wife of Boston, were visitors. Both were spoken to encouragingly through prophecy. They had come to visit Sister Elizabeth Gilbert, Sister Sinclair's mother, who was ill. Brother Sinclair is president of the district.

All were glad to welcome Elder John Rogerson at this service after seven weeks' absence and to hear his testimony again.

Bishop M. C. Fisher was the speaker at both services, February 10. In the morning he spoke on the "Stewardship of service" and in the evening on the "Stewardship of education." Brother Alma M. Coombs was the morning soloist and in the evening Brother Joseph Cliff.

James Houghton, district chorister, addressed the singers during the Sunday school hour. The combined choirs of the district will sing "From Olivet to Calvary" at the coming conference.

Brother Fisher will visit Haverhill February 17, and Brother Houghton will preach at Fall River February 24.

Gospel Meetings to Be Held at Brentwood

BRENTWOOD, MISSOURI, February 14.—A series of gospel meetings will be held in the church at Brentwood for two weeks commencing February 24. The meetings will be under the supervision of Elder H. A. Higgins, district president, assisted by the local officers. Services will begin at 8 o'clock sharp, and those desiring seats are requested to come early. Any Saints near who have an opportunity to tell of these meetings should do so, as Brentwood wants to make this "opening campaign" one of benefit to members as well as to the world.

Sunday, February 3, dawned bright, and all who gathered at the Lord's house were happy in the promises. During the social service, which followed the communion, the promises of healing were manifest; uplifting and refreshing testimonies were borne by our younger folk; and testimonies were added by the older ones, all of which made the hour an enjoyable one.

Pastor Reeves spoke in the evening on "Revelations," which subject he has had under consideration for some little time.

This branch is working for funds for electric lights, and the Department of Women promise a real supper on Tuesday, February 19. Brentwood hopes to raise $200, which is necessary for the lighting.

First Anniversary in New Church Celebrated at Columbus

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8.—A special anniversary service to celebrate the first year's occupancy of the new church was held at the Second Columbus Branch Sunday, January 27. The regular sacramental service was held in the morning, and the main event of the day took place in the evening. Brother Lewis C. Lewis first gave a short sermon, and then the remainder of the service was turned over to the choir which entertained very pleasingly with solos, duets, and anthems. Everyone enjoyed the music, and the Saints are now looking forward to the Easter cantata which the choir is working on. The name of the cantata has not yet been given out.

The young boys of this branch, ranging from twelve to sixteen years of age, have just organized a club, which they call "Rekrow," symbolizing "worker." Their constitution states that they are organized to better themselves morally, socially, physically, and religiously. They are zealously working to be able to attend the reunion at Kirtland this year. They are also organized into a boys' junior choir and are doing splendid work in the musical line.

Missionary Supervisor Visitor at Duluth

DULUTH, MINNESOTA, February 8.—Brother W. E. Shakespeare, missionary supervisor for North Dakota and Minnesota, is in Duluth renewing old acquaintances. He has been holding special meetings at Two Harbors for some time.

The annual business meeting, having been postponed until District President George W. Day could be present, was held January 20. Brother Robert Zuelsdorf was called to the office of priest and ordained the following evening.

Officers elected were: C. B. Freeman, president; W. C. Stanty, clerk, secretary, historian, and librarian; A. O. Johnson, Sunday school superintendent; Robert Stark, assistant; P. G. Schnuckle, treasurer and branch solicitor; Sister R. C. Tourville, musical director; Lottie Zuelsdorf, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression; Mollie Feather, president of Department of Women; and Helene Stark, correspondent and publicity agent.

Brother Robert Stark left for Indiana Harbor, Indiana, on Thursday, January 31, so Brother W. C. Stanty was put in his place as assistant superintendent of Sunday school.

Death of Agnes C. Craven

Sister Agnes C. Craven died Saturday, January 19. She was baptized when eighty years of age and had a wonderful experience at that time. She went down into the water staggering with the infirmities of age. During her baptism she seemed to see her old body floating down the stream. She had indeed gone into the waters of regeneration, for she came out with youthful steps, blithesome as a child. She had another wonderful experience just before her death. Having been blind for some time, her sight was restored just before her death, and she had the privilege of seeing all her children again before her passing.

Duluth invites any Saints or friends who may be passing that way, to visit with them at 318 Central Avenue, on the second floor of the building.

Book of Esther to Be Dramatized

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, February 7.—The Seattle-British Columbia District is making fine preparations for the semi-annual conference which is to be held in Seattle, February 21 to 23. Anyone who does not attend will miss a treat, because real preparations are in progress for entertaining the district.

Those who a year ago saw the presentation of "Job," which was written by a local young man, will have the pleasure this year of looking forward to what is believed to be a finer drama of Bible characters. This year "Esther" is to be dramatized. It represents the experiences of Queen Esther of Medo Persia when the wicked Prince Haman, through false pretenses, secured the edict from King Ahasuerus to destroy all the Jews in Persian bondage, because of his hatred toward Mordecai, Queen Esther's Jewish father.

This is a fine interpretation of their Persian bondage experiences and the intervention of Jehovah in their behalf. The drama is written by a young man of high ideals, who with good talent has given careful attention to details and facts.

The Department of Women are also making special preparations to see that all visitors are properly provided for. One can always count on that department.

C. E. Jones spent Sunday, February 3, with the Centralia Saints on business for the district. On another recent Sunday he was with the Tacoma Saints.

Sacramental services of this month were well attended, and a splendid measure of the Spirit was present. All of the time was occupied and some fine spiritual testimonies borne.

Midland District Reunion Held

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, January 18.—A reunion of the Midland District was held in the Saints' Chapel, Priestly Road, at Birmingham, January 12 and 13.

A business session was held on Saturday, followed by a session of the Department of Recreation and Expression. A talk about this department was given by Apostle Paul M. Hanson, and Brother Willis spoke on the Boy Scout Movement.

Sunday was the "red letter day." The Sunday school mission took charge in the morning, followed by a preaching service in which Brother Hanson gave a very good sermon on "Being united one with another." Sister G. Edwards gave a wonderful talk on "Religious education" at 2 p. m. This enthused everyone to go on with their Sunday school work.

A fellowship service followed in which the Spirit of God was present in good measure. In the early part of this meeting, Brother Fred Sheppard was ordained to the office of priest.

Apostle J. F. Curtis was the evening speaker, making a fine finish to a glorious day. Everyone went home rejoicing, having spent a good, spiritual time together.

Brother and Sister Henry Booker, of Independence, Missouri, write that it has been seventeen years since they left Leeds, England, but have not forgotten the Saints and the good times they had there. They especially remember the young people who used to come to the little Bible class.

Creston Branch Member Placed on Graceland Agriculture Program

CRESTON, IOWA, February 13.—George B. Hall, branch president, is on the program for the agricultural short course to be held in Lamoni, Iowa, February 20 to 24. Brother Hall will have charge of the department in bee culture, and knowing his ability along that line it is certain the committee in charge have been very fortunate in securing his services.

The Department of Women have elected the following officers for the year: Mrs. George Hall, leader; Mrs. J. A. Franklin, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Guy Routh, chairman of the work committee; Mrs. A. M. Hogan, friendly visitor.

This department held a church supper Friday, February 8, at the home of Brother and Sister Hall. This is one of the ways the Creston Branch has of getting together socially, also adding in a substantial way to the local building fund.

The young people, of high school age and over, have elected Mrs. Nellie Hogan as their teacher for 1924. On Monday evening, January 28, they met at the home of Brother and Sister Hogan for a social time, also organized under the name of L. D. S. (Let's Do Something). Ralph Hammer was chosen president; Helen Franklin, vice president; Louise Hogan, secretary-treasurer; and Elsie Hammer and Harold Edmiston, recreational committee. This is a class of wide-awake young people who are already proving they have adopted the proper slogan.

Status of Reorganization Defended at Macon

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 15.—In a letter to President Frederick M. Smith, the presiding elder of the Northeastern Missouri District, E. F. Robertson, writes:

"I am glad to report that the interest in our meetings here (Macon, Missouri) seems to be on the increase. Brother Bailey's sermons are attracting considerable attention and to be taking well with those who hear them. Last night he continued talking until nearly ten o'clock, by request of the audience, and many declared they would have been glad for him to continue until midnight."

Confused With Mormons

Owing to some confusion in the community regarding the status of the Reorganized Church, Elder Robertson wrote a letter of explanation to the Macon Daily Chronicle, from which the following quotations are taken:

"It is a very painful thing to us to be confused in the minds of our friends and fellow citizens with the people in Utah who are known as Mormons, for we have no more affiliation with them than have the Methodists, Baptists, or Roman Catholics. Their headquarters are at Salt Lake City, Utah. Ours are now at Independence, Missouri, but formerly at Lamoni, Iowa. Their president is Jedediah M. Grant; ours is Frederick Madison Smith, who was in Macon and officiated at the dedication of our church, January 30.

"We could quote volumes of testimony from lawyers, senators, and magistrates of this and other countries, certifying to the good character of our people and of the vast difference between us and the church in the West.

"It is sometimes reported that our members have to take an oath binding them to keep the secrets of the organization. We come no nearer to requiring an oath than do any other of the churches; not so near as some. I stand ready always to prove any statement I have made in this letter and to disprove statements, from any source, that may be made to the contrary."

Epidemic of Sickness Affects Church Attendance at Pisgah

PISGAH, IOWA, February 11.—Elder Joseph Lane is much improved in health, and Saturday of last week it was possible for him to call on friends in Pisgah.

Inclement weather and a general epidemic of measles prevented any of the Pisgah Saints being in attendance at the conference of the Little Sioux District, which was held at Sioux City, February 8 to 10. The measles has reduced the attendance both at church and in the public schools, making it seem advisable to close the school for a period of four days.

Billy, the youngest son of Mr. and Sister S. C. Earleywine, has been very low with pneumonia following an attack of measles. At this writing he is thought to be out of danger and started on the road to recovery.

Wedding of Millie Neizum

The wedding day of Sister Millie Neizum is to be Thursday, February 14. This young sister will be greatly missed from the home where she has performed the duties of the mother whose place was left vacant by death some years ago. Sister Millie has the hearty good wishes of those who know her, as she assumes the responsibility of making another home.

U. W. Greene, evangelist, expects to begin a series of lectures, Monday evening, February 11, and will continue throughout the week if the interest merits the effort.

Independence Radio Station Heard at Distant Places

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 15.—Brother J. L. Williams, of Bevier, Missouri, writes: "The Independence Radio Station K F I X has not been heard at Bevier since the wave length was changed. Graceland comes in fine up until 7 p. m., when the station W O Q of Kansas City, on the same wave length, comes on the air. The reception is then marred. From a reading of the programs sent out from K F I X, the most conspicuous thing about them is the exclusion of Latter Day Saint hymns."

For the information of Brother Williams and others, it is pointed out that the Sunday programs, both morning and evening, are opened and closed with hymns from our own song books, after the regular manner of services. The numbers to be sung are not available at the time of the printing of the program. The low wave length should be sufficient for all neighboring States and throughout Missouri, as reports frequently come from New York and Canada and many far Western States telling how well the programs are received at those places.

Questions and Topics Discussed at Prayer Meetings

BARBERTON, OHIO, February 14.—There is much interest manifested in the branch at present, especially among the children from the ages of eight to thirteen. Last Wednesday evening, notwithstanding the cold and slippery walks, twelve children were out to prayer meeting, but only five grown people. The Lord has said, "A little child shall lead them." Surely, the little children are taking the lead here.

Questions Answered at Prayer Meetings

The prayer meetings have been rather unique. At each prayer service the children are given questions to answer for the next Wednesday evening, while the older ones are given a subject to discuss in the way of testimony.

On last Wednesday evening the questions for the children were as follows: Who was the oldest man? How long did he live? Who was his father? How long did the father live? Who did he walk with? How did he walk with him? What became of him and his people? It is surprising to see the interest the children take in answering these questions. This is what is bringing them out. They are also taking a deep interest in the music. It is wonderful how willing the children are to try when they find some one has an interest in them.

Their questions for next Wednesday are: What good man lived on earth at the time of the flood? How old was he at the time of the flood? What did God tell him to do that he might be saved at that time? How old was he when he died? Who was Methuselah's grandfather?

After these questions are answered a short talk is given the children, then the subject for the older Saints is taken up. The subject for next prayer meeting is, "What can I do to warn my neighbor as God has commanded?" This seems to be an appropriate subject at this time. Brother Patterson is expected to hold a series of meetings here March 9 to 23.

Apostle J. F. Garver Opens Meetings at Colorado Springs

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO, February 11.—A special young people's meeting opened Sunday, February 10, with Apostle John F. Garver in the stand. He preached from a text found in Matthew 11: 8, "But what went ye out for to see?"

Only those who have heard Brother Garver can testify to the forcefulness of his remarks. He gave food for thought that if digested would take many hours. While the Saints have enjoyed the way the young people have taken hold of the work here, yet it is hoped they will be even more active in the future.

There has been a good representation of the young people present at these meetings. The church has been entirely filled with both old and young.

Branch Membership Decreasing Because of Transfers

PERSIA, IOWA, February 11.—On the morning of January 27 the preaching was by Elder Sidney Pitt, and the attendance was fair. Brother Pitt is one of the old members of the branch. There were no services in the evening because of the cold weather. Brother Pitt preached twice on February 10.

Sacramental services were held on February 3. In the fellowship meeting the Saints expressed their desires in the service of the Master by testifying of the marvelous way in which the Lord had blessed them. For this they felt thankful.

At the annual business meeting, it was learned that the bills for the previous year were all paid. The officers were reelected, and Elder Sidney Pitt was chosen to serve as branch priest and W. J. Chambers as teacher. This is the first time for several years that this place has had a full set of officers. It is hoped that the branch will now improve in spirituality and in other ways.

Persia's congregation used to be of good size, but in the last fifteen years members have been moving away. This helps other localities, but the enrollment here has decreased from 157 to 82. The present number may not seem so small, but many members live five or six miles out and others still farther. Automobiles make the distance shorter, yet sometimes only six or eight are present to hear a good sermon.

Junior Services Provided at Boston

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, February 8.—The primary and intermediate departments are being given special attention and good results are following. Besides the thoughtful program of the Sunday school, which holds their interest and enthusiasm, very successful arrangements have been made for a separate preaching service once a week. Here the prayers, selection of songs, and the address is adjusted to the young people. The first sacramental service under this plan was gratified by a deep sincerity, and a one hundred per cent response was received from the boys and girls.

"Messiah" Rendered

The "Messiah" was given to well-filled and enthusiastic houses during the month of December at the three branches, Attleboro, Providence, and Boston, whose combined choirs presented it. James R. Houghton, the district chorister, was in charge and sang the baritone solos. The soprano solos were sung by Miss Helen Coombs, of Attleboro, the alto by Miss Blanche Lanman, of Boston, and the tenor by Mr. Lewis Phillips, recently from Wales. These choirs have plans for added work in the future.

The district was very sorry to lose Apostle Edmund J. Gleazer but are glad to feel that his good work is going forward in his new field. Elder O. L. Thompson, the new district missionary, has by his untiring service and efficient methods won a deep place in the hearts of the people and is carrying the work steadily forward.

The past year has been a successful one for the Boston Branch, and the new year is moving with gratifying progress.

District Conference Held at Des Moines

DES MOINES, IOWA, February 20.—Des Moines entertained the annual district conference from February 8 to 10. There was a large attendance, considering the fact that the roads east and south of the city were blocked with snow.

A spiritual prayer meeting, which was held Friday morning at nine o'clock, gave the conference a good start.

Sister Blanche Edwards represented the Departments, speaking at 10.30 a. m. on the subject of religious education and again at 2.30 p. m. on the work of the women. Both lectures met with a hearty response from the Saints. They were very instructive and full of human interest, and spiritual.

The conference was entertained Friday evening by a program given by the Department of Recreation and Expression, under the direction of Stephen Robinson. It was highly appreciated by the audience.

Apostle Edwards was present, assisting in a great measure in all sessions. His lectures to the priesthood were full of practical ideas which will no doubt be made use of by the ministry.

Election of Officers

Business and election of officers occupied the Saturday morning ten o'clock session. Officers for all departments were elected, as has been the custom for the past five years, in one meeting. By request of the conference the district president nominated the heads of departments, which nominations were all concurred in, and resulted in F. O. Wilkinson being elected Sunday school superintendent; Stephen Robinson, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Evelyn Nash, chorister; Mrs. Lentell, superintendent of Department of Women; and Bessy Laughlin, secretary. The presidency remained the same as last year. William Robinson was chosen as assistant superintendent of Sunday school.

The Runnells Branch recommended that Ralph Wicker be ordained to the office of priest. The action of the branch was concurred in, and Brother Wicker was ordained on Saturday afternoon.

The business of the conference was conducted in a way which was commendable, generally speaking. It was disposed of as expeditiously as possible that more time might be given to the educational work of the program. At the close of one session the missionaries gave some of their most interesting experiences in gospel work. Brother Edwards told of how he first met "corn cooked on the cob."

The preaching was by A. C. Silvers and F. Henry Edwards, who ministered the word in power, assisted in great measure by the Holy Spirit. All prayer services were marked by a spirit of love and fellowship among the Saints, while the Spirit of God hovered over all. The opening service of the conference was marked by the unusually large attendance of members, it being the largest in many years. The numbers increased from the start until the close. In all it was a very successful conference and will be a landmark in the progress of the Lord's work in the district.

Bloomsburg Has Meetings for Young People

BLOOMSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA, February 18.—A very profitable series of meetings has been conducted by Patriarch A. E. Stone, who gave seasonable advice and encouragement to the young people as to how to live and deport themselves.

There has been increased activities in Bloomsburg since the reorganization of the Religio work, which is upon lines tending more toward education than recreation.

Baptismal Font Dedicated at Vinal Haven

VINAL HAVEN, MAINE, February 14.—Elder Harvey Victor Minton still continues the series of meetings in the Saints' church at Vinal Haven. There is a good interest, and some are near to the door of baptism. One woman, Mrs. Fred Morong, was baptized February 6.

Brother Minton dedicated the baptismal font by prayer on the evening of this baptism.

The Sunday school department, under the supervision of Sister Harvey V. Minton, is growing, and many children are attending.

There are many people not of the faith who offer their services to help with the music in solos, duets, etc., on Sunday evenings. The Saints feel the hand of God blessing them in this marvelous work.

Old-Fashioned Candy Pull Had at Groton

GROTON, CONNECTICUT, February 6.—A good old-fashioned candy pull on Thursday evening, January 31, at the home of Brother Philip T. Whipple, brought out all the Saints, young and old, also several of their neighbors. There were about thirty-six in all.

The time was spent entertainingly while the candy was being made, some playing the piano, others accompanying with singing, while the men found checkers interesting. The age-old game of "gossip" was played with merriment. Another feature of the evening was pop corn and apples, which were served plentifully. Then the candy was pulled, and it turned out fine.

Everyone had a very pleasant time. At the close, Thomas G. Whipple, the branch priest, offered a benediction.

Holden Stake News

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, February 25.—Brother and Sister Cornelius Edgerton have moved to Independence, Missouri, so Brother Edgerton could be near his work. They have been very active in the work at Grandview and have many friends who regret their departure.

A valentine party for the children was held in the church basement, Friday evening, February 15. A short program was given, games were played, and refreshments served. A valentine box was the main feature of the evening.

Two baked food sales have been held under the auspices of the Department of Women during the past few weeks. A neat sum, which will be used for the benefit of the local church work, was realized.

Elder Alvin Knisley spent the week end at Grandview, giving two splendid discourses on Sunday, February 17, reminiscent of his conversion and early missionary experiences. These were very interesting. Brother Knisley is one of the missionaries of the Holden Stake.

Since the Department of Recreation and Expression has changed their meeting from Friday to Sunday night, the attendance has more than doubled, and greater interest is manifested. After the study period a short program is given each evening.

Lexington

Elder G. M. Shippy was the speaker on Sunday morning of February 17. Brother Shippy occupied as a seventy under general appointment for some years. He is now living here. Elder D. J. Krahl spoke in the evening. Three children were blessed by Elders Brendel and Krahl at the evening's social service.

The priesthood have made a special effort to put the SAINTS' HERALD in every home, resulting in about seventeen new subscriptions. A Saint to keep alive must keep in touch with the church movements.

Classes in the Department of Women are being organized by Sister Lola A. Johnson, the supervisor.

Marshall

Elder R. D. Weaver closed his meetings at Marshall on February 18, and departed for his home at Cameron, Missouri, for a short rest. He will begin meetings at Atherton on March 2. His sermons were greatly appreciated. Many outsiders were in attendance and some quite interested.

The annual election was held on Tuesday evening, February 19, with the stake president in charge. Elder H. G. Thayer requested to be released from duties of pastor, and Elder Levi Phelps was chosen in his stead, with Brother Thayer as assistant.

The superintendents of departments for the new year are: M. L. Johnson for the Sunday school; W. P. Mitchell for the Department of Recreation and Expression; Mrs. J. H. Spohrer for the Department of Women; Mrs. Clara Thayer for the music; and Miss Lois Spohrer, secretary.

There have been thirty-four added to the branch at Marshall the last year by baptism and transfer.

Holden

The birthday party given at the Holden Home on Washington's birthday was one of the successful events in the history of the Home. The "presents" received will be used for Home improvements. Sister Edith Carr, the matron, desires in behalf of the Home to thank all who so willingly assisted.

The stake missionary, Elder Knisley, is conducting meetings in the Methodist Church at Beagle, Kansas. This is a new opening, and the first preaching by Latter Day Saints ever held in the neighborhood. There are many places in the stake where the gospel is unknown. It is a pleasure to see the ministers making these new openings.

Brother A. C. Christensen was the speaker at the Home Sunday morning. Brother D. J. Krahl spoke at the church. The conditions of the roads kept most of the Saints who live in the country at home.

Doctor Stanley Green of Independence visited the Home on professional business on Thursday.

Graceland Chats

Chapel Service

LAMONI, IOWA, February 23.—The chapel service this week was one of many pleasing features. The reading and prayer was conducted by the dean, President F. M. McDowell, who has not been able to appear thus since his return from Flint, Michigan. Many expressed pleasure to have him again at "home."

The piano numbers were the ones everybody likes and were played by Miss Virginia Carley, the head of the piano department. Miss Ruth Fisher, of the public speaking department, read from "Twelfth Night." Graceland is growing more and more appreciative of the classics, both in music and literature.

President Briggs, just returned from a business trip, spoke interestingly of the beauty of the winter scenes under the rays of the sun. The ice-clad world, trees, rocks, hills, and shrubs sparkled, according to the famous phrase, like "Acres of diamonds." Before closing his speech, everyone knew Brother Briggs had been away from Lamoni, even before he presented the beautiful enlargement of a photo of an historic English scene, photographed by President F. M. Smith, and presented by Brother Smith to Mr. Briggs for Graceland.

A sadder strain of chapel service prevailed when Roy Cheville, dean of men, read a letter of condolence which was indorsed by a standing vote of all present as their expression of heartfelt sympathy to the parents and fiancée of Donovan Simmons.

The Dean's Office

Brother McDowell's office is a busy place on the occasion of his return from these missionary tours. The little "lower room," which is his own very pleasant, private sanctuary, becomes a place of confidences, letter writing, and reading, while the outer room, "The Department Place," is alive with the staccato of typewriters.

This other open door is the way to Miss Blanche Edwards's desk. She represents the young women of the church, and she also represents, during his absence, Brother Max Carmichael, superintendent of the Sunday school department. She very earnestly and consecratedly does other things.

You see, this northeastern quarter on the first floor is quite an important place. Here are the two Miss Nelsons, Eula Vickery, Vera Redfield, and often other extra secretaries and stenographers.

Does it seem good for Brother McDowell to come back to this from his tours among the Saints? To come back to this and the class work which waits for him? Isn't life full of opportunities to serve mankind!

Agriculture Course

The short course of the Iowa State Agricultural College, which was held at Graceland, February 20 to 23, struck a season of extremely bad weather, but those attending were enthusiastic and keenly interested. Some came miles over terrible roads for the course.

Recreation Night

Friday evening is given over to recreation, both by the Lamoni high school and the college. This is also the time for community pictures at the college, while the festive scenes are many. The college freshman came out last Friday evening in "kid clothes," and indulged in children's games. It seemed so easy for some of them to drop back, and how they enjoyed it. "Backward, turn backward," no, they never said a word to "Time"; they went back just as easy as anything.

Declamatory Contest

On Saturday night the final declamatory contest occurred at the Brick Church. Of the ten winning places in the contest, nine appeared. The tenth, Miss Jeanette Haas, much to the disappointment of all, and especially her society, the Victorians, was too ill to appear. The judges were Cyril Wight, Mrs. F. M. McDowell, and Mrs. Lená Graham. The winners were: Dramatics, Ruth Walden, Niketes, first; Dora Dexter, Niketes, second; Jeanette Haas, Victorian, third. Oratorical: Ray Esgar, Victorian, first; Alvin Woods, Victorian, second. Humorous: Dorothy Emmerson, Victorian, first; Katherine Wolfe, Niketes, second. Miss Dorothy Emmerson won first over all.

Kansas City Stake Items

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, February 21.—An event that has been looked forward to by the young people of Central Church for some time had its culmination in the rendition of the beautiful operetta, "The merry milk maids," on Friday evening, February 15, at the Little Theater on Troost Avenue. It was given under the auspices of the Plus Ultra Class, assisted by the Who-Sem Society of the Central L. D. S. Sunday School. Eugene Christy, voice instructor at the Horner Institute of Fine Arts, was the director and Roy A. Thrutchley was manager.

The operetta was a most enjoyable affair and was appreciated by a good-sized house. It was a success from every point of view. The splendid talent shown was a pleasant surprise to the church people. The rendition showed a conscientious study of the operetta, and a little talent with consecrated effort will accomplish much. The members of the cast did their parts well.

Able Producers

The conductor should be especially mentioned for his splendid work, while much praise goes to Miss Mahan, teacher of expression at the Horner Institute of Fine Arts, who coached the cast.

Members of the cast are as follows: Mrs. Elizabeth Hitchcock, Mrs. Alice Smeadon, Miss Julia Edwards, Mrs. Estella Moore, Miss Marcene Blankenship, Miss Melva Blankenship, Miss Rea Tucker, Miss Hulda Armstrong, Mrs. Dagmer Root, Miss Media Deaver, Mrs. Helen Dunn, Mrs. May Liddle, Mrs. Marie Budd, Miss Perfonia Murrell, Mr. A. D. Hitchcock, Mr. T. B. Dunn, Mr. C. J. Wolfe, Mr. Henry Hampton, Mr. Roscoe Hampton, Mr. Rupert Wight, Mr. Richard McVey, Mr. Paul M. Clarke, Mrs. Florence Short, pianist; Mr. Herman Broadhacker, violinist.

Proceeds are to be applied to the Central Church building fund.

Missionary Meetings

Missionary William I. Fligg closed a series of meetings Sunday night, February 17, at the 17th and Heathwood church. He commenced a series of special meetings at the Bennington church Wednesday evening, February 20.

Patriarch Ammon White will hold a series of special meetings at Chelsea Park church beginning Sunday, February 24, and continuing as long as interest keeps up.

Services at Central

The speaker last Sunday morning at Central was Bishop J. F. Keir, who spoke to a well-filled house. Brother Keir said we have two great tasks, first to preach the gospel to every creature, and second, to establish Zion. He quoted James Harvey Robinson who said the world seems to demand a moral and economic regeneration which it is dangerous to postpone. The problem can be solved by being brotherly, said the speaker. The church and God are one. Unity is one of the foundation stones of Zion. He urged equality of opportunity as brought about by stewardships. He stated that matters are now shaping themselves so stewardships may be entered into more successfully. The matter cannot be revolutionized overnight.

Series of Meetings Close at Kirtland

KIRTLAND, OHIO, February 19.—Elder William Patterson, supervisor of the missionary work in the Kirtland District, has just closed a series of meetings which have been the best attended of any in recent years as to the point of interest shown by neighbors and visitors as well as local members. The gospel principles were presented, as well as much other intellectual food, to strengthen the Saints in the requirement to go on to perfection. The speaker was manifestly blessed by the Spirit in his office, particularly on the second Sunday morning. The series has proven beneficial to all participating therein.

Use of the Radio

The musical work was very inspiring, orchestral accompaniment and vocal offerings making the occasions very much worth while. An innovation was the advent of the wireless reception of musical numbers and other items, though the congregation was somewhat disappointed in not being able to get a clear reception of the special radio program which was broadcast from the Independence station for Kirtland's benefit for the opening service.

Bad weather and interference from other and more powerful stations nearer to this place had the air loaded with "jazz" at that particular time. The sermon and music, however, were the things the people came to hear and were of such high order that any other disappointment was offset.

The broadcast program had been strongly advertised and was received in a number of places to which notices were sent, and this most modern vehicle of publicity should certainly be followed up. The Independence congregation singing "Redeemer of Israel" was heard in the old temple here at Kirtland. What would the Latter Day Saints of olden time have thought of that? Previously, the children's musical program and President Elbert A. Smith's sermon on "Faith" at Independence were heard at a dwelling in the immediate vicinity of the temple, so the Saints had felt confident that the special program would register even better.

Other items heard after the service in the temple were: Christian Endeavor plans for the convention at Pittsburgh, President Coolidge's Lincoln Day speech from New York, and other numbers, mostly musical.

Reception Held

The home-coming of John Lewis and family, who have been located for some time in Independence, was celebrated last Saturday evening. The honors were shared by Brother Patterson, as the folks also wished to express their satisfaction of his efforts in their behalf. These festivities were held in the reunion auditorium and were sponsored by the Pleasant Hour Circle of the Department of Women. Cake, orange punch, and parlor games were enjoyed by a huge crowd. As some of the visitors expressed it, "You seem like just one big family."

Elder Patterson was invited to appear at the high school building to give a talk and his inimitable mimicry of bird calls. He is now asked to repeat the program for other departments.

Kirtland is looking beautiful on this date. It is decked out in all the crystal gems and snowy purity of a typical winter. Yet it will soon go to make way for the resurrection of spring.

Illustrated Lectures Interest Saints at Lock Four

LOCK FOUR, PENNSYLVANIA, February 22.—Winter seems to be the main subject in this part of the country, yet the attendance is still good at all the meetings.

Brother Gomer T. Griffiths of Columbus, Ohio, was here with his illustrated lectures. The members of the branch attended well and several nonmembers were interested in the lectures. Brother Griffiths has a fine set of slides, and it is worth anyone's time to see these and hear about them. He lectured on the following places: Damascus, Australia, South Sea Islands, Kirtland Temple, the Hill Cumorah, and many places of historic nature.

There does not seem to be very much sickness here among the Saints. Everyone seems eager to be at the meetings even though the weather is very cold and there is much snow, over four feet on the ground. All the roads and highways are drifted and blocked with snow banks ten to fifteen feet high. It is still snowing and blowing and is the deepest snow here since about 1906. Many farmers are snowed in and cannot get to markets.

The maple sugar season will soon be one of the events in this part of the country. Western Pennsylvania is a wonderful farming country, and there are large coal mines and steel mills which employ hundreds of thousands of men and women of every nationality in the world. It seems to be "the work shop" of the whole world.

Money Raised at Social for Songbooks

WATERLOO, IOWA, February 17.—The Ginger Jar Class of the Department of Recreation and Expression held a pie social, raising enough means to purchase a new set of song books, Zion's Praises, for church use.

Elder Leonard Houghton of Madison, Wisconsin, missionary in this district, held a series of meetings here lately.

Apostle T. W. Williams to Hold Meetings at San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, February 17.—Apostle T. W. Williams is in this city and will hold a series of meetings, beginning Sunday, February 17, at 11 o'clock.

It is hoped that the Saints of this place will make an extra effort to attend these meetings.

Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 26.—Patriarch Frederick A. Smith spoke at the Stone Church, Sunday morning, February 24, on "How a Christian should live." The evening speaker was President Elbert A. Smith, continuing his series of sermons. His subject was "The Resurrection." Both services were broadcast.

Religio Attendance Increasing

Attendance at Religio Sunday evening is increasing. Apostle John W. Rushton spoke, February 24, on the Book of Mormon as sacred literature.

Sunday School Banquet

The Sunday school announces a banquet for officers and teachers to be held in the dining hall, Friday, March 14, at 6.30 p. m. It will be in the nature of a "pep" meeting, that all may learn how results have been accomplished. It is also hoped to stimulate greater interest and effort in Sunday school work. An attendance of 225 is expected.

Attendance at the Stone Church Sunday school on Sunday, February 24, was 1223.

The first of a series of departmental conferences was held following the Sunday school hour, in Bartholomew Hall, when 19 teachers of the junior department met with the departmental and general superintendents. The object of these conferences is to make it possible for teachers to bring their problems while they are still fresh to the attention of the officers.

Formerly all departments met on the same night, and then divided up during the latter part of the evening for departmental work. Hereafter the plan calls for one or two conferences each Sunday following Sunday school. This will enable more teachers to attend, it is hoped.

Revival Meetings at Liberty Street

The revival meetings at Liberty Street church closed Friday night, February 13. Several nonmembers are investigating as a result of these sermons by Evangelist Ammon White. Although there has been no great number of baptisms, Pastor J. M. Baker is greatly pleased with the spirit of interest and study that has taken hold of the congregation.

Great Interest in Meeting on Budget

Pastor J. M. Baker preached Sunday morning, February 24, on the subject, "Our budget." He turned the meeting into a round table and the interest became so great that the 2.30 prayer meeting was converted into a continuation of the same subject. Brother Baker urged a hearty cooperation with the Bishopric in carrying forward the work of Zion.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards preached at 8 p. m. to a most attentive audience.

Prayer for Afflicted Member

Sister J. M. Baker has been very ill for the past week. The entire congregation united in prayer in her behalf Sunday, February 24.

Infant Daughter Dies

The infant daughter of Brother and Sister Luther Simpson, born on February 13, died at the age of five days. Because of the sorrowing mother, a very brief and quiet service was held at the home on South Pleasant, February 19. Elder C. I. Carpenter officiated. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Pastor Returns to Englewood After Absence

Elder James E. Warne is home again and will resume his work at Englewood as pastor, relieving Elder John Ely who has ably cared for the work in the pastor's absence.

February 22, at 7.15 p. m. the Department of Recreation and Expression rendered a program suitable to the day. Immediately afterwards all motored to East Independence and reproduced the program for the benefit of the Saints there. Judging by the packed houses, both congregations are badly in need of new buildings or more room for worship.

Sunday, February 24, Elder William Clow occupied during the morning hour and Elder Lyman W. Fike in the evening.

The Twelve

Apostle J. A. Gillen was in Chicago last week but to-day leaves for Detroit and then on to Owen Sound district.

After spending several days in Independence, Apostle John W. Rushton will leave to-day for Houston, Texas, where he will be joined by Apostle T. W. Williams, on their mission to the South.

Apostles J. F. Curtis and Paul M. Hanson are still in Holland.

The steamer upon which Apostle M. A. McConley sailed from Honolulu, was due to arrive at New Zealand February 25, so it is expected that Apostle McConley is now in that country. He will be joined later by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, who is now at Tahiti.

Apostle Roy S. Budd who has been in Independence for two weeks, will return to his California mission this week end. He will attend the Boise, Idaho, conference on his way. Apostle D. T. Williams is on his way to Independence from Seattle, Washington.

The meetings at Colorado Springs have closed and Apostle John Garver has returned to Lamoni, Iowa, after attending the conference at Denver.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer is still in Oklahoma, but is expected to stop in Independence on his way to Saint Louis where he will conduct a series of meetings shortly.

Radio Flashes

San Antonio, Texas.—I take this occasion to inform you that our San Antonio W C A R radio programs and sermonets continue to reach many throughout the State, according to letters addressed to the station, and even an occasional stranger whom we chance to meet in our travels.

Texas had 25,000 radio sets in it when we began broadcasting three months ago, and new ones are being installed every day. It is noticeable that the villages and ranches are enthusiastically responding to the radio call and are installing them with increased rapidity.

It gives me prestige with new acquaintances and the village press when I mention that I am, when in the city, one of the radio preachers. Branch President T. J. Jett, jr., will substitute in my place at the radio next Monday, since I am about 250 miles from the city. Perhaps you remember that our program will be between 8.30 and 9.30 p. m. every two weeks.

I assure you that I appreciate the radio work conducted at the center stake, remembering that strangers to our work in San Antonio report having heard the Independence program and lectures. We see names of such parties in the Radio Department of the SAINTS' HERALD and we are arranging to call on them.—William Mannering.

Lethbridge, Alberta.—The early concert from K F F V on Tuesday, January 15, came in very well on a very small one-tube detector set.—D. W. Buchanan.

Washington, District of Columbia.—Station K F F V was heard by me on January 15, 8.40 eastern time.—Max Abel.

Holden, Missouri.—It seems the broadcasting is coming in better and louder all the time from K F I X. Are you improving your apparatus or is it merely in my receiving set? Last night was the loudest yet. W O Q was going at the same time, and yours was louder than theirs. I tuned them out completely. And that talk of Mr. Coombs's was wonderful! I am sending him a letter in your care. He spoke a little too loud, but we need more of that kind of jurisprudence gospel. Get him again, and all you can of that. You can't blame him for getting loud. 'Twas enough to make him. Go it, boys; we're with you.—H. E. Moler.

Jacksonville, Florida.—I heard the program of January 22 from K F F V. Enjoyed it very much.—R. A. Dougherty.

Artists for Christ

A descriptive analysis of the present condition of the Saints in their business of building Zion can perhaps best be expressed in the thought that many are yet but apprentices in the art of being Christ-like.

The true artist is one who is at play while working. He harmonizes mental playfulness with the serious occupation of producing his ideal. A disgruntled worker never yet became an artist. It is important that one work at the thing he is most interested in and be happy while doing so. Square pegs do not fit into round holes. We have been told repeatedly by the leaders of the church to prepare for the things we can do best. That means finding the thing we want to do, and can do, and then pushing our capacity to its limit in preparing for work. In the Christian art of living every citizen in Christ must contribute to the good of the whole by doing best what he most desires to do.

Too many have become satisfied upon finding the thing they love, and thereby cease preparation. When the "animating idea" is in excess of the technique to produce that idea objectively, the artist never develops. The Latter Day Saint who is satisfied to partake of a portion of the spirit of ecstasy in prayer meeting but who is not willing to labor every day to live better because of his ideal, will never become the image of Christ and will have no place as a citizen in Zion. On the other hand the one who is concerned wholly with the means for building Zion temporally, has not the spirit of the artist to guide him, and his road may lead in the wrong direction.

Hand and brain must work together to produce. Spirit and body must function in perfect union to develop the soul. Artisans building Zion must be guided by the Spirit of God to accomplish the purpose. The true artist has served his apprenticeship and has learned the technique necessary to reproduce his artistic spirit, objectively.

Latter Day Saints have the spirit of the artist when they put on Christ, but it takes a severe course of apprenticeship to prepare them for Zion Builders. Some are surely ready to enter upon the serious business, as trusted workers for Christ. Surely there are those who have served their apprenticeship and are artists indeed.

Progress Waits on Action

We are beginning to wonder when the present revolt against tradition and authority is going to stop, and when an understanding will be effected whereby we may again embark upon a safe course. The revolt against the political state, music, art, poetry, commerce, and religion has reached a stage when harmony should be emerging out of chaos.

We do not desire to go back to hide-bound traditions which have served their purpose, nor do we wish to follow the radical revolutionist who would plunge headlong into the dark and boundless abyss of unexplored truth. Rather should we effect a progressive policy in the light of what we have already learned. The way to new worlds unconquered is not in rejecting the past to accept a new and untried solution. Columbus discovered America by reaching out beyond the superstitious traditions that bound sailors to the land, but he sailed in boats made by years of experience, and he followed a course reasoned out by science as he knew it. Without the experience of generations of sailors he could not have discovered America.

Statistics show unprecedented growth in crime, but this revolt against authority is not confined to the political state. Jazz has become a musical crime; the plastic arts have been entered by the futurists, cubists, vortists, and other "aesthetic bolshevists"; while in commerce the integrity of business morals has been swept aside. In the field of religion we find the revolt going on against tradition and authority both within the church and outside the organization. Youth movements in Germany, Russia, and elsewhere have declared against the authority of the church as the custodian of religion, and some have even defied the authority of a God. Within the churches denominations have been torn and rent by various factions, some standing for traditional doctrines, right or wrong, and others waving the red flag in the face of their opponents, shouting contempt for the past. The former are playing at hide and seek; only those who are "it" are afraid to leave the base lest some one get in free. They are willing to hide but not to seek. The latter are having an equally good time at blind man's buff, seeking in all directions, but blindfolded. Both games probably give mental relaxation.

It is time, however, that we get down to business and stop this foolishness. Any thoughtful being recognizes that we would be helpless without the invaluable experiences of the past, but that without sight and faith we can go nowhere. The road before us is not mapped out. We must blaze the trail as we go, with only the general direction known. The old camping ground has been a place we all loved, but the goal will not come to us. We must break camp and strike out for our destination. We have no Aladdin's lamp, but to rub and wish. There is but to do, and time is short.

Graceland College Annual Book

Graceland students seem as enthusiastic as ever over the doings of the college, but the larger student body this year perhaps accounts for the contagious college spirit which is spreading throughout the church. These young men and women want us to know what they are doing and rightly we should, for it is our college, and they are our boys and girls who are attending, and there are many among us who will yet attend.

In a letter to alumni of this institution, the manager of the Acacia, the college annual, tells of great things being accomplished and urges each old alumnus to get the Graceland spirit again, by subscribing for the annual book this year.

He tells of the new gymnasium which is well under way and what an advantage it will be to the college. Those attending the Young People's Convention last year, will be especially interested in this project. Work on this building is being done chiefly by students, who are thus enabled to work their way through the college year. Pictures of this and an account of its progress will be featured in the Acacia.

There is an organization called the College Players, similar to those at other colleges and universities, which produces all the plays and puts on many entertainments. Convention visitors last year will remember the play and opera given by the support of this club. More entertainments will probably be coming at the next convention. We are told the Acacia lets out all the secrets about this affair, too.

The Graceland Chats column in the HERALD has told about the oratorical contests between the societies at Graceland. Awarding of a cup to the winner takes place at the last chapel. All year intra-mural contests have occurred, consisting of debates, oratorical contests, short stories, extemporaneous speaking and other events. A full account will appear in the Acacia.

Friends of students, alumni, prospective students, and those interested in the college as our church institution will be interested in reading the annual. It is the best advertisement we have for the college, outside of the students themselves. The annual is described by a member of the staff:

We are going to have a fine leather cover with the college tower embossed on the front. Next will come the foreword, dedication, history, etc. Then a scene section of beauty spots of the campus and town. All individual pictures of classes including Juniors, Sophs., Freshmen, Academy, Religious Ed's., and Commercials, with snaps from class members to liven it up a bit. Individual pictures of men of this year's football will also be in, with a comparison page of varsity men of 1920-21. There will be group pictures of Royal 13, Foxes, O. O. H's., Lambda Deltas, and all the different society pictures.

Do you know, alumni friends, that we are going to have something in here about you? We are putting in some old cuts of 1918-20 as a comparison, that you will have a good laugh over. Our book is to have 164 pages done in two colors and it is bound to be worth twice the subscription price of $2 we are asking for it. You will also be anxious to see different snaps of the last year's convention.

Everybody is going to be here this year, young and old, especially after you see what we really have here.

Forty-five crippled children of school age in Grand Rapids, Michigan, who have never attended school before, are now enrolled in an orthopedic department which has been organized recently in one of the elementary schools.

A Sonnet on Death

O Death,

How bitter is the remembrance of thee
To a man that is at peace in his possessions,
Unto the man that hath nothing to distract him,
And hath prosperity in all things,
And that still hath strength to receive meat!

O Death,

Acceptable is thy sentence
Unto a man that is needy, and that faileth in strength,
That is in extreme old age,
And is distracted about all things,
And is perverse, and hath lost patience!

Fear not the sentence of Death;

Remember them that have been before thee,
And that come after.

This is the sentence from the Lord over all flesh:
And why dost thou refuse,

When it is the good pleasure of the Most High?

Whether it be ten, or a hundred,

Or a thousand years,

There is no inquisition of life in the grave.

Murmurings of Naaman

By Bishop James F. Keir

Naaman was captain of the host of the king of Syria. The king looked upon him as a great and an honorable man—a man of valor—for he had led his armies to victory in one of their latest wars, but he was a leper.

Leprosy is a very loathsome disease. It is known to have existed in India at least 3,000 years before Christ, while on the papyri found in the tombs of the kings of Egypt description of it is given.

Canthie is authority for the statement that the Chinese burned lepers alive in an effort to exterminate the disease, while France tried the more humane way during the Middle Ages of establishing leproseries, or homes for the lepers. The lepers were provided with rattles and required to give warning when others approached them, much in the same way as the Jews required them to cry out "Unclean, unclean" in Bible times.

At the solicitation of a little Israelitish maid who waited upon Naaman's wife, he went, armed with a letter from the king of Syria to the king of Israel saying, "Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith sent Naaman, my servant, to thee that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy." This provoked the king of Israel, and he rent his clothes and said, "Am I God, to kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy?"

The Prophet Elisha

Elisha, the man of God, heard of what the king had said and done, and he sent unto the king, saying, "Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? Let him come now to me, and he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel."

So Naaman came and stood at the door of the house of Elisha. Naaman expected that Elisha would come out and in the name of the Lord rebuke the disease, but he did not. He simply told Naaman to go dip in Jordan seven times. This aroused Naaman's ire. What virtue was there in following the advice and counsel of Elisha, murmured he. "Are not the rivers of Abana and Pharpar better than all the waters of Israel?" So he turned away in rage. He was unwilling to follow in the way that was pointed out by the servant of the Lord.

God's servants have ever been directing our attention to the pathway of duty, because it is not only the pathway of safety but the most pleasant way in which we can walk.

Men are many times moved by their feelings as was Naaman, rather than by their judgment. Our cool, unbiased judgment will always cast its decision in favor of following God's law and his counsel. But how often we permit what we consider to be the misconduct of another to stand between us and duty, and justify ourselves in breaking the law or of refusing to "dip seven times in Jordan" because something was done which we did not like. Had we known, as the little maid did, or if we knew with what certainty God works when we obey as did Elisha, our vision could not be obscured either by the faults, failures, or seeming misconduct of others. Our failure to do robs us of the spiritual development, increased vision, and the joy that belongs to God's people.

The early church had its Naamans who murmured and refused to observe the plain requirements of the law, thus delaying the redemption of Zion, which called forth the rebuke of our heavenly Father.

"Were it not for the transgressions of my people . . . they might have been redeemed even now; but, behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands . . . and do not impart of their substance, as becometh Saints."

"There are many who will say, Where is their God? Behold he will deliver in time of trouble; otherwise we will not go up to Zion, and will keep our money."—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2, 3.

Last Financial Report

Our last financial report showed 12,387 names in the list of tithepayers. Of course it is difficult for us to know just what proportion of the membership is represented by this list. A generous guess would be that each name represents a husband and wife and two children. If this is approximately correct, it would show out of a membership of about 100,000 only 49,548 are tithepayers. Can it be possible that one half of our membership have nothing left from their income after deducting necessary living expenses? What will be the excuse of those who have and have failed to tithe that increase in the day of judgment?

I have heard men say that they would not pay their tithe as long as such and such a thing is done. Like Naaman they fail to see the virtue in obedience. They forget that the tithe is a debt. It is not theirs; it belongs to God. It is passed through their hands only as a means to an end. The end is the development of their character, the enlargement of their vision, the increase of their joy, and finally it plays its part in their final salvation.

May each be as wise as Naaman, who finally permitted his judgment rather than his feelings to rule, and who listened to the advice and counsel of thoughtful friends who had the interest of his soul at heart, and dipping seven times received the healing balm of the Son of God.

The Law of Temporalities in Relation to Character Building

By Bishop Charles Fry

Purpose of the Law

The law of God is designed to accomplish such a change in man as will eliminate every evil trait and perfect in him the qualities of the divine character, thereby making it possible for him to receive a fullness of joy. That portion of the law of God applying to the acquisition, possession, and disposition of temporal or material things has this same design and works for the good of those observing the law, bringing enrichment rather than impoverishment.

Relative Values

Values exist in things other than material. On occasions one might give all his earthly possessions for health or liberty. Millions in money have been spent in an endeavor to obtain peace among the nations. Properly developed talents are more to be desired than mere riches, and contentment is preferable to the hoardings of a grasping soul. Fortunes have been spent in the search for knowledge, and many have left home and inheritance for the gospel's sake.

Christ's estimate of the value of things placed the ethical and spiritual above the material, assuring men that the enrichment of the soul is vastly more important than the laying up of treasure for physical needs. All the wealth of the world is not equal in value to one human soul.

The Evil of Selfishness

One of the greatest evils in human nature is selfishness. It causes trouble and distress and misery to a far greater extent than is generally supposed. It may be said to be a primary evil, for out of it grow many other evils, and it manifests itself in a great variety of ways. One general direction in which selfishness manifests itself is in the acquisition, possession, and disposition of material wealth in which it has many phases, some of which are the following:

Forms of Selfishness

1. Covetousness, which is an inordinate desire to possess, which disposes one eagerly to seek to acquire, often by harsh, unjust, or unlawful means.

2. Extortion, which is a more extreme form of covetousness, and which leads one to obtain unjustly by taking advantage of others' necessities, or by oppression, threats, or compulsion.

3. Rapacity, which is a most extreme form of covetousness, leading one to seize property by extremely greedy methods, by violence, plunder, etc.

These three have to do with acquisition, but the evil of selfishness affects also the manner of holding or disposing of property.

4. Avarice is that evil quality which inclines one not only unduly to seek to acquire but also selfishly to retain. It includes the miserly trait.

5. Stinginess, which causes one to be not only extremely close and penurious but meanly uncharitable to those in need, and ungenerous to those to whom he is obligated.

6. Parsimony is the disposition to deny oneself and others the things which are needful for their welfare. In its advanced stage it will limit to the lowest degree the actual necessities of life.

Degrees of Selfishness

These forms represent the extremes of selfishness, but they definitely exist in the lesser degree. The milder forms are the more common, and there are few persons who are not affected by them to some extent. But whether in mild or extreme degree, these evils work for the impoverishment of the individual and the shriveling of his soul, as also for the disintegration of society. The seed of selfishness in the human heart, if unremoved, will grow until some or all of these forms of evil will become the controlling passion. Love will die in the heart of such a man, and the love which others have had for him will fade away.

The Law of God

The gospel embodies a law of giving. It is found in the teachings of Christ and of the inspired writers. Jesus said, "Freely ye have received, freely give"; and while this was said of spiritual things, it applies equally to temporal things. He also said, "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again."

To the rich young man the Lord said, "Sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, take up thy cross, and follow me." It is probable that this man was trusting in his riches and selfishly holding them which prevented him from getting a proper hold on life.

Latter-day revelation advises, "See that ye love one another; cease to be covetous; learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires." The gospel law requires men to meet every proper need of their fellows, holding that each individual is but a unit in a common brotherhood.

Methods of Giving

The law of Christ provides that wisdom shall govern one's giving. It is not required that one should give more than he is able, or that he should impoverish himself to his own injury or that of his family. Nor is blind or promiscuous giving productive of unalloyed good. There are many considerations to be taken into account in order that the giving shall answer its true purpose.

The necessities which call for giving are many and varied. Occasions sometimes arise requiring direct giving to meet immediate needs. But one of the chief functions of the church is to see that the poor and destitute and others otherwise distressed and in need are provided for, to do which, it is dependent upon the funds placed in its treasury. The church has other functions of great importance, for the execution of which it is also dependent upon the same treasury. That this treasury may be supplied, the Lord has ordained the following methods of giving:

Tithing. An observance of the law of tithing is in effect an acknowledgment of divine ownership and of God's participation in production. It leads one to a right attitude toward God and toward his fellow men. It helps one to see the true value of ethical and spiritual things in relation to that of temporal things, and gives him an improved outlook upon life.

Offerings. The giving of offerings whether to distressed individuals, to institutions which meet the particular needs of numbers of people, or to the broader institution of the church which has for its work a variety of activities meeting as many different human needs, will enlarge the soul, increase pity for the distressed and sympathy for the needy, develop a greater love for one's fellow men and for God, give a greater appreciation of his own blessings, and enlarge charity without which all else will become a disappointment.

Consecration of the Surplus. Consecration is an advanced step in the work of giving, and carries with it a deeper understanding of man's relationship to God and to man, and will develop a greater faith and confidence in God. It tends to the elimination of every form of selfishness, and brings the character to a superior point of refinement. It removes all disposition to be overreaching in business or to take unjust advantage. It develops a keener sense of justice and equity and inspires one to maintain human rights. It helps one to see the value of immaterial things in their true relation to material things.

The children of the kingdom have their greatest obligation to the church, for the church is the divinely appointed institution for meeting the needs of humanity in both spiritual and physical things. Its missionary and pastoral arms provide for the spiritual needs, while the Sanitarium and Homes make provision for the needy and distressed. The Bishopric also look after numerous individuals directly. So when one pays his tithes, which the Lord claims as his portion of one's increase, and offers his gifts or makes his consecrations, he is giving to the Lord and at the same time to his fellow men who are in need. He is fulfilling the law of God by which law he is preserved. Light and inspiration come into his soul, and he is in a condition to prosper more abundantly in business or work and at the same time rid himself of the evils of selfishness and attain a most excellent character.

A Composite of Some Conference Speeches

Speech Reported by Ann A. Lyst

Mr. Chairman, Brethren, etc: I rise to tell you how necessary it is that you become perfectly orthodox, as I have always been. I respectfully inform this honored body that it has had the privilege of my valuable membership for a number of years, more or less, and that during all the period of my noble service and undeviating self-sacrifice, during which there were days at a time when I received not a penny for my great services, except such as came with interrupted frequency, all other support being from other sources to some extent. But my sacrifice has been willingly, not to say cheerfully or even eagerly made, and so Mr. Chairman and brethren, all this sacrifice and service has entitled me to your reverent consideration because of the great weight of my opinion, which has been the result of many hours, if not years, of wonderful reflection and some little study, which you cannot fail to appreciate when I inform this waiting assembly that my historical researches have enabled me to divulge the astounding and important fact that during the theological controversies of ages past it was estimated that no less and probably no more than three million and sixty-seven devils and one little devil could stand on the point of a cambric needle for at least some time, more or less. Hence, my own and individual opinion on this absorbing and portentous question before the house should be given its due weight, if not much more.

And now, Mr. Chairman and deferential assembly, with these great and well-considered reflections, to which I hope you have given close and rapt attention, I proceed to approach somewhat nearer, if possible, the point at issue; which I do with appropriate deliberation if not with some caution, which you may possibly be able to understand, when I tell you that it is not even certain that the little devil has been able as yet to find a secure footing on the point of the cambric needle for any length of time and with any great degree of comfort and satisfaction.

At this juncture, Mr. Chairman, I regretfully and reluctantly feel compelled to say that unless attention is more fully centered on me, and that unless due weight is more fully given my pointed and unanswerable speech in this precarious and uncertain conference, the relevancy of which should at once impress every hearer, it will be impossible for this church to make any further progress or succeed for long years to come if ever; in which case I must issue the gravely warning voice that my panacea alone can solve the unknown problems so darkly confronting and pressing around us on every hand. And even now there are ominous signs, the meaning of which those who run, if slowly, may doubtless be able to read with the indispensable assistance and interpretation that it is in my power alone to freely bestow upon this very needy and perplexed body assembled.

I am impelled to say further, Mr. Chairman and deliberative body, that my invaluable services to this church have been practically without a parallel in all the history of this organization, and often I have been compelled to stand without a peer in the distinguished sphere of my activities, which have left their abiding impress upon the church, and even upon many of its members; and until my distinguished hair becomes gray and my tottering limbs reluctantly refuse to serve I shall willingly continue my support and valuable assistance in deciding and solving the inexplicable problems that no one but myself can hope to decide aright, if at all.

It was with these self-sacrificing thoughts in mind that I at last consented to arise and let the church have the great weight of my superior understanding upon the stirring question so misapprehended by this helpless assembly. And though you have not had the great privilege of hearing my sought-for voice in conference, except more or less frequently, I assure you, Mr. Chairman and noble brethren, it was not from lack of interest or intention, as it was at times impossible for me to get the floor while others were occupying it so unprofitably, though I tried earnestly several times to do so, but was not given proper recognition by the chair in preference to the one who was speaking, as the importance of my opinion most certainly entitled me to.

And now, Mr. Chairman and interested conference assembled, having unraveled the intricacies of this remarkably significant and important question to my eminent satisfaction, so that it is not my fault if the entire church does not at once and immediately proceed to act in harmony with the very valuable advice I have been so willing to freely give, I move the previous question, as there is nothing left to be said concerning the matter that is worth the consideration of anyone present; and if the previous question does not prevail we may as well at once adjourn, as nothing else would be of any benefit to this body whatever.

A Daydream

By J. E. Vanderwood

While sitting within the confines of a small room with my mind well occupied with the important things of the hour, I meditated upon the work that especially concerned me. While thus meditating the possibilities of the church were visibly portrayed before my eyes, and I saw the youth of the church arising to the places of responsibility that require men and women of intellect and power; they blended their efforts with those who in the past have so nobly borne the heat of the battle; I saw the strength and vigor of youth coupled with the wisdom and experience of mature years, and as I beheld, I said surely God is assembling the strength of his house, his young men and his warriors; and I saw them armed, not with carnal weapons, but with the spirit of wisdom, and with power.

I contemplated the work that lies before us, and said surely this army of young people, with whom must one day rest the burden of the work, together with the assistance of those who have carried forward the ideals of the church thus far are able to give them, can accomplish this very thing. I saw this army composed of the youth of the church and those that had long borne the burden of the work united in purpose as one, and they moved forward in a solid phalanx, and their power increased.

Spirit of Unity and Love

As I beheld this army arising I saw the powers of darkness recede, and the Spirit of unity and love seemed to pervade the very atmosphere. Those who in the past had been contentious now disappeared, and I saw a concerted effort put forth until all were imbued with the idea and spirit of helpfulness. Envy and jealousy were not to be found there; the spirit of selfishness, that hideous monster that has brought to the world such suffering and misery, was nowhere to be found; and I said to my soul, surely the reign of peace is being ushered in and Christ will make his abode with men.

I beheld also that love was the ruling power, and that this new army was actuated by the spirit of altruistic love. Then I said surely this is the army of the living God, for they are clothed with truth and armed with his matchless power. Herein I saw verified that which I had long believed, that the spirit of love is the most powerful weapon that can be used by man; for I saw clearly that he who conquers through love shall never be overthrown.

The New Social Order

I beheld also that all worked for the common weal of mankind, and that no one claimed for himself that which he was not willing to claim also for his brother. In other words each had a common right to make the best of life, to develop the best there is in him and to assist his brother to reach with him the highest and the best there is in life. As this spirit increased I saw sin and poverty fade and pass away, and peace and plenty found its way into the abode of man. This was not all, for I saw ignorance vanish, superstition and tradition likewise disappeared, and I saw a free people who had grown intellectually and spiritually wise, and thus the social and industrial order of things was changed; all men shared in the fruits of labor, for as one they partook of the opulence of nature, which the God of love has so bounteously provided for his creatures.

As I beheld I saw that no man was oppressed, nor was there any who had a desire to defraud or in the least injure his brother. Suspicion, with all the evils that grow out of it, was not so much as remembered in this ideal society, for each one delighted in doing that which would make more perfect the conditions in the midst of which the overruling Providence permitted him to live. Hence joy abounded in every soul, and good will was in evidence everywhere. The triumph of love was reflected in the very countenances of this blessed people and their souls grew robust and beautiful.

Homes Made Beautiful

I saw the homes of this people made comfortable and beautiful; art was in evidence everywhere until the dwelling places became a veritable paradise, work became a delight to them, and the curse that had long infested the earth was entirely eliminated. Joy was found at every hearthstone; oppression and greed were no more, neither were there any who lacked that which contributed to peace and comfort; each one sat under his own vine and fig tree; yes, he reaped the fruit of his own labor, and his work was a pleasure unto him.

The Temple of God

In the midst of the city I saw a temple that had been reared as a monument for the worship of the God of heaven, wherein this happy and contented people sang praises and adored the giver of the most excellent benefits that they were enjoying. I saw too that their manner of worship was quite unlike the common methods of worship, in that their whole exercise was actuated by the spirit of meekness and love. No one in that blessed city possessed fear, for they were drawn to God through the Spirit of undying love. No one said: "You will go to hell if you don't do this," nor did they say: "You will receive a great reward if you do that," but they had a joy in doing that which they did, and therefore they were heard to say: "It is indeed a blessed privilege to meet at this temple that has been built and dedicated to the service of humanity and the worship of God, which he has accepted, and wherein we can commune with him and learn of his ways." To them worship was a privilege rather than a duty, it was a pleasure rather than a necessity, it was something they delighted in rather than something they were required to do. Hence their worship like their work became a true delight unto them, and God was an ever-present helper with them. He blessed them with wisdom and understanding until the power of their example was heralded to the ends of the earth.

Zion Redeemed

As I beheld I said, surely Zion is redeemed and the dwelling place of man has become the habitation of our God. I then reflected and discovered that it had been a daydream, but I said in my soul, with the cooperation of this people, the young and those of riper years in the church coupled with the blessing of God we can bring about this very condition. Surely the armies of the living God will not surrender their most sacred privileges until they have in truth achieved this very end. Let it be fully understood that it is up to us to redeem Zion.

Shall we not therefore renew our strength, re-dedicate ourselves to the work, and if need be re-double our strength until this excellent and ideal condition is obtained? We shall find therein a joy that is nowhere else to be found, and our lives will be greatly enlarged as we lay hold upon such a noble and worthy undertaking. May we adopt a new slogan, one that will give us courage, one that may be expressed in these words: we can do it! For surely the God of heaven will sustain us if we put forth the proper effort.

Classes for subnormal children are maintained with the assistance of State funds in nine States—Missouri, Minnesota, Montana, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. In all of these States the money is given with the provision that the classes must be properly organized and only teachers with special training placed in charge of them.—School Life.

What It Means to Be Saved

Sermon by C. Edward Miller at General Conference, Independence, Missouri, October 2, 1923.

I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and the unwise.—Romans 1:14, Inspired Version.

Paul had the faculty of obtaining information from everywhere; he had the ability to assimilate it and then disseminate it:

So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also. For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed through faith on his name; as it is written, The just shall live by faith.—Romans 1:15-17, Inspired Version.

God used Abraham and his family to be the depositories of the divine oracles. His family multiplied but they never were a great and wonderful nation. They were not great in the arts and sciences, and yet to-day their influence is marvelously felt. What is the reason for this? The Greeks and Romans developed mythology and philosophy, but that is where they stopped; Israel, Abraham's descendants, did not stop with mythology; they progressed; they developed religion. Philosophy and science are largely for the great ones of this earth, while the common people are shut out, but religion is embraced by king and peasant. Israel developed religion.

We want to remember that in this day and age of the world, and God almighty knew what people needed, he set apart this family of Abraham to carry the information of the only true God unto the world.

Influence of Saint Paul

The Apostle Paul is the product of Israel. At the Stone Church to-night they are rendering the oratorio "Saint Paul." We feel his influence in music, in song, and in religion to-day, and you young people, the rising generation, can properly give time and attention to many of the things on this earth, but you will miss the vital thing if you do not go in for religious education. The man who does not give some attention to the things of almighty God is doing his higher being a tremendous injustice. True religion meets man's highest needs and man is developed by religion.

The Apostle Paul says, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ." He was no coward, and he was not ignorant either. He was a fine specimen of the manhood of the time. He was held in great esteem by his fellow men.

Meaning of Salvation

The theme of the conference sermons is salvation. What is salvation? What does it mean to be saved?

Men and women are more or less taking chances on the future. "Hope springs eternal in the human breast," you know. Pandora had the first hope chest, and she apparently used it very effectively.

Men think, oh, I will take a chance, and everything will be all right; but I will tell you, hope, like faith, without works is dead. Some years ago I visited a penitentiary, and not very long ago I was in an insane asylum, but I could go in and out as I wanted to, and that is what the other fellows could not do; so I had a great advantage over them. I saw in that penitentiary the product of something. Something was wrong in these men and women. Some of them had a vicious look. It was apparent, in looking at the faces of some of them, that something was lacking. They were the product, right here, of forces that sent them to the penitentiary and to the insane asylum. The cause, perhaps in a limited way, was right here. Here we have a tremendous extreme. Here is Christ the 100 per cent man. Here is the Devil, 100 per cent Satan. Why should there be the Christ and Satan? What caused the Christ? What caused Satan?

The Product of Law

As I travel around the world I see all kinds of men and women, an immense disparity between them, mentally, morally, and physically. Why, I have seen some men who are too big to be men and not big enough to be mules. Then others are undersized, like your speaker. Why should this be so? There is a disparity physically, intellectually, spiritually, and yet the Lord says he is no respecter of persons. What is the cause? We see the effect, but what caused this? It is a great question. There is something men must everlastingly consider in this world, and it is this: We are the product of law, and in the future, throughout the countless ages of eternity, we will be the product of law, and we cannot get away from it.

The Psalmist says:

If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. . . . Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee.

We can very properly speak of that power as God working through law. In God we live, move, and have our being. In law we live, move, and have our being. We cannot get away from it.

Traveling from Toronto to Chicago a physician sat down beside me. We talked for several hours before I knew he was a physician. We conversed on international and national matters, and eventually we talked of our families. He was a very intelligent man, was splendid company, and I enjoyed his association. After I arrived at Chicago I boarded a street car and a colored woman sat beside me. She did not talk about international matters; she did not talk about national affairs; she talked about people, and particularly her people and herself. You notice the larger the man, the less he talks about people; generally he talks about things. He talks about the great things. There was a very marked difference between the Chicago physician and the little colored woman. Why? What business had the Almighty to favor the one and apparently place a curse on the other, and then say he is no respecter of persons? There has been some kind of a law sometime, somewhere, in operation that produced this disparity. I fear to go against any force, any law, that will lead me to an inferior position throughout the ages of eternity. I want to get in line with those forces. I want you, too, everybody, to get in line with those forces which will produce an intelligent individual, the one hundred per cent Christ man for eternity.

Jesus Christ, we are informed, loved righteousness and hated iniquity from the beginning. Therefore law did not start here on this earth. It was away back there. It always was, and it always will be. This is a universe of law, and that law back there produced the Christ and he came here. He loved righteousness and hated iniquity here. There was the cause back there; the effect here is this one hundred per cent perfect man.

Satan back there tried to interfere with the forces and powers of almighty God, and he felt the effect of it. How far these forces and powers back there affect us here I do not know, but here we are, and what a great difference there is between men on this earth. The point I am trying to make is this: What was done back there assuredly had some effect on us here. What we do here will certainly have some effect upon us throughout the ages of eternity, and the result—inequality, possibly forever.

Present-Day Revelation

What evidence have we there will not be equality? Where do you want to be in this scale in the eternity to come? Where are you going to be? We can determine right here what we are going to be throughout the ages of eternity. If there are visitors here to-night who are not acquainted with our philosophy I will say here in this book that we call the Doctrine and Covenants, containing revelations of the Lord Jesus Christ, we are told that these revelations are to the church in this day and age of the world. The church is called the bride, the Lamb's wife. So when a husband does not talk to his wife, there is something wrong. When they are not on speaking terms they may get a divorce. If Jesus Christ does not talk to his church, what is wrong? But he does talk to us, and he has told us in this day and age of the world: "I was in the beginning with the Father." That is, Christ said, "I was in the beginning with the Father. Ye were also in the beginning with the Father. . . . Intelligence, or the light of the truth, was not created or made, neither indeed can be"; so man existed always; he is immortal. Well, after all, the whole universe is immortal; you cannot destroy it.

Effect of Environment

I read in a magazine some time ago that matter could possibly be destroyed. I wrote the Scientific American editor and asked if that was so. He answered that it is not so to date. The whole universe is immortal. These laws are immortal. They never had beginning nor end, and man never had an intellectual beginning. The body is born into the world, but the spirit comes here and adapts itself to the body. How much we were affected by conditions back there we know not, but here is what we do know: We are affected by our environments. What we hear, what is taught us, and what we do here will determine our condition amid the starry universes of unbounded space in the countless ages of eternity. Well has it been written, Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth. I read one time of a young man, below the average of intelligence, who sold part of his brain to a doctor for experimental purposes. That is, he agreed with the physician to take out part of his brain for a certain amount of money. You can depend upon it that he did not have very much brain in the first place, or he would never have made an agreement of that kind.

We have need to develop our intelligence, our thinking powers, rather than diminish them. We send our young people to school, to college, to take post graduate courses, and to the university to acquire all the knowledge possible, but here was an individual who was willing, for a little filthy lucre, to have part of his meager intelligence taken from him. You can depend upon it that "the glory of God is intelligence." Where are you and I going to be throughout the ages of eternity individually? That is a tremendous question that I am asking you. How are you going to answer it? Well, I can tell you where you will be. If you obey this gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ and endure unto the end, as our heavenly Father loves company he will have you with him, but you will have to be intelligent company. Intelligence is the reward of the future; it is the glory of God. It is the glory, too, of men and women.

The Universality of Law

I saw a beautiful wax figure in the window the other day. It was a masterpiece. The only thing wrong with it was it had no brain. Quite a number of years ago there was a magazine published in Boston called The Arena, by B. O. Flower. Some of our young men at Pittsburgh took it. It was a kind of super-magazine, and was read by intelligent men and women of the country. In one of the last editions I ever saw there was an article by a man by the name of Wood, I believe, and here is what he said: "What do you think is the greatest discovery of the nineteenth century; the telegraph; the telephone; electric light; the printing press? No; the greatest discovery of the nineteenth century is this—the universality of law." But who discovered it first? You will find it right here in the Doctrine and Covenants. In one terse paragraph it is stated that law is everywhere. Everything is governed by law. The Lord revealed this secret to his prophet in these last days. There is the law of degrees. You can be partially saved. You can be completely saved. The law of degrees will work there. Accidents are governed by law. The accident insurance companies know about how many accidents there will be in a year through the operation of the law of averages. There is a man in the United States who can tell you how many people will go to the post office in a day in towns of certain sizes. He has averaged it all up by the law of averages.

There is a little instrument called a spectroscope which you can hold in your hand. By it astronomers have discovered what kinds of elements are in the distant suns. You take iron and heat it; make a vapor out of it and use the spectroscope. There you will see 2,000 lines in the spectrum. They are in groups of varied widths. When they take the spectrum of our sun and compare it with the iron spectrum they synchronize perfectly—2,000 lines. This is an invaluable witness that there is iron in the sun, two thousand witnesses to bear testimony. Now astronomers know that the universe out there is of the same material that our world is made of.

The Universal Gospel Law

Here is the big thing they have discovered—the law of cohesion and propulsion, the law of definite combination, the numerical law, and the multiple law stand good. The same laws are in operation out there in space that are in operation here. Now we can understand the dignity, the magnitude, the magnificent situation that the apostle presents to us when he said, "the everlasting gospel." Man came along and tried to change a spiritual law. As well try to change the physical laws of the universe! There is a loose expression sometimes used. They say we "break a law." You cannot break a law. It will do business at the old stand all the time. The law will break you every time. Jesus Christ said that if you fall upon this stone it will break you. We thought that meant the Christ when they hung him up there on Calvary's cross, but it did not. He was the triumphant one all the time.

There is the universal gospel law; the unchangeable law. The gospel is unchangeable, and our religion teaches that Adam had the gospel back there. Of course it is a universal law. It comes down through the ages, restored in these latter days, and it cannot be changed and be the gospel, because it was right in the beginning, a perfect law of liberty, and a perfect thing cannot be improved. Perfection means it is above improvement, so when we refer to the perfect law of liberty we have obtained the best God Almighty can give; it is perfection. Yet men tamper with it and take a little away, and add a little more. No wonder it is written, "Whatsoever the Lord doeth, it is forever. Nothing can be put to it; nor nothing taken from it." Why? It is perfection.

It says here in one of these revelations that Jesus Christ gave to the church, "that which is governed by law is preserved by law and perfected and sanctified by the same." That is why Paul says, "I am not ashamed of the gospel." It is God's law to perfect man, to preserve him. You cannot tamper with that without injuring its efficiency. The gospel is made up of active principles. You cannot tamper with one of them without injuring that divine combination. Chemically we know that to get certain results we must use certain chemicals, and this is the case when turning out perfect men and perfect women. The more of the gospel law used the better will be the production. The less it is used, the worse the job. We want to be God-made, do we not? Yes. Well, then, observe God's law, and that is the gospel.

Of course Paul was not ashamed of the gospel. He preached it triumphantly. What did he care about that rabble horde in front of him? I am not ashamed of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation, to both the Jew and the Gentile. Well, the Jew may have been a pretty poor proposition, but at the same time, the gospel was equal to the task. It is the sick who need a physician.

Work of the Gospel

I want to call your attention to another thought. You have often heard this expression: "You cannot make a purse out of a sow's ear." Yes, you can, because it has been done. Some chemists proved it by taking the ear of a pig, and at a convention of chemists they turned it into a beautiful purse for a woman. They did it.

The object of the gospel is to change men and women and send them up to the Christ stature. We have ideals; that is the God in us. How often do we want to be better? The work of the gospel is to change us from the human into the divine. The gospel is composed of two parts—the human and the divine. We furnish the human element; God furnishes the divine. It is perfectly adapted to the work for which it has been designed, and so if we will apply all of this spiritual chemical as it should be applied we are going to get results. Effects will follow causes. They always do. I am not ashamed of the gospel either, but I will tell you I am awfully ashamed of what some people think is the gospel, and I am ashamed of what they think we think it is.

Perfection Through Suffering

I read in a magazine that a man was invited to address a lot of returned soldiers. These boys had had different men address them in the hospitals from time to time, and they were, as the crude expression had it, "fed up" on this kind of business. Well-meaning men would go there and say, "Cheer up; do the best you can; don't give up," and all that sort of thing. So when this man went to address them they were rather listless. They took little interest in what he had to say. Finally he said, "Say, those of you who have got one arm off raise your hand." Quite a number of hands went up. "How many of you have got an arm and a leg off?" Quite a number raised hands. "Now, how many of you have got both arms off? Say aye." None of them had both arms off. "Why," he said, "you are not in my class at all. I have got both arms and legs off." Now they sat up and took notice! He said: "Boys, I want to tell you my story. I was going out in the West to the farm of my uncle. There was a terrible blizzard raging when I landed at the station. My uncle was there with a spring wagon. I sat in the back on a box and away we went. In that blizzard we could not see the right way, and he ran over a stump which threw me out into the road. I shouted to him, but on account of the fierceness of the blizzard he never heard me, and there I was. I wandered around for hours and finally came to a woodpile. I threw sticks of wood around in a circle and tried to hit the house but I could not see anything because the blizzard was raging so. Finally I found a haystack and crawled in there and stayed there all night. In the morning my hands were frozen and my feet were frozen, and my face was partially frozen. They had to take off my hands and feet; but I want to tell you, boys, I didn't give up. I taught school there. They helped me out and I taught school, and to-day I have an interest in three banks and I married the brightest and prettiest girl in the town."

You and I have to face these trials, and they are the best thing that could happen to us if we permit them to be sanctified to our everlasting good. Jesus Christ was made perfect through the things that he suffered.

The Gospel Will Save

I want to refer to the splendid preconference lectures, these lectures we have been listening to. I cannot forget them nor forgive the church for not having them ten years ago. In one of these lectures the brother told us that the United States Government sent a man over to France. This man had only one arm. They sent him over there to teach the boys who were cripples that they could do a large number of things with just one arm. He showed them how. The gospel plan is urging us to reach the heights of spirituality, and we can do so if we make the effort. There is a girl here from the Society Islands. She has been raised under unfavorable environments. There are certain customs over there that are detrimental to the welfare of the young people. That young girl would not permit these customs to fasten themselves upon her, and so everybody over there said of her, "She is one of God's good girls." This sister is here in Independence. She proposes to develop; she intends to raise the standard of life among her people, and here she is learning to be of service. The gospel will do something for us. It will save us.

The Three Glories

What does it mean to be saved? I have used this illustration several times. If anybody can give me a better one I shall not use this one any more. To be saved, as I understand it, is to have absolute liberty to go any place you wish to go in the whole universe. Brother Griffiths, Charles May, and myself were traveling around the Society Islands. We were on a French steamer. We paid for first-class fare. It was all right in a way, but the old steamer had a list. She would roll to one side; she was top-heavy. Returning, the steamer was filled with French officers and their wives, and we could not travel first class. There was no room for us, and we would not go steerage because of too many reasons which I do not need to mention. You can imagine what they were. We had our bedding with us, so we laid that bedding on the hatch and slept there the first two nights. But the third night it rained, so we had to go right down in the hull where there were bananas, copra, and all kind of freight. That was no class at all, was it? It was not first, second, third, or any kind of class. Now to be saved, as I understand it, is to come forth in the sun glory; that is the first class. God almighty wants us to travel the universe in a regal and royal style.

Jesus Christ cried out triumphantly, "All power is given unto me, both in earth and in heaven." To be saved as I understand it is this: to have a Godlike intellect, so we can understand and appreciate God, and God wants to be appreciated. There is a brother here in this audience who one time in a city worked hard to perfect himself in playing a piece of music, and when he found out that he could play it perfectly he went over it again. As he finished it the second time he heard a knock at the door and a lady was there. She said, "I want to tell you how much I appreciated your playing." He certainly was pleased that somebody appreciated his playing. God wants to be appreciated; he can only be appreciated by a God-like intellect in us. We are told here in the twenty-first chapter of Revelation, "I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." The thought there is that it is going to be a beautiful city. Can you imagine anything more desirable than living in that beautiful city? And the people were to be beautiful. It says, referring to Christ's resurrection, "His glorious body." So to be saved is to be endowed with a God-like mind and a beautiful body, an Apollo Belvidere, or Venus de Milo body, and perfect environments, physically, socially. There is a marvelous combination. Are you going to be satisfied with anything less? Are you going to let men, women or devils rob you of this magnificent salvation? No wonder Paul said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, because it is the power of God unto salvation." The gospel is the divine cause, it will unerringly produce divine effects if it is properly applied. It will save us. I am not ashamed of that gospel.

Doctor Gains Glenn Atkins says that religion begins in our need so to interpret the power manifest in the universe as to come into some satisfying relationship therewith.

Stewardship

By Arthur B. Phillips

The straining eyes of Israel
Look Zionward to-day,
That all in righteousness may dwell
Where all as brothers buy and sell;
Where justice scorns delay.

The faith of Christ is testing thee,
The test of love for man;
The test that means equality,
That sets both soul and body free,
And leaves no class or clan.

The day for empty words is past;
The hour for deeds is here.
The call to stewardship at last
Is sounding as the trumpet blast.
The reign of Christ is near.

Anoint thine eyes and thou shalt see
The fullness of His plan.
Lead on, thou Lamb of Calvary,
Till Zion's crowning glory be
God's love full-born in man.

Art as It Relates to the Home, the Family, and the Child

By Nellie E. Sampson

PART XVIII OF ARTICLES ON HOME BUILDING

What Is Art?

What is art? In the past, art signified pictures, drawings, and statuary. Art study always meant drawing, picture painting, or sculpturing, while art appreciation implied picture discussion. If a man studied art, expressed art, or loved art, it must be through these mediums only.

To-day we find that the term art typifies a broad, comprehensive field, which pertains to every phase of life. Art implies not only the training of eye and hand, but it includes taste, originality, constructive ability, an understanding of color and design, and an appreciation of all that is beautiful. Intelligent arrangement and a feeling for color are the foundation of well-planned cities, gardens, buildings, individuality in homes, in dress, and, in fact, most of our manufactured articles.

Psychological Analysis

To-day people are seeing more surely the psychological relation between the individual and his works, and the unquestionable power of environment in determining one's future efficiency.

Instinctive Desire to Create Beauty

Man instinctively desires to create and possess beauty. This is shown by the savage in the making of implements and utensils more or less ornamented, the use or misuse of paint, metals, and textiles in matters of attire. We also trace the instinctive desire to create and possess beauty through the development of the race, in all ways by which man has expressed naturally his life activities.

State of Consciousness

Art is then, first of all, a state of mind, a condition of consciousness growing out of a desire for beauty. Since it is a state of consciousness, we realize the importance of environment for the proper development of art consciousness. Poor environment in time causes people to become immune to bad odors, loud noises, inharmonious colors; while good environment produces refinement, culture, and artistic appreciation.

Effect of Environment on Art Consciousness

The home is the center of all life's activities. It furnishes the environment in which are born and nurtured the early impressions of the children who are to set the taste standards in the generations that follow. We realize this is true, for we know that every time a color is seen, a sound is heard, or an odor perceived, a new sensation is recorded in consciousness, or one previously recorded is made more permanent by repetition. Thus taste improves as the æsthetic sense becomes defined or sensitized to the point of responding to the more subtle combinations of surrounding forms and colors.

Importance of the Home

What, then, can be more important than the home, especially its interior? Is it not here that the child first sees colors, hears sounds, and touches textures? These first impressions should be of the quality one would have the young mind make permanent as standards for future judgment.

The artistic home should not be regarded as a luxury. Its possession should be regarded as a duty to the cause of civilization. Even the nation is dependent upon it for mental and artistic quality, as well as physical comfort. Sensing the importance of artistic homes, our problem is that of promoting them. First, we must arouse interest, but this should not be difficult if our people appreciate our ideal, a beautiful Zion. The great obstacle confronting our purpose is that which hinders in solving most all problems—the lack of knowledge. But if intelligent advancement be made step by step, the results will be effective, and the work appealing to the most unlearned.

Cleanliness and Neatness

If we would develop art consciousness, may we first attempt a proper setting, that of cleanliness? A clean, neat home, however meager or poor, is beautiful compared to an unkempt home. The most beautiful work of art cannot be appreciated in sordid conditions. So the primary requisites of a beautiful home are cleanliness and neatness. Children should early sense the idea that things are beautiful when they are neat, clean, and well cared for.

Utility in Art

Second, we must impress the fact that the art quality of anything is based upon two elements, use and beauty. Use, or function, is of the first consideration. Frank Alva Parsons states that "an object which does not do honestly, truthfully, and sensibly what it purports to do cannot be artistic." A chair which proves uncomfortable is not artistic, no matter how beautiful the material is of which it is made. A clock which will not run is not artistic, no matter what its style or quality. Function, or fitness, is the fundamental idea of a room. Such furnishings as are needed for the proper function of each room should be chosen, but all decorative objects and souvenirs, which needlessly occupy space, or interfere with the proper functioning of the necessary articles, should be eliminated. In the arrangement of the room, every object should be so placed as to do its own work in the most efficient manner.

A home must answer the needs of the family not only from the standpoint of physical comfort but also mental comfort. It should provide intellectual stimulus and refined influences which complement the activities of life outside, and calm and rest tired nerves. The home should satisfy the needs of the family from the standpoint of sanitation. Physical comfort does not always provide sanitation. The Victorian plush upholstery, chenille portieres, and nailed-down carpets were not sanitary. Furnishings should be sanitary no matter how they are used. The home must meet the family's needs from the standpoint of economics. We cannot afford to buy everything we see, desire, or appreciate. Good things are not all costly, and cheap things are not all bad. It is true there is a greater field for beautiful things where unlimited means are at the command of the designer, but unless the designer thoroughly understands what is good and what is not, the field for his caprice and ignorance is increased in proportion to the amount of money he has to spend. Often the money limit is the saving thing in the selection of articles as to their kind or their number. Money is not the standard of judgment. Knowledge is the greatest factor of defense against bad things, which thought brings us back to our second element of art quality, beauty.

Standard of Beauty

Beauty is harmony. The standard of beauty is determined by principles of harmony in color, form, line, and texture. Few people know instinctively how to achieve beauty. We are not like the Japanese, a people trained from earliest childhood to the appreciation of color and line. We must dispense a knowledge of the basic art principles, which are a guide for more and better art. These principles are concrete realities, not illusive phantoms or abstract formulas as they were thought to be in the past. For instance, color theory has been known to the chemist and artist, but the average person has been groping in the dark for pleasing color harmonies. Now we have series of charts and definite information concerning them. Theory and Practice of Color, by Bonnie E. Snow and Hugo B. Frochlich, published by the Prang Company, is an excellent book on this subject. The text is not only clear and interesting, but the book contains a complete set of hand-colored charts. These charts may also be obtained separately from the same company.

Psychology of Color

There is another phase of color which the charts cannot touch. The inner shrine of color which we call its psychology. This has to do with the effects that different colors exert upon our feelings and emotions. All people react to the influence of color, whether they know it or not. Color has power to attract attention, to stimulate emotion, to cheer and animate, or to quiet and subdue. We all know the stimulating, exciting quality of red. Too much of it will irritate to a dangerous degree a person of super-sensitive temperament, but it has its place in bringing cheer, courage, and warmth as needed in our lives. Yellow, symbolizing the sun, brings light, buoyance, and hope; reflects all the light about it and appears to add a certain element of its own; brings sunlight into dark rooms; encourages and enlivens despondent dispositions. Blue is cold, quiet, and reserved. Because of its quietness and restraint, blue has a large place in our schemes of house furnishing, costuming, and commercial designing.

From the effect of the three primaries, we may easily deduct the psychological effect of the binaries and hues. Orange combines the qualities of red and yellow. It has strong decorative quality, but must be carefully controlled and balanced by large areas of subdued color. Green is lighter and more cheerful than blue, and affords more dignity and repose than yellow. It is restful to the eyes and nerves, and a relief from light and heat. Violet is the nearest to black in value, and in its influence on our feelings. In darker tones violet denotes seriousness or solemnity, in lighter tones delicacy and refinement. Violet is used less decoratively than any other color.

In home decoration, color should do the work which the location and lighting of rooms do not. From the standpoint of health and character development, color should act on consciousness as a supplement to what is being forced on us through the senses; it should stimulate certain ideas in the mind, either consciously or unconsciously, and neutralize undesirable ones.

Harmony in Form

Our second art principle, form, signifies consistent structural unity. Harmony must prevail in scale, style, and arrangement of forms. There must be unity of scale, not an extremely large form combined with a very small one. Consistent styles or types should be combined, or at least one type should be dominant. In arrangement, furniture should be parallel to structural lines of room and to each other, unless function demands it otherwise. Variety may be shown in the arrangement of books, pottery, and other ornaments.

Line Composition

The third principle, line, is important. Horizontal lines produce rest and repose, vertical lines, dignity and strength, while oblique lines suggest motion and unrest. The principle of line composition is clearly demonstrated in architecture, and should be a means of effective arrangement of furniture. In a well-arranged home, occupied by a normal family, there is usually a sufficient amount of diagonal effects as a result of constant use of chairs, books, magazines, etc., without the larger pieces of furniture appearing to be in motion also.

Texture Scheme

The fourth principle, texture, is also important in producing harmony. Burlap and chiffon will not enter harmoniously into a texture scheme, even if they were both made of silk and have the same color.

Applied Knowledge of Art

Having a knowledge of art quality, the next step is to apply it. However, various obstacles may hinder in a movement for more artistic homes. Some may say, "I cannot afford to improve my home as I wish to do"; others, "Why buy good things when I must put the new with the acknowledged bad?" These objections should be answered by encouraging people to attempt a little at a time. It is never too late to begin to do right. If finances are low, start with the background of the room and make the woodwork, the walls, ceiling, and floor, a suitable background. The quality of rest will find its way into the room the moment the backgrounds are satisfactory. The background is the foundation upon which all things must rest. Then let the next change be in curtains, draperies, and rugs, as these come next in importance. After that, the furniture and decorative material can be dealt with very easily and quite gradually if need be. The house will turn out better than one expects, and the best of it all is, the family grows with it.

Educational Advantages

In such a home a child has great educational advantages. Besides the environment, great care should be exercised in the selection of his toys, books, and pictures. There has been a decided advancement of late in the production of toys in fields of applied art. Recently one State Director of Art Education resigned her position to devote her entire time to designing useful toys. Books are even a greater medium of art education. Better have one good book of beautiful illustrations than many poor ones. In fact, the poor ones are worse than none, as they cultivate poor taste standards. The Sunday supplement is pernicious. There are beautiful books for children in abundance these days. A long list is

Patriarch J. F. Martin Finds High Degree of Spirituality Among Graceland College Students

From a Letter to the First Presidency

LAMONI, IOWA, February 5.—This will let you know that according to arrangement I came to Lamoni last week.

Shortly after the holidays I went to Wheeling, West Virginia, to assist my mother with some of her affairs, and while in that district I visited three of the branches, preaching and assisting otherwise as opportunity offered. After reaching home again, your message came with regard to the Lamoni Stake.

Work at Lamoni

I arrived here Friday evening and have since been quite busy with the work. Friday evening I preached at the church; Saturday I attended business sessions and visited the college; Sunday morning I addressed a Sunday school class of about fifty girls from the college, also assisted in presiding over the sacrament service. In the afternoon I assisted with a musical program at the college, and in the evening I preached again at the church. So during the conference I tried to do my best to help make it a success and have enjoyed it thoroughly.

A good spirit prevailed throughout the conference, manigiven on page 420 in the Mothercraft Manual, also a list of reproductions of famous pictures and statuary.

Outline of Course of Study

(The outline follows the chapters in the textbook. Questions are selected from manuals, Mothercraft, by Etta Hunt, 15 cents, and Mothercraft for Girls, by Alice Mae Burgess, 12 cents, and other questions are based upon the articles. The question manuals and any reference books as listed may be obtained from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.)

CHAPTER XIX

Music and Art

The questions and article on music will appear next week.

1. What colors attract the child? Why?
2. How may the color sense be cultivated?
3. What kinds of pictures do children like?
4. Observe children trying to draw pictures, and compare their methods, interest, etc., with Doctor Hall's discussion of the subject. (Page 333.)
5. What will result from supplying good pictures?
6. What should the child draw? Should his drawings be criticized? Why?
7. How is drawing a test of observation?
8. What of the Sunday supplement? How may the child's desire be satisfied with the good in pictures as well as in story?
9. What part does the home play in the development of the artistic sense of the child?
10. Have you done all you can, within your circumstances, to make your home a beautiful place to live in, and in which to educate your children artistically?

festing itself in a high degree of intelligence in the business sessions and other services.

Requests for Blessings

Owing to a number of requests for blessings, mostly from students at the college, I stayed over until Thursday morning. I visited the college a number of times, and Wednesday evening attended young people's prayer meeting there. I was greatly impressed by the high degree of spirituality manifested by the students and was pleased to observe that so many are catching the vision of the church and are preparing themselves for service. A number with whom I conversed spoke in the highest terms of appreciation for the work that is being done in the religious education department. I could almost envy the young people the privilege of attending Graceland and taking advantage of the opportunities offered there.

I started meetings here at Hiteman Thursday evening. The meetings were well advertised and the attendance and interest thus far have been good. It is desired that I stay here two weeks or more.

Flint Meetings Come to Successful Close

From a Letter to the First Presidency

FLINT, MICHIGAN, February 13.—I am glad to announce the closing of the third annual campaign of the young people's organization of Flint which culminated in being State wide for the last three days. We regretted your inability to be present, as we had hoped to give you the pleasure of meeting our fine group of young people of Michigan. A general consensus of opinion throughout the entire two weeks was of the very best, and nowhere did we hear of a negative thought being presented as to the subjects discussed or the thoughts presented. Personally, I feel that the presence of Floyd McDowell in Flint has left a lasting impression with our people here and believe it will result in much good being done.

Resolution Passed

At the close of the campaign Sunday evening the young people passed the following resolution:

"Moved and seconded that we as the young people of the State of Michigan inform the First Presidency of the church that we are behind every forward movement which tends to bring about the spirit of unity and right living throughout the world."

This was carried unanimously by those present who numbered about four hundred. With this sentiment we are hopeful of accomplishing some worth-while things during the coming year.

Meetings Held at Casey, Illinois

CASEY, ILLINOIS, February 2.—Elder Ulrich, the missionary appointed to this district, arrived here the first days of January, and after looking around a few days we secured the tabernacle and opened the meetings in Casey, with some interest. But owing to the fact that we could not keep it warm it became necessary to close. Through the kindness of the Universalist folks we were permitted to use their church about four miles out of town. This was gladly granted to us after we had proved to them that we had no affiliation with the Utah Mormons.

At this place we had a pretty good interest. About twenty-five were present almost every night. However there were many more that were there from time to time even though the roads were very bad most all the time.

There was a man by the name of Mr. Emrich (a Universalist) who was out almost every night, and looked after the fires and lights for us, which was appreciated very much.

The Ohio Oil Company furnished the gas for the heat and lights. Elder Ulrich furnished the gospel light. There were some to call us "Mormons" and throw mud, but they stayed at a safe distance. So we feel that there was some good done. Elder Ulrich left Friday with the promise that he would return when the roads were in better condition. The writer preached Sunday night, the 17th, and will continue to try to keep the angel message before the people until Brother Ulrich can return.

New Church Building Opened at Long Beach

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA, February 25.—About ten years ago a small body of Saints in Long Beach, California, established themselves in a little building that was a mere shack, so far as appearances were concerned. But their faith and courage was a mansion for their souls, and God recognized it, for it was but a few years until it became imperative to enlarge this building to make room for the members and friends who continued to come.

SAINTS' CHAPEL, LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA

Building Enlarged

This was done, and then how commodious the Saints felt in their church, so new, so clean, and so big. Very soon they were able to buy a piano to help them in their song worship. More members were added, either newcomers or folk who came to see the light of the gospel as do Latter Day Saints. Children from round about came to Sunday school and returned again to become regular attendants. By and by the once commodious home was full to overflowing. Again and again the house was so crowded at Sunday school that early arrivals for church had to stand or wait outside until they could get in. There was nothing else to do but to enlarge the building. The courage and faith of the original group was still with us, so we thought about it, we talked about it, we dreamed about it, and verily it was done.

Remodel Church Second Time

Now after three months that seemed more like years, we are again meeting together in our remodeled home; we are feasting together at our banquet table laden with happiness, good fellowship, and love.

Our auditorium is much enlarged and with new chairs, carpet, and lights, it seems quite comfortable and inviting. We have a basement for the small children's Sunday school room, or for socials. We are equipping our kitchen a little at a time. It is quite a satisfaction to know we always have a place for meetings, without wondering if we are not too much bother for some hostess.

If our pastor, Brother N. T. Chapman, has a motto, it must be: "Let us be happy and rejoice." We cannot help but be happy and rejoice with him, but there is a fly in our ointment—we already overflow our church!

E. LEOLA NICE.

Two Baptized at Santa Rosa, California

SANTA ROSA, CALIFORNIA, February 18.—The meetings yesterday were well attended at both Sunday school and church services, the speaker being Brother J. D. White, of Berkeley, district president.

After the morning service and luncheon were over, four auto loads motored to our mission at Windsor, ten miles north, where services were held at 2.30. The little church was well filled and Brother White again delivered an impressive and spiritual sermon. After that all went a short distance to Brother and Sister Bell's home where two candidates were baptized in a stream not far from the house and afterwards returned to the church where the confirmation was held. It was an ideal day and a very busy one for Brother White, but we know he is happy working for the Master.

Our branch has purchased a lot and hope to have a church built this year.

We adopted the budget system last year and found it very satisfactory.

H. E. WALKER.

Individual Communion Service Purchased at El Reno

EL RENO, OKLAHOMA, February 27.—The liberality of the Saints here is quite marked. At the Sunday school last week, the Christmas offering averaged twelve cents per member present. What other school can beat that average? The recent call for means for an individual communion service and church sign resulted in $25 being raised and expended for these commendable purposes. The branch now has both. An appeal in behalf of the HERALD and Ensign subscriptions was made.

Brother W. A. Connel was the speaker to a fair audience on the morning of February 17, and on the next Sunday morning, Brother W. A. Milner, the branch solicitor preached. His subject was tithing. After the service he was seen busy with a receipt book, receiving and receipting tithing.

The writer occupied Sunday evening with special liberty, on the subject, "The Lord added to the church such as should be saved." Emphasis was placed on "church" and "saved."

Mr. J. H. Cherry visited at this service. He once visited Emma Smith Bidamon in Nauvoo, and held a long conversation with her, in which she stated that she was the only wife of Joseph Smith. She told him also of the efforts of Brigham Young to have her accompany them to Utah, even trying to kidnap her.

Brethren Roland and Pratt, though they live twelve and eighteen miles in the country, are seen with their helpful families at the services every Sunday.

Brother and Sister J. H. Norris, of Chickasha, with their children, Jesse and Paul, are expected to visit here again.

Scarcely any snow has fallen this winter. Natural gas is one of the principal fuels in this part of the country.

On the streets of El Reno may be seen specimens of many shades of humanity. Those which most attract attention are the Indian women, wrapped in their highly colored blankets and shawls. There are no Lamanites in this branch, but a goodly number are found in the Calumet Branch, fifteen miles away.

The work is hopeful here and pushing forward.

J. M. TERRY.

Gives Credit Where Credit Is Due

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, March 5.—The good people of Flint, Michigan, in their reports of the recent young people's meetings held in that place have been characteristically modest in their reference to themselves and characteristically liberal in credit given the speaker. It is said that there are always two sides to a story. We believe that we must give credit where credit is due. Hence this brief note.

Reasons for Success of Meetings

If the writer were to list the reasons for the success of the young people's meetings at Flint, such a list would certainly include the following:

1. Thorough preparation over a period of several months, this preparation including praying as well as working, and working as well as praying.

2. Efficient organization. The young people of Flint know how to organize efficiently and have learned the sweet art of working together for common interests.

3. Loyalty to those in charge of the campaign and to the speaker.

4. Whole-hearted and self-sacrificing support of the undertaking from the opening song of the first meeting until the last good-by on the closing night.

5. A most hospitable and courteous treatment of their invited guest, the speaker of the series.

6. A most sympathetic and kind interest in the welfare of the loved ones the missionary must always leave behind.

Backed up by such loyal support and inspired by the Spirit of God which came in answer to the prayers of these young people, who could help but succeed?

Acknowledges Support

Since praise has been given liberally and publicly by the good young people of Flint, the writer wishes publicly to acknowledge the excellent support given him in his recent efforts among these young people. The intimate contact with these young souls throbbing with life's blood and perplexed with life's problems has made the writer a better man, a better father, and a better Saint. May God's choicest blessings be the heritage of the young people of Flint as well as of all the children of God.

F. M. MCDOWELL.

Central Nebraska District Conference Held

CLEARWATER, NEBRASKA, February 18.—The conference of the Central Nebraska District, Saturday and Sunday, February 16 and 17, passed very pleasantly.

The prayer and testimony services both mornings were marked by a peaceful and humble spirit, as well as having a cheerful and hopeful aspect. The Sunday school program on Saturday night was very interesting. One interesting feature was a solo sung by Mrs. Rakow, who, with three others, was baptized on Sunday in the icy waters of the Elkhorn River.

The officers chosen for the ensuing year are: Levi Gamet, president; Mrs. Etta Rutledge, secretary; F. S. Gatenby, treasurer. Miss Sarah Smith was chosen to act as chorister for the Sunday school department. Elder George Jenkins was the preacher Sunday night and F. S. Gatenby, Sunday morning.

The capacity of the little church was severely taxed to accommodate the crowds. Really they need to make more room.

A splendid feeling characterized the meetings from first to last.

LEVI GAMET.

Apostle Clyde F. Ellis in Island Mission

PAPEETE, TAHITI, February 6.—Another month finds us still in Tahiti, the capital of French Oceania. We were unable to go to the distant diving island of Hikueru because of certain conditions existing, and work in Tahiti, that demanded our attention.

Visit Island of Makatea

Elder R. J. Farthing and the writer left Tahiti on January 30 for the phosphate island of Makatea, where we have a branch of about fifty members, and returned on the morning of February 3. We did considerable work there in an effort to solidify the branch organization. The Saints there are rebuilding their church building, which is being moved from the seashore to the plateau, where the majority of the population of the island, and the workmen for the Phosphate Company, are living. They hope to have it dedicated when Brother McConley and I return in December.

The Phosphate Company showed us every kindness while we were on the island, and gave us a house, with every convenience, in which to live. Also they furnished us meals, which were carried or brought to our home each morning, noon, and evening, by a steward, who also took full charge of the house. This was all done without charge.

High Price of Living

Conditions in this mission are becoming more complex each month, and each year. The financial status of things in France, and throughout the whole world, is affecting us in many ways, and if the franc continues to drop, conditions will continue to complicate themselves. Foodstuffs from abroad, and also clothing, are soaring to the sky in price.

We are continuing our efforts for the benefit of the poor native Saints who are subjects of such an unwholesome environment as is found in these distant islands. We cannot hope to do anything very demonstrative, but we are endeavoring to strengthen them against the evils so prevalent.

To Go to New Zealand

The writer expects to leave Papeete on March 6 for Wellington, New Zealand, where I will meet Brother M. A. McConley, and after a few weeks of labor there, go to Sydney, Australia, for their mission conference, which will convene April 18, and last over the 21st.

Mail sent to 65 Nelson Street, Rozelle, Sydney, New South Wales, Australia, in care of Standard Publishing House, will reach us while we are in that field.

I desire to thank all for their kind remembrances at the time of our departure from the home land, and also those who remembered us so kindly Christmas and New Year's time. Such evidences of friendship and confidence make the path of life much brighter, and the burdens much lighter, as we struggle on in our warfare.

We trust all is well in Zion and Joseph's land, as well as the whole world, with the church of the living God and his people.

CLYDE F. ELLIS.

Work Among Italians at Philadelphia Continues

From a Letter to the First Presidency

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, February 18.—I did not do very much church work last week, but was able to attend the services. I am gradually improving and gaining in weight. Yesterday, I put in a very busy day attending services and also visited two sick people in the hospital.

John Zimmermann, jr., preached in the morning, Bishop Zimmermann in the afternoon to the Italians, and John Angus at night to the Saints at the church. It was a day for the Johns.

Our Sunday school superintendent, A. L. Stone, is proving himself to be a fine worker. "He is on the job," as Brother Garver would express it.

We have a little Sunday school every Sunday afternoon for the little Italian children. About four or five of our girls go down and teach them. We have about 16 or 20. We are all counting on having a branch among the Italians within a reasonable length of time.

Missionary Reports Fine Interest in Gospel Sermons

CLEARWATER, NEBRASKA, February 23.—On November 7, I arrived at Meadow Grove, Nebraska, it being my first visit to this State. On learning after my arrival that the Methodist people would begin a protracted effort, I remained at this place until Monday, November 12, when I left for Norfolk, Nebraska, and began cottage meetings.

Baptisms Follow Meetings

I preached the funeral of Sister Campbell's little girl on Tuesday, and continued the cottage meetings until Sunday, December 2. Then I began a series of meetings at Meadow Grove which lasted until January 1. Two were converted and others are near the fold of God. The interest was splendid throughout, and from Meadow Grove I went to Neligh, beginning a protracted effort there which lasted five weeks.

While at Neligh I preached the funeral of Mrs. Dowds, a nonmember. These meetings were just fine all through, though the temperature dropped as low as thirty-four below zero. Despite this the crowd did not diminish or the interest either. It was proven beyond any question of doubt that if the people are interested cold weather will not keep them from attending the services.

These meetings resulted in bringing in one more, a very fine man who will be of great service to the church, a fine musician as well as a graduate of a university. The effort at Neligh was a crowning success to the work.

The one convert from this place, the two from Meadow Grove, with another from Inman were baptized at the district conference by Brother Fred Gatenby. Sister Raco from Inman requested Brother Gatenby to baptize her, and I asked that he baptize the other three.

I stopped off at Inman on my way to Clearwater and spoke to them three evenings. There I found a nice bunch of Saints, and good interest was given the three evenings I spent with them.

District Conference

I arrived at Clearwater on February 10, preached at the 11 a. m. service and at the 8 p. m. hour. I continued then each evening until Saturday, February 16, when the district conference convened. They say it was the best conference they have had for years. The interest in the meetings has also been the best for years, according to the Saints here.

A banker, Mr. James Ferguson, and his wife, of the Christian Church here, have been regular attendants, leaving their own services to come to ours. They have said these are the grandest sermons they ever heard.

I shall continue these efforts indefinitely. I have surely been busy since coming to this field, preaching eighty-six times in a little over three months, besides doing other work which comes in the line of missionary life. At Neligh the call from nonmembers is, "Come. We want to hear more. We have questions to ask you."

May God bless the work everywhere! I am hopeful of the final triumph of the work.

GEORGE JENKINS.

Sermon to Full House of Nonmembers Well Received

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

SAINT CLAIR, MICHIGAN, February 18.—I came here Saturday to visit the Saints and try to encourage and assist them with their services. Well, if a missionary wants to be kept real busy, visit Saint Clair. I presided over the prayer service, taught a class in the Sunday school, then drove out five miles into the country and spoke to a full house, all nonmembers, in a private home. I am sure the gospel was gladly received by nearly all present, and we received a strong invitation to come again and preach for them. This is a wonderful opportunity for our local men of Saint Clair to bring some honest people into the church.

I just received a call to come to Lexington to preach the funeral sermon of our oldest member in Eastern Michigan and possibly the whole church. He was 103 years old and retained his mentality till the last and was highly honored and respected by all who knew him.

This part of "the thumb" is tied up on account of the deep snow, but to-day the sun is very warm so I hope the snow will settle so we can use the auto again, as not many are prepared for sleighing. The driving horse is a thing of the past here.

I am not entirely over my throat trouble, but am trying to do what I can to build up the work. It is a hard task to get over being hoarse when you have from one to two sermons a week and speak twice on Sunday. Well, I am happy and glad to assist.

WILLIAM M. GRICE.

Way for Gospel Opened Up at Wakeeney, Kansas

WAKEENEY, KANSAS, February 18.—The work is growing very fast at Wakeeney, Kansas, and many people are getting an understanding of the gospel as it was preached by the apostles of old. The church here has had its growth slowly, the same as it has in many other places. The first members to land in this town were Brother Sellers and his family. Brother Sellers is a very zealous worker and very anxious that every one hear the message. In this work he is well supported by his wife and two daughters. Of course he had to meet the opposition that comes to all men who are not ashamed of the true gospel of Christ. But he was not to be discouraged, so continued with the preaching and teaching of the Word.

He first established himself in a good grocery business, but the real objective all the time was the establishment of the gospel. In time Brother Walter Curtis was sent to the district as the missionary, and he preached the word with power and authority and several were baptized. The work continued until it was quite firmly established. The opposition as well as the work grew, and in time the Saints found themselves without a home, as all the buildings in town were closed to them. But the Sunday school was held in the home of Brother Sellers, and he continued to preach and thereby keep the Saints alive spiritually.

Assistance Arrives

This was the condition when the call came, "Come up to Wakeeney and help us." We turned the "Rocky Mountain Goat" (our small car) south, and in time found ourselves warm and comfortable in the home of Brother Sellers. However the reception given us by the clergy was not quite so warm. We tried to show the Spirit of Christ and heaped coals on their heads by forgiving them and praying for them. We trust the same will bear fruit in time, but there is no indication that the tree is even going to bloom yet. We could get no place to preach, so Brother Sellers pushed the counters back to the wall and we borrowed some seats and carried them in each evening and held our meetings in the store. Large crowds attended each evening, and quite a number were converted and baptized, also several babies were blessed. The weather was very bad and we had the blizzards, yet our crowds continued to grow till we could hardly house them.

Women's Department Organized

Sister Burton was busy among the sisters and organized a splendid Department of Women, with Sister Sellers as president. They are going to work with a will, and the effect of some of their work is already noticeable. Their motto is a cleaner and better town and better conditions in the homes. The Sunday school was also built up and almost doubled in attendance.

New Church Building

We have the foundation laid and part of the material on the ground for a new church and work will begin as soon as the weather will permit. Arrangements are partly made for another effort in the spring when we hope to bring more into the faith.

Monday we shall go on south to Alexander and see what we can do there in the Master's cause. Last Sunday evening Sister Burton returned to our home in Nebraska. A large number of friends and Saints gathered at the depot to see her off and wish her Godspeed.

Spirit Felt by Nonmembers

Last Sunday morning the Lord was with us in power, and his Spirit rested on all who were present. It brought the testimony to those who were baptized and rested not only on those who were members but on the outsiders. It was a taste of what we beheld the closing afternoon of the General Conference. Stanch and staid men and women were melted to tears as the softening influence of the Spirit rested on them. Most noticeable was a little girl seven years old. The Spirit of God rested upon her and her face shone as the noonday sun. Her mother had just been baptized the week before on a bitter cold day in the ice water and to her this was a wonderful testimony that God is no respecter of persons. As I listened to the wonderful testimonies of those present, the thought came to me that the Saints are being paid for the hardships they have passed through for the gospel's sake in northwestern Kansas. P. R. BURTON.

CHURCH NEWS

Southeastern Illinois District Conference Held at Springerton

SPRINGERTON, ILLINOIS, February 20.—The Southeastern Illinois district conference convened here Saturday and Sunday, February 16 and 17. On Friday evening a program was rendered by the Sunday school, which some of the Saints say was the best they have ever seen.

Springerton has some good musical talent, especially Brother Ralph Laster, who is a real violinist. There are also some good singers, and these added very much to the success of the program.

Brother F. Henry Edwards had charge of the business session, and was assisted by R. H. Henson, district president, and Henry Sparling, a missionary of this district. The business meeting being finished at about 4 o'clock, a good social time was enjoyed until about 5.30.

Sunday was a very busy day, with Sunday school at 10 a. m., conducted by the local officers, preaching at 11, sacramental and prayer service at 2.30, and preaching again in the evening.

Addresses of Apostle F. Henry Edwards

Brother Edwards preached twice on Sunday and also at 7 p. m. on Saturday. It is not often that one of the Quorum of Twelve is in this neighborhood, so Brother Edwards was kept busy. His sermon Saturday evening was on the subject, "Going on unto perfection." On Sunday evening, he preached another excellent sermon. At the latter part of it, the Spirit of the Master came in such power that nearly everyone present was melted to tears, and yet it was so gentle and mild that it just seemed to flow from heart to heart.

Brother Edwards at the close of his discourse bore testimony that God, in looking down through the stream of time, knew that the people who were there were to carry on the work in that place, that his power to heal the physical body was just as great as it ever was, and that God was working in many ways which are not known to bring his work to consummation.

The good Spirit was also at the prayer service in the afternoon, and not unlike the General Conference it was there in a very marked degree at the close.

The next conference will be at Marion, Illinois, the first Saturday and Sunday in June.

Series of Meetings to Be Held at Council Bluffs

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, February 25.—Arrangements have been made for an interesting and, it is hoped, a profitable series of services at the Central church beginning March 13, with a musical program by the local choir, and continuing until March 14, following with a banquet and program for men and boys on March 15. On the next day, at 8.15 a. m., there will be held a young people's prayer meeting presided over by President F. M. McDowell, who is also expected to preach at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. The Saints are looking forward to this time with fond anticipation to receive a great spiritual uplift.

At the Religio session Sunday evening, February 24, a special program in commemoration of Washington's Birthday was enjoyed.

Interest in the new mission at Dutch Hollow Schoolhouse continues. The sermons by the local brethren are appreciated.

The epidemic of measles is abating, yet many cases exist among the Saints. Several families where the children have been affected are now on the road to health.

Sister A. H. Rudd, who was so badly burned, is slowly improving. Through administration she has received the greatest relief. The Saints have been deeply interested in rendering what assistance they could, and that interest has not lessened.

Sister H. H. Hand has been very sick for several days, and she has been halting between two opinions, whether to be operated on or to continue to trust in the ordinance of God's house entirely. The decision has been made to further wait on the Lord, and to do all that can be done with nursing and with "herbs and mild foods" at the hands of friends, associated with administrations, believing that this is wise.

Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, March 4.—Sacrament services were held at all Independence churches Sunday, March 2. The weather was fine so a large attendance was out. At 2.30 p. m. at the Stone Church, President Frederick M. Smith addressed a problems meeting. President F. M. McDowell was in charge. At 7.30 p. m. President Elbert A. Smith concluded his series of gospel sermons. He talked on "The eternal judgment." At 11 a. m. a sermon with sacred musical program was broadcast from the radio studio, Bishop A. B. Phillips speaking on "The vision of the church."

Banner Sunday School Attendance

Sunday, March 2, was a banner day at the Stone Church Sunday school in point of view of attendance. The report shows 1,556, which is the highest mark so far reached. The Christmas morning Sunday school attendance was 1,317, and twice since then it has gone over 1,300.

Classroom is a great problem. Classes are very close together in the church building, and every available space is occupied. Over 500 were accommodated Sunday in buildings outside the church, part of the classes meeting in the building across the street on the temple lot. There were nineteen perfect attendance classes Sunday.

Stone Church Religio

Religio attendance is still growing on Sunday evening. The program consisting of musical numbers and an original poem on the Book of Mormon by Doctor Joseph Luff, read by himself, was interesting and entertaining.

East Independence

No doubt it has been thought by some that East Independence has been translated and gone to join the city of Enoch since this part of Zion has not been heard from for some time. It is not so. The church stands three and one half miles from Zion proper; it is still on earth, having its joys and sorrows, and its ups and downs. However, it is striving to keep up the Lord's work in this part of the vineyard, to walk in the straight and narrow path. Although stumbling and falling occasionally the Saints get up and struggle onward to the best of their ability.

There are many obstacles here which are hard to remove, but having a great desire to be numbered with the few when the Lord comes to make up his jewels, the Saints do not allow these things to discourage them. A sure foundation is being built, and they are determined to reach the goal, no matter how hard it may seem at times to remove the stones which are always in the paths of those whose eyes and minds are heavenward.

Business Meeting

The annual business meeting was held in the early part of December. The election of officers resulted in the selection of the following: A. H. Parsons, president; Albert Thatcher, jr., Sunday school superintendent; Garner Collins, superintendent of Recreation and Expression; T. W. Thatcher, scoutmaster; Sister Gladys Teeter, musical director; and Sister Goldie Brook, supervisor of Department of Women.

Building New Church

The Saints here are trying to build a new church which is needed very much as the present building is taxed to capacity for most of the meetings. However, it is hoped in the near future that there shall be room enough so that the neighbors, who are nonmembers, will feel free to meet with the Saints. Some have expressed their reason for not coming to the meetings that the building was too small to even care for all its members comfortably.

Vesper Service Held

A vesper service was held for the Boy Scouts on Monday night. Several were taken in as full-fledged Scouts.

Sister Jacob Friend, who has been quite ill, and Sister Albert Thatcher, sr., who has not been well all winter, are both improving. Brother Thomas Mauzey, who has been confined at home for several months, is still ill. Sister Dollie Uptegrove, who was operated on for appendicitis and spent three weeks in the Independence Sanitarium, is home again.

East Independence was favored with a splendid Washington program last Friday night from the Englewood Religio. This was enjoyed very much. Come again, Englewood.

Enoch Hill May Enlarge Church

The work on Enoch Hill seems to have bright prospects in practically all departments. The group prayer meetings are well attended, as are the other services, while all are of a spiritual character.

There are a number of sick in this district, but all seem to be improving.

Saints are moving into the territory adjacent to the church, and it is beginning to look as though the church building will have to be enlarged.

Brother Carl F. Greene and wife are making preparations to leave for Germany, where Brother Greene will take up missionary work again. They expect to sail April 5.

Liberty Street Crowded for Room

The Liberty Street Sunday school is increasing in attendance until it is a problem where to put the people. It is the old question, "How shall we keep a roof over our heads?"

Sacramental services were well attended. Pastor J. M. Baker introduced an arrangement of the priesthood which is particularly pleasing to the congregation.

Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith preached at night, taking for his text the parable of the talents.

Sister J. M. Baker continues ill at her home. The congregation united in prayer again for her, Sunday, March 2.

Leone Ellen, the infant daughter of Francis B. and Anna Sutton Presler, died February 25. The services were held at Carson's chapel. The members of the family wish to express their thanks for the help, sympathy, and floral offerings which were extended to them in the time of need.

Nineteen girls met Monday evening, March 3, at the home of Brother Philip Turner, 401 South Spring Street, and organized a Temple Builder Chapter. Sister Ballanger, supervisor of women in that district, had charge of the meeting. Sister Pearl Moriarty was chosen as leader; Edna Resch, secretary; and Evalyn Turner, treasurer.

Walnut Park Has Missionary Day

February 24 was another "missionary day" at Walnut Park when Apostle F. Henry Edwards and Roy S. Budd were the speakers and assisted in the afternoon round table.

Subjects recently discussed in the young people's Wednesday evening meetings are "Overcoming" and "Good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people." There are some good talkers and deep thinkers among these young people, and their meetings are beneficial in various ways. Elder Glauud Smith is their leader.

Guy Reynolds is the new Religio superintendent.

The sacramental service, March 2, was well attended, and a spiritual message of cheer and encouragement to one of our worthy and hard-working officers was heartening to all. A stranger to this brother brought the message and gave it, not even knowing whether the brother was present or what his circumstances were, but the one thus named arose and testified to the need and timeliness of the recognition and encouragement.

Pastor J. A. Dowker preached as he had announced, one of his "old-time gospel sermons" in the evening.

Departmental Day at Walnut Park

Departmental Day at the Walnut Park Church will be next Sunday, March 9. The program for the day has been placed in charge of Mrs. Dona Haden, supervisor of Women at Walnut Park. Miss Blanche Edwards, of Lamoni, Iowa, supervisor of the young women of the church, will be the speaker at 11 o'clock. At 2.30 a round table discussion will be in charge of Mrs. Dora Glines, general superintendent of Department of Women. At 7.30 Mrs. Ida Pearson Etzenhouser, representing the social service department, will give the address.

The Presidency

President Frederick M. Smith and President Elbert A. Smith will attend the Far West stake conference, arriving there March 13, in time for its organization. President Floyd M. McDowell will be in attendance over the week-end.

The Twelve

Apostle J. Arthur Gillen has been conducting a series of meetings in the Owen Sound District, Ontario. The meetings to be held by Apostle E. J. Gleazer at Saint Louis, Missouri, will begin Sunday, March 9.

The two Pacific Slope missionaries are in the Middle West. Apostle D. T. Williams is in Lamoni, Iowa, and Apostle Roy S. Budd is in Independence, although he expects to leave for the West in a few days.

The apostles in foreign fields have not been heard from this week, but their general whereabouts are known. Apostle Clyde F. Ellis who is in Papeete, Tahiti, is expected to sail for New Zealand, March 6, where he will meet Apostle M. A. McConley. Apostles Paul M. Hanson and J. F. Curtis were in Holland when last heard from.

Apostle John F. Garver has returned to Lamoni, Iowa, after a series of meetings conducted by him at Colorado Springs. Apostle F. Henry Edwards has returned to Independence from attendance at the Clinton, Missouri, conference.

Following a series of meetings at San Antonio, Texas, Apostle T. W. Williams was to join Apostle John W. Rush-ton at Houston, Texas.

The Bishopric

Bishop Benjamin R. McGuire was in Tulsa, Oklahoma, over the last week-end. Bishop Israel A. Smith returned to Independence from Colorado to-day, after being away for over a week.

Pen and Ink Club

The Pen and Ink Club, which consists of some of the writers of the church, enjoyed a social evening at the home of Arthur E. McKim, Friday, February 29. Games were played, refreshments served, and a general good time enjoyed. Among the "twisted authors" which tested their familiarity with literary people, the names of some of their own club members proved to be the hardest to decipher.

Japanese Fete

A Japanese Fete will be given March 7, at the home of Mrs. Wallace Robinson, 73 Jansen Place, Kansas City, by the Independence Music Club. There will be two sessions, the first from 3 to 6 in the afternoon, and the last from 7 to 11 at night. Admittance to the house will be by ticket, where a musical concert will be in progress during both sessions.

A lounging room will be provided for the men while their wives visit the bazaar, it is announced; but other booths, consisting of candy, Japanese tea room, and other refreshments, will be of interest to all. Certain "side shows" have also been provided, one of which will be the fortune teller's booth on the third floor.

Tickets are available for Independence people and may be obtained from Mrs. T. J. Watkins or Mrs. Emma Stahl. Proceeds will go to the Independence Music Club.

Lamoni Stake Items

LAMONI, IOWA, March 1.—The music for the evening service last Sunday was furnished by the junior girls' chorus, under the able direction of Sister C. E. Wight. The chorus is doing splendid work and the two numbers rendered on this occasion were very fine indeed. There were also a piano duet by Sisters Arlene Barr and Dorothy Prall, and a solo by Miss Anna Erwine. The sermon for this hour was by Roy Cheville; the preaching in the forenoon was by C. E. Wight.

Damage Done by Bad Weather

Services in the rural branches around Lamoni have been greatly hindered by bad weather and bad roads the past few weeks. Sunday night, seven inches of snow fell which is melting now and will make the roads again almost impassable.

Much damage was done to telephone and light wires last week by a sleet storm, the severity of which had not been equaled since 1904. Large branches of trees were also broken by the weight of the ice. This section has seen more snow and ice this winter than for many years.

The young people surely have taken advantage of it, for conditions were better last week for coasting and sleighing than for many winters. Among the sleighing parties was one enjoyed by the Faivola Oriole Circle with their monitor, Sister Ethel Brooner. There were fifteen of them crowded in one sled. Some of the girls fell out, but that only added to the merriment. When they returned, an appetizing lunch was waiting for them at the home of Sister W. E. Prall.

Meetings at Davis City

A religious service, which was being held nightly at Davis City, was interrupted last week by the stormy weather. The electric light system was temporarily out of commission by wires broken by sleet. The services were resumed Sunday night. Music was furnished at this meeting by an octet from Lamoni. The stake presidents, C. E. Wight and Wilber E. Prall, are the speakers.

Baptisms Follow Meetings at Hiteman

A two-weeks' series of meetings was closed Sunday, at Hiteman, Iowa, by an all-day service. Patriarch John F. Martin had been the speaker, who also spoke morning and evening on Sunday. At the noon hour the sisters of the branch served a splendid dinner in the church. A social and confirmation meeting followed, five baptisms having been the result of this series of meetings. These are all splendid additions to the branch and the Hiteman Saints feel very much encouraged. Brother Martin went to Chariton where he began another series of meetings.

Booster Club Party

The Booster Club gave a Washington's birthday party, Friday night, which netted them a nice sum. Sister Minnie B. Nicholson has been president of this society for many years and has proved of inestimable value to the community in this capacity. The Boosters are a group of hard-working women, sponsoring many town improvements and are always ready to help with any worthy community enterprise.

Community Club Membership Drive

The community spirit of Lamoni, so often praised by strangers, was manifest last week in a drive made by the Community Club for new members. Two sides, led by Brethren George W. Blair and Oscar Anderson, are working. The losers are to banquet the winners. This club is composed of both men and women with Brother H. H. Hopkins, president.

Visitors in Lamoni

Elder E. E. Long is home from his mission field in Nebraska for a few days with his family.

Elder C. M. Clifford is also at home, having just completed a series of meetings in Montrose, Iowa.

Elder George Hall, president of the Creston Branch, was in Lamoni the last of the week attending the farmers' short course. Brother Hall is an authority on bee keeping and delivered a lecture on that subject.

Elder L. G. Holloway went to Centerville, Thursday, with the expectation of holding a series of meetings near there.

Kansas City Stake Items

KANSAS CITY STAKE, February 28.—The thirty-first quarterly conference of the Kansas City Stake was held at Central Church, February 17 and 18. Devotional services were held on Sunday and the business meeting on Monday evening. Weather conditions were not the best, as it was a cheerless, raw, cloudy day, but there was a good attendance and a fine spirit prevailed at all the sessions from Sunday school at 9.30 to the close of the business session.

The elders' quorum met at 1.30. A social service was held at 2.30 in the main auditorium, at which the time was profitably utilized in prayer, testimony, and spiritual exhortation. At the same hour the young people occupied in the north room with an active social service at which spiritual enjoyment was had.

At 4.30, there was a meeting of the ministry in the north room, which was addressed by several of the local brethren; and at the same hour Brother Walter W. Smith spoke to the women in the main auditorium on "The psychology of the adolescent."

The speaker at the morning service was Bishop J. F. Keir, and Walter W. Smith spoke again at 7.45.

A juvenile service was had at 11 a. m., at which a goodly number of children were present. At 7.15 a song service was held at which the men took the leading part.

Business Session

The stake presidency, Seth S. Sandy and Charles D. Jellings, were in charge of the business meeting of the conference. Considerable business was presented, an important item of which was the report of the committee on stake administration, in harmony with the late General Conference action. A substitute was offered. The report with substitute and article on departmental work in HERALD of January 23, also action of recent General Conference were ordered back to the committee to report at next stake conference. In the meantime they were to furnish the membership with copies of both reports and substitute.

The stake bishop, F. B. Blair, reported cash on hand at last report, $3,775.08; received since, $46,948.31; disbursements, $45,620.92; balance, $5,102.47. The title of the property controlled by the Heathwood Saints was placed in the hands of the bishop. A petition from the Malvern Hill Church asking that their building be enlarged was placed in the hands of the stake presidency and bishopric with power to act.

Change of Pastors at Argentine

John J. Schimmel was placed in charge of the Argentine church, as W. H. Gates resigned. Sister R. E. Newkirk was placed in charge of the Temple Builders and Orioles. A request from the Bennington Heights Church for additional room was referred to the stake presidency and bishopric with power to act.

Address of President F. M. Smith

Apostle John W. Rushton broke the bread of life, Sunday, February 24, at Central Church. He read the first chapter of 2 Peter. At the evening hour, President Frederick M. Smith spoke of the proposed new Kansas City charter.

Fourth Church

J. O. Worden, pastor of the Fourth Church, and an optimistic brother, comes with a successful plan to have an attendance at midweek prayer meetings. Like many other congregations some of the members live at some distance from the church edifice. At about 6.30 they serve a good substantial meal which the membership take advantage of at fifty cents a plate. Thus a gathering of Saints is had. Such money as is left after the expense is paid finds its way into the treasury. Of course the people all stay for the 7.45 service. In this way they are both physically and spiritually refreshed.

Penny Day was observed by the Sunday school on February 24, when penny offerings were made. The total receipts were $21.25, and will be applied to the purchase of a new communion set.

The boys and young men meet on each Friday night and have a jolly good time together. This is their play night. The Progressive Club of the Department of Women meets every Wednesday to study the Doctrine and Covenants and sew to raise money to help where most needed. With the Temple Builders they prepare the dinner above referred to.

Missionary Meetings

The stake missionary, William I. Fligg, has the best attendance ever at Bennington, the building being filled to capacity. He continues another week.

Patriarch Ammon White has good interest at Chelsea and will hold one week longer.

Tentative arrangements are being made for special services at Argentine to begin Sunday, March 16.

Joseph A. Tanner was the speaker at the Central Church, March 2, at 7.45.

Sunday School Consulting Board Meets

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, March 5.—The consulting board, consisting of Brethren S. A. Burgess, F. M. McDowell, A. Max Carmichael, Sister Eunice Smith, and Sister Christiana Salyards, appointed by the executive council of the Sunday School under instructions from the General Sunday School Convention, met again this last January, during the Christmas holidays to take up once more the furthering of the revision of lesson material.

By action of the executive council of the Department of Recreation and Expression this committee has under its advisement the getting out of material for that department along with that for the Sunday school. This was done because the task seemed a joint one rather than a separate one. It seemed that the task could better be performed under a single administration rather than under a divided one.

The committee heard a report from the superintendent of the Sunday School Department that the training of editors could commence next September. The committee took under advisement several possible candidates, and then referred the final selection within certain limits to A. Max Carmichael, and F. M. McDowell. The executive board of the Department of Women concur with the Consulting Board in that the final selection within limits of editors for all departmental work be left to A. Max Carmichael and F. M. McDowell.

Results of Flint Meetings Being Felt

FLINT, MICHIGAN, February 27.—With the closing of the third annual campaign of the young people's organization on February 10, there seems to be a general feeling of putting into practice the teachings received. The Bishop's solicitors report an increased demand for inventory blanks, and one said he was busy finding out how much tithing these people have paid.

Several officers of the local young people's organization went to Detroit on Sunday, February 24, to assist with the organization of a local there. An executive meeting was held for the district officers, and many interesting plans have been made which will be announced later and which will assist this good work throughout the entire district.

To Complete Second Church Building

The Second Church, located at the corner of Jane and Olive Streets, is completed as far as the weather will permit. The building must be painted, and concrete steps placed at the front, which will be done as soon as the weather allows. This will give the Saints in the east side of the city a very cozy church home. The various departments are busy, and functioning in their work in a commendable way.

Third Church Building Fund

At the regular business meeting of the branch on February 25, plans were outlined for the raising of funds for the new building to be erected in the location of the Third Church. Elders Benjamin F. Anspaugh and Matthew W. Liston were elected as leaders of two groups, to be selected by them, to put on a big drive in the city to raise the necessary funds.

Assist in Opera

Several of the local workers have been asked to assist with the opera, "Robin Hood," which is being worked up under the direction of Mrs. W. H. Winchester, for the benefit of the new building of the Women's Associated Clubs. This will be rendered April 1 and 5, at the new high school auditorium.

Conference Minutes

CENTRAL OKLAHOMA.—At Terlon, February 16 and 17. Apostle E. J. Gleazer was chosen to preside with District President Earl D. Bailey. His counsel and advice were highly appreciated. The following officers were elected: Earl D. Bailey, district president; George Kelley and Ed Dillon, counselors; Mrs. Pearl Greenwood, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Ed Dillon, superintendent of Department of Women; Mrs. Alice McGeorge, Sunday school superintendent; Carlyle Kueffer, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression; Mrs. Iola Kueffer, chorister. Three ordinations were approved: Gath Colbert Lewis, teacher; Edward Workman, priest; W. A. Newman, priest. Saturday afternoon was given over to institute work. Priesthood meeting was held Sunday at 8 a. m. in charge of Brother Gleazer, and young people's prayer meeting at 8.30 in charge of Hubert Case. Sunday school at 9.45, preaching at 11 by Brother Gleazer, prayer service at 2.30 p. m. The closing sermon was by S. W. Simmons at 7.30. Pearl Greenwood, district secretary.

CENTRAL TEXAS.—Near Bryan, February 16 and 17, 1924, with district president presiding. Representatives were present from Marlin, Central Branch, and Houston Heights. Missionaries attending were S. S. Smith, A. J. Banta, and J. M. Cleavenger. Apostles T. W. Williams and John W. Rushton were unable to attend. Preaching was by S. S. Smith and J. M. Cleavenger. A good spirit was present all through the conference. J. M. Nunley.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.—At Springerton, Saturday and Sunday, February 16 and 17. A program was given Friday evening by the Sunday school, which was one of the best we have had for some time. Springerton has some very good musical talent, especially Brother Ralph Laster, who is a real violinist; also some good singers, which added much to the success of the program. Business meeting convened at 10 a. m. Saturday, with F. Henry Edwards in the chair, assisted by District President R. H. Henson and Henry Sparling. Business was continued at 2.30 p. m., after which a social hour was enjoyed from 4 to 5.30. Brother Edwards spoke at 7, taking for his subject, "Going on unto perfection." Sunday school was held at 10 a. m. Sunday in charge of local officers. Brother Edwards spoke again Sunday morning, followed by sacrament and social service at 2.30 p. m. at which a good spirit prevailed. Brother Edwards was the speaker again in the evening, giving one of the best sermons we have had the privilege to hear. This conference was not unlike the General Conference in that the good Spirit was present to a very marked degree at the close. The next conference will be held at Marion, Illinois, the first Saturday and Sunday of June.

Radio Flashes

Fargo, North Dakota.—K F I X was heard over the radio-phone at Brother Rotzin's this evening, February 19, at 9 p. m. It came in quite plainly and distinctly, especially the short talk on "Life." Brother Frank Weddle said, "That surely is Brother Keir's voice." Come again, Brother Keir; your talk was appreciated. It filled the soul with joy to hear the name of Latter Day Saint over the radio-phone.

I am surely glad the gospel can be preached in every home by the means of the radio. I hope that the Saints in Saskatchewan will get radios in their homes, for it is surely a blessing for every Latter Day Saint to have one.

I am just starting out in life for myself. I hope to be of financial as well as spiritual help in God's work. Pray for me that I may remain steadfast in the faith.

FLOYD BLAKLEY.

Paris, Texas.—I wish to advise that I have listened in on programs from K F F V several times. They come in very clear indeed. I enjoyed your radio talk last evening between 7 and 7.20, Central Time.—W. O. Jones.

Gladys Hill, Virginia.—This is to advise that your program from K F I X Sunday, was enjoyed. This was the first time we have gotten your station.—A. L. Fralin.

Mount Vernon, Illinois.—These few lines are to let you know that the gospel has been heard preached in Mount Vernon over the radio from both K F I X and K F F V. Last Sunday night I tuned in and got Elder W. E. Prall, of Graceland, and he came in loud and clear. When K F F V was through I tuned in to K F I X and listened to Brother Elbert
A. Smith spread the gospel principle of baptism. It is a wonderful way to spread the message. We ought to be thankful that our Creator has permitted us to live in this wonderful age.—O. C. Henson.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—Heard station K F F V January 15.
Volume excellent. Enjoyed the music very much.—C. G.
Armstrong.

Recover From Illness

The sick of the branch are well on the way to recovery, especially Sister George Robinson, who was given up by three doctors. Her husband, not a member of the church, asked for administration when she reached the point she could not ask for herself. After two trips to the hospital, a turn came for the better, and recently she was taken home; after an absence of seven weeks. Thus God still remembers his children to-day, when proper faith is manifested.

Condition of the Branch

The general condition of the branch is good, and the Saints have a greater desire to do their share of the work in making the branch what it should be. There are still a great number of Saints moving into the city. Those coming in should correspond with one of the following: Elder A. H.
DuRose, 2716 South Saginaw Street; Albert Leighton, 762
Warren Street; or Matthew W. Liston, 306 Eighth Avenue, Flint, Michigan. Almost daily inquiries are received regarding the work here. There is plenty of work in most of the trades, but it is almost an impossibility to get a place to live, as the housing shortage has become a problem to the business men of the city.

Education Is Experience

Education should not be considered as either a privilege or a duty. It is a necessity. More than that, it cannot be avoided. Education is the process by which life unfolds. It is experience.

That education means schooling is an erroneous idea. One may go to school and have but limited experience. There are others who have had but a few days of schooling in their lives, yet who have become highly educated men and women. The intensity with which one lives, the breadth of experiences gained, and the length of life allotted to one, are the criteria for an educated person. An educated person is one who through participation in the affairs of life has become better fitted to meet successfully daily problems.

The experiences of civilization which are handed down to each generation help to make the new generation better fitted to live. We rejoice because we were born into a world already far advanced because of the countless ages of work performed by men and women who lived before us. We inherit all the material wealth hitherto produced and remaining, but above all we inherit the methods devised for producing more. Now whatever we add to the rich inheritance we have received, will be our contribution to the next generation. May the next generation be amply paid for the privileges we have enjoyed. May our children be born into a world far better than the one into which we were born, as the result of the great advancement we have made.

What has taken ages to produce our present world, what has taken a lifetime for us to learn, can now be given to our children in the course of a comparatively few years. We have established the school as the agency for preserving the experiences of the race and passing them on to succeeding generations. In this way our children are saved much of the time we spent in learning the things we have learned. The school is the best means for disseminating in a short time these valuable experiences. By thus cutting short the time necessary for the new generation to receive their inheritances, we make it possible for them to begin to produce earlier in life. The products of the next generation should be greatly multiplied, as over those of our generation, because of our efforts to shorten the period of preparation. Schooling must be more than attending school. It must supply the child with those things necessary for continuation of his education independent of help. It must prepare him to produce.

The object of education is not to know words, dates, facts, etc., but it is to prepare the child to accept truth no matter from what source it comes. Education should give power of thought and of action. It is the means for complete living. It is experience.

Christmas Offering for 1923 Announced by Bishopric

The Christmas offering books were closed on February 29 and the amount is $54,837.86 for the year 1923.

The Blue Stepping Stones will be ready for distribution on Sunday, March 30. This early publication, the Bishop explains, has been made possible by the prompt response on the part of the Sunday schools in sending in their offering. The copy for this issue was delivered to the publishers on March 5.

Blue Pencil Notes

A New York husband and wife have a fine new idea. They are to have "a vacation from each other." Not a divorce, you know—they are so common—practically everybody who is anybody has a divorce now—some have two or three. No, they are to have a vacation "from each other" for one year.

They love each other so much that they have decided to live apart one year. At the end of the year they will resume hostilities. It is interesting to men to note that she is to establish a studio where she will seek "self-expression"—while he is to keep the home fires burning. Men are very successful as housekeepers.

Mary Pickford has expressed herself in vigorous fashion on the subject, in this wise:

"It's just plain rot—this business of having one's vacation away from one's husband. Why, you might just as well not be married at all if you think you need that sort of vacation. I believe the easiest way to become estranged from one's husband is to be away from him. The first time you miss him terribly, the second's not so bad, and by the fifth or sixth time you find you can get along perfectly well without him."

If a movie star of Mary Pickford's experience feels that way about it, we who have old-fashioned ideas may take courage. We had thought of love as hoarding the moments. The longest life is too short when a man spends it with the woman he loves. The only real vacations are taken together. But of course we never met this woman who is to take the year off. Her husband may enjoy the year immensely. It may be the year of his life. And we never met the man, so we must not judge the woman. Possibly she has earned a vacation.

Having written the above, my note making was temporarily suspended while with others I called to celebrate with Samuel and Mary Siegfried the fifty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. Fifty-five years. You can count them all in a half minute. Yet theirs is considered a long married life. When questioned, Brother Siegfried, with a sort of puzzled look in his eyes, replied: "Yes, they say it has been fifty-five years. It does not seem so to me."

Probably it never occurred to these good people to take a vacation from each other. Not one of the fifty-five years would they now care to count out of their mutual experiences when they sit together of an evening and say, one to the other, "Do you remember that time, when—" and so and so. Wedded memories are to be shared. No, they would not count out any of the years; and now they are only asking that they may spend the rest of their time on earth together.

True, Samuel Siegfried had one vacation. It was when Abraham Lincoln was making blue a most popular color in men's wearing apparel. He had three years of vacation. Some of the time was spent in battle, some of it in hospital, some in camp. He carries an old-fashioned confederate musket ball in his person to this day as a memento. Mary Siegfried, who was a Lambert, never cared much for vacations—not away from the family. Six children yet living and three who have gone to the beyond kept her rather busy. Now there are grandchildren. The cooky jar must still be kept replenished. I had one of those cookies of her make at the anniversary—big, brown molasses cookies such as women made on Illinois farms forty years ago—not wafers, you understand, but cookies—like they made when you were urged to take another, to stay to supper, to stay all night, to just make yourself "feel at home."

Sister Siegfried never had time to think much about "self-expression." She just went ahead and expressed herself. She found self-expression in maintaining a good, old-fashioned, hospitable home to which people loved to come and where they were welcome. A home where the children were well nourished, well clothed, well taught, well disciplined. And if Samuel needed a bit of disciplining at times, she knew several ways to go about it in much less time than a year.

Samuel Siegfried was rather busy, too. Having helped Abraham Lincoln in that matter of the emancipation proclamation, it never occurred to him thereafter that he should do anything less than go ahead with a man's work in the world. There were farms to break and cultivate. A home to build. All the endless toil of a man who has a good appetite and has seven others to feed and clothe before he can think of himself. Jointly with his wife he sought to rear the children to work, to tell the truth, to love the gospel. Had his wife ever proposed that they take a year apart while she should conduct a studio and he run the house, in all probability when he had done laughing, he would have said, "Now Mary, that's funny; but I can't stand here all day and listen to you joke. The harvest is coming on and I'm busy. Have supper on time to-night because I'll be pretty hungry."

The spoiled children of the Twentieth Century, with their hectic heart hankerings, their trial marriages, their happy-to-have-known-you and wish-you-better-luck-next-time unions, and their vacations from each other, make the marriage certificate look like a comic valentine. But men and women like Samuel and Mary Siegfried make marriage seem what it is, a sacrament. ELBERT A. SMITH.

New Member of Board of Publication

At a meeting of the Board of Publication on February 21, the resignation of T. J. Watkins as a member of the board was received. Brother Watkins, who was elected to this position at last General Conference, is giving up this work, due to the demand his own business makes upon his time. In view of this fact the board accepted the resignation of Brother Watkins and elected Brother Thomas Crick to fill the vacancy thus created.

"With Purpose, Cleave Unto the Lord"

Sermon by Walter W. Smith at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri.

The apostles having gone into those regions round about Antioch, introduced the gospel there, and Barnabas, having gone up to assist the church at Antioch, gives the following advice:

Who, when he was come, and had seen the grace of God, was glad; and he exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.—Acts 11:23.

I do not believe that I need come to you with an admonition to cleave to the Lord. But there is more in this text than just to exhort you to cleave to the Lord. That is the first and most apparent suggestion. What I want to say to you is couched very clearly in the first part of it, "Who, when he was come, and had seen the grace of God, was glad; and he exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord."

Being Good for Something

Perhaps no greater evil could befall us, as we attempt to do the thing the Lord has asked us to do, than just to run without tidings and plan without object, and have nowhere to go. Perhaps the greatest need lying before us is some definite objective.

May I say to you, without being misunderstood, that it is not enough just to be good? It is quite necessary, if we are to do the things God has committed to us, that we be good for something. One of the great philosophers has said that the probable end of just simply being good is to be good for nothing. Now, I am not discounting the proposition of being good, because it is absolutely necessary that we all be good. But what is being good? Well, you answer, just being good. But how do you know it is good? How can you tell whether a thing is good or not, whether the action, feeling, mental attitude of men are good? What is, just being good?

If it be a neighbor that is that way, how can you tell it in him? You would have to hear him saying something to know whether or not he could talk good. You would have to see him acting in order to know whether or not the character of his soul were really good or bad. A post sits still and harms nobody. So might a man if he were just good and not good for anything.

Purpose for Cleaving Unto the Lord

There is more required than just to cleave unto the Lord. For what purpose do you cleave unto the Lord? Like a barnacle on the bottom of a ship, which has for its chief object the getting of a living while the food comes by? A very selfish object. Unless we are able to see for what purpose we cleave unto the Lord, why do we cleave unto him? Some one says, To get saved. Why, that is what people go in business for. To get what they want. Is religion on that parallel? Does God want us to go to heaven just to get something? Is that the standard on which we have started out? But the admonition of the lesson is that with purpose we cleave unto the Lord, that our cleaving unto the Lord should have some definite object. The powers and attributes of life are all of no avail if they serve no end. It must be determined what these qualities and powers are to be used for before we can tell whether or not they are going to be good. The learned man who devotes himself to God is reckoned as an asset. The learned man who devotes himself to himself may be the finest embezzler in the neighborhood. Learning may only be a tool of the Devil if it is not sanctified by a divine purpose in life.

For what are you going to use the talent, the temperament, the power, the soul qualities that have come to you as the result of your experience in this great latter-day work? Life without a purpose is like a ship without a port, sailing on and on and on, no place to go, no way of telling whether you are getting there or not.

Purposeful Direction

Let me quote another passage of scripture. Paul, writing to the Philippians says:

Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; (or to have understood all things before) but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded; and if in anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you.—Phillipians 3: 13, 14, 15, I. V.

It is not enough to press. A man might be pressing in the wrong direction. A man might run, and be running away from righteousness instead of towards it. A man might move and be moving out instead of in. The direction is what counts. Paul says: "I press toward the mark for the prize." A mark! Do you know whether you are going toward what you are going after, or not? Do you know how to tell whether you are getting anywhere in your efforts or not? Do you have a definite, purposeful attitude in your life's work so that to-day you can say, "I am better to-day than I was yesterday, because I followed my program"? Better for what? "Nearer than I was yesterday." Nearer what?

Need for Definite Aim

We must have in mind some definite thing to accomplish, which is our aim, the mark for the prize towards which we strive. Do you know what the mark is? Have you programmed your experience? laid out your life's work? scheduled your efforts? arranged your plans so that day by day you can tell whether or not you are qualifying for the things you intend to do, or whether another day has slipped by with the promise that if God will spare your life you will do better to-morrow? Is that the way your program works?

I used to work for a man who was woefully uncertain. There was only one thing about him that was certain and that was, if I wanted to do anything real badly I could be certain that he did not want me to do it then. Whenever he would get some sort of a notion that he wanted to do a thing he had a string of words that he used like this:

"Well, I think it is about time to start to commence to get ready." He was always about to commence, but he never quite got there, because he did not have any program. He was a farmer. We might stop plowing corn any day and go mending fences. He was not a bad man. He was far from that. I think that, of most of the men I have ever seen, his generosity was perhaps larger than any of them. But he never seemed to know whether to-morrow would be the day to go to town or the day to stay at home, and as a result he got very little done.

Do you know, lots of people work at their religion just like that. To-morrow, if it ever comes around to us, we expect to do certain things. I expect to get up real early in the morning and before I go to work I will read a chapter in the Bible and pray, to see if I can raise my spiritual attitude a little bit; but to-morrow morning when it rolls around, it is such a splendid opportunity to sleep, and the opportunity is so pressing, that I do not like to have anybody disturb me, so I will read that chapter the next morning.

Have you a program? a definite schedule so that you will know at the end of every day whether you have accomplished something? Can you actually say, Yes, I have gained ground, I have mastered this, I have really accomplished something. Now, if you have not, apparently you have not labored as the text suggests that you should, for it intimates very strongly that you should press toward the mark for the prize.

The Tortoise and the Hare

You know the story of the hare and the tortoise. One was very slow, almost painfully slow to watch. The other was very swift and agile, but very forgetful and sleepy. The tortoise knew where he was going and kept steadily at it until he got there. Perhaps the hare knew where he was going, too, but he had a lot of things that he wanted to do and he forgot the program, so when he got there the tortoise was already there.

Paul says:

Know ye not that they which run in a race all run, but only one receiveth the prize? So run that ye may obtain. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we, an incorruptible. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air.—1 Corinthians 9: 24, 25, 26, Inspired Version.

When a man goes out to fight, the object is to overcome his opponent. What would you think of the man who went out to war and carried a well-oiled gun of polished steel, who, when he came up into battle, would say, "Friend, stand thee over there. Thou standest just where I am going to shoot." Would not he be a wonderful man to defend his country? Paul said, "I fight not as one that beateth the air." When I am striking, I am striking somewhere, and at something.

The Dutch Windmill

After years of pastoral work in Independence, I will let you in on a great secret. Most of the Latter Day Saints here who are fighting do not know who they are fighting. We are just standing still waving our arms like a Dutch windmill in the hope that if the enemy is anywhere around there, we will sure enough hit him. Did you ever hear the story of the boy who saw some kind of a varmint in the weeds and, running to his father, said, "Let me take the old shotgun out, dad. I will point it at the weeds and when I pull the trigger I will swing it around so that I will hit all the weeds and be sure to get the animal."

Is that the kind of religion you have? Are you aiming to do good to somebody? but you do not know just what it will be? Or do you actually know when you are fighting, striking against evil, that you are actually striking some particular wrong thing that ought not to be tolerated, and are you making it hard for men to do that thing? If that is what your program is, that is exactly what is intended here. Work with a program. Strike at the mark. Now if I were going to run, it would be very important for me to know which way I was going. If I were running from things, of course, it would make lots less difference than if I were running toward things. I have known folks though who were running from things when they ran into things that were worse than the things they were running from; but if you are running to things then it becomes absolutely necessary, altogether necessary, that you determine where you are going.

It is also well to know what you are going after. Many a man has been thoroughly disappointed and made heartsick because upon reaching the thing for which he ran greedily he discovered that it was not what he thought it was. He had a program all right, but the object of his program was not a commendable one, and after running and getting what he wanted he found out that he did not want it. They had a program, but the mark for the prize did not determine definitely what it was they were after.

The Object of Being Good

Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us.—Hebrews 12: 1, I. V.

Do you know what the race is? Do you know where you are going? Do you know from what country you are going and into what country you are coming? If you do not, how are you going to know when you get there?

I tell you, just being good is only a subjective expression of what you hope to be. Just being good is not what we want. We want men and women good for something. We want them able to render same kind of definite service, able to know when they are reaching their objective, and whether they are doing it for Christ's sake or not. Strive, but strive toward the prize. Run, not uncertainly; but run a definite race. Cleave unto the Lord, but do not just hang on. With purpose we should cleave unto the Lord. The man who does that is a very useful member, but the man who cleaves unto the Lord without a purpose is like the barnacle on the bottom of the ship.

Now, I would not gamble with my religion like that. I would not make it a guessing contest at my own expense. I would have a program, a plan, a scheme, that I could know as I approach a mark for the prize whether or not I was gaining ground, or, unfortunately, losing ground.

Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

I submit that no better example has ever been offered in the whole history of the race; that for this purpose Jesus Christ assumed the form of flesh and lived like a man that he might lift us up that we might live like princes, that he might show us what to do; and all the time he had his program clearly before him; that with purpose he was laboring for the joy that was set before him.

The Program of Christ

Jesus knew when he was getting his work done. When he came down out of the mount after the transfiguration scene had taken place, Peter, James, and John were in the mount with him and saw the heavens open and heard a voice speaking. While the voice was being heard the vision of two eminent characters appeared before him, Moses and Elias.

Oh, that was a wonderful day! They said to Jesus, "This is a wonderful place. Let us make three tabernacles and stay right here." Jesus was lifted up there, and when they were coming down from the Mount he admonished them, saying, "See thou tell the vision unto no man until I am risen from the dead." He knew his program. He knew what was expected of him and what he was expected to do, and when he said, "Tell not this vision until I am risen from the dead," he knew his program clear through to the end. And on that memorable night when he went into the garden to pray, he had his program clearly in mind. That program led him into the depths of sorrow to pray. He was in anguish that hour and he said, "Father, if it is possible, let this cup pass from me, nevertheless not my will but thine be done."

The Program of the Church

Young man, young woman, what is your program? Do you know where you are going? What are you doing to render service to God and make this church look in the eyes of men to be the greatest thing in the world? If you will permit the expression, Let us hope and pray that we will quit sending men out into the world to represent this great gospel of Jesus Christ as the panacea for all evils while we are walking on crutches as we do. If a man came to my house with a head as smooth as a billiard ball and offered to sell me a hair tonic, guaranteed to make my hair stay on my head until I died of old age, I would say to that man, You go home and try it on yourself, and if it works on you, then I might try it. If a man came to my house walking on a crutch with an arm tied up and had a cure guaranteed to cure rheumatism, I would say to him, Go home and use it on yourself. When your foot gets well and your arm is straight come back and I will buy.

What is the use of going to the world to tell them Jesus Christ has committed to us the most marvelous thing and carry it with a limping and faltering attitude that some of us have in regard to this work? Why not have a program and know where we are going and know when we get there that we have accomplished at least a part of our work?

Does your life measure up to that? Have you a program? If this church needed you as a part of its great marvelous program could you be used as a brick in the rear of the walls to hold up the body of the building? Are you solid, strong, absolutely sure, never-failing, and trustworthy, so that you could be depended upon; or are you double-minded so that you would place in danger the rest of the building?

What is your personal program? What is the program of the church? What thing do you do or what thing do you hope to do for the church? What is it that you can do that the church needs done? Well, you may say your prayers, but do you? Does your program include that so that you will be so experienced that if the need arises you can pray for others? Did you ever hear of the Catholic boy who became a Latter Day Saint who had lots of trouble around the house, and who used to go out in the woods very frequently to pray? The other boys at the house wondered a good many times what he went to the woods so often for, so they finally followed him and they heard him praying. One day in the church he was called on to pray and he offered a good prayer. One of the boys heard about it and he said, "Oh, it's no wonder he prayed a good prayer, he has had so much practice." Are you keeping up your practice so that if this church needs some praying done you can do it?

Redeeming Zion

I might tell you the program of this church. It has a program published to the world, a program that is the vision of the President of this church. Do you know what you can do in this program? What is it that you can do so well, so perfectly that the church would be delighted to have you? Your program ought to make you such a man that the world seeing you will say, "Surely his religion has made him wonderful."

I do not think any man ought to go out from this meeting to-night without a program. The church can suggest to you, and I am glad to suggest that your program should be to do the thing for which Jesus Christ gave his life. The big problem, the one momentous problem that lies before this congregation is the redeeming of Zion. What are you going to do about it? If you will just redeem the fifty-foot lot on which you dwell and the house in which you live, you will have done more than most men ever did, and when that is done the people in the neighborhood will be asking what your recipe is to make you act as you do.

It ought to be so that when a Latter Day Saint goes down the streets the people will say, "Here comes a man, a good man. In time of trouble he will do the utmost to help. Any time anybody needs anything he will be the first to respond. When you have a program in your lives that means doing the thing that Jesus Christ gave his life for, you will be just such a man. And when several thousands of that kind of people meet together regularly to say their prayers, I should not be surprised if something wonderful happened when they asked the Lord for something. And when the Lord wants something done he could get it done right away.

One thing we have not learned how to do very well, is how to regulate our lives by a program. The trouble is we all want to make our own program instead of making our lives to fit what is needed in the world.

God sent this church to make the world ready for his coming and if God does not send his Son as soon as we thought he ought to, it will be because you are not ready to receive him. If you want to make a program the question you should ask yourself is, What does humanity need? It is a big program. This church has before it the greatest opportunity that ever came to any organization. It needs a lot of great big fine strong-hearted men and women to do the tasks before it. They will have to make a program for themselves and work it for a while in order to enter in and work the program of the church when it is offered. Let that program be the thing God wants done. Whatever needs to be done, that is your job. Do it. Make the world know that this latter-day work means something worth while.

Tithes and Offerings

By Bishop Albert Carmichael

The fulfillment of the financial law of the church by its stewards includes the following steps to be taken in the order given:

1. Payment of the tithe.
2. Payment of the surplus, if any.
3. Payment of offerings, either special or general.

To illustrate the above steps to be taken, let us give Mr. A as an example. Mr. A finds that he has $5,000 increase. To comply with the law, Mr. A first pays one tenth of the $5,000, or $500, as a tithe. Second, Mr. A then determines if he has any surplus, and if he has, say $1,000, Mr. A pays the $1,000 as surplus. Mr. A now has $3,500 left. He desires to make a sacrifice for some worthy purpose. He has no tithe (tenth) to pay, for that is paid. He has no surplus to pay, for that is paid. Then, third, Mr. A can make an offering if he desires out of the remaining $3,500, say an offering of $500. If Mr. A hands this $500 to the church as an offering, without stipulating as to how it shall be used, it will be called a general offering. If Mr. A stipulates that the $500 is to be used for a special purpose, it will be called a special offering. The offering in this case is that amount which the steward might be willing to deny himself of his needs and just wants.

First, the Tithe

Wherein Abraham paid unto him tithes of all that he had of the riches which he possessed which God had given him more than which he had need.—Genesis 14: 39. (His net worth or increase.)

And all the tithes of the land, whether of the seed of the land or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's.—Leviticus 27: 30.

I require all of their surplus property . . . and after that, those who have been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them forever, for my holy priesthood.—Doctrine and Covenants 106: 1. (That is, the tenth of the increase is the Lord's and is to be used in caring for the priesthood.)

I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their services.—Numbers 18: 21.

But the tithes of the children of Israel . . . I have given to the Levites to inherit; therefore, I have said unto them among the children of Israel, they shall have no inheritance.—Numbers 18: 14.

The reason for the payment of the tithe as the "first" step in complying with the law of God is very evident from these facts:

(a) God does not need anything. He is perfect. His demand on us for compliance with a certain law is solely for the good of humanity.

(b) When he demands as his just share of the gain or net increase of our business, he does so for our good and the good of humanity in—

1. Being obliged to keep an account of our annual receipts and expenditures. No man can make a real success financially unless he knows how his business is going. He must keep tab on himself; balance his books at least once a year so as to be able to tell what his gain or loss is. Having these facts, he can intelligently analyze his business and make it more successful. He will thus be able to render a just account unto his God and by paying the tenth of the gain, "render unto God the things that are God's."

2. It teaches us constantly to acknowledge, through the annual payment of the tithe, that God is our landlord and that it is our duty to "first seek to establish the kingdom of heaven" by providing for the kingdom's representatives (the ministry). The salvation of lost souls is our paramount duty. The Lord is jealous for the fallen race and has seen to it that a provision for the means of carrying the gospel to them is the first thing in his financial program—the payment of the tithe of the increase for the support of the ministry and his family—thus releasing the servant of God, allowing him to "go into all the world and preach the gospel," having no worry or concern as to whether his family is being cared for, thus being able to give the best there is in him to his arduous and holy task. Need we wonder why God called all those who would not comply with this law "robbers"? (Malachi 3: 6.)

State of Equality

The families of the ministry should be on an equality with all the other families of the household of God, each family getting its needs, those needs to be "ample" enough to enable every member of the family to develop his physical, mental, and spiritual "abilities" to their greatest capacity. (Matthew 25.)

God is not the author of "class legislation." He knows no such thing as "special privileges." The payment of the tithe is part of God's program to develop character as well as to bring that unalloyed joy to his children. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Just as the priesthood of former-day Israel was allowed enough from the tithes so that they in turn could pay their tithes, so it should be with latter-day Israel. Every member of the kingdom of God should be able to pay his tithe.

The Mosaic economy was a "schoolmaster" to educate the Hebrews up to the gospel plan. Part of this Mosaic program was:

1. The people should pay to the Levite one tenth as a tithe.

2. Then the Levites were to tithe what they had received for the benefit of the priests of the tribe of Levi.

3. Then the priests of the tribe of Levi were to tithe what they had received for the benefit of the high priesthood.

Here we have the tithe of the tithe of the tithe. Everyone had the "joy of giving." Everyone had the lessons of frugality and saving to observe, so as to enable them to give a "tithe." So it should be today. None should be deprived of the opportunity of learning to be frugal—saving—wisely spending and honorably paying his just debt, the tithe. These things measure the man.

Second, the Surplus

The payment of the surplus is the means provided by God to bring "equality." The payment of the tithe (tenth of the increase) will not alone do this. The awful charge against the rich men by the servant of God, James, is based on the fact that "ye have heaped treasure together for the last days." How expressive this indictment is at the present time! Having kept more than their "needs and just wants," they are not faithful stewards. Sorrow and suffering is then their portion. Such riches become corrupted. Gold was made to use, not to be hoarded. The writer significantly exhorts the brethren, "Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned; behold the judge standeth before the door."

This giving of our surplus for the benefit of the group challenges the generally accepted idea of current economics that every person has the right to the product of his labor. This placement of a man's productivity is seriously called in question by some of our most intelligent thinkers for the following reasons:

a. The impossibility of equitably determining the amount to be distributed to the laborer as his percentage of the earnings.

b. The principle is not altruistic. It is individualistic, extremely so. The rights of the group (society) are not recognized. The three factors necessary to create value to any productivity are: the laws of nature (God), the individual, and society. Any partitioning of any productivity that does not fully consider the right of these three cannot be correct. The divine plan provides for society (the group) to have all of a man's surplus. God does not need any of this product for himself. He does ask that the individual should divide his earnings in a certain definite manner, so as to provide for the needs and just wants of every worthy child of his: "Having food and raiment let us be therewith content."—Paul.

Factors of Production

That the reader may more clearly grasp this wonderful basic economic law of the commonality of the surplus, we represent the factors of production as a triangle.

The result of B's effort in individual production is clearly dependent on the cooperation of both A and C. This is so of the productivity of C. Even A is dependent on B and C for certain results.

A's share, as stated above, is the tenth of the increase, not to be used by himself, but as a guarantee that the human family may be properly enlightened through the efforts of a group of society whose responsibility will be to "teach all nations." Having enlightened the individual by preaching the word, the said individual is now more fully ready to do his part intelligently as a member of the group (society).

The individual B, having recognized his responsibility to A for what A has done for him by cooperation with him, furnishing B the land, heat, moisture, etc., now must also recognize his responsibility—his debt—towards C, or society. Here is where the "brotherhood of man" is recognized. Here is where God intends to operate so as to produce true equality. The divine rule of man having or retaining his "needs and just wants only" out of his production, places all on an equality. All above a man's "needs and just wants" by divine decree goes into the "common treasury" for the good of all. If B, the individual, should place his surplus in the common treasury, so should two or more individuals working together as an association. One of the accusations the Lord had against old Israel was that "ye . . . exact all your labors." (Isaiah 58:3.) This with other wrongs drove Israel away from God.

Let us remember that the group C is divided into two groups, that of the priesthood and the secular group; or in other words, the group engaged in spiritual matters and the group engaged in temporal affairs. Every individual comprising each group is supposed to have his inheritance, or enough for his needs and just wants. The spiritual group, the priesthood, have for their inheritance the tithe or tenth; the temporal group have for their inheritance their "needs and just wants" provided for out of their own property, or from the "surplus" which has been placed in the hands of the group.

Third, the Offering

The payment of a debt is not an offering. The Pharisee prayed, "I give tithes of all I possess." (Luke 18:12.) But the Master thought differently. Listen to him: "Ye pay tithes." There are too many people like the Pharisee. They think that when they "pay" the tithe it is a gift. "The tithe is the Lord's." We may ease our conscience by saying we make an "offering" of our tithe, but strictly speaking it is not so. We are but paying our just obligations. The tithe belongs to our fellow man of the priesthood.

The same is true of the "surplus," that portion of which we have no "need." It is not ours but belongs to our fellow man who has need.

Tithes and Offerings

After we have paid our God-given obligations, then we may have something to "offer"—a present if you please—a real sacrifice—a part of our needs and just wants.

First. The tithe (tenth of our increase) is clearly a debt which must be paid. We have no say about the amount. God has told us that the tenth of the interest (increase) (Doctrine and Covenants 106:1) is his. We should pay the tithe the same as we pay any other just debt. The amount of this debt is determined by the Lord. It is always the tenth of the increase.

Second. The payment of the surplus, which comes after our tithe or tenth is paid, is a further compliance with the financial law of God. It is in a sense a higher as well as a better compliance. We now have a say as to the amount to be paid. The law requires

Why Teach Religion?

By Floyd M. McDowell

A recent number of the HERALD contained a report of a survey of high school students in Missouri to ascertain knowledge of the Bible and its teachings. As startling as these facts appear, their real significance is not at once apparent. Facts are always interesting as facts, but causes, results, and proposed remedies are even more interesting and valuable. Some of these are brought out by the editor. In a recent number of the Good Housekeeping magazine, Mr. William G. Shepherd discusses the whole problem of teaching religion at some length, bringing to light some interesting facts and very forcefully urging at least one remedy. We quote extensively from Mr. Shepherd's excellent article.—F. M. M.

SHALL WE TEACH RELIGION IN SCHOOL?

A great educator told me recently, "The richer our public school education becomes, the farther away it gets from giving moral and religious instruction."

What he meant was, for instance, if you are going to go back into the vistas of time—which is an excellent thing to do, in school—and tell of the parts which other religions have played in the life of mankind, you cannot refuse to tell of the part which our

us to take the initiative in determining the amount to be paid by us as surplus. The initiative responsibility rests upon the person. God has told us to pay our surplus, but has not told us the exact amount. He leaves this for us to determine, each for himself. "Let each one of you lay by him in store as he may prosper" (the surplus), (1 Corinthians 16:2). Then God, through his representative the church, meets us half way and confers with us as to the correctness of our individual judgment.

Third. The offering comes after the tithe and the surplus are paid. This is the logical, as well as the ethical, step to take. Note this: The amount of the offering is to be wholly determined by the individual paying. Here the initiative responsibility falls wholly on the steward. Neither the tithe nor the surplus comes out of our "needs and just wants." The offering should come out of our needs and just wants. It is the real sacrifice. The widow paying her mite gave an offering—a real sacrifice. The rest paid out of their abundance (surplus), she out of her dire needs. No wonder the Master commended her the most. She was living in a higher ethical atmosphere than the others. She gave of her deficiency, proving her love for God was full to overflowing. "Speak unto the children of Israel. . . . If any man of you bring an offering unto the Lord . . . he shall offer it of his own voluntary will."—Leviticus 1:2, 3.

own religion, that of our Bible, has also played in human history—and how and why it played it.

And this educator continued, "The more you train children's intellects, the more need there is for carefully training their characters and helping them develop their souls."

Fill our schools with child experts in biology, zoology, geology, and all the other sciences, able to recite ancient history like nursery rhymes and to discuss all the philosophies that wise men have ever devised—and what will you have in those school-rooms in the way of upstanding, honest, trustworthy, moral, ethical citizens?

That is a fair question to put to any father and mother in this land. It is a fair question to ask of any of our millions of American taxpayers who are willingly supporting the greatest and most extensive educational system any nation has ever had.

What kind of children do our religionless public schools turn out?

I am not asking this question rhetorically, but because an answer, definite and scientific, has been made in the United States. This answer I am able to give in this article. It is sinister beyond description. It shows a condition of thought and mind in the boy and girl life of our Nation that explains not only all our puzzlement as to the behavior of our children, but our amazement at the growth of crime of every sort in the United States.

It is an answer that causes me to repeat the demand, which I know I am making in the name of hundreds of thousands—millions, perhaps—of American fathers and mothers, that our children shall receive religious instruction of some sort in the public schools.

The lack of religious instruction for American children—and its results—has been measured by scientists. An amazing series of tests, covering a space of three years and conducted by cold-blooded scientists in pedagogy, has stripped the characters of our American children bare. And they do not look good; the soul of our religionless American school-boy or schoolgirl does not look good.

Some Tests Given

These tests, which I shall describe, show that over one half of our American school children will, under temptation, have an unethical outlook on life.

They show, more than this, that under temptation over half of them will act dishonorably or dishonestly. To put it plainly, science shows that over half of them will cheat and lie and steal.

These tests and their results are not pleasant things to consider. They were hard tests. It may have been cruel to give them. I would not thank any man or woman, scientist or otherwise, for giving them to my sons. But the fact remains that the tests were made. The laboratory of science took the children in and tested them morally. And the bigger fact remains that American school children were not able to stand the strain.

True-False Test

One of these tests was known as the "True-False Test." It has been applied to thousands of children in the United States. This test consists of presenting to the examinee a series of printed statements. After each statement are the words, in big capital letters, "TRUE FALSE." The child is asked to underline the word which he believes describes the truth or falsity of the statement. Here's a sample line from the test sheet:

"It is my duty to help those who are the victims of injustice. TRUE FALSE."

Here are several of the answers made by a great majority of the boys and girls:

It is not wrong to steal from one who has secured his wealth dishonestly.

It is more honorable to have charge of an office than to work at a trade.

Stupidity is more sinful than deceit.

Unnecessarily failing to meet an appointment on time is not immoral and unchristian.

It is true that our duty is greater to secure justice for the people of our own race and religion than for others.

Cheating a railroad is not so much a sin as cheating a person.

It is not the pupil's duty to call attention to the fact that a teacher has given him too high marks.

It is true that if a storekeeper gives you too much money it is all right to keep it because he would probably do the same if you paid him too much.

Thousands of American children assented to these statements when they had an equal opportunity to dissent from them; it was only a question of making a mark with a lead pencil. Nothing they had received in school or at home in the way of religious instruction caused them to mark their paper otherwise.

Their answers to these questions disclosed their outlook on life. They afforded proof that under American life, 'way down deep into its very childhood, there is unmorality in thought and downright approval of dishonesty.

Purchasing Test

The purchasing test was a test of how children would act under temptation to dishonesty.

In this test storekeepers and clerks were taken into the confidence of the experimenters.

The children were sent to purchase an article that was supposed to cost twenty-five cents. They were each given a quarter for the purchase. At the store the clerk would say, "We are selling this article for fifteen cents to-day," and would return a dime to the child. This test was sometimes varied by having the clerk give the child a dime extra, in change, apparently making an error.

The test was to see how many children, and which ones—would bring back the dime to the teacher.

Sixty-four per cent of the children did not return the dime, either to the teacher or to the store.

The scientists who made this test insist that their selection of children was made so carefully that they feel safe in assuming that sixty-four per cent of all America's children would have done as these children did. . . .

Appropriating Money

The tests were ingeniously disguised. In one city a test was given in a restaurant where the children thought they were giving a banquet for the restaurant keeper who, some weeks before, had made a gift to their school organization. Every child brought a certain amount of money to pay for his share of the banquet. At the conclusion of the banquet it was announced, privately, to each child that the cost was less than had been expected. The children were supposed to return the excess to their school organization. This test involved not only honesty, but gratitude to the restaurant keeper and loyalty to the school organization. Only a small percentage of the children returned the money.

Examinations

Here is a hard test that was made to see how children would cheat in examinations. The children are given double sheets of paper, the under sheet being secretly coated with wax that shows any change or correction. A set of questions and answers is written on the blackboard and a map hung over the answers. The teacher, in this test, leaves the room while the children are writing down their answers to the questions. After a certain length of time the map, apparently by accident, falls from the blackboard and discloses the list of answers. The children, with no teacher in the room, have the opportunity to correct any errors they have made in their answers; they are given plenty of time to yield to this temptation. In some of these tests 100 per cent of the children yielded. . . .

Some Results

These tests were character-sifters, scientifically designed.

Scores were given in every test, and strength of character and the ability to resist temptation were expressed in terms of percentages, as engineers express the strength of steel.

Boy Scouts Stood Highest

The highest score was 82.3 per cent. It was made by a group of Boy Scouts which had been organized two years. These high-idealed little fellows came within 17.7 per cent of being 100 per cent trustworthy and honest. Some new fellows came into the troop during the later months that the tests were under way. Of course, none of the boys in the troop knew the purpose of the various experiments; often, of course, they were not aware that they were being tested. The old-timers in the troop ranked up 100 per cent! One young fellow said, "I don't know what these examinations are, but they must be trying to test our nerve." He scored 100.

The second highest score was 80.4 per cent. It was made by a group of Boy Scouts which had been organized six months.

The third highest score was 78.2, made by a group of boys in a highly efficient private school, who came from high-class homes.

Far down in the list, number nine, came the group that interests you and me—that interests every father and mother in this land—a group of boys in a typical American public school. Most of us have our children in the public schools. We cannot all have our sons in the Boy Scouts or in private schools. These privileges are luxuries to some of us. The score of this public school group was only 56.8.

Are our public schools in America being so conducted that honesty and the development of character in our children are luxuries outside of the range of public schools? Is a belief in God, such as the Boy Scouts have, and the Girl Scouts, and such as is taught in most private schools in America, too rare a privilege for American public school children?

The Actual Facts

I am giving the list of these scores. They are taken from a book by Doctor Walter S. Athearn, entitled Measurements and Standards in Religious Education, which is being published this month by the George H. Doran Company, of New York:

Rank	Group	Average in Test
First	Boy Scouts (two years) .....	82.3
Second	Boy Scouts (six months) .....	80.4
Third	Private School .....	78.2
Fourth	Private School .....	75.0
Fifth	Camp Fire Girls (four months) .....	62.2
Sixth	Boy Scouts (just organized) .....	60.5
Seventh	Private School .....	59.5
Eighth	Boy Scouts (just organized) .....	58.1
Ninth	Public School .....	56.8

This makes a disturbing picture of the world of children.

But I am not writing this article for the purpose of showing that American children are wicked and sinful. Neither did the scientists who gave the tests and measured out the scores of childhood's ethics have the purpose of proving the wickedness of American children.

Some Things Really Significant

These tests were made in an attempt to discover, scientifically, whether or not goodness, honesty, trustworthiness, and a decent outlook on life and a love of God and man could be taught in school; whether they could be taught, definitely and decisively, like other subjects. And whether they could be learned like lessons.

And this is what has been discovered:

These subjects can be taught in school, and they can be so thoroughly learned that they produce definite results in children.

After the tests which I have described had been made and the scores carefully registered, the various groups of children were given special instructions.

One set was given ethical instruction by highly trained teachers who knew the psychology of youth and were skilled in pedagogy. There was no religion in this ethical instruction; it only showed children what they ought to do.

Other sets were given religious instruction, with prayer, Bible reading, singing, and devotion.

The children who had been given ethical instruction improved over 60 per cent. New tests—some harder than those I have described—were given to them. They had improved marvelously; their characters had strengthened like muscles hardened with exercise.

But there was a triumph in the test of the boys and girls who received religious instruction, under trained teachers. They improved 85 per cent in the honesty tests. Their souls as well as their brains had been put to work in their solving of life's problems. Their characters had become like rock. . . .

A Survey to Find Causes

Doctor Walter S. Athearn has been the leader in this testing of American children. He is one of the leading educators of the United States. Under the Institute on Social and Religious Surveys, serving as a skilled scientist in the subject of pedagogy, he has just completed a three-year task of analyzing religious education in the State of Indiana. Indiana was selected, by common consent of the committee, as being a typical American State, a fair cross-section of American life.

The directorate of the institute includes Doctor Ernest D. Burton, president of the University of Chicago; Doctor W. H. B. Faunce, president of Brown University; Doctor Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of Massachusetts Agricultural College, and others.

The idea of Dean Athearn's survey was to attempt to measure the results, if possible, of religious education.

Their Conclusion

Doctor Athearn talked to me on a sandy beach at Bermuda, where he was resting after completing the final editing of three huge volumes which will show the results of the institute's work. "We have made the discovery," he said, "that unless children are taught religion, they will not be religious. We have also made the discovery that children can be scientifically taught religion in such a way that the course of their entire lives is changed.

"Under scientific pedagogy children can be taught goodness so that they will really be good. Spiritual inspiration can be put into their minds so that it will remain there and will become the motive of their lives. Our tests prove this beyond any scientific doubt."

How About Sunday School?

"Why don't you send your two sons to Sunday school if you want them to have religious instruction?"

This is a fair question that has been put to me repeatedly since my other article was published. It requires a fair answer, and the Indiana survey gives this answer.

In the Indiana survey, children were not subjected to the personal tests I have described. The purpose of the investigation in Indiana was to analyze religious schools and religious education. The American Sunday school, as it is typified in Indiana, was put under the scientific X ray. More than 20,000 Sunday school children and over 2,000 Sunday-school teachers were personally interviewed by a staff of thirty trained surveyors.

Dean Athearn told me this:

Indiana is not any worse than any other State in the Union. It may be a little better, for all I know. But 1,734,137 persons in Indiana, or 62.2 per cent of the population, are not identified with any church, either Jewish, Protestant, or Catholic, and 551,590 children and youth are not identified with the educational program of any church. Half of the Protestant children of Indiana attend Sunday school; half of those who do go are absent half the time. Half of every Sunday school session is given over to opening and closing exercises instead of lessons. The result is that the Indiana children who do go to Sunday school receive a total of twelve hours of religious instruction annually.

The Average Sunday-School Teacher

Doctor Athearn describes the average Sunday-school teacher of Indiana; he believes that she is the average Protestant Sunday-school teacher of America. She has been worked out by averages, by making a composite of Sunday-school teachers.

She is a married woman, thirty-seven years of age. She

Music and Rhythm in the Home

By Zella Blasdell Harder

PART XIX OF ARTICLES ON HOME BUILDING

One social or Zionitic ideal is to train parents until they are so competent that they can recognize in their children latent possibilities along any line and, after these talents are recognized, help bring them out and develop them, thus making better homes. One phase of this process of better home making is that of rhythm and music in the home.

If the parents wish to be in the best position to help the child, they must be very sure that they have done all in their power to give the child the right kind of a start, that is to say, furnish the proper kind of an environment into which to be born. During the first few years of its life a child receives from its environment impressions which last throughout its lifetime. What the musical environment ought to be to produce impressions the child should receive and retain is our problem. While not attempting to solve it, I shall offer a few suggestions that may help.

Music in the Home

If we were to make a canvass of a thousand homes in different sections of the country and tabulate our findings, I wonder what class of music we would find? Is our music as closely censored as our books? We have condemned the "dime novel," the "yellow sheet," and the sensational magazine; yet some sheet has two children of her own. She has had eleven years of schooling, but she has never had a course in pedagogy or teacher training, nor a course in the Bible or in any part of the subject matter which she is expected to teach the children. She entered the teaching service from the finest of motives, but she is not a trained teacher.

That's my answer. I do not believe my sons would receive religious instruction of effective sort and quantity in the Sunday school.

Well does the editor of the HERALD state that the churches must face these problems and face them frankly. Well does he ask, "Could such a test be given to our boys and girls and be passed with greater success?" Well does he state, "We fear to answer." To this we add, "If not, why not?" and "If not now, when?" What shall we do in the next few years to improve the efficiency of the Sunday school? What shall we do to increase the amount of religious instruction? What shall we do to insure an increased number of trained teachers? Can there be even the remotest possibility that it is right for us to rest in calm assurance and make no effort to meet these issues? Who can answer?—F. M. M.

music and some phonograph records contain texts as suggestive as any of these. Hours are spent by many parents figuring calories, choosing balanced meals, and finding the vitamine content of certain foods; but the average parent does not give much thought to the question of choosing music for the home. Good music is a spiritual food and has a far-reaching significance as a spiritual and moral force. Music has much to do with character building. Can we afford to tolerate trash just because it is the latest "hit"? The first step toward making better homes, musically, is to "clean house" on the undesirable things, bearing in mind that all so-called popular music is not vicious. A very good standard of judgment would be one which would discard all music with words you would hesitate to interpret in plain language to your own child.

So much for harmful texts. Some music is bad in itself. Music that is correct in harmony (at least without those terrible unexpected crashes called chords), perfect in rhythm (not jazz, which is a misuse of syncopation), and that has a melody which agrees with the sense of hearing, is usually safe. Music which violates these rules should not be tolerated in the home. With the phonograph within the reach of everyone, good music may be enjoyed at very little outlay of time, money, or ability.

Developing Rhythm

It is remarkable how early in life a child responds to rhythm and musical sounds. Children at a very early age are often lulled to sleep by a soothing sound, sometimes a crooning on only one note; also they are often disturbed and frightened by a sudden, loud, or discordant noise. When first sitting alone, children have been observed keeping an even rhythm with their hands or feet, or even with bending their bodies. This sense of rhythm should be cultivated. When a child is a little older he should be taught the rhythm of the clock ticking, birds flying, horses running, his own heartbeats, and other things from his life about him. A child who early is made to feel rhythm from within, later misses much of the hard drudgery of counting time, for it then becomes a pleasure to keep in time and an annoyance to be out of time.

Many little toys useful in developing rhythm as well as a musical ear can be used. For instance, musical bells on a handle, a little tube instrument to strike, a mellow-toned bell, or a drum. Avoid harsh tones from the first. One of the most harmful toys for a child is the ordinary toy piano. It is not true to tone, and from the beginning gives the child a wrong idea of intervals. The ideal plan is to let the child have access to a real piano, where he will develop correctly.

Voice Culture

As soon as the child is old enough (say two or three years of age) he should be encouraged to sing. Some things, however, should be remembered. A child should never sing loudly. He should be encouraged to sing softly and naturally, and then only those songs which are within his range. Kindergarten or preschool age children can sing easily only from C to A or B; those of seven, eight, or nine years of age should reach the octave and sometimes a step above; while those who are ten, eleven, or twelve years old may have a range of from B to the high E or F. If a child can be encouraged to speak softly, hum much, and sing without straining, he will nearly always have a sweet-toned voice. Many parents are overanxious to develop the voice of the child and so ruin it by beginning lessons too early. Voice culture should not begin until late in the teens, when the voice has become placed.

The critical time in the musical life of a child is when he has reached the age for outside instruction. For the first two or three years, at least, wise parents will send the child to the best teacher to be found. He will at the end of that period have formed some good habits which will remain with him throughout his life. If he starts with a poor teacher, he may acquire habits which will ruin his chances for any kind of success musically, as he is likely to form a real distaste for good music. Experience has taught many parents that true economy is in giving the child the best instructor first, because bad habits once formed are not easy to overcome, and many children give up when the process of correcting these early mistakes begins.

A Musical Foundation

Parents would do well to allow the child time to get a good musical foundation and not be anxious for him to play "pieces" for making a show. In the old countries which produce good musicians, teachers use a different method from ours. There the child spends years in preparation. A very fine English pianist and harmonist once told the writer he had spent years in study before he was allowed even to touch the piano. He had to sight-read and sing his exercises before he could play them. Perhaps if we were more carefully trained, with a broader foundation, our musical appreciation would be greater, and our musicians would not be embarrassed by having to perform before a whispering, moving audience.

When we see many of our people demanding loud, flashy music, wanting to be artists without being willing to work, and our children just touching the surface of musical training, we wonder what the remedy may be. I believe we will have to begin with music as we did with the liquor question—teach the children of to-day the better way, that our people of to-morrow may appreciate and even produce the type of music we should use.

Music, a Zionie Ideal

With our ideals, our church should have the best. We should be producers as well as performers. We should lead and not always follow. If to the spirit we carry into our music, we add years of careful study and build up our appreciation, we will have music which will indeed build character, which will help to bring us to "the measure of the fullness of the stature of Christ." This must all begin in the home, our parents as the teachers. What of them? Are they ready to do their "bit" toward this part of Zion's redemption?

Outline of Course of Study

(The outline follows the chapters in the textbook. Questions are selected from manuals, Mothercraft, by Etta Hunt, 15 cents, and Mothercraft for Girls, by Alice Mae Burgess, 12 cents, and other questions are based upon the articles. The question manuals and any reference books as listed may be obtained from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.)

1. How early does the child respond to melody? What is the effect of rhythm?
2. What may be used as a beginning?
3. What can be done at the age of six months to cultivate a musical sense?
4. How does a phonograph help?
5. With what kind of music should the child be acquainted?
6. How may an acquaintance with good music influence the child later?
7. When should musical instruments be provided? Should pianos be closed to the children?
8. In what way is singing a means of self-expression?
9. Why should the mother sing at her work? What is the effect upon the child?
10. Should a child be forced to practice? What care should be taken of the voice in childhood?

To work out a practical plan of cooperation in making education available to all the people in their homes, the United States Commissioner of Education has called a national conference on home education to be held on May 7 at the University of Minnesota in conjunction with the annual meeting of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations. Directors of extension education in universities, librarians, leaders in parent-teacher association work, and others concerned with home education are invited to this conference.

Missionary A. M. Chase Reports Work in Iowa

TABOR, IOWA, February 18.—Since coming from General Conference I have not been idle, though I cannot report as much accomplished in this field as I would like to. There is much to be done here if we get back to what this district was at one time. We would like to make it more of a stronghold for the cause of Christ than it was in the earlier days.

Purchases Home

My first point in this field was Tabor where my wife and I established our home, purchasing a small place, as we could not find a suitable place to rent. From here we drove to Lamoni, using a commercial truck loaned us by Brother Madison Leeka, and brought back a load of household goods so we could set up housekeeping at once. We were ready for work by October 28.

District Conference Convenes

Our district conference met with this branch November 9 and 10. A remarkably peaceful spirit and unanimity were manifest among the Saints. It was one of the encouraging things I have met since coming back to this field. One of the things agreed upon by the conference was that we should bring the next reunion of Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts to Glenwood this coming summer.

After the district conference I devoted my efforts to the work in the three branches, Tabor, Bartlett, and Thurman, until December, except for one Sunday spent in an all-day meeting at Glenwood. This meeting at Glenwood was partly to forward the reunion enterprise. I think the efforts were a success, so preparations are being made to hold this gathering in the Lake Park August 14 to 24.

Organization at Hamburg Revived

December 2 was devoted to an all-day service at Hamburg, which was followed up with a week's meetings there. The following Sunday, Sister Chase organized a Sunday school, and regular services were taken up once more in the brick church, the first time for several years. This was made possible by the devoted work of Brother N. L. Mortimore and his wife, and an amalgamation of the two branches, Hamburg and Riverton. Brother Mortimore is preaching there each Sunday, and Sister Mortimore superintends the Sunday school.

Illustrated Christmas Lectures

December was a busy month. In addition to other work I delivered an illustrated Christmas lecture at each of the five places, Hamburg, Glenwood, Tabor, Bartlett, and Thurman during the week preceding Christmas. I drove to Lamoni for the Christmastide, but was called to Shenandoah to preach a funeral sermon the 27th. The 30th found me back at Tabor.

Tabor Business Meeting

At the branch business meeting here January 6, I was chosen to act as branch president, as Brother M. Gaylord desired to be released from this responsibility on account of his age and increasing infirmity. With this added responsibility I have confined my labors a little more closely to this branch, but largely on account of the difficulty of getting over the district during the bad roads of the winter. I expect to get out to other portions as soon as I can do so with comfort and profit to the cause.

Two Weeks' Meetings

I have just closed a two weeks' service here, beginning February 3 and closing the 17th. An excellent spirit has been with us during this effort.

Addresses Public Meetings

Two pleasant experiences since coming to this town are: On November 14, by invitation of the committee, I addressed the Father and Son Banquet at the Congregationalist Church, and on January 11 I responded to an invitation from the president of the Tabor College, Reverend McLeod, to address the student body at their chapel hour. Both efforts were well received.

In all of these efforts I have been ably assisted by Sister Chase, who ever stands by, ready to do what she can to help the cause along. In her capacity as helper to the missionary (district president) and in addition to this, as superintendent of Women and Sunday school she is one busy "unordained missionary."

Pastor of Fresno Branch Tells How Church Building Was Obtained

FRESNO, CALIFORNIA, March 1.—In the HERALD for January 16 a very description of the interior decoration of our newly finished church building is given under the heading, "Fresno Remodels Church Building." I am not aware who furnished this news item but I am glad that some one is interested enough in our welfare to report some of the good work accomplished here. Two years ago the present pastor upon finding himself at the head of the Fresno Branch formulated a program, which, among other things, included the establishment of a church home of which the Saints would not be ashamed, and to which we could invite our most discriminating friends.

To accomplish this it was first necessity to obtain a united branch, so we entered our duty with all the enthusiasm of a newly elected congressman. We recall now the fact that our district president, J. D. White, appreciated this, our exaggerated enthusiasm, and without stint offered us some very valuable counsel and advice.

Many Times Discouraged

Many times I went to the church discouraged half to death, but would go to the pulpit and assume the most optimistic attitude. I have yet to recall a single instance when I did this that the former enthusiasm did not return long before the conclusion of the sermon.

Harmonious strains were audible among the mingled voices of our congregation long before we could move a peg in the direction of a new building. Many objections were met with when this task was approached, but our success can be no better stated than by relating the fact that at the end of the year the pastor was returned by unanimous vote and by unanimous vote was later placed at the head of a building committee with full power to act. This, however, was not the end of our task, but rather the beginning.

Create Building Fund

The story of how we raised our building fund is a long one, and is made so from the fact that our resident membership is composed in large part of laboring people working for wages in the city. In this case we are happy to state that it was done by unanimous effort of the known resident membership, supplemented by the splendid assistance of friends on the outside. I consider it not less than providential that first-class mechanics from the Union Hall would come to our church and donate, not one day, but stick to the job to the very end, with all the enthusiasm shown by the pastor, which was not a little under these circumstances. All of the mechanics who donated their labor were outsiders, only one having relatives in the church. The others had never seen inside of our church until they came to donate their service. They were friend mechanics of the pastor. Happily again, they are now in regular attendance at the services.

Building Almost Completed

The little church (that part of it conceived by us in the beginning) is now completed, except a part of the plumbing and kitchen fixtures, and now stands as a monumental testimony of the spiritual readjustment of the Fresno Branch. This, however, is not the end of our task but rather the beginning. A vestibule for the present building is to be added in the near future. Within a year or two the banner branch of the State with the finest church building in California, is the goal.

Publicity Work

Not a little of our success is due to continued newspaper advertising. Each week our services are announced in two local dailies. Many sermons and articles have been published in these papers during the past year. We have made it a point to be up to the minute on national and local issues and deliver sermons or lectures on them, furnishing a synopsis of these to the local newspapers. Many of these sermons have been reprinted by various periodicals in the valley without comment, while some of them have brought down severe editorial criticism, especially from a pro-Catholic paper. There is no doubt but that untold good has been done in this way. Much of the success of recent revival services conducted in the church by Apostles D. T. Williams and Roy S. Budd, together with Field Missionary George Wixom, which were said to be a close rival to the services by the same brethren at Berkeley and San Francisco, was without a doubt due to newspaper advertising. Our acquaintance with the editorial staff of these papers made it possible not only to get interviews and have sermons published but to have pictures taken by the staff photographers and used in connection with the interviews. I will venture to state that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the best advertised church in Fresno to-day. And for this reason our best days are yet to come.

SAMUEL WOOD.

others left believing in the work, who we believe will obey later.

Rejoice in Baptisms

Two of the men who were baptized are husbands of sisters in the church, and one of the women is the wife of a brother in the church. The other is a young girl of ten years, the daughter of one of the brethren who were baptized. These baptisms cause great rejoicing in the homes of the Saints, and have been looked forward to for several years. This branch has been noted for its number of brothers-in-law, and sisters-in-law; but we are pleased to report that their number has been reduced by three, who have become brothers and sisters indeed, and we look forward with hope, and pray that God will hasten the time when other homes will be blessed by seeing beloved companions come into the fold.

Use Baptist Font

We were extended the courtesy of the Baptist font at the Baptist church. The janitor had the water nicely warmed, and ready at the appointed hour. The scene was very impressive, and tears filled the eyes of the lookers-on as Brother Curtis led the candidates down into the waters of baptism, and inducted them into the kingdom. Here the bloom of youth offered itself with all that the future might bring, and the venerable, white-haired man of sixty-one offered himself with the wisdom that the experiences of the past had brought to him, and the middle-aged husband and father, wife and mother offered themselves as a comfort and encouragement to their companions, and an example to their children; all to the honor and glory of God, and in fulfillment of his commandments, the good Spirit testifying that God was pleased.

Brother Curtis left on the afternoon train, following the confirmation meeting, Sunday, for Rock Island, where he preached in the evening, and then went on to Independence for a short visit with his family, before starting our special meetings at Kewanee on March 9.

We are still rejoicing in the work of the Master, and see day by day the great need of consecration to service, and the need of faithfulness on the part of the Saints.

E. R. DAVIS.

Branch at Opportunity, Washington, Increasing in Numbers

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

OPPORTUNITY, WASHINGTON, February 15.—My health is excellent, and there seems to be given to me of late in the last four weeks a special endowment of inspiration greater than ever before in my whole experience and I am glad to tell you that in our branch here our numbers are increasing. Average attendance at prayer meetings is about forty, Sunday school, one hundred ten; preaching services, from eighty to one hundred.

There is good interest at Coeur d'Alene Branch, which is ably taken care of by Brother L. E. Holmes. Clarks Fork Branch is well taken care of and very much alive. Sagle Branch is being built up by Brethren R. A. McDole and V. L. Gunter, my counselors. They also take care of Sandpoint.

Two of our local men are taking care of Valley Branch. The Spokane Branch is divided into groups and the men are taking hold of the work with a zeal and a zest that cannot help but win if they stay humble.

I have given you this brief report to let you know we are very much alive and will appreciate any suggestions that are possible for me to receive.

OSCAR CASE.

Kewanee District Meetings at Savanna Result in Baptisms

SAVANNA, ILLINOIS, February 25.—Elder E. A. Curtis, missionary, and E. R. Davis, president of the Kewanee District, opened a series of meetings in the Saints' chapel at Savanna, on February 3, and closed with the Sunday night service, February 24.

In all, thirty-two meetings were held during the three weeks, there being twenty preaching services, two prayer meetings, one sacrament service, four sessions of Sunday school, three sessions of Religio, one baptismal service, and one confirmation service.

The good Spirit was present throughout this series of meetings. Many were touched by the influence of the Spirit, which brought tears to the eyes of Saints and nonmembers.

The Savanna Saints were loyal in supporting the meetings by their regular attendance, and also by their finances. The nonmembers showed a very friendly spirit and a deep interest in the meetings, over fifty per cent of the attendance being nonmembers. Four were baptized, and a number of

First Reunion at Tiona, Australia, Held

WALLSEND, NEW SOUTH WALES, January 4.—Since the 10th of the month just ended I have been away from my field of South Australia. I arrived on the Tiona reunion grounds on the 14th and with other brethren worked hard in preparation for the first reunion of its kind in Australia. Ten days of reunion activities followed, closing the end of the month. I remained one day longer, assisting to break up camp, most of the people having dispersed, and now have broken my journey at Wallsend on my way toward my field. I will preach for the Saints here on Sunday in two places, and thence to Sydney where I will visit for a few days and then to Lower Bendoc where I have a week's mission with the branch there that was started as a result of my first missionary labors. I will then go back to Sydney to take the train for South Australia, stopping to preach and make a few visits with the Victorian Saints on my way. The journey will constitute a distance of about 3,550 miles, so we do not hope to leave our field again for at least two years except as requested or appointed elsewhere.

Tiona Reunion

The number of Saints and friends at the Tiona reunion totaled about 350. It was fine to see such a large body, comprised mainly of young people.

Great commendation is due to the brethren who worked so hard securing the land, organizing the company, and directing affairs in preparation for the reunion. A vast amount of study and hard work was entailed. Then there were some who through their various responsibilities were totally deprived of the privilege of attending meetings. It was a great example of sacrifice. Many young men gave up their beds and tents to accommodate visitors who came in far greater numbers than anticipated, and in pouring rain worked at erecting tents and beds while others were enjoying the meetings.

With every good wish for the ultimate triumph of the great work in which we are engaged,

HAROLD I. VELT.

Expresses Desire for Association of Saints

ANDOVER, MASSACHUSETTS, February 29.—Your circular concerning club offers received at a most opportune time, and I felt that it came in response to a great yearning on our part to be in touch with the activities of Christ's church on the earth.

After our somewhat hectic experience in Lynn, Massachusetts, during which your humble servant strove to plant the germ of the work, and which is still in active development, business changes made necessary a move to the present location, a beautiful little addition to the town of Andover, Massachusetts. There are none of our people nearer than Haverhill, which is nine miles away, with very poor roads, and as Sister Blanchard has been very ill most of the time, it has been out of the question for us to meet often with the Saints. We have found little food in worshipping with other religious friends.

We are looking forward to the time when conditions will permit us to gather nearer the center of Zion, where at least we may be near those of like aspirations, even though they, as we, fall short of realizing the ideal of the great work which is ours to keep and promulgate.

The uplifting association with such men as Brethren Greene, Burgess, Rich, Baldwin, Gleazer, and many others too numerous to mention is greatly missed.

FREDERICK W. BLANCHARD.

Eastern Colorado District Conference Held at Denver

DENVER, COLORADO, March 4.—The Eastern Colorado district conference was held at Denver, Colorado, February 23 and 24. The conference opened Saturday morning, February 23, with a prayer meeting at 9 o'clock. The sessions were well attended and the business of the district was accomplished in a peaceful and expeditious manner. Apostle John F. Garver was in attendance, and he, with the district presidency, was chosen to preside over the conference.

District Presidency Elected

Elder Bruce E. Brown was elected president of the district. Upon his nomination, Elder E. J. Williams was elected his counselor. The other member of the district presidency was left unnamed until Brother Brown has become more acquainted with the district.

Reunion Grounds

Upon motion it was authorized that the reunion grounds at Colorado Springs be platted off. At the last reunion a plan had been proposed and accepted in which every member of the district was asked to contribute at least $50 to meet the reunion ground debt. Those who did this were to be permitted to build on a lot on the grounds. The motion adopted now will expedite matters, so that those who have already paid and those who will pay, shall receive permission to erect their buildings immediately, upon definitely located sites.

Ordinations

Ordinations were provided for certain brethren in Genoa, Fort Collins, and Pueblo; and an ordination already carried out by the district president at La Junta was approved.

Departmental Elections

The department superintendents were reelected to their various offices, as follows: Sunday school superintendent, Sister Louisa Fishburn; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Reno Auld; superintendent of Department of Women, Sister Letha Tilton. Upon nominations, other assistants of the above-mentioned officers were chosen.

Other matters, chiefly of a routine nature, were carried out, but we think this is sufficient to show the nature of the business transacted.

Prayer Service

A splendid prayer meeting of the young people was held Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. A large crowd came, and the hour and a half was filled with good, spiritual testimonies and rousing hymns. The Lord graciously favored them through the voice of admonition and prophecy.

Apostle J. F. Garver Present

Elder Garver preached morning and evening, Sunday, to a crowded church. He also gave some timely advice during the sacrament meeting concerning spiritual gifts. We believe that the wisdom of it will be recognized by everyone.

Commissary Committee

We should fail in giving honor where honor is due if we did not mention the splendid work done by the commissary committee, under the leadership of Sister Laura Kohankie. Their wonderful cooking and tasty meals helped to make the delegates feel at home, and was a decided factor in making the conference a success.

Conferences Closes

The conference came to a close Sunday night, after a motion had been carried by the visitors, thanking the Denver Saints for their hospitality.

Junior Boys and Girls Present Plays for Glasgow Saints

GLASGOW, MONTANA, February 26.—This month of February has been the most active of all the months in the history of the Glasgow Branch. It started off, February 1, with a chicken supper, followed the same evening with a play by four of the junior boys, entitled, "The black vamp." The attendance was good, the supper cleared $24, and the local paper gave a very favorable account of the boys' play.

The junior girls, not wishing to be outdone by the boys, put on a play, Friday evening, February 8, entitled, "Mrs. Marshall advertises for a maid." This was well rendered and received favorable comment from the local paper, also. A splendid attendance greeted them.

The prayer meetings have been much better attended lately and increased interest shown.

Responding to the request of the publishing interests of the church, Elder James C. Page opened with a sermon on "What shall we read?" This was followed by a personal canvass of each family of Saints which resulted in a number of subscriptions to church papers and promise of several more.

Better attendance, both of members and nonmembers, has been had at the preaching services; especially it is noted that a goodly number of young people have started coming.

Interesting Addresses

Elder E. D. Chase spoke, February 3, on "Man's final destiny," and on February 10, the discourse of Elder James C. Page was "Prophecy." He spoke again on the fourth Sunday and that time on "What's in a name?" He showed the Bible name for the church and its members. Joseph Sandidge, priest, gave a patriotic address on the lives and characters of Washington and Lincoln, on the third Sunday.

The young people's orchestra is progressing very well under the leadership of Brother Earl Wilcox.

The Bible normal class has been working very strenuously on a play which is to be given on the last Friday night of this month. Sister Georgia Wilcox is directing it.

At the sacramental services of February 2, two children were blessed. Arnold Ralph, the son of Sister Milton Anderson who is a daughter of Brother and Sister William McLean; and Doris Valentine, daughter of Brother and Sister Webster Rogers. Elders Elmer D. Chase and James C. Page officiated.

A little incident which recently happened will give the HERALD readers an idea of what the church has to contend with here. When a certain lady was invited to attend one of the services of the Saints, she made answer, "The members of my congregation would think that I had gone clear to the dogs were I to attend one of your meetings."

Several citizens of Glasgow, who own radio sets, report often of hearing the church station, K F I X, at Independence, Missouri. So some are hearing the gospel preached at Glasgow who do not come to the services.

JAMES C. PAGE.

Service

Not lightly was it said, "They also serve
Who only stand and wait,"

For mighty are the prayers that swift ascend
To heaven's gate.

CHURCH NEWS

First Saint Joseph Branch Hears Many Interesting Speakers

SAINT JOSEPH, MISSOURI, February 24.—A number of excellent sermons from unaccustomed sources has been the treat of the First Branch recently. Brother John Sheehy of Cameron delivered two forceful addresses one Sunday, and those who know this live wire will understand why the word forceful is used. The sermons were greatly appreciated.

Brother Leslie Wight, of Kansas City, Missouri, interested the audience with a salesmanship disquisition on gospel living which was very fine.

Apostle J. A. Gillen, beloved by all, spoke twice one Sunday, and aroused the Saints to a deeper realization of their need of living nearer to God. The divine fire which glowed through all his utterances seemed to radiate to every heart, calling forth the best that was in them.

Elders Coventry Archibald, John Bear, and Milo Burnett have also contributed a goodly share toward the spiritual edification of the Saints here. Brother R. S. Salyards delivered his parting address this morning, substituting for Brother V. M. Goodrich who was to have spoken but was physically unable to do so. The sermon was a message of love, hope, and unswerving faith, which inspired the Saints to look forward, reach upward, and press onward. There are not many to whom is given the wonderful vision of the onward march of the gospel forces to ultimate victory. This is the priceless possession of Brother Salyards.

Business Meeting

At the last business meeting of the First Branch, Brother Salyards presented his resignation as pastor. It was accepted, and acting upon the written recommendation of the First Presidency of the church, which was represented by President Elbert A. Smith in person, Brother Orman Salisbury was elected to succeed Brother Salyards.

Brother Salisbury selected Brethren Milo Burnett and Coventry Archibald to be his counselors. Sister Letha Burnett was chosen secretary of the branch.

Brother Salisbury presented plans for coordinating the various activities of the departments of the branches. These by vote were accepted. He has inspired a feeling of confidence in his executive abilities, which will cause all to work together in a spirit of friendliness and cooperation.

Work for the Departments

The Department of Women chose Sister J. A. Koehler for the successor of Sister Salyards. Of this department, the Temple Builders, the Relief and Service division, the Blue Birds, and the X. W. W. Study Club are active. The Orioles no doubt will soon be reorganized and be meeting regularly.

The Sunday school is progressing finely. There is a good attendance and a very live interest. There is now a good orchestra which is a wonderful asset to the school. The beautiful music is truly inspiring.

The basket ball team, which is composed of members of the young men's class with Brother M. S. Ross as teacher, does very well indeed, considering the handicap under which they work. They belong to the Sunday School League of the city, and although they have not been fortunate enough to win many games this season because of not having any place in which to practice, yet they are fine young fellows, and it is hoped the time will come when there will be suitable equipment for the clean sport of young folks. Altogether Brother

Stone, the Sunday school superintendent, is rather proud of his school.

The Religio, which now meets on Sunday evening at six o'clock, is striving bravely to carry on, and the outlook seems good for them.

The choir, which is one of the necessary essentials to a good branch, is not forgotten. Sister Elma Scott, the chorister, is devoted to her work, and the result is splendid music at the services. It is hoped that this faithful organization knows how the branch appreciates it.

Far West Conference

The annual Far West conference will convene at the First Branch on March 5, at 8 a. m., and will continue over the following Sunday. Preparations are being made to entertain a large crowd, and everyone is looking forward to an interesting time.

Farewell Reception

The combined branches of the city gave a farewell reception on Friday evening, February 22, to Brother and Sister Salyards who are leaving soon. There was a large gathering and a splendid social time. A beautiful spirit of friendly affection made the occasion a memorable one. An interesting musical program was given, after which Brother and Sister Salyards were invited to take seats on the platform. Then Bishop J. A. Koehler gave a brief but exact account of their lifelong work in the church and paid them some very high compliments, which are well deserved. At the close of his remarks he presented Brother and Sister Salyards with a beautiful and complete silver table service, the gift of the First Saint Joseph Branch. Both responded in well-chosen expressions of affection and regard for the people and the kindness received while among them.

"Blest be the tie that binds" was then sung, after which refreshments were served and a general social time ensued. It is with regret that Saint Joseph parts with those who have endeared themselves to the branch. They go with many earnest wishes for their future peace, happiness, and prosperity. It is good to know that they will be so near that Saint Joseph may be able to see them occasionally.

Cherokee Recognizes Many Blessings Received

CHEROKEE, IOWA, February 23.—God has shown his goodness to the Cherokee Saints many times and in many ways, but in the healing of the sick he has been indeed very kind. The branch president, A. R. Crippen, was called twenty miles in the country to administer to Sister Bessie Julius who was very sick and was expected to die. As soon as the prayer and administration were given the sister was better and is now fully recovered and enjoying good health.

Brother Walter Ballantyne was also healed of a fever as soon as the elders called and administered to him.

The sacramental service of February 3 was well attended by the Saints and the presence of the Holy Spirit was much enjoyed by all.

The attendance at the cottage prayer meetings has been much improved of late, and the services enjoyed by those attending.

E. L. Edwards, Bishop's agent, gave a fine talk to a large and attentive audience on Sunday morning, February 10. W. W. Reader, teacher, was the speaker in the evening on the subject, "Cigaretts, tobacco, and the cost."

Fred T. Mussell, high priest, the new district president of Des Moines, preached both morning and evening of Sunday, February 17, to fine audiences. He has held meetings every night through the week, and his talks on the priesthood have been very instructive. He has enjoyed good attention and been blessed with the Spirit in presenting the work.

Brother Alfred Ballantyne is still confined to his home as a result of burns received two months ago.

The Oriole girls were entertained, February 22, at luncheon at the home of Sister Bernadine Kudrle. Brother Mussell was a guest and talked to them.

There is an improvement in the Sunday school attendance the past few Sundays.

Plans Being Made for Meetings at Fargo

FARGO, NORTH DAKOTA, March 4.—Missionary meetings are being planned for the near future, which will begin as soon as arrangements can be made with Elder W. E. Shakespeare, who is now in Minnesota. Extensive advertising will be carried on in the daily papers.

Publicity Work

Publicity work has just recently been started here. The city editors have been found to be quite friendly toward the efforts being put forth. In the late census report, the Reorganized Church was classed as "Mormon," so an article was prepared for publication here, which would point out the difference between this church and the Utah church. It was published in a local paper.

Department of Recreation and Expression

Last year the course in public speaking was taken up in the Department of Recreation and Expression. This year found the Saints anxious to study the Book of Mormon. The department meets on Sunday evening at 7 o'clock and a short program precedes the lesson. Mrs. J. E. Wildermuth is the superintendent.

Department of Women

The Department of Women last year decided to "touch up a bit on grammar" so a course was taken in the English grammar. This year they are enjoying the course on "Home building" taken from the SAINTS' HERALD, and are realizing a little more what a real home should be. Meetings are held every two weeks, and a social session is held once a month.

Oriole and Music Departments

The Orioles are under the leadership of Sister Ralph Coney, who is also superintendent of the Sunday school. They meet on Tuesday evenings.

Superintendent Franklin E. Weddle, of the music department, is trying to keep the spirit bright by music and song. On Friday evening, February 29, the chorus took part in a banquet at the home of Brother and Sister G. W. Lindsey. Covers were laid for twenty-five people. After the dinner, the rest of the evening was spent in social activities and in rendering a short program.

District President a Visitor

Elder Thomas Leitch, district president, spent Sunday, February 24, with the Saints, preaching in the evening to a good audience.

Elder J. M. Terry writes from El Reno, Oklahoma: "Our services yesterday, February 24, were very good. The morning hour was occupied by Brother Milner, our branch solicitor, on "Tithing," a good plain talk. I made an appeal in behalf of the church papers. The result was $44 tithing and a new subscriber for the HERALD.

Graceland Chats

LAMONI, IOWA, March 1.—Graceland chapel program appointment for February 28 fell to Mrs. Royce of the English department. Miss Mabel Carlile led in the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner," and President G. N. Briggs led in the Lord's prayer. Mr. Roy Cheville then held a few minutes of song, selections being from different college songs. This was followed by the talk of Mrs. Royce, who spoke on national hymns and songs and sacred hymns of our own church and other churches.

President Briggs Returns

President Briggs just returned from attending the National Education Association meeting of superintendents in Chicago. This meeting included all executive officers of colleges and schools. His few days were so completely filled with lecture and concert, observation and discussions, that the recital of it is an inspiration to home friends.

The regular meeting of the Lambda Delta Sigma Society was held on Monday evening, February 25, at the home of President G. N. Briggs. The invitation from Brother and Sister Briggs to meet at their home was a happy leader to the pleasant hours spent there.

In all meetings or gatherings of a social nature, the college regulations are observed, and on school nights these adjourn at eight o'clock. This meeting of the Lambda Delta was unique, for each member came with a donation to the six o'clock supper.

The program followed immediately after the supper. President F. M. McDowell as chairman of the committee conducted the discussion. The subject was "Stewardship." The different phases were handled by members of the committee.

Athletics

A. R. Gilbert, of the athletic department, is conducting a series of lectures every Thursday night at the high school for high school and college football boys. This is in anticipation of the work in football the coming months.

Sophomore Class Elects Officers

Monday evening the sophomore class elected its officers for the second semester, as follows: President, Leland Omans; vice president, Frances Van Fleet; secretary-treasurer, Roy Henderson; sergeant-at-arms, Harold Brown.

Debate With Saint Joseph

The two teams that will represent Graceland in the dual debate with Saint Joseph Junior College March 14 have now been definitely picked. The men on both sides are hard at work. The affirmative team is composed of Leland Omans, Wayne Wolfe, and James Thomas, with Evan Fry as alternate, and the negative team of Roy Henderson, William Ely, and Walter Daykin, with Philip Lewis as alternate. The negative team will remain at home and meet the affirmative team from Saint Joseph, while Graceland's affirmative team will make the trip to Saint Joseph to meet the Saint Joseph negative team there. It is possible that the Saint Joseph debate will be held on the 15th instead of the 14th, but no definite announcement to this effect can yet be made.

The home debate will be held at the Brick Church, so that a crowd of several hundred may be accommodated.

Thursday Chapel Service

LAMONI, IOWA, March 8.—President F. M. McDowell occupied the chapel hour on Thursday, March 6. He gave a reading of the sermon by Doctor Fosdick from the text, "The place whereon thou standest is holy ground." Brother Mc-Dowell punctuated the reading with occasional remarks, making application of the excellent text matter supplied by this popular and fearless man of that rank known as Makers of Men.

The sermon is full of rich thought and everyday doctrine for youth and aged. No one after reading will fail to sense to some degree the value of past or future, and most of all the inestimable opportunity of the present. "Do not lose your present tense" either in looking backward or in building too many air castles. Neither shall one live in the present to the loss of high ideals of past or future, since past or future are but segments of eternity. Out of the past we came, into the future we go, and we stand thus on holy ground between the two; this is our working base.

During the absence of President Briggs, the meeting was in charge of Professor J. A. Gunsolley.

Athletics

These warm days have turned the thought of man and maiden to outdoor activities. The track for men has led forth the fellows who like to run. Coach Gilbert has a fine program outlined for spring and hopes to see Graceland represented at the track meet in Drake. Then will come tennis, and already boys and girls are feeling of rackets with an eye to the future.

One swallow does not make a spring, but wild geese honking northward, fat robins calling at dawn, musical calls from a flash of red as the cardinal cleaves the clear spring air, all these things mean spring, and that means joy to the lover of outdoor activities.

President Briggs and Dean McDowell Away

It is almost impossible to keep the president and the dean of this college both here at once. They just zigzag at home and away, until one is at loss to find them. Brother Briggs returned to-day and Brother McDowell leaves. Fortunately the college has at least one of them. At present the president is with us and the dean is in Independence.

Conservatory of Music

The conservatory of music is one of the busiest and most interesting departments of the hour. Never has there been a keener interest and more whole-hearted response to efforts of instructors. Miss Armstrong, of the voice department, in addition to her work in Lamoni, has a class in Mount Ayr where she finds much pleasure in teaching individuals and conducting group work. Miss Carley, piano instructor, is so busy and inspired that she is already planning more intensive work on her own career. How can one doubt the time and labor given to band work if one hears the beautiful concerts by J. H. Anthony's students? By the way, Graceland's radio station is sure to be giving something every Tuesday and Thursday at 7 p. m. as well as Sunday at 6.30 p. m. Be sure to listen in.

Graceland Oratorio Society

Miss Mabel Carlile conducts the Lamoni Graceland Oratorio Society. This organization is doing some very consecrated work this year. Last Sunday, preceding the sermon at the church, they gave a concert of high order. The members and personnel were: Male quartet: Evan Fry, James Dempsey, Reese Wells, and Albert Brackenbury; piano solo, Enos Needham; violin number, Emma Snead, of Independence, who is visiting in Lamoni. Then there was a beautiful selection by the chorus and a trio consisting of Mrs. Raymond McElroy, Walter Walden, and Fields Jones.

The Free Lyceum number is to be put on by the Oratorio Society Tuesday afternoon, March 11, with Miss Margaret Armstrong, soprano; Miss Ruth Fisher, reader; and an instrumental trio assisting. The A Cappella Chorus, of twenty voices, is training for part in this and other programs.

Patroness Hall Party

The greatest of all Friday evening festivities was the Saint Patrick Day's party at Patroness Hall.

From banquet to good-by the moments were filled with pleasure, and the thirty couples who participated have stored up memories that will not soon fade. The dining room was prettily and appropriately decorated in green and white.

The Patroness girls are making a splendid record during the absence of their dean, Miss Putnam. They are giving her substitute, Miss Tess Morgan, magnificent support. Their conduct deserves high praise, but then one expects just such things of those girls. Are they not Graceland girls? And does not that imply loyalty, high purpose, and faithfulness to ideals?

Miss Layton's Illness

Miss Layton's English pupils will be happy to have her with them again after her illness and consequent visit to the Sanitarium at Independence, Missouri. She has been greatly missed.

Doctor H. S. Salisbury Visits in Tama

TAMA, IOWA, February 14.—Doctor H. S. Salisbury, professor of geology of the University of Texas, recently spent a few days here. While here he was engaged more or less in making geological surveys and in delving into the history of the State.

Brother Salisbury is a member of the Iowa State Historical Society. He is the present commander of the Missouri division of the Sons of Veterans, a division comprising all of the States of Missouri and Arkansas.

Holden Stake News

Holden

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, March 10.—"Come, sweet Comforter," the song composed by President F. M. Smith, was feelingly sung by Sister Ralph Baker at the Sunday school session previous to the communion service held on Sunday, March 2. The spirit which accompanied the song seemed to continue throughout the sacramental service in a marked manner. Brother I. M. Ross was the speaker at the church in the evening.

The priests occupied at the 11 o'clock hour last Sunday. Brother Robert Dillon spoke on "Why do we have priests?" Brethren A. C. Christensen and S. F. Shoemaker also occupied, speaking on, "The cooperation between the priest and the member." Another song, "Onward to Zion," composed by President Smith, was sung by Sister Ross. The priests had charge of the preparation and rendition of the entire program.

In the morning the young people met in prayer service, with Brother Freelin Hampton in charge. This was their first meeting for some time.

Elder C. F. Scarcliff was the evening speaker at the church.

The Dramatic Club of the Department of Recreation and Expression held a special get-together meeting at the home of Brother and Sister L. J. Merrick, Friday, March 7.

The Holden stake reunion will be held at Holden the latter part of July. Take your vacation then and come to Holden. Begin to prepare now.

Lexington

The work at Lexington is moving forward unusually well because of the splendid cooperation of the Saints. There was an outpouring of God's Spirit at the communion service Sunday, March 2. The children even testified of the Spirit's presence. Brethren Brendel, Burgess, Johnson, and Shippy presided. Under the influence of the Spirit a wonderful prophecy was delivered. The largest number were present which ever met in a sacramental meeting at Lexington.

The Sunday school with Brother W. T. Bears as superintendent, and the Department of Recreation and Expression in charge of Brother Fred Furness, are doing splendid work. The Department of Women gave a good program last Friday evening.

Brother R. E. Burgess baptized two on Sunday, the 9th, and another was baptized the previous Sunday.

The Department of Music has organized a junior orchestra. Much is expected of them in the future.

The budget system has been adopted, and now the branch wonders how it ever got along without it.

Miss Gwendolyn Johnson, the pianist of Lexington Branch, played for the Independence Music Club, Wednesday afternoon, and also over the radio from the Independence broadcasting station, Thursday evening.

Sedalia

The Saints' church building at Sedalia is nearing completion, and will be occupied in the near future. The building is thirty by fifty feet, with full basement. The outside is finished with stucco (Elastica) and presents a very attractive appearance. For some years all meetings have been held in the dental rooms of Doctor G. W. Rodger at the corner of Fourth and Ohio Streets.

Several families have moved to Sedalia in the past year, which made a church building a necessity. The building is located at the corner of Ninth and Montgomery Streets in a splendid residence section. It is a credit to the church organization and to the city. Doctor G. W. Rodger is the pastor.

Elder C. L. House, wife, and son, of Houstonia, attended the sacramental services this month. Brother and Sister House were pioneers in the work here and much credit is due them for the present growth.

Sedalia is a city of about twenty thousand population, and the railroad shops furnish employment for about twenty-five hundred men. Brother Milton Ferguson, who has a position with the Missouri, Kansas, and Texas Railroad, has bought a residence here and will move his family from Holden as soon as school closes.

Elder W. S. Macrae, of the stake presidency, was at Sedalia, March 1, remaining over Sunday and leaving for Post Oak on church business the following Tuesday.

Marshall

"Overcoming" seemed to be the theme of the testimonies which followed the communion service held at Marshall on March 2.

Sister Eva Louis Ridge, daughter of Brother and Sister Ralph M. Ridge, was united in marriage with Brother Wilson Beard on February 11. They are making their home in Sedalia, Missouri.

The Department of Women, under the leadership of Sister Adah Spohrer, is becoming one of the active departments. The Orioles gave a social at the home of their leader, Sister Belle Woods, on Thursday night, March 6. The proceeds will be applied to the purchase of a new piano which is to be installed next Sunday.

Grandview

During the past month there seems to be a renewed activity, and a marked increase in spirituality among the Saints at Grandview. All the departments are in splendid working order.

The normal training class meets each Monday evening at the home of Sister Goddard. The members of this class are boosters for the teachers training course and are trying to enlist other teachers.

Brother I. M. Ross, of Holden, spent Sunday, February 24, with the Grandview Saints. He occupied both the morning and evening hours, delivering splendid discourses. Immediately following the morning sermon, Brother Hopkins arose, and under the influence of the Spirit spoke words of comfort and advice to Brother Ross.

The Saints were agreeably surprised while assembled for prayer service on Wednesday evening, February 27, by a visit from the stake president, Brother D. J. Krahl.

The citizens of Grandview are organizing a community educational club, and have four members from each of the three churches to act as an executive committee. Sisters Danforth, Chipley, Dyer, and Goddard were chosen to represent the Saints. Several of the members were asked to participate in the first program, which will be held in two weeks. The present plans of the committee are to merge this club into a parent-teacher association.

The ordinance of baptism was performed on Sunday, March 1, prior to the opening of Sunday school, when the two sons of Brother and Sister Binns were conducted into the water. They were confirmed prior to the sacramental service.

The Saints all enjoyed that meeting. The Spirit was present in marked degree. During the meeting one of the sisters related a dream which she had had some two weeks previous. In this dream the Saints were admonished by a stranger to cease faultfinding and be more diligent in teaching their children to have reverence for the house of God.

Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, March 11.—Attendance at the Sunday services in Zion, March 9, was somewhat affected because of the sudden cold spell accompanied by snow. The sun, however, shone through the clouds and prevented the snow upon the walks becoming ice. When it is at all possible to walk with safety, the Saints continue to crowd the churches. The lighter attendance Sunday still found well filled houses at most of the services.

President Frederick M. Smith spoke at the Stone Church in the morning, beginning an explanation of a subject that may take several sermons to complete. He started to outline the attitude of other churches toward social problems and particularly stewardships. In this way he hopes to make our own doctrine on that phase clearer.

Elder H. O. Smith was the evening speaker, taking the place of Apostle E. J. Gleazer who had been announced, but who was called to Saint Louis, Missouri, to begin a series of meetings there. The sermon was preceded by the usual half hour musical concert. Both services were broadcast.

Department Day at Walnut Park

Department Day at Walnut Park was occupied as announced last week. After Miss Blanche Edwards's talk at 11 o'clock on "The worth of our girls," a meeting was called for Monday evening at the home of the local young women's supervisor, Mrs. R. Barnhart, for all girls between the ages of eleven and twenty-five. Miss Edwards met with them in an endeavor to carry on the work of the department—"to help girls to gain a knowledge of themselves physically, mentally, socially, and spiritually."

Mrs. Dora Glines, general superintendent of women, directed the round table in the afternoon, emphasizing the fact that the object of the departments was identical with the object of the church, that is, "the development of the individual 'to a perfect man unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.'"

Mrs. Ida P. Etzenhouser showed definitely the importance of the work of the Social Service Bureau by giving a report of the large amount of work done in only one month, February. In the evening she talked further on social service and the home.

The speaker March 16, at 11 o'clock, will be former pastor Bishop B. J. Scott.

Englewood Congregation

The ladies of Englewood are planning a social time for Monday evening, March 17. A light supper will be served to help swell the building fund.

A goodly number attended the morning services, Sunday, March 9. Elder James E. Warne was the speaker. Elder Frank Mussell occupied at the evening hour.

Liberty Street

Brethren Carl and Foster Baker, sons of Pastor J. M. Baker, have recently located in Independence. Sunday, March 9, their daughter, Mrs. J. L. Parker, of Des Moines, Iowa, accompanied by Mrs. Foster Baker, came to visit her parents. It was quite a family reunion since Brother and Sister Baker have not had all their children at home together for more than twenty years. They rejoice that their mother's condition is much improved. The Saints are still asked to remember Sister Baker in prayer.

A good spirit prevails in the young people's prayer meeting. Every one who can face life bravely and smile is asked to attend. Elder Roy V. Hopkins will have charge Sunday, March 16.

The girls met and organized the lower circle of Orioles immediately after the afternoon prayer meeting, Sunday, March 9, with Miss Evelyn Turner as monitor.

Elder Roy V. Hopkins preached Sunday morning, March 9. Elder Joseph Luff began a series of Sunday night services starting with the subject, "Seeing Jesus."

The Silver Wing Chapter of Temple Builders met at the home of Sister Turner on Spring Street, Monday night. A course of study was decided upon. Ambitious plans were discussed. An urgent invitation was given the girls to join with the Department of Women in some lines of work.

The Bishopric

Bishop James F. Keir will be in Plano, Illinois, on Sunday, March 16. From there he will go to Milwaukee and Beloit, Wisconsin.

Independence Music Club

The Independence Music Club now meets at the Independence Institute building on the Campus, in rooms being furnished jointly by the Music Club and the Laurel Club. The new Steinway grand piano, being purchased by the club, has been moved to the building. The rooms when completely furnished will be particularly adaptable to the Music Club work.

The Japanese fete held at the home of Mrs. W. N. Robinson, Kansas City, March 7, was successful artistically and financially. Oriental atmosphere was in every room, with the many costumed attendants, the burning incense, the

"Pearl of Great Price" Lost

While I was away from the office last summer, an original copy of "The Pearl of Great Price" disappeared. I very much prize this pamphlet and would like to have it returned. It was published in Liverpool in 1852, and contains the prophecy of the Rebellion. It formed a magazine much the size of Autumn Leaves and had the name of Samuel Ackerly, my father-in-law, printed on it. A copy of the Temple Lot Case disappeared about the same time. Anyone knowing of either will perform a favor by conferring with the undersigned. J. W. Peterson, Independence, Missouri.

Reunion Notices

Chatham, Erie Beach, July 25 to August 4. This change of dates has been necessary to meet the convenience of gen-cherry blossoms and other decorations. A continuous concert was in progress, given by members of the club and musical talent in the vicinity of Kansas City. The refreshment rooms, booths, and bazaar, were delightful places to spend money, but value was received in every purchase.

Between 500 and 600 people attended the fete during the afternoon and evening. Approximately $425 was cleared, which amount will finish paying for the piano. Much credit is due Mrs. Robinson, honorary president, for offering her home to be used as the setting for the fete.

Brother and Sister Samuel Siegfried celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary, March 4. Brother Siegfried is eighty-three years old and Sister Siegfried is seventy-five. Brother and Sister H. R. Mills, long-time residents of this city, celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary on February 25.

Basketball Season Closes

The pennant of the L. D. S. Basketball League goes to the winning S. R. S. team. The season of basketball was an enjoyable one and great interest was maintained to the last. ## Radio Flashes Independence, Missouri.—We have a crystal set and have "listened in" on nearly every program given from the Stone Church. We get most of them very clear. All the sermons and lectures are especially distinct. I am vitally interested in the programs being broadcast from K F I X and know that much information is being received which otherwise would probably be overlooked. I shall be very grateful to receive a printed program each month. For more than two months I have been confined to my bed by the hand of affliction, and you cannot conceive how I have enjoyed listening.—F. R. Schafer.

Keota, Oklahoma.—Was listening to morning live stock reports and tuned in station K F F V just as you were signing off. Could hear very clear. Thought you might like to hear how far you were getting out, and especially in daytime.—H. D. Price.

Fargo, North Dakota.—I am pleased to notify you that I get programs from K F F V often and enjoy them.—Myer Rutz.

Syracuse, New York.—Just a line to tell you how much we enjoyed your evening program at 8.45 Eastern time. We entertained a roomful on the loud speaker. The cornet solo was unusually good. Would appreciate your letting us know the evenings you send.—George C. Kirk.

Louisville, Colorado.—Have listened with interest to your Sunday evening radio church service, which came in very clear and distinct. We are located twenty miles north of Denver at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, but have no trouble in picking you up on your low wave length. Extending our thanks to the minister of the church for his words of good counsel and cheer.—Owen Thirlaway.

Saint Joseph, Missouri.—My husband and I were at the home of Brother and Sister Gist, of this city, Sunday evening and heard the musical program and the sermon by Brother Elbert A. Smith, which we certainly did enjoy to the fullest extent. It was wonderful, and I believe there can be much good accomplished in this way. Wishing you much success along this line.—Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Peel.

Washington, District of Columbia.—We heard station K F F V this evening at 8.15 to 8.35 Eastern Standard time, when you signed off.—Rolston Lyons.

Blue Pencil Notes

A press dispatch from Brooklyn reveals a tragedy of modern life as therein set forth:

New York, March 3.—Mr. and Mrs. David A. Mount, of Brooklyn, disclosed a "bridge tragedy" after inserting the following "ad":

"Couple living Heights section, mediocre bridge players, want to meet couple similarly afflicted around 40 years old; object: improvement of game. Main 4307-W."

Mrs. Mount explained:

"Did you ever play bridge? No? You never stole your partner's bid without cause? Then you don't know how we feel. Nobody but a bridge player could sympathize with us. Nobody but a rotten bridge player."

And Mr. Mount added:

"I've got so now that I'm never sure. I'm in a constant state of terror. When I make what I think is a brilliant play I have to cast a furtive glance about the table to see if everything is all right. If anybody so much as lifts an eyebrow, I'm ready to dive under the table."

Here is a middle-aged couple who have had their ambitions. But now they know that life is all but hopeless. They have failed. Think of it. In this twentieth century, with all its culture, its art, its literature, its new thought, "heirs of all the ages," they cannot enjoy it. They are not worthy of it. They cannot play bridge. In America, the land of the free and easy, they would hide beneath the table. They are as aliens. They cannot play bridge. Living contiguous to the Statue of Liberty, where men have tunneled under the Hudson and challenged the gods with the most aspiring city sky line in the world, even in close proximity to Brooklyn Bridge—these poor people cannot play bridge. The war came, reconstruction followed, came unemployment, multitudinous problems wearied the world. What had they to contribute? Nothing. They cannot play bridge.

The Pilgrim Fathers were a busy people. On Sunday they went to church, said their prayers, sang hymns, read the Bible, preached or listened to endurance sermons. During the week they chopped down forests, erected houses and forts, plowed the soil, planted crops, held town meetings and fought Indians. They founded a great republic, redeemed the wilderness established religion and education. They were very successful. What would they think of two of their posterity who cannot play bridge? What would they think of two of their posterity who desire so very badly to play bridge and play it so very badly? What would they think of two of their posterity who care to play bridge at all?

Alas, when these two die they will have established within themselves such an "inferiority complex" that they will never dare to present themselves at the pearly gates. One glance from Peter's stern eye will start them well on their way to the other place. Arriving there they will find awaiting them many of the very best bridge players of the whole world.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Belief in Immortality

A renewed interest has taken place during the past few years in the proposition that there is life after death. The revealments of science in the material realm, for a time tended to obscure that of the spiritual, while a materialistic philosophy was being formed. But in spite of this advance of the material, religion has kept alive the hope that there is a life beyond, the only thing which makes this mean existence of ours tolerable. Minds are fortunately so constituted that they strive to look beyond demonstrated truth, thus creating in the imagination dreams of something better.

It is this hopeful attitude of man, together with the wonderful advancement of science, that has brought the focus of attention on immortality. The question which naturally arises is, May not scientific methods be extended to the spiritual realm, thereby making it possible to demonstrate the fact that there is another life? Leading men in the fields of religion and science have set about to accomplish this purpose. Current literature is full of arguments, experiments, and conclusions. Needless to say no definite results have been obtained. However good has been accomplished, for the stimulated interest has brought to light much evidence on the subject, most of which in its nature tends to encourage those firmly believing that there is life beyond the grave.

One of the leading scientists, Doctor Henry Norris Russel, Princeton astronomer, most recently expresses himself as being convinced that life here does not cease. He draws an analogy, set forth in the Literary Digest, between a burning candle and life. As the flame of a candle is blown out, so we see a body left lifeless. But the flame is not "blown out." Only the chemical process by which the flame burned on the candle is stopped. The light goes on, out into space, still a definite entity which will endure for ages. As with the candle, so with life. At death, only the chemical process in the body is stopped. The spirit is separated from the body and passes on just as the flame, a definite entity, into the space of which we have no knowledge. The fact that we cannot see spirits in the spiritual world is no more proof that they do not exist than that we cannot see where the flame goes when it is "blown out."

Doctor Russel says that throughout nature we find that reality far exceeds in splendor what we can possibly conceive in our imaginations. If we can create in imagination a world beyond the one on which we live, it will in no wise meet the actuality. He concludes:

God never fails to surpass our human imaginations, and, if we are to believe in the kind of God who alone is credible in these days of ever partial knowledge of his works, we can safely trust such a God to provide for us some future which goes beyond our dreams.

Why Science Is Religious

Huxley says that science is the best teacher of truth, for it demands the entire surrender of preconceived notions to the will of God.

In science men are striving upward to God. In nature they seek to find truth, which is but an expression of the infinite. In religion, God is reaching down to man, connecting with the spiritual within him. Revelation through the spirit is termed the religious, while revealment through nature is called science. But science and religion are inseparable. Science is religious, for every truth discovered is the Spirit of God. And religion is scientific, for the Spirit of God is truth.

The man who is determined to find truth, whether he look for it in the laboratory, or in the secret recesses of his soul, cannot fail to find God. God will reach man through the overwhelming flood of his emotions, or in the great illumination of his intelligence.

The Philosophy of Times and Seasons

To everything there is a season,
And a time to every purpose under the heaven:

A time to be born,
And a time to die;
A time to plant,
And a time to pluck up that which is planted;

A time to kill,
And a time to heal,
A time to break down,
And a time to build up;

A time to weep,
And a time to laugh;
A time to mourn,
And a time to dance;

A time to cast away stones,
And a time to gather stones together;
A time to embrace,
And a time to refrain from embracing;

A time to seek,
And a time to lose;
A time to keep,
And a time to cast away;

A time to rend,
And a time to sew;
A time to keep silence,
And a time to speak;

A time to love,
And a time to hate;
A time for war,
And a time for peace.

—Ecclesiastes 3: 1-9.

By agreement between the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric arrangements have been made for Bishop C. J. Hunt to travel in the Spring River and Central Oklahoma Districts, to labor with the local authorities in those districts in the interests of church finances. Bishop Hunt is a tireless worker, and as traveling bishop should be of great help to the church in various fields.

A persistent rumor that the British Government is considering the inclusion of Palestine under the proposed new Arab Confederation if or when such a confederation comes into existence, is stoutly denied by the editors of The Palestine Weekly. They state that there are no grounds whatsoever for such a rumor and that the British Government has not the slightest intention of making any modification or diminution in the Palestine mandate, as approved by the League of Nations.

Palestine's Assets and Liabilities

Reprinted from the "Palestine Weekly,"
February 15, 1924.

The government of Palestine has done a praiseworthy act in making public certain facts and figures which go a long way to clear up doubts and speculations. Considerable sums of money were spent both by the military administration and the civil government in Palestine. The bulk of the expenditure made by the Army of Occupation was on roads and railways. The purpose was purely strategic. The water supply of Jerusalem was also created solely for the purpose of meeting the needs of the garrison stationed in the capital.

The civil government went a little further and amalgamated strategic and public needs. It was necessary on the one hand to adapt this country to the needs of the British Empire chain of communications, and on the other to introduce into it the improvements required for its economic development. To this end over a million pounds were spent in ballasting the railway lines, broadening the Ludd-Jaffa narrow-gauge line, purchasing new rolling-stock, and constructing new roads in addition to repairing old ones. In order to appreciate the importance of what was achieved in the improvement of communications since 1917, it must be remembered that prior to and during the war Palestine was at least one hundred years behind the times in this respect. A trip, or the transport of goods, from Haifa to Jerusalem took twenty-four hours; now it takes six hours by train and four hours by car. In order to go from Jerusalem to Cairo, it took two full days in 1914; train to Jaffa, steamer to Port Said, train to Cairo. Now, a traveler enters a train at Jerusalem at a quarter past eight in the morning and alights on the Cairo platform at a quarter past ten in the evening of the same day. Moreover, the war (and possibly this can be ascribed to the times in general) has brought motor cars into common use, with the result that the sums which the government had to spend on roads were far greater than would have been normally required. The improved system of transport instituted by the government has therefore formed an asset to the country which takes by far the most prominent place in its balance sheet. It is true that some two million pounds have yet to be paid to the British Government for the lines taken over from the Army of Occupation, and nearly a million and a half due to the crown agents for goods supplied in the form of rolling-stock and various stores. But the main point for the public is to realize that these new riches are definitely the property of the government, of the country. The debts will no doubt be paid in good season and in such manner as not to constitute an additional and undesirable burden on the shoulders of the Palestinian taxpayer.

But the increase of Palestine's assets have taken other forms. The necessity for developing the country's communications was felt not only in roads and railways, but in postal relations, including telegraphs and telephones. The organization of Turkish postal service was far from satisfactory, and, taking advantage of the privileges conferred by the capitulations, the foreign powers had Austrian, Russian, German, and Italian post offices. The telegraph service was a monopoly of the state, and telegram senders suffered therefrom. Telephones did not exist at all. The difficult task of reorganizing the postal and telegraph administration and creating a network of telephones was undertaken by the British military administration with a zeal worthy of the empire whose colonizing genius has become traditional. Under the military government, the telephone service was used almost exclusively by the army and government offices, some eighty instruments only being allowed to the public early in 1920. At present there are about 1,200 paying subscribers.

One of the greatest needs of the country has been the construction of a modern port at Jaffa and Haifa. The civil government has been studying the question for several years now, and various plans have been drawn up. But such a task cannot be accomplished without a considerable outlay of money, which will amount to well over a million pounds. The proposed Palestine loan of two and a half million pounds could not be relied upon for providing even an appreciable portion of the necessary outlay, as it has been earmarked for other purposes. It will therefore be necessary to grant a concession to a private company to build a harbor either at Jaffa or at Haifa, probably at the latter port.

Another achievement of the Palestine Government has been the granting of loans to agriculturists out of funds collected from debtors to the former Ottoman Agricultural Bank and other funds borrowed from the Anglo-Egyptian Bank. The true significance of this achievement will be better understood when it is remembered that as a result of the war, there was scarcely a farmer in Palestine who had not fallen into debt from which only fresh loans advanced to him at a reasonable rate of interest could help to extricate him. The work accomplished by the government in this respect is yet far from meeting the requirements of the farmers in this country. Debts incurred by them through loans from private lenders have forced them into severe financial difficulties. But, none the less, it must be admitted that in most cases the government agricultural loans have relieved the situation to an appreciable extent.

The work of drainage and afforestation undertaken by the government has been quite considerable, when we remember that the funds put at the disposal of the Departments of Agriculture and Health for the purpose were very limited. The magnificent woods which had adorned the hills and plains for centuries, were slowly but steadily and ruthlessly cut down by the Turkish authorities and by ignorant peasants who were nothing loath to follow the example of officialdom. The government has planted considerable areas with trees, of which over two millions are now growing.

We have mentioned all this, not to supplement the information supplied by the secretariat in its very clear and concise statement, but simply to point out that our assets must be measured not only by the actual market value of the works and stores acquired by the government, but by the benefit that the population derives from these improvements. A network of railways, telephones, or roads means much more than hundreds of thousands of pounds. They give Palestine the possibility to develop economically on modern western lines. Forests and drainage systems represent more to us than the value of trees and pipings. They mean purer air and improved health. Loans to agriculturists mean more than so many pounds to the government's credit; they indicate the possibility of more intensive cultivation and of putting new areas under cultivation. The liabilities need not worry us to any extent; compared with any other country of the same size, they are insignificant. And with all this we should bear in mind that Palestine's riches are yet lying practically unexplored. Palestine would not mind incurring further liabilities if the riches of Palestine could therefore be brought to light and added to its assets.

HONOLULU, HAWAII, February 13.—To President Frederick M. Smith: Just a line or two to let you know how much we have enjoyed the visit of Apostle M. A. McConley and how much we have benefited by his good work. He leaves on Saturday, February 16, for New Zealand. Sister McConley will be a great help to the work in many ways, as she fits in nicely in so many departments.

You will be pleased also to hear that Elder D. J. Williams and his wife have made a splendid impression on the Saints here. I must say that I myself am very much pleased with them. The Hilo Branch is fortunate in having a brother and sister of their character to care for it. I hope you will be able to send us, sometime in the near future, some one of the same type to take care of the work of the Honolulu Branch.

Brother and Sister Williams are splendid, lovable people, and I am sure that I shall be able to work very agreeably, and I trust successfully, with them.

G. J. WALLER.

Economic Aspect of Zion

Sermon by President Frederick M. Smith at the problem meeting, Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, March 2, 1924.

I wish this afternoon to attempt to speak to you on some of the temporal problems. I know there are some who can divide the problems of the church into temporal and spiritual, and they would have certain of us individuals confine ourselves to the spiritual and not touch the temporal. There are others whom they would have confine themselves to the temporal and have nothing to do with the spiritual. So far as I am personally concerned, as I understand the spirit and the import of the work of this church, you cannot divide the temporal from the spiritual, because they both interact. I will go a little farther than that and say this, that if I understand the work of the church and its philosophy, one of the chief distinctions between us and the other churches is that we attempt to enhance our spirituality by spiritualizing our temporal affairs. I wish you would catch the import of that. Think it over. You will find that it will give you a starting point for a very long and pleasurable train of thought.

Spiritualizing Temporal Affairs

One of the chief functions of this church is to spiritualize our everyday affairs. The reason that I am speaking just a moment, before entering upon the presentation of some of the problems of Zion, of the necessity for spiritualization is that I want to remove the possibility of my being accused of not being spiritual because I fail to mention spirituality in presenting some of the very practical and everyday things in the development of Zion. So if I shall present some almost sordid aspects of the temporal affairs or our economic or industrial activities, do not for a moment forget that I have great respect for the work of the church in developing spirituality.

Let me repeat what I have said before, the prime work of this church is to develop spirituality and to preserve and enhance it in every form, and for that very reason we are bound to make efforts, and we hope eventually successful efforts, to bring Christianity to bear upon our everyday affairs and particularly our industrial and economic affairs, until eventually we shall not have the dividing line between temporal and spiritual because we will recognize that the one supports the other, that they are simply different aspects of life. Remember, Jesus said, "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly." And that abundant life will not come until we have permeated society and industries with the ideals of Christianity.

Problems of Zion

I mentioned life. For the purposes of the hour, life, I think, can be said to be divided into three great periods or activities. Chronologically perhaps two of them can be said to be identical, but for our purposes to-day we will divide life into three classifications: First, the period of preparation; second, the period of work or contribution; and third, the period of recreation; and these two last, according to my understanding, as I said a while ago, run strongly parallel or function simultaneously. The problems of Zion can be roughly classified under these three heads, and for the purpose of the afternoon I shall glance rather hurriedly at and try to discover what are some of our duties in regard to each of these.

Period of Preparation

The period of preparation primarily concerns itself with the period of childhood and the period of growth and learning. And it is almost impossible to say when that period of growth and learning is completed. As a matter of fact, growing should be an activity or something which enters into our life until the processes of involution have begun, and even after that we can grow in a certain sense, for certainly we have many manifestations before us in the examples and in the lives of some of our splendid aged people that spirituality never ceases to grow, and even intellectuality grows long after the body has entered this period of involution. And this spirituality is what makes ripe old age so beautiful.

The period of adolescence might be termed (of course I want you to remember the classification I am attempting this afternoon is very rough) the finishing of preparation and growth and the beginning of work. The period of work, then, might be called that period in a person's life in which he makes his contribution to the welfare of society; and this period envisaged by those who look upon the individual as the unit would be that period in which the individual makes preparation to live in idleness or ease or to remove at least from the distress and fear of dependency, in other words that period when he makes his fortune. Personally I cannot look upon this as being idealistic. And yet those who say that money is the acid test have that envisagement of the work period just as I have stated.

Period of Contribution

I would say that the period of work is that period which is granted of the Lord for an individual to make his contribution to the welfare of society and to do something for the other fellow, and the success of his work, the amount of his contribution will depend upon two things primarily: first, the completeness of his preparation and his growth; and second, the application of his energies to that which he is best qualified to do. And one of the problems of Zion is just that, to determine whether or not an individual is attempting to function in the line for which he is best qualified. This classification of life means that the prime or the important period of a person's life is the work period, and I feel that is not at all out of consonance with our own scriptures which say that every individual is expected to be a workman: "The idler shall not eat the bread nor wear the garment of the laborer." (I am not attempting to draw the line here on sex, speaking generically)—workmen all for the good of society. And this envisagement of it will give life and goal to that experience that is so frequently used and yet altogether too narrowly used: "Workmen together with God." For what? For ourselves? For the other fellow was the import of the message Jesus brought to us.

Labor Not Degrading

Labor is not degrading. As a matter of fact, it is the opposite of that if properly understood. The difficulty of course has been that looked upon from the standpoint of individual success as measured by the accumulation of wealth, the man who has either been content to labor with his hands or else has had no opportunity or desire to amass a fortune to care for the last years of his life usually becomes a burden on society, and labor has come to be looked upon as more or less degrading. I once heard a man in this town (I am glad he was not a member of the church) say that at one time he learned a trade, and after he had learned his trade he was boasting about it. He said, "I am glad to know that I have learned a trade, because no matter what happens to me I can always work at my trade and make a living." A banker who heard him said, "In these days you don't need a trade. All you need is brains." The man took this statement at its face value, and he told me later, "I have not worked a day since. I have lived on my brains."

Sometimes the hardest work in the world is that work which is done with the brain. If that banker who made that statement to the young man had analyzed his own thoughts and had spoken them to the young man, this is what he would have said, "If you are sharp enough and keen enough to do the right kind of grafting, you can get more than your share if you use your brains." Brains plus graft is what he meant, but what he did not say. I hope as Latter Day Saints we will recognize the plausibility that every man must be a laborer for the benefit of the church. If any of you people think that digging post holes for a transcontinental telephone line is harder than the work done by the president of the church, I will gladly change with you any time you can get the people to assent to such a change. I know which is easier; I have done both.

Qualification for Work

There is an additional thought not always manifest. While it is true that every man is expected to be a laboring man, there is another concomitant that should always be present in the minds of Latter Day Saints, and unless we can envisage this aspect of it we fail to comprehend the great and glorious social philosophy of this organization. That thought is that Zion can never be redeemed and will never put on its beautiful garments and shine as a social testimony to the world of the efficacy of the religion of Jesus Christ until we can know of a surety that every man is working in that place in which he is best qualified to work and where he can make the greatest and best contribution to the welfare of society. In other words, in the three periods of life or the three manifestations of life—preparation, work, and recreation—there must be a consonance running through the whole; and from the time a person starts his intellectual growth as a child and continues through the adolescent period and to the adult period, there must be this idea held to the fore: "What is it that the Lord needs me to do above all else? For he wants me to do that for which I am best qualified, and he has given me certain endowments, natural it is true, and perhaps even latent, which it is my task to discover and develop." I know that is a good deal to put into the mind of the child, but if the child cannot say it, society should be so organized that it can say it for the child and say to it, "Here is the vocation in which you are best qualified to work. Therefore, we will put you through the right process of development." And if early in the life of the child this ideal is given him, and he is trained in that field in which he is best qualified to make his best contribution to society, then there should be provision made in our social order for the education of that child to be so broad that eventually he will come in contact with the thing in which he is most interested, and with which he can make his greatest contribution, for that is but another way to say what I have said before to you a number of times in the past.

The Application

Now the application of it. What are you doing? Are you a workman? Are you contributing to the welfare of society, or are you a leech? I know that some people look upon preachers as leeches, living off the blood of society, and yet of course that is a narrow vision of it, because if preachers are functioning as they should there is a stimulation which comes from their work that enables others to do better work. More than that, if this church is what we claim it to be, then it is true there is a certain social reason for preaching, and there is, for we know that there is an inward feeling after God that is present in the soul of every individual. And if our theory is correct in regard to our own social philosophy, then it will make better workmen and better students of those who give compliance to it.

Let me repeat, then, What are you doing? What is your job? What is the best that you can do? I will put it a little more in harmony with the spirit of the age and say, Is it the job that pays you the best? I say that because I would like to have you answer what is your contribution to society. If you are not doing the thing that pays you the best, you are not fulfilling your duty to society. Are you giving your best to your job? I imagine you say, "How does that happen to come in a church service?" I will put it in a very broad sort of way. I know a certain bishop in this church who in his work is constantly asking the people about their jobs, asking them if they are satisfied with them, asking them if they think they could hold a better job, and, if they think they could, he begins to look for better jobs for them. If he finds a stenographer who is doing well where she is but there is still a better job that will pay more money and give larger opportunities, he helps this stenographer to make the change. He does not say, "Now I want a percentage of your increase," but he quietly says, "If I have helped that one to earn five dollars more a week I have increased the income of this church fifty cents per week." Furthermore it increases the self-respect of the individual.

There is the application of what I was asking you. Are you doing your best at your job? Are you capable of holding a bigger job, and, if you are, why aren't you looking for a bigger job? Why isn't the church helping you to get a bigger job? And in saying that I am putting up to you a very practical problem of Zion.

Aiding the Other Fellow

Now that I have got you to thinking about your own selves, and I hope I have, I am going to ask you this: If you are satisfied with your job and are drawing the biggest salary you are capable of drawing, are you concerned about the other fellow? If to-morrow morning's train brings to Independence a family of Latter Day Saints and in that family of Latter Day Saints is a person who can hold your job down better than you can do it, are you ready to give it to him? That gets pretty close home, doesn't it? And yet isn't that a part of your job as a member of this church, if you are satisfied that some one else can do it better than you can do it?

I have got at this backward, but I am putting to you a very practical problem, and that is this: There are people who are coming to Zion every day; there are hundreds who are getting ready to come to-morrow, and thousands who will be here next month, next year. What are they coming for? Are they coming to help you or to have you help them? What are they going to do when they get here? What is there to do when they get here? What are they going to do for a living when they get here, and how are we going to help them do it? What are the industries of Independence and Kansas City, and what wages do they pay? Why, naturally whenever we think of work we think of wages. You wonder when you come, What are the industries of Kansas City and the regions round about that will permit me to go to work?

Industries of Zion

Let me put some questions to you that have a very practical application and that must be answered from this church sooner or later. What are the industries in Zion? And of the industries in Zion and the regions round about, how many are controlled by us? And the profits of the industries in Zion and the regions round about, into whose bank account are they going, Latter Day Saints' or others'? If you will stop some morning in your journey to Kansas City and return in the evening and count the number of our people who are daily going into Kansas City and count the number who are daily coming back, and figure up ten cents fare each way you will see how much our people are spending each day for transportation. What for? To have other people make profits that are not coming to us at all. They go to places where people are learning to put our people, because of their frugality and integrity and their honesty, in positions of great trust, even in preference to other people. Why? Because they can make more profit out of the labor of those persons.

Consecration of Surplus

Surplus should be consecrated to the service of the Lord, and while we are helping men of the world build up their surplus we know that surplus is going to be used in idleness and to promote those things that are not of particular interest to us.

What are the industries of Zion that are needed? Whose are they? Where are they? When are they? These are questions that we should be thinking about. Let us take the question of raw material. Are the people of this church furnishing raw material for industries from which other people are making profits? I can give you a very practical illustration along this line. Let us take a very common illustration. Take the question of the middle man. Are the hens of the Saints in Holden Stake serving the Lord? Of course some of us ministers get a few eggs to eat, and in that way perhaps the hens are doing that. The difference in the price paid to the farmers who have the chickens in Holden Stake and the price you pay when the eggs come on your table represents profits to somebody—profits to the middle man, who stands between the farmer of the Holden Stake and the consumer of Independence or Kansas City. There is the dealer in Holden, the wholesale dealer in Kansas City or sometimes the jobber, transportation from Holden to Kansas City and from Kansas City over to Independence, and there is the profit to the retail grocery man and finally they reach your table, and the people in Holden have not got very much for the eggs. We would not care how many middle men there are between the farmer and consumer, if we knew that the excess profits or the surplus in each one of those instances was coming back to the church, would we? As long as they are not, what are we going to do about it?

The Curtains of Zion

There are some other problems. One of them is this: We talk about Zion and the curtains of Zion. What are the curtains of Zion? They are the supports to the center place. Do you imagine that our superstructure is going to be complete if part of the curtains of Zion, so far as the principle is concerned, are in the hands of people not members of the church? and do you imagine that religiously we can be self-contained and have the curtains of Zion supporting the center place and not be organized industrially and economically so that the curtains of Zion will be supporting Zion? Let us suppose the people of the Far West Stake raise sheep. They take their wool clip in the spring and send it in to some warehouse man in the city. He sells it to the spinner and ships it to the East, and the spinner makes a profit and sells it to the man who weaves it, and finally after some months or years it comes back to us and we pay the freight on it from Saint Joseph to Kansas City, on to the East and around the East and then back here. When it comes back to us as cloth it is made up into clothing. It is also true of cotton. If we are raising cotton in Oklahoma the process is practically the same. I would not care how many middle men it took to do this if all the profits that came from this circle of middle men were being used for the service of the church.

What does this all mean? That we function as producers a great deal and that all of us are functioning as consumers and will keep right on functioning as consumers, but somehow, somewhere this question of the middle man should be settled so that we will get the profits. In other words, let me put it a little more practically. Is it not possible? More than that, should it not be done? I will put it a little stronger yet, How much longer are we going to live in Independence with our producers in the outlying districts and let them sell their products to the middle men who are not members of the church, when we could just as well be functioning and keep those profits ourselves? How long before we can supply the manufactured needs of the curtains of Zion and keep those profits within ourselves?

What of the Middle Man?

Students of society are indicating that we are rapidly entering a period where we have altogether too many middle men, hence we see manufacturers who are attempting to sell direct to the consumer. You do not know anything about the intrigues of combinations formed against them. And while I know what should be done I am almost somewhat conscious of the work it is going to take to accomplish this. We had in Independence a few years ago an association of retail grocers. When in the early days of the Sanitarium we tried to reduce the expenses of the Sanitarium and went to the wholesale house in Kansas City and bought our supplies direct, it was not long until we were visited by a representative of the wholesale house who said that he had been visited by a committee from the retailers of Independence who said they would stop buying from the wholesale house if they did not stop supplying us with groceries, and one member of that committee was a Latter Day Saint. That is how much social spirit there was among the grocers of Independence at that time. That was an indication of some of the problems that we will have to meet. Are we going to submit to it? I was ready to fight that thing, but some others on the board were not. I know what we will be up against, but I think the time is here, if not now then shortly, when we must be self-contained; and between the consumer and producer there must be, where necessary, a chain of middle men that will keep our profits serving the Lord. That might not be religious in the opinion of some, but I think it is highly within the prerogative of the church if Zion is to be organized as it should be.

Place of Employment Bureau

In the meantime, or between now and then, what are we going to do? Take this question of your job. Are you working at a job where you get a maximum of wages? If not, how are we going to help you get something better? And there comes one of the problems, practical in its aspect and yet entirely workable, that I have been trying and hoping to get into effect from the first day I came to Zion. The problem is still here, and yet to-day in Zion, the center of the church, we do not have an employment bureau under the auspices of the church. Whose fault is it and how long are we going to be without it?—an employment bureau with exactly the purpose in view of seeing to it that our people are enjoying the best jobs they are capable of holding. And when we find a person who is not holding a job he is capable of holding, then get out and find him a better job. Don't you recognize the importance of being in touch with the situation so that we can immediately put these people in touch with the people who are needing that kind of help? Do you want the pastors of Zion to look after these people in the employment bureau? I should say while it is not a direct function of the pastor's office it is of sufficient importance to the church that the pastors are greatly concerned in seeing that such is done. How are we going to get it, I wonder? Is it practical? It comes right back to the question, Is the church interested in your job? It is, and I do not know but that it is time that the officers of the church are asking what I am asking now. It is time we are asking what you do with your money, because if you are spending money that is in the nature of surplus, you are spending money that belongs to the church just as much as we are when we spend our allowances. It is right if there is anything in our philosophy, and if there is nothing in our philosophy we had better be finding it out.

Standard of Efficiency

This is a very bread-and-butter view of things isn't it, and yet isn't it a factor in church work? One of the greatest problems that concerns the church to-day is this question of relation of wages and the laboring man to the church. There is much being written and spoken on this subject to-day, and I have not to go far into literature to discover this astounding fact that a large percentage of the laboring men of this country are living below a standard of living that places their efficiency as laboring men too low. More than that there is a large percentage of laboring men in this country who actually live below the poverty line, and any man who says the church is not interested in that question is belying the nature of the Christian religion, and any man who fears to stand up in his pulpit and denounce conditions that cause our laboring men to continually live below the line of poverty is not the man who should stand to represent Christ.

If any church on the face of the earth ought to be interested in the question of wages, ought to be interested in the question of bread and butter, it is this church; and if we fail to move out and occupy and if we fail to organize in such a way that we will take care of these practical problems, then we will come short of doing our duty and we will be worthy of rebukes that are coming as one came this morning.

Duty of the Church

So far as I am concerned, as leader of this church I shall continue to cry out for the church to move forward and enter upon these practical problems, and if the church fails to do it it will be because they are listening to those who are trying to slack the progress of the church and are not listening to those who are speaking in the name of the Lord. Fear has always been a deterrent of right living. Fear has always been an incentive to those who would see beyond this vale. I say that the Christian religion, so far as its success and ultimate work is concerned, will not be complete until there is such a demonstration of the social philosophy of Jesus Christ that fear of dependency, fear of decrepit old age, fear of becoming incapacitated by disease has been removed by such an organization of society based on the Christian religion that every man will feel that every other man is his brother. That is the mission of this church. Will it accomplish it?

The Aim of Religion

Sermon by Albert Carmichael at the Young People's Convention, Lamoni, Iowa, June 13, 1923.

There are many religions. Any system of worship is called a religion. We no doubt have the right to presume that the "religion" meant in this caption is that of the true God, the one he sent his Son with and commissioned him to publish or teach to the human family.

What is the aim of the religion given to us by God? Paul puts it like this:

Then cometh the end, when he [Christ] shall deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have abolished all rule and all authority and all power. For he must reign, till he hath put all his enemies under his feet. —1 Corinthians 15: 24, 25.

The aim, then, is the redemption, the saving of those who will to be saved, and the handing of this perfected piece of work over to God. To do this, Christ must for a time have the power and actually use it in his work of putting down all rulers not of him, all authority not of him, and all powers not of him. This period when Christ shall so reign is known, in biblical terms, as the millennium.

This is the aim of Christ. It must be our aim. That was and is his goal. It must be our goal. The idea may seem very Utopian but nevertheless it is a verity. Its accomplishment may appear to be very far in the distant future, but "The vision is yet for an appointed time, but in the end it shall speak, and not lie; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

There must be a preliminary work done before the ushering in of the millennium, and in that work we are concerned as to what is our part. This brings us down to present-day activities, to things we must now do to help usher in this wonderful period surcharged with activity. While we may fully believe in the final triumph of the Christ mission, the thing that should engage our attention is to help put into operation those things which will bring our Zion, over which the Master of men shall reign in person as Lord of lords and King of kings.

Purpose of the Convention

We are sure that it gives us much pleasure to stand before an audience of this kind. We have been satisfied for a number of years that we older fellows will never redeem Zion. Brother Heman C. Smith used to say facetiously that before Zion could be redeemed there would have to be a number of first-class funerals. Young in mind, you are not crystallized spiritually. Some of us older men are. 'Tis a pity, 'tis true, but we are congealed. You can kick some of us around like a football and we will come back with the same old ideas. The primary object of this Young People's Convention is to give to you young people ideas which we hope will help you to function properly as factors in the proposition right at our door. This proposition involves some of the elements of the working out of the real aim of our religion. We older men have the conceit to think that we can put something before you, and after you have given it due consideration and complied thereto it will make a wonderful change in your life.

Two Great Sides

There are two great sides to this religion of ours, the theoretical and the practical. Naturally the practical man does not like to be bothered with theories. He wants to go. And the dreamer likes to theorize. Both classes of men are absolutely essential to the accomplishment of the work. We must theorize and we then must work out our theories. I am going to try to leave the theoretical part out to-night. I am going to try to give you some of the practical things to be realized in our religious belief. It would not be good business to spend an hour here and have you leave the tent with no better idea of what to do and how to do things needed so much to be done than when you entered.

Immediate Aim

I said this afternoon that I wanted to drive certain definite pegs; pegs that we can tie to with a certainty that they will greatly aid us in obtaining that something aimed at in our religion, and that something is character, Godlike character. Now let us determine definitely what is the immediate thing we should aim to attain. The thing lying right before us, the thing to achieve, is for us to enter into that economic condition known as stewardships. Let us make our theory a practical fact. Very briefly, then, let me recapitulate what I stated this afternoon. You want first to get this idea in mind clearly and definitely that you can be organized in group formation but before you can be so organized it is vitally necessary that you become an individual steward. I stated this afternoon that was the first step.

It is generally understood that the time has come for the gathering, and that the gathering must be done in harmony with the law. What is the law? Now listen, you that are not in stakes, so that if you go to California, Maine, Florida, or any other place you will know what is what about this matter. The time for the gathering has come, but the gathering must be accomplished in order, as the Doctrine and Covenants says; that is, it must be done in harmony with the law governing the gathering, for all things are governed by law. Without law all would be chaos.

What is the law? When you come up to Zion or any of her stakes, you must have complied with the law that entitled you to be called an individual steward. You may become a steward before you ever come to Zion. You may be a steward whether you are in Maine, Kirtland, Florida, or wherever you are. But when you turn your face Zionward, then it is required that you comply with the law governing your coming to Zion. Then you must be a steward to be in harmony with the law of the celestial kingdom.

Forming Organizations

Having obeyed the laws entitling you to become an individual steward, you may then ask, "What is the next step?" The next step that God expects of you is for you to begin to form organizations, or what we call group formations. These are organizations, associations, trust companies, partnerships, cooperations, corporations, or whatever kind of legalities you want, to associate yourselves together that you might better capitalize both your ability and capital to serve humanity. You are not ready to enter into the mass formation until you have complied with the law of individual stewardships. I hardly think you will find those on whom rests the responsibility to organize trying to get you men and women together in group stewardships until each one so desiring has complied with the law of individual stewardships.

Now, as I have said, you can comply with the law of individual stewardships in California or elsewhere, and do it now. You have the right then, let me repeat, to enter into the individual stewardship status wherever you are and any time. You have the right also to enter into the group stewardship anywhere you are and any time. Zion and her stakes have no monopoly in allowing people to enter into individual or group stewardships.

What, then, is there in Zion or in her stakes that will help you along in this idea of coordinating all of your abilities and enterprises? There must be something here in Zion or her stakes that you haven't got in California. There should be something superior in the status known as Zion, or the stakes of Zion, to that which you have in California, or any place outside of Zion or her stakes. A closer cooperation, a more compact association, is the superior thing that we should find in Zion or her stakes, a higher degree of efficiency in the mechanics of our economics, and thus resultantly greater spirituality. The society of Zion, representing as it should the highest form of complex society, must of necessity be more efficiently organized to work smoothly.

The Complexity of Zion

As stated before, the society of which Zion eventually will be composed is going to be the most complex society in the world. The society or civilization which will be represented by the highest type of Zionian ideal is going to be the most intricate of all civilizations. We never in the wide world could solve the problem without being in touch with the Infinite. When you consider that the Lord has promised that Zion, of which we hope we are a part, poor as we are, shall sometime and somewhere be independent of everything under the celestial heavens, that is, short of God and Christ, you will begin to appreciate our problem. In other words, we must solve our problems of the creation of wealth and the distribution of wealth, which includes all those things that go to make up our highly complex society of to-day. These are seething, turbulent things in the minds of the human family. These questions will have to be solved by us. In the name of God, then, don't rail against this institution over here (Graceland); rather join hands with her and polish your brains. I like Brother Joseph's attitude about that. I remember well after this college was started the attacks made on the institution. Brother Joseph said, "If in the divine economy of God, he shall see fit to choose a rough shaft, we shall bow our heads and say amen; but if in his divine economy he sees fit to choose a polished shaft, we shall bow our heads and say amen." I like that. That is charity. That is the big viewpoint. Don't you get the idea that the inspiration of God can't fire a humble man, no matter where he is, nor how ignorant he may be or how learned he may be.

In the working out of this Zionian proposition then, we must go at this thing in a way that will cause us to use every ounce of intelligence that God can bestow upon us, and we must be constantly in touch with God. The problem is far too difficult for us to solve without the aid of the spirit of revelation. Added to our best efforts must come the revealments of God to us. Especially now, that we are living in the hastening dispensation, we must depend on divine guidance to lead us on. Let us never forget this.

Group Stewardships in Lamoni

I would like to present to you some of the things Lamoni Stake has done by way of group stewardships. In undertaking this, we found that our difficulty was of two kinds: first, to establish these groups as governed by the laws of the church, and second, to organize them so as to conform to the laws of our State. Any group organization is carefully guarded by the statutes of the State. This is as it should be. People investing their means in an organization must necessarily trust the integrity of those managing the organizations, so the State wisely throws around the investment every legal safeguard possible.

The question as to what would constitute the proper legal form under which to organize bothered us for quite a while. When it dawned upon us that the kind of legal form of administering the business was of minor importance, that the real essence of the stewardship idea was the right attitude of the mind of the steward, we had no difficulty. All we had to be careful about was to be sure to follow the statutes of the State governing that particular legal form adopted by us in our organization. To make ourself clearer, let us state it in a different way. For quite a while some of us who were interested in completing the group organization contemplated in the law of God, had different views as to the proper legal dress with which to adorn our organization. Some thought it must be a cooperation; others thought it should be an old-fashioned corporation. Again, others thought it should be a trust company, and still others a joint stock company, etc.

We can learn from the valuable experiences of others who have worked on similar problems. We call to memory a Professor Powell of California. This gentleman put the State of California on the map, as far as successful cooperative societies are concerned. Professor Powell, in his analysis of the things requisite to make any group organization successful, stated that experience had taught that three things are absolutely essential to insure success and stated them as follows:

First, loyalty.

Second, fit the legal form or dress to the business and not the business to the legal form. The business is the important thing; the legal form is of minor importance.

Third, efficient managers.

With these fundamental rules for a successful growth, we proceeded to develop the group stewardship in the Lamoni Stake. We agreed to get together and work together, using that legal pact which would develop our business the best, knowing that if each individual composing the group organization would have the right attitude of mind and annually comply with the law governing the individual steward, that is, (1) filing his inventory, (2) paying his tithe if any, (3) paying his surplus if any, and (4) every year repeating this, that this would bring Zion. You remember just why the Lord called it Zion? Because her inhabitants

First, dwelt in righteousness (the gospel).

Second, there were no poor among them (equality).

Third, they were of one heart and one mind (unity).

Preamble of an Organization of Stewards

That you might know the attitude of the minds of those who entered into these groups or organizations, we herewith read to you the preamble of one of them. This will give you a correct idea as to the motive—not for self, but for our fellow man—not so much to get as to give.

Whereas, the chief object of religion is character formation and the inculcation of righteousness, and

Whereas, we believe that religious motivations and incentives can be carried into business, and

Whereas, it is the desire of the stockholders of the.....
.....to conduct its affairs so as to make a practical demonstration of Christian Stewardship,

Now therefore we, the undersigned, formulate and subscribe to the following principles and by-laws for the direction and transaction of the business of said company.

In entering into this organization, we do so fully cognizant (a) that we are stewards of God; (b) that this responsibility placed upon us both individually and collectively must be accounted for both in time and in eternity; (c) that our business relationship in this organization shall be governed by the law of stewardships as interpreted by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The object of this stewardship is to create, so far as possible, social, industrial, and property equality by a just and wise arrangement for (a) the proper creation of wealth, and (b) the proper distribution thereof.

There then follows in the by-laws of this group specific information as to the manner of compliance with the law of stewardships.

Another one of our group activities is that known as the Lamoni Electric Company. This organization (a corporation) is being held as stated in the following section, quoted from the by-laws of this corporation:

All stock in this company shall be held in accordance with

CHURCH NEWS

Baptisms Result From Meetings at Lamar

WILEY, COLORADO, February 21.—Brother Bruce Brown, the new district president, made the branch a visit about a month ago, which was enjoyed by all. Then Brother J. D. Curtis came just as Brother Brown was leaving and has been holding meetings at Lycan and at Lamar since then. No baptisms were reported from Lycan, but on February 10 six new members were added to the numbers at Lamar. The meetings continue with good interest.

A basket dinner was enjoyed at the Wiley church, where the baptismal service was performed.

Temple Builders

The girls of Wiley have organized a Temple Builder Chapter known as "The Puritan Maidens," and their motto is, "The girls who can be depended upon." They have several plans in mind for the good of the branch. On February 14, they gave a nice little valentine program and box supper which was evidently appreciated by all and which netted the girls $35. About one third of this was given as a surprise to the missionary who was here. The Saints from Lamar gave their loyal support by coming out after the church services to enjoy the box supper.

Need for Pastor

A plan is on foot by which perhaps a pastor can be put in charge of the Wiley, Lamar, Lycan, and Utleyville Saints which would be a great help to all. These points are somewhat scattered, but they all need some systematic aid, and one man for all four would be much better than none most of the time. The Lamar Saints are contemplating a church building of some kind, but have not made any definite arrangements as yet.

Altogether it seems that the work is picking up in this locality, for which the branch is thankful. Things have been rather at a standstill for the past two years, so the Saints grow very discouraged at times.

Effort is being made to impress upon the Saints the importance of taking the church papers.

Farewell Party Given for Departing Friends

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND, February 22.—Another valuable man leaves the Providence Branch. Brother Hildred Grange goes to the Artloom Rug Factory in Philadelphia, and ultimately to Zion. So on Monday, February 11, a large party of Saints gathered in the lower auditorium of the church to bid farewell to him and his family.

Evelyn Joy the room had been converted into a very pretty salon. The affair opened with song and prayer followed by a short musical program: soprano solo, Mrs. Cora Brown; piano duet, Mrs. Laura Brown and Clarence Streeter; soprano solo, Miss Marian Calvert; duet, Paul Haynes and John Jackson; piano solo, Mrs. Laura Brown; monologue, Edmund M. Brown; solo, Master Malcolm Spinet. Brother Brown's keen wit brought out many eccentricities of the various members of the branch, much to the amusement of all.

Brother Grange was presented with a beautiful banjo clock, a gift from the members of the branch. The presentation was made by Patriarch J. D. Suttill. To this Brother Grange responded very feelingly. Providence regrets to see their fellow members leave them, but are happy in the thought that the family is capable and willing to serve God and his church.

New Pastor

The new pastor, Elder T. J. Elliott, has arrived and occupied both morning and evening hours on February 10. Brother Elliott is an able leader and an inspiration for greater activities among the willing workers.

James R. Houghton paid this branch a visit on February 17. He occupied the morning hour, giving the Saints a very inspiring talk as usual. Brother Houghton holds the office of priest and is the district chorister.

A bean supper and social was held recently under the auspices of the ladies' aid. A net profit of over $60 was realized, notwithstanding the supper tickets sold at the very nominal price of twenty-five cents.

Brother Daniel F. Joy, who has been suffering with asthma and bronchitis, is on the road to recovery. Brother Joy was recently elected superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression. He also teaches the men's Bible class of the Sunday school.

The periscope shows greater activities ahead in the Providence Branch and the HERALD readers may look for news more regularly.

Bad Roads Affect Church Attendance

WESTON, IOWA, February 20.—The attendance has been very small for some time in Boomer, only a few faithful ones braving the very bad roads, which this part of the country is experiencing. All look forward to better meetings as soon as the spring opens up.

The new officers of the Grandview Sunday school are all chosen now and are busy with the work assigned them. It has two senior classes, one intermediate, one junior, and one beginner this year. The total enrollment is forty-seven.

THE AIM OF RELIGION

the law of stewardships as set forth in the law relating to temporalities of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each stockholder shall hold his stock in trust as such steward.

Accordingly this group business venture, The Lamoni Electric Company, has been for several years, and is now being managed and controlled entirely in the interest of the group, the church. If this can be done in Lamoni, why not in other places?

Patriarch U. W. Greene Commences Meetings at Moorhead

MOORHEAD, IOWA, February 26.—Patriarch U. W. Greene arrived yesterday from Pisgah where he has been holding services. He commenced meetings here last evening. It is a pleasure to have Brother Greene here, and as this is a new field for him to labor in it is hoped he will be pleased with the acquaintances which he makes with the Saints and friends and his efforts will be crowned with success.

There will be no services for this and to-morrow evenings so as not to interfere with the lyceum course which is being furnished by the school this year. The meetings will be continued on Thursday evening.

Death of Joseph Cannon

Moorhead Saints were saddened by the sudden death of Brother Joseph Cannon on February 10. He, accompanied by his wife, had just recently gone from their home here to spend the remainder of the winter with their daughter, Sister Fred Stephens, of Sioux City, Iowa. "Uncle Joe" was one of those who joined the church during the time when Brother Daniel Macgregor was holding meetings here, and he remained faithful to the end. A large number of Moorhead people attended his funeral at Sioux City on February 12.

Member Moves to Pisgah

Brother Irvin Clark and family are moving to a farm near Pisgah, Iowa, having traded the farm here for the one to which they are moving. Moorhead will certainly miss them at the services, since they lost no opportunities to be present and helpful. Brother Clark is a grandson of the aged Brother J. C. Crabb. It will not be a surprise to see Brother Clark step into the field some day in more active service in the church.

District President in Ill Health

In a recent letter from Brother Joseph Lane, the district president, it is learned that he is not in very good health and is deprived of doing the work for the church which he has been so energetically performing, but the Saints hope and pray that when the weather shall moderate and spring return that Brother Lane will be able to take his place again. At present he is with his children in Lamoni.

The weather has been quite stormy during the last month which has hindered some from attending the services. As a whole, however, the Moorhead Branch is moving along about as usual.

Chatham Sunday School Wins Debate

CHATHAM, ONTARIO, February 5.—A challenge to debate any school in the district was received from the Kimball Sunday school, early in December. The subject, time, and place were to be left in the hands of the district Sunday school superintendent.

The Chatham Sunday school accepted the challenge, and the battle was waged on Friday evening, January 25. The subject chosen by the district superintendent was, "Resolved that the world has grown better in the last one hundred years." Chatham affirmed and Kimball denied. Each speaker had ten minutes in which to submit his arguments. At the close of the debate the judges gave the decision to the Chatham team.

The meeting was educational, and all present thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The proceeds were to go to the Wallaceburg church, and $17 was the sum of the collection. This was considered a splendid amount since there was no admission charge, just a silver collection at the door.

Mock Trial Held

A mock trial is to be held by the Department of Recreation and Expression on Friday evening of February 7. This trial is to be made as nearly as possible an exact duplicate of a trial held in the courts of the land. An enjoyable and educational evening is anticipated.

The Department of Women was recently called together by the branch president, and a complete reorganization was effected. This meeting was very successful, and the department is away to a good start with a full set of officers. All departments are becoming actively engaged in the work.

The sacramental service at 9.30 Sunday was well attended with a good feeling present. God is with us here, and the branch will move steadily upward.

Much sickness has been prevalent among the Saints of late. Some have recovered, some slowly recovering, and others are still seriously sick. They desire the prayers of the Saints throughout the church.

Carsonville Saints Go Over Top With Christmas Offering

CARSONVILLE, MICHIGAN, February 20.—This branch is small in membership, there being only thirty-three, but it is large spiritually and the work of the Master is moving along nicely. The Lord blesses the Saints in their labors. Although the weather is cold and stormy the Saints keep up the services.

The Sunday school is small, but it set a goal last year of $100 for Christmas offering, and went over the top with $35.50 more. This year the aim is $150. This is where both old and young can help in a fair cause and it is hoped that the school can go over the top again.

Brethren J. E. Davis and J. J. Leekworth preside here. Brother Leekworth is the branch president and truly he is a man of God, humble and full of love for his fellow men.

Novel Plan Devised for Raising Building Fund

BURLINGTON, IOWA, February 21.—At the first business session of the Department of Women for this year, it was voted that this department finance $1,500 for the building funds at the end of this year. A committee of three has been appointed for each month in the year to plan and direct ways of entertainments and recreation. The proceeds will go to the building fund.

Those in charge for the month of January were Sister Lulu Rayer, who is president of the Department of Women, Sister Louisa Bauer, and Sister Ernest Wilkie. By their splendid service and cooperation of the Department of Women the sum of $127 was raised.

The committee for February has been equally busy and will be able to raise that amount or more. There has been a minimum amount of $25 set for each committee, but there is no maximum amount set, for the slogan is, "Do your best."

Valentine Supper

A valentine box supper was given at the home of the pastor, G. S. Daniel. The home was beautifully decorated in hearts and valentine sentiments. A large crowd was present and all enjoyed a very pleasant evening. The sum of $24.50 was turned in. The committee in charge of this was Sister E. F. Kunz, Sister J. J. Jenkins, and Sister H. N. Snively.

Word has been received from Brother and Sister D. J. Williams of their safe arrival in Honolulu, although fourteen hours late. They were welcomed by the Saints of that place in the usual way, with wreaths of flowers placed about their necks. They enjoyed a very pleasant meeting the next day, which was Sunday.

Sacramental Service

The sacramental services of February 3 were well attended and the Spirit was present in power. Several of the members were spoken to through the Spirit and encouraged to continue the efforts they had put forth, for it was pleasing in the sight of God. More blessings were promised to be added unto them.

A sermon to the children was preached on February 17 by Elder G. Scott Daniel. It was enjoyed by both young and old. A junior choir, formed by Sister G. S. Daniel and under her direction, rendered a special number befitting the occasion. The weather conditions were at the worst; all of Burlington was covered with ice, which prevented many from attending.

Missionary Welcomed to Lincoln, Nebraska

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, February 10.—Gomer R. Wells, the long-looked-for missionary of this district, came to Lincoln recently and gave the Saints a good talk. While many had never seen him before, yet the congregation easily recognized him as he came into the church.

Sister Pearl Scofield has gone to California for an extended visit with her daughter, Sister Mansfield, who lives in Pasadena. She was accompanied by her husband, who will stay but a short time.

Sister Blanche I. Andrews is also visiting in California. She is with her daughter, Bertha Hart, in Riverside.

Sister A. S. Woodard, also a member of the Lincoln Branch, is living now in Los Angeles. These Lincoln Saints in California will appreciate having members of the church call upon them. Any doing so will receive a hearty welcome.

So much has been heard about the good sermons broadcast from Independence that one of the brothers who has a radio set placed it in the church here so the Saints could hear some of the good things, too. It has been hard to get K F I X here in Lincoln. However, to the delight of all, it came in at last. The district conference is expected here in a short time, and it is hoped that some good may be caught out of the air for that occasion.

Revival Meetings Held at Tulare

TULARE, CALIFORNIA, February 13.—A series of revival meetings was presided over by Apostles Roy S. Budd and Daniel T. Williams from January 13 to 16. Apostle Williams delivered a wonderful discourse to the young people on January 15. On January 17 George H. Wixom, missionary for the Northern California District, came and continued the meetings the rest of the week and over Sunday. The house was well filled each evening. A large number of nonmembers attended. The lectures were greatly appreciated by all.

The district conference convened at Sacramento February 1 to 3. Eleven members from here attended. A very good Spirit prevailed throughout the conference. Brother James A. Damron was ordained to the office of priest. Apostles Daniel T. Williams and Roy S. Budd officiated in the ordination.

A number of Saints from Dinuba visited the Department of Recreation and Expression here Sunday evening, February 10. Robert Hurley, priest, delivered a fine sermon. A large number of nonmembers were in attendance.

Young People's Meetings at Colorado Springs Close With Splendid Interest

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO, February 22.—Brother John F. Garver, preaching every night to crowds which taxed the capacity of the church, has had an average attendance of seventy, with about half that number young people.

The brother preached on different phases of the gospel. In the series of twelve evenings he took up the evaluation of the gospel, the purpose of the gospel, the principles of the gospel, the gifts of the gospel, the instruments of the gospel, the gospel relation, the power of the gospel, the gospel attitude, the gospel lost, the gospel found, the gospel invitation, and the gospel promise.

Each night the subject dove-tailed with the subject of the preceding night, and only those who have heard Brother Garver can appreciate his presentation of the gospel. It is indeed a pleasure to have so able a speaker as this apostle. It is hoped that the seed which has been planted may fall in rich ground, spring forth, and bear much fruit.

The brother presented his thoughts in such a beautiful manner that the crowd seemed to sway with each sentence. If many such meetings could only be had, more people might be privileged to hear this beautiful message and come to obey the same.

The meetings ended with no baptisms as yet, but a few are ready to follow the standard. May God bless the efforts put forth here and elsewhere, and may each examine himself and make it possible for God's Spirit to work within him and thus hasten the cause.

Missionary Leaves Salt Lake for Holland

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, February 12.—Elder John Eggen has left Salt Lake City to fulfill a mission to Holland, of which country Elder Eggen is a native. For a number of years he was a member of the Utah Mormon Church, but was led with his wife to come into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Both Brother and Sister Eggen have been very useful to the branch here.

Elder R. Fulk, Guy P. Levitt, and R. E. Davey held special meetings here during the month of January. The singing was in charge of Elder Levitt, assisted by Sister Hart; Sister Davey was the pianist.

The Department of Recreation and Expression have met each Friday evening. A debate was held between the members on Friday, February 8, followed by an entertainment.

English Saints Maintain Active Interest in Departmental Work

LEICESTER, ENGLAND, February 12.—The work here is progressing under the care of Elder J. T. Norton. Regular services are held, and every effort is made to encourage the Saints in the work. The spiritual development of the branch is good, and happy memories still exist of the missionaries' visits to this part of the Lord's vineyard.

Priesthood Meetings

Meetings of the priesthood are held two nights every month for the study of the Doctrine and Covenants, and a blessing is the result of that effort.

The place of meeting is in the center of the city, convenient for all the Saints. The building does not belong to the Saints, so the finances are heavy; rent and rates must be paid regularly each month. There is a room for social activities, so that the building meets all the needs, and does not interfere with the regular services.

Departmental Work

The Department of Recreation and Expression meet every Monday evening at 8 p. m. Brother T. Newport is superintendent of this department. Everything is done to try to keep the young interested. One night in the month is for socials, a program is arranged and refreshments provided. This night is very interesting because all are able to take part. There is another night for games, which are appreciated by young and old.

The Sunday school meets at three o'clock. The first Sunday in the month is devoted to singing out of Zion's Praises. Brother Newport is also in charge of this department, and Sister Ida Norton is secretary and organist. It is only a small school, but those in charge of this work feel that much depends upon the effort in training the young and establishing the truths of the gospel in their hearts, and fitting them for higher service.

Sherrill Saints Meet Financial Obligations Successfully

SHERRILL, NEW YORK, February 27.—The branch made a payment on the principal of the church debt, caught up on the interest, voted to meet the district budget obligation as a branch, and straightened up a few other little matters. Thanks to the Department of Women is due for much of it, as well as donations from outside of Sherrill which have been mentioned previous to this.

The prospects are as good as they ever were for a successful year's work. True, there are those who are not as interested as they should be, but according to the size of the branch membership, the attendance is undoubtedly the best of any church in the place.

The pastor has been away from the city three Sundays thus far this year and Brother Rathbun has consented to fill the pulpit each time.

Election of Officers

As a result of the annual business sessions held the first of the year, the branch officers remained as they were: F. C. Mesle, pastor; Elder Floyd Rathbun, acting in capacity of priest of the branch; and Brother J. O. Montgomery, deacon and treasurer.

In the Sunday school, Brother Orville Comfort, wishing to be relieved from responsibility this year, was replaced by his younger brother Arnold. Edward Hunneyman, a young man who is a constant attendant of the Sunday school, though not a member of the church, was made secretary.

Departmental Work

The Department of Recreation and Expression is superintended by Sister Zetta Montgomery. The study hour was appointed for Sunday night at 6.30, and the Book of Mormon is being studied, assisted by quarterlies. The new program calls for the social evening once during the month on a week-day night.

The Department of Women again chose Sister Agnes Comfort as superintendent; Sister Bertha Rathbun, secretary and treasurer; and Sister Victoria Lewis, teacher. Owing to the Religio taking up the Book of Mormon, the women have changed to the study of Bible geography.

The Orioles, after several efforts, held their business session, in which Sister Effie Dunn was chosen monitor again; Dorothy Mesle, recorder; and Florence Hunneyman, treasurer. Sister Margaret Montgomery was chosen as assistant monitor by Mrs. Dunn. The girls have plans which will enable them to get to camp this summer. At least the church girls do. There are, at present, three nonmembers included in their group.

Winter is here in all her glory, but the roads were all kept open by a large truck snow plow during the worst snow-storm on record in many years.

Each Sunday School Class Contributes to Building Fund

PONTIAC, MICHIGAN, March 1.—Senior class, Number 1, of the Sunday school, on February 22, gave a box social. A total of $99.25 was collected for the purpose of helping in the completion of the church. It has been decided that each class shall do a part in raising money for this purpose. All classes of the Sunday school are now organized and in good order to work.

Department of Women Dinner

The Department of Women gave a dinner, February 28, in the church basement. The proceeds realized were about $25. On March 17, this department will give a box social, at 8 p. m. Saints of Orion, Michigan, and other near-by Saints should take notice and as many as can be present.

Word was received here of the arrival of a little daughter at the home of Brother and Sister Millard Riley, of Saint Clair, who recently moved from Pontiac. Hearty congratulations and best wishes come from the Pontiac Saints.

Those on the sick list at this place are: Sister Gladys Green; Sister De Wolf; and Sister A. Clark, who is recovering from a broken wrist sustained when falling on the icy walk Christmas eve.

This Year's Christmas Offering

This branch has already turned over $40.41 to Bishop McGuire for the Christmas offering for this year. The method of obtaining Christmas offering is to gather the regular offering from classes each Sunday, birthday offering, and special offering. The Christmas offering superintendent has devised a plan to obtain a special offering from each one on Sunday. One of the dates of the month appears in a verse written on the blackboard, and those whose birthdates appear are to give a special offering. These are some of the verses used so far this year:

"If on the first your birthdate come,
Please add some to the Christmas fund."

"The second, too, is a very good date,
For Christmas offering don't be late."

"Those whose birthdate is the third,
May give an offering to the Lord."

"The fourth of any month will do,
For birthdate and an offering, too."

"Our offering to date is $40.41, Those on the fifth may add to that sum (some)."

"Your special offering date is fixed,
For those whose birthday is the sixth."

If this plan should be of interest to any, the other verses as they appear could be sent them, as all the dates of the month are intended to be used, until 31 is reached.

San Francisco Has Lincoln Day Celebration

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, February 26.—The Sunday school celebrated Sunday, February 10, as Lincoln's Day, in memory of Abraham Lincoln. Stories and incidents connected with his life were told, and remarks concerning him were made by the pastor, John A. Saxe.

A priesthood meeting was held on February 11. A number of unordained young men of the branch were present by invitation, and much good instruction was given.

Many different missionaries have spoken here recently. H. W. Savage and William Anderson visited here on February 3. Brother Savage preached to an interested congregation.

L. B. Parish, priest, addressed the Saints recently on filing inventories, giving excellent light along that line. Cecil Hawley, Bishop's agent, spoke lately, too, on stewardships.

On last Sunday evening Elder J. D. White, president of the district, delivered an interesting discourse.

In all, this branch is doing well. The last sacramental service was peaceful, spiritual, and well attended.

Bright, sunny weather is here. Spring flowers are appearing, green grass is abundant everywhere. All nature seems joyous and the people are happy. There is no zero weather, no snowstorms, or blizzards. This is a portion of the most precious of lands.

Missionary to Denmark Delayed Because of Illness

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, February 29.—A farewell social for Elder P. T. Anderson was held February 19 at the Central Church. About one hundred fifty met for this occasion. Brother Anderson contemplated starting for his mission to Denmark on the following Saturday, but on account of affliction could not go. He is patiently awaiting relief, and is eager to be on his Father's business.

The following program was enjoyed at the farewell: Reading; short talk on missionary work and the appreciation to be shown; two musical selections by the local orchestra; piano solo, Edith Burton; violin solo, Marie Salisbury; and a short talk by Elder George Beatty. A beautiful traveling bag was presented to Brother Anderson from the branch. Brother Anderson responded with a feeling talk after which a banquet was held in the basement. Brother Anderson says that he will carry with him the good will of the Saints and it will be a strength to him. An original poem to his mission and departure was presented him from Elder J. F. Mintun.

Sister H. H. Hand was taken to the hospital for an operation recently. The Saints are praying for her speedy recovery.

Eastern Oklahoma District Conference Over

HARTSHORNE, OKLAHOMA, March 3.—Apostle E. J. Gleazer attended the Eastern Oklahoma district conference at Haileyville, and was chosen to assist Elder William Sparling in presiding.

One ordination was provided for, that of W. H. McCoy to office of priest.

Officers elected were: William Sparling, district president; Mrs. J. S. White, superintendent of Department of Women; H. E. Winegar, superintendent of Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression; Sister Eunice Cameron, organist; Mrs. J. S. White, clerk-treasurer.

The next reunion will be held July 18-27. Conference will be the last two days of reunion.

Stewardship Theme at Priesthood Meetings

BEVIER, MISSOURI, February 27.—Priesthood meetings are being held at 2.30 p. m., every Sunday afternoon, the theme being "Stewardship." All members interested are invited to attend these meetings.

The Department of Women held their monthly food exchange Saturday afternoon, February 23. Over $25 was cleared.

Sister Ethel Harris, after an extended visit with home folks at Bevier, and visiting relatives and friends at Huntsville and Jefferson City, Missouri, also at Denver, Colorado, returned to Saint Louis, Sunday, February 17. She will resume her work with a large electrical company.

Sister Ruth Perry finished her complete business course with the Chillicothe Business College and has accepted a position in the People's Bank of Bevier. Sister Perry was the valedictorian of the 1923 high school class, and was awarded a free scholarship in the above institution for making the best averages for the four-year high school course.

Sister W. B. Richards has been confined to her home with sickness for a week or so but is gradually improving.

Cottage Meetings Held at Duluth

DULUTH, MINNESOTA, March 3.—Brother W. E. Shakespeare, missionary supervisor of Minnesota and North Dakota Districts, was here the last six weeks holding cottage meetings. The meetings were also held at Two Harbors. Although there was not a large crowd, there were some nonmembers at the meetings, and the sermons strengthened the Saints who attended. It is hoped the seed of the gospel was sown and that much was accomplished for the cause.

While Brother Shakespeare was here, he with Brother W. C. Stantz, visited some of the isolated and found the missionary spirit strong with them. There is lots of work to be done in this field, so Brother Shakespeare expects to leave here soon.

Sacrament Services

Sacrament service held here March 2 was well attended, and a fine spirit prevailed. Brother Frank P. Tucker and wife, of Deer Creek, were visitors, assisting in the meeting.

Department of Women

The Department of Women meets every second Thursday in the month at the homes of the members. The attendance is good, and much work is being accomplished. They have been studying stewardships and ideals of Zion. Sister Mollie Feathers is the leader.

Book of Mormon Study at Religio

The Department of Recreation and Expression, with Sister Lottie Zuelsdorf as leader, is forging ahead. During the study hour the Book of Mormon is the subject being studied. Every second Friday, following the study period, a parliamentary drill is had. At other times a short program is given, except the last Friday evening of each month, which is turned over to a young people's prayer meeting. Meetings are held at 430 Eightieth Avenue West.

Sunday School

Sunday school is in charge of Brother A. O. Johnson and is doing well. A good attendance is obtained.

Regular Services

This is followed by regular preaching services at 11 o'clock. The meetings take place at 320 North Central Avenue. Prayer service and sacrament service are held at the same place, prayer service being on Wednesday evening. All are invited to attend meetings. Brother C. B. Freeman, 409 Atlantic Avenue, is pastor.

Series of Meetings at Brentwood Branch Having Success

BRENTWOOD, MISSOURI, March 3.—H. A. Higgins commenced a two weeks' series of meetings at Brentwood Branch on February 24. He very aptly explained the first principles during the week to a large audience, almost half of which was composed of nonmembers, whose attention was undivided.

An outstanding feature of the series is the half hour of congregational singing prior to each lecture. The old songs refresh the memory and the new songs introduce a sincere appeal to those taking part, bearing witness to the statement, "The song of the righteous is a prayer unto me."

The spirit of the gospel has been abundant thus far. The second week begins with renewed fervor to-day, after one of the most spiritual communion services in the history of the Brentwood Branch.

Evangelistic Meetings to Be Held at Moundsville, West Virginia

MOUNDSVILLE, WEST VIRGINIA, March 4.—Special services were started Monday, February 11, in the church at this place by Elder Thomas L. Clark, of Port Huron, Michigan. Brother Clark, upon arriving and finding the building too small to accommodate the public, directed his sermons to the Saints until a larger building could be procured. After almost two weeks of fruitless search, a building just vacated by another church was secured and moved into.

Brother Clark, having to return home to bring his family to the district, closed the services until his return.

The Saints at this place feel that they received much good from the sermons and are looking forward to greater things when the meetings are resumed. Several of the themes of the sermons were as follows: Religious cowards, The four-square man, Where art thou?

Recognition of the church was given through the papers which heretofore had not been privileged. A half column was given to the church each day.

Considerable advertising for the coming evangelistic meetings which will begin March 9, is being done.

On the evening of February 23, seven members of the priesthood of the branch attended the district priesthood meeting at Wheeling, West Virginia. The theme of the evening was tithing.

Bible Normal Class of Glasgow Presents Play

GLASGOW, MONTANA, March 1.—"The paper wedding," a play, was given here recently by the Bible normal class of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Mrs. Earl Wilcox, teacher of the class, was coach. About one hundred fifty people were out to see the performance. The local paper advertised the play, which aided in having a good attendance. The prejudice which met the advance of the work here is gradually being broken down.

Members of the cast were Mr. Joseph Sandige, Mrs. Earl Wilcox, Mrs. Webster Rogers, Mrs. Alma Jordan, Mrs. John Bruce, and Mrs. Olson.

News From the Omaha Branch

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, March 10.—A Valentine box social was held at the church on the evening of February 15, under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Sister Elmer Riner, wife of the local superintendent of that department, was in charge, and a pleasant, social time resulted. Quarterlies have been obtained for the use of the older members, and Brother Howard Elliott gives weekly lectures to the younger ones on the subject, "Argumentation and debate." Local talent is called upon for the programs, which add attraction to the meetings.

Music Department

The branch quartet is getting into action, meeting regularly Tuesday evening of each week at the home of Sister H. G. Fredrick who sings the soprano parts and is director. The other members are Sister Cloe Fleming and Brethren Harlow Fredrick and Harry Greenway, with Sister Charlotte McDonnell as accompanist. They appear at the forenoon services each Sunday, their work being especially good and well appreciated. They are preparing a cantata for Good Friday called "The seven last words of Christ."

The young people's choir, under the direction of Sister Ollie Derry, is making good progress in the preparation of the Easter cantata, "The risen king." They are singing anthems at the 6.30 meetings Sunday evenings also.

Programs at Sunday School

Sister Rose Adams, superintendent of Sunday school, manages to have something special for each session, using about ten minutes of the time. On February 17 Doctor Merchant's class gave a George Washington program. On the 24th Brother Norman Issott displayed a blackboard drawing of the monument made of Rock of Ages granite, which was erected by the Utah Church on the site of the birthplace of Joseph Smith, Sharon, Windsor County, Vermont. This memorial was quarried in the summer of 1905, and by almost superhuman effort the shaft was in place for the unveiling on December 23 of that year, the one hundredth anniversary of the Prophet's birth. Brother Issott explained the construction and nature of the monument, and read its description from an article which appeared in the last October issue of The Rock of Ages Magazine, a trade journal published at Montpelier, Vermont.

On March 2 Sister Adams gave one of her helpful illustrated moral lessons, showing that we must build deep and draw our spiritual strength from pure, unyielding springs which start from the rocks, rather than from shallow surface wells which are easily dried up by external influences. On the 9th a class of young girls gave a group of numbers, readings and music.

Sacramental Service

The little church was comfortably filled at the sacramental service, March 2. Worshipping with us were Sister F. F. Banyard from Perry, Iowa, and Brother Rasmussen from Decatur, Nebraska. This brother is just recovering from a long confinement at a local hospital, due to a broken ankle. He was glad to bear his testimony among the Saints, as he has received a very definite blessing in being restored to health and activity. It was a pleasure, too, to welcome again Sister Nancy Carey, who is recovering from a prolonged illness.

Illness in Branch

John Ahlstrand, a young brother, is still in a serious condition due to infection in the jaw, following the extraction of a tooth late in December. He suffers greatly but is trying to endure and overcome the affliction. Through administrations and the prayers of the Saints it is hoped that he may be rewarded by a complete recovery to health.

Others who have been ill among the Saints are Sister A. Z. Leach, Sister N. M. Rumel, and Sister Norman Issott. Several of our families have been quarantined for measles and scarlet fever affecting the children in their homes, but in all these cases conditions are improving.

Department of Women

Twenty-nine women were present at the meeting of the Department of Women, February 28, at the home of Sister Carl Self. At this time Sister Elliott, who had served the department for three years, thought best to resign, since she will be moving away at the close of the school year. It was with much reluctance this resignation was accepted, for Sister Elliott has been a faithful steward over this work if ever there was one. Her assistant, Sister A. A. Thiehoff, was elected to succeed Sister Elliott, and all feel sure the work of the department will move steadily onward under her direction. A Saint Patrick's dinner was planned, to be held in the church, for purposes of social intercourse, good fellowship, and, perhaps incidentally, some financial advantages.

Deaths of Members

The passing of Brother David Edwards at Missouri Valley on February 20 caused several of our branch members to grieve over the loss of a loved one. He was the brother of Sisters T. J. Edmunds and Charlotte Murphy, and of Brethren T. A. and Edward Edwards. All extend sympathy.

Sister Mary Hawley received word last week of the death at Dow City, Iowa, of her sister, Sister Martha Jackson. This bereavement leaves Sister Hawley and Sister Romanan Wight the only ones of the once large family group of Holcomb brothers and sisters.

Speakers at Branch

Speakers occupying the pulpit since our last letter have been Branch President B. M. Anderson, High Priest Carl Self, and Elders H. A. Merchant, W. E. Stoff, and Isaac Sylvester. On the evening of March 2 Lieutenant Connolley occupied in the interests of the Near East Relief. His lecture was very impressive. Since he himself has been privileged to be in the land of distress he was able to paint graphic pictures of the great need for help. Contributions to the amount of $33 were made, which was a fair showing for this small group.

Meetings to Be Held

The Saints are looking forward with keen pleasure to the coming of Patriarch John F. Martin, who will hold a series of meetings from the 16th to 30th inclusive. We expect his arrival this week-end, in time for him to get acquainted with our members at the Saint Patrick's dinner next Saturday evening. But all that will be another story.

Indianapolis Saints Resume Midweek Prayer Services

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, March 5.—The Indianapolis Branch held the first midweek prayer service that has been enjoyed here in a long time, on January 30. It was a splendid meeting, nearly everyone present taking active part. The gift of tongues was received and interpreted by the missionary in charge. A good spirit was present to a marked degree and all rejoiced at the evidence of God's pleasure.

All services since have been well attended. Many of the older Saints testify that they have never felt a greater degree of the Spirit of God than during the past month or two. The outlook is encouraging.

Brother and Sister David Burtch, who have labored much in Michigan and Ohio, came to this branch from near Albany. While stopping here Brother Burtch became seriously ill, and died on Sunday, February 3. Brother O. J. Hawn, who had known Brother Burtch for about twenty years, preached the funeral sermon. It was a great comfort to Brother Burtch to have Brother Hawn near him during his illness.

Four Baptized at Modesto as Result of Meetings

MODESTO, CALIFORNIA, February 27.—A two weeks' series of meetings has been conducted by Elder E. B. Hull and his wife, Sister Hull having charge of the music. The meetings were very well attended and many friends were made to the cause. Four adults were baptized. One of the women had heard of the gospel through one of the Utah Latter Day Saints, but after coming to Modesto and getting acquainted with some of the members of this church she could readily see the truth.

All the Saints are encouraged and feel built up in the faith. It is hoped others, who are investigating, will come in. One other woman has given her name for baptism.

The publicity agent was able to get a number of free notices put in the two local papers. In addition two display advertisements were inserted.

Brother Hull promised to return. He leaves here to meet Elder George H. Wixom and go to other places.

Sister Hull organized a junior choir while here, and it is hoped to have it grow to improve the meetings and interest the young people.

The intermediate class in the Department of Recreation and Expression have organized. They took for their name, "C. R. Progressive Class." Melvin Howe was chosen president; Irma Swall, secretary; and Albert Briner, yell leader. They are planning a box social to be held soon.

Classical Recital Given for Benefit of Piano Fund

TORONTO, CANADA, March 5.—The Religio, three months ago, undertook to pay for a Steinway grand piano in four months. Everybody except the president of the Religio and some of his able assistants thought it would be impossible. One month remains and the watchward seems to be, "Let's go!" to raise the balance of $200.

Professor George E. Boyce, the chorister, sometimes called the "Paderewski of Canada," volunteered to put on a recital for the piano fund. A classical recital was something new for Toronto Branch. It was the most successful affair from both the cultural and financial point of view ever given here. The sum of $225 was cleared.

Brother Boyce was assisted by Sister Blanche Needham, vocalist, and Miss Frances Heath, violinist. The artists and accompanists represented several faiths: Saints, Jewish, and Baptist.

The musicians revealed new beauties in Beethoven, Kreisler, Chopin, Landon Ronald, Romeau-Leschetzky, Haden, Carey, Lalo, and Liszt.

Four dainty maidens ushered the large audience to their seats. The deportment was ideal. The ability of the artists held the people's interest intense throughout the well-balanced program.

Quite a successful institute was held here February 8 to 10.

The program was excellent, the attendance good, and the live institute team happy. Elder Gregory's part of the program was a sermon on "Tuning in for results." It was a very unique and enjoyable discourse.

Brother Thomas Seton, chorister for the Humber Bay Branch, dropped dead while preparing the music for some special services in the church. It had long been Brother Seton's wish to "die in the harness" and in this his wish was fulfilled. Several years ago, Brother Seton was chorister of the Toronto Branch.

Series of Debates Proposed Between Oakland and San Francisco Branches

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, March 3.—The remarkable attendance at Religio and Sunday school speaks well of the condition of the branch. At a Religio social, February 29, there was an attendance of about seventy, many of whom came across the bay from San Francisco.

Much interest has been aroused over a proposed series of debates between San Francisco and Oakland branches of the Religio, which may include all the departments of the bay district before it is finished.

All of the Sunday school classes are organized and the interest is running high, especially in the young people's class. Their program includes visiting the aged and carrying flowers to the sick, as well as social activities.

Two new priests were ordained by Apostles Roy S. Budd and D. T. Williams while they were here in January. Also plans were made for the systematic visiting of all the members of the branch.

Two families moved here recently from Alberta, Canada. Two Brothers Ralston, from Colorado, have also joined the branch here.

Lamoni Stake Items

LAMONI, IOWA, March 15.—The Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society gave its first evening program Tuesday as a number of the lyceum course. Critics pronounced it the best concert ever given by the musical talent of Lamoni. In fact it compared favorably with any imported numbers.

Miss Margaret Armstrong, of Kansas City, college instructor in voice, carried the soprano-solo work. Miss Armstrong's work in Graceland this year has been most satisfactory and she has given much pleasure to Lamoni audiences by her splendid interpretations of the best music. On this particular occasion her hearers were enraptured by her artistic work. She was very ably assisted by some of her more advanced pupils, Sister Josephine Smith, Brethren Evan Fry, and Fields Jones.

An A Capello chorus of twenty selected voices sang several numbers unaccompanied, which were among the best things on the program.

Brother J. H. Anthony, band and orchestra instructor, Thad Howland, and Thelma Lane, rendered a very pleasing string trio with piano accompaniment.

Sister Ruth Fisher, instructor of public speaking, gave a very fine interpretation of Longfellow's "Hiawatha."

The chorus work by one hundred twenty-five voices was not the least because mentioned last. Sister Mabel Carlile has accomplished much in this line since the organization of the oratorio society last September. Besides furnishing music for church services each Sunday and a thirty-minute concert once each month, the chorus gave four very fine numbers on this program. They are now working on the oratorio, "Elijah," to be given during the young people's convention. They are accomplishing a good work for the church.

Society of Patronesses Social

The Society of Patronesses held an afternoon social at the home of Sister J. C. Danielson, Friday afternoon. A program by young people was rendered as follows: Duet, Mavis Wells and Doris Long; violin solo, George Briggs, jr.; reading, Ernestine Horner. A business meeting was also held at which thirty new members were taken in. Some names were also dropped. The purchasing committee was instructed to place a filing cabinet in the general office room at the college. Further plans were also made regarding a fancy work booth to be held during the convention.

"Aunt Vida" Smith was present and gave the Patroness ladies an invitation to be guests of the Faculty Ladies Club at Sunny Mead Cottage next Wednesday afternoon.

A delightful Saint Patrick's Day lunch was served.

Special Meetings to Be Held

A special service series of meetings is announced for Lamoni from April 6 to 13. President Elbert A. Smith will be the speaker. Brother Elbert is a general favorite with both old and young here and all are looking forward to his coming with much eager anticipation.

Election of School Directors

An election of school directors last Monday brought out the largest vote ever polled at a similar election here. It resulted in the election of H. H. Gold to succeed himself and Brother W. A. France to succeed Brother C. E. Wight who has served faithfully for several terms.

Elder G. R. Wells is home for a few days from his mission field in Nebraska.

News From Hiteman Branch

Thinking the large number of Saints who have left the Hiteman Branch during the past few years would be interested to learn of the activities here, it is a pleasure to report the splendid series of meetings held by Patriarch J. F. Martin, of Kirtland, Ohio, February 7 to February 24, inclusive.

Never in the history of the Hiteman Branch has there been so much interest aroused among those not of the faith. Religion is the topic of the town. Each night, although the weather conditions were very unpleasant, the attendance grew larger until the last evening two hundred were present. Brother Martin's sermons were so clear and concise that even a child could understand them and though lengthy he did not weary his audience. He has a splendid personality. A great deal of good has been done in this place. It was indeed with sad hearts that the people here bade him "God-speed."

Eight Baptized

On Sunday, February 24, at 1 p. m., he led five precious souls into the icy waters to be baptized. The ground was covered with snow and the ice had to be cut. Those baptized were Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Burk, jr., Mrs. John Stokes, Miss Charlotte Bateman, and Mr. Vincent Orr. On the following Wednesday afternoon three more were baptized: Misses Edith Van Buskirk, Evelyn White, and Mr. Charles Burk, making eight new members for the Hiteman Branch. Many others say they are convinced of the work and will soon be ready.

Prayer Services

Three prayer services were held while Brother Martin was here, one on each Sunday afternoon. They were all inspiring and in the last two the gift of prophecy was manifest. The members were spoken to as a body and several individuals were spoken to personally.

Social Gatherings

Several social gatherings were also held. On the evening of February 14 a social affair was given in the church by the Department of Recreation and Expression. A fine program was enjoyed, games played, and a two-course luncheon served. After preaching services Tuesday evening, February 19, the choir surprised Brother Martin at the home of Brother and Sister Smith. The evening was pleasantly spent playing games. Appetizing refreshments were served, after which Brother John F. (Nobby) Wilkinson on behalf of the choir presented Brother Martin with a traveling case.

On Tuesday evening, February 26, a social gathering in the church was given in his honor. A musical program was well rendered and refreshments served. Brother William Wilson, the branch president, then presented to Brother Martin on behalf of the Hiteman people, a purse for himself, also one for his companion. The Sunday school class of young girls whom he taught while here gave him a pair of house slippers.

Death of Helen Mae Jones

While in Hiteman, he was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of a little Sunday school member, Helen Mae Jones, daughter of Mr. and Sister D. J. Jones. The funeral was held in the yard of their home.

Rally Day

On the last Sunday Brother Martin was here, February 24, a Rally Day was held. The Department of Women served meals, cafeteria style, in the church. They have done much splendid work during the past year.

Department of Women

Though few in number, the Department of Women have been the cause for cleaning the interior of the church building, purchasing window shades and silk draperies for the rostrum, placing new electric light shades and chairs in the church and paying seventy-five dollars on the new furnace, besides sending flowers to the sick and helping those in need.

The Choir

The faithful service rendered by the choir during the series of meetings should be mentioned. Anthems were sung every evening and several special numbers were given.

The Hiteman Branch is anxiously looking forward to the time when Brother Martin can be here again.

Chariton Branch News

A Rally Day at Chariton Sunday, March 2, was the successful close of ten days' meeting which had been held with Patriarch J. F. Martin as speaker. A lively interest was shown in these meetings which increased nightly. Brother Martin's subjects were timely and such as appealed to all seekers after truth. As a result of the meetings there were nine baptisms.

On Wednesday evening the program was dispensed with and the evening given over to recreation.

The Chariton Leader has this to say regarding Brother Martin's work in the city: "Evangelist Martin is a young man of strong personality, is an able speaker, and a talented musician and reader as well. His sermons were forceful, his arguments logical and expressed in such simple, clear language that even the children could understand the message he brought to his audience each night."

Holden Stake News

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, March 17.—A series of meetings is being held in Atherton by Brother R. D. Weaver, one of the missionaries of the Holden Stake. Much good is being accomplished, both within and without the church. The Saints are being built up spiritually, and love seems to permeate every heart. This brings the Spirit of God in the midst of the Saints and unitedly they are being blessed and favored with God's blessing.

Through the pleasing personality of Brother Weaver, and his powerful delivery of God's work, characterized by the Spirit of God, he is winning the favor of the nonmembers who had heretofore turned away. The hall is being filled every night, not with a transient crowd, but with a steady and regular attendance, who are getting the connection in all the sermons.

Brother Weaver and his message are being talked of throughout the whole community, and the Saints will no longer be held responsible for the people not hearing the gospel in all its beauty.

Sister John C. Schwab has done systematic tracting, both before and during the meetings, which has been a great asset.

The choir is doing splendid work under the direction of Sister Schwab.

The "Go-get-'em" Club of young people from Walnut Park gave a very pleasing program last Sunday evening to a full house. Other members of Walnut Park have promised another evening of entertainment soon. This help is appreciated.

Brother D. R. Carmichael, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression here, has been appointed superintendent of this department for the Holden Stake.

Brother George I. Hansen, who has acted as pastor for the past few years, has moved with his family to Independence.

Lexington

The Lexington Church enjoyed another week of spiritual meetings which have been well attended considering all things. Brother G. M. Shippy preached Sunday morning. Brother H. A. Brendel occupied the evening hour. Allen Orndoff, a very promising young man, was baptized two weeks ago by Brother Brendel, making a total of three new members in that time. The Saints here are proud of the new members and hope they will live to receive the full benefit of the gospel.

Sister Ethel Beebe was called away because of the death of her sister at Cameron, Missouri.

Sister Fred Furness is visiting in Warrensburg.

Sister Maurine Burch, a senior in high school and teacher training, has been teaching school at Dover, Missouri, the past two weeks.

The Department of Music, with Sister Lola Johnson as director, gave a very fine program at the Religio last Friday evening.

There are more members paying tithing here now than ever before.

Holden

Sister Alice G. Dungee died at the Holden Home for the aged on February 29, where she had resided the past six years. The funeral services were held in the home chapel in charge of Elders I. M. Ross and D. J. Krahl. The body was taken to Independence for burial.

The Priscillas announce that they will repeat their play, "The Modern Cinderella," on Thursday evening, March 20, at the Home Auditorium.

The pulpit at the church was occupied Sunday morning,

March 16, by Elder W. S. Macrae. Elder D. J. Krahl spoke in the evening on "Our responsibilities." Elder C. F. Scarcliff was speaker at the home at 11 a. m.

Bishop A. B. Phillips visited Holden on Thursday, March 13, on church business.

Elder I. M. Ross attended the Far West stake conference on Sunday, March 9, and visited with relatives at Mound City for a few days following.

Elder F. A. McWethy is sick at his home, and is confined to his bed.

The Dramatic Club is working on a special number for Easter.

Sister Lucille Kittinger, of Holden, has been appointed stake recorder.

Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, March 18.—Services at the Stone Church, Sunday, March 16, were well attended although the weather was cold and threatening. Bishop Benjamin R. McGuire spoke in the morning on the subject of broadcasting the gospel to the world. In the evening a half hour musical concert preceded an address by the Reverend Doctor Harry H. Mayer, Rabbi of the Linwood Boulevard Temple, Kansas City, Missouri. Doctor Mayer spoke on world conditions and obedience to law. A slight snow began falling early in the evening, increasing until a driving snow covered the entire city within a few hours.

Stone Church Sunday School

The large attendance at the Stone Church Sunday school continues. Sunday, March 16, there were present 1,434 members and visitors.

D. O. Cato has replaced W. B. Paul as superintendent of the adult department. Brother Paul recently resigned the position.

Liberty Street

Elder John W. Peterson preached at the Liberty Street church, Sunday morning, March 16, using for his text, "The fullness of atonement." Elder Joseph Luff preached in the evening on the subject, "Calvary plus what?"

Officers and Teachers Banquet

At the banquet of the First Independence Sunday school, in the Dining Hall at the Stone Church Friday evening, over 180 were served a very fine menu at a very nominal cost. This is the first time in recent years that the banquet style of caring for the crowd has been attempted, but it was very successful.

Only officers and teachers were provided for, with the necessary escorts. The entire program was participated in from the seats at the extensive tables, which were beautifully decorated for the occasion, the various departments being seated together.

The Laurel Club, a very active women's organization, served the meal, thus adding another $25 to their substantial bank account. The elaborate menu was made possible through the kindness of local and Kansas City firms which donated liberally of their products for the occasion. This feature was in charge of O. C. White, one of the general superintendency of the school.

A history of the school was read, written by Elder William Clow, who in 1877 moved to Independence from London, Ontario, and found no Sunday school organization among the Saints. Gradually he and others were able to break down the existent prejudice in our own ranks against the idea of such a school, until to-day every church building of the Saints in Independence is taxed to the utmost in caring for those who come, in fact most of them utilizing nearby buildings and finding them inadequate.

The program was in charge of Chris B. Hartshorn, superintendent, assisted by O. C. White and E. D. Moore, and consisted principally of recognition and encouragement of those who had during the past year made especially worthy attainments as shown by the records of the past year. Some excellent showings were made, and the indications are that all past records will be broken this year. The monthly teachers' meetings are attended by practically a hundred per cent of the large staff of over 135 teachers who assemble by departments.

The music for the occasion was by the Auditorium Orchestra, in charge of R. T. Cooper, with some special numbers.

There was much enthusiasm engendered and amusement provided by the song leadership of H. C. Burgess, the program for the evening including some songs written especially for the occasion.

Walnut Park

An Oriole Circle, christened "Just Us Girls Circle," was organized among the girls of Walnut Park, Monday, March 17, by Sister Dora Glines, of the Department of Women. The meeting was at the home of Sister R. Barnhardt, and was a very enthusiastic one. Sister Julia Anna Roberts was chosen monitor. Delicious refreshments suitable to Saint Patrick's Day were served.

I X L Entertainment

The double quartet of the I. X. L. Sunday school class of the Stone Church, rendered the musical comedy, "A tale of a hat," March 13, in the Dining Hall. It was cleverly presented and the capacity house received it well. A great deal of credit is due Mrs. Clifford Forties, of Kansas City, who directed the dramatic action of the play, also to Mr. Paul N. Craig, who directed the music, as well as taking a principal part. The young women ushers easily disposed of twenty-five pounds of homemade candy before the performance.

The Twelve

Apostle J. A. Gillen has been holding a series of meetings in the Owen Sound District, but is expected to be at Guelph, Ontario, after March 19.

A very successful campaign is being made in Saint Louis, where Apostle E. J. Gleazer is in charge.

The missionaries in the Australian and island mission field are now in New Zealand. Apostle M. A. McConley arrived there from Honolulu and Apostle Clyde F. Ellis joined him there recently, sailing from Tahiti. They are expected to be present at the Easter conference in Australia.

Apostles T. W. Williams and John W. Rushton are working in the southern mission field, the former being at Dallas, Texas, and the latter at Mobile, Alabama.

Lamoni, Iowa, has two members of the Twelve at present, Apostles John F. Garver and D. T. Williams. Apostle Garver has been in Independence recently on church business.

Apostle Roy S. Budd is on his way to California, having spent the last week-end at Ogden, Utah.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards preached to congregations at Saint Joseph, Missouri, Sunday, March 16. He addressed the members of the First Branch in the morning and those of the Second Branch in the afternoon.

Saint Patrick's Party at Institute

A Saint Patrick's party which served as a formal opening of the Institute Building on the Campus, was given March 17 by the Laurel Club. Over 200 invitations were sent out.

Upon entering, each guest was given a favor, representing an emblem of Ireland. At this time a charge of twenty-five cents was made, which covered the evening's entertainment and refreshments.

A short musical program was rendered, followed by a few speeches from prominent guests, particularly "Irishmen." Games were then played and refreshments served. The ice cream was appropriately decorated with a green design of a shamrock on a white slab of cream. The cake was delicious homemade cake, donated by the Laurel Club members. Punch was also served.

Radio for Holden Home

A little market basket decorated with purple and gold is making its rounds in Group Twenty-four. It is called the "radio basket," and started out from the home of Sister Tom Reese. It bears a message on a little note inside which tells the purpose of the basket. Its mission is to obtain funds to help purchase a loud speaking radio for the aged Saints of the Holden Home, that they may enjoy the services broadcast from Zion. The basket obtains its funds in a unique way. The first person who took it to her neighbor put in it a dozen fresh eggs. The neighbor took out the eggs, used them, and put in the basket the sum she thought the eggs were worth, or more or less according to her means. Now she had no eggs without buying them, so she put in the basket a jar of fruit, and took it over to her neighbor, who bought the jar of fruit, put in something else and passed it on. The ladies find it gives them an opportunity for a pleasant visit with their sisters, also, and are enjoying the mission of the little radio basket.

Alice E. Cobb Dies at Age of 89 After Active Life in Church Work

Sister Alice E. Cobb, born June 1, 1834, at Berkshire, New York, died Friday, March 14, in Kansas City, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. B. Blair, where she had been living for some time. Funeral services were held in Kansas City on Saturday, March 15. President Elbert A. Smith was in charge, and Elder Hubert Case preached the sermon, using for his text, "The glory of God is intelligence." Following the services, the body was taken to Little Sioux, Iowa, for burial.

In the words of Elder Case, the life of Sister Cobb "was one of the most intelligent examples of Christian conduct that it has ever been" the privilege of Elder Case to see. Sister Cobb was widely known as an active church worker, and although her remarkable life was spared for almost ninety years, her mind was clear and active to the very end.

She was loved and honored by many friends whom she made during her activities wherever she went.

Sister Cobb was married to Elijah Cobb, September 24, 1854. She was baptized by W. W. Blair at Preparation, Iowa, in 1864. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Cobb lived in Little Sioux, Iowa, where Mr. Cobb died. It was by request of Sister Cobb that her body was taken to Little Sioux to be buried beside that of her husband, who preceded her by 38 years.

Six children were born, three of whom are now living: Sister Elizabeth Blair and Sister Ruth Lyman Smith, of Kansas City; and Sister Mary Grace Johnson, of Chicago, Illinois.

Radio Flashes

College Station, Texas.—To say that I was glad when I first picked your station up, would be a mild expression, indeed. Nor has my interest diminished. The first time was an experiment in which I was able only to assure myself that you were you. The second attempt was more successful, as those hearing will attest. Brother S. S. Smith was with us on that evening. On Sunday evening, February 24, we heard the program beginning with the solo from the kindergarten to the finish. I must say a word for that solo. All those pieces sounded well. The reading by Blaine Bender was really good. When those good old hymns came way down to Texas the Spirit was not lost for distance. I have often read writings by Brother E. A. Smith; now I have heard his voice. The voice and the pen are in accord. We all enjoyed that sermon. And I have often wanted to hear a Latter Day Saint prayer by radio. Sincerity was apparent to a great extent even after such a long passage. We sign off with many thanks for the program.—C. M. Mitchell and Party.

Detroit, Michigan.—Heard clearly and enjoyed your broadcasting Sunday evening, February 17, and shall be interested in receiving the program regularly as per your suggestion. I congratulate you on being so splendidly progressive.—Harold Helmer.

Pensacola, Florida.—Your program on March 6 came in fine. I did not get all of it but the song by Mrs. Smith and the two last piano solos by Miss Johnson were fine. You don't know how glad I was to listen to my own church station. Three cheers to K F I X. I will be listening in, in the future for you. Please give my best regards to K F I X. We read all the radio letters in the HERALD.—W. M. Cobb.

Topeka, Kansas.—At Cherryvale, Kansas, on Sunday evening, February 10, we had the pleasure to listen in on the excellent sermon on "Faith" by Elder Wilber E. Prall from K F F V. I believe that the radio is doing more good broadcasting the gospel of Jesus Christ than many might suppose.—A. P. Crooker.

Aguadilla, Porto Rico.—I take pleasure in reporting to you that your station was heard down here last night, February 26. I received your last three numbers of the concert: "Melody," violin solo by Orlando Nest [Nace], Orchestra Overture, "The Golden Shepherd"; and another selection by the orchestra. Am I right?—Doctor Pedro J. Zamora.

Santa Ana, El Salvador, Central America.—With great pleasure, I am informing you that your fine station K F I X has been heard by me here on several occasions. To give you some facts and to show you that I am telling the truth, I am sending this: Radio Log record, February 14, 1924. 9.50 p. m. Central Standard time, K F I X coming in fine, loud, and clear, and very steady. At this time the Radio Orchestra was playing "Hungarian Dance No. 5," by Brahms, then I don't remember quite well if you signed off at 10 p. m. but anyway I think you did because I did not hear your signals any more after this time. After congratulating you much for the fine station you have in operation and finally for the very fine work it is doing, too, and your very good concerts you always send over same, I am going to ask you a favor. Will it be much trouble if I beg you to kindly let me know that this reception was correct and acknowledge receipt of these lines. Thanking you much in advance for this.—Jose Valasco.

How Can We Bring the Sanitarium to More Who Need Its Services?

We who have had occasion to go to the Sanitarium for medical attention have learned to appreciate at once the efficiency and the splendid spiritual atmosphere of that institution, and doubtless all Latter Day Saints find themselves wishing that all who need the services of that institution could have them. This observation is quite likely to lead to the thought that there are perhaps in Independence alone, scores, if not more, who need care such as the Sanitarium can give and would be glad to give, but are not in a position to avail themselves of the appointments of the institution.

In the February, 1924, number of The Modern Hospital, was presented an aspect of hospital service to the masses, which gives food for thought to all those persons interested in community welfare. The article was on the subject, "How may hospital care be furnished to persons with moderate incomes?" From it we quote. In speaking of the hospital the writer says:

People of moderate means are often unable to enjoy its benefits. In view of this fact it is clear that in the absence of the family physician at a moderate cost, and through failure to provide a substitute with the attributes of scientific medicine, a large number of people have given up their allegiance to regular medicine and have become supporters of low-priced but irregular and irresponsible cults and schools, which have grasped the opportunity of capitalizing the field of low cost treatment of ill health.

I wish to state in the beginning that there is no question of socialized medicine involved in the solution, unless the medical profession fails to keep the remedies within their own control. I am of the opinion that low cost medical service may be provided in a business-like way and yet along strictly ethical lines: that in spite of the scarcity of professional men the benefits of regular medicine may be extended to a very much larger number of people and at the same time without reducing professional incomes or interfering with the present professional fees paid by patients who are able to afford them.

The answer, to my mind, lies in organization. Without going into the matter in detail it may be stated that the nucleus of the solution has already been tried out by what is called group medicine, or better described, as diagnostic groups.

As for special nursing, the present cost has attracted more attention than any other item of hospital expense. A charge of nearly $100 a week for special nursing is an appalling rate for a man of moderate means. Yet, this is a common occurrence in cases of serious illness when a night and day nurse means much in the safety and comfort of the patient, Relatives, under these circumstances feel impelled to provide every facility which standardized nursing affords for the beloved sick ones, though the expense thereof may entail financial embarrassment.

The hospital often has no alternative to offer in such an emergency and yet on the score of community service, the institution should stand ready to advise and to provide an organized plan by which adequate nursing service may be rendered at a price which is within the patient's means.

There are three ways of meeting deficits. (1) The rates for full-pay patients may be placed so high as to leave enough surplus to cover the deficit. This was formerly the regular method, but under modern conditions it cannot be done. Often regular charges cannot be made high enough to meet the deficits. Again there is an element of social injustice in attempting to tax anyone without his consent, to meet expenses incurred by another. (2) The deficit may be met by endowments. This has been the mainstay of hospitals in the past and has enabled them to offer accommodations to all classes at prices within the means of the patient. Endowments are becoming rare, however, and former endowments are proving inadequate. (3) Finally, reasonable hospital deficits incurred in the interest of patients who are not able to pay the full cost may and should become matters of community interest. On economic grounds alone all that class of patients who are known as part-pay patients should receive help. Every day of sickness of a worker is a financial loss to the community. To protect our present social organization and to prevent the augmentation of irresponsible classes, all who are temporarily embarrassed, or who are bound by family ties, who are the main support of dependents and who are willing and anxious to meet their responsibilities must receive every encouragement and assistance in preserving self-respect in their endeavor to achieve economic independence. At least they should be granted hospital rates within their means.

Those knowing the work and conditions of the Sanitarium, cannot but appreciate the clear-cut way in which some of our own problems are presented in the above quotation. The Sanitarium has never been a money-making affair, and we are carrying to-day an extraordinarily heavy accounts receivable. Many are cared for when the expense is borne by the General Church, and deficits must be made up from the same source. However, it is pleasing to report that for a little over one year, the church has not been called upon to meet a deficit.

To the problems of the Sanitarium and public health the church must give attention, and it is hoped the quotations we have used will stimulate thought thereon.

The Sanitarium and Health Work

It has been a source of pleasure to see the desire of those in charge of the Sanitarium to expand the activities of that very worthy institution, and carry on health work outside the building. The importance of community health work is being emphasized more and more, and in many communities excellently planned and executed programs of health work are being carried out. In a recent number of Modern Hospital, Doctor A. C. Bachmeyer says:

The place of the hospital in the general health program of the smaller community is particularly important, for there the hospital can be made the real health center. While this may not be possible in the same measure in the larger cities having many hospitals, the idea emphasizes the need of correlating those institutions with all other health agencies.

The Sanitarium is located not in a large city but in a small and compact one; and as such logically becomes the center for health program activities. The move on the part of the Sanitarium to occupy a larger community field of service should be heartily supported by the citizens and officials of Independence, and particularly hearty should be the support given by Latter Day Saints.

Record of Organization, April 6, 1830

"Whilst the Book of Mormon was in the hands of the printer, we still continued to bear testimony and give information, as far as we had opportunity; and also made known to our brethren that we had received commandment to organize the church, and accordingly we met together for that purpose, at the house of the above-mentioned Mr. Whitmer (being six in number) on Tuesday, the sixth of April, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and thirty.

"Having opened the meeting by solemn prayer to our heavenly Father we proceeded (according to previous commandment) to call on our brethren to know whether they accepted us as their teachers in the things of the kingdom of God, and whether they were satisfied that we should proceed and be organized as a church according to said commandment which we had received. To these they consented by a unanimous vote. I then laid my hands upon Oliver Cowdery and ordained him an elder of the 'Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,' after which he ordained me also to the office of an elder of said church. We then took bread, blessed it, and brake it with them, also wine, blessed it, and drank it with them. We then laid our hands on each individual member of the church present that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and be confirmed members of the Church of Christ. The Holy Ghost was poured out upon us to a very great degree. Some prophesied, whilst we all praised the Lord and rejoiced exceedingly."—Church History, vol. 1, pp. 76, 77.

Is laid for your faith in his excellent word;
What more can he say than to you he hath said,
You, who unto Jesus for refuge have fled!"

6.00 p. m., Religio program.

7.30 p. m., Musical program, followed by sermon by President Floyd M. McDowell, subject, "Hear ye him."

What Is Man?

It has been said that man is an animal, who writes.

A child is born into this world an automaton, a machine, an animal. He breathes, moves, eats, and cries by instinct. So do other animals. But other animals cannot write. A baby will develop muscles which may be coordinated in such a way that in later life he can make certain little marks with a stick in the sand, or with a pencil on paper. He will learn to write.

The real difference lies not alone in the bodily structure of the animal, but in the brain as well. Some would attribute to him a super-physical function, while others would give to him a super-psychic force. Be that as it may, he is endowed with reason. For without reason, he would have nothing to say, and with nothing to say he would have nothing to write.

What has he to say that another animal has not? He seeks to eat; so do other animals. He finds shelter from the elements; so do other animals. He reproduces his kind; so do other animals. He seeks to know the great mystery of life. He asks himself, Why? Why? And this the other animals do not. Man is looking for God. The other animals do not care whether there is a God or not.

Man is an animal, but he can write.

With the Apostles in Europe

A travelogue by Paul M. Hanson, written on board the S. S. "Helouan," February 23, 1924.

Brother J. F. Curtis and I are now sailing down the Adriatic on our way to Alexandria, Egypt, en route to Palestine. We embarked on the steamer yesterday at Trieste, and left there exactly at one o'clock in the afternoon, on schedule time. The sea is smooth. From the side of our vessel one could see yesterday quite clearly with a good field glass, homes, towns, and farm scenes on the eastern shore.

The steamer is of the Lloyd-Triestino Line, one of the largest, most commodious, and modern on the Mediterranean. It has wireless, and many watertight compartments for safety.

The passenger list is not large. Nearly all speak Italian; some speak several languages; a few English, or broken English. The menu is in Italian—but where "there is a reason" for learning the meaning of foreign words, a speedy utilization, if not adeptness, in the use of the tongue is noticeable. Language is a marvelous acquisition—orderly arranged sounds making known our wants, and carrying ideas of sorrow, joy, dismay, cheer, love, and intelligence.

Leave England for Holland

On February 2, Brother Curtis and I took our departure from England, on the S. S. Batavier V, for Rotterdam, Holland. After a sea passage lasting one night we entered the calm waters of the Maas River, and were soon at the landing stage. The multitudinous shipping in the river presented a lively and interesting picture.

We were fortunate in having Mr. John Graven, jr., who understood English, meet us at the wharf. We were taken by him to the hospitable home of his parents in Schiedam.

Rotterdam is thoroughly Dutch in all its aspects. Unusual scenes attract attention. Quaint, and in some places, tottering buildings overhang the numerous canals which intersect the city. Large windmills with slowly turning giant wings loom up here and there. The clattering of the klompen (wooden shoes) of the school children and others is heard. Dogs, usually under the carts, single, or in double team, are seen helping their master drawing his load of milk, bread, coal, vegetables, etc.

The Dikes of Holland

Nearly half the country is below sea level, in which region lie Rotterdam, Amsterdam, and The Hague. Only by unbroken vigilance is the land retained, much of which has been taken from the sea.

The ocean is kept within its bounds by dunes and dikes. These mean to Holland its existence. Dunes are great sand banks cast up by the sea; the dikes are mighty embankments faced with stone, with a long slope to the sea. Dikes are seen within dikes. Some of the towns, like Schiedam, have their main streets on the dikes.

We were greatly pleased with the Dutch people. They are a fine race, everywhere making a good appearance.

The history of Holland reveals that its inhabitants possess fine mental and artistic gifts, also courage and determination even when fighting at great odds. The bringing of their struggle of eighty years with Spain to a victorious termination discloses their bravery and tenacity of spirit. She thrived in the midst of adverse conditions; rose from under the iron heels of persecution; freely gave of her blood in defense of liberty of conscience; and became a home for the persecuted of other nations.

At Delfshaven, adjoining Rotterdam, is the church where the Pilgrim Fathers worshiped just before their departure from the country. With solemn thought one day I wended my way from this building. At Leyden, not far from Rotterdam, is where John Robinson, their leader, lies buried; the man of God who announced that truth was yet to break forth from God to man, and championed human rights and liberty.

Work Accomplished in Holland

Elders Postma and Veenstra did a good work in the Netherlands. Before we left Holland two were baptized; and as a result of labors chiefly of others, a branch was organized at Schiedam. It will be known as the Rotterdam Branch. It consists of about twenty-six members. Two were ordained to the eldership, John Graven, sr., and Arie Pyl. A Sunday school was also organized. We rejoiced with these Saints. Their tongue we did not understand, but their acts of grace, charming hospitality, and sincerity, created spacious room in our hearts for all of them. There is one language which all can understand, that which expresses itself in kind and noble deeds. Schiedam is about two miles by electric tram from Rotterdam. When in Holland Brother John Graven, sr., and later Elder John Eggen, who recently arrived from America, acted as our interpreters.

Visit Belgium and France

From this land of canals, colossal windmills, and much that imparts a subtle charm, we went through Belgium, calling at Paris, on our way. Here we met Sister Pauline James, daughter of Brother and Sister Orville James, of Independence, Missouri. She is studying music, but graciously served as our guide and rendered assistance in the arranging of our time to the best advantage during our two days' visit. Paris has much that is wonderful. We attended a service in the great Notre Dame, visited the Louvre, Napoleon Bonaparte's Tomb, Palace of Versailles, Arch of Triumph, were up in the Eiffel Tower, etc. Our visit in this city, because of its educational value, and the very pleasant association with our sister, will ever be cherished in pleasant memory. Her knowledge of French saved us on several occasions from embarrassment. An amusing incident: Many of the stores have different prices, one for the French, the other for tourists from America or England. This is because of the depreciated franc, resulting in the high purchasing power of the dollar and pound. One day a clerk charged Miss Pauline the higher price, but soon apologized, saying he thought at first she was not a French girl!

Arrive in Switzerland

In Basel, Switzerland, we were met at the station by Elder E. C. Ohlert. With beaming face he grabbed us and our luggage as we stepped off the train before we knew he was near. How happy we were to see him! Men cannot engage in mutual sacrifice, know each other's difficulties, experiences, and joys, without deep comradeship developing. In the trenches there is a fusing of all interests. From the crucible comes the finest gold. It is not possible for one in a drawing room to sense the full meaning of conflict on the battle field. One cannot live outside of one's experience. This explains the influence of the twelve of the New Testament church, in person, voice, epistles, and revelation—from their writings many of the texts now employed for sermons are taken. The first book of the New Testament was written by an apostle, and the last book in arrangement—book of Revelation—was written by an apostle.

In Basel we found the Saints meeting in a hall very suitable for public gatherings. Brother Ohlert is doing a good work, loves his mission, and is giving special attention to German with a view to qualifying more fully for future service. This is as it should be; knowledge gained and experience acquired should not be thrown to the winds, but utilized. He was ordained a seventy by us, in accordance with General Conference action.

This city contains much that interests; especially were the narrow, irregular streets, with buildings of peculiar architecture, full of attractive power. A part of the city is across the Rhine. There is an old cathedral that belonged to the Roman church before the Reformation, now owned by the Reformed church. On the outside, in one of the walls, is a statue of the courageous man who led the Reformation in Basel. In those days it was dangerous to be in the minority.

Luzerne is in a region of mountains and lakes—beauty all around. Here the Saints, few in number, meet in a hall. Both in this city and in Basel Brother Ohlert was our interpreter. A dialect of German is used in this part of Switzerland, French near France.

From Luzerne to Milano (Milan), Italy, the region is one of almost indescribable grandeur. The mountains were well covered with snow. With the sun at times breaking through the clouds upon the snow, some of the mountain peaks robed in mists, and others picturesque and rising in superb and lofty majesty, it was a sight that could hardly be equaled anywhere. We passed through the Saint Gotthard tunnel, about ten miles in length. Electric power is used in driving the trains, secured from the Swiss waterfalls.

Cathedral at Milan

In Milan is the world famous cathedral, the construction of which was started in the fourteenth century. Marvelous was the conception and execution of this structure. All is of marble. Through the aisles and corridors we passed, alongside of the great columns. There was a very subdued light. Exquisitely carved marble is in the ceiling. Here and there were many candles burning, and before them were worshipers. On the ground floor we entered the treasure room, where we were shown sacred vessels, crucifixes, etc., of solid gold and silver, some adorned with precious stones. We climbed to the top of the cathedral. From here, in looking down upon the forest of spires, each surmounted with a statue, one is impressed by the stupendous size of the structure—yet delicate, lace like, is much of the work that greets the eye. The final test now comes: to what extent is the edifice ministering to the real spiritual and community life of the people?

In going southward the sunny skies of Italy appeared before Milan was reached; a pleasant change from the northern weather.

Stop in Venice

Venice was on our way to Trieste, and in this city we spent one day and two nights. At the railway station we were met and taken in a gondola, a small Venetian boat, to where we were to stay. No horse or auto was seen in the city; but the gondolas are about as numerous as autos in other cities.

The Roman cathedral built in honor of Saint Mark, of New Testament reputation, is the chief object of interest. In it is combined wealth from many nations; the richest marbles are there; no paintings, but mosaics. It is claimed by the church that the body of Saint Mark was brought from Egypt in the eighth century, and though in the fire that destroyed the building that formerly stood where Saint Mark's now stands, is under the high altar of the present building.

In the city are a number of plague churches. In the present age when an epidemic strikes, chief attention is given to the sanitary and hygienic conditions; in the Middle Ages the existence of disease on a large scale in a community was regarded as a divine punishment, and new churches were vowed and built. The chief among these, and just across the Grand Canal from where we stayed, is the Church of Santa Maria della Salute. Around the Adriatic are many of these plague churches.

To-day only the outline of the coast of Italy is seen through the clouds.

We are due at Brindisi at eleven o'clock this morning, where I will endeavor to mail this letter. The Mediterranean is often rough, but the prospects appear fair for a good voyage to Alexandria, where we are due the afternoon of the 25th; then by rail to Jerusalem.

Tithes and Prosperity

By Bishop J. A. Koehler

There are two kinds of laws, statutory laws and natural laws. Statutory laws are laws that men make for their own government. But man has nothing to do with the making or unmaking of natural laws; they exist regardless of anything that men may say or think or do.

Legal and Moral Obligations

There are two kinds of duties or obligations corresponding to these two kinds of laws; there are legal obligations and there are moral obligations. Taxes, for example, are a legal obligation, but tithes are a moral obligation. Some men are cunning enough to escape the force of legal laws, but no man ever lived who could find a way to get out of the range of a moral law. It is as impossible to escape the force of a moral law as it is to get away from ourselves and to separate ourselves from our own nature.

The law and order and prosperity of the "state" of which we are citizens grow out of the attitudes and actions of men with regard to political affairs. The law and order and prosperity of the church likewise depend upon the attitude and actions of men with regard to the affairs of the government of God. Only when the settled behavior of men shows that they both know what the laws of God are and that they have pleasure in observing those laws can the law of the church be maintained, its order preserved, and its prosperity realized. No nation can prosper that cannot derive from its citizens a revenue sufficient for the purposes of government. Neither can the church thrive unless the members of the church place in the storehouse of the Lord the funds that are needed for the purpose of promoting the affairs of the church.

Rights of Governments to Tax

Governments have rights to tax their citizens because it is through government that men individually derive rights and liberties in common with their fellows; liberty to engage in industry unmolested; the right of property, and of participation in the affairs of government, and so on.

God, through the church, asserts his right to the "tithes" of the people because (on the one hand) it is through the government of the church that the privileges of the gospel are derived. It is because there is a church in action that we enjoy the fellowship and communion of Saints; it is through its ministrations that wounded spirits are healed, afflictions assuaged, moral instruction and inspiration imparted, and on the whole the clouds of doubt and destruction and despair dissipated, and the hope of eternity assured and brightened.

Tithes Are Moral Obligations

The fact that the church is the medium through which such inestimable blessings are broadcast among men is the fact that makes tithing a "debt," a moral debt, an obligation from which none can hope to escape. Failure to meet that obligation is as certain to be followed with disastrous results as a failure to tell the truth or to be kind or to discharge any other moral obligation that the circumstance of our lives impose upon us. The law of tithes is in effect a declaration of a claim that the group has upon the individual for services rendered.

If the digestive organs of our bodies should cease grinding up food substances, and if the circulatory organs or members of our bodies should discontinue to carry prepared food to the different parts of the body to be used up in bodily action, our health would soon become impaired and death would finally result.

All bodies, both animal and social, must have sustaining organs. In every social undertaking there must be members of organs which bear the "burden" of providing the material substances needed to maintain its life. In the Church of Christ this responsibility rests upon each and every member in the measure of his ability to contribute to the welfare of the church.

Prohibition could never have triumphed except for the labors and sacrifices of those who were friendly to the cause. Surely the friends of the liquor interests did not devote their substances to the advancement of prohibition. Surely the church cannot hope to triumph with the aid of those who do not appreciate its values. The church has no other friends than its own members from whom it can hope to receive the support that will make it possible to establish the kingdom of God in the lives of men. If the members of the church do not carry the "burden" (so-called) of the work of the church, there can be no church, there can be no winning of the world for Christ. If the members of the church do not bring their tithes into the storehouse it is a sign that the church does not have even its own "members" for its friends.

Law of Tithing

"BRING" you all the tithes into the storehouse, is the rule of God. "Bring!" Should the church be under the necessity of begging its devotees to do their common duty? Does "love" require to be "coaxed out"? Are the subjects of our devotion last to be considered in the disposition of our income? Is it characteristic of love to seek only its own? If we know what love of others is, we know that it does not require to be coaxed out; but on the other hand we know that love seeks to find its way out; love is not static nor merely latent, nor dormant, nor merely potential; love is kinetic and dynamic; love just naturally must find some way to please and promote the welfare and happiness of the objects of its affection. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse." "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of thine increase." It is useless to proclaim one's devotion and loyalty to the cause of Christ unless one's time, talent, and resources are spent with some regard to the needs and the advancement of the concerns of the church.

The measure of the flow of tithes into the storehouse is one of the indexes to the solidarity of the group. The willingness of the response of the members is the measure of their conversion to the ideals of the church. It is the sacrifices of the members of the group for the purpose of enabling the group to express its ideals that tell the depth of their interest in and love for the things for which the church stands.

Morale of the Church

The morale of the church depends upon the devotion of its members. If people are unconcerned, if they have other interests (private interests) that claim prior attention, the morale of the church is sure to suffer. Those who give that the church may live, are the ones who themselves are alive in Christ. Those who give the most in service and in substance in proportion to their ability are the ones into whose lives the church puts its richest blessings; these are they who come to have the deepest appreciation and love of the work, and whose lives in turn are most greatly enriched. To live, one must give. "God so loved—that he gave."

The success of the missionary program of the church, the success of the efforts to develop its institutions for the improvement of the lives of the existing members, the success of the work of human redemption, depends (among other things) upon the tithes and offerings of the members of the church. The interest that one has in the work of the church, his appreciation of it, and his devotion to it, can find their attestation only in the individual and personal contributions that the individual member makes for the sake of the prosperity of the church.

How Should a Christian Live?

Sermon by Elder Frederick A. Smith at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, February 24, 1924.

We have chosen for our text this morning a little statement made by the Christ himself, found in the seventh chapter of Matthew, twelfth verse, in your King James translation: "Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets." (Inspired Version.)

Our subject this morning is, "How to live a Christian life." I presume the text that I have read if properly applied would answer the question, What is a Christian? Our viewpoint on that may have something to do with our idea and understanding of what kind of life a Christian must live. A definition of a Christian as we have it is one who believes or professes the religion of Christ; second, a follower of Christ. If you are to take that definition, especially the latter part of it—a follower of Christ, then I presume the most of us would be compelled to recognize that to follow him and follow him intelligently and properly would necessitate upon our part a very careful consideration not only of the life that he led but of the teachings that he gave, of the doctrine that he presented.

I know some do not like that word doctrine, but reflect, that is the word he used, so if we are going to be Christians we will have to consider it and make it a part of the life we are going to live in this great drama of life.

This little text that I have read this morning is more far-reaching than a person would probably think, if he will examine it carefully. I have said before and I think I am justified in saying it now that there is more ground covered in that one small statement than any other one possibly that we have in the scriptures: "Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets."

The Doctrine of Christ

The religion of Christ as we find it in the scriptures and carried out in the history of the Christ demonstrates that in this statement that he made, he outlined for us some of the practical workings—what we will term the doctrine of Christ—and we shall strive this morning for a little while to interest you in the thought of what this may cover and see if we can gather from it something of the life that of necessity we must lead if we are followers of Christ.

In all the work that Christ did when he was here upon the earth, he not only demonstrated his teachings but their practical application as well, for his whole life was one constant ministration to his fellows. And I think if you will study it you will be led to the conclusion that if we follow the Christ we are going to recognize more clearly and surely our relationship to each other as well as our relationship to God. There can be no genuine brotherhood unless the principles of the doctrine of Christ as given to us shall be made manifest in our lives.

In another statement which he gave to us he repeated the two first commandments, the great commandment which he said was, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart," and the second which he said was like unto it, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." These are some of the teachings of Christ. Do we believe it? We may profess to believe it, but, my friends, are we following Christ in this? Have we done it?

Manifestation of Love in Christians

If we look carefully over it we are confronted with the thought that to carry this into practice and to exercise it in our lives as we should is to manifest in the work of every day a spirit of love, the great characteristic of the Christ himself. And with that spirit burning in our bosoms, actuating our thought, our conduct, our actions, we must of necessity put ourselves in a better condition, in a different attitude from that which is manifest in the world around us. And as we view the matter there can be no true Christianity without love. We may boast of it, we may talk about it, we may eulogize it as manifested in Christ, but, my friends, we cannot act it unless we have it within our souls; and if we do not have it, then we are lacking in the characteristics of a Christian and we are not living a Christian life.

There are many evidences in the world where individuals have been very kind and very thoughtful and they have always brought forth words of praise and admiration and they have always brought to the individual the respect of the community in which they lived, I care not where it was. They have always given to the individual a certain degree of peace—peace of mind, comfort, and satisfaction which cannot be found without it. I care not who the individual may be or where he may be, as sure as he leaves this principle of Christ, just that sure, my friends, he finds trouble and perplexity and distress and is not living the life of a Christian.

Freedom Given by the Gospel

Jesus gave utterance to another declaration that would manifest itself in contrast to that of a Christian life. He said, "The way of the transgressor is hard." In my short experience in life and a study of the conditions which surround me I have been forced to recognize the truthfulness of this statement made manifest around me every day, "The way of the transgressor is hard." I might make this statement now and ask you to think it over, that the easiest way to live, the happiest condition that can come to us is the life that Christ lived, that he gave, for it brings to you satisfaction and comfort of soul and mind and body that nothing else in this world ever brought to humanity or can bring to them. They may talk about it being hard to live the life of a Christian, but I must take issue with that.

I believe it is the easiest life to live, for the simple reason that just as soon as we put ourselves in that attitude we free ourselves from many of the perplexities and the anxieties and the fears that beset us on every side when we are outside of the work of God, and there comes as a consequence a freer condition, and the words of the Master are true when he said, "The gospel shall make you free," and if it makes you free you will be free indeed. There is no mistake about it, my friends, under this condition you fear nothing, you have nothing and no one to fear, and if you go back and study your own life you will discover that whenever you have followed the practical application of the statements of the Master you have been absolutely free. There has been no fear, not a particle. You don't have to fear anyone. Can you say that when you have been in transgression? Can you say that when you have failed to keep the commandments of God? Are you not conscious as soon as you step aside from the path of righteousness the Master has pointed out that it at once brings into your mind the consciousness of your own guilt? And there comes fear immediately that some one else will discover it and know that you have done wrong. You cannot escape that conclusion. It is there.

Application of the Golden Rule

Now, my friends, when you talk about Christianity, about what a man should do to live a Christian life, we ask you to look carefully to the thought expressed in our text this morning, in this little text which says, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you: do ye even so to them." Now for a few moments let us examine this. What do you want men to do to you? Every one of you would answer without hesitation, No harm. You want others to manifest toward you the principle of kindness and love. That is what you would like. There is not one of you but what would love it. It is a thing that every one of you would enjoy. It would beget in you that spirit of confidence and love toward your fellows that must of necessity bring to our lives that peculiar recognition of brotherhood that God has referred to and that is a part of the Christian life. How long will it take us to wake up to this condition, and sense surely what it means to be a follower of Jesus Christ, a professor of the religion of Jesus Christ?

I want you to catch the thought this morning as we dwell upon this for a little season, for we as a church of all others probably ought to manifest to the world everywhere the true workings of the spirit of Christianity in the lives we live, the associations around us, that we may reflect to those with whom we come in contact that spirit of love and brotherhood, the principles of righteousness, and recognize the rights of our brother and fellow in such a way as shall bring from him the response that is necessary that there may be a mutual manifestation of love and that practical working out of the principles of Christianity in our lives.

Now if you take this little text, you say at once, "Well, I wouldn't want anybody to go around and talk about me and abuse me." Well, then, don't talk about anybody and don't abuse anybody. That is the very essence of that piece of advice given there. You don't want anybody to steal from you, therefore you should not steal from others. If this is put into operation and by every individual is recognized, at once we are face to face with the fact that everyone else will have that same spirit and we will get rid of this banditry that there is so much of and every other form of vice and graft. Even these slippery oil grafters would have to stop, and our politicians would find themselves face to face with something that would check them. We would have honest government, wouldn't we?

Scope of the Gospel Principle

If we look over the situation we can see that this little principle, small as it may be in the space it occupies, the few words used in the expression, if put into operation must act as a reflex of the teaching of God, the religion of Jesus. This same spirit if put into operation between nations would operate in the same way. One nation would not want to take advantage of another and every other nation would have that same spirit, and we would have the end of war.

You think for a few moments, my friends, and you will see how broad it is in its possibility of application. You will discover at once that it cannot recognize a partisanship of such a character that you will say that you are going to do so and so without any regard for its effect or influence upon your brother. You cannot live the Christian life and live it in that kind of way. To have recognition of the application, love must come to you more fully and make its inroads upon you until it will root out of you that peculiar selfish nature or that partisan idea or that disposition to take one side of anything and forget that your brother has an interest with you, until it will bring to you that condition of peace and unity and love that God said should come.

That is what Christianity is going to do. That is what the life of a Christian must bring to us. Until we can reach that condition, we are not living as we ought to and representing the true principles of Christianity.

The Religion of Jesus Christ

I am glad the definition in its declaration states freely and frankly that this is the religion of Jesus Christ, not any religion, but the religion of Jesus Christ; for the religion of Jesus Christ is based on that principle of love—love for God, love for your fellows, love for the principles of righteousness, love for virtue that will manifest itself in the individual until it shall make the individual like Christ himself. And then, my friends, the working out of that which we call the life of a Christian has accomplished the work designed of God.

We haven't reached that yet. We haven't gotten to that position yet, but there are other features that can be recognized in this which we may ask you to consider just briefly.

There is an interesting statement over here in James. I think I shall examine it just briefly this morning in connection with what the Master said, for he presents to us a statement which I want to read. In the first chapter of James, 26th and 27th verses:

If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the vices of the world.

What It Means to Keep the Faith

Why, it looks easy, but, my friends, let us look carefully at the statement again, "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." It will not save him. It cannot bring him to the position it ought to bring him to. In the examination of the thought let us ask the question, Am I in the faith? Do I believe the religion of Jesus Christ? And in your examination please let me plead with you to be fair enough and conscientious enough and thoughtful enough to examine it from the standpoint that Christ has given to us and not from the human side, so that in your examination you can discover whether you are living the religion and exercising your faith along the lines God laid down or whether you are yielding to the influences of your own nature and peculiarities of mankind and selfishly undertaking to adjust the things that you know God has taught in such a way that it will aid you in doing things that you cannot help but see are out of harmony with the teachings of Jesus Christ.

There is altogether too much in the world of the disposition to conclude that because God is loving and is kind he will wink at our mistakes and overlook our follies and forget our selfishness and dispositions to gratify our own will, that we will seek to justify ourselves in some of these things because others may do them or because we think it won't hurt anything. But, my friends, it is not living your religion in such a way that it will make you a Christian in doing it. Are you moving toward your fellows in thought or action or word in harmony with the statement of our text? For to my mind that is a practical expression of Christianity as given to us by the Savior. And the life of a Christian measured by that must always be governed by the principle of love.

Turn to Romans the 13th chapter and there you will discover the idea expressed again in which the apostle enumerates a number of commandments of God and winds up with this declaration, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, for love worketh no evil to his neighbor." A Christian life must be based on the principle of love—love for your fellows; for your God, for virtue, honor, integrity, righteousness, that shall impel you always to recognize that which God has given to us, that which will cleanse our hearts and cleanse our souls and make us like him.

Necessity of Humility

I want you to get the thought along that line, and if you do, my friends, then I am satisfied we will be able to see the remedy for a great many of the evils of the world to-day. It may mean humility upon our part, humbling ourselves and bringing ourselves down into subjection, overcoming possibly some of our own dispositions, even stopping some things and recognizing some people that otherwise we would not have done. Yet, if you are going to occupy that position and live the life of a Christian you must recognize this in order to bring yourself in close rapport with God that you might express in your life, in your conversation, in your thoughts even that peculiar characteristic of Christ that shall be a pure, clean life, one that has compassion for your fellows, one that recognizes the mistakes of your neighbor and in the recognition of those mistakes does not altogether condemn although it may not condone. But in spite of all these there can come to you yet the spirit of love and kindness and consideration for the one who may be so unfortunate as to make the mistake or the error.

Faith

Have we reached that point? Have we come to that position? If so, then, my friends, we can recognize some of these things which the apostle says, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the vices of the world." There could be much said upon that point this morning, but we are going to call your attention to just one or two statements and then ask you to look carefully to yourself and see to what extent possibly you have manifested in your own life a character like Christ's. Here are some of the things essentially necessary. You say you believe in God, that you have faith in God and Christ. Let us see: "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue." Faith? Have you got it? Do you really believe in God? Have you got faith in Christ's teachings, in his religion? If so, you have the foundation to base your hope upon. Have you got love?

Virtue

"Add to your faith virtue." Virtue covers a great deal. Virtue means righteousness, purity. Do you have it?

And to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: For so an entrance shall be administered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.—2 Peter 1: 5-11.

Knowledge of God

"Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge." I want to emphasize that thought of knowledge. Knowledge of what? That is the thing I want you to get for just a few minutes. Why, every one of you would answer without hesitation, Knowledge of all good things. Yes, we will emphasize it that way, and knowledge of God and knowledge of the religion of Jesus Christ, a knowledge of the teachings and application of the principles of the Christian life that he has laid down, a knowledge of how to apply those principles to your own life that you might bring yourself into subjection to the divine will and reflect in your own life the divine character. That is the knowledge we need—a knowledge of what God has written for our good, a knowledge of his Spirit that we may discern the right from the wrong. If we can get that, my friends, in connection with our faith, and exercise it as we ought to do, we will recognize it is the application of the text that we have offered to you this morning as representing the true principle of life that a Christian must live and without which we cannot live as we ought to live. The world is suffering to-day because of lack of the true Christian life. The world is suffering for that principle which the Master made manifest in the individual, in the community, in the state, in the government, in the world, that which brings to you that condition of peace, genuine peace, true peace that God has said should come and ought to come in the exercise of the principles of his religion. If we have not found it, friends, the fault does not lie with God, it lies with us, with mankind who has failed to make the application of the doctrine of Christ, the principles of truth, the everlasting gospel, that will save mankind. And if we shall in the exercise of our faith add to that faith virtue, purity, and knowledge and to knowledge temperance, and patience and godliness and brotherly kindness and charity, we shall rejoice in the things that pertain to God and we will be able to drink at the fountain that God has given, that which gives to us spiritual life and reflects to the world the true Christian character through the life that we live. May God help us to that end.

Attack on the Oregon law requiring attendance at public schools has been made in the form of an application for injunction brought by Hill Military Academy, of Portland, against Oregon State officers to prevent them from executing the law. The law is scheduled to become effective September 1, 1926. It will seriously affect private and parochial schools.

LETTERS

Reports Missionary Field Ripe on Grand Cayman Island

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

GEORGETOWN, GRAND CAYMAN ISLAND, WEST INDIES, February 14.—No doubt Brother May has given you a survey of the work here in Cayman, and I believe he and I agree in all the matters pertaining to the situation, but I wish to write you a few lines, as I believe you are personally interested in this mission.

I have been traveling in the interest of the church for eighteen years, but I believe there is the best prospect for the work here that I ever saw anywhere. This seems to be the opportune time to put forth efforts in these islands.

Our crowds at the services are very encouraging indeed. And almost every day people from the different parts of the island are in to see us about going to their place next. I am of the opinion we will have but few idle moments between now and the mosquito season.

People over on the island of Cayman Brack are begging for us to go over there.

My! how they do appreciate the gospel. There are no attractions on the island as in most places, and the people would surely appreciate all the departments of church work.

Brother May and I are batching in a house, centrally located in town and just across the street from the church, which is reserved for missionary headquarters. It is a five-room house, furnished, and they charge us only ten dollars a month. The climate here is ideal, and there is plenty of fruit. Staple groceries are higher than in America, but taking everything as it comes I think living is just about as cheap as anywhere.

I trust everything is going nicely in Zion.

Former Pastor Returns to Hold Meetings at Jonesport Branch

JONESPORT, MAINE, March 6.—The Saints in this part of the Lord's vineyard are enjoying a good spirit, and are the recipients of many of the Lord's blessings.

Some twenty years ago, Elder Calvin H. Rich was the local pastor. Since that time his travels as a missionary have carried him into many parts of the country, but he has never been back to Jonesport until last month. With Brother Rich stationed in the western part of the State, the Jonesport Saints felt that they wanted to see him here again. Accordingly, arrangements were made for a series of meetings here, with Brother Rich as the speaker.

The interest was good from the start. The meetings continued for two weeks. One of the interesting features was the question box conducted each night.

The Jonesport church has a seating capacity of about three hundred and was well filled each night. Sunday nights the capacity was overtaxed.

Before he left he had the privilege of baptizing one sister, and we feel assured that many more have shown a decided interest in the message of the gospel.

Death of Sister Yarwood

The presence of Brother Rich at the exact time when he was here was greatly appreciated by the writer, as he came when we very much needed his assistance, during the final illness of Sister Chelline's mother, familiarly and widely known to the church as "Aunt Jane" Yarwood. Sister Yarwood was one of the pioneers of the Reorganization in the Massachusetts District, and was a faithful member of the church for more than half a century. Her church home was always in the Massachusetts District until one year ago. When we entered the service of the general ministry and were sent to Jonesport, she came with us, leaving all the associations of her lifetime. She soon became endeared to the Saints and townspeople in her new environment. She passed away February 21, and was buried the 23d, Elder Rich preaching the funeral sermon.

Beals Island Meetings

During the month of January I conducted a two weeks' series of meetings on Beals Island with good interest, resulting in one baptism at that time. We are hopeful of more, both on the island and in Jonesport. There have been some unusual manifestations of the blessing of healing in this branch recently. For all our blessings we thank our heavenly Father. Our desire is that we may all unite in going forward toward the consummation of God's work.

Reports Progress of Work in Southern Ohio District

UNION FURNACE, OHIO, March 1.—Would like to tell of the progress of the Southern Ohio District the past year. In my official visits I find as a general rule the work is on the upward trend and the Saints seem hopeful and willing to do what they can to further the gospel work.

During the past year McDermott Mission was organized into a branch, with Elder Clarence Current in charge. This branch has grown by leaps and bounds, and with such a man as Brother Current at the helm, the work will continue to prosper there.

Nelsonville Branch has a wide-awake band of workers with a united priesthood and they will have their new house of worship paid for in June.

The Plains Branch is also right on the job and have a very able leader in the person of Elder John Gabriel. I believe I can report the greatest material progress from Iron-ton Branch as they have just recently moved into their new church and are succeeding in getting quite a number of outsiders interested. Much credit is due to Brother B. B. Holland, chairman of the building committee. By his faithful and untiring efforts the Saints there have a house of worship of which any district might be proud. Brother Charles Kinstler is pastor of the branch and Sister Anna Kinstler is the capable leader of the young folks and is quite successful in creating an interest among those of the adolescent age.

Quite a number of our young people are looking forward to attending the Young People's Convention in June.

I enjoy going among the Saints and in my weak way trying to encourage them and help them to awaken to the responsibility that lies upon them, and if I have been able to help them, may the credit be given to whom all credit is due.

May the Lord prosper his work everywhere is my prayer.

GARD H. KIRKENDALL.

Sister Elizabeth Depew, of Windsor, Ontario, writes that the smallpox scare throughout the border States, and the general vaccination, has had some effect upon the church attendance. The Saints so far have not been afflicted, yet public gatherings of all kinds are affected.

Our Call

By Adah B. Goddard

The call to-day is for service,
Let each one do what he can
To establish the kingdom of Zion,
Be it woman or child or man.

The call to-day is for service,
Think ye you can sit and rest,
When our ears are filled with the crying
Of murmuring nations, unrest?

Nations that are greedy and lustful,
Of whom the prophets long ago wrote,
Ready, without a moment's warning,
To spring at each other's throat.

The call to-day is for service,
Think ye you can sit and rest,
When our ears are filled with the crying,
Of the poor, the weak, the oppressed?

The call to-day is for service,
Think ye you can lie down and sleep,
When your dreams are disturbed by the pleading
Of children with cold and bare feet?

The pleading of pinched little faces,
Of tiny hands blue with the cold,
And you know the help will not be long lasting,
If you give them silver or gold.

The call to-day is for service,
Not alone for self, but each other,
Think ye you can gain life eternal,
If ye heed not the cry of your brother?

The great need to-day is for Zion,
Let us teach it and live it as well,
That when the poor and oppressed call upon us,
We can clothe them and all their fears quell.

Let us lift up the yoke of the needy,
Let us warm those cold little feet
Of the children crying with hunger
And pleading for help in the street.

The great need to-day is for Zion;
Let us teach it and live it as well,
That when nations arise against nation,
We can in peace and in safety dwell.

The call to-day is for service,
Let us establish, with peace, not the sword,
The kingdom of Zion among us,
And be ready for its King and our Lord.

Testifies of Fine Spirit at Holden Stake Conference

From a Letter to President Elbert A. Smith

GRANDVIEW, MISSOURI, February 22.—I had the privilege of attending the Holden stake conference, which convened at Lees Summit, February 2 and 3, and I wish to tell you I never attended meetings anywhere, outside of prayer service, where I enjoyed the Spirit of God to the extent I did while there. It also accompanied me home, and I have been meditating almost constantly since that time upon the splendid thoughts I received from the talk by President F. M. Smith, yourself [Elbert A. Smith], and Apostle E. J. Gleazer.

ADAH B. GODDARD.

People on Grand Cayman Island Welcome Missionaries

GEORGETOWN, GRAND CAYMAN, WEST INDIES, February 14.—We arrived here last Wednesday night. The Carribean Sea trip from about sixty miles this side of the Isle of Pines was very rough. We sailed one hundred and forty miles or thereabouts through rough seas, but were fortunate enough to be anchored inside some keys during a severe storm just the night before we ventured out into the deep sea.

Brother N. L. Booker, who was traveling with me, was a little seasick, since it was his first schooner trip, but stood the trip very well.

The people here are all glad to see us. They had waited patiently and long. Had we not come by way of Havana and the Isle of Pines, we would have been in some very severe weather on the schooner Drew. As it was, however, we had a nice time en route, at Havana, and five days with Elder Carr at the Isle of Pines, before we left on a Caymanian schooner, the Tuecoi, which left for here the Sunday after the Tuesday we landed there.

We are having meetings at present with the same interest as ever, and find people in all parts of the island desirous of having us hold meetings with them.

J. CHARLES MAY.

Mulberry Saints Enjoy Missionary Meetings

MULBERRY, KANSAS, February 26.—The Saints here are enjoying the services held by Elder Amos T. Higdon. Although the weather has been cold there has been a good attendance of nonmembers each night.

One man has given his name for baptism and others will follow. The Saints are being helped and strengthened.

The local editor is giving the Saints considerable space each week, to announce the sermons and meetings.

MRS. CHARLES A. DOOLEY.

Missionaries Arrive at Hilo, Hawaii

From a Letter to the First Presidency

HILO, HAWAII, February 19.—After spending nearly two weeks with the Saints in Honolulu, we took the Inter-Island Steamship Mawna Kea for Hilo. We believe the time spent in Honolulu with Brother and Sister McConley and the rest of the Saints will be of profit to our future work. The experience did much to help us get acquainted with the ways of the Hawaiian, Japanese, and Chinese, and we are glad to say that we have some splendid members of the church among these people. We also appreciate our short association with Brother G. J. Waller and feel sure that our labors together will be very pleasant. He is a man of great faith and worth to this mission. Thursday evening, the 14th, about three hundred Saints and friends gathered on the church lot for a short entertainment and to express farewells and wishes to the missionaries. Brother M. A. McConley was to leave the following Saturday for Australia, and Sister Williams and I on Friday for Hilo.

Met by Saints

Steamships are unlike trains that are more often late than on time; they sometimes get in ahead of time. Leaving Honolulu at three o'clock Friday afternoon, we were to be at Hilo at 7.30 a. m., Saturday. About six o'clock we could see the city only a short distance away, but, as some one said we were to lie in the harbor a while before landing, we went to breakfast. This was a mistake, for we pulled into the landing at 6.30 while we were in the dining room. We found some of the Saints awaiting us, and met a number of others coming who thought we would arrive at 7.30, and though we had never seen these people before, it was a very happy meeting.

We enjoyed a splendid degree of liberty at both services on Sunday, and feel much at home with the Saints here. We met with the priesthood of the branch in the afternoon and found the brethren ready to renew their efforts in line of duty. If we can retain the spirit now enjoyed among the priesthood, the success of the work is sure. We shall work and pray to that end.

We trust that the Lord will manifest his favor to the strengthening of his people everywhere.

D. J. WILLIAMS.

Debate Held at Kingston

KINGSTON, MISSOURI, February 27.—A debate between Elder A. M. Baker, of Koshkonong, Missouri, and Reverend Freeman Jones, of Hancock, Missouri, was held at Cowgill, Missouri, February 5 to 14, and was repeated at Kingston, Missouri, February 24.

Elder Baker affirmed the Latter Day Saint church to be in harmony with the New Testament in form, organization, faith, and practice; Reverend Jones affirmed the Church of Christ to be in harmony with the New Testament in form, organization, faith, doctrine, and practice.

Although roads were scarcely passable and weather stormy almost continually throughout the whole debate, the churches at both places were nicely filled. It is hoped much good will be derived from the interesting debate. Both parties conducted themselves as gentlemen throughout the whole discussion and closed with the best of feelings.

It is hoped that it will be the means of causing many in the vicinity of both Cowgill and Kingston to investigate the work and be convinced of the truthfulness of this latter-day gospel.

Elder Baker, though small in stature, proved himself mighty in defense of the truth, and that quality, not quantity, is what counts.

MRS. JAMES DAWSON.

Walthill Saints Remember Beautiful Sacramental Service

WALTHILL, NEBRASKA, March 2.—The sacramental service of March 2 is one that will be long remembered by the Saints of this branch. The service was in charge of Brothers B. F. Creel and Amos Samson. For one hour and forty-five minutes the Saints were permitted to enjoy the testimonies of the many blessings from the bountiful hand of almighty God, and the wonderful outpouring of God's Spirit, so much so that it brought tears of joy to the eyes of all.

There was a spirit of love present which the Saints so much enjoyed that the very air seemed laden with the peaceful influence of the Holy Spirit.

The spirit of prophecy in admonition to the young rested upon Brother Amos Samson, one of the Lamanite brethren. It was also present in the testimony of Sister Nettie Solomon who spoke of the blessings of God to her family and among her brethren and sisters, the Lamanites. She desired the prayers of the Saints for herself and her people.

As I write, I, too, ask the Saints to lift up their voices to the Almighty in heaven for this chosen people of God, who are trying to find him who blesses them and was with them in the days of old. Oh, if we could only enjoy an outpouring of God's Spirit in the future as the Saints here did to-day!

There is a tremendous work to be done here, and it can be accomplished only by the help of God. The promise is to us if we will obey. Let us humble ourselves, and God will hear us.

The Saints of Walthill will lift up their voices in prayer each day for the Saints wherever they are, and the prayers of the Saints are asked in our behalf, although we be thousands of miles apart.

STANLEY BENNER.

Eight Baptisms Follow Hiteman Meetings

From a Letter to the First Presidency

CHARITON, IOWA, February 29.—The meetings at Hiteman are now history, and I am pleased to say that they were pronounced a success. I never enjoyed working more than during this series of services. In spite of the extremely bad weather which prevailed throughout, the attendance was very good, varying from 75 to 200, which is considered excellent for Hiteman under the present circumstances.

Five Baptized

The Saints supported the effort loyally, and a good choir rendered excellent help each night. Last Sunday was homecoming day, and it proved to be the banner day of the series. The Spirit was present in great measure, and all were made to rejoice under its kindling influence. One of the most soul-stirring events of the day was the baptismal service, at which time I had the pleasure of inducting five precious souls into the kingdom of God. It was indeed a most impressive service. We had to cut the ice, which was about a foot thick, for the baptisms. A heavy snow had fallen during the night, making a beautiful setting suggestive of purity. A goodly crowd gathered at the water's edge, and after an inspiring hymn and an earnest, heartfelt prayer, the candidates bravely came forward and were buried in the sacred waters of regeneration. It was an event that I shall not soon forget.

I was to have concluded my efforts Sunday, but owing to the death of one of the Sunday school pupils I stayed over to conduct the funeral. The nature of the illness with which the child died prohibited us from holding the service in the house, so I had the unusual experience of preaching to a congregation outdoors in the wintertime.

Farewell Gathering

On Tuesday evening the missionary heart was made glad when the Saints had a farewell gathering in his honor. A splendid program was rendered at this time, and incidentally a generous purse was presented to the missionary, together with another purse to be sent to his companion far away. It is very gratifying to know that one's efforts are appreciated, and it makes one feel that whatever sacrifices may be incident to missionary life are well worth making.

Three More Baptized

At this farewell gathering three others requested me to baptize them before leaving Hiteman, so we were happy to attend to this on Wednesday afternoon, at which time the same beautiful Spirit was present as prevailed at the Sunday service.

The Hiteman Saints have a way of entwining themselves around a fellow's heartstrings that is irresistible, and I shall long remember my sojourn with them.

JOHN F. MARTIN.

Branch Enjoying Good Work at Simcoe, Ontario

SIMCOE, ONTARIO, March 8.—It has been a bit severe this winter for the Saints, and work has been slack, but the Saints are doing good church work here.

The Sunday school is going fine under the leadership of good teachers. There are about thirty-five Saints here. It is thought that before long the branch will increase in numbers. There were two new members added this winter. The hall used for services is not big, but it is comfortable and heated well in the cold weather.

The sermons of late have been wonderful, the branch elder being the speaker. He is not only a good speaker, but he puts his heart in his work. He is one of God's men.

O. D. TURNER.

Topical Discussion Replaces Regular Sermon

From a Letter to the First Presidency

PITTSBURG, KANSAS, March 3.—We have had fine attendance of late, and most of the Saints seem anxious to do their best. We have outlined several studies for Sunday morning instead of the usual morning service. These are on the topic of "Stewardship." The method we are using is, that we form the congregation into a big class and discuss stewardship from the outlines received from Brother F. M. McDowell while in Independence last January.

Junior Department

We have also organized a junior department, and Sister Blackmore is telling the church history in story form to the juniors. The juniors have their own prayer service, assembling with the adult Saints every sacrament Sunday. Talks are given on different suitable subjects in a way that they can understand. We are finding it a success.

Interchurch Banquet

During the month an interchurch banquet was held, in which we were asked to cooperate. This banquet was for the officers of the various churches to get together for the development of a more friendly spirit. Four of our branch officers attended, myself included. With the other ministers of the city I was accorded time on the program. We believe that good was accomplished and that more people will understand a little about us. Two of our young men are now serving on the permanent committee of the get-together effort.

We were very pleased to hear from one of our high school girls how her teacher made an intelligent explanation of the difference between our church and the Mormons when another student asked her if the Latter Day Saints here were Mormons.

We are hoping that good will eventually come of this effort to break down prejudice.

JOHN BLACKMORE.

Sister Iva Lamb, of the Joyfield Branch in Michigan, writes that there have been no church services there for some time owing to the weather conditions this winter.

Excellent Conference of New York and Pennsylvania District

From a Letter to the First Presidency

SCRANTON, PENNSYLVANIA, February 26.—Just to inform you of the most excellent time had and enjoyed by the Saints at the district conference of the New York and Philadelphia District held at Scranton, Pennsylvania, February 23 and 24. Perhaps I might be justified if I said that I have not attended a district conference in years that would compare with it. The blessed Spirit of the Master was present in power to the edification, instruction, and satisfaction to the souls of the Saints. Could a means have been provided whereby there might have been a preserving of the spiritual energy and power present for future use we might have had a supply that would have furnished us with a working force for a whole year. Surely we could sing with a full understanding that beautiful hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love." Our souls surely did magnify God; and may this be to all here the beginning of a better day for the New York and Philadelphia District.

A splendid representation was present and neither did the attendance diminish through the day, but rather increased until at the night service the house was packed with attentive listeners, and only too soon were the good-bys said.

Our hope is still high. The signs of the times are plainly visible. May God add his strength to all his people, the followers as well as the leaders, is my prayer. Success.

A. E. STONE.

Island Missionaries Learn Native Language

From a Letter to the First Presidency

PAPEETE, TAHITI, February 6.—Brother Farthing and I visited the island of Makatea, 120 miles distant, last week, and succeeded in correcting their branch records; also made an initiative effort in settling their difficulty over a church building site.

Brother and Sister Farthing are doing very well in their study of the language. I think it will not be long before they will be able to converse and work in the language. They are also going to continue their study of French, which will prove to be a very valuable asset to them here.

My work of the month has been practically the same as that which was reported to you last month. Several church sites have been settled, and the papers made out; additional work on the statistician's records has been done, and between forty and fifty native songs are ready for publication.

Leaves for New Zealand

I will leave Papeete, Tahiti, on March 6, arriving at New Zealand March 15, where Brother McConley and I will meet and spend two or three weeks among the branches. From there we will go to Sydney for their mission conference in Australia, which will convene on the 18th of April.

We are well and working hard, for we must separate soon, and the responsibilities thrust upon Brother and Sister Farthing will be hard for them to perform.

CLYDE F. ELLIS.

M. S. Spangler, of Pomona, California, writes: "I am pleased with the many good things I read in the church papers, and with the progress our church has made in so short a time. . . . I regret I have done so little, but I love the people of God and hope to be numbered among them when Jesus comes."

Church Building at Morgantown to Be Opened Soon

VAN VOORHIS, WEST VIRGINIA, March 10.—I am glad to report that West Virginia District has a live corps of workers. I think this is due, to a large extent, to the fact that all the priesthood are organized and come together twice a year to discuss questions that are vital to the progress of this great latter-day work. We have only been organized about four years, but the results have been marvelous. I surely feel sanguine for the future success of our work in West Virginia.

In Morgantown and Pursglove we have fourteen holding the priesthood. These meet every Saturday evening when they take up questions pertaining to their respective duties. Elder Joseph Edwards, branch president, is their leader, and he surely is the right man for this work. Nearly all are performing their duties, and as a result God is with us and his Spirit is poured out upon us.

Morgantown has nearly finished a new church building. It is built of cement blocks with two floors, an auditorium and a basement. Our formal opening will be on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, March 28, 29, 30.

We have also a band of Saints in Fairmont, a new place about twenty miles from Morgantown, which is connected with Morgantown by a concrete road. There are four holding the priesthood in Fairmont, an elder, priest, teacher, and deacon. I am hoping to see a branch organized there soon.

The weather has been very bad this year, but we are hoping to see spring make its appearance soon.

THOMAS NEWTON.

Three Baptized Into Japanese Branch at Honolulu

From a Letter to President F. M. Smith

HONOLULU, HAWAII, February 27.—There were three baptisms on Sunday afternoon, February 24, one of the candidates being a Japanese woman who has been attending the meetings of our Japanese branch for some time; the other two were girls in our main Sunday school.

Friday evening, March 7, we commence with the new work of the Department of Recreation and Expression. A program has been arranged by the different committees appointed to carry on this work. On Sunday evening the work of this department is devoted entirely to study, part of the time being given to the lessons that are provided in the quarterlies, and the remainder of the time to the study of the Book of Mormon.

G. J. WALLER.

Writing from Reeves, Louisiana, Brother R. E. Bankester says: "In reading the HERALD it makes me feel sad because I cannot associate with the Saints and attend meetings. I was especially moved by Brother M. A. McConley's sermon to the conference. When I read the good sermons and letters it fills my heart with gladness and my soul seems to reach out for higher things." Brother Bankester would welcome visiting elders or even friendly letters, as he longs to be in active touch with the gospel work.

Hope

Hope is born of the rising sun;
Type of the love that to you flows on,
Warm and strong from friends that are true;
Joy and strength may it bring to you.

CHURCH NEWS

Saint Who Helped Found Branch Twenty-Seven Years Ago Now Pastor

BEARDSTOWN, ILLINOIS, March 11.—The gospel work was first started in Beardstown about twenty-seven years ago, when Brother and Sister M. R. Shoemaker and Brother S. J. Bartlett, now deceased, were baptized. They were formerly members of the Christian Church, but after hearing the angel message were anxious that others in Beardstown should have the same privilege. Meetings were held in their home at various times, and in less than four years a church was built and a branch organized.

Brother and Sister Shoemaker are still firm in the faith and doing their part in all departments of church work. Brother Shoemaker is branch president at present. Many have since obeyed the gospel here.

Remodel Church Building

Last summer the church was remodeled, a basement put under it, and a furnace put in. It was refinished inside and painted outside. The congregation at present is small compared to the number that have been baptized. Many have moved to Independence and other places, and some have been lost by death, but the few that are left are doing a good work. Preaching services are held every Sunday, sacrament once a month, Sunday school, prayer meeting, and the Department of Recreation and Expression meeting each week.

A great deal of praise is due the ladies' aid for the work they are doing. They meet once a week, oftener when work demands. The money they make by quilting and sewing is turned over to the building committee and applied on the church debt.

By means of the radio some are hearing the gospel here who could not be reached in other ways, and in due time it is hoped that this will be the means of bringing others into the fold.

Meetings at Brentwood Come to Successful Close

WEBSTER GROVES, MISSOURI, March 12.—Elder H. A. Higgins, district president, has just concluded a two-weeks' rapid-fire series of meetings, covering the gospel of Christ, at Brentwood Branch. He very ably handled the subjects of the gospel plan, and the assemblies were extraordinarily interested.

The average attendance at the meetings was ninety-seven, a large number of whom were not of the faith but who were very regular in attendance.

Elder J. W. A. Bailey occupied the morning hour, March 9, speaking to the Saints concerning the Book of Mormon and explaining its mission. One of the outstanding features of this discourse was the statement that the Latter Day Saints are the divinely appointed committee, to be used by God in "persuading" the Jews to come to Christ. Very beautiful was the picture of the united forces of the Saints and those of Judah, taking Christ to the Gentiles.

Sunday evening, March 9, Brother Higgins closed the two-weeks' series of meetings with another crowded house.

Baptisms Follow Meetings

One young man who had been attending meetings here for some little time came at the close of the meeting Friday,

March 7, and stated that he had received a telegram from home that his mother was very ill, and that he would like to enter the waters of baptism before taking the journey to his mother. At 10 o'clock that night, out in the open waters of a spring-fed lake and in the presence of a number of the members of the church, Brother Higgins led this man through the waters of regeneration. All then repaired to the home of Brother C. J. Remington across the road, and after changing clothing the confirmation meeting was held. Brother Higgins was spokesman, assisted by Elders N. N. Cooke and C. J. Remington.

Another candidate was baptized Sunday afternoon, March 9, at the church building in Saint Louis proper.

Many others are near the entrance of the kingdom, and if they fail to enter in, it will be, as so well portrayed by Brother Higgins, "This gospel will stand as a witness against them in the last days."

The Saints have worked hard, with a single purpose, united for the truth, and God has truly been with them. Minds have been refreshed with the "dear old story," and many, many new thoughts have been given the Saints by these men of God who have been sent in their midst.

Brother Higgins promises to hold another two weeks' meeting in the fall, which will be very welcome. Brother Higgins has endeared himself to the hearts of all at Brentwood in a measure that cannot be shaken. The Saints unite to give thanks to the almighty Father for his mindfulness in causing this earnest man to come to this district.

Department of Women Active at Columbus, Ohio

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11.—The Women's Department of the Second Columbus Branch gave a surprise dinner on Sister Mary George, Friday, March 7, by way of appreciation for all the good she has done while here. She is leaving soon, returning to her home in Kirtland.

The dinner was held at the home of Sister S. F. Bierly, who is just recovering from an operation. There were over twenty women present, and although it was a "pot luck" dinner, the table groaned with the weight of good things brought to eat. The majority of the women stayed for the afternoon for a social time. It will be an afternoon that will live in the memory of all who were present.

The local Department of Women, though very small, consisting of only about twenty-five members, is very active. The new church which was built just a year ago still has a considerable debt to be raised, and the women are very busy sewing and having rummage sales, etc., to help in this line; they have been instrumental in helping to sod the lawn, plant the hedge, take care of some of the repairs, and in giving several substantial sums to pay on the general debt. Their efforts are very highly appreciated by the priesthood here and also all the members.

Priesthood Ably Meets Added Responsibilities

BRADNER, OHIO, March 11.—Since the departure of Elders E. L. Ulrich and Walter Wierbaugh to the mission field, the local priesthood have been thrown back upon their own resources. It was feared that when these able workers left, the branch would decline, but the added responsibility placed upon the local officers has only made them work the harder to meet all demands. The branch is pleased to be able to report that the work continues uninterrupted.

Brooklyn Sunday School Begins Attendance Contest

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK CITY, NEW YORK, March 6.—Immediately following the Sunday school election at which time Sister Katherine Nichols was unanimously elected superintendent, a membership contest was started, based on attendance credits in mileage on a "Trip to Independence" by automobile. The route was laid out on a chart which was placed the full length of a side of the main auditorium. The route touches at many points made famous by incidents past and present in the history of the church. This chart was executed by one of the superintendents, Brother Archibald Hawkins, and to him has been assigned the task of preparing historical sketches of the important points reached from Sunday to Sunday by each contesting side.

Both cars were off as the gong sounded at 9.45 a. m. on March 2, more than twice the usual membership being present. The piloting of the ladies' car is in the hands of Gladys Squires. This daring chauffeurette immediately upon starting, shifted gears into high, and at the pace of the Rolls Royce sped over Manhattan Bridge through Central Park onto Riverside Drive and up the Hudson on beyond Peekskill to the first stop. It is sincerely hoped by the men, who are traveling in a Pierce-Arrow, that no motorcycle cop fail to do his duty if a Rolls Royce is seen burning up the road.

Easter Program

Preparation for an Easter program is well under way. There will be a presentation of Elsie M. Barraclough's Easter Dawn pageant, for which parts have been assigned.

Department of Women

During the past two weeks, the members of the Department of Women and their friends have been entertained by Mesdames Eliza Squires and Elsie Slocum. A charge was made per plate, which money will be used in the activities of the organization. These gatherings are very pleasant occasions.

Recent Speakers and Visitors

The first blanket of snow for this section made its appearance on Sunday, February 10. On this date, Elder Potts ably presided during the absence of District President Ephraim Squires who occupied at Elk Mills, Maryland. The speakers at Brooklyn were Frank N. Lester, Bishop's agent, and Elder A. Max Carmichael. Elder Frank Mesle, president of the branch at Sherrill, New York, was the speaker during the morning hour on February 13. Brother Rudd, of Chicago, was a visitor on the same date.

Brother A. Max Carmichael, general Sunday school superintendent, is a welcome visitor at the Brooklyn Branch, while he is engaged in work at Columbia University. Upon introducing his subject for a recent discourse, Brother Carmichael had Bibles distributed to every one in the audience. During his sermon the audience was kept busy jumping from one passage to another, while he read from an entirely different translation of the Bible, which was described by some as "a cross between a futurist philosophy and fundamentalistic theory." Brother Carmichael always has an interesting way of presenting what he desires to talk upon.

Directions for Locating Brooklyn Church

Since many thousands of visitors arrive in New York daily, many among them are probably interested in locating the Latter Day Saint church in Brooklyn. The lack of a church directory makes it very difficult at times to get information concerning the church location. Since this is the first time the Brooklyn Branch has been heard from in this respect, full information is given for benefit of visitors:

Brooklyn Church, Park Place and Schenectady Avenue. From Brooklyn Bridge take Saint Johns Place trolley to Schenectady Avenue. Or from Manhattan (New York City) take any Interboro Subway train, transfer at Nevins Street, Brooklyn, to a Pennsylvania Avenue train, leaving same at Utica Avenue. Come to street level and inquire for Park Place and Schenectady Avenue. Services at the usual hours on Sundays and Wednesday evening. Branch President, Ephraim Squires; Secretary, A. P. Hawkins. Both have Brooklyn phones.

Epidemic of Sickness Closes Church Services for Two Weeks

BAY PORT, MICHIGAN, March 11.—The church services were discontinued two weeks on account of smallpox in the vicinity but commenced again last Sunday. Mumps, whooping cough, and pneumonia have been going the rounds here, and a few children of the Saints have been dangerously ill. They were helped to recovery through administration.

The annual election of branch officers was held January 2 under the coordination plan. Officers elected were: Harvey G. Dutcher, president; George W. Harder, superintendent of Sunday school; Archibald Harder, president of Religio; and Mrs. Pearl Dutcher, superintendent of Department of Women.

A Christmas tree and program, appropriate to the sacredness of the season, was given at the church on the Saturday evening of December 22. The children each received a sack of candy and nuts.

Brother George Sylvester, an old-time Saint of nearly eighty years, was buried December 15 in the old cemetery. Brother Sylvester was one of the first to receive the gospel message when it was introduced in this community thirty-five years ago by Elder J. J. Cornish. He has since lived a truly faithful life.

There have been no special services this winter and things have been quiet and uneventful in this place. Later on it is planned to hold a series of meetings.

Brother Frederick J. Miller attended some of the young people's meetings recently held at Flint, and brought back a highly appreciative report of the helpful and inspiring nature of the services.

Wins Prize in National Monument Contest

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, February 27.—Norman Issott, grandson of Brother W. T. Rushton, and nephew of Apostle John W. Rushton, is the winner of fourth prize and a cash award in a national five hundred dollar prize competition for designs for moderate priced monuments conducted by Monumental News. Brother Issott has been in the business for only twenty months, and is now designer for J. F. Bloom and Company, monument firm.

Judges in the contest were Lorado Taft, Chicago sculptor, William H. Varnum, head of the Applied Arts Department, University of Wisconsin, and Edward J. Law, architect, Madison, Wisconsin. There were 165 designs submitted.

"In the perfecting of 'the handsomest monument in the state,' Mr. Issott had a considerable part," says the Omaha World-Herald. "This is a thirty-eight foot shaft of Vermont granite erected by the Silas A. Strickland Post No. 13, G. A. R., of Hastings, Nebraska. At the top of the shaft is a seven-foot figure of a Union soldier."

Snowstorm Damages Telephone Service Near Pisgah, Iowa

PISGAH, IOWA, March 10.—Evangelist U. W. Greene continued his effort at Pisgah for two weeks, after which time he went to Moorhead, Iowa. The attendance was not all that could be desired on account of bad roads and inclement weather.

It began raining on Monday evening, March 3, but before morning it had changed to snow which fell in such quantities as to do considerable damage to the telephone service for some distance up the Soldier Valley.

Brother Lester Hunt, who recently moved from here, returned from Rosalie, Nebraska, March 5, with the body of his little daughter, Esther. The child died of pneumonia on the previous day. Both of his little girls developed pneumonia after having had the measles, but the older one, Nellie Temple, is much improved in health.

Brother Mark Hutchinson, until recently of Bozeman, Montana, is moving his family to Pisgah. Brother Hutchinson has accepted a position with the Van Eaton Mercantile Company. The Saints will be very much benefited by his help in church work and by his cheerful words of encouragement.

Brother Hutchinson and George Meggars, the pastor, were called recently to administer to Sister Roe Simmons who is quite seriously ill with heart trouble. Sister Simmons is in a critical condition yet, but it is to be hoped the Lord will see fit to bless her with good health.

Attendance at church services is improving slowly, but it is hoped for a return to normal after the roads are in better condition.

Tulare Saints Give Valentine Party

TULARE, CALIFORNIA, March 12.—The Department of Recreation and Expression held a Valentine party February 14, at the home of Brother and Sister J. T. Smith. After games and amusements were indulged in, sandwiches, punch, and doughnuts were served to about forty. Instead of charging the guests for their valentines when they called at the post office, a special collection was taken up on the following Sunday evening, netting $7.54, which was added to the Christmas offering.

At the last midweek prayer meeting there were only nine present but each took part in the meeting.

Sacramental service, March 3, was fully up to the standard, with room ahead to press forward. There was a good attendance. The service was peaceful and the time well occupied.

Meetings at Macon, Missouri, Close

MACON, MISSOURI, March 11.—Edward F. Robertson, the district president of Northeastern Missouri, and Elder John W. A. Bailey, missionary appointee for this district, just closed a very successful five weeks' meeting. Elder Robertson preached one week of the series, at which time Elder Bailey arrived and continued for four weeks.

The international lectures given by Elder Bailey were greatly appreciated by Saints and friends.

Elders Bailey and Robertson made many friends while in Macon, and all will welcome their return when roads are better and weather conditions more favorable. The Saints are earnestly praying that on this return the seed which has been sown will bring forth fruit.

Temple Builders Entertain

The Nautilus Chapter, on Monday evening, February 25, entertained in honor of Elders Robertson and Bailey, at the home of one of their members, Sister Ailene Moss. These brethren parted from us the next day for others fields of activity. About forty guests were present, and a program was arranged for the evening's amusement by a committee. Dainty refreshments were served, carrying out a color scheme of blue and white, both in decorations and refreshments.

At the close of the program Ainsworth R. Moore, the branch president, presented to Elders Robertson and Bailey a gift from the Macon Saints in appreciation of their labors. At the close all sang, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and were dismissed with prayer by Brother Samuel Jesse Joyce, sr.

Missionary Meetings Held at Homes of Saints

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, March 13.—A series of missionary meetings is being held in the homes of the Saints and friends on Tuesday evenings by Brother Robley, who is president of the branch. These meetings are being held to introduce the work to those who would go to a meeting at a friend's home, but who would not be interested enough to attend church. The young people show a great interest and attend very regularly.

The Department of Recreation and Expression are now taking up a study course of the Book of Mormon and much interest is shown both by pupils and teachers. A short program is given after the lesson and much pleasure is derived from both the lessons and the educational part of the evening.

A "Snow Shoe Club" has been organized in this department and many tramps, hikes, and social evenings are enjoyed.

The Department of Women held an entertainment after which they served refreshments on Saint Valentine's day. The evening was proclaimed a great success and many said they had a good time. The proceeds went towards the buying of a piano of which the branch was in need.

This department held a pie social on Friday, February 29, after which the lesson hour of the Department of Recreation and Expression was taken up. The proceeds from this also went to the piano fund.

Meetings at London, Ontario, Liberally Supported by Press

LONDON, ONTARIO, March 3.—London Saints are still very active in church work. Elder H. A. Koehler is with them and is busily engaged in a series of services. The response from the Saints and nonmembers in attendance has been excellent. All feel that they have been repaid for the effort put forth in this campaign.

Brother Koehler certainly has delivered the message with the spirit of his office and calling. Many honest souls have heard the gospel and some will be added to the numbers here. This is the harvest time for the work in London. Never before in the history of the church has the work had the support of the press along publicity lines as it has now.

Brother Koehler is preaching in the theater as well as the church. May God give the brother health, strength, and wisdom to continue, that the fruit of the seed sown may be reaped, and all may rejoice in the gathering in of honest souls.

The branch feels very proud of their hocky team in the winning of the silverware of the Church Hockey League of London. Six churches represented the league: Three Methodist churches, one Anglican, one Presbyterian, and one Latter Day Saint.

From the spirit which prevails throughout the branch, it is expected that there will be more good news in the future.

Patriarch F. G. Pitt to Leave Florida for North Soon

Patriarch F. G. Pitt writes that his address as published in a late number of the HERALD was wrong. He has been residing at Howey, Florida, but expects to leave shortly for the North. Howey is a new town being built by Mr. Howey, who has already built three prosperous towns. Brother Pitt says this little spot is the most beautiful he has seen in Florida.

Brother Pitt has been ill with rheumatism since leaving Kirtland, Ohio, last fall, but is now improved. He has preached twice in the schoolhouse with good interest, besides assisting the Methodist minister in his meetings. Brother and Sister Pitt, who are well known as the "singing missionaries," have had charge of the music at these meetings. Brother Pitt preaches every alternate Sunday, and has done much to open up the way for others who may follow his efforts there.

It is expected that Brother and Sister Pitt will occupy in the Kirtland Temple again next summer where they did a good work last year.

Sickness in Branch Stops Missionary Meetings

OGDEN, UTAH, March 17.—Brother Fulk and Brother Levitt endeavored to hold a series of services in the branch about two months ago. They had only started when sickness came among the Saints. Although Brother Fulk's family were numbered among the sick ones, the brethren continued for two weeks, and there was a good attendance.

The men thought it wise to close the services, since they were nearly worn out trying to care for the sick in the daytime and preaching at night. About two weeks after they closed, Brother and Sister Fulk lost their little baby girl, Thelma. This brought sorrow to the Ogden Saints.

Elder Roy H. Hewes is the presiding officer of the branch. He is making a good leader for the Saints here. The Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression are in a flourishing condition.

Ogden had the privilege of entertaining the district conference March 15 and 16. This was well attended, and the visitors entertained in a royal manner by the Ogden Saints. They were glad to have Apostle Roy Budd with them. He gave much spiritual food, and the Ogdenites say, "Come again, Brother Budd."

Altogether, Ogden is looking forward for some good work to be done. While they pray and labor to that end, they also look with interest upon the general workings of the church.

Louisville Saints to Build New Church

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY, March 13.—The building committee have been getting estimates on the plan for the new church building here. It has not been decided to give the work over to any contractor.

The "Ways and Means" committee have been trying to keep the women busy making fancy work, etc., and selling the handwork to add to the building fund.

The Saints are hopeful for the future. Group meetings are still being held here.

San Antonio Saints Pleased With Visit of Apostle T. W. Williams

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, March 17.—The San Antonio Saints have been favored by a recent visit from Apostle T. W. Williams, who came here February 14. He began a series of meetings on February 17 which continued for two weeks.

Very few of the San Antonio Saints had met Brother Williams. They had known him through his writings in the church publications and also in his work of recent years among the young people. However, a few of the old residents recall his visit to San Antonio many years ago. He was a stranger to the majority of the members, but he did not remain a stranger long. With his genial disposition he soon won the love and confidence of all, both young and old. This includes also some not of our faith, who were brought nearer to the kingdom through his ministry.

Friendly With All

He taught practical fellowship, democracy, and friendship. He taught great truths in the simplest language. He never forgot the children in any of his sermons, which recognition on his part created a great friendship between himself and the children.

His visit will be long remembered by all the Saints, and it is hoped he will pay another visit in the summer, when conditions will probably be more favorable. He was handicapped by the inclemency of the weather, sickness, and other causes. Notwithstanding all this the attendance was fairly good throughout the meetings. Some of the Baptist and Methodist friends here have attended and seemed to be pleased with the efforts Brother Williams put forth.

He has paved the way for a greater effort during the summer months, leaving the Saints with a clear message and an inspiration for better living and doing.

District Conference

The district conference convened February 23 and 24. Brother Williams was the speaker on all occasions except one when Brother D. S. Palmer occupied. The attendance during conference was fairly good. Saints living fifty miles away came by auto and had to make the trip home through the rain and in the night for they had stayed till after the evening services.

District Conference Held at Fall River, Massachusetts

FALL RIVER, MASSACHUSETTS, March 12.—All are busy preparing for conference which meets here Saturday and Sunday, March 15 and 16. There will be election of officers on Saturday afternoon and three sermons in the evening. The elders will meet Sunday morning and then there will be prayer meeting after which O. L. Thompson will preach. In the afternoon the oratorio, "From Olivet to Calvary," will be presented. In the evening Brother Elliott, of Providence, will be the speaker. The conference meals on Sunday will be served in the church.

Fall River has new pulpit chairs and the pulpit desk has been re-upholstered and varnished to match the chairs. The Department of Women paid for these improvements.

The district missionary, O. L. Thompson, preached here twice last Sunday to an attentive audience, with several non-members present. Monday night the attendance was splendid and all were touched by the Spirit, and felt a great desire for higher things. On Tuesday it snowed and nine came out but the minister did not. He was staying near the church, but had been told that no one would come out.

Suppers Being Given by Women to Help Meet Branch Expenses

VINAL HAVEN, MAINE, March 14.—Elder Harvey Victor Minton closed his series of meetings here in Vinal Haven, Sunday evening, March 2. Since the last report he has baptized a young woman into the church, making two persons who have been baptized during the series of meetings. This series has been of about six weeks' duration. Interest is good, and many more seem near the fold.

The Sunday school continues to grow in attendance, as also does the Department of Recreation and Expression.

The women of Vinal Haven Branch have organized to conduct suppers in the vestry of the church each fortnight on Tuesday nights. This is to help pay the debt on the local church building.

The Oriole Girls have been organized, and also the Boy Scouts.

It seems with all the different departments humming, the Saints in Vinal Haven will be kept busy. They request the prayers of the Saints elsewhere that whatever is done may be done in the Lord's glory to bring the best results for the general good of all.

Bloomsburg Saints Have Reconstruction Program

BLOOMSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA, March 10.—The branch at Bloomsburg has felt the spiritual uplift of the district conference, recently held at Scranton, at which about twenty-four of this branch membership were present.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has had an increase in interest lately, but is in need of more equipment. The department has sold six Books of Mormon, some to non-members, and a few Book of Mormon paper maps.

The Department of Music is growing and improving. It now has in instrumental music, a piano and three violins. A better better balance of parts is still needed.

The branch motto is "Reconstruction, retrenchment, and advancement."

Persia Saints Correspond With Each Other During Long Winter Months

PERSIA, IOWA, March 12.—Persia Branch, being in winter quarters, has not held services every Sunday, but the Sunday school has met regularly. The Saints keep in touch with each other by correspondence which, in addition to business matters, always contains some testimony of interest in the work. The news in these letters is passed on to others, and thus is a means of renewing and reviving interest. The knowledge that other Saints are still firm and true, strengthens the faith of isolated ones.

Sacrament service was held Sunday, March 2. The Saints had a good meeting, many testifying to the goodness of the gospel.

March 9 Patriarch Joshua Carlile, of Underwood, met with the members and delivered an instructive sermon.

Arrangements are being made to hold a series of meetings in the near future, at which Patriarch F. A. Smith is expected to be the speaker.

Several ordinations took place at the last district conference at Sioux City. This places responsibility upon those who were ordained, requiring them to administer to others and assist in carrying on the work.

Musical Entertainment Given by Saint Joseph Choral Society

SAINT JOSEPH, MISSOURI, March 21.—One of the most delightful musical entertainments ever given in the church was heard with deepest appreciation by a large audience at the First Church, Wednesday evening, March 4.

L. D. S. Choral Society

This program was rendered by the Latter Day Saint Choral Society, an organization which has for some time been training under the direction of Paul N. Craig, of Independence, Missouri. He comes up every Tuesday for this purpose and gives private lessons also. The program was so fine that it called forth much favorable comment in the local papers, also from members of the various musical societies of the city. It has aroused an interest in the musical circles which will be of benefit to the society and the church as well.

The program given was an excellent demonstration of Brother Craig's ability as a director, as well as that of Miss Edna Christiansen who so ably assisted at the piano and organ. This enthusiastic society well deserves the pride the Saints feel in it. They look forward with pleasant anticipation to the next appearance which will be in the latter part of May when "The Holy City" will be presented.

Far West Stake Conference

The conference of the Far West Stake convened at the First Church Thursday morning at ten o'clock. The dominant business of the morning was the reorganization of the stake, which, because of the resignation of Elder R. S. Salyards, was without a permanent president.

This was accomplished very quietly and unanimously by the body, which ratified the recommendation of the First Presidency that Elder Orman Salisbury be chosen to fill the vacancy. President Frederick M. Smith and President Elbert A. Smith presided over the session, in conjunction with President Floyd M. McDowell and Apostle John F. Garver. These last two brethren assisted Elder Salisbury during the conference, which continued four days.

President F. M. Smith gave a kind, fatherly, heart-reaching address, touching on present conditions in the church and expressing a yearning hope for its future.

Stake Presidency Chosen

President Salisbury chose for his counselors, Brethren Herbert Barto and Leslie Wight, who were ordained to the office of high priest, and also as counselors to the stake president.

All the members of the high council having resigned, some of them were reappointed and others chosen to complete the quorum. These were also ordained, all under the hands of Brothers Frederick M. Smith, Elbert A. Smith, and John F. Garver.

The conference was marked by a fine spirit of unity and harmony which was very gratifying to see. Splendid sermons were the order of the evening sessions.

Get-Acquainted Meeting

A get-acquainted meeting was held one evening after the services. The two Johns (John Garver and John Sheehy) distinguished themselves in a way which you who are acquainted with them can readily understand was extremely funny. This was a pleasant hour.

It was decided by the stake to adopt the plan of coordination, also to make the stake conference an annual meeting instead of semiannual, as heretofore, giving the president a right to call a special session should an exigency arise at any time. This annual conference is to meet some time in March with the First Saint Joseph Branch.

Meals Served Free

Plans had been made for feeding the conference people free of charge in the lower rooms of the church, and a committee on arrangements composed of ladies of the various branches of the city carried out those plans in a very efficient and satisfactory way. A cook was hired and the service was very well spoken of. The same plan will obtain hereafter.

Mrs. Tapscott was chosen as secretary of the stake. Mrs. Ora Liggett of the Third Branch was elected superintendent of the Department of Women. A music committee of three members was appointed to look after the musical activities of the stake. They are Mrs. Etta Mason, William P. Ross, and John Sheehy.

The interests of the stake Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression will be cared for by Brethren Archie Constance and Elmer Armstrong respectively.

Altogether the conference was a very enjoyable one and should leave the Saints refreshed and revived in the work of the Lord. If the Saints here do not do their bit in the building of Zion it will not be because they have not been instructed, admonished, and encouraged to do so.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards spoke very acceptably last Sunday morning, and Elder Herbert Barto at night.

Young Daughter of Elder R. L. Fulk Dies at Salt Lake City

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, February 21.—Thelma Nadien, age two years, daughter of Brother and Sister R. L. Fulk, died on Sunday, February 17. She had been taken with measles, when pneumonia and meningitis set in, causing her untimely death.

Funeral services were held in the church, February 20. Elder Guy P. Levitt was in charge and Elder R. C. Chambers, of Rupert, Idaho, preached the sermon. Brother Chambers gave an inspiring talk, having words of comfort for those bereaved. Solos were sung by Miss Maud Kennes, of Salt Lake City. Pallbearers were from the young women's department at Ogden. Prayers were offered by Elder Levitt and Elder William Postma. Burial was in the City Cemetery.

The heartfelt sympathy of Saints and friends has gone out to Brother and Sister Fulk in their great sorrow. Little Thelma was bright and endearing to all who knew her, and she will be missed by many who loved her.

Elder R. L. Fulk was ordained one of the Seven Presidents of Seventy at the recent General Conference.

Graceland Chats

LAMONI, IOWA, March 22.—Miss Mabel Carlile directed a very successful piece of Graceland work on Friday evening, March 21. The occasion was the Knights of Pythias Diamond Jubilee at Bethany, Missouri. Those in charge had asked for a concert, and Graceland likes to be given a chance to speak for herself.

There were twenty-one who went by car to the little Missouri city, the A Cappella Chorus, the Graceland mixed quartet, and the college male quartet. Miss Thelma Lane was the pianist and Miss Ailene Brackenbury, soloist. A happy addition was Miss Frances Van Fleet as reader. Miss Van Fleet captivates her audience at once with her friendliness.

The Wahaska Lodge auditorium was filled, and the encore calls extended even to the chorus. The event has left all concerned with a feeling of pleasure.

College Players Give Play

The College Players gave a very successful production of the "School for Scandal." This was directed by Miss Ruth Viola Fisher, head of Graceland dramatics, assisted by Miss Vivian McElroy, another member of the Graceland faculty. There was much pleasure added to the occasion by the music of the college orchestra. The orchestra was ably conducted by Brother Dewey White in the absence of Brother Joseph Anthony.

The College Players and their friends are anticipating a real treat on Thursday evening, March 27, when Miss June Whiting appears before Lamoni on the Community Lecture Course. Miss Whiting is presenting "The Fool," by Pollock. She made many friends in the school and community during her four-year stay in Graceland. These will be pleased to again meet her.

Regular Meeting of Lambda Delta Sigma Society

The Lambda Delta Sigma Society held the regular meeting on Monday evening, March 17. By invitation from President and Mrs. McDowell, they met at their home. A lunch was served, contributed by those present, and the work of the committee was taken up. Elder C. E. Wight, Miss Lulu Porter, Mr. Keith Harder, and Miss Dillon, the committee, brought in some excellent papers on the subject of vocational guidance. The subject is one of deep concern to many and merited the best that could be given. It is a question of momentous importance to Graceland. The only regret was the absence of President McDowell.

Graceland Gymnasium

Work on the gymnasium has begun in pretty good earnest. If winter ever leaves there will be a busy scene around the open walls. President Briggs presided at a most interesting faculty meeting in the interest of the building. The interest carried over into chapel next day when the boys signed up for hours on work of construction.

Ex-Students and Prospective Ones

Brother Elbert Dempsey and wife, Hortense Hill Dempsey, are the proud parents of twin sons, born on March 20. These little ones are grandsons of Brother and Sister Arthur Dempsey and Brother and Sister Frank Hill, so they bear the names of Arthur and Frank. They are also great-grandsons of that brave defender of truth, Apostle James Caffall.

Graceland Loses a Friend

Graceland people bow in reverence to the summoning of Sister Alice Cobb. A sweet and gracious presence has been removed from the circle who love Graceland. The loss is felt with some small sense of the triumph her noble spirit will make of death.

Thursday Chapel

The chapel is a busy place with piano instruction and drama practice. On March 20 Miss Carlile occupied with her band of singers, and Professor J. A. Gunsolley gave a much-needed talk.

New Pastor Elected at Waterloo, Iowa

WATERLOO, IOWA, March 18.—A. J. Fisher, the branch president, has resigned on account of failing health, and Elder Victor A. Hall was elected to that office. His address is 625 Iowa Street.

Elder E. A. Davis, the district president, is with the Waterloo Saints, helping to open up the work more efficiently.

Kansas City Stake Items

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, March 24.—Elder J. W. Quinley, long identified as pastor of the Springfield, Missouri, Branch, died of apoplexy Monday night. Burial service at Central on Wednesday at 2 o'clock. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Central Church

The monthly departmental meetings of both men's and women's divisions were held Sunday afternoon of March 16. Live subjects were ably discussed by those taking part, one of which was our attitude to those of other faiths.

Announcements are out for another series of young people's meetings for one week, commencing April 6, and closing the 13th. Walter W. Smith will be the speaker.

Brother Fred S. Anderson occupied the sacred desk at 11 o'clock, March 23, and Pastor Joseph Tanner at 7.45. On the previous Sunday Brother Rambo led two into the church through the waters of baptism.

Bennington Branch

The struggling congregation at Bennington, content in the past with things very much as they would come and go, without apparent displeasure at the discouraging things experienced nor exultant when successes came their way, were introduced to a brand new experience in the recent past when William I. Fligg, missionary, came in their midst the second of this month and began special meetings in the church.

Efforts of this kind were held at other times, but with little real claim on the hearts of the nonmembers who attended. Not so this time. From the first to the last service the house was filled to overflowing and many were enraptured by the volleys of expressive truth fired broadside by Brother Fligg. By the power of God he was able to aim true and with telling effect, so that there was a complete surrender upon the part of eleven souls, ten of whom were baptized Sunday, March 16. The other was baptized a week later. The Spirit of God was present to a marked degree in the confirmation services.

It is hard to estimate the good done, aside from those baptized, as there was an awakening to and understanding of the Saints' position, hitherto unknown.

Elder H. W. Goold is pastor there. A reception was held for Brother Fligg, Monday, March 17, at which a fine social time was had. The church building, 28 by 40, has proved too small as their Sunday school now numbers eighty-five.

Argentine Branch

Brother W. I. Fligg begins missionary meetings at Argentine, March 23, at 7.45.

The young musical people of Central who gave the operetta, "The merry milkmaids," at the Little Theater, will repeat the performance at the Argentine high school, Friday, March 28.

A reception was held on March 17 for the outgoing pastor, Walter L. Gates, and the incoming one, Brother John J. Schimmel. Brethren Joseph A. Tanner and Seth S. Sandy, of the stake presidency, honored the gathering with their presence. Brother Tanner and others regaled those present with speech making appropriate for Saint Patrick's Day. Their witty, pungent remarks were much enjoyed, as also was the pie and ice cream which followed. There was more than enough and it was partaken of with relish. From a social standpoint the reception was a great success.

Chelsea

Patriarch Ammon White closed a two weeks' meeting at Chelsea, Sunday, March 16. Good interest was shown, the Saints built up, and friends made to the cause. Since then he has been doing cottage work at Mount Washington and when finished will hold meetings at Quindaro.

Fourth Church

Brother E. W. Lloyd baptized two at Fourth Church, Sunday, March 16.

Northeast

The wife of the pastor, Elder C. A. Selbe, passed away suddenly, March 23.

Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, March 25.—The forecast for rain or snow in Independence, Sunday, March 23, was not realized, the day being a pleasant one. Attendance at Independence churches was large.

The morning speaker at the Stone Church was Bishop Mark H. Siegfried, and the evening speaker was Apostle John F. Garver. Both services were broadcast. At 2:30 p. m. Elder Jonathan Koshiway, the Indian missionary, occupied in place of the usual afternoon prayer meeting.

Patriarch Ammon White was the speaker both morning and evening at Second Independence. At Englewood the morning speaker was Elder John Ely. At 7.30 p. m. Elder James Gault spoke. The speakers at Walnut Park were: 11 a. m., Charles Koehler; 7.30 p. m., C. K. Greene.

Liberty Street

At choir practice Tuesday night, March 18, Brother Harry Smith resigned his position as chorister. Resignation was accepted by the choir, and Brother George Anway was chosen unanimously to take Brother Smith's place, providing it were possible for him to accept the work. Sunday night, March 23, Brother Anway took charge of the music.

Elder W. H. Kelley preached Sunday morning, March 23, on the subject, "Believe that God is." Elder Joseph Luff spoke at night explaining "the testimony of a century."

The Silver Wing Chapter of Temple Builders met at the Turner home on South Spring Street, Monday night, March 24. This was the night for an educational lecture and Sister Dora Glines was to have spoken to the girls on the work of young women in the church, but because of illness Sister Glines could not be present. Sister Bertha Anderson Hulmes kindly came in her place and gave the chapter a most interesting talk on "Aids to personality." At the close of the meeting a few of the older members gave the chapter a delightful surprise by serving refreshments.

Englewood

The Department of Recreation and Expression is progressing nicely under the supervision of Brother Joseph A. Farrow. On Friday night, March 14, this department enjoyed a taffy pull.

The Department of Women are alive and working splendidly under the leadership of Sister Eva Nelson. They meet each Thursday afternoon.

Sister Grace Morrison is quite ill.

Stone Church Sunday School

The unusually large attendance at the Stone Church Sunday school the last few weeks continues. On March 23 there were 1,501 in attendance, with 14 perfect classes.

Group One Has Interesting Meetings

At the regular monthly meeting of the young people of Group One held last Thursday evening, March 20, at the home of Brother and Sister George DeTray, Brother Jonathan Koshiway spoke very interestingly of the gospel work among the Indians. He also displayed several specimens of Indian handwork. The young people were very much pleased in having this opportunity to become somewhat personally acquainted with Brother Koshiway and to learn of the work he is doing. After the young people, thirty-five in number, had sung, "Consecration," "The old, old path" was requested by their guest and sung feelingly. The playing of games and partaking of refreshments added to the enjoyment of the evening.

This meeting is one following up a movement started three months ago at which President F. M. Smith was the speaker. Last month the gathering was addressed by Sister Bertha Anderson Hulmes, who spoke on a theme always interesting to young men and women, touching some of the vital points in the acquiring of charm and a pleasing personality. The helpful suggestions of Sister Hulmes were very much appreciated and will long live in the daily lives of the young people. Sister Ruth Lyman Smith, who was to have spoken on this evening, was unable because of illness to keep her appointment. Much regret was expressed that Sister Smith could not be present.

Group One also has a very busy and very happy circle of Temple Builder Girls, with Mrs. George DeTray as leader. Last Friday evening, March 21, "friends" of the girls brought their cars, and loading the Temple Builders in, took them to the church at East Independence where they rendered the program at Religio. Several visits of this kind have been made recently to various branches.

Sister Dora Glines, general superintendent of Women's Department, addressed the Parent-Teacher meeting at the Columbian School, March 21, on the objectives of the Parent-Teacher Association, the League of Women Voters, and the National Social Hygiene Association. Sister R. D. Etzenhouser reported on the observance of Founders' Day in Kansas City. Sister Ida P. Etzenhouser, of the Social Service Bureau, spoke at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association at the Noland School, March 19.

The Twelve

Apostle J. A. Gillen is in Ontario, at Guelph, where he has been holding meetings.

Apostles J. F. Curtis and Paul M. Hanson have arrived in Palestine where they will soon be joined by Elder D. B. Sorden and wife, from England. Brother and Sister Sorden will replace Brother and Sister Harry Passman, who will return to the United States the first of June.

In the southern mission field, Apostle John W. Rushton is at Howey, Florida, where Patriarch F. G. Pitt has recently uncovered a new field and prepared it for additional work. He will visit Tampa while in the State. Apostle T. W. Williams has been holding meetings at Dallas, Texas.

Apostles J. F. Garver and F. H. Edwards are in Independence at present. Apostle Garver preached at the Stone Church Sunday, March 23. He is scheduled to preach in Lamoni, Iowa, on March 30. Apostle Edwards has just returned from Atchison, Kansas, where he addressed the Saints on March 23, both morning and evening.

The meetings at Saint Louis are still progressing under the initiative of Apostle E. J. Gleazer, who is the speaker.

Apostle Roy S. Budd has returned to California. Apostle D. T. Williams is in Lamoni, Iowa.

Reading at Stone Church

Miss June Whiting, of the Graceland College Public Speaking Department, will read Channing Pollock's famous play, "The Fool," at the Stone Church, March 31. This play is an intense human drama that should inspire Christians to see anew the message of the gospel. It is the "Old, old story" transferred to a modern setting—the story of a man whose heart went out to suffering humanity, who dared to defy the kings of industry and the rulers of his day, who tried to drive the money-changers out of the temple, but who was himself the victim of the lash.

The story raises the question, Can the fundamental principles of Christianity be put into practice? Does any man live who dares to try it as Jesus tried it? It is a story worth the attention and time of every Latter Day Saint.

Death of Fareppa Bankester

Sister Fareppa Bankester, of Robertsedale, Alabama, died March 22, at the Independence Sanitarium. She was brought to the Sanitarium March 3. Sister Bankester was born in Russell County, Alabama, 1865. She was baptized in 1891. Funeral sermon was preached by Elder T. C. Kelley. Burial in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Brother George Cummins, of Salt Lake City, Utah, writes that church services there have been abandoned for a while on the account of a quarantine sickness of the child of Elder Davey. The child is ill at the parsonage, and they are quarantined for thirty days.

Valentine Social Given by Cheboygan Saints

Brother Allen has faithfully served the interests of the church, and we regret that economic conditions are such that he has found it necessary to resign. Brother Smelser is well recommended for this office, and we bespeak through him your continued response to the financial needs of the Lord's work.

Our Departed Ones

JACKSON.—Martha Holcomb Jackson was born at Montrose, Ohio, June 20, 1849. Moved to Gallands Grove, Iowa, in 1854. Married Alfred Jackson, September 18, 1866. Baptized August 24, 1862. Died at the home of A. L. Jackson, Dow City, Iowa, March 4, 1924. Leaves four sons: W. L., of Independence, Missouri; F. L., of Dunlap, Iowa; A. L., of Dow City, Iowa; and F. F., of Denison, Iowa. Leaves also ten grandchildren, one great-grandchild, and two sisters. Husband and five children have preceded her. Funeral at Dow City in charge of C. E. Butterworth. Sermon by W. A. Smith.

GALLSPEY.—Mary Fountain was born June 13, 1844. Married Thomas Gallspey, March 15, 1869. Died March 5, 1924. Leaves husband and three children. Funeral sermon by Jeff Henson. "Aunt Mary" was laid to rest in the Wolfe Cemetery.

Elder Allen Schreur, of Gaylord, was here recently and organized a Religio with Brother Irving Sheffer as president; Sister Beulah Hilla, vice president; Sister Ellen Sheffer, secretary; and Sister Etta Wilson, treasurer.

Visitors Welcomed at Detroit

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, March 4.—Good spiritual meetings have been enjoyed here lately. Last Sunday, March 2, there was an extra good service at which many spiritual gifts were evident.

Brother A. N. Hoxie, of Philadelphia; M. W. Liston, of Flint, Michigan; Elder Houston, of Port Huron, Michigan; William Grice, missionary of eastern Michigan; and other brethren were in Detroit on Sunday.

Apostle J. A. Gillen and Elder B. H. Doty, missionary for Ontario, were here on Wednesday, February 27. All enjoyed their presence and words of cheer.

Elder G. R. Kuykendall, pastor of the Central Church, had started a series of lectures on the Book of Mormon, but he did not speak Sunday night since Brother W. M. Grice was the speaker. Brother Kuykendall will continue his lectures on next Sunday night.

A large attendance has been present and the Saints look forward to a still larger one in the future.

Saints Are Not Discouraged by Opposition to Progress of Work

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS, March 10.—This place has had its ups and downs during the past six months, and sometimes it seems as if the downs predominate. But through all the discouragements the Saints feel God's hand over them.

A remark made by Elder J. A. Daer, the branch president, some time ago, put trials in a little different light than they are usually looked upon. He said, "I am convinced now that there is a great work to be done in this place, or the Adversary would not be so busy trying to tear the work apart here." May the heavenly Father give the Saints strength and wisdom to overcome opposition and accomplish his work.

The district president, Elder J. Cooper, has visited here on several occasions and his sermons are always a feast to the soul.

Brother Jerome Wildermuth, with his forceful sermons and his interesting round table talks, gave many a profitable evening.

Just lately two young men were called to the Aaronic priesthood, James Ferguson to the office of priest and F. F. Kell to the office of teacher. Brother Ferguson was ordained on February 27, and Brother Kell will be ordained soon. Although he has been in the work only a short time, he has had many divine evidences of the truthfulness of the gospel.

Brother Kell and his family have been such willing workers in the different departments here, that the Saints rejoice that God has recognized his work by calling Brother Kell to occupy in a higher place.

Any Saints near Rockford should call at 115 North Third Street, on Sundays from 10 to 12 a. m. The pastor resides at 1532 Benton Street.

While Elder C. W. Prettyman was visiting among the Saints at Pleasantview, Nebraska, with whom he had labored so long, he was prevailed upon to preach a few sermons. The Saints were appreciative of this visit and of his sermons. A few nonmembers attended the meetings. This branch also reports the home department doing nicely.

Radio Flashes

Joplin, Missouri.—I have been able to tune in K F I X several times, and it comes in clear. The first time I tuned in this station, it was in the middle of a sermon, and I said to my wife, "If this preacher is not a Latter Day Saint, he surely talks like one," and sure enough it was. Best wishes for your future success, as I think there are many possibilities for radio in spreading the gospel.—J. E. Leslie.

Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania.—I would like to report that station K F F V has been heard here. Signals loud and clear, in spite of much local interference. I am located nine miles from Philadelphia.—Paul Looney.

Olathe, Kansas.—We greatly enjoy your K F I X programs, and appreciate your great kindness in entertaining your vast audience all over the United States. May the Lord bless all efforts that are manifested in making our land better and advancing the kingdom of God.—Mr. and Mrs. Clem A. Swank.

Vandena, Saskatchewan, Canada.—Have just listened to your K F F V program which I enjoyed very much. Heard you announce that you had to rebuild your aerial system and think you must have improved it, as I heard you once before and not nearly so loud as this evening. To-night you could be heard 30 feet from Magnavox, using detector and two stage.—G. Art Lewis.

Chariton, Iowa.—Through the courtesy of Brother R. E. Evans, a few of the Saints here had the pleasure of hearing the Graceland College program recently. We enjoyed the singing, and the prayer was so grand it will make an impression upon many. The sermon by Brother McDowell was so plain and searching it gave comfort to the soul such as could not be given by teachers of materialism.—Parley Batten.

Girard, Montana.—Perhaps you would be interested to know that I tuned in on station K F I X. I tried several times before, but could not get it. This time it came in quite clear and distinct. I am sending you one dollar to use for the benefit of the station. Will be on the lookout for you from now on.—Raymond R. Gouldsmith.

Silver City, New Mexico.—We happened to be twisting the dials last evening, March 6, and picked up K F I X just before you signed off. Heard you mention your wave length, ask for reports, etc. Also heard you announce you would be on again at 11 a. m., Sunday, with an address by Frederick A. Smith (my uncle). You were coming in here very strong, and modulation was perfect as could be asked for. Announcer A. B. C. sounds to me like Mr. Arthur B. Church. If so, "Hello, Mr. Church."—J. A. McCallum.

The Controversy of the Churches

While the Federal Council of Churches is avowedly declaring the great love of its members for one another and urging closer cooperation within itself, there breaks out in melodramatic peal the great controversy between the Fundamentalists and Modernists.

The Fundamentalists represent a conservative element in the attitude toward the Christian doctrines, but they are possessed of a belligerent nature as regards the views of fellow churchmen.

All who have been brought into the quarrel of the churches on the opposition have been termed Modernists, apparently because they differ with some of the traditional doctrines which have been considered fundamental for years by the sectarian world in general. The Fundamentalists are leading the fight to force their colleagues to believe as they do or get out of the church.

Strange as it may seem, the controversy is not between denominations but is between factions in several of the churches, sort of a Protestant civil war, as it were.

Mr. Bryan did not start the war, but he gave some impetus to it when recently he waged a fight on evolution throughout the country, bringing it into several state legislatures, on the floor of the Presbyterian convention, and when he finally published his views in book form. Needless to say, Mr. Bryan is a Fundamentalist.

Evolution, however, is not now the center of the argument, for it has been far supplanted by the question of the virgin birth of Christ. Among lesser questions, but still of importance are: Belief in the Bible as inspired and absolutely without error; belief in the bodily resurrection of Jesus; and belief in the literal second coming of Christ.

Doctor Harry Emerson Fosdick, of the First Presbyterian Church in New York, was one of the first to protest against the Fundamentalists attempting to force their views upon other people. He has been in the front rank of Modernist leaders since then. Other leaders in the Presbyterian and Baptist churches also came out in protest. Furious fighting on the floor of the convention of both churches helped to widen the chasm between opposing forces. The Unitarians are also in on the controversy, but as yet the Congregationalists are remaining aloof. This is perhaps due to the extent individual freedom of thought is allowed in that church. The Episcopalians were startled recently when one of their numbers announced that Christ did not have the power of God, thus opening within their ranks the rift that was already in others.

Anti-Protestants must smile with satisfaction when they view the breach within the ranks of Protestantism. It may also be a source of warning to those who, now smug in their own safety, are winking at the unstable beliefs of others; for a storm rises quickly and sometimes destroys all in its wake.

A recent news dispatch states that curiosity over the controversy is driving many to religion; that an increase in the attendance of Salvation Army open-air services in the streets is noticeable; and that people who never before knew much about the Bible are discovering that the "old, old story" is interesting and fascinating.

The great war between Fundamentalist and Modernist represents a world attitude not only on the selected questions for controversy, but upon all other questions as well. It is a final period of religious, political, and economic adjustment, and such cannot be made without a struggle. Never before has a time been so ripe for the spreading of the true gospel as it is at present. The Lord has promised that his word shall go unto all peoples, and surely he is preparing the way.

Demand for Religious Literature

Comes the word that the public is demanding more religious literature than ever before in the history of publications. Books on religion are being sold on a scale heretofore unknown, while the story of the life of Christ is leading all in the non-fiction class. The Western Christian Advocate says:

From books that deal with ecclesiastical points now in controversy in church circles, the increased demand reaches in one direction—to semireligious and philosophical works, and in the other direction to the Bible itself. The Bible, a perennial best seller, sold better in the first nine months of 1923 than in all of 1922, and the 1923 total is likely to run 75 per cent higher than for the preceding year. These are sales, not gifts. The American Bible Society's figures show that where ten persons were interested enough to pay money for a Bible in 1922, seventeen or eighteen felt the need in 1923.

Our Zeal and His Compared

A comment and quotation from "Glad Tidings."

Our Sunday Visitor (a Roman Catholic publication, dated January 8, 1922) makes some comparisons between their own liberality and that of the Seventh-day Adventists which are unfavorable to the Roman Catholics. We copy it that our members may make comparison with his own, or our own, liberality. Here it is:

The latest statistical and financial report of the Seventh-day Adventists is both interesting and instructive. With a membership of only 100,000 in the United States, and of only 185,000 in the whole world, this sect has missionaries in every land, and prints its books, tracts, and periodicals in ninety-nine languages and dialects. It publishes 144 papers and magazines, which reach many times as many people as there are Adventist members. Every adherent of this denomination is a missionary both by personal work and financial support. Indeed, it requires great courage and spirit of self-sacrifice to belong to the Adventist body. There are no "slackers" among these people. The 185,000 members gave during the year 1920, $11,854,040.23, which represents $63.92 for every member in the world. Since many adherents in other countries could not give as well as those in this land, it is likely that the Adventists of the United States gave towards local church support and home and foreign missions at least $100 each during that one year. The gain in 1920 over 1919 was $3,277,353.37.

The reader probably knows that all Adventists must pledge to the church the biblical tithe, or ten per cent of their gross income. From this source the church received $7,195,436.04. The ten per cent had to be paid even by the impoverished members in Europe. Almighty God is supposed to receive the first fruits of the Adventist member's labor to the amount of ten per cent. The same people gave for missions more than the 20,000,000 Catholics of the United States, or $4,658,941.19. All Adventists gave $2 for missions for every one cent given by Catholics; in other words, the Adventist church in the United States gave two hundred times as much, in proportion, as the Catholic church.

Hence you, who imagine that your church with its local dues and its mission demands, places a heavy burden on you, can learn both zeal and sacrifice from the Seventh-day Adventist. Not only his purse, but all his spare time and energy are at the disposal of his church. He is thoroughly instructed in the tenets of his religion, can hold his own against all objectors, passes his literature on to others after he will have thoroughly perused it, and he would gladly lay down his life for his faith. Even if misdirected, his zeal is certainly worthy of emulation. If Catholics generally had the zeal and the spirit of the Adventists, the world would be converted in short order. Such is our mission; such is the command issued to the church; such is the requirement imposed by the Master on all his followers. What is your New Year resolution?

Our Father's Watchcare

By Oliver D. Shirk

Our heavenly Father looks forth from his throne,
And watches so faithfully over his own,
In huts and in hamlets, on seas and on plains,
In the lives of his children he watchfully reigns.

Though unseen by the world and unnoticed by men,
He blesses his children again and again.
The world at his children so often may frown
But he knoweth his own, and will give them a crown.

The world may laugh at the righteous and say,
"Your humble, straight path is a very poor way,
Come out with the throng; come out and be gay;
Come do as the world does; have pleasure to-day."

But the righteous abide in the "rut," as they say,
And wait for the Lord to point out the way.
The world has its hour; its hour will fade;
It glows for a while, then subsides into shade.

The light of the righteous, undimmed by the years,
Gives hope to the faithful, assuages their fears:
A lamp to their feet, a light to their way;
It leads till the morning brings forth the new day.

Content with the food and the raiment are they,
That come from their Father day after day.
They ask not for treasures and riches of old,
But seek for the beauties of heaven's pure gold.

They give like the widow, the last of their meal,
And trust in their Father, come want or come weal,
Who clotheth the lilies, the fields, and the grass,
And never the needs of a child doth he pass.

So, loving our Master, we walk in his way,
That leads to the portals of fair, endless day;
And trust in our Father who forth from his throne
Is watching so faithfully over his own.

The Aim of Religion

A symposium, by Elbert A. Smith and Samuel A. Burgess, at the Young People's Convention, Lamoni, Iowa, June 18, 1923.

TALK BY ELBERT A. SMITH

I certainly appreciate the kind words of Brother McDowell in introducing me, but I assure you that I am only an apprentice in living the Christian religion, and sometimes I think I am not very successful. Brother McDowell has asked me to speak to-night in answer to the question, "Why religion at all?" Now he seems to be trying to inveigle me to answer it this morning. He is like some young men who want an answer before they ask the question.

I approach the theme from a little different angle perhaps from Brother Wight, though our conclusions are probably the same. I certainly appreciate his paper and think it will bear rereading.

What is the aim of religion? Is it merely to keep men out of hell? Is the preacher simply a fire insurance agent? Is it simply to get men into heaven? Is the preacher simply selling lots in the golden city? It seems to me that about all is gathered up in the thought that the aim of religion is the development of the human soul. It is a great instrument that God uses in carrying on that thing which he had in mind when he said, "Let us make man." Some think that when he had molded the human form and then afterwards breathed into it the spark of life and man stood up a living soul that his work was done; but in the fourth chapter of Ephesians we get the idea that the work is still in process, where it is said, "Unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

Religion for Developing Man

Religion is the great instrument in the hands of God in developing man towards that standard. I think that Alma in the Book of Mormon clearly had that in mind when he made the supreme test of religion its power to enlarge the human soul. He says by this you may know.

I hear people say they know the gospel is true. They have seen certain signs and had spiritual testimonies. Others have said they could not say that it is true. Alma says, By one thing you may know it is true, when a man can say, "It beginneth to enlarge my soul." When you become a bigger and better man, you can stand up in any prayer meeting and say you know this gospel is true.

I recall the statement of Roger Babson when he stood one time at the brink of Niagara Falls with a friend of his, and as they watched that tremendous volume of water going over the falls the friend said, "There is the greatest source of undeveloped power in America." Babson replied, "You are wrong. The human soul is the greatest source of undeveloped power in America to-day or in the world."

It is the purpose of religion to develop the human soul, and when we have that conception of religion we see that it is as broad and comprehensive and rich and complete as life itself, and yet it is just as simple as the springing up of a blade of grass.

Types of Church Work

We have many types of men in the church with various ideas. We have some who seem to see nothing but the missionary work of the church, and they lament when they see money expended for any other purpose. I thank God for these men who are on fire with the missionary spirit. They help us to keep it burning in the church.

We have others who see the need of pastoral work. That to them is the big thing. I heard one of them say he would not care if not another dollar was spent for missionary work if we would train and conserve that which we have already. We have others who see the ministry of music and recreation and education. If we had only the one class, or if we listened only to the admonitions of one class, we would have a rather one-sided development; but if we can be broad enough and tolerant enough to let every man bring his offering to this church, we may get a program that is rich and full and really religious.

Purpose of Religion

When we say that the purpose of religion is to develop the human soul, it follows naturally that the object of religion is not to suppress or destroy the great racial tendencies. It has been the idea in the past, sometimes, that it was the purpose of religion to destroy all that man liked to do and naturally wanted to do. Anything that was pleasant was considered irreligious, and anything that was bitter and disagreeable was religious. Just as they used to think that anything that was bitter was the better kind of medicine. If little children loved to laugh and play that must be repressed. Let them sit in the corner and learn the catechism. If young people grew up and fell in love, that, being natural, was wrong. But we see now very clearly that the purpose of religion is not to suppress but to develop, to direct, to control the great natural tendencies of the human soul.

Religion then has significance only as it helps along that line; and everything is religious or serves a religious purpose that helps the human soul to grow. (And the human soul is spirit and body. Doctrine and Covenants 85:4.) Anything which does not serve that purpose is not religious, and anything which destroys or hinders the development of the human soul is irreligious or anti-Christian. Anything that serves the purposes of developing the human soul serves a religious purpose in its time, in its place, and in its degree.

I am broad enough then to believe that a ball game in its time and place and degree may serve a religious purpose, but certainly its time is not on Sunday and its degree is not by any means equal to such pentecostal meetings as we sometimes have. So, too, those larger things, prayer, and meditation, and service, must be tested by this supreme test. Sometimes prayer is irreligious. The Pharisee stood puffing himself up and saying, "I thank God I am not as other men." That prayer was irreligious, and the more he prayed it the smaller he got. I have heard of prayer services where week after week in certain branches every man improved the opportunity to slur somebody with whom he had a quarrel. That kind of a prayer service is irreligious. It destroys the human soul. Religion must be a help to the growth of the human soul. It must justify itself thus somewhere, somehow, or else it cannot have place in our life.

What Is Irreligious?

I have recently read a story of our monasteries of years ago. When a young man entered to take up the life of a monk, a stick was planted in the ground, and he was given the job of watering the stick. That was considered religious. It was irreligious. It served no purpose whatever in developing him or others. Religion is concerned first with developing individuals and society. The idea used to be, apparently, that ceremony was religion; that doctrine was religion; that organization was religion. These things, all of them, justify themselves in my mind as finally we trace them out and find they serve some purpose in developing the human soul.

Take the question, for instance, of church membership. Some seem satisfied when they have acquired church membership and have their names on the church roll. They seem to think that is an insurance policy, that it is all filed away safely in the strong box of heaven, and there is nothing more to do. I have known men to lie in order to retain their church membership. Accused of transgression they have appealed from three courts in succession and sworn they were innocent, but finally they have confessed before the branch in order to retain their church membership.

Church membership is of significance only as through it by fellowship and mutual helpfulness and love and charity with your fellow men and God you become a bigger man or woman than you were yesterday. If it is not helping your soul to grow along those lines, it is not religious.

God's Organization

And so as a church organization we have always been proud of the fact, and justly so, that we have a church organized with apostles, prophets, evangelists, and so on, a whole line of them, and not one that is not in the record. It is God's organization. It is the best one in the world; but that is not the final thing we are sent out to preach. Those are helps in the hands of the ministry to accomplish a purpose. What is that purpose? "For the help of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ, until we all grow into the fullness of the stature of Christ." That is what your church organization is for, and in it you find its significance and justification.

And so with the church principles of faith, repentance, and baptism. All those principles have their significance as they help men and women to grow, and Paul after he had enumerated them said, "Let us go on to perfection." That is what they were for, and so with all other ceremonies, including the most beautiful of them, the communion of the Lord's supper. It is not a mechanical function, but it calls us always to the memory of the Lord Jesus, and he said to us, "And inasmuch as ye do it, do it in remembrance of me."

TALK BY SAMUEL A. BURGESS

Just to cause you to think a little I would like to run over some of these definitions briefly: "The life of God is the soul of man." I will confess that has never appealed to me as a definition. In the first place, it is too passive, it is too much like sitting back and saying, "Nothing to do; Jesus paid it all." Yet religion is the divine spark within oneself reaching out to that Eternal One as his son. As the son of my father I possess something of him, and if I have become the son of God I am possessed of something of his divine likeness, and that divine likeness of his, small though it may be in me, is reaching out the better to comprehend and know him. It is a positive seeking for the divine and seeking to manifest that we have found Him, by our conduct toward our fellow men.

We have failed many times in our definitions of religion because we have a tendency to try to put it within the four walls of a definition and keep it there. To-day the tendency is to emphasize religion as linking together, as relationship of man to man—the social aspect. Yet that is not the whole.

A definition can never measure religion. It is said that we have a dearth of original thought, that if we can work a thing out with our hands, we do it. That same principle will cause us to try to put things down in a neat analysis, so many bones to a finger, so many habits, so many attitudes there, so many knowledges. But after all, anatomy is not life. However valuable anatomy may be to the understanding of the living body, the anatomy of religion will never define or measure or explain the life of the soul nor real religion.

Religion Is Fuller Life

In the simplest terms, after all, the religious purpose is the fuller life. Man is an animal, and he can live on the animal plane. He also possesses intelligence and can live as a man. However, as has been pointed out quite clearly, unless he is touched with the finger of God, the spiritual power within him is not awakened. Except he is born again, he cannot see, let alone enter, the kingdom of God.

Now man, partaking of the divine nature, is forever seeking the peace of soul that he can find only when his soul and mind are brought in concurrence with the divine. Then he knows which way is east. When a young man is suddenly thrown into the midst of college in the center of the knowledge of the ages, he sometimes gets turned around and does not know east or west, and he does not know which way he is going. But he finds himself when he gets in touch with the divine; and when we are in touch with the divine, like takes on a new significance. Those things of life that we wondered what good they are, what they are for—the mechanical part of life, such as washing dishes, chopping wood—takes on a new significance, for we realize that all is part of an eternal purpose.

Religion must be everyday life. That sounds easy but is not. It is hard to keep our feet on the earth of common sense and reason with the broad sympathy and love of our fellow men, and keep that divine goal forever before us each day and hour.

Again, man is so constituted that he cannot be happy unless he knows the truth and follows the way of truth. Unless he feels that contact with the eternal, he is not at peace in his own soul, for part of him is not functioning.

Summary of Religious Aims

To sum up: Our religious aims are first of all for a right attitude toward our fellow man. A man who goes out to save his own soul is quite likely to lose it and everything else in the bargain, but if he seeks first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, if he seeks first to do good to others, seeking first always the consciousness of God as well as the consciousness of the brotherhood of man, then he finds joy and satisfaction and peace in the sanctum of his own soul and in a better understanding of his fellow men, of God, and His purposes. Receiving the as-urance that he is a son of God, he can view with patience the questions and doubts of others and will with patience try to help those that are seeking truth.

The aim of the religious life is then to live fully. Eat, drink, and care for the physical nature, so we may the better live and do. Intellectually, it means to learn and accept the truth, wherever found. Socially, it requires our full duty as a citizen, as a neighbor, as well as in the family. One cannot live to himself alone and live the full life of religion. Then to crown it all, religion means in secret prayer to draw near to God, so that in renewed spiritual power everyday life is glorified; and work for and with the family and community becomes a part of our life as a child of God. Every deed and thought thus takes on new purpose, and love of neighbor is seen to be truly love of God, for it has now become such.

Biographical Sketch of Rees Jenkins

By S. A. Burgess

Amid extreme privations brought about by the war, famine, pestilence, and exposure, Elder Rees Jenkins, first missionary of the Reorganization to Palestine, died fighting for the cause of Christ. Faithful at his post to the last, he did all that he could for the people among whom he labored that they might know of the restored gospel in its glory. As the only visible monument to his service in the Holy Land, his grave is marked by a simple stone. Jerusalem and Damascus know him no more, but his work lives in the lives of many friends, and they remember him as a martyr to Christ.

Early Life

Elder Rees Jenkins was born at Cilcenen, Wales, August 10, 1869. He came from a family of Latter Day Saints and at the early age of fifteen was ordained a deacon. Before he was seventeen he became a priest and was later made an elder.

In 1903, he came to America where he labored for several years. In 1908 he entered the quorum of seventy and was sent on a mission to Wales, where he remained for three years.

In Palestine

Elder Jenkins received the first appointment to Palestine in 1911. While others had previously visited there, no definite or permanent appointment had probably been made. In 1841 Orson Hyde, of the Quorum of Twelve, made a brief visit to Jerusalem, and in 1866 George J. Adams, on his own responsibility took a colony to the Holy Land, some of whom still remain there. Also early in 1906 Paul M. Hanson visited Palestine on his way home from Australia. At other times E. F. Robertson and possibly others visited there for a short time. In 1910 Frederick G. Pitt and his wife, with Gomer T. Griffiths, arrived in Palestine en route to Australia. They were well received by Mary J. Floyd and her husband, both of whom had been affiliated with the George J. Adams colony. At this time Elder Griffiths organized a branch of eleven members. In all he remained about ten weeks. Brother and Sister Pitt, however, had their tickets extended as long as possible, so were able to remain for about six months.

Early in the fall of 1911, Elder Jenkins and his wife arrived in Palestine and began their faithful work. Elder U. W. Greene was appointed in charge of that field in 1913, and Elder H. A. Koehler and wife were selected to accompany him. Writing to the next conference of the work in the Holy Land, Elder Greene said:

During the past year Brother and Sister Rees Jenkins have labored here; Sister Jenkins, being matron of the home, has indeed been a mother in Israel.

Elder Greene continued in charge of that mission, but his services were terminated by the outbreak of the war. In 1915 in a report of the conditions of the mission he stated:

I am satisfied that school work is necessary in Jerusalem, and that we need industries to assist the people to earn a living there. Brother Jenkins and wife preferred to remain temporarily, than to endure the horrors of an ocean trip during the winter; they will probably leave there as soon as conference arranges to care for the mission. We had hoped for great things this year, and were disappointed in the way things turned out.

Elder Jenkins and wife, however, remained in that field as they felt they were needed to keep the work going. They had been there since 1911.

Communication Stopped by War

From a letter in the HERALD of August, 1918, Sister Jenkins wrote that they had just received funds the first of May from the church, which were much appreciated, and the first they had received since December, 1915. It is certain, however, that money was sent in 1916 through the department of state. Still, for two years and a half, communication with them was practically impossible. Elder Jenkins was ill much of the time. Elder Greene had urged upon them to leave that field, but they felt their services were needed. They seemed to possess the real spirit of the missionary, and Elder Jenkins and wife evidently meant to make that their life work, to redeem the people of the Holy Land.

In any event, the passage of time made it nearly impossible to get away as the horrors of war increased. No report could be received from them.

In 1916 and 1917 Elder U. W. Greene reported Elder Jenkins being seriously ill and the native

Saints suffering for the necessities of life. It was impossible to send supplies, as they were stolen en route. An effort was made to reach them with cable funds but apparently without avail.

Elder Jenkins Made Captive by Turks

When the Turks evacuated Jerusalem, they took Elder Jenkins with them but left Sister Jenkins in Jerusalem. When he arrived at Damascus early in December, 1917, he was neither put in prison nor cared for. An account of what happened there and the story of his sad death is told by Mr. Archibald Forder, who was taken prisoner at the same time:

Mr. Forder Lends Assistance

Mr. Jenkins arrived in Damascus early in December, 1917, and visited me in my house about the 12th; he was very wet and cold the day he came and told me that he had no place in which to live, neither had he money to buy food with or pay for lodging. I told him he could come and occupy one of my rooms, and he came the same day. I lent him a bed and blankets, and we ate together in my room, he sharing what I had, although it was half rations. About Christmas he contracted a heavy cold and was in bed about a week, during which time I looked after him, and he got well again, although he never really recovered from the cold. Early in the year 1918 he received some money from America and was able to care for himself, although he still had my room, furniture, bedding, and other things. So far as I know he was not badly off for food; every morning I made his breakfast for him, as he complained of being giddy when he rose.

Contracts Typhus Fever

For a time he seemed to be better and ate well, going walking every day. In March he had a slight sunstroke which troubled him some, and I insisted on his stopping in bed for several days, during which time I cared for him, as I had nothing else to do. In April he caught a severe cold, for he had very little clothing, and he would go out in the wet for a walk; however, he got over the cold but was very weak indeed. One morning he complained of headache and burning stomach. I saw that he had fever, which I thought was a result of the cold, so I doctored him with such remedies as I had, and he seemed better, but a day or two later he was down again and had no desire to get up. The fever continued, so I called in an English nurse friend of mine, and together we examined him, and found spots on his abdomen which we feared were typhus spots, so I called in a doctor who pronounced it a case of typhus, but he said all was being done that could be done, and it was best for Jenkins to stay under my care than to go to the Turkish hospital.

For a few days I fed him every hour on milk and brandy, washed him, and did all that was possible for him, and he seemed likely to pull through although very weak. As I was getting very tired with the constant nursing, the doctor suggested sending in a native woman to care for him, but no one wanted to be with a typhus case, and many blamed me for running the risk of getting the disease myself, but I meant to see the case through no matter what happened.

Taken to Hospital.

On about the tenth day some of the neighbors told the authorities that I had a case of typhus in my house. They sent a doctor to see the case, and he ordered Jenkins to be moved to the hospital. I did my best to keep him in my house, but they sent men and had him taken to the hospital which was about two miles out of the city. I went with him, and saw him put in a ward with several others; the long shaking in the wagon tired him, and he was much exhausted on reaching the hospital. I bribed the attendant in charge of the ward to let me stay a time and feed him on milk and brandy, and he seemed to pull round sufficiently to recognize me and to understand where he was. About evening I left him, promising to return early next morning to get what was necessary; meanwhile the attendant promised to look after him and feed him as I had done.

Dies During the Night

Early next morning I was at the hospital, but my patient was not there. He had died during the night, and his body had been sent away with others to be buried. No one could tell me where the dead were disposed of, but after several hours searching I found that his body had been thrown into a pit with others and left to decompose. I got men and recovered the body, had a coffin made, and buried the remains in the Protestant cemetery in Damascus. Over the grave I erected a wooden cross bearing the name, and date of decease. The authorities revisited my house and took away all the clothing and bedding that had been used by the patient and burned them, not giving any compensation.

Might Have Been Saved

On my return to Jerusalem in November, 1918, I handed to Mrs. Jenkins such few things as I had been able to keep, together with a small sum of money that was left over, after paying the few expenses. I did my best for the poor fellow, for we were fellow sufferers in a strange land, and I am glad that I was able to do my best although things turned out as they did. I feel sure that had Jenkins been left in my care, he would have pulled through, but being a prisoner myself I could not resist the authorities in their action in removing him. He died on May 9, 1918.

Appointment of Harry Passman

Elder Harry Passman was appointed at the January conference of 1919, to Palestine, and reached there early in 1920. President Frederick M. Smith, who visited Palestine in 1918, was unable to go to Damascus because of the destruction of roads by bands of belligerent Bedouins, so upon his request Elder Passman went to Damascus as soon as the way was open and had the grave of Elder Jenkins suitably marked. A photograph of his burial place accompanies this article.

The supreme price was paid for the early efforts to spread the gospel in the holy land, but it was permanently planted and is now bearing fruit. The splendid work done through great sacrifice and eventually loss of life, by the first missionary of the Reorganization to Palestine, will never be forgotten. It still lives in the lives of others and will continue to live in the cause it established in that country.

TRIBUTES TO ELDER REES JENKINS

Memorial Article Dedicated to Elder Rees Jenkins

I was never acquainted with Elder Rees Jenkins personally, but I had the privilege of following him in the path he molded, and of conversing with some that knew him well. Their testimony of his character was consistent. He was an ideal man with high resolves, and was ever toiling to put these into execution.

A gentleman in Jerusalem made the statement to me that Elder Rees Jenkins was one of those rare Christians that had imbibed the spirit of tolerance toward all men. There was no room in his soul for prejudice. He was striving hard to emulate his Master and was succeeding.

He was one of those pastors that stuck to his post during the war, even at the cost of his life. "Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friends." The Good Shepherd laid down his life for the sheep, and in the final sacrifice of Elder Rees Jenkins I discern that same spirit that characterized our beloved Master.

Only those that were deported with him can appreciate his sufferings and agonies; but God saw fit to relieve him from his journey through the Garden of Shadows. That Still Small Voice seemed to say, It is enough. And as the Old Reaper thrust in his sickle to reap, our beloved brother answered the summons.

When the sun goes below the horizon, its light continues to shine. When a good man goes to rest, his light is not extinguished, but everlastingly continues to radiate. So it is with our beloved brother; though he has gone beyond the horizon, his beautiful character continues to illumine those that knew him best.

HARRY PASSMAN.

Letter of a Friend

I knew the late Elder Rees Jenkins, missionary of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Jerusalem, from 1910 to 1917. He was an intimate friend of mine; a man of high ideals; a true Christian who lived a Christlike life; and a pioneer missionary who followed the steps of his Master and lived as he taught.

During the World War I visited Elder Jenkins frequently in spite of the unbearable stress of those bad days: maltreatments of the cruel and atrocious Turks, and vain troubles given to him by some of his false brethren. He was patient, never murmured, but trusted his God with an unwavering faith.

On one occasion, when he was persecuted by certain natives who brought groundless imputations against him, he treated them manfully, showing to them the spirit of his Master, who prayed for his enemies while he was on the cross.

The last time I met Elder Jenkins was a short while prior to his deportation by the Turks from Jerusalem to Damascus, where he slept in the Lord. I found him undisturbed and enjoying a peace which nobody but a true Christian can enjoy.

Although Elder Rees Jenkins is dead, his ideals, his faith, his Christian life, are alive and speak of him.

When Will the People Come Out of the North Country?

Because of the many times our attention has been called to a remarkable article appearing in Popular Science Monthly, we are giving a short review of the same for the benefit of our readers.

This article, entitled "Will the ZR-1 discover a polar paradise?" by Lieutenant-Commander Fitzhugh Green, United States Navy, is an imaginative description of a lost tribe of people on an unknown continent lying somewhere in the unexplored area of the polar regions. It is based upon some scientific facts, upon observations of arctic explorers, and corroborated by fascinating legends of the Eskimos.

In the proposed transpolar flight of the huge new navy dirigible, the ZR-1 (the Shenandoah), next summer, lies the most thrilling possibility that ever faced a single body of explorers: In the center of the unknown area of the Polar Sea may be discovered a vast continent heated by subterranean fires and inhabited by the descendants of the lost Norwegian colony of Greenland!

So wild is the idea as to tax the most gullible imagination. Yet it is vividly encouraged and supported not only by history and tradition, but by the searching test of scientific analysis.

The possibility of land being found in the north is not unlikely. The greatest unexplored area on the surface of the globe lies within the boundaries of the Polar Sea and covers about 1,000,000 square miles. That an unknown continent lies within this area is not only possible but probable. Experts agree that a new arctic land will be found. Doctor Harris, tidal expert in Washington, District of Columbia, declares he is convinced from data he has worked out that a large land mass lies near the North Pole. Geologists corroborate this statement by finding a well-defined area of volcanic activity in this region. Arctic explorers have sighted mountain peaks at different times. Land is probable.

As early as 985 A. D., Eric the Red discovered Greenland. He brought back tales of "grassy fiords, long sunlit days, game-infested hills, ice pans groaning under their burden of fat seals, bays teeming with fish." Colonization began, and the Vikings who settled that country prospered. The last ship known to have returned to Norway from these arctic colonies was in 1410. When connection was again made with this country in 1721, the Norwegian colony of perhaps 100,000 people had disappeared. Not a trace of them has been found to this day. What happened to them? Were they lured northward into a land of "milk and honey" where grass is green throughout the year? An engineering scheme has been projected for heating Iceland by using the heat from hot springs. Is it possible that a fertile plateau to the north is naturally heated by hot springs, geysers, and boiling pools? "Does a polar paradise exist? And, if so, are the vanished Norsemen there?"

It may well set us to wondering at the words of the Lord when he said:

And they who are in the north countries shall come in remembrance before the Lord, and their prophets shall hear his voice, and shall no longer stay themselves, and they shall smite the rocks, and the ice shall flow down in their presence. And an highway shall be cast up in the midst of the great deep.—Doctrine and Covenants 108: 6.

House to House Missionary Work, or Tracting

(A plan outlined by Thomas L. Clark for directing workers during a series of missionary meetings at Moundsville, West Virginia.)

This plan is submitted for consideration of those interested in missionary work. It is a concrete example of the way one missionary is meeting the problem of tracting, and should suggest possible solutions to similar problems elsewhere.—EDITORS.

When approaching a home, don't go up with a pussyfoot tread as though you were going to steal the door knob and run away. Be natural; be businesslike; carry yourself erect as a gentleman or a woman of refinement and culture.

When greeted at the door by the person of the house, in response to the ring of the doorbell, address her as follows:

"Good morning, Mrs. ———. This is Mrs. ———; I am representing the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ. Did you ever attend any of our services?"

(Whether she says yes or no, reply as follows:)

"Well, we are now conducting a revival campaign, in the North Street Church building, formerly occupied by the Church of God, and we would be pleased to have you attend."

(Handing her the tract) "This is a brief tract, which will give you an idea who we are, and I would be pleased if you would read it, and some evening when you come to service, bring it along, as we like to keep them for future use, and if you desire other literature upon any religious topic, we will be glad to furnish you with same.

"Our service begins at seven-thirty each evening."

(Then passing the time of day, leave. Don't stop to argue.)

(The name and address of the people who return the tract to the church will be taken for reference.)

Second Visit a Few Days Later

(Carrying a card or bill announcing a special sermon for that or the following evening, you make the second call, to pick up the tracts left before, and extend another personal invitation.)

"This is Mrs. _____ representing the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ." I just wish to leave you a card announcing our special service, to be held (time) in the North Street Church building. . . . You know where it is, do you not?

"Oh, by the way," (speak as though a new thought just entered your mind) "have you that tract read, which I left you the other day? If you have I'll just take it with me, if you don't mind." (When she presents you with the tract ask her:) "Are there any points advanced in this tract that are not made clear enough to you?" (If any point is raised, don't argue, give her a tract that will meet her needs—which you should have with you—take her name and address, and again extend her a cordial invitation to the services.)

Finds Opportunity for Preaching in Community Where There Is No Minister

MARBLE, COLORADO, March 2.—I thought it might be of interest to the Saints to hear from this little town in the mountains. I came here from Carthage, Missouri, where I first came in contact with the restored gospel of Jesus Christ. I accepted the gospel and stepped forth in obedience to its plan and was baptized January 15, 1920.

I was not idle from then on. I was ordained to the office of priest May 1, 1922, which office I now hold. I remained in Carthage until a few weeks ago, when the opportunity came for me to come out here where I could make better wages and have steadier work. Upon arriving here I found there was but one church and that was an Episcopalian church, and all the people were either Episcopalian or Catholic. I also found out that there was no minister here, so I offered my services. They accepted, and on Sunday, February 24, I preached to them, using "Faith" as my subject. They were well pleased and asked me to attend Sunday school, which is held at three o'clock in the afternoon. I did, and was called upon to offer prayer, also to teach the Bible class; the latter I asked to be excused from but they insisted, so I did. I preached again on March 2, and taught the Bible class in the afternoon.

I see before me a wonderful opportunity for getting the gospel of Christ before this people, and I am earnestly praying for God's assistance that I may be able to accomplish this. It is an intelligent community, many of the people being school-teachers and the main business people of the town.

God in all his power can and will bless his ministry and people. It is truly a marvelous work and a wonder, and I am praying for the advancement of the gospel of Christ.

Visiting Members Note Progress Made in Minneapolis Branch

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA, March 17.—My companion and I have been visiting members here for some time past, and during our stay have noticed with deep interest the wonderful progress which is being made by the branch under the care of our brother, Elder C. A. Kress, who during the week days is engaged in business.

Since Brother Kress has been put in charge of the branch here, one of the most important moves he has made was to have cottage meetings at the homes of some of the Saints. Oh, it is indeed encouraging to see the members, by the guidance of the Holy Spirit, respond with a real heart to heart zeal! This will surely bear much fruit if all continue faithful and humble.

At the sacramental meetings the good Spirit is ever present to bless and comfort the pure, the noble, and the good. Many have been made to feel its influence, which has caused not only the Saints, but nonmembers, to give vent to their feelings. Some of the nonmembers are showing a very friendly feeling at those meetings.

There is also very good orchestral talent here, which is a wonderful asset. The lovely music is quite inspiring. The choir, which is one of the very important essentials for a branch, makes the meetings more interesting. Brother James Spargo, the chorister, is certainly the right man in the right place. He is ever devoted to his calling, all of which means that good music is being rendered.

Baptisms Performed

The outlook for the onward progress of the work here is very encouraging. Yesterday, March 16, two adults were baptized, and two other adults are on the list for baptism on next Sunday. Still others are very near the threshold.

Last, but not least, is the encouraging big move which has been and is going on here, especially since the new year of 1924. The present church building is entirely too small to seat the crowd and at times cannot even give standing room for the attendance. The Saints are putting forth real efforts for an up-to-date church building which when completed will be a credit to the members and the church.

This may mean sacrifice on the part of the members here, even until it hurts. If it should be, the Saints will not be making the sacrifice in vain, for we have the blessed assurance of the heavenly Parent that we shall be rewarded according to all the good deeds and sacrifices which we put forth to spread this glorious latter-day work.

May all with oneness of heart and purpose lay up for themselves treasures in heaven.

Conditions in Germany Described by German Member in Letter

From a Letter to the First Presidency

PLAUEN, GERMANY, February 20.—I would like to write to you and tell you of some of the conditions in Germany. We hope with the help of God that we may soon come to Zion.

There are in this land doctors and officers who have become beggars. Children in school faint and are overcome from hunger. There are many men out of work, and things are getting worse every day. There is so much wickedness going on, instead of looking to the Lord for help the people curse him. The hardships of Germany cannot be described. The people are cold, hungry, and freezing, and they have to go through this every day. As for us, we put our trust in the Lord that he will help us get out of this land. We have trusted in the Lord before, and he has helped us, and will in the future.

We would like to be remembered to Mr. John Zimmermann, jr., and wish to thank him for his kindness in helping us.

J. M. Terry Writes of Work at El Reno

EL RENO, OKLAHOMA, March 14.—The ground is covered with snow and the twigs of the trees are ridged inch deep with whiteness, while the snow still falls. The worst storms here usually come down from the north but this one is from Texas and Arkansas. It will be a blessing to the farmers.

Sickness has invaded the ranks and lessened the attendance at the church services, yet sufficient numbers attend to maintain the services, which consist of Sunday school, Religion, and two sermons each Sunday, with the usual Wednesday night prayer meeting.

A program of the dramatization of the book of Esther, written by the talented Brother W. W. Powers, of Seattle, was received. Those in the cast are: Gail Waite, D. S. McDole, C. H. Powers, Percy A. Powers, Mary J. Williams, Monte E. Lasater, Austin Earl, Walter Waite, Dollie Tabbut, Medel Brown, Florence Love, Rosetta Simpson, D. Oliver, Juanita Inslee, Beth Oliver, Francis Holman, N. Inslee, Lila Tabbut, Ruth Roland, Grace Emslie, and Pearl Skoor. Sister Florence Love is director of the music. Surely such a work is commendable. It is hoped Brother Wilford W. Powers will do more along this line.

A union revival, lasting one month, has just closed here. It is reported that 1,025 "hit the trail," as they say, and various churches are gathering in their portions. The Latter Day Saints were not included.

This is a level prairie country, not much timber. Gazing in all directions from some vantage points one seems to be in an immense saucer, some thirty miles in diameter. Some of the soil here is as red as brick dust, yet it is productive.

The church forces here are united and the prospects good when the weather settles and sickness abates.

Work Being Revived at New Canton, Illinois

NEW CANTON, ILLINOIS, March 20.—This writing finds me at a place where many of our missionaries of the past have labored with success. However, this place is now the home of just a very few Saints, no longer boasting the large membership, large Sunday school, and large Christmas offering it once did. While the few Saints remaining are holding on to the rod of iron, they are anxious that the gospel may still be preached to the newcomers.

I finished a three weeks' series of meetings at New Canton last Sunday, March 16, with an all-day meeting. We wrote special invitations to the scattered members in the many little towns near this place, but owing to the condition of roads many were unable to attend the meeting. However, a splendid day was had, and four precious souls were brought into the kingdom. Two more have given their names for baptism.

Brother Tilphard Phillips was ordained to the office of elder. This will help the branch out to some extent, although he is to labor about twenty-five miles from here.

Four babies were blessed during the meetings, which shows that the Saints are awake to the necessity of bringing up their children in the way they should go. There were also some administrations.

I believe much good was done and that the Saints will try harder to work together than they have in the past, to boost this great cause, that others may see the beauties in it.

My mission address is Bradner, Ohio.

Apostles' Visit to London Enjoyed by Saints

LONDON, ENGLAND, March 7.—Perhaps a word from this great city will show that the church work is still in existence here. The branch continues though few in number, and the Spirit of God is realized at times.

The recent district conference was one of spiritual power and blessing to all who love the work of God. Brethren J. F. Curtis and Paul M. Hanson were present and both made a good impression.

The Saints were sorry that these men were not able to stay for a longer period. It is a great pity that so many missionaries have been to London, yet so little actual missionary work has been done here. The London Branch holds its meetings in Saint Leonard's Hall, Stamford Hill, by the kind permission of the general authorities, but the hall is quite a distance from the majority of the London Saints. Most of them have to go three to five miles to church, so you can see why the midweek meetings are not well attended.

We are holding Religion and prayer services on Thursday evening, Religion from 7.30 to 8.15 and prayer meeting from 8.30 to 9.15. The Sunday services are: Sunday school from 8.30 to 4.30, choir practice from 5.30 to 6, and the evening preaching at 6.30.

This shows there is an effort made to hold on. The Religion and Sunday school are in the hands of Elder J. W. Foster, who is quite devoted to the work. Brother W. T. Goullee is instructor in singing and all musical activities.

Field Ripe for Harvest

The work of the church can only make progress here under real devoted and intelligent service. It seems that if ever there was an opportunity to bring the church before the people it is now. The general Christian community has come to the conclusion that their churches are powerless unless they come before the people with a solid front, having the one message essential to spiritual life and salvation. They are organizing revival centers and all the ministers of the different denominations are taking part in making the meetings a success.

What a wonderful opportunity for our church, if we were only in the position to accept it, and hold meetings in these districts and show that God has again restored the gospel, the one message which leads to life and salvation. At present there is no one here to do it, so far as this great city is concerned.

It seems that many are waiting for the message. Christianity is not a myth but a blessed reality when faith can be applied to the law of liberty, when men and women can prove for themselves that the blessings and gifts of the gospel are still in existence, and that God is still interested in the welfare of humanity. May the young men do all they can to become efficient ministers, capable of being a power for good to the church and mankind.

JOHN W. WORTH.

Rallies Held in Branches of Toronto District

TORONTO, ONTARIO, March 10.—Following the district conference the district presidency, David Pycock, James A. Wilson, and J. T. Whitehead, have been actively engaged in advancing the work in the different parts of the district.

Rallies have been held in the branches throughout the district according to plans of the Presidency. These have been conducted by the department heads, Angus Kennedy, superintendent of Sunday school; J. T. Whitehead, superintendent of Religio; and Mrs. A. F. McLean, superintendent of Department of Women. The following branches have had rallies: Toronto, Hamilton, Humber Bay, North Toronto, Woodbridge, Niagara Falls with Welland uniting; and Lowbanks. The rally at Cameron was postponed on account of heavy snows.

Sisters Margaret Macgregor and Mary Wilson assisted in conducting sessions for the Department of Women, and Brethren A. F. McLean, B. H. Hewitt, D. Pycock, and James A. Wilson were speakers in Religio and Sunday school sessions. The late T. R. Seaton conducted the music in all these rallies and gave talks on music in most of the branches.

Winter Institute

The institute was held in Toronto, February 8, 9, and 10, the program previously published in the HERALD being carried out, with the exception of a few changes made necessary in the personnel of the instructors. The Toronto Branch served meals to all attending the sessions. The attendance on Saturday and Sunday, February 9 and 10, was larger than at preceding institutes in Toronto. Elders Gregory and Macgregor were welcome visitors at the institute and their lectures were received with appreciation.

Missionary Meetings

Since the first of the year Elder D. Pycock conducted a series of meetings at Lowbanks. They were well attended by nonmembers as well as members. At the close of the meetings an oyster supper and program were given in honor of Brother Pycock, at which nonmembers assisted.

Elder Frederick Gregory, district missionary, held a series of meetings at North Toronto with good success. He was given a surprise party at the home of Brother B. J. Williams at which some of his old friends of the First Toronto Branch were present. Brother Williams was the first president of the First Toronto Branch. He has also conducted meetings at Woodbridge and is at present at Humber Bay.

Elder S. W. Tomlinson has been preaching and visiting at Beeton and Tottenham where two large groups of nonresident Saints reside.

Elder W. W. Coombe, a nonresident member of Whitby, late of the Winnipeg Branch, has held meetings with the Saints at Port Perry.

A series of meetings are being conducted by Elder R. C. Russell in Ottawa. The meetings are held on Sunday at the church, and during the week at the homes of nonmembers. Several are ready for baptism as soon as the Ottawa River will allow for openings in the ice. Brother Russell held meetings at Cornwall preceding the present series.

Besides presiding over the North Toronto Branch, Elder James A. Wilson preaches at Woodbridge, Beeton, and other near-by places; Elder J. T. Whitehead preaches in these places when his other district work permits. Bishop A. F. McLean is kept busy explaining the financial law in the different branches.

Welland Branch Swept by Fire

Welland Branch lost all their records, organ, pulpit, books, and other property through fire, recently. The hall which they were renting was totally destroyed. It had taken the Saints twenty years to gather together this property and as their membership has become lessened through removals this is a great loss to the few who remain to carry on the work; but they are not discouraged.

Death of District Chorister

The Saints throughout the district were shocked and saddened to hear of the death of Elder T. R. Seaton, on February 19. While at his duties as chorister in his home branch, at one of Elder Gregory's meetings, he was suddenly taken away. The sympathy of the whole district goes to his wife, his son Clifford, and daughters, Irene and Inez and Mrs. John Pycock. Elder Gregory conducted the funeral services.

Purchase of Reunion Grounds

The district reunion committee, appointed by the conference, has purchased grounds at Woodbridge on the Humber River. It is an ideal spot for the district reunion, which will be held the last week in July and the first week in August. The grounds are about twenty miles from Toronto, making one of the most beautiful spots in Ontario.

FLORALICE MILLER.

Brother C. L. Munro, of Taneycomo, Missouri, writes on March 9 to the HERALD. He says that a union Sunday school was organized in that community last September, the first one which the neighborhood had known for seven years. It was predicted that a certain rough element would interfere with the services, but so far they had not been disturbed and even some who were expected to give trouble were coming instead and seemed interested.

Brother Munro, being a school trustee, might be able to obtain a position for any rural Latter Day Saint teacher who is interested in that portion of the country. He and his wife are also looking for a girl of about fourteen years who is in need of a good home.

A Sunset as a Blessing

After visiting a branch where my efforts seemed to meet with little response, I went to another one where the president did not consider it advisable to arrange for more than the one meeting held each Sunday night. I at once got in communication with the president of another branch and received a very warm-hearted invitation to come at once and hold some meetings. It was a short letter but one carrying that spirit which is at once a godsend to a missionary who may happen to have struck a "rough patch" recently.

On a certain Wednesday, in a part of the globe where the sun is not often seen, it shone brilliantly most all day. I was going to my new appointment on that day, and the sunshine lent encouragement. My destination was in the heart of a part of the world known in all lands for its beautiful scenery. I was going south by train, late in the afternoon, and as I was sitting on the right hand side facing the engine, I had an unobstructed view of the westering sun. I witnessed one of the most gorgeous sunsets which it has ever been my lot to see: the very light or pale tints far out to each side of the sun, gradually growing deeper in color and richer in hue until they were entirely lost in the ball of fire just above the horizon.

It was simply marvelous, and the splendid view lasted for at least ten minutes when a rather large cloud came between the sun and me. Yet my feast was not over, for from behind the cloud the sun made such rich and varied fringes to the broken and jagged edge of the cloud as to make one feel, "Great is the God of nature."

The cloud stayed only about five minutes and passing on left the entire west to be given all the tints of red, gold, and silver possible by the body likened unto celestial glory, as it sank between two hills rising rather abruptly on the horizon.

I drew the attention of a gentleman sitting opposite to the beauty of the occasion, and he looked up for a moment and said, "Yes, that's better," then resumed his perusal of the racing edition of the evening paper. I could only think, "Poor, crippled soul."

I would have had another five minutes of wonderful view, but here was my station—coming like an unexpected message that calls one away from an unfinished banquet, but the early courses had been perfectly served and thankfully received. On the station platform stood not only one of the Saints to meet me, but a little group of them. This fact made my welcome to the city seem real and sincere. On retiring I thanked God that I had been given courage and strength sufficient to enter in upon my new labors. "A MISSIONARY."

Winfield Saints Now Occupy New Church Building

WINFIELD, KANSAS, March 18.—Winfield is still on the map and trying in its weak way to keep the gospel coals burning. Winfield is in the Southwestern Kansas District. Brother George W. Vickery is the pastor.

On February 4, the Saints moved into their new church building of which they are very proud. Since then the membership has grown and there is a larger Sunday School. Brother Charles Pooler, of Arkansas City, is the superintendent.

A Religio has also been organized which meets each Friday evening, and has as its president, Brother H. N. Madden. There are three classes and at the close of the study period a program is rendered.

The Department of Women is under the leadership of Sister Emma Vickery. This department, though only a few most of the time, has made six quilts and had bazaars and cooked food sales, which have been some help in making payments on the new church.

Brother Madden is preaching on Sunday afternoons at the Lone Star schoolhouse about eight miles from Arkansas City. This is the first time the gospel has been preached out there. This was brought about by Brother Moore who lives in that neighborhood. Brother Madden talks there each Sunday except on the first of the month when he goes to Hardtner to administer the sacrament.

Two men have been baptized here by Brother H. N. Madden in the past year.

The reunion for the Southwestern Kansas District will be at Winfield in Island Park from July 18 to 27. The reunion was held here last summer for the first time. While the number was not so very large, all were very much benefited and strengthened to go on with their daily walks of life. It would be a pleasure to see many more at the reunion this year. Better begin planning now to come.

Large Numbers Attend Street Meetings in New Zealand

From a Letter to the First Presidency

AUCKLAND, NEW ZEALAND, January 5.—I am pleased to say that progress is being made here though perhaps slowly. So far as Auckland is concerned our services have settled down to a weekly routine, leaving me little time for outside effort. This is about all we accomplished during December, 1923. The Sunday program is as follows: Sunday school at 2 p. m.; street meeting from 4 to 6 p. m.; and meeting in Cottage Hall at 7 p. m.

Sacrament Services

On the first Sunday in each month there is sacrament at 12.30. Formerly we held this communion service after Sunday school, but this necessitated our rushing away to street meeting before the sacramental meeting was half through which was not good for either the work or the elders who went.

The change of sacrament to 12.30 has had a good effect upon both attendance and the Spirit of the meetings. It also leaves us plenty of time to get to the street meeting, which is a twenty-minute car ride from headquarters.

Street Meetings

This street meeting is as popular as ever and seldom fails to draw from two to three hundred persons. At times we have three speakers, and at other times only one. We have the privilege of occupying from 4 to 6 o'clock. On the last Sunday in December, I was alone and spoke for two hours and twenty minutes—a record for me.

Distribute Papers

At these meetings I distribute twenty-four Zion's Ensigns weekly, which are sent by the Publicity Department. Brother McConley recommended that I sell them for one penny (2 cents) each, but I found this to be illegal, so I give them away and take up a collection for printing expenses. This the authorities advised me to do. So far I have always received my money for them. This is better than giving away, say three or four shillings worth of tracts weekly. The men at these meetings have a high appreciation of us and certainly most have imbibed some of our teachings.

Work of the Departments

In the local work the Sunday school is going strongly and during December held its Christmas tree and distribution of prizes. This meeting was a great success and was held at "Myrona" with sixty-one persons present. We distributed about ten pounds worth of prizes for Sunday school and gifts from the Christmas tree. All the children and parents went home very pleased with the year's work, promising further support.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, is also doing much to cater to the social and recreational needs of the branch. The branch meetings have been better of late and one member has been added by baptism, besides a child of one of the members, making two added during the month.

The branch decided to cease meetings for two Sundays during the Christmas holidays, as also did the Sunday school, since the members are away for the holidays camping at the beaches. Meetings will begin again January 13. However, I have kept up the street meetings as we are assured of a congregation.

Country Work

The work in the country is being done by Brother A. L. Loving, chiefly in Hauraki Plains. His brother, Cyrus, assists and so did Brother Thompson until the middle of December when the latter went to Sydney, Australia, with Brother Taylor who came up from the South Island en route for Australia.

There have been no more baptisms in the country, but one member and his wife recently paid fifteen pounds tithing, showing they recognize duty. There are others almost ready for baptism, so I am told.

Mission House

My work from door to door has been practically suspended during the holiday period. The work of finishing the mission cottage grounds is also at a standstill, owing to my inability to shift the heavy rock in front of the building, and no money is forthcoming to hire laborers. I have done practically all I can without money and there is great if not urgent need for funds to finish taking out the rocks and putting proper fences and paths about the place.

The place itself is practically finished and needs very little more done to make it an ideal residence. It certainly is a boon to church appointees, working in Auckland, and a place for the whole Dominion of New Zealand to look to as headquarters, also a pleasant halting place for American missionaries traveling to and from Australia.

Brother and Sister Loving left here by horse and trap about two weeks ago for Hauraki Plains, intending to return about the second week of February to take up the work here during my absence in Australia, whither I will go sometime at the end of January or the beginning of February.

Easter Conference in Australia

This arrangement was made when Brother McConley was here en route for America. I am to go to Dunedin in the South Island and from there to Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, and thence to Sydney in time for the Easter conference. Brother Loving remains here till near conference and I return as soon after as possible so the place will not be without a general officer for more than a month. In the meantime there are two local elders, a priest, and a deacon here. The local elder, Brother L. Bheroy, can hold the street audience for a few weeks as he is well liked.

Since coming to our present church home we have all regained excellent health and are feeling quite at home in New Zealand.

We are concentrating on normal class work, so we may have some persons qualified to carry on the departmental work here.

Utah District Conference Convened at Ogden

OGDEN, UTAH, March 17.—The district conference of Utah convened at Ogden, March 15 and 16. The following program arranged by Guy P. Levitt, the district president, was followed out:

Friday, 7.30 p. m., a social evening with a short program; Saturday, 9.30 a. m., prayer service; 10.30, opening of conference; 2.30 p. m., business session; 7.30, preaching; Sunday, 11 a. m., 2.30 p. m., and 7.30 p. m., preaching.

Those of the General Conference appointees present were Apostle Roy S. Budd, Elders Guy P. Levitt, Roscoe E. Davey, William Postma, and R. L. Fulk.

Elder R. C. Chambers of the Idaho District was also present to contribute his valuable aid of comfort and encouragement to those with whom he came in contact.

The members of the priesthood of the Ogden Branch, as well as Provo, Salt Lake City, and Malad, Idaho, were present to do their bit in making the conference a success.

Hagerman, Rupert, Malad, and Lava Hot Springs of Idaho; Logan, Salt Lake City, and Provo of Utah, sent delegates. All who were able to attend this conference were made to rejoice in the splendid sermons delivered by Apostle Budd. Full of wise counsel and timely warning, his message was soul stirring and interesting to an inspirational degree. *

The priesthood meeting Sunday morning was filled with kindly admonitions and encouragements from Brother Budd. All present were inspired to more earnest desires and determinations of greater activities.

Elder R. C. Chambers delivered a splendid sermon Sunday afternoon and many hearts were gladdened by the message of truth.

The entire conference joined in regrets that Apostle D. T. Williams was not present. It is hoped that many more such conferences may gladden the hearts of the Saints.

H. L. PEERMAN AND R. L. FULK, Press Committee.

Owen Sound District Meetings Close

OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO, March 25.—Apostle J. A. Gillen has been here and has gone to other parts of the district. The verdict of all is that no one could have been sent whose work could have been more productive of good results than has been evident here. At the prayer services yesterday the great spiritual uplift that has been experienced more or less by all was in evidence.

Brother Gillen opened up the services here on March 2, and throughout the two and a half weeks his discourses were of that character so much needed by the people everywhere at this time. He told us on the start his work primarily was to build up and set in order. This must be done before an ingathering of new members could be expected or taken care of.

Every sentence of his series of sermons was forcibly sent home to the hearts of his listeners by that wonderful and compelling spirit so much enjoyed by Brother Gillen and radiated from him to the people.

His words to this branch were: "If we would bring our lives and our homes up to the standard required by Christ for his people, or in other words, live the Christ life, the influence going out from our homes and our lives would compel the people to come in, until our building would not be sufficient to hold them."

Brother Gillen felt strongly impressed that some of the young men here would be called to occupy in higher offices in the not far distant future.

As an example of that wonderful influence going out from

Brother Gillen's sermons and his daily life while going from home to home, a sister who lives not far from my home came in one morning so full of the sweet Spirit of the Master that she felt she could not keep to herself and must share it with us. We had a season of prayer and all enjoyed the Spirit to a great measure. She said that she had never felt such power in prayer before. No doubt many more enjoyed similar experiences.

While here, Brother Gillen gave a very instructive and inspiring talk to the Department of Women. He strongly emphasized the need for study and preparation to fit them for their responsibilities as home builders and mothers.

Many nonmembers enjoyed Brother Gillen's sermons and learned to love him as well as our own people did. On March 16 the church was crowded, and no doubt could Brother Gillen have remained longer, the church would not have held the crowd. He left on March 20 for short visits to Warton, Harrison, and Guelph.

A social evening closed the meetings on March 19. A short program was rendered, after which pleasant conversation was indulged in while the refreshments were served.

All are looking forward to Brother Gillen's coming again and trust it may not be far distant, for he certainly made many warm friends here and will be welcomed at any time by members and nonmembers alike. Best wishes of the Saints here go with him wherever he may be called to labor. He is recognized among us as a man of God.

Baptisms Follow Missionary Meetings at New Canton, Illinois

NEW CANTON, ILLINOIS.—Having read so many interesting letters from the Saints in all parts of the world, I thought a letter from this branch might be of interest to some.

We have just had a fine series of meetings held by Brother E. L. Ulrich, the new missionary. His first efforts in his new field of labor left a blessing. The Saints here all seem more determined now to live the gospel law and put forth a new effort to build up the work which has been going down here for some time.

There was splendid attendance at these meetings, which continued to the close. An all-day meeting with a basket dinner was had on March 16. Invitations were sent to the Saints at the different towns close by to come and meet with us and enjoy the day. As a result a large crowd was present. There were seventy at the basket dinner.

Brother Ulrich was the speaker for the day. Several nonmembers came and all said they enjoyed his sermons. The evening service closed the series of meetings, and from here he went to a little place called Cincinnati Landing.

After preaching there a week, the services were concluded because of bad roads. Then Brother Ulrich returned here to spend another Sunday with the Saints and preached both morning and evening. In the afternoon there was a very spiritual prayer meeting.

Much good was done by this visit from Brother Ulrich. Four children were blessed, six baptized, and Brother Tilphard Phillips ordained elder. Brother Ulrich was called to his home at Bradner, Ohio, and left with a promise to come again to this part of the Lord's vineyard during the coming summer.

ALMEDA COLLIER.

Brother W. H. Clester, of Burlington Junction, Missouri, writes that the HERALD is a blessing to him. He is thankful for the gospel and prays that the Saints may inherit the blessings which await the faithful.

South Sea Island Missionaries Have Many Humorous Experiences While Learning Language

PAPEETE, TAHITI, March 11.—After having been with us for two months, assisting in our study of the Tahitian language, and in many other ways enabling us to become accustomed to our new and strange environment, Apostle Clyde F. Ellis left for New Zealand on the S. S. Maunganui, March 4. After a month in New Zealand with Apostle M. A. McConley, they expect to go on to Australia for the mission conference in April.

During the past two months in the Society Islands, Brother Ellis has worked very hard to put the affairs of the mission in order so that we newcomers might be able to carry on the work effectively in spite of our, as yet, imperfect knowledge of the language. As Brother Ellis made us acquainted with the various phases of the work in this mission, we came to realize that a missionary to the Society Islands must be rather versatile; he must be a preacher, a song writer, a financier, an editor, a printer, an office manager, a statistician, a sailor, a writer of Sunday school and Religio lessons, an interpreter—besides which he ought to know something about law and medicine. Brother Ellis qualifies on all these points.

A Strange Language

We find Tahitian a very strange language. There are only thirteen letters in the native alphabet. Each word is spelled just as it sounds—there are no silent letters. One great difficulty, however, is to pronounce the words exactly right, for if one makes a very slight mistake in pronunciation it is almost sure to mean something other than what was intended. The natives have been laughing about a slight mistake I made a short time ago. I meant to say afai which means bring or carry, but said afii which means neck of a beast. Every consonant must be followed by a vowel, and every vowel has its own separate and distinct sound, even when four o's or four a's occur in immediate succession. As for instance in the word faaaa, which means to kindle fire. To illustrate the care that must be exercised in pronunciation, I give below a few words somewhat similar in appearance but distinctly different in meaning:

Faaaeae, faaaiai, faaaui, faaeaea, faaieie, faaioio, faaoaoa, faaoeoe, faaoioi, faauaua, faaueue, faauiui, faoao, faiai, faoaoa, fauai, feiai, faaau, faea, faeo, faia, faoa, feaa, feai, feao, fao, fee, feo, fei, and fifififi. These are all real, usable words, even the last, which means full of intricacies or entanglements, like the language itself.

Native Myths

In this country the girls do not look for the "man in the moon." Instead, they have a very vivid lesson impressed upon them as they discern the form of a "woman in the moon." For the Tahitians have a tradition to the effect that the first woman, who was Hina, the wife of Ti, displeased her husband and was banished by him to the moon, where she yet remains in exile.

Blessing a Baby

The native Saints have been very kind to us ever since our arrival and are very anxious to help us learn their language. A short time ago I was called on to bless an infant. I did not think to ask about the gender till after the name was given to me, and then I discovered that the name "Teata" did not furnish a clue. So I started out using the pronoun "it" then later changed to "she" and finally called the child "he." Brother Ellis told me later that I was all right in the end. It is some satisfaction to be finally right. One good thing, as I was using English none present but Brother Ellis and my wife knew of my perplexity. I could not help wishing I had been able to pray in Tahitian, wherein the same pronoun oia means he, she, or it.

Enjoy Spirit

The Sunday before Brother Ellis's departure we had a very enjoyable and spiritual prayer and sacrament service. We had been wondering if the natives ever enjoyed the Spirit as the Saints sometimes do in America. We found that the same Spirit was present here also, though we could understand very little of the prayers and testimonies.

Last Sunday a party of Saints from the island of Tikahau were in Tahiti, and I had the pleasure of hearing two of the Tikahau elders preaching in their native tongue.

Saints Pleased With Successful Close of Debate Held With Campbellites

KOSHKONONG, MISSOURI, March 19.—I have just closed a ten-session debate at Cowgill, Missouri, with the Reverend William Freeman Jones, representing the so-called "Church of Christ," commonly known at the Campbellites. Mr. Jones proved himself a good twister and dodger, although he is not as bold in debate as many of his colleagues. However during the debate he never accused us of anything immoral, such as polygamy. But I noticed the word Mormon quite freely used. No doubt he wants a little advertising. He had plenty of opportunity during the debate to fling these things at us had he been disposed to do so, as I made the difference between us and the Utah people very plain.

Affirmative Arguments Not Touched

While the Reorganized Church was under fire, my main affirmative arguments were never touched. Mr. Jones could do nothing with Revelation 14: 6-8. I proved the angel flying from heaven had the gospel to preach to all that dwell upon the earth. The biggest argument he could make was, "It does not say the angel landed." I proved by Revelation 18: 1-7 that the angel did land and the earth was lighted with his glory. Concerning Zechariah 2: 4, about the angel coming to a young man, and Jerusalem being inhabited as towns without walls, I proved that the Palmyra Seer fulfilled the prophecy, and that it was a latter-day consideration. Mr. Jones went to the historical narrative where Cyrus was impressed by God to help the children of Israel get back to Palestine from their captivity, rendering material aid in rebuilding the walls. Even the school children could see the difference between Jerusalem with walls and without walls. However, Mr. Jones used this until the people tired of it.

Proof of Restored Gospel

In regard to Malachi 3: 1-7 I proved that it had reference to the work of John the Baptist, just previous to the second coming of Jesus. This was a prophecy to be fulfilled in the last days. This position was strengthened by the use of Acts 3: 19-21 and Matthew 17: 9-12, showing that Elias must come and restore all things. I proved these young men made a Bible claim when they asserted that the Aaronic and Melchisedec priesthoods were restored to the earth in consequence of their ordinations. I proved that Jones's interpretation of Hebrews 8d to 10th chapter was wrong, that Jesus had to be a high priest while upon earth or he could not have entered the "Holy of Holies." Mr. Jones never did remove my argument. Apparently he never knows when he is defeated on a point.

I was truly recognized of God in making my defense of living apostles, prophets, and the signs following the believer in all the world. Mr. Jones in his rebuttal proved himself infidel to the Scriptures and the great promises of God. He has learned that it is best not to ask for any more signs, as he did in our debate in Osage County.

In regard to my opponent's proposition, it was the same old song, "Pentecost." He never did touch his origin. He tried to use Isaiah 2: 1-4 and Daniel 7: 10-14 to show they were fulfilled upon Pentecost. I took them up and examined them in detail, showing they were prophecies to be fulfilled in the last days. Mr. Jones was so defeated on these points he refused to come back to them and never used them in his recapitulation.

"Old Peggy" Chart

I gave due credit to Campbell, Scott, and Stone, so far as they spoke the truth, but they cut off their theological heads by denying a divinely called ministry and Holy Ghost religion. I finally got Mr. Jones out of his hole when the pressure was so strong that he acknowledged Campbell was a good man. In showing up his organization, I used my "Old Peggy" chart with a wooden leg. I gave them elders and deacons after the man-made fashion, but they were as destitute of spiritual life as a wooden leg. It takes life to produce life.

Some of the progressive brethren were present during the debate, and when I was showing how unscriptural Jones's crowd were on "instrumental music" these other brethren were laughing up their sleeves. I proved that instruments of music are used in heaven (Revelation 5: 8). But if Brother Jones and his brethren get up to the "pearly gates" and see these musical instruments, he will say: "Come on, brethren; let us go back to Brush Run."

Well, friends, we had a splendid time. The weather was bad, and the crowd was not large, but it was steady. We made many friends for the cause. I was ably assisted by Brother C. J. Craven as moderator. While at Cowgill Brother and Sister Earl Craven, a young married couple, threw open their doors and made their home our home while the debate lasted. The same day I arrived, a little daughter came to bless their home.

Debate at Kingston

Immediately upon closing the debate, we proceeded to Kingston and commenced another ten-session debate. It was largely a repetition of the other debate, making twenty sessions in all. Quite a strain. Some of Mr. Jones's own members, I am told, declared that their proposition went down. I enjoyed my stay with the Kingston Saints. I made my home largely with Brother C. J. Craven, who moderated for me. Sister Craven has been an invalid for a number of years, but she knows how to sacrifice for the Lord's work. I might say Brother Jones feels a little "sore" because I had the last speech in both places, but I have promised if the next time ever comes, he shall have the lead. Mr. Jones said in his report to the Review that "the Kingston Saints were wonderfully amazed as they heard his arguments." Yes, at his inconsistencies. I left the Saints feeling strong in the faith. We are satisfied. To God be all the praise.

CHURCH NEWS

Church Officials Entertained at Zion City by Mr. Voliva

LAMONI, IOWA, March 7.—Bishop A. Carmichael and A. J. Yarrington returned Wednesday from a visit to Zion City, Illinois, where they went in the interest of the church work.

They were very much interested in their investigation of the colony and its working organization and were very pleasantly entertained during their stay by Mr. Voliva and his associates.

Zion City

This colony of Zionists, organized in 1896, is unique in many ways. It consists of about 6,000 members thoroughly organized under Wilbur Glen Voliva, as general overseer. Mr. Voliva directs the affairs of the colony, not only ecclesiastically, but educationally, industrially, and politically. Under him are the twelve apostles, and from these the heads of the four divisions, with their assistants, are chosen. But Voliva's mandates are all powerful. "I rule with an iron hand," he says.

Nonmember Citizens

There is a small percentage of the citizens who are not members of the colony, who have in different ways found residence there, but they feel and know distinctly that they are there in opposition to the desires of the Zionists. Among the first things brought to the attention of the visitor are signboards announcing the fact that nonbelievers are not welcomed as residents of Zion City.

School System

There are two classes of schools, the public schools which have an attendance of about 350 nonmembers, and the parochial schools attended by 1,040 Zionist children. The parochial high school is accredited by the State. There is also a college or institution of higher learning but this is not accredited.

Industrial Affairs

Industrially the Zionists are very prosperous. Among their industries is a large wholesale printing establishment, where the church organs are also printed, two weekly publications, Leaves of Healing and The Theocrat. There is a bakery and candy factory from which is shipped daily four carloads of products, besides five tons which is hauled by truck to Des Moines, Iowa. They have a curtain factory, an apron and dress factory, and others which were not visited. These industries furnish employment for members of the colony and their growth is sufficiently rapid to keep pace with the increasing population.

The deeds to all property and industries are held in the name of Voliva personally and not as trustee of the church. He thus exerts a general control which is binding.

Transfer of property is made by lease only. Individuals may secure long-term leases, extending to the year 3,000, in which case the requirements are very strict. Following are some of the stipulations: Occupants shall not use or sell tobacco or liquor in any form, shall hold no dances, no gambling games, no theaters or circuses on said property. There must be no bobbed heads, or extravagance in dress (the brethren noticed particularly the absence of the flapper). No drugs or doctors are permitted. The Zionists are believers in divine healing and have reared three generations without the use of doctors or medicine, as a result of which they claim the highest birth rate and lowest death rate in the State.

Political Control

Politically the Zionist colony votes as a body, solidly for their chosen candidate. In this way they control the vote of the county and consequently meet with much opposition from outside.

Religious Organization

Ecclesiastically their organization includes a prophet, apostles, seventy, elders, etc. The members are tithed on their gross income, while running expenses of the schools, etc., are met by freewill offerings.

The tabernacle now in use has a seating capacity of 3,500 or 4,000 and includes besides the main assembly room, several classrooms. One of their prized features is a white robed choir of 400 members and a band of 50 pieces. Their Sunday services include morning, afternoon, and evening meetings, their main service being from 2.30 to 6 p. m.

A new tabernacle which will have a seating capacity of 10,000 is being erected at a cost of $250,000. A $50,000 radio broadcasting station has also been installed.

The Zionists maintain a foreign missionary force in China and South Africa.

February Birthdays Celebrated by Mount Vernon Saints

MOUNT VERNON, ILLINOIS.—The Religio here is pleased with the reprint of the old Book of Mormon quarterlies and is enjoying the study very much.

The committees gave a special program on February 29, in honor of nine of the members whose birthdays occurred in February. Those whose birthdays were celebrated were: Brother Henry Sparling, missionary in charge; Brother Harvey Maymon, priest; Chester Henson, elder; Brother John Deselm; Sister Ada Feltman; Sister Evaline Fuqua; Brother Eddie Colvin; Brother Herbert Henson; and Master Alma Henson.

An unusually large crowd was present. Sister Opal Fuqua, the superintendent, had charge. Favorite songs were selected and the following program rendered: Reading, Opal Fuqua; original poem, "That something was me," Brother Sparling; original poem, "Our missionary in a run-away Ford," by R. H. Henson, branch and district president; other selected readings, "The wise old owl," and "Our radio"; instrumental solo; and a paper which contained personals and items of interest on every member of the Religio family.

There was also a pie contest. Brother Sparling will give anyone a recipe of the pie, since he was the one selected to cut it and learned its contents.

After an hour of laughter and fun, the above-named members were marched out of doors, where a spread was prepared of cake, fruit, etc. Then Brother Sparling and wife were called to the stand by the branch president and were presented a nice sum of money together with a few groceries which helps a missionary and wife along. Gratitude was expressed by both and a song, "God's way is the best way," by Brother Sparling was selected for the close.

This is one of the methods of promoting interest here among the young people. Inquiries have already been made when another such occasion will happen.

A Sister Hartshorne writes that the HERALD is very precious in their home and that they treasure it for the light and inspiration which it creates within their souls. A testimony which she writes will be published in the columns of the Ensign.

Flint Meetings Follow Up Young People's Series Held Recently

FLINT MICHIGAN, March 24.—Elder G. W. Burt, of Beaverton, Michigan, has been holding meetings at the Third Church for the last ten days, starting Sunday, March 16. He will open at the First Church on the night of the 27th and continue for one week. He has been busy giving blessings during his visit at Flint. His work is very effectual, following as it does the splendid work of President Floyd M. McDowell.

Death of Archibald McKenzie

A feeling of sorrow has overshadowed the Flint Saints with the passing, recently, of Elder Archibald McKenzie. As a young man he joined the church in Canada and was instrumental in missionary and local work during more than fifty years of membership in the church. He came to Michigan several years ago and located here. He has been ailing for the last two years and after some months in the hospital was moved to the home of his daughter, where he died, March 2, at the age of seventy-five years. Elder Matthew W. Liston preached the sermon.

Baptism Performed

Though there was this feeling of sorrow, there was also joy when the opportunity was presented to baptize Terrance Conarty. This man married one of the girls of the church about five years ago, and after attending services one day he went to the home of Matthew Liston and said he was ready for baptism. After spending the evening talking gospel, arrangements were made for the ceremony and he was led into the water on March 9. During the baptism the men's chorus was practicing and in splendid harmony sang, "My faith looks up to thee," which made a fitting background for the sacred ordinance.

Reunion to Be Held

Increasing interest is being manifested on the part of the membership, with a desire to comply with the church law. The attendance at the services is good, and the spirit of unity seems to be manifested. The young people are making arrangements to attend the reunion at Port Huron, August 8 to 17. It is hoped to make this the best reunion in the history of the church in Michigan.

Easter Program

The choirs are busy arranging their Easter program. The men's chorus, recently organized under the direction of Brother Eugene Everhart, will soon make its debut. From the lusty throats of these men beautiful harmony is being developed. The choir at the Second Church, under the direction of Sister Ruth H. Wilcox, is busy practicing the cantata "Daniel."

Elder Matthew W. Liston journeyed to Alma, Michigan, on March 19 to address the students of Alma College at morning chapel, and the Chamber of Commerce at the noon luncheon. He has been assisting Elder James H. Blackmore, pastor of the Highland Park group at Detroit, with a special series of meetings at the hall on the corner of Florence and Hamilton Boulevard.

East Saint Louis Saints Report Progress of Work

EAST SAINT LOUIS, ILLINOIS, March 26.—The genial spirited presiding officer of the Lansdowne Branch called his staff of officers together last Sunday morning and commended them for the efforts being put forth in the different branches of the work. He appreciates the harmony prevailing, and the good which is being accomplished.

Elder Clarence Dickens will preach here at the 11 a. m. service March 30. Brethren R. Archibald of Saint Louis, and W. C. Carl, T. Lewis, Charles Smith, Robert Wright, Clarence Dickens, and H. Brunkhorst of the home branch have occupied the pulpit the last two months.

David Smith said in one of his poems, "Remember, the best preachers are those who practice what the preachers say." If the Saints just try to live up to the very best counsel given them, they will grow in grace and knowledge.

The missionary effort which was put forth at Sixteenth and Parsons Avenue has been concluded. Good seed was sown by the different brethren. May it bring forth fruit.

Relief Work

Sister Rella Meloan, who is in charge of the Department of Women, is feeling encouraged. Just recently, under her supervision and at her solicitation, a needy brother and family were helped financially, both by the generosity of this department and the branch. One other worthy person was the recipient of a donation help. "The poor ye have with you always" and a banding together in even a small way makes it possible to help the needy.

A nice program, in charge of Sister Charles Smith, was held at the home of Sister Avery, Wednesday, the regular meeting day of the department. Plans are being made to accomplish more in the future, when the intellectual and spiritual will be taken care of in connection with the material. Sister F. F. O'Bryan is again active in the cradle roll department.

Temple Builders and Orioles

Sister Dora Faulkner is now in charge of the Temple Builders, their meeting night being Tuesday. Good attendance and a commendable interest is shown in their chosen study, "Etiquette." Sister Irma Smith has the Orioles, with Friday evening as assembly night. Their meetings open and close with prayer, the younger girls being encouraged to express themselves in this avenue.

Religio Department

Faithful Brother Clinton Dickens is in charge of Religio.

On the worst night of the past month for weather, eight of the faithful attended. Brother Dickens is going to use the Religio quarterly. There is quite a definite demand for a study of the Book of Mormon. It is hoped to soon chronicle added enthusiasm for the Religio Department.

Sunday School

Sunday school is in fine shape right from the head down or the foot up. The librarian, Brother Hayes, plays in the orchestra, but is always there to see that books, quarterlies, etc., are ready for use and then returned to the bookcase after services. He also takes care of tracts, papers, etc.

Brother Smith, superintendent, and Robert Dickens, assistant, are efficient officers. School opens on time, and there are no tedious long-drawn-out reviews. Brother Prosper Carl, orchestra leader, and Sister Irma Smith, chorister, with their musicians helping, offer some good music. Brother Clint Dickens, at the last business meeting, declined reelection as secretary, having served for years, and Sister Grace Carl is occupying that place with great credit to herself and is serving the school ably.

Brother A. H. Dailey, assistant superintendent of the district Sunday school, spent a morning here recently, addressing the school. Plans are afoot for active district work, and this school is asked to help.

Brother David H. Milner has been placed in charge of the work at Granite City.

Meetings Brought to Close Because of Bad Weather

MOORHEAD, IOWA, March 25.—In the last news from Moorhead, Evangelist U. W. Greene had just begun a series of meetings. He continued his labors for some time with good interest, but owing to bad roads which hindered the attendance of almost all of the Saints residing in the country, it was thought best for the brother to close until a more opportune time.

His sermons were well received by those permitted to attend, and the Saints were very much disappointed that it was necessary to close. It is hoped he will return in the future and that all may be permitted to come and gain the benefits of the good things that Brother Greene has in store for the uplift of God's people.

Christian Church Burns

Owing to the Christian Church people having the misfortune of their church getting on fire, causing damages to the extent that they were unable to hold services one Sunday, and through the advice of their pastor, Reverend V. M. Elston, their congregation attended the Saints' services that day and were permitted to hear two splendid discourses by Brother Greene.

During the past month two more families have moved from this branch, Brother Claud Mann and family having gone to Missouri Valley, and Brother J. T. Spence and family to Cherokee. Farewell receptions were given each family prior to their departure. As Brother Spence is an elder and a faithful man in his calling, his services in the branch both in the pulpit and otherwise will be greatly missed.

The loss of both these good families is felt, but they are moving to towns where they can attend the Saints' services, and they will not be idle, but will assist to help the good work in various ways as they have always done here.

Sister Cannon has also disposed of her household goods and gone to Sioux City to make her future home with her daughter, Sister Fred Stephens. As long as her health would permit, Sister Cannon was always present at the services and faithful in the discharge of her duties.

Quite a number of Moorhead Saints and friends would like to have been present at the burial of Sister Alice Cobb at Little Sioux on Sunday, March 16, but the roads were certainly impassable, and thus all were obliged to stay at home.

In the pioneer days Brother and Sister Elijah Cobb were residents of Preparation, which is only three miles from Moorhead. Sister Cobb was among the first of Monona County's school-teachers, and while the most of the older generation has passed away the younger ones are familiar with the good name of Sister Cobb.

Arrangements are being made through the Sunday school to observe an Easter program.

Sister Helen McDonald returned recently from Cedar Falls where she has been preparing herself for the school-teaching profession and is now teaching east of Soldier.

Officers and Teachers Banquet Held at Burlington, Iowa

BURLINGTON, IOWA, March 15.—The second annual officers and teachers banquet of the Sunday school was held at the Burlington Hotel Friday night, March 14. G. A. Schmidt, president of the Des Moines County Sunday School Association and C. M. Clifford, of Hamilton, Canada, were the guests of honor. Elder Clifford will conduct a series of revival meetings at the church here beginning Sunday, March 16.

E. R. Williams, superintendent of the Sunday school, presided as toastmaster and also made an interesting talk. A program was part of the evening's entertainment.

Increased Interest Shown in Department of Recreation and Expression

DES MOINES, IOWA, March 17.—Though this place has been silent for some time, it does not imply that it has been inactive. During the last few weeks an increased interest has been seen in the Department of Recreation and Expression because of the competition among the various classes.

Each class has entire charge of one session, in the opening and closing exercises, as well as the program. All the program is furnished by the members of the class. Good-natured rivalry exists among the classes to see which can outdo the other in originality and initiative in conducting the service as well as furnishing a worth while program. All persons participating have done exceedingly well. It is thought the judges will have to be very wise in order to make a fair decision. The class of young men and young women of this department are fully organized and meet two nights a month to discuss church topics of interest to them.

Brother D. E. Dowker and family have recently moved into their new home at 1102 East Twelfth Street.

Brother W. D. Bullard, of Indiana, was the speaker on the Sunday before conference.

Speakers at District Conference

Apostle F. H. Edwards and his sister Blanche, also Brother A. C. Silvers were the speakers at the district conference, February 9 and 10. Brother Silvers had begun a series of services over the district but had to discontinue them because he was called to the Independence Sanitarium where his daughter was seriously ill.

The choir, under the leadership of Sister Evelyn Finch, the very able branch chorister, is preparing a very pretty and appropriate cantata for Easter.

With Brother Albert Richards in charge of the Christmas offering it is expected that it will go over the top this year. The goal has been set at $1,000. Already over $150 have been raised. In a chart talk recently, Brother Richards showed the necessity of the contributions of each person in order to realize the ideal.

Brother F. T. Mussell was the speaker on Sunday evening, March 16.

Brother and Sister Farley and a sister-in-law, of Lucas, Iowa, also Brother Alex Miller, of Vincennes, Indiana, were recent visitors.

Milwaukee Sunday School Forced to Look for Larger Quarters

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN, March 11.—Since General Conference the Saints here have had the pleasure of having Brother Ward L. Christy and wife with them for several days. Brother Christy gave some very good discourses which were received with grateful hearts. Since then Sister Christy has returned and rendered some very effectual assistance in the Department of Women by organizing the departments and getting them in good working condition.

The general condition of the branch is very good, with a fine spirit of willingness to work. Numbers of the members have found their working places and are happy in the fact that they are able to assist. There are still some who have very valuable talent who should be in their respective places and at work. This would then be a fine working organization.

Brother William Murray, wife, and daughter, formerly from South Side Branch at Chicago, have located here. Brother Murray has recently been assigned the Sunday school superintendency and is working well in that position. He has started a red and blue contest for membership in the Sunday school, which is now forcing the school to look for larger quarters.

There are about fifty members in the jurisdiction of the branch with a Sunday school enrollment of forty or more. The members are very much encouraged at the future prospects of the branch and feel that there is an excellent field for a good work in this city.

If the Saints, who read this article and who have friends and relatives here interested in the church, will write Fred V. Dreyer, 863 Mineral Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, he will get in touch with them as soon as possible.

Church Property Undergoing Repairs at Bevier, Missouri

BEVIER, MISSOURI, March 25.—Elder E. F. Robertson, missionary in charge, was at Bevier on the first Sunday in March. From Bevier he went to Higbee.

Repairs and improvements are the order of the day on the church property. The stained glass windows are undergoing repairs; a room is being partitioned off in the basement for the use of the Temple Builders; and a fence has been ordered built across the rear end of the church property to stop short-cutting across the lawn.

Sisters Cayula Newton of Missouri City and Eva Miller of Stuttgart, Arkansas, were called here by the sudden death of their uncle, Bismark Ruch, who fell dead March 13, while on his way to work. Mr. Ruch was an uncle to Elder V. D. Ruch, now on a mission to Norway.

The ladies' senior class gave a surprise party to Sister Henrietta Julius, March 15, the occasion being her eightieth birthday anniversary. The visitors went prepared for a nice program and took an appetizing lunch along with them. The same class gave Sister Miriah Surrige a surprise party on the eighty-third year of her birth. Sister Surrige is a sister of Gomer T. Griffiths.

Easter Program

The Department of Sunday school is making preparations for an Easter program.

A Sunday school drive is being inaugurated here by all the Sunday schools joining forces in an effort to increase Sunday school attendance. From a census taken, it was shown that out of over 700 children of school age, there was an average attendance of only about 400 in the combined Sunday schools. Of this number at least one fourth are adults or past school age, leaving about 400 children of school age who do not attend any Sunday school.

Sister Archie F. Smith and two children, Crawford and Annalee, of Oakland, California, arrived here March 27 for an extended visit. Sister Smith will be remembered as the former Miss Hattie Williams, an active worker in all departments of the work here some years ago.

Sisters W. B. Richards and Mary Rudkin are still confined to their homes by sickness.

Sickness Among Members at Spearfish, South Dakota

SPEARFISH, SOUTH DAKOTA, February 27.—The work is moving along here in the regular routine of services, although somewhat handicapped by sickness among the membership.

Brother Cohrt has been delivering some splendid sermons on the Master's statement, "I will build my church." He has preached in spite of the fact that he is suffering from lumbago.

Sister Frank Dopp has also been afflicted, which has necessitated moving her to the hospital at Deadwood, South Dakota, where she underwent an operation. By request, a number of the Saints gathered for prayers at the time of her operation. A good spirit prevailed, and at the last report Sister Dopp was doing nicely.

Regular election of officers was held the first Sunday of the new year, in which all of the old officers were sustained.

Although only five were present at the last prayer service the meeting was prolonged for over an hour. The theme of the testimonies was "loyalty."

Davidson Saints Preparing Easter Program

DAVIDSON, OKLAHOMA, March 25.—Davidson Saints are still working, with almost all busy in one or other of the departments.

The young people have prayer meeting twice each month. They have not many idle moments and are now busy on the Easter program.

Another member is added to the cradle roll here, W. B. Burks, jr., who is the son of Brother and Sister W. B. Burks. Mother and son are doing fine.

The superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression is trying to organize a debating club. Much interest is shown.

Brother Erwin Dickey, of Matherville, Illinois, would like to know if there are any Saints living near Interior, in the Bad Lands of South Dakota. If so, he wishes to communicate with them.

Welland Branch Quickly Recovers Following Loss of Property by Fire

WELLAND, ONTARIO, March 19.—The Welland Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is doing good at present.

Church meetings are had on Sunday with Sunday school and evening preaching services. On Wednesday night prayer meeting is held.

A little misfortune happened last month, when the hall where the Saints held meetings was destroyed by fire. All the books for the Sunday school, the organ, and the desk were lost. Now a new organ and new books are purchased and things in general are going fine. The Welland Saints express their thanks to the brothers and sisters of Toronto for the help received from them in the troublesome time.

The Saints here held their annual valentine box social February 14. Every one present enjoyed the program. Games were a part of the entertainment.

Next Friday night, March 21, there will be a party at the home of Sister Minor. It is in the nature of a Saint Patrick social and all are looking forward to a good time.

The meeting hall is now on East Main Street, rented from the Moose Lodge. Any Saints coming to Welland at any time will be welcome. "You can't miss the hall because it is right across the street from the jail."

Branch Members Transfer to Other Places Because of Industrial Conditions

WELLSTON, OHIO, March 11.—The Saints at this place have been discouraged for about three years because of industrial conditions. There are nearly one hundred and fifty members in this branch, but most of them have been compelled to seek other fields for employment. Because of this, nine members of the priesthood have been lost. However, Detroit, Michigan; Dayton, Springfield, and Columbus, Ohio; and other places have profited by Wellston's loss. One elder, one priest, and one teacher are left to look after this branch.

A new plan to increase the Sunday school attendance is proving a success. It was started February 24. On March 9 the membership of the Sunday school had increased about twenty. The school is divided into the Reds and the Blues, each member wearing a ribbon to indicate the side he is on. After a certain time the side having the least number of members will have to treat the opposite side.

If the contest keeps up as it starts out, Wellston will have to build or rent a tabernacle to hold Sunday school.

Changes to Be Made in Colorado Springs Department of Recreation and Expression

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO, March 11.—Plans are under way for reorganizing the Department of Recreation and Expression. An increase in interest is hoped for.

In the absence of the pastor, the local priesthood has had to do most of the preaching. All are happy to have the pastor with them again for some time.

The district conference at Denver was a splendid one from several points of view. But especially should the women be commended for the way in which they handled the serving of meals and their reception of visitors.

The Saints here have no reason to complain if the Lord blesses them in the future as he has in the past.

Last Meeting Is Held in Church Before Raising Building

GRAND VALLEY, ONTARIO, March 18.—The closing services in the little church of the Garafraxa Branch were held March 16. The building is to be torn down and the material used in the erection of a modern church in the village of Grand Valley.

Those taking part in the farewell service were John Shields, S. G. St. John, J. H. Taylor, and J. T. Thompson. Truly it was a day of blessing, the Holy Spirit being present from the opening prayer meeting until the benediction. The last sermon was preached by Patriarch John Shields.

Work Established in 1837

It was in this locality that John Shields, as a priest, began his missionary career. His first opening was in the home of John Taylor, sr., who is now deceased.

In the fall of 1837 he began to reap the results of his sowing, baptizing four of the Taylor household (John Taylor, sr.; his son, Jacob; and his daughters, Hannah and Jane), also John Elliott. Later on in the month he baptized the mother and two sisters of Elder J. T. Thompson. Brother Alexander Clark, father of the late Ada Smith, heard his first sermon at these meetings, and later obeyed. He was a great support to the work in this part.

Brother Shields was ordained an elder at the Corinth conference in June, 1838, and returned to labor in these parts. On July 30 of that year he baptized J. L. Mortimer and wife, the wife of Jacob Taylor, and two others.

Apostle J. H. Lake organized the branch in September, then J. L. Mortimer and John H. Taylor were called to the office of elder and priest, respectively, and Brother Mortimer was chosen president of the branch.

Building Erected

The erection of the church building began at once on the Taylor farm. J. L. Mortimer, assisted by Isaac Scott, did the brick work, William Taylor did the carpenter work, and Brother Taylor, sr., furnished the major part of the funds and material. Brethren Thompson, Clark, Hillis, Rea, and others also assisted in the work.

At the opening service, R. C. Evans and Willard J. Smith took a prominent part. Elder J. A. McIntosh assisted materially in the success of the work here. He confirmed most of the members who had been baptized by Brother Shields before he was an elder. Also, in the winter of 1839, he conducted an eight-night debate in Grand Valley with Reverend T. L. Wilkinson of the Methodist Church.

The Garafraxa Branch increased very rapidly. In two years there were one hundred fifty members. Among the visiting church officials and missionaries, besides those already mentioned, there have been Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, Bishop Hilliard, Samuel Brown, S. B. St. John, A. E. Mortimer, Fred Gregory, Daniel Macgregor, E. K. Evans, and R. B. Howlett, and others.

Branch President Thirty-four Years

Brother Mortimer continued as branch president until about a year later when he entered the missionary field. Elder John H. Taylor has held the branch presidency for about thirty-five years without a break, with much credit to himself and benefit to the church.

J. T. Thompson is another missionary product of Garafraxa. Wherever he has labored he is esteemed as one of the best missionaries. Laura Farthing, daughter of Brother and Sister Jacob Taylor, went from here on a missionary tour with her husband to the Society Islands. It might be interesting to note that the father, mother, and eleven children of the Thompson household came into the church here. Elder Shields baptized twelve of them, all except the father.

Time would fail to tell of the many noble Saints who worshipped in the Garafraxa Branch. Some have gone to their reward, of whom we note: Alexander Clark, his son James and his daughter, Ada Smith. Mother Clark and her daughters, Alice (the wife of Bishop A. F. McLean), and Mabel, are still doing a good church work where they reside. There are also the Newberry family of Alberta, Brother William Roy, of Vanscoy, William Owen, of Spokane, Washington, and others who are still using their endeavors to build up the kingdom of God.

Lamoni Stake Items

LAMONI, IOWA, March 28.—The auditorium of the Brick Church is undergoing a siege of redecorating, and meetings for two Sundays have been held in the basement rooms. It was very crowded, but after all, the change was conducive to some good. The minds of older Saints were back to an early day when the small membership, children and all, found ample room there. The chorister seemed so near that he was easily followed, and congregational singing, which was all that was attempted, was very responsive. Good old-fashioned hymns were sung with feeling and then, as if to complete the glorious reminiscence, Brother J. A. Yager preached one of those good old-fashioned sermons, backed by the mighty power of God's Spirit, asking the question, "Are we ashamed of the gospel of Christ?"

Services last Sunday morning and evening were by C. E. Wight, stake president, and Elder John L. Cooper of DeKalb, Illinois. Attendance at church services are perceptibly larger this year than for a long time, especially at the evening meetings.

Department of Women Reorganized

The Department of Women has been again reorganized. Last fall the four groups were consolidated into two divisions and class work has been carried on all winter, but the attendance has been small, due to various causes. Four groups have been again formed under the leadership of Sister F. M. McDowell, Sister Oliver Hayer, Sister John Midgorden, and Doctor Clara White. Meetings will not be held separately, however, but jointly every other Sunday afternoon.

The first meeting was held last Sunday with Ida Monroe, the stake superintendent, in charge. Three good talks were given. The first was by C. E. Wight, stake president, who urged the necessity of a consecrated effort on the part of the women of the church for greater efficiency. They have a work to perform, which cannot be done by the men, and they should arise to a greater realization of their opportunity.

Sister Blanche Edwards said that God's greatest gift to us is ourselves. The beauties of nature are wonderful to him who can see, but what do they mean to the blind? Music is inspiring to him who can hear, but loses its power when that faculty is impaired. Our own personality, then, is a priceless gift, full of latent possibilities, but, she warned, "Freely ye have received, freely give."

Community Clinic

Doctor Clara White then followed with the unfolding of plans for a community clinic. This undertaking is the result of a recognition by the women of the groups that the greatest degree of efficiency can be attained only by those who are physically sound, and through a desire of Sister White to be of service to the church.

The clinics will be held each Wednesday afternoon at Doctor White's office when physical examination and medical advice will be given free and a chart properly filled out showing result of the examination. This clinic is open to anyone in the community.

Evergreen Branch Meetings

Elder L. G. Holloway began a series of meetings at Evergreen Branch six miles west of Lamoni, Sunday night.

Members of the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society gave a program in Bethany Friday night, the occasion being the golden jubilee of the Knights of Pythias. They sang to a large and very appreciative audience.

Holden Stake News

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, March 31.—Elder R. E. Burgess, of Knobnoster, came to Lexington on Thursday evening at the request of Sister Bolley, who was very ill. She is very much improved. Elder G. M. Shippy preached Sunday morning, and Elder Burgess occupied the evening hour, using for his theme, "What would Jesus do?"

The Religio program Friday night was given by the men under the leadership of Brother Brendel. The attendance was record breaking, there being 132 present. It was a program which was uplifting to all.

Knobnoster

The Knobnoster Saints have been fortunate in having the privilege of listening to the splendid gospel sermons delivered by Elder J. F. Petre during the past few months. Brother Petre expects to leave soon on a mission to Colorado. There is a marked increase in the spirituality of the church here. Our pastor, Elder F. L. Goode, is not content with our present condition and is urging the Saints to still greater spiritual attainments. The Religio is prospering under the direction of Sister Elsworth Moorman.

Holden

The annual spelling contest of the grammar grades of the schools of western Johnson County was held Friday night at the Holden High School Auditorium. Bernice Hampton, daughter of Brother and Sister Freelin Hampton, and Herbert Ferguson, son of Brother and Sister M. A. Ferguson, secured two of the five prizes offered.

Elder F. A. McWethy has recovered from his late illness so as to be about his work again. Elder G. W. Beebe was the speaker at the Home Sunday morning the 30th. Elder D. J. Krahl spoke at the church in the morning, giving particular attention to the history of the Latter Day Saints as taught in our public schools in comparison with the current history as secured at the time and related by people of those times. Elder John Lovell gave the evening sermon treating on the divine mission of Jesus.

Recent additions to the Holden Home family are, Mrs. Mahettabel Hager and Martha A. Parsons, of Independence, Missouri. Mrs. Eunice M. Russell, of Scottsville, Michigan, and Miss Carrie Crowley of Jonesport, Maine. Miss Helen Rogers accompanied Sister Crowley from Jonesport to Holden. Sister Rogers is a former Graceland College student. She has been teaching in the schools at Lubeck, Maine.

Independence

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, April 1.—Services at the Stone Church, Sunday, March 30, were as follows: 11 a. m., sermon by Elder R. V. Hopkins on "Is Jesus Christ the Son of God?"; 7.30 p. m., musical program followed by preaching at 8 p. m. by Bishop J. F. Keir on "Industrial equality." Both services were broadcast.

Walnut Park

The speakers at Walnut Park Sunday were W. H. Kelley at 11, and Jonathan Koshiway, an Indian missionary, in the evening. Brother Koshiway's experiences have given him such a wonderful appreciation of the gospel that it is always an inspiration to listen to him.

A meeting of the girls on March 25 at the home of Supervisor Sister R. Barnhardt resulted in a second Oriole circle being organized under the direction of Sister Flo Whittemore—this one including girls of ages eleven and twelve with Sister Ruth E. Paris monitor.

In the debate at Religio Friday night between Walnut Park and Enoch Hill, Kenneth Morford and August Kramer, of Enoch Hill, won, they denying the resolution that "the entrance of women into public life is for the betterment of society in general." In the first debate, on the subject, "Resolved that education has done more for the advancement of civilization than religion," Walnut Park had the negative side and were winners. A third debate will be held to complete the contest.

Liberty

President Elbert A. Smith preached Sunday morning, March 30, on the text, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." Doctor G. Leonard Harrington spoke at night, using the Word of Wisdom for his subject.

Pastor J. M. Baker was in Kansas City, Kansas, for Sunday night services.

The Silver Wing Temple Builders gave an April Fool party at the home of Brother and Sister Wesley Ballinger, Monday night. Each Temple Builder invited one guest for the evening.

Pastor's Wife III

The Saints of Enoch Hill were sorry to learn of the serious illness of Sister Charles Fry, the pastor's wife, who is in the Sanitarium. They trust that God will see fit to restore her to health and strength again.

The week of special meetings held by the Aaronic priesthood were concluded on Friday evening, March 21. The services were well attended considering the inclement weather, and good interest was shown.

Brother Carl F. Greene, missionary to Germany, bade farewell to Saints and friends at a social gathering on Thursday evening, March 27. Brother Greene on his first mission to Germany was alone, but this time Sister Greene accompanies him. Much good seems to have attended his efforts during his three years' labors in that country. He reported having baptized sixty-three and converted one hundred thirty to the truth. The Saints trust that God will abundantly bless both him and Sister Greene on their present mission.

Institute Mass Meeting

The annual mass meeting of the contributors to the fund for the purchase of the Campus met in the Institute building, Friday, March 29, at 8 p. m. President Frederick M. Smith presided.

Election of members to the general committee of thirty was held, reports adopted, and other business transacted.

Form of Organization

The committee of thirty is elected by the mass meeting for a period of three years, ten members retiring every year. This committee is subdivided into the following committees: Ways and Means, Finance, School, Maintenance, Service and Activities, and the Executive committee, which is composed of the chairmen of all the other committees together with the chairman of the committee of thirty and Mark Siegfried.

Reports of Committees

The ways and means committee, whose purpose it is to plan for the larger development of the project, has coordinated the work of the other committees, conducted the continuance of the work to secure endowments for the Institute and advertised the Campus.

The finance committee reported that of the pledges made last year, all had been paid but about $7,000.

The Institute has been conducting school, afternoon and evening for two semesters. It has had an enrollment of over 400, with sixty classes, studying forty subjects, taught by thirty-six instructors, all of whom give their time to this work without remuneration. A kindergarten has been conducted daily with an average attendance of 18 children. In addition to the regular school work, the Nurses' Training School of the Independence Sanitarium is carried on in the Institute. Last fall Mr. Hale W. Smith loaned the Institute library over 300 volumes, which has greatly helped in this way.

The maintenance committee reported work that had been found necessary in the improvement of the grounds. The driveway was continued to make it a one-way drive. The entrance was also widened. Temporary baseball grounds and backstop were provided. Minor repairs were made on the building. The heating plant was entirely overhauled and put in good working condition. Showers and lavatories were provided. A platform and backstop for the motion picture projection screen were provided.

Service and activities committee reported supervising activities on the Campus on all special holidays during the year. Matched games of baseball were carried on in the fall, for which a baseball diamond was provided. Forty-nine special appointments were made for clubs, classes, and private functions. It is estimated that about 41,500 motor cars were parked on the Campus during the year. Only two accidents were reported and these were of a minor character. Net profit from the refreshment stand for the season was over $1,100. Rooms have been assigned the Music Club, Dramatic Club, Laurel Club, and Boy Scouts for use. As many as 20 men have been used to police the Campus during the large gatherings.

Election of Members

Of the ten retiring members, the following were reelected: M. H. Siegfried, E. C. Harrington, R. V. Hopkins, William Gard, and George A. Gould. New ones in office are: Miss Lillian Zimmermann, Mrs. T. J. Watkins, Mrs. Joseph Sturges, Mansel T. Williams, and C. B. Hartshorn.

Summer Meetings Scheduled

It was decided to hold regular Sunday meetings on the Campus this year, as last. This will include sacred concert at 7.30 p. m. followed by preaching at 8 p. m. Meetings will be held in the amphitheater. Motion pictures are to be shown twice weekly instead of only once a week as last summer.

A fine spirit of friendliness and cooperation was manifest throughout the meeting. All present seemed to be supporters of the community enterprise and were willing to assist in any way possible to further the project. The meeting expressed itself as favoring expansion in all lines of activities.

The Twelve

Apostle J. A. Gillen will soon bring the meetings he has been conducting in Ontario to a close, and will return to Independence. Apostles John W. Rushton and T. W. Williams are in the Southern mission field. Apostle J. F. Garver was in Independence for a few days recently. He is editor of the Ensign, which business brings him here frequently. Apostles J. F. Curtis and Paul M. Hanson are in Palestine where they are attending to work in that mission. Clyde F. Ellis and M. A. McConley, who have been in New Zealand are now in Australia, where they will attend the Easter conference. Apostle Roy S. Budd has been in Los Angeles since arriving in California. The meetings at Saint Louis, which were conducted by Apostle E. J. Gleazer were brought to a successful close March 30. Apostle F. Henry Edwards has been in Independence and Kansas City during the week. He expects to leave soon for Lamoni, Iowa, and then on to Minneapolis. Apostle D. T. Williams is at present in Ottumwa, Iowa, located in the historical Nauvoo District.

The missionary department has been called upon recently for assistance in a number of young people's meetings to be held all over the country, beginning April 6, the anniversary of the organization of the church.

Addresses Quill Club

President Frederick M. Smith addressed the Kansas City Quill Club, Friday night, March 21, at 8 o'clock, on "The church and industrial relations." The meeting was held at the Hotel Baltimore.

Wins Prize in Contest

Miss Frances McGuire, in whose name the young people of Independence entered the Journal-Post subscription contest, won one of the prizes offered. She is the recipient of a new Overland motor car, which she has promised to turn over to the Campus gymnasium fund. The prize was awarded after several weeks of intensive work on the part of the contestants.

Social Service Bureau

The Social Service Bureau reports sales of $57 last month at the Used Commodity Shop. Of this amount $10.25 was given as aid, following the usual course of investigation. The Commodity Shop is now in charge of Sister J. H. Logeman who is very enthusiastic because she sees great opportunities of service for it. At present the shop is open from 9 to 12 daily except Saturday, when it is open from 9 to 4. To put out a large amount of goods it is necessary to receive new goods continually. Anyone having anything in the way of clothing, furniture, etc., to contribute, may call the Social Service Bureau, Independence 2084, and the things will be called for promptly. Summer goods are especially desired now. Remember the shop during house-cleaning time.

Radio Flashes

Coffeyville, Kansas.—Several of the Saints here had the pleasure of listening to the fine musical program broadcast from the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, March 23. The music did not come in so clear but the sermon was very distinct. The Saints here congratulate you on the splendid programs which you broadcast.—Mrs. Mary Pitcock.

Wayzata, Minneapolis.—While listening over my three tube radio set last night, March 18, I picked up K F I X. I certainly was pleased because I had tried for weeks to get this station. Minneapolis and Kansas City are on so much of the time that I think they interfere. I just heard the last two numbers on the program, "The land of beginning again," read by Beatrice McNamara; and solo, "Love's garden of roses," sung by M. Dawson Stephens. Then the announcer read some letters and when he said, "This is K F I X, Independence, Missouri, Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," it did my heart good, because I am a Latter Day Saint. I belong to the Minneapolis Branch.—Mrs. Irene Dobson.

Bryan, Texas.—We heard a song feast from Zion City, Illinois, of old-time hymns that certainly was fine. I think it would be well for those having this work in charge at K F I X to give a musical program of old-time hymns, distinctive of our faith and belief. Some of the old songs of Zion would be appreciated by the Saints here. Something like that would cause the people to sit up and take notice. Let the good work go on.—S. S. Smith.

The Place of Music in the Small Church

The problem of music in the small church is ably set forth and discussed in a recent book Better Music in Our Churches, a chapter of which appears in The Christian Work. So well does it take up some of the problems vital to us, that we are calling the attention of our readers to a few of the issues presented.

The main difficulties in obtaining good music for the small church seem to lie in the lack of trained leadership and in the general inertia on the part of those who do have musical ability to respond to the needs of the church. Many times leaders, who have been willing to work and upon whom has rested the responsibility in the past, are incompetent from the point of view of musical ability. They have kept alive what little interest is manifest in the music work, but their leadership has become a habit. New material is needed to revive the work in the church. It is often difficult to displace these long established leaders yet it must be done if better leadership is to be found. Since the public schools have been giving more attention to the development of music and training of children, many young people are growing up with a fair amount of musical preparation. These should be watched and their interest captured that their ability may be added to that of the choir or musical organization. From these young people may come possible leaders.

In addition to these difficulties are those presented by the congregation itself. The people, including the minister, often feel that music is to fill in the time; therefore they pay little attention to its improvement. An attitude of musical appreciation must be developed on the part of the congregation if those who can furnish better music are to be encouraged in their efforts. Congregational singing is an important factor in the development of appreciation. This is not, however, such a great problem in our own churches as in many others, for our congregations love to sing, and our selection of hymns is conducive to inspirational song services.

The minister comes in for a bit of scoring by the article in review, because of his lack of interest, often, in the musical part of the service. If he were to realize the value of good music as a setting for his sermon, he would spend part of his time in conjunction with the choir, arranging the musical program for each service. The article suggests that every minister should receive some sort of musical education, which prepares him to meet the many situations he finds while out in the field.

A contributing factor to the success of a meeting, is an instrumental prelude by organist or pianist. It is really remarkable how a service may be dignified by the use of such a little device. Meetings should be conducted with considerable formality, sociability being reserved until after services. The playing of a prelude in the morning, following Sunday school, will help to maintain the proper decorum for the meeting to follow. The problem of a dignified service is not so great for the evening meetings as it is in the morning, because these meetings are usually made up chiefly of adults. However the use of the prelude is desirable upon all such occasions.

It will not be forgotten what the Lord has spoken to his people in the latter days concerning the place of music in our churches:

The service of song in the house of the Lord with humility and unity of Spirit in them that sing and them that hear is blessed and acceptable with God; . . . let them who shall be moved thereto by a desire and the gift to sing take upon them the burden and care of the service, and use therein instruments of music of the reed and of the string, or instruments of brass in congregations that are large, and as wisdom and choice may direct. Let the young men and the maidens cultivate the gifts of music and of song; let not the middle-aged and the old forget the gladness of their youth and let them aid and assist so far as their cares will permit. . . —Doctrine and Covenants 119: 6.

DEPARTMENTAL

Important Announcement Concerning Religio Quarterlies

The Department of Recreation and Expression is now having printed three quarterlies: the Junior Religio Quarterly, Study Outline for Senior Religio, and a reprint of Book of Mormon lessons. The lessons in the "Study Outlines for Senior Religio" for this first six months of 1924 cover the history of the stewardship program in our church. After the completion of this course July 1, 1924, these quarterlies will contain the course of the Book of Mormon: that is, beginning July 1, 1924, there will only be one Senior Religio Quarterly and that will deal with the Book of Mormon.

How to Order

Please notice that senior Religio classes desiring to begin the study of the Book of Mormon on July 1, or thereafter, should order the study course in the Book of Mormon No. 1 rather than the regular quarterly for July 1, 1924. Classes that have been studying the reprint lessons in the Book of Mormon for the three or six months prior to July 1 should order the second or third quarterly in the Book of Mormon course according to whether they have been studying the course for one or two quarters.

In ordering Senior Religio Quarterlies it will hereafter be absolutely necessary for you to be very definite as to just what number of the Book of Mormon course you wish to receive. They will be numbered from one to eight inclusive, each to cover one quarter.

Back Numbers Obtainable

In addition to the above there is a quantity of back issues of the Senior Quarterly dealing with a variety of subjects of interest to the church as listed below. These may be secured at the regular price from the Herald Publishing House.

New Quarterlies

Quarterlies on the following courses may now be secured from the Herald Publishing House at 10 cents each:

In connection with this notice, we urge that both local and general officers of the church having to do with traffic matters take them up through the traffic bureau. The best interests of the work at large indicate the wisdom of this.

Below are the names and addresses of the district superintendents in this department for the various districts which have reported to us. If your district is not represented, we would be glad to have you report to us at once the name and address of your district superintendent.

The Use of Wine

Can it be used in case of sickness? What wine should be used in the sacrament?

By S. A. Burgess

A letter from one of our missionaries raises directly the question of wine in the church. To what extent should it be used in case of sickness? What wine should be used in the sacrament? Must grape juice be made new each year and be used? Is there not a difference between grape juice made fresh every year and wine several years old? Has wine power to build muscle or nerves? Some contend that Jesus made wine at the feast, and that it was real fermented wine that would make one drunk; therefore, it is all right so far as the church law is concerned for one to use wine in case of sickness. What is referred to in Doctrine and Covenants 86?

These are some of the questions directly raised by this and other letters.

No Food Value in Alcohol

That alcohol possesses no food value has been pointed out many times in both the HERALD and Ensign. It does not build nerves and muscles. It does, as do other narcotics, deaden for a time the higher powers and so produce for a time a feeling of temporary happiness. Sometimes it has been used by physicians to tide one over a shock, but it is dangerous because of its habit-forming qualities and because it has no value as a food or medicine. Many physicians, if not most of them, to-day recognize that the use of alcohol is not at all a necessity in medicinal practice. The American Medical Association has so resolved, London physicians have so declared, and in fact the use of alcoholic beverages has very greatly decreased in the hospitals in the past twenty or thirty years.

Many an old woman drinks her cup of tea and thinks she is fed, but she is only deceiving herself. Alcoholic beverages act as a stimulant so that many have thought they were fed, but after all they were only mocked. There is not only the bitterness of the morning afterwards; there is not only the injury done to society and others; there is not only the waste of means; but in addition, even the most moderate drinking lowers one's efficiency and keenness of perception and action. It lowers one's possibility for spiritual power. It is not, therefore, surprising to note that the word of God in the Old Testament plainly declares, "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."—Proverbs 20: 1. "Look not thou upon the wine when it is red."—Proverbs 23: 31.

Unfermented Wine for Hebrew Ceremonies

As to both the Old and New Testament, it is well to remember that the word translated wine means fruit juice and not necessarily fermented. This may surprise some, but in the HERALD, May 15, 1922, volume 62, page 450, a report is published containing the following extract from Current Opinion:

One of the long and fierce controversies of the early days of prohibition agitation was whether the Old Testament commended the use of fermented wine and the New Testament enjoined its use in the sacrament. Many books and pamphlets have been published on the subject. The controversy has pivoted on the question whether the Hebrew words yayin and tirosh in the Old Testament, and the Greek word oinos in the New, meant unfermented wine or fermented wine, or both. A few days ago the Rabbinical Assembly of the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York City met and after an eight-hour discussion reached a unanimous decision that it is proper for Jewish families to use unfermented wine for all religious purposes. This action followed the reading of a paper by Professor Louis Ginzberg, an authority on the Talmud, in which he demonstrated to the satisfaction of his hearers that the centuries-old custom of the Jews of using only fermented wines is due to an error of one of the Jewish Codifiers of the Book of Customs, the author of which was Rabbi Abraham Klausner. Either the codifier, says Professor Ginzberg, did not have the original text before him, or he examined it too hastily.

On one hand we have total lack of evidence that fermented wine was used by the Jews in the Old Testament times or by the Christians in the New Testament.

It may be well to note that in no case does the New Testament say wine was used in the sacrament. The words used are always "the fruit of the vine," not wine, let alone fermented wine.

Against any presumption that they might have used fermented wine are the above passages from the Old Testament warning against the use of wine when it is red, and wine as a mocker. Many other passages can also be readily found, as Proverbs 23: 29-35; Isaiah 28: 7; Hosea 4: 11; Habakkuk 2: 5.

Drunkenness was also condemned in the New Testament. Ephesians 5: 18; Romans 13: 13; 1 Corinthians 5: 11.

Now what was the drink that Jesus made when he turned the water into wine? The Greek word used, oinos, is also frankly translated by Young as grape juice. This Greek word included both wine in its ordinary sense and also the unfermented juice of the grape.

It is written in Luke 1: 15 that an angel said of John the Baptist that he should drink neither wine nor strong drink. See also Ephesians 5: 18: "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess." Paul's advice to Timothy was to drink a little oinos for his stomach's sake. (1 Timothy 5: 23.) As has been pointed out, this word included the unfermented grape juice.

As to the church to-day, the Word of Wisdom states:

Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, in consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarned you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation, that inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold, it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together, to offer up your sacraments before him. And, behold, this should be wine; yea, pure wine of the grape of the vine, of your own make. And again, strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies.

This states plainly that it is not good to drink wine or strong drink. The only exception made is the time of the sacrament, and this we are told should be "pure wine of the grape of the vine of your own make." This tends to exclude the liquid from the realm of strong drinks. Strong drinks or alcohol are not for the belly, but only for the washing of our bodies.

Fresh Juice for Sacrament; NOT Fermented

With regard to the use in the sacrament, it is interesting to note in Doctrine and Covenants 26: 2 that the promise is that He will drink "the fruit of the vine" when He comes again on the earth. They were warned at this time, in 1830, not to purchase wine, but make it new among them. (Doctrine and Covenants 26: 1.) This revelation, given nearly one hundred years ago, is also referred to in the Times and Seasons, volume 4, page 117.

Early in the month of August, Newell Knight and his wife paid a visit at my place in Harmony, Pennsylvania; and as neither his wife nor himself had been as yet confirmed, it was proposed that we should confirm them and partake together of the sacrament before he and his wife should leave us. In order to prepare for this, I set out to procure some wine for the occasion, but had gone only a short distance when I was met by a heavenly messenger and received the following revelation, the first paragraph of which was written at this time, and the remainder in the September following.

"Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your Lord, your God, and your Redeemer, whose word is quick and powerful. For, behold, I say unto you, that it mattereth not what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, when ye partake of the sacrament, if it so be that ye do it with an eye single to my glory; remembering unto the Father my body which was laid down for you, and my blood which was shed for the remission of your sins; wherefore a commandment I give unto you, that you shall not purchase wine, neither strong drinks of your enemies; wherefore ye shall partake of none, except it is made new among you; yea, in this my Father's kingdom which shall be built up on the earth.

"Behold, this is wisdom in me; wherefore marvel not, for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth, and with Moroni, whom I have sent unto you to reveal the Book of Mormon, containing the fullness of my everlasting gospel."—Doctrine and Covenants 26: 1, 2.

There have been many editorials published by our late President Joseph Smith in the SAINTS' HERALD on the question of the use of wine in the scriptures. He urges that the wine should be freshly made each fall, bottled and kept. Some had been pouring water upon raisins and pouring it off. Others had been using other methods. He urges that, above all, contention be avoided; that it is of far less importance what method be used than that there should be no contention.

September 19, 1887, directions are given that the wine must be clean and prepared in the fall. Directions were given how to prepare the grape juice and remove the scum; to prepare in the fall and not to keep over from year to year, it was stated plainly, was to prevent using strong alcoholic beverages that old wine becomes.

Finally, as governing the sacrament, General Conference on April 9, 1913, adopted the following:

Touching the kind of wine to be used in the sacrament services of the church, we are of the opinion that fermented wine should not be used, but that either unfermented wine or water should be used, and so be in harmony with the spirit of the revelations. (See Doctrine and Covenants 26: 1; 86: 1; 119: 5. General Conference Resolution 702.)

While up to the time that this was adopted the use of fermented wine was very rare indeed, since then unfermented juices alone have been used.

Use of Grape Juice as a Beverage

As to the use of grape juice at other times than for the sacrament, the value of fruit juice, including grape juice, in fevers and other sickness is very well recognized. Some physicians will not permit anything else being taken except a little fruit juice in the early days of fevers. Unfermented fruit juice is not injurious in any such sense as is alcoholic beverages. We do not recall ever hearing of anyone being injured by drinking pure fruit juice. Such possess a large food value; in fact, fruit juice is prescribed for young babies even in the first year of life, when nothing else except water and milk is taken.

Church Against the Saloon

The position of the church on alcoholic beverages has been very strongly against the saloon and all it stands for from the very first organization of the church in 1830. At Kirtland and Far West, as well as in Nauvoo, the church was officially and directly opposed to the saloon and the use of alcoholic beverages. When the headquarters of the church were removed to Lamoni there were saloons in that place, but one very soon went out of business, and it was but a short time until there were none. The church has always been directly against the use of alcoholic beverages. We do not recall ever hearing of any and at Holden, Missouri, as well as elsewhere, it has been well recognized that the members of the church would vote solidly against the saloons and in favor of prohibition.

The evils of the continued use of alcoholic beverages have been discussed too frequently to require repetition in this article, but these moral issues do appear, as we are all God-fearing people who recognize that we are and must be to an extent our brother's keeper. Social consciousness requires a recognition of this social responsibility.

In the United States and certain provinces in Canada, this has been forbidden by law. In such cases it is certain that no good member of the church will lend any countenance to "moonshining," nor will he engage in the manufacturing of alcoholic beverages for home or other use.

Alcohol possesses no food value and very little therapeutic value. It is forbidden by the law of the church and, in the United States and certain portions of Canada, by the law of the land. This should answer all questions as to the position we should take in our private life as well as officially as a church.

Summary

From the above we note:

First, that alcohol has no food value.

Second, practically no medicinal value.

Third, fruit juice is beneficial; possesses both food and medicinal value.

Fourth, for the sacrament we should use fruit juice freshly prepared each year.

Fifth, fruit juice that stands is likely to become strong liquor.

Sixth, the teachings of the church are to use unfermented grape juice or water for the sacrament.

Seventh, that the church of God is opposed to the use of alcoholic beverages both individually and collectively, and considers it a social responsibility of the church to oppose that which is socially or individually harmful. Those who keep the law of God must keep the law of the land; hence, when the law of the land prohibits the use or manufacture of alcoholic beverages, the members of this church will be in the front with those supporting the law.

Treasures

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth,
Where moth and rust doth consume,
And where thieves break through and steal:
But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven,
Where neither moth nor rust doth consume,
And where thieves do not break through nor steal.

Jesus—The Master Teacher

By Roy L. Roberts

When you start to study the methods of teaching, and especially the methods of character education or religious education, it is well to stop long enough to examine well the work of the greatest of teachers, for as one writer has said:

Here work enough to watch
The Master work, and catch Hints of the proper craft, tricks of the tool's true play.

When you look at the results of the teachings of Christ you can well call him the greatest of teachers, and it is for the purpose of studying this great personality and his methods of teaching that this paper is undertaken.

His Qualities as Teacher

We find the following statements in Luke 2: 40 and 52: "And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him." "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." His ancestral occupation must also have been salutary and sinew-building. Thus we see Jesus growing in stature and vigor during his childhood, and it was this quality that made it possible for him to stand the strenuous work of the ministry; it is this quality that gave force to his personality and made it possible for him to meet all the situations of his ministry in a straightforward and vigorous manner, that caused the people to wonder and marvel at this man who taught as no man had ever taught.

Possessed Knowledge and Wisdom

From the same quotations we gather that he was growing in knowledge and wisdom. Although the facts about his early life are not recorded in the Gospels, we would not go far wrong in inferring that this was gained from the teaching and training from his parents, from his association with men, as for instance his experience during his first trip to Jerusalem to celebrate the passover (Luke 2: 46, ff.) and possibly some of his training was had in the Jewish synagogues. We do know that he sprang from a race of teachers, and from the way in which he used the experiences of the past it would be logical to infer that he had gotten it by training and experience during his years of silence. He also seemed to have had the reflective and poetical temperament that is so characteristic of the oriental life and so favorable to the development of an ethical and religious teacher.

In addition to these experiences and training, we find him coming in contact with experiences which gave him an understanding and a sense of the greatness of his work that he had never had before, as for instance his baptism and the voice from heaven (Luke 3: 21, ff.; Matthew 3: 13, ff.); and the temptation by the Devil after his fast of forty days and nights (Luke 4: 3, ff.; Matthew 4: 1, ff.).

These experiences brought him into intimate contact with God and gave him a personal knowledge which radiated conviction, and when he taught, men marveled and said, "And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power." (Luke 4: 32). "The people were astonished at his doctrine, for he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes" (Matthew 7: 28, 29). "And no man was able to answer him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions" (Matthew 22: 46). "We know that thou art a teacher come from God" (John 3: 2). "Never man spake like this man" (John 7: 46).

Knew Literature and Tradition

Also as a result of his training he gained a mastery of the Jewish life, literature, and traditions which enabled him to express himself with appropriateness and force. He always had a historical allusion at the tip of his tongue ready to illustrate his point and his insight and breadth of vision enabled him far to surpass the Jewish teachers who were supposed to be well trained in the use of these methods. He not only had an insight into the Jewish life, literature, and traditions which enabled him to see the true meanings, but he also had an insight and vision that encompassed the whole world. "Other sheep I have; them also I must bring" (John 10: 16). "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me" (John 12: 32). "The kingdom of heaven is as leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal until the whole is leavened" (Matthew 13: 33). "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16: 15).

Understood Psychology

Jesus' remarkable intuition and knowledge of mental processes is repeatedly indicated in the introduction to his various sayings. In the Gospels we frequently read such phrases: "Knowing their thoughts, Jesus exclaimed" (Matthew 9: 4); "Jesus, however, was aware of what was passing in their minds and said to them" (Matthew 12: 25); "Jesus, however, knew what was in their minds, and said" (Luke 6: 8); "Jesus, knowing of the discussion that was occupying their thoughts, took hold of a little child, and placed it beside him, and then said to them" (Luke 9: 47); "When Jesus became aware of the way in which they were debating" (Luke 5: 22); "Knowing their hypocrisy, Jesus said to them" (Mark 12: 15); "Jesus knew from the first who they were that did not believe in him and who it was that would betray him; and he added" (John 6: 64).

And his natural insight is crystallized in that passage from John 2: 25: "He could read every heart, and he did not need that others should tell him what men were; for he could of himself read what was in men." From the above quotations we can see that Jesus not only knew the mental processes, but he knew and understood the motives that actuated men.

Fitted for Moral Leadership

Again, his moral fitness for leadership through teaching is most obvious. His self-control and naturalness in every incident are the best evidence of his sound character and fixity of purpose. The strength of his personality, with its calmness and poise, is in striking contrast to the perturbed and flurried attitude of the disciples in time of stress. Their alarm during the tempest serves but as a foil to his complete command of the situation, and brings out clearly the lesson of faith he taught (Mark 4: 35, ff.). His self-possession is likewise shown in his quiet rebuke of James and John when they clamored for vengeance on the Samaritan village that did not welcome him (Luke 9: 52, ff.). And in similar fashion, at the time of his arrest, the agitation and abortive attempts at defense made by the disciples greatly heighten the dignity and control of the Master (Mark 14: 46, ff.; Luke 22: 47, ff.).—Graves, What Did Jesus Teach? p. 38.

While Jesus did have a calmness and poise that is admirable and necessary for a successful teacher, yet if the occasion demanded harshness he was able to meet the emergency, as is shown in his driving the money changers out of the temple (Matthew 21: 12, ff.; John 2: 13, ff.).

Practiced What He Taught

Jesus was the embodiment of his teachings as is shown by the following statements: "I am the way, the truth, and the life" (John 14: 6); "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine" (John 7: 17); "He that doeth truth cometh to the light" (John 3: 21); "I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8: 12); "Which of you convicteth me of sin?" (John 8: 46); "This man hath done nothing amiss" (Luke 23: 41); "I find in him no fault at all" (John 18: 38), and "I am meek and lowly of heart" (Matthew 11: 29).

In addition to the things mentioned in the above quotations, we find the Christ daily recognizing his Father in prayer where he thanked him for the past blessings and asked for those which he needed. He was continually going about doing good, giving cheer where cheer was needed; sympathizing and healing those who were sick of mind or body; treating the despised with respect and understanding, and to seal his teachings he went to a hideous death rather than take back one jot or tittle of his high ideals for which he had thus far given his short life. And even when he was dying he uttered a prayer for his murderers.

Qualified for Teaching

The next quality that we will consider is Jesus' aptness at teaching. Of course, this is the big test—Can he really accomplish results by teaching? Stop to consider the “unlearned and ignorant men” (Acts 4:13) that Jesus chose as pupils and disciples and how they became men of power under his tutelage. Consider the fact that “the mass of people listened to Jesus with delight” (Mark 12:37). He never wrote, yet his words have been recorded and are considered to be of priceless value to-day.

Many books have been written about his methods of teaching, and to-day even with our advanced studies in education a renewed interest is being taken in the methods of the man of Nazareth. His teachings have become part of our social inheritance, and although we cannot say definitely that his teachings have caused the social reforms that have gone through and are going through the nations of the world, yet it is safe to say that his teachings have done much to break down the artificial walls of social class, to emancipate the serfs and slaves, elevate woman to her rightful place in home and society, establish education at public expense and establish places of worship for the great mass of people. It also has caused many more of the social reforms that are now taking place in this fair land of ours. The influence of his teachings have been so great that the majority of people have agreed with the conclusion of Nicodemus: “We know that you are a teacher from God” (John 3:2).

Now that we have listed the main characteristics of Jesus as a teacher, let us list some of the essential qualifications that have been made by our greatest educators and see how Jesus measures up to them.

Doctor H. H. Horne in his book, Jesus—The Master Teacher, has the following lists:

The Essential Qualifications of a World-Teacher:

1. A vision that encompasses the world.
2. Knowledge of the heart of man.
3. Mastery of the subject taught.
4. Aptness in teaching.
5. A life that embodies the teaching.

Additional Qualifications of the Teacher:

I. Physical.

1. Health.
2. Good presence.
3. A speaking eye.
4. An effective voice.

II. Intellectual.

1. Common sense.
2. Intelligence.
3. Happy use of language.
4. Idealism.

III. Emotional.

1. Cheerfulness.
2. Sympathy.
3. Disinterestedness.

4. Honor.
5. Enthusiasm.
6. Culture.
7. Courtesy.

IV. Volitional.

1. Executive ability.
2. Willingness to work.
3. Ambition.
4. Patience.
5. Humility.

V. General.

1. An avocation.
2. Sense of the greatness of his work.
3. Personality.

This standard was set up for the ideal teacher without Jesus being in mind. When applied to him, how does he meet the test? Shall we say, then, that he is an ideal for teachers, and also a real teacher himself?

Professor G. H. Palmer (The Teacher, page 8, Boston, 1908) enumerates the four essential and fundamental characteristics which every teacher must possess as follows:

“First, a teacher must have an aptitude for vicariousness; and second, an already accumulated wealth; and third, an ability to invigorate life through knowledge; and fourth, a readiness to be forgotten.”

Though Professor Palmer was writing on the teacher in general it is interesting that, in commenting on his second point, he should find Jesus his best illustration, as follows:

“The plan of the Great Teacher, by which he took thirty years for acquisition and three for bestowal, is not unwise, provided that we too can say, ‘For their sakes, I sanctify myself.’”—Horne, Jesus—The Master Teacher.

Now consider where you would place Jesus? Of course any such analysis does not do him justice, for he transcends it all by being the ideal teacher.

Significance of Jesus' Teaching

One of the best ways to see the full significance of Jesus' teaching is to take one example which has unity in itself and there find all the principles and methods that you can. It will not cover all of the points, methods, and principles that Jesus used but it will include many. The best illustration where such a method is followed is found in the book, Jesus—The Master Teacher, by H. H. Horne, pages 4-7.

Let us choose John 4:1-43.

Topic: How Jesus Taught the Woman of Samaria.

1. Here we have the complete teaching situation, with master, pupil, environment, subject matter, aim, and method. Jesus is the master, the woman of Samaria is the pupil, Jacob's well is a part of the environment, the water of life is a part of the subject matter, the transforming of a life is the aim, and what are the methods?

2. The Master utilized an occasion as it arose, though he was weary with his journey, and it was the noon hour, and she was a Samaritan and a woman, and sinful. There were several reasons why he might have let this occasion slip, but not so: “There cometh a woman.”

3. He established a point of contact. She evidently came to draw water. “Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink.” He was thirsty; it was a natural request.

4. He had her attention and interest from the start. He had done an unexpected and unusual thing. He utilized “surprise power." Though a Jew, he had spoken to a Samaritan. This attention and interest are sustained throughout, even increasing in concentration and intensity as slumbering impulses are awakened.

5. He used the conversational method. Seven times he addressed her and six times she replied, the arrival of the disciples interrupting the conversation.

6. He was here dealing with an individual, though thereby the way was opened to deal with the crowds of the city for two days.

7. He exemplified the principle of personal association, for a brief time, by intimate converse with a woman who was a sinner, thereby causing his disciples to marvel.

8. He asked her no question, but he answered three of her explicit questions, as well as the deepest longing of her nature. He built upon her answers and made the most of them: "In that saidst thou truly."

9. There are problems at the basis of this teaching. First, there is the personal problem of the woman's life. Who was more conscious of this at first, the woman or Jesus? It was his object to awaken her conscience. Then there is the theological problem, felt and stated by the woman: Where shall God be worshipped? She seems to have introduced this problem as a distraction from the personal issue, but the answer of Jesus, "in spirit and in truth," reopened the personal problem.

Are there still other problems here? What?

10. His reply concerning the nature of worship and God is perhaps long enough to be regarded as the nucleus of a private discourse, with a single auditor. How did John learn about this conversation, do you suppose?

11. There is the use of apperception in passing from water to "living water," yet it is clear that even so the woman did not understand. (See verse 15.) There is apperception also in Jesus declaring himself to be the Messiah to one who said she knew that Messiah cometh (verses 25, 26), and this time she evidently understood.

12. His use of the concrete appears in "to drink," "this water," "thy husband," "five husbands," "this mountain," "Jerusalem," "I am he." The concrete water of Jacob's well was used to illustrate the abstract water of life.

13. His use of contrast appears in the difference between "this water," after taking which one thirsts again, and his living water, after drinking of which one shall never thirst (verses 13, 14). Also between the ignorant worship of the Samaritans and the intelligent worship of the Jews (verse 22.)

14. His use of motivation appears in the awakening first of interest and then of conscience and finally of service. The conversation concerning water awakened interest, that concerning the husband awakened conscience, that concerning true worship awakened service. She carried back in haste to the city not the waterpot she had brought forth, but the living water.

15. Jesus secured expression from this voluble, motor-minded woman, first in words and then in deeds. He pierced the crust of her encased conscience by a command to act: "Go, call thy husband, and come hither." A motor command which could not be executed is the profound way in which the Master threw this precipitate will back upon itself in shame and confusion. Unintelligently she said: "Sir, give me this water"; intelligently she said: "Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet." From superficial questions of curiosity her self-expression passes to serious concern in personal and religious matters, and finally back to the ministry of Sychar.

16. Some striking characteristics of Jesus as a teacher appear in this incident, such as his disregard of current conventionality in talking with a Samaritan and a woman and a sinner; the absence of false modesty; intimate knowledge of his pupil (how did Jesus know the woman had five husbands?); profoundest knowledge of his subject—the nature of God as spiritual; the demonstrated ability to teach; prophecy—"the hour cometh"; and self-assertion: "I that speak unto thee am he."

What impression do you get from this evidence of teaching method in a single incident?

Analysis of Educational Methods

After having taken one incident and examined it for the principles and methods involved, the next thing to do is to take the educational principles and go through all of the teachings of Jesus to find out how many of them are used. Doctor Horne has done this very thing and has given a summary of his findings as follows:

Jesus began by winning attention through interest, then he established some point of contact with his hearer (s) on the physical or spiritual plane.

As a teacher he was not only a tactician with methods, but a strategist with objectives. His greatest objective was to share with men that sense of union with the Father which he enjoyed.

Jesus based his teaching on the vital problems in the lives of his pupils.

Though not a Greek, he was as ready to converse in a profitable way as was Socrates, and he led a more public life, though shorter, than did Socrates, because he traveled more.

He asked and answered questions to stimulate self-expression, desiring conviction rather than persuasion on the part of his followers. His questions are better than those of Socrates, from whom "the Socratic art" is named, because they are not "leading."

He used the discourse at many different times before many different groups on many different themes, but always in a more or less informal way.

He told stories with a point, the parables, which his auditors did not always understand, but which always made them think, and led the spiritually minded to inquire of him their meaning.

He knew and used the old scriptures, for the nutriment of his own soul and as a common meeting ground with the religious minds of his day.

He never let the occasion slip, but utilized it as it arose to clarify thought and guide life.

The principle of apperception is recognized in his words: "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear," and all his parables present the less familiar in terms of the more familiar. Even so, he was often misunderstood.

He used the principle of contrast to vivify the portrayal of truth, concrete examples to bring the abstract near, symbols to make, if possible, difficult meanings plain, and wonderful imagery to enhance the appeal to the imagination and so to the powers of conviction.

He cared more for individuals than for crowds, though he would often minister to crowds, perhaps with a view to reaching individuals.

His disciples he trained as witnesses of his mainly by the processes of personal association, individualizing them, and meeting the needs of each, especially Peter.

The work accomplished by Jesus and also under his tutelage was highly motivated, through the awakening of spir-

Good Spirit Found Among Southern Saints by Missionary

FARMINGTON, KENTUCKY, March 19.—Although the weather conditions were bad, a good conference was held in the Kentucky and Tennessee District March 15 and 16. The good Spirit present reminded one of the closing day of the General Conference.

At the district conference we adopted the slogan, "We can do it," and we are of the opinion that the good people fully realize that this means a united and concentrated effort. I am quite sure we are learning that the surest way for us to succeed is to help our brother to succeed.

The membership of this district is widely scattered so it is quite difficult for them to get together, but in spite of this handicap we feel sure that the good people here will do what they can to advance the work. I think I never have found a better-hearted or more conscientious people than we have in this district. It is my purpose to be of service to them and to help them in every way.

Meetings at Springville

On February 13 I began meetings at Springville, Tennessee. Although the weather was bad, I missed only one night of meeting. There was some prejudice to remove, but this was overcome and neutralized. Meetings closed March 9, with prospects for a good ingathering in the not-far-distant future.

There would be a most excellent field for missionary work here if we only had men enough to cover the field. I am itual and altruistic impulses rather than those of personal advancement, though not to the exclusion of the latter.

In a way most interesting to uncover, Jesus probed the depths of human nature, and secured most of the native reactions of man, though some, like rivalry, he did not consciously appeal to, and some, like sex, he sublimated.

All the methods of impression he used were but as means to expression as an end. Jesus was far more pragmatic than either idealistic or mystic.

Jesus appreciated childhood and made its characteristics identical with those of membership in the kingdom.

In a way not surprising but confirmatory of our previous impressions, Jesus embodies those qualities of the Teacher commonly set up as ideal.

Though, surprising to relate, many of our best histories of education do not refer to Jesus, by common consent he is regarded as the Great Teacher of the human race. A comparison of his characteristics with those of other world teachers does not alter this conclusion.

In this discussion I have given almost equal amount of space to the qualities of Jesus as a teacher and to the methods used by the Master. I have done this because I think that the personality of the teacher plays an important part in the molding of character, if not the most important part.

It is true that this discussion has been meager and very unsatisfactory, but I hope that it may be the stimulus to cause us to continue our study of the personality and the methods of the greatest teacher of all time.

indeed pleased to hear the name of Brother William Bath so favorably spoken of in this part of the country. I am convinced that could our brother be returned to this field a good work could be accomplished.

I have been greatly blessed in presenting the word and feel that we have a brighter day before us for the work in this district. I am encouraged in the work and hope to be able to do all that is in my power for the forwarding of the work in this field. I am aware that I can do but little myself, but if the entire membership works with me, and then God blesses our efforts, we will be able to make advancement.

Rededicating Services

Twenty-one years ago the first of this month, I entered the work of the ministry. At that time I laid all I had upon the altar and have tried to give the church the best there is in me. To-day after so many years of service and preparation, for I have constantly been preparing for a better service, I want to rededicate myself to the cause and enter upon the work that is now before us with as much zeal and a great deal more wisdom and knowledge than I did at that time. During the years that are past I have found the Lord an ever-present helper, and I would like to encourage all to press on until they reach that excellent height where the life of Christ will be reflected in them. May God in his infinite mercy guide us into the way of all truth is my prayer.

Big Rapids Saints Are Visited by a Missionary

BIG RAPIDS, MICHIGAN, March 24.—The first visit from a missionary since the Sunday school was organized in January was had when Brother A. C. Silvers came and preached at the home of Brother Hanson. This is the same place that the Sunday school is had. A few nonmembers were present.

Though there are only seven members, a sacramental service was held Sunday afternoon. It was the first service of its kind some have had the privilege to attend for nearly a year. God blessed the meeting with a great outpouring of his Holy Spirit. All were encouraged and strengthened and glad that Elder Silvers came.

He expects to return to this place again in the summer and hold a series of meetings on the street. It is felt that a way is opening up for a great work to be accomplished here.

Five of the members of Big Rapids are students of the Fenis Institute. We wish we had more time for the gospel work, but our studies occupy all our spare time.

From a Letter to the First Presidency
